Honorable Members of the General Assembly:

On December 29, 2011, I issued a report entitled 2011 Report to the General Assembly: Business Entity Compliance with State Awards for Economic Development. Subsequent to the release of this report, the Ohio Department of Development discovered additional information regarding compliance with their economic development programs and shared that information with my office. This amended report reflects that new information.

Very respectfully yours,

Mike DeWine
Ohio Attorney General

During the process of preparing last year's 2011 Report to the General Assembly: Business Entity Compliance with State Awards for Economic Development, the Attorney General's Office (AGO) requested specific information from the Ohio Department of Development (ODOD) regarding economic development awards the Department administered. Among all of the information requested, ODOD was to identify those economic development awards that were scheduled to be completed.

Every award agreement designates a date when the recipient is obligated to begin working toward the performance metrics (the "triggering date" for performance); every award agreement also specifies the time frame in which the performance goals are expected to be met. The AGO defines "closeout year" as the calendar year in which an award recipient must achieve the performance metrics called for in its award agreement.

The AGO's report focused on companies that received awards with a 2010 closeout year designation. By comparing the companies' commitments for job creation, job retention, capital investment, and workforce training with the actual results documented in ODOD's 2010 annual reports, the AGO assessed "...the level of compliance of such [business] entities with the terms and conditions, including any performance metrics, of their state awards for economic development," as required by R.C. 125.112(G).

After publication of the 2011 report, ODOD discovered that some of the award recipients it had designated as having a 2010 closeout year actually had closeout dates occurring in other years, either because an improper triggering date had been used to calculate the closeout date or because the closeout date had been extended. At the same time, ODOD discovered that other award recipients indeed were scheduled for a 2010 closeout.

Because the triggering dates used to determine closeout dates had not been actively tracked by ODOD, the AGO set out to identify each company's compliance record by physically examining all of ODOD's award files that could even potentially have a 2010 closeout date.¹ The Attorney General ordered this review in early January. Between January 5 and February 2, a total of 64 AGO attorneys spent 930 man hours examining 1,621 ODOD award files. The following chart contains the results of the review and provides the most accurate possible picture of businesses' compliance with the terms and conditions of their award agreements.

¹ To ensure every award with an actual 2010 Closeout Year date was reviewed, the AGO asked ODOD to provide files containing (1) every grant with funds encumbered between 2005 and 2009; (2) every tax credit approved by the Ohio Tax Credit Authority between 2004 and 2007; (3) every loan approved by the Controlling Board between 2004 and 2008; and (4) every workforce training award expiring between 2008 and 2011.

All Awards

The AGO reviewed a total of 1,621 award files maintained by ODOD and determined that 365 files had a Closeout Year of 2010. Of these awards, 199 substantially complied with the terms and conditions of their agreements; 138 awards did not comply. The overall compliance rate was 59.1 percent.

Grant Awards²

The AGO reviewed 380 grant files and determined that 63 files had a Closeout Year of 2010. Of these 63 closeout grants, 17 awardees substantially complied with the terms and conditions of their agreements; 46 did not comply. The overall compliance rate was 27.0 percent. Non-compliant grant recipients are listed in Appendix 1.

Tax Credit Awards³

The AGO reviewed 291 tax credit files and determined that 54 had a Closeout Year of 2010. Of these 54 closeout tax credit awards, businesses receiving 17 tax credits substantially complied with the terms and conditions of their tax credit agreements; 37 did not comply. The overall compliance rate was 31.5 percent. Non-compliant tax credit recipients are listed in Appendix 2.

Loan Awards⁴

The AGO reviewed 375 loan files and determined that 46 loans had a Closeout Year of 2010. Of these 46 closeout loan awards, businesses receiving 11 loans substantially complied with the terms and conditions of their loan agreements; 35 did not comply. The overall compliance rate was 23.9 percent. Non-compliant loan recipients are listed in Appendix 3.

² A typical grant award helps a business offset the cost of undertaking a new project in exchange for its promise to create and/or retain a specified number of jobs within three years of the project's completion. However, the recipient is not required to inform ODOD of the actual project completion date, nor does ODOD formally request it. As a result, this date is not known in most cases. ODOD ordinarily uses the last date grant funds are disbursed to the recipient based on the likely proximity of the final fund disbursement to the actual project completion date. In addition to job creation and retention commitments, some grant award agreements contain other performance metrics such as capital investment, minimum average hourly wage, and maintenance of operations. In practice, ODOD does not enforce these additional performance metrics. For purposes of this report, the AGO calculated performance end dates, assigned Closeout Year designations, and determined compliance based on job creation and/or job retention commitments consistent with ODOD practices.

Workforce Training Awards⁵

The AGO reviewed 576 workforce training files and determined that 202 had a Closeout Year of 2010. Of these 202 awards, businesses receiving 154 awards substantially complied with the terms and conditions of their workforce training agreements; 20 did not comply. The overall workforce guarantee award compliance rate was 88.5 percent. Non-compliant workforce training award recipients are listed in Appendix 4.

In addition, 28 businesses trained fewer workers than promised but were only reimbursed proportionately based on the actual number of workers trained. These businesses were categorized as neither substantially compliant nor non-compliant.

⁵ A typical workforce training award provides a business with a grant to offset the cost of training its workers in a new skill in exchange for its promise to train a specified number of workers within a designated period of time, usually between one and two years. The training completion date is included in each grant agreement. In addition to the worker training commitment, some workforce training award agreements contain other performance metrics such as capital investment, minimum hourly wage, and maintenance of operations. ODOD does not, as a matter of practice, ordinarily enforce these additional metrics. For purposes of this report, the AGO determined compliance based on worker training commitments consistent with ODOD practices.
