Inasmuch as under section 5649-3d, General Code, appropriations may not be made for any purposes not set forth in the annual budget, and as the budget commission will not meet until June, 1914, and as no appropriation may be made until March, 1915, the probate judge will be without power to pay any such claims until such time, unless funds are provided through charitable channels.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 27, 1913.

HON. CYRUS LOCHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge your letter of May 15th, in which you request my opinion as to the power of the county commissioners or any other county authority to appropriate money at the present time for the payment of so-called "mothers' pensions;" and as to the power of the juvenile court to make an order for the payment of such a "pension" before funds are provided out of which the order can be paid.

Through a misapprehension I delayed giving consideration to your letter until the present time. I had not carefully examined the act in which "mothers' pensions" are provided for, being Senate Bill No. 18, and was unaware of the provisions of section 3 thereof, hence I supposed that the first question to be encountered was whether or not the act was one "providing for tax levies," and that question being involved in a case pending in the supreme court at the time your request was received, I deemed it proper to await the decision of that court.

Section 3 of the bill referred to provides, however, that the act shall go into effect "as provided in section 1c of article II of the Constitution." In the enrolled bill there is a typographical error in this provision which, however, does not, in my opinion render ineffective the obvious legislative intent. It is provided in section 1c of article II of the constitution that certain laws shall not go into effect until ninety days after they have been filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state; therefore it was the clear intention of the legislature that regardless of whether or not this act could be regarded as one "providing for tax levies" it should not go into effect until ninety days after it was filed in the office of the secretary of state. The bill was not filed in the office of the secretary of state until a date, which under the provisions of section 3, would postpone its effectiveness until sometime in August, 1913.

The provisions of the act, which as a whole is sometimes referred to as the "children's code," which provides for the so-called "mothers' pension" are sections 1683-2 to 1683-9 inclusive, General Code, as enacted therein. The operative provisions of these sections are as follows:

> "Section 1683-2. For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, etc. * * * when such women are poor, and are the mothers of children not entitled to receive an age or schooling certificate * * * the juvenile court may make an allowance to each such woman as follows: * * * The order making such allowance shall not be effective for a longer period than six months * * *."
> "Section 1683-3. Such allowance may be made by the juvenile court, only upon the following conditions: First—the * * * children * * * must be living with the mother * * ; second— * * only when in the absence of such allowance, the mother would be required to work regularly away from her home and children * * *; third—the mother must * * * be a proper person * * * for the bringing up of her children; fourth—such allowance shall * * * be necessary to save the * * * children from neglect * * *; fifth—it must appear to be for the benefit of the child to remain with such mother; sixth—a careful preliminary examination of the home of such mother must first have been made by * * * such * * * competent * * * agency as the court may direct * * *.

"Section 1683-5. Should the fund at the disposal of the court for this purpose be sufficient to permit an allowance to only part of the persons coming within the provisions of this act, the juvenile court shall select those cases in most urgent need of such allowance.

"Section 1683-9. It is hereby made the duty of the county commissioners to provide out of the money in the county treasury such sum each year thereafter as will meet the requirements of the court in these proceedings. To provide the same they shall levy a tax not to exceed one-tenth of a mill on the dollar valuation of the taxable property of the county. Such levy shall be subject to all the limitations provided by law * * *. The county auditor shall issue a warrant upon the county treasurer for the payment of such allowance as may be ordered by the juvenile judge."

All these sections must be considered together. So that whereas section 1683-2 by itself creates a power in the juvenile court, and section 1683-3 by itself imposes but six limitations upon the exercise of that power, section 1683-5 indicates rather conclusively that the valid exercise of the power depends upon other conditions than those recited in section 1683-3, viz., the existence of a fund at the disposal of the court. How this fund is to be provided is indicated in section 1683-9; that is to say, there is no way other than that mentioned in section 1683-9 by which the juvenile court may have at its disposal the fund out of which to make allowances; and as the power of the juvenile court to make the allowance is dependent upon the existence of this fact, the steps provided for in section 1683-9 must have been taken according to law before the power to make the allowance arises.

Therefore, the provisions of section 1683-9 are, in the last analysis, controlling. This section is not entirely clear. The first sentence would indicate that the county commissioners may provide the sum necessary to meet the requirements of the court from any moneys in the county treasury. If the sentence stood alone then it would be competent for the commissioners, whether they had made a specific levy for this purpose or not to allow at the beginning of the fiscal year by way of appropriation for the succeeding fiscal year a sum which in their judgment would be necessary for the support of the juvenile court in this particular.

I heretofore held in an opinion to the prosecuting attorney of Franklin county, rendered shortly after the Smith one per cent. law became effective, that the beginning of the fiscal year of the county is the first of March. I would be of the opinion that the word "year" as used in section 1683-9 must be regarded as referring to the fiscal year, and particularly that beginning on the first of March; for upon the rendition of the opinion aforesaid the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices promulgated a ruling to the same effect, and the various counties have since been conconducting their business upon the theory that the first of March marks the beginning of the fiscal year. I believe it would be a fair inference to make that the general assembly in enacting a law involving the making of an annual allowance of funds would have in mind the fiscal year that had been accepted in practice.

If the first sentence in said section 1683-9 then stood alone there would be some ground for holding that the county commissioners would have the right to make an appropriation out of the general levies of the county in March 1914, to meet the requirements of the juvenile court in the proceeding provided for in the preceding sections.

Even if the first sentence stood alone, however, the question would not be entirely free from doubt. Section 5649-3d of the Smith one per cent. law, so-called, provides inter alia, "no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget." If the purposes of the juvenile court under the "mothers' pension" law be regarded as a "purpose" within the meaning of this section, and unless the first sentence of section 1683-9 be regarded as an implied amendment to section 5649-3d, or as an exception to it, no appropriation could be made in March 1914, for that purpose unless a levy had been previously made in June 1913, therefor.

It is unnecessary to discuss further the possible separate effect of the first sentence of section 1683-9 because this sentence does not stand alone. It is immediately followed in the context by the requirement that the commissioners "to provide the same" shall levy a special tax. I am of the opinion that this provision is controlling for two reasons:

In the first place it qualifies the sentence which immediately precedes, and is to be regarded as indicating the only way in which the county commissioners may "provide out of the money in the county treasury" the sum necessary to meet the requirements of the court. This would be the primary and logical grammatical construction of the two sentences, where the commissioners are directed to provide something and the manner in which they shall provide that thing is pointed out. The provision is a grant of power and the maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius applies and leads to the conclusion that there is no other legal way of "providing" the fund.

In the second place the fact that the general assembly has at least granted authority to the commissioners to make a special levy indicates very clearly that the purpose for which the levy is to be made is a special purpose and not a general purpose, which might be met out of the general funds of the county. It is here that section 5649-3d again comes into play. If the purposes of the "mothers' pension" act were to be regarded as general purposes of the county, then if the commissioners had made the levy in 1913 for the general county fund it would be proper, despite the provisions of the section just cited, to make an appropriation out of that fund for the purpose of the juvenile court under this act; but inasmuch as the legislature has at least declared the purpose of the "mothers' pension" fund to be a special purpose, it by that declaration negatived the possible contention that such purposes are purposes properly to be met by an appropriation out of a levy for the general fund of the county.

I call attention in passing to the fact that while I have paraphrased section 1683-9, as a matter of fact, the word "any" is not used in that section, and the provision is that the commissioners shall "provide out of the money in the county treasury" the necessary sum.

Having regard to all the facts to which I have called attention, I am clearly of the opinion that the commissioners will be without authority to provide a sum necessary for the court's purpose by appropriation or otherwise, until they have made a specific levy for that purpose, and until that levy has produced "money in the treasury," i. e., until after the first semi-annual settlement of the proceeds of such levy.

Now inasmuch as the act does not go into effect until August I am of the opinion that the commissioners may not make the levy referred to in section 1683-9 until 1914. The date as of which all levies made in the year 1913, so to speak, is the first Monday in June; for this is the date on which the budget commission is convened, and all levies are in theory made before that time; so that no board or officer has authority to make a levy for this year unless the authority existed prior to the first Monday in June.

Inasmuch as the commissioners will be without authority to make the levy provided for in the act until June 1914, and inasmuch also as the proceeds of such levy cannot be appropriated for the purpose of the act until March 1915, I am of the opinion that it is not until the first of March 1915 that any fund can be provided for the use of the court under the "mothers' pension" provision of the act.

I have already expressed the opinion that the juvenile court is without authority to make any allowance until there is a fund at its disposal for this purpose. I have also expressed the opinion that the ordinary county levy to be made in the year 1913 cannot be appropriated for this purpose. This opinion extends to the question of appropriating the levies for juvenile court purposes for the reason that the general levies for the purposes of the juvenile court, such as the payment of costs, transportation of children, salaries of probation officers, etc., are, in the contemplation of this new law separate and distinct objects and purposes as compared with the objects and purposes of the "mothers' pension" provisions, and would have to be held so under section 5649-3d.

The question arises as to whether there are or can be any funds at the disposal of the juvenile court "for this purpose" before proceeds of the levy made by the county commissioners for such purpose become available?

It would be easy to answer this question in the negative for reasons already apparent, were it not for the use of the word "thereafter" in section 1683-9, supra. Its use indicates an apparent legislative intention that until the county commissioners are able to act, the court shall make the allowance out of some fund other than one provided especially for this purpose by the commissioners.

I can, however, find no authority of law for the expenditure of any public moneys other than the proceeds of the levy provided for in section 1686-9 for this purpose. The question as to whether or not the ordinary juvenile court levies are available for this purpose has already been discussed and decided in the negative.

It seems to me that in the course of the preparation of this bill its draftsman must have contemplated the insertion of a provision which would make the law effective immediately upon its technical taking effect, and would adequately provide for its administration in a fiscal way between that date and the date when the proceeds of the first levies became subject to expenditure. Possibly at one time there was in the bill a provision of this sort, and the word "thereafter" may have referred to such a provision. The law at present, however, lacks any such temporary provision, and I am of the opinion that no such provision can be constructed by inference for the mere purpose of providing an antecedent for the word "thereafter." Indeed, the word "thereafter" may be construed, in order to give it effect, as meaning "hereafter." It would have to be so construed or else regarded as meaningless.

Having decided, then, that (unless funds are provided for the administration of the juvenile judge through charitable channels) the judge of the juvenile court may not make allowance for "mothers' pensions" until the fund for that purpose is provided and appropriated, I am of the opinion that the powers provided for in the related sections may not be exercised until after the first of March, 1915.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MAY NOT PAY BIGGER PERCENTAGE FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT THAN IS AUTHORIZED BY THE STATUTES.

Inasmuch as the statutes do not so authorize, the trustees of Greene township may not pay from township funds twenty-five per cent. of the cost and expense of the surveying, supervision and construction of a road within the township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28, 1913.

HON. THOMAS H. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Ashland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of April 16th, which is as follows:

"Would you please give me an opinion on the following: the Trustees of Green township, Ashland county, Ohio, passed the following resolution.

Minutes of meeting held in Green township, December 19, 1900.

The following resolutions were passed:

To the commissioners of Ashland county, Ohio:—Whereas, state aid is desired, that a certain road, in whole or in part in this township be improved, pursuant to the provisions of an act passed by the general assembly, to amend certain acts, creating a state highway department to provide for state aid in the construction of highways (99 Ohio Laws 308-320); Therefore be it resolved, that we believe that the public interest demands the improvement of the said roads described as follows: 'Beginning at a point in the township of Green, at the north corporation line of Loudonville, Ohio, on what is known as the Loudenville and Ashland road and running north to a point in the township of Green, at or near the residence of Anderson Byers, a distance of two miles in Green township.'

Resolved further, that we, the trustees of Green township, Ashland county, Ohio, do agree for ourselves and our successors in office to pay from the township funds in the manner provided in said act, twenty-five per cent. (25) of the cost and expense of survey, supervision and construction of said improvement.

H. J. NEPTUNE,
—. A. MCCLURE,
Trustees of Green township.
O. W. CRONE,
Ashland county, Ohio.

Attest: S. N. WELSH, Clerk.

"The above trustees agreed varbally with the abutting property owners to assume the entire 25 per cent. of the cost of the improvement, and relieve the abutting owners from paying any part of the improvement as required by the General Code (99 Ohio Laws 308-320). No assessment or apportionment as to benefit or frontage was ever made.

"Now the present trustees have refused to pay the extra 10 per cent. which should have been assessed to the abutting property owners and which was assumed by the former trustees and the ones who passed the foregoing resolutions. The present trustees have placed the matter with me for an opinion.

"Can the trustees who made the foregoing resolution make an agreement with the abutting property owners by which they can place on the township the entire 25 per cent. of the cost of such improvement, and relieve the abutting property owners of their proportion as provided by said act? And if said trustees made such agreement does it relieve the abutting property owners of their share as provided by the act under which this improvement was made."

It appears from the resolutions of the township trustees, quoted above, that it was adopted on December 19, 1908, so that it becomes necessary to consider the provisions of law that were applicable at that time.

The powers of township trustees with respect to road improvements, under the state highway law, as it existed when said resolution was adopted, were defined by sections 6, 16 and 17 of an act of 1908 (99 O. L., page 308), carried into the General Code, edition of 1910, at sections 1187, 1207, 1208 and 1210, which sections provided:

"If the county commissioners fail to make such application before the first day of January, following the appropriation by the general assembly, the trustees of a township of such county may apply in like manner for aid from such appropriation. Such application shall contain an agreement on the part of the township to pay one-half the cost of construction of a road or highway, including surveys and other necessary expenses, by an assessment on the township of thirty-five per cent. thereof, and fifteen per cent. thereof, on the property fronting on such road or highway. (Section 1187).

"One-half of the cost and expenses of such improvement shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in which the highway is located upon the order of the county commissioners, issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner, from any fund in the county treasury for the construction of improved highways under the provisions of this chapter. One-half of the amount so paid by the county shall be apportioned by the county commissioners to the township or townships and the abutting property as provided in the next section. (Sec. 1207.)

"One-fourth of the cost and expenses of such improvement shall be apportioned to the township in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned to the township, three fifths shall be charged upon the whole township, and two-fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of lands so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to persons affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost of establishing county roads. (Sec. 1208.)

"The township trustees shall certify the assessment to the county auditor, who shall place it upon the tax duplicate against the property benefited. The county treasurer shall collect such assessments in the same manner as other taxes are collected, and in such payments as may be approved by the county auditor. The township trustees shall pay the portion of the cost and expenses assessed to the township in the same manner as other claims are paid. (Sec. 1210.)

Section 1187 applied only to a case where the township trustees were dealing directly with the state highway commissioner, when the county commissioners had failed to make application for the state aid money. It is manifest from the language of the resolution, that the township trustees in question were not dealing directly with the state highway commissioner, but with the county commissioners, who had made application to the state highway commissioner, for the use of the state aid money for the construction of a certain road improvement. Further consideration of section 1187 will therefore be unnecessary.

Section 1208, in language that cannot be misunderstood, provided that one-fourth of the cost of a road improvement under state highway law, should be apportioned to the township in which the road to be improved was located, and of the amount so apportioned, three-fifths was to be a charge on the whole township and two-fifths was to be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The method of procedure in making the assessment against the abutting property was clearly set forth in section 1208.

The township trustees were required by section 1210 to certify such assessments to the county auditor, whose duty it was to place them on the tax duplicate against the property benefited, and the county treasurer was charged with the duty of collecting such assessments.

It was clearly the duty of the township trustees in this instance to assess ten per cent. of the cost of such improvement against the abuttting property, according to the benefits received thereby and their action in agreeing to place the entire twenty-five per cent. of the cost of said improvement upon the township as a whole, which would have the effect of relieving the abutting property from the payment of ten per cent., which the statute says it shall bear, was unquestionably illegal and void. Public officers cannot abrogate the statutes of the state by verbal agreement as they attempted to do in this case, or otherwise.

Such illegal agreement is not binding upon the present trustees and in my opinion it is their duty to proceed to make an assessment against the property abutting said improvement in the manner provided in the statutes above quoted.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY CORONER MAY HOLD INQUEST AND CHARGE FEES ONLY UPON SUSPICION OF DEATH BY VIOLENCE.

Under section 2856, General Code, a county coroner may only hold an inquest and charge fees therefor, when he knows or has good reason to suspect that death has been caused by violence, i. e., unlawful means.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19, 1913.

HON. CYRUS LOCHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 13, 1913, you inquire:

> "The county coroner for the month of May presented a bill to the county commissioners of this county amounting to $505.45, for inquests held, etc. It appears that he viewed in all ninety-six bodies, and charged for the same three dollars, as provided for by statute.
> "It appears, that the coroner, for some time whenever he has information that an accident occured on railroad, in a factory or any other place, and any one is killed, he would view the body and charge the county with three dollars for viewing the body and also for mileage and the necessary writing. The same is true of cases of people who die where they had no medical attendance at the time."

You submit a number of cases and the cause of death. These include death by apoplexy, asthma, chronic alcoholism, pneumonia, bronchitis, still born, starved to death and similar causes of death.

The authority for a coroner to hold an inquest is found in section 2856, General Code, which reads:

> "When informed that the body of a person whose death is supposed to have been caused by violence has been found within the county, the coroner shall appear forthwith at the place where the body is, issue subpoenas for such witnesses as he deems necessary, administer to them the usual oath, and proceed to inquire how the deceased came to his death, whether by violence from any other person or persons, by whom, whether as principals or accessories before or after the fact, and all circumstances relating thereto. The testimony of such witnesses shall be reduced to writing, by them respectively subscribed, except when stenographically reported by the official stenographer of the coroner, and, with the finding and recognizances hereinafter mentioned, if any, returned by the coroner to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county. If he deems it necessary, he shall cause such witnesses to enter into recognizance, in such sum as may be proper, for their appearance at the succeeding term of the court of common pleas of the county to give testimony concerning the matter. The coroner may require any and all such witnesses to give security for their attendance, and if any of them neglect to comply with his requirements, he shall commit such person to the prison of the county, until discharged by due process of law."

Section 2857, General Code, provides:

> "The coroner shall draw up and subscribe his finding of facts in writing. If he finds that the deceased came to his or her death by force or violence, and by any other person or persons, so charged, and there present, he shall arrest such person or persons, and convey him or them immediately before a proper officer for examination according to law. If such persons, or any of them, are not present, the coroner forthwith shall inform one or more justices of the peace, and the prosecuting attorney, if within the county, of the facts so found, in order that the persons may be immediately dealt with according to law."

These sections were known as sections 1221 and 1222 of the Revised Statutes, and were construed in State ex rel. vs. Bellows, 62 Ohio St., 307, wherein it is held:

> "Within the meaning of section 1221, Revised Statutes, providing for inquests by the coroner, a dead body 'is found within the county' when it is ascertained to be in the county; and death is supposed to have been caused by violence whenever the coroner from observation or information has substantial reason for believing or surmising that death was caused by unlawful means."

The court quotes from the two foregoing sections and then says on page 310:

> "It is thus indicated that the inquest is intended to aid in the detection of crimes and in the punishment of those who perpetrate them. Construed with this purpose in view, and with reference to their natural meaning, the sense in which the words and phrases of the statutes are used should not be the subject of serious doubt. A death 'caused by violence' is a death caused by unlawful means, such as usually call for the punishment of those who employ them. A body 'is found' within the county when it is ascertained by any means that it is in the county. 'Death is supposed to have been caused by violence' whenever from such observation as he may be able to make, and from such information as may come to him, the coroner is for reasons of substance led to surmise or think that the death has been so caused.

"It is the duty of the coroner to hold an inquest and to perform the other duties enjoined upon him by these sections of the statute whenever a dead body is found within his county and he knows or may reasonably believe that death was caused by unlawful means. For such services he is entitled to the compensation which the defendants propose to pay."

The court then approves the opinion of the circuit court in the same case as reported in 8 Circuit Decisions, 376. The syllabi in the circuit court report read:

"Meaning of the words 'Found' and 'Violence' as used in section 1221, Revised Statutes.

"The word 'found' in this section is jurisdictional, and means being present in the county. 'Violence means the unlawful use of physical force or other agency to cause death. It does not include mere accident or casualty.

"The corner is authorized and required to hold an inquest upon a dead body lying in his county, when he knows, or has reason to suppose, the death was caused by unlawful means."

Shearer, C. J., says on pages 378 and 379:

"Of course, it is not in every case of death from unknown causes that the coroner would be authorized to hold an inquest; but if he knows, or has reasonable ground to believe, the death was the result of violence, or unlawful means, the coroner not only may, but is required to hold an inquest. Violence, in the sense used in the statutes, means force unlawfully exercised, as distinguished from mere accident or casualty."

"We are, therefore, of opinion that where a person has come to his death by violence, as hereinbefore defined, whether in the presence of third persons or not, it is the duty of the coroner to hold an inquest, not only to ascertain the cause of the death, but whether a crime has been committed, who the perpetrator is, and to secure and preserve the evidence to the end that justice may not be defeated.

"The word 'supposed' in the statute does not necessarily imply doubt, uncertainty or ignorance of the cause of the death. It is broad enough to include both suspicion and knowledge. If the coroner either knows or suspects the death to have been by violence, he may act."

This question was also passed upon by Hon. U. G. Denman, attorney general, as shown in report of the attorney general for 1909-1910, at page 493. He holds that the coroner has no authority to hold an inquest over the body of a person killed by a railway train in the presence of several witnesses.

By virtue of section 2856, General Code, the coroner is authorized to hold an inquest over the body of a person "whose death is supposed to have been caused by violence." The court in State vs. Bellows, 62 Ohio St., 307, supra, say "a death caused by violence is a death caused by unlawful means, such as usually call for the punishment of those who employ them."

The coroner, therefore, can only hold an inquest when he knows or has good reason to suspect that death has been caused by violence, by the use of unlawful means.

He would not be authorized to hold an inquest over a body of a person whose death was caused by railroad accident, or by accident in a factory, if the accident was not caused by unlawful means, or if there was no reason to suspect that it was caused by unlawful means.

An inquest would not be authorized where death was caused by or resulted from disease, such as asthma pneumonia, bronchitis, still born, starved to death, tuberculosis, and other similar diseases.

In order to hold an inquest it must be a death by violence, and not a natural or mere accidental death. An accidental death without reasonable ground to believe that it was caused by unlawful means, would not authorize an inquest. A death by starvation under suspicious circumstances of wrongful death could be inquired into by the coroner.

In order to draw his fee the coroner is not bound, in all cases, to find that the death was caused by unlawful means. The circumstances, however, must be such as to make a reasonable man suspect that unlawful means had been used. The coroner must act in good faith upon the information given him and must reasonably suspect that violence has been used, through unlawful means, although upon investigation he might find that no wrong had been in fact done.

The coroner would not be authorized to hold an inquest over persons who die without medical attendance, unless the circumstances would cause a reasonable man to suspect that death had been caused by unlawful means.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

NECESSITY OF AUDITOR'S CERTIFICATE UPON EXPENDITURE OF MONEYS RECEIVED FROM SALE OF SPECIFIC BONDS—NECESSITY FOR NEW CONTRACT FOR ALTERATIONS—PERMANENT REPAIRS UNDER SNYDER ACT.

From the face of section 5660, General Code, and the decisions upon the question, the question whether or not the auditor's certificate is necessary for the expenditure of moneys received from the sale of bonds for a specific purpose must be considered doubtful. It is therefore recommended that such certificate be obtained.

When extra work is made necessary through alterations required, the same should be provided for by separate contract. When replacements are made necessary by reason of a recent flood, which are permanent and not temporary in their nature, the procedure of section 1 of the Snyder act is not available.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1913.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 5th, requesting my opinion upon the following facts and the questions presented thereby:

> "Some time ago the question of erecting what is known as the Thirty-first Street Bridge in Lorain, Ohio, was submitted to popular vote and the result was the issuance of bonds to the extent of $70,000.00 to pay for the improvement, which bonds were all sold and the money is in the treasury. The contracts were let as follows: For the fill to the approach, $10,500.00; for the substructure, $5,621.66; for the superstructure, $24,967.00, and the auditor's certificate of funds was as follows: For the fill to the approach of the bridge, $22,520.00; substructure, $7,000.00; superstructure $25.00.00. By reason of the action of the flood this year much earth was washed away where this fill is being made, which will necessitate the expenditure of an additional $3,000.00 to properly complete the work. The action of the water also demonstrated that an additional expense of $1,500.00 willl be necessary to properly protect the bridge by means of a heavy rip-rap wall. My questions are as follows:

"First: Is the certificate of funds by the auditor in the case of the issuance of bonds for specific purposes, such as this, required?

"Second: Is it necessary for the commissioners in providing for this extra work and expense, which at the time of the letting of the contract was unknown, to proceed as for a new improvement and enter into a separate contract for this work?

"Third: May we legally, under the flood act, proceed to let, after proper resolution or application to the court of common pleas, contracts for this additional work and take the money out of this fund?"

It seems to me that your first question is sufficiently answered by the provisions of section 5660, General Code, which is the section requiring the issuance of the auditor's certificate. It provides in part that,

"Money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds, sold and in process of delivery, shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund."

A provision of this sort would have been unnecessary, and would be meaningless if there were no requirement that a certificate be issued against the proceeds of bond issues.

In making this statement, however, regard must be had to the decision in the case of Akron vs. Dobson, 81 O. S. 66. This was a decision under a similar section of the municipal code, then denominated section 1536-205. The third branch of the syllabus in the case is as follows:

"3. Section 1536-205, Revised Statutes, providing that no contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or other order for the expenditure of money, be passed by the council or by any board or officer of the municipal corporation, unless the auditor of the corporation shall first certify to council that the money required for the contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay the appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn and not appropriated for any other purpose, does not apply to an ordinance appropriating the money obtained by council, from a sale of bonds made by it, to the purpose for which the bonds were sold."

It appeared that the entire bond issue in question in this case was to be devoted to the purchase of certain real estate and fire apparatus and nothing else. In the opinion, as pages 77 and 78, is found the following:

"It is also contended that the contract is void because the auditor did not certify to the council that the money required for the contract was in the city treasury as prescribed by section 1536-205, Revised Statutes. The supplemental petition avers that the auditor did not so certify. This is denied by the answer in the circuit court, and that court does not make any finding upon that issue. This contract cannot create an obligation against the city in the nature of a debt, to meet which no funds have been provided. The council issued and sold the bonds and appropriated the proceeds to meet the expenditures it authorized, and any obligations incurred by the ordinance under the authority conferred are payable only out of the appropriation, so that the section can have no application to such a case."

It does not really appear that the court's dictum (which does not exactly correspond to the third branch of the syllabus), was necessary to a decision of the case, inasmuch as the lower court had not made a finding of fact as to the issuance of a certificate, which was necessary because an issue of fact was raised on this point. The difference between the syllabus and the opinion in this particular is apparent. The syllabus declares that the issuance of the certificate is not necessary when the ordinance appropriating the money is passed, about which there could be no dispute. The opinion, however, speaks of the issuance of the certificate in connection with the contract; and this appears to have been the only question involved, and the question concerning which, as above remarked, the lower court made no finding of fact.

This decision is therefore unsatisfactory as a clear exposition of the law. A similar holding is found in the case of Emmert vs. City of Elyria, 74 O. S. 185, the second branch of the syllabus in which is as follows:

"Sections 45 and 45a of the municipal code (1536-205 and 1536-205a, Revised Statutes, Bates 5th ed.) providing in substance that no contract involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into unless the auditor of the corporation shall first certify to council that the money required for the contract is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn and not appropriated for any other purpose, and that a contract entered into contrary to such provision shall be void and that the money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds or noted sold and in process of delivery shall be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund, do not apply to contracts for street improvements, when bonds have been authorized by the municipality to be issued to pay the entire estimated cost and expense of the improvement."

In the opinion of the court is found the following:

"In Comstock vs. The Incorporated Village of Nelsonville, supra, it is held that, in the absence of an exception, section 2702 applied to so much of the cost of the street improvement as was to be paid by the city out of a levy and that it did not apply to so much as was to be paid by special assessment, for the reason that the payment that was to be made by the city was included in the general levy which was subject to limitation. As the general law then was, the city was not authorized to provide for its part by a levy extending over a number of years and by bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of the levy. Section 51 of the Code provides that bonds may be issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments and that the assessment may be payable in one to ten installments, and section 53 provides that any city or village is authorized to issue and sell its bonds as other bonds are sold to pay the corporation's part of any improvement and may levy taxes in addition to all other taxes authorized by law to pay such bonds and the interest thereon, and in section 95 it is provided that municipalities shall have power to issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments, and such bonds may be in sufficient amount to pay the estimated cost and expense of the improvement, so that it would seem to follow now that a municipality may issue bonds in sufficient amount to pay the estimated cost and expense of an improvement and may levy taxes in addition to all other taxes authorized by law, to pay the bonds issued and sold to pay its part of the cost of the improvement, that sections 45 and 45a do not apply to improvements for which the city has authorized bonds to be issued to pay the entire estimated cost and expense."

These decisions are under the city sections. Logically, they should apply also to the interpretation of section 5660. If it be the opinion of the court, however, that sections like these do not apply when the whole bond issue is for a single purpose I cannot understand how the decisions could be worked out with respect to county bonds, because nearly all county bond issues are for single specific purposes.

In the present state of the law I cannot advise otherwise than that the question is a doubtful one. It would be safer, however, to comply with the strict letter of section 5660. This should not be a cause of embarrassment, because the money is actually in the treasury. On the facts which you submit, the county originally had $70,000 in its treasury to pay for the improvement, which I think is unquestionably available for the purpose of making these additional expenditures. Of this $70,000 approximately $54.520 has been certified to, the effect of which, under section 5660, is to appropriate the money to the particular contracts on which the certificates were issued. Such money cannot be regarded as available for any other expenditure and could not be regarded, therefore, as available for the purposes which you mention, unless such purposes be regarded as in the nature of "extras" on the contract for the approaches already let, which, as I shall hereafter point out, is not the case. If your figures are correct, however, there remains something in excess of $15,000 of the proceeds of the bonds issued, which is in the treasury and not certified against. When the contract for the additional work is let, in the manner which I shall describe in, answering your second question, these certificates can be issued against this $15,000.

Answering your second question, I beg to state that in my opinion it is necessary in providing for the extra work which must be done, to proceed as for a new improvement and to enter into a separate contract for this work. I have searched in vain through the provisions relating to the letting of county contracts, as incorporated in the so-called "building regulations," found in sections 2343 to 2366, inclusive, and expressly made applicable to contracts for bridge approaches by section 7559, General Code, for any authority to incur what are known as "extras," regardless of the circumstances. Other provisions of law, such as those relating to the construction of state buildings, the doing of municipal contract work, and the construction of school houses, contain express or inferential authority for entering into supplemental contracts with the principal contractor, in case any additional work is required on his contract, with out necessitating competitive bidding on such additional work. I cannot avoid the conclusion that these express provisions in the other statutes simply emphasize the lack of any such provisions in the county statutes.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that any work required on a county improvement which is not covered by the original plans and specifications must be separately contracted for; and if the amount thereof exceeds $200.00 as provided in section 2354, the entire process of the preparation of plans and specifications and estimates, their approval and the letting of the contract, after competitive bidding, must be gone through with.

Your third question suggests a manner in which, under certain circumstances, the formalities of which I have just been speaking may be obviated. The provision of the Snyder act, to which you refer, is as follows:

"Section 1. The commissioners of any county or any road district, the board of education of any school district, the council of any municipal corporation or the trustee of any township are hereby empowered to authorize or enter into contracts temporarily to repair, reconstruct or replace any public property or public way which such commissioners, council or trustees are authorized to repair, reconstruct or construct under any general law of this state, if such public property or public way has been destroyed or injured by floods occurring in March and April, 1913, and if urgent public necessity exists for the making of such temporary repair, reconstruction or replacement; and to appropriate money, levy taxes, borrow money or issue bonds for such purposes. None of the provisions of the General Code requiring notice of any like repair or improvement to be given, imposing any limitation upon the time within which like contracts may be entered into or authorized; requiring competitive bidding in entering into like contracts; requiring the issuance by the auditor or clerk of a certificate that the money for such contracts is in the treasury or in process of collecting, unappropriated for any other purpose; requiring ordinances for like purposes to be published; requiring the submission of propositions to make like repairs or to reconstruct or construct like public improvements, property or way, or to expend money or levy taxes therefor to a vote of the electors; or subjecting any ordinance or resolution making any such contract or authorizing the same to be made, to a referendum of the electors, shall in any way apply to or govern proceedings for entering into or authorizing such contracts or appropriating money therefor. Directors of public service or safety in cities shall not be required to advertise for competitive bids in entering into any contract authorized by this section.

Provided, however, before any such contract for temporary repair, reconstruction or replacement involving an expenditure of more than five hundred dollars is authorized or entered into, such commissioners, board or council shall apply to the common pleas court of the county, or of any county in which any part of any such school district, road district or municipal corporation is located, or to any judge thereof. Such application shall set forth the nature of the repair, reconstruction or replacement proposed to be made, and the amount of money proposed to be expended upon each building, plant, sewer, aqueduct, reservoir, water mains, (including water pipes connected therewith), apparatus, levee, embankment, street, alley, bridge, culvert, viaduct, or approach thereto, or to any of them, or upon each like public improvement or public way, and the necessity thereof. Such court or judge shall forthwith hear and finally determine such application, and if it is found that such public necessity exists, that the proposed repair, reconstruction or replacement is temporary in its nature and should be made forthwith, and that the amount of money proposed to be expended therefor is reasonable and justified by such necessity, said court or judge shall allow the application, and board of officers so applying shall be authorized to proceed in the manner provided in this section. * * *"

It appears from your statement of facts that the proposed repairs and replacements are permanent and not temporary in their nature. I should be of the opinion, therefore, that the procedure of section 1 is not available to you, and that you would have to act under section 8 thereof, which is in part as follows:

"Section 8. Proceedings under the general laws of this state for the permanent repair, reconstruction or replacement of public property and public ways, destroyed or injured in the manner described in section one of this act, shall not be subject to any provisions of such laws requiring the submission of the proposition to make such repair, reconstruction or replacement, or to expend money for such purposes to a vote of the electors, or subjecting any ordinance or resolution making or authorizing to be made any such contract to a referendum. * * *"

This section, it will be observed, does not do away with the necessity of advertising for bids or preparing plans and specifications.

Even if application should be made to the common pleas judge, and he should allow the same, that would not, in my judgement, be a complete adjudication of the matter. As the proceedings before him are entirely exparte and summary in their nature it would still be possible for any interested taxpayer to raise the question as to whether or not the proposed repairs were actually temporary in their nature.

In my opinion, therefore, you should not proceed under section 1 of the Snyder act in making these repairs, but should act under the provisions of the building regulations.

I might add that while you assume that the county will be obliged to pay the additional three thousand dollars to complete the work which was damaged by the flood, there would appear to be some question as to whether or not under these circumstances the loss should not fall upon the contractors. Not knowing the circumstances, and not having the contract before me, and you not having requested my opinion upon this point, I express none, but suggest the question to you for your consideration. This suggestion, of course, relates solely to the three thousand dollar item of which you speak and not to the fifteen hundred dollar expenditure.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DUTY OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO PAY EXPENSE OF PURSUIT INCURRED BY SHERIFF UPON ESCAPE OF PRISONERS—QUESTION OF NEGLIGENCE IN PERMITTING ESCAPE ONE OF FACT.

When prisoners have escaped from the county jail by inserting their arms through the gratings of the jail door and turning the key therein, the fault should not necessarily be imputed to the sheriff, who has nothing to say as to the nature and construction of such door, and the county commissioners may pay the expenses incurred by such sheriff in pursuing and recapturing such prisoners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 17, 1913.

HON. T. E. MCELHINEY, Prosecuting Attorney, McConnelsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 7, 1913, you say:

"Some months ago three prisoners escaped from the jail in Morgan county in the following manner: There is one outside entrance to the jail proper, there being two doors to this entrance, the inner door being of iron bars running from top to bottom and cross bars from side to side. The bars in question leave apertures two and one-half or three inches square at all points where the bars cross; the door is made of solid plate surrounding the lock for a distance of nine inches on the side of the lock measuring from the key hole and seven inches to the bottom of the plate in which the lock is situated. The spaces between the bars will permit the hand of an ordinary sized person and a portion of the arm to reach through.

"On the occasion above mentioned, the prisoners in said jail were given the liberty of the corridor surrounding the cage, it being in the forenoon, and the matron and assistant doing some scrubbing and other cleaning in and about the corridor and cell; upon leaving the corridor on an errand the key was left inserted in the lock from the outside thereof, and the door being locked, and by means of reaching the hand and arm through the aperture before described, one of the prisoners was able to reach the key, unlock the door, and in this manner effect an escape.

"In pursuing the prisoners and recapturing them, items of expense were incurred in the way of livery and automobile hire, assistance for the sheriff, and other expenses, and the sheriff has presented these items in his expense account for payment by the county commissioners.

"I desire the opinion of your department as to whether these different expenses are proper charges against the county and properly included in the sheriff's itemized list of expenses, or whether they should be paid individually by the sheriff.

"The commissioners of the county have, by the placing of additional iron bars and plate, rendered it impossible for a prisoner to again reach the key if the same should be left in the lock as on this occasion.

"It has been customary for the sheriff in this county to give the prisoners through the day the liberty of the corridors of the jail, and especially is this true at or about meal times, or on occasions when the work was being done in the jail in the way of cleaning and rearranging cells."

From your very full statement of the case, I am unable to see that the sheriff was guilty of such acts of negligence as would preclude him from being allowed his reasonable expenses in the pursuit, recapture and return of escaped prisoners. The commissioners are charged with the erection and maintenance of a suitable jail in which to safely keep and confine prisoners. The sheriff is chargeable with due diligence in keeping prisoners and restraining them under all the conditions and circumstances existing at the time. He is not bound to repair the jail, not give it the highest physical efficiency to prevent an emergency, not ordinarily to be anticipated. Good faith, ordinary care, watchfulness and vigilence, are all that can be expected of him, in view of the circumstances. If he was not negligent or careless to that degree as to fairly and clearly impute to him the direct cause of their escape, he ought not to be chargeable therewith. This is a matter that should appeal to the fairness and good judgment of the county commissioners, in the light of all the circumstances and the condition of the jail; and if they allow the sheriff's bill, their action in that behalf can not be questioned, when done in good faith.

Each and every such case as you submit, should be determined in the light of good judgment and fairness. Humanity would warrant giving prisoners the use of the corridors, at reasonable times, the same as trusties at penal institutions are afforded extra privileges; and if any such should betray the confidence reposed in them and escape, it is the duty of the sheriff in charge to pursue and retake them; and in the absence of known and established negligence or carelessness, they should be reimbursed as to their expenses, under section 2997, General Code.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MONEYS RECEIVED UNDER SECTION 7033, ET SEQ., GENERAL CODE, MAY NOT BE EMPLOYED TO IMPROVE COUNTY OR TOWNSHIP LINE ROADS.

Sections 7177 and 6995, General Code, are the only provisions in the statutes for the improvement or construction of a county or township line road and under the terms of sections 7033 to 7052, General Code, township trustees are not empowered to expend the moneys received thereby for the purpose of improving a township and county line road.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28, 1913.

HON. IRVING CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 4th, in which you inquire as follows:

> "New London township, outside the corporate limits of the village of New London, has been erected into a road district under provisions of sections 7033 to 7052, General Code, and bonds of the district sold. Can the money so raised for improving the public ways of the district be used to improve by macadamizing a township and county line road, or such section thereof as has been apportioned to New London township under section 7177, General Code, without any assistance from the adjoining township or county? Can section 6995, General Code, apply to such case, or to any other than townships improving under section 6976 et seq? If not how can a township line road be improved?"

Sections 7033 to 7052, General Code, provide a scheme whereby bonds may be issued and taxes levied for the improvement of roads, when the township or part thereof is established by the township trustees as a road district. Said sections make no provision for the improvement of any road that does not lie wholly within a road district.

Section 7177, General Code, provides:

> "If a road is established as a part of the line or boundary of a township or municipal corporation, the trustees of such adjoining townships and council of such corporation, shall meet at a convenient place as soon after the first Monday of March as convenient, and apportion such road between the townships, or township and corporation, as justice and equity requires. The trustees of the respective townships, and council of the corporation, shall cause the road to be opened and improved accordingly, and shall thereafter cause their respective portions to be worked and kept in proper repair."

In order to come within the purview of section 7177, a road must be either on the line between two townships or on the line between a township and a municipal corporation, in the same county. That section has no application to a county line road.

Section 6995, General Code, provides:

> "The county commissioners and the township trustees may improve any county or township line road or public highway by jointly agreeing in regard thereto, and paying for said improvement under any plan and specifications authorized by law for road improvement in any county and township in the state."

The last quoted statute is incorporated in the subdivision of the township road laws, entitled "Roads partly within a municipality." When township trustees are improving roads under said subdivision, they may agree with the trustees of the adjoining township in the same county or with the county commissioners of an adjoining county, as to the improvement of a road or roads which are on a line between two townships of the same county or on a line between one county and a township of another county.

The method of improving roads prescribed by sections 7033 to 7055 is exclusive and independent of that prescribed by sections 7177 and 6995, respectively, and the provisions for the improvement of county or township line roads found in the latter sections cannot be so as to apply to improvements made under the former.

I am therefore of the opinion that money raised to improve roads under sections 7033 and 7052 cannot be used to improve a township and county line road or such section thereof as has been apportioned to a township under section 7177, General Code, with or without assistance from the adjoining township or county. Section 6995 applies only to a case where township trustees are improving roads under the subdivision in which that section is found, to wit, sections 6976 to 7018, inclusive.

The only provisions of statute I have been able to find for improving township line roads are those embraced in sections 6995 and 7177, supra.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

LIABILITY OF PARENT TO PROVIDE SCHOOL BOOKS FOR CHILD WHEN ABLE SO TO DO.

Under sections 7763, 12977 and 12978 of the General Code, the parent if able so to do is bound to see to the education of his child and must provide the latter with books, or be subjected to the penalty provided by section 1655 of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1913.

HON. JAMES J. WEADOCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 28 1913, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "The board of education of one of our townships has submitted to me the following inquiry: The board has passed a rule whereby they furnish school books free to pupils who are unable to furnish the same. One of the residents of the school district who has ample means and is able to provide his children with school books refuses to furnish the same and sends his children to school without any books. Is there any provision under our statutes whereby this parent can be compelled by the board to furnish his children with school books, and if so, what is that provision?"

In reply to your inquiry would say that section 7763 of the General Code provides for the school attendance of children between the ages of eight and fourteen years as follows:

> "Every parent, guardian or other person having charge of any child between the ages of eight and fourteen years must send such child to a public, private or parochial school, for the full time that the school attended is in session, which shall in no case be for less than twenty-eight weeks. Such attendance must begin within the first week of the school term, unless the child is excused therefrom by the superintendent of the public schools, in city or other districts having such superintendent, or by the clerk of the board of education in village, special and township districts not having a superintendent, or by the principal of the private or parochial school upon satisfactory showing, either that the bodily or mental condition of the child does not permit of its attendance at school, or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such superintendent, or clerk as the case may be, to teach the branches named in the next preceding section."

Section 12977 of the General Code provides that except in certain cases the parent or guardian in charge of a minor between eight and fourteen years of age shall cause such minor to attend school as follows:

> "Whoever being the parent or guardian or other person in charge of a minor between eight and fourteen years of age or a minor between fourteen and sixteen years of age who has not passed a satisfactory fifth grade test in the studies enumerated in section seventy-seven hundred and sixty-two or is not regularly employed, upon notice from a truant officer as provided by law, fails to cause such minor to attend a public, private or parochial school, unless such person proves his inability so to do, shall be fined not less than five nor more than twenty dollars, or the court may in its discretion, require the person so convicted to give a bond in the sum of one hundred dollars, with sureties to the approval of the court, conditioned that he or she will cause the child under his or her charge to attend some recognized school within two days thereafter, and to remain at such school during the term prescribed by law; and upon the failure or refusal of any such parent, guardian or other person to pay said fine and costs or furnish said bond according to the order of the court, then said parent, guardian or other person shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than thirty days.

Section 12978 of the General Code provides that a person violating the preceding section may be required to give a bond in the sum of $100.00, etc., as follows:

"The court may require a person violating the next preceding section to give a bond in the sum of one hundred dollars, with sureties to the approval of the court, conditioned that such person will cause such minor to attend such school within two days thereafter, and remain in attendance therein during the term as provided by law."

Section 7739 of the General Code provides that each board of education may furnish school books free of charge, as follows:

"Each board of education may furnish, free of charge, school books, necessary to enable the parent or guardian, without expense therefor, to comply with the requirements of this chapter, to be paid for out of the contingent fund at its disposal. Such levy each year, in addition if necessary to that otherwise authorized, as may be necessary to furnish such school-books free of charge to all the pupils attending the public schools, is hereby authorized. But pupils wholly or in part supplied with necessary school books shall be supplied only as other or new books are needed. All school books furnished as herein provided, shall be the property of the district, and loaned to the pupils on such terms and conditions as each board prescribes."

You state that your board has adopted a rule whereby they furnish school books free to pupils whose parents are unable to provide the same. I will not pass upon the legality of this rule so adopted by said board of education for the reason that it is not necessary to take it into consideration in this particular case. While it is doubtful whether or not a board of education can legally adopt and enforce such a rule, nevertheless, the adoption of such rule does not relieve the parents who are able to do so, from the duty of contributing to the support, maintenance and education of their minor children under seventeen years of age, as will be hereinafter pointed out. You state that the parent in this case is sending his children to school as he is legally required to do by virtue of sections 7762, 12977 and 12978 of the General Code, above quoted, and that such parent is amply able to provide school books for his said children, but refuses to do so. If said parent desires to raise any question as to the validity of the rule passed by the board of education, he must do so in some way other than refusing to furnish his children with school books.

Sections 7709 and 7714 inclusive, of the General Code, provide in substance the manner whereby boards of education shall procure and provide the necessary text books for their respective schools.

Section 7715 of the General Code provides that such books so provided must be sold to the pupils of school age in the respective school districts at not to exceed ten per cent. of the price paid by the board of education to the publisher, as follows:

"Each board of education shall make all necessary provisions and arrangements to place the books so purchased within easy reach of and accessible to all the pupils in their district. For that purpose it may make such contracts, and take such security as it deems necessary, for the custody, care and sale of such books and accounting for the proceeds; but not to exceed ten per cent. of the cost price shall be paid therefor. Such books must be sold to the pupils of school age in the district, at the price paid the publisher, and not to exceed ten per cent. there for added. The proceeds of sales shall be paid into the contingent fund of such district. Boards also may contract with local retail dealers to furnish such books at prices above specified, the board being still responsible to the publishers for all books purchased by it."

Section 7716 of the General Code provides that when pupils remove from any district and have such text books as were adopted by such district, and which are not the same as those of the district into which they move, that the board of the district from which they remove shall purchase such books at the fair value thereof as follows:

"When pupils remove from any district, and have text books of the kind adopted in such district and not the kind adopted in the district to which they remove, and wish to dispose of them, the board of the district from which they remove, if requested, shall purchase them at the fair value thereof, and resell them as other books. Nothing herein shall prevent the board of education from furnishing free books to pupils as provided by law."

Parents are charged with the care, support, maintenance and education of their children under seventeen years of age by virtue of the provisions of section 1655 of the General Code as follows:

"Whoever is charged by law with the care, support, maintenance or education of a minor under the age of seventeen years, and is able to support or contribute toward the support or education of such minor, fails, neglects, or refuses so to do, or who abandons such minor shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than ten days nor more than one year, or both. Such neglect, non-support or abandonment shall be deemed to have been committed in the county in which such minor may be at the time of such neglect, non-support or abandonment. Each day of such failure, neglect or refusal shall constitute a separate offense, and the judge may order that such person stand committed until such fines and costs are paid."

Inasmuch as school books are not furnished free of charge to the pupils of parents who are able to pay for them in the district about which you inquire, then such books must be sold to such pupils in accordance with section 7715 of the General Code, and a statutory duty is imposed upon such parents to pay for the books so sold to such pupils by virtue of the provisions contained in sections 7715 and 1655 of the General Code.

I assume the children of the parent in question are under seventeen years of age, and, therefore, if such parent who is able to do so, fails, neglects or refuses to buy books for his children, then he is, to that extent, refusing to contribute to the education of his children, and is subject to prosecution under the provisions of said section 1655 of the General Code.

Under the circumstances which you state, and for the foregoing reasons it is the conclusion of this department that such parent is not only required to send his children to school, as provided by sections 7763, 12977 and 12978 of the General Code (unless his said children come within some of the exceptions of said statutes), but is also bound to provide books for his said children and can be prosecuted for not doing so by virtue of section 1655, supra.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

JOINT BODY CONSISTING OF EMERGENCY FLOOD RELIEF COMMISSION AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY ACT ONLY UPON THE ASSENT OF EACH INDIVIDUAL BOARD VOTING INDEPENDENTLY.

Inasmuch as under the emergency flood commission act, wherever the flood commission is referred to, it is spoken of as an independent commission in itself, and inasmuch as furthermore, county commissioners are everywhere referred to as an independent board rather than as individuals, constituting such board, the authorizations of the act extending to joint actions upon the part of the emergency commission and the county commissioners require both the consent of the flood commission acting as a board and also the consent of the county commissioners acting in like capacity for all acts authorized to be jointly performed by them.

Inasmuch as the making of allowances for payment, under section 2460, General Code, constitutes just as much a part of the proceedings as does the entering into and approval of contracts, the joint consent of both the commission and the county commissioners is required in such allowance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 12, 1913.

HON. ROBERT G. PATTERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 24th requesting my opinion on the following question arising under Senate Bill No. 287, which is entitled "An act to establish the Ohio flood relief commission, etc."

1. "What is the constitution of the joint body which consists of the emergency commission and the county commissioners; that is, should the two bodies for the purpose of the act organize as a single commission, and when so organized should the votes of a majority of the individual members, consisting of the county commissioners and the members of the emergency commission, determine the action of the body; or should the two bodies—the emergency commission on the one hand, and the county commissioners on the other—be regarded as separate bodies in joint session as in the case of joint county ditch proceedings; or should the emergency commission be regarded as a quasi corporate entity, which, for the purposes of the act, is added to the membership, so to speak, of the county commissioners, having as a body a vote in the deliberations of the county commissioners respecting the matters to which the act refers equal to the vote cast by an individual county commissioner.

2. "The further question arises as to whether or not the emergency commission is required to join with the county commissioners in making allowances for payments under section 2460, General Code, in so far as payments are made upon contracts relating to the repairing, rebuilding and restoring of public works destroyed or damaged by the floods of March and April, 1913."

You have submitted with your questions a very full statement bearing upon the questions for which I thank you.

As you state sections 7 and 10 of said S. B. No. 287 present both of the questions above stated, these sections are as follows:

"Section 7. If within fifteen days after this act shall take effect a petition signed by the electors of any county, equal in number to ten per centum of those who voted at the last regular county election, shall be filed with the Ohio flood relief commission, stating that public works or public property in such county has been seriously damaged by the floods of March and April, 1913, so as to constitute an emergency which the county commissioners are unable to meet and that such authorities are unable to adequately provide for the repair of the damage caused by such floods and for the reconstruction of public works made necessary thereby, the Ohio flood relief commission shall forthwith investigate the statements of such petition. If the commission finds that the statements therein made are true, they shall so notify the probate judge of such county who shall within five days appoint with the approval of the Ohio flood relief commission not to exceed four electors of such county to constitute the emergency commission of such county.

"Section 10. The emergency commission of any county shall exercise in conjunction with the county commissioners such powers and duties as are conferred upon the county commissioners in so far as they extend to the repairing, rebuilding and restoring of public works destroyed or damaged by the floods of March and April, 1913, and the emergency commission shall exercise and perform such duties jointly with such county commissioners."

The form in which your first question is above phrased suggests what I think are the three possible constructions of the peculiar language of section 10 above quoted. The first of the three possible constructions is that which would read the section as having an effect similar to that of section 2333, e. seq., of the General Code, providing for the organization and constitution of a court house commission. Some of these related sections are as follows:

"Section 2333. When county commissioners have determined to erect a court house or other county building at a cost to exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, they shall submit the question of issuing bonds of the county therefor to vote of the electors thereof. If determined in the affirmative, within thirty days thereafter, the county commissioners shall apply to the judge of a court of common pleas of the county who shall appoint four suitable and competent freehold electors of the county who shall in connection with the county commissioners constitute a building commission and serve until its completion. * * *"

"Section 2338. After adopting plans, specifications and estimates, the commission shall invite bids and award contracts for the building and for furnishing, heating, lighting and ventilating it, and for sewerage thereof. Until the building is completed and accepted by the building commission it may determine all questions connected therewith, and shall be governed by the provisions of this chapter relating to the erection of public buildings of the county.

"Section 2339. The commission may employ architects, superintendents and other necessary employes during such construction and fix their compensation and bond.

"Section 2340. When approved by the building commission, plans, drawings, representations, bills of material, specifications of work and estimates of cost thereof shall be filed by the county auditor in his office and shall not be altered, unless such alteration shall first be drawn, specified and estimated as required by law for the original plans and approved by the building commission. No change shall be made until the price to be paid therefor shall have been agreed upon in writing between the commission and the contractor.

"Section 2341. Resolutions for the adoption or alteration of plans or specifications, or award of contracts, hiring of architects, superintendent or other employes and the fixing of their compensation, the approval of bonds, and the allowance of estimates shall be in writing and require for their adoption the votes of five members of the commission, taken by yeas and nays recorded on the journal of the county commissioners. When signed by five members of the commission, the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer for the payment of all bills and estimates of such commission."

The method of procedure employed in these related sections is, as you point out in your letter, a most convenient one. The sections themselves would answer as to the court house commission all of the questions which you raise concerning the emergency commission. The very clearness of these sections and the method of procedure under them is doubtless what has induced you to state in your letter that "the idea of the single joint commission similar to the court house act is certainly the most practicable." You also suggest that "the legislature in enacting the present act seems to have more closely followed the idea of the court house commission, etc."

I have looked at that question as to the adoption or rejection of the first possible construction above suggested from the same angle of view, that is to say, it has seemed to me that there are several points of similarity as between section 10 of the emergency commission act and the whole court house commission act, so as to lead one to the reasonable assumption that the legislature may have had in mind the procedure of the latter in enacting the former. Unfortunately, however, there are insuperable difficulties in the way of construing section 10 of the emergency commission act as having the same effect as that of the above quoted provisions of the court house commission act.

In the first place, the court house commission consists of a definite number of persons, i. e., seven, of which the "four freeholder electors" constitute four members and the individual commissioners the other three members. The "commission" provided for in the court house act is a single body, always referred to as such. On the other hand the "emergency commission" provided for in sections 7 and 10 of the act under consideration consists of the electors appointed by the probate judge. Nowhere is there any provision that the county commissioners shall be members of the emergency commission. Furthermore, the number of members of the emergency commission is not fixed by the act. Whereas, in order to constitute a court house commission it is necessary to have seven members, four of whom shall be competent freehold electors, and three of whom shall be the county commissioners, yet as to the emergency commission, if it were to be regarded as a single body embracing the commissioners as members, the numerical membership would be indefinite. This would, of itself, be a sufficient reason for holding against any such possible construction, for if the body is to be a single one, of which the individual commissioners are members, then the constitution of a quorum in that body would be a matter which would be left to the discretion or caprice of the probate judge in determining the number of members whom he would appoint to the "emergency commission." This would lead to two constitutional difficulties. First, it might be claimed with a great show of reason that the delegation to the probate judge of the power to determine the number of members of the single body and thus to constitute a quorum and a majority vote would amount to a delegation of legislative power, the subjects being matters almost universally governed by legislation in other similar instances.

Second, it could be well claimed that an act which would result in a commission of five members in one county, so that the commissioners would have the balance of power in that county, and seven members in another county in which the commissioners would not have the balance of power, would be an act of a general nature lacking uniformity of operation. But there is an essential difference between section 2333 and related sections on the one hand and sections 7 and 10 of the emergency commission act which appears on the face of the respective sections.

In section 2333, General Code, it is provided that "the freehold electors shall act in connection with the county commissioners;" in section 7 of the emergency act the "four electors themselves constitute the emergency commission, and the county commissioners have no membership in such commission. Then it is provided in section 10 that the emergency commission constituted, as provided in section 7, shall exercise in conjunction with the county commissioners the power therein conferred.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the first possible construction of sections 7 and 10 above suggested must be rejected and that the individual members of the emergency commission do not constitute members of a single body of which the individual county commissioners are also members, and in which body the vote of each individual is of equal weight and the majority of the individuals is necessary to determine the action of the body. Choice is, therefore, to be made between the other two possible constructions above suggested.

Which of the other two constructions will be given to the language of section 10 might be said to depend largely upon the interpretation of the phrase "county commissioners." In the court house commission act above quoted from the word "commissioners" evidently refers to the individual members of the board of county commissioners, and not to the board itself. This does not necessarily appear on the face of section 2333, but does appear upon consideration of section 2341 above quoted. In fact I think that the provisions of section 2341 and that section alone produce the result of which I speak, and that if it were not for that section it would not so clearly appear that the commission provided for in section 2333 consisted of seven members.

In the case of section 10 of the emergency commission act I have reached the conclusion that the phrase "county commissioners" is used in what virtually amounts to its commonest sense, viz., meaning the "board of county commissioners." In the chapter relating to the powers and duties of county commissioners the phrase is oftenest used in this sense.

I shall not burden this opinion by quoting the numerous provisions of that chapter but call attention to the fact that the whole phrase "board of county commissioners" is but seldom used while the commonest phrase is "the county commissioners" or merely "the commissioners." Whenever it is so used in this chapter it is clear that it means the board of county commissioners because all three commissioners need not concur as the action of the county commissioners is by majority vote. This then is the primary and ordinary meaning of the phrase "county commissioners." It refers not to the individual members of the board in the collective sense but to the board itself as a governmental entity and body corporate.

This conclusion is strengthened by consideration of section 6 of the emergency act relating to the commission in cities, which is as follows:

> "Section 6. The emergency commission of any municipality shall have, in conjunction with the director of public service, all the powers and duties of the director of public service in such municipality in so far as they may extend to the repairing, rebuilding and restoring of public works destroyed or damaged by the floods of March and April, 1913, and shall exercise and perform such powers and duties jointly with such director."

The last clause of the above section is parallel to the last clause of section 10. I am of the opinion that the legislature intended the effect of the one to be similar to that of the other. There can be no question as to the meaning of the phrase "the emergency commission * * * shall exercise and perform such powers and duties jointly with such director." The use of the word "jointly" in this connection, together with the designation of the emergency commission as a "commission" and not the members of it as "commissioners" lead to the conclusion that the concurrence of a city emergency commission, as a unit, determined by a majority vote of the members thereof, with the director of public service on the other hand, is necessary to any action to be taken under said section 6.

So then, would I construe section 10. In my opinion the emergency commission is not a fourth county commissioner; but it is a body politic. The case cited by you of Chesborough vs. Commissioners, 37 O. S. 508, in so far as it relates to the necessity of a majority of each board of county commissioners in a joint county ditch proceeding concurring in the official action, may be applied to the construction of said section 10.

I am, therefore, of the opinion in answer to your first question that the county commissioners and the emergency commission shall not organize as a single joint body except perhaps in an informal way and for convenience. The emergency commission should separately organize, and upon any question arising, the emergency commission should determine its attitude by a majority vote of its members, and the county commissioners determine their attitude by a majority vote of the individual commissioners, and if the two attitudes thus determined upon do not agree no action can be taken.

I observe that you state that this construction does not appeal to you because of the opportunity for the two bodies to become dead-locked and thus defeat the operation of the law, a result which ought to be avoided. I acknowledge the force of this suggestion; but it is not permitted to read into a statute phraseology which is not there nor to ignore express provisions which are present there because of the mistaken policy of the legislature.

Answering your second question, I am of the opinion that the issuance of warrants to conform to contracts made by the two boards jointly must be approved in the same manner.

Section 2460 cited by you, provides in part as follows:

> "No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim. * * *"

In my opinion, the provisions of section 10, by necessary implication extend the authority of the emergency commission as far as that of the county commissioners extends with respect to the repairing, re-building and restoring of public works destroyed or damaged by floods of March and April, 1913. It surely cannot be contended that the allowance of a claim against the county, created under and by virtue of a contract made in pursuance of this joint authority but referable to that contract for the purpose of determining the extent of performance and the amount due, is not a power of the county commissioners respecting the repair, re-building and restoring of public works destroyed or damaged by the floods mentioned. It seems to me that it is a power which is related to such repairing, re-building and restoring equally as closely as is the power to enter into the contracts themselves. It involves the superintendence of the contracted work with respect to its performance, and one of the evident designs of the emergency commission act being to place a check upon the county commissioners with respect to the matters which it concerns, this superintendence must be deemed to be within the scope of the powers referred to in section 10.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that warrants for payments on contracts made by the emergency commission and the county commissioners acting jointly under section 10 of senate bill No. 287, may be issued only upon the proper certificate of the emergency commission and the commissioners, jointly made, this being a case wherein the amount due "is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal" within the meaning of said section 2460, General Code.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ACT PROVIDING FOR REBUILDING OF SCHOOL HOUSE DESTROYED BY CASUALTY OR CONDEMNED BY CHIEF INSPECTOR OF WORKSHOPS AND FACTORIES IS PROPERLY DECLARED AN EMERGENCY MEASURE AND TAKES EFFECT IMMEDIATELY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 23, 1913.

HON. FRANK C. ANDERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 18th submitting certain facts on which the following question of law arises:

> "Is an act of the general assembly, containing an emergency section, passed by the required vote, subject to the referendum?
> "The act in question takes out of the Smith law limitations, levies to provide for the retirement of bonds issued either before or after the passage of the act for the purpose of re-building or replacing a school house destroyed by casualty or condemned by the action of the chief inspector of workshops and factories.
> "The emergency recited is that without the removal of the tax limitations many school districts will be unable to comply with the orders of the inspector, etc."

Clearly, the declaration of an emergency under section 1d of article 2 of the constitution, as amended, is within the discretionary power of the legislature. The legislature is required to recite the acts constituting an emergency and necessitating the withdrawal of the legislation from the referendum If the recitals so made do not of themselves in law make out a case of an emergency and of necessity of immediate effectiveness, in all probability a court would hold the emergency section void. However, in the case you state, the facts do, in my opinion, constitute an emergency, and the legislature's recital of these facts cannot be disputed.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the act to which you refer is at present in effect, and that by virtue thereof a budget commission may allow a board of education a sinking fund levy for the purposes referred to in the act in excess of the fifteen mill limit of the Smith law.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY NOT MAKE EMERGENCY LEVY FOR ROAD PURPOSES WITHOUT SPECIFYING PARTICULAR ROADS.

Levies made under section 7419, General Code, by the county commissioners for the repair of roads destroyed by floods, or other casualties and exempted from the general tax limitations, may not be made by the county commissioners for general road purposes without specifying the particular roads which are in need of such repair.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16, 1913.

HON. E. W. COSTELLO, Prosecuting Attorney, Defiance, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 7th wherein you request my opinion on the following question:

> "May the county commissioners under section 7419 make a levy for general road purposes without specifying the particular roads which are in need of repair and for the real purpose of providing a fund for the general improvement, maintenance and repair of roads throughout the county outside of the Smith law limitations?"

The question involves the joint construction of sections 7419 and 5649-4, General Code, which are as follows:

> "Section 5649-4. For the emergencies mentioned in sections forty-four hundred and fifty, forty-four hundred and fifty-one, fifty-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-four hundred and nineteen of the General Code, the taxing authorities of any district may levy a tax sufficient to provide therefor, irrespective of any of the limitations of this act.
> "Section 7419. When one or more of the principal highways of a county, or part thereof, have been destroyed or damaged by freshet, land slide, wear of water courses, or other casualty, or, by reason of the large amount of traffic thereon or from neglect or inattention to the repair thereof, have become unfit for travel or cause difficulty, danger or delay to teams passing thereon, and the commissioners of such county are satisfied that the ordinary levies authorized by law for such purposes will be inadequate to provide money necessary to repair such damages or to remove obstructions from, or to make the changes or repairs in such road or roads as are rendered necessary from the causes herein enumerated, they may annually thereafter levy a tax at their June session, not exceeding five mills upon the dollar upon all taxable property of the county, to be expended under their direction or by the employment of labor and the purchase of materials in such manner as may seem to them most advantageous to the interest of the county, for the construction, reconstruction or repair and maintenance of such road or roads or part thereof."

In the case of State on the relation of the Tax Commission vs. The Auditor of Franklin county, decided last year by the then circuit court of Franklin county, this question was squarely raised and passed upon. It was therein held that the commissioners may not levy under section 7419 for general purposes and have their levy regarded as "an emergency" levy under section 5649-4, but that the resolution of the county commissioners making the levy must specify each road which has been damaged and is in need of repairs, the casualty occasioning the emergency and the amount of money needed for the particular road; and that an emergency must be recited in order to justify the auditor in making the levy directly without the intervention of a budget commission and irrespective of any of the rate limitations.

Whether or not a levy may be made in the manner described by you under section 7419, but subject to the limitations of the Smith one per cent. law was a question not passed upon in the case to which I have referred; nor is this the question which I understand you to ask.

The case to which I refer is not reported so far as I know, although it is possible you may find it in some of the recent law publications. I participated in the action myself, however, and the records of this department disclose with exactness what was held and determined therein.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the commissioners may not make a levy outside of the Smith law limitations under section 7419, General Code, in the manner described by you.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY NOT EXPEND MORE THAN $50,000 FOR INFIRMARY AND BUILDINGS WITHOUT VOTE OF THE PEOPLE, EVEN THOUGH FUNDS ARE ON HAND.

Under sections 5638, 5640 and 2436, General Code, county commissioners are limited to an expenditure of $50,000 without vote of the people for the rebuilding of an infirmary destroyed by fire or other casualty and the fact that there are funds in the treasury in excess of said $50,000 does not operate to exempt from this requirement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1913.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 21, 1913, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "Can the commissioners of Clark county, Ohio, expend $75,000 or $100,000 for land for an infirmary and buildings thereon, part of the money being now in the poor fund, and the other part expected from the sale of the present infirmary site, without first submitting the question of such expenditure to a vote of the people, as provided by section 5639-1, General Code?"

Among other buildings designated therein, section 2419 of the General Code provides that an infirmary shall be provided by the commissioners when in their judgment it is needed, and that the same shall be of such style, dimensions and expense as the commissioners determine. (56 O. L. 160.)

Among other provisions therein stated, section 2433, of the General Code, provides that the commissioners may purchase land for an infirmary at such prices and upon such terms and payment as are agreed upon between them and the owners of the property. (66 O. L. 52.)

These provisions conferred ample authority on the commissioners to purchase land for the purpose and erect an infirmary building without submitting any question in regard thereto to the voters of the county. Later, however, as a limitation on the power of the county commissioners conferred by these statutes as to infirmary or other county buildings, the legislature, by an act providing for rates of taxation for county purposes, provided further as follows:

> "The county commissioners of any such county shall not levy any such tax or appropriate any money for the purpose of building public county buildings, purchasing sites therefor, or for lands for infirmary purposes, or for building any bridge, except in case of casualty, as provided for in section two, the expense of which shall exceed ten thousand dollars, without first submitting to the qualified voters of said county the question as to the policy of building any public county building or buildings or for purchasing sites therefor, or for the purchase of lands for infirmary purposes by general tax * * * each proposition shall be separately submitted, and printed tickets shall be provided by the said county commissioners, on which shall be printed 'For ————tax, yes;' which blank shall be filled with a proper designation of the proposed improvement, as the notice may require." (74 O. L. 95.)

Saving amendments to the provision as to the cost of expense figures of the building or purchase, exceeding which the provisions of the act were to apply, this act as far as the question here presented is concerned remained practically as originally adopted down to 1911. (R. S. Sec. 2825; G. C. Secs. 5638, 5640.)

In view of the fact that the provisions above noted were originally enacted as part of an act providing and regulating taxes for county purposes and since then so classified, and the further fact that by the provisions noted the question to be submitted to the voters was as to the policy of building county buildings, or the purchase of land for infirmary purposes by general tax, and that the vote or ballot provided for in form was one in favor of or against the tax for the improvement or purchase submitted, there is room for doubt whether the statutory provisions above noted had any application to expenditures for the purposes named in the statute which were not thereafter to be provided for by taxation. As to this, however, I am not unmindful that the courts, in cases where this question was not made and where obviously the cost of the improvements there in question was to be met by taxation, have spoken of this statute as applying where the cost or expenditure exceeded the figures named in the statute.

State ex rel vs. Davis 55 O. S. 1, 14.
State ex rel vs. Brown 60 O. S. 462, 471.
State ex rel vs. Commissioners 5 N. P. 260.

In 1911 the legislature by act (102 O. L. 447) amended section 5638, General Code, and for section 5640 substituted section 5640-1, which sections as amended and substituted are as follows:

> "Section 5638. The county commissioners shall not levy a tax, appropriate money or issue bonds for the purpose of building county buildings, purchasing sites therefor, or for land for infirmary purposes, the expense of which will exceed $15,000.00 except in case of casualty, and as hereinafter provided; or for building a county bridge, the expense of which will exceed $18,000.00 except in case of casualty and as hereinafter provided; or enlarge, repair, improve or rebuild a county building, the entire cost of which expenditure will exceed $10,000.00; without first submitting to the voters of the county the question as to the policy of making such expenditure.
> "Section 5640-1. The ballots provided by the deputy state improvisors shall have printed upon the same the words 'in favor of the expenditure of $————for the purpose of————————' and 'against the expenditure of

> $———' for the purpose for which said money is to be expended. If the board of the county commissioners desire to submit upon the same ballot more than one question as to the expenditure of money for any of the purposes referred to in section 5638, the same may be done by proper resolution and notice, and by separately stating upon said ballot each proposition, as above provided."

The legislature by these amendments have eliminated the question hereinbefore suggested; for the provision now is, not that the question submitted to the voters shall be as to the policy of erecting county buildings or purchasing infirmary lands by general tax, but that the question submitted shall be as to the policy of making expenditure for the propositions, and this likewise is the form of the ballot prescribed in section 5640-1. The provisions above noted seem clearly to exclude any authority on the part of the county commissioners to make the proposed expenditure in question without submitting the same to the voters of the county, even though the money to meet such expenditure may not have to be raised by an issue of bonds and tax levy.

Section 2436, General Code, provides as follows:

> "For the purpose of rebuilding an infirmary destroyed by fire or other casualty, the commissioners of a county may appropriate money, levy tax and issue and sell the bonds of such county in anticipation thereof, in an amount not to exceed fifty thousand dollars, without first submitting to the voters thereof the question of rebuilding such infirmary, appropriating such money, levying such tax and issuing and selling such bonds."

It is plain that there is nothing in the situation of fact presented in your inquiry bringing the same within the provisions of the section last noted, and it follows that the commissioners as to this transaction are governed by the provisions of section 5638, and that the question of the proposed expenditures will have to be submitted to the voters of the county in manner and form provided for in sections 5639-1 and 5640-1.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS NOT AUTHORIZED TO FIX ESTIMATE FOR BIDS ON ERECTION OF SUPERSTRUCTURE FOR A BRIDGE — ESTIMATE IN CASE OF ERECTION OF SUBSTRUCTURE—PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS NOT TO BE APPROVED BY COMMISSIONERS, AUDITOR AND SURVEYOR IN ERECTION OF SUPERSTRUCTURE.

Under section 2343, General Code, county commissioners are authorized to have plans and specifications made and to fix an estimate for bids upon the erection of a substructure of a bridge. Under the same statute, however, bids may be received upon iron or reinforced concrete substructures for bridges upon plans and specifications submitted by the bidders themselves.

Under section 2344, General Code, the county commissioners may or may not cause plans and specifications to be prepared as they see fit for bids upon the erection of a superstructure for a bridge, but there is nothing in the statute authorizing or requiring the commissioners to fix an estimate for such bids.

Under section 2345, General Code, they must receive bids for a superstructure upon plans and specifications submitted by the bidders themselves in the erection of a superstructure.

The reference in sections 2353, 2354 and 2358, General Code, to estimates required in the erection of bridges generally, must be considered inconsistent with the above quoted statutes, and is to be explained by the fact that in times passed this reference referred to estimates formerly required by the laws in the erection of bridges generally.

There is nothing in the statutes, therefore, prohibiting the making of a contract for a bridge superstructure in excess of any estimate fixed by the county commissioners.

The requirement of section 2350, General Code, that plans and specifications of work and estimates relating to the building of a bridge shall be submitted to the commissioners, county auditor, and county surveyor for approval and deposited with the county auditor for inspection of the parties interested, refers only to such plans and specifications and estimates as are authorized to be prepared by the county commissioners, and has no application to plans and specifications prepared and filed by the bidders themselves.

Under section 2343, General Code, bids upon the erection of a substructure for a bridge may not exceed the estimate fixed by the county commissioners, even though the plans and specifications therefor have been submitted by the bidder himself.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 3, 1913.

HON. ALLEN THURMAN WILLIAMSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 14th submitting for my opinion thereon the following questions:

> "1. Are county commissioners authorized to award a contract for a bridge superstructure to a bidder who submits with his bid his own plans and specifications, at a price in excess of an estimate which has been made by the engineer upon the direction of the commissioners, acting under section 2343, General Code, said estimate relating both to the substructure and the superstructure of the bridge?
> "2. Must the plans and specifications which may be submitted by a bidder, in case his bid is accepted, be approved by the commissioners, auditor and surveyor under section 5350, General Code?"

I am not sure that your letter relates solely to the contract for the superstructure, and shall also consider the question of a contract for the substructure as a separate question.

Sections 2343 etc., General Code, constitute all the statutory provisions relating to the letting of bridge contracts. I quote such portions of the related sections as throw light upon the questions which you submit.

"Section 2343. When it becomes necessary for the commissioners of a county to erect or cause to be erected a public building, or substructure for a bridge * * * before entering into any contract therefor * * * they shall cause to be made by a * * * civil engineer the following: full and accurate plans * * *; accurate bills * * * of * * * material * * *; full and complete specifications * * *; and full and accurate estimate of each item of expense, and of the aggregate cost thereof.

"Nothing in this section shall prevent the commissioners from receiving from bidders on iron or reinforced concrete substructures for bridges the necessary plans and specifications therefor."

"Section 2344. When it becomes necessary to erect a bridge, the county commissioners shall determine the length and width of the superstructure, * * * and advertise for proposals for performing the labor and furnishing materials * * *. In their discretion the commissioners may cause to be prepared, plans, descriptions and specifications for such superstructure, which shall be kept on file in the auditor's office for inspection * * * and invite bids or proposals in accordance therewith.

"Section 2345. They shall also invite, receive and consider proposals on any other plan at the option of the bidders, and shall require that all proposals on such plan shall be accompanied with plans and specifications * * *."

"Section 2346. In their advertisements the commissioners shall * * * state the time when the place where bids will be opened and contract awarded. At such time and place, or at a time to which they shall publicly adjourn the consideration thereof, they shall publicly open * * * the proposals made and award the contract * * * for the erection of such superstructure to the person or persons * * * who is the lowest or best bidder or bidders, considering price, plan, material and method of construction.

"Section 2347. The plans and specifications upon and according to which the contracts are awarded, shall be kept on file in the office of the auditor and made a part of the contract with the successful bidder or bidders. * * *

"Section 2348. If the plans, drawing, representations, bills of material and specifications of work, and estimates of the cost thereof in detail and in the aggregate required in the preceding sections relate to the building of a court house or jail, or an addition to or alteration, repair or improvement thereof, they shall be submitted to the commissioners, together with the clerk of the court, the sheriff and probate judge, and one person to be appointed by the judge of the court of common pleas, for their approval. * * *"

"Section 2350. If the plans, drawings, representations, bills of material, specifications of work and estimates relate to the building of a bridge, they shall be submitted to the commissioners, county auditor and county surveyor. If approved by a majority of them, a copy thereof shall be deposited with the county auditor and kept for the inspection of parties interested."

"Section 2352. When the plans, drawings, representations, bills of material, specifications and estimates are so made and approved, the county commissioners shall give public notice in two of the principal papers in the county having the largest circulation therein, of the time and place where sealed proposals will be received for performing the labor and furnishing the materials necessary to the erection of such building, bridge or bridge substructure * * * and a contract based on such proposals will be awarded. * * *. They (the plans, etc.) shall be open to public inspection at all reasonable hours, between the date of such notice and the making of such contract.

"Section 2355. If they fail to make a contract as herein provided, on the day named in the notice, the commissioners may continue from day to day until it is made. Such contract, so far as it relates to public buildings or bridge substructures, shall be awarded to and made with the person who offers to perform the labor and furnish the materials at the lowest price, and gives good and sufficient bond for the faithful performance of the contract in accordance with the plan or plans, descriptions or specifications herein required, which shall be made a part of the contract.

"Section 2358. No contract shall be made for a public building, bridge or bridge substructure * * * at a price in excess of the estimates required to be made by the preceding sections."

I assume, of course, that the amount of the proposed contract exceeds one thousand dollars so as to be subject, under the provisions of section 2353, not above quoted, to the appropriate provisions of the chapter which are above quoted.

I shall first consider your first question in so far as it relates to the contract for a superstructure. I confess that in this connection I find but a single ambiguity on the face of the related sections, and this consists of the use of the word "bridge" in section 2358.

Let it first be noted that section 2343, General Code, certainly does not relate in any way to the superstructure of a bridge. This is true for two reasons: 1. The section in clear and unequivocal language mentions "substructure for a bridge" and is silent respecting the remainder of the structure. 2. Section 2344 explicitly relates to superstructures and the contract therefor and is silent as to substructure.

Therefore, the necessary conclusion is that section 2343 relates only to the substructure and that section 2344 relates only to the superstructure. The two parts of the bridge are clearly and definitely separated for the purpose of the letting of contracts. Does it not necessarily follow from this that the commissioners have no authority whatever under section 2343 to cause a competent civil engineer to make "a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense, etc.," as to the superstructure of a bridge? I cannot escape an affirmative answer to this question. If the county commissioners cause plans to be made they must by that act incur an expense; that is they must employ some one to do the work. The work which they can thus procure to be done must be limited to the subjects enumerated in the section. The superstructure of a bridge is not mentioned in the section. Therefore, there is no authority for the commissioners to have estimates of cost relating to the superstructure of a bridge prepared, at least so far as section 2343 is concerned. In fact the same conclusion follows, so far as this section is concerned, as to the making of plans and specifications. Authority to have such plans and specifications made for a superstructure must be found elsewhere, and it is found stated in clear and unequivocal language in section 2344.

So that when you state in your letter that the commissioners acting under section 2343 caused plans, specifications and estimates to be made of the proposed bridge improvement, inlcuding both substructure and superstructure, you have perhaps described an illegal act of the county commissioners. Inasmuch, however, as the commissioners had authority under section 2344 to have plans and specifications prepared so much of their official acts are not open to objection.

In the second place, section 2344 which does relate to the preparation of plans, descriptions and specifications for the superstructure expressly makes such preparation discretionary with the county commissioners; and this is emphasized by consideration of section 2345 which is couched in mandatory language and makes it the unavoidable duty of the county commissioners to invite, receive and consider proposals or plans submitted at the option of bidders. The only thing then which the county commissioners under section 2344 are required to do before advertising for bids is to fix the length and width of the superstructure, and whether it shall be a single or double track. Upon these specifications they may advertise for bids without further preliminaries.

It is clear, therefore, that sections 2344 and 2345, which especially relate to the letting of contracts for the superstructure, not only do not require but do not even authorize the commissioners to have estimates made in advance of advertising.

The reason for this is perhaps sufficiently obvious in that when a bidder bids on his own plans he makes his own estimate, being the amount of his bid. In the very nature of the case an estimate of the cost must relate to a particular improvement according to a specified plan. The estimate of the cost of a bridge constructed according to one plan cannot be said in any way to relate or to be applied appropriately to the cost of constructing a bridge at the same place according to another plan. The two bridges would not be the same structure, and the policy of the legislature being to permit competition in plans, the sole and essential reason for the making of an estimate, which necessarily relates to a single plan, is done away with. It is absolutely clear to me then, that sections 2343 to 2345 inclusive contain no requirement that an estimate be prepared as a condition precedent to advertising for bids for the construction of a bridge superstructure.

Section 2350, General Code, is not necessarily inconsistent with this. It is to be read in connection with section 2348 from which it appears that the phrase "required in the preceding sections" must be regarded as qualifying the phrase "plans, drawings, representations, bills of material, specifications of work and estimates" as it occurs in sections 2348, 2349, 2350 and 2351, originally all a part of section 797, Revised Statutes.

Section 2350 will be further discussed in a subsequent portion of this opinion For the present purpose, however, it may be dismissed with the statement that plans, specifications and estimates for a bridge substructure "relate to the building of a bridge," and it is these plans, etc., which must be submitted to the commissioners, auditor and surveyor and not necessarily the plans for the superstructure.

Sections 2353 and 2354, General Code, neither of which I have quoted above, both refer to "estimated cost of a public bridge * * * or bridge substructure." But in the light of what I have already pointed out these provisions serve merely to create a possible ambiguity like that already referred to in section 2358. The phrase "estimated cost" as used in these sections does not necessarily refer to a cost ascertained by an engineer employed for the purpose of making an estimate, and certainly it cannot apply if there is no authority to employ an engineer for such purpose. Presumably, then, those sections could be given force and effect by holding that the "estimate" referred to therein is to be made by the commissioners themselves in the exercise of their discretion.

I come now to section 2358. I have already pointed out that there is no requirement in any of the sections preceding this section that an estimate of cost be made by an engineer or architect for the construction of a bridge superstructure. This being true it would appear that the section in so far as it relates to a contract for a "bridge" is meaningless, for it is clear from a reading of section 2344, General Code, that the word "bridge," wherever used in these statutes means and refers to the superstructure only, or at least refers to the structure as an entirety, including both substructure and superstructure. At all events it does not mean merely "substructure." Nevertheless, it is equally clear, as already stated, that there is no requirement in any of the preceding sections for the preparation of an estimate covering superstructure. Here then, is an ambiguity which cannot be explained away or accounted for as readily even as that presented by sections 2353 and 2354 already referred to.

In order to resolve this ambiguity I have deemed it proper to refer to the phraseology of the related sections as they existed prior to the codification, and to the legislative history thereof upon familiar and well established principles of statutory construction.

Sections 2343, 2344, 2345, 2350, 2353, 2354 and 2358 were all originally enacted in 66 O. L. page 52, and thereafter amended in 85 O. L., 219, since when none of them have been amended by the legislature save in immaterial respects and in process of codification. Section 2343 was section 7 of the act of 1869. I quote enough of it to show the significant changes between its original form and its present form:

> "In all cases where it shall become necessary for the commissioners of any county to erect any * * * bridge * * * such commissioners, before entering into any contract for the erection of * * * such * * * bridge * * * shall make, or procure some competent architect to make * * * a full, accurate and complete estimate, etc."

Originally, then, the bridge contract was to be entered into as a whole. There was no separation into superstructure and substructure. In this act there is nothing corresponding with sections 2344 and 2345. This section 7, however, was amended two years later, 68 O. L., 20, so as to eliminate the word "bridge" from the first portion thereof, and to add the following after the end of the sentence containing the requirement of an estimate:

> "and where it shall become necessary to erect or cause to be erected any bridge such commissioners shall determine the length and width of such bridge, whether the same shall be single or double track, etc., and shall advertise * * * for proposals * * * ; and the commissioners may but are not required to prepare or cause to be prepared plans, descriptions and specifications for such bridge, etc."

Now, the effect of this amendment of section 7 was to take all reference to bridges out of what has since become section 2343 and to make all bridge contracts subject to the procedure outlined in what is now sections 2344 and 2345, General Code. In other words, there was a period of time during which what has become section 2343 did not relate to bridges at all, and in which the contract for an entire bridge, including both substructure and superstructure was to be awarded on plans submitted by the bidders without any estimate being made whatever.

Now, during this period of time, what is now section 2358 was in force in substantially the same form as it is now found in the Code. It constituted section 11 of the act in 66 O. L., 52. The legislature in 1871 did not expressly amend this section but it seems very clear to me that by doing away with the requirement that estimates be prepared in the letting of bridge contracts they destroyed for the time, at least, its application to such contracts.

Subsequently the related sections were amended and reenacted in 85 O. L., 218, some seventeen years after the amendment to section 7 of the original law. At that time the sections took on practically their present form, although in the meantime, of course, the phraseology had been somewhat changed in the process of codification in 1880.

The amendment of 1888 left section 796 R. S., which was the new part of section 7 of the original act incorporated therein in 1871 substantially as it was, inserting merely the word "superstructure" in place of the word "bridge" as it occurred the second time in original section 7. It amended section 795, which has since become section 2343 by inserting the words "or any substructure for a bridge or bridges." It reenacted section 800 which has since become section 2358, amending it so as to insert the words "public building, bridge or bridge substructure" in place of the words "court house, jail, infirmary or bridge" as in the original.

Now it was perfectly consistent for the legislature of 1888 to insert the limitation on contracts relating to bridge substructures, because it had required estimates to be made in such cases; but its use of the word "bridge" in section 800 cannot be satisfactorily explained excepting by the fact that the word was there in the original section, and though rendered nugatory by the intermediate amendment to section 795 R. S. was simply allowed to remain. In other words the legislature did not deliberately put the word "bridge" into section 800 when it amended that section in 1888, but it simply left it there. At all events, the intention of the legislature to do away with the necessity for the requirement of the preparation of estimates for bridge contracts in 1871 is very clear; likewise the intention to separate the substructure from the superstructure and to provide a different procedure for the two parts of the structures with respect to the letting of contracts is clearly apparent in the legislation of 1888. So that under the law of 1888, which is the law still in force, although the phraseology has been changed in process of codification, no estimate whatever was either required or authorized to be made covering that portion of the bridge contract which relates to superstructure.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the word "bridge" in section 2358 and in sections 2353 and 2354 is not, in the light of the legislative history sufficient to permit the conclusion that said section 2358 prohibits the making of a contract for a bridge superstructure at a price in excess of any estimate; for no estimate is required or authorized to be made for such contract. In reaching this conclusion I have taken into consideration certain decisions of courts which I will now discuss.

In Bridge Co. vs. Campbell, 60 O. S. 406, a bridge company was denied the right to recovery against the county for a bridge consisting both of substructure and superstructure constructed under an alleged contract with the county commissioners who had ignored every provision of law. After quoting the statutes beginning with section 795 and ending with section 800 Burket, Judge in delivering the opinion of the court, says at page 425:

> "No notice of the proposed levy was published; nor record of the contract was entered in the minutes of the commissioners by the auditor; no plans or specifications were ever made, approved or deposited with the auditor; no contract was ever submitted by the commissioners to the prosecuting attorney for his approval, and none was ever approved by him.
> "These omissions are fatal to the validity of the contract, and by force of the above cited sections of the statute, the contract is totally void and imposed no obligation on either party to it."

It will be seen that the commissioners in proceeding as they did in this case ignored all the provisions of the statute. The decision, therefore, is not narrowed to the single point now under discussion and cannot be regarded as an authority in point either way.

In State ex rel. vs. Biddle, 3 N. P., 173, the facts as stated in the opinion of the court show that the commissioners attempted to purchase at private sale a bridge consisting of both substructure and superstructure without any record or proceeding showing that any contract of any kind had been entered into. The facts are substantially the same in this case as in the case of Bridge Co. vs. Campbell, supra. Indeed, the parties are the same and suspicion arises that the facts are exactly the same.

Accordingly the same conclusion must be reached as to the Nisi Prius decision as has already been expressed respecting the supreme court decision.

In State ex rel. vs. Amlin, 13 O. D. N. P., 334, these statutes were considered but the question involved in the case pertains principally to the substructure and the court's consideration thereof on page 339 shows that the distinction between the substructure and the superstructure was in his mind. On page 341, however, section 800, revised statutes, now section 2358, General Code, is considered in the following language:

> "It is further claimed that defendants let the contract for the superstructure for more than the engineer's estimate of the cost thereof * * *. Section 800, revised statutes, provides that 'no contract or contracts shall be made for any * * * bridge or bridge substructure * * * at a price in excess of the estimates in this chapter required to be made.'
> "Defendants contend that this does not refer to superstructures. A bridge proper consists of two parts, substructure and superstructure. The section mentions 'bridge or bridge substructure.' By the use of both terms the legislature clearly intended to express more than the substructure. By the word 'bridge' may have been meant the entire structure, substructure and superstructure or it may have intended to give to the word the meaning properly given it, and to have referred to the superstructure. In either event I must conclude that within the contemplation of this section the county commissioners had no authority to make a contract for any superstructure for a sum in excess of the estimate under their direction by the county engineer."

Here, then, is an express holding which is contrary to the conclusion which I have stated. However, the injunction was granted on other grounds as is apparent from a reading of the entire decision and inasmuch as the contract for the entire bridge including both substructure and superstructure was a single one, the expression of opinion which I have quoted was not necessary to a decision in the case. It will be seen that Judge Williams, who rendered the opinion, did not consider section 800, Revised Statutes, in its relation to the other sections in the chapter of which it was a part, and that he merely assured that an estimate covering the superstructure as well as the substructure was both authorized and required by such other sections. This I have shown to be erroneous. Hence, in spite of the fact that a common pleas court has expressed a view contrary to that which I have stated, I have felt obliged to adhere to that view.

In State ex rel. vs. Huston, 4 N. P. (N. S.), 423, a decision of Judge Bigger of the same court as that which decided the case last discussed, the distinction between sections 795 and 796 R. S., is clearly pointed out and made a ground of decision on page 425. The court sustained a motion made by defendants (the bridge contractors) to strike from the petition an averment that in letting a contract for a superstructure the commissioners had failed to have plans, specifications and estimates made by the engineer. The holding is that section 795 relates wholly to the substructure and that, therefore, the failure of the commissioners to comply with it cannot invalidate a contract for the superstructure. This is in accordance with the view I have expressed and in so far as it is, it is inconsistent with the decision in State ex rel. vs. Amlin, supra. It is fair to say, however, that Judge Bigger was not called upon to consider the effect of section 800, Revised Statutes. In fact no court has ever considered the inter-relation of sections 800 and 796, revised statutes, being sections 2358 and 2344 and 2345, General Code, respectively, which it seems to me is clearly required by the question which you ask.

In State ex rel. vs. Snyder vs. Commissioners, 2 N. P. (N. S.) 261, the facts are very much like those in the Fulton county case in which the Buchanan Bridge Co. was a party, above cited, in that none of the provisions of law were complied with.

The court in deciding the case ignores the distinction between sections 795 and 796, and on page 269 says:

> "Not until plans, specifications, etc., are prepared by the commissioners or by some competent architect or civil engineer for them, with an estimate of the cost in detail and in the aggregate of any particular bridge, all of which shall be approved by a majority of the commissioners with the county auditor and the county surveyor, and all these things on file in the auditor's office, have agents of bridge companies, or others, any business to transact with the commissioners, much less any right to prepare their own plans and specifications, drive a bargain with the commissioners, procure their own signature to a contract, with their own plans and specifications attached, without any public light thrown upon it."

This decision is quite inconsistent with that of Judge Bigger in the case last cited and ignores the plain language of the statute. I cannot escape the conclusion that it is erroneous. It was purely obiter so far as being necessary to support the judgment in the case is concerned, therefore I feel justified in ignoring it.

It will be seen, therefore, that the decisions of the Nisi Prius courts upon questions incidentally involving the single question which you present are not harmonious; so that there is no well established judicial interpretation of the section involved in an answer to your inquiry. I have felt justified, therefore, in pursuing my own investigation into the legislative history of these sections with a view to ascertaining what the real intention of the general assembly was. That investigation has completely satisfied me and has led to the adoption of the conclusion which I have reached, which is that your first question, in so far as it relates to a contract for the superstructure, must be answered in the affirmative, because the commissioners are not authorized or required to have an estimate made covering the superstructure; and because further when bridge contractors offer their own plans and specifications and bid on them their bid itself becomes the "estimate."

I will now consider your second question in so far as it relates to the contract for the superstructure. I am satisfied that this question must be answered in the negative. That is, plans and specifications for the superstructure submitted by a bidder are not to be approved by the commissioners, auditor and surveyor under section 2350.

This, it seems to me, necessarily follows from the provisions of sections 2346 and 2347 above quoted. These sections explicitly require that proposals for bridge superstructures shall be opened on the date stipulated in the advertisements for bids and that the contract shall be awarded at the same time. They also require that when the contract is awarded the plans and specifications shall be filed in the office of the auditor. Now, the provisions of section 2350, above quoted, are to the effect that the plans, etc., which are to be submitted to the commissioners, auditor and county surveyor shall not be filed in the office of the county auditor until they are so approved; and it is clearly the intention of this section, which must be read in connection with section 2352 that the filing of the plans, so approved, in the office of the auditor, is for the purpose of permitting prospective bidders to inspect them. Said section 2352, provides:

> "When plans, drawings, representations, bills of material, specifications and estimates are so made and approved, the county commissioners shall give public notice in two of the principal papers of the county * * * of the time when and place where sealed proposals will be received for * * * the erection of such * * * bridge or substructure * * * and a contract based on such proposals will be awarded * * *. The notice shall * * * state when and where such plan or plans, descriptions, bills and specifications can be seen."

It is clear then that the plans which are to be approved by the commissioners, auditor and surveyor are plans upon which competitive bids are to be invited before the contract is let; and further, by reading the related sections together it is equally clear that such plans are those which relate to the substructure only and not to the superstructure. How could it be otherwise? If when a bidder submits plans with his bids those plans are then to be advertised again for competitive bidding, in that case any bidder at such subsequent competitive bidding would also be entitled to submit plans with his bid by virtue of section 2344, and in case new plans were accepted by the county commissioners the process would have to be repeated an indefinite number of times. The conclusion is unavoidable that the procedure with respect to superstructures is entirely distinct from that in respect to substructures; that, by virtue of sections 2346 and 2347 the commissioners have the right to accept plans offered and bid upon by a bidder, and that when they are so accepted, and a contract is thereby entered into the same must be filed in the office of the auditor. The transaction is then at an end.

I will now consider your first question, assuming that it may relate to a contract for a substructure. This question involves consideration of the last clause of section 2343 above quoted, which is as follows:

"Nothing in this section shall prevent the commissioners from receiving from bidders on iron or reinforced concrete substructures for bridges the necessary plans and specifications therefor."

In my opinion this provision not being followed up by other provisions like those found in sections 2346 and 2347 is not to be construed like the similar provision relating to contracts for superstructures. I am of the opinion that notwithstanding that bidders on iron or reinforced concrete substructures have the right to submit their own plans and specifications, yet a contract for the substructure may not be let on such plans and specifications in excess of the estimate required by section 2343 to be made of the cost of building such substructure. It will be well to have the engineer make an estimate of the cost of an iron or reinforced concrete substructure so that no confusion may arise by reason of his failure so to do.

I am of the opinion, then, that your first question, in so far as it relates to the substructure, must be answered in the negative, although it has been answered in the affirmative in so far as it relates to the superstructure.

I have reached the first two conclusions above expressed very reluctantly. It would be much more pleasant to ignore the plain language of the statutes, as one or two of the Nisi Prius courts have done, upon the theory that the legislature must have intended to protect the county treasury by providing for full and free competition in letting bridge contracts. I do not believe, however, that it is good law to disregard and virtually set aside statutory provisions on the ground that they are unwise or impolitic. I suppose that some would say that the statutes, as I have construed them, encourage monopoly and are vicious in a high degree. If this be the case the fault lies in the legislature, for it was clearly and unmistakably the intention of the general assembly to make possible, at least, the elimination of competition with respect to the construction of bridges according to any specified plans, and to substitute therefor competition in plans. To be sure this is not destroying competition entirely. Competition is of two kinds, viz.: in price and in quality of goods. Evidently the general assembly supposed that plans for the construction of a bridge were considerations of quality, and that competition in plans was worth while even at the expense of competition in price. If this be wrong or unwise it is for the legislature to correct.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INHERITANCE TAX LAW—WHO EXEMPT FROM INHERITANCE TAX—HALF BROTHER CONSIDERED BROTHER WITHIN THE LAW.

Under amended sections 5331 and 5333, of the inheritance tax law, the exemption to brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces was abolished. These amended sections became effective upon its passage and approval May 5, 1913.

Where there is no express provision in an act amendatory of an inheritance tax statute, inconsistent with the general provisions of section 26 of the General Code, the provisions of the prior law will be regarded as controlling of the taxes from estates becoming subject thereto before the amendment and these exceptions apply to the taxation of inheritance created prior to May 5, 1913, although the tax has not yet been collected.

Within the meaning of the statutes, a half brother is considered a brother.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1913.

HON. M. F. MERRIMAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 1st requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "First. Does the fact that a legatee or devisee is a brother of a decedent exempt him from the payment of the collateral inheritance tax?
> "Second. Does the fact that such devisee is the son of a brother exempt him from the payment of the tax?
> "Third. Is a half brother exempt from the payment of the tax?
> "Fourth. Is the son of a half brother exempt from the payment of the tax?"

The statute, the construction of which is involved, is as follows:

> "Section 5331. All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interests therein * * * which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state * * * to a person * * * other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, brother, sister. niece, nephew, lineal descendant, adopted child * * * or the lineal descendants thereof, or the lineal descendants of an adopted child, the wife or widow of a son, the husband of the daughter of a decedent shall be liable to a tax of five per cent. of its value, above the sum of two hundred dollars. * * *"

It seems to me that the answer to your first question is perfectly apparent upon the face of the statute. If the legatee or devisee is a brother of the decedent himself, the section does not apply to his interest at all. Contrary would, of course, be true if the legatee or devisee were the brother-in-law of the decedent. In Re Bates' Estate, 7, N. P. 625.

The answer to your first question carries with it the answer to your second because such a person as is referred to in your question would be a "nephew" within the meaning of the statute. In re Bates' Estate, supra.

Your third question raises the query as to whether or not a brother of the half-blood is a "brother" within the meaning of the statute. This question was decided in the affirmative in a case entitled In Re Ormsby's Estate, 7 N. P. 542. This is a Nisi Prius decision and is not well reported. I am of the opinion, however, that upon principle it is correct. Although exemptions from taxation are to be strictly construed, yet the enumeration of relatives in section 5331, General Code, does not, strictly speaking, constitute a list of exemptions. The tax is denominated a collateral inheritance tax, and the legislative history of inheritance taxation in this state discloses that originally, at any rate, the inheritances not subject to the collateral inheritance tax were to be taxed as direct inheritances. Therefore, this is not a case of exemption from taxation but rather of the exclusion of certain things for the purpose of definition by this method. That being the case I am of the opinion that the word "brother" should be used in its popular sense so as to include a brother of the half-blood as well as a brother of the whole-blood.

Similar reasoning would lead to an affirmative conclusion with respect to your fourth question. In other words, I am of the opinion that the test as to what constitutes a "brother" is to be applied for the purpose of ascertaining what constitutes a "nephew."

I feel impelled to inject into the discussion of the general topic suggested by your letter a question which you do not directly ask. It so happens that about the time I received your letter, though in all probability subsequently to the death of the decedent concerning whose estate you inquire, the general assembly amended sections 5331 and 5333, General Code, so as to abolish the exemptions to brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces concerning the application of which language of the old statute you inquire.

The amendatory act will be found in 103 O. L. 463, passed April 15, 1913, and approved May 5, 1913. Section 5331, General Code, seems to be a law "providing for a tax levy" within the meaning of section 1d of article II of the constitution as amended. It satisfies three tests suggested by the court in the recently decided, and not yet reported, case of State ex rel. Schreiber vs. Millroy, in that it provides for the levy of a specific rate upon definite subjects of taxation for definite purposes, and thus contains all the elements of a tax levy. Furthermore, the law itself makes the levy so that the interposition of no local or executive levying authorities is necessary in order that the levying power shall be exerted, and, therefore, this law became effective immediately upon its passage and approval, viz.: on May 5, 1913.

I take it that on the date on which this law became effective the estate or estates, concerning which you inquire, had not been settled and the taxes on the taxable inheritances therein had not been paid. The question would, therefore, arise as to what law, as between the old statute and the new statute governs the taxation of these inheritances, which question is rendered more acute perhaps by the decision of the supreme court in the case of Friend vs. Levy, 76 O. S. 26. This case, however, carefully examined, constitutes a complete answer to the suggested question. It involved the question as to the time of taking effect of the repeal of the former direct inheritance tax law. The repealing act contained an exception to the effect that the estates in which the inventory had already been filed at the date of the passage of the act should be subject to the repealed law. The supreme court first found this exception to be unconstitutional, and therefore void. Nevertheless, the court found that the general assembly in incorporating this exception in the repealing act conclusively evinced an intention to take the repeal out of the operation of the general provisions of section 79, revised statutes, now section 26, General Code, which provides that:

> "Section 26. Whenever a statute is repealed or amended, such repeal or amendment shall in no manner affect pending actions, prosecutings, or proceeding, civil or criminal, and when the repeal or amendment relates to the remedy, it shall not affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, unless so expressed, nor shall any repeal or amendment affect causes of such action, prosecution or proceeding existing at the time of such amendment or repeal, unless otherwise expressly provided in the amending or repealing act."

The court was of the opinion that the exception in the repealing act before it, though void, constituted an "express provision" inconsistent with the general rule of present section 26 within the meaning of that section, in that its use showed that the legislature did not intend the general statute to apply.

A careful examination of the decision will show, however, that the court regarded section 79 R. S., now section 26, General Code, as generally applicable to a case of this sort. That is to say, the right to collect an inheritance tax from the inheritor's portion of the estate of a decedent dying prior to the amendment of the inheritance tax law was evidently regarded by the court as either a "proceeding" or a "cause of proceeding" within the meaning of the statute, Therefore, it seems that where there is no express provision in an act amendatory of an inheritance tax statute, inconsistent with the general provisions of section 26, General Code, the provisions of the prior law will be regarded as controlling the collection of the tax from estates becoming subject thereto before the amendment.

Inasmuch as the act in 103 O. L. 463 contains no provision inconsistent with the general rules of section 26, General Code, I am of the opinion that the conclusions already expressed apply to the taxation of inheritances created prior to May 5, 1913, although the tax has not yet been collected.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SCHOOL PROPERTY—BOARD OF EDUCATION MAY ISSUE AND SELL BONDS—AMOUNT OF BONDS MAY BE ISSUED AND SOLD ONE YEAR—ORDER TO ISSUE BONDS SHALL BE MADE AT REGULAR MEETING OF BOARD.

In order to obtain or improve school property, a board of education may issue and sell bonds. No greater amount of bonds can be issued in one year than would equal the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills for the year next preceding such issue.

The order to issue bonds shall be made only at the regular meeting of the board and by a two-thirds vote of the full membership of the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1913.

HON. CLARK GOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 4th in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "The board of education of York township of this county is compelled to construct a new school building in the village of Elgin at a cost of about $3,500; they have on hand in their building fund about $1,700; they have increased their levy so that it will yield them the other $1,800 during the year 1914. They desire to proceed with the construction of this building. Can they do so and borrow the remaining $1,800 for a year, or can they call a special election and vote on a bond issue for the amount?"

It seems to me that your question is sufficiently answered by a consideration of section 7629 of the General Code which is as follows:

> "The board of education of any school district may issue bonds to obtain or improve public school property, and in anticipation of income from taxes, as occasion requires, may issue and sell bonds, under the restrictions and bearing a rate of interest specified in sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven. The board shall pay such bonds and the interest thereon when due, but provide that no greater amount of bonds be issued in any year than would equal the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills, for the year next preceding such issue. The order to issue bonds shall be made only at a regular meeting of the board and by a vote of two-thirds of its full membership, taken by yeas and nays and entered upon its journal."

This department has previously held that under this section a vote of the electors is not required in order to authorize the borrowing of necessary money. If, therefore, the levy of two mills on the duplicate of the preceding year will produce the necessary amount—and I take it from the facts you state that this must be so—the solution of your question would seem to follow.

Boards of education have no authority to borrow money otherwise than by the issue of bonds under this section, or the preceding, except for the purpose of meeting obligations already lawfully incurred. This is by virtue of section 5656 of the General Code to which I refer you. You will readily observe that this section is not available in the case which you present.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—PURCHASE OF TOLL BRIDGE BELONGING TO PRIVATE CORPORATION—VOTE OF ELECTORS.

County commissioners may lawfully purchase or condemn toll bridge belonging to a private corporation at a cost in excess of $18,000, without submitting the question of the policy of the expenditure to a vote of the electors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1913.

HON. D. F. DUNLAVY, Prosecuting Attorney, Jefferson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 13th in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "May the county commissioners purchase a toll bridge belonging to a private corporation at a price in excess of $18,000 without submitting the question of the policy of the expenditure to a vote of the electors?"

As you state, there are only two sections of the General Code which need be considered in connection with this question, viz.: Sections 7566 and 5638, which are as follows:

> "Section 7566. The county commissioners of a county in which there is a toll bridge, or a bridge owned by a person or corporation authorized by law to charge and collect toll for crossing it, may purchase such bridge, with the approaches, at a price agreed upon by them and the owners of the bridge. If they are unable to agree with the owners thereof, upon such purchase and sale, the commissioners may appropriate it."
> "Section 5638. The county commissioners shall not levy a tax, appropriate money or issue bonds for the purpose of building county buildings, purchasing sites therefor, or for land for infirmary purposes, the expenses of which will exceed $15,000.00, except in case of casualty, and as hereinafter provided; or for building a county bridge, the expense of which will exceed $18,000.00, except in case of casualty, and as hereinafter provided; or enlarge, repair, improve, or rebuild a public county building, the entire cost of which expenditure will exceed $10,000.00; without first submitting to the voters of the county, the question as to the policy of making such expenditure."

As you state in your letter, the power granted in section 7566 is an unqualified one; but section 5638, being of later date, would control, if at all applicable to the purchase of a bridge.

However, in my opinion, section 5638 is not applicable to the purchase of a toll bridge. The language of the statute is to the effect that the commissioners shall not make an expenditure "for building a county bridge" without first submitting, etc. There is no reason of policy for making any distinction between the building of a bridge and the purchase of a toll bridge with respect to the requirement of submitting the question to the electors. The anomaly, however, is the result of the legislature's action. The sections are too plain to admit of any forced construction.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the county commissioners may lawfully purchase or condemn a toll bridge belonging to a private corporation, at a cost in excess of $18,000.00, without submitting the policy of the expenditure to the vote of the electors in the manner provided by section 5638, et seq, General Code.

You also ask my opinion as to whether or not a levy for the so-called "Mothers'

Pension Fund" may be made this year. I enclose herewith copy of opinion to Hon. Cyrus Locher, prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county, which answers this question.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

HOUSE BILL No. 678 SUBJECT TO REFERENDUM—ANNUAL BUDGET—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—BLIND RELIEF.

House Bill No. 678, 103 Ohio Laws, 833, did not go into effect immediately upon its passage, but is subject to referendum, and does not go into effect until ninety days after filing in the office of the secretary of state. This bill was not in effect at the time that the annual budgets are required by law to be filed, viz.: the first Monday in June, 1913.

The county commissioners are authorized to levy a tax at a limited rate for the relief of the needy blind, and if they fail to make an estimate for budget purposes for blind relief, the budget commission is without power to authorize any such levy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1913.

HON. THOMAS L. POGUE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 9th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

1. "Did House Bill No. 678, 103 Ohio Laws, 833, go into effect immediately upon its passage?

2. "If the first question be answered in the affirmative, was there any authority, on the first Monday in June, for any county officer to submit, and for the budget commission to allow, a levy for the blind relief fund?

3. "If the first question be answered in the negative, and if it be proper for the budget commission to allow an estimate for the blind relief fund, what board or officer should make and certify the estimate?"

The law to which you refer is entitled "An act to create an Institution for the Relief of the Needy Blind." It establishes a state institution, "to mean under this act a board," for the purpose mentioned. The board thus created is authorized to levy taxes in the following language:

> "Section 8. In addition to the taxes levied by law for its purposes, the said board may certify to the said auditor of state, to be levied and collected as other taxes, a state tax not to exceed one-sixth of one mill on the dollar, to be levied and collected upon the taxable property of the state for the purpose of creating a fund for the blind as herein provided. Provided, however, that such levy shall be subject to the limitations provided by law upon the maximum and combined maximum rates of taxation. After the passage of this act and on the demand of the state treasurer the treasurers of the respective counties shall transfer and pay over to the state treasurer all moneys in their possession under present levies for the relief of the blind."

Section 10 of the act repeals all former provisions of law relating to the relief of the needy blind, including section 2969, General Code, by virtue of which the county commissioners have been heretofore authorized to make levies for this purpose.

It is clear, therefore, that if the repealing section took effect prior to the first Monday of June, county commissioners would not be authorized to certify any levy for the relief of the blind; nor would any other county authority be authorized to do so. The only authority of law for making such a levy would be that found in section 8, above quoted.

The question, therefore, is squarely presented as to whether or not the provisions of section 8, which have been quoted, constitute the entire law found in 103 O. L. 833, a "law providing for tax levies" within the meaning of section 1d of article 11 of the constitution, as recently amended.

In an opinion to the tax commission of Ohio, relating to the time of taking effect of the so-called Kilpatrick bill, amending sections 5649-2 and 5649-3, General Code, I expressed the view that an act authorizing a levy to be made by some local or executive officer or board is not an act "providing for tax levies" within the meaning of the constitutional provision above cited. The question upon which that opinion was rendered was before the supreme court in the recent case of State ex rel. Schreiber vs. Milroy, which had been submitted to the court when I received your letter but had not yet been decided. In the meantime the supreme court has decided the case in question and has sustained the view that the so-called Kilpatrick act is not an "act providing for tax levies," and will not therefore become effective until ninety days after it was filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state.

The court's decision, however, is upon a different ground than that of which I have spoken in this letter. The court apparently interprets in its opinion the phrase "laws providing for tax levies" by furnishing a definition to the effect that, in order that a law may be one which "provides for tax levies," it must designate the purpose for which the levy is to be made, must prescribe the rate which is to be or may be levied, and must designate the subjects of taxation upon which the rate is to be levied. It was because sections 5649-2 and 5649-3, General Code, which were amended by the act before the court, did not incorporate all three of these elements that the court held that it was not in the excepted class but was subject to referendum.

The court did not find it necessary, therefore, to pass upon the question as to whether or not a law which merely authorizes a levy of taxes upon designated property, for a specific purpose, at a limited rate, does constitute a "law providing for a tax levy." The question, therefore, cannot be regarded as settled. I have, however, already expressed my opinion upon the general proposition in the letter to the tax commission, above referred to, a copy of which you have. My opinion has not, I confess, been strengthened by examination of the supreme court's decision. I am prepared to go so far as to state that it is at least inferable from the court's opinion that the view which I hold would not be accepted by the court. However, the question has not been passed upon, and perhaps was not considered by the court. I, therefore, feel obliged to adhere to my opinion, and to hold that a law which merely authorizes some tribunal other than, and subordinate to, the legislature of the state to make a tax levy is not a "law providing for a tax levy."

Now, the act in question is clearly a law such as I have been discussing. It does not require an annual levy; it leaves the question as to whether or not a fund shall be provided from year to year to the judgment and discretion of the so-called "institution." It merely confers authority to make the levy, and does not impose any duty so to do.

Therefore, it is my opinion, for reasons more completely stated in the previous opinion referred to, that the act found in 103 Ohio Laws, 833, is not at present in effect, and was not in effect at the time on which the annual budgets are required by law to be filed, namely: the first Monday in June, 1913.

Your second question, which assumes an affirmative answer to your first question, is obviated by the negative answer which I have returned thereto.

I shall answer your third question in the light of the conclusion reached with respect to your first questions, and without considering the constitutionality of present section 2969, General Code, which, I am compelled to state, has been seriously questioned in the courts.

The operation of this section is not in any way interfered with by the act to which you refer, passed February 18, 1913, and filed in the office of the secretary of state March 10, 1913, 103 Ohio Laws, page 60. This act amends sections 2967, 2967-1 and 2968, General Code, so as to abolish the blind relief commissions and to extend their powers and duties to county commissioners. It does not, however, amend section 2969, nor did it take effect until after the first Monday in June.

Section 2969 need not be quoted. It merely authorizes the county commissioners to levy a tax at a limited rate for the purpose of providing for the relief of the needy blind. It is perfectly clear on its face, and its meaning is not qualified by any related sections. The power to levy taxes for the relief of the blind is vested in the county commissioners. If the commissioners fail to make an estimate for budgetary purposes for blind relief the budget commission is without power to authorize any such levy.

You state in your letter that the budget commission of Hamilton county has received an alleged estimate, submitted by the probate judge. Obviously, this estimate cannot be considered.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CLERK HIRE—POWER OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO ALLOW CLERK HIRE—POWER OF COMMON PLEAS JUDGE TO ALLOW ADDITIONAL CLERK HIRE.

When the county commissioners have fixed an aggregate sum for clerk hire during the year at a time designated, they have no power subsequently to take further action increasing the amount of such allowance, when the aggregate amount was then equal to or less than the maximum amount allowed by law.

Under section 2980, General Code, a common pleas judge may allow such additional amount of money as he deems necessary to pay the salaries of clerks, deputies, bookkeepers or other employes as may be required, and upon such allowance the county commissioners shall transfer to the general county funds, such amounts as may be necessary to pay such salary or salaries.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 2, 1913.

HON. W. V. WRIGHT, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 23, 1913, you requested my opinion as follows:

"On the 29th of November, as provided by section 2980, Code, the probate judge of this county prepared and filed with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, clerks and other employes, showing in detail the requirements of his said office for the year beginning January 1st, next thereafter.

"The commissioners in fixing an aggregate sum to be expended for such period, acting under the belief that the common pleas court judge had power to make additional allowance should such office require it, without regard as to whether the amount so fixed by the said board should be equal to or less than the aggregate amount due the said office by computing the proper per cent. of the fees, costs, etc., collected for the use of the county in such office, fixed an amount less than the aggregate amount so due the said office.

"The commissioners now realize that the allowance made the said probate judge is entirely inadequate, and the common pleas judge is entirely inadequate, and the common pleas judge being powerless to act in the premises, may they now correct their record so as to allow the said probate judge the aggregate amount to which his office is entitled?"

Sections 2980 and 2980-I of the General Code provides as follows:

"Section 2980. On the twentieth of each November such officer shall prepare and file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants, bookkeepers clerks and other employes, except court constables, of their respective offices, showing in detail the requirements of their offices for the year beginning January 1st next thereafter, with the sworn statement of the amount expended by them for such assistants for the preceding year. Not later than five days after the filing of such statement, the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for such period for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes of such officer, except court constables, which sum shall be reasonable and proper, and shall enter such finding upon their journal.

"Section 2980-I. The aggregate sum so fixed by the county commissioners to be expended in any year for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes, except court constables, shall not exceed for any county auditor's office, county treasurer's office, probate judge's office county recorder's office, sheriff's office or office of the clerk of courts, an aggregate amount to be ascertained by computing thirty per cent. on the first two thousand dollars or fractional part thereof, forty per cent. on the next eight thousand dollars or fractional part thereof, and eighty-five per cent. on all over ten thousand dollars of the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisities collected for the use of the county in any such office for official services during the year ending September thirtieth next preceding the time of fixing such aggregate sum; provided, however, that if at any time any one of such officers require additional allowance in order to carry on the business of his office, said officer may make application to a judge of the court of common pleas, of the county wherein such officer was elected; and thereupon such judge shall hear said application and if, upon hearing the same, said judge shall find that such necessity exists he may allow such sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salary of such deputy, deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes as may be required, and thereupon the board of county commissioners shall transfer from the general county fund to such officer's fee fund, such sum of money as may be necessary to pay said salary or salaries.

' 'When the term of an incumbent of any such office shall expire within the year from which such an aggregate sum is to be fixed, the county commissioners at the time of fixing the same, shall designate the amount of such aggregate sum which may be expended by the incumbent and the amount of such aggregate sum which may be expended by his successor for the fractional parts of such year."

The question presented depends for its solution on the proper construction of the statutory provisions above noted. The precise question being one as to the power of the county commissioners, the determination of the question may safely proceed on the inquiry as to whether or not such power has been vested in them by statute; for it is clear that as to any subject matter they have only such powers as are thus given them.

"The board of county commissioners can exercise only such powers as are conferred upon them by law."

State ex rel. vs. Yeatman 22 O. S. 546, 551.
Commissioners of Mahoning Co. vs. Ry. Co. 45 O. S. 401, 403.
Commissioners of Medina Co. vs. Leighty I. C. C. (n. s. 431).

And it is likewise clear that when power with reference to a given subject matter is conferred by statute, such power must be exercised in substantial compliance with the directions of the statute.

Treadwell vs. Commissioners, 11 O. S. 183, 190.
State ex rel. vs. Yeatman 22 O. S. 553, 554.
Ritter vs. Railway Co., 6 N. P. (n. s.) 161, 166.

Section 2980 provides that not later than five days after the filing by one of the officers designated in section 2979 of the statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for clerk hire in his office for the ensuing calendar year, the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for such purpose during the year, and further provides that the sum so fixed shall be reasonable and proper and that the finding of the commissioners shall be entered upon their journal.

The direction of the statute as to the time within which the commissioners are to make the allowance is stated in negative terms and in this respect exhibits the features of a mandatory statute.

However this may be, it is clear that the express terms of the statute make provision for but one aggregate allowance by the county commissioners; for it provides that at the time designated they shall fix an aggregate sum which shall be reasonable and proper in amount, and it follows that if the amount to be fixed by the commissioners at the time directed by the statute is to be one reasonable and proper to meet the requirements of the office for clerk hire during the ensuing year, no other or further allowance on their part is contemplated by the statute. Nor is there anything in the provisions of section 2980-I which confers any power on the county commissioners to make any other or further allowance than that to be fixed at the time directed by the provisions of section 2980.

Section 2980-I was enacted expressly as a supplement to section 2980 and, by familiar rules of construction, its provisions are to read, not as standing alone, but in connection with section 2980 as well as other statutes relating to the general subject matter.

Section 2980-I provides that the aggregate sum "so fixed" by the county commissioners for clerk hire in the particular office, shall not exceed a certain amount based on a percentage of the income of the office for the previous year therein designated. The statute in providing for a division of the aggregate amount to be allowed for the ensuing year between an incumbent of the office and his successor in office during the year, directs that "at the time of fixing the same" the commissioners shall designate the amount to be expended by each. It is thus to be noted that in each instance when the provisions of section 2980-I refer to the action of the county commissioners in fixing an aggregate amount for clerk hire, the reference, reading the sections above noted as standing together, is clearly to the particular time designated in section 2980 and none other. I am therefore of the opinion that when the county commissioners have fixed an aggregate sum for clerk hire during the year at the time designated, they have no power subsequently to take further action increasing the amount of such allowance, whether the aggregate amount thus fixed was equal to or less than the maximum amount then allowable by them on the basis fixed by the statute. I am confirmed in this opinion by the provisions of 2980-I when read in the light of reasons calling for its enactment. There were three defects more or less manifest in the practical operation of the law as it stood before enactment of section 2980-I; first there was no check on the amount that the county commissioners might fix as an allowance for clerk hire for any office other than the requirement that such amount should be reasonable and proper, which obviously was a matter wholly within the sound judgment and discretion of the county commissioners; on the other hand there was no provision for the contingency that the business of such office might necessarily require an amount in excess of that fixed by the commissioners; again under the law as it then stood, it was legally possible for an incumbent of the office to exhaust the aggregate amount fixed as clerk hire for the year, and thus leave his successor in office during the year without money for clerk hire during the remainder of the calendar year for which the aggregate amount was fixed.

Section 2980-I in express terms clearly provides for the first and third defects in the operation of the law as it stood before the enactment of the section, and as to the second defect in the operation of the prior law noted, it is just as clear, whatever may be said of the scope of the proviso in this section on this point, that the section does not in any of its provisions attempt to remedy the defect by conferring any power on the county commissioners to increase the allowance fixed by them at the time designated in section 2980. The failure of the legislature to expressly authorize the county commissioners to increase their allowance for clerk hire up to the maximum amount to which the office might be entitled on the income basis fixed by the statute is significant to the point that it was not the intention of the legislature that they should have this power. If it had been the intention of the legislature that the commissioners should have this precise power, it is reasonable to believe that it would have been granted in express terms.

The only provision of this section providing for an allowance in excess of that fixed by the commissioners at the time designated in section 2980 is that authorizing a judge of the common pleas court to make an additional allowance on the application of the officer if the necessity therefor is found by the judge. This provision as the power of a common pleas judge to make an additional allowance for clerk hire is stated in form of a proviso in the statute, and if it is to be thus considered and as such read solely in connection with the preceding language of section 2980-I, apart from the provisions of other sections, there may be at first blush color to the contention that the right of the officer to apply to a common pleas judge is limited to the condition that the county commissioners shall have fixed the clerk hire of his office at the maximum amount to which the office is entitled on the income basis provided by the statute. It is to be noted, however, the county commissioners are not under any direction by force of the provision of section 2980-I to fix the aggregate sum for any of the offices named in the maximum amount to which such office may be entitled, nor is it contemplated that they should in all cases do so. The only purpose of the enacting clause of this section, preceding the proviso, is to prescribe an amount beyond which the commissioners are not authorized to go in fixing the aggregate sum for clerk hire for such office. And considering this proviso as strictly such it seems clear that the words "additional allowance" therein are referable to the allowance actually made and fixed in any case by the commissioners rather than to the maximum prescribed, and the additional allowance provided for is additional to that made by them whether it be equal to or less than the maximum.

However, it is not an appropriate function of a proviso to confer power, but rather to qualify, limit or restrain the operation of general terms contained in the previous part of the section or act. This proviso does not by its terms in any way qualify, limit or restrain that part of section 2980-I which preceded it, but allows full force and effect to the provisions of the section prescribing the maximum amount which the commissioners are authorized to fix as clerk hire for any of the offices therein named, and, moreover, contains within itself an express and independent grant of power. I am of the opinion therefore, that this proviso is not strictly such but it partakes rather of the nature of an additional enactment, and as such is to be considered and construed in connection with all the sections relating to the subject matter.

Sumstein vs. Mullen, 67 O. S. 382, 410.
In re Day, 181 Ill. 80.
Probst vs. Railroad, 139 N. C. 397, 399.
Georgia Railroad vs. Smith, 128 U.S. 174, 181.

> "It is a well established rule that the provisions of a statute are to be construed in connection with all laws in para materia, and especially with reference to the system of legislation of which they form a part, so that all the provisions may, if possible, have operation according to their plain import."

Cincinnati vs. Connor, 55 O. S. 82, 89.

The chapter of which these sections are a part discloses a complete legislative scheme providing for a compensation of deputies and clerks in the county offices therein named. Prior to the enactment of section 2980-I, as before noted, one of the defects in the operation of the law relating to this subject matter was that there was no provision for the contingency that the actual requirements of a particular county office might necessarily call for an allowance in excess of that fixed by the commissioners. By the enactment of section 2980-I, whatever limitations may be implied therein on the power of the common pleas judge to act, it is certain the legislature has not provided for such defects in the prior law by granting any authority or power on the county commissioners to make an allowance for deputy and clerk hire in addition to that made by them at the time directed by statute: And assuming that the legislature intended to meet and provide for this manifest defect in the enactment of this section, I am of the opinion that it did so by its grant of power to the common pleas judge, and that the judge on application may make an additional allowance for clerk hire in any case where he finds the necessity therefor, whether the sum fixed by the commissioners for such purpose be the maximum amount to which the office is entitled or less.

I might add, by force of the rule of construction before noted, that since the enactment of section 2980-I, section 2981 is to be read in connection with the provisions of the latter statute; and so read the limitation on the compensation of deputies and clerks is that such compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount allowed by the county commissioners, and the additional allowance, if any, made by the common pleas judge under section 2980-I.

It is further to be noted that the money allowed by the common pleas judge is not available until the commissioners have transferred the same from the general county fund to the fee fund of the office affected by such allowance.

The precise question made in your inquiry is, as to the power of the county commissioners to make an additional allowance for clerk hire for the office therein named, but your inquiry assumes that the common pleas judge of the county is without power to act on the premises stated. On the considerations above noted I am unable to agree with the assumption made. I am advised that the common pleas court of Noble County (McGinnis, J.) came to a conclusion contrary to that reached by me, holding that the common pleas judge was without jurisdictional power to act under section 2980-I, unless the sum fixed for clerk hire by the commissioners was the maximum. This decision was affirmed by the circuit court of that county without report. The common pleas court of Coshocton County (Nicholas, J.) in a later decision reviews the opinion of the judge in the Noble county case and comes to a conclusion sustaining the view that the commissioners have authority to make but one allowance for clerk hire, and that the common pleas judge has power to act even though the sum fixed by the commissioners is less than the maximum amount to which the office is entitled. It seems to me that the conclusion reached by Judge Nicholas in his construction of section 2980-I, as to the power of the common pleas judge to act under its provision is correct. The contrary construction of this section as to such power of the common pleas judge leaves the law still defective in a particular which was undoubtedly within the cognizance of the legislature at the time of the enactment of the same and which defect was sought to be remedied by the enactment.

With reference to the power conferred upon the common pleas judge by this section, I do not apprehend that there can be any valid constitutional objection to its exercise by him if he choses to do so.

State vs. Judges, 21 O. S. 1.
Walker vs. Cincinnati, 21 O. S. 14.
State ex rel. vs. Cincinnati, 52 O. S. 419, 450, 451.

I note that your question in form is one as to the power of the county commissioners to correct their record, but the facts stated show that the real question is one as to their power by subsequent action to increase the amount fixed by them as clerk hire for the particular office named at the time designated by the statute, and this in my opinion they cannot do.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TREASURER—FEES ALLOWED FOR DISBURSING FUNDS—DEPOSITORY.

No compensation is provided by sections 7033 to 7052, for the services of the township treasurer in disbursing funds placed thereunder. He is entitled to the compensation prescribed by section 3318, of all such money actually paid out by him on the order of the township trustees. This would not include funds placed in the township depository, nor those turned over to the treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1913.

HON. IRVING CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of April 4th you inquire:

> "What fee is the township treasurer entitled to for disbursing funds held by him under provision of sections 7033 to 7052? Does section 7015 apply to such funds? Or is he entitled to two per cent. under section 3318?"

Sections 7015 and 3318, General Code, provide:

> "Section 7015. The treasurer of such township shall receive and disburse all money arising from the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter. He shall receive as compensation therefor one-half of one per cent. of the first ten thousand dollars, or less, distributed in any one year, and one-fourth of one per cent. of any amount in excess of ten thousand dollars, to be paid out of the township funds, and he shall not receive other compensation for services rendered under such subdivision.
> "Section 3318. The treasurer shall be allowed and may retain as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, two per cent. of all moneys paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees."

It is to be observed that the compensation of the township treasurer under section 7015 is to be computed upon moneys raised under the subdivision of the chapter of the General Code, of which said section is a part. Sections 7033-7052 constitute an entirely separate and distinct subdivision of the General Code from that in which 7015 is found, and it is therefore my opinion that the compensation prescribed by section 7015 cannot be paid to the township treasurer for disbursing money raised pursuant to sections 7033-7052.

Examinations of the latter sections disclose that no specific compensation is fixed therein for a township treasurer when disbursing money raised by virtue of their provisions, nor is such treasurer expressly charged with the duty of receiving and paying out such money.

Township trustees are authorized by section 7051 to levy a general tax upon the taxable property in the road district, to provide means to pay the cost of road improvements and principal and interest on bonds issued for such purpose, the authority to issue bonds being found in other sections of the same subdivision. The moneys so raised are township funds and the township treasurer is by reason of that fact the legal custodian thereof.

As no compensation is provided by section 7033-7052 for the services of the township treasurer in disbursing funds raised thereunder, I am of the opinion that he is entitled to the compensation prescribed by section 3318 for all of such moneys actually paid out by him on the order of the township trustees. This would not, of course, include funds placed in the township depository nor those turned over to a succeeding treasurer.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SURVEY OF FORFEITED LAND—WHEN SURVEYOR MAY NOT COLLECT —MEANING OF "HELD IN COMMON WITH SOME OTHER PERSON."

When a county surveyor makes a survey of forfeited lands, without being authorized to do so by the county auditor, the surveyor does not acquire a valid claim against the county and his bill for making such survey cannot be legally paid out of the county treasury.

The phrase "unless it is held in common with some other person" refers to and modifies the clause "the tract of land so sold" and not the entire original tract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1913.

HON. LEVI B. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Waverly, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I desire to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 26, 1913, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Section 5762, of the General Code, provides in part as follows:
> "The county auditor on making a sale of a tract of land to any person, under this chapter, shall give to such purchaser a certificate thereof. If the land so sold is not an entire original tract, and the auditor deems it necessary, such certificate shall be directed to the county surveyor of the county, requiring him to proceed at the request of the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, to ascertain the boundaries of the tract of land so purchased, unless it is held in common with some other person.
> "The General Code seems to be silent as to who is to pay the surveyor for this work and we desire to know whether this surveyor's bill is paid from the county treasury and charged against the land so sold or does the county pay the bill and stop at that? Also, what is meant by 'unless it is held in common with some other person'? Does that mean unless the entire original tract is held in common with some other person or persons?"

As you state in your letter, there is no statutory provision to pay a surveyor for such work. Since the receipt of your inquiry by this department, the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices has submitted to us a report of its examiner, involving the same surveyor's bills, about which you request an opinion. In said report it appears that the county auditor never at any time authorized the county surveyor to make a survey of any land sold at forfeited sale and there is no record whatever of any certificate having been issued, authorizing such surveys. It further appears from said report, that the auditor did not deem such survey necessary. It is to be noted that said section 5762, of the General Code, supra, provides in substance that if the land so sold is not the entire original tract, a certificate shall be directed to the county surveyor, requesting him to proceed to ascertain the boundaries of such tracts of land, provided "the auditor deems it necessary."

Section 2803, of the General Code, relative to a record being kept of all surveys made by the county surveyor, whether official or otherwise, or by other competent surveyors, contains a provision similar to that contained in section 5762 of the General Code above quoted. Said section 2803 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The county surveyor shall make and keep in a book provided for that purpose, an accurate record of all the surveys made by himself or his deputies for the purpose of locating any land or road lands or fixing any corner or monument by which it may be determined, whether official or otherwise. Such surveys shall include corners, distances, azimuths, angles, calculations, plats and a description of the monuments set up, with such reference thereto as will aid in finding the names of the parties for whom made and the date of making such surveys. Such book shall be kept as a public record by the county surveyor at his office, and shall be at all proper times open to inspection and examination by all persons interested therein. Any other surveys made in the county by competent surveyors, duly certified by such surveyor to be correct and deemed worthy of preservation, may by order of the commissioners, be recorded by the county surveyor." (R. S. Sec. 1178.)

It is to be noted that all unofficial surveys are not to be recorded by the county surveyor unless "deemed worthy of preservation." In constructing said section, the supreme court in the case of Strawn vs. Commissioners, 47, Ohio State 404, held that the county surveyor, who makes a survey for a private individual and records the same without its having been found to be worthy of preservation by the commissioners, does not acquire a claim against the county, as follows:

> "A county surveyor, who makes a survey for a private individual, upon an employment by him, and records the same without its being submitted to the county commissioners and found by them to be worthy of preservation, does not thereby acquire a valid claim against the county, to be paid for making such record."

Upon like reasoning and for the reason as stated above that the county auditor had never at any time authorized a surveyor to make a survey of such forfeited lands and that the county auditor had never deemed such survey as being necessary, it is the opinion of this department that such surveyor does not require a valid claim against the county and that the surveyor's bills for work in surveying such forfeited lands, under the circumstances as above set forth, cannot be paid legally out of the county treasury.

You also inquire as to what is meant by the clause "unless it is held in common with some other person," and "does that mean unless the entire original tract is held in common with some other person or persons?"

In answer thereto, it is my judgment that said phrase means the tract of land purchased at the sale of the county auditor in accordance with said section, and does not refer to the entire original tract. The clause, "unless it is held in common with some other person," refers to and modifies the clause, "the tract of land so purchased," rather than "the entire original tract," which latter clause is in the first part of the sentence. In further substantiation of my opinion in this regard, I quote from section 5765 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Any person claiming any land, inlot, outlot, or part of lot, by virtue of a sale made under the provisions of this chapter, as tenant in common with any other person or persons, may apply for partition thereof, in like manner as is provided for the partition of real estate. On presenting the county auditor's deed, the court, before which application for such partition is made, shall set off to such person, the land claimed in the deed as his share, in the manner prescribed by law for the partition of estates, in lands, tenements or hereditaments of joint tenants, tenants in common, and co-partners."

It is apparent from the provisions contained in said sections 5762 and 5765, of the General Code, that the survey required to be made by the surveyor in the former section, in order to ascertain the boundaries of the tract of land so purchased in accordance therewith, is to be waived; for the reason that if any person claims any land, inlot, outlot or part of lot by virtue of a sale made under the provisions of said section 5762, as a tenant in common with any other person or persons, such person may make an application for a partition of such lands so sold in like manner as is provided for the partition of real estate, and the establishing of the boundaries of such real estate, and the setting off by metes and bounds of the portions of the various claimants if the property is in such shape that it can be so set off, is an incident of the partition proceedings so provided for by said section 5765, and necessarily takes the place of the survey required by section 5762, General Code, for the purpose of ascertaining the boundaries of the tract of land so sold. In other words, the survey required by section 5762, supra, is not necessary when a survey is required by virtue of a partition proceeding in accordance with section 5765, supra. Therefore, the clause "unless it is held in common with some other person" only refers to and modifies the clause "the tract of land so sold" and not the entire original tract.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EXPERT WITNESS—GRAND JURY—ALLOWANCE OF WITNESS FEES OF EXPERT WITNESS TESTIFYING BEFORE GRAND JURY.

Under the provisions of section 2494, General Code, the approval of the court is clearly made a condition precedent to the allowance of the claim of an expert witness testifying before the grand jury or a trial court, not only as to the amount of the claim, but also to its allowance or disallowance altogether.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 10, 1913.

HON. B. F. ENOS, Prosecuting Attorney, Cambridge, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of July 3rd, you request the opinion of this department as follows:

> "Some time since we had a microscopical and chemical examination made, by a chemist in a poisoning case in this county, and afterward fully paid the chemist for his work. Thereafter this chemist was called as a witness before the grand jury. Now is he entitled to fees as an expert witness before the grand jury under favor of section 2494, General Code?

"The chemist is claiming fees as an expert witness, and a certificate has been made under favor of said section 2494, but the common pleas court has refused to approve the same, or rather has refused to approve any amount as such fees."

Section 2494, General Code, as is follows:

"Upon the certificate of the prosecuting attorney or his assistant that the services of an expert or the testimony of expert witnesses in the examination or trial of a person accused of the commission of crime, or before the grand jury, were or will be necessary to the proper administration of justice, the county commissioners may allow and pay such expert such compensation as they deem just and proper and the court approves."

By virtue of this statute, the approval of the court is clearly made a condition precedent to the allowance of the claim for services of an expert witness, testifying before the grand jury or the trial court.

The facts stated in your letter are not sufficient to permit of comment upon the merit of the claim in the present case. From your statement, however, that the chemist was fully paid for his microscopical and chemical examination, it would seem reasonable to suppose that any agreement had with him was intended to cover the examination only and the payment for the same was not presumed to include his services as witness before the grand jury. Whether or not this was actually the case does not appear in the facts set forth.

My opinion must be limited upon the facts stated to the power of the court with reference to the claim and from the terms of this statute, I am of the opinion that the discretion of that official extends not only to the allowance of the amount of the claim, but must also be allowed to rule upon its allowance or disallowance altogether. I am, therefore, forced to conclude that if the court in the exercise of the discretionary powers conferred, sees fit to disapprove the amount specified for such services, such claim cannot be allowed, at least in the absence of clear and unmistakable abuse of discretion upon the part of the court.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PRESENTING OF A DEED FOR RECORD—NUMERICAL ORDER OF FILE—DEED MAY NOT BE WITHDRAWN AFTER FILING AND BEFORE BEING RECORDED.

From the time a deed is presented for record until it is recorded, each instrument shall be kept on file in the same numerical order and there exists no legal right on the part of the recorder or any other person to withdraw a deed presented for record during such period from the office of the recorder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 10, 1913.

HON. BEN A. BICKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Hamilton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 20th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "First. Can a deed presented to have recorded and filed by the county recorder, be withdrawn before it is recorded and if so by whom?
> "Second. Can an attorney or any other person withdraw the deed temporarily, between the time of filing and recording?
> "Third. Can the grantee or grantees withdraw the deed after the same is filed by the recorder and not recorded?"

In the absence of express statutory provision for a different procedure, the question of the right of a recorder to retain possession of a deed presented to him for any purpose, would of course depend upon the ordinary rules of bailment and the agreement of the parties with reference thereto.

The procedure for the recording of deeds, however, is governed by statute, and I am of the opinion that section 2758, General Code, affords an answer to your inquiries. This section is as follows:

> "Section 2758. Upon the presentation of a deed or other instrument of writing for record, the county recorder shall indorse thereon the date and the precise time of day of its presentation, and a file number. Such file numbering shall be consecutive and in the order in which the instrument of writing is received for record, except chattel mortgages, which shall have a separate series of file numbers, and be filed separately, as provided by law. Until recorded each instrument shall be kept on file in the same numerical order for easy reference, and, if required, the recorder shall, without fee, give to the person presenting it a receipt therefor, naming the parties thereto, the date thereof, with a brief description of the premises. When a deed or other instrument is recorded, the recorder shall indorse thereon the time, when recorded, and the number or letter and page or pages of the book in which it is recorded."

By this statute it is provided after a deed is filed with the recorder for the purpose of being recorded that "until recorded each instrument shall be kept on file in the same numerical order for easy reference." This language expressly gives the recorder custody of a deed from the time of filing to the time of its being recorded and there is nothing in the statutes which entitles a grantee or any other party to withdraw a deed during such period.

It is necessary for the proper maintenance of the system set forth in the statutes for the recording of deeds or papers that strict safeguard be imposed and that rules of order and precision be maintained, and in view of this express provision of the statute,

I am of the opinion that there exists no legal right upon the part of the grantee or any other person to withdraw a deed presented for recording, during such period, from the office of the recorder.

The words "for easy reference" undoubtedly give the right of any member of the public to inspect such deed, but this right cannot be extended so as to permit the withdrawal of the instrument from the office. The recorder is charged with the custody of the same and is undoubtedly charged with the responsibility of its safe keeping, and would be answerable for any loss or inconvenience which would result from the loss of the instrument.

In view of this conclusion, it is unnecessary to answer your second and third questions.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—COUNTY INFIRMARY—PUBLICATION IN NEWSPAPER—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO FURNISH STATEMENT FOR PUBLICATION CONCERNING FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS OF COUNTY INFIRMARY.

Under the provisions of section 2536, General Code, when two newspapers of general circulation and of opposite politics volunteer to publish free of charge a detailed statement of the financial transactions of the county commissioners in connection with the infirmary, the county commissioners are obliged to furnish the auditor with the necessary statement for such publication.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1913.

HON. B. F. DUNLAVY, Prosecuting Attorney, Jefferson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 13th, you inquire as follows:

"Under section 2508, General Code, do the county commissioners have to report in their report a detailed statement of the expenses of the county infirmary? I call your attention in this matter to section 2536, of the General Code, and ask you if that has any bearing upon the question. I would take it that under section 2536, General Code, when the infirmary directors were in charge of the institution, in that instance no report need be published unless the proprietors or managers of two newspapers, within the county, volunteered to publish the report without expense, but now that the county commissioners have charge of it, it is my opinion that they must comply with section 2508 and include within their report the report of the county infirmary."

Sections 2507, 2508 and 2536, General Code, are as follows:

"Section 2507. On or before the third Monday in September of each year, the county commissioners shall make to the court of common pleas of the county a detailed report of their financial transactions during the year next preceding such date. Such report shall be in writing, and itemized as to amount, to whom paid, and for what purpose.

"Section 2508. Such report shall be published immediately in a compact form one time in two newspapers of different political parties, printed and of general circulation in such county. If two such papers are not so published, the publication shall be in one paper only. In addition to such publication, the report shall be published in the same manner in one newspaper, if there be such, printed in the county in the German language and having a bona fide general circulation of not less than six hundred among the inhabitants of such county speaking that language.

"Section 2536. If in any county the proprietors or managers of two newspapers of general circulation and opposite politics notify the county auditor that they will publish free of charge a full and detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures of the county commissioners of the county for any designated month or months, the auditor shall at once so notify the county commissioners, who within twenty days shall furnish the auditor with a full account in detail of all moneys received and paid out by them during such month, whence it was received and to whom and for what purposes paid."

I am pleased to say that I agree fully with the conclusions stated by you.

The language of sections 2507 and 2508 is clear, and it is the manifest intention thereof that such statement should comprise a detailed account of all financial transactions conducted by the county commissioners.

When the legislature shouldered the county commissioners with the duties pertaining to the county infirmary, they in no wise exempted the financial transactions connected with such duties from the requirement of sections 2507 and 2508, above quoted, and I am of the opinion that all moneys received or expended in this connection should be included in said report.

Neither can I find any difficulty with reference to section 2536, General Code, and I am of the opinion that such a report need only be published when the proprietors or managers of two newspapers of general circulation and opposite politics volunteer to publish free of charge a detailed statement of the financial transactions of the county commissioners in connection with the county infirmary. When such offer is made by such newspapers, the county commissioners, by virtue of this statute, are obliged to furnish the auditor with the necessary statement for publication.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—POWER TO LEASE ROOMS IN COURT HOUSE —JEFFERSON COUNTY LAW LIBRARY ASSOCIATION—PROSECUTING ATTORNEY SHOULD OCCUPY ROOMS IN COURT HOUSE.

County commissioners are without power to lease rooms in a court house to a private firm when such rooms are needed for the use of the county.

When a private concern occupies rooms in a court house and these rooms are needed for the use of the prosecuting attorney, the private concern should be ousted and the rooms occupied by the prosecuting attorney.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 25, 1913.

HON. W. C. BROWN, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 24th you requested my opinion as follows:

> "The Jefferson County Law Library Association has a room furnished it by the county commissioners, in accordance with law, adjoining which is the office formerly occupied by the prosecuting attorney. In the court house is a suite of offices occupied by Messrs. Erskine & Vail, attorneys at law, who pay the commissioners two hundred dollars a year; the room occupied by Messrs. Erskine & Vail being leased to them until the first of April, 1914. The Jefferson County Law Library Association has requested of the commissioners that the room formerly occupied by the prosecuting attorney be given to them for law library purposes, claiming that the same is necessary for a proper use of the library by its members. The Library Association has a valuable collection of books, estimated at possibly twelve or thirteen thousand dollars; part of the library is stored in other parts of the court house for the reason that there is not sufficient room in the present quarters, and there is no place for study in the library.
> "The commissioners are of the opinion that the room formerly occupied by the prosecuting attorney is needed by the Law Library Association, to be added to their private quarters. The prosecuting attorney at the present time occupies two rooms in the National Exchange Bank Building, in the city of Steubenville, Ohio, one of which costs sixteen dollars a month, the other eighteen dollars a month. There is no available room for the prosecuting attorney in the court house other than the room which the Law Library Association has requested and the rooms occupied by Messrs. Erskine & Vail, under lease until April 1, 1914.
> "The following proposition has been made to the county commissioners by the prosecuting attorney, that the county pay the rent of the office in the National Exchange Bank Building that rents for sixteen dollars a month, or apply the rental at the rate of two hundred dollars a year that is received from Messrs. Erskine & Vail, upon the rent of the prosecuting attorney in the National Exchange Bank Building. This the commissioners are willing to do if the same is legal. Being interested in the matter myself, I would appreciate it if you would render the commissioners an opinion."

Section 3055, General Code, requires the county commissioners to provide rooms for a law library as follows:

> "For the use of such law library, the board of county commissioners of the county shall provide at the expense of the county, a suitable room or rooms with sufficient and suitable bookcases, in the county court house, or if there is no suitable room or rooms to be had therein, any other suitable room or rooms at the county seat, and shall heat and light them. The books and furniture of the law library association used exclusively in such library, shall be exempt from taxation."

The powers of the county commissioners with reference to the provision of rooms for county officers are set forth in the following statutes, 2433, 2434, 2446 and 2419.

"Section 2433. When, in their opinion, it is necessary, the commissioners may purchase a site for a court house, or jail, or land for an infirmary or a detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home at such price and upon such terms of payment, as are agreed upon between them and the owner or owners of the property. The title to such real estate shall be conveyed in fee simple to the county.

"Section 2434. For the execution of the objects stated in the preceding section, or for the purpose of erecting or acquiring a building in memory of Ohio soldiers, or for a court house, county offices, jail, county infirmary, detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home or other necessary buildings or bridges, or for the purpose of enlarging, repairing, improving or rebuilding thereof, or for the relief of the support of the poor, the commissioners may borrow such sum or sums of money as they deem necessary, at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum, and issue the bonds of the county to secure the payment of the principal and interest thereof.

"Provided, that if the judge designated to transact the business arising under the jurisdiction provided for in section 1639 of the General Code of the state of Ohio, shall advise and recommend in writing to the county commissioners of any county the purchase of land for and the erection of a place to be known as a detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home, the commissioners without first submitting the question to the vote of the county may levy a tax for either or both of such purposes in an amount not to exceed in any one year two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property on the tax duplicate of said county.

"Section 2446. When in the opinion of the commissioners it is necessary to procure real estate, or the right of way, or easement for a court house, jail, or public offices, or for a bridge and the approaches thereto, or other lawful structures, and they and the owner or owners thereof are unable to agree upon its purchase and sale, or the amount of damages to be awarded therefor, the commissioners may appropriate such real estate, right of way or easement, and for this purpose they shall cause an accurate survey and description to be made of the parcel of land needed for such purpose, or in case of a bridge, of the right of way and easement required, and shall file it with the probate judge. Thereupon the same proceedings shall be had, as are provided for the appropriation of private property by municipal corporations.

"Section 2419. A court house, jail, offices for county officers and an infirmary, shall be provided by the commissioners when, in their judgment, they, or any of them, are needed. Such buildings and offices shall be of such style, dimensions and expense, as the commissioners determine. They shall provide all rooms, fire and burglar proof vaults and safes, and other means of security in the office of the county treasurer, necessary for the protection of public moneys and property therein."

Section 2447, General Code, confers upon the county commissioners power to dispose of such real estate as is not needed for public use. This section is as follows:

> "If, in their opinion, the interests of the county so require, the commissioners may sell any real estate belonging to the county, and not needed for public use."

The power of county commissioners to lease property owned absolutely by them is upheld in the case of Widow vs. Commissioners, 5 O. S., page 204, The syllabus of this case is as follows:

> "Where real estate is vested absolutely in the county commissioners, for public purposes, they may dispose of it in the same manner as individuals could."

On page 205 of this decision, Judge Lane said:

> "A corporation is an artificial person, and by the terms of its creation it possesses the same capacity, to purchase or to sell, that an individual has who possesses the capacity to contract."

In this case the power of the county commissioners to lease the property was contested but such power was upheld by the court.

The syllabus of the case of Weir vs. Day, 35 O. S. page 143, is as follows:

> "1. Under the act of May 1, 1873, entitled 'an act for the reorganization and maintenance of common schools' (70 Ohio L. 195), boards of education are invested with the title to the property of their respective districts in trust for the use of public schools, and the appropriation of such property to any other use is unauthorized.
> "2. A lease of a public schoolhouse for the purpose of having a private or select school taught therein for a term of weeks, is in violation of the trust; and such use of the schoolhouse may be restrained at the suit of a resident taxpayer of the district."

On page 145 Judge McIlvaine uses the following language:

> "The questions in this case relate solely to the power of a board of education to appropriate the public schoolhouse of its district to private uses, or, indeed, to any use other than public schools.
> "Section 37 of the 'act for the reorganization and maintenance of common schools' passed May 1, 1873 (70 Ohio L. 195), in force when the original action was commenced, provides: 'The several boards of education of all school districts now organized and established, and all school districts organized under the provisions of this act, shall be and they are hereby declared to be bodies politic and corporate, and as such capable of suing and being sued, contracting and being contracted with, acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of property, both real and personal, and taking and holding in trust for the use and benefit of such districts any grant or devise of land, and any donation or bequest of money or other personal property; and of exercising such other powers and having such other privileges as are conferred by this act.' And section 39 reads as follows: 'All property, real or personal, which has heretofore vested in and is now held by any board of education, or town or city council, for the use of public or common schools in any district is hereby, vested in the board of education provided for in this act, having under this act jurisdiction and control of the schools in such district.'
> "By virtue of these sections, all public school houses are vested in the boards of education, in trust for the use of the public or common schools, and the appropriation of them to any other use is unauthorized and unlawful. The power of 'disposing of property' conferred upon such boards by section 37, was intended to and does relate solely to property not needed for the use of the public schools.

"We do not mean to say that a court of equity will interpose its extraordinary power, by writ of injunction, against every casual or temporary use of such property for other than public school purposes, but it is quite clear to our minds that its appropriation, by lease, for a private school for a term of weeks, ought to be restrained.

"It has been suggested that a distinction might be made between uses other than for the public schools; and that those which are educational in character might be allowed, while those not educational should be prohibited. We can see no ground for such distinction. The property having been acquired and maintained by general taxation, for the use of public schools, to which all the youth of the district are entitled to admission, it would be a violation of the trust to devote it to any educational purposes to the benefits of which, each youth within the district, of school age, might not of right demand admission upon equal terms with others in like condition."

The principle of public property being burdened with a public trust so as to place a restraint upon the powers of its alienation, by quasi corporations, was recognized in the case of Widow vs. Commissioners above cited, by the following language by the court of Judge Lane, appearing on page 207 thereof:

"Admitting that civil corporations incidentally possess the power to transfer a good title by deed, it may still be insisted that a person taking the estate holds it subject to the same trusts as while in the hands of the corporation. Perhaps such a trust may sometimes be raised by the terms of the donation. If the land be made subject to uses expressed on the face of the deed, which can not be enjoyed consistently with the exclusive dominion and enjoyment of the alienee, perhaps the trust might be enforced; as where lands were given to a municipal corporation, to be holden for a common, walk, or public fountain, perhaps the purchaser may take it, subject to the rights of the inhabitants. But the case before cited, from Vesey & Boame, shows that when property held for general corporate purposes is aliened, even for purposes not corporate, such alienation is absolute."

I am of the opinion that the case presented by you discloses an analogous principle to that which is the basis of the decision in the case of Weir vs. Day. Under 2447, General Code, the power of the county commissioners to sell real estate is restricted to such as is not needed for county purposes, a fort ori the same restriction extends to their power to lease. When a court house is erected, it is burdened with the trust requiring its use for county purposes, and its devotion to foreign purposes when required for county purposes, is as much a violation to the trust burden as was the lease of the school house in the case of Weir vs. Day.

I therefore conclude that the county commissioners are without power to lease rooms in the court house to a private firm, when such rooms are needed for the use of the prosecuting attorney. This firm should be ousted from their rooms and their offices made available to the prosecuting attorney. The law library association may then be permit ed the use of the rooms formerly given to the prosecuting attorney.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ROAD COMMISSIONERS—DUTY TO DESIGNATE ROADS AND STREETS FOR IMPROVEMENT—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—CENTER LINE OF TOWNSHIP.

Under section 6985, General Code, it is the duty of the road commissioners to designate the roads and streets in a township, which in their opinion should be repaired. The township trustees in choosing the roads to be improved are lijmited to these roads designated by the commissioners.

The trustees must first improve the roads nearest the center line of the township running north and south.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 25, 1913.

HON. A. M. HENDERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of April 14th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "The trustees of Coitsville township, this county, acting under sections 6976, etc., have held an election to determine the question of improvement of roads which carried in favor of improvement, appointed a commission and the commissioners have recommended the improvement of three roads, none of which run north and south as referred to in section 6987 and which are not traveled upon to as great an extent as two other roads running north and south in the township. The trustees have consulted me with reference to whether or not they could pave the two roads which were not referred to in the commissioners' recommendation."

Sections 6976 to 7018 inclusive of the General Code of Ohio, provide a complete scheme for the improvement of roads in a township, including roads extending into or through a municipality.

Section 6985 and 6987 provide as follows:

> "Section 6985. Such commissioners shall designate and determine the established roads and streets in the township which in their opinion shall be improved. The commissioners shall call to their assistance a competent engineer, who shall make a correct map of the township, plainly showing the established roads and streets therein which have been by such commissioners designated for such improvement, also profiles of such roads and streets showing the grade thereof, as they then exist or have been established, which he shall turn over to the custody of the township clerk.
> "Section 6987. After the report of the commissioners, and the map and the profiles have been filed with the township clerk, the township trustees, in determining which roads shall be first improved, of those designated by the commissioners, shall select those nearest the center line of such township, north and south. If, in their opinion, it is not expedient to improve all roads in all directions at one time, they shall improve the roads which in their opinion are the most traveled and used within such township."

It is the duty of the road commissioners under section 6985 to designate the roads and streets in a township which, in their opinion, shall be improved. They are also empowered by said section to employ a competent engineer whose duty it is to make a map of the township, plainly showing which roads have been designated by the commissioners for improvement, and to make profile thereof.

After the report of the commissioners, and map and profile have been filed, the township trustees must choose the roads to be improved, but in making their choice, the trustees are limited by section 6987 to those roads designated by the road commissioners.

Section 6989 provides for the advertising for bids and letting of contracts after the "trustees, by resolution, have determined to improve such designated roads."

These various provisions of statute read together clearly justify the conclusion and it is my opinion that the township trustees in question may not improve any roads other than those designated by the road commissioners.

The fact that none of said roads run north and south does not, in my judgment, authorize the trustees to disregard the recommendation of the commissioners. The words "north" and "south" appearing at the end of the first sentence of section 6987, in my opinion, qualifies the clause immediately preceding them, that is, they refer to the direction of an imaginary line running through the center of a township, north and south, rather than to the direction of the roads themselves. The township trustees must first improve the roads nearest the center line of the township running north and south, whatever may be the direction in which such roads extend.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BLIND RELIEF COMMISSION ABOLISHED BY HOUSE BILL No. 180.

The blind relief commission was abolished with the taking effect of House Bill No. 180, and consequently, does not continue in office during the years 1913 and 1914. The office does not exist after July 8, 1913.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 18, 1913.

HON. A. BICKLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Hamilton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 15, 1913, in which you inquire:

> "Mr. A. H. N. has requested me to secure an opinion from you as to whether or not the blind relief commission continues in office for the year 1913 and 1914.
> "It is my opinion that house bill 180 found on page 60 of the laws of Ohio, volume 103, abolishes county blind relief commissions and that said law is in force at this time and until house bill 678, as found in the laws of Ohio, volume 103, page 833, becomes a law on August 11, 1913, at which time the said law will take the place of the law created by house bill 180.
> "It is my opinion that the blind relief commission ended with the passage of house bill 180 and that in the light of the above named law the blind relief commission does not continue in office for the year 1913 and the year 1914, and if the same is your opinion, I would like to have you write confirming my opinion as herein stated."

House bill 180, 103 O. L. 60, was filed in the office of the secretary of state March 10, 1913, and therefore went into effect July 8, 1913. Inasmuch as it repeals sections 2962, 2963 and 2964, its effect is to abolish the blind relief commission at the time of its taking effect.

House bill 678, 103 O. L. 833, was filed with the secretary of state May 13, 1913, and takes effect on August 11, 1913, as stated by you, and as it specifically repeals sections 2962-3-4-5-6-7, 2968-1, 2968, 2969 and 2970, H. B. 180 is repealed.

The result is that H. B. 180 is in effect from July 8, 1913, to August 11, 1913, when H. B. 678 takes effect, and that after the taking effect of H. B. 180, there is no blind relief commission for the reason that there is no such office to fill after July 8, 1913.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF COUNTY EXAMINERS—CERTIFICATE FROM FOREIGN STATE—EXAMINATION.

The board of county examiners has no authority to honor a certificate of teachers who have taught in a foreign state, or to issue certificates to them without taking an examination in this state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1913.

HON. C. C. CRABBE, Prosecuting Attorney, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of July 3rd wherein you submit for my opinion the question whether or not the boards of examiners have the right to honor certificates of teachers who have taught for years in a sister state and issue certificates to them without requiring them to take an examination in this state.

I infer, since you as prosecuting attorney are making the inquiry, that you refer to the county board of examiners.

The sections prescribing the duties of the county board of examiners are found in sections 7811 to 7837, General Code, inclusive.

Section 7816, General Code, provides as follows:

> "The board shall make all needful rules and regulations for the proper discharge of its duties and the conduc' of its works, subject to statutory provisions and the approval of the state commissioner of common schools."

After providing for the necessary examination and the kinds of certificates that may be issued, section 7824, General Code, provides:

> "County boards of school examiners at their discretion may issue certificates without formal examinations to holders of certificates granted by other county and city boards of school examiners."

Section 7825, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Each county board of school examiners may make its own regulations to grant certificates without formal examinations, except in theory and practice of teaching and in the science of education, to graduates of schools for the training of teachers, having at least a two-years' course of study in addition to graduation from a first grade high school, and of colleges or universities, with at least a four years' course of study in addition to graduation from a first grade high school. Certificates thus granted to such graduates may be issued, on application, within one year after graduation, first for one year; and at their expiration, on satisfactory evidence of success in teaching, for longer terms."

The provisions of section 7816, General Code, supra, that the board shall make all needful rules and regulations for the proper discharge of its duties and the conduct of its work are not broad enough as it seems to me to permit of issuing of such certificate as you inquire about. Especially so, since there are statutory provisions relative to the issuing of such certificates found in later sections.

Section 7824, General Code, supra, provides how certificates may be issued without examination to those who already hold Ohio certificates.

Coming now to a consideration of section 7825, General Code, supra, it will be seen that certificates may be issued without examination except in theory and practice and in the science of education to graduates of schools for training of teachers having at least a two years' course of study in addition to graduation from a first grade high school and to graduates of colleges and universities, but that the provision is that certificates thus granted to such graduates may be issued on application within one year after graduation, first for one year; and at the expiration on satisfactory evidence of success in teaching, for longer terms. This section does not limit the right of the board of school examiners to issue certificates to graduates of schools for training of teachers in Ohio or of the colleges and universities in Ohio, but such section is general. However, as I take it, the provision that the certificate 'may be issued on application within one year after graduation' is to be considered as a limitation upon the board of school examiners in issuing certificates under said section 7825, General Code.

Your question is in reference to teachers who have taught for years in a sister state. This is not covered by section 7825, General Code, nor do I find any section of the statutes which do give authority to board of school examiners to so issue certificates without examination to teachers who have taught for years in a sister state.

I am informed that it has been customary in certain counties of the state to issue a certificate under such circumstances, but since I can find no authority of law permitting of such issuance, and since the board of school examiners have only those powers which are granted them by statute, I am constrained to hold that the board of county examiners have no authority to honor certificates of teachers who have taught for years in a sister state and issue certificates to them without taking an examination in this state.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SALE OF REAL ESTATE—FORFEITURE.

Where A and B enter into an agreement in the month of March, whereby A agrees to sell to B real estate valued at $13,000 or forfeit to B $500, the property to be delivered on April 25th, A should not be assessed for $12,500 as credits, as this merely amounts to an executory agreement to buy certain lands at a stipulated price or to forfeit $500. deposited with A.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 25, 1913.

HON. J. B. TEMPLETON, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 7th requesting my opinion upon the following statement of facts:

> "A, the owner of real estate situated in Fulton county, and a resident of said county, in March, 1913, entered into an agreement with B, a resident of Henry county, by the terms of which it was agreed that A would sell the said real estate to B for the sum of $13,000 on the 25th day of April, 1913, or forfeit $500, and B would purchase the said real estate on said 25th day of April or forfeit $500. B deposited the sum of $500 as such forfeiture with A at the time the contract was entered into. On April 25th B elected to purchase the property and A elected to sell it and the bargain and sale was consummated and the deed was delivered.
> "What, if any, personal tax should be assessed against A on account of the above transaction?"

The agreement of the parties to which you refer was entered into prior to the day preceding the second Monday of April, but the transaction was closed after that date. The manner in which the transaction terminated ultimately cannot affect the question in any way. For the purpose of determining the amount of A's personal assessment the status of the transaction on the day preceding the second Monday of April with the possibilities which then existed must be considered, and that alone. In all cases of this sort the intention of the parties is controlling. The agreement as you state it, however, seems to be so explicit that it is scarcely likely that there are other facts which might be shown with a view to giving to the arrangement between the parties an effect other than that which appears to follow from the facts which you set out.

On your statement of facts A clearly possessed no incohate right of action against B which might have become perfected on B's failure to take the real estate on the 25th of April at the price agreed upon for any amount in excess of $500. That is to say, on the day preceding the second Monday of April A's right against B was contingent upon B's failure to buy the land and consisted simply of a right to retain for his own use the $500 which B had deposited with him.

So far, then, as B's obligation to A, under the contract of March, 1913, is concerned, it amounts merely to an executory agreement to buy certain land at a stipulated price or to forfeit the sum of $500 deposited with A for that purpose.

On the other hand, the obligation of A to B under the contract of March, 1913, did not alter the case. On the day preceding the second Monday of April B possessed an executory obligation against A whereby if A should fail to deliver to him a deed for the property on a day certain in the future A would be obliged to forfeit and pay to B the sum of $500.

These mutual obligations are such as to clearly eliminate the land itself from consideration. True, the land constituted the subject-matter of the contract, but the right of action which either party would have against the other would not be such as would enable the one to compel the specific performance of a contract to convey nor either to recover damages upon the basis of the loss of the land or $13,000. Though not exactly an option the contract amounts to little more than an option coupled with an agreement to purchase or forfeit the sum of $500.

Contracts of this general character have, under tax laws similar to our own, been held not to create a taxable credit. In re Shields, 10 L. R. A. n. s. 1061, 111 N. W. 963 (La. 1907). Brown vs. Thomas, 37 Kansas, 282. Schoonover vs. Petcina, 126 Iowa 261.

In other words, in order that a contract right may be taxable as a credit it must at least create a demand such as the law will recognize and enforce, fixed and certain, and not indefinite nor contingent, and liquidated, as to its amount. 37 Cyc. 784.

No such demand as to the sum of $13,000 is created by the contract described by you.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that A should not be assessed for the sum of $13,000 or more accurately, for the sum of $12,500 as credits on account of the transaction described by you.

It appears from your letter that A concedes his liability to be taxed upon the $500 deposited with him as moneys. I, therefore, do not consider any question which might arise respecting this amount.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BONDING COMPANY—JOINT AND SEVERAL LIABILITY FOR THE FULL AMOUNT OF THE BOND—BOND OF COUNTY TREASURER.

Under the provisions of section 2633, General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws 540, where two bonding companies sign a joint and several bond of a county treasurer, the companies so signing render themselves jointly and severally liable for the full amount of the bond.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 28, 1913.

HON. CHARLES H. DUNCAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 1st you call my attention to section 2633, General Code, as amended at the recent session of the legislature, 103 Ohio Laws 540, which provides in part as follows:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, the county treasurer shall give bond to the state in such sum as the commissioners direct with two or more bonding or surety companies as surety, or at his option, with four or more freehold sureties approved by the commissioners and conditioned for the payment, according to law, of all moneys which come into his hands, for state, county, township or other purposes."

And you inquire whether under the language of said section "with two or more bonding or surety companies as surety" if two companies were to go on the bond of the treasurer each such company could limit its liability to half the amount of the bond either by splitting the bonds or executing two bonds or by stipulation to that effect in one bond signed by both companies. The provision is that the two companies are to go on the bond as surety. The word "surety" is used in the singular, and, therefore, the legislature must have intended that the two companies were to sign but one joint and several bond fixing the liability of each for the full amount of the bond. It would hardly be contended that if four or more freehold sureties were to go upon a bond of the treasurer each of said sureties would be permitted to limit his liability to only a proportionate part of the bond signed by him. There can be no doubt that it was the intention of the legislature that the bonding companies were to sign a joint and several bond and render themselves so liable for the full amount of the bond required.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—AMOUNT THAT MAY BE EXPENDED FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OR REBUILDING OF A SCHOOL HOUSE WITHOUT SUBMITTING THE QUESTION TO A VOTE OF THE PEOPLE.

When the tax duplicate of the preceding year is such that a tax of two mills would raise only $2,600, the board of education may not expend for the construction of a school house the sum of $3,300 without first submitting the question of the expenditure to a vote of the people.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 21, 1913.

HON. CLARK GOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 1st in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "The state inspector of workshops and factories has ordered a certain board of education to discontinue the use of a certain school house which will, in the aggregate, cost about $3,300 to have the improvements made as designated.
> "The tax duplicate of last year is in amount such that a tax of two mills thereon would raise only about $2,600. Can the board of education, under the terms of sections 7630-1 and 5649-4, of the General Code, as amended by the last legislature, borrow more than $2,600 without a vote of the people, and make a tax levy of two and one-half mills to repay the loan?"

Your question assumes that the sum of $2,600 is the total amount which can be borrowed by the board of education for the purposes stated under the provisions of sections 7625 to 7630 inclusive, General Code.

This assumption is correct and I shall not discuss these sections further. Your reference to sections 7630-1 and 5640-4, General Code, calls attention to the provisions of an act passed by the last session of the general assembly found in 103 L. O. 527. This act supplements section 7630, General Code, by the enactment of section 7630-1 and amends section 5649-4. The amendment of section 5649-4 is for the purpose of taking out of the Smith law limitations, so called, levies made under authority of section 7631. Said section 5649-4 need not be considered in this connection.

Section 7630-1, in my judgment, contains the answer to your question. It provides as follows:

> "If a school house is wholly or partly destroyed by fire or other casualty, or if the use of any school house for its intended purpose is prohibited by any order of the chief inspector of workshops and factories, and the board of education of the school district is without sufficient funds applicable to the purpose with which to rebuild or repair such school house or to construct a new school house for the proper accommodation of the schools of the district, and it is not practicable to secure such fund under any of the six preceding sections because of the limits of taxation applicable to such school district, such board of education may, subject to the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven, and upon the approval of the electors in the manner provided by sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-five and seventy-six hundred and twenty-six issue bonds for the amount required for such purpose. For the payment of the principal and interest on such bonds and on bonds heretofore issued for the purposes herein mentioned and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, such board of education shall annually levy a tax as provided by law."

It is obvious that the sole purpose of section 7430-1 is to enable money to be borrowed when the obstacle to the borrowing of the money is the tax limitation of the district. Not only is there nothing in the section which indicates that it was intended to dispense with the necessity of a popular vote, but the section expressly provides that a vote of the electors is necessary in order to secure the authority to borrow money thereunder.

Therefore your question must be answered in the negative despite the provisions of section 7630-1, or more accurately, because of the express provisions thereof, read in connection with section 7625 et seq, the aggregate amounts of the indebtedness which may be incurred by a board of education for the purpose of which you state in any one year without a vote of the people, is $2,600.

The borrowing power of boards of education is very restricted under the statutes of this state. Save for the purpose of funding or refunding a valid and existing indebtedness, such boards have no power to borrow money other than that specified in the sections which have already been discussed. Therefore, if the board of education concerning which you inquire desires to expend the sum of $3,300, the tax duplicate of the district being such as you describe it to be, it is absolutely necessary that the board of education submit the question to a vote of the people.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOND ISSUE BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES TO MEET TOWNSHIP SHARE OF HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT EXPENSE—OBLIGATION IMPOSED ON TOWNSHIP BY LAW.

Township trustees may not issue and sell bonds under the joint authority of sections 3295, 3939, et seq, for the purpose of contributing the township share of a highway improvement. If the township trustees desire to borrow money for the purpose of meeting their portion of the cost of a highway improvement, they must do so under section 1223, General Code. The bonds referred to under section 1223 may be issued without a vote of the people, regardless of the outstanding indebtedness of the township.

No action of the trustees is necessary to impose the obligation upon the township; this obligation being imposed by the law itself and the proceeding through which it is imposed is carried on by the county commissioners on the one hand and by the state highway commission on the other.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 27, 1913.

HON. CHEEVER W. PETTAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Cadiz, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 26th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "May the township trustees issue and sell bonds under the joint authority of section 3295, General Code, and section 3939 et seq., General Code, for the purpose of contributing the township's share of a state highway improvement?"

You state it as your opinion that unless the township trustees have some authority to borrow money under the procedure mentioned by some other sections of the General Code, a state highway improvement contract cannot lawfully be let. It appears that in the specific instance which you have in mind, owners of abutting property have petitioned for a particular improvement, and the county commissioners have applied for state aid, having required the trustees of the township to guarantee the township's portion by resolution. Apparently, the only thing remaining to be done in the proceeding is the actual letting of the contract.

I shall first discuss the question as to whether or not a certificate that the township's portion of the money is in the treasury etc., is required to be issued by the township clerk, in this class of cases, and if so, at what point in the proceedings it should be issued. This question has been raised in my mind, although you do not expressly invite my opinion thereon.

Section 5660, General Code, is the only section which requires the issuance of any such certificate by the township clerk. It is as follows:

> "* * * The trustees of a township * * * shall not (1) enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or (2) pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the * * * clerk * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn. * * * Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the * * * township * * * is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or so long as the order or resolution is in force."

Obviously, this statute applies to and governs the creation of obligations by the voluntary act of the trustees. It has long been recognized that this section does not apply to the creation of obligations imposed upon a taxing district by law, or by the action of authorities other than those of a taxing district itself. Thus, for example, it does not apply to the salary of a county officer; nor does it apply to the judicial expenses chargeable against a county treasury. I do not know that I can cite authorities upon these propositions, but it seems to me they are self-evident.

The first thing, then, for consideration is as to whether or not, under the present state highway law, the obligation of a township to pay a part of the expense of constructing a state highway is one that is created by the act of the township trustees. If it appears that the township is charged with a proportion of the cost and expense of constructing such a highway, without any action on the part of the township trustees, then, it must be held that the issuance of a clerk's certificate is not required. If, on the other hand, the improvement of a highway under the state highway law calls for any action on the part of the township trustees, as a necessary step therein, then, this certificate should be issued, if at all, before that step is taken.

Inasmuch as your question has arisen after practically all the steps have been taken, excepting the letting of the contract itself, I shall first consider in this connection whether or not the issuance of a Burns law certificate at this stage of the proceedings is necessary in order to render such contract valid.

Section 1201, General Code, governs this matter. It provides as follows:

> "Upon receipt of the application and certified copy of the resolution of the county commissioners, the state highway commissioner shall advertise for bids for two consecutive weeks in two newspapers of general circulation and of opposite politics, published in the county in which the improvement is to be made. Such notice shall state that plans and specifications for the improvement are on file in the offices of the state highway commissioner and county commissioners, and the time in which bids therefor will be received. Subject to the approval of the county commissioners the state highway commissioner shall award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder."

It is obvious that the township trustees have nothing whatever to do with letting the contract under this section. The contract is to be let by the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the county commissioners. These two public agents then concur as one of the contracting parties, and, therefore, it might well, and perhaps should, be held that the Burns law certificate must be issued as a prerequisite to the action of the commissioners under this section.

So far as this section is concerned, however, it cannot give rise to the duty to issue a Burns law certificate as to the township's portion. Section 5660, General Code, does not, as already pointed out, apply to obligations imposed upon the township by some outside authority. Clearly, the letting of the contract, if it results in imposing an obligation upon the township, is an act of an outside authority, and not an act of the township trustees. Therefore, if this section stood alone it would have to be held that a Burns law certificate may not be required as to the township's portion.

It appears, therefore, that so far as the facts stated in your letter are concerned, the necessity for the issuance of a certificate, if any, either arose at some prior stage of the proceedings or will arise at some subsequent stage thereof; it does not arise at the point to which those proceedings have progressed, viz.: the letting of the contract by the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the county commissioners.

I will now consider the statutes relating to the obligation of the township to pay any portion of the expense of a state highway improvement, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not such obligation arises necessarily, or in any case, through or by virtue of the action of the township trustees. For that purpose I quote the following provisions of the state highway law, being all of the provisions in any way relating to the subject:

"Section 1185. The commissioners of a county may make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from an appropriation by the state for the construction, improvement, maintenance, or repair of highways. * * * If the county commissioners have not made use of the apportionment to such county, in the year in which it is available, then the township trustees may make application prior to the first day of April of the succeeding year. * * *"

"Section 1186. Each application for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of highways shall be accompanied by a proper certified resolution of the county commissioners or township trustees having jurisdiction of the road to be constructed, improved, maintained or repaired, stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the highway therein described; that the description does not include any portion of the highway in the limits of any municipality.

"Section 1188. If the trustees of a township make application under this chapter, the state highway commissioner may proceed with the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of such road or highway in the manner provided in case of an application by the county commissioners. In such case the township trustees shall have the same rights and powers as are given county commissioners under this chapter, and the township clerk and township treasurer, respectively, in case of application by township trustees shall have the same rights and powers as are given to the county auditor and treasurer.

"Section 1189. Upon the receipt of an application, the state highway commissioner shall determine whether the highway sought to be improved is of sufficient public importance to come within the purpose of this chapter. * * * If the highway commissioner approves of the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of such highway or any part thereof he shall certify his approval of the application or such part thereof to the county commissioners. * * *

"Section 1192. * * * The county commissioners or trustees of townships in which the highway is situated may also improve a highway to a greater width than herein specified if their application therefor contains a stipulation to pay such added cost and expense; or such county commissioners, trustees and abutting property owners may join in an application for an increase of width of an improvement by jointly agreeing to pay the added cost and expense thereof. * * *

"Section 1193. Upon the completion of the maps, plans and specifications of the proposed road improvement, the state highway commissioner shall cause an estimate to be made of the cost and expense of its construction and transmit to the county commissioners, together with the certificate of approval thereof, copies of such maps, plans and specifications.

"Section 1194. Upon the receipt of the maps, plans and specifications of a proposed improvement, with the approval thereof by the state highway commissioner, the county commissioners by majority vote may adopt a resolution that such highway be constructed under the provisions of this chapter. A certified copy of such resolution shall be transmitted to the state highway commissioner.

"Section 1198. If the owners of fifty-one per cent. of the lineal feet adjacent to such road or highway petition the county commissioners for its improvement under the provisions of this chapter, the county commissioners shall grant the petition, if from a view of such road or highway they are of the opinion that the improvement will be for the best interests of the public.

"Section 1199-1. If the owners of fifty-one per cent. or more of the lineal feet abutting on a (an) intercounty highway petition the county commissioners for its construction, improvement, maintenance or repair under the provisions of this chapter, the county commissioners shall grant the petition, if they are of the opinion that the improvement will be for the best interests of the public. The county commissioners may, without the presentation of such petition, make application for aid from an appropriation by the state as provided in section 12 (General Code, section 1185) of this chapter.

"Section 1200. Before their approval of the proposed road improvement, the county commissioners may require that the trustees of the township or townships through which it extends agree to pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost and expense thereof, and that the trustees by resolution, approve the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the same."

In this connection I also quote section 1200 as enacted in 99 Ohio Laws, 310, which is apparently repealed by implication by the present section bearing that number:

"Before their approval of a road improvement, the county commissioners shall require that the township or townships through which it extends shall pay twenty-five per cent. of the costs thereof, and that the trustees, by resolution, approve its construction."

Section 1201 has already been quoted.

"Section 1205. Upon the completion of the improvement the state highway commissioner shall immediately ascertain the cost and expense thereof and apportion the same to the state, county, township or townships and abutting property. He shall certify the total cost and expense of the improvement and a statement of the apportionment to the county commissioners and trustees of the township or townships.

"Section 1206. The state's proportion of the cost and expense of the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of any highway under the provisions of this chapter shall be paid by the treasurer of state upon the warrant of the auditor of state issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner from an appropriation made to carry out its provisions. The county's, township's and property owners' proportion of the cost and expense of such construction, improvement, maintenance and repairs, shall be paid by the treasurer of the county, in which the highway is located upon the warrant of the county auditor issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner from any funds in the county treasury for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of roads.

"Section 1207. Whenever there are one or more improvements to be made in any county and the cost and expense thereof is equal to or is less than twice the amount apportioned by the state to a county, then the state shall pay fifty per cent. of such cost and expense.

"Whenever there are one or more such improvements to be made in any county and the cost and expense thereof exceeds twice the amount apportioned by the state to a county, then the state shall pay the amount of the apportionment for said improvement or improvements apportioned as may be agreed upon by the state highway commissioner and the county commissioners.

"Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, the county shall pay twenty-five per cent. of all cost and expense of improvement.

"Section 1208. Except as otherwise provided one-fourth of the cost and expense of such improvement shall be apportioned to the township or townships in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned three-fifths shall be a charge upon the whole township or townships and two-fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the owners of the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of land so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to the persons affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost and expense of establishing county roads. If the improvement lies in two or more townships the amount to be paid by each shall be apportioned according to the number of lineal feet of the improvement lying in each township. * * *

"Section 1210. The township trustees shall certify the assessment to the county auditor, who shall place it upon the tax duplicate against the property benefited. The county treasurer shall collect such assessments in the manner as other taxes are collected, and in such payments as may be approved by the county auditor. The township trustees shall pay the portion of the cost and expense assessed to the township in the same manner as other claims are paid.

"Section 1210-1. * * * The township trustees of any township in which a road is constructed under the provisions of this chapter may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such road as herein provided to be paid by the county or abutting property owners and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such road improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such road improvement without an assessment upon the county or owners of abutting property upon such road.

"Section 1212. Each contract under the provisions of this chapter shall be made in the name of the state, signed by the state highway commissioner or deputy, attested by the chief clerk of the department and approved by the commissioners of the county in which the improvement is made. * * *"

In all the foregoing statutes I fail to find any official authority by virtue of which the township trustees can avoid the imposition upon the township of the obligation to pay one-fourth of the cost and expense of the improvement. The owners of abutting property, if they petition, petition the county commissioners—not the township trustees. The application to the state highway department is made in the first instance by the county commissioners, not the township trustees. (Of course, I am not considering the case where the commissioners fail to make application and the improvement is initiated by the trustees. Nothing in this opinion should be construed to apply to such a case.) The estimated cost of expenses, when made by the highway commissioner, is to be approved by the county commissioners, not the township trustees. The contract, as already stated, is to be made by the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the county commissioners; the trustees have no part in it. The apportionment of the cost and expense is to be made by the state highway commissioner in strict accordance with the statute. Trustees do not assume the obligation to pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost and expense; the statute itself imposes that obligation upon the township, which the trustees must meet as they meet other claims against the township. The state highway commissioner simply determines the amount chargeable against the township. The township treasurer does not even pay, in the first instance at least, the township's portion or any part of it. The money for the immediate discharge of the contract is to come directly out of the county treasury. The contractor has no claim against the township, but the county treasurer seemingly has, although no machinery is afforded to the county treasurer for collecting this claim.

There is one section, and one only, that is not in harmony with the procedure as I have outlined it. I refer to section 1200, above quoted. In its original form this section provided that the county commissioners "shall require that the township * * * shall pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost." Practically, the only change made in this section when it was amended by implication in 102 Ohio Laws, 333, section 26, so far as it relates to the powers and duties of the county commissioners, was to change the word "shall" to "may." Therefore, the word "may" in present section 1200 cannot be read as equivalent to "shall;" and the county commissioners, if they choose, need not require that the trustees pass the resolution referred to in this section; and failure so to require does not invalidate the proceedings. This is clear also from an examination of the other sections, which explicitly state that twenty-five per cent. of the cost shall be apportioned to the township.

Therefore, the determination as to whether or not the county commissioners will have the trustees pass the resolution referred to in section 1200 lies with the county commissioners. It follows from this that the trustees cannot, by refusing to pass this resolution, relieve the township of the obligation to pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost. In other words, this resolution, apparently, is a mere formality, insofar, at least, as it relates to the apportionment of the original cost of an improvement petitioned for. The resolution may have some application and force with respect to the matter of maintenance and repair. This is a subject which I have not investigated.

Now, there are cases in which the township trustees may, by their voluntary act, impose an obligation upon the township. One of them is that in which the trustees substitute themselves for the commissioners in initiating the improvement, after the commissioners have failed to avail themselves of their privileges under the statute. Another is when the trustees waive the assessment of abutting property and agree that the township shall pay the whole twenty-five per cent. primarily assessed against the township. Proceedings of these sorts would constitute, in my judgment, the incurring of obligations involving the expenditure of money within the meaning of section 5660, General Code.

But where the proceedings for a state highway improvement take their normal course, I am of the opinion, and clearly so, that no action of the trustees is necessary to impose the township's obligation upon it. The law itself imposes the obligation, and the proceedings through which the obligation is so imposed are carried on by the county commissioners, on the one hand, and the state highway commissioner, on the other hand. This is true even where the county commissioners see fit to go through the empty formality of requiring the township trustees to assume to pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost of the improvement under section 1200, above quoted.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that nowhere in the course of the entire proceedings for the improvement of a state highway, and the payment therefor, is the issuance of a certificate that the money required for the township's portion of the improvement is in the township treasury, unappropriated, etc., necessary; and I am further of the opinion that any practice or requirement of the state highway department to the contrary is without authority at law.

In a way, what I have said answers your question, but it is not responsive to the exact query which you raise. I shall therefore now discuss the statutes under which provision may be made for money to pay the township's portion.

In a former opinion, a syllabus of which you say you have seen, I have held that sections 3295 and 3939, read together, do not authorize a township to borrow money for any of the purposes specified in section 3939, unless such purposes are township purposes. This opinion, as you point out, does not cover the question now submitted, for the reason that the improvement of roads under the state highway department law is, in part at least, a township enterprise, because a part of the cost of the improvement is imposed by law upon the township.

There is another principle of law, however, which is to be taken into consideration in determining whether or not section 3939, General Code, applies to a given subject, and that is this: if the power to borrow money for a specific purpose be vested in township trustees, under sections other than sections 3295 and 3939, then, such other sections must be deemed to be exclusive. In other words, if it appears that the general assembly has at any time authorized the borrowing of money for a given purpose, by a special method, inconsistent with section 3939 and succeeding sections. such special method must be deemed exclusively to apply to the exercise of the borrowing power for that purpose.

Now, in the highway law, as amended in 99 O. L. 316, section 21, designated as section 1223, General Code, the general assembly provided as follows:

> "It shall be lawful for the commissioners of any county or for the trustees of any township to incur indebtedness or to issue bonds at a rate of interest not exceeding four per cent. in the manner authorized by law, for the payment of the said county or said township's share of the cost of any highway improvement undertaken under the provisions of this act, or any other act in which the state of Ohio pays one-half the cost of construction; provided, further, that for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act the county commissioners of any county or the trustees of any township in addition to any limit fixed by law or to any authority under any act now in force giving authority to sell bonds and fix the rate of interest and levy taxes to provide for their payment may, by unanimous vote of the board of county commissioners or of the township trustees, provide for the sale of bonds, fix the rate of interest not exceeding four per cent. and levy taxes for the purpose of paying the same."

This section clearly conferred upon township trustees special borrowing power and limited it with respect to the rate of interest to be paid by a limitation different from that to be found in section 3939. In my opinion the power thus conferred was, at the time, exclusive, and that would be a sufficient reason for holding that section 3939 did not then apply to the raising of money to discharge the township's proportion of the cost of a state highway improvement.

Now, the last act of the general assembly amending the state highway law (excepting the one passed by the last session of the general assembly, which is probably not yet in effect, and which, at all events, would not apply to your improvement) was that found in 102 Ohio Laws, 333. This act has an interesting legislative history. As originally passed it repealed nearly all of the sections of the then existing highway law, and substituted an entirely new scheme of legislation. Among the new sections then enacted was section 52, which provided that the county commissioners and the township trustees, respectively, should have special levying power within limitations exclusive of any limitations upon aggregate amounts of similar levies, thus constituting the levies exceptions to the previously passed Smith One Per Cent. law. The governor in a message, shown at page 349, 102 Ohio Laws, vetoed this section, and in addition vetoed sections 58 and 59 of the bill. Section 58 repealed certain specific sections of the highway law; and section 59 was as follows:

> "This act shall supersede all sections and parts of sections or acts and parts of acts not herein expressly repealed which are inconsistent herewith."

In stating his reasons for vetoing the repealing sections Governor Harmon used the following language:

> "While the entire repealing sections are struck out by my action there will be no real difficulty, because they cover only the old state highway law which this bill replaces, re-enacting most of it. Being later and on the same subject the bill will repeal by implication the parts of the old law which are different."

The governor, therefore, did not think that his action would result in leaving the new act in such a shape that it would by implication repeal all the provisions of the old law. He stated it as his opinion that some of the old law would be necessarily retained, i. e. that part which was not inconsistent with the new law. Furthermore, he evidenced this feeling by vetoing section 59, the result of which action was to preserve such parts of the old law as were not in direct conflict with any provision of the new law, even though the original intention of the legislature had been to adopt an entirely new scheme.

The governor did not veto section 53, which has been numbered section 1223, General Code, and is as follows:

> "The county commissioners in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments, and whenever in their judgment it is necessary, are hereby authorized to sell the bonds of any such company in which such construction, improvement, maintenance or repair is to be made to any amount not exceeding, in the aggregate, one per cent. of the tax duplicate of such county. Such bonds shall state for what purposes issued, and their interest at a rate not in excess of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and in such amounts to mature in not more than ten years after they are issued, as the county commissioners shall determine. Such bonds shall be advertised once each week for four consecutive weeks in two newspapers published and having a general circulation within the county. Such bonds shall be sold to the higest responsible bidder and for not less than par and accrued interest. The county commissioners may reject any and all bids. The proceeds of such bonds shall be used exclusively for the payment of the cost and expense of the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highway for which the bonds were issued, except that any balance remaining after all of the cost and expense of the improvement have been paid, shall become a part of the county road improvement fund."

In my opinion, however, the vetoing of section 52 left nothing upon which section 53 could operate; because the bonds authorized to be issued under said section 53 are to be issued "in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments" and not otherwise. In other words, the power thus conferred was not a general bororwing power, but merely a power to anticipate the collection of specific taxes. The authority to levy the taxes having been terminated by the veto of the governor, the authority to borrow the money fell with it. Therefore, in my opinion, section 53 of the new law, being section 1223, General Code, is not and never was in effect.

If it were in effect it would of itself constitute an answer to your question; for if it could be given any meaning at all, it would indicate that the county commissioners should borrow all the money necessary to provide for the cost of the improvement including the township's share, as well as the county's share. It cannot, however, be given this or any other effect; it is simply null.

This statute never having been operative, having, so to speak, been constructively vetoed when the governor vetoed section 52, I am of the opinion that original section 1223, General Code, was never repealed by implication, and that it is as present in effect, and will be until the act passed by the last session of the legislature becomes effective.

It is to section 1223, General Code, then that we must look for authority to borrow money. This section controls, for reasons already stated, to the exclusion of section 3939, General Code, bieng quite inconsistent with it, and being a statute pertaining to a particular subject, and of the kind which always, under familiar rules of statutory construction, take precedence over other statutes general in their nature, regardless even, in some instances, of the temporal order in which the two statutes are passed. As a matter of fact, the legislative history of the two statutes involved, viz.: Sections 1223 and 3939, shows that the former was originally the later act, although the latter has been amended in other particulars since the former was enacted.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the township trustees, if they desire to borrow money for the purpose of meeting their portion of the cost of a highway improvement, must do so under section 1223, as passed 99 Ohio Laws, 316, and not under authority of section 3939, General Code, referred to in section 3295.

I would be of the further opinion that the limitations imposed by the sections succeeding section 3939 do not apply; and that the bonds referred to in section 1223 may be issued without a vote of the people regardless of the outstanding indebtedness of the township.

I realize that my opinion leads to an unfortunate conclusion, in that it is now practically impossible to dispose of four per cent. bonds. This situation, however cannot change the legal aspect of the case.

I am aware also that my conclusion upon the first point suggested by me might lead to the further conclusion that there is no way in which the state highway commissioner or the county commissioners can satisfy themselves that the township's portion of the cost of the improvement is to be met. This, too, is a defect in the law. As a matter of fact, by virtue of the vetoing of section 52, the township's portion of the obligation, unless provided for by an issue of bonds, would have to be met out of the general township fund, there being no authority at law to levy taxes especially for the purpose of contributing to a state highway improvement. In fact, the provision of section 1210, above quoted, would govern; and if the township trustees refused to "pay the portion of the cost and expense assessed to the township in the same manner as other claims are paid," the question would arise as to whether or not there is any way for the county treasurer to compel the township trustees to make the payment; and still further, if there should be no money in the general township fund to meet the expenditure, whether or not the county treasurer, by appropriate action, could compel the making of a sufficient levy for such purpose.

All these questions are very embarrassing and suggest the necessity for additional legislation. While I have not examined the newly passed act of the legislature, I understand that it supplies many of the defects which I have suggested and is much more workable than the law which I have been obliged to construe. It may be that the relief in your particular situation lies in awaiting the effect of this new law. That, however, is a question upon which I would prefer not to express an opinion, unless my opinion were particularly invited upon that point.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SIGNERS OF INITIATIVE, SUPPLEMENTAL OR REFERENDUM PETITIONS MUST PLACE THEREON THEIR NAME, THE NAME OF THEIR TOWNSHIP OR COUNTY OR MUNICIPALITY.

Under the provisions of article 2, section 18, of the constitution, it is necessary for each signer of any initiative, supplemental or referendum petition to write in for himself the name of his township and county or the name of the municipality, street and number and the ward and precinct. This information may not be filled in by a second party.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1913.

HON. ARCHER L. PHELPS, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 15th you call my attention to article II, section 1g of the constitution as amended September 3, 1912, and you request my opinion whether each signer must for himself write in the name of the township and county or name of the municipality, the street and number and ward and precinct. It would seem to me that the language of said section of article II answers your inquiry itself in that it states: "Each signer of any initiative, supplementary or referendum petition must be an elector of the state and shall place on such petition after his name the date of signing and his place of residence." It then proceeds to state how he shall designate his place of residence as follows: "A signer residing outside of a municipality shall state the township and county in which he resides. A resident of a municipality shall state in addition to the name of such municipality, the street and number, if any, of his residence, and the ward and precinct in which the same is located."

While it is true that the person soliciting the signatures in making his affidavit to the part of the petition solicited by him is required only to state the number of signers and that each signature attached was made in his presence and to the best of his knowledge and belief each signature is genuine and that he believed the signers to be electors and that they signed with knowledge of the contents and on the date set opposite their name, yet from the clear statement that each signer shall place on the part of the petition signed by him his place of residence, I am of the opinion that each signer must for himself write in the name of the township and county, or the name of the municipality, the street and number and the ward and precinct, and that such section does not authorize the filling in of this information by a second party.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

431.

THE PROVISIONS OF THE NEW CONSTITUTION RELATING TO THE TAKING OF DEPOSITION IS NOT SELF-EXECUTING—AN ATTORNEY APPOINTED TO TAKE CARE OF A CASE IN COURT IS ONLY TO ACT IN THE COURT WHEREIN HE IS APPOINTED.

1. The provisions of the new constitution relating to taking deposition is not self executing. It requires legislation to give effect thereto and provide the manner of taking deposition. Provision for taking such deposition is to be found in 103 Ohio Laws, 433-434.

2. Under section 13562, General Code, an attorney appointed by the common pleas court to assist in the trial of a case is only bound to take care of a case in the court wherein he is appointed. This court then allows him for fees which the commissioners pass upon and pay in such amount as they approve. His service is then at an end.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 26, 1913.

HON. W. J. SCHWENCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 19, 1913, you ask my opinion on three propositions, as follows:

> "First. In the trial of a murder case the court appointed an attorney to assist you. During the trial counsel so appointed took sick and retired from the case. Thereupon the court appointed another attorney to assist in the completion of the trial. A conviction was had. Defendant objected to the new appointment and alleged the same as a principal ground in motion for a new trial. The motion was overruled and error proceeding, based thereon, is now pending in the court of appeals.
> "You ask whether the appointment of the second attorney and permitting him to assist in the prosecution was reversible error."

It is a rule of this department not to render an opinion as to the merits of questions at issue in cases pending in the courts. In this case the exact question you submit is before the court of appeals, and it would not be proper for me to express an opinion thereon at this time. For this reason I feel compelled not to render an opinion on your first question.

> "Second. Under the present constitution can the state take depositions without a law being passed providing for doing so?"

This provision of the new constitution is not self executing and it requires legislation to give effect thereto and provide the manner of taking such depositions. By consulting 103 Ohio Laws, pages 443 and 444, you will see that the legislature has made provisions for the taking of such depositions, effective August 8, 1913.

> "Third. Under the statute providing for the appointment of an assistant to the prosecutor, it seems to be limited to the appointment of an attorney to assist in the trial of the case. Are the services of assisting limited to the mere trial or do they extend to the hearing of the case in the higher courts on review?"

Section 13562, General Code, provides:

> "The common pleas court or the circuit court, whenever it is of opinion that the public interest requires it, may appoint an attorney to assist the prosecuting attorney in the trial of a case pending in such court, and the county commissioners shall pay such assistant such compensation for his services as such court approves and to them seems just and proper."

Under this statute the attorney appointed by the common pleas court is only bound to take care of the case in that court. This court then allows his fees for the services rendered in that court, which the commissioners pass upon and pay in such amount as they approve. That is the end of the employment unless the circuit court (now court of appeals) appoints him to render services in that court in the same case. He cannot receive fees for services in the reviewing court unless such court appoints him and allows his fees. The reviewing court might deem the services unnecessary and refuse to appoint. Each court has exclusive jurisdiction as to such appointment to assist in the trial of such cases, pending in their respective courts; and the common pleas appointment does not extend to, or bind the reviewing courts. Counsel is not bound to appear and render services in the reviewing court without an appointment therein.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PART OF TOWNSHIP SCHOOL DISTRICT MAY NOT BE UNITED WITH ANOTHER SCHOOL DISTRICT FOR HIGH SCHOOL PURPOSES.

There is no statutory provision for the uniting of a part or portion of a township school district with another township, village or special school district for high school purposes.

Where a petition asks for the uniting of the north half of Salt Creek township school district of Pickaway county to the village school district of Tarlton for high school purposes, such petition cannot be granted.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 11, 1913.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 21, 1913, you submitted the following inquiry:

"I am enclosing herewith a request for an opinion relative to the union-ization of school districts for high school purposes received from the clerk of the board of education of Saltcreek township school district, Pickaway county, Ohio."

The request referred to in your inquiry and which was received by you from the clerk of the board of education of Saltcreek township school district, Pickaway county, Ohio, reads as follows:

"Enclosed please find a petition presented to the board of education of Saltcreek township school district, Pickaway county, Ohio, at its last meeting, May 31, 1913.

"You will observe that it purports to be signed by residents of the north half of Saltcreek township school district and requests the board of education of that district to join the north half of the territory comprising the said school district with the village school district of Tarlton (lying within the boundaries of Saltcreek civil township and adjoining Saltcreek township school district on the north) for high school purposes only.

"The board of education are in doubt as to their authority to comply with the request of the petitioners. That is, they are in doubt whether the statutes, sections 7669, 7670, 7671 and 7672 of the General Code, Ohio Laws, authorize the uniting of less than whole districts for high school purposes only.

"The board understands that under section 4692, General Code, and sections following any part of the territory of one school district may be transferred to another school district for general school purposes, that is to say, for all school purposes, elementary, high or otherwise. But the petitioners in the petition herewith sent you do not ask for a transfer of the north half of the territory comprising Saltcreek township school district to Tarlton school district for all school purposes, so as to make such annexed territory a part of the village district, to wit, Tarlton school district, but only ask that so much of Saltcreek township school district be united with Tarlton school district for high school purposes, the high school thereof to be governed by a committee of two from each board.

"Please advise whether the petition may be granted under the statutes."

In reply thereto I desire to say that section 7669 of the General Code provides for the uniting of two or more adjoining township school districts or a township district and a village or special school district, or any two or more of such school districts, for high school purposes, as follows:

"The board of education of two or more adjoining township school districts, or of a township district and of a village or special school district situated partially or wholly within the township, or of any two or more of such school districts, by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, may unite such districts for high school purposes. Each board also may submit the question of levying a tax on the property in their respective districts, for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting a building, and issue bonds, as is provided by law in case of erecting or repairing school houses; but such question of tax levy must carry in each district before it shall become operative in either. If such boards have sufficient money in the treasury to purchase a site and erect such building, or if there is a suitable building in either district owned by the board of education that can be used for a high school building, it will not be necessary to submit the proposition to vote and the boards may appropriate money from their funds for this purpose."

Section 7670 of the General Code provides that any high school so established shall be under the management of a high school committee and such high school shall be free to all the youth of school age within each district, as follows:

"Any high school so established shall be under the management of a high school committee consisting of two members of each of the boards creating such joint district, elected by a majotiry vote of such boards. Their membership of such committee shall be for the same term as their terms on the boards which they respectively represent. Such high school shall be free to all youth of school age within each district, subject to the rules and regulations adopted by the high school committee, in regard to the qualifications in scholarship requisite for admission, such rules and regulations to be of uniform operation throughout each district."

Section 7671 provides how such high school shall be maintained and supported as follows:

> "The funds for the maintenance and support of such high school shall be provided by appropriation from the tuition or contingent funds, or both, of each district, in proportion to the total valuation of property in the respective districts, which must be placed in a separate fund in the treasury of the board of education of the district in which the school house is located, and paid out by action of the high school committee for the maintenance of the school."

It is to be noted that the above sections provide for the establishment of joint high schools by the respective school districts therein enumerated in their entirety and there is no statutory provision for the uniting of a part or a portion of any school district therein enumerated with another school district for high school purposes.

Therefore, in conclusion, it is my opinion in the absence of any statutory provision for the uniting of a part or a portion of a township school district with another township village or special school district for high school purposes, that the petition for the uniting of the north half of the Saltcreek township school district to the village school district of Tarlton for high school purposes, cannot be granted.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PURCHASE AUTOMOBILE FOR USE OF COUNTY SURVEYOR.

The county commissioners may not purchase an automobile for the use of the county surveyor. The right of the county surveyor as a public officer to compensation, fees, allowances, etc., must depend upon express legislative enactment or on necessary implication from the terms used. Since there is no statutory provision broad enough to authorize the commission to make this purchase, they are without authority to do so.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1913.

HON. A. H. HENDERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 15, 1913, in which you inquire as follows:

> "Have the commissioners authority to purchase an automobile for the use of the county surveyor ?"

The only statutory provision having any bearing on the question here made is section 2786, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The county surveyor shall keep his office at the county seat in such room or rooms as are provided by the county commissioners, which shall be furnished with all necessary cases and other suitable articles, at the expense of the county. Such office shall also be furnished with all tools, instruments and books, blanks and stationery necessary for the proper discharge of the official duties of the county surveyor. The cost and expense of such equipment shall be allowed and paid from the general fund of the county upon the approval of the county commissioners. The county surveyor and each assistant and deputy shall be allowed his reasonable and necessary expense incurred in the performance of his official duties. (R. S. section 1181.)"

Nothing in the way of specific authority is given by this section to either the surveyor or the county commissioners to purchase an automobile at the expense of the county. The case of State ex rel. vs. Commissioners of Mahoning county, 10 C. C. (n. s.) 398, in which the court denies the right of the sheriff to purchase vehicles for official use at the expense of the county, is in my opinion conclusive against any authority to be implied from the provisions of section 2786, authorizing the county commissioners or the surveyor to purchase for his use an automobile at the county's expense.

The case above referred to was decided on a construction of section 1296-29 R. S. later carried into the General Code as section 2997. This statute providing for payment of the expenses of county sheriffs in the discharge of their official duties was much broader with reference to the question there made, than is section 2786 with respect to the right of the county commissioners to purchase an automobile for the use of the county surveyor.

The court in the case before cited says:

"If the legislature intended to have county commissioners supply sheriffs with horses, vehicles and harness, or to allow them the expense necessarily incurred in their purchase, it would certainly have so provided in unambiguous terms."

This language of the court is pertinent with reference to the question here made with respect to the construction of section 2786.

Whether the question made is approached from a view presented by a consideration of the compensation, fees or allowances due the surveyor, or from a view as to the powers of the county commissioners, the result is the same. The right of the surveyor as a public officer to compensation, fees or allowances must depend on express legislative enactment or on necessary implication from the terms used.

State ex rel. vs. Commissioners Mahoning Co. supra.
Sage vs. Commissioners, 82 O. S. 126.
Thorniley vs. Commissioners, 81 O. S. 108.

The same is true with reference to the powers of county commissioners.

Commissioners vs. R. R. Co., 45 O. S. 401, 403.
State ex rel. vs. Yeatman, 22 O. S. 546, 551.
Commissioners of Medina County vs. Leighty, I. C. C. (n. s.) 431.

I am of the opinion that none of the provisions of section 2786 are broad enough or specific enough to authorize the commissioners to purchase an automobile for the use of the county surveyors nor to authorize any allowance to the surveyor for the expense of any such purchase made by him.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHEN A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE IS APPOINTED TO FILL A VACANCY, HIS SUCCESSOR SHOULD BE ELECTED AT THE NEXT REGULAR ELECTION OF SUCH OFFICERS FOR A FULL TERM OF FOUR YEARS.

When a vacancy occurs in the office of justice of the peace, the successor to the person appointed to fill such vacancy should be elected at the next regular election for such office for a full term of four years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 3, 1913.

HON. OLIN M. FARBER, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 11, 1913, in which you inquire:

> "Jabez Dickey was elected a justice of the peace for Madison township, this county, in November, 1911, and commissioned to serve until December 31, 1915. On January 8, 1913, he resigned, and B. B. Dickey was appointed by the trustees of said township to fill out the unexpired portion of the term of said Jabez Dickey.
> "I respectfully ask for your opinion on the following point: Should the successor of said Jabez Dickey as such justice of the peace be elected at the November election for the year 1913 or the year 1915?"

The act of April 13, 1913, 103 O. L. 314, established the office of justice of the peace, fixed their powers, jurisdiction and duties the same as existing on September 3, 1913. The last clause of section 1 of said act reads:

> "All laws and parts of laws in force on said date, in any manner regulating such powers and duties, fixing such jurisdiction or pertaining to such office, or the incumbents thereof are hereby declared to be and remain in force until specifically amended or repealed, the same as if herein fully re-enacted."

Mr. B. B. Dickey, having been appointed on January 8, 1913, the question may arise as to its validity on account of the amendment to the constitution taking effect on January 1, 1913, and abolishing the office as one provided by the constitution. This question is not covered by the decision of the supreme court. See State ex rel. vs. Redding, 87 O. S. 385-400.

However, Mr. B. B. Dickey accepted the appointment, qualified, and is a de facto justice of the peace at least.

Section 10 of the General Code reads:

> "When an elective office becomes vacant and is filled by appointment, such appointee shall hold the office until his successor is elected and qualified. Unless otherwise provided by law, such successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first general election for the office which is vacant that occurs more than thirty days after the vacancy shall have occurred. This section shall not be construed to postpone the time for such election beyond that at which it would have been held had no such vacancy occurred, nor to affect the official term, or the time for the commencement thereof, of any person elected to such office before the occurrence of such vacancy."

Section 1714, General Code, reads:

> "If a vacancy occurs in the office of justice of the peace by death, removal, absence for six months, resignation, refusal to serve, or otherwise, the trustees within ten days from receiving notice thereof, by a majority vote, shall appoint a qualified resident of the township to fill such vacancy, who shall serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The trustees shall notify the clerk of the courts of such vacancy and the date when it occurred."

Section 1715, General Code, reads:

"At the next regular election for such office a justice of the peace shall be elected in the manner provided by law, for the term of four years commencing on the first day of January next following his election."

Construing these sections together, and I think it clear that sections 1714 and 1715 make the "other provision" meant by section 10, therefore, a successor to Mr. Jabez Dickey must be elected in 1913, and for the full term of four years as provided by section 1715, General Code.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PAROLE OF PRISONERS FROM WORKHOUSE—MANAGER OF A WORKHOUSE MAY FOR GOOD CAUSE PAROLE PRISONERS CONFINED THEREIN.

The board of workhouse directors have authority to discharge prisoners confined in the workhouse, when there is good and sufficient cause for so doing. The authorities of such institution are the sole judges of what constitutes good and sufficient cause. When they execute their power fairly, their action is final.

When a prisoner is paroled, the officers designated in section 4133, General Code, should make the conditions of the parole and provide for the retaking of the prisoners should the conditions of the parole be violated.

The rule requiring the recommendation of the trial court on good cause shown can be suspended and the prisoner paroled without the same.

The board of pardons has nothing to do with the parole of a prisoner sentenced by a mayor of a village. No notice is necessary to the prosecuting attorney or to the attorney prosecuting the case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 6, 1913.

HON. TOM S. MADDOX, Prosecuting Attorney, Washington C. H., Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 13, 1913, you ask:

"I desire to submit the following questions to you for an opinion, to wit:

1. "Has the board of workhouse directors authority to grant an absolute release of a prisoner under section 4133 of the General Code, when it was shown that he was convicted by perjured testimony, a fact which was not known at the time of his trial and until the time had expired for the filing of a bill of exceptions?

2. "If an application is made to the board of directors of the workhouse for the conditional release of a prisoner on parole, may he be paroled on such terms as said board of directors may specify in the absence of rules and regulations suggested in section 4134 of the General Code?

3. "Have the said directors authority to suspend the rules and parole a prisoner for good cause shown, even though their rules and regulations provide that the same shall not be done without the recommendation of the trial court.

4. "Has the board of pardons power and authority to recommend to the governor the pardon of a prisoner confined in the workhouse, for good cause shown, when he has been convicted and sentenced thereto by the mayor of a village? If so, does the procedure in such cases conform to the statutory provision in regard to notice to the prosecuting attorney apply, as to indictable offenses, or must notice be given to the attorney representing the prosecution of the alleged defendants?"

I will take these questions up and answer them in their order.

1. Section 4133, General Code, reads as follows:

"An officer vested by statute with authority to manage a workhouse may discharge, for good and sufficient cause, a person committed thereto. A record of all such discharges shall be kept and reported to the council, in the annual report of the officer, with a brief statement of the reasons therefor."

This is a very broad section and would seem to give the governing officials of the workhouse full power to "discharge for good and sufficient cause" any person committed to such institution. The authorities of such institution are vested with discretionary powers in that behalf; and they are, in my opinion, the sole judges of what constitutes "good and sufficient cause." To them alone is delegated, under this section, the right to determine whether the facts and circumstances in each case warrant their exercise of the power to discharge; and when fairly exercised, their action in that behalf is final and unquestionable.

Such action, in a clear case, is one of humanity, right and justice toward the incarcerated one, and is intended to grant relief to him without being compelled to resort to the slower proceedings of parole or pardon through other boards or authorities. In other words, this section affords speedy relief to a prisoner whom the workhouse authorities believe is entitled to his freedom without being compelled to await the circumlocution attendant upon other forms of release.

2. Section 4134, General Code, provides:

"Such officer also may establish rules and regulations under which and specify the conditions on which a prisoner may be allowed to go upon parole outside of the buildings and enclosures. * * *"

Under this section the officer designated in section 4133 should make rules providing for the parole of prisoners prior to their release; but in my opinion the said rules and regulations can be made at the time of the release of each particular prisoner. These rules could impose conditions and provide for retaking and reconfining a prionser in case of violation of the conditions of his parole.

3. I am of the opinion that a rule requiring the recommendation of the trial court can be suspended, on "good cause shown," and a workhouse prisoner paroled without the same.

4. The board of pardons has nothing to do with a prisoner confined in the workhouse under sentence of a mayor of a village; and the matter of notice to the prosecuting attorney or attorney prosecuting the case is not required.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

LIQUOR LICENSE COMMISSIONER CANNOT BE APPOINTED IN COUNTIES WHICH HAVE NEVER VOTED DRY, BUT WHICH HAVE NO SALOONS.

In counties which have never been voted dry and which have no saloons, it is the duty of the liquor license commission not to appoint a county liquor license commission for such county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1913.

HON. R. H. PATCHIN, Prosecuting Attorney, Chardon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of August 30th you submit for my opinion the question whether or not liquor licensing commissioners must be appointed in your county, stating that:

> "The liquor license law, Vol. 103 O. L. page 218, section 7, provides, 'In each county of the state where the sale of intoxicating liquors has not been prohibited from the county by law, there shall be a board, etc.' Geauga county has never been voted dry as an entirety. At least some of the townships have no record of such a vote. Our vote has all been taken under the old Beal law and there has never been a county vote under this law, there being no saloons in our county."

Your attention is called to section 7 of the act found in 103 O. L. 218, which provides in part as follows:

> "For the purpose of licensing the traffic in intoxicating liquors in this state, the state is hereby divided into licensing districts, and each county in this state shall constitute a licensing district.
> "In each county of the state, wherein the sale of intoxicating liquor is not prohibited throughout the county by law, there shall be a board consisting of two commissioners, representing the state, not more than one of whom shall belong to the same political party, known as 'The ..... County Liquor Licensing Board,' the blank to be filled with the name of the county. Each commissioner shall be a qualified elector of the state, residing in the county in question, and shall be appointed by the state liquor licensing board. * * *."

It is apparent that since your county is one wherein the sale of intoxicating liquor is not prohibited throughout the county by law, following the exact letter of the statute, it would be necessary to appoint a county liquor licensing board; but as it must be conceded that the legislature never intended to demand a vain and useless thing, I have concluded that in those counties where, owing to township or Beal law local option elections, the various subdistricts of the county are "dry," that it would be useless to appoint a county board who would have no duties to perform. The state board certainly would not fix compensation for officers who, under no circumstances, could perform any services. I have, accordingly, advised the governor and the state liquor licensing board that there will be no violation of any duty in case action is not taken in appointing county liquor licensing boards in those counties in which to all intents and purposes the sale of intoxicating liquor is prohibited throughout the county, even though this prohibition has not been effected by the result of a county local option election.

I reach this conclusion, feeling that under all the circumstances the public should neither be put to the expense of maintaining a county liquor licensing board nor to the cost of holding an election by reason of a technical requirement of the statute. While I construe section 7 as providing for the appointment of a liquor licensing board in each county of the state wherein the sale of intoxicating liquor is not prohibited throughout the county by law, still, I do not believe it was the intention of the people in amending the constitution, nor of the legislature in passing the liquor licensing law, to create saloons in counties where they have not heretofore existed.

In answer to your question, therefore, it is my opinion that under the circumstances of the case in Geauga county the state liquor licensing board is justified, and I believe it is their duty, to refuse to make any appointment of a county liquor licensing board in your county.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, MAYOR OR POLICE JUDGE HAS FINAL JURISDICTION IN THE PROSECUTION OF VIOLATIONS OF THE FISH GAME AND BIRD LAWS.

A justice of the peace, mayor or police judge shall have final jurisdiction, within his county, in the prosecution for violations of section 13413, General Code. Section 13413, General Code, is a part of the fish, game and bird law of the state, controlled by section 1464, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 9, 1913.

HON. LEVI B. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Waverly, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 1, 1913, you inquire as follows:

> "Has the justice of the peace, mayor or police judge final jurisdiction within his county in a prosecution for a violation of section 13413 of the General Code, and is section 13413 a part of the fish, game and bird laws of the state, controlled by section 1464 of the General Code?"

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that section 1464 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "A justice of the peace, mayor or police judge shall have final jurisdiction within his county in a prosecution for a violation of any provision of the laws relating to the protection, preservation or propagation of birds, fish and game and shall have like jurisdiction in a proceeding for the condemnation and forfeiture of property used in the violation of any such law."

Section 13413 of the General Code as amended March 5, 1913, (103 O. L. 111), provides as follows:

> "Whosoever shall catch, kill or injure a skunk, or pursue it with such intent, except from the fifteenth day of November to the first day of February both inclusive, or whoever shall at any time or place dig out, or smoke out with fumes or gases, any skunk or in any manner destroy the den or burrow of any skunk, or whoever during the period when it shall be unlawful to kill such animal shall have in his possession the green pelt of a skunk unless such person can show by the original signed by the shipper that such pelts were shipped from without the state shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars.

"This section shall not prevent the owner of a farm or any one authorized by him in writing from killing a skunk when doing an injury upon his premises. The provisions of this section shall be enforced by the commissioners of fish and game."

Game animals are defined as follows:

"Animals pursued and taken by sportsmen."—Webster's Dictionary.

"Those wild animals who are pursued or taken for sport or profit in hunting, trapping, fowling or fishing."—Century Dictionary.

"Birds and beasts of a wild nature obtained by fowling and hunting."—Bouvier's Law Dictionary.

The American-English Encyclopaedia, second edition, volume 11, page 654, defines "game" in general as follows:

"Birds and beasts of a wild nature obtained by fowling and hunting."

By reason of the above definitions it is my opinion that said section 13413 of the General Code is a provision of law relating to the protection, preservation and propagation of game. It is to be noted that section 1464 of the General Code specifically provides that a justice of the peace, mayor or police judge shall have final jurisdiction within his respective county in a prosecution for violation of any provision of the laws relating to the protection, preservation or propagation of birds, fish and game.

Therefore, inasmuch as said section 13413 of the General Code above quoted, relates to the protection, preservation and propagation of game, and inasmuch as said section provides that the provisions thereof shall be enforced by the commissioners of fish and game, it is my opinion that said section 13413 is a part of the bird, fish and game laws of the state of Ohio and any violation of said section comes within section 1464 of the General Code above quoted as being a violation of a provision of the laws relating to the protection, preservation and propagation of game, and it follows in accordance with the foregoing reasoning that a justice of the peace, mayor or police judge has final jurisdiction within his county in a prosecution for a violation of said section 13413 of the General Code, above quoted.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

LEVIES MADE UNDER GEHRETT LAW TO BE USED FOR THE EXTINGUISHMENT OF THE BONDS ISSUED UNDER THAT LAW—THESE FUNDS MAY NOT BE USED TO REPAIR ROADS WHICH HAVE BEEN IMPROVED.

Levies made under the original Gehrett law are subject only to the limitations to which they would have been subject had that law been continued in force, and are not subject to the limitations prescribed in section 6945, General Code, as amended 103 O. L. 202.

The present section 5654, General Code, which has just gone into effect, governs the disposition of all levies made and bonds issued under the original Gehrett law, so that if there is at present a surplus in a fund created by an issue of bonds under this law, which has not been expended or transferred to the general fund, such surplus must be applied to the extinguishment of the bonds as therein provided, and may under no circumstances be used to repair a particular road which has been improved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. CHARLES M. MILROY, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 1st requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. Is it compulsory that the county follow the provisions of sections 12946 and 12946-2 and pay twice a month? (103 O. L. page 154.)

"2. Under the Thomas Stone road law (Ohio Laws Vol. 103, pages 198-204) section 6945 provides for a maximum levy of 3 mills. Should these 3 mills include the Gehrett law levies already made, or are they in addition thereto? This section also provides that the 3 mill levy is subject to the maximum limitation upon the aggregate amount of all levies now in force. Does this mean the 10 mill limit, as provided by law, or the 15 mill limit which includes sinking and interest levies?

"3. Under section 5654, as amended in Vol. 103 of Ohio Laws, at page 521, can the county commissioners expend any surplus from a bond issued for Gehrett law roads for the repair and maintenance of said roads, or shall the surplus be transferred to the sinking fund to meet the principal and interest on said bonds?"

I am indebted to you also for a copy of an opinion rendered by you to the auditor of Lucas county upon these questions, and for the very full statement of your views embodied therein.

Your first question is answered by the enclosed opinion to Hon. Geo. C. Von Beseler, city solicitor, Painesville, Ohio, August 11, 1913.

Answering the first subdivision of your second question, I beg to state that in my opinion levies made under what was known as the Gehrett law, formerly sections 6926 et seq., General Code, should not be regarded as within the three mill limit of present section 6945.

I understand that in referring to the Gehrett law levies already made, you mean levies under original sections 6926 to 6956 inclusive, which said sections were held to be repealed by implication by a recent decision of the supreme court, but proceedings under which are validated or attempted to be validated by the act found in 103 O. L. 132. Section 1 of that act provides:

"All * * * taxes * * * levied or to be levied on account of such roads * * * are hereby declared and held to be valid, and boards of county commissioners or other officers shall have full power and authority to proceed with the construction and completion of all roads in process of construction under said section * * * and shall also have full power and authority to taxes * * * to pay for the construction and improvement of any such roads, and to do any and all things contemplated by such petitions under said sections."

The original Gehrett law was in very many respects like the act found in 103 O. L. 198 et seq., and consisted of the same numbered sections of the Code. The repeal of this act by implication must have taken place on the 10th day of May, 1910, when the act found in 101 O. L. 247 took effect. Accordingly from that date there was no such law as that embodied in the General Code sections bearing numbers 6926 to 6956, inclusive. The act found in 103 O. L. 132, is an exercise of the special legislative power vested in the general assembly by section 28 of article II of the constitution, and its purpose was simply to authorize the taxing authorities to levy such tax as might enable the authorities to carry out to completion proceedings begun under the old law after the date when its life was held to have been terminated. In addition to such levies there would, of course, be levies under the repealed sections made for the purpose of retiring bonds issued thereunder before the time when the repeal became effective. Indeed, I do not question that all levies made for the purpose of retiring bonds issued under the Gehrett law, either before or after its implied repeal, would have to be sustained irrespective of the passage of the curative act. My opinion, however, is not invited upon this or any related question, but assumes that levies shall be made for this purpose.

I have discussed these matters because of the fact that the present so-called Thomas road law, being sections 6926 et seq., found in 103 O. L. 198, and at present in effect purport to repeal the sections which constituted the original Gehrett law and to re-enact them for the purpose of amendment. Technically, therefore, this act, which passed and became effective at a date later than the act found in 103 O. L. 132, repealed the Gehrett law just as the latter act revised it. This technical view-point, however, in my opinion, is incorrect. While in deference to the constitutional provisions the sections of the General Code which are "amended" in the so-called Thomas law, are repealed and re-enacted, yet this is formal merely. The actual repeal of the sections, the number of which the legislature deemed it proper to use in the new act was effected on May 10, 1910. Therefore, the law embodied in the sections bearing these numbers was not a continuous rule of action unaffected by the simultaneous repeal and re-enactment within the familiar rule of statutory construction. What is now sections 6926 et seq., General Code, is an entirely new law, similar to, but by no means identical with the old Gehrett law. There was a hiatus of nearly three years between the implied repeal of the Gehrett law and the enactment of the new law, and the fact that the new law was in for an "amendment" of the old, cannot bridge this gap. Nor is the question affected by the curative act above referred to. This act did not revive the old law in its entirety; it merely authorized uncompleted proceedings to be carried to completion in accordance with its provisions.

From all this consideration then I am of the opinion that it was not the intention of the general assembly to regard levies made under the corresponding sections of the Gehrett law as governed by the limitations of the Thomas act. The two acts are entirely independent and the fact that their section numbers correspond and their subject-matter is similar, is entirely immaterial. This conclusion is strengthened by consideration of section 6956a, and of the title of the act found in 103 O. L. 198, from both of which it appears that the intention is expressly declared to provide an additional method "for the improvement of any public road * * * in addition to all other methods provided for by law."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that levies made under the original Gehrett law are subject only to the limitations to which they would have been subject had that law been continued in force, and are not subject to the limitations prescribed in section 6945, General Code, as amended in 103 O. L. 202.

Answering the second subdivision of your second question which relates to the interpretation of section 6945 in its proper application to the Thomas law, so-called, I quote the section in its entirety, as follows:

> "For the purpose of providing by general taxation a fund out of which not less than one-half nor more than two-thirds of the costs and expenses of all improvements made under the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter can be paid, the commissioners are authorized to levy upon the taxable property of any township or townships within the county in which such improved road is to be or has been constructed, not exceeding three mills in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of the taxable property in such township or townships. Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes, but subject to the maximum limitation upon the aggregate amount of all levies now in force."

In my opinion the words "maximum limitation upon the aggregate amount of all levies now in force" mean, the ten mill limit of the Smith One Per Cent. law. The exact meaning of this phrase is somewhat doubtful. Sections 5649-2 and 5649-3 provide for the ten mill limit which is to include all levies excepting certain designated interest and sinking fund levies. This limitation is no where described but is referred to as follows: "The maximum rate of taxes that may be levied for all purposes," (Section 5649-2); "a maximum rate of ten mills" (5649-3). The word "aggregate" is not used in this phrase, but it is necessarily implied as the limitation is upon the aggregate rate as such.

Section 5649-5 contains the only other limitation which could possibly have been intended by the language used in section 6945. The limitation provided for is that of fifteen mills, and it is referred to as "the combined maximum rate for all taxes levied." This provision does not contain the word "aggregate." It does, however, refer to aggregate levies just as the ten mill limit does. However, I am of the opinion that the fifteen mill limit cannot be appropriately referred to in other legislation without the use of the word "combined" which is its distinguishing characteristic.

Another reason suggested in your opinion supports the view that the ten mill limit covers the three mill levy provided by section 6945. By inference at least the levy is designated as one "for township purposes," and it is clearly the intention of the Smith law, as a whole, that all levies for current township, county, municipal and school purposes shall be within the ten mill limit, unless by favor of a vote of the people. This limit is raised.

For both the suggested reasons, then, I am of the opinion that the three mill levy provided by section 6945 must be made within the ten mill limit of the Smith law.

I cannot return an affirmative answer to your third question, although I am compelled to reach a conclusion opposite to that reached by you. Section 6950 of the General Code being a part of the original Gehrett law, provides as follows:

> "The proceeds of such bonds shall be applied and used exclusively for the payment of the expenses and cost of construction of such stone or gravel road improvement, and the levy for the payment of the principal and interest of such bonds may be in addition to any levy now authorized by law."

I need no more than refer to the fact that the improvement of a road and its repair and maintenance are two separate and distinct matters in the theory of our road improvement laws. For example, under section 7422, General Code, it is the duty of the county commissioners to repair all improved roads in the county and for this purpose they must make a levy upon the grand duplicate of the entire county. Therefore, while the improvement of the road is a matter which may be paid for by any of the plans offered by the statutes and by levies and assessments in limited territories, the repair and maintenance of such road is a matter of county concern, the expense of which the taxpayers or property owners of any limited territory cannot be made to bear.

I note that you refer to a custom of many years standing in Lucas county, which is inconsistent with the interpretation which I have placed on the section; yet such a custom can be of no weight in the face of the plain provisions of the law. There never was any warrant of law for using a surplus remaining in a construction fund for the repair of a road. Whether or not such surplus money should, under the old laws, have been treated as provided in original section 5654, General Code, is to my mind a difficult question, in view of the peculiar nature of the levy made to pay Gehrett law bonds such levy being upon the taxable property of the township only, while the bonds were those of the county.

The question has never been determined but I should incline strongly to the view that inasmuch as the township was especially taxed for the purpose of the improvement, the money arising from an issue of bonds which would have to be paid by levies so made, cannot be devoted to county purposes. Under the old law, possibly, there was no way in which to dispose of such a surplus, and the custom which obtained in Lucas county was as equitable a solution of the difficulty as could be worked out under the circumstances.

Present section 5654, however, clearly applies to the proceeds of a Gehrett law tax or bond issue. A contrary holding might be made if the prior law had made any definite disposition of the proceeds of such a bond issue so that to make amended section 5654 applicable to a levy made before it took effect or to bonds theretofore issued might seem to give it a retrospective application. That question, however, is not present in this instance, because unless original section 5654 itself would govern the disposition of such surplus and action was taken thereunder, there was no way lawfully to dispose of the surplus of the proceeds of a bond issue under the Gehrett law until present section 5654 became effective.

I am of the opinion that present section 5654, which has just gone into effect, governs the disposition of all levies made and bonds issued under the original Gehrett law; so that if there is at present a surplus in a fund created by an issue of bonds under this law which has not been expended or transferred to the general fund, such surplus must be applied to the extinguishment of the bonds as therein provided, and may, under no circumstances be used to repair a particular road which has been improved.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—MEMBER OF VILLAGE COUNCIL AND MEMBER OF SCHOOL BOARD—OFFICES COMPATIBLE—VILLAGE MAYOR AND MEMBER OF VILLAGE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Under the provisions of section 4218, General Code, a member of the village council may not serve as a member of the village school board. The mayor of a village may serve as a member of the village board of education.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 11, 1913.

HON. OLIN M. FARBER, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 26th you advise that two members of the village board of education of Lexington, Ohio, are also members of the village council, and that a third member of said board of education occupies the position of mayor of said village.

You state you have advised the members of council that under section 4218, General Code, they may not serve in both capacities. In this connection I beg to say that your advice has been in accordance with the established ruling of this department.

With reference to the mayor and his ability to serve both as mayor and as a member of the board of education, you state that under section 4255, General Code, it is provided that the mayor of the village shall be president of the council, shall be present at all regular meetings thereof, and shall have a vote in case of a tie; and you inquire whether or not these duties make a village mayor such a member of the village council as to cause his disqualification under section 4218, General Code, upon the acceptance of another public office such as member of the board of education.

Section 4218 of the General Code provides:

> "Each member of council shall have resided in the village one year next preceding his election, and shall be an elector thereof. No member of the council shall hold any other public office or employment, except that of notary public or member of the state militia, or be interested in any contract with the village. Any member who ceases to possess any of the qualifications herein required or removes from the village shall forfeit his office."

The established principle of government, which calls for a separation of the distinct departments known as legislative and executive, clearly appears in the scheme of government provided by the statutes for villages. Thus, section 4215, General Code, provides that the legislative power of each village shall be vested in and exercised by a council composed of six members, whilst section 4248, General Code, prescribes that the executive power and authority of villages shall be vested in a mayor, clerk, treasurer, marshal, street commissioner and such other officers and departments thereof as are created by law.

The mayor and the council clearly occupy distinct offices and represent distinct departments in the village government. The statutes throughout recognize this distinction and treat of each office separately. Thus, under section 4218, General Code, the qualifications of a councilman are set out, whilst under section 4255, General Code, the legislature expressly provides for the qualifications of the mayor, to wit: solely that he shall be an elector of the corporation. Were it intended that the qualifications prescribed for councilman, under section 4218, should be considered applicable to a mayor, the qualification set out in section 4255, General Code, would be a useless and superfluous case of legislation. So, also, under section 4219, General Code, the salary of councilman is provided; whilst under section 4257, General Code, an altogether different compensation is provided for the mayor. Furthermore, under sections 4237 and 4238, General Code, council is made the judge of election qualification of its members, and may expel or punish them on its own initiative; whilst under section 4268 an altogether different procedure is provided for the removal of a mayor, to wit: by the governor.

In none of these provisions is the mayor to be considered to come within the directions applicable to members of council. As a matter of fact, argument need not be presented to make manifest that the office of mayor is intended as a distinct supervisory and checking power over that of council. He is given power to protest expenditures, to make recommendations, and must preside over and guide their deliberations.

It seems clear, therefore, that the one duty wherein he shares in the obligations of the council, to wit: that of voting in case of a tie, may not be viewed as sufficient to constitute him a member of council, within the meaning of section 4218, General Code. I have been unable to find anything in the respective duties either of the office of mayor or of that of member of a village board of education which would make these offices incompatible. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the mayor of a village may also hold the office of member of a village board of education.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE PROVISIONS OF THE STATUTE PROVIDING FOR THE PROBATE JUDGE APPOINTING EXAMINERS FOR AUDITOR'S OFFICE ARE NOT MANDATORY.

Section 2705, General Code, in reference to the probate court appointing examiners to examine the auditor's office at least once a year, are not mandatory. It is the duty of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices to examine the auditor's office at least once a year. However, the probate judge still retains the right to cause such examination to be made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1913.

HON. A. A. SLAYBAUGH, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 2nd you state that you would like a construction of section 2705 of the General Code as to whether it is mandatory for the probate judge to direct the examiners appointed by the probate judge to examine the auditor's office.

Section 2705, General Code, reads as follows:

> "At least once each year and oftener if he deems it necessary, the probate judge may direct such examiners to examine the auditor's office, including all records, books, accounts and vouchers therein, and make report thereof, as in the examination of the county treasury."

The sole question which arises is as to whether the word "may" as used in the above section is to be read as "must" or "shall." It is a recognized rule of law that the word "may" shall be construed as "shall" in cases where public interest or rights are concerned, and where something is directed to be done for the sake of justice or public good. This does not need citations of authorities.

Section 2705, General Code, is a codified section of part of section 1219, Revised Statutes. Upon an examination of section 1129, Revised Statutes, we find that the probate judge is required to appoint two competent and trustworthy accountants of opposite politics to examine into the treasurer's office, and further provides in the following language:

> "The said probate judge is further authorized to direct said examiners at least once a year and oftener if he deems it necessary to make an examination of the auditor's office."

I do not construe such language as used in section 1129, Revised Statutes, as above quoted as mandatory upon the probate judge, and while section 2705, General Code, were it a new provision of law and not simply a codification of a prior provision of law, could well be construed to be mandatory, yet in codifying the laws it is not presumed that there was any intention on the part of the legislature to change the meaning of a statute as it existed prior to codification.

I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 2705, General Code, are not mandatory upon the probate judge, especially so in view of the fact that under section 284, General Code, it is made the duty of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices to examine the auditor's office at least once a year. There would, therefore, now by reason of the provision of section 284, be no necessity for such examination for the sake of justice or public good. If, however, the probate judge should desire, he still retains the power to cause such examination to be made.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX LAW IS AN ACT PROVIDING FOR TAX LEVY AND WENT INTO EFFECT IMMEDIATELY UPON ITS PASSAGE AND APPROVAL.

Sections 5331 and 5333, General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws 463, in reference to collateral inheritance tax, is an act providing for tax levy and as such went into effect immediately upon its passage and approval. This law having been passed and approved May 8, 1913, would govern the taxation of an estate of a decedent dying on July 9, 1913.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. THOMAS L. POGUE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of August 4th in which you request my opinion as to the status, under the initiative and referendum amendments to the constitution of the act appearing in 103 O. L. 463, which so amends sections 5331 and 5333, General Code, pertaining to the collateral inheritance tax as to change the exemptions thereto.

The sections amended and re-enacted are the operative sections of the law, i. e., section 5331 in particular is the one which provides for the levy of the tax.

I am of the opinion that within the tests laid down by the supreme court in the recent case of State ex rel. Schreiber vs. Milroy, in which we both participated, this act is "an act providing for a tax levy," and as such went into immediate effect. Having been passed and approved on May 8, 1913, its provisions would govern the taxation of the estate of a decedent dying in July of this year.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS NOT REQUIRED TO MAKE RETURN OF PERSONAL PROPERTY TO COUNTY AUDITOR.

Building and loan associations are not required to return any personal property to the county auditor, under section 5404, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. WILLIAM H. VODREY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lisbon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 31st in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Should a building and loan association list for taxation the personal property of the association other than the moneys held in its reserve fund and undivided profits account?"

You state that it is asserted by certain building and loan associations in Columbiana county that the case of Gruner, auditor of Defiance county vs. Home Savings & Loan Association, 85 O. S. 484, unreported, is authority for the proposition that no property belonging to a building and loan association is taxable to the association as such.

The decision in question was an affirmance of that of the circuit court of Defiance county upon grounds stated in the following journal entry:

> "It is ordered and adjudged by this court, that the judgment of said circuit court be, and the same hereby is, affirmed, upon the ground that a building and loan association is not required to separately list its surplus and profits for taxation, but the real estate owned by a building and loan association is subject to the laws relating to the taxation of real property, whether purchased by surplus and profits or not."

I cannot reach the conclusion that the case is authority for a proposition so broad as that upon which it is cited, yet I am not convinced that the proposition for which the building and loan associations in question contend is not correct. To be perfectly frank, the case in question is not decisive of the precise question which you raise. The journal entry states conclusions only and not reasons upon which they are based. The conclusion is limited to the statement that the surplus and profits of a building and loan association need not be separately listed for taxation; but this conclusion is even further qualified by the statement that when the surplus and undivided profits are invested in real estate, such real estate must be listed for taxation in the ordinary way.

As you will observe from a report of the case I participated in its presentation to the court, and I have no hesitancy, therefore, in advising you that the contention made by the building and loan association, which was the defendant in error, was based upon the joint construction of sections 5404 and 9675 of the General Code, it being claimed that the latter section contained a specific provision for the taxation of building and loan associations within the meaning of the former section. That is to say, it was asserted that the taxation, as "credits" of the shares of stock of non-borrowing member of a building and loan association provided for by section 9675, General Code, constitutes the equivalent of the taxation of the property of the corporation, the value of which is supposed to be represented by the value of the individual shares; so that within the letter and spirit of the exception contained in section 5404, General Code, a building and loan association is not required to make any personal return to the county auditor.

Upon careful consideration of the question, which is by no means free from doubt, I have reached the conclusion that the court could have reached its decision only by acquiescing in the contention made by the building and loan assocation. The return to be made by all corporations subject to the provisions of section 5404 is a return of all the property of such corporations from which, when the value thereof is ascertained, the assessed value of the real estate is to be deducted. This return is not separable into different items for the purpose of the application of the statute. The sole question being as to whether or not section 5404 applies at all, it must follow that if it does not apply to a part of the personal property of a given corporation it does not apply to any of the personal property of such a corporation.

The seeming incongruity in the journal entry of the supreme court, arising from the qualification of the conclusion reached by the court in so far as real estate in which the surplus and undivided profits of an association may be invested is concerned is obviated by consideration of the fundamental principle of our tax laws. The return which must be made under section 5404 by corporations subject thereto is, as has already been stated, a personal return analogous to the personal list which each taxpayer is required by other sections of the General Code to make out and deliver to the assessor annually. Real estate, on the other hand, is separately valued and assessed every four years, whether it belongs to a corporation or to an individual.

Section 5404 does not affect the listing of corporate real estate; that is done by the real estate assessors in the quadrennial year. Therefore, if there were no such section as 5404, General Code, nevertheless, all corporate real estate, as well as other real estate, would be placed upon the tax duplicate and valued for taxation in the names of its owners. Therefore, a section such as section 9675, which by construction is held to constitute an exception to section 5404 and to relieve any class of corporations from the obligation to make a return under said section, would not relieve such corporations from the taxation of their real estate. In other words, the effect of exemption from the provisions of section 5404, is to relieve a particular corporation from taxation upon whatever is required to be returned by that section, but not from taxation upon real estate, which is assessed under other provisions of the law.

Having already stated that section 5404 is indivisible in its application to different classes of personal property, and requires all such property, or none, to be returned to the county auditor annually, I am of the opinion that on the authority of the case above cited, properly understood, a building and loan association is not required to return any personal property to the county auditor under section 5404. I may add that there were no opinions rendered in any of the courts in the case which I have been discussing.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

QUESTION OF CENTRALIZATION OF SCHOOLS TO BE SUBMITTED TO A VOTE OF THE ELECTORS—SCHOOLS MAY BE CENTRALIZED BY THE ABOLISHMENT OF ALL SCHOOLS IN THE SUB-DISTRICTS AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW SCHOOLS AND CONVEYANCE OF THE PUPILS TO THE NEW SCHOOLS PROVIDED NO ELECTION IS HELD.

It is necessary for a township board of education to submit the question of centralization of schools to a vote, under the provisions of section 4726, General Code.

All the electors of the township are entitled to vote upon the proposition of the centralization of schools.

The abolishment of all the schools in all the sub-districts, by virtue of sections 3730 and 3731, General Code, the establishment of new schools and the conveyance of pupils to these schools, operate as a centralization of the schools of the township, provided that no election has been held upon the question of centralization which resulted adversely and provided that no petition may be filed for an election according to law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1913.

HON. HOWARD F. CASTLE, Prosecuting Attorney, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On August 19, 1913, you submitted to this department a request for an opinion as follows:

> "Springfield township was composed of thirteen school sub-districts. In the past six years the township board of education has abolished ten of the thirteen sub-districts, the last three of which were abolished a few months ago, and all have been abolished by virtue of section 7730. The abolishment has been carried out by the board by resolution without submitting the question to a vote.
> "New schools have been established and provision made for the conveyance of pupils as required by law. A new school is now just completed at a large expense for the last three sub-districts abolished, and will be ready for use for school purposes at the beginning of the next school term. The three sub-districts in the township which have not yet been abolished are so situated that it would be impracticable to abolish them and convey the pupils to other schools.
> "A petition has been filed with the township board of education within the last few days by the required number of electors, asking for a vote on the question of centralization of the schools of the township under section 4726 of the General Code.
> (1) "Under the facts above stated, is it necessary for the township board of education to submit the question of centralization to a vote under section 4726?
> (2) "If so, are all of the electors of the township entitled to a vote on the proposition, or only the electors in the three sub-districts which have not as yet been abolished?
> (3) "Does the abolishment of school sub-districts in a township, by virtue of section 7730 of the General Code, the establishment of new schools, and the conveyance of pupils therein, operate as a centralization of the schools of the township?"

In reply to your inquiry, I desire to say that section 7730 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The board of education of any township school district may suspend the schools in any or all sub-districts in the township district. Upon such suspension the board must provide for the conveyance of the pupils residing in such sub-district or sub-districts to a public school in the township district, or to a public school in another district, the cost thereof to be paid out of the funds of the township school district. Or, the board may abolish all the sub-districts providing conveyance is furnished to one or more central schools, the expense thereof to be paid out of the funds of the district. No sub-district school where the average daily attendance is twelve or more, shall be so suspended or abolished, after a vote has been taken under the provisions of law therefor, when at such election a majority of the votes cast thereon were against the proposition of centralization, or when a petition has been filed thereunder and has not yet been voted upon at an election."

Section 7731, of the General Code, provides as follows:

"No township schools shall be centralized under the next preceding section by the board of education of the township until after sixty days' notice has been given by the board, such notices to be posted in a conspicuous place in each sub-district of the township. When transportation of pupils is provided for, the conveyance must pass within at least the distance of one-half of a mile from the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half of a mile from the public road. But transportation for pupils living less than one and one-half miles, by the most direct public highway, from the school house shall be optional with the board of education."

Said section 7730 of the General Code was formerly section 3922 of Bates Revised Statutes and prior to the amendment thereof on April 23, 1908, (99 O. L. 203), was passed upon by the supreme court in the case of Bowers et al., vs. Board of Education of Fulton township (78 O. S. 443). Prior to the amendment of said section on April 23, 1908, said section 3922, Bates Revised Statutes, now 7730 of the General Code, provided as follows:

"The board of education of any township school district is authorized to suspend the schools in any or all sub-districts in the township district, but upon such suspension the board must provide for the conveyance of the pupils residing in each sub-district or sub-districts to a public school in said township district, or to a public school in another district, the cost of such conveyance to be paid out of the funds of the township school district; or the board may abolish all the sub-districts providing conveyance is furnished to one or more central schools, the expense of such conveyance to be paid out of the funds of the district. * * *"

The said case of Bowers et al. vs. Board of Education came up from Fulton township, Fulton county and involved the right of the board of education of Fulton township to centralize the schools of that township by means of total suspension of sub-district schools, although at an election, at which the question of centralization was submitted to the electors of Fulton township, the question of centralization was decided in the negative.

The decision in the common pleas court was rendered in May, 1906, wherein the court held that the board of education of Fulton township could centralize their schools by suspension under said section 7730 of the General Code (3922 Bates Revised Statutes), notwithstanding the fact that the election held in such township prior to such centralization by suspension, by virtue of section 2938-2, Bates Revised Statutes (4726 of the General Code), had resulted against centralization.

The circuit court affirmed the judgment of the common pleas court and the supreme court without report in 78 O. S. 443, above cited, affirmed the two lower courts. The lower courts' decisions are likewise not reported. Said section as amended on April 23, 1908, was amended by attaching the following provision:

> "No sub-district school where the average daily attendance is twelve or more, shall be so suspended or abolished, after a vote has been taken under the provisions of law therefor, when at such election a majority of the votes cast thereon were against the proposition of centralization, or when a petition has been filed thereunder and has not yet been voted upon at an election."

It therefore follows, under the circumstances which existed in the Bowers case, to wit, an election being held which resulted adverse to centralization, that the board would be without authority in that case to centralize the schools under the provisions of said section, 7730, but it also follows that such amendment would not alter or change the decision of the court in regard to the right of the township board of education to centralize their schools by suspension of sub-districts, provided that no election had been held which resulted adversely to centralization and provided that no petition had been filed thereunder and had not been voted upon at an election. In accordance with the decision of the supreme court in the said case of Bowers et al. vs. Board of Education, supra, it follows that a board of education of a township school district may centralize the schools of such township district by abolishing or suspending the sub-district schools, provided of course that no election had been held in such township school district resulting adversely to centralization or that no petition had been filed with the board of education, requesting an election upon the question of centralization and which had not yet been voted upon at an election.

Section 4726, of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "A township board of education may submit the question of centralization, and, upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such township district, must submit such question to the vote of the qualified electors of such township district, at a general election or a special election called for that purpose. If more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it, at such election, such board of education shall proceed at once to the centralization of schools of the township, and, if necessary purchase a site or sites and erect a suitable building or buildings thereon.
> "If, at such election, more votes are cast against the proposition of centralization than for it, the question shall not again be submitted to the electors of such township district for a period of two years."

In construing said section 4726 of the General Code (3927-2 Bates Revised Statutes), the court in the case of State ex rel. Haines vs. Chester Township Board of Education, 15 C. D. (25 G. C. Rep.) page 424 held as follows:

> "The centralization of the township schools is a duty imperatively imposed upon the township board of education under act of April 16, 1900."

As above stated, it is to be noted that the last amendment made to section 7730 of the General Code as amended in 99 O. L. page 203, specifically provides that no sub-district school where the average daily attendance is twelve or more shall be suspended or abolished, after a vote has been taken under the provisions of law therefor, when at such election a majority of the votes cast thereon were against the proposition of centralization, or when a petition has been filed thereunder and has not yet been voted upon at an election. That is to say, in other words, if a petition for an election upon the question of centralization is filed with the board of education, signed by not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such township district before centralization is actually accomplished by the suspension or abolishment of the sub-district schools in the township school district, then it is imperative that such election be held under said section 4726 in accordance with the rule laid down in the case of State ex rel. Haines vs. Chester Township, supra, and the centralization in that event cannot be carried to completion under the provisions of section 7730 of the General Code, supra.

In this respect you state that a petition has been filed with the township board of education of Springfield township within the last few days by the required number of electors, asking for a vote on the question of centralization of the schools of said township, under the provisions of section 4726 of the General Code, and that three of the sub-districts in said Springfield township have not as yet been abolished and at least to that extent the board of education has not as yet accomplished centralization of its schools by abolishing or suspending all the sub-district schools of said township.

Therefore, it follows for the foregoing reasons and under the circumstances as you state them in your letter of inquiry, in answer to your first question, that it is necessary for the township board of education to submit the question of centralization to a vote under section 4726 of the General Code. In answer to your second question, I am of the opinion that all of the electors of said township are entitled to vote upon the proposition of centralization for the reason that said section 4726 specifically provides that said proposition shall be submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of such township district, either at a general election or a special election called for that purpose. In answer to your third question, I am of the opinion that the abolishment of the schools in all the sub-districts in the township district, by virtue of sections 7730 and 7731 of the General Code and the establishment of new schools and the conveyance of pupils therein, operates as a centralization of the schools of the township, provided that no election has been held upon the question of centralization which resulted adversely to centralization and provided that a petition for such election has not been filed therefor in accordance with law.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAX LEVY MADE BY BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR THE PAYMENT OF BONDS ISSUED IN ANTICIPATION THEREOF MUST COME WITHIN THE LIMITATION OF THE SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW AND WITHIN THE FIVE MILL LIMITATION.

A levy of taxes made by a board of education for the purpose of providing for the payment of bonds issued in anticipation thereof, under authority of section 7629, General Code, must be made within the limitations of the Smith One Per Cent. Law, and also within the five mill limitation, applicable to boards of education as such, and prescribed by section 5649-3a, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. HENRY HART, Prosecuting Attorney, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 31st requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Is a levy of taxes made by a board of education for the purpose of providing for the payment of bonds issued in anticipation thereof, under authority of section 7629, General Code, subject to the 1910 limitation, so-called, of the Smith one per cent. law?"

At the outset of my discussion of this question, I may say that all tax levies of whatsoever kind or character, save and excepting only the emergency levies especially referred to in section 5649-4, General Code, are subject to the 1910 limitation whether they are the sinking fund levies referred to in sections 5649-2 and 5649-3 or not. (State ex rel. vs. Senzenbacher, 84 O. S. 506, unreported.)

Supposing, however, that you may be interested also in the application of the ten mill limit of the Smith law, I beg to advise that a levy of the kind referred to by you must be made within this limitation, and within the five mill limitation applicable to boards of education as such, and prescribed by section 5649-3a, General Code.

You will observe that sections 5649-2 and 5649-3, in speaking of the interest and sinking fund levies which are to be made outside of the 1910 limitation (and which have been held to be exempt from the five mill limitation prescribed by section 5649-3a, in the case last above cited) uses the following language:

> "Such levies for interest and sinking fund purposes, necessary to provide for any indebtedness heretofore incurred or any indebtedness that may hereafter be incurred by a vote of the people."

It is apparent, therefore, that not all sinking fund levies are exempt under this provision but only those specifically referred to therein.

Although your letter is not explicit on this point, I have inferred from the facts stated by you that the particular levy made by the board of education in question was not made prior to the passage of the Smith law, viz., June 1, 1911, but has been made since that date. I also infer that the bonds were not issued upon a vote of the people. This would be true, if you are correct in stating that the proceedings have been had under section 7629, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The board of education of any school district may issue bonds to obtain or improve public school property, and in anticipation of income from taxes, for such purposes, levied or to be levied, from time to time, as occasion requires, may issue and sell bonds, under the restrictions and bearing a rate of interest specified in sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven. The board shall pay such bonds and the interest thereon when due, but provide that no greater amount of bonds be issued in any year than would equal the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills, for the year next preceding such issue. The order to issue bonds shall be made only at a regular meeting of the board and by a vote of two-thirds of its full membership, taken by yeas and nays and entered upon its journal."

If, of course, you are in error in referring to the sections, and if, as a matter of fact, proceedings were taken under section 7625, General Code, which requires a vote of the people, then the levies in question could be made outside of the ten mill and five mill limitations of the Smith law, but must still be within the 1910 limitation thereof, plus nine per cent. If, however, the inferences which I have drawn from your letter are correct, and the bonds have been issued since June 1, 1911, without a vote of the people, then the levy to pay them, and in anticipation of which they were issued, must be made within all limitations of the Smith law.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SUITS BROUGHT BY HUMANE SOCIETY—COUNTY AUDITOR MAY BE MANDAMUSED TO COMPEL HIM TO ISSUE WARRANT FOR COSTS —COUNTY AUDITOR SHALL DRAW WARRANT FOR ATTORNEY EMPLOYED BY HUMANE SOCIETY WHEN HIS BILL IS PROPERLY APPROVED—COUNTY AUDITOR MAY NOT QUESTION GOOD FAITH OF PROCEEDINGS.

Where action is brought by the humane society and the magistrate before whom the action is brought certifies the cost bill to the county auditor under oath, the county auditor shall issue his warrant to the person in whose favor the bills are payable.

Where an attorney is employed by the humane society to prosecute the case referred to and the judge of the common pleas court approves the bill, the county auditor shall draw his warrant in favor of the attorney.

The county auditor has no authority to question the good faith of a prosecution, such as the one in question, where the society was in possession of all the facts.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 29, 1913.

HON. WILLIAM H. VODREY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lisbon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 30, 1913, in which you ask for a ruling regarding the costs incurred in trial brought by the humane society against defendants charged with cruelty to animals, your communication referring to a request for information regarding the same subject made by Mr. L. P. Metzger, who was your predecessor in office.

Mr. Metzger states that the humane agent of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals at Salem, instituted a proceeding against Edward Jenkins for cruelty to animals, another prosecution of the same character having been instituted by the same officer against an employe of Jenkins. In the former case a trial was had which resulted in the acquittal of the defendant, and in the latter prosecution the defendant was also found not guilty.

After the conclusion of both trials, the magistrate before whom they were held, certified the cost bills of the proceedings to the county auditor, and the attorney for the humane society filed a bill for his services, which bill was approved by the common pleas judge.

Mr. Metzger requests answers to the following questions:

> "1. Is the auditor's duty to correct this bill and draw his warrant for the same so clear under the statute that he would be compelled to do so by mandamus?
> "2. Are the provisions of section 13440 of the General Code, sufficiently definite, and if so, what if any authority, would the county commissioners have to interfere with an allowance of attorney's fees already fixed by the judge of the court of common pleas?
> "3. Does the county auditor have any authority to question the good faith of a prosecution such as the one against Blyth was, when such society was in full possession of all of the facts in the case?"

(1) Among the objects of the humane society are the enforcement of laws for the prevention of cruelty to animals, and it is authorized to appoint agents for the purpose of prosecuting violations of laws for the prevention of cruelty to animals.

Section 13438 provides:

> "In such prosecutions, the jurrors and the witnesses shall be entitled to like mileage and fees as in criminal cases in the court of common pleas."

Section 13439 contains the following language:

> "In such prosecutions, no costs shall be required to be advanced or secured by a person authorized by law to prosecute. If the defendant be acquitted or discharged from custody by nolle or otherwise, or convicted and committed in default of paying fine and costs, all costs of such case shall be certified under oath by the trial magistrate to the county auditor, who, after correcting errors therein, shall issue a warrant on the county treasury in favor of the person to whom such costs and fees are payable. * * *"

For an understanding of the word "such" as used in the first line of section 13439, reference should be had to 95 O. L. 517, of part of which section 13439 is the embodiment. In codifying the act, the code commissioners separated the part appearing as section 13439 from the context of the original act, but, nevertheless, it is clear that this section applies to violations of the law relating to the prevention of cruelty to animals. It clearly and definitely states that the trial magistrate shall, under oath, certify to the county auditor the costs of the case, under the circumstances stated in your letter, and that the county auditor shall issue his warrant in favor of the persons to whom the costs are payable. There is a clear and manifest duty imposed upon the auditor in this section, which he must not disregard. The only authority he has under this section is to examine the cost bill and allow it if it is correct; and allow it after correction of errors, if it contains any such errors. Therefore, my answer to your first question is that, if the auditor fails to comply with this section, mandamus would lie to compel him to do so.

(2) Section 13440 provides in part that:

> "A humane society or its agent may employ an attorney to prosecute the following cases, under this section, who shall be paid for his services out of the county treasury in such sum as the judge of the court of common pleas or the probate judge of such county or the county commissioners thereof may approve as just and reasonable.

"1. Violations of law relating to the prevention of cruelty to animals or children; * * *."

Under this provision if the attorney was employed by the humane society or its agent to prosecute the case referred to, and the judge of the court of common pleas approved the bill as just and reasonable, the county commissioners have absolutely nothing to do with the matter, and the county auditor should draw his warrant therefor in favor of the attorney and deliver the same to such attorney.

(3) I do not think that the county auditor has any authority to question the good faith of the prosecution, as his duty is clear under section 13439 and there is no authority vested in him to conduct any investigation into the good faith of the proceeding. If the society has manifestly abused its rights and privileges, another method of investigating this should be adopted. This theory is supported by the fact that the fees and costs are to be paid to the magistrate and witnesses, who have nothing to do with the institution of the prosecution. In case of acquittal the humane society can reap no financial benefit from the proceedings.

While this answers all of the questions which are asked, there is another matter which should be taken into consideration. You do not state whether part of the fees and costs in this case are claimed by the agent of the humane socirty under section 10076 of the General Code, which provides:

"For this service and for all services rendered in carrying out the provisions of this chapter, such officer, and the officers and agents of the association, shall be allowed and paid such fees as they are allowed for like services in other cases, which must be charged as costs and reimbursed to the society by the person convicted."

Section 10072 was passed subsequent to the original act, of which 10076 is a part. It provides:

"Upon the approval of the appointment of such an agent by the mayor of the city or village, the council thereof shall pay monthly to such agent or agents from the general revenue fund of the city or village, such salary as the council deems just and reasonable. Upon the approval of the appointment of such an agent by the probate judge of the county, the county commissioners shall pay monthly to such agent or agents, from the general revenue fund of the county, such salary as they deem just and reasonable. The commissioners and the council of such city or village may agree upon the amount each is to pay such agent or agents monthly. The amount of salary to be paid monthly by the council of the village to such agent shall not be less than five dollars, by the council of the city not less than twenty dollars, and by the commissioners of the county not less than twenty-five dollars. But not more than one agent in each county shall receive remuneration from the county commissioners under this section."

Under the foregoing section, it is mandatory upon the council to fix a salary for the agent, which shall not be less than the minimum amount provided for by statute, and for the commissioners to do the same thing. This section is, I think, capable of enforcement by mandamus. Therefore, the agent in your case, if he were not salaried, would have a right to require the commissioners and council to fix a salary not less than the minimum amount provided for in this statute. This being true, he would not, in my judgment, be entitled to any fees, his salary being in lieu thereof; nor would the fact that the salary had not been paid him justify his drawing the fees, because he had a remedy to enforce the payment of the salary, and this is true even though it would cover services performed before the salary was fixed. In other words, the judgment, in a proper proceeding, would be to the effect that he was entitled to salary from the time of his appointment, provided he was appointed subsequent to the passage of the act in question, and from the time of the passage of the act, if he was appointed prior to the passage of the act. Of course his appointment would have to be approved in the manner prescribed by law in any event.

Upon the point which I am just discussing, I beg to call your attention to Fournier vs. Mayor, 42 N. W., 277.

I also wish to call your attention to an opinion rendered by this department on November 11, 1912, to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, to the effect that in no event is the humane agent entitled to fees, costs or repayment of expenses out of the county treasury.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOND OF PERSON WHO TRAFFICS IN INTOXICATING LIQUORS—DURATION OF SUCH BOND IS MEASURED BY DURATION OF TAX YEAR—SURETY OR GUARANTEE COMPANY MAY SECURE SUCH BONDS.

The bond required of persons who traffic in intoxicating liquors, referred to in section 6072, General Code, is measured as to its term of duration by the tax year, or by that part of the tax year remaining after the execution of the bond.

Where the bond is executed with a surety or guarantee thereon, as surety, the bond is sufficient without other sureties thereon.

When the principal of the bond provided for by section 6072, General Code, executes such bond, conditioned as therein provided, to the satisfaction of the county clerk, he has done all that is required of him.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1913.

HON. THOS. L. POGUE, Prosecuting Attorney, Hamilton County, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 9, 1913, I have letter from your office asking my opinion as to the construction to be placed on certain language in section 6072, General Code, as amended in 103 O. L. 441.

The language of section 6072 referred to in the inquiry, is as follows:

> "Any person who traffics in intoxicating liquors as a beverage at retail shall not be entitled to any rebate or refunder under the liquor tax law without giving a bond in amount equal to twice the amount of such rebate or refunder with securities acceptable to the county clerk that he will not traffic in intoxicating liquors without paying the liquor taxes provided by law."

The particular inquiries with reference to the construction of this language of the section are, first, whether the bond therein provided for is for the balance of the tax year only, or for an indefinite time; second, whether in the event a surety company is given, more than one surety thereon is required; third, whether, in the event of the death or disqualification of a surety or securities on said bond, the principal thereon is required to rehabilitate said bond as a condition of his qualification to commence business on application therefor to the county auditor.

As to the first inquiry, it is to be noted that the statute makes no provision as to the term or duration of the bond therein provided for, and the same is to be determined by a consideration of the purposes of this bond as disclosed by the provisions of this statute when read in connection with other sections of the General Code standing in para materia with it. The bond provided for being statutory, it is to be considered with reference to the statute which authorizes its execution and prescribes its object, and as a statutory obligation, it is to be given that effect which in reason must have been intended by the statute.

Secrist vs. Barbee, 17 O. S. 426.
Cincinnati vs. Baumer, 12 C. C. (N. S.) 240.
O'Brien vs. Murphy, 175 Mass. 253.
Chaladek vs. Brown, 58 Ill. App. 379.

The bond provided for by section 6072 as amended, is to be executed as a condition precedent to the right of the person, corporation, or co-partnership who has paid the assessment on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors provided for by section 6071, to receive any rebate or refunder on the assessment so paid. Refunders on such assessments are authorized, first, when the person, corporation or co-partnership paying the assessment discontinues business (section 6074, General Code); and second, when such person, corporation or co-partnership paying such assessment is obliged to suspend business temporarily on account of civil or military orders, or on account of fire, flood, earthquake or other public calamity (section 6071-1 General Code; 103 O. L. 818.)

Sections 6071, 6072, 6073 and 6074, provide as follows:

"Section 6071. Upon the business of trafficking in spirituous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquors, there shall be assessed yearly and paid into the county treasury as provided by sections 6072, and following, of the General Code, by each person, corporation, or co-partnership engaged therein the sum of one thousand dollars.

"Section 6072. Such assessment, with any penalty thereon, shall attach and operate as a lien on the real property on and in which such business is conducted, as of the fourth Monday of May each year, and shall be paid at the times provided for the payment of taxes on real or personal property within this state, to wit: One half on or before the twentieth day of June, and one half on or before the twentieth day of December of each year. * * *

"Section 6073. When such business is commenced after the fourth Monday in May in any year, such assessment shall be proportioned in amount to the remainder of the assessment year, except that it shall not be less than two hundred dollars, and such assessment shall attach and operate as a lien as provided in the next preceding section and be payable upon the date of such commencement.

"Section 6074. When a person, company, corporation or co-partnership engaged in such business, has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment and afterward discontinues such business, the county auditor, upon being satisfied thereof, shall issue to such person, corporation or co-partnership a refunding order for the proportionate amount of such assessment so retained shall not be less than two hundred dollars unless such discontinuance of business has been caused by an election under a local option law or a lawful finding of a mayor or judge or a petition filed in a residence district as provided in this chapter, in which case the proportionate amount of such tax shall be refunded in full."

By section 6071-1, General Code (103 O. L. 818), it is provided that the refunder therein authorized and provided for shall be a proportionate amount of the tax paid under the provisions of section 6071 and following sections of the General Code, the same to be based upon the number of days, or fraction thereof, of enforced discontinuance.

In the consideration of the concrete question presented, it will be noted that by the provisions of section 6071 an assessment is provided for on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors covering a certain definite period of time, to wit, the tax year. Sections 6072 and 6073 have operation with respect to this assessment. With respect to the bond in question, it is to be given with reference to the refunder on the assessment provided for by section 6071, and as a condition precedent to the payment of such assessment. Looking to the provisions of sections 6074 and 6071-1, it is noted that the refunders therein authorized and provided for are predicated on the assessment provided for in section 6071, covering, as it does, a certain period of time, to wit, the tax year, and the amount refunded under the provisions of both sections 6074 and 6071-1 represents a proportional part of such assessment based on the ratio existing between the period of discontinuance and the whole tax year.

On a consideration of the statutory provisions above noted, I am of the opinion that the bond provided for by section 6072 in legal effect is measured as to its term of duration by the tax year, or, more specifically, that part of the tax year remaining after its execution.

The bond in question bears some analogy to the bond of a public official indefinite as to term of duration, executed during his term of office, which has been held to be effective and obligatory during such term only.

State vs. Crooks, 7 Ohio, Part 2, p. 221.
Bryant vs. Bonding Co., 77 O. S. 90.
O'Brien vs. Murphy, supra.

As to the purpose of the bond in question, although the language of section 6072 providing for the same, is broad enough and specific enough to cover the refunders authorized and provided for by section 6071-1, yet it is reasonable to believe that section 6072 as amended, insofar as it makes provision for this bond, was enacted more particularly with reference to the refunders authorized and provided for by section 6074 and that the purpose of the bond is to provide against the trafficing in intoxicating liquors by one taking such refunder, during the balance of the tax year represented by the same.

As to the second inquiry above noted, I note that section 9571, General Code, provides as follows:

"When a bond, recognizance or undertaking is required or permitted by law, with one or more securities, its execution or the guaranteeing thereof, as the case may be, as sole surety by a company authorized to guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, to guarantee the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and to execute and guarantee bonds and undertakings in actions or proceedings or by law allowed is sufficient, and when so executed and guaranteed, shall be a full compliance with every requirement of law, ordinance, rule or regulation that such bond, recognizance must be executed and guaranteed by one surety or two or more sureties, or that such sureties shall be residents or householders or freeholders."

By force of the provisions of this section I am of the opinion that if the principal executes a bond with a surety or guaranty company thereon as security, which is authorized to execute and guarantee all bonds required and provided for by law, the bond so executed is sufficient without other surety thereon.

As to the third inquiry made, I am of the opinion that when the principal on the bond provided for by section 6072, as amended, executes such bond conditioned as therein provided to the satisfaction of the county clerk, he has done all that is required of him.

As provided by the statute, he is required to give this bond before he is entitled to any rebate or refunder, under the liquor tax law, on his license to traffic in intoxicating liquors. The purpose of the bond is to provide against the traffic in intoxicating liquors by one who is not authorized so to do, and not to prescribe a condition as to one who is making application according to law for qualification to engage in the business. Your third inquiry must, therefore, be answered in the negative.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

IN TRANSFERRING TOWNSHIP SUBDISTRICTS TO SPECIAL DISTRICTS THERE MUST BE EQUITABLE DIVISION OF PROPERTY—SPECIAL DISTRICT HAS NO INTEREST IN PROPERTY OF SUBDISTRICT—MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION CONTINUING TO RESIDE IN TRANSFERRED TERRITORY FORFEIT THEIR OFFICE.

Where two township school subdistricts, formerly a part of a certain township district have been transferred to a special district therein, unless there has been an equitable distribution of the funds now in the school district and of the money in process of collection, there has been no valid transfer of territory and the territory involved is still a part of the township district.

The special district has no interest in the school land, buildings, furniture and fixtures, or any school property in the transfer. The legal title is unaffected by the transfer of the territory. The real estate should be disposed of at public sale and the funds derived from the sale should go to the present township district.

Where territory has been legally transferred from the township district to a special district, the members of the board of education residing in the territory so transferred and who continue to reside therein after the transfer is made, forfeit their office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1913.

HON. CHARLES M. MILROY, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 12th, and to apologize for my inability to return an answer thereto before the time for opening the schools of the districts interested in the question. The pressure of business in this department has seriously impaired my ability to keep up with its advisory work.

You state in your letter that two subdistricts, formerly a part of a certain township school district in Lucas county, have been recently transferred to a special village school district therein; that in the school fund of the township district a certain sum has accumulated from the collection of taxes; that there are certain school lands, school houses, furniture and fixtures located in the territory thus transferred; and that certain members of the township board of education reside in the territory so transferred.

Under the foregoing statement of facts you submit for my opinion the following questions:

> "1. What, if any, part of the aforesaid $4,000 now in the school fund of the township, and the money in process of collection, is the special school district entitled to?
> "2. Has the special school district any ownership or interest in the school land, school houses, school house furniture and fixtures, or any of the school property in the territory so transferred to the special school district?
> "3. What is the status of the members of the board of education of the township elected to represent the territory so transferred, but whose terms have not expired?"

I assume that you have used the word "transfer" in its exact sense, and that the territory of which you speak has been severed from the one district and attached to the other, by the procedure outlined in section 4692, General Code, and not by annexation as provided in sections 4690 and 4691, General Code.

As it is, there are two separate proceedings by which territory may be technically "transferred" from one district to another. Section 4692, General Code, provides for the transfer of territory from one district to another "by the mutual consent of the boards of education having control of such districts." It would seem that if this be the proceeding which has been followed in the case concerning which you inquire, the details to which your first two questions relate should have been provided for in the resolution which, presumably, was passed by each of the concurring boards. In fact, I question whether or not the transfer was legally complete until some of these matters had been agreed upon between the two boards. I regard, for example, the first sentence of section 4696 as applicable to what may be termed this voluntary transfer. That sentence provides: "When territory is so transferred from one school district to another, the equitable division of funds or indebtedness shall be determined upon at the time of the transfer." The remainder of the section refers to the method of apportionment "when territory is transferred * * * by proceedings in the probate court."

The inference here is that the "equitable division of funds or indebtedness" is one of the elements of the contract, so to speak, upon which the "mutual consent" of the boards of education affected thereby must be secured under section 4692. And I am of the opinion that the disposition of property, as well as that of funds, is a matter which may lawfully be agreed upon in this manner. As to the effect of failure to agree as to either of these matters, I am of the opinion that such failure as to the apportionment of the funds and indebtedness renders the proceeding incomplete and void. That is to say, by force of sections 4692 and 4696, read together, as I think they must be, a voluntary transfer is incomplete and of no effect until the equitable division of funds has been determined upon.

It seems otherwise with respect to property. The statutes are silent in this particular, and while it may be lawful for the two boards to agree as to this matter it does not appear that they are required to do so.

I call your attention now to the fact that the procedure outlined in section 4693 et seq. constitutes a separate and distinct method of transferring territory from one district to another, as compared with that outlined in section 4692, and upon which I have just commented.

Section 4693, for example, provides that,

> "Territory may also be transferred from one school district to another, as follows: * * *"

The language here used indicates clearly that the method is in addition to that mentioned in section 4692. That portion of section 4696 which governs the probate judge in the discharge of his powers and duties in transferring territory from one district to another, upon petition, is as follows:

> "* * * When territory is transferred from one district to another by proceedings in the probate court or by the annexation of territory to a city or village, the proper division of funds in the treasury, or in process of collection, of the board of education of the school district from which the territory is detached, shall, upon application to the probate court of the county in which such territory is situated by either board of education interested, be determined and ordered by such court. If such board of education is indebted, such indebtedness, together with the proper amount of money to be paid to such board by the board of education of the school district to which the territory is transferred, annexed, or of the district created, shall be in like manner determined and ordered by the court."

The probate judge in so acting undoubtedly exercises judicial power. The proceeding is judicial in the highest sense. There are adverse parties; there is a hearing, after notice; there is a judgment for costs. Therefore, the question which you raise becomes one pertaining to the jurisdiction of a court. The principle here is that a court, in the exercise of special jurisdiction, is limited to the subject matters spes cifically mentioned in the statute providing for the special proceeding. I regard thi- principle as elementary. This particular transfer proceeding does not ipso facto result in the transfer of the title to the real and personal property located in the transferred territory. Then, it seems clear that the probate judge is without jurisdiction, by his judgment, finding and decree, to effect such transfer, or to compel appropriate conveyances or deliveries which would be necessary to do so.

That the mere transfer of territory does not have, ipso facto the effect of transferring property located therein seems to me clearly to follow from the provisions of other sections of the school code, considered in connection with the silence of the sections now immediately under consideration. Thus, section 4688, General Code, contains explicit provision as to the disposition of property in the case of the abandonment of a village school district. So, also, section 4690, General Code, contains another provision dissimilar to that found in section 4688, as to the disposition of property in case of annexation of territory to a city or village. There is here a peculiar provision, which is as follows:

> "When territory is annexed to a city or village, such territory thereby becomes a part of the city or village school district, and the legal title to school property in such territory for school purposes shall remain vested in the board of education of the school district from which such territory was detached, until such time as may be agreed upon by the several boards of education when such property may be transferred by warranty deed. In case of disagreement between such boards of education, like proceedings shall be had by application to the probate court as are provided by law in case of the transfer of property from one school district to another."

The last use of the italicized word in this context is an obvious error, as there are no proceedings in the probate court "provided by law in case of the transfer of property from one school district to another." Evidently, the word "property" here should be read "territory." At the very most no inference can be drawn from its seemingly accidental use in this context from which to construct jurisdiction in the probate court to dispose of the legal title of school property located in territory transferred from one district to another.

Other specific provisions might be cited in this connection. Suffice it to say that the general assembly has made various and differing provisions for the disposition of the legal title to school property located in territory belonging to one school district and which, by some process, becomes a part of another school district; but that it has failed to make any such provisions in the case of the transfer of territory upon petition, or otherwise, as between two school districts.

The question, then, is as to the rule in case of the silence of the statutes. I have not been able to find any decisions directly in point. I am of the opinion, however that the mere transfer of territory cannot have the legal effect of transferring legal title to the school property located therein from one board of education to another. The two boards must have an opportunity, in any event, as already pointed out, to agree between themselves as to the terms of transferring territory. If they fail to agree with respect to the transfer of the legal title of property located in the territory, as one of the terms of transferring territory, then, because the probate court has no jurisdiction over the property, as hereinbefore stated, the situation is just the same as it would have been if there had been no proceedings in the probate court, but the boards had acted under section 4692, so as to effect a voluntary transfer of the territory without transferring the property.

The effect of such voluntary transfer has already been discussed.

The foregoing discussion suggests the answers to your first two questions, as follows:

1. Unless the equitable distribution of the funds now in the treasury of the township school district and the money in process of collection in such district has been effected by some means or other, there has been no valid transfer of territory, and the territory involved is still a part of the township district, and will remain so until the distribution is made. The proceedings, whether voluntary or on petition, should be examined, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not by inference possibly, this question cannot be answered as one of fact. In other words, does not the agreement between the boards, if any, or the findings of the probate court, provide what part of the school funds of the township district shall be apportioned to the village district. If such a provision is found your question is answered; if none is found, and the subject is simply omitted, then, the proceeding is incomplete and nugatory, and should be reopened and carried to completion.

2. I am of the opinion that the special village school district has no ownership or interest in the school land, school houses, furniture and fixtures, or any school property in the transferred territory. The legal title to all this property originally vested in the township district, and in the absence of contract between the two boards, entered into as a part of the process of transfer, this legal title is unaffected by the transfer of the territory as such. The fact that the transferred territory comprises exactly two subdistricts of the original township district, for which the buildings and property in question were originally used by the board of education of that district, makes the question a hard one (always assuming, of course, the validity of the transfer). It would be most equitable that the property intended for the use of the subdistricts should go with the subdistricts—or, at least, that a part of it should go. I have pointed out, however, the only method under the statutes by which the transfer may be affected. The board of education of the township district is at liberty to remove and use for its own purposes all the movable things formerly kept by it in the transferred territory; the real estate may and should be sold at public sale, as provided by law, for the enhancement of the school fund of the present township district.

The answer to your third question involves consideration of section 4748, General Code, which, in part, provides as follows:

> "A vacancy in any board of education may be caused by * * * non-residence * * *. Any such vacancy shall be filled by the board at its next regular or special meeting."

No statutes expressly require a member of any board of education to be a resident of the district for which he is elected; but the necessity for such provision is obviated by the one just quoted, the effect of which is to make non-residence—which I interpret to mean residence outside of the district—a cause of vacancy.

The effect of change of the boundaries of a district, where the incumbent of an office is required to be a resident of such district is established in the case of State vs. Choate, 11 Ohio Reports, 511. The syllabus in this case sufficiently states the facts and the conclusions:

> "The legislature may change the boundaries of a county, and when such change places an associate judge within the limits of another county, who does not, within a reasonable time, remove into the limits of the county for which he was appointed, he forfeits his office.
> "A person who attempts to exercise the office of associate judge in a county wherein he does not reside, is guilty of intrusion and usurpation.
> "The legislature may fill a vacancy that has happened, or that is certain to happen, before the meeting of the next general assembly."

This principle controls, especially in the absence of any provisions of law to the contrary. There are no such provisions, the statutes being silent as to the effect of the transfer of territory, upon the tenure of office of members of the board of education of the original district, residing in such transferred territory.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that if the territory has been lawfully transferred from the township district to the special village district, those members of the board of education of the former district, residing in the transferred territory, and continuing to reside therein after the transfer, have forfeited their respective offices.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A TENANT RESIDING ON LAND IS THE PROPER PERSON TO PETITION FOR THE DETACHMENT OF SUCH LAND FROM A VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—THE FACT THAT A BONDED INDEBTEDNESS EXISTS ON THE FIRST DISTRICT IS NO OBJECTION TO THE DETACHMENT OF SUCH TERRITORY.

1. Where land is sought to be detached from a village school district, the tenant residing on said land is the proper person to petition for the detachment of the lands from said district. Such petition cannot be made by the owner of the land or by his trustee.

2. No objection can be interposed to the transfer of said territory from the village school district to the township school district on the ground that a bonded indebtedness had been created, which now exists against the first mentioned district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. CHAS. F. CLOSE, Prosecuting Attorney, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On June 13, 1913, you submitted a request for an opinion as follows:

> "A land owner of Sycamore township, Wyandot county, whose lands are now within the Sycamore village school district, has, through his tenant, petitioned the board of education of said village school district, to detach his lands from said village school district, to the end that such lands may be taken into Sycamore township and school attendance be had in one of the districts of the township.

"The buildings of the owner of the land sought to be detached from the village school district and attached to the township, are about two miles from the school building in Sycamore village school district, and about one mile and a quarter from the school building in the township district to which he seeks to be admitted.

"There is now a bonded indebtedness in the Sycamore village school district of considerable proportions, and which indebtedness was incurred while the lands sought to be detached were owned by the same gentleman as now owns them and were a part of said village school district.

"Queries: Is the tenant the proper party to petition for the detachment of the lands, or can such petition be made only by the owner of the land himself or his trustee, the land owner in this case being under trusteeship?

"Can the lands herein mentioned be detached in view of the fact that they were within the school district of the village at the time when the bonded indebtedness above referred to was contracted, and in view of the further fact that the lands were owned at that time by the present owner?"

In a subsequent communication of the date of August 1, 1913, you state that said tenant who petitioned for the detachment of the territory as set out in your inquiry of June 13th, is the only white male citizen who resides in the territory sought to be transferred and that he is an elector.

Section 4692 of the General Code provides that any school district or part thereof may be transferred to the adjoining school district by mutual consent of the boards of education having control of such districts, as follows:

"Any school district or a part thereof may be transferred to an adjoining school district by the mutual consent of the boards of education having control of such districts. To secure such consent, it shall be necessary for each of the boards to pass a resolution indicating the action taken and definitely describing the territory to be transferred. The passage of such resolution shall require a majority vote of the full membership of each board by a yea and nay vote, and the vote of each member shall be entered on the records of such boards. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, is placed upon the records of such boards and copies of the resolution certified to the president and clerk of each board together with a copy of such map are filed with the auditor or auditors of the county or counties in which such transferred territory is situated."

Section 4693 of the General Code provides that territory may also be transferred from one school district to another by petition as follows:

"Territory may also be transferred from one school district to another as follows: A petition, signed by not less than one-half of the qualified male citizens who are electors, residing in the territory sought to be transferred and accompanied by a correct map of the territory, shall be filed with the clerks of the boards of education interested. If such boards of education fail or refuse to transfer such territory by mutual consent, as herein provided, within sixty days from the filing of the petition and map, the petitioner shall file a copy of the petition and map in the probate court of the county in which the territory is situated, or, if it be situated in two or more counties, in the probate court of the county containing the largest proportionate share of the territory to be transferred. The petitioners shall give satisfactory security for the costs in the sum of one hundred dollars, conditioned that they will pay all the costs in case the transfer is not granted."

In the event that the transfer of such territory from one school district to another is refused by the boards of education of the respective districts interested, and a petition is filed in the probate court, section 4694 of the General Code provides that the probate judge shall fix the date for the hearing of the petition, as follows:

"Thereupon the probate judge shall fix a day for the hearing of the petition and cause to be published for four consecutive weeks in two newspapers of opposite politics printed and of general circulation in the county, a notice of the filing of the petition and of the time of the hearing. He shall also notify the clerks of the boards of education interested of the filing of the petition and the time of hearing."

Section 4695 of the General Code provides that the judgment of the probate court, either for or against said transfer, shall be final, and also provides for the payment of the costs of such proceeding as follows:

"The probate judge may hear and determine the case and give judgment for or against such transfer, and his judgment shall be final. In case the finding is against the transfer, judgment shall be rendered against the petitioners for the costs of the proceedings. If the finding is for the transfer, judgment shall be rendered against each of the boards of education interested for one-half of the costs, or, if more than two boards are interested, judgment shall be rendered against each for its equal proportionate share of the costs. A certified copy of the findings of the court, together with a copy of the map of the territory transferred shall be filed by the probate judge in the office of the county auditor."

Under the circumstances which you state in your communication of August 1, 1913, referred to above, to the effect that the tenant who petitioned for the detachment of the territory as set out in your inquiry of June 13th, is the only white male citizen who resides in the territory sought to be transferred and that he is an elector, leads me to the conclusion that the petition filed with the respective boards of education interested in the transfer of such school territory, is in conformity with section 4693 of the General Code above quoted, unless there are other qualified male citizens, other than white, who are electors and who reside in the territory to be transferred, besides the white male citizen whom you mention. Therefore, in direct answer to your question, I am of the opinion that the tenant is the proper party to petition for the detachment of the lands and that such petition cannot be made by the owner of the land himself or his trustee, the owner as you state in this case being under trusteeship.

In answer to your second question, section 4696 of the General Code provides that when territory is transferred from one school district to another, there shall be an equitable division or apportionment of the funds or indebtedness of the respective districts as follows:

"When territory is so transferred from one school district to another, the equitable division of funds or indebtedness shall be determined upon at the time of the transfer. When territory is transferred from one district to another by proceedings in the probate court or by the annexation of territory to a city or village, the proper division of funds in the treasury, or in process of collection, of the board of education of the school district from which the territory is detached, shall, upon application to the probate court of the county in which such territory is situated by either board of education interested, be determined and ordered by such court. If such board of education is indebted, such indebtedness, together with the proper amount of money to be paid to such board by the board of education of the school district to which the territory is transferred, annexed, or of the district created, shall be in like manner determined and ordered by the court."

The provisions of section 3893 of Bates Revised Statutes, as passed March 8, 1892, was similar to the provisions now contained in section 4696 of the General Code. Said section 3893, Bates Revised Statutes, provided in part as follows:

"Section 3893. A part or the whole of any district may be transferred to an adjoining district by the mutual consent of the board of education having control of such districts; but no such transfer shall take effect until statement or map, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, is entered upon the records of such boards, nor, except when the transfer is for the purpose of forming a joint subdistrict, until a copy of such statement or map certified by the clerks of the board making the transfer, is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated; and any person living in the territory so transferred may appeal to the county commissioners, as provided in section 3967, and the commissioners, at their first regular meeting thereafter, shall approve or vacate such transfer."

The case of Eckstein et al. vs. Board of Education of Chicago Junction at el. 10 C. C. Report, page 480, was an appeal from the judgment rendered by the court of common pleas. Said section was brought to test the legality and validity of certain proceedings had in the probate court of Huron county, whereby it was sought to detach certain territory from the townships of Richmond and New Haven, and to attach the same to the village school district of Chicago Junction.

In construing said section 3893, Bates Revised Statutes, supra, the court on page 487 of the opinion says:

"If it be shown that it is sought to take, by certain lines, a certain defined territory from one township or one village school district, or from a township school district, and to attach that territory to an adjoining school district, it would seem, as I have just stated, to follow evidently that the change that was sought to be made in the township from which the territory was to be taken would require a corresponding change in the township to which the territory was to be attached.

"There seems to be some difficulty as to what may be the result of a change like this as to the power of taxation in a school district as newly constituted, with the territory detached and the territory from the adjoining township attached to it; as to whether or not the officers of the district as so enlarged, for example, in this case, the authorities of the Chicago Junction village school district, have the authority to levy a tax upon the property of the territory which is detached from the other two townships and added to Chicago Junction school district, or whether the parts formerly belonging to the old township districts are to be taxed by the authorities of those districts, and the fund certified under the statute, so as to be expended by the authorities controlling the Chicago Junction district. We have found some difficulty about that. We are not entirely clear in our minds in regard to it."

And again at page 489 of the opinion, the court holds the proceeding to detach territory from one school district and to attach the same to another, under statutory provisions similar to the provisions contained in sections 4692 to 4696 of the General Code, inclusive, as being valid in the following language:

> " * * * and if these proceedings in the probate court be effectual to the end had in view in taking them, so that the territory detached from each of these townships adjoining Richmond and New Haven, and attached to Chicago Junction village school district, constitutes with that of the former village district, a village school district, and if it is treated in that view, then the property embraced therein may be taxed by the authorities of the Chicago Junction village school district, and it is not subject to the power of taxation by the old directors or board of education of the districts from which those parcels are detached, because they no longer form any part of them.
> "Now, although as I say we are not satisfied entirely with this view, this construction of the statute, yet our conclusion is that that is the view to be applied to this case, and it results from that that these proceedings are to be regarded as legal and valid. * * *"

In my judgment no objection can be interposed to the transfer of said territory from the Sycamore school district to the township school district on the ground that a bonded indebtedness had been created and which now exists against the first mentioned district for the reason that section 4696 of the General Code as above quoted takes care of such objection by providing for an apportionment or division of the funds or indebtedness when territory is so transferred from one school district to another.

Therefore, in direct answer to your second question, I am of the opinion that the land mentioned in your inquiry can be detached from the village school district and attached to the township school district, even though during the time that said lands were a part of the village school district the latter district created a bonded indebtedness, as stated in your inquiry, and at that time owned by the present owner of such land.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHEN THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WISH TO ESTABLISH A SOCIAL CENTER THEY MUST SUBMIT AN ESTIMATE OF THE COST TO THE BUDGET COMMISSION—THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ARE WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PAY THE SALARY OF A DIRECTOR OR OTHER NECESSARY EXPENSES FOR SUCH SOCIAL CENTER.

1. The county commissioners do not have authority to expend money in the public treasury for the purpose of establishing social centers. If the county commissioners desire to establish such institution they must at the proper time submit to the budget commission an estimate of the amount of money needed for this purpose.

2. The county commissioners have no authority to pay the salary of a director and other necessary expenses connected with these social centers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 30, 1913.

HON. CYRUS LOCHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 24, 1913, you state that your board of county commissioners has asked you for an opinion regarding House Bill 41, providing for civic and social centers; and you ask the following questions:

> (1) "Has the board of county commissioners authority to appropriate money now in the public treasury for this purpose, or will it be necessary for them to request the budget commission to levy a tax and create a fund for the payment of these expenses before any money can be expended?
> (2) "Has the board of county commissioners authority to pay the salary of a director and other necessary expenses, as light and fuel, to establish these social centers in the school houses under the control of the board of education, if the board of education gives them their consent and co-operation?"

1. An act to provide for, aid and encourage the civic, social and moral development of the local communities throughout the state is to be found in 103 Ohio Laws, 830. Section 1 provides that school houses and grounds may be used for social centers, upon application of any responsible organization, or a group of at least seven citizens. Section 2 provides for the responsibility and liability of the said organization for damages, and the payment of the actual extra expenses. With these two sections we are not especially concerned. Section 3, in part, reads as follows:

> "Boards of county commissioners shall be and are hereby authorized at their discretion to provide for the organization and maintenance of civic and social centers throughout the county, to employ an expert director who shall superintend and administer the same, and to levy a tax and create a fund for the payment of all expenses involved in the social and educational work contemplated in this act; * * *. The board of county commissioners at their option may, or, upon petition of ten per cent. of the qualified school electors of the county, shall refer the question of providing for this social, educational and recreational work to a vote of the aforesaid electors of the county or of such portions of the same as are affected by this act."

In order properly to answer your question, it is necessary to refer to those sections of the General Code governing the levying of taxes by the county commissioners.

Section 5627, General Code, imposes upon the commissioners the duty of determining the amount to be raised for ordinary county purposes, public buildings, the support of the poor, interest and principal of the public debt, and for road and bridge purposes.

Section 5630 prescribes the maximum levy that may be made for county purposes.

Section 5649-3a, in part, reads as follows:

> "On or before the first Monday in June, each year, the county commissioners of each county * * * shall submit or cause to be submitted to the county auditor an annual budget, setting forth in itemized form an estimate stating the amount of money needed for their wants for the incoming year, and for each month thereof. Such annual budgets shall specifically set forth:
> (1) "The amount to be raised for each and every purpose allowed by law for which it is desired to raise money for the incoming year."

Section 5649-3d expressly states that at the beginning of each fiscal half-year the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, from moneys known to be in the treasury from the collection of taxes and all other sources of revenue, "and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget, nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances."

These statutes make clear the fact that levies shall be made for certain specific purposes and that such purposes shall be clearly set forth. When the moneys come into the treasury such moneys shall be appropriated for the objects for which the money has to be provided, and all expenditures must be kept within such appropriation.

It will not be disputed that the only fund out of which the expenses of maintaining social and civic centers could, at the present time, possibly be paid would be the fund raised for ordinary county purposes. At the time, however, such fund was provided for, the county commissioners did not and could not take into consideration the establishment of the civic centers. Expenditures for this purpose were not in contemplation of the commissioners, nor was the organization of such centers a proper function of county government at the time the levy for ordinary county purposes was made. This would clearly indicate that the legislature did not contemplate the expense of the maintenance of these centers as one that should be paid from the levy or appropriation for ordinary county purposes. When the commissioners made such levy and appropriation they took into consideration the ordinary and necessary county expenses as they existed and were in contemplation at the time of the levy and appropriation. New objects, so foreign to usual county expenditures as are those provided for by the act in question, were not thought of, and consequently to say now that such expenditures should be made would be to infringe upon the necessary contemplated expenses which the commissioners had in view when they levied and appropriated, as we cannot assume that the commissioners extravagantly and carelessly required the taxpayers to pay for county purposes a greater amount than was necessary.

In addition to this, we find in the act referred to a clear and manifest expression of legislative intent that these centers should not be maintained out of the general county fund, in that the act itself unequivocally provides for the levying of a tax and the creation of a fund for the payment of the expenses of the social and educational work contemplated in the act. This should demonstrate beyond cavil that the legislature has treated this work as something entirely distinct from an ordinary county purpose, and that in providing for a special tax and a separate fund for such purpose, the legislators did not intend that any of the moneys in the general revenue fund of the county should be used for this purpose. In this connection I beg to call your attention to an opinion of this department to you, dated June 28, 1913, relative to the Mothers' Pension Law. This opinion seems to me, in reasoning, fully to cover the question you now ask, and to determine it in the manner in which I have here held, viz.: a board of county commissioners has no authority to appropriate money at present in the public treasury for the purpose of providing for social centers. This, of course, carries with it the implication that if the county commissioners desire to establish such centers they must, at the proper time, submit to the budget commission an estimate of the amount of money needed for this purpose.

2. In view of what has already been said, in answer to your first question, I am of the opinion that the second question must be answered in the negative. If the county commissioners have no authority to appropriate money for the purposes referred to, they have no authority to pay the salary of a director and the other necessary expenses of establishing social centers in school houses.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE A CHIEF OF POLICE GOES FROM OHIO TO INDIANA AND MAKES AN ARREST FOR NON-SUPPORT UNDER PROVISION OF SECTION 12970, GENERAL CODE, THE COST INCURRED IN MAKING THIS ARREST MAY NOT BE PAID FROM THE COUNTY TREASURY.

Where a charge is filed against a man for non-support of his minor children under provision of section 12970, General Code, and the chief of police from Ohio arrests a man in the state of Indiana, the expense of the chief of police in making the arrest cannot be legally paid from the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1913.

HON. W. J. SCHWENCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—As previously acknowledged, I have your favor of July 22, 1913, in which you ask opinion of me as follows:

> "During the month of May an affidavit was filed with the mayor of this city charging the defendant with non-support of his minor children. This affidavit was filed by his wife, who was insolvent. The warrant on the affidavit was issued to the chief of police, Trautman, who subsequently arrested this party at Elwood in the state of Indiana. Thereupon the chief of police went to Elwood, and the defendant returned with him without a requisition. Thereupon the defendant was bound over to the probate court, and when arraigned, he plead guilty to the charge of non-support. Thereupon the probate court sentenced him to serve time in the work-house, which sentence was suspended upon the condition that he pay the sum of $15.00 per month for the support of his minor children, and to pay the costs of prosecution.
> "The chief of police used his own private money to make the trip to Elwood, Indiana, and return, and the question now is, can the chief be reimbursed out of the county treasury, or is he compelled to wait until the defendant has paid all the costs in the case ?"

You do not state specifically whether the charge filed against the defendant in the mayor's court was one under the provisions of section 13008, General Code—a felony —or one under the provisions of section 12970, General Code—a misdemeanor. Inasmuch, however, as it appears from your statement that the defendant was bound over to the probate court of the county, which court exercises original jurisdiction in making final disposition of the case, I infer that the offense charged was a misdemeanor only; for as appears from the provisions of section 13424 and 13425, General Code, it is only as to misdemeanors that the probate court has concurrent original jurisdiction with the court of common pleas.

As to persons charged with felonies, who have fled, sections 2491 and 13493, General Code, make appropriate provisions for payment out of the county treasury of the necessary expenses of the officer or authorized agent returning them to justice. Sections 3015, 3016 and 3017, General Code, further provide as follows:

> "Section 3015. The county commissioners may allow and pay the necessary expense incurred by an officer in the pursuit of a person charged with felony, who has fled the country.
> "Section 3016. In felonies, when the defendant is convicted the costs of the justice of peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury. In all cases when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction is had, such costs are paid from the county treasury.

"Section 3017. In no other case whatever shall any costs be paid from the state or county treasury to a justice of the peace, police judge or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police or constable."

From a consideration of the sections of the General Code before noted, it is apparent that they do not authorize payment out of the county treasury of the expenses of an officer in the pursuit and arrest of a person charged with a misdemeanor; nor do I find any statute which does so. Section 3019, General Code, which, as originally enacted, was part of the same act with sections 3015, 3016 and 3017, already noted, provides:

"In felonies wherein the state fails, and in misdemeanors wherein the defendent proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make an allowance to any such officers in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowance to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars."

As to this provision, however, I note that it has been held that a chief of police is not entitled to fees for the service of processes issued by a mayor in state cases.

City of Delaware vs. Matthews, 13 C. C. (N. S.) 539.
Matthews vs. City of Delaware, 82 O. S. 423.

It follows, of course, that if the chief of police is not entitled to any fees for any particular service rendered by him, that section 3019 does not confer any authority upon the county commissioners to make any allowance to such officer in place of fees. Aside from this, however, it is apparent that expenses incurred by an officer in pursuing and arresting a person charged with a crime, are not "fees" in the sense of the term as employed in section 3019, but when allowed and paid to an officer are in addition to the fees to which he is entitled. In so far as the fees of a chief of police are covered by section 3019, I conclude the fees therein mentioned are such as are provided in section 4534, General Code, which provides:

"The fees of the chief of police or his deputies in all cases excepting those arising out of violations of ordinances, shall be the same as those allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases."

The fees of constables and sheriffs in criminal cases are provided for by sections 3347 and 2845, General Code, respectively, neither of which make any provision as to expenses incurred in the pursuit and arrest of persons charged with crime. Therefore, aside from the fact that your letter to me does not state that the defendant is insolvent, I am of the opinion that section 3019, General Code, is of no assistance to the chief of police mentioned with respect to his right to be reimbursed for his expenses from the county treasury.

Section 13502, General Code, provides as follows:

"If the accused flee from justice, the officer holding the warrant may pursue and arrest him in any county of the state and convey him before the magistrate or court issuing the warrant, or other magistrate or court of the county having cognizance of the case."

I note from your statement, however, that the arrest in this case was made in the state of Indiana. In the case of Smith vs. Commissioners of Portage County, 9 O. 25, where the court had under consideration the claim of an officer against the county on account of his services and expenses in making an arrest, on warrant, in another state, to wit, the state of Indiana, it held that the services rendered by the officer under such circumstances were both voluntary and without authority of law, and presented no legal foundation for an implied promise to pay for them.

As to the present inquiry, however, it is enough to know that there is no statute which authorizes the payment of the officer's expenses in making the arrest in question, from the county treasury. Section 4214, General Code, provides that the city council shall fix the salaries and compensation of all officers and on familiar principles, the salary or compensation so fixed for any officer is deemed to be in full for all services rendered by him except in so far as is otherwise provided by law; and if no provision is made by statute for paying out of the public treasury the expenses of an officer, incurred in the discharge of his duty, they cannot be so paid. (Richardson vs. State ex rel., 66 O. S. 108).

If, therefore, I am correct in my inference that the charge against the defendant was a misdemeanor, I am of the opinion that the expenses of the chief of police in making the arrest in question cannot be legally paid from the county treasury.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE TERM "AS OTHER COUNTY EXPENSES" WHEN APPLIED TO ELECTION EXPENSES MEANS THAT SUCH EXPENSES ARE PAYABLE FROM THE COUNTY TREASURY UPON THE APPROVAL OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The use of the phrase "as other county expenses" as applied to election expenses means that election expenses not otherwise provided for shall be paid from the county treasury upon the order or approval of the county commissioners in the same manner they allow and pay other claims against the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1913.

HON. HUGH R. GILMORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 19, 1913, you inquire as follows:

"I desire to call your attention to an opinion given by you January 31, 1911, to Hon. A. E. Jacobs, City Solicitor, Wellston, Ohio, and reported in your 1911-1912 reports, volume 2, page 1504, relative to election expenses and ask your further opinion as to what you mean by the term 'as other county expenses.' In the next to the last paragraph of your published opinion you say in part 'provide that all expenses arising from such election shall be paid out of the county treasury as other county expenses.'"

The opinion to which you refer considered what political subdivision should pay certain election expenses and not necessarily the manner of paying or allowing the same. The words quoted from the opinion allow the provisions of section 5052, General Code. Said section provides:

> "All expenses of printing and distributing ballots, cards of explanation to officers of the election and voters, blanks, and other proper and necessary expenses of any general or special election, including compensation of precinct election officers, shall be paid from the county treasury, as other county expenses."

What is the proper construction of the phrase "as other county expenses"? The same phrase is used in section 4821, General Code, which reads:

> "All proper and necessary expenses of the board of deputy state supervisors shall be paid from the county treasury as other county expenses, and the county commissioners shall make the necessary levy to provide therefor. In counties containing annual general registration cities, such expenses shall include expenses duly authorized and incurred in the investigation and prosecution of offenses against laws relating to the registration of electors, the right of suffrage and the conduct of elections."

It is specifically provided by statute that certain items of expense of elections shall be paid from the county treasury upon vouchers of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections and certified by the chief deputy and clerk thereof.

For example, section 4822, General Code, provides:

> "Each deputy state supervisor shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of four dollars for each election precinct in his respective county. The compensation so allowed such officers during any year shall be determined by the number of precincts in such county at the November election of the next preceding year. The compensation paid to each of such deputy state supervisors under this section shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars each year and the compensation paid to the clerk shall in no case be less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars each year. Such compensation shall be paid quarterly from the general revenue fund of the county upon vouchers of the board, made and certified by the chief deputy and the clerk thereof. Upon presentation of any such voucher, the county auditor shall issue his warrant upon the county treasurer for the amount thereof, and the treasurer shall pay it."

The provisions of section 4821 and 4822, General Code, supra, were formerly parts of the same statute, to wit, section 2966-4, revised statutes, and said section contained the two methods of paying election expenses, that is, part were to be paid "as other county expenses" and part upon order of the board of elections.

If it had been intended that the general expense of elections provided for in section 4821, General Code, should be paid from the county treasury as other election expenses are paid therefrom, the legislature would not have used the phrase "as other county expenses," but would rather have used the phrase "as other election expenses."

The use of the phrase "as other county expenses" means that election expenses not otherwise provided for shall be paid from the county treasury upon the order or approval of the board of county commissioners, as they allow other claims against the county.

Section 2460, General Code, provides the manner of allowing claims against the county, as follows:

"No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim. No public money shall be disbursed by the county commissioners, or any of them, but shall be disbursed by the county treasurer, upon the warrant of the county auditor, specifying the name of the party entitled thereto, on what account, and upon whose allowance, if not fixed by law.

Therefore, all proper and necessary expense of elections not otherwise specifically provided for, are payable from the county treasury upon the approval of the county commissioners.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE A FAMILY HAS BEEN AFFLICTED WITH SMALLPOX AND THE CHILDREN OF THIS FAMILY HAVE BEEN KEPT OUT OF SCHOOL THEY MAY RE-ENTER SCHOOL ON RECEIVING WRITTEN PERMISSION FROM THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Where a family has been afflicted with smallpox and all the members who have contracted the disease have recovered, and the board of health is of the opinion that those who have been exposed will not contract the disease, and that all danger of spreading the disease is passed, the children of such family may re-enter school on receiving written permission from the board of health.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 3, 1913.

HON. J. B. TEMPLETON, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 1st you state:

"In Franklin township of this county the local board of health have raised a quarantine on a family that have been afflicted with the smallpox. The mother and all the children have had the disease which lasted in the family for several weeks. The father being present all the time with the family and never having contracted the disease. The place was under quarantine for seven weeks and more than twenty days had elapsed from the time the last child had the disease until the premises were disinfected, which was thoroughly done by a competent, practicing pyhsician, and all of the subjects were given a bath and hair washed in chloride solution.

"On last Thursday the quarantine was raised and this disinfecting took place and the children sent to school. The teacher would not receive them into the school, basing his claim under section 4430 of the General Code of Ohio that seventeen days must elapse after such disinfection until the children would be admitted into the schools.

"I contend that if the teacher receives written notice of the raising of the quarantine from the board of health, accompanied by a certificate of the attending physician that such disinfection has been complete, and that no danger exists of the spread of the disease that he must allow the children admission into the school. The father of said children being practically immune from the disease after so long a time since the last child became sound and well. Of course the pyhsician's statement would cover that."

Section 4430 of the General Code is as follows:

"Each physician attending a person affected with any such disease shall use such precautionary measures to prevent the spread of the disease as is required by the board of health. No person quarantined by a board of health on account of having a contagious disease, or for having been exposed thereto, shall leave such quarantined house or place without the written permission of the board of health, and where other inmates of such house have been exposed to and are liable to become ill of any such disease, for a period thereafter counting from the completion of disinfection, as follows. In diphtheria or membranous croup, fourteen days; in smallpox, seventeen days; in scarlet fever, ten days; in cholera or yellow fever, seven days; in typhus fever, twenty-one days. In cases of measles, chickenpox and whooping cough, or either of them, the board of health may require the same report of cases and may enforce the same quarantine and other preventative measures as are provided for in this chapter in cases of scarlet fever or diphtheria."

I am of the opinion that the language of this statute sustains your position. The statute prohibits any person from leaving a quarantined house without the written permission from the board of health, and this prohibition includes those who have had the contagious disease as well as those who have been exposed thereto. The statute then extends a further prohibition to other imnates of such house as have been exposed to and are liable to become ill of any such disease for a period, in a case of smallpox, of seventeen days. Whether an inmate who has been exposed to such disease is liable to become ill of the disease is undoubtedly left to the judgment of the board of health, and such board should guide its conduct in the granting of permission to leave the house in the manner required by the statute.

In the case presented the facts clearly establish that the only person who was an inmate of the house and who was exposed to the disease may be considered immune and in no danger of becoming ill of that disease. I am of the opinion, therefore, that the seventeen day limitation does not apply in this case if the board of health is of the opinion that the only exposed inmate, viz.: the father, is not liable to become ill of the disease, being immune therefrom.

The teacher is clearly not permitted to judge of the facts and should receive the children into the school, provided the permission of the board of health is obtained.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

THE COUNTY SHERIFF HAS NO AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY A CHAUFFEUR AT THE EXPENSE OF THE COUNTY.

There is no authority conferred upon the sheriff by section 2927 to employ a chauffeur or care-taker for his automobile at the expense of the county, even though the automobile is used by the sheriff in the discharge of his official duties. The payment of such expense out of the county treasury is illegal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1913.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 8th in which you inquire:

> "Are the county commissioners authorized by section 2997, General Code, to pay out of the county treasury, a salary to a chauffeur or care-taker of an automobile owned by the sheriff, the same being used, at least in part, in the discharge of the official duties of the sheriff?"

Section 2997, General Code, provides:

> "In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare, and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

There is no authority conferred by the foregoing section upon a sheriff to employ a chauffeur or care-taker for his automobile at the expense of the county, even though the automobile is used in the discharge of official duties.

I am therefore of the opinion that payment out of the county treasury for such purpose would be illegal.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TRAVELING EXPENSES OF ENGINEERS INCURRED IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF A JOINT COUNTY DITCH SHALL BE ALLOWED BY THE COMMISSIONERS OF EACH COUNTY IN JOINT SESSION.

In joint county ditch proceedings the traveling expenses of those employed in the construction of such ditch shall be allowed by the county commissioners of the counties jointly. The commissioners should investigate the amounts charged in the bill in order to see that no illegal expense is allowed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 29, 1913.

HON. JAMES A. TOBIN, Prosecuting Attorney, Lancaster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 27th you say:

"That the commissioners of Fairfield and Perry counties are entertaining joint proceedings for the deepening, widening, etc., of a natural watercourse, to wit: Rush Creek, the proceedings being had under the chapter governing joint county ditches.

"Engineers were appointed by the board in joint session, Fairfield county selecting its own county surveyor and Perry county appointing one from Newark, Licking county (instead of its own county surveyor).

"Thereupon, these engineers proceeded upon the route of the improvement, and under the plea of not being able to secure boarding in any of the nearby towns set up housekeeping for themselves, and when their bill for services was presented to the commissioners for the first twelve days of their services the following items appeared thereon:

One tent	$ 21.00
Cooking utensils	4.45
Railroad fare	11.25
Groceries	45.00
Ten cots	17.50
Hotel bill for draftsman	6.25
12 days automobile hire	48.00

"This last item was for auto for the engineer from Newark to come and go to his work each day he was employed."

And you ask whether these items may be permitted as legal expenses. Sections 6563-38 and 6563-44 of the General Code are as follows:

"Section 6563-38: All of the costs and expenses connected with ordering and granting said improvement shall be taken as a part of the cost thereof and shall be included in the amount ordered to be paid by each county, except their costs of arbitration as provided in section 29.

"Section 6563-44: Said surveyors named in section 8 (G. C. Sec. 6563-8) shall meet with the joint board of county commissioners whenever required by said board and said surveyors and auditors shall be paid their necessary expenses while employed under this act and shall be allowed the same fees as are allowed in ditch work generally and said commissioners shall receive the sum of three dollars a day and their actual expenses while employed under this bill."

Under the plan provided by these statutes the cost of the proceedings is proportioned among the counties, either by agreement of the various county boards or by decision of arbitrators appointed by the governor. Under section 6563-38, above quoted, the costs of surveyors' expenses are proportioned in like manner. Under section 6563-42, General Code, the joint board of commissioners is given power to pay the various costs and expenses from the moneys received from the sale of bonds in the respective counties; the moneys to be paid from the county funds in the order provided by section 6563-43, General Code.

Under section 6563-44, above quoted, surveyors are allowed for necessary expenses when employed under the act. Under the statutes referred to the joint board of county commissioners are alone empowered to allow these expenses, and are therefore constituted the tribunal in whose discretion rests the allowance of such claims. Whether or not claims for expenses are reasonably necessary is a question depending for its solution upon the judgment of the joint board of county commissioners.

It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rules for the allowance of such expenses. It is well settled that a board permitted to rule upon the same is vested with a wide discretion, and that the decision of such board will not be interfered with in such cases in the absence of clear and flagrant evidence of abuse of such discretion.

The facts stated in your letter do not make it possible to even venture a suggestion as to the reasonability or necessity of the expenses incurred. Whether or not the items set out were necessary expenses depends upon the surrounding facts and circumstances, to wit: the difficulty of procuring board in the nearby township; the distance of the nearest place to procure board; and the comparative expense of adopting other methods of support while engaged in the work.

My opinion is, therefore, that the solution of your question rests primarily with the joint board of county commissioners. They may allow or disallow the claims, as they judge them reasonable or necessary under the circumstances.

There is a clear and definite limitation upon the exercise of this discretion, however, which must not be overlooked, namely: that only such expenses may be allowed as are reasonably necessary. The purchase of a tent and sleeping and cooking equipments, and the hire of automobiles are circumstances which might well raise such doubt in the mind of a supervisory authority as would impel close scrutiny. On their face they present a strong suggestion of unreasonability. Circumstances might be imagined where such expenses would be the most economical and efficient, and therefore reasonably necessary. Whether such circumstances exist in this case, however, the facts presented do not disclose. At any rate, I am of the opinion that the question of their allowance rests, first of all, with the county commissioners, under a careful scrutiny and investigation of the surrounding facts and circumstances. Until they have acted in the matter it would be impossible to in any way control the allowance.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

IN TRANSCRIBING RECORDS IN THE RECORDER'S OFFICE A PERSON SHOULD BE HIRED FOR THIS PURPOSE AND PAID DIRECTLY FROM THE COUNTY TREASURY AS OTHER CLERKS AND RECORDERS ARE PAID.

When the county commissioners so direct the records of Erie county now recorded in Huron county may be transcribed by some person appointed or hired by the recorder for this purpose. The person performing such work is to be paid from the county treasury as other employes in such offices are paid. It is not necessary that the county recorder personally do this work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1913.

HON. HENRY HART, Prosecuting Attorney, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 4, 1913, you state that prior to 1838 Huron and Erie counties were one, and the records pertaining to the latter were, prior to that date, recorded in Huron county. Erie county now desires to have copies of the records and maps which were recorded in Huron county before that time. You inquire if it is necessary that the county recorder personally do this work; or may he employ some one to do it for him?

It is elementary that the ministerial work of an official may be performed by one employed by him for that purpose, and consequently you are correct in your assumption that the county recorder may hire some one to copy the record. From your letter, however, I infer that you are of the opinion that the recorder might pay such clerk or employe the fees which the statute fixes for the performance of this work, and consequently I desire to call your attention to certain provisions of the statute concerning this phase of the question.

Section 2780, General Code, provides in part that:

> "For services directed to be performed by the county commissioners in transcribing the records of other counties * * * the recorder shall receive not exceeding six cents for each hundred words, each figure to count as one work for transcribing defaced or injured records of plats, not exceeding fifty cents for the first six lines and three cents for each additional line. * * * All compensation provided for in this section shall be paid out of the county treasury upon the allowance of the county commissioners and the warrant of the county auditor and shall be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the recorder's fee fund. The commissioners shall allow the recorder his necessary expenses in transcribing records in other counties."

The clear and express intent of this statute is to require the payment of these fees into the county treasury to the credit of the recorder's fee fund, and therefore the recorder is not entitled to these fees in addition to his salary. From this it necessarily follows that he could not pay this money to him who should do the work for him. This is in conformity with section 2996, General Code, which is to the effect that the salary allowed the recorder shall be in lieu of all fees and other perquisites.

Section 2980, General Code, provides for the filing with the county commissioners of a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants, clerks and other employes; whereupon, the county commissioners shall fix the aggregate sum to be expended for such deputies, etc.

Section 2980-1, General Code, limits the aggregate sum so to be fixed by the county commissioners to an amount to be ascertained by computing thirty per cent. on the first two thousand dollars or fractional part thereof, forty per cent. on the next eight thousand dollars or fractional part thereof, and eighty-five per cent. on all over ten thousand dollars, of the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected for the use of the county in such office, for official services during the year ending September 30th next preceding the time of fixing such aggregate sum.

This would indicate that the purpose of paying the fees you have referred to into the county treasury is to authorize them to be used as a basis for the increasing of clerk hire, etc.

Therefore, it would seem proper for the recorder to take into consideration, in filing his statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended, the amount that he estimates will be necessary for the payment of the clerk who transcribes the Huron county records. Should this allowance be insufficient for that purpose, he can proceed under section 2980-1, General Code, to make application to a judge of the common pleas court for additional allowance. This is in harmony with section 2981, which authorizes the recorder to appoint and employ necessary assistants, clerks, employes, etc., and fix their compensation.

I would recommend, that the employe who is to do the work be hired by the recorder for that purpose, and that he be paid directly out of the county treasury, as the other clerks of the recorder are paid, and that the commissioners make allowance for this purpose, as provided in the foregoing statute.

You must remember that in writing the foregoing opinion I am doing so upon the assumption that the county commissioners have directed the recorder to transcribe these records. If they have not done so, he is not authorized to have the transcript made.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

JOINT TOWNSHIP DITCHES MAY BE RE-APPORTIONED AS OFTEN AS THE COUNTY DITCH SUPERVISORS DEEM IT NECESSARY IN ORDER TO COMPLETE A GENERAL CLEANING.

Township ditch supervisors may re-apportion township ditches that have been apportioned. This general apportionment may be made as often as the county ditch supervisors deem it reasonably necessary in order to complete a general cleaning. The procedure outlined in section 6393, General Code, for apportionment in two or more townships applies also to one single township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1913.

HON. E. L. SAVAGE, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 8th you request my opinion as follows:

> "Owing to certain conditions relative to joint township ditches located in this county, that have heretofore been apportioned by the township ditch supervisors, acting jointly, there has now arisen the question whether said township ditch supervisors may reapportion such joint township ditches. And, as a corollary thereto, the further question has been presented whether a township ditch supervisor having once apportioned the township ditch can again reapportion the same.

"These questions have been presented to this office and we are in doubt what construction should be placed upon section 6691 of the code and the other sections of the statute governing the duties of township ditch supervisors; and we will greatly appreciate the favor of your opinion upon the questions presented."

I am enclosing a copy of an opinion rendered by this department to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, under date of June 4, 1913, which is quite relevant to the question presented by you. In that opinion I held that the proceedings prescribed by section 6691, et seq, General Code, for the apportionment of township ditches by the township ditch supervisor for the purpose of cleaning said ditches, are available only for the purpose of completing a general cleaning, and that such apportionment affords no authority for compelling individual owners to clean or keep in repair the apportionment allotted to them after said general cleaning has been completed in accordance with the statutes set out.

I can find nothing in said statutes to prevent township ditch supervisors from making such general apportionment as often as it may be deemed reasonably necessary to complete such a general cleaning.

The procedure outlined in section 6693, General Code, for apportionment in two or more townships, being the same as that prescribed for apportionment in a single township, the answer would be the same in either case. I believe that the enclosed opinion will afford an explanation to the answers here given to your questions.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

AN OFFICIAL STENOGRAPHER RECEIVING AN ANNUAL SALARY IS NOT ENTITLED TO EXTRA COMPENSATION FOR TAKING TESTIMONY BEFORE A REFEREE WHERE A CASE IS REFERRED TO A REFEREE BY THE COURT.

Where a case is referred to a referee and tried and an official stenographer who is receiving an annual salary, is called to take the testimony, the case is one before the court and the stenographer is not entitled to a per diem for this employment. This per diem of $4.00 per day as provided in section 1549, General Code, is to be collected and paid into the general fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 15, 1913.

HON. L. T. CROMLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 11, 1913, in which you inquire whether an official stenographer who is under an annual salary, payable from the county treasury, and who takes the testimony in a cause sent to a referee, is entitled to $4.00 per day or any other compensation for the time so served, and in reply desire to say: Section 1549, General Code, to which you refer, reads:

"In every case so reported, there shall be taxed for each day's service of the official or assistant stenographers a fee of four dollars, to be collected as other costs in the case. The fees so collected shall be paid quarterly by the clerk of the court in which such case was tried, into the treasury of such county, and credited to the general fund."

Section 1548, the next preceding section and referred to in section 1549, General Code, reads:

> "Upon the trial of a case in any of such courts, if either party to the suit, or his attorney, requests the services of a stenographer, the trial judge shall grant the request, or such judge may order a full report of the testimony or other proceedings, in which case such stenographer shall cause accurate shorthand notes of the oral testimony or other oral proceedings to be taken, which notes shall be filed in the office of the official stenographer and carefully preserved."

From these sections it is apparent that in all cases reported by the stenographer a fee of $4.00 per day is to be taxed as part of the costs in each case.

Section 1550, General Code, provides that the court shall fix the compensation of stenographers and also that, "such compensation shall be in place of all per diem compensation in such courts."

Section 11475, General Code, reads:

> "All or any of the issues in the action or proceeding, whether of fact or law, or both, may be referred by the court, or a judge thereof in vacation, upon the written consent of the parties, or upon their oral consent in court entered upon the journal."

Section 11478, General Code, reads:

> "A trial by referees shall be conducted as if by the court; and in like manner, they may summon and compel the attendance of witnesses, administer necessary oaths, and grant adjournments."

Section 11479, General Code, reads:

> "Referees must state the facts found, and conclusions of law, separately. Their decision must be given, and may be excepted to and reviewed, as in a trial by the court. Their report upon the whole issue shall stand as the decision of the court, and judgment shall be entered thereon as if the court had tried the action."

Section 11480, General Code, reads:

> "When the reference is only to report facts, the report of referees shall have the effect of a special verdict in the action."

Section 11481, General Code, reads:

> "If the court so directs, but not otherwise, referees shall reduce the testimony of witnesses in either form of reference to writing, and have each witness subscribe to his testimony."

From these sections, I think it clear that the trial by the referee is one of substitution for the court in all referred cases. And when the stenographer acts in a referred case, the action is for the court, just as much as in cases triable by the court, whether in equity, or at law and a jury is waived.

I am of the opinion that when a case is referred to a referee and tried and a stenographer is called to take the testimony, that the case is one before the court and the stenographer is not entitled to a per diem for time employed, notwithstanding the fact that under section 1549, General Code, four dollars for each day's service is to be taxed as part of the costs, "to be collected as other costs in the case."

Under section 11486, General Code, the compensation of the referee is made part of the costs of a referred case and is payable to the referee when collected while under section 1549, General Code, the per diem of the stenographer is, when collected, to be paid into the county treasury, and credited to the general fund.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE A VILLAGE ISSUES BONDS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE STREET AND INCLUDES IN THIS BOND ISSUE THE COST OF PAVING BETWEEN THE RAILS OF A TRACTION RAILWAY, THE INTEREST ON SO MUCH OF THE BOND ISSUE COVERING THIS PAVING MUST BE COLLECTED IF POSSIBLE FROM THE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Where a village in improving its streets by assessment on the benefited property makes a single issue of bonds in anticipation of collection of assessments but includes in the assessment the cost of paving between the rails of an electric railway, which under contract between the railway and the city is to be paid for by the railway company, and the city has sold the bonds and must now pay interest on them, it must recover this interest, if it can, from the railway company itself for so much of the amount as represents interest on the bonds issued covering the property of the railway company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 29, 1913.

HON. C. C. CRABBE, Prosecuting Attorney, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 5th wherein you state facts which raise the following question:

> "If a village in improving its streets by assessment on the benefited property, etc., makes a single issue of bonds in anticipation of collection of assessments, but includes in the 'assessment,' so in theory anticipated, the cost of paving between the rails of an electric railroad, which under a contract between the village and the railroad company, is to be ultimately paid by the latter, should the interest on the entire issue of bonds be included in the amount assessed upon the owners of abutting property, or should the interest on so much of the issue as anticipates the payment of the obligation of the railroad company be omitted from such assessment and charged against the railroad company?"

You refer in your letter to my opinion of July 12, 1913, addressed to Hon. Clinton H. Stoll, village solicitor of London. The question submitted by Mr. Stoll was quite different from the one submitted by you. I assumed at the out-set of the opinion given to Mr. Stoll that the entire bond issue concerning which he inquired was in "anticipation of the collection of the special assessments alone, and that the money to meet the village's * * * costs * * * is separately provided for by a different bond issue."

The question which you now submit is to be answered by considering whether or not the portion of the improvement represented by the paving between the rails is a part of the improvement, the cost of which may be assessed against abutting owners. Of course it is assumed that the railroad company is to pay this obligation and the question just suggested must be amplified by the further assumption that the railroad company is, so to speak, an abutting owner and its obligation to the village may be enforced by assessments. This assumption is erroneous. The subject matter of the question is governed by section 3776, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The council may require any part or all of the track, between the rails of any street railroad constructed within the corporate limits, to be paved with stone, gravel, boulders, or wooden or asphaltic pavement, as may be deemed proper, but without the corporate limits, paving between the rails with stone, boulders, wooden or asphaltic pavement shall not be required."

Under this statute, or rather under a franchise ordinance of similar import, it is held in Columbus vs. Street Railroad Co., 45 O. S. 98, that the municipal corporation had the right from time to time to provide for the improvement of a street in which a street railroad was located and to require the street railroad company to pay for that portion of the cost thereof represented by the cost of paving between the rails; and that if the company failed to make the improvement itself when called upon to do so by the council of the municipal corporation the latter might do the work and charge the cost thereof to the company; and that the charge so made could be enforced by action at law.

The case of Cleveland vs. Railroad Co., 4 Dec. Re-print, 315, holds that the municipal corporation may enforce its authority under section 3776, General Code, by levying assessments on the property of the railroad, on the theory that the same constitutes "lands abutting, adjacent and contiguous or other specially benefited lands." Ordinarily I am disposed to follow the decisions of our lower courts, but in this particular instance I feel impelled to deviate from this rule as to the decision last above cited or at least to apply the decision in a very qualified way. The very facts which you state show the reason which leads me to this conclusion. It seems that after the village's bonds had been issued and after the assessments had been made, the street railroad company engaged contractors, as it had the right to do, and did its own paving, thus leaving for solution the question of the interest on the bonds which the village had issued in anticipation of so much of the assessment as was charged against the railroad company.

The very fact that a railroad company has a right under section 3776 to do the paving itself precludes the thought that council may include the charge against it in the assessment generally made upon abutting property to meet the expense of the whole improvement, which may be levied before the work is done. If any assessment is to be made on account of the failure of the railroad company to discharge the duty cast upon it by action of council under section 3776 the procedure should at least be similar to that provided in section 3857, General Code, for the construction of sidewalks. This section provides as follows:

> "If such sidewalks, curbing or gutters are not constructed within fifteen days, or not repaired within five days from the service of notice, or completion of the publication, the director of public service in cities may do or have it done at the expense of the owner, and all such expenses shall be assessed on all the property abounding or abutting thereon. Such assessments shall be collected in the same manner with a penalty of five per cent. and interest for failure to pay at the time fixed by the assessing ordinance, as in case of improvements."

The fact that there is nowhere any such provision as this with respect to assessing street railroad property for its part of the costs of paving between the rails militates against the correctness of the decision in Cleveland vs. Railroad Co., supra.

Furthermore, ordinary abutting property is assessed in proportion to the benefits or according to the foot front, or in proportion to the tax valuation, and the public is required to pay one-fiftieth of the cost and the cost of intersections. This, however, is not the case as to a railroad company. It is not assessed as benefited property if it is assessed at all; its assessment is not limited to the benefits conferred, nor is it in proportion to the tax value; nor is it in proportion to the "feet front;" nor does the city bear any part of the cost of the improvement charged against it. In fact the paving which a street railroad company is required to do is no part of the paving which the city does. That is, it may be no part of that paving because the railroad company may choose to do the paving itself.

Accepting, however, the decision in Cleveland vs. Railroad Co., supra, for what it is worth and assuming the right of council to collect an obligation created by the failure of the company to do its own paving, and its subsequent failure to pay for the paving between the rails when done by the municipal corporation, I am, nevertheless, of the opinion that the village's right to assess does not arise until the work has been done and the railroad company has refused to pay for it. There is nothing in the Cleveland case inconsistent with this conclusion. I am further of the opinion that the paving between the rails is no part of the improvement for which assessments generally are levied, but is a separate and distinct improvement so far as methods of paying for it are concerned.

From these conclusions it follows that even if the village had the right to assess the street railroad company's property, and to issue bonds in anticipation of such assessment, the issuance of such bonds would have to be made separately from the issuance of bonds in anticipation of the remaining assessments.

In the case submitted by you this does not seem to have been done, yet under the facts as they have actually arisen, it would be most equitable, at least, to separate the bonds issued in anticipation of the payment of the alleged assessment by the street railroad company from the remainder of the bonds if this can be done.

At all events, I am clearly of the opinion, in direct answer to your question, that the interest on so much of the bonds as anticipates the collection of so-called assessments upon the property of the railroad company, which assessments can never be collected because that work has been done, and the expenditure on account of which will never be made by the village for the same reason, cannot be lawfully included as one of the items of cost entering into the assessments made against other abutting property. If the village has sold the bonds and must now pay interest on them by virtue of following the procedure which I have outlined, it must recover this interest, if it can, from the railroad company itself.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A PUPIL RESIDING IN ONE DISTRICT AND ATTENDING SCHOOL IN ANOTHER MAY NOT CONTINUE TO DO SO AND DEMAND TRANSPORTATION AFTER THE SCHOOL IN THE DISTRICT HAS BEEN CENTRALIZED.

Under the provisions of sections 7735 and 7736, General Code, a pupil residing in a district and attending schools of another district, under section 7735, General Code, cannot continue to attend the schools of said latter school district and demand transportation after the schools of the district which such pupils have been attending have been centralized, and transportation provided for.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 13, 1913.

HON. HUGH R. GILMORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 19, 1913, you submitted the following request for an opinion, to wit:

> "Under sections 7735 and 7731, General Code, may a pupil, residing in a district and attending the schools of another district under authority of said section 7735, General Code, continue to attend the schools of said latter district and demand transportation, after the schools of the district such pupil has been attending have been centralized and transportation provided for; and will the board of the resident district of such pupil be compelled to pay such pupil's tuition?"

You further state in substance in your inquiry, that the school which the pupil has been attending and which is now centralized, is not a "nearer" school than the school which is located in the pupil's residence school district.

Section 7731, of the General Code, provides for the centralization of schools of a township, as follows:

> "No township schools shall be centralized under the next preceding section by the board of education of the township until after sixty days notice has been given by the board, such notices to be posted in a conspicuous place in each subdistrict of the township. When transportation of pupils is provided for, the conveyance must pass within at least the distance of one-half of a mile from the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half of a mile from the public road. But transportation for pupils living less than one and one-half miles, by the most direct public highway, from the school house shall be optional with the board of education."

Section 7735, of the General Code, provides that pupils living more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned may attend a "nearer school, as follows:

> "When pupils live more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned in the district where they reside, they may attend a nearer school in the same district or if there be none nearer therein, then the nearest school in another school district, in all grades below the high school. In such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement to that effect. But a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside. Nothing herein shall require the consent of the board of education of the district where the pupils reside, to such attendance."

Section 7736, of the General Code, specifies how the tuition of such pupils shall be determined and paid, as follows:

"Such tuition shall be paid from either the tuition or the contingent funds and the amount per capita must be ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the elementary schools of the district attended, exclusive of permanent improvements and repairs, by the total enrollment in the elementary schools of the district, such amount to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of a month will create a liability for the whole month."

Section 7737 provides that when the schools of a district are centralized, etc., the provisions of the next two preceding sections shall not apply, as follows:

"When the schools of a district are centralized or transportation of pupils provided, the provisions of the next two preceding sections shall not apply."

In construing said section 7735, of the General Code, (4022-a B. R. S.) the court in the case of Boyce vs. Board of Education, 76 O. S. 365 held as follows:

"Section 4022-a, revised statutes, does not require the board of education of a school district to admit children to a school outside of the district in which they reside unless the school in their own district is more than a mile and a half from their residence and more remote from their residence than the school to which admission is sought."

The plaintiff in error in the above case brought suit in the court of common pleas for a writ of mandamus to compel the defendants in error to admit his children of school age to the school located in Mount Carmel special school district. He alleged that the children resided with him in Beechwood special school district in Union township; that there is but one school in the district in which he resides, which is located more than a mile and a half from the relator's home and that is the school to which his children are assigned. He further alleges that the school controlled by the defendants is the nearest school to his residence outside of his own school district and in an adjoining school district, and the petition of the plaintiff in error admitted that the school to which his children are assigned is nearer his residence than that to which he sought to have them admitted. In the opinion of the above entitled case, the court held as follows:

"Notwithstanding a manifest want of care to express with precision the purpose of this legislation it is quite clear that the legislature did not contemplate any of the reasons assigned in the petition as a sufficient cause for the transfer of attendance by children from the school in the district in which they reside to that of another district. It is equally clear from the language which the legislature has employed that the only purpose to be accomplished by the section is to relieve school children from the necessity of attending a school in their own district which is more than one mile and a half from their residence if there is a nearer school in another district. Since the petition admits that the school which is under the control of the defendants is more remote from the residence of the relator than is the school of the district in which he resides, the circuit court correctly determined that the statute does not authorize the transfer."

It is disclosed in your letter of inquiry that the schools of the township which said pupil has been attending have been centralized and it also appears as above stated, that the schools of said township district since having been so centralized, are now more remote from the residence of said pupil than the school in his own school district. It would seem to follow, therefore, that said pupil is now within the rule laid down by the court in the case of Boyce vs. Board of Education, supra. In addition to the foregoing, it is to be noted that section 7737, of the General Code above quoted, specifically provides that when the schools of a district are centralized or transportation of pupils provided, the provisions of sections 7735 and 7736 shall not apply. Inasmuch as the schools in the township school district of the township in which said pupil formerly attended have been centralized and transportation of pupils provided, it would seem to follow that the provisions of sections 7735 and 7736, supra, no longer apply to the pupil in question by virtue of the provision contained in said section 7737.

Therefore, in direct answer to your question, I am of the opinion under the circumstances which you state, that under sections 7735 and 7736 of the General Code, a pupil residing in a district and attending the schools of another district, under section 7735 of the General Code, cannot continue to attend the schools of said latter school district and demand transportation after the schools of the district which such pupils have been attending have been centralized, and transportation provided for. Said pupil not being able to attend such school, it of course follows that the board of education of the district wherein said pupil resides, cannot be compelled to pay said pupil's tuition.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A POLICE OFFICER OF THE CITY IS ENTITLED TO WITNESS FEES IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OR PROBATE COURT.

A police officer of the city is entitled to witness fees when he testifies before the grand jury or in a trial of a criminal case in the probate court or in the court of common pleas.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 24, 1913.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 7th you submit for my opinion the following question:

"Is a police officer of the city of Springfield entitled to witness fees, when he testifies before the grand jury, or in the trial of a criminal case in the probate court or the court of common pleas?"

and you refer me to sections 3014 and 3024 of the General Code.

Section 3014, General Code, provides:

"Each witness attending under recognizance or subpoena, issued by order of the prosecuting attorney or defendant, before the court of common pleas, or grand jury, or other court of record, in criminal causes, shall be allowed the following fees: For each day's attendance one dollar; and five cents for each mile, the same as in civil causes, to be taxed in only one cause, when attending in more causes than one on the same days, unless otherwise directed by special order of the court. When certified to the county auditor by the clerk of the court, fees under this section shall be paid from the county treasury."

Section 3024, General Code, provides as follows:

"No watchman or other police officer is entitled to witness fees in a cause prosecuted under a criminal law of the state, or an ordinance of a city before a police judge or mayor of such city, justice of the peace, or other officer having jurisdiction in such causes."

In the codification of section 3015 revised statutes by the enactment of section 3024, General Code, it will be noticed that a comma is omitted before the word "before," but since it is a rule that statutes shall receive the same construction after codification which would have applied to such statutes before codification unless the intent of the legislature is clear to the contrary. I do not believe that the mere elimination of the comma in question would be considered as an intentional change in the statute, and therefore that it should receive the same construction in the codification that it would have received prior to codification.

One of my predecessors, the Hon. Wade H. Ellis, in considering section 1315 revised statutes, which read as follows:

"No watchman or other police officer is entitled to witness fees in any cause prosecuted under any criminal law of the state, or any ordinance of a city of the first or second class, before any police judge or mayor of any such city, justice of the peace, or other officer having jurisdiction in such causes."

on a request for opinion as to whether police officers are entitled to witness fees in criminal cases tried in the common pleas court, states as follows:

"The grammatical construction of the statute and its punctuation both indicate the words 'before any police judge or mayor of any such city, justice of the peace of other officer having jurisdiction in such causes' limit the words 'any criminal law of the state' as well as the words 'any ordinance of a city of the first or second class.' If the limiting phrase 'before any police judge, etc.,' is read as though referring back to 'ordinance' only, no reason could have existed for mentioning justices of the peace in this connection. No criminal prosecutions for violations of city ordinances can be brought before justices of the peace. Furthermore the words 'police judge, mayor or other officer' comprehend all officers or tribunals before which prosecutions for violations of ordinances can be brought. Why should there have been an enumeration of certain officers if the statute was intended to prevent the allowance of witness fees to police officers in any criminal prosecution before any tribunal whatsoever? If such had been the intent of the legislature it would have been clearly expressed by so much of the statute as precedes the word 'before.' From the terms of the statute then, aside from any consideration of its purposes, it appears that the clause enumerating certain officers, refers to prosecutions for offenses under criminal laws of the state as well as under city ordinances, but was not intended to embrace all tribunals before which cases under such laws and ordinances might be tried. The court of common pleas, the chief tribunal before which prosecutions under criminal laws of the state are tried, is not specifically mentioned in this statute. That the legislature would have specified justices' courts and left courts of common pleas to be comprehended under the term 'other officers having jurisdiction in such causes' is not probable if they intended prosecutions before such court to come within the purview of the statute. By the enumeration of certain officers of limited jurisdiction the phrase 'other officers' is limited to other officers of the same class as those enumerated.

"It seems to me that there is a basis in reason for the distinction apparently made between the right of police officers to receive witness fees in prosecutions before the officers enumerated, and their right to receive such fees in prosecutions in the court of common pleas. One purpose of the statute probably was to prevent police officers from making unnecessary arrests for the purpose of receiving witness fees. It is conceivable that there might be many instances of unfounded prosecutions before magistrates for the sake of the fees, but the same opportunity for commencing unfounded prosecutions before the court of common pleas does not exist.

"Local police officers are called upon to testify before the police judges and mayors much more frequently than in the court of common pleas; but the legislature may have considered that instances in which police officers would be summoned from other counties would arise more often in trials in the court of common pleas than before magistrates. In such cases it is just that the police officer should receive his witness fees and mileage.

"I am therefore of the opinion that section 1315 does not deny to police officers the right to witness fees in criminal cases tried in the court of common pleas." (See Attorney General's reports for 1906, page 230.)

This opinion was also concurred in by my predecessor, the Hon. U. G. Denman, in an opinion rendered on April 9, 1910, Attorney General's report for 1910, page 369, and Mr. Denman further stated that upon the reasoning of the opinion of Mr. Ellis police officers would also be entitled to witness fees in grand jury proceedings.

I concur fully in the opinion of my two predecessors, and therefore, am of the opinion that a police officer of a city is entitled to witness fees when he testifies before the grand jury or in the trial of a criminal case in the probate court or the court of common pleas.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHEN A TOWNSHIP IS WITHOUT A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE AND NO ONE IS WILLING TO TAKE THE APPOINTMENT AS JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, THE VACANCY IN THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES CANNOT BE FILLED.

Under the provisions of the General Code a vacancy in the board of trustees of a township may be filled by the justice of the peace of said township holding the oldest commission. In a township where there is no justice of the peace, and no one is willing to accept an appointment as justice of the peace, the vacancy in the board of trustees cannot be filled.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 24, 1913.

HON. CHARLES H. JONES, Prosecuting Attorney, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of September 12, 1913, wherein you submit for my opinion the following question:

> "How shall a vacancy in a board of township trustees be filled, when such township is without a justice of the peace?"

You state in your letter as follows:

> "Your attention is directed to General Code section 3262 which provides that vacancies shall be filled by the justice of the peace. The township in question has had no justice of the peace for several years, and no one in the township is willing to accept an appointment from the trustees under General Code, section 1714."

Section 3262, General Code, provides as follows:

> "When for any cause a township is without a board of trustees, or there is a vacancy in such board, the justice of the peace of such township holding the oldest commission, or in case the commission of two or more of such justices bear even date, the justice oldest in years, shall appoint a suitable person or persons, having the qualifications of electors in the township to fill such vacancy or vacancies for the unexpired term."

Section 1714, General Code, provides:

> "If a vacancy occurs in the office of justice of the peace by death, removal, absence for six months, resignation, refusal to serve, or otherwise, the trustees within ten days from receiving notice thereof, by a majority vote, shall appoint a qualified resident of the township, to fill such vacancy, who shall serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The trustees shall notify the clerk of the courts of such vacancy and the date when it occurred."

I am unable to find any other sections of the code which deal with the subject.

Section 3262, General Code, limits the right of a justice of the peace to appoint to a vacancy to the justice of the peace of the particular township and you state that there is no justice of the peace in such township, and further that no one in the township is willing to accept the appointment. If there is no one willing to accept the appointment at all in the township I am of the opinion that a vacancy in the board of trustees cannot be filled.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE CLERK OF COURT IS LIMITED TO MAKING A CHARGE OF 25c FOR EACH HUNTER'S LICENSE IN ADDITION TO THE $1.00 CHARGED FOR THE LICENSE ITSELF.

Under the provisions of 103 O. L., 716, the clerk of court shall charge $1.00 for each hunter's license, and in addition thereto may make a charge of 25c for the license issued to each applicant, and he is furthermore empowered and required to administer the oath and to take and certify the affidavit therein required and to collect and receive the fee therein provided, to wit, 25c.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1913.

HON. CHARLES M. MILROY, Prosecuting Attorney, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I desire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of inquiry of the date of September 4, 1913, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "This office is in receipt of correspondence between John P. Kelly, clerk of courts of this county, and your office relative to fees allowed to be charged by him for the issuing of hunters' licenses. Mr. Kelly takes the position that in addition to the $1.00 to be charged resident hunters for license, under section 1 of an act of the general assembly as found in volume 103 of Ohio Laws, at page 716, and the fee of 25 cents for taking affidavit, issuing such license, and attaching his seal of office thereto, as provided in section 2 of said act, he is entitled to make the further charge of 25 cents for keeping record, as follows: 10 cents for entering, 5 cents for indexing, and 5 cents for noting, in accordance with the general provisions of the Code (sections 2900 and 2901) relative to county clerk's fees.
> "Kindly give us your opinion covering this matter, at your earliest convenience, and oblige."

In reply thereto, section 1 of an act entitled "Relative to resident and non-resident hunter's license and to repeal sections 1421, 1422, 1423 and 1424 of the General Code," 103 O. L., 716, provides in relation to hunters' licenses, as follows:

> "No person shall hunt, pursue or kill with a gun any wild bird or wild animal within this state without having first applied for and received a hunter's license and paid the fee, as required herein. Every applicant for a hunter's license who is a non-resident of the state of Ohio and who is a citizen of the United States of America, shall pay a fee of fifteen dollars ($15) to the officer issuing the same. Every applicant for hunter's license who is a citizen of the United States of America, and a resident of the state of Ohio, shall pay a fee of one dollar ($1), provided that the owner, tenant or children of the owner, manager or tennant of lands within this state may hunt upon such lands without a hunter's license."

Section 2 of said act provides, that such licenses shall be issued by the clerk of the common pleas courts and township clerks, as follows:

"Hunter's license shall be issued by the clerks of common pleas courts and township clerks. Every applicant for a hunter's license shall make and subscribe an affidavit, setting forth his name, age, occupation, place of residence, personal description, and citizenship, and the officer authorized to issue licenses may charge each applicant a fee of twenty-five cents (25c) for taking such affidavit, issuing such license and attaching his seal of office thereto, and clerks of common pleas courts to whom such application is made is hereby empowered and required to administer the oath and to take and certify the affidavit herein required and to collect and receive the fees therefor as herein provided * * * *."

Sections 2900 and 2901 of the General Code provide the fees to be charged by the clerks of the common pleas courts in the respective counties, in the general performance of their duties.

Said section 2900 of the General Code provides as follows:

For the services hereinafter specified, when rendered, the clerk shall charge and collect the fees provided in this and the next following section and no more. For docketing each cause in appearance docket, ten cents; for docketing each execution in execution docket, ten cents; for docketing each transcript of judgment in execution docket, ten cents; for indexing each cause in the execution or appearance docket each plaintiff and each defendant, five cents; for filing each praecipe, pleading, subpoena, cost bill and other necessary document, five cents; for noting the filing of same, except subpoena and praecipe therefor, on the appearance docket, each, five cents; for taking each affidavit including certificate and seal, twenty-five cents; for issuing each writ, order or notice, except subponea, thirty cents; for noting the issue of same on appearance docket, each, five cents; for recording return of same on appearance docket, each, ten cents; for issuing subponea, each name, five cents; for taking undertaking bond or recognizance, twenty-five cents; for impaneling and swearing jury, each cause, fifty cents; for swearing each witness, five cents; for entering attendance of each witness, ten cents; for certifying fees of each witness, five cents; for entering each cause on the trial or motion docket and indexing same, each term, ten cents; for each entry on journal per one hundred words or fraction thereof, ten cents; for indexing same, five cents; for posting same on appearance docket, ten cents; for entering on the indictment any plea, ten cents; for poling a jury, twenty-five cents."

Said section 2901 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"For making cost bill to be taxed but once, forty cents; for making complete record in each cause, ten cents per hundred words; for indexing same, each cause ten cents; for recording plat the same fees as are allowed the county recorder for like service; for making copies of pleadings, process, record, or files, including certificate and seal, ten cents per hundred words; for indexing pending suits, each plaintiff or defendant, five cents; for indexing living judgments, each plaintiff or defendant, five cents; for noting on appearance docket papers mailed, each defendant, five cents; for certificate (on penitentiary cost bill) that execution was issued, twenty-five cents; for receiving and disbursing money, other than costs and fees, paid to such clerks in pursuance of an order of court or on judgements, and which has not been collected by the sheriff or other proper officer on order of execution to be taxed against the party charged with the payment of such money, a commission of one per centum on the first one thousand dollars and one-fourth of one per centum on all exceeding one thousand dollars; for entering on cash book costs received in each cause, twenty-five cents; for acknowledging deed or other instrument of writing, forty cents; for recording commission of justice of the peace, mayor, notary public or railroad policeman, fifty cents; for cancellation of railroad policeman's commission, fifty cents; for issuing any license, fifty cents; for issuing certificates to receiver or order of reference with oath, seventy cents; for certificates of fact under seal of the court, to be paid by the party demanding same, thirty-five cents; for certificate of deposit on foreign writ, certificate of opening deposition, certificate for attorney's fees, certificate for stenographer's fee, each ten cents."

It is to be noted that section 2 of said act entitled "An act relative to resident and non-resident hunters' licenses, etc.," specifically provides that the officer authorized to issue licenses may charge each applicant a fee of 25 cents for taking such affidavit, issuing such license and attaching his seal of office thereto, and clerks of common pleas courts to whom such application is made, is hereby empowered and required to administer the oath and to take and certify the affidavit herein required, and to collect and receive fees therefor as herein provided.

By reason of said provision, other than the dollar to be charged for the license itself, the clerk of courts is specifically limited to making a charge of 25 cents for each hunter's license, issued to each applicant, and is furthermore empowered and required to administer the oath and to take and certify the affidavit therein required and to collect and receive the fee therein provided, to wit, 25 cents.

Ipso facto such clerk is not legally entitled to make a further charge of 25 cents for keeping the record, as follows: 10 cents for entering, 5 cents for indexing and 5 cents for noting, as provided in the general provisions of sections 2900 and 2901 of the General Code, supra.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY ALLOW POSTAGE FOR THE RETURN OF A DOCUMENT LEFT WITH THE RECORDER FOR THE PURPOSE OF BEING RECORDED.

Where it is for the best interests of the county, and an amount of money may be saved by so doing, the county commissioners may allow an amount sufficient to cover the cost of mailing back to the owners records left at the recorder's office for the purpose of being recorded.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 7, 1913.

HON. CYRUS LOCHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of September 24th you submit the following:

"Our new county recorder has just taken office and he has a great many new ideas. One of them is that he wants to mail all papers left in his office for record, to the owner so as to save people who take papers to his office to be recorded an extra trip and extra postage. He says that if he could do this, it would save the county considerable money, as he could dispense with at least one deputy. The way the business is done now, the deeds and other papers are left in his office for record and the owner is given a receipt. A great many papers accumulate and as they get old and are not called for, they are stored away and many months thereafter, when the owner calls for the paper, it consumes a great deal of time in looking for these papers, in order that they may give them to the owner. The recorder contends that if the county commissioners have authority to spend money for postage for the recorder for this purpose, that it would be a great accommodation to the public and a saving to the county. It is estimated that this expense for the county for extra postage would be approximately five hundred dollars, and that it would dispense with at least one employe in the office, and thereby save the county from five hundred to one thousand dollars a year. The question therefore is:

"Have the county commissioners authority to expend funds for the purpose of purchasing postage and stationery for mailing to the owners, deeds, mortgages and other papers left in the recorder's office for record? The county commissioners have the authority to pay for postage for the various public officials required in the transaction of county business, but does this come within the rule, or should the owners who leave these papers in the recorder's office pay the postage?"

The only expression of the statutes in relation to the matter which I am able to find is section 2758, General Code, which provides as follows:

"Upon the presentation of a deed or other instrument of writing for record, the county recorder shall indorse thereon the date and precise time of day of its presentation, and a file number. Such file numbering shall be consecutive and in the order in which the instrument of writing is received for record, except chattel mortgages which shall have a separate series of file numbers, and be filed separately, as provided by law. Until recorded each instrument shall be kept on file in the same numerical order for easy reference, and, if required, the recorder shall, without fee, give to the person presenting it a receipt therefor, naming the parties thereto, the date thereof, with a brief description of the premises. When a deed or other instrument is recorded, the recorder shall indorse thereon the time when recorded, and the number or letter and page or pages of the book in which it is recorded."

This statute makes absolutely no direction whatever with reference to any prescribed method of returning the instrument. The requirement is that the instrument shall remain on file until recorded. The disposition of the instrument subsequent to that time is not spoken of in the statute, yet it is clear that the person depositing the same for record is entitled to a return thereof as soon as it is recorded, and if he so desire he may require of the recorder a receipt evidencing such right.

I am of the opinion that the recorder may select the most expedient means of returning the instrument. From the facts stated in your letter it appears that the mailing of the instrument would save the county the expense of an extra clerk, and, viewed from all sides, would be the most economical, efficient and expedient means of accomplishing the return.

The principle is well settled that a county officer has such powers as are expressly granted and those which are necessary to carry the granted powers into effect. My ruling on this situation comes within this rule. Nothing having been provided by the statutes authorizing the charge of postage incurred in sending such instrument to the person entitled thereto, I am of the opinion, that technically no charge may be compelled, and that the county commissioners may allow the recorder a sufficient amount to cover the postage incurred in the operation of this plan. I see no objection, however, to the plan of requesting the party entitled to the return of the paper to deposit the price of a stamped envelop upon which he may inscribe the proper address to which he desires the paper returned.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE THE COURT ALLOWS AN ATTORNEY A FEE OF $50.00 IN A CASE OF FELONY, AND THE CASE IS CARRIED TO THE COURT OF APPEALS, THIS FEE MAY NOT BE INCREASED BY THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Where counsel is assigned in a case of felony and is allowed a certain fee by the court, and the case is carried to the court of appeals, the counsel so appointed may not receive more than the $50.00 allowed by statute, and the county commissioners have no authority to pay him more.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 20, 1913.

HON. H. F. CASTLE, Prosecuting Attorney, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of October 14, 1913, you state that one David Ruch was indicted for perjury; that he was indigent; that one T. W. Kimber was appointed to and did defend him; that Ruch was convicted; that the situation was such that he felt it to be important that the case be passed upon by the court of appeals; that Mr. Kimber, prosecuted error to the court of appeals; and you inquire whether the court of appeals can make an allowance in excess of fifty dollars, as provided in section 13618, General Code.

Section 13618, so far as important here, reads:

> "Counsel so assigned in a case of felony shall be paid for their services by the county and may receive therefor in a case of murder in the first and second degree such compensation as the court approves; in a case of manslaughter not exceeding $100; and in no other cases of felony not exceeding $50. * * *"

Without this and the preceding section there would be no statutory authority to either appoint or pay counsel for indigent prisoners, and, as the statute is clear and unequivocal, the authority of the commissioners in making the allowance is limited to the fifty dollars.

This appointment is made to defend the accused as to the indictment against him. The supreme court of New York, under a statute similar to ours, affirmed the reversal of an order allowing certain sums to counsel as compensation for expenses of expert witnesses in a murder case. People ex rel. Cantwell vs. Coler, 168 N. Y. 643.

The above case was affirmed on the opinion of the court below, which is found in 61 App. Div. 598. The statute allowed not to exceed $500, and personal and incidental expenses. The court allowed the $500 and $950 as expenses incurred in securing expert witnesses on handwriting. The appellate division reversed the allowance of the $950, which was affirmed as above.

The taking of a case to a reviewing court, as I view it, is no part of the duty of the counsel appointed to defend an indigent prisoner, however much he may be convinced of error in the trial, or interested in securing a reversal. Counsel so appointed in taking a cause to a reviewing court must do so with the understanding that he can only receive fifty dollars for his work in both courts, and also that if he secures a reversal he must go through a second trial with a limitation of $50 attached to his compensation. It is not a question of how much the services are worth, but how much the commissioners are authorized to pay.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY ENTER INTO A CONTRACT WITH A HOSPITAL FOR FURNISHING MEDICAL AND SURGICAL TREATMENT TO THE INDIGENT POOR OF THE COUNTY.

The county commissioners of Fulton county have a right to enter into a contract with the Wauseon Hospital Association for the purpose of procuring medical and surgical treatment for the indigent poor of Fulton county. The making of such contract is within the power of the county commissioners and is perfectly valid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 15, 1913.

HON. J. B. TEMPLETON, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letters of November 5th and 12th, 1913, in which you inquire as to the validity of a contract entered into between The Wauseon Hospital Association and the commissioners of Fulton county, Ohio, for furnishing medical and surgical treatment for the indigent poor of Fulton county, as provided in section 2502, revised statutes.

The contract recites:

> "Whereas, there does not exist in Fulton county, Ohio, a hospital supported by public funds, etc."

Section 2502, General Code, reads:

> "Except in counties containing hospitals supported by public funds, the commissioners of any county, in their discretion, may pay to a hospital organized or incorporated for purely charitable purposes, in which the indigent poor of the county may receive free of charge needed medical and surgical treatment, a sum not to exceed twenty-five hundred dollars each year. Such amount shall be paid from the county poor fund in equal payments on the first day of January and July, and shall be for the maintenance and support of such indigent poor and the reimbursement of such hospital for treatment thereof. Nothing herein shall authorize the payment of public funds to a sectarian institution."

It would seem from the language of this section and the recital in the contract submitted, that the contract presented brings itself directly within the provisions of the law.

The question you ask arises from the fact that the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices has held to be invalid a ten year contract entered into between these same parties on December 19, 1910, for the same purpose. A copy of this contract is attached to the report of the examination of Fulton county, Ohio, from October 1910 to December 1911, pp 54-5.

The conclusion of the bureau was based on an opinion of this department to Hon. C. A. Leist, prosecuting attorney of Pickaway county, Ohio, February 7, 1911, and found in the opinions of the attorney general for that year, p. 1067.

To my mind the opinion mentioned does not cover the contract in question, but as it appears to me, this contract comes squarely within the exception stated therein, to wit:

> "It is thus seen that the contract referred to is not a contract for the care of sick and disabled persons of the county, but rather an agreement to give a certain sum of money to such hospital for aid to the hospital. p. 1071."

The opinion referred to, although given when the provisions of section 2502, General Code, were in force, was in law and fact based on a question arising under the act of May, 2 1910, 101 O. L. 166, which was entitled, "An act to authorize the board of commissioners of any county to render assistance to a corporation or association, maintaining a hospital for charitable purposes," and while the constitutionality of the law was not passed upon (p. 1071) it was held that the contract of the commissioners of Pickaway to aid the hospital named in the contract was a diversion of public funds to a private purpose "however charitable" the objects of the hospital might be, and, therefore, invalid as against sound public policy.

That the above opinion is correct need not be questioned, neither is there any call for its modification. The question now presented is not one of aiding a hospital, but of procuring a hospital to furnish surgical and medical attention to the indigent poor of Fulton county, and is clearly within the exception in the opinion given to Mr. Leist, as above copied.

I am, therefore, of the opinion, assuming the validity and constitutionality of section 2502, General Code (concerning which no question is made), that the contract in question is within the powers of the commissioners and perfectly valid.

It is not deemed necessary at this time to discuss the question of the validity of the ten year contract, as the making of the contract in question must be construed as an abrogation of its terms by mutual consent.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

FIVE REPUTABLE FREEHOLDERS OF A TOWNSHIP MAY MAINTAIN A SUIT AGAINST TRUSTEES OF THE CEMETERY ASSOCIATION TO COMPEL THE PLACING OF MARKERS OVER THE GRAVES OF DECEASED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS IN SUCH CEMETERY.

Where five reputable freeholders of a township, in which is located a cemetery owned and controlled by a cemetery association, have petitioned the board of county commissioners for funds as provided in section 2958, for the purpose of placing markers over the graves of soldiers, sailors and marines buried in such cemetery, and said cemetery trustees refuse to permit the placing of these markers, said five petitioners may, at their own cost, institute a suit in mandamus against said cemetery association to compel such association to permit the placing of markers over the graves of such deceased soldiers and sailors buried in said cemetery.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1913.

HON. JAMES J. WEADOCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of inquiry of the date of October 9, 1913, wherein you inquire as follows:

"Section 2958 of the General Code provides as follows:

"That the board of county commissioners in the several counties of this state, shall, upon the petition of any five reputable free holders of any township or municipality in their county, procure for, and furnish to said petitioners, a suitable and appropriate, durable marker for the grave of each and every soldier, sailor or marine, who served with honor in the military or naval forces of the United States, including those who served in the war of the American Revolution, buried in the limits of any such township or municipality. The name of such soldier, sailor or marine, also the company, regiment or other command in which he served, shall be inscribed upon said marker. Such marker shall be placed on the grave of each soldier, sailor or marine, by said petitioners for the purpose of permanently marking and designating said grave for memorial purposes, and said board of county commissioners shall provide for the payment of the necessary expense of placing and setting said markers.

"Five reputable freeholders of a township in this county, in which is located a cemetery owned and controlled by a cemetery association in accordance with sections 10093 to 10119 of the General Code, have petitioned our board of county commissioners to provide them the funds referred to in the foregoing section to pay this expense of placing and setting markers. The county commissioners have set aside a certain fund for this purpose. The petitioners have procured from the United States Government the markers which are designated by said government to go over the graves of deceased soldiers. The cemetery association in question has now refused to permit these markers to be placed over the graves of soldiers buried in said cemetery for the reason that they claim the markers do not comply with the rules and regulations of the association. Is there any method by which this association can be compelled to permit these markers to be placed over the graves of said soldiers?"

In reply thereto, section 10093 of the General Code provides that a company or association incorporated for cemetery purposes may appropriate or otherwise acquire and hold land for cemetery purposes as follows:

> "A company or association incorporated for cemetery purposes may appropriate or otherwise acquire and hold, not exceeding one hundred acres of land; also, take any gift or devise in trust for cemetery purposes, or the income from such gift or devise according to the provisions of such gift or devise, in trust, all of which shall be exempt from execution, from taxation and from being appropriated to any other public purpose, if used exclusively for burial purposes, and in no wise with a view to profit."

Section 10103 provides that such company or association may prescribe rules for inclosing and adorning lots and for erecting monuments in such cemetery, etc., as follows:

> "Every such company or association shall cause a plat of its ground and of the lots by it laid out, to be made and recorded, or filed in the recorder's office of the county in which situated; the lots to be numbered by regular consecutive numbers. It may inclose, improve and adorn the grounds and avenues, erect buildings for its use, prescribe rules for inclosing and adorning lots, and for erecting monuments in the cemetery, and prohibit any use, division, improvement or adornment of a lot which it deems improper. An annual exhibit shall be made of the affairs of the company or association."

Said section 10103 was passed March 8, 1888, and is found in the 88th volume of Ohio Laws, at page 76.

Section 2958 of the General Code, which you cite and quote in your inquiry, was enacted by the legislature May 10, 1910, and specifically provides that the county commissioners in the several counties of the state upon the petition of any five reputable freeholders of any township or municipality in their county, shall procure for and furnish to said petitioners a suitable and appropriate marker for the grave of each soldier, sailor or marine, who served with honor in the military or naval forces of the United States, and further provides that said petitioners shall place said markers on the graves of each such soldier, sailor or marine. You further state in your letter of inquiry, that the petitioners therein referred to, have procured from the United States Government the markers which are designated by said government to be placed over the graves of deceased soldiers.

While section 10103, supra, provides that every corporation or association, incorporated in accordance with section 10093, supra, for the purpose of appropriating or otherwise acquiring land for cemetery purposes, may prescribe rules for enclosing and adorning lots, and for erecting monuments in such cemetery and may prohibit any adornment of lots which it deems improper, nevertheless, section 2958, supra, places a limitation upon such corporations or associations in making such rules as prohibit the placing of markers upon the graves of soldiers, sailors or marines, who served with honor in the military or naval forces of the United States, including those who served in the war of the American Revolution, who are buried in such cemetery. Furthermore, as hereinbefore stated, section 2958, supra, was enacted subsequent to section 10103, supra, and this fact indicates that it was the intention of the legislature that the provisions of section 2958 should govern.

It would seem to follow, that the said cemetery association or corporation is without legal right or authority to object to the placing of the markers on the graves of said deceased soldiers, buried in said cemetery, provided said markers have been duly approved by the county commissioners, as provided by statute.

By reason of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that the said five petitioners, at their own cost, can institute and maintain a suit in mandamus against the said cemetery association or corporation, to compel such association or corporation to permit the placing of said markers over the graves of such deceased soldiers, buried in said cemetery.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DITCHES — CONSTITUTIONALITY OF INTERSTATE DITCH LAW — COMITY—EXTRA-TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION OF STATES—POWER TO IMPROVE BRANCH DITCH IN SAME PROCEEDING—LIVING STREAMS NOT INCLUDED BY INTERSTATE DITCH LAW.

The government of a state may not be exercised out of the boundaries thereof. Extra-territorial jurisdiction of the state executive or legislative department may be exercised only on the grounds of comity, i. e., only insofar as the same is consented to by the state in which said jurisdiction is to be exercised. The interstate ditch laws in Ohio, as founded upon such comity, and the laws of the state of Indiana, are sufficient to authorize the jurisdiction conferred upon the joint ditch commission having representatives from both this state and that of Indiana. The provisions of the Indiana law are also ample to authorize representatives of this state to act on such commission.

Section 5 of the Indiana law and section 6567 of the General Code of Ohio intend that a decision of the joint board requires a majority vote of the representatives from each state, thereby imparting an equal voice to each jurisdiction in the proceeding. The authority of the joint board extends only to the determining of the route of the proposed improvement and to apportioning the cost between the states. All other prodecure must be accomplished by the commissioners of the respective counties by reference to the laws for providing for single and joint county ditches in Ohio.

A branch ditch may be improved in the single proceeding contemplating the improvement of the main ditch. Such branch ditch, however, must be described in the petition when application is made for such improvement. The interstate ditch law does not authorize the improvement of living streams, as this procedure is available only for the improvement of ditches, streams and water-courses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 8, 1913.

HON. EMMETT L. SAVAGE, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your favor of October 7th you request my opinion as follows:

"I am writing to ask you to favor me with your opinion as to the constitutionality and legality of sections 6564 to 6595, inclusive.

"This is the interstate ditch law. There was recently filed with the county commissioners of this county, the county commissioners of Van Wert county, Ohio, and the ditch commissioners and circuit court of Allen county, Indiana, a petition for the location and construction of a ditch improvement, one branch of which heads in Allen county, Indiana, and flows thence easterly out of that county into Paulding county, and which throughout its course follows the line of a natural stream known as Flat Rock creek. This creek flows through parts of Benton township, Paulding township, Jackson township, Emeral township and into Auglaize township, all of Paulding county, where it empties into the Auglaize river.

"Another branch of the improvement heads in Van Wert county, and extends thence westerly into Allen county, Indiana, where it unites with the first above described branch of the improvement. That is the branch heading in Van Wert county lies wholly within that county and Allen county, Indiana, and terminates in Allen county aforesaid.

"A question has arisen between the attorneys of Allen county, Indiana, and this office as to the constitutionality of the said statute.

"To point out the question in controversy we might say that it has been our view that said sections of the statute attempt to confer upon the ditch commissioners of another state, acting jointly with the county commissioners of this state, power to locate and establish ditches in this state. This power seems to be specifically mentioned in section 6570.

"Section 6584 provides the rules by which the joint board shall be governed.

"Section 6567 provides for a division of the vote of the joint board between the members of the foreign state and the state of Ohio and seeks to give to each an equal proportion of the vote. This we think is an attempt to confer on the ditch authorities of the foreign state limited judicial powers to locate ditches in Ohio. Can this be done? That is to say is it within the power of the legislature of Ohio to confer that jurisdiction upon persons who are not citizens of the state of Ohio.

"Another question presented by the ditch proceeding above indicated arises out of the two branches of the proposed improvement. The one branch arising in Van Wert county and ending in Allen county, Indiana, and not flowing through any part of Paulding county, Ohio. The other arising in Allen county, Indiana, and flowing directly into Paulding county and not touching any part of Van Wert county.

"The question is do these not constitute the interstate ditches; one between Van Wert county, Ohio, and Allen county, Indiana; the other between Allen county, Indiana and Paulding county, Ohio?

"The proposed improvement has not yet been located, that is the joint board consisting of the members of Van Wert county, Ohio, the commissioners of Paulding county, Ohio, and the ditch commissioners of Allen county, Indiana, has not yet made a finding either for or against said improvement. So far only such preliminary steps as are necessary in a ditch proceeding have been taken, that is to say the filing of the petition and the giving of notices to land owners whose lands are sought to be affected.

"On the 20th of this month another meeting of the joint board will be held at which it will be expected to take action on the petition and either grant or refuse the same. It is with a view to having the favor of your opinion upon the two questions above suggested, viz.: the constitutionality of the law and whether said proposed improvement shall not be deemed as two separate improvements. Jointly only between Van Wert county, Ohio, and Allen county, Indiana, in one case and only between Allen county, Indiana, and Paulding county, Ohio, in the other.

"The principal question, of course, is as to the constitutionality of the so-called interstate ditch law; and the second question only arises in case the said law shall be deemed to be constitutional.

"As prosecuting attorney of Paulding county, Ohio, I desire to request the favor of your opinion upon the questions presented."

Though I have made a thorough investigation of the decisions I have been unable to find any instance of a procedure similar to that set out for the improvement of interstate county ditches as the laws for the same are stated in sections 6564 et seq General Code.

A law very similar in substance to these referred to in the General Code of Ohio, has been passed by the legislature of Indiana, and the same appears at page 884 of the acts of 1913 of that state.

It is clear that the plan presented by these laws contemplates extra-territorial jurisdiction on the part of the officers of either state. The statement of the rule as regards extra-territorial jurisdiction of a state is found in volume 7 of the Encyclopedia of the United States Reports, page 242 as follows:

> "As a general rule the jurisdiction of a state is co-extensive with its territory and extends to citizens and subjects of a foreign government within its territory as well as to its own citizens or subjects; and on the other hand it is well settled that as a general rule a state has no jurisdiction or power within the territory of another state."

In volume 4 of the same work, at page 344 the following is stated:

> "The legislative and judicial authority of each state is bound by its territorial limits and cannot be exercised with respect to persons or property within other states. No state tribunal can extend its process beyond the state limits so as to subject either persons or property; and state laws have no operation beyond state lines; except so far as is allowed by comity. Any exertion of authority of this sort beyond this limit is a mere nullity and incapable of binding such person or property in any other tribunal."

Under these statements of the law it is clear that if any force is to be given to the statutes in question the same must be based upon the arrangement between the states in the nature of comity. In this connection the following is said in volume 3 of the Encyclopedia of the United States Reports, at page 1030:

> "The extent to which the law of one nation as put in force within its territory, whether by executive order, by legislative act or by judicial decree, shall be allowed to operate within the domain of another nation depends upon what our greatest jurists have been content to call the comity of nations * * *, but it is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to internal duty and convenience and to the rights of its own citizens or other persons who are under the protection of its laws."

Story in his work on Conflict of Laws sums up these rules as follows:

> "Section 20. Another maxim or proposition is that no nation can by its law directly affect or bind property out of its own territory or bind persons not residents therein, whether they are natural born citizens or others."
> "Section 23. From these two maxims or propositions there flows a third, and that is, that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another, depends solely upon the laws and municipal regulations of the latter: that is to say, upon its own proper jurisprudence and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent."

It is clear that there has been a very special effort made by the legislature of both the state of Indiana and the state of Ohio to provide a foundation for this exercise of extra-territorial jurisdiction in interstate county ditch procedures along the lines of the principles above stated. With but slight exceptions the law of either state with reference to joint procedure in these matters is a substantial duplication of the law of the other.

It is to be noted that in the Indiana law the details are more fully set out and more amply and precisely provided for than they are in the Ohio law. Sections 2 and 3 of the Indiana law provide in detail the steps which must be taken with reference to the filing of the petition, the notice to land owners, the procedure to be undertaken by the Indiana authorities in full as a foundation for taking up the matter of joint action with another state.

In Ohio, however, all preliminary matters are based upon pre-existing laws providing for ditch procedure in the single counties. The Ohio law presents a mere skeleton wherein provision is made for joint action in the matter of interstate county ditches. All other matters are provided for by a general reference to the single and joint county ditch laws of the state existing at the time these interstate ditch laws were enacted. This will be readily seen by observation of section 6595 of the interstate county ditch law of Ohio, which provides as follows:

> "In all matters pertaining to the location and construction of such improvement, not herein expressly provided for, the county commissioners shall be governed by the provisions of law providing for the location and construction of county ditches."

Section 6585 of these interstate ditch laws in a similar spirit provides as follows:

> "The further proceedings of the joint board shall be in conformity with the laws for the location of county or joint county ditches taken at this stage of the proceedings. * * *"

The stage of the proceedings referred to in this statute relates to the time when the joint board have come to an agreement with respect to the location and establishment of the route and general scheme of the ditch, and have further agreed upon the apportionment of the expense which is to be borne by each state. By this statute the further procedure rests solely with the counties of the state as the same is set out in joint and single county ditch laws. In brief, by reference to the joint county ditch law, sections 6536 to 6538, General Code, the apportionment of the expense among the counties in this state must be made by joint agreement and further proceedings as to application for damages, levying of assessments, letting of contracts, etc., must be attended to by the commissioners of each single county by reference to the single county ditch laws, after the manner provided for joint county procedure, when the ditch is to be located wholly in this state. The intention of the statutes in this respect is clear, and the sole work, therefore, of the interstate county board is that of making provision for the location and establishment of a ditch, and for the apportionment of the expense to be borne by each state.

For proper proceedings under the law, therefore, before a petition may be filed which will provide a foundation for interstate county ditch procedure under section 6564, General Code, the conditions of section 6442, General Code, and following sections in the chapter providing for single county ditches with reference to notice to land owners and provisions for hearing, must be complied with.

Where more than one county in Ohio is affected, before the proper foundation is made for interstate county ditch procedures, the conditions of section 6536 and following sections of the joint county ditch chapter must be complied with. This conclusion is inevitable in the light of the established rule of law that such procedures are unconstitutional in the absence of the provision for notice and opportunity for hearing to the land owners effected by the improvement.

Sessions vs. Crunkilton, 20 O. S. 349.
Zimmerman vs. Canfield, 42 O. S. 463.

A similar conclusion follows with reference to the right to make application for damages and with reference to the procedure for the letting of contract, the apportionment of assessments upon the property-holders, levying of taxes, issuance of bonds, etc.

What difficulties may be presented in attempting to conform these procedures in the accomplishment of an interstate ditch improvement I am not prepared to say. It is clear that the legislature has left much to be desired, in this general and rather loose method of direction in this regard. The general intent is clear, however, and all work must necessarily be conducted with a view to harmonizing the different statutory directions to this end.

Assuming, therefore, that the statutes set out may be harmonized, and the working plan prove feasible, we may investigate the statutes of both Ohio and Indiana with a view to ascertaining whether or not a sufficient foundation has been established for the existence of the principle of comity in these matters.

In the Ohio law there appear several sections in the interstate ditch law which are absent from the provisions of the Indiana law. These sections are as follows:

> "Section 6572. The joint board may determine upon the necessary capacity of the part of said improvement located in this state."
> "Section 6576. The engineer, so appointed, shall file a bond, with the auditor of each county in this state affected by said improvement, in the sum of one thousand dollars, with two approved sureties, conditioned to the faithful performance of his duties.
> "Section 6584. The proper authorities in the adjoining state, joining with the counties in this state, may enter upon lands, or cause it to be done, in this state, along any portion of said located ditch or its tributaries, to perform work which may be assigned them to do by the joint board when in session.
> "Section 6587. The commissioners of any county in this state, in which are located lands affected and charged for the improvement or construction of a ditch, drain or watercourse, as provided by law, may cause to be performed any work which is assigned to them outside of the limits of this state, in a like manner as under the laws for similar duties, if the necessary privilege to do so has been granted by the legislature of the state where said lands are located through which such work is to be constructed."

The absence of the first of these statutes from the Indiana law does not appear to be in any way detrimental as the authority therein contained is undoubtedly conferred by section 6569 of the Ohio, conferring power upon the joint board to locate a ditch or to order the widening or deepening of the same and by kindred statutes conferring jurisdiction in the establishment and location of such ditches. The requirement that the engineer in this state shall file a bond, in the absence of such express requirement in the Indiana law with respect to the engineer selected by the Indiana board would not in any way effect the expressed consent of this state to permit such engineer to act.

The requirement of section 6584 of the General Code of Ohio permitting the authorities in the adjoining state to cause work to be done in this state in the establishment of such ditches seems unnecessary for the reason that in the plan presented it is not contemplated that the authorities of one state shall have anything to do with the work done in the other state.

The same may be said with reference to section 6587 authorizing officers in this state to enter upon lands in the other state for the purpose of accomplishing work therein assigned them, no such procedure being contemplated by its statutes.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that these slight differences in the provisions of the laws of the two states do not affect the operation of the principle of comity. A slight discrepancy appears to be present in these statutes in that the laws of neither state provide for the sending of notices of the filing of a petition for such a ditch to the authorities of the other state. Each law provides that upon receipt of a notice from the other state, the commissioners may enter into an arrangement made for joint procedure. The intention, however, is so clear that the matter of notice may be readily founded upon the doctrines of implied power, and I would not consider such a slight omission detrimental to the operation of the plan presented.

A problem which must not be over-looked in the matter of such joint interstate operation is presented by the absolute want of appeal from the decisions of the joint board, and also the absence of any provisions in the event of disagreement by the joint board. The success of the plan rests altogether upon the existence of absolute harmony upon the part of the authorities of either state. The right of appeal in such case is not essential, however, and I am of the opinion that the absence of such would not afford ground of attack with respect to constitutionality. (Powersex vs. Seneca County Com. 20 O. S. 496; Engle vs. Defiance county, 25 O. S. 425.)

The consideration which seems to throw the gravest doubt over the matter, and which gives the greatest concern with respect to the legality of this procedure remains to be considered.

Section 6567 of the General Code provides that:

> "Without regard to the number of each board present the members from this state shall have the casting of one half of all votes on all questions, which vote shall be represented equally by the different members present of the board or boards from this state."

Section 5 of the Indiana law provides:

> "Without regard to the number of such joint board present, the members from this state shall have an equal voice on all questions, which votes shall be represented equally by the different members present from each state * * * *."

To my view this very important provision of these laws presents an ambiguity. I am of the opinion that it is equally susceptible, as regards its language, to the interpretations. One construction permitting the joint board to vote as a whole and authorizing a majority vote of such joint board to carry all questions voted upon. Each interpretation, granting, of course, that the representatives from each state would be entitled to the right of casting an equal number of votes upon all questions so considered.

Another interpretation would require each matter considered, before it is carried by the votes of the joint board to receive a majority sanction of the one half vote to be represented by each state.

It is clearly necessary, therefore, to choose the more logical and practical of these interpretations as the intent of the legislature of each state.

Under the plan presented by the first interpretation it is clear that a large majority of votes cast by authorities representing one state in such joint procedure favoring a proposition which has been voted against in such joint procedure by a majority of the authorities representing the other state, might be carried as a decision of such joint board, thereby substantially vesting the authorities of one state with a jurisdiction over matters concerning another state over the objection of the authorized representatives of said latter state. For example, if three county commissioners from this state met an equal number of ditch commissioners from another state, together with one county commissioner from this state voted in favor of the location of a ditch as against the vote of two county commissioners from this state against the location of such ditch, the decision of the joint board would have to be regarded in favor of the establishment of such ditch, notwithstanding the objection thereto by the authorities elected in this state to represent the locality in question in matters of such public concern.

A similar difficulty was hinted at with reference to joint county ditch procedure in this state in the case of Chesbrough vs. Commissioners, 37 O. S. 508. It was therein objected that the procedure providing for joint county ditches was invalid by reason of the fact that the same conferred extra-territorial jurisdiction upon the respective boards of county commissioners. The court, however, sustained the validity of the provision by direct reference to the requirement of these statutes that a majority of each board taking part in the joint proceedings was required to carry any proposition presented for consideration. On page 515, in this connection the court used the following language:

> "A majority of each board, in joint session, and not a majority of the joint board, is required. Hence each board acts as an integral part of the joint body. The assumption that the commissioners of either county are acting and exercising authority over the internal affairs of the other county, is therefore not well founded."

It will be readily seen in the present connection, however, that such assumption is well founded, and that the objection must be considered in connection with the inquiry at hand. The question presenting itself, therefore, is whether or not, under rules of comity, the legislature has power, by consent, to permit the authorities of another state to thus exercise jurisdiction over matters concerning the citizens and property of Ohio. In the absence of constitutional provisions contrary thereto, I am of the opinion that such a consent would be within the power of the legislature.

I am of the opinion, however, that section 4 of article XV of the constitution of this state must be accorded deference upon this point. This provision is as follows:

> "No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state unless he possess the qualifications of an elector."

While it may be doubted that the plan presented under the first construction would constitute an appointment of other than electors of this state to an office herein, it is clear beyond doubt that such a plan does operate to confer official duties and to grant official jurisdiction to persons other than electors of this state.

While the legislature of one state might, within the principle of comity, relinquish its jurisdiction over these matters to the extent contemplated by such an interpretation, I am strongly of the opinion that such an intent must not be attributed to this provision in the absence of clear and undoubted foundation therefor. Such an arrangement, if not actually in conflict with the constitutional provision above quoted, is clearly contrary to its spirit, and it is also a very inconsistent and inharmonious plan, when considered in the light of the legislative direction under kindred procedure with respect to joint county ditches. If the legislature has considered it necessary to safeguard the representation of the county in matters undertaken altogether by officers representing the state within which the matters are undertaken, there is clearly much stronger ground for the same sort of safe-guard when one state is intended to be represented as opposed to an outside jurisdiction.

Considering the second interpretation: Under this construction a majority of the representatives from each state would be required to constitute a sanction of the joint board in the consideration of any matter.

When this construction is made, the import given to the term "vote," which is required to be represented equally by the different members present of each board under the Ohio statute, and the import which is to be given to the term "voice" as used in the Indiana statute, providing that the members from Indiana shall have an "equal voice" on all questions, is turned from the interpretation given these terms under the first construction. The "vote" referred to in the first construction has reference to a majority vote of the joint board, and the "voice" referred to in the Indiana statute, under the former interpretation, refers to such voice when considered in connection with a vote cast by all members of the joint board for the purpose of ascertaining a majority of such votes. Under the second construction, however, the import given is that there are really two votes, i. e., one by the Ohio board and the other by the Indiana board, and that upon each vote the authorities of each state must have equal majority representation.

On the ground that a state may not be considered to have an equal voice in such proceedings, or may not be considered to have been represented by an equal vote therein, when the authorities directed to represent it, have voted contrary to the final result. I am of the opinion that the second construction is the one intended.

While the legislature would perhaps have the power, under principles of comity, to so yield up its jurisdiction as to permit officers of other states to step in, should they so desire, and rule in matters of this kind, it would not seem feasible, practical or logical that such would be a likely intention. The extent which the legislature in these matters intended to yield up jurisdiction to the authorities of the other states must be confined to matters in which its own representatives by majority vote agree, and it is surely not to be calculated that authorities of another state are to be permitted to rule and judge in matters concerning this state, against the will of those directed by election in this state, to control matters concerning its property and its citizens.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that no measure may be passed, or no vote carried by the joint board, upon which the authorities of either state have not voted in the majority, for the reason that when such is not the case, the state refusing such majority of its authorized representatives, has not been accorded an actual representation or an equal voice in the matter considered.

My final conclusion, therefore, is that conceding the work ability of the Ohio provisions, and the ability to harmonize the general provisions with those referring to single and joint county ditches, there exists no constitutional objection to these laws.

Taking up your second question: You state that there are two branches to the improvement contemplated and you desire to know whether or not both branches may be improved in one proceeding or whether it is necessary for separate proceedings to be instituted for each branch.

To use your own language of description these branches are as follows:

> "One branch heads in Allen county, Indiana, and flows thence easterly out of that county into Paulding county and which throughout its course follows the line of a natural stream known as Flat Rock creek. This creek flows through parts of Benton township, Paulding township, Jackson township, Emerald township and into Auglaize township, all of Paulding county, where it empties into the Auglaize river.
> "Another branch of the improvement heads in Van Wert county, and extends thence westerly into Allen county, Indiana, where it unites with the first above described branch of the improvement. That is the branch heading in Van Wert county lies wholly within that county and Allen county, Indiana, and terminates in Allen county."

The chapter pertaining to single county ditches provides that a petition for a ditch shall include, "a side, lateral, spur or branch ditch, drain or water course necessary to secure the object of the improvement whether it is mentioned therein or not." (Section 6442, General Code.)

The chapter with respect to interstate county ditches, however, has no such reference. The question arises, therefore, as to whether or not the section above referred to connecting single county ditch procedure with interstate county ditch procedure, to wit, section 6595, General Code, is sufficient to justify this inclusion of branch ditches. While it would seem that this hinging of the interstate ditch procedure upon the single county ditch provisions and the incorporation of the latter provisions into the interstate provisions would relate only to matters of procedure rather than to the matters of substance intended to be covered by the interstate laws, I am, nevertheless, of the opinion that the intention to include a branch ditch should be accredited to the interstate laws. I base this conclusion upon the very apparent necessity of including all parties concerned in an improvement of this nature. It is clear at a glance that where branch ditches are involved in the improvement of a ditch it is only by including all parties concerned and by taking up at the same time the matter of the branch improvement that the end can be accomplished. It is a very apparent fact that the improvement of a branch ditch must have in view the necessity of making consequent changes in the main ditch, and also that improvements made in a main ditch or out-let ditch which accrued to the advantage of the property holders along a branch ditch, must be taken into consideration in making the assessments for such proposed improvement.

Under the doctrine of implied powers, therefore, and in view of the very apparent necessity of the improvement, I am of the opinion that one procedure may contemplate the improvement of a branch ditch as well as the improvement of a main or outlet ditch.

My conclusion does not go so far, however, as to hold that the improvement of a branch ditch may be included without specific mention thereof in the petition, as is specifically provided in the case of single county ditches. If such a branch is intended to be improved or if its condition depends upon the improvement of the main stream, specific mention thereof, and a description of the route of such branch must be set forth in the petition filed for procedure with respect thereto.

In this connection, however, we cannot lose sight of the necessary conclusion that the provisions for interstate county ditches do not include the improvement of a natural stream or water course. This chapter authorizes the improvement only of ditches drains and water courses, and it is a settled fact, beyond dispute, that the use of these terms cannot be extended to include natural streams or natural water courses.

I have similarly held with reference to joint county ditches in an opinion rendered to Hon. Homer E. Johnson, and Hon. Charles F. Close, prosecuting attorneys respectively of Marion and Wyandot counties, under date of April 2, 1913. The principles considered therein have application here, and I am enclosing for you a copy of that opinion.

From your statement of facts I would conclude that the branch of the improvement which heads in Allen county and flows into Paulding county, contemplates the improvement of a natural stream known as Flat Rock creek. If my interpretation of your statement of facts is correct this improvement may not be made under the laws provided for interstate ditches. If, on the other hand, such improvement does not contemplate the improvement of a natural stream, I am of the opinion, in accordance with what I have before stated, that both of the improvements may be included in the petition, and their accomplishment be culminated by a single proceeding.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A DEPUTY SHERIFF WHOSE TIME IS ONLY PARTIALLY TAKEN UP WITH HIS WORK, AND WHO IS ONLY PAID FOR SO MUCH WORK AS HE PERFORMS, MAY ACT AS PROBATION OFFICER AND RECEIVE COMPENSATION THEREFOR PROVIDING THERE IS NO CONFLICT BETWEEN THE TWO POSITIONS.

Where a deputy sheriff is paid for such service as he performs during the year, and his time is only partially taken up with his work as deputy sheriff, such an officer is eligible to appointment as probation officer, where the duties of both will not require all the time of the appointee, and there will be no conflict between the two positions. This does not apply to deputy sheriffs under a regular salary whose entire time is covered by his compensation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 15, 1913.

HON. HARRY T. NOLAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 29th, in which you inquire:

> "In Lake county practically all the work of the sheriff's office is done by the sheriff, personally; there is set aside by the commissioners at the beginning of the year the sum of $300 to compensate deputy sheriffs for services rendered during the year; each deputy sheriff performs such items of service as he is specifically directed to perform by the sheriff and is paid for his services out of the amount set aside.
> "May a deputy sheriff so employed and compensated be appointed probation officer by the probate court and be allowed compensation out of the county treasury for his services as such probation officer? The entire time devoted to both offices does not exceed two or three days a month."

and you further state:

> "Neither does it seem possible that there could be an evasion of the salary law because the officer is compensated as deputy sheriff only for specific items of service rendered by him as such, and is compensated as probation officer only for specific duties performed, as such, by him at the direction of the probate court."

From this I understand that the deputy sheriff is not on a salary either yearly or monthly, but is paid out of the $300.00 allowance for work actually performed, or as it might be said, his payments are upon the piece price-plan. Under these circumstances, it is inconceivable how there can be any incompatibility between the two offices, nor evasion of the salary law.

You call attention to the opinion of my predecessor, Mr. Denman, found on page 446 of opinions of 1910, in which it is held that a sheriff may not act as probation officer, with which opinion I fully concur, not only for the reasons stated in the opinion, but also because of the fact that the sheriff is upon a salary compensating him for his time, and he would not be authorized to devote a portion thereof to the duties of probation officer.

However, none of the reasons applicable to sheriffs apply to deputies whose employment and compensation are, as stated in your letter. I am therefore of the opinion, that deputy sheriffs appointed and paid, and whose time is only partially taken up, as you state, are eligible to appointment as probation officers where the duties of both will not require all the time of the appointee, are limited, as you state, and are not conflicting.

This opinion, it must be understood, applies only to deputy sheriffs under the conditions you state and must not be construed as applying to deputy sheriffs generally, nor to deputy sheriffs under a regular salary, whose entire time is covered by his compensation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

IN PARTITION PROCEEDINGS, IN THE ABSENCE OF AN ORDER FROM THE COURT FOR THE PAYMENT OF MONEY TO THE SHERIFF AND THE RECEIPT OF SUCH MONEY BY THE SHERIFF, THE SHERIFF IS NOT ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION EITHER AS COSTS OR EXPENSES FOR RECEIVING AND DISTRIBUTING FUNDS PAID HIM IN PARTITION PROCEEDINGS WHERE THERE IS AN ELECTION TO TAKE.

Under partition proceedings where one of the heirs elect to take the property at the appraised value thereof, and the same is awarded, the money so paid in on election to take in partition proceedings is not made on a writ of partition, and the sheriff is not entitled to poundage on money so paid, but where the court orders moneys paid to the sheriff, under section 12039, the court, not as costs, but as expenses in the case, may make an allowance to the sheriff for compensation for services in complying with such order of court. In the absence of such order, the sheriff is not entitled to compensation, either as costs or expenses for receiving and distributing funds paid him in partition cases where there is an election to take.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 2, 1913.

HON. CHARLES C. HALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of May 31, 1913, in which you inquire:

> "Under partition proceedings where one of the heirs elects to take the property at the appraised value thereof, and the same is awarded to said party electing to take the same, what if any poundage is the sheriff entitled to under the provision of section 2845, General Code, relating to fees of sheriff, when only a part of the appraised value is paid into his hands for distribution?"

The portions of section 2845, applicable to the question you ask are:

> "Poundage on all moneys actually made and paid to the sheriff on execution, decree or sale of real estate, on the first ten thousand dollars, one per centum; on all sums over ten thousand dollars one-half of one per centum, but when such real estate is bid off and purchased by a party entitled to a part of the proceeds, the sheriff shall not be entitled to any poundage except on the amount over and above the claim of such party, except in writs of sale in partition he shall receive one per cent. on the first two thousand dollars, and one-third of one per cent. on all above that amount coming into his hands."

I am informed that it has been held in Hamilton County that a sheriff is not entitled to poundage in partition cases where there is an election to take, but am not advised as to whether the ruling was made in a case where no money came into the hand of the sheriff, or in a case like you put, where a portion is paid.

The rule is general and strictly followed that where no provision is made to compensate an officer, he is not entitled to any, also that an officer to be entitled to fees must receive same under a provision clearly showing a right to the same.

The above clause, except in writs of partition, etc., does not include money paid into the hands of the sheriff on any election to take. The statute authorizing elections to take, reads:

> Section 12035. If one or more of the parties elects to take the estate at the appraised value, unless on good cause shown by special order, the court directs the entire payment to be made in cash, or all the parties in interest agree thereon, the terms of payment shall be one-third in one year and one-third in two years, with interest, the deferred payments to be secured to the satisfaction of the court. On payment being made in full, or in part, with sufficient security for the remainder, as above provided, according to the order of the court, the sheriff shall make and execute a conveyance to the party electing to take it."

This section does not authorize payment to the sheriff, nor does it devolve upon the sheriff to see to the distribution of the proceeds of sale. The payment unless directed by the court to be made in cash, shall be one-third cash and one-third in one, and one third in two years with interest; the deferred payments to be secured to the satisfaction of the court.

The question of how and to whom payments are to be made rests with the court. If the cash payment is ordered to be made to the clerk, such clerk is entitled to poundage under section 2901, General Code. If ordered paid to the sheriff, his fees, if he gets any, must be allowed by the court under section 12050, General Code, and in the absence of direction by the court to pay to the sheriff, he cannot by receiving the money from the party electing to take, become entitled to poundage under section 2845.

Section 12039, General Code, reads as follows:

> "The money or securities arising from a sale of, or an election to take the estate, shall be distributed and paid, by order of the court, to the parties entitled thereto, in lieu of their respective parts and proportions of the estate, according to their rights therein. All receipts of such money or securities by the sheriff are in his official capacity, and his sureties on his official bond shall be liable for any misapplication thereof."

The latter part of this section inferentially, at least, recognizes the right of a sheriff to receive moneys or securities for distribution to parties entitled, when an election to take has been approved by the court. I also am of the opinion when it is considered that in the adjustment and apportionment of costs and expenses that the court in a partition case must be governed by the principles of equity, that the power of the court under section 12039 to order distribution of moneys and securities, is not limited to a perfunctory order to pay or turn over to parties entitled but must be construed to include the right on the part of the court, when deemed for the interest of all parties, to order such payment made by or through any of the court officers, and the sheriff would certainly be a proper selection, and when so done the sheriff is not entitled to poundage as such under section 2845, but may be allowed for his services such sum as the court deems just and equitable, in virtue of section 12050, General Code, which reads as follows:

> "Having regard to the interest of the parties, the benefit each may derive from a partition, and according to equity, the court shall tax the cost and expenses which accrue in the action, including reasonable counsel fees, which must be paid to plaintiff's counsel unless the court awards some part thereof to other counsel for service in the case for the common benefit of all parties; and execution may issue therefor as in other cases."

Inasmuch as I am of opinion that money paid in on election to take in partition proceedings is not made on writ of partition, the sheriff is not entitled to poundage on money so paid, but, where the court orders moneys paid to the sheriff under section 12039, I am of opinion that, the court, not as costs, but as expenses in the case, may make an allowance to the sheriff for compensation for services in complying with such order of court. In the absence of such order, and payment made under it, the sheriff is not entitled to compensation, either as costs or expenses for receiving and distributing funds paid him in partition cases where there is an election to take.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

THE FACT THAT AN ERROR IN PRINTING BALLOTS WAS MADE AND THE BALLOTS INSTEAD OF READING FIVE MILLS FOR THREE YEARS, READ TWO MILLS FOR THREE YEARS, AND WERE VOTED ON, DOES NOT MAKE THE ELECTION INVALID, AND THE TAXING AUTHORITIES MAY LEVY TWO ADDITIONAL MILLS FOR A PERIOD OF THREE YEARS.

Where the electors of a certain village voted to levy taxes in excess of the Smith law, the amount of five mills for three years, and a mistake was made in printing the ballots providing for the levy of two mills for a period of three years, the proceeding is not invalid, and the taxing authorities are authorized to levy two additional mills for municipal purposes during a period of three years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 4, 1913.

HON. I. H. BLYTHE, Prosecuting Attorney, Carrollton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of November 5th, receipt whereof has already been acknowledged, you state that the council of a certain village in Carroll county, passed a resolution under section 5649-5 General Code, for the submission to the electors of the village of a proposition to authorize the levying of taxes in excess of the Smith law limits, the number of mills specified being five, and the number of years during which the additional levy was to be permitted being three. The resolution was properly certified to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, and proper notice of submission of the question was given according to law. In all proceedings preliminary to the election itself, including publication of notice, the number of mills and number of years referred to in this resolution were correctly stated.

The ballots printed under the direction of the deputy state supervisors of elections erroneously stated the proposition as being the authorization of an additional levy of two mills for the period of three years. The ballots so prepared were used at the election, no one observing the discrepancy, and a majority of the electors voted affirmatively upon the question so submitted.

You ask my opinion as to whether the proceedings are void because of the discrepancy above referred to; whether the proceedings are valid as authorizing the additional levy of two mills for the period of three years or whether the proceedings are valid as authorizing an additional levy of five mills for a period of three years.

There is nothing in sections 5649-5 et seq., General Code which throws any light upon the solution of the question which you submit. They merely provide for the requisite steps in the submission of the question as to increasing the tax levy, all of which were complied with fully by the authorities required to act in the premises for the village in question, except for the unfortunate error which crept into the ballots.

It will be observed that the error was such as to make the affirmative ballots cast favor a proposition less extensive, so to speak, than they would have favored if cast upon the proposition originally designed to be submitted. That is to say, a vote in favor of authority to levy two mills for a given period confers pro tanto less extraordinary authority upon the taxing officers than one favoring a levy of five mills for the same period.

This being the case, I am of the opinion that the whole proceedings are not invalid as there is no excess, so to speak, of authority attempted to be conferred upon the taxing officers in addition to that sought by them. As between the proposition actually voted upon by the electors and that submitted by the resolution and published in the notice, I am of the opinion that the former controls. It certainly cannot be said, in law, that the electors have approved a proposition to authorize a levy of five additional mills by depositing affirmative ballots calling for the authorization of a levy of two additional mills only.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that as a result of the election aforesaid, the taxing authorities are authorized to levy two additional mills for municipal purposes during the period of three years.

The question is not free from difficulty, and in such search as I have made I have been unable to find any authorities upon it. I believe, however, that the general principles above outlined are correct, and that they lead to the conclusion expressed.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

WHERE SEVERAL LEGATEES ENTERED INTO A CONTRACT IN REFERENCE TO THE DISTRIBUTION OF AN ESTATE, AND THIS CONTRACT IS FILED IN THE PROBATE COURT, THE INHERITANCE TAX MAY BE ASSESSED AND COLLECTED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE TERMS OF THE CONTRACT FILED IN THE PROBATE COURT.

Under the terms of a certain will five cash legacies in the sum of $1,000 were bequeathed and one legacy of $2,000, and in addition thereto five legacies of $50 each were bequeathed. A contract was entered into between the persons receiving the legacies wherein it was agreed to pay the $50.00 legacies and the debts of the estate and the expenses of the administration, and to divide the remainder of the property equally between the remaining persons receiving the bequests. This contract was filed in the probate court. In this case the inheritance tax should be assessed and collected on the five legacies for $1,000 and the one for $2,000 in accordance with the agreement filed in the probate court, if the probate court authorizes the distribution of the estate as such in accordance therewith.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 19, 1913.

HON. THOMAS L. POGUE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt has already been acknowledged of a letter under date of October 29th from Mr. Charles A. Groom, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, submitting for my opinion the following question:

"Under the will of Theresa Braunstein, cash legacies of one thousand dollars were bequeathed to each of two sisters and three brothers and a legacy of two thousand dollars to another brother.

"In addition to the above, five legacies of fifty dollars each were bequeathed to nephews and nieces of the testatrix.

"All of the residue of the property of the testatrix was bequeathed to a brother in trust for the sisters, they to receive the income in equal shares during their natural lives and upon the death of either, the income which the sister so dying would have received is distributed to all of the brothers and surviving sister in equal parts.

"After the death of the two sisters for whom the trust was created, the entire principal of the trust fund is ordered converted into cash and the net proceeds divided equally among the four brothers share and share alike, and in the event any of said brothers be dead at the time of the distribution, leaving issue surviving, the issue is to take the deceased parent's portion.

"The estate is small, consisting entirely of personal property, and all of the brothers and sisters of the testatrix are elderly and their children are of full age.

"All the brothers and sisters and their children have entered into an agreement filed with the probate court to pay the $50.00 legacies to nieces and nephews, the debts of the estate and expenses of administration and to divide the property remaining equally between the six brothers and sisters and determine the trust.

"Our local probate court has correctly held that the tax becomes due immediately upon the death of the ancestor and that whatever private agreement may be made between the parties, their inheritance is nevertheless determined by the will or the statutes of descent and distribution.

"In the present case the remainder after termination of the trust is contingent, dependent upon survivorship of brothers or death of brothers with issue surviving, so that the tax in accordance with the terms of the will cannot at present be assessed. The carrying out of the agreement to terminate the trust and divide the residue of the estate equally among the brothers and sisters will, in this instance, carry the property to the persons entitled had the testatrix died intestate, with the exception of the bequests to nephews and nieces of fifty dollars each.

"Will you kindly advise me whether under the facts stated, the tax should be calculated upon the pro rata share each brother and sister will receive by the contract for distribution in equal parts, or whether I should treat the provision for distribution of the trust fund as an acceleration and tax the bequests of one and two thousand dollars respectively, plus the increase thereof from a pro rata distribution of the proceeds of the trust fund to such brothers and sisters as the parties now entitled thereto by virtue of the waiver and renunciation of each and their issue."

The present collateral inheritance tax law is found in section 5331, General Code, as amended, 103 O. L. 463. A tax is thereby imposed upon "all property * * * and any interests therein * * which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state" to certain persons, including brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces upon the value thereof above the sum of five hundred dollars.

The same section also provides that:

"Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien upon the property, and be and remain a lien until paid."

Other provisions of the related statutes seemingly bearing upon the question submitted by you may be cited as follows:

"Section 5335. Taxes imposed by this subdivision of this chapter shall be paid into the treasury of the county * * * within one year after the death of the decedent * * * and if not paid at the expiration of eighteen months after such death, the prosecuting attorney of the county * * * shall institute the necessary proceedings to collect the taxes, * * * after first being notified in writing by the probate judge of the county of the non-payment thereof * *."

"Section 5336. An administrator, executor or trustee, having in charge or trust, property subject to such law * * * shall not deliver any specific legacy or property subject to such tax to any person until he has collected the tax thereon."

"Section 5342. When for any reason the devisee, legatee or heir who has paid such tax relinquishes or reconveys a portion of the property on which it was paid * * * the tax, or the due proportional part thereof shall be repaid to him by the executor, administrator or trustee."

Under the laws of other states it has been held that in the case of contingent legacies which do not pass at the death of the testator, when the amount of the legacy ultimately payable to a given beneficiary cannot be ascertained at the time of the testator's death, his separate interest is taxable, but the amount of the tax not being ascertainable, the same cannot be collected until the estate actually vests in him. If this were the law of the state of Ohio, it might have applied to the case you submit in the absence of the agreement described by you, because at the death of the two sisters, if preceded by the death of one or more of the four brothers, each surviving child of one of such deceased brothers might receive a distributive share, amounting to less than five hundred dollars, in which event his inheritance would fall within the exempted class and would not be taxable. In other words, the amount which each surviving child of each of the four brothers might take ultimately under the will, could not be ascertained at the death of the testator and, therefore, the amount of the tax, cannot be determined at that time because of the chance that some of the ultimate legacies may fall within the exemption.

That being the case, section 5333, which I have not quoted, and which provides for the appraisal of remainders and of life estates, and the apportionment of the tax in such cases, probably cannot be applied.

Whether the doctrine of the foreign decisions to which I have referred, but which I have not cited, would apply under the Ohio law is extremely doubtful, because of the provision of section 5335, supra, to the effect that the tax shall be collected within eighteen months after the death of the testator. I do not find it necessary to determine any of these questions, however, for reasons which will appear.

Section 5331, which is the real operative portion of the collateral inheritance tax law imposes a tax upon property (or to be more accurate in the light of the decisions upon inheritance of property) passing by will or by the intestate laws of the state. In other words, it is a prerequisite of a valid assessment of the tax that the estate taxed shall be one devolving upon the person subject to the tax, by will or by operation of the laws of descent and distribution (omitting from mention the case of deed of gift also referred to in the statute). Broadly speaking, then, there must be an "inheritance" before there is a subject of taxation. Or, as pointed out in a former opinion which was, I think, given to you, it has been the holding of courts of this state in answering constitutional objections to inheritance tax laws that the real subject of taxation is not the property passing by inheritance but the privilege of inheriting. Therefore, in order to sustain the tax at all, it must be based upon the fact of inheritance as distinguished from other methods of acquiring title to real or personal property.

The question is, therefore, directly raised by your query, as to whether or not the beneficiaries of the will mentioned by you, in entering into the agreement referred to and in receiving the shares of the estate which would ultimately come into their respective possession, under that agreement would acquire their respective titles by inheritance or by voluntary acts inter vives. For, if in spite of the modifications of the terms of the will by the agreement, the distributive shares under the agreement are still "inheritances," then they are taxable as such; if, on the other hand, the titles to the distributive shares apportioned by the agreement, would vest in the six brothers and sisters by act of the parties, then, although there was a previous inheritance, a tax cannot attach to the shares determined by the agreement as such.

Now, in the case stated by you, it appears that the brothers and sisters and their children have entered into an agreement, which is filed with the probate court, to pay the specific legacies to nephews and nieces, and then to divide among themselves, in certain proportions, the remainder of the estate. Such action by them is necessary in order that the estate as such, may be divided as they have agreed. I assume from your statement that the estate is in probate, and that the object of this proceeding, which is not specifically authorized by any statute, is to secure an order of distribution from the court based upon the agreement. I shall first assume that the court has jurisdiction and power to make such an order of distribution, and to direct the administrator or executor to distribute the assets of the estate in the manner provided by the agreement. That is to say, I shall not give any great weight to the question as to whether or not an administrator or executor distributing the estate, and being discharged by order of court, may be held liable in any way. It is sufficient, I think, for the present purpose, to take into account the fact that the estate has been or is to be divided in accordance with the terms of the agreement. That is to say the various parties who are to receive distributive shares under the agreement are not intending to divide up their several legacies after distribution of such legacies to them, but they intend their agreement to have the effect of producing a certain distribution of the estate.

Putting it in another way, if the agreement is to be efficacious at all, its effect will be to divide the estate itself and to authorize the probate court and the executor or administrator to recognize those entitled to shares under the agreement as distributees of the estate as such.

That being the case, I am of the opinion that the takers of the distributive shares under the agreement will receive them as inheritance. Whoever, being other than a creditor of the estate, receives a distributive share of the estate of a deceased person under the orders or with the approval of a court of probate having jurisdiction to administer such estate, takes his share as if from the decedent himself, and, broadly speaking, acquires his title by inheritance. That is to say, as a sharer in the estate of the deceased person, he exercises and enjoys the privilege of inheritance which is secured to him by the laws of the state, indeed, created by those laws. There is, to my mind, an essential distinction between receipt by a person of a distributive estate, as such, on the one hand, and his use of such distributive share after it has passed out of the estate and become his property on the other hand. In the former, the devolution of title is by operation of law, whether the statute of wills, the statutes of descent and distribution or the proper orders of a court of proper jurisdiction. In the other case the operation of the law has extended itself and the party is dealing with that which is already his.

Assuming then, that the parties are to secure or have secured an order of court entitling them to share in the estate in accordance with the terms of the agreement entered into by them, whether that agreement be called renunciation or by any other name, I am of the opinion that these shares will fall to the respective parties as "inheritances" and will be taxable as such. In this view of the case it is immaterial to determine whether the various shares be regarded as passing "by will" or "by the intestate laws of this state;" although from a technical view point, I am of the opinion that they are shares passing by will, in that the will and its administration gives rise to whatever right the legatees may have to secure an order of distribution on the basis of their agreement.

This view of the case is sustained, inferentially at least, by some authority. Thus in Page vs. Rives, 1st Hughes, 297, Federal Case No. 10666, it was held that money received by claimants under a deceased person's will by reason of a compromise contract between them and the executor, sanctioned by the court having jurisdiction of money so received, does not constitute "distributive shares in an intestate's estate" for the purpose of a federal revenue tax. This decision merely establishes the rule that money so received is not received by virtue of intestacy and does not conflict with the holding that it may be regarded as received under the will, or, more broadly speaking, that its receipt may be regarded as due to inheritance.

Under the English statute where the testator directed a certain estate to be sold and the proceeds to be divided between his two sons, but they preferred to take the property themselves under an amicable arrangement, it was held that the duty was imposed upon the value of the property notwithstanding the deviation from the strict terms of the will. (Attorney General vs. Holford, 1 Price 426.)

Similarly, it is held in Pennsylvania, under a law quite like that in Ohio in its essential aspects, that where devisees and legatees have compromised with the contestors of the will, or with persons claiming title adversely to the decedent, and such compromise is approved by the court before distribution is ordered, the devisees and legatees are taxable only upon the shares actually received by them after deducting the amounts paid to the adverse claimants. (In Re Pepper's Est. 159 Pa. St. 509; In Re Kerr's Est. Id. 512.)

It is a fair analogy from these decisions, all under laws which rest the right to tax upon the privilege of inheritance, as such, that where the course or amount of the distributive shares deviates from those fixed by the will itself under authority of the administering court, the title of the ultimate takers is one of inheritance, and is derived from the will.

In short, although the terms of the will are not observed strictly because of the intervention of the agreement, yet it is the will which the court is administering when it authorizes the distribution according to the agreement.

I am, therefore, of the opinion, in the case you submit, that the tax should be assessed and collected on the shares distributed to the six sisters and brothers in accordance with the agreement filed with the probate court, if the probate court authorizes the distribution of the estate as such in accordance therewith.

Of course, all the foregoing is, as already stated, upon the supposition that the probate court will order distribution in accordance with the terms of the contract. If, on the other hand, the court should find itself without jurisdiction to make such an order of distribution or would decline to make the order under the facts of this case then I take it your question would not arise at all. Therefore, I have not considered the consequence of the court's failure to so act.

I think I have made it clear that I do not intend to pass upon the court's authority to order distribution in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BONDS, OUTSTANDING—EXEMPTIONS—CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

Inasmuch as bonds, for which an ordinance declaring it necessary to sell the same, was passed prior to January 1, 1913, when the same were not sold until after that date, are not "at present outstanding" at the time of the constitutional amendment, to wit: Section 12, article 2, became effective, such bonds are not exempt from taxes as provided by the terms of that amendment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 9, 1913.

HON. J. C. ADAMS, City Solicitor, Coshocton, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I have before me your letter of November 16, 1912, in which you inquire:

> "1. In your opinion, does the ordinance declaring it necessary to issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments have to lay over, under the initiative and referendum, for a period of sixty days before it becomes effective? and,
> "2. If the ordinance declaring it necessary to sell bonds is passed before January 1, 1913, but the bonds are not sold until after January 1, 1913, would the provision of the new constitution operate on such bonds and render them taxable?"

The first inquiry was answered some time ago by mailing you copy of an opinion of this department, dated November 18, 1912; and as to the second inquiry I desire to say that section 2 of article XII, as amended reads:

> "Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule, all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property according to its true value in money, except all bonds at present outstanding of the state of Ohio or of any city, village, hamlet, county or township in this state or which have been issued in behalf of the public schools in Ohio and the means of instruction in connection therewith, which bonds so at present outstanding shall be exempt from taxation; but burying grounds, public school houses, houses used exclusively for public worship, institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and personal property, to an amount not exceeding in value five hundred dollars, for each individual, may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation; but all such laws shall be subject to alteration or repeal; and the value of all property, so exempted, shall, from time to time, be ascertained and published as may be directed by law."

So far, without exception, the words "now," "now in office" and other terms expressive of the time when any of the constitutional amendments should take effect have been held as referring to January 1, 1913.

It will be observed that the words, "at present outstanding" are used twice in this section referring to bonds which may be exempt from taxation.

It is not thought necessary under the plain reading of this section to refer to the rule requiring exemptions from taxation to be construed strictly, and I hold that all bonds outstanding, that is, sold and in the hands of buyers may be exempted, while others, which will include all bonds sold and delivered after January 1, 1913, whether the necessity for issuing was determined before or after January 1, 1913, are subject to taxation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM ACT—ORDINARY EXPENDITURES—ORDINANCE OF COUNCIL PROVIDING FOR PURCHASE OF MAP AND BLUE PRINT INVOLVING EXPENDITURE.

It has been the policy of the courts to construe the initiative and referendum act strictly, and therefore an ordinance of council providing for the purchase of a map and blue print for a village, for the sum of $200.00, since it involves an expenditure of money, is within the purview of the initiative and referendum act and the clerk is required to hold up such expenditure for thirty days after the passage of said ordinance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 2, 1913.

HON. O. H. STEWART, City Solicitor, Pomeroy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 4th, you request my opinion on section 4227-2 General Code, as follows:

> "Does not this law, by application, require the clerk to hold up all expenditures for thirty days after their regular passage by council, in order to fully protect himself?"

In an opinion heretofore rendered by me I have given it as my opinion that the approval of the bills by a village council of the ordinary expenditures incurred by such council could not be considered as within section 4227-2, General Code, as an ordinance involving the expenditure of money. However, you state that the question arose on account of a controversy about spending $200.00 for a map and blue print of the village, and that upon the passage of the appropriation resolution, one of the members of council notified the clerk not to pay the bill, as he was going to circulate a petition for a referendum vote on the matter in question.

The courts of this state have been giving strict construction to the initiative and referendum act, and as undoubtedly the buying of a map and blue print of the village for the sum of $200.00 would be an expenditure of money, and since the statute in question covers ordinance, resolution, and other measures, I am of the opinion that it might well be held that the resolution appropriating the money for such purpose was one within the initiative and referendum act, and that the same would not become effective in less than sixty days.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ASSESSMENTS—STREET IMPROVEMENTS MAY BE ASSESSED FOR ONLY ONE-HALF OF PORTION WHICH WAS FORMERLY ASSESSED FOR PLANK ROAD IMPROVEMENT—PAVING AND RE-PAVING—CURBING.

When a street two miles in length and thirty-six feet in width, is being paved for a width of eight feet, partly in brick and partly improved for the same width by a plank road, and it is now desired to pave the entire width of such street, held:

That the construction of a plank road constituted a paving or repairing, within the meaning of section 2832, General Code, and that for the new improvement, under this statute, that portion of said road which had been so paved and planked could not be again assessed for more than one-half the costs and expenses of the new paving.

As regards the twenty-eight foot strip on such road, which had not been formerly improved, the assessment must be the same as upon original improvements.

The curbing and gutters, insofar as they have heretofore been provided and assessed against the abutting property can be assessed upon re-improving the same, for not more than one-half of the cost thereof, and where no curbing had heretofore been provided and assessed, such curbing and gutters may be assessed as in the case of an original improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 16, 1912.

HON. D. F. DUNLAVY, City Solicitor, Ashtabula, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 5, 1912, you submit the following to this department for an opinion:

"In the city of Ashtabula, Ohio, there is a street known as Lake street, and for the purpose of this opinion we will say that it runs from Aunger avenue, in the city of Ashtabula, to Bridge street, in the city of Ashtabula, and is a street of about two miles in length between those points. It is a thirty-six foot street, but has never been improved the entire width, and at this time the purpose of the council is to improve the street the full width of thirty-six feet, and to assess the costs, as much as may be done, upon the abutting property owners.

"Some years ago, and there is yet to be paid two or three assessments, a plank road was put in upon said street of a width of eight feet; that the costs of said plank road was assessed upon the abutting property owners on both sides of the street and has been paid for under the said assessment regularly and in accordance with said assessment, and there remains, as stated above, two or three assessments yet to be paid. This was for a portion, we will say at this time, of said street, perhaps of a length of three-quarters of a mile. There has also been an improvement on the same street, and in the place of a plank road, and connecting with said plank road, an eight foot paving, together with curb on one side, and this improvement has been assessed against abutting property owners on both sides of said street.

"The question now is: What portion of the costs of improvement can be legally assessed against abutting owners?"

Section 3822, General Code, to which you refer, provides:

"When a special assessment for the improvement of a street or other public place has been levied and paid, the property so assessed shall not again be assessed for more than one-half the cost and expense of repaving or repairing such street or other public place unless the grade thereof is changed."

This section has been construed in two recent decisions of the courts.

In Page vs. City of Columbus, 15 Cir. Ct. N. S. 40 (Ohio Law Reporter of June 3, 1912), it is held:

"The provision of section 3822, P. & A. Anno., G. C., limiting reassessments for repaving improved streets to one-half the cost, does not violate the constitutional inhibition as to retroactive or retrospective legislation, and applies to improvements made before and after the enactment of the said act.

"No distinction is made by this act as to material used or cost of the original improvement, but the restriction applies generally to all improvements whereby an unimproved street has been transformed into an improved one and the cost assessed specially against the abutting property."

This decision was affirmed by the supreme court without report in 86 Ohio St. 333. Rockel, J., in the opinion of the circuit court says at page 45:

"The second question that is raised is that the graveling of a roadway or surfacing it with crushed gravel is not within the statute. In other words, that what is meant to be included in the statute is that when a street has been once paved with brick or something of that character, and is thereafter repaved or repaired, that then it comes within the meaning of the statute. It is possible that this was chiefly what the legislature had in mind, but the statute must be construed according to the meaning of the words used in the statute.

"It may be true that a person might receive the benefits of this limitation, who had not been taxed very heavy for some prior improvement, but as the statute draws no lines of distinction between whether the original improvement shall be a gravel, cobble, plank, brick or stone roadway, or one of some other description, we must hold that it applies to all improvements of the character to which it might apply."

By virtue of this decision an improvement of a street by making a plank roadway, as in your case, would constitute an improvement thereof as contemplated by section 3822, General Code.

In case of Baldwin vs. Springfield, 20 Ohio Dec. 265, it is held:

"Macadamizing" a street, formerly improved by graveling pursuant to municipal direction, constitutes a 'repaving' within the meaning of section 53, Municipal Code of 1902 (General Code 3822) for which not more than one-half the cost may be assessed against the abutter.

"The limitation of section 53, Municipal Code of 1902 (General Code 3822) as to 'repaving' assessments does not apply to assessments for curbing and guttering if the former improvement did not include and the property were not assessed therefor either as part of a street or sidewalk improvement."

This case was affirmed by the circuit court on May 19, 1910, and is followed and liberally quoted from in the opinion in the case of Page vs. City of Columbus, supra.

In this case the graveling of a street is considered an improvement of a street as contemplated by section 3822, General Code.

Following the lead of these two decisions it may be held that the improvement of the eight foot strip of the street now in question, both that part which was improved by plank and that which was paved, would be considered, under section 3822, General Code, as an improvement of such eight foot strip and that said section 3822, General Code, would apply to an assessment made for repaving or repairing said eight foot strip and would limit the amount to be assessed against the abutting property for repaving or repairing such eight foot strip to one-half of the cost of such improvement.

In your case you desire to not only improve the eight foot strip but also to pave the remainder of said street, which remainder is twenty-eight feet wide. This width of twenty-eight feet has not been improved at any time by paving or by making a plank road therein, or by any other kind of paving material. It cannot be said that this part of the street is to be "repaved" or "repaired" because it has never been improved or paved in any way.

Section 3822, General Code, applies when the grade of the street is not changed. It makes no specific provision as to a case where only a part of a street has been improved and an assessment levied and paid therefor.

In Baldwin vs. Springfield, supra., it is held that "repairing" as used in section 3822, General Code, does not apply to an assessment for curbing and gutters if the former improvement did not include such curbing and guttering.

When a street is paved from curb to curb with brick there is no definite distinction between the main part of the street and the part where the water flows and which may be termed the gutters. In improving streets with gravel, or by macadamizing, or by laying asphalt therein, it is customary to lay brick or other hard material next to the curb and in such case this part is termed the gutters. The width of the gutters varies and is sometimes as wide as four feet on each side of the street. It is in fact a part of the improvement of the street between the curb lines. It is a part of the roadway.

The court in Baldwin vs. Springfield, supra, when it excepted the gutters from the limitation of section 3822, General Code, must have contemplated that only the central part of the street had been formerly improved by placing gravel therein, and that the part next to the curb line which would constitute the gutters, had not been improved. The reasoning upon which the court based its conclusion must necessarily have been that only a part of the street had been improved by the former improvement and that the improvement thereafter of that part which had not theretofore been improved would not fall within the provisions of section 3822, General Code.

In Baldwin vs. Springfield, supra, Kunkle, J., says on page 271:

> "To constitute an original paving of a street there must have been a substantial paving of the part of the street improved. Page & Jones, Taxation, section 462; Brady, in re, 85 N. Y. 268.
> "A street includes sidewalks and gutters, and paving includes flagging; the work therefore of setting curb and gutter stones, and flagging the sidewalk of a street, which has once been done, is included in the phrase, repaving a street. Burmeister, in re, 76 N. Y. 174.
> "It is not claimed that the property owners in question have previously constructed or been assessed for any curbing and guttering on this street, either as a part of a street or of a sidewalk improvement. The only expense to which they have been subjected, relates to the grading and graveling of the portion of the highway in question."

Also on page 272, he further says:

> "As the plaintiffs have never constructed or been previously assessed for curbing and guttering, either as a part of a street improvement or as a part of a sidewalk improvement, I do not think the cost of the curbing and guttering in question would come within the repaving limitation."

In the case submitted the property owners have never been assessed for improving the additional twenty-eight feet of the street, which the city now proposes to improve. They have not improved this part of the street themselves. As to this part of the street it cannot be said that the proposed improvement will constitute a "repaving" or a "repairing" thereof. It has never been paved.

As to this twenty-eight foot strip, I am of the opinion that the limitation upon the assessment as provided in section 3822, General Code, does not apply and that the city, as to this part of the street, may levy the assessment, as if it were an original improvement.

It appears that in a part of the street one curb has been provided and the cost thereof assessed upon the abutting property. The improvement of a street contemplates two curbs. As part of the property owners have been assessed for one curb they cannot now be assessed in full for the cost of two curbs. The cost of one curb may be assessed as if it were an original improvement and the other curb would come within the limitation of section 3822, General Code.

In making the assessment for the improvement contemplated against the abutting property, not more than one-half of the cost of repaving the eight foot strip can be assessed against such abutting property. The cost of paving the remainder of said street may be assessed against such abutting property in the manner and amount as in an original improvement of a street. The curbing and gutters in so far as they have heretofore been provided and assessed against the abutting property, can be assessed on reimproving the same for not more than one-half of the cost thereof, and where no curbing or gutters have heretofore been provided and assessed, such curbing and gutters may be assessed as in the case of an original improvement.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COMPENSATION OF CITY SOLICITORS BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR SERVICES IN STATE CASES—"SHALL" IS DIRECTORY AND MEANS MAY.

Under section 4306, as amended, county commissioners may allow a city solicitor or assistant, or assistants designated by the solicitor, to act as prosecuting attorney, or attorney of the police or mayor's court, such compensation as they may deem advisable.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 7, 1912.

HON. F. G. LONG, City Solicitor, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 3rd you request my opinion as to what construction may be given to sections 4306 and 4307, General Code, as amended May 5, 1911. You inquire specifically as follows:

> 1. "Are the county commissioners authorized under said sections to allow a city solicitor compensation for his services rendered in state cases in the mayor's court.
> 2. "Are the last two words of section 4307 'shall allow' directory or mandatory in their application or construction?"

You further advise that you have had a number of state cases within the last year and you inquire:

3. "Whether you should receive compensation, or may you receive compensation from the county commissioners for said cases."

Section 4306, General Code, provides as follows:

"The solicitor shall also be prosecuting attorney of the police or mayor's court. When council allows an assistant or assistants to the solicitor, he may designate an assistant or assistants to act as prosecuting attorney or attorneys of the police or mayor's court. The person thus designated shall be subject to the approval of the city council."

Section 4307, General Code, provides:

"The prosecuting attorney of the police or mayor's court shall prosecute all cases brought before such court, and perform the same duties, as far as they are applicable thereto, as required of the prosecuting attorney of the county. The city solicitor or the assistant or assistants whom he may designate to act as prosecuting attorney or attorneys, of the police or mayor's court shall receive for this service such compensation as council may prescribe, and such additional compensation as the county commissioners shall allow."

Prior to the amendment of sections 4306 and 4307, General Code, under date of May 5, 1911, I gave it as my opinion in an opinion rendered to the Hon. Warren J. McLaughlin, city solicitor, Lima, Ohio, under date of May 12, 1911, that the language of section 4307, General Code, providing for compensation by county commissioners did not apply to a city solicitor but solely to assistant city solicitor. However, since the amendment referred to I am now of the opinion that the county commissioners are now authorized under said sections to allow city solicitors compensation for their services rendered in state cases in mayor's court.

Second. Section 4307, General Code, provides that the city solicitor shall receive for services as prosecuting attorney in the mayor's court such compensation as council may prescribe and such additional compensation as the county commissioners shall allow.

While it is true that there is a seeming difference in the language between "may" and "shall" yet I am of the opinion that it is optional with the county commissioners as to whether or not they allow any additional compensation to a city solicitor for the prosecution of state cases in the mayor's court. Or, in other words, that the words "shall allow" are simply directory in their application or construction.

Third. One of the meanings of compensation as given by the dictionary is:

"To recompense or compensate for work or labor done."

As you state that as city solicitor you have prosecuted a number of state cases in the mayor's court in the last year and as the law permits the county commissioners to allow additional compensation for such services I am of the opinion that you are entitled to receive compensation from the county commissioners for said cases should they see fit to allow you therefor. As I view it, the compensation provided for in section 4307, General Code, may be either fixed at a lump sum in advance, or as I view it, the more proper way by fixing the compensation after the services are performed.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

SINKING FUND TRUSTEES MAY NOT PURCHASE CITY BONDS ON CREDIT—CASH SALES.

Under section 4514, General Code, trustees of the sinking fund are given power to invest all moneys received by them in specified bonds and under section 3922, General Code, a municipal corporation must first offer its bonds to said trustees before they may offer them for sale to other parties.

Their powers, under section 45414, General Code, are restricted to the investment in this manner of moneys received by them and such power cannot be extended so as to allow them the right to purchase such bonds other than by the immediate payment of the amount due.

Such board of trustees, therefore, may not purchase city bonds upon the agreement to pay for them at a future date.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 7, 1912.

HON. MARSHALL G. FENTON, City Solicitor, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 7 you submitted for my opinion the following question:

> "The board of the trustees of the sinking fund have since its organization bought all city bonds issued and have paid for same as the money was needed by the city. By this practice ten or fifteen thousand dollars has been earned and placed to the credit of the general sinking fund. This you can see has been quite an item. Query: Can the board of trustees of the sinking fund continue such practice, or will it be necessary to pay in full for all bonds at time of purchase from the city."

Section 3922, General Code, provides that when a municipal corporation issues its bonds it shall first offer them to the trustees of the sinking fund and if said trustees decline to take the bonds the corporation shall then offer them to the board of commissioners of the sinking fund of the city school districts.

Section 3923, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "Only after the refusal of all such officers to take all or any of such bonds at par and interest, bona fide for and to be held for the benefit of such corporation, sinking fund or debt, shall the bonds, or as many of them as remain, be advertised for public sale."

Section 3924, General Code, provides that:

> "Sales of bonds, other than to the trustees of the sinking fund of the city or to the board of commissioners of the sinking fund of the city school district as herein authorized, by any municipal corporation, shall be to the highest bidder after publication."

In your inquiry you state that it has been a custom of the board of trustees of the sinking fund of your city to buy all city bonds and to pay for them as the money was needed by the city. I do not believe that that is the intent of the statute. As I view it, the statute intends that the bonds shall be offered to such trustees and if accepted the money is forthwith to be paid. I am unable to view the matter in any other light. Section 3922, General Code, specifically provides that the bonds shall be offered to the trustees of the sinking fund at par and accrued interest, which must necessarily mean accrued interest to the day it is offered; i. e., such interest as has accrued since the issuance of the bond up to the day of acceptance thereof by the trustees. The entire sections to which I have referred in this opinion confirm me in the view that it is understood that the sale to the trustees of the sinking fund or to the board of commissioners of the sinking fund of the city school district shall be a cash transaction.

This view is further strengthened by consideration of section 4514, General Code, wherein it is provided as follows:

> "The trustees of the sinking fund shall invest all moneys received by them in bonds of the United States, the state of Ohio, or of any municipal corporation, school, township or county bonds, in such state, and hold in reserve only such sums as may be needed for effecting the terms of this title. All interest received by them shall be re-invested in like manner."

Such section provides that the trustees shall invest all moneys received by them in the bonds specified and hold in reserve only such moneys as may be needed. It contemplates, therefore, that it is the duty of the trustees in taking over bond issued to have the money on hand with which to pay for the same and not to lend the credit of the trustees to the city in return for the bonds of such city.

While it might be a saving to the city to permit the sinking fund trustees to hold the money which they should have paid for the bonds at the time of accepting the same until the money was needed by the city, yet, if such be the desire it will require legislative enactment so to provide.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

HOME RULE—WHAT IS A "PUBLIC UTILITY"—AN ICE MANUFACTURER IS NOT SUCH A PUBLIC UTILITY AS MAY BE CONDUCTED BY A MUNICIPALITY UNDER THE AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

A manufacturer of ice does not require a use of public property nor the consent of the legislature, nor is such a business comprehended by the decisions defining utilities.

The manufacturer of ice is not such a public use as affects an entire community, so as to entitle such a business to be classed as a public utility, within the meaning of article 18, section 4, of the new Ohio constitution, providing for the ownership and operation of public utilities by municipal corporations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1913.

HON. DAVID H. JAMES, City Solicitor, Martins Ferry, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 4, 1912, you inquire of this department as follows:

> "Is an ice manufactory conducted for the purpose of supplying ice to the inhabitants of a city, a public utility within the meaning of article 18, section 4, of the constitution, as recently amended?
> "May the city council, out of funds raised by general taxation, legally appropriate money for the purpose of constructing and operating a municipal ice manufactory to supply ice to the inhabitants of the city?"

The provision of the new constitution to be construed is contained in the amendment granting municipal Home rule.

Section 4 of article 18 of the recently amended constitution of Ohio reads:

> "Any municipality may acquire, construct, own, lease and operate within or without its corporate limits, any public utility, the product or service of which is or is to be supplied to the municipality or its inhabitants, and may contract with others for any such product or service. The acquisition of any such public utility may be by condemnation or otherwise, and a municipality may acquire thereby the use of, or full title to, the property and franchise of any company or person supplying to the municipality or its inhabitants the service or product of any such utility."

This section of the constitution authorizes a municipal corporation to operate "any public utility the product or service of which is or is to be supplied to the municipality or its inhabitants."

By virtue of this section a municipality is not authorized to operate any utility the product or service of which is to be supplied to the municipality or to its inhabitants, but its power to provide such service or product is limited to such utilities as are "public" in character.

It is necessary to determine, therefore, whether or not the manufacture and distribution of ice can be classed as a "public utility" within the meaning of this constitutional provision.

The courts and text writers do not lay down a rule by which a "public utility" may be tested in all cases. Each business or service must depend upon its own peculiar characteristics and the general principles as to what constitutes a "public use," or "public service" or "public utility" applied thereto.

The cases pertaining to the exercise of the right of eminent domain have determined various things to be a "public use." It is in this line of cases that the doctrine of a "public use" has been mostly applied.

The difficulties that have confronted the courts and the text writers in defining the term "public use" is stated by Cooley on page 766, 768 and 769 of his work on Constitutional Limitations, where he says:

> "We find ourselves somewhat at sea, however, when we undertake to define, in the light of the judicial decisions, what constitutes a public use.
> "The reason of the case and the settled practice of free governments must be our guides in determining what is or is not to be regarded a public use; and that only can be considered such where the government is supplying its own needs or is furnishing facilities for its citizens in regard to those matters of public necessity, convenience or welfare, which, on account of their peculiar character, and the difficulty—perhaps impossibility—of making provision for them otherwise, it is alike proper, useful and needful for the government to provide."

Dillon in his work on Municipal Corporations, 5th Ed. says at section 1293:

> "The politico-economical question of municipal ownership and operation plays an important part in all public utilities, but does not require to be discussed here. The funds of a municipality being derived from the people either by taxation, or by other revenue received for public purposes, there is, of course, the inherent condition attached to all public utilities constructed at the expense or on the credit of a municipality, that they should be public in character."

He here lays down the condition that the utility must be "public in character." At section 1292, he further says:

"Whether the legislature in the United States can authorize a municipality to carry on a business for the benefit of its inhabitants must be determined by considering whether the carrying on of such business can be regarded as a public service. This inquiry underlies every attempt to confer upon a municipality the power to exercise trading functions. If such a business is to be carried on, it must be with money raised by taxation, and it is settled in the United States that the legislature can authorize a municipality to tax its inhabitants only for public purposes. This is the uniform rule of law in the United States. It is not easy to determine in every instance whether a benefit conferred upon many individuals in a community can be called a "public service" within the meaning of the rule that taxes can be laid only for public purposes. In general, however, it may be said that the promotion by taxation of the private interests of many individuals is not a public service within the meaning of the constitution."

Pond in his work on Municipal Control of Public Utilities gives certain characteristics of a public use at page 89, where he says:

"The rule of law is now universally accepted that when private property is devoted to a public use, it is subject to public regulation and control. Property is clothed with a public interest and devoted to a public use when used in a manner to make it of public consequence, and to affect the entire community. When one devotes property to a use in which the public has an interest, he virtually grants to the public an interest in that use, and must submit to public control for the common good to the extent of the interest so granted."

In Massachusetts it has been held that the manufacture and distribution of gas and electricity to the inhabitants of a town is a public use. And it is also held in said state that the purchase and sale of coal and wood for the use of the inhabitants is not a public service. These cases are well considered and will be liberally quoted from.

In the case of Opinion of the Justices, 150 Mass. 592, it is held:

"The legislature has the power under the constitution to authorize the cities and towns within the commonwealth to manufacture and distribute gas or electric light for use in their public streets and buildings and for sale to their inhabitants."

On page 595 of the opinion, the justices say:

"It is impossible to define with entire accuracy all the characteristics which distinguish a public service and a public use from services and uses which are private. The subject has been considered many times in the opinions of the court of which we are now the justices, and Lowell vs. Boston, (111 Mass.454) is a leading case. It is there said, that 'an appropriation of money raised by taxation, or of property taken by right of eminent domain, by way of gift to an individual for his own private uses exclusively, would clearly be an excess of legislative power,' that 'the promotion of the interests of individuals, either in respect of property or business, although it may result incidentally in the advancement of public welfare, is, in its essential character, a private and not a public object,' and the appropriation of property for turnpikes and railroads 'can only be justified by the public service thereby secured in the increased facilities for transportation of freight and passengers, of which the whole community may rightfully avail itself.' It is said that the essential point is that a public service or use affects the inhabitants 'as a community, and not merely as individuals.' "

Also on page 597, the Justices further say:

"It is not necessarily an objection to a public work maintained by a city or town, that it incidentally benefits some individuals more than others, or that from the place of residence or for other reasons every inhabitant of the city or town cannot use it, if every inhabitant who is so situated that he can use it, has the same right to use it as the other inhabitants. It must after all be a question of kind and degree whether the promotion of the interests of many individuals in the same community constitute a public service or not. But in general it may be said that matters which concern the welfare and convenience of all the inhabitants of a city or town, and cannot be successfully dealt with without the aid of powers derived from the legislature, may be subjected to municipal control when the benefits received are such that each inhabitant needs them and may participate in them, and it is for the interest of each inhabitant that others as well as himself should possess and enjoy them."

In Opinion of the Justices, 155 Mass. 598, it is held:

"By Field, C. J., Allen, Knowlton, Morton and Lathrop, J. J. The legislature has not the power, under the constitution, to authorize the cities and towns within the commonwealth to buy coal and wood for the purpose of sale to their inhabitants for fuel.

"By Holmes, J. The legislature has the power to give such authority.

"By Barker, J. The legislature cannot authorize towns and cities to engage in trade merely that it may be better carried on; but may authorize them to deal in fuel, if the necessities of the people can be met only in that way"

The majority of the justices deny the right of the legislature to grant to a municipality the right to engage in the business of buying and selling coal for the use of its inhabitants. One justice dissents in toto and another justice modifies the holding so as to permit the municipality to furnish coal and wood for fuel "if the necessities of the people can be met only in that way." This latter view was followed in a later case, to-wit, Opinion of the Justices, 182 Mass. 605, in which it was held that the legislature had the power to grant to municipalities the right to supply fuel to its inhabitants in case of a scarcity falling short of a famine, but creating widespread and general distress. Such a situation is not now presented in your inquiry.

In the opinion of the majority of the justices in 155 Mass. 598, supra., they say at pages 601 and 602:

"Whether the legislature can authorize a city or town to buy coal and wood, and to sell them to its inhabitants for fuel, must be determined by considering whether the carrying on of such a business for the benefit of the inhabitants can be regarded as a public service. This inquiry underlies all the questions on which our opinion is required. If such a business is to be carried on, it must be with money raised by taxation. It is settled that the legislature can authorize a city or town to tax its inhabitants only for public purposes. This is not only the law of this commonwealth, but of the states generally and of the United States.

"It is not easy to determine in every case whether a benefit conferred upon many individuals in a community can be called a public service within the meaning of the rule that taxes can be laid only for public purposes. In general, however, it may be said that the promotion by taxation of the private interests of many individuals is not a public service within the meaning of the constitution."

Also on page 602, they further say:

"There are nowhere in the constitution any provisions which tend to show that the government was established for the purpose of carrying on the buying and selling of such merchandise as at the time when the constitution was adopted was usually bought and sold by individuals, and with which individuals were able to supply the community, no matter how essential the business might be to the welfare of the inhabitants. The object of the constitution was to protect individuals in their rights to carry on the customary business of life, rather than to authorize the commonwealth of the 'towns, parishes, precincts and other bodies politic' to undertake what had usually been left to the private enterpriess of individuals."

On page 605 the justices further say:

"In the opinion given to the house of representatives on May 27, 1890, which is printed in 150 Mass. 592, the justices advised that the manufacture and distribution of gas and electricity for furnishing light to the inhabitants of cities and towns might properly be regarded as constituting a public service. It was there said: 'It must often be a question of kind and degree whether the promotion of the interests of many individuals in the same community constitute a public service or not.' Gas or electricity for furnishing light has in recent times become a most convenient means of lighting both public and private buildings, streets and grounds. It is impracticable that each individual should manufacture gas or electricity for himself, but this can best be done by some company or the municipality for a considerable territory, and for the use of both the municipality itself and the inhabitants. Everybody who chooses within that territory cannot be permitted to manufacture and distribute gas or electricity for the public use or the use of other persons, as it is distributed by means of pipes and wires, and the number who properly can be permitted to lay pipes or wires in a given territory must be limited to one, or at most to a few persons or corporations. The pipes or wires must be laid in or over the public ways; or in or over land taken for the purpose, which may require the exercise of the right of eminent domain."

On page 606 they further say:

"But when the constitution was adopted the buying and selling of wood and coal for fuel was a well known form of private business, which was generally carried on as other kinds of business were carried on; and is now carried on in much the same manner as it was then. It was and is a kind of business which in its relations to the community did not and does not differ essentially from the business of buying and selling any other of the necessities of life. Although all kinds of business may be regulated by the legislature, yet to buy and sell coal and wood for fuel requires no authority from the legislature, and requires the exercise of no powers derived from the legislature, and every person who chooses can engage in it in the same manner as in the buying and selling of other merchandise."

These cases lay down certain rules and tests as to what constitutes a public service which the business of manufacturing and distributing of ice cannot meet.

It is not necessary to rely solely upon the decisions of one state.

In Baker vs. City of Grand Rapids, 142 Mich. 687, it is held:

> "A city has the right, through its board of poor commissioners, to provide fuel for needy citizens, and in emergency, when a coal famine seems imminent, is authorized to purchase such amount of fuel, in any market, as is necessary for that purpose; but it cannot enter into a commercial enterprise by buying and selling coal to its citizens as a business, thereby entering into competition with dealers in coal, since such a use of public funds is not for a public purpose."

While the term "public use" as used in the law of eminent domain may not in all cases be synonymous with the term "public utility" as used in the municipal ownership provision of the constitution, yet there is sufficient similarity in their meaning and application that it is safe and proper to look to the definition of "public use" as used in the law of eminent domain to ascertain the principles which will apply to determine whether or not a certain service or product can be considered a public service, of the means of supplying the same a "public utility."

At section 252 of Lewis on Eminent Domain, 3 Ed., he says:

> "It is easily determined, as has been shown in the two preceding sections, that private property can be taken only for public use, and that what is a public use is a question for the courts. When, however, we come to seek for the principles upon which the question of public use is to be determined, or to define the words 'public use' in the light of judicial decisions, we find ourselves utterly at sea. 'No question has ever been submitted to the courts,' says one authority, 'upon which there is a greater variety and conflict of reasoning and results than that presented as to the meaning of the words "public use," as found in the different state constitutions regulating the right of eminent domain.' A perusal of the cases cited in this chapter will verify this statement. Courts have generally avoided and wisely so, the enunciation of general principles or the giving of general definitions which might prove stumbling blocks in subsequent cases or work mischief in their practical application. It is the duty of courts simply to apply the law to the case in hand. But every decision necessarily proceeds upon the basis of certain general principles, which whether expressed or not, are capable of being discovered and applied to future cases."

Also at section 257, he further says:

> "The different views which have been taken of the words 'public use' resolve themselves into two classes; one holding that there must be a use or right of use on the part of the public or some limited portion of it, the other holding that they are equivalent to public benefit, utility or advantage."

And at section 258:

> "It is of course impossible to reconcile these different views, and the question is, which is correct.
> "The use of a thing is strictly and properly the employment or application of the thing in some manner. The public use of anything is the employment or application of the thing by the public. Public use means the same as use by the public, and this it seems to us is the construction the words should receive in the constitutional provision in question. The reasons which incline us to this view are: First, that it accords with the primary and more commonly understood meaning of the words; second, it accords with the general practice in regard to taking private property for public use in vogue when the phrase was first brought into use in the earlier constitutions; third, it is the only view which gives the words any force as a limitation or renders them capable of any definite and practical application.

"If the constitution means that private property can be taken only for use by the public, it affords a definite guide to both the legislature and the courts. Though the property is vested in private individuals or corporations, the public retain certain definite rights to its use or enjoyment, and to that extent it remains under the control of the legislature. If no such rights are secured to the public, then the property is not taken for public use and the act of appropriation is void.

"On the other hand, if the constitution means that private property may be taken for any purpose of public benefit and utility, what limit is there to the power of the legislature?"

In Farmers Market Co. vs. Philadelphia and Reading Terminal Co., 10 Pa., circuit court, 25, this test of a public use is given:

"Not every use from which the public may incidentally and temporarily derive an advantage or benefit or convenience during the pleasure of the owner of the property and from which they may be excluded at the mere caprice of the owner is a public use. The test whether a use is public or not is whether a public trust is imposed upon the property—whether the public have a legal right to the use which cannot be gainssaid or denied or withdrawn at the pleasure of the owner."

This decision is not by the highest court of Pennsylvania, but is it quoted with approval in Amsperger vs. Crawford, 101 Md., 247, where it is held:

"A public use of property means, not a use that will be to the interest or to the advantage of the public, but a use of the property by the public."

Pearce, J., says on page 253:

"We agree with the Pennsylvania court (Farmers Market Co. vs. Phil. R.T. Co., 10 Pa. Cr. Ct. 25), that 'the test whether a use is public or not, is whether a public trust is imposed upon the property, whether the public has a legal right to the use, which cannot be gainsaid or denied or withdrawn at the pleasure of the owner.' And we held with the New York court (Matter of Niagara Falls, 108 N. Y. 375) that 'the expressions, public interest and public use are not synonymous, that the establishment of mills and manufactories, the building of churches and hotels and other similar enterprises are more or less matters of public concern and promote in a general sense the public welfare. But they lie without the domain of public uses for which private ownership may be displaced by compulsory proceedings."

In order for a utility to be public it must have certain inherent characteristics. Not every utility which is of benefit or interest to the public can be considered a "public utility." Every individual in a community is interested in securing the necessities of life, and any service which permits him to secure these is of public benefit. But that alone does not make the means of supplying such necessity of life a "public utility."

In the law of eminent domain the following have been generally held to be public uses: Highways and roads; railroads; telegraph and telephone lines; water works; canals and waterways; drains; levees and sewers; ferries; oil pipe lines; electric light plants and gas works. All of these have certain characteristics which distinguish them from uses which are considered private. In order to carry on the most of these the consent of the government must be first secured. Many of them use the public highways for their pipes, poles, wires and tracks. In all of them the government retains the right to regulate and control. The corporation or persons who supply any of these things must supply them to all who care to use their facilities.

In order for a person or corporation to manufacture or distribute ice it is not necessary to first secure the consent of the government. An ice manufacturer does not use the streets of a city in the same manner as a water works, or electric light or gas company, or a street railway uses them. The ice manufacturer uses the streets for his wagons but he has no property permanently in the streets as the others have. The state or city does not exercise the same control over the manufacturer and distributor of ice that it exercises over street railways, electric light and gas plants.

The business of manufacturing and distributing ice has the characteristics of a private business and it has not the characteristics of a public service.

It is, therefore, my opinion that a municipality cannot engage in the business of manufacturing and distributing ice to its inhabitants. Such a business is not a "public utility" within the meaning of section 4, article 18, of the new Ohio constitution.

With this construction of this section it is not necessary to determine whether or not this provision of the constitution is self-executing.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—TEMPORARY APPOINTEE IN THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SERVICE DOES NOT OBTAIN PERMANENT POSITION BY MERE PASSAGE OF EXAMINATION.

Under section 4481, General Code, appointments to position in the classified service in municipal corporations, must be made from a list of three candidates, certified by the commission to the appointing authorities.

Under section 44881, General Code, however, when there are no eligible names for certification to the vacancy, upon the list of the commission, a temporary appointment may be made. A person so temporarily appointed, however, does not acquire a right to permanency in the position by the mere fact of a certification from the civil service commission, that he has successfully passed their examination; on the contrary a permanent position must be filled in accordance with section 4481, General Code, by selection from eligible names certified by the civil service commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 30, 1912.

HON. FRED S. SCOTT, City Solicitor, Nelsonville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 4, 1912, you submit the following inquiry to this department:

"On the first day of January, A. D., 1912, the director of public service appointed E. P. to the position of water-lineman (water works department), of the city of Nelsonville, Ohio, the water-lineman having resigned, January first, A. D., 1912, and there were no applicants to certify from on the roster of the civil service commission of said city.

On the first of November, A. D., 1912, a civil service commission for the city of Nelsonville was held, and said E. P. took the civil service examination, and was notified by the said civil service commissioners, that he had passed a successful examination.

"On the first of December, A. D., 1912, the director of public service forwarded to the said civil service commissioners a certificate of appointment, a copy of which I hereunto attach and make a part of this communication.

"I request your opinion as to whether or not, it is necessary for the director of public service to certify to said civil service commission a vacancy in the position of water-lineman; or is said E. P. an incumbent duly there in the said position."

The certificate of appointment enclosed is dated December first, 1912, but states that the appointment was made on January first, 1912. This was before the appointee took the civil service examination. It is conceded that the position in question is in the classified service of the city.

Section 4481, General Code, provides the manner of appointment when a vacancy occurs in a position in the classified service. Said section reads:

"Appointments shall be made in the following manner: The appointing board or officer shall notify the commission of any vacancy to be filled. The commission shall thereupon certify to such board or officer the three candidates graded highest in the respective lists as shown by the result of such examination. Such board or officer shall thereupon appoint one of the three so certified. Grades and standings so established shall remain the grades for a period of six months, or longer if the commission determines, and in succeeding notifications of vacancies, candidates not selected may be dropped by the commission after having been certified a total of three times."

Before an appointment can be made to a position in the classified service the appointing officer must notify the civil service commission of the vacancy and thereupon the commission shall certify three candidates from the proper list.

In your case it does not appear that any notice was given to the commission of any vacancy. Neither does it appear that the civil service commission certified any names eligible for appointment.

It appears that when the vacancy first occurred there was no name upon the eligible list to be certified. Thereupon the director of public service made a temporary appointment under section 4488, General Code, which provides:

"To prevent the stoppage of public business or to meet extraordinary exigencies, as provided in this title, the mayor may make temporary appointments."

Such temporary appointee could only hold the position until such time as the civil service commission could certify the candidates from its classified list. After his appointment the temporary appointee took the civil service examination and became eligible for appointment to the regular position. After such eligibility a certificate of appointment was made to the civil service commission, but this certificate attempts to have the appointment date back to January first, which date was before the time when such appointee took the civil service examination. It is evident that the name of such appointee was not certified to the appointing officer after the appointee took examination. This is essential in order to make an appointment other than a temporary appointment. The appointee in question may not have been one of the three highest in grade on the eligible list, and may not have been one of the three to be certified.

It is contended that because there was no name upon the eligible list on January 1, 1912, when the appointment was made, such appointment was legal and the appointee would have the protection of the civil service law as to removal. The statutes do not make an exception as to the manner of appointment when no name is upon the eligible list. On the contrary section 4488, General Code, provides for temporary appointments until such time as eligible names can be supplied and the appointment made in the regular way. Such temporary appointees are not subject to civil service regulation and they do not come within the protection of said laws.

The fact that no person has ever taken an examination for a particular position does not dispense with the necessity of making the appointment thereto after examination and certification by the civil service commission as required by sections 4480 and 4481, General Code. The purpose of the civil service law to apply a test of merit to appointees cannot be evaded because no name is upon the eligible list. When a vacancy occurs and there is no name upon the eligible list, an examination should be held to supply such names.

The director of public service should notify the civil service commission that there is a vacancy and thereupon the civil service commission should certify three names if it has such on its eligible list for such position. As held heretofore by this department, if there are less than three names on the eligible list the commission may certify the names they have, and the director of public service may make an appointment from such name or names, but he is not required to make an appointment from such name or names unless three names are certified to him.

Unless the person in question has been certified for appointment by the civil service commission after examination, and the appointment thereafter made he is not appointed to the regular position, and he is not protected by the civil service laws.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC SERVICE DIRECTOR—EMPLOYMENT OF ENGINEER FOR PREPARING PLANS FOR MUNICIPAL WATER WORKS PLANT—FIXING OF COMPENSATION BY COUNCIL.

The work of preparing plans, specifications and estimates for municipal water works plant, must be conducted by the director of public service, in accordance with section 4326, General Code. The employment of an engineer for said work, in accordance with section 3428, General Code, need not be authorized by council. The compensation of such engineer, however, must be fixed by council, in accordance with section 4314, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 11, 1913.

HON. J. F. NEILAN, City Solicitor, Hamilton, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 3rd, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

"Should the council or should the director of public service employ an engineer for the purpose of preparing plans, specifications and estimates of cost, and supervising the work in connection with the making of certain improvements in municipal water works plants?

If the director of public service should exercise the power, to what extent is his authority limited by the provisions of section 4328 of the General Code?"

I quote the following provisions of the law, most of which are cited by you in your letter:

"Section 4324. The director of public service shall manage and supervise all public works and undertakings of the city, except as otherwise provided by law, * * *

"Section 4325. The director of public service shall supervise the improvement * * * of streets * * * and the construction of public improvements * * * except those having reference to the department of public safety, or as otherwise provided in this title.

"Section 4326. The director of public service shall manage municipal undertakings * * * and shall make and preserve surveys, maps, plans, drawings and estimates. He shall supervise the construction and have charge of the maintenance of public buildings and other property of the corporation not otherwise provided for in this title. He shall have the management of all other matters provided by the council in connection with the public service of the city."

"Section 4327. The director of public service may * * * determine the number of * * * engineers * * * necessary for the execution of the work and the performance of the duties of his department.

"Section 4211. The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as is otherwise provided by this title. * * *"

"Section 4328. The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material * * * for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, certain formalities shall be observed. * * *"

In my opinion, it is perfectly clear from these sections that the work of preparing the plans, specifications and estimates for a contemplated improvement of the kind you mention is within the department of public service, so that council has nothing more to do with the matter after it has authorized the improvement than to require the director of public service through the engineering department to have the necessary services performed. It is immaterial, so far as council is concerned, whether the director did this by use of his regular force or by the employment of additional men or consulting experts.

In my opinion, a consulting engineer employed on work of this sort is, in contemplation of law, a member of the department of public service specially employed as such. That being the case, his employment is not to be regarded as a contract within the meaning of section 4328, but as an arrangement for the compensation of the person employed in the department. That being the case, it is not necessary for council specifically to authorize the employment in case it involves an expenditure of more than five hundred dollars.

However, such employment may not be made unless the council has, in pursuance of the power vested in it by section 4314 of the General Code (which I do not quote), fixed the compensation pertaining to the position of the person specially employed. Such compensation may be fixed by council in any reasonable way, either by prescribing the amount to be paid per diem or by fixing a monthly or annual salary.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE AND THE COUNCIL—LATTER MUST DETERMINE MATERIALS FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT—NO POWER IN DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE TO CHANGE SAME.

Under section 3825, General Code, in the ordinance determining to proceed, council must set forth, the character and materials which may be bid on for the street improvement. This power is legislative and the director of public service is not permitted to make a change as to the materials specified by council.

Council may select several materials, however, and allow the director of public service to choose between them.

Section 4331, General Code, providing that the director of public service may make alterations or modifications in a contract under certain conditions, when it becomes necessary, can be construed only to allow changes in plans and specifications when emergency requires.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 3, 1913.

HON. G. T. THOMAS, City Solicitor, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of January 27, 1913, is received in which you inquire:

> "Every step so far has been taken for the improvement of a street. The plans were made by the council as provided in section 3815 and approved, and the ordinance passed as provided in section 3825, setting forth in specific terms and of what materials this street should be built.
> "A member of the board of public accounting called the notice of the director of public service to section 4331, General Code, and I am informed that it is contended that the director of public service can change the plans and materials without the consent of council or any one else.
> "If section 4331 will bear that construction, then sections 3616, 3629, 3815 and 3825 are of no avail, and all the power council has is to order the street improved and furnish the funds to do it with.
> "Section 4331 might mean, if the construction given it by the 'learned adviser' was the law, that the city council, after causing to be made and approved, plans and specifications for a paved brick street and ordering it constructed, then the director might conclude (without the intervention of council, the law making power), that a concrete or asphalt street was a better street, and change the contract and build some kind of street to suit his idea of a better street than the brick street the council ordered constructed."

You refer to and quote from a number of sections of the General Code. These with others will be referred to in this opinion.

The questions involved in your inquiry are:

First—Has council the power to determine the particular material with which a street may be paved?

Second—Can the director of public service select a material for the paving of a street other than that prescribed by council in the ordinance to proceed with the improvement?

Section 3616, General Code, provides:

> "All municipal corporations shall have the general powers mentioned in this chapter, and council may provide by ordinance or resolution for the exercise and enforcement of them."

Section 3629, General Code, provides:

> "To lay off, establish, plat, grade, open, widen, narrow, straighten, extend, improve, keep in order and repair, light, clean and sprinkle, streets, alleys, public grounds, places and buildings, wharves, landings, docks, bridges, viaducts and market places within the corporation, including any portion of any turnpike or plank road therein, surrendered to or condemned by the corporation."

Section 3714, General Code, provides:

> "Municipal corporations shall have special power to regulate the use of the streets, to be exercised in the manner provided by law. The council shall have the care, supervision and control of public highways, streets, avenues, alleys, sidewalks, public grounds, bridges, aqueducts and viaducts within the corporation, and shall cause them to be kept open, in repair, and free from nuisance."

These sections give some of the general powers of council, but do not go so far as to authorize council to select the material with which a street may be improved.

Section 4324, General Code, provides:

> "The director of public service shall manage and supervise all public works and undertakings of the city, except as otherwise provided by law, and shall have all powers and perform all duties conferred upon him by law. He shall keep a record of his proceedings, a copy of which, certified by him, shall be competent evidence in all courts."

Section 4325, General Code, provides:

> "The director of public service shall supervise the improvement and repair of streets, avenues, alleys, lands, lanes, squares, wharves, docks, landings, market houses, bridges, viaducts, aqueducts, sidewalks, play grounds, sewers, drains, ditches, culverts, ship channels, streams and water courses, the lighting, sprinkling and cleaning of public places, the construction of public improvements and public works, except those having reference to the department of public safety, or as otherwise provided in this title."

By virtue of sections 4324 and 4325, General Code, the director of public service is authorized to supervise the improvement and repair of the streets. They do not, however, specifically authorize him to select the material with which the streets are to be improved.

Section 3814, General Code, provides:

"When it is deemed necessary by a municipality to make a public improvement to be paid for in whole or in part by special assessments, council shall declare the necessity thereof by resolution, three-fourths of the members elected thereto concurring, except as otherwise herein provided. Such resolution shall be published as other resolutions, but shall take effect upon its first publication."

Section 3815, General Code, provides:

"Such resolution shall determine the general nature of the improvement, what shall be the grade of the street, alley, or other public place to be improved, the grade or elevation of the curbs, and shall approve the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles for the proposed improvement. In such resolution council shall also determine the method of the assessment, the mode of payment, and whether or not bonds shall be issued in anticipation of the collection thereof. Assessments for any improvement may be payable in one to ten installments at such time as council prescribes."

Sections 3814 and 3815, General Code, have reference to the preliminary resolutions of council for the improvements.

Your question is to be determined by a proper construction of the provisions of sections 3825 and 4331, General Code.

Section 4331, General Code, provides:

"When it becomes necessary in the opinion of the director of public service, in the prosecution of any work or improvement under contract, to make alterations or modifications in such contract, such alterations or modifications shall only be made upon the order of such director, but such order shall be of no effect until the price to be paid for the work and material, or both, under the altered or modified contract, has been agreed upon in writing and signed by the contractor and the director on behalf of the corporation, and approved by the board of control, as provided by law."

By virtue of this section the director of public service is authorized to make alterations or modifications of a contract when in his opinion such changes become necessary, "in the prosecution of any work or improvement under contract." This provision contemplates changes which become necessary after the contract for the improvement has been entered into. It does not contemplate a complete change in the materials to be used in the improvement.

It often occurs that as work progresses upon an improvement changes in the plans and specifications become necessary. Certain contingencies may arise that will require a more or less alteration in the plans. Section 4331, General Code, covers such contingencies.

By virtue of section 3825, General Code, certain matters must be contained in the ordinance to proceed with the improvement. Said section reads:

"If the council decides to proceed with the improvement, an ordinance for the purpose shall be passed. Such ordinance shall set forth specifically the lots and lands to be assessed for the improvement, shall contain a statement of the general nature of the improvement, the character of the materials which may be bid upon therefor, the mode of payment therefor, a reference to the resolution theretofore passed for such improvement with date of its passage, and a statement of the intention of council to proceed therewith in accordance with such resolution and in accordance with the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles provided for such improvement."

This section authorizes council to set forth in such ordinance "the character of the materials which may be bid upon therefor."

I do not find any case which decides the proposition submitted by you, but this section has been construed by the courts and these decisions will aid in reaching a conclusion in reference to your inquiry.

In case of Emmert vs. City of Elyria, 74 Ohio St., 185, the first syllabus reads:

"A statement in an ordinance, providing for the improvement of a street by paving, that the paving material shall be asphalt, brick or other material as may thereafter be determined, meets the requirement of section 55 of the municipal code (1536-215, Revised Statutes, Bates 5th ed.), that the ordinance shall contain a statement of the general nature of the improvement and the character of the materials which may be bid upon therefor."

In that case the selection of the material was in effect left to the board of public service.

In Scott vs. Hamilton (City), 19 Cir. Dec. 652, it is held:

"A board of public service, where required by a street improvement ordinance to choose one of three materials after bids were received, performs only a ministerial act, and as the agent of the city council executes its legislative command.

"There is no statutory provision requiring that the discretion of the board of public service in the selection of material for the improvement of a street shall be controlled by the wish of the property owners, and where the board exercises its discretion in good faith, its decisions cannot be interfered with by the courts."

On pages 653 and 654, Giffen, J., says:

"The question to be considered is, whether the city council is required by statute to designate the particular material of which the street is to be constructed before bids can be received. Section 53 of the municipal code (Lan. 3606; B. 1536-215), as passed October 22, 1902, provides as follows:

"At the expiration of the time limited for filing claims for damages, * * * the council shall determine whether it will proceed with the proposed improvement or not, * * * and if it decides to proceed therewith, an ordinance * * * shall contain a statement of the general nature of the improvement and the character of the materials thereof.

"The same section as amended April 19, 1904, (97 O. L. 122), provides that:

"The ordinance shall contain a statement of the general nature of the improvement and the character of the materials which may be bid upon therefor.

"The intention of the legislature as expressed either in the original section or as amended, was evidently to authorize council to designate, not the particular material with which the street should be paved, but to state the general character of the same. It is said, however, it is the policy of the municipal code to keep separate and distinct legislative and executive function; that the former was conferred upon the city council and the latter upon the board of public service; and that by the ordinance directing the board of public service to receive bids on three different kinds of material for the improvement, the council delegated its authority to the board of public service without legal sanction."

On page 655, he further says:

"Under these decisions we think that the board of public service, although required by the ordinance to choose one of these materials after the bids were received, only performed a ministerial act and as the agent of the city council executed its legislative command.

"After council had determined what materials would be suitable for the particular improvement, the wisdom of receiving bids upon more than one kind is found in the fact that greater competition is hereby secured, and that the relative amount of the respective bids, may determine the particular material to be used."

In the same case the common pleas court as reported in Scott vs. Hamilton (City), 16 Ohio Dec. 660, held:

The powers of a city council are legislative and those of the board of public service administrative. But where a council passes an ordinance for the paving of a street and names the materials to be used therefor in the alternative, the board of public service may receive bids in the alternative and select the materials it prefers. This is a carrying out of the will of the council, as its agent, and is not the exercise of legislative power illegally delegated.

"The law of Ohio confers upon the members of the board of public service of a city, acting as a board, the power to select the material with which the streets shall be paved. The members of the board need not consult the property owners on this point and the court will disturb their selection only for fraud or collusion, or such gross negligence as amounts to fraud."

On page 666, Belden, J., says:

"Now the question in this case is, whether council has acted. Undoubtedly if council would pass an ordinance declaring East High street should be paved, and name no material, that would not give the board of public service power to select the material. But here they have named three materials, in the alternative. Council has named them—not simply the board of public service—but the legislative body has named the three materials, and the question is whether delegation of power to select one of three materials named is delegation of legislative authority".

On page 668, he further says:

"So in this case when the city council designated the kind of materials to be used, in the alternative, its agents, the board of public service, had the right to make a selection, and when made, such selection became the material chosen by the city council. The contract is binding upon the city, because the city council, the local legislature, authorized the selection of the material.

"The contract required the authority of council, but after that authority was given the execution of the contract devolved upon the board of public service.

"The voice which speaks the will of the municipality is the council, but the hand which records that expression is the board of public service."

In each of the above cases council named more than one material in the ordinance. The final choice was left to the board of public service. Where council named certain materials the choice of the board was confined to those particular materials.

Council did not, in either of the above cited cases, limit the board to one certain kind of paving and the right of council so to do was not determined.

Council is the legislative body of the municipality. The director of public service is an administrative officer. It is seen that when the director of public service selects one of three materials named by council he is performing a ministerial act and not a legislative act. His choice, however, is limited to the materials named by council in the ordinance. If he selects a material other than that named by council, where council specifically names certain materials, he would be performimg a legislative act and would be encroaching upon the power of council.

By virtue of section 3825, General Code, council is authorized to determine the character of the materials which may be bid upon for the improvement. Under this authority council could select one specific material, or it could name two or more kinds of material and leave the final choice to the director of public service. The director of public service has no power to change the material where council has named a specific kind of paving to be used in the improvement.

Therefore, where the council of a city determines in the ordinance to proceed with an improvement, that a street shall be paved with a certain kind of paving, the director of public service is not authorized to contract for a different kind of paving for such street.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—DISTRIBUTION OF EXCESS FUNDS RAISED BY BOND ISSUE—PAYMENT INTO CONTINGENT FUND FROM SINKING FUND—PREMIUM AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

Section 2295, General Code, provides that all moneys from both principal and premiums on the sale of bonds (by a board of education) shall be credited to the fund on account of which the bonds are issued and sold. Such premiums and accrued interest must be applied to the fund created by the sale of bonds and not to the sinking fund.

Section 7603, General Code, provides that "moneys coming from sources not enumerated herein shall be placed in the contingent fund." This is the only section in any way bearing upon the distribution of an unexpended surplus in a fund raised by a bond issued by a board of education, and therefore, under the technical construction of the statute, such unexpended surplus must be paid into the contingent fund. Such a procedure, however, is in conflict with sound business principles and with the procedure outlined by the statutes, with reference to the disposition of such funds in other taxable districts, and the better course would be to credit such surplus to the sinking fund, for the purpose of devoting the same to the reduction of the bonded indebtedness upon the theory that specific provision therefor has been mistakenly omitted from the statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 17, 1913.

HON. W. J. TOSSELL, City Solicitor, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I regret that pressure of business due to the legislative session has retarded my consideration of the questions asked in your letter of November 19th, receipt whereof is acknowledged. The questions are as follows:

> "(1). May not the premium and accrued interest of school bonds be applied to the payment of the bonded indebtedness of the school district notwithstanding the last sentence of General Code 2295, providing that such proceeds should be credited to the fund on account of which the bonds are issued and sold?
> "(2). What should be done with excess funds raised by a bond issue to build a school house? May not the excess be used to reduce the bonded indebtedness?"

These questions, which may be considered together, invite comparison of the statutes relating to the exercise of the borrowing power by school districts with those of a similar character relating to municipal corporations. You have yourself referred to the only section which contains any express provisions respecting the powers and duties of school district officers in relation to the management of a fund created by a sale of school district bonds. The sentence to which you refer is as follows:

> "All moneys from both principal and premiums on the sale of such bonds, shall be credited to the fund on account of which the bonds are issued and sold."

Referring to the previous section, section 2294, General Code, it is ascertained that the antecedent of the word "such" is "bonds issued by boards of county commissioners, boards of education, or commissioners of free turnpikes." It is very clear, therefore, that the last sentence of section 2295 defines the duty of the clerk of a school district with relation to the disposition of the premiums and accrued interest received by a board of education from the sale of an issue of the bonds of a school district.

The comparison which I have already suggested is extremely interesting in this connection. Section 2295 above quoted is the only section relating in any way to the subject-matter of either of your questions. Neither the statutes authorizing the school districts to issue bonds nor those prescribing the machinery of payment of bonded indebtedness of a school district through the agency of a sinking fund commission contain any other provisions whatever upon the general subject. I invite your attention now to the provisions of sections 3932 and 3804, General Code, which are as follows:

> "Section 3932. Premiums and accrued interest received by the corporation from a sale of its bonds shall be transferred to the trustee of the sinking fund to be by them applied on the bonded debt and interest account of the corporation, but the premiums and accrued interest upon bonds issued for special assessments shall be applied by the trustees of the sinking fund to the payment of the principal and interest of those bonds and no other.
> "Section 3804. When any unexpended balance remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds, the whole or part of the bonds are still outstanding, unpaid, and unprovided for, is no longer needed for the purpose for which such fund was created, it shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied in the payment of the bonds."

You will observe that these sections make complete disposition of all moneys arising from a sale of bonds by a municipal corporation, in excess of the needs of the fund created thereby, with the possible exception of depository interest. It is obvious, then, that the legislature has failed to make complete provision for the handling of proceeds of bond issues by boards of education in the manner in which it has provided as to municipal corporations. That is to say, the case of the premiums and accrued interest is evidently provided for, but that of the surplus is not provided for. This is the conclusion which would have to be reached unless section 7603 of the General Code controls. This section, in full, is as follows:

> "The certificate of apportionment furnished by the county auditor to the treasurer and clerk of each school district must exhibit the amount of money received by each district from the state, the amount received from any special tax levy made for a particular purpose, and the amount received from local taxation of a general nature. The amount received from the state common school fund and the common school fund shall be designated the 'tuition fund' and be appropriated only for the payment of superintendents and teachers. Funds received from special levies must be designated in accordance with the purpose for which the special levy was made and be paid out only for such purpose, except that, when a balance remains in such fund after all expenses incident to the purpose for which it was raised have been paid, such balance will become a part of the contingent fund and the board of education shall make such transfer by resolution. Funds received from the local levy for general purposes must be designated so as to correspond to the particular purpose for which the levy was made. Moneys coming from sources not enumerated herein shall be placed in the contingent fund."

It is not clear that this section applies to the disposition of unexpended proceeds of a bond issue for a specific improvement. Nevertheless, it must be conceded that the last sentence might be construed so as to apply to that subject-matter without doing violence to its terms. Perhaps a strict and technical interpretation of this section might require a holding to the effect that unexpended surpluses in funds raised by a school district through an issue of bonds must be credited to the contingent fund of the district.

Such a conclusion, however, does violence to sound business principles. While there is no escape, in my opinion, from the conclusion that under section 2295 of the General Code the premiums and accrued interest received from a sale of bonds must be credited to the fund created by the sale, and not to the sinking fund, there is strong temptation to ignore the provisions of section 7603, and to regard the disposition of the surplus mentioned by you in your question as a casus omissus, to be worked out administratively in the exercise of sound business judgment.

My conclusions, then, specifically, are as follows:

Under the last sentence of section 2295, General Code, the premium and accrued interest arising from the sale of school bonds must be applied to the fund created by such sale, and not to the sinking fund.

The unexpended surplus in such a fund may be regarded, strictly, as belonging to the contingent fund. This conclusion being doubtful, under the peculiar language of section 7603, however, the better business course would be to credit such surplus to the sinking fund, upon the theory that specific provision therefor is omitted from the statutes.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INTEREST OF PUBLIC OFFICER IN PUBLIC CONTRACTS—MEMBER OF PARK COMMISSION MAY NOT ACT AS LEGAL COUNSEL FOR MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—RECOMMENDATION AS TO FINDING.

Under section 12912, General Code, which prohibits an officer of a municipal corporation from being interested in the profits of services for such corporation, under penalty of fine and imprisonment, a member of the park commission may not be employed to assist the city solicitor in behalf of such corporation in the case of special litigation. In view, however, of the ability to distinguish the Ohio court decision relative to the question, and of the looseness of the proposition of law, where such employment was made in good faith and valuable services were rendered, the finding shall be withheld and the matter be regarded as a closed incident.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1913.

HON. VAN A. SNIDER, City Solicitor, Lancaster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of February 27, 1913, which is as follows:

> "As city solicitor of Lancaster, I respectfully ask your opinion on the legality of my employment of legal counsel to assist me in conducting litigation in which the city of Lancaster is a party and deeply interested.
> "At an expense of almost $40,000.00 the Hocking River is being deepened, widened and straightened through the city and for several miles both above and below the corporate limits. The improvement became involved in litigation, and the city council in its annual appropriation set out $____ to enable me to employ assistant counsel, the appropriating ordinance providing that the same should be paid out on my order as solicitor. I engaged a lawyer to assist me, as instructed, who rendered the required legal services, and he was paid out of the moneys so appropriated on my warrant. Now the lawyer I employed happens to be a member of the park commission, but as you know, does not receive any compensation as such park commissioner.
> "The questions I submit to you are two in number:
> "First. May I not under the circumstances employ any reputable lawyer to assist me?
> "Second. Does it render the employment and payment illegal because the lawyer employed happens to be a member of the park commission?"

Section 4054 of the General Code provides for the appointment by the mayor of three electors of the city as members of the board of park commissioners. Under said section the members of the board shall serve without compensation.

Section 3808 of the General Code provides:

> "No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. A violation of any provision of this or the preceding two sections shall disqualify the party violating it from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, and shall render him liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other thing he may receive contrary to the provisions of such sections, and if in office he shall be dismissed therefrom."

Analyze the first sentence of this section: "No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation." It means no member of the council shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation; no member of any board of the corporation shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation; no officer or commissioner of the corporation shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation.

The two preceding sections referred to in section 3808 are as follows, to wit, section 3806 and 3807. Section 3808, taken in connection with the two preceding sections, discloses the fact that the primary purpose of section 3808 is the prevention of abuses by boards of which the officer is a member. However, the purpose is not strictly limited to these, but prohibits any member of any board of the corporation or any officer or commissioner of the corporation from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation, whether the expenditure is made by a board of which he is a member or otherwise.

The circuit court of Hamilton county, in the case of State ex rel. Winn vs. Wichgar, Aud. 17, C. C. D., page 743, held:

> "A member of a municipal board of health is an officer of the municipality, and as such ineligible to the office of district physician during his term and for one year thereafter, and he cannot therefore recover for services rendered in such capacity."

The decision of the circuit court is based on section 6976 of the Revised Statutes, which is as follows:

> "An officer or member of the council of any municipal corporation or the trustee of any township who is interested directly or indirectly in the profits of any contract, job, work or services for the corporation or township, or acts as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer in any work undertaken or prosecuted by the corporation or township during the term for which he was elected or appointed, or for one year thereafter, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months nor less than thirty days, or both, and shall forfeit his office."

Section 12910, of the General Code, is as follows:

> "Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education, or a public institution with which he is connected, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

Counsel who did the legal work you referred to was not interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for use by the city of Lancaster or any public institution with which he was connected, therefore section 12910 does not apply.

Section 12911, of the General Code, is as follows:

> "Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit, by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or a public institution with which he is not connected, and the amount of such contract exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law, shall be imprisoned * *."

You can readily see that this section does not apply. Section 12912, of the General Code, is as follows:

"Whoever, being an officer of a municipal corporation or member of the council thereof or the trustee of a township, is interested in the profits of a contract, job, work, or services for such corporation or township, or acts as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer, in work undertaken or prosecuted by such corporation or township during the term for which he was elected or appointed, or for one year thereafter, or becomes the employe of the contractor of such contract, job, work or services while in office, shall be fined, etc. * * *"

There seems to be a difference between section 6976 of the Revised Statutes and section 3808 of the General Code in this, that the former prevents an officer or member of the council of any municipal corporation or trustee of any township from becoming interested directly or indirectly in the profits of any contract, job, work or services for the corporation or township, and prevents such persons from acting as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer in any work undertaken or prosecuted by the corporation or township during the term for which he was elected or appointed or for one year thereafter. There is no reference in this to compensation of such officer. The latter—section 3808 of the General Code, prevents a member of the council or a member of a board of the corporation or an officer or commissioner of the corporation from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation, other than his fixed compensation. In other words, the element of compensation enters into section 3808, but not into section 6976 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio. As the criminal statutes are strictly construed, it might be doubtful whether an officer who served without compensation may not lawfully be interested in a contract with the corporation, especially if his own board had not let such contract.

The member of the board of health referred to in the case of Winn vs. Wichgar, supra, was an officer appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council. A park commissioner is an officer appointed by the mayor of a municipal corporation and following the decision in the Hamilton county case, a member of the park commission is an officer of the municipality. Now, then, a member of the board of health may not be appointed a district physician. Under the statutes (section 4408)

" * * * The board may appoint a clerk, and with the consent of council, as many ward or district physicians, or one ward physician for each ward in the city as it deems necessary."

But such district physician may not be a member of the board of health.

Now, then, may one employed as counsel to assist a city solicitor be a member of the board of park commissioners? A surface view would leave the impression that a park commissioner who accepts employment to assist the city solicitor is within the inhibition, but let us see. The circuit court of Franklin county, in the case of State of Ohio ex rel. Attorney General vs. Frank Gebert, 12 Ohio circuit court reports, (new series) page 274, held in an opinion by Judge Dustin:

"Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon, the other; or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

A district physician, under the statutes, is an officer, and the inhibition upon his being a member of the board of health cannot rest upon the theory of employment, because such officer is not an employe in the true sense. It seems to me that the real gist of the decision of the circuit court is to be gathered from a consideration of the proposition that a district physician is the appointee of the board of health itself. It would certainly seem to be against public policy to permit a man to accept an office the very existence of which depends upon the discretion of the board of which he is a member, because the board of health appoints as many physicians as it deems necessary, and I can see every reason against the idea that a board of health would first deem it necessary to appoint two ward or district physicians through the vote of member "A" with member "A" holding the deciding vote, and thereupon appoint member "A" a ward or district physician. It seems to me that the circuit court would come to the same conclusion it did upon the application of general principles of law, nevertheless, it bases its decision upon section 6976 of the Revised Statutes.

I find it difficult to agree with the circuit court so far as its reasoning is concerned and regret that the decision is not explained by an opinion rather than a percuriam. A short percuriam, such as the one given, indicates that the court may not have been quite satisfied itself, but following this decision, which I am bound to do until the same be reversed, it is my conclusion that a park commissioner may not lawfully accept employment from the city council to assist the city solicitor, but the question, in my mind, is a very close one, and certainly under the circumstances neither crime nor personal interest is to be imputed to a lawyer who accepts service from a city solicitor and renders valuable service, nor, in my judgment, should there be any finding against one who has rendered such service. Where all the parties concerned are cognizant that a certain employment is within the inhibition and then accepts such employment, finding should be made in a case like this, but where all parties to the transaction acted in good faith, and valuable services were rendered, the matter in my judgment, should be regarded as a closed incident.

I shall forward a copy of this opinion to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices accordingly for its guidance.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CITY FIREMEN—WHEN SALARY FIXED, COMPENSATION MAY NOT BE INCREASED FOR EXTRA WORK ON ACCOUNT OF FLOOD.

When council has fixed the salary of city firemen, under section 4214, General Code, and such firemen on account of a flood, are compelled to perform extraordinary services by the chief of the fire department, the city auditor is not authorized to pay out money in excess of their salaries for such services.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1913.

HON. CLIFFORD L. BELT, City Solicitor, Bellaire, Ohio.

Your favor of February 7, 1913, is received in which you inquire:

> "The fire department of Bellaire is not strictly a regular or full paid department, there being but one man devoting his entire time and receiving full pay. However, all members of the department are paid monthly salaries ranging from $3.00 for privates to $5.00 for lieutenants, and $7.00 for captains.

"During a recent flood in this city, the lower sections thereof were inundated, causing a dangerous condition by reason of leaking gas pipes in said section. The chief of the fire department designated a number of the firemen to patrol the flooded section with skiffs, so as to be ready in case of an explosion or fire, to give immediate succor. Bills were presented for this extra service by the firemen, which is claimed in addition to the regular salaries of said firemen, and payment thereof has been refused by the city auditor.

"Are, or are not said claims legal charges against the city, payable from the safety fund?"

Section 4214, General Code, gives the council of a city the sole right to fix compensation for employes of the city as follows:

"Except as otherwise provided in this title, council, by ordinance or resolution, shall determine the number of officers, clerks and employes in each department of the city government, and shall fix by ordinance or resolution their respective salaries and compensation, and the amount of bond to be given for each officer, clerk or employe in each department of the government, if any be required. Such bond shall be made by such officer, clerk or employe, with surety subject to the approval of the mayor."

In Smith vs. Lotschuetz, 20 Low. Dec. 390, it is held:

"A director of public service of a city has no power, either under sections 139, 140 or 141 of act 99 O. L. 563 (General Code 4324, 4325, 4326), the Payne law, giving him the management and supervision of his department to fix salaries or compensation of employes therein but the exclusive right to fix salaries and compensation thereof is resposed in the city council by section 227 of such act (General Code 4214).

It does not appear that council has fixed any compensation for the alleged extra work for which the bills have been rendered.

The firemen in accepting the positions at the compensation fixed therefor, accepted them knowing the compensation and they cannot claim extra compensation for services performed within the line of their duty.

In case of Clark vs. County Commissioners, 58 Ohio St., 107, it is held:

"To warrant the payment of fees or compensation to an officer, out of the county treasury, it must appear that such payment is authorized by statute."

In case of The Somerset Bank vs. Edmund, 76 Ohio St., 396, it is held:

"Public policy and sound morals alike forbid that a public officer should demand or receive for services performed by him in the discharge of official duty, any other or further remuneration or reward than that prescribed and allowed by law."

It appears that the work in question was performed at the direction of the chief of the fire department.

In Halpin vs. Cincinnati, 3 Low. Dec. Re., 58, it is held:

"A citizen who takes upon himself the burden of an office, can recover no fees except such as are prescribed by law or ordinance. Fees are a subject of legislative discretion entirely.

"If no compensation is attached to the office, he can recover none, although at the request of a superior, he performs services not obligatory upon him."

Section 4376, General Code, prescribes the duties of the chief of the fire department, as follows:

"The chief of the fire department shall have exclusive control of the stationing and transferring of all firemen and other officers and employes in the department, under such general rules and regulations as the director of public safety prescribes. In case of riot or other like emergency the mayor may appoint additional firemen and officers for temporary service who need not be in the classified list of the department. Such additional officers or firemen shall be employed only for the time during which the emergency exists."

Section 4378, General Code, provides:

"The police force shall preserve the peace, protect persons and property and obey and enforce all ordinances of council and all criminal laws of the state and the United States. The fire department shall protect the lives and property of the people in case of fire, and both the police and fire departments shall perform such other duties, not inconsistent herewith, as council by ordinance prescribes. The police and fire departments in every city shall be maintained under the civil service system, as provided in this subdivision."

Section 4393, General Code, provides:

"The council may establish all necessary regulations to guard against the occurrence of fires, protect the property and lives of the citizens against the damages and accidents resulting therefrom and for such purpose may establish and maintain a fire department, provide for the establishment and organization of fire engine and hose companies, establish the hours of labor of the members of its fire department, but after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and eleven, council shall not require any firemen to be on duty continuously more than six days in every seven, and provide such by-laws and regulations for their government as is deemed necessary and proper."

The chief of the fire department has no authority to employ any one for the city. He has no authority to contract for the city. It appears further that the services performed by the firemen were performed under the direction of the chief and was for the protection of property against fire which was imminent under the circumstances. This was in the line of the duties of the firemen.

The city auditor is not authorized to pay out money without authority therefor There is no authority of statue or ordinance to pay the claims in question and they are not legal charges against the city.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM—ORDINANCE PROVIDING FOR COMPROMISE PAYMENT OF JUDGMENT MAY NOT BE DECLARED EMERGENCY.

Under section 4227-3 of the General Code, an ordinance of council may not be declared an emergency measure so as to go into immediate operation except where the facts constitute an actual emergency in the general sense of the term. An ordinance, therefore, providing for the payment of a certain sum to compromise a suit brought by a public utility against the city, in the absence of special facts and circumstances, constituting an emergency may not be declared an emergency measure.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1913.

HON. H. W. HOUSTON, City Solicitor, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 1st directing my attention to an ordinance of the city of Urbana which you enclosed with your letter, which ordinance was declared by your city council to be an emergency measure. It appears from an examination of said ordinance that it is an ordinance authorizing and directing a compromise settlement in the case of The City of Urbana, Ohio, vs. The Urbana Light Company. The ordinance recites that the city of Urbana has brought suit against The Urbana Light Company to recover eight thousand five hundred and twenty-six dollars and forty-two cents ($8,526.42) with interest, which amount the city claimed as indemnity from The Urbana Light Company by reason of a judgment paid by the city and costs incurred in an action brought by one A. M. against said city, and further recites that The Urbana Light Company has offered to settle and compromise the above action by the payment of forty-five hundred ($4,500.00) dollars in toto and that the city council deemed it to the best interest of the city to settle said action on said basis. After the recitals the ordinance ordains:

> "By the council of the city of Urbana, State of Ohio, three-fourths of all members elected thereto concurring."

The ordinance is declared to be an emergency measure, and section 1 thereof accepts the offer of The Urbana Light Company, and section 2 thereof provides that upon payment of the sum of forty-five hundred ($4,500.00) dollars, as set forth in said ordinance, the case of The City of Urbana against The Urbana Light Company be settled and dismissed, and the auditor is directed on behalf of the city to execute a release in favor of the Light Company, and section 3 thereof provides that the ordinance shall take effect from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

Your inquiry is as to whether such ordinance can be classified properly as an "emergency measure" or whether it is an ordinance which must be submitted to a vote of the electors under the Municipal Initiative and Referendum Law.

Section 3615, General Code, provides that "each municipal corporation shall be a body politic and corporate" and may "sue and be sued."

Being, therefore, a body politic and the right having been given by the legislature to such corporations to sue and be sued, I am of the opinion that it is proper since the municipal corporation can sue, to compromise any suit which it has once instituted through action of council.

Section 4227-2, General Code, provides that any ordinance, resolution or other measure of a municipal corporation, granting a franchise, creating a right, involving the expenditure of money or exercising any other power delegated to such municipal corporation by the general assembly shall be subject to referendum.

Section 4227-2 further provides that no resolution, ordinance or measure of any municipal corporation, creating a right, involving the expenditure of money, granting a franchise, conferring, extending or renewing a right to use of the streets, or regulating the use of the streets for water, gas, electricity, telephone, telegraph, power or street railways, or other public or quasi-public utility shall become effective in less than sixty days after its passage.

Section 4227-3, General Code, provides:

> "All other acts of city council not included among those specified in section 2 (General Code 4227-2) of this act, shall also remain inoperative for sixty days after passage and may be submitted to popular vote in the manner herein provided, except that any act, not included within those specified in section 2 (General Code, section 4227-2) of this act, as remaining inoperative for sixty days, and which is declared to be an emergency measure, and receiving a three-fourths majority in council of such municipal corporation may go into effect immediately and remain in effect until repealed by city council or by direct vote of the people as herein provided."

It is to be noted that the ordinance in question cannot be considered as an ordinance which under section 4227-2 remains inoperative for sixty days. The ordinance may, therefore, under section 4227-3, General Code, go into effect immediately provided it can be considered to be an emergency measure. The ordinance in question received three-fourths majority of council and was declared to be an emergency measure.

I do not believe, however, that the mere declaration of council that an ordinance is an emergency measure is sufficient under section 4227-3, General Code, to permit it to go into effect immediately upon receipt of a three-fourths majority of council. It seems to me that there must be a real emergency arising sufficient in law to constitute an emergency. If it were held otherwise council could declare each and every ordinance passed by it to be an emergency except those which under the provisions of section 4227-2, General Code (paragraph 2) would not go into effect in less than sixty days, and thus thwart the will of the people and nullify to a great extent the intent of the referendum act. This, however, is more a matter of fact than one of law. If there are any facts existing which would create an emergency in the settlement of the claim set forth in the ordinance then the ordinance would go into effect immediately and remain in effect until repealed by the city council or by direct vote of the people. If the facts as they exist are such as not to create a real emergency then the ordinance should be permitted to lie at least thirty days as required by section 4227-2, General Code for filing a petition of referendum in order that the electors may exercise their rights thereunder. It is necessary to leave the matter of fact to you as this department cannot pass upon the same. I would say, however, that council having declared the ordinance to be an emergency measure the court would, I believe, be inclined to take the expression of council in the matter practically as conclusive.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—MAY NOT SUPPLY ELECTRICITY TO PRIVATE CORPORATION FREE OF CHARGE.

Under article 8, section 6, of the constitution, a municipal corporation may not raise money for, or in aid of any private corporation. An ordinance of council, therefore, providing for the supply of free electricity or light and power in order to aid such corporation in rebuilding a plant destroyed by fire, is unconstitutional and void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1913.

HON. J. M. MCGILLIVRAY, City Solicitor, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of March 18, 1913, is received, in which you inquire:

> "The C. P. & F. Company property burned last fall; and there have been two, three or probably more meetings of the citizens, insisting that the city furnish electricity to aid in the rebuilding of the plant, without cost to the corporation. This was not at the instigation of The C. P. & F. Co., but independent of them, and largely by what is known here as the Boosters Club.
> "Council first passed a resolution authorizing the furnishing, and then revoked it, and since then the matter has been assuming a very acute form.
> "The director of public service has asked my opinion in writing as to whether he will be either criminally or civilly responsible if he furnishes the electricity under the ordinance, and because of the intense feeling on the subject here, and at the request of the mayor and director of public service, I submit to you the following question:
> "Is the director of public service of a city authorized under the latter part of section 3992 of the General Code, when so directed by council, to furnish a corporation whose property has been destroyed by fire, electricity for light and power without cost, to aid it in rebuilding its plant?"

You call attention to section 3992, General Code, which provides:

> "When a municipal corporation is the owner of a natural gas plant to supply the citizens thereof with natural gas for fuel, the council of such municipal corporation may provide for supplying natural gas at rates to be determined by it, to persons living outside of and in the vicinity of such municipal corporation, and to county infirmaries, children's homes and other public institutions within or without such municipal corporation. To encourage the location or establishment of manufacturing industries within such municipal corporation, council may reduce the price of gas to be used to operate such manufacturing, or donate it for a term of years for such purpose, but this section shall be inoperative if the municipal corporation or the citizens thereof are thereby deprived of a full supply of such gas."

This section has reference to gas plants owned by a municipal corporation. It cannot be construed to apply to electric plants or to the furnishing of electric current.

Section 6, article VIII, of the constitution of Ohio, as adopted in 1912, provides:

> "No laws shall be passed authorizing any county, city, town or township, by vote of its citizens, or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation or association whatever; or to raise money for or to loan its credit to, or in aid of, any such company, corporation or association provided, that nothing in this section shall prevent the insuring of public buildings or property in mutual insurance associations or companies. Laws may be passed providing for the regulation of all rates charged or to be charged by any insurance company, corporation or association organized under the laws of this state or doing any insurance business in this state for profit."

In case of Markley vs. Village of Mineral City, 58 Ohio St., it is held:

"A municipal corporation is without capacity to acquire land by purchase for the purpose of donating the same to a corporation or person as an inducement to build and operate manufacturing plants within the municipality.

"Corporate funds paid out in the attempted purchase of land for such purpose are unlawfully expended, and a deed purporting to convey such land is without legal effect."

In your case the electric light plant is owned by the city. It is maintained and operated by means of taxation, or from public funds. If the city were to furnish electric current free of charge to a private corporation, it would be giving aid to such corporation. This is prohibited by the foregoing provision of the constitution.

A municipal corporation is not authorized to furnish to a private corporation electric current from its municipal plant, free of charge.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—POWER OF COUNCIL TO REFUND BONDS ISSUED FOR PURPOSE OF PAYING COMPROMISE CLAIM.

Under sections 3916 and 3917, General Code, when council has validly entered into an agreement of compromise of a claim against the city and has issued bonds for the purpose of paying such claim, which bonds they are unable to pay on account of taxation limitations, they may either issue notes or bonds for the purpose of extending the time of payment of such indebtedness.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 11, 1913.

HON. MARSHALL G. FENTON, City Solicitor, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 20th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following statement of facts:

"Prior to June 13, 1911, The Chillicothe Electric Railroad Light & Power Co. had a suit, pending in the Common pleas court of Ross county against the city of Chillicothe for $13,339.70. An amount claimed to be due said company for what is commonly known as 'extra lights.' On June 19, 1911, an entry of settlement and dismissal was filed in said court and no judgment was rendered in the case, as a settlement was effected out of court in the following manner:

"The company submitted a proposition of settlement for $11,000, which proposition was accepted by the city council by resolution on June 13, 1911, and later approved by the mayor. At the same time a resolution was passed and then approved by the mayor authorizing and instructing the mayor and auditor of the city of Chillicothe to borrow money in the sum of $11,000, in anticipation of the general revenue fund of the city of Chillicothe, Ohio, in order that funds might be provided to pay said company for electric current.

"The company was paid and a resolution has been passed by the city council every six months since authorizing and instructing the mayor and auditor to borrow the amount above stated as the auditor pays off the note at each semi-annual settlement.

"Query—Can the city issue bonds to extend the time of payment as provided in section 3916 of the General Code? If not, how can this indebtedness be legally paid?"

Section 3916, of the General Code, provides that:

"For the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation a corporation is unable to pay at maturity, or when it appears to the council for the best interest of the corporation, the council thereof may issue bonds * * * or borrow money so as to change but not increase the indebtedness * * *."

Section 3917, General Code, provides:

"No indebtedness of such municipal corporation shall be funded * * * or extended, unless it shall first be determined to be an existing valid and binding obligation of the corporation by a formal resolution of the council thereof. * * *"

While the claim of which you speak did not go to judgment I assume that the city was actually indebted to the company in something like the amount agreed upon as a settlement. If the claim had gone to judgment, of course, the satisfaction thereof would have fallen upon the sinking fund and an entirely different procedure would have been followed. Inasmuch as the claim was settled, however, and there is no question as to the obligation of the city to pay the electric light company, I am of the opinion that if council passed a proper resolution under section 3917 it had authority to borrow the money originally.

Having had authority to borrow the money originally, council clearly had authority, under section 3916, to extend the time of the payment of the indebtedness when it found that the city was unable to pay the same at maturity. This might be done, as has been done, by a simple exercise of the borrowing power, i. e., the issuance of a note to take up the outstanding note.

Section 3917, however, provides two methods of securing funds for the purposes referred to therein, viz.: The issuance of bonds, and the simple borrowing of money. It is my opinion that council has a choice of these two methods. If one of the renewing notes of which you speak in your letter is due, or is about to become due, and the municipality finds it is unable to pay the same at maturity by reason of its limits of taxation, or for any other good and sufficient reason, council clearly has authority to issue bonds bearing the rate of interest specified in section 3916 and subject to the restrictions of section 3917. Such bonds must be offered for sale and sold in the manner in which municipal bonds are sold, and the proceeds of the sale applied to the satisfaction of the debt. That is to say, bonds may not be issued to the holders of the notes in exchange for the latter, but the municipal corporation is entitled to the benefit of competitive bidding in the sale of the bonds.

I am aware of the dictum in Herrmann vs. Cincinnati, 6 circuit decisions, 151, to the effect that a provision like this section, in form, authorized only the refunding of an existing bonded indebtedness. This case was decided, however, upon other grounds and I am not disposed to give weight to this portion of the opinion, especially in view of the fact that it is entirely inconsistent with the language of the statute.

In adjusting the indebtedness by the issuance of any bonds care, of course, must be taken to avoid increasing the amount of indebtedness outstanding by virtue of the original transaction, as that would be a violation of section 3916, General Code. Altaffer vs. Nelson, 18 C. C. R. 145.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that if all of the provisions of the two sections which have been quoted are carefully observed, council may lawfully issue bonds to provide for funding the present floating indebtedness of the city, arising out of the facts set forth in your letter.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM—ORDINANCE DIRECTING PUBLIC SERVICE DIRECTOR TO PROCEED WITH SEWER IMPROVEMENT MAY NOT BE EMERGENCY.

Since an ordinance of council directing the director of public service to proceed with the construction of a sewer involves the expenditure of money, such ordinance may not be declared to be an emergency measure under section 4227-3, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1913.

HON. G. T. THOMAS, City Solicitor, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 14th you request my opinion on a state of facts submitted to this department on November 20th, 1912, after having read copy of an opinion sent you after receiving your letter of November 20th. Such facts are as follows:

> "Council has passed a resolution to improve a certain part of the city by the construction of sanitary sewers, the extent thereof being about six miles in length, and involving the expenditure of $40,000.00 or more. This sanitary sewer is in furtherance of a plan devised and approved about seven years ago. Some changes have been made in the general plan, but the changes are not material.
> "No sanitary sewers have ever been constructed in that part of the city, and it is contended by many of the tax payers who will be assessed for their construction that, by reason of the soil being gravel and naturally sewered that their construction is not necessary. This portion of the city is almost entirely a resident district of the city, with the exception that there is one of the large school houses and three factories."

and you inquire:

> "1. Shall the ordinance when passed ordering the director of public service to proceed with the construction of this sewer, which contains the declaration of the council that this is 'an emergency' be conclusive and prevent any further steps preventing the construction of this sewer?

"2. Despite the declaration that its construction is 'an emergency' and a notice and demand should be made upon me as solicitor to bring an action to enjoin its construction until the people should have an opportunity to vote under the referendum, what would be the form of the action?"

In answer to your first question it seems to me that the ordinance passed ordering the director of public service to proceed with the construction of the sewer in question would be an ordinance which would involve the expenditure of money, and consequently could not under section 4227-3, General Code, be declared to be an emergency measure, since an ordinance involving the expenditure of money is expressly included in that class of ordinance which cannot be declared to be emergency measures, and therefore even though council should declare that such ordinance was an emergency measure and should pass the same by a three-fourths majority of council, it would in so far as it was declared to be an emergency measure be invalid.

"Second: You inquire what should be the form of action that should be brought should notice and demand be made upon you as solicitor to bring an action to enjoin the construction of the sewer until the people should have an opportunity to vote under the referendum.

It would seem to me that since the ordinance was one which ordered the director of public service to proceed with the construction of the sewer the action in injunction should be instituted against such director of public service.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—POWER OF CITY TO ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS—SINKING FUND TRUSTEES MAY NOT PURCHASE—REMEDIES IN CASE OF VIOLATION.

Under section 3913, General Code, a city is empowered to issue certificates of indebtedness in anticipation only of fund available from taxes and revenues at the next semi-annual settlement of tax collections.

The trustees of the sinking fund are not empowered by the statutes to invest their moneys in such certificates.

When, therefore, the sinking fund trustees have purchased such certificates and have failed to apply for their payment out of the fund secured at the next settlement of taxes, they have acted in excess of their powers. On equitable grounds, however, the expenditures of the sinking fund trustees may be viewed as a trust fund and by causing the city to issue refunding bonds, under sections 3916 and 3917, General Code, by selling the certificates to a third party, by purchasing the refunding bonds of the city and by causing the city to pay the third party holding such certificates, by means of the funds obtained from the sale of the refunding bonds, the matter may be adjusted.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1913.

HON. R. E. MYGATT, City Solicitor, Conneaut, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 30th, submitting for my opinion, as to the proper procedure in the promises, the following statement of facts:

"The city of Conneaut issued certain notes in anticipation of the general revenue fund of the municipality. (This does not appear from your letter but, in the findings of the examiner of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, to which you refer, I find a statement to the effect that the notes mentioned by you were lawfully issued in the first instance. Whether or not they were lawfully issued at the outset does not affect the conclusion which I have reached.) The notes were taken by the sinking fund trustees, who have held some of them for two years and some for three years. The certificates have not been paid by the city.

"How should the books of the sinking fund trustees be adjusted?"

Assuming that the notes were, in the first instance, lawfully issued, they would have been issued under authority of section 3913, General Code, which is in part as follows:

"In anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year, such corporations may borrow money and issue certificates of indebtedness therefor, signed as municipal bonds are signed, but no loans shall be made to exceed the amount estimated to be received from taxes and revenues at the next semi-annual settlement of tax collections for such fund, after deducting all advances. The sums so anticipated shall be deemed appropriated for the payment of such certificates at maturity. * * *"

The trustees of the sinking fund, in investing the moneys in their custody and under their control, are subject to the following:

"Section 4514. The trustees of the sinking fund shall invest all moneys received by them in bonds of the United States, the state of Ohio, or of any municipal corporation, school, township or county bonds, in such state * * *."

It is apparent, at a glance, that the investment made by the sinking fund trustees in the instance presented by your question was unlawful. Certificates of indebtedness are not bonds at all. Should any loss accrue to the city by reason of the unlawful investment, the sinking fund trustees would be personally liable therefor.

Under section 3913, supra., the notes issued should have been paid out of the next semi-annual settlement of taxes. It was the duty of the sinking fund trustees, even though they had made an unlawful investment of their funds, to present the notes for payment to the city auditor immediately after the semi-annual settlement. It was also the duty of the auditor to set aside and appropriate amounts sufficient to provide for the payment of the notes so issued immediately after the settlement. If any loss ensues the liability therefor would seem to fall in some degree, perhaps secondarily, upon the auditor, because of his failure so to set aside sufficient money to pay the notes.

I do not think that personal liability ought to be regarded as the solution of the question which you present. There have been mismanagement and unlawful conduct on the part of the officers of the city, but, undoubtedly, there was no intention to proceed in an illegal manner. Meanwhile, the city has obtained the benefit of the money which has been misapplied. The situation simply amounts to this: Trust funds, i. e., the moneys in the sinking fund, have been misapplied and devoted to the current uses of the municipal corporation, which has received the ultimate benefit of the misapplication. When the unlawful investment was made a personal liability arose as against the sinking fund trustees, and possibly the auditor. Technically, advantage might be taken of this liability and the sinking fund trustees might be held personally accountable for the money which they have applied otherwise than to the uses and purposes of the trust committed to them by the statute. Nevertheless, looking at the matter from the broadly equitable point of view, it would be unjust to enforce this liability, because the city has obtained the benefit of the misapplication.

I do not see that it would help matters any to have the sinking fund trustees sell the notes of the city; the holders of these notes would still have to be paid, whether they be sinking fund trustees or not; and as the municipality is, as you state, unable to pay the notes from its current revenues, the burden of paying any judgment that might be secured would ultimately fall upon the sinking fund by virtue of section 4517, General Code.

At the time the municipality borrowed the money it had power to and did create a valid obligation against itself. That is to say, if the notes were lawfully issued in the first instance, there was thereby created a debt of the city. Unless the failure of the sinking fund trustees to present the obligations when due had the effect of extinguishing the debt, such debt would continue to exist until the notes were paid. In my opinion, the failure of the sinking fund trustees and city auditor to provide for the payment of the notes out of the succeeding tax settlement proceeds does not have the effect of extinguishing the obligation.

You state in your letter that the city of Conneaut is not now and, presumably, never has been able, by virtue of the limitations upon its taxing power, to pay these obligations out of current revenues. Inasmuch as you ask me for a convenient method of avoiding the difficulties in which the city authorities find themselves, I beg to suggest the following:

While the notes should have been paid, as already stated, out of the next succeeding tax settlement, yet, it is conceivable that for some valid reason this was impossible. Notes having been lawfully issued in the first instance, the city owes a debt which it must pay, even though the sinking fund trustees are not lawfully in possession of the evidences of indebtedness and have misapplied their funds in purchasing them. The case seems, therefore, to come under section 3916, General Code, which is as follows:

> "For the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation the corporation is unable to pay at maturity, or when it appears to the council for the best interest of the corporation, the council thereof may issue bonds of the corporation or borrow money so as to change but not to increase the indebtedness, in such amounts, for such length of time and at such rate of interest as the council deems proper, not to exceed six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

This section must be read in connection with section 3917, General Code, which is as follows:

> "No indebtedness of such municipal corporation shall be funded, refunded, or extended, unless it shall first be determined to be an existing valid and binding obligation of the corporation by a formal resolution of the council thereof. Such resolution shall also state the amount of the existing indebtedness to be funded, refunded or extended, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear, and the place of payment of principal and interest."

I recommend that the council declare the outstanding notes to be a valid existing indebtedness of the municipality. Perhaps it might be best to have the sinking fund trustees sell the notes, so that they may be in the hands of third parties at the time this declaration is made. Then, let the council issue bonds to fund what is now a floating indebtedness, and let the bonds be offered to the sinking fund trustees under the general statutes. Out of the proceeds of the bonds the notes could be taken up by the municipal corporation directly. The sinking fund trustees, having possession of the bonds, would then be authorized to provide for their redemption out of the levies for sinking fund purposes. This, it seems to me, is the proper manner in which to convert a floating indebtedness into a funded indebtedness, and that seems to be the problem which is before the authorities at Conneaut at the present time.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—WHEN CITY AND TOWNSHIP LIMITS SO EXTENSIVE—DUTY OF COUNCIL TO PROVIDE CIVIL DOCKET.

Under section 3512, General Code, when the city limits become identical with those of a township, the duties formerly resting upon the township trustees are transferred to the city council, and one of such duties is to provide a civil docket for the justice of the peace within the township, under section 1724, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1913.

HON. R. CLINT COLE, City Solicitor, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I hereby acknowledge receipt of your communication of January 9th, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "The last state accountant to inspect the books of this city, in his report, claimed that the justice of the peace here owed the city certain amounts for civil dockets, for which the city had paid.
> "This city, a number of years ago, extended the corporation limits until they were co-extensive with the township. Our council has never passed any ordinance with reference to justices of the peace. They have, however, always been elected at the regular elections.
> "My query is to know what the status of our justices of the peace is, and whether or not the city should furnish them with civil dockets. Section 3512 of the General Code is the statute to be interpreted."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that the justices of the peace about whom you speak hold their respective offices and exercise their official prerogatives by virtue of the constitutional provisions of article IV, section 1 of the constitution of 1851. Said article IV, section 1 was amended by the constitutional convention held in 1912, and said amendment was adopted at the election on September 3, 1912, but in this instance the amendment in nowise affects the justices of the peace who held office prior to January 1, 1913, and for whom the expense was incurred by the city solicitor, as stated in your letter.

Section 1719 of Bates' Revised Statutes, (2nd edition) enacted March 7, 1872 (69 O. L. 23) provided in substance, for the election of justices of the peace where the limits of a municipal corporation are co-extensive with the boundaries of a township, as follows:

> "When the limits of a municipal corporation are co-extensive with the limits of the township, and the township becomes merged in the municipal corporation, the corporate existence of such township shall, nevertheless, continue for the purpose of electing the same number of justices of the peace and constables for such township, who shall be voted for on the same ballot, provided, that in cities of the second grade of the first class, and in cities of the second class, the corporate limits of which are co-extensive with the township, justices of the peace and constables for such township shall be voted for on the same ticket with officers for such city; and the municipal officers holding such election shall proceed in the same manner, and make like returns, as in case of election for justices and constables held by the trustees and clerks in the township."

Section 1623 and section 1625 of Bates' Revised Statutes (2nd edition) provide, respectively, as follows:

"When the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, the office of township trustee, township treasurer and township clerk in such township shall be abolished; and all the powers and duties of trustees of townships, conferred or prescribed by law, shall vest in and be performed by the council, except as to binding out apprentices and administering relief to the poor; and if such corporation is not already provided with an infirmary, the council shall forthwith, except in cities of the first grade of the second class, and from year to year, appoint one or more and not exceeding three, directors of the infirmary, and prescribe their duties by ordinance, and in cities of the first grade of the second class, the board of public works shall appoint such director or directors.

"The duties of treasurer and clerk of such township shall be performed by the clerk and treasurer of the corporation; and all moneys collected or authorized by law to be paid to the township treasurer shall be paid to such corporation treasurer."

Said sections were originally adopted by the legislature as sections 475 and 477, respectively, of the municipal code, of the date of May 7, 1869 (66 O. L., 229). Said section 1623 was amended April 28, 18090 (87 O. L. 370), but making no material change in its provisions as originally enacted. In construing section 1719 Bates, Revised Statutes, the court in the case of McGill vs. State, 34 O. S., 228, at page 251 of the opinion ,says:

"The act of May 7, 1872 (69 Ohio L. 23), preserves the corporate existence of such township for the sole purpose of electing justices of the peace and constables, evidently to meet the constitutional requirement that justices of the peace shall be elected by townships. But for all other purposes the township organization in this class of cities and villages is abolished."

In construing section 1623 and section 1625 Bates' Revised Statutes, quoted above the court in the case of Curtiss vs. McDougal, 26 O. S., 66, held as follows:

"Where the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, and the office of the township clerk is thereby abolished, as provided in section 475 of the municipal code (66 O. L. 229), the office of the clerk of such city or village, under the provisions of section 477 of the same code, becomes a depository for chattel mortgages."

When the legislature enacted the new municipal code, the provisions of said sections 1623, 1625 and 1719 Bates' Revised Statutes, supra, were condensed into one act, which said act is now section 3512 of the General Code, and said sections 1623, 1625 and 1719 Bates' Revised Statutes were repealed. Said section 3512 of the General Code (section 1536-3 Bates' Revised Statutes) provides as follows:

> "When the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, all township offices shall be abolished, and the duties thereof shall thereafter be performed by the correponding officers of the city or village, except that justices of the peace and constables shall continue the exercise of their functions under municipal ordinances providing offices, regulating the disposition of their fees, their compensation, clerks and other officers and employes. Such justices and constables shall be elected at municipal elections. All property, moneys, credits, books, records and documents of such township shall be delivered to the council of such city or village. All rights, interests or claims in favor of or against the township may be enforced by or against the corporation."

Section 1724 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Each justice of the peace must keep a docket, which shall be furnished by the trustees of the township, in which must be entered by him."

The word "docket" as used in section 1724 evidently means a justices' civil docket, for the reason that section 1742 of the General Code specifically provides the manner in which a justice may provide himself with a criminal docket, as follows:

> "A justice of the peace may retain out of the fines or other moneys belonging to the county coming into his hands in criminal proceedings, the amount paid for a criminal docket * * *. A justice of the peace paying out money for such purposes shall file with the county auditor, at the expiration of his term of office, a sworn itemized statement thereof. In making the annual statement to the auditor as required by law, a justice of the peace, having made such expenditures or having such moneys in his hands contemplated for such purposes, shall include therein the moneys so paid or held by him."

By virtue of section 1724 of the General Code, above quoted, it is part of the official duty of township trustees to furnish justices of the peace with civil dockets, and by virtue of section 3512 of the General Code, above quoted, when the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, the duties of the township officers devolve upon the corresponding officers of the municipality, which in this case would be the municipal council. Inasmuch as the court in the case of Curtiss vs. McDougal, supra, construed that the duties of the township clerk devolved upon the city or village clerk when the corporate limits of such city or village become identical with those of a township, by virtue of sections 1623, 1625 and 1719 of Bates' Revised Statutes, the provisions of which statutes are now contained in section 3512 of the General Code, but expressed in more concise language in the latter section, it follows by parity of reason that the duties of the township trustees devolve upon the municipal council when the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township.

Therefore, in direct answer to your inquiry, I am of the opinion that it is the legal duty of the city, through its council, to furnish the justices of the peace of your city with civil dockets.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE—POWER TO FIX SALARIES OF EMPLOYES IN THE WATERWORKS DEPARTMENT RESTS WITH COUNCIL.

An ordinance of council dividing employes of the waterworks department into three classes and fixing the salaries of such employes in accordance with said classification, is a valid exercise of the powers of council as set out in section 4214, General Code.

Council has the right to appropriate bonds for waterworks purposes, under section 3960, General Code. Whether a certain power belongs to council or to the director of public service must be determined when the particular power is sought to be exercised by the nature of the power.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, 1913.

HON. G. B. FINDLEY, City Solicitor, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of February 19, 1913, is received, in which you inquire:

"Does the director of public service have the exclusive right to make such regulations as he deems necessary for the efficient management of the waterworks?

"Is ordinance No. 1936 enclosed herewith, in so far as it relates to the waterworks, an interference by the council with the department of the director?"

The ordinance submitted reads as follows:

Ordinance Number 1936.

"To fix the salaries and bonds of the employes in the waterworks department and stenographer in the city auditor's office.

"Be it ordained by the council of the city of Elyria, state of Ohio:

"Section 1. That the employes of the waterworks department shall be classified into three classes A, B and C.

"Class 'A' shall consist of persons who have served two years or more continuously in one position, or in a lower position in the same department, from which they have been promoted.

"Class 'B' shall consist of persons who have served one year and less than two years continuously in one position or in a lower position in the same department, from which they have been promoted.

"Class 'C' shall consist of persons rendering their first year's service in said department.

"Section 2. That the following schedule of salaries be and it is hereby adopted."

Pumping Station—Engineers.

Class A	$1,200 per year
Class B	1,140 per year
Class C	1,080 per year

Firemen.

Class A	$1,080 per year
Class B	1,020 per year
Class C	960 per year

Office—Linemen.

Class A	$1,020 per year
Class B	960 per year
Class C	900 per year

Assistant Line and Meter Men.

Class A	$840 per year
Class B	780 per year
Class C	720 per year

"Section 3. That the salary of the assistant clerk in the waterworks office be and it is hereby fixed at $480.00 per annum, and the salary of the stenographer in the city auditor's office be and it is hereby fixed at $660.00 per annum, and said stenographer be and is hereby required to give bond in the sum of $500.00.

"Section 4. That the salary of the chemist at the waterworks plant be and the same is hereby fixed at $600.00 per annum.

"Section 5. That the salaries of the waterworks employes herein fixed shall be payable semi-monthly from the waterworks fund of the city, and the salary of the stenographer in the city auditor's office shall be payable semi-monthly from the general fund of the city.

"Section 6. All ordinances and parts of ordinances heretofore passed and inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed.

"Section 7. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law."

This ordinance divides the employes of the waterworks department into three classes, and then fixes the salaries of such employes in accordance with said classification. The only use made of the classification is to make a difference in the compensation to be received by the employes.

The ordinance fixes the salaries of certain employes and has no other purpose. In passing said ordinance council has acted under authority of section 4214, General Code, which provides:

"Except as otherwise provided in this title, council, by ordinance or resolution, shall determine the number of officers, clerks and employes in each department of the city government, and shall fix by ordinance or resolution their respective salaries and compensation, and the amount of bond to be given for each officer, clerk or employe in each department of the government, if any be required. Such bond shall be made by such officer, clerk or employe, with surety subject to the approval of the mayor."

In State vs. Lothschuetz, 20 Ohio Dec., 390, it is held:

"A director of public service of a city has no power, either under sections 139, 140 or 141 of act 99 O. L. 563 (General Code 4324, 4325, 4326), the Payne law, giving him the management and supervision of his department to fix salaries or compensation of employes therein, but the exclusive right to fix salaries and compensation thereof is reposed in the city council by section 227 of such act (General Code 4214).

The ordinance submitted is not an interference with the power of the director of public service, but is within the power of council.

You ask further if the director of public service has the exclusive power to make regulations for the management of the waterworks. This is a very broad question and is one which will cover all the duties of council and the director of public service as to the waterworks department.

It is seen that council has the right to fix the compensation of the employes in the waterworks department and to that extent, at least, the director of public service has not the exclusive power.

Sections 3955, et seq., General Code, provide for the management of the waterworks department.

Section 3960, General Code, provides:

> "Money collected for waterworks purposes shall be deposited weekly with the treasurer of the corporation. Money so deposited shall be kept as a separate and distinct fund. When appropriated by council, it shall be subject to the order of the director of public service. Such director shall sign all orders drawn on the treasurer of the corporation against such fund."

The council has the right to appropriate the funds of the waterworks by virtue of this section.

It appears therefore that council has some power in reference to the waterworks department.. Whether a certain power belongs to council or to the director of public service must be determined when the particular power is sought to be exercised and by the nature of the power.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—POLICE AND FIREMEN'S PENSION FUND—POWER OF COUNCIL TO MAKE LEVY FOR—DUTY OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Under section 4605, General Code, council is empowered, where a municipality avails itself of the firemen's pension fund provisions, to make a levy as provided by law for other municipal levies, not to exceed three-tenths of a mill on each dollar of property valuation for such purpose; and under section 4606, General Code, if the board of trustees fails to furnish the mayor an estimate of the amount of money needed as provided for heads of the departments of municipalities, council may, nevertheless, make the levy.

These provisions, however, cannot be construed to give the right to compel council nor the board of trustees, nor any officer in authority, to make such levy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1913.

HON. RODERIC JONES, City Solicitor, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 12th in which you submit the following request for an opinion:

> "I beg to ask your opinion upon the construction of sections 4605 and 4606 of the Code. These sections relate to the firemen's pension fund, but somewhat relate also to the police fund, and the same questions arise in both.
> "I should like your advice as to two propositions: First, as to whether, under these two sections, the council has the exclusive right to make the levy for the fund and, secondly, whether the council is required to make a maximum levy without reference to the needs of the fund or to section 4606 or such part thereof as is necessary to limit the pay roll to meet the necessities of the fund?"

Your letter refers to sections 4645 and 4646, an obvious mistake, as these sections relate to the sanitary police pension fund and contain no provision whatever respecting the making of a levy, such provisions, as to that fund, being incorporated in sections 4637 and 4638, General Code. These sections are substantially similar to sections 4605 and 4606, and both groups of sections are, in turn, substantially identical with sections 4621 and 4622, General Code, which refer to the police relief fund. As you yourself suggest the construction of sections 4605 and 4606 necessarily affects that of sections 4621 and 4622 and 4637 and 4638, respectively.

I quote sections 4605 and 4606, General Code, in full:

"Section 4605. In each municipality availing itself of these provisions, to maintain the firemen's pension fund, the council thereof each year, in the manner provided by law for other municpal levies, and in addition to all other levies authorized by law, may levy a tax of not to exceed three-tenths of a mill on each dollar upon all the real and personal property, as listed for taxation in such municipality. In the matter of such levy, the board of trustees of the firemen's pension fund shall be subject to the provisions of law controlling the heads of departments in the municipality, and shall discharge all the duties required of such heads of departments.

"Section 4606. A failure of such board of trustees to act in the manner required by law of the heads of departments in such municipality in the making of such levy shall not limit the power of council to make it. If the council fails in any year to make the maximum levy herein authorized, in addition to the amount realized therefrom, there shall be passed to the credit of the firemen's pension fund such portion of the annual tax on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors required by law to be passed to the credit of the general fund in the municipality, as when added to the amount realized from such levy for the firemen's pension fund, will equal the amount that would be realized from a full levy of three-tenths of a mill, or such part thereof as is necessary to meet the pension pay roll, but the portion used of such tax on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors shall not exceed sixteen-thirtieths of the amount of such tax required to be passed to the credit of the general fund in the municipality."

I cannot so read these sections as to reach the conclusion that council may be compelled to make the levy for the fund nor that any other board or officer has the right to make such levy.

In the first place, council is expressly vested with authority to make the levy, and the board of trustees of the fund is expressly given the powers and duties conferred by law upon the heads of departments in municipalities. This means, of course, that the board of trustees of the fund is to furnish the mayor annually an estimate, in itemized form, of the amount of money needed for its wants as required by section 3738. The mayor, then, may revise the estimate and include it in his annual budget, which is required to be submitted to council by section 3791. That section expressly provides that:

" * * * Any item of which (the budget) may be reduced or omitted by council, but the council shall not increase the total of such budget. In > the making of the annual budget, the mayor may revise and change any and all items in the annual estimates furnished to him by the directors and officers as herein prescribed, but he shall not increase the total of any such estimate when including it in his annual budget to council."

It seems to me that section 4605 expressly makes the machinery just referred to applicable to the making of the levy for the firemen's pension fund. However, section 4606 modifies the effect of section 4605 in this particular to a certain extent; for it authorizes the council to make the levy even though the board of trustees has failed to submit its estimate of needs for budgetry purposes. It cannot be inferred from this, however, that the council can be compelled to make the levy or any part of it, nor that the board of trustees or any other officer has authority to act instead of council. The power to levy taxes is not to be raised by implication. It is, in a sense, the highest attribute of sovereign power. Unless the legislature has passed a tax-levying law, which is self-executing, express authority must be found in the statutes for some administrative officer or legislative tribunal to make the specific levy. The only authority which appears with respect to the firemen's fund is the authority of council.

Council's authority is a power and not a duty. This is clear because the possibility of council's failing to make the maximum levy is recognized by section 4606 and specifically provided for. If the power of council to make the levy were also a duty, then no such provision as that which is found in the last sentence of the section just cited would have been necessary.

I am of the opinion, then, that the council has the exclusive right to make the levy for the fund, and that council cannot be compelled to make the maximum levy authorized by section 4605. Whether or not council might be compelled to make some levy, i. e., to exercise its legislative discretion, is, perhaps, a more doubtful question, but I incline to the view that council cannot be compelled even to do this. If council fails to make the maximum levy, or such part of it as is necessary to meet the pension pay roll, then the proceeds of the tax on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors may be, and must be automatically transferred from the general revenue fund of the municipality to the firemen's pension fund in the amount and under the restrictions specified in section 4606, General Code.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CRIMINAL PROVISION WITH REFERENCE TO PLAYING OF POOL—CONDUCTING OF POOL ROOM—POWER OF MUNICIPAL CORPORATION TO REGULATE—COMMON LABOR ON SUNDAY—EXEMPTION OF HEBREWS.

Inasmuch as pool cannot be construed to be classified within the terms "other games of similar kinds," as described by section 13049, General Code, that section cannot be held to prohibit the playing of this game on Sunday. Pool, however, comes within the term "sporting" as used in section 12048, General Code, and it therefore follows, that a person over fourteen years of age is prohibited from playing such game on Sunday, by this statute. This statute does not include one who engages in the business of conducting a pool room on Sunday. Such person would be included within the terms of section 13044, General Code, prohibiting common labor on Sunday.

Persons who conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, however, are exempted from this statute, by section 13045, General Code.

Under section 3659, General Code, a municipal corporation has the authority and power to regulate the playing and conduct of billiards and pool.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 13, 1913.

HON. JOHN T. BLAKE, City Solicitor, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith desire to acknowledge the receipt of an inquiry dated December 30, 1912, from Hon. Frank N. Sweitzer, former assistant solicitor of your department, requesting an opinion as follows:

> "Section 13049, sometimes called the Sunday Amusement Statute, makes it unlawful to engage in certain things on Sunday. After mentioning certain performances and games occurs the following phrase, 'other game of similar kind.' The legislature, no doubt, had in mind prohibiting certain games besides the ones specifically mentioned or this phrase would not have been added. Now, my question is: What games are included in this phrase? More specifically, does the conducting of an ordinary pool room on Sunday fall within this statute? Unless pool is included in section 13049 there seems to be no statute prohibiting the operation of a pool room on Sunday where the proprietor is a consistent Hebrew and observes conscientiously the seventh day of the week."

In reply thereto I desire to say that section 13049 of the General Code referred to in your inquiry provides as follows:

> "Whoever, on Sunday, participates in or exhibits to the public with or without charge for admittance, in a building, room, ground, garden or other place, a theatrical or dramatic performance or an equestrian or circus performance of jugglers, acrobats, rope dancing or sparring exhibition, variety show, negro minstrels, living statuary, ballooning, base ball playing in the forenoon, ten pins or other game of similar kind or participates in keeping a low or disorderly house of resort or sells, disposes of or gives away ale, beer, porter or spirituous liquor in a building appendant or adjacent thereto, where such show, performance, or exhibition is given, or houses or place is kept, on complaint within twenty days thereafter, shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars or imprisoned in jail not more than six months, or both."

Said section does not specifically mention pool and does not, therefor, include the game of pool unless the same is included in the phrase "other game of similar kind."

Where specific words are followed by general words, the latter must be confined to and include only things of a same kind. This is known as the principle of ejusdem generis.

Lewis Sutherland on Statutory Construction, Vol. 2, Sec. 422.

Several instances of the application of the rule are given by Mr. Sutherland in his work on statutory construction, but I will content myself by merely citing the general rule as given above.

In the case of ex parte Joseph Neet, 157 Mo. Rep., 527, the court holds as follows:

> "1. Playing Games on Sunday: Base Ball. The game of base ball cannot be classified as among the 'games' mentioned in the statute which says that 'every person who shall be convicted of horse racing, cock fighting, or playing at cards or games of any kind, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.'
> "2. Sunday Base Ball. There is no law in this state which prevents the playing of base ball on Sunday."

This case overrules and reverses the decision of the Kansas City Court of Appeals in the case of State vs. Williams, 35 Mo. Appeals, 541. At page 536 of the opinion, the court says:

> "If the view of the Williams case had been adopted, this statute would have been elastic enough to cover every game that ever was or ever will be invented, no matter whether it was harmless, promotive of physical or mental development or deleterious to both. It would prevent games of chess, backgammon, jacks, authors, proverbs, faro, keno and poker alike, and when played on Sunday any one would have been as illegal as any other. Such a construction would have curtailed many of the pleasures of many of our people without elevating them or improving their moral tone. Until the lawmakers, expressly provide for such sweeping changes in the lives and customs and habits of our people, it is not proper for the courts by construction to impair their natural rights to enjoy those sports or amusements that are neither mala in se nor mala prohibita—neither immoral nor hurtful to body or soul. We therefore conclude that there is no law in this state which prevents playing a game of base ball on Sunday, and therefore the defendant is imprisoned for the doing of an act which is not unlawful, and therefore the imprisonment is wrongful."

The things specifically mentioned in section 13049 are all of them in the nature of performances, exhibitions or shows, except that "base ball in the forenoon" and ten pins, while they are exhibitions, are also generally regarded as being games of an athletic nature. The statute goes so far as to particularly and specifically prohibit base ball being played in the forenoon, and in as much as the legislature was so specific as to prohibit base ball being played in the forenoon surley the legislature would have specifically mentioned the well-known game of pool if it had intended to include such game within the prohibition of section 13049.

For the foregoing reasons and the further reason that penal statutes are to be strictly construed, I am of the opinion that section 13049 does not include the game of pool, and the conducting of the ordinary pool room on Sunday does not come within the provisions of said section.

In answer to your question: What games are included in the phrase "other game of similar kind?" I can only say that those exhibitions, performances or games are included which are specifically mentioned and other like or similar exhibitions, performances or games, such as moving picture shows, which are in the nature of theatrical or dramatic performances; also horse shows or races, as being included in the term equestrain performances; also a circus performance would include the well-known side-show or a wild west exhibition. Without giving further examples of what exhibitions, performances or games might be included as similar in kind to those enumerated I wish to state that pool, which is played with small ivory balls and a cue or mace on a table made especially for the playing of said game and which has pockets in the corners and on two sides thereof and is covered with cloth, is not similar in kind to base ball, which is played out in the open field with a ball and bat by two teams composed of nine members on each team; and pool is not similar in kind to ten pins, which is played by rolling or bowling a large ball upon a long alley for the purpose of knocking over pins set upon end.

Section 12048 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Whoever, being over fourteen years of age, engages in sporting, rioting, quarreling, hunting, fishing or shooting on Sunday, on complaint made within ten days thereafter, shall be fined not more than twenty dollars or imprisoned not more than twenty days, or both."

The term "sporting" contained in said section is defined by Webster as follows:

> "That which diverts and makes mirth; game; diversion; play."

and is defined by the Century dictionary as follows:

> "Amusement, enjoyment, entertainment, fun, a playful act, a pastime, merry making, a play, game."

Webster fails to define the term "pool" but does define a pool ball as follows:

> "One of several ivory balls about two inches in diameter and used in playing a kind of billiards."

Webster defines "billiards" as follows:

> "A game played on a rectangular table covered with a cloth, with small ivory balls which the players aim to drive into hazzard nets or pockets at the sides and corners of the table by impelling one ball against another with maces or cues, according to certain rules of the game."

Century defines the term "pool" as follows:

> "A game played on a billiard table with six pockets, by two or more persons."

It appears, therefore, that both dictionaries define the term "pool" as a game which, according to both of said authorities as above quote, comes within the term "sporting."

In the case of State of Nebraska vs. O'Rourk, 17 L. R. A., 830, base ball is held to be sporting, as follows:

> "1. Under the provisions of section 241 of the Criminal Code, any person of fourteen years of age or upwards who shall on Sunday engage in sporting, etc., shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $20, or be confined in the county jail not exceeding twenty days, or both.

"2. Playing base ball on Sunday comes within the definition of 'sporting,' and renders the persons engaging therein liable to the punishment provided for in section 241."

The Nebraska statute on sporting on Sunday in substance follows the provisions of the Ohio statutes and reads as follows:

"If any person, of the age of fourteen years or upwards, shall be found on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, sporting, rioting, quarreling, hunting, fishing or shooting, he or she shall be fined in a sum not exceeding twenty dollars, or be confined in the county jail for a term not exceeding twenty days, or both, at the discretion of the court. And if any person, of the age of fourteen years or upwards, shall be found on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, at common labor, (work of necessity and charity only excepted), he or she shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five dollars nor less than one dollar; provided, nothing herein contained in relation to common labor on said first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, shall be construed to extend to those who conscientiously do observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, nor to prevent families emigrating from traveling, watermen from landing their passengers, superintendents or keepers of toll bridges or toll gates from attending and superintending the same, or ferrymen from conveying travelers over the water, or persons moving their families on such days, or to prevent railway companies from running necessary trains."

It necessarily follows that playing pool comes within the term "sporting," and whoever, being over fourteen years of age, engages in playing pool on Sunday is violating said section 13048 of the General Code as quoted above, including the proprietor of a pool room if he engages in said game. Said section does not, however, seem to be broad enough to include one who engages in the business or occupation of conducting and keeping a pool room on Sunday unless he actually joins or engages in the game of playing pool.

Section 13044 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Whoever, being over fourteen years of age, engages in common labor or opens or causes to be opened a building or place for transaction of business, or requires a person in his employ or under his control to engage in common labor on Sunday, on complaint made within ten days thereafter, shall be fined twenty-five dollars, and for each subsequent offense shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars and imprisoned not less than five days nor more than thirty days."

Said section 13044 of the General Code does not apply to those who observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, as provided by the exception contained in section 13045 of the General Code, as follows:

"The next preceding section shall not apply to work of necessity or charity, and does not extend to persons who conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, and abstain thereon from doing things herein prohibited on Sundays."

A proprietor of a pool room who is a consistent Hebrew comes within the exception contained in section 13045 above quoted.

Section 3616 of the General Code provides that municipalities shall have certain general powers as follows:

"All municipal corporations shall have the general powers mentioned in this chapter, and council may provide by ordinance or resolution for the exercise and enforcement of them."

Section 3659 of the General Code provides as follows:

"To regulate billiard and pool tables, nine or ten pin alleys or tables, and shooting and ball alleys; and to authorize the destruction of instruments or devices used for the purpose of gambling."

Section 3670 of the General Code provides as follows:

"To regulate and license manufacturers and dealers in explosives, pawnbrokers, chattel mortgage and salary loan brokers, peddlers, public ballrooms, scavengers, intelligence offices, billiard rooms, bowling alleys, livery, sale and boarding stables, dancing or riding academies or schools, race courses, ball grounds, street musicians, second hand dealers, junk shops and all persons engaged in the trade, business or profession of manicuring, massaging or chiropody. In the granting of any license a municipal corporation may exact and receive such sums of money as the council shall deem proper and expedient."

Under section 3659 of the General Code, a municipal corporation has the authority and power to regulate pool and billiards.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ELECTION OF COMMISSIONERS TO FORM CITY CHARTER—ADVERTISEMENT AS IN MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Under section 14, article 18, of the constitution, the election of a charter commission by a city must be conducted by the election authority prescribed by general law. Under this provision, a notice of such election should be given in the same manner, for the same time and by the same persons required to give notice at municipal elections, under the general laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 23, 1913.

HON. A. J. LAYNE, City Solicitor, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 15th, in which you say:

"We are about to hold an election to elect commissioners to form a new charter for the city of Ironton. Should the council or the election board advertise this election?"

In answer permit me to state that section 8 of article 18 of the constitution reads:

"The legislative authority of any city or village may by a two-thirds vote of its members, and upon petition of ten per centum of the electors shall forthwith, provide by ordinance for the submission to the electors, of the question, 'shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter.' The ordinance providing for the submission of such question shall require that it be submitted to the electors at the next regular municipal election if one shall occur not less than sixty nor more than one hundred and twenty days after its passage; otherwise it shall provide for the submission of the question at a special election to be called and held within the time aforesaid. The ballot containing such question shall bear no party designation, and provision shall be made thereon for the election from the municipality at large of fifteen electors who shall constitute a commission to frame a charter; provided that a majority of the electors voting on such question shall have voted in the affirmative. Any charter so framed shall be submitted to the electors of the municipality at an election to be held at a time fixed by the charter commission and within one year from the date of its election, provision for which shall be made by the legislative authority of the municipality in so far as not prescribed by general law. Not less than thirty days prior to such election the clerk of the municipality shall mail a copy of the proposed charter to each elector whose name appears upon the poll or registration books of the last regular or general election held therein. If such proposed charter is approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, it shall become the charter of such municipality at the time fixed therein."

Section 14 of the same article reads:

"All elections and submissions of questions provided for in this article shall be conducted by the election authorities prescribed by general law. The percentage of electors required to sign any petition provided for herein shall be based upon the total cast at the last preceding general municipal election."

I would consider the advertisement alluded to as a part of the "conduct of the election" and included in the language "conducted by the election authorities prescribed by general law."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the notice of this election should be given in the same manner, for the same time, and by the same persons required to give notice of municipal elections under the general laws. I can find no law requiring either council or election board to do so.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE—MERE APPROPRIATION BY COUNCIL DOES NOT AUTHORIZE CONTRACT IN EXCESS OF $500.

Under section 4328, General Code, a director of public service may not enter into any contract involving an expense of more than $500 without authorization of the council. The mere appropriation of funds for a general purpose cannot be construed to amount to a sufficient authorization to justify such a contract by the director of public service.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1913.

HON. G. T. THOMAS, City Solicitor, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 19, 1913, you submit to this department the following inquiry:

> "I have from the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices a statement of opinions rendered that pertain to the municipal code, and among them, under the head of 'Contracts' No. 22, January 11, 1913, I find the following:
> "When a director of public service advertises for bids for a contract in excess of $500.00, without authorization of council, in accordance with section 4328, General Code, such bids are illegal and void. The subsequent authorization of council for such contracts does not remedy the defect; bids must be reissued.
>
> "The following facts may be required to explain my conclusions:
> "We made, at the semi-annual appropriation period, an appropriation for 'water-main extension' $1,800.00.
> "The director of public service asked me this question: 'Must I have an ordinance to authorize the purchase of water pipe, the cost price of which is about $700.00, when I have in that fund appropriated for that purpose $1,800.00?'
> "My answer was that 'the council had appropriated for that purpose and under authority of the city of Akron et al. vs. Dobson, 81 Ohio St. Rep. 66, that no further action was required by council, but that he must advertise for bids, the amount being over $500.00 as required by section 4328, General Code.
> "I am anxious to know if I am right."

The holding of the bureau to which you refer was taken from an opinion of this department to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, under date of January 11, 1913, a copy of which opinion is herewith enclosed.

Section 4328, General Code, provides:

> "The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertising for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

You call attention to the case of city of Akron vs. Dobson, 81 Ohio, St., 66, wherein it is held:

> "The council of a municipal corporation may, by ordinance appropriate money and authorize the directors of public safety to enter into contracts for an authorized purpose, and in such case the particular contract made by the directors to effect that purpose, if within the appropriation and the authority, does not have to be approved by council."

It appears that council in the above case not only appropriated the money but also authorized the directors of public safety to enter into contracts for the expenditure thereof.

On page 72 of the opinion, Summers, J., says:

> "Upon the 6th day of April, 1908, the council passed an ordinance authorizing and empowering the directors of public safety to expend the sum of thirty thousand dollars, realized from the sale of said bonds, for the purpose stated in the first mentioned ordinance. The last mentioned ordinance further authorized the directors to enter into contracts 'with the lowest and best bidder, after advertisement according to law.' "

On page 77, he further says:

> "The council provides the money for carrying on the government, either by a levy of taxes, or an issue of bonds, and it is proper that it should have some control over the expenditures, but considering these sections in the light of the purpose of the code we think their requirements are met by an ordinance making an appropriation and stating generally the purpose for which it is made, and authorizing the directors to enter into contracts to effect that purpose."

In the case of city of Akron vs. Dobson, council not only appropriated the money, but it also authorized the directors of public safety to enter into contracts for the purpose authorized.

In the case you submit it appears that council has only appropriated the money. It must go further than that. It must authorize the director of public service to enter into contracts to expend the money so appropriated, if such contracts are in excess of five hundred dollars.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL BONDS HELD BY SINKING FUND TRUSTEES NOT EXEMPT FROM TAXATION.

Since the statutes of the state do not make provision for the exemption of municipal bonds purchased by sinking fund trustees, the same must be held to be taxable in this state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1913.

HON. CLYDE C. PORTER, City Solicitor, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 20th, in which you request me to express my opinion as to the taxability of municipal street improvement bonds, issued after January 1, 1913, and taken by the trustees of the sinking fund of the corporation, while in the hands of such trustees.

You cite the case of Trustees of The Cincinnati Southern Railway vs. Roth, Treasurer, 13 N. P. n. s. 633. I have read the decision of Judge Oppenheimer in this case and I am of the opinion that it is absolutely correct in principle. The reasoning of the court is based upon the assumption that the constitutional authority to exempt public property used for any public purpose is not self-executing; a proposition so plain, it seems to me, as to require no argument. The court then proceeds to analyze the exemption statutes of the state, and, failing to find therein any provision authorizing the exemption of the particular kind of public property involved in the case before him, turns to section 5328 of the General Code, which creates a general rule that all property is to be taxed. This logic, which cannot be assailed, in my judgment, leads to the conclusion that under the laws of the state any public property which is not exempted from taxation is subject thereto despite its public character, and even despite its public use, although, in the case decided by Judge Oppenheimer, the question as to whether or not the use of the particular property was public was not involved.

Applying the reasoning of this decision and of the cases cited in Judge Oppenheimer's opinion to the hypothetical statement of facts submitted by you, it seems that the only answer which can consistently be returned to your question is the affirmative one. Bonds in which the trustees of a sinking fund invest their moneys constitute undoubtedly, "public property." They are also subjected to a public use. I do not believe any discussion of this point is necessary. However, they are clearly "investments in bonds * * * of persons residing in this state," as the word "persons," agreeably to section 5320, General Code, is construed in the case commented upon. Unless, therefore, their exemption from taxation is provided for in the chapter relating to such exemptions, they must be held taxable.

Sections 5349 to 5365-1, General Code, constitute a subdivision relating to exempt property. Not only does this subdivision contain no provision which might by any ingenuity be stretched to cover the case of municipal bonds held by sinking fund trustees, but also these sections do contain specific exemption of other kind of property owned by municipal corporations and put to a public use. Indeed, section 5358 exempts certificates of stock in a corporation or railroad company owned by a city. Evidently, therefore, the general assembly considered it necessary expressly to exempt the investments of a city, thus destroying the force of a possible argument to the effect that the word "corporation" in section 5328 means only a private corporation.

Therefore, inasmuch as the legislature has seen fit expressly to exempt some investments of a municipal corporation and has not exempted its investments in bonds, it must necessarily follow that such investments are not exempt.

I am quite aware of the ridiculous conclusion to which the statutes lead. This, however, is the fault of the legislature and not of the courts or of any other officer whose function it is to declare or interpret the law. My attention has more than once been called to the archaic condition of our taxing statutes. Such results as that to which you call attention are inevitable in the absence of a general revision of our laws on this subject.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION NOT EMPOWERED TO LEASE REAL PROPERTY HELD FOR SCHOOL PROPERTY.

Section 4749, General Code, which enumerates the power of the board of education with reference to acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of real and personal property, does not include any provision for the leasing of such property by the board, and as the statutes nowhere prescribe the manner of executing such a lease, the board cannot be held to possess such power.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1913.

HON. STUART R. BOLIN, City Solicitor, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I desire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of February 7, 1913, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Will you kindly give us your opinion as to whether or not boards of education have power under the General Code to lease any part of their real property acquired by purchase and which is not used for school purposes?"

In reply thereto I beg to say that section 4749, General Code, provides for the corporate powers of boards of education as follows:

> "The board of education of each school district, organized under the provisions of this title, shall be a body politic and corporate, and, as such, capable of suing and being sued, contracting and being contracted with, acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of real and personal property, and taking and holding in trust for the use and benefit of such district any grant or devise of land and any donation or bequest of money or other personal property and of exercising such other powers and privileges as are conferred by this title and the laws relating to the public schools of the state."

It is to be observed that the board of education by virtue of said section has the power to dispose of real and personal property when such property is no longer required or used for school purposes. So long as such property is used for school purposes the boards of education of their respective districts hold such property in trust for the use of the public schools.

> "Under the act of May 1, 1873, entitled 'An act for the reorganization and maintenance of common schools' (70 O. L. 195), boards of education are invested with the title to the property of their respective districts in trust for the use of public schools, and the appropriation of such property to any other use is unauthorized."—1st Syllabus in Weir vs. Day 35 O. S. 143. See also page 146 of the opinion.

The term "dispose" as used in said statute according to Webster's dictionary means:

> "To exercise finally one's power of control over, to pass over into the control of some one else, to alienate, to bestow, to part with, to get rid of, as to dispose of a house."

The Century dictionary defines the term "dispose" as follows:

> "To make over or part with as by gift, sale or other means of alienation. Alienate or bestow."

The board of education of each school district being a body corporate, such board has only such powers as are specifically granted by statute. Said section 4749, supra, cannot be so construed as to include powers which are not therein specifically enumerated. In my judgment, section 4749, supra, gives the board of education the power to alienate, convey or sell its real property acquired by purchase, but does not give the board the right to lease such property.

Furthermore section 4756 of the General Code specifically provides how real property may be sold by a board of education as follows:

> "When a board of education decides to dispose of real or personal property, held by it in its corporate capacity, exceeding in value three hundred dollars, it shall sell such property at public auction after giving at least thirty days' notice thereof by publication in a newspaper of general circulation or by posting notices thereof in five of the most public places in the district in which such property is situated. When the board has twice so offered a tract of real estate for sale at public auction and it is not sold, the board may sell it at private sale, either as an entire tract or in parcels, as the board deems best. The president and secretary of the board shall execute and deliver deeds necessary to complete such sale."

Section 4757 of the General Code provides how conveyances made by the board of education shall be executed, as follows:

> "Conveyances made by a board of education shall be executed by the president and clerk thereof. No member of the board shall have directly or indirectly any pecuniary interest in any contract of the board or be employed in any manner for compensation by the board of which he is a member except as clerk or treasurer. No contract shall be binding upon any board unless it is made or authorized at a regular or special meeting of such board."

If the legislature had intended to vest boards of education with power to lease real property acquired by purchase it would not only have specifically provided for such power by including it in said section 4749, supra, but would also have provided how such real property could be leased, and how the leases of such property should be executed as in the case of the sale and conveying of real property in accordance with sections 4756 and 4757 of the General Code above quoted.

Furthermore, section 4752, of the General Code, provides that the board of education, on motion, may adopt a resolution authorizing the purchase or sale of real or personal property, etc., as follows:

> "A majority of the members of a board of education shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Upon a motion to adopt a resolution authorizing the purchase or sale of real or personal property or to employ a superintendent or teacher, janitor or other employe or to elect or appoint an officer or to pay any debt or claim or to adopt any text book, the clerk of the board shall publicly call the roll of the members composing the board and enter on the record the names of those voting 'aye' and the names of those voting 'no.' If a majority of all the members of the board vote aye, the president shall declare the motion carried. Upon any motion or resolution, a member of the board may demand the yeas and nays, and thereupon the clerk shall call the roll and record the names of those voting aye and those voting 'no.' Each board may provide for the payment of superintendents, teachers and other employes by pay roll, if it deems advisable, but in all cases such roll call and record shall be complied with; provided, that boards of education of township school districts may provide for the payment of teachers monthly if deemed advisable, upon the presentation to the clerk of a certificate from the director of the sub-district in which the teacher is employed stating that the services have been rendered and that the salary is due; the adoption of a resolution authorizing the clerk to issue warrants for the payment of the teacher's salary on presentation of such a certificate shall be held as a compliance with the above requirements."

If the legislature had intended to grant authority to the board of education to lease any of its real property acquired by purchase it would have included such right in section 4752 of the General Code by providing that such real property could be leased by the board of education upon a motion to adopt a resolution authorizing the making of such lease as in the case of the sale of real property.

For the foregoing reasons it is the opinion of this department that boards of education do not have the power under the General Code to lease any part of their real property acquired by purchase not used for school purposes.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS—APPOINTMENT BY BOARD OF EDUCATION PRIOR TO THE FOUR MONTHS' PERIOD PRECEDING THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE SCHOOL YEAR MADE BEFORE AMENDMENT OF STATUTE, IS VALID.

On April 20, 1911, section 7702, General Code, as it then existed, did not provide as it does in its present form, that the appointment of a school superintendent by the board of education in a city school district must be for a term beginning within four months of such appointment, and that such appointment must be made between May 1st and August 31st. An appointment made on that date, therefore, to take effect on July 1st of that year, is valid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1913.

HON. MARSHALL G. FENTON, City Solicitor, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of April 24th, you wrote as follows:

"Will you kindly render me an opinion as to the question growing out of the following state of facts, the question being whether or not Fred. C. Kirkendall has a contract as superintendent of the schools of this city good until July 1, 1914, or may the board elect a successor this year?

"On May 5, 1908, Kirkendall was first elected by the board of education of this city as superintendent of the public schools for one year. The minutes of the meeting at which he was elected show no date for the beginning of such service. Previous to that time, the board of education had elected superintendents for periods of one year and three years, there being several such elections, but in no instance is the period of service defined, nor is the phrase 'school year' or any similar or equivalent phrase used.

"On July 8, 1908, Kirkendal met with the board of education, as superintendent, and appointed teachers who were then confirmed and elected. He met with them again on July 16th; again on July 30th, and again on August 6th of the same year, in each instance as superintendent. On July 16th he asked for an additional high school teacher, which request was granted by the board. On July 30th he gave a list of desks needed for the various rooms and his request in that respect was favorably acted upon. At that meeting he also nominated high school teachers, who were then confirmed and elected. At the August 6th meeting he presented a request from one of the teachers asking to be excused from institute, recommending that the request be granted and the board granted the same.

"On May 20, 1909, the board of education elected Kirkendall as 'superintendent of the Chillicothe public schools for one year.' This is the language of the minutes. The minutes make no mention as to when the term of service shall begin. At a meeting of the board on July 3, 1909, Kirkendall's letter of acceptance as 'superintendent of schools for one year, 1909-10, at a salary of $2,100.00 for the entire term' was read and confirmed by the board. On June 3, 1909, Kirkendall met with the board, as superintendent, and nominated teachers for the school year beginning September 1, 1909, which the board confirmed and elected.

"The minutes of the board of education for April 7, 1910, show the following action:

" 'For the committee on education Mr. Roche moved that the rules be suspended and that the board proceed to elect F. C. Kirkendall superintendent of schools for one year from the expiration of his present term at the same salary he is now receiving.'

"The minutes also show that Mr. Boulger seconded the motion, which carried, all present voting yes upon roll call.

"On June 21, 1910, Kirkendall appointed teachers for the school year beginning September 1, 1910, and the teachers so nominated and appointed were confirmed by the board.

"At the meeting held on April 6, 1911, Mr. Roche moved that:

" 'F. C. Kirkendall be employed as superintendent of the public schools for a period of three years at a salary of $2,200.00 per year.'

"Mr Scott seconded the motion and on roll call it carried. The minutes of the subsequent meeting, held on April 20, 1911, read, in part, as follows:

" 'Acceptance of Mr. Kirkendall of his election as superintendent for the period of three years from July 1, 1911, at a salary of $2,200.00 per year, was received and placed on file.'

"At the next meeting of the board, held on May 1, 1911, Mr. Kirkendall nominated teachers for the school year beginning September 1, 1911, and the board confirmed the nominations.

"Outside the minutes of the board of education, the facts are that Mr. Kirkendall began the active performance of his duties as superintendent in July, 1908. The selection of teachers both for the grades and for the high school have been made, as shown by the minutes, and such appointment and approval by the board has necessitated the investigation of new teachers each year and recommendations of teachers each year, since the same corps of teachers has never been on duty in any two years. The orderly conduct of the schools require that the teachers shall be appointed by the superintendent confirmed by the board, assigned their grades and places of service and that the schools shall be ready for opening at the beginning of the school year, which in this city has always been on Tuesday following the first Monday of September.

"Kirkendall has drawn his salary in the same installments and at the same time as the teachers in the public schools, the first installment thereof being paid at the end of each school month during the active session of school and no installment of salary being paid for services rendered during the vacation months preparatory to the beginning of active school sessions for the school year.

"Examiner Godfrey has reported as follows:

" 'On April 6, 1911, the board employed Fred. C. Kirkendall as superintendent for a period of three years beginning on July 1, 1911; that action was illegal because it was taken more than four months before the school year began. Section 7702, General Code as it then stood was as follows:

" 'The board of education in each city school district shall appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent of the public schools of the district for a term not longer than five school years and to begin within four months of such appointment.'

"It is contended, on behalf of the superintendent, that his services as such began within four months of his employment, from the fact that he began his services after each of his successive employments for the next school year with the preparation and submission of a list of teachers to be elected for the school year beginning on the first Tuesday of September thereafter. Counsel for Kirkendall have advised him that his election is legal, that his employment began according to his acceptance, on July 1, 1911; that the contract made by the election and acceptance has been interpreted by the conduct of the parties and such conduct shows such interpretations to be that the term of employment began on July 1, 1911; that the statute does not require that the date of employment of the superintendent shall be co-terminous with the school year; that in this instance neither the board nor the superintendent contemplated that such employment should begin at the beginning of the next succeeding school year, and that the actual services rendered under such employment began with July 1, 1911.

"Under these facts, has Kirkendall a legal contract as superintendent, extending to July 1, 1914?"

I do not deem it necessary to go into details in this opinion. Our present statute on the subject, section 7702 of the General Code, to the effect that:

"The board of education in each city school district at a regular meeting, between May 1st and August 31st, shall appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than five school years, beginning within four months of such appointment and ending on the 31st day of August."

did not become a law until the 31st day of May, 1911.

It seems that on the 20th day of April, 1911, the following motion was adopted by the board of education:

"Acceptance of Mr. Kirkendall of his election as superintendent for the period of three years, from July 1, 1911, at a salary of $2,200 per year, was received and placed on file."

If there was anything lacking in a meeting of minds between Mr. Kirkendall and the school board before this time, the passage of this resolution removed such defect, and when the board adopted the resolution just referred to the meeting of minds between the superintendent on the one hand, and the board of education on the other, was complete; and at the time the only requirement was that the superintendent should enter upon his duties within four months from the time of his appointment. This, he did.

It appears further that on May 1, 1911, Mr. Kirkendall nominated teachers for the school year, beginning September 1, 1911, and the board confirmed the nominations. Here was another confirmation of the entire act. The form of the resolution of the board of education of April 20, 1911, and its action on May 1, 1911, in confirming Mr. Kirkendall's nomination of teachers, both being prior to the adoption of the present statute, completed the contract, and in my judgment eliminated from consideration the other propositions presented in the case. Doubtless, the examiner was applying the present statute to a contract made before it became effective, which was misleading.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

POWER OF COUNCIL TO BORROW MONEY FOR FLOOD EMERGENCY.

Under sections 4450 and 4451, General Code, council may borrow money for the payment of bills incurred by the board of health in pursuance of the prevention of disease, made menacing by recent floods, and levies made to cover such indebtedness will be exempt from Smith law limitations, by virtue of section 5649-4, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1913.

HON. ALLEN G. AIGLER, City Solicitor, Bellevue, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You inquire in your letter of May 3rd, receipt of which is acknowledged, whether there is any means of paying bills incurred by the board of health of the city of Bellevue, in connection with the recent flood, which manifested itself so peculiarly in your city, the current appropriation for such purposes having been exhausted.

I call your attention to the provisions of sections 4450 and 4451 of the General Code, which are as follows:

"Section 4450. In case of epidemic or threatened epidemic or during the unusual prevalence of a dangerous communicable disease, if funds are not otherwise available, the council of a municipality may borrow any sum of money that the local board of health deems necessary, to defray the expenses necessary to prevent the spread of such disease. Such money may be borrowed until the next levy and collection of taxes are made, at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum. Thereupon the board may expend the amount so authorized to be borrowed which amount, or so much thereof as is expended, shall be a valid claim against the municipality from the sum so created.

"Section 4451. When expenses are incurred by the board of health under the provision of this chapter, upon application and certificate from such board, the council shall pass the necessary appropriation ordinances to pay the expenses so incurred and certified. The council may levy and set apart the necessary sum to pay such expenses and to carry into effect the provisions of this chapter. Such levy shall, however, be subject to the restrictions contained in this title."

I am of the opinion that under these sections council may now borrow enough money to pay the bills which have been incurred and remain unpaid.

I call attention also to the fact that levies made under these sections are exempt from all limitations of the Smith law. See section 5649-8 of the General Code.

"Section 5649-4. Section 4. For emergencies mentioned in sections forty-four hundred and fifty, forty-four hundred and fifty-one, fifty-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-four hundred and nineteen of the General Code, the taxing authorities of any district may levy tax sufficient to provide therefor, irrespective of any of the limitations of this act."

It seems therefore that the exercise of power under the sections which I have cited, should be a feasible and satisfactory method of meeting the situation which you describe. The only cost which this will involve is the interest on the amount which it will be necessary to borrow.

Of course, if the council has provided a contingent fund in accordance with the authority of section 3800 of the General Code, such a fund could be expended in the manner provided, for purposes such as described by you. It would not in my judgment, however, be in accordance with law to make a transfer at this time, from some other fund to the health fund and then to appropriate the amount so transferred to the health fund and expend the same. Inasmuch as you state in your letter that you realize that such a proceeding would not be in accordance with the law, I have not deemed it necessary to state my reasons for this conclusion.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—PUBLICATION OF NOTICE OF ELECTION ON QUESTION OF ISSUING BONDS FOR SCHOOL BUILDING—POSTING OR PUBLICATION IN ONE NEWSPAPER OF GENERAL CIRCULATION IN THE DISTRICT.

The statutes do not require or authorize publication of a resolution of a board of education passed for the purpose of submitting to electors the question of issuing bonds for construction of a school building.

Under section 7625, General Code, however, notices of the election shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections, i. e., under section 4839, General Code, such publication may be made by posting written or printed notices in five public places in the district at least ten days before the holding of the election, or it may be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the district, once at least ten days before holding of the election.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1913.

HON. W. A. O'GRADY, City Solicitor, Wellsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 15th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "What publication is necessary of a resolution passed by a board of education under section 7625, General Code, for the purpose of submitting to the electors of the district the proposition of issuing bonds for the construction of a school building?"

Section 7625, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "When the board of education of any school district determines that * * * it is necessary to * * * erect a schoolhouse * * * , that the funds at its disposal * * * are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary, the board shall * * * at a general election or special election called for that purpose, submit to the electors of the district the question of the issuing of bonds for the amount so estimated. Notices of the election required herein shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections."

Sections 7626 to 7628, inclusive, General Code, which are in pari materia with the section from which quotation has just been made, are silent respecting the question which you ask.

I do not find in any of the general statutes relating to the powers and duties of boards of education any provision requiring a resolution, such as would be required in order to carry out the authority vested in the board of education by section 7625, to be "published" in the sense that municipal ordinances, for example, are required to be published.

The only publication referred to in section 7625 is that of notice of the election, which is required to be given in the manner provided by law for school elections. The reference here is to the provisions of section 4839, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The clerk of each board of education shall publish a notice of all school elections in a newspaper of general circulation in the district, or post written or printed notices thereof in five public places in the district at least ten days before the holding of such election. * * *"

Under the above quoted section publication in a newspaper is not even required, it being optional with the posting of written or printed notices in public places in the district. In the event, however, that it is desired to have publication, such publication is required to be made in but one newspaper of general circulation in the district, and is complete by one insertion at least ten days before the holding of the election.

This is the only publication of the resolution which is authorized or in any sense required by law. As a matter of fact, the resolution itself, as such, is not required to be published, the notice being sufficient, in all probability, if it states the substance thereof; that is, enough of it to apprise the electors of the district of the nature of the proposition submitted to them.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL BONDS FOR STREET IMPROVEMENTS, NOT OUTSTANDING JULY 1, 1913, ARE SUBJECT TO TAXATION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 20, 1913.

HON. R. CLINT COLE, City Solicitor, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of May 12th submitting two questions:

"(1) Whether or not municipal bonds for street improvements are taxable.

"(2) Whether in the last legislature the provisions of section 3942, General Code, were in any way modified."

In answer to your second question I desire to say that we have had the question looked up and find that there were no modifications of section 3942, General Code, made at the recent session of the legislature.

In answer to your first question as to whether or not municipal bonds for street improvements are taxable, it would appear that proposal No. 32, which was duly adopted at the election held September 3, 1912, amends section 2 of Article XII of the constitution.

Proposal No. 41, which was likewise duly adopted at the same election provides that:

"The several amendments passed and submitted by this convention when adopted shall take effect on the first day of January, 1913, except as otherwise specifically provided by the schedule attached to any of said amendments."

There was no separate schedule attached to proposal No. 32, consequently such amendment went into effect on January 1, 1913.

Section 2 of article XII of the constitution as it now reads provides that:

"Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule, all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property according to its true value in money, excepting all bonds at present outstanding in the state of Ohio or of any city, village, hamlet, county or township in this state or which have been issued in behalf of the public schools in Ohio and the means of instruction in connection therewith, which bonds so at present outstanding shall be exempt from taxation."

Municipal bonds for street improvements are as much bonds of the city as any other bond and since the constitution provides that all such bonds not outstanding on January 1, 1913 shall be taxable, and as this department has construed such amendment to be self-executing in that all bonds not so outstanding on January 1, 1913, shall be subject to taxation, I am of the opinion that municipal bonds for street improvements not outstanding on January 1, 1913, are taxable.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CITY MAY NOT SUBSTITUTE GAS LAMPS FOR ELECTRIC LAMPS IN CONTRAVENTION TO TERMS OF CONTRACT WITH ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY PROVIDING FOR THE USE OF ELECTRIC LAMPS BY THE CITY.

When a city has properly entered into a contract with an electric light company, which contract provided for the furnishing of certain lights to the city by said company and of power for the operation of the same and for the use of said lamps by the city, the city may not substitute gas lamps for such electric lights.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 16, 1913.

HON. EDWARD C. STITZ, City Solicitor, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of January 14, 1913, you say that on April 1, 1912, the city of Van Wert, Ohio, by its director of public service, entered into a contract with the Van Wert Public Service Company, "whereby said company contracts and agrees to light the public streets, alleys, public land, lanes, squares and other public places in the city of Van Wert, Ohio, with electricity for a period of ten years, beginning with April 1, 1912." Then follows a statement of the terms of said contract as to the number and kinds of lights, and the prices thereof.

You further state that the contract calls for "not less than ninety (90) 300 watt metallic flame arc lights and such number as the said city may require of 75 watt Tungsten incandescent lights."

That said contract was entered into in accordance with an ordinance of the city council authorizing the director of public service to make the same under section 3809, General Code; and that "the public service company is complying with its part of this contract."

You then say: "The city council is now preparing to light certain streets with gas and is about to authorize the director of public service to enter into a contract with the Van Wert Gas Light Company to light certain streets with gas lights and to remove the electric lights from the territory lighted with gas."

My opinion is asked as to whether this can be done.

Section 3809, General Code, provides that the council of a city may authorize a contract with any person, firm or company, for lighting the streets, alleys, lands, lanes, squares and public places in the municipal corporation, for a period not exceeding ten years.

Section 3994, General Code, provides:

> "A municipal corporation may contract with any company for supplying with electric light, natural or artificial gas, for the purpose of lighting or heating, the streets, squares and other public places and buildings in the corporation limits."

Either of the sections would authorize the city of Van Wert to enter into a contract to light its streets and other public places with electricity or gas, as the council may determine.

I have before me the ordinance, No. 388, of your city, "authorizing the director of public service of the city of Van Wert, Ohio, to make and execute a contract with the Van Wert Public Service Company, of Van Wert, Ohio, for lighting the streets, alleys, lands, lanes, squares and public places in the city of Van Wert, Ohio," of the 25th day of March, 1912. (Section 3 of said ordinance is as follows):

> "That said contract shall provide that said city shall use, and said company shall furnish, during the term of said contract, not less than ninety such arc lamps, in such lighting; and that said city shall have the right to add, from time to time, as many more as it may desire; and that said city shall use and said company shall furnish electricity and lamps of sixteen candle power for as many street arches as the city may from time to time require, and said company shall furnish the number of Tungsten lamps required by said city."

The contract of April 1, 1912, provides that the company shall keep and maintain its power plant at Van Wert with sufficient power to supply the electrical current necessary and required by the contract; and if it fails so to do, the same shall operate as a forfeiture of the contract, at the option of the city. The ordinance and contract are adopted and executed according to law, and the company accepted the terms of the same, entered upon its duties thereunder, and is still complying with all the terms thereof. This contract, then, being one the city had a right to make, under the statutes above quoted, is binding upon the city of Van Wert so long as the public service company performs all of its obligations thereunder; and said company has a vested right by virtue of said contract, which it can enforce, during the ten years specified therein, while it does all things imposed upon it by the terms thereof.

The company is required to keep its plant equipped so as to furnish all the electric lights the city may demand.

By virtue of said contract the company invests its capital, equips its plant for proper service to the city, and must keep and maintain it in such state of efficiency as will meet the requirements of the municipality, or forfeit its compansation under the contract.

It must be understood this is not an ordinance or franchise giving the company the right to furnish electricity to the citizens of the city, but it is a contract with the city itself, to light the streets, etc., thereof, for a definite and fixed term at prices stipulated.

In my opinion council has no authority to interfere with the vested rights of this company by substituting other kinds of light in lieu of electricity furnished under the contract, so long as the company is furnishing, or is able to furnish electricity according to its agreement with the city.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VACANCY IN OFFICE OF PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL IN CITIES FILLED BY APPOINTMENT OF MAYOR.

There being no other provision for the filling of a vacancy, occurring in the office of president of the council in a city, such vacancy may only be filled, under section 4252, General Code, through appointment by the mayor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 17, 1913.

HON. ORA R. WADE, City Solicitor, Fostoria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 10, 1913, you ask:

> "In case of the death of president of council in cities, how or by whom is the position filled?"

Your interrogatory raises, squarely, the question of where the appointing power rests in cities, when a vacancy occurs in an elective office, whether caused by death, or otherwise.

By section 4272, General Code, the president of the council is an elective officer of cities, and is the presiding officer of the legislative department of the city from which he is chosen. He is not a member of council as other members are, and has no vote except in case of a tie.

Section 4272, General Code, gives him power, in the absence from the city or inability of the mayor, to become acting mayor; but in such cases he cannot act as president of the council. If the mayor dies, resigns or is removed (section 4274, G. C.) the president of council becomes mayor for the unexpired term, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

Section 4210, General Code, provides for the election of a president pro tem in cities; but there is no provision that he shall succeed as president, if that office is vacant. Therefore, if the president of a city council dies, the office is vacant; and if it is desired to fill it, a successor must be named by some one vested with appointing powers in such cases.

Can the council make the appointment in cities in case of the death of the president? I think not. Section 4211, General Code, applying to cities, says:

> "The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever, and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as otherwise provided in this title."

The president, as I have said, is not a member of council, and does not fall within the exception above quoted, "except those of its own body."

There being no provision of the law referring to vacancies in the office of president of the council, by name, specifically, we must look to the general statute on the subject in the law applying to appointing persons in cities. In my opinion section 4252, General Code, covers the case, which reads as follows:

> "In case of death, resignation, removal or disability of any officer or director in any department of a city, unless otherwise provided by law, the mayor thereof shall fill the vacancy by appointment, and such appointment shall continue for the unexpired term and until a successor is duly appointed, or duly elected and qualified, or until such disability is removed."

The president is an officer in the legislative department of the city, and therefore I am of the opinion that the mayor has the power to appoint a president of the council in the language of the statute above quoted.

Your other questions will be taken up very soon and answered seriatim.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE—DAY LABORERS—BOND ISSUE.

The director of public service is not authorized to employ day laborers to make a public improvement to be paid for from a bond issue, where such improvement will cost to exceed $500.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1913.

HON. W. S. JACKSON, City Solicitor, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 20, 1913, you submitted the following to this department for opinion:

> "The council of this city has just authorized a one hundred thousand dollar bond issue, for the purpose of improving and extending the waterworks system.
> "Some of the labor to be performed for this improvement can be done more economically and more advantageous to the city by employing men by the day, under the direction of our able superintendent of the waterworks than by the usual method of advertising for bids and letting a contract.
> "Query:—Can the director of public service, acting through the superintendent of the waterworks, employ day laborers to perform public work, without advertisement and receiving bids, and pay said laborers from the moneys arising from the sale of bonds?"

On April 4, 1913, we sent you an opinion given to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, in which a similar question was considered in reference to street improvements.

You thereupon renewed your request and stated further that > "The work contemplated will be paid for by money derived from the sale of bonds, and the bonds paid for by the revenue of the waterworks."

In your case the money to be expended has been raised by a bond issue. Although the bonds are to be paid ultimately from the revenues of the waterworks, the expenditure is not in fact a current expenditure from the current receipts of the waterworks. Your question will therefore be considered only as to the right of the city to employ laborers for laying water mains and extending the waterworks when the cost thereof is to be met by a bond issue, and not as to the right of the city to maintain a department for laying water mains when the cost thereof is paid from the current receipts of the waterworks department.

Section 3961, General Code, provides:

"Subject to the provisions of this title, the director of public service may make contracts for the building of machinery, waterworks buildings, reservoirs and the enlargement and repair thereof, the manufacture and laying down of pipe, the furnishing and supplying with connections all necessary fire hydrants for fire department purposes, keeping them in repair, and for all other purposes necessary to the full and efficient management and construction of waterworks."

Section 3965, General Code, provides:

"Before entering into any contract for work to be done, the director of public service shall require bond to be given, with good and sufficient surety, for the faithful performance of the work. In case of emergency, by a vote of two thirds of all the members elected thereto, the council may authorize such director to enter into such contract without advertising."

Section 4328, General Code, provides:

"The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

The case you submit is not an emergency as provided for in section 3965, General Code. The provision of this section in permitting advertising to be dispensed with in case of an emergency, shows that it was contemplated that the provisions of section 4328, General Code, as to advertising should be complied with. Section 3961, General Code, when it provides that "Subject to the provisions of this title, the director of public service may make contracts," contemplates that the provisions of section 4328, General Code, shall be complied with.

The expenditure in question is paid for in the first instance by an issue of bonds to be paid in the future. In order to protect the taxpayer and to prevent fraud and collusion the statutes require competitive bids for such expenditures.

I am therefore of the opinion that the director of public service is not authorized to employ day laborers to make a public improvement to be paid for from a bond issue, where such improvement will cost to exceed five hundred dollars.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

ORDINANCE—MUST BE APPROVED BY MAYOR—VETO—MAYOR MUST GIVE REASON FOR HIS VETO—HIS REASON MUST BE RETURNED TO THE CITY COUNCIL WITH THE VETOED ORDINANCE—FORMATION OF CITY CHARTER.

It is necessary to submit to the mayor for his approval an ordinance for the city council, providing for the submission to the electors of the question "shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter" as authorized by section 8, article 18, of the constitution.

The provisions of section 4234, which require a mayor to return an ordinance with his objections when he disproves the same, are mandatory and a veto of such an ordinance without giving council his reasons therefor is invalid, and the ordinance remains in the same situation as if the mayor had taken no action whatever.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1913.

HON. H. M. RANKIN, City Solicitor, Washington C. H., Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 5, 1913, you inquire:

> "Ten per centum of the electors of this city petitioned the council to pass an ordinance to provide for the submission of the question to the electors, "Shall a Commission be Chosen to Frame a Charter?' as provided in article 18, section 8, of the constitution of the state. The council have passed such ordinance. Is it now necessary to present this ordinance to the mayor and have his approval before the same can go into effect?"

Section 8 of article 18 of the present constitution of Ohio, to which you refer, provides:

> "The legislative authority of any city or village may by a two-thirds vote of its members, and upon petition of ten per centum of the electors shall forthwith, provide by ordinance for the submission to the electors, of the question, 'shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter.' The ordinance providing for the submission of such question shall require that it be submitted to the electors at the next regular municipal election if one shall occur not less than sixty nor more than one hundred and twenty days after its passage; otherwise it shall provide for the submission of the question at a special election to be called and held within the time aforesaid. The ballot containing such question shall bear no party designation, and provision shall be made thereon for the election from the municipality at large of fifteen electors who shall constitute a commission to frame a charter; provided that a majority of the electors voting on such question shall have voted in the affirmative. Any charter so framed shall be submitted to the electors of the municipality at an election to be held at a time fixed by the charter commission and within one year from the date of its election, provision for which shall be made by the legislative authority of the municipality in so far as not prescribed by general law. Not less than thirty days prior to such election the clerk of the municipality shall mail a copy of the proposed charter to each elector whose name appears upon the poll or registration books of the last regular or general election held therein. If such proposed charter is approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon it shall become the charter of such municipality at the time fixed therein."

It is necessary to determine what is meant in this provision by the phrase "The legislative authority of any city."

Section 4206, General Code, provides:

> "The legislative power of each city shall be vested in, and exercised by a council, composed of not less than seven members, four of whom shall be elected by wards and three of whom shall be elected by electors of the city at large. For the first twenty thousand inhabitants in any city, in addition to the original five thousand, there shall be two additional members of council, elected by wards, and for every fifteen thousand inhabitants thereafter there shall be one additional member similarly elected, provided that the total number of members of such council shall not exceed thirty-two. When the total number of members of council is fifteen or more, one member of every five shall be elected at large, and the remainder from wards."

Section 4234, General Code, provides:

> "Every ordinance or resolution of council shall, before it goes into effect, be presented to the mayor for approval. The mayor, if he approves it, shall sign and return it forthwith to council. If he does not approve it, he shall within ten days after its passage or adoption return it with his objections to council, or if council is not in session, to the next regular meeting thereof, which objections council shall cause to be entered upon its journal. The mayor may approve or disapprove the whole or any item of an ordinance appropriating money. If he does not return such ordinance or resolution within the time limited in this section, it shall take effect in the same manner as if he had signed it, unless council by adjournment prevents its return. When the mayor disapproves an ordinance or resolution, or any part thereof, and returns it to the council with his objections, council may, after ten days, reconsider it, and if such ordinance, resolution or item, upon such reconsideration is approved by the votes of two-thirds of all the members elected to council, it shall then take effect as if signed by the mayor. The provisions of this section shall apply only in cities."

By virtue of section 4206, General Code, the legislative power of a city is vested in council. But by virtue of section 4234, General Code, a legislative act of council must be presented to the mayor for approval. An ordinance or resolution of council is not effective until presented to the mayor as required by section 4234, General Code.

By virtue of the power of veto the mayor performs duties which are legislative in character as distinguished from his executive duties.

At page 355 of volume 28 of Cyc. it is said:

> "Acts of legislation, whether of state or corporation, are not valid unless they receive the concurrent approbation of all the elements constituting the legislative department of government. Whenever, therefore, the charter of a municipal corporation makes the mayor a constituent element of its legislature, either directly or indirectly, by positive expression or necessary implication, his approval is essential to the validity of any ordinance enacted by the council."

At page 958 of 36 Cyc. it is said:

> "Under the system of government adopted in this country the chief executive, either the president or a governor, is a part of the law-making power, and it is usually provided by constitution that a bill shall not become a law until presented to the executive for his approval or veto."

By virtue of the provisions of section 4234, General Code, the mayor of a city is a part of the legislative authority of a city. The mayor has the right to approve or disapprove an ordinance or resolution of council before the same can become effective.

Section 8 of article 18 of the constitution provides that the submission of the question shall be provided by ordinance. And by virtue of section 4234, General Code, an ordinance of council must be submitted to the mayor for approval.

The provision "by a two-thirds vote of its members" found in section 8, article 18, refers to the term "legislative authority," in said section. This phrase, however, can only apply to the body now known as the council, or some similar body. It does not and cannot apply to an individual, such as a mayor. This provision cannot be held to mean that council only should act upon such ordinance.

No reference is made in the constitutional provision to the council. Under the present plan of permitting cities and villages to adopt a charter, some of them may not have a council. The purpose of the provision is to permit the "legislative authority" of the municipal corporation to pass such ordinance. And it must be passed as other ordinances are passed.

The electors of a city or village have a right to have such question submitted to a vote upon the filing of a proper petition as provided in section 8 of article 18. The petition of the electors does not fix the date of the election or arrange the other details. This is left to the legislative authority and is to be provided by ordinance. It is this ordinance to arrange the details and to fix the date of the election that is to be passed upon, by the legislative authority. The mayor, under section 4234, General Code, has the same right as council to pass upon these questions.

The remedy in case of failure of the council and the mayor to act upon such petition need not be considered in your case.

The term "legislative authority" found in section 8 of article 18 of the constitution of Ohio includes all bodies or officers who are required to act when a legislative act is passed.

I am therefore of the opinion that an ordinance of the council of a city providing for the submission to the electors of the question "shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter," as authorized by section 8, article 18, of the constitution of Ohio must be submitted to the mayor as required by section 4234, General Code. This is true of an ordinance passed upon the initiative of council as well as one passed by virtue of a petition of the electors.

Since considering your foregoing question you have submitted under date of July 14, 1913, another inquiry arising from later developments on the passage of said ordinance.

You state that:

> "The ordinance was presented to the mayor for his approval. The mayor has since returned the ordinance to council.
> "On the bottom of the ordinance was added by the mayor the following: 'Vetoed July 8, 1913, Harve W. Smith, Mayor, City of Washington, Fayette county, Ohio.' No reasons whatever were given by the mayor explaining his action in the matter.
> "In addition to the question as to whether the mayor had the authority to veto such an ordinance we have the additional question as to whether the mayor did veto the ordinance."

You call attention to the case of Casey vs. Dadman, 77 N. E. Rep. (Mass.) 717. This same case is reported in 191 Mass. 370 as the Mayor of Lowell vs. Dadman. The syllabus in 191 Mass., 370, reads:

"Under R. L. c. 26, an attempt of the mayor of a city to veto an order of the city council without stating his objections in writing in returning it is of no effect.

"R. L. c. 26, section 9, giving a limited veto power to the mayor of a city contains the same requirement which the constitution of the United States and that of this commonwealth impose respectively on the president and the governor that he must return an ordinance of which he disapproves 'with his objections in writing."

Lathrop, J., says on page 370:

"No question is made as to the proper passage of the order by the city council. The mayor attempted to veto the order, and the only question is whether the veto had any force or effect. The veto in question was dated April 13, 1905, and was addressed to the city council of the city of Lowell, and signed by the mayor. It was in these words: 'I herewith return without my approval joint order entitled, providing for a new division of the territory of the city of Lowell into wards.' By the Rev. Laws, c. 26, section 9, the mayor was required, if he disapproved of the order to return it, 'with his objections in writing.' The s called 'veto' contained no statement of objections, and was of no effect ------The reason why it is necessary that the objections should be stated is plain. It is that the body passing the order should have an opportunity to weigh and consider the objections, and determine whether it is right or wrong. ------In this country the absolute veto is unknown; the qualified or limited veto is all that an executive has. ------ The attempt on the part of the mayor to return an absolute veto was of no effect."

In case of Truesdale vs. City of Rochester, 33 Hun. (N. Y.) 574, it was held:

"That the failure of the mayor to tate his reasons for disapproving the resolution, as required by section 48 of chapter 14 of 1880, rendered his objection thereto unavailing. and that the resolution took effect at the expiration of five days from the time it was presented to him."

The charter in this case provided:

"If he disapproves he shall return such transcript to the common council or the clerk thereof, with his objections and reasons for disapproval, in writing."

Dillon on Municipal Corporations, 5th Ed., says at section 578:

"It has been said that in this country the absolute veto is unknown; the qualified or limited veto is all that an executive has. In other words, the vesting of the mayor with power to disapprove an ordinance is intended to induce due consideration and to prevent haste and inconsiderate action, and upon disapproval the council usually has the power to pass the ordinance over his veto. In approving or disapproving the ordinance the mayor must comply with the requirements of the statute or charter. Thus, when the statute requires the mayor, if he disapproves an ordinance, to return it with his objections in writing, a message returning the ordinance disapproved without stating any objection to it is not a valid exercise of the veto power."

It will be observed that in the foregoing cited authorities the law required that the ordinance should be returned by the mayor "with his objections in writing" if he disapproves.

In the statute of Ohio, section 4234, General Code, it is provided that the mayor shall return the ordinance "with his objections." The words "in writing," are omitted. It is provided further, however, "which objections council shall cause to be entered upon its journal."

In case of Erie vs. Parade Street Market Co., 37 Pa. Sup. Ct. 449, it was held that:

> "In such a case it is immaterial that the mayor does not state his objections."

Porter, J., says on page 452, of the opinion:

> "We find in the second sentence of the section of the statute above quoted, referring to the return of an ordinance by the mayor without his approval, this language, 'he shall return it, with his objections, to the branch of councils wherein it originated, which shall thereupon proceed to reconsider it.' The clause 'with his objections' is merely permissive and contemplates giving the mayor an opportunity to state his reasons for his official action. The vital thing is the return of the ordinance, by the mayor, to the councils, without his approval, in the manner required by the statute."

The provision of the charter under consideration in the last quoted case was that the mayor should return the bill "with his objections," as in our statute. The language of the statute as quoted by the court does not show that council was required to place said objections upon its journal. It appears that the cases in 33 Hun. 574 and 191 Mass. 370, supra, although previously decided, were neither cited or considered by the court.

Wallace, J., says at page 199 of Harpending vs. Haight, 39 Cal. 189:

> "and that as part of this return, the executive objections to the passage of the bill must be stated. For unless these things be effected by the return how can the senate enter the bill and executive objections upon its journal or what way proceed to the consideration of the objections themselves."

The constitution of California was under consideration and it provided:

> "If he approve it he shall sign it; but if not he shall return it with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the same upon the journal and proceed to reconsider it."

This is very similar to the provision in the statute of Ohio now under consideration. The conclusion of the court, however, is dictum, as the governor, in that case, did submit his objections.

The decisions upon this question are not harmonious. Nor are the provisions governing the veto power alike in all the cases.

In the Massachusetts case the court say that the provision there under consideration was similar to that in the constitution of the United States.

In section 7 of article I of the constitution of the United States it is provided:

"If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it."

Article II, section 16 of the constitution of Ohio provides:

"If he does not approve it, he shall return it with his objections in writing, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the objections at large upon its journal, and may then reconsider the vote on its passage."

It appears, therefore, that in some cases, the words "in writing" are included and in others these words are omitted.

The question to be determined is, is the provision of the Ohio statute, that the mayor, if he disapproves an ordinance, shall return it "with his objections," mandatory or directory.

I find no decision in Ohio directly upon this proposition. As to other provisions of the statutes, the courts have held that the provisions of the statutes providing the manner in which ordinances shall be passed are mandatory.

In Campbell vs. Cincinnati, 49 Ohio St. 463, it is held:

"The requirement in section 1694, that ordinances of a permanent nature shall be fully and distinctly read on three different days, unless three-fourths of the members elected dispense with the rule, is mandatory."

Dickman, J., reviews on page 473, the different rule as applied to the legislature, and then says on page 474:

"But municipal corporations act not by inherent right of legislation, like the legislature of the state. They are governments of enumerated powers acting by a delegated authority. They are creatures of the statute, invested with such power and capacity only as is conferred by statute, or passes by necessary implication from the statutory grant, and their powers must be strictly pursued. * * * The rule therefore as stated in numerous adjudged cases is, that the mode of procedure to be followed in the enactment of ordinances as prescribed by statute must be strictly observed. Such statutory powers constitute conditions precedent, and unless the ordinance is adopted in compliance with the conditions and directions thus prescribed, it will have no force."

By virtue of section 4234, General Code, the mayor is required to return the ordinance "with his objections" if he disapproves the same. And council is required to enter such objections upon its journal.

If the mayor declined to make known his objections council could not enter the same upon its journal.

The purpose of requiring the mayor to state his objections is to permit the members of council to weigh and consider such objections upon their reconsideration of the ordinance.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the provisions of section 4234, General Code, which require the mayor to return an ordinance "with his objections" when he disapproves the same, are mandatory and that an attempted veto of an ordinance without giving to council his objections thereto is invalid.

The attempted veto in your case by the mayor was of no effect, as he failed to give his objections thereto. The ordinance remains in the same situation as if the mayor had taken no action thereon.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS—ORDINANCE—RESOLUTION—MOTION—PUBLICATION OF ORDINANCE—HOW PLACE OF HOLDING ELECTION IS DESIGNATED.

Section 4844, General Code, which provides that elections shall be held for each municipal or ward precinct at such place as the council of the corporation may designate, does not mean that council must designate such place by ordinance or resolution. Council may designate such place by motion. Section 4227, General Code, providing for the publication of an ordinance does not apply.

When council in non-registration cities, designates the place of voting by ordinance, it is not necessary that the ordinance be published.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1913.

HON. JAMES L. LEONARD, City Solicitor, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 3, 1913, you state:

> "In non-registration cities council designates the places for voting in the different precincts."

and inquire:

> "Does the ordinance for such have to be published?"

Section 4844, General Code, provides:

> "Elections shall be held for each township precinct at such place within the township as the trustees thereof shall determine to be most convenient of access for the voters of the precinct. Elections shall be held for each municipal or ward precinct at such place as the council of the corporation shall designate. In registration cities, the deputy state supervisors shall designate the places of holding elections in each precinct."

Section 4211, General Code, provides that the powers of the city council shall be legislative only.

Section 4224, General Code, provides that the action of council shall be by ordinance or resolution.

Section 4227, General Code, provides that ordinances of a general nature shall be published before going into operation.

Section 4234, General Code, provides that each ordinance or resolution of a city council shall before it goes into effect be presented to the mayor for approval.

All of these sections, however, are found in Title XII of the Code, which deals exclusively with municipal corporations and their general powers and duties.

Section 4844, General Code, supra, is found in Title XIV of the General Code, in other words, in a title entirely separate and distinct from that in which sections 4211, 4224, 4227 and 4234 are found. The provisions of the last named sections, as I view the law, apply solely to the actions of council that are taken in relation to municipal affairs and found under Title XII, and do not relate to section 4844, General Code. Therefore, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 4844, General Code, that elections shall be held for each municipal or ward precinct at such places as the council of the corporation shall designate does not mean that council must so designate such places by ordinance or resolution. In fact, council can designate the same by a mere motion, and, therefore, section 4227, General Code, providing for the publication of an ordinance of a general nature, does not apply.

I am further confirmed in this view by the fact that section 4844, General Code, further provides that in registration cities the deputy state supervisors shall designate the places of holding elections in each precinct. The designation of the places of holding elections by deputy state supervisors would not have to be published in any manner, and it would seem an anomaly that the action of council in designating places of election in non-registration cities would require publication, whereas the action of the deputy state supervisors in registration cities would not. I would, therefore, state it as my opinion that if council in non-registration cities designates the places of voting by ordinance such ordinance would not have to be published.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

EMERGENCY COMMISSION—DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SAFETY—MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COMMON PLEAS COURT—EMERGENCY COMMISSION LIMITED TO EXPENDING MONEY.

An emergency commission acting in conjunction with the director of public safety has no control over the raising of revenues required for the use of his department. Its authority is limited to the expenditure of such funds as council in its legislative discretion may provide for its use.

In a municipal corporation in which an emergency commission has been appointed, the council has authority to apply to common pleas court for authority to expend money, under section 1, 103 O. L., 141, involving an expenditure of more than $500.00.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1913.

HON. J. F. NEILAN, City Solicitor, Hamilton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 3rd requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. May an emergency commission, appointed for a city under the provisions of the act found in 103 O. L. 206, acting in conjunction with the director of public service, compel the council of the corporation to provide funds necessary to make the repairs and replacements, for the purpose of making which the commission has been appointed?

"2. In a municipal corporation in which an emergency commission has been appointed under authority of the act above referred to, who is the proper party to apply to the common pleas court under section 1 of the act found in 103 O. L. 141, for authority to expend money for temporary repairs and replacements involving an expenditure of more than $500.00?

"May a municipal corporation, under the amended constitution establish and maintain a municipal ice plant, coal yard or a municipal furnishing house?"

The answer to your question is made absolutely clear by section 6 of the act to which I have referred in stating it.

Section 6 provides as follows:

"The emergency commission of any municipality shall have, in conjunction with the director of public service, all the powers and duties of the director of public service in such municipality in so far as they may extend to the repairing, rebuilding and restoring of public works destroyed or damaged by the floods of March and April, 1913, and shall exercise and perform such powers and duties jointly with such director."

In connection with this section I have read the remaining sections of the act and find therein no provision in any way qualifying or enlarging the express and plain language thereof. It is clear that the only powers which the emergency commission has and which must be exercised, not independently, but in conjunction with the director of public service are those which the director himself has. The director of public service in a municipal corporation has absolutely no control over the raising of funds required for the use of his department. His authority is limited to the expenditure of such funds as council in its legislative discretion may provide for his use.

Therefore, your first question must be answered in the negative.

Your second question is rendered easy of solution, it seems to me, by the express language of section 1 of the act found in 103 O. L. 141, which provides in part as follows:

"* * * the council of any municipal corporation or the trustees of any township are hereby empowered to authorize or enter into contracts temporarily to repair, reconstruct or replace any public property or public way which such commissioners, council or trustees are authorized to repair, reconstruct or construct under any general law of this state * * * and to appropriate money * * * for such purposes. * * * Directors of public service or safety in cities shall not be required to advertise for competitive bids in entering into any contract authorized by this section.

"Provided, however, before such contract for temporary, reconstruction or replacement involving an expenditure of more than five hundred dollars is authorized or entered into such * * * council shall apply to the common pleas court of the county, etc."

It may be said of the foregoing section that the power of a city council is clearly limited to authorizing a contract which must be then entered into by the director of public service. The distinction is clearly observed throughout the section; both the council and the director are mentioned in the section. Therefore, there is no confusion of ideas, and no implication can be constructed by which any power conferred upon council by the express language of the section can be construed as intended to be conferred upon the director of public service. Now the duty to apply to the common pleas court for authority to authorize a contract involving more than five hundred dollars in a city is expressly imposed upon council. That being the case, in my judgment, the director of public service would not be authorized to make the application to the court; and it necessarily follows from what has been said in connection with the answer to your first question that the emergency commission, having only the powers of the director of public service, is not authorized to make the application to the common pleas court on its own behalf or in conjunction with the director of public service, nor may it compel the council to make the application.

Your third question is perhaps sufficiently answered by the enclosed copy of an opinion to Hon. David J. James, City Solicitor of Martins Ferry, Ohio.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A MAJORITY VOTE OF THE CITY COUNCIL IS REQUIRED IN ORDER TO PURCHASE LANDS BY THE CITY.

When property is purchased for the use of a corporation and within its powers, a majority vote of the council is required to authorize the purchase.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 7, 1913.

HON. E. N. FAIR, City Solicitor, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of July 23, in which you inquire:

> "There seems to be no statute directly authorizing the purchase of real estate for city purposes. We have purchased real estate without appropriation proceedings approved by your predecessor. A proposition has been made by a freeholder to council for the sale of a small tract of land for street purposes. Council is divided as to the advisability of purchasing said tract and stand four to three in favor of its purchase. Now the question arises, does it take a majority vote or a two-thirds vote. I think it takes the latter. It takes a two-thirds vote for the sale of real estate, section 3699, General Code of Ohio, and to pass an ordinance authorizing the proceedings to appropriate property for city purposes requires a two-thirds vote, section 3680, General Code of Ohio."

Judge Dillon lays down the rule applicable to the acquisition of property by municipalities as follows:

> "In the absence of express prohibitory statutes, or of statutes which in terms confer and limit, and therefore define and measure, the power, the capacity to acquire and hold property, real or personal, must be fairly incidental to some power expressly granted or absolutely indispensable to the declared purposes of the corporation."

Section 3615, General Code, reads:

> "Each municipal corporation shall be a body politic and corporate, which shall have perpetual succession, may use a common seal, sue and be sued, and acquire property by purchase, gift, devise, appropriation, lease, or lease with the privilege of purchase, for any municipal purpose authorized by law, and hold, manage, and control it and make any and all rules and regulations, by ordinance or resolution, that may be required to carry out fully all the provisions of any conveyance, deed or will, in relation to any gift or bequest, or the provisions of any lease by which it may acquire property."

Section 3680 to which you call attention, applies to appropriation of property and 3699 to the sale of property owned by the corporation, but no longer needed for municipal purposes. That these sections are mandatory and must be followed cannot and need not be questioned. To do either requires a vote of two-thirds of the council.

When it comes to purchasing property for city use, no such restriction can be found and under the authority from Dillon on corporations cited above; section 3615, General Code, and 2 Abbott on Municipal Corporations 1697, where a similar doctrine is found, I am of the opinion that it does not require a two-thirds or more than a majority vote of the council to authorize the purchase of property, always limited, as stated by McAbbott "to the purposes of the organization of the particular corporation and never construed as including those enterprises involving speculation or profit"; in other words, the purchase must be for the use of the corporation and within its powers—never beyond them.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CITY COUNCIL MAY FIX THE RATE OF BOTH ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER—THE RATE SO FIXED SHOULD BE THE MAXIMUM.

When a municipality grants a franchise to a light or power company granting the use of its streets for the business of the company, a valuable right is granted. This right is ample consideration for a stipulation in the ordinance fixing the rate for both electric light and power. The contract formed by the acceptance of the ordinance, forms a binding contract.

The rate so fixed by council should be the maximum rate that may be charged by the company receiving the franchise for light and power.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 2, 1913.

HON. WILLIAM L. HUGHES, City Solicitor, Lorain, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 8, 1913, in which you request my opinion on inquiry stated therein as follows:

> "Applications have been made to our council by George E. Milligan and the Cleveland Southwestern & Columbus Railway Company for franchises for furnishing electric heat, light and power to the city of Lorain and the inhabitants thereof. In the franchise ordinances it is undertaken to fix the prices to be charged therefor.
> "That the city, in a franchise ordinance granting the use of streets, alleys and public grounds to an electric company, may specify the amounts to be charged the public or private consumers for the lighting, to be readjudicated each five years under the code, is beyond question; but I seriously doubt the power of council to regulate the price to be charged for power.
> "Have you any data on this?"

Section 9195, General Code, provides as follows:

> "A company organized for the purpose of supplying electricity for power purposes, and for lighting the streets and public and private buildings of a city or village, may manufacture, sell and furnish the electric light and power required therein for such or other purposes, and with the consent of the municipality, under such reasonable regulations as it prescribes also construct lines for conducting electricity for power and light purposes, through the streets, alleys, lanes, lands, squares and public places of such city or village, by the erection of the necessary fixtures, including poles, piers and abutments neccessary for the wires. All wires so erected and operated shall be covered with a waterproof insulation, and the poles, piers, abutments and wires so located and arranged so as not to interfere with the successful operation of existing telegraph and telephone wires. (83 vs. 143.)

Excepting the provisions authorizing and governing the application of telegraph and telephone companies to the probate court for direction as to the mode in which lines of such companies shall be constructed along the streets and public ways of a municipality in case of disagreement, all the provisions of the chapter of the General Code applying to telegraph and telephone companies are by section 9192 made applicable to companies organized for supplying electric light and power.

As will be noted, section 9195, provides that a company organized for supplying electricity for power and lighting purposes, with the consent of the municipality and under such reasonable regulations as it may prescribe, may construct lines for conducting electricity for such purposes through the streets and alleys and public places of such city or village. This section manifestly confers on municipalities no express power or rate regulation of electricity for either light or power purposes and, it is likewise clear that the right of regulation conferred by this section on municipalities with reference to electric light and power companies refers solely to the proprietary right and power of the municipal corporation to direct the mode and manner of the use of its streets and public places by such companies in constructing their lines, and confers no legislative authority to regulate the rates on the sale of electricity for any purpose.

"State ex rel. vs. Sheboygan, 111 Wis. 23.

"Old Colony Co. vs. Atlanta, 83 Fed. Rep. 39.
"St. Louis vs. Bell Telephone Co., 96 Mo. 623."

With respect to the question at hand sections 3982 and 3983 of the General Code provide as follows:

"Section 3982. The council of a municipality in which electric lighting companies, natural or artificial gas companies, gas, light or coke companies, or companies for supplying water for public or private consumption, are established, or into which their wires, mains or pipes are conducted, may regulate from time to time the price which such companies may charge for electric light, or for gas for lighting or fuel purposes, or for water for public or private consumption, furnished by such companies to the citizens, public grounds, and buildings, streets, lanes, alleys, avenues, wharves, and landing places or for fire protection. Such companies shall in no event charge more for electric light, natural or artificial gas, or water, furnished to such corporation or individuals, than the price specified by ordinance of council. The council may regulate and fix the price which such companies shall charge for the rent of their meters, and such ordinance shall provide that such price shall include the use of meters to be furnished by such companies, and in such case meters shall be furnished and kept in repair by such companies and no separate charge shall be made, either directly or indirectly, for the use or repair of them."

"Section 3983. If council fixes the price at which it shall require a company to furnish electricity or either natural or artificial gas to the citizens, or public buildings or for the purpose of lighting the streets, alleys, avenues, wharves, landing places, public grounds or other places or for other purposes, for a period not exceeding ten years, and the company or person so to furnish such electricity or gas assents thereto, by written acceptance, filed in the office of the auditor or clerk of the corporation, the council shall not require such company to furnish electricity or either natural or artificial gas, as the case may be, at a less price during the period of time agreed on, not exceeding such ten years."

Section 3982 expressly confers on the municipality legislative power of rate regulation as to electric lighting companies and as to charges for electric light, but is silent as to electric power companies and charges for electric power. This section in so far as electric lighting companies are therein mentioned was enacted about three years after the enactment of what is now section 9195. As a matter of construction as far as section 3982 is concerned, the rule expressio unius est exclusio alterus would seem to obtain and exclude the power of the municipality to regulate rates as to electricity for power purposes. Telephone Company vs. Cincinnati 73 O. S. 64, 80; Richards vs. Bank Company 81 O. S. 348, 363. I am unable to see that as a matter of construction this section is within the rule announced in the case of State vs. Cleveland, 83 O. S. 61, and the grant of power in this section being legislative in character, the established rule that a municipal corporation has only such legislative power as is expressly granted or clearly implied leads to the same conclusion that this section grants no power to regulate rates on electricity for power purposes. Ohio Elec. Ry. Co. vs. Ottawa, 85 O. S. 237; Ravenna vs. Penna. Co., 45 O. S. 118; Townsend vs. Circleville, 78 O. S. 133.

Section 3983 is more general in its terms than is section 3982, but, as I view it, this section is to be considered as a limitation on the legislative power granted by section 3982 rather than as independent grant of such power. Chillicothe vs. Logan Gas Co., 8 N. P. 88, 93, 95.

The power granted by section 3982, as to regulation of rates is, as before stated, legislative in character (8 N. P. 88, 47 O. S. 35) and on the considerations before noted, I am of the opinion that such power of regulation does not extend to rates on electricity for power purposes.

There still remains, however, the question whether a municipality may not as a matter of contract by ordinance in consideration of the grant therein to an electic power company of a franchise, in the use of the streets and public ways and places fix rates as to electric power to be supplied within the municipality, which on acceptance by the company would become a valid and enforcible contract on the part of the company obligating it to furnish electricity for such purposes at the rate fixed. This is a question not free from difficulty, though it is clear that the power of a municipality to contract and its power to legislate are matters fundamentally distinct in their application to the question at hand.

"The power to regulate as a governmental function and the power to contract for the same end are quite different things. One requires the consent only of one body, the other the consent of two."

"Noblesville vs. Noblesville Gas Co. 157 Ind. 169.

With respect to the question as to the power of a municipal corporation to fix rates as to charges made by public service companies the rule seems to be that where such municipality by ordinance grants to such company the use of its streets in which to lay or construct its mains, pipes or lines by virtue of valid legislative authority authorizing it to grant such franchise, it is authorized to prescribe in the ordinance granting the franchise the conditions upon which the rights and privileges granted by the ordinances are to be exercised, and it has been held that rates for service by such companies are matters having a proper relation to the franchise granted, and that stipulation as to such rates are binding on such companies upon acceptance.

"Boerth vs. Detroit City Gas Co., 152 Mich. 654.
"Noblesville vs. Noblesville Gas Co., supra.
"Muncie Gas Co. vs. Muncie, 160 Ind. 97.

"Rochester Tel. Co. vs. Ross, 125 App. Div. 76, 195 N. Y. 429.
"White Haven vs. Water Co., 209 Pa. 166.
"People vs. Telephone Co. 192 Ill. 307.
"Zanesville vs. Gas Co., 47 O. S. 1, 31.

I am unable to see any reason why the principle recognized in these cases should not apply to the question at hand. By express legislative enactment municipalities in this state are authorized to grant to an electric power company a franchise covering the use of its streets and other public ways and places in constructing its lines for the purpose of conducting electricity to consumers within the city or village, and without such franchise such company has no right to the use of the streets of the municipality for such purpose. While the right to produce and sell electricity as a commercial product is open to all persons without legislative authority, still the right to use the streets of the city for the purpose of transmitting electricity with wires is not common to all citizens, but is a franchise which can only be granted by the state or municipality acting under legislative authority. Purnell vs. Lane, 98 Md. 589; New Orleans G. L. Co. vs. Louisiana L. & H. Co., 115 U. S. 659; State ex rel. vs. Cinn. G. L. Co., 18 O. S. 262.

In the case of Farmer vs. Tel. Co., 72 O. S. 526, it was held that a stipulation fixing a rate of telephone service in an ordinance permitting a telephone company to use the city streets for its poles and wires was not a valid and enforcible contract though the ordinance had been accepted by the telephone company. In this case the court followed the case of Macklin vs. Home Telephone Co., I. C. C. (n. s.) 373, 70 O. S. 507, where the same question was involved. In neither case, it will be noted, was the decision placed on the ground of any want of power in the municipality to contract as to rates for telephone service by reason of the fact that it had no legislative power to fix or regulate such charges, but in each case the decision as to the invalidity of the contract was placed on the ground that the telephone company took its right to the use of the streets and public ways of the municipality by legislative grant from the state, and that the municipality possessed nothing in the way of a valuable right to bestow upon the telephone company as a consideration for its agreement to maintain the rates fixed by the ordinance.

The relation of a city or village to an electric light or an electric power company is quite different in this respect from its relation to a telegraph or telephone company. As to the latter named companies, as before noted, they take their right to use the the streets of a city or village directly from the legislature of the state, "and it is not made to depend upon any consent or agreement on the part of the municipality" (64 O. S. 81) electric light and electric power companies are granted the right to use such streets with the consent of the municipality and under such reasonable regulations as it may prescribe.(Sec. 9195.) This legislative provision gives municipal authorities the right to refuse the privilege of constructing electric wires and appliances in the streets and other public ways, and without their consent no such company can lawfully enter upon and occupy the streets for purposes of its business (76 O. S. 330, 331).

It is manifest, therefore, that a municipality does have a valuable right to bestow in granting to an electric light or electric power company a franchise covering the use of the streets for the purpose of its business; and I see no reason why the valuable right thus bestowed is not ample consideration for a stipulation in the ordinance granting the franchise fixing the rates as to both electric light and electric power nor why the the contract formed by the acceptance of an ordinance containing such stipulation as to rates is not valid and enforcible.

"Van Wert vs. Van Wert Public Service Co., 11 N. P. (n. s.) 91."

As to electric lighting companies and as to charges for electric light, the municipality, within the limitations of section 3983, has the additional power to regulate rates, but as to electric power the municipality can govern rates only by making stipulation therefor in the ordinance granting the franchise which on acceptance by the company would become an enforcible contract and obligation against it, subject only to the power of the public service commission, on proper complaint, to investigate the rates so fixed and, if need be, revise the same.

The conclusion here reached as to the power of the municipal council to fix rates for electric light and electric power are consonant with the provisions of the acts provided for the public service commission and defining and regulating its powers and duties (102 O. L. 549, sections 614-I to 614-84 G. C.; 103 O. L. 804). Under the provisions of the act first above noted, any person, association, firm or corporation furnishing electric light or power is a public utility (sections 614-2, 614-2a G. C.) Provision is made in the act granting to the commissioners power to investigate and revise rates charged or chargeable by public utilities under municipal ordinances. By force of section 614-47 G. C., rates fixed under sections 3982 and 3983, (including rates as to electric light) can be investigated and revised by the commission only as provided in sections 614-44 to 614-46 of the General Code; that is on written complaint as to the rate, made by the public utility itself, or by a certain percentage therein stated of the electors of the municipality. As to rates charged by other public utilities (with certain exceptions not here important) the commission has power to investigate and revise the same as provided in sections 614-21 to 614-23 inclusive; that is, on the written complaint of any person, firm or corporation, of the public utility itself, or on the initiative of the commission.

As to the rates both for electric light and electric power to be fixed by the city council, the rates so fixed should be the maximum. That is, the ordinance should provide that the person or corporation receiving the franchise should not charge or receive more than certain rates therein named for electric light and electric power respectively.

In conclusion, I assume that the corporation mentioned in your inquiry as the proposed recipient of the municipal franchise as to light and power is one organized under the laws of the state of Ohio, as required by statute (section 614-73 G. C.)

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONTRACT FOR STREET PAVING AND ALSO FOR WATER PURIFICATION PLANT SHOULD BE APPROVED BY BOARD OF CONTROL.

1. When a contract is let for public improvement, such as street paving and when such work exceeds $500.00, such expenditure of council should also be approved by the board of control.

2. A contract for a water purification works, which is ordered by the state board of health and which has been authorized by ordinance of the council, directing the director of public safety to enter into a contract with the lowest and best bidder, should also be approved by the board of control.

3. Sections 12946-1, 12946-2, General Code, which provide for the payment of wages at least twice in each calendar month, does not apply to municipalities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1913.

HON. GEORGE C. VON BESELER, City Solicitor, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 15th you request my opinion upon three questions:

> "First: Whether or not contracts for public improvements, such as street paving, when such work exceeds $500.00, such expenditure first having been authorized and directed by ordinance of council under section 4328, must also be approved by the board of control in accordance with section 4403."

Section 4328, General Code, provides in part:

> "When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

Section 4403, General Code, provides in part:

> "No contract in the department of public service or the department of public safety in excess of five hundred dollars shall be awarded except on the approval of the board of control, which shall direct the director of the appropriate department to enter into the contract."

An examination of section 4328, General Code, discloses that when council has so authorized and directed the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement, and section 4403, General Code, provides that no contract in the department of public service in excess of five hundred dollars shall be awarded except on the approval of the board of control. There is no doubt in my mind that a contract entered into under the provisions of section 4328, General Code, would be considered as a contract in the department of public service and that after the director of public service had received bids, having been authorized and directed by council to make the expenditure, he shall not award a contract for the particular work in hand until the approval of the board of control is obtained.

Section 4403, General Code, was intended to give the board of control the supervision of the awarding of contracts after advertisement for bids had been properly made. Therefore, I am of the opinion that contracts for public improvements exceeding five hundred dollars, the expenditure having been authorized and directed by ordinance of council, should be approved by the board of control.

Second: You next inquire:

> "Whether or not a contract for water purification works, the installation of which is ordered by the Ohio state board of health and which has been authorized by ordinance of the Council directing the director of public service to enter into a contract with the lowest and best bidder, must be approved by the board of control."

The mere fact that the installation of a water purification works is ordered by the state board of health would not, as I view it, change the conclusion to which I have reached in answer to your first inquiry above. As before stated the board of control is simply to approve the awarding of the contract.

Third: Your next inquiry is whether or not Senate Bill No. 132, 103 Ohio Laws 154, known as sections 12946-1 and 12946-2, General Code, applies to municipalities.

Senate Bill No. 132 is an act to provide for the payment of wages at least twice in each calendar month.

Section 1 of said act provides that every individual, firm, co-partnership, association or corporation doing business in the state of Ohio who employs five or more regular employes shall pay as provided therein, and

Section 2 provides that no such corporation, contractor, person or partnership shall by a special contract exempt himself or itself from the provisions of the act.

A municipality cannot be considered as doing business in this state. It is solely a political subdivision of the state and not in any sense an individual, etc., as set forth in section 1 of the act.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said section would not apply to municipalities.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

443.

THE MAYOR OF A CITY HAS NO AUTHORITY TO DISMISS CHIEF OF POLICE OR FIRE CHIEF BETWEEN AUGUST 10, AND JANUARY 1, 1914, WITHOUT FIRST SUBMITTING THE CASE.

When section 4281, General Code, was repealed by the civil service act, it was re-enactede and since section 4250, General Code, was not repealed, there never was an instant of tim, when the provisions of section 4381, were not in force, nor when there was any change of the law from that in force at the time the case of Karb vs. State was decided. Consequently there will be no power on the part of mayors to remove chiefs of police or of fire departments between August 10, 1913, and January 1, 1914, without forthwith certifying such facts and the cause therefor to the civil service commission of the city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. HOWARD E. MACGREGOR, City Solicitor, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 10, 1913, you say:

> "I respectfully request your opinion upon the question, whether, by reason of the recent enactment of the new civil service law (amended senate bill No. 7) there will occur a period of time between August 10, 1913, and January 1, 1914 (or until the new civil service law goes into complete operation) during which mayors of municipalities may arbitrarily remove chiefs of police and fire departments without preferment of charges or hearings before the municipal civil service commission?"

The question submitted by you must be analyzed and determined in the light of the old laws governing civil service in cities, together with the act on the same subject (amended senate bill No. 7) passed by the general assembly April 28, 1913, and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 10 thereafter (103 O. L. 698).

The old statute (General Code 4381, applying to chiefs of police and fire departments) reads as follows:

> "The mayor shall have the exclusive right to suspend the chief of the police department or the chief of the fire department for incompetence, gross neglect of duty, gross immorality, habitual drunkenness, failure to obey orders given him by the proper authority or for any other reasonable and just cause. If either the chief of police or the chief of the fire department is so suspended the mayor forthwith shall certify such fact, together with the cause of such suspension, to the civil service commission, who within five days from the date of receipt of such notice shall proceed to hear such charges and render judgment thereon, which shall be final."

The supreme court of Ohio, in the case of Karb, Mayor, vs. The State, ex rel. Cartre, O. L. R., January 20, 1913, page 113, decided that chiefs of police or fire departments in cities, are not subject to summary removal by the mayor, notwithstanding the provisions of section 4250, which reads as follows:

> "The mayor shall be the chief conservator of the peace within the corporation. He shall appoint and have the power to remove the director of public service, the director of public safety and the heads of the sub-departments of the departments of public service and public safety, and shall have such other powers and perform such other duties as are conferred and required by law."

The court held that a chief of such departments, when suspended or removed, had the right to be heard by the civil service commission of the city, whose decision is final.

Under the supreme court decision in the above case, if the law remains unchanged on and after August 10, as to chiefs of police and fire departments, then such chiefs are still protected the same as when that decision was rendered. We must now compare amended senate bill No. 7, effective August 10, 1913, with the old law, and see what changes, if any, are made affecting chiefs of police and fire departments, and the power of mayors in cities relative to such officers.

The new act above referred to is entitled: "An act to regulate the civil service of the state of Ohio, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof, and to repeal sections 4412, 4477," (and 36 other sections named in the title). This act consists of 32 sections and many sub-divisions thereof, and is, in effect, a codification of all the laws relating to civil service in Ohio; and when effective supplants existing laws as to that subject. There is nothing in the act extending the time of its taking effect, so that by operation of law under the new constitution, all parts thereof would become effective August 10, 1913.

One of the most important questions confronting us on the threshold of the inquiry, is: Was section 4381, above quoted, repealed? If we look at section 32 of the act, we find that said section 4381 is among the enumerated ones repealed. This is the only place in the act where said section is referred to; but if we look at the title of the act we find section 4381 is not mentioned at all as one of the sections to be repealed. We are then driven to ascertain what the intention of the legislature was, in the enactment of this new law, and what in fact, it did, along the lines aforesaid.

The mere use of language in one section of the act, is not decisive of the question. If this were not so, the fact that section 32 enumerates section 4381 as repealed, would settle the question, and we would look no further. But there are higher and broader rules to be applied in determining the intention of the law-making body.

> "The great fundamental rule in construing statutes is to ascertain and give effect to the intention of the legislature. 36 Cyc. 1106.
> "In construing a statute, the legislative intent is to be determined from a general view of the whole act, with reference to the subject matter to which it applies and the particular topic under which the language in question is found. 36 Cyc. 1128.
> "It is the duty of the court, so far as practicable, to reconcile the different provisions so as to make them consistent and harmonious, and to give a sensible intelligent effect to each. 36 Cyc. 1129."
> "Statute law is the will of the legislature; and the object of all judicial interpretation of it is to determine what intention is conveyed, either expressly or by implication, by the language used, so far as it is necessary for determining whether the particular case or state of facts presented to the interpreter falls within it." Endlich on interpretation of statutes, section 1.

Lord Coke, in section 27 of Endlich, says:

> "To arrive at the real meaning, it is always necessary to take a board general view of the act, so as to get an exact conception of its aim, scope and object."

The same section further provides:

> *"The true meaning of any passage is to be found not merely in the words of that passage, but in comparing it with every other part of the law * * ."

Section 35 of the same author, under the heading, "All parts of statute to be compared," says:

"Passing from the external history of the statute to its contents, it is an elementary rule that construction is to be made of all the parts together, and not of one part only by itself. A survey of the entire statute is almost always indispensable, even when the words are the plainest; for the true meaning of any passage is that which best harmonizes with the subject, and with every other passage of the statute."

Section 43, same author, says:

"When there are earlier acts relating to the same subject, the survey must extend to them; for all are, for the purposes of construction, considered as forming one homogeneous and consistent body of law, and each of them may explain and elucidate every other part of the common system to which it belongs.

"The first and all important rule to be regarded in construing a statute is, to have respect to its spirit, rather than its letter."—Spicer vs. Giselman, 15 O. 339, 341.

"A code of statutes relating to one subject, is presumed to be governed by one spirit and policy, and intended to be consistent and harmonious, and all of the several sections are to be considered in order to arrive at the meaning of any part, unless a contrary intent is clearly manifest.—60 O. S. 353.

"In gathering the meaning of an act of legislation, the whole act must be taken together.——Horton vs. Horner, 16 O. 145, 147.

"We must endeavor to get at the legislative intent by a consideration of all that has been said in the law, and not content ourselves with partial views, by selecting isolated passages, and holding them alone up to criticism.—State vs. Roach, 47 O. S. 485, 35 O. S. 288.

"The court must look through the whole statute, and if possible construe it so that the whole may have effect, and that one part shall not defeat another."—Michies Ohio Digest, volume 12, page 896, citing numerous Ohio authorities.

Judge Ranney, in 3 O. S., 53, speaking of statutory construction, says:

"It must not be dissected, and its parts construed separately, but the intention of the law-giver is to be deduced from a view of the whole, and every part taken and compared together."

"A statute must be reasonably construed.—Ampt vs. Cincinnati, 5 N. P. 98; 8 N. P. 335; Henry vs. Trustees, 48 O. S. 671.

"Where the question is one of construction, the court should adopt that one which is most reasonable and consistent with the purview of the act.—Michie Digest, volume 12, page 897, citing numerous Ohio authorities.

"It is a well known rule in the construction of statutory laws that every word therein contained is to be given a meaning where it is possible to be done and preserve good sense; and that a construction which would leave without effect any part of the language used should be rejected, if any interpretation which will give it effect can be found.—23 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 311."

So much on the subject of construction in general.

Let us now see whether section 4381, General Code, was in fact repealed by the repealing clause, section 32, of amended senate bill No. 7, when construed with the whole of said act.

The last part of section 19 of the act known as senate bill No. 7, provides as follows:

> "The mayor shall have the exclusive right to suspend the chief of the police department or the chief of the fire department for incompetence, gross neglect of duty, gross immorality, habitual drunkenness, failure to obey orders given him by the proper authority or for any other reasonable and just cause. If either the chief of police or chief of the fire department is so suspended the mayor forthwith shall certify such fact, together with the cause of such suspension, to the civil service commission, who within five days from the date of receipt of such notice shall proceed to hear such charges and render judgment thereon, which shall be final."

This language is an exact copy of section 4381, General Code, in words and punctuation; and forms a part of the whole act, the title of which I have heretofore given, and which will be effective on the 10th day of August, 1913. This raises the question squarely, whether section 32 of the act which purports to repeal section 4381, General Code, did repeal the same as a matter of law.

Under the title "Re-enactment not a Repeal in Spite of Express Repealing Clause, Endlich on the interpretation of statutes, section 490, lays down this doctrine:

> "It seems, indeed, to be the general understanding that the re-enactment of an earlier statute is a continuance, not a repeal of the latter, even though the later act expressly repeals the earlier. The mere re-enactment of an existing law, in the same or substantially the same terms, without words of repeal, and in the absence of conflict, or an intention to supersede, does not, of course, necessarily repeal the old law. But even a repealing act re-enacting the provisions of the repealed statute, in the same words, is construed to continue them in force without intermission; the repealing and re-enacting provisions taking effect at the same time. So, it was held, that, where an act repealing another which provided for the appointment of certain officers, instantly, by the second section, re-enacted the repealed act, the repeal was rendered inoperative, the former law left in force, and the officers appointed under the same, whose term of office had not expired, remained in office. So the repeal of the general corporation law by a statute substantially re-enacting and extending its provisions, does not terminate the existence of corporations formed under it, but is to be regarded as a continuance, with modifications, of the old law. The principal has been applied also to a revision which repealed the acts collated and consolidated, but immediately, in its own provisions, re-enacted them literally or in substance, so that there was never a moment when the repealed acts were not practically in force. So the repeal and re-enactment, in a revision of laws, of a statutory provision authorizing a town to make a certain by-law was held not to affect the validity of the by-law. And it has been applied to criminal statutes so as to permit a conviction for an offense against the re-enacted old law, even where the re-enacting law undertook to repeal it; the re-enactment being construed a continuance."

A law cannot be repealed and re-enacted in the same act. The one act neutralizes the other, and the law retains its validity, and stands untouched.

What is a repeal? In 36 Cyc., page 1038, the text says:

> "The primary meaning of the word 'repeal,' as used in speaking of the repeal of a statute, is, as its etymology imports, the recalling or revoking of a statute."

In the notes the definitions are:

"The abrogation of one statute by another."

"A repeal removes the law entirely."

"A repeal puts an end to the law."

"A clause in a statute purporting to repeal other statutes is subject to the same rules of interpretation as other enactments, and the intent must prevail over literal interpretation."

"The repeal and simultaneous re-enactment of substantially the same statutory provisions is to be construed, not as an implied repeal of the original statute but as a continuation thereof".—Cyc. volume 12, page 1084.

"When there is an express repeal of an existing statute, and a re-enactment of it at the same time, * * * the re-enactment neutralizes the repeal, so far as the old law is continued in force."—Sutherland Stat. Construction, section 134.

In view of the rules of construction given above, and reading the new statute and section 4184, General Code, in the light thereof, I am of the opinion that said old section 4184 is not in fact repealed, and is now, and will be on August 10, 1913, effective and in full force.

The object of the new act was to strengthen and extend the civil service system in Ohio, and not to render a part of it inoperative from August 10 to January 1, next, This new act, under the authorities cited, must be construed as a whole, with a view of arriving at the true intention in the minds of the legislature. Each word, phrase, clause and section thereof must be considered together, in pari materia, and not taken up separately and picked to pieces. This act, as a whole, is "to regulate the civil service of the state of Ohio, the several counties, cities, etc., thereof," and amounts to a codification of the laws relating to this subject, and must be read in the light of all the laws pertaining thereto. In other words, a fair, practical, sensible view, must be taken of the act, so as to bring out the intention of the law-makers. There surely was no intention on the part of the legislature that any hiatus in the civil service law should exist on August 10 or at any other time, for section 19 of the new act says: "That members of existing municipal civil service commissions shall continue in office for the term for which they have been appointed."

The further intention of the legislature not to disturb the existing state of civil service laws and appointees thereunder, is shown in the language used in section 31 of the new act, which is as follows:

"All officers and employes in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof holding their positions under existing civil service laws, shall when this act takes effect, be deemed appointees under the provisions of this act."

This fixes the status of chiefs of these departments, and they come within the provisions of section 4381 as re-enacted in the new act, and are entitled to all the right thereunder of a hearing before the civil service commission within five days after removal or suspension by the mayor.

While enough, we think, has been said to warrant the conclusion herein arrived at, we might aid the following considerations:

Where a new statute repeals an old one and at the same time re-enacts the provisions of the old law as part of the new, the repeal and re-enactment go into effect at the same time. One court has said:

> "In our judgment it is clear that the effect of this repeal and re-enactment was to continue the uninterrupted operation of the statute. There is no change in the law, and the re-enactment of the new is simultaneous with the repeal of the old provision. It is said in the argument that there was an instant of time between the taking effect of the new statute and the expiration of the old, but it is difficult to perceive by what process such instant of time could be estimated. The new statute took effect at the same instant with the repealing statute. When the legislature re-enacted the same provision and provided for its taking effect at the same time with the repealing of the old statute, it is clear that they intended to continue such provisions in force without interruption."—(Fullington vs. Spring, 3 Wis., 667).

(Where the legislature repeals an existing statute, and by the same act makes a different provision for the matters included in the old act, and provides that the new provisions shall take effect in the future the repeal does not become effective until the provisions of the new act which supplant the old become effective).

A situation very similar to the one under consideration was presented in Connecticut, when the legislature of that state passed an act by the first section of which so much of the general statutes of the state as provided for the appointment of commissioners for New Haven county was repealed and the office was abolished, and by the second section of which a board of commissioners for said county was created, and they were given all the powers provided for county commissioners by the general laws of the state. In other words, by section 1, it repealed the general laws applicable to commissioners for New Haven county, and by the second created the same office and granted to it the same powers possessed by the old officers under the old laws. Concerning this, it was stated:

> "We have this condition of things; an act of the legislature repeals by its terms a certain section of the general statutes and abolishes a board of officers appointed under it, and the same act creates precisely the same board and clothes them with the same powers and duties enumerated in the section repealed. Can this be done? We think not. The act in question contains the elements of its own destruction. It attempts to kill and make alive at the same instant—an impossibility. There must be some appreciable space of time between the repealed act and the re-enactment of the same act. In this case not a second intervened and there never was a moment when the relators were out of office or when the office of county commissioner of New Haven county was abolished."—(State ex rel. vs. Baldwin, 45 Conn., 144).

So in this case, while section 4381 was repealed by the civil service act, it was re-enacted, and inasmuch as section 4250 of the General Code was not repealed, there never was an instant of time when the provisions of section 4381 were not in force, nor when there was any change of the law from that in force, when Karb, Mayor, vs. The State of Ohio was decided.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that there will be no power on the part of mayors of cities to remove and suspend chiefs of police or fire departments, between August 10, 1913, and January 1, 1914, without forthwith certifying such fact and the cause therefor to the civil service commission of the city.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CITY COUNCIL MUST PROVIDE BY ORDINANCE FOR CHARTER ELECTION WHEN PETITION OF 10% OF THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY REQUEST THE SAME.

The council of a city, upon petition of 10% of the electors of the city shall provide by ordinance for the submission to the electors of the question "Shall a commission be chosen to draw a charter." Council has power to examine the petition to see that it is in proper form and also to see that it contains ten per cent. of the voters. When this is done, council should prepare and pass an ordinance submitting the question.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 15, 1913.

HON. G. T. THOMAS, City Solicitor, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 9, 1913, in which you inquire:

> "At the last session of the council of our city there was presented a petition signed by ten per cent. of the voters of this city requiring the city council to inaugurate by ordinance a commission form of government. This petition was presented by authority of section 8 of article 18 of the constitution of Ohio, which reads as follows:
> "Section 8. The legislative authority of any city or village may be a two-thirds vote of its members, and upon petition of ten per centum of the electors shall forthwith, provide by ordinance for the submission to the electors, of the question 'shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter?'
> "The remainder of the section I do not need to quote.
> "The question is, is it the duty of council upon presentation of this petition to order an election?
> "There is a great diversity of opinion as to just what this means, and I cannot find any two men who take the same view. If it is intended that the ordinance for submission shall automatically go to the electors, why is it required that two-thirds of council shall vote for it? My opinion is that it requires both the two-thirds majority and the ten per centum of the electors in order to submit it to the people."

As I read section 8 of article 18, the two-thirds vote of members of council applies only to the submission by the council note the language: "The legislative authority of any city or village may by a two-thirds vote of its members, and upon petition of ten per centum of the electors shall forthwith provide by ordinance, etc. A two-thirds vote of the council may make the submission, but upon a petition of ten percentum of the electors, the council, legislative authority shall provide by ordinance, etc.

Taking this view of the matter, when a proper petition is presented, it is mandatory upon the council to provide by ordinance for the submission of the question "shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter?"

Therefore, the two-thirds vote, not applying when a petition is filed, only a majority of the council is necessary; they are commanded to act and have no discretion in the matter. The council, of course, has power to determine whether the petition is in proper form under this amendment, and carries with it the ten per cent. of the electors of the municipality and once these two questions are answered affirmatively, there is nothing left with the council but the preparation and passing of an ordinance submitting the question.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

UNION CEMETERY AT IRONTON NOT UNDER CONTROL OF CITY COUNCIL AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES.

Under the provisions of section 4189, General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., 272-273, the Union Cemetery, known as the Woodland Cemetery, at Ironton, is now under the control of the township trustees and the city council of the city of Ironton. The law providing for cemetery trustees of union cemeteries has been repealed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 15, 1913.

HON. A. J. LAYNE, City Solicitor, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 14, 1913, you say:

> "Upper township and the city of Ironton elected three cemetery trustees for a union cemetery known as Woodland cemetery and their term of office, under the old law, would expire on the first Monday of January next. Under House Bill No. 478 found at pages 272 and 273 of 103 Ohio Laws, the law providing for the election, organization and power of said cemetery trustees has been repealed, and said law became effective on or about August 1, 1913.
> "In view of the above, have said cemetery trustees any power to transact any business now?"

By the repeal of sections 4184, 4185 and 4189, of the General Code, the legislature abilished the office of cemetery trustees of union cemeteries; and legislated out of office the present incumbents, and deprived them of any control or management of such cemeteries.

Section 4189 was amended, 103 O. L., pages 272 and 273, so as to read as follows:

> "The cemetery so owned in common, shall be under the control and management of the trustees of the township or townships and the council of the municipal corporation or corporations and their authority over it and their duties in relation thereto shall be the same as where the cemetery is the exclusive property of a single corporation."

The latter act is now in full force, and your union cemetery is now under the control and management of the township trustees and the city council.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

RAILROAD POLICEMEN ARE OBLIGED TO GIVE BOND IN ORDER THAT THEY MAY LAWFULLY CARRY CONCEALED WEAPONS IN THE DISCHARGE OF THEIR DUTIES.

Railroad policemen do not have the right given to the particular officers designated in section 12819, General Code, in reference to carrying concealed weapons. Their right to carry concealed weapons is conditioned upon their giving bond, provided for in the second provision of this statute.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1913.

HON. R. E. MYGATT, City Solicitor, Conneaut, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—As previously acknowledged, I have your favor of August 12, 1913, in which you state that the Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad Company have in their employ certain special railroad policemen, appointed by the governor under authority of section 9150, General Code, who have taken the oath of office and given bond to the city of Conneaut in the sum of $500, and you ask opinion of me as to whether railroad policemen are required to give the bond provided for in section 12819, General Code, as amended (103 O. L. 553), as a condition to their right to carry concealed weapons in the discharge of their duties as such railroad policemen, or whether they are exempted from the obligation of giving such bond by the provisions of section 9151, General Code, providing that railroad policemen shall possess and exercise the powers of city policemen.

Section 12819, General Code, as amended, (103 O. L. 553) provides as follows:

> "Whoever carries a pistol, bowie knife, dirk or other dangerous weapon concealed on or about his person shall be fined not to exceed five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years. Provided, however, that this act shall not affect the right of sheriffs, regularly appointed police officers of incorporated cities and villages, regularly elected constables, and special officers as provided by sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code to go armed when on duty. Provided, further, that it shall be lawful for deputy sheriffs, and specially appointed police officers, except as are appointed or called into service by virtue of the authority of said sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code to go armed if they first give bond to the state of Ohio, to be approved by the clerk of the court of common pleas, in the sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned to save the public harmless by reason of any unlawful use of such weapons carried by them; and any person injured by such improper use may have recourse on said bond."

Prior to its recent amendment section 12819, General Code, made it an offense—a misdemeanor—for any one to carry concealed the weapons therein named and designated. The terms of the statute did not except any one from its operation, whether he might be an officer of the law or otherwise. Nor, prior to the recent amendment of this section, was there any other statute which gave anybody an absolute right to go armed with concealed weapons. Sections 13693, General Code, however, provided, and still provides, that on the trial of an indictment for carrying a concealed weapon, the jury shall acquit the defendant if it appear that he was at the time engaged in a lawful business or employment and that the circumstances were such as to justify a prudent man in carrying such weapon for the defense of his person, property or family.

Strictly and legally speaking, therefore, prior to this amendment no particular person or persons had an absolute right to carry concealed weapons, but every person did so at his peril, to be determined by the question whether or not at the time of the alleged offense he was in the pursuit of a lawful business or employment and the circumstances justified him in carrying such weapon for the defense of person, property or family (3 C. C. 660.) The effect, however, of section 13693 has been to allow police officers and, generally speaking, all other officers of the law to carry concealed weapons with impunity and practically to allow them to do so.

The enacting clause of Section 12819 as amended, makes it an offense—a felony—for any one to carry concealed the weapons therein named and designated. The enacting clause is followed by a proviso excepting from its operation all sheriffs, regularly appointed police officers of cities and villages, and regularly elected constables, and the special officers provided for by sections 2833, 4373, 10070, 10108 and 12857 of the General Code. The effect of this first proviso is to give the particular officers therein named and designated an absolute right to go armed with concealed weapons when in the discharge of their duties as such officers. None of the officers named and designated in this first proviso include railroad policemen. Railroad policemen not being expressly excepted by this first proviso from the operation of the enacting clause the question is, are they excepted from the operation of the enacting clause by implication. It is a rule of construction that the designation of particular persons or things in the language of a statute is an implied exclusion of all other persons or things (Telephone Co. vs. Cincinnati, 73 O. S. 64, 80).

By force of the expressed terms of this proviso, I am of the opinion that railroad policemen are not within its meaning, and that they do not have, as far as this statute is concerned, the absolute right to go armed in the discharge of their duties.

The first proviso in section 12819, as amended, is followed by a second proviso that it shall be lawful for deputy sheriffs and specially appointed police officers, other than those designated in the first proviso, to go armed if they give the bond provided for therein. The right of the officers named and designated in the second proviso to go armed is not absolute, but conditioned upon their giving the bond prescribed.

In my opinion, railroad policemen come clearly within the second proviso. Section 9150 makes special provision for the appointment of such officers, and they are therefore special police officers other than those provided for in the sections of the general act designated in the first proviso herein before noted.

It is true that now, as before the amendment of section 12819, by virtue of the provisions of section 9151, General Code, railroad policemen possess and may exercise the powers of city policemen. In the consideration of the question here presented, however, it is to be borne in mind that section 12819 does not confer the absolute right to go armed on persons having powers of city policemen or on persons having any other particular powers or special duties to perform. This section does confer such absolute right on police officers of cities and villages and upon sheriffs, by name, and likewise confers this right upon other officers designated in the first proviso in this statute, not including railroad policemen; while deputy sheriffs and all other specially appointed officers are provided for with respect to their right to go armed by the second proviso in the statute above noted, giving them such right upon condition that they execute the bond therein provided for. In this connection it may be questioned whether or not the provisions of section 9151, conferring upon railroad policemen the powers of policemen in cities, does not have reference to powers expressly granted to city policemen by other statutory provisions. (See section 4378 G. C.; section 1536-687; section 1934 R. S.; 72 O. S. 347, 354.) However, were it to be considered that section 9151, standing alone, would be effective to give railroad policemen an absolute right to go armed in the discharge of their duties in view of the fact that city policemen, by the provisions of section 12819, are given such right, yet it appears that by this section special provision is made as to specially appointed police officers, including railroad policemen, making their right to go armed conditional on their giving the bond prescribed. It follows that effect must be given to the later special provision.

"State ex rel. vs. McGregor, 44 O. S. 628, 631.
"Cincinnati vs. Holmes, 56 O. S. 104, 114.

Personally, I see no reason why the legislature in this act should not have given railroad policemen the same absolute right to go armed as it did to city policemen. There is a good deal more reason why they should have this absolute right than some of the officers provided for by the special sections of the General Code designated in the proviso in section 12819. It would have been an easy matter to have given this right to railroad policemen by simply adding section 9150 to the list of General Code sections designated in the first proviso. What were the reasons which actuated the legislature in not including railroad policemen in the list of those having such absolute right, I do not know, but to my mind, this section cannot be construed to give railroad policemen this absolute right without by construction incorporating in effect section 9150 in the list of other code sections specially designated in this first proviso, and this would be pure legislation and not admissible in construing the statutes.

In the consideration of the concrete question here presented, the further question arises as to what, if any, effect the enactment of section 12819 as amended, has on the operation of section 13693, which, as already noted, does not purport to confer an absolute right on any one to go armed with concealed weapons, but which provides for their justification in so doing under certain circumstances therein named, on trial of an indictment charging the offense.

After careful consideration, without here discussing the reasons which lead me to the conclusion, I am of the opinion that there is nothing in the provisions of section 12819 as amended, which has the effect of repealing, by implication, section 13693, and that this much may be safely concluded as for the law on the subject matter: First, that sheriffs, city and village police officers, constables and special officers provided for in the sections of the General Code designated in the first proviso in section 12819, have an absolute right to go armed with concealed weapons while on duty; second, that deputy sheriffs and all other special officers lawfully appointed (including railroad policemen) have a right to go armed with concealed weapons on condition that they execute the required bond; third, that no other persons have a right to go armed with concealed weapons, but that such persons do so at their peril, the same to be determined by the question whether the prohibited act was done while about a lawful business or employment, and whether, further, the weapon was carried under circumstances justifying a prudent man in doing so for the protection of his person, property or family.

In the consideration of the question presented by your inquiry, as to the right of railroad policemen to go armed with concealed weapons, the question arises whether or not the legislature, in making special provisions as to the right of deputy sheriffs and other special officers, including railroad policemen, to go armed, has excepted them from the protecting care of section 13693. In other words, whether or not the legislature intended both the right of a railroad policeman to go armed, and also his justification for the act, to depend on the condition that he has given the bond required.

However, the question made by your inquiry is one going simply to the right of railroad policemen to go armed with concealed weapons in the discharge of their duties, and on the considerations before noted, I am of the opinion that they do not have the absolute right given to the particular officers named and designated in the first proviso in section 12819, but that the right to do so is conditioned upon their giving the bond provided for in the second proviso in this statute. Although the statute does not specifically so state, I am of the opinion that this bond should be filed with the clerk of the common pleas court, he being the officer who must approve the bond.

In conclusion, I note what you say with reference to the policemen of the Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad Company having given bond to the city of Conneaut in the sum of $500. I know of no statutory provision which directs or authorizes railroad policemen to give bond to cities in or through which the railroads upon which they are employed may pass, and, although city policemen do not have to give bond as a condition of their right to go armed in the discharge of their duties, yet railroad policemen, in their capacity as such, are required to do so as a condition to their right in this respect, and they should be so advised.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE FACT THAT A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION WHO CONTRACTS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF A SCHOOL BUILDING IS A MEMBER OF THE FIRM THAT FURNISHES THE MATERIAL TO THE CONTRACTOR FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE BUILDING, DOES NOT IN ITSELF INVALIDATE THE CONTRACT.

Where a board of education contracts for the construction of a school building, and a member of this board of education is also a member of a corporation that is furnishing supplies to the contractor for the construction of this building, the action is legal provided at the time the contract was entered into it was not understood that this particular corporation was to get the contract for supplies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 26, 1913.

HON. C. B. FINDLEY, City Solicitor, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 13th you requested my opinion as follows:

> "A member of the board of education of the city school district of Elyria is also a stockholder and officer of a corporation that is furnishing building material and supplies to a contractor, to be used in the construction of a school building that is being erected by said contractor for said board, under a contract naming a lump sum to be paid for such completed building. The legality of this action has been questioned, and your opinion is desired.
> "My opinion is that such action is legally valid and not prohibited by section 12911 of the General Code, such materials being furnished for the use of the contractor and not for the use of the board of education."

I beg to refer you to the case of State vs. Pinney, 13 O. Dec. N. P. 210, the third branch of the syllabus of which is as follows:

> "A county commissioner is not liable to amercement under section 856 Rev. Stat., notwithstanding persons to whom contracts for the construction of public improvements have been awarded by the county commissioners, during his term of office, afterward purchase stone from a stone company, of which he is a stockholder and director, and where it does not appear that, at the time of the letting of the contracts, any agreement or understanding existed between him and the contractors that he should take any part in the subsequent carrying out of the contracts or derive any benefit therefrom."

The language of the statute in question was:

> "No commissioner shall, directly or indirectly, be concerned in any contract for work to be done or material to be furnished for the county."

The language of this statute is stronger, if anything, than the language of section 12911, General Code, so far as the same has application to the situation presented; and such statute extended to the prohibition of an indirect interest in a contract in behalf of the county.

The circumstances presented by your letter do not make clear whether or not, at the time the board of education entered into the contract with the contractor referred to, there existed an understanding between said contractor and a member of the board in question with reference to the supplies which were to be furnished.

I am of the opinion that the answer to your question, in the light of the decision above cited, which is the only authority which I am able to uncover, hinges upon this circumstance. In brief, if the interest of the official in question existed at the time the contract was entered into between the board and the contractor, the situation is covered by section 12911, General Code. If, on the other hand, no understanding existed between the official in question on the corporation of which he was an officer and member, with reference to the delivery of such supplies, at the time of the making of said contract, the subsequent purchase by the contractor from said corporation would not operate to bring the transaction within the prohibition of said statute.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES MAY REFUSE TO COMPLY WITH ORDINANCE OF CITY COUNCIL—ATTORNEY GENERAL HAS NO AUTHORITY TO INSTITUTE PROCEEDING TO RECOVER PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES UNDER PUBLIC UTILITIES ACT.

It is not a violation of any provision of the public utilities act for a public utility to refuse to comply with an order of council, passed under section 63 of that act.

Under section 69 of said act, the attorney general has no authority to institute a proceeding to recover penalties and forfeitures provided for by the act, in the absence of an order from the commission requiring him so to do.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 9, 1913.

HON. ALFRED BETTMAN, City Solicitor, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Answering yours of July 25th, in which you call attention to the passage of an ordinance requiring The Cincinnati Gas and Electric Company and The Union Gas and Electric Company to build extensions to their distributing plant for the distribution of gas to a certain section of Cincinnati, and suggest that under section 67 of the act appearing in 102 Ohio Laws, 570, the utility company is liable to forfeiture of $1,000.00 per day for failure to comply with this ordinance, I beg to call your attention to the following:

The city of Cincinnati, as I understand it, about a year ago, passed an ordinance, under the provisions of section 53 of the act just referred to, requiring the utility companies to build extensions for the distribution of gas to a part of the city not theretofore furnished by them with gas. The company refused to make these extensions and failed to complain in writing, within the time prescribed by statute, to the public service commission. An action was brought by the city to compel the company to comply with the ordinance. By reason of the foregoing non-compliance with the ordinance, it is your contention that the company has violated the provisions of the act to which reference has just been made and is, therefore, subject to the penalty prescribed by section 67 of the act.

The question of the validity of the ordinance and its reasonableness is now before the court, with the city and the gas companies as litigants, the state not being a party; consequently, into the merits of that dispute, the state cannot enter. It is, however, concerned with the matter of the provisions of the public service act and the recovery of penalty for violation thereof; and it is this which I shall here consider.

Section 53 empowers municipalities to require of a public utility, by ordinance or otherwise, such additions or extensions to its distributing plant as may be reasonable and necessary in the interest of the public, and to designate the nature and time of the completion of such extension, as well as all of the conditions under which they must be constructed and operated. These requirements of council are subject to review by the public service commission.

Section 67 provides that "every public utility shall obey, observe and comply with every order, direction and requirement of the commission made under authority of the act, and that any public utility 'which violates any provision of this act' or fails to comply with the order of the commission shall forfeit and pay to the state not to exceed $1,000.00 for each such failure, etc., and each day's continuance thereof, shall be deemed to be a separate offense."

The question here is "is it a violation of any provision of this act for a public utility to refuse to comply with an ordinance of council?" Section 53 makes it clear that council may require the public utility to make extensions, etc., subject, however, to review by the commission, this review being in the nature of an appeal. Whether failure to perfect such appeal renders the action of council final, and deprives a court of jurisdiction to review the ordinance, is not here under discussion, that being for the court to decide in the action now pending in Hamilton county.

Section 67 differentiates between violation of the provisions of the act, and failure to comply with the orders of the commission, thus showing that the legislature had in mind that these two delicts were distinct—one being the disobedience of an order of the commission, the other a breach of a positive statutory injunction. Now here the wrong consists in failure to obey an order of council. Can this be said to be a violation of the provisions of the act? I have called attention to the fact that the legislature treated violation of the act as something different from refusal to comply with an order of the commission for the purpose of showing that the phase "violates any provision of this act" does not comprehend non-compliance with the commission's orders. If such clause had covered both subjects, there would have been no necessity for the additional words, and it is a fundamental principle of statutory construction that every word inserted in a statute is intended for some purpose.

Therefore, if violation of the provisions of the act does not include disobedience of the orders of the commission, how can it be said that such violation does include failure to comply with the order of council? Besides this, the word "provisions" as here used means some actual expression in language and not conjecture or inference and it cannot be said there is any direct provision of the act requiring public utilities to obey the orders of council. The provision is that council "shall have power to require the utility to make extensions, etc." The vesting of power in council does not make the exercise of such power a legislative enactment—that is a provision of municipal ordinance rather than one of the public service act. Because council has been empowered by the act to require the extension and provision is made for an appeal from the ordinance, it does not follow that if no such appeal is taken, the action of council becomes the action of the commission, for that body has never considered the matter. Had the act in clear language imposed upon the utility the duty of complying with the order of council, an entirely different question would arise, and the absence of such language is significant of the legislative intent not to penalize the utility under the facts stated by you. There can be no violation of a statute unless such statute imposes a duty, or entails an obligation; and as the law here sought to be invoked is penal in its nature, it must be strictly construed.

Section 69 adds some force to the foregoing, in that, under it, actions to recover penalties and forfeitures provided for by the act are to be commenced and prosecuted by the attorney general when directed to do so by the commission. This would indicate that the action of the attorney general should be based upon a state of facts that had been brought before the commission, either because it was in direct violation of a statute which the commission is required to administer or because there had been disobedience of its order made after a hearing before it in the manner prescribed by law. In other words, the delict should in formal way be brought before the commission, and this situation does not here exist.

I should like very much to be of some help to you in this matter and if you can suggest any other statute or make clear, any other construction of this act, I shall be very glad to hear from you and reconsider the matter.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONSTRUCTION OF A FILTRATION PLANT—BONDS MAY BE ISSUED FOR SUCH PURPOSE WITHOUT SUBMITTING QUESTION TO A VOTE OF THE PEOPLE—PLANS SHOULD BE APPROVED BY STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Section 1259, General Code, provides the manner in which funds should be derived for the purpose of constructing a filtration plant. The question of the issuance of bonds for this purpose shall not be required to be submitted to a vote of the people. Council should immediately secure funds and the plans of the filtration plant should meet with the approval of the state board of health.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 18, 1913.

HON. BEN. L. BENNETT, City Solicitor, East Liverpool, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 28, 1913, you state that the state board of health has required an improvement of the water supply at East Liverpool on or before January 31, 1913, which requirement was approved by the governor and attorney general. In this order no suggestion was made as to the system of purification to be adopted. The council of your city has instructed its ordinance committee to prepare an ordinance to submit to the electors at the November election the question of whether a mechanical, crib, or well system of filtration should be installed, provided, that this ordinance would not conflict with the order of the state board of health, approved by the governor and attorney general. You ask:

> "Is there any provision in the election laws whereby such a question can be submitted to the electors of a municipality and does council have the authority to cause an election to be held for said purpose, or, is not council the sole judge of the method to be adopted, subject to the approval of the state board of health?"

It seems to me that there has been some claim that an ordinance of this kind is authorized by virtue of section 4227-1. This section provides in part as follows:

> "Ordinances and other measures providing for the exercise of any and all powers of government granted by the constitution or now delegated or hereafter delegated to any municipal corporation, by the general assembly, may be proposed by initiative petition. * * *"

The ordinance to which you have reference has not been proposed by initiative petition, and therefore, this statute does not authorize it. Even if it had been proposed by initiative petition I am of the opinion that it is not authorized by law. You will observe that the only ordinance that may be proposed by the electors are those which provide for the exercise of powers granted by the constitution or delegated to the municipality by the general assembly. It does not appear to me that council has been granted or delegated the power to submit to the people a question of the character suggested by your inquiry. The kind of plant to be adopted is a legislative question for the determination of council, and council has no power to delegate its legislative power to the people. The right to delegate such power in cases like this would vest in the general assembly, but the delegation of power to the people by the legislature does not imply that the municipality may delegate it, and I can find no authority for such delegation.

In addition to this it must be remembered that a municipal corporation has only those powers which are expressly granted to it, and such as are necessary to carry out the powers so expressly granted, therefore we must look to the statutes to find authority for the submission of questions to the people and for the calling of elections for that purpose. I can find no statute authorizing council to call an election for the purpose stated in your question.

One reason that may be suggested for the fact that there is no provision for the submission of questions in this manner to the people, is that, by virtue of section 4227-1 et seq., they have the power to initiate measures and to reject ordinances passed by council. These methods accomplish exactly the same result as would be accomplished by allowing the people to determine the course to be pursued by municipalities. I do not desire, however, to be understood as saying that in the present instance the adoption of a plan by council would be subject to referendum. That is a question which it is not necessary here to determine, as your question may be answered without a decision upon that point.

I wish, in this connection, to call your attention to section 1259 of the General Code, which distinctly provides the manner in which the funds shall be derived for the purpose of constructing a purification plant. The question of the issuance of bonds for this purpose shall not be required to be submitted to a vote of the people. Council should immediately make provision for the procuring of funds under this section. It should also adopt some system of filtration that will meet with the approval of the state board of health.

I trust that this fully answers your question, but if it does not I shall be glad to be of whatever further assistance I can.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

AT THE PRESENT TIME A HEALTH OFFICER OF A CITY IS NOT PROTECTED BY THE CIVIL SERVICE CLAUSE.

A health officer of the city of Zanesville is not at the present time protected by 103 Ohio Laws, 698, and may be removed by the board. Under the provisions of the laws as they exist at the present time, a health officer has no appeal to the civil service commission if he is discharged.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 11, 1913.

HON. T. F. THOMPSON, City Solicitor, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 21, 1913, you inquire:

> "Can a health officer of the local board of health of the city of Zanesville, Ohio, be summarily removed without cause.
> "He has been appointed for a period of one year, which year will not expire until January 1, 1914."

There are three phases to your question and they will be considered in the order to be stated:

First:—The right of the appointing power to remove an officer at its will.

Second:—The rights of the health officer under the civil service law applicable to cities prior to the repeal and amendment thereof by the recent legislature.

Third:—The rights of the health officer under the civil service law enacted by the last legislature as set forth in 103 Ohio Laws, 698, et seq., in so far as it is now operative.

FIRST.

At page 1371 of 29 Cy., the rule is stated:

> "Furthermore, it is the universal rule that where the duration of an office is not prescribed by law, the power to remove is an incident of the power to appoint."

Also at page 1408 of the same volume it is said:

> "The powers of removal of the executive authorities are defined by the statutes upon which they depend, except that the power of removal is by the common law regarded as incident to the power of appointment. The executive power of removal is either an arbitrary or a conditional one. In case the power is an arbitrary one—and it is arbitrary when incident to the power of appointment—no formalities such as the presentment of charges or the granting of a hearing to the person removed are necessary to its lawful exercise. The appointment of a successor even is regarded as a removal of the prior incumbent. It is not necessary that the cau se assigned for removal shou ld be stated in the precise language of the statute."

A conditional power of removal would be such a power as is possessed in cases of officers and employes in the classified service.

The health officer is appointed by virtue of section 4408, General Code, which reads:

"The board of health shall appoint a health officer, who shall be the executive officer. He shall furnish his name, address and other information required by the state board of health. The board may appoint a clerk, and with the consent of council, as many ward or district physicians, or one ward physician for each ward in the city as it deems necessary.

The statute does not fix the term of office for such health officer. The term in the present case was fixed by the appointing power, and this fixing of the term by the board of health would not deprive it of any power it may have to summarily remove such officer, if such power is incident to its power of appointment.

Section 4412, General Code, prior to its repeal in 103 Ohio Laws 698, 713, provided:

"The board shall have exclusive control of its appointees, define their duties and fix their salaries, but no member of the board of health shall be appointed as health officer nor shall a member of the board of health nor the health officer be appointed as one of the ward physicians. The board may suspend, but not remove, any member of the sanitary police now serving or hereafter appointed for cause authorizing the dismissal of any person in the classified service, and shall certify such fact together with the cause of such suspension, to the civil service commission, who, within five days from the receipt thereof, shall proceed to inquire into the cause of such suspension and render judgment thereon and such judgment in the matter shall be final."

This section protected the sanitary police, but not the health officer, from removal without cause.

The appointing power, which in this case, is the board of health, would have the right to remove the health officer without cause, unless such health officer is protected by the civil service law which will be considered next.

SECOND.

The sections of the General Code quoted in this branch of the opinion will be as they existed prior to their repeal or amendment at the recent session of the legislature.

Section 4479, General Code, provided:

"The civil service shall be divided into classified and unclassified service. The unclassified service shall include the positions of officers elected by the people or appointed to fill vacancies in offices filled by popular election, ———; persons who as members of a board or, otherwise, have charge of any principal department of the government of any city, the head or chief of any division or principal department relating to engineering, waterworks, street cleaning, or health, the chief of the police department, the chief of the fire department, the superintendent of any workhouse, house of refuge, infirmary, or hospital, the librarian of any public library, private secretaries, deputies in the office of the city auditor and city treasurer, unskilled laborers, and such appointees of the civil service commission as they may by rule determine. The classified service shall comprise offices and places not included in the unclassified service."

This section places in the unclassfied service the "head or chief of any division or principal department relating to ————health." The only office in the department of health which will fit this designation is the health officer.

An examination of original sections 4411 and 4412 General Code, and the amendments thereof in 102 Ohio Laws 44, will determine the status of the health officer.

Section 4412, General Code, as amended in 102 Ohio Laws 44 is quoted above.

Section 4411, General Code, as amended in 102 Ohio Laws 44, read:

> "The board may also appoint as many persons for sanitary duty as in its opinion the public health and sanitary condition of the corporation require, and such persons shall have general police powers, and be known as the sanitary police, but the council may determine the maximum number of employes so to be appointed."

The legislature in amending section 4412, General Code, in 102 Ohio Laws 44, provided that the sanitary police should have the right of appeal to the civil service commission, but made no such provision as to the health officer.

Section 4411, as originally carried into the General Code read:

> "The board may also appoint, with the consent of council, as many persons for sanitary duty as in its opinion the public health and sanitary condition of the corporation require, and such persons shall have general police powers, and be known as the sanitary police."

Section 4412, original General Code, read:

> "The board shall have exclusive control of its appointees, define their duties and fix their salaries, but no member of the board of health shall be appointed as health officer, nor shall a member of the board of health nor the health officer be appointed as one of the ward physicians. All such appointees shall serve during the pleasure of the board.

Under the last quoted sections the health officer was subject to discharge at the pleasure of the board of health and he had no right of appeal to the civil service commission. The specific mention of the sanitary police in section 4412, General Code, as amended in 102 Ohio Laws 44, and not of the health officer, shows that it was not intended to protect the health officer by the civil service law.

The health officer is therefore in the unclassified service.

Section 4484, General Code, provided:

> "Nothing herein shall prevent the dismissal or discharge of any appointee by the removing board or officer, except that the chiefs and members of the police and fire departments and of the sanitary police shall be dismissed only as provided by law and the appeal therefrom shall be made to the civil service commission under such rules as the commission may adopt."

The health officer was not protected by this section.

Therefore, under the provisions of the civil service law, as it existed prior to the recent amendment and repeal, the board of health could remove the health officer at will and such officer was not protected by the civil service law.

THIRD.

The third phase of your inquiry requires a consideration of the civil service law as set forth in 103 Ohio Laws 698. This act is now effective, except that certain provisions do not come into operation until some time in the future.

Section 2 of the civil service law, 103 Ohio Laws 698, and to be known as section 486-2, General Code, provides:

> "Method of Appointment. On and after January 1, 1914, appointments to and promotions in the civil service of this state and the counties, cities and school districts thereof shall be made only according to merit and fitness to be ascertained as far as practicable by examination which, as far as practicable, shall be competitive; and on and after January 1, 1914, no person shall be appointed, removed, transferred, laid off, suspended, reinstated, promoted or reduced as an officer or employee in the civil service under the government of this state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, in any manner or by any means other than those prescribed in this act."

By virtue of this section persons in the civil service of a city, which includes the classified and unclassified service, cannot be removed on and after January 1, 1914, except in accordance with the provisions of the act of 103 Ohio Laws 698. This section does not, therefore, protect employes or officers at this time.

Section 8 of act of 103 Ohio Laws 698, to be known as section 486-8, General Code, provides:

> "Service—Unclassified. The civil service of the state of Ohio and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof shall be divided into the unclassified service and the classified service.
> (a) The unclassified service shall comprise the following positions which shall not be included in the classified service, except as otherwise provided in section 19 hereof:
> 1. "All officers elected by popular vote.
> 2. "All heads of principal departments, boards and commissions appointed by the governor or by and with his consent or by the mayor, or if there be no mayor such other similar chief appointing authority of any city or city school district.
> 3. "All officers elected by either or both branches of the general assembly.
> 4. "All election officers.
> 5. "All commissioned, non-commissioned officers and enlisted men in the military service of the state.
> 6. "All presidents, superintendents, directors, teachers and instructors in the public schools, colleges and universities; the library staff of any library in the state supported wholly or in part at public expense.
> 7. "Two secretaries or assistants or clerks for each of the elective and principal executive officers, boards or commissions, except civil service commissions, authorized by law to appoint such a secretary, assistant or chief clerk.
> 8. "Three deputies of elective or principal executive officers authorized by law to act generally for and in place of their principals and holding a fiduciary relation to such principals.
> 9. "Bailiffs of courts of record.
> 10. "Employees and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections.
> (b) "The classified service shall comprise all persons in the employ of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, not specially included in the unclassified service, to be designated as the competitive class.
> 1. "The competitive class shall include all positions and employments now existing or hereafter created in the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations. Appointments shall be made to, or employment shall be given in, all positions in the competitive class that are not filled by promotion, re-instatement, transfer or reduction, as provided in sections 15, 16 and 17 of this act and the rules of the commission, by appointment from those certified to the appointing officer in accordance with the provisions of section 13 of this act."

Subdivision (a), branch 2, determines the status of the health officer under the new law. This branch places in the unclassified service "all heads of principal departments—appointed—by the mayor."

The health officer is not appointed by the mayor or by any similar chief appointing power. He is appointed by the board of health. Under the new law the health officer will be in the classified service.

The latter part of section 10 of 103 Ohio Laws 698, to be known as section 486-10, General Code, reads:

"The incumbents of all offices and places in the competitive classified service, except those holding their positions under existing civil service laws, shall, whenever the commission shall require, and within twelve months after the rules adopted by the commission go into effect, be subject to non-competitive examinations as a condition of continuing in the service. Reasonable notice of all such non-competitive examinations shall be given in such manner as the commission may require and all such non-competitive examinations shall conform in character to those of the competitive service."

By virtue of this section, or the provisions thereof above quoted, incumbents are required to take a non-competitive examination, as a condition of continuing in office.

Section 31 of 103 Ohio Laws 698, provides:

"Schedule. All officers and employes in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof holding their positions under existing civil service laws, shall when this act takes effect, be deemed appointees under the provisions of this act. All existing eligible lists shall continue in force for the term of eligibility to be fixed by the commission as provided therein; and all records of existing commissions shall become the property of the commissions appointed hereunder. Municipal civil service commissions now in office shall continue to perform their duties under the provisions of sections 4412, 4477, 4505, 7690-1, 7690-6, 12895 and 12896 of the General Code, and the rules prescribed thereunder until rules are provided in compliance with the provisions of this act."

The above section will be known as section 486-31, General Code. It protects officers in the classified service, that is those that have been appointed in accordance with existing civil service laws. It does not protect those in the unclassified service.

In order to answer your inquiry it is not necessary to determine the status of incumbents when the provisions of section 2, supra. of this act become effective. The health officer in question cannot now claim protection under this provision. He must be an incumbent on January 1, 1914, to claim such protection.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the health officer in question is not protected by the provisions of 103 Ohio Laws 698, and that he may be removed by the board of health under the provisions of the laws as they existed prior to the passage of the above act. The health officer, at this time, has no right of an appeal to the civil service commission if he is discharged.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

COST OF REPLACING STREETS AND SIDEWALKS DESTROYED DURING THE FLOOD OF 1913, SHOULD BE PAID BY THE CITY GENERALLY.

Where property, such as streets and sidewalks, were destroyed during the flood of 1913, the abutting property owners should not be assessed to replace the improvement, but the cost should be charged to the city generally.

Council is without authority to assess any of the cost upon the abutting property owners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1913.

HON. MARSHALL G. FENTON, City Solicitor, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Answering your letter of August 23rd, receipt whereof has already been acknowledged, I note that you ask whether or not the owners of property which has been once assessed for a public improvement, and whose assessments have not yet been paid in the installments provided for in the assessing ordinance, may have their property again assessed for not more than half of the cost and expense of restoring the improvement, the same having been destroyed by the floods of March, 1913.

I note that you also submit the further question as to whether or not, in the event that your first question is negatively answered, the city may now provide, by resolution, to reassess the property when the present assessments are paid?

In my consideration of the questions which you have asked, I have encountered another and different question which seems to me to preclude consideration of the specific inquiries which you make. The public improvements which you mention being the replacement of streets and sidewalks destroyed by the floods of March, 1913, must, I think, be undertaken under the provisions of what is known as the "Snyder Emergency Law," found in 103 O. L. 141. Section 3 of that act provides, inter alia that:

> "For the permanent * * * reconstruction or replacement of * * * public ways destroyed or injured in the manner and at the time described in section 1 of this act (viz. by the floods of March and April, 1913) any * * * council of any municipal corporation * * * may issue bonds or notes of the corporation * * * as needed * * *"

Section 5 of the same act provides for the execution of the bonds to which section 3 refers.

Section 6 of the act provides for the payment of these bonds, which shall be by a special levy on all the taxable property of the municipal corporation outside of all tax limits. This section also contains another provision which is of vital importance in this connection, mention of which will be deferred for the present.

Section 9 of the act defines the term "public ways" as follows:

> "The term 'public ways' means and embraces streets, alleys, sidewalks, and public places * * * in municipal corporations, and the paving or other improvements heretofore constructed or made thereon, whether by assessment of abutting property or otherwise * * *."

The particular provision of section 6 which is of vital importance in this connection was amended by the same session of the general assembly, 103 O. L. 760-762, and in its final form reads as follows:

> "Except for purposes mentioned in section 1 and 2 of this act, and except when acting for such purposes under the general laws of the state, and not under said sections, none of the taxing authorities mentioned in this section shall borrow money or levy a tax for any of the purposes mentioned in this act under the general laws of the state unless such tax is necessary to provide for the payment of notes or bonds issued for such purposes, and authorized prior to the passage of this act; but all moneys borrowed or taxes levied for the purpose of making repairs, reconstruction and replacement of public property and public ways destroyed or injured by the floods mentioned in section 1 of this act shall be borrowed or levied under the provisions of this act."

In this section the legislature evinces the intention that the replacement of all public property destroyed by the floods of March and April, 1913, shall be a burden upon the general tax duplicate. That is to say, regardless of whether or not assessments were paid out, the general assembly intended that the general taxpayers should pay for replacing property destroyed by the floods. The under-lying idea seems to be that a calamity of the nature of that which occurred in March and April of this year was so extraordinary as to make it unjust to require political sub-divisions to rehabilitate themselves out on their current revenues or to permit them to assess property as "specially benefited" for this purpose.

I do not hold that assessments may not be made, but section 6 expressly provides that no money shall be borrowed for any of the purposes mentioned except under authority of that act; and I take it that it would be useless to levy assessments without the power to borrow money in anticipation thereof, which is so denied.

The constitutionality of the emergency act, as a whole, has been sustained by the supreme court in a recent decision. The particular provision now under consideration was not passed upon by the court, as such. If there is any constitutional question here, it arises out of the fact that property which is actually specially benefited by an improvement, is not to be required to contribute to the expense of making the improvement. In other words, the general taxpayers are to confer special benefits upon particular property.

I do not regard this question as of much importance, however, because the public has an undoubted interest in the maintenance of the highways and streets. I believe it could also be established that the public is interested as such in the maintenance of sidewalks, although it has been customary to assess the entire cost of the construction of sidewalks upon the owners of the benefited property. See, for example section 3870, General Code, which permits a village to assume a portion of the cost and expense of constructing sidewalks, etc.

Now the legislation under discussion amounts to a legislative determination that in the particular instance the public necessity is paramount and that the mere restoration of public property originally constructed by assessment does not confer a special benefit upon the private property but merely discharges a public obligation. At any rate every presumption favors the constitutionality of the law, and its provisions being clear, I am of the opinion that the reconstruction and repaving of which you speak in your letter must be at the expense of the city generally, council being without authority to assess any portion of the cost and expense thereof upon the abutting property.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

UNDER SECTION 4412, GENERAL CODE, BEFORE ITS REPEAL, THE ACTION OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH IN RAISING THE SALARY OF THE SANITARY POLICEMAN WAS FINAL.

Where the board of health raises he salary of a sanitary policeman, $10.00 per month, the action of the board is final, and such action imposes upon the city the obligation to pay the increased salary from the time when the same became effective.

Section 4412, General Code, under which this increase was granted, now repealed, was in effect May, 1913, when his increase in salary was granted.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 23, 1913.

HON. JAMES L. LEONARD, City Solicitor, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 20th requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "In May, 1913, our board of health raised the salary of the sanitary policeman $10.00 per month. The amount necessary to pay the increased salary had not been set forth in the annual budget for the year 1913, and further the moneys raised by the city from the collection of taxes, etc., are less than the amount of our appropriations for that year.
> "Can he force the city to pay the increased salary for the year 1913?"

The board of health, under section 4412, General Code, now repealed, but in effect during the period concerning which you inquire, has explicit power to fix the salaries of its employes. There is no limitation upon this power such as there is upon the power of council to fix salaries of other persons employed in the service of the municipality.

I am of the opinion that the action of the board of health in fixing the salary of the sanitary policeman in question was final and conclusive, and that such action imposed upon the city the obligation to pay the increased salary from the time when the same became effective.

I incline to the view, although my opinion is not invited specifically upon the question, that the order of the board of health in question was not subject to the municipal referendum and became effective immediately upon its adoption. Not being a regulation "intended for the general public" within the meaning of section 4413, but one "for the government of the board" within the meaning thereof, no publication of the same is required and it became operative from and after the date of its adoption.

I will now consider the effect of the failure of council to appropriate an amount of money for this salary sufficient to pay the increase.

I am of the opinion that the effect of this situation is to preclude the city auditor from issuing warrants for the health officer's salary in excess of the amount appropriated. Therefore, the health officer, though he is legally entitled to the increased salary, is not entitled to receive the actual money involved in such increase until an appropriation is made for this purpose. But when such an appropriation is made the same may provide for the payment of back salary unless the health officer by his conduct has waived his claim thereto.

Council is, of course, not legally obliged to appropriate for this salary at all. The effect of a failure to appropriate would be to subject the city to suit on the part of the health officer for the unpaid salary. A judgment recovered in such a suit would have to be paid out of the sinking fund.

As to the effect of the failure of the council in making up its annual budget to provide for such an increase, I should prefer not to express an unequivocal opinion. If the budget presented by council to the county auditor under section 5649-3a, General Code, merely estimated the needs of the health fund, then the fact that council may have had in mind a particular salary as one of the items comprising the needs of the health fund would not preclude the council from subsequently appropriating out of the health fund enough money to provide for the increased salary, if there were such moneys in the fund.

Section 5649-3d, to which you refer, prohibits council from appropriating in excess of the amount set forth in the annual budget; it does not, however, in my opinion, preclude council from appropriating a greater amount for a specific item within a general purpose set forth in the budget than had been originally contemplated, provided the aggregate of such specific appropriations does not exceed the amount set forth in the budget. For illustration, suppose that the council simply certifies to the county auditor that the needs of the health fund require a levy of one thousand dollars, and in so certifying intends to divide the one thousand dollars, five hundred for the salary of a health officer and five hundred for general contingent expenses of the board of health, unless the health fund levies are so estimated by specific items to the budget commission, the mere fact that council may have had such a division of the fund in mind in certifying to the auditor that the needs thereof required a levy of one thousand dollars, would not preclude the council, in making its subsequent appropriations from the proceeds of that levy when allowed by the budget commission, from setting aside six hundred dollars for the salary and four hundred dollars for the contingent expenses. The limitation of section 5649-3d, General Code, under the circumstances imagined would operate upon the aggregate of appropriations but not upon the specific appropriations as such; or in other words, the word "purpose" as used therein must necessarily refer to and mean the same thing as is meant by the same word in section 5649-3a so that if council considers that the health fund is a "single purpose" then the specific appropriations from that fund are limited by the provisions of section 5649-3d to the extent only that the aggregate of such appropriations may not exceed the aggregate allowance in the budget for the purpose of the health fund.

If, however, the salary of the sanitary policeman, as such, was one of the items of the budget, instead of the general purpose of the health fund, then, of course, council cannot even appropriate for the additional salary at any time during the current year, and if it desires to appropriate therefor, must provide a specific item in the next annual budget for the payment of back salary to the sanitary policeman. Without such an appropriation the health officer can only recover his additional salary by securing judgment against the city in the manner already pointed out.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

PROPERTY MAY NOT BE RE-ASSESSED FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT FOR MORE THAN ONE-HALF THE COST OF THE REPAIRING OF SUCH STREET—MUNICIPAL CORPORATION MUST MEET DEFICIENCY WHERE ASSESSMENT IS NOT SUFFICIENTLY LARGE TO COVER COST OF THE IMPROVEMENT—JUDGMENT AGAINST THE CITY FOR SUCH DEFICIENCY TO BE PAID FROM THE SINKING FUND—LEGALITY OF BOND ISSUE DOES NOT DEPEND UPON THE LEGALITY OR REGULARITY OF THE LEVYING OF THE SPECIAL ASSESSMENT—BONDS MAY BE ISSUED TO MEET CITY'S SHARE OF SUCH EXPENSE WITHOUT VOTE OF THE PEOPLE.

Where a special assessment has been levied and paid, for improving a street by macadam, the property so assessed cannot again be assessed for more than one-half the cost and expense of repairing or repaving such street.

If a municipal corporation fails to make an assessment against abutting property sufficiently large to meet the bonds issued in anticipation of such special assessment, the municipal corporation must raise the deficiency and pay the same from its general funds.

If a final judgment is secured against the city for such deficiency, it should be paid from the sinking fund, if no other provision is made to take care of such deficiency.

The legality of the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments does not depend upon the regularity or legality of the special assessments.

Under the provisions of the General Code, council may issue bonds to pay the city's share of the cost of the improvement without a vote of the people, provided the total indebtedness created by council does not exceed in any fiscal year one per cent. of the total value of the property listed for taxation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1913.

HON. EDWARD C. STITZ, City Solicitor, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 20, 1913, you submit the following inquiries:

> "First. If a street has been macadamized with stone and the cost thereof (except a part of the cost assessed against all the taxable property of the city) assessed against the abutting property, and the street is again improved by paving the roadway with brick, asphalt, concrete or other material, must the assessment be limited to one half the cost and expense of the improvement?
>
> "Second. If bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments and the assessments are in a different proportion than is provided by law and by reason thereof it becomes impossible for the city to pay the abutters' part as assessed and thereby there is not enough money collected of the assessments to pay such bonds, is the city liable to pay the bonds, insofar as the assessments fund is lacking in amount?
> "Third. If the city is unable to pay the balance of such bonds, after the assessment fund is depleted, by reason of there being no fund out of which to pay the same, and if the bonds are sued upon and judgment obtained against the city, must the city pay such judgment out of the sinking fund?
> "Fourth. If bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for a street improvement, and the assessment as made by the city for the payment of such bonds is irregular and not according to law, and by reason thereof there is not enough money raised, by assessments, to pay the bonds and interest when due, are the bonds legal bonds of the city, or are the bonds legal?

"Fifth. (a) Can the city issue bonds for the purpose of paying its part of proposed street improvements without a vote of the people?

(b) "If a vote of the people is necessary or desired, do the following sections of the General Code apply: 5912, section 4, and the following five sections, independent of any question of limitation?

(c) "Would such bonds be legal without a vote of the people?"

Your first question involves a construction of the provisions of section 3822, General Code, which provides:

"When a special assessment for the improvement of a street or other public place has been levied and paid, the property so assessed shall not again be assessed for more than one-half the cost and expense of repaving or repairing such street or other public place unless the grade thereof is changed."

It appears in your question that a special assessment has been levied and paid for macadamizing the street. Is the macadamizing of a street considered an "improvement of a street" under section 3822, General Code?

In case of Page vs. City of Columbus, 15 Cir. Ct., N. S., 40, it is held:

"The provision of section 3822, P. & A. Anno., General Code, limiting reassessments for repaving improved streets to one-half the cost, does not violate the constitutional inhibition as to retroactive or restrospective legislation, and applies to improvements made before and after the enactment of the said act.

"No distinction is made by the act as to material used or cost of the original improvement, but the restriction applies generally to all improvements whereby an unimproved street has been transformed into an improved one and the cost assessed specially against the abutting property."

The above case was affirmed without opinion by the supreme court in 86 Ohio St., 333.

In the foregoing case the first improvement was made by graveling part of the road bed, putting in a curb and a boulder gutter.

In case of Baldwin vs. Springfield, 20 Ohio Dec. 265, it is held:

"'Macadamizing' a street, formerly improved by graveling pursuant to municipal direction, constitutes a 'repaving' within the meaning of section 53 Mun. Code. of 1902 (General Code 3822) for which not more than one-half the cost may be assessed against the abutter.

"The limitation of section 53, Municipal Code of 1902 (General Code 3822) as to 'repaving' assessments does not apply to assessments for curbing and guttering if the former improvement did not include and the property were not assessed therefor either as part of a street or sidewalk improvement."

This case was affirmed by the circuit court May 19, 1911.

On page 271 Kunkle, J., says:

"There are a number of decisions to the effect that macadamizing is considered paving."

Also on page 272, he further says:

"Any material by which a hard, firm or smooth surface for travel is secured, constitutes a paving, and from the above definitions of paving and repaving, we think macadamizing in question constituted a repaving, and that the limitation of section 3820, General Code, (B. 1536-213), as to repaving, applies to the improvement in question."

The macadamizing of a street is no doubt an improvement of a street as contemplated by section 3822, General Code. If a special assessment has been levied and paid for improving a street by macadamizing it, the property so assessed cannot be again assessed for more than one-half of the cost and expense of repaving or repairing such street.

Your second inquiry involves the obligation of a municipal corporation to pay in full bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments, when such special assessments prove insufficient to pay such bonds and the interest in full.

It is assumed that the bonds in question were issu ed for the improvement of a street.

Section 3914, General Code, provides:

"Municipal corporations may issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments. Such bonds may be in sufficient amount to pay the estimated cost and expense of the improvement for which the assessments are levied. In the issuance and sale of such bonds the municipality shall be governed by all restrictions and limitations with respect to the issuance and sale of other bonds, and the assessments as paid shall be applied to the liquidation of such bonds."

It will be observed that the municipal corporation issues the bonds under this section.

Section 3918, General Code, provides:

"Bonds issued under authority of this chapter shall express upon their face the purpose for which they were issued, and under what ordinance."

Section 3919, General Code, provides:

"Bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness issued by a municipal corporation shall be signed by the mayor and by the auditor, or the clerk thereof, and be sealed with the seal of the corporation. When issued for street improvements, they shall have the name of the street or portion thereof so improved, and for which they were issued, legibly written or printed upon them."

These sections provide for certain recitals in the bonds and the manner of executing the same. There is no provision that they shall be paid solely from the fund raised by special assessment upon the abutting property.

In a note to section 3914, General Code, in Page & Adams Annotated Code, it is stated:

"The fact that the statute which authorized the assessment is invalid and that the assessment cannot be collected, does not prevent recovery on the bonds against the municipal corporation or the public quasi corporation which issued them: Loeb vs. Columbia Township, 179 U. S., 472."

In the case of State vs. Commissioners, 37 Ohio St., 526, it is held:

'The act of March 29, 1867, and the acts amendatory and supplementary thereto, commonly called the two-mile-road improvement laws, authorize the commissioners of counties, for the purposes of raising money necessary to meet the expenses of road improvements, 'to issue the bonds of the county,' and thereby create a debt of the county in its quasi corporate capacity, notwithstanding they also require the commissioners to assess the cost and expense of the improvement upon the lands benefited thereby and situate within two miles thereof.

"When, from any cause, sufficient money be not calized from such ocal assessments to pay the debt so created, it is the duty of the commissioners to levy a tax therefor upon all the taxable property of the county."

On page 529, McIlvaine, J., says:

"The question of the power of the commissioners to obligate the county, is, however, raised on the statutes to which reference is made in the bond. The holder of the bond is notified by its face, that the power assumed by the commissioners is to be found in these statutes. Section 7 of the statute provides, 'that for the purpose of raising money necessary to meet the expenses of such improvement, the commissioners of the county are hereby authorized to issue the bonds of the county, payable in installments, or at intervals not exceeding in all five years, bearing interest at the rate not to exceed seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, which bonds shall not be sold for less than their par value.' From the language of the statute here quoted, perhaps no one would deny that the debt evidenced by the authorized bonds is the debt of the county in its quasi corporate capacity—indeed, the language is not susceptible of any other meaning; but, inasmuch as the same section provides for an assessment upon the lands specially benefited and lying within two miles of the improvement, to meet the payment of the interest and principal of the bonds, it is contended that no other mode or manner of taxation can be resorted to for the purpose of paying the bonds. However plausible this contention may be, we think it cannot be maintained. That the legislature might have so provided, we do not deny, but if such was the intention, it should have been expressed in very clear and unmistakable terms. Such terms were not used, nor is such inference clear."

It will be observed that in the above case the commissioners were authorized to issue "the bonds of the county;" and under section 3914, General Code, the authority is that "municipal corporations may issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments." In both cases there is authority to levy the cost against the abu ting property.

In discussing improvement bonds payable by special assessments, Dillon says on page 1388 of his work on municipal corporation, 5th edition:

"Although such obligations do not constitute debt of the municipality in the constitutional sense of the word, or an obligation which is payable from its general funds, yet bonds which are issued in the name of the municipality, to be paid only from a special fund created by the enabling act, and so limited on the face of the obligation, are the bonds of the municipality. The municipality is the obliger in the bond, must fulfil the obligations imposed upon it, and is subject to appropriate action n r. spect thereof, notwithstanding the fact that it is not under any general liability, or, so to speak, liability in personam for the debt. If, however, the bonds do not purport to be the promise of the municipality, but are issued by certain persons or officers or commissioners designated by statute to make the improvement, and are expressly stated to be issued pursuant to the statute for the purpose of the improvement payable only from the assessment therefor, without liability on the part of the municipality, such bonds, not being in form the obligation of the municipality, were regarded as simply the statutory promise or obligation of the commissioners, or agents selected by the state to make the particular improvement, and no action in such case was held to lie against the municipality in respect to the bonds, even if it be only to enforce the creation of the fund."

Also on page 1395, Dillon further says:

"In addition to the remedy against the municipality by mandamus, the holder of improvement bonds has a remedy by action against the city for the amount owing on the bonds or for damages in the event that the city has clearly neglected its duty in not taking steps to perfect the assessment, in consequence whereof the assessment cannot be enforced. "

On page 1256 of Dillon, it is further said:

"Local improvements, such as grading or paving streets, making sewers, and the like, are public improvements for the benefit of the city or public at large and are not the private improvements of the abutter. The mode of payment by a local assessment on the abutter for benefits is an exercise of the state's power of taxation, and the proceeding as to him is in invitum. The city alone has the power to make the assessment and to collect it, and the duty to exercise this power and to make and collect the assessment is a duty resting upon the city in the performance of which the contractor has a direct and immediate interest. It is an erroneous view that the city authorities in this matter are the agents of the contractors. They are agents, if agents at all, appointed by law, and their failure to do their duty cannot be imputed to the contractor as a fault on his part. The city is, we repeat, under a duty to the contractor—the contractor is under no duty in this respect to the city, but has a right to have the city's duty faithfully performed."

The last quotation was in reference to the rights of the contractor where he looked to the special assessment for his pay. The same principles would apply where bonds have been issued and the contractor paid from the proceeds of the sale thereof.

The improvement of a street is a matter which concerns not only the abutting property owner, but the city at large as well. Such improvement is of general benefit to municipal corporations. The method of paying therefor by levying part of the cost against the abutting property is the exercise of the power of taxation. It may be paid by general taxation as is the case when a street is repaved and only fifty per cent. of the cost can be levied against the abutting property. The city's portion must be raised by general taxation.

The bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of the special assessments are municipal bonds. They are obligations of the municipal corporation. It is the duty of the municipality to raise a fund sufficient to meet the bonds, and if it fails to do so by reason of its failure to make a sufficient assessment against the abutting property, the bond holders should not suffer thereby. It is the duty of the city to make such levy and not of the bond holder.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that where a municipal corporation fails to make an assessment against abutting property for the payment of the cost of an improvement of a street, sufficient to meet the bonds issued in anticipation of such special assessments he municipal corporation must raise the deficiency and pay the same from its general unds, and it is liable therefor.

In this connection I desire to call attention to the provisions of sections 3902 and 3909, General Code.

Section 3902, General Code, provides:

> "When it appears to the council that a special assessment is invalid, by reason of informality or irregularity in the proceedings, or when an assessment is adjudged to be illegal, by a court of competent jurisdiction, the council may order a reassessment, whether the improvement has been made or not."

Section 3909, General Code, provides:

> "If an assessment proves insufficient to pay for the improvement and expenses incident thereto, the council may, under the limitation prescribed for such assessment, make an additional pro rata assessment to supply the deficiency. In case a larger amount is collected than is necessary, it shall be returned to the persons from whom it was collected, in proportion to the amounts collected from such persons respectively. This section shall be subject to the limitations contained in other sections of this chapter."

It is intended that the part of the cost to be paid by the abutting property should be raised by special assessment and not by general taxation, and where possible this should be done.

Your third inquiry is as to the payment of such deficiency from the sinking fund after judgment on the bonds against the city.

Section 4517, General Code, provides:

> "The trustees of the sinking fund shall have charge of and provide for the payment of all bonds issued by the corporation, the interest maturing thereon and the payment of all judgments final against the corporation, except in condemnation of property cases. They shall receive from the auditor of the city or clerk of the village all taxes, assessments and moneys collected for such purposes and invest and disburse them in the manner provided by law. For the satisfaction of any obligation under their supervision, the trustees of the sinking fund may sell or use any of the securities or money in their possession."

By virtue of the provisions of this section the trustees of the sinking fund shall provide for "the payment of all judgments final against the corporation, except in condemnation of property cases".

Therefore, if a final judgment is secured against the city for such deficiency it should be paid from the sinking fund, if no other provision is made to take care of such deficiency.

Your fourth inquiry is in effect answered in considering your second question.

The legality of the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments does not depend upon the regularity, or the legality of the levying of the special assessments. The irregularity of the special assessment may be cured under the provisions of sections 3902 and 3909, General Code, supra.

Your fifth inquiry is in reference to the power of council to issue bonds for the part of the cost of a street improvement to be borne by the city, without a vote of the people.

Section 3821, General Code, provides:

"A municipality may issue and sell bonds as other bonds are sold to pay the corporation's part of any such improvement, and may levy taxes in addition to all other taxes authorized by law to pay such bonds and the interest thereon."

Section 3939, General Code, provides in part:

"When it deems it necessary, the council of a municipal corporation, by an affirmative vote of not less than two-thirds of the members elected or appointed thereto, by ordinance, may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such period of time, and at such rate of interest, not exceeding six per cent. per annum, as said council may determine and in the manner provided by law, for any of the following specific purposes:

" '22. For resurfacing, repairing or improving any existing street or streets as well as other public highways.' "

Section 3940, General Code, provides:

"Such bonds may be issued for any or all of such purposes, but the total indebtedness created in any one fiscal year, by the council of a municipal corporation, under the authority conferred in the preceding section, shall not exceed one per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation, as listed and assessed for taxation."

Council may under the foregoing provisions issue bonds to pay the city's portion of a public improvement without a vote of the people, provided the total indebtedness created by council under section 3939, General Code, shall not exceed in any fiscal year one per cent. of the total value of the property listed for taxation.

You inquire further as to the sections applicable if a vote of the electors is desired.

Section 3942, General Code, provides:

"In addition to the authority granted in section one (1) (General Code, section 3939) of this act and supplementary thereto, the council of a municipal corporation, whenever it deems it necessary, may issue and sell bonds in such amounts, or denomination, and for such period of time and rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. annum, as it may determine upon for any of the purposes set forth in section one (General Code, section 3939), upon obtaining the approval of the electors of the corporation at a general or special election in the following manner."

This section will apply to bonds to be issued for the city's portion of the cost of a street improvement when it is desired or it is necessary to submit the question of the issue of such bonds to a vote of the electors.

The manner of such submission is set forth in the succeeding sections.

In answering your fifth inquiry, other limitations than those contained in section 3940, General Code, have not been considered, in fact you eliminate the question of limitations in submitting your inquiry.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

COUNTIES TO PAY FOR CONFINEMENT OF PRISONER IN WORKHOUSE FOR MISDEMEANORS—MUNICIPAL CORPORATION TO PAY FOR SUCH CONFINEMENT WHEN THE PERSONS CONFINED ARE VIOLATORS OF MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES.

Under the provisions of section 12384, General Code, counties should make contract with workhouses and pay for the confinement of prisoners confined therein, where the prisoners are found guilty of misdemeanors, and sentenced to the workhouse.

Municipal corporations are to pay for prisoners confined for violations of municipal ordinances.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 26, 1913.

HON. MAURICE V. SEMPLE, City Solicitor, Ashland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 21, 1913, you state that two parties, jointly charged with violating section 13225, General Code, pleaded guilty before the mayor of your city, were fined and committed to the Cleveland workhouse.

You further state that the county of Ashland, and the city of Ashland, each have contracts with said workhouse.

You then inquire whether the city, or the county, should pay the workhouse for the keeping of said prisoners.

Section 12384, General Code, provides as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county, or the council of a municipality, wherein there is no workhouse, may agree with the city council, or other authority having control of the workhouse of a city in any other county, or with the board of district workhouses having a workhouse, upon what terms and conditions persons convicted of misdemeanors, or of the violation of an ordinance of such municipality having no workhouse, may be received into such workhouse under sentence thereto. The county commissioners, or the council of a municipality, are authorized to pay the expenses incurred under such agreement out of the general fund of the county or municipality, upon the certificate of the proper officer of such workhouse."

It will be seen that the county contracts and pays for those convicted of misdemeanors; and the municipality for those convicted of the violation of municipal ordinances.

The convictions in the above cases were for violation of the local option law. The conviction was for a direct offense against a law of the state and liability against the municipal corporation would seem to arise when the mayor tried it on account of violation of a municipal corporation. The mayor of the village in this instance was acting as the agent and representative of the state as distinguished from those cases involving violations of municipal ordinances where he acts as the direct representative of the city. The city had nothing to do with the cases. The county should pay the bills at the workhouse.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE BONDS ISSUED BY MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS CANNOT BE SOLD BECAUSE RATE OF INTEREST IS NOT HIGH ENOUGH THE RATE OF INTEREST MAY BE INCREASED, AND THE ADDITIONAL AMOUNT NECESSARY TO BE RAISED MAY BE ASSESSED AGAINST THE ABUTTING PROPERTY.

Where a village council passed an assessing ordinance duly authorizing the issuing of 4% bonds in anticipation of an assessment against the property owners and these bonds could not be sold because they were taxable and the rate of interest would not be high enough, council may amend the assessing ordinance by increasing the rate of interest of such bonds, and the additional interest may be assessed against the abutting property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1913.

HON. CHARLES H. DANFORD, Solicitor of Matamoras, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 7, 1913, you inquire:

> "On June 19, 1911, the village council passed a necessity ordinance to pave Main street. On January 6, 1912, the council passed the ordinance to proceed with the improvement. These two ordinances so passed provided for the issuing of four per cent. bonds in anticipation of the collection of deferred installments of assessments.
>
> "On February 19, 1913, the assessing ordinance was duly passed by the village council and authorized the issuing of four per cent. bonds in anticipation of the assessments against the property owners. You will notice this ordinance was passed after the constitutional amendment was adopted. These four per cent. bonds would not sell for the reason that purchasers claimed that these bonds are taxable and the return of interest therefore is not high enough. No doubt this situation has confronted other villages and cities and has been worked out in such manner as will stand the test of a suit on the part of a property owner to enjoin the collection.
> "First:—Are these bonds taxable?
> "Second:—Can the village council pass an assessing ordinance, amending the ordinance of February 19, 1913, and provide for issuing five per cent. bonds in anticipation of the assessments to be paid by property owners."

Your first question has been answered in an opinion given to Hon. J. C. Adams, city solicitor of Coshocton, Ohio, under date of January 9, 1913, in which it is held that "all bonds sold and delivered after January 1, 1913, whether the necessity for issuing was determined before or after January 1, 1913, are subject to taxation." A copy of that opinion is herewith enclosed.

Your second question involves the right of council to amend an ordinance fixing a rate of interest that bonds shall bear, by now increasing such rate of interest.

The bonds in question would not sell at par when bearing four per cent. interest because of the amendment to the constitution taxing such bonds. This constitutional amendment was adopted after the particular improvement in question had been determined upon by council and the rate of interest fixed. Council could not foresee at that time the present contingency.

Section 3914, General Code, provides:

> "Municipal corporations may issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments. Such bonds may be in sufficient amount to pay the estimated cost and expense of the improvement for which the assessments are levied. In the issuance and sale of such bonds the municipality shall be governed by all restrictions and limitations with respect to the issuance and sale of other bonds, and the assessments as paid shall be applied to the liquidation of such bonds."

This section authorizes council to issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments. It does not specifically provide or limit the rate of interest, but for this purpose refers to the general provisions of the statutes.

Section 3939, General Code, provides in general for the issue of bonds and the rate of interest, and reads in part:

"When it deems it necessary, the council of a municipal corporation, by an affirmative vote of not less than two-thirds of the members elected or appointed thereto, by ordinance, may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such period of time, and at such rate of interest, not exceeding six per cent. per annum, as said council may determine and in the manner provided by law, for any of the following specific purposes."

The five per cent. bonds which are proposed to be issued by the amended ordinance are therefore within the limitation of six per cent. interest provided by the foregoing section.

In your case council fixed the rate of interest at four per cent. in the necessity ordinance of June 19, 1911, and also in the ordinance of January 6, 1912, determining to proceed with the improvement. Council again fixed the rate of interest at four per cent. in the assessing ordinance of February 19, 1913. This latter ordinance was passed after the constitutional amendment was adopted permitting the taxation of such bonds.

In case of Lippert vs. Toledo, 19 Cir. Dec. 345 (9 General Code, N. S. 455) it is held:

"It is not necessarythat the council should determine in advance of the assessing ordinance the proportion of the cost and expense of making a street improvement that is to be assessed upon the property abutting thereon.

"The fact that the council may have, in the resolution and ordinances adopted and passed preparatory to the making of the improvement, indicated the proportion it intended to assess upon the abutting property, does not bar it from designating a different proportion in the assessing ordinance, provided it is within the limitations fixed by statute."

This case was affirmed without report in 75 Ohio State 000. It will apply to the act of council in fixing the rate of interest in the ordinances of June 19, 1911, and of January 6, 1912, but will not apply as to the ordinance of council of February 19, 1913, which authorized the issuing of bonds, fixed the rate of interest and provided for the special assessment.

In making the special assessment the interest on the bonds is to be included in the cost of the improvement by virtue of section 3896, General Code, which provides:

"The cost of any improvement contemplated in this chapter shall include the purchase money of real estate, or any interest therein, when acquired by purchase, or the value thereof as found by the jury, when appropriated, the costs and expenses of the proceeding, the damages assessed in favor of any owner of adjoining lands and interest thereon, the costs and expenses of the assessment, the expense of the preliminary and other surveys, and of printing, publishing the notices and ordinances required, including notice of assessment, and serving notices on property owners, the cost of construction, interest on bonds, where bonds have been issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments, and any other necessary expenditure."

Can council now amend the assessing ordinance and fix a different rate of interest to be charged against the abutting property?

At section 824, page 1765, of McQuillin on Municipal Corporations, the rule of amending improvement ordinances is stated:

> "Subject to the constitutional provision forbidding the impairment of the obligation of contracts, as explained elsewhere, improvement ordinances which are not wholly void may be amended, even after the contract is let and the work begun, in like manner as other ordinances. Thus an ordinance providing for street improvements which proves to be defective and insufficient to support an assessment, if not absolutely void, may be amended and reassessment made thereunder. So a division of special assessments into installments may be authorized by an amendment to the original ordinance providing for the improvement."

Council has power to issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments and to fix the rate of interest thereof. The rate fixed in the present case was not sufficient to sell the bonds and council would have authority, under the rule stated by McQuillin, to amend such ordinance by fixing a higher rate of interest.

The levying of a special assessment, or the amount thereof, is not contractual but is an exercise of the power of taxation. Council is authorized to levy an assessment sufficient to meet the cost to be borne by the abutting property and the interest on bonds issued in the anticipation of the collection of such assessments. The bonds are issued in order to enable the property owner to pay his assessment in installments. He has the privilege to pay the entire assessment and save the charge of interest. It is for his benefit that the bonds are issued.

Section 3909, General Code, provides:

> "If an assessment proves insufficient to pay for the improvement and expenses incident thereto, the council may, under the limitation prescribed for such assessment, make an additional pro rata assessment to supply the deficiency. In case a larger amount is collected than is necessary, it shall be returned to the persons from whom it was collected, in proportion to the amounts collected from such persons respectively. This section shall be subject to the limitations contained in other sections of this chapter."

This section authorizes a further assessment where the original assessment proves insufficient. If the assessment was contractual this section would be invalid as impairing the obligation of a contract. Also the decision in Lippert vs. Toledo supra, would not be good law.

Council may amend the assessing ordinance by increasing the rate of interest of such bonds and the additional interest may be assessed against the abutting property.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A CITY HAS NO AUTHORITY AT THE PRESENT TIME TO ENTER INTO A CONTRACT WITH A MAUSOLEUM COMPANY FOR THE ERECTION OF A MAUSOLEUM IN A CEMETERY FOR THE PURPOSE OF SELLING CRYPTS THEREIN.

At the present time there is no authority for a city acting through its director of public safety, or through its council, to enter into contracts with a mausoleum company for the erection of a mausoleum in a cemetery for the purpose of selling crypts therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 10, 1913.

HON. S. C. CARNES, City Solicitor, Cambridge, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of July 25, 1913, you make the following inquiries:

"1. Does the law permit the city, through its director of public service, or through its council, to authorize a company to erect a mausoleum on certain lots in the cemetery, for the purpose of selling crypts therein before or after the erection of the same, the title to the lots on which the mausoleum to be erected either be transferred to the company and after the mausoleum is erected transferred to the director of service, or the title to remain in the city with an agreement that the director of service shall control the same and receive an endowment fund from the company for the purpose of maintenance and embellishment of the same?"

"2. If the above is answered in the negative, can there be any arrangement by a private corporation with the director of service, by which the private corporation can erect a mausoleum on lots owned by the city and the private corporation to sell the crypts therein, before or after the erection thereof, and the endowment fund be furnished the director of public service by the private corporation for the maintenance and embellishment of the same?"

The solution of these questions involves a construction of the laws of Ohio relative to city cemeteries, and the title, control and disposition of lands and lots therein, for burial purposes. Let us take up the statutes applicable to city places of interment, in their order.

Section 4160, General Code, vests the title and right of possession of all city burial grounds, in the corporation where the same are located.

Section 4161, General Code, provides that:

*"The director of public service shall take possession and charge, and have the entire management, control, and regulation of public grave yards, burial grounds, and cemeteries located in or belonging to the corporation * ."

This section further provides that he shall, when necessary, direct the laying out, numbering and naming of lots, avenues, walks, paths or other subdivisions; and keep a plat thereof in the corporation auditor's office for the use of the public.

Section 4326, General Code, also gives the director of public service the management of cemeteries.

Section 4162, General Code, says:

"The director of public service shall direct all improvements and embellishments of the grounds and lots, protect and preserve them * * *."

The director, under section 4165, General Code, fixes the size and price of lots, and gives to each purchaser a receipt for the amount paid by him and a description of the lot sold. This receipt entitles the purchaser to a deed for the lot purchased.

As to the price of lots, section 4166, General Code, provides:

> *"No more shall be charged for lots than is necessary to reimburse the corporation for the expense of lands purchased or appropriated for cemetery purposes, and to kee p in order and embellish the grounds * ."

Section 4167, General Code, says:

> "The director of public service shall have entire charge and control of receipts from the sale of lots, and of the laying off and embellishing the grounds."

Section 4170, General Code, requires that the director to appoint a clerk and report quarterly "all moneys received and disbursed by him in the management and control of the cemetery."

In his annual report to council, the director is commanded, by section 4171, General Code, to set forth *"the number of lots sold, to whom sold, and the amount received therefor * ."

From a careful reading and construction of the statutes above quoted, it seems clear to me that no such contract, arrangement, or understanding, directly or indirectly, can be entered into with any person, firm or corporation, for mausoleum purposes, as set forth in your questions. The title to all city cemetery lots is vested originally in the city; the director of public service is given entire management, control and regulation of the same; he lays the same out in lots, and fixes prices for their sale. He alone can sell lots and give receipts, which result in deeds to the purchasers.

In short, there is not a moment of time, when the director loses control, supervision and absolute management, of all lots and lands in the city cemetery. No improvements, embellishments, or sale of lots can be made, except through the director. He retains absolute control of every foot of land in city cemeteries; and there is no parting with his interests or powers, or delegation thereof to any one else. He makes by-laws and regulations for the management of the cemetery, and all who purchase lots therein are governed thereby. The statutes above quoted, having provided for the manner of acquiring title to cemetery lots for burial purposes, are exclusive on that subject of any other means in relation thereto. The legislature, having before it the subject of city cemetery lots, and the means of acquiring title thereto and the control thereof, is presumed to have expressed itself fully on the subject; and any other arrangement sought to be carried out, different from the statutes on the subject, cannot be enforced.

If the legislature intended to provide another means of acquiring the right or title to such lots, and give mausoleum companies the authority to sell crypts or other burial privileges to the public, it should have said so in plain language.

I take it that these statutes on the subject are inclusive of the manner and means referred to therein, and are exclusive of all others.

These statutes are generally old ones; and nearly all enacted at a time before such mausoleums as you speak of were in existence, or corporations therefor were formed. They are a modern means of interment, not contemplated by these statutes, which have reference to the individual ownership of burial lots, and the old fashioned way of burial in the ground.

There was no thought of acquiring title to portions of a cemetery, by a corporation, and selling crypts, spaces or other privileges therein, at a profit, in a mausoleum erected thereon.

The whole idea, on the part of our fathers in framing such laws, was to enable families and individuals to purchase, own and control a resting place for their own dead, at prices not speculative—but under the terms of section 4166 above quoted.

The officers having charge of these cemeteries are creatures of statute, and their duties are prescribed by law. They can do nothing along the line of cemeteries or lots therein, except what is specifically authorized by law. If the statute is silent on the subject, no authority exists, as all such officers have no implied authority.

If such an arrangement were carried out as you outline in your questions, we would have the agent of the mausoleum company selling crypts or other burial privileges in the cemetery, to various persons, at prices to be fixed by the mausoleum company. This would, while such an arrangement was going on, deprive the director of public service of the exclusive privilege of selling burial places, conferred upon him by statute. Other apparent conflicts of authority would exist, and the director would be deprived of his exclusive statutory control of the city burying ground.

I can readily see that such an arrangement as you suggest might be desirable, sanitary and convenient, but it will require additional legislation before it can be authorized. At present I am of the opinion that no such arrangement as you speak of can be made, either directly or indirectly.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE A RAILROAD COMPANY IS GIVEN THE RIGHT BY CITY COUNCIL TO CONSTRUCT A SIDE TRACK ACROSS ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL STREETS AND A PETITION FOR REFERENDUM ON SAID ORDINANCE WAS CIRCULATED AND FILED IN DUE TIME, NOTICE OF THE ELECTION SHOULD BE GIVEN UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 4672, GENERAL CODE.

Where a city council passes an ordinance granting to a railroad company the right to erect a side track across one of the principal streets in the city, and a petition for referendum in said matter was circulated and filed in due time, the notice of the election on the petition filed for referendum, which petition was filed under section 4627, General Code, should be given. Section 5018 does not apply to the election held on such petition for referendum.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 11, 1913.

HON. A. T. ULLMAN, City Solicitor, Ashtabula, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 20th, you submitted for my opinion the following:

> "Our city council passed an ordinance last fall granting to a railroad company the right to lay a side track across one of our principal streets. A petition for referendum in said matter was circulated and filed in due time and on November 18, 1912, said petitions were certified by the city clerk to the deputy supervisors of elections. All in accord with section 4227-2, General Code. (102 O. L. 521.)
> "Now, shall notice of election be given, as to this referendum, for thirty days, under said section 4227-2 as it stood at the time of filing said petitions; or is notice to be given under section 5018-8 as enacted April 18, 1913, Vol. 103 O. L. 833?"

Section 4227-2, General Code, as it stood prior to amendment 103 O. L. 211 and as it stood at the time a petition for referendum in the matter in question was filed, provided in paragraph one thereof that within ten days after the filing of a petition for referendum with the clerk, the clerk should certify such ordinance to the board of elections who was required to submit such ordinance to the electors at the next general election. In paragraph two thereof it was provided as to certain ordinances, among which were ordinances creating a right, granting a franchise, conferring, extending or renewing a right to use the streets or regulate the use thereof that when a referendum petition was filed with the clerk petitioning for the submission of such ordinance the clerk shall certify the fact of the filing of such petition to the board of elections who was required to submit such ordinance at the next regular election, and then followed the provision which is material to consider in connection with your inquiry, as follows: "Provided, however, that at least thirty days notice of the election upon such ordinance, resolution or measure must be given when such election is to be held."

The entire Initiative and Referendum Act was repealed at the recent session of the legislature and a new act substituted therefor. That is to say, the act purports to amend section 4227-1 to 4227-6, General Code. There are, however, but five sections in such new act and six sections in the former act. However, the new act is an entire substitute for the former act.

In said new act, which is found in 102 O. L. 211, there is no provision made for the giving of notice of an election to be held on a referendum petition. At the end of section 4227-3 of the new act is found the following provision:

> "The provisions of this act shall apply to pending legislation providing for any public improvement."

This language, however, I do not believe to be in any way involved in the question you submit for the reason that the ordinance referred to by you was not one involving any public improvement, the ordinance being one simply granting a railroad company the right to lay a side track.

Section 5018-8, General Code, (103 O. L. 833) is found in a new act providing for publicity pamphlets relative to measures submitted through the Initiative and Referendum and is House Bill 638. I shall not give the substance of said act in this opinion further than to say that it provides for the mailing of pamphlets in reference to the Initiative and Referendum to the electors of the municipality, and further section 5018-8 provides:

> "When any constitutional amendment or other measure has been published in pamphlet form in accordance with the provisions of this act, the same shall be in lieu of any other method of advertising provided by law."

and section 5018-8, General Code, provides in part:

> "That the provisions of this act shall apply in every municipality in all matters concerning the operation of the initiative and referendum in its municipal legislation, unless otherwise provided for by the legislative authority of the municipality."

The question, of course, then arises whether by reason of the repeal of section 4227-2, General Code, (102 O. L. 521) and the enactment of House Bill 638, (103 O.

L. 831) the notice of election required by section 4227-2 (102 O. L. 521) is to be given, or whether the provisions of House Bill 638 is to be followed.

Section 26 of the General Code (formerly section 79 revised statutes) reads as follows:

> "Whenever a statute is repealed or amended, such repeal or amendment shall in no manner affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, civil or criminal, and when the repeal or amendment relates to the remedy, it shall not affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, unless so expressed, nor shall any repeal or amendment affect causes of such action, prosecution, or proceeding, existing at the time of such amendment or repeal, unless otherwise expressly provided in the amending or repealing act."

The supreme court held in the case of commissioners of Union County vs. Greene, 40 O. S. 318, that the word "proceeding" as used in section 26 related to judicial matters and not to road improvements. Since then, however, the supreme court has taken a more liberal view of such act and has construed the word "proceeding" as used therein to include steps necessary to make a valid assessment and have even gone so far as to declare that the plans of a building commission for the construction of a court house constitute a proceeding within the meaning of section 26.

> See State ex rel. vs. Cass 13 O. C. C. n. s. 449.
> Affirmed without report in State ex rel. vs. Building Commission, 84 O. S. 443.

The court states in the journal entry in such case that the judgment of "affirmance" is based upon the proposition that the work of the building of a court house was "a proceeding" within the meaning of section 26 of the General Code, as illustrated by the reasoning of the circuit court in its opinion, 32 C. C. 208, and was not affected by the provisions of section 2338 of the Code."

In view of the fact that the supreme court has given a very liberal construction of section 26 of the General Code, I am of the opinion that the filing of a petition for referendum under section 4227-2, General Code, (102 O. L. 521) and the subsequent steps so taken would constitute "a proceeding" under said section 26, and consequently that no repeal or amendment should in any manner affect such pending proceeding.

If it were to be held that a referendum petition filed under section 4227-2 (102 O. L. 521) and the subsequent steps necessary to be taken thereunder to cause the ordinance in question to be voted upon was not a proceeding the effect might be that all referendum petitions filed under said law would by reason of the amendment of said law in the 103 O. L. 211, become a nullity. This I do not believe would be tenable in view of the liberal construction given by the supreme court in reference to section 26, General Code.

The enactment of section 6 of the act found in 103 O. L. 831, even should it be held it could apply to a petition filed under section 4227-2, General Code (102 O. L 521), nevertheless such provision although found in a different act would be, as I view it, an amendment of said section 4227-2, General Code, and consequently, would affect said pending proceeding, and by reason of section 26, General Code, could not be held to apply.

> See Railroad vs. Hedges, 63 O. S. 339.

In such case the act in question was a new act but did not purport to be an amendment or repeal of any existing statute. The court, however, on page 341 says:

"It is true that section 79, revised statutes, applies only in terms to the amendment or repeal of a statute, and the act of 1890 above referred to is neither. Still, we regard the principle of that section as declaratory of the policy of our law, which forbids giving to a statute retroctive effect, though remedial in character, unless the act contains an express provision to that effect."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the notice of election on the petition filed for referendum which petition was filed under section 4227-2, General Code, as found in 102 O. L. 521, should be given, and that section 5018-8, General Code (103 O. L. 833) does not apply to the election held on such petition for referendum.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF ST. BERNARD HAS NO RIGHT TO PUBLISH ORDINANCES IN THE "ST. BERNARD OBSERVER," AS IT IS NOT A NEWSPAPER THAT COMPLIES WITH SECTION 6255, GENERAL CODE.

The "St. Bernard Observer" does not conform to the requirements of section 6255, General Code, because no part of it is printed in the municipality or within the county, and for that reason the council of the city of St. Bernard has no right to publish ordinances therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 9, 1913.

HON. C. A. HEILKER, City Solicitor of St. Bernard, Atlas Bank Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 14th, advising me that the legality of certain ordinances duly posted in five prominent places had been called in question on the ground that there has been established in your city a party newspaper called The St. Bernard Observer, and requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. Has the council the right to publish ordinances, etc., in the Observer, assuming that it is a party newspaper published and of general circulation in the city, although no part is printed in the municipality, as required by Section 6255, General Code?

"2. If council has the right to cause ordinances, etc., to be published in the Observer, is it obligatory to do so, assuming that it is a publication published and of general circulation in the municipality, but no part of it is printed therein?"

In answer to your first question, I beg to state that in order to determine this question it is necessary to refer to the various sections of the General Code regarding the publication of ordinances, resolutions, proclamations, etc., of a municipality, and those sections of the General Code which relate to legal advertising in general.

Section 4227, General Code, requires that ordinances of a general nature or providing for improvements, shall be published as hereinafter provided, before going into operation.

Sections 4228 and 4229, General Code, prescribe how such ordinances shall be published and are as follows:

> "Section 4228. Ordinances and resolutions requiring publication shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics, published and of general circulation in such municipality, if such there be; and shall be published in a newspaper printed in the German language if there is in such municipality such a paper having a bona fide paid circulation within such municipality of not less than one thousand copies. Proof of such circulation shall be made by the affidavit of the proprietor or editor of such paper, and shall be filed with the clerk of the council. (96 v 60, 124; 96 v 82, 196.)
> "Section 4229. Except as otherwise provided in this title, in all municipal corporations the statements, ordinances, resolutions, orders, proclamations, notices and reports required by this title, or the ordinances of a municipality to be published, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation therein, if there are such in the municipality, and for the following times: The statement of receipts and disbursements required shall be published once; the ordinances and resolutions once a week for two consecutive weeks; proclamations of elections once a week for two consecutive weeks; notices of contracts and of sale of bond once a week for four consecutive weeks; all other matters shall be published once. (96v, 60124; 96 v 82, 196.)"

Section 4232 prescribes that when there is no newspaper published in the municipality that it will be sufficient publication of ordinances, resolutions, proclamations, etc., to post up copies thereof at not less than five of the most public places in the corporation, to be determined by the council, for a period of not less than fifteen days prior to the taking effect thereof; and I note from your letter that that provision of the statute has been complied with.

Sections 4228 and 4229, General Code, require that all ordinances, proclamations, orders, etc., of a municipality shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation therein, if there are such within the municipality, and shall be published in a newspaper printed in German language, if there is in such municipality a paper having a bona fide circulation of not less than 1,000 copies.

The definition of the word publish is "to make known publicly, to issue as from the press, to circulate". A consideration of sections 4228 and 4229, in connection with this definition of the word "publish" might load us to believe that it was the intention of the legislature only to require the issuing of such paper within the municipality and not that the mechanical operations of printing be performed therein, and if that were the case, the St. Bernard Observer, to which you refer, would come within the scope of this statute since it is published within the limits of that municipality.

Sections 6355, General Code, which should be read in connection with Section 4228 and 4229, is as follows:

> "For sufficient publication of a notice or advertisement, required by law to be published for a definite period, at least one side of the newspaper in which such publication is made shall be printed in the county or municipal corporation in which such notice or advertisement is required to be published."

The word "print" is defined to make a mark or marks upon, as by pressure; to impress types, letters or pictures, etc., on paper, cloth, etc. The legislature in this section in the use of the word "print" as distinguished from the word "publish" in sections 4228 and 4229 evidently had in mind the mechanical operations necessary in the publishing of a newspaper.

As you well know, a great many local newspaper companies print only one side of the newspaper they issue or publish; the other side consisting of what is commonly called "boiler plate". This section, I believe, was intended to bring local newspapers of that kind within the scope of the statutes in regard to legal advertising printed in the county and shows clearly that the legislature intended that the mechanical operation of printing at least one side of all newspapers in which ordinances, etc. are to be published, should be done within the county, municipality or state where such publication is made.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that, under the facts stated in your letter, the St. Bernard Observer does not conform to the requirements of section 6255, General Code, and for that reason the council of the City of St. Bernard has no right to publish ordinances, etc. therein.

In answer to your second question, I beg to state that it is obvious that if council had no right to cause ordinances, etc., to be published in the St. Bernard Observer, it could not be obligatory upon them to do so, for it could not be compelled to do that which it has no right to do.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

AN ORDINANCE OR OTHER MEASURE NECESSARY FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT THAT HAS BEEN PETITIONED FOR BY OWNERS OF A MAJORITY OF THE FOOT FRONTAGE OF THE PROPERTY IS NOT IN ANY WAY SUBJECT TO REFERENDUM.

1. The resolution of necessity passed after council has been petitioned by a majority of the foot frontage to be assessed does not require more than a majority vote of council.

2. Section 3835, General Code, is not in any way affected by the provisions of section 4227-3, General Code. By reason of the provisions of section 4227-3, General Code, the ordinance or other measure necessary for a street improvement that had been petitioned for by owners of a majority of the foot frontage of the property to be assessed is not in any way subject to the referendum, having been by reason of such section specifically exempted from the operation thereof.

3. The reasons for such necessity in passing a resolution of necessity are not required to be set forth in such resolutions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1913.

HON. D. S. LINDSEY, City Solicitor, Piqua, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 22 you submitted for my opinion five several questions, which I will take up in the order presented.

> "First. In the passage of the resolution by the city council, declaring the necessity of a street improvement, the cost of which is to be assessed against the abutting property in the ordinary way and which improvement has been petitioned for by the owners of a majority of the foot frontage of the abutting property, should the resolution receive more than a majority vote of the council?"

Section 3814, General Code, provides:

> "When it is deemed necessary by a municipality to make a public improvement to be paid for in whole or in part by special assessments, council shall declare the necessity thereof by resolution, three-fourths of the members elected thereto concurring, except as otherwise herein provided. Such resolution shall be published as other resolutions, but shall take effect upon its first publication."

Section 3835, General Code, provides as follows:

"No public improvement, the cost or part of cost of which is to be specially assessed on the owners of property, shall be made without the concurrence of three-fourths of the members elected to council, unless the owners of a majority of the foot frontage to be assessed, petition in writing therefor, in which event the council, a majority of the members elected thereto concurring may proceed with the improvement in the manner herein provided."

In section 3814, General Code, there is an exception stated as to the requirement of three-fourths of the members of council in passing the resolution of necessity in that it excepts "as otherwise herein provided."

Section 3835, General Code, is, as I take it, such an exception in that it states that if the owners of a majority of the foot frontage petition council in writing for a public improvement to be specially assessed "a majority of the members elected thereto concurring, may proceed with the improvement in the manner herein provided."

The manner of proceeding with the improvement after a petition has been presented to council is of course for council to pass the resolution of necessity provided for in section 5814, General Code, and the provision of section 3835, General Code, that council may proceed by the concurrence of a majority of the members elected thereto would seem to me to be a provision otherwise provided for in section 3814, General Code.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the resolution of necessity passed after council has been petitioned by a majority of the foot frontage to be assessed does not require more than the majority vote of council.

"Second: Does section 4227-3, as amended by the act passed by the legislature April 17, 1913, in any way change the provisions of section 3835 of the General Code relating to such improvements? The resolution declaring the necessity of the improvement having been passed by the council, July 14, 1913, should the improvement proceed under section 3835, or should it proceed under section 4227-3 as amended?"

Section 4227-3, General Code (103 O. L. 212), is found in House Bill 499, which bill was declared by section 3 of said act to be an emergency measure, and, therefore, under section 1d of Article II of the constitution went into effect immediately upon the approval of the Governor, to-wit: April 28, 1913, and I assume from your letter that the entire proceeding concerning which you inquire was started subsequent to the going into effect of said act.

Section 4227-3, General Code (103 O. L. 212), provides in part as follows:

"Ordinances or other measures providing * * * for street improvements petitioned for by the owners of a majority of the feet front of the property benefited and to be especially assessed for the cost thereof as provided by statute * * * shall go into immediate effect."

The provision that such ordinances or other measures shall go into immediate effect is used by the legislature, as I view it, in contradistinction from such ordinances as are subject to referendum and does not mean that they must go immediately into effect but into effect as provided by statute had the Initiative and Referendum Act not been passed.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that section 3835, General Code, is not in any way affected by the provisions of section 4227-3, General Code (103 O. L. 212), and furthermore, that by reason of the provisions of section 4227-3, General Code, the ordinances or other measures necessary for a street improvement that had been petitioned for by the owners of a majority of the feet front of the property to be assessed are not in any way subject to the referendum, they having been by reason of such section specifically exempted from the operation thereof.

> "Third: Should the reasons for such necessity be set forth in the resolution ?"

I assume from your question that you refer to whether or not it is necessary to set out the reasons for the passage of the resolution of necessity.

There is no provision in section 3815, General Code, which states that the resolution shall determine, nor in any other section that I have been able to find requiring that the reasons of necessity shall be set forth.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the reasons for such necessity in passing a resolution of necessity are not required to be set forth in such resolution.

> "Fourth: If it is necessary to set forth the reasons for the necessity, will it be sufficient to set that out in the ordinance directing to proceed with the improvement?"

From the answer given to your third question it is not necessary to give any answer to your fourth inquiry.

> "Fifth: If it is necessary to have a two-thirds vote of council will it be sufficient if the ordinance directing the improvement have a two-thirds vote, the resolution having been passed by a majority vote of council?"

By reason of the answer given to your first question it is not necessary to answer the fifth inquiry.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A PARTY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MAY NOT PAY THE REASONABLE VALUE OF THE SERVICE OF A CHALLENGER AT AN ELECTION.

A party executive committee may not pay the reasonable value of the services of a challenger and witness in each precinct in addition to the one paid worker allowed to prepare lists of voters. No provision was mad in section 26 of the Corrupt Practices Act for an expenditure of money for this purpose. Anything in this section not provided for or implied therein is a corrupt practice.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 3, 1913.

HON. H. STANLEY MCCALL, City Solicitor, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of October 27th you ask:

> "May a party executive committee pay the reasonable value of the services of a challenger and witness in each precinct, in addition to the one paid worker allowed to prepare lists of voters?"

Section 5176-26, General Code, provides:

> "Any person is guilty of a corrupt practice if he, directly or indirectly, by himself or through any other person, in connection with, or in respect of any election, pays, lends or contributes, or offers or promises to pay, lend or contribute any money or other valuable consideration, for any other purpose than the following matters and services, at their reasonable, bona fide and customary value: * * * the preparation of lists of voters and payment of necessary personal expenses by a candidate. * * * No party organization or candidate shall compensate or hire in any one election precinct more than one person to prepare lists of voters."

It has been the ruling of this department in former opinions that the enumerated list of things contained in section 26 of the so-called Corrupt Practices Act is exclusive, and that any payment, contribution or expenditure, or agreement or offer to pay, contribute or expend any money or thing of value, for anything not in said section provided for, or fairly implied therein, would be a corrupt practice.

My understanding of the provision for a party organization or candidate compensating or hiring in any one election precinct one person to prepare lists of voters is, that an organization or candidate may compensate or hire in one election precinct one person to prepare a poll of the voters in that precinct. This does not mean payment for a party worker, for in some way working at that poll on election day. The legislature knew the difference between polling a precinct prior to election day and the ordinary work of a worker at the polls on election day. They saw fit to make provision for the one, and conspicuously neglected to make any provision for the payment of the other. The amendment of the last legislature, striking out the provision for party representatives, was another step to do away with the so-called "paid party workers" at the polls.

Section 4922, to which you refer, is found in chapter five, which provides for "Registration of Electors."

Section 5058, General Code, provides for the appointment of party challengers.

Section 5059, General Code, provides that challengers appointed under authority of section 5058, shall serve without compensation from the county, city, village or township.

These provisions were parts of our election laws prior to the enactment of the so-called Corrupt Practices Act; and the legislature, with such provisions in mind, did not see fit to include any compensation for them in the list of permitted things and services. Not being found in section 26 of the Corrupt Practices Act, either expressly or by fair inference, it is my opinion that they cannot be paid for their services.

I am enclosing you copy of an opinion just rendered to the secretary of state, on another question, which may be of interest to you.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THERE IS NO PROVISION FOR FILLING A VACANCY IN THE CHARTER COMMISSION.

Where a vacancy occurs by resignation in the commission that has been elected to frame a city charter there is no officer who has authority to fill such a vacancy in the charter commission, and such vacancy must remain unfilled.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 6, 1913.

HON. GEORGE C. STEINMAN, City Solicitor, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 1, 1913, you inquire:

> "Will you kindly give me your opinion on the question of filling a vacancy caused by resignation of a member of the charter commission elected to frame a charter?"

The charter commission is provided for by constitutional provision in section 8 of article XVIII of the constitution of Ohio, known as the home rule amendment. This section provides for the election of the members of the commission, but makes no provision for filling vacancies.

Section 4252, General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio laws 65, provides:

> "In case of death, resignation, removal or disability of any officer or director in any department of any municipal corporation, unless otherwise provided by law, the mayor thereof shall fill the vacancy by appointment, and such appointment shall continue for the unexpired term and until a successor is duly appointed, or duly elected and qualified, or until such disability is removed."

This section will not apply to the charter commissioner, as the charter commission is not a department of the municipal corporation.

You call attention to the manner in which council fills a vacancy in the office of councilman. This is provided for by section 4236, General Code, which reads:

> "When the office of councilman becomes vacant, the vacancy shall be filled by election by council for the unexpired term. If council fail within thirty days to fill such vacancy, the mayor shall fill it by appointment."

The statutes do not provide a manner for filling a vacancy in the charter commission and I do not decide that the legislature has that power.

I am of opinion, therefore, that no officer has authority to fill a vacancy in the charter commission, and that such vacancy must remain unfilled.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE MAY PROCEED UNDER AUTHORITY OF COUNCIL TO INVITE BIDS FOR THE PURPOSE OF INSTALLING WATER METERS IN CONNECTION WITH THE WATER WORKS.

The council of a city may pass an ordinance and the director of public service may lawfully proceed under authority already granted him to invite bids for the purpose of the installation of water meters in connection with the water works. These contracts will be valid obligations of the municipality against the water works fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 5, 1913.

HON. D. F. MILLS, City Solicitor, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 24th, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "An expenditure within the department of public service, for the installation of water meters in connection with the waterworks of a city is contemplated by an ordinance, already passed, directing the director of public service to enter into the necessary contract. The intention is to use surplus moneys in the fund derived from the operation of the waterworks plant. These moneys have not been appropriated by council to this or any other purpose.
> "Is it necessary that the auditor of the city certify that the money required for the contract is in the treasury, as required by section 3806; and should this certificate have been issued prior to the passage of the ordinance?"

Although you do not request my opinion upon the question, I beg leave to point out that section 3960, General Code, provides that money collected for waterworks purposes, though it must be kept as a separate and distinct fund, shall be subject to the order of the director of public service only "when appropriated by council."

As a consequence of this provision, it would not be competent for the fund of which you speak to be drawn upon until after the next semi-annual appropriation ordinance. This seems to be your opinion, but I mention it in what may be an excess of caution.

This conclusion, however, is aside from the main question submitted by you; that question being as to the necessity of the issuance of an auditor's certificate when a given contract is to be met out of revenues of the waterworks. I am of the opinion that the case cited by you, viz: Kerr vs. Bellefontaine, 59 O. S. 466, is in point, as well as other cases of similar import, like Comstock vs. Nelsonville, 61 O. S. 288.

The doctrine of these decisions, and others like them, is that despite the general language of section 3806, which was originally section 45 of the municipal code, and had its prototype in old section 2702, revised statutes, because these sections have always been found among the sections relating to the exercise by a municipality of the delegated power of taxation, and the expenditure of the proceeds of taxation, thei operation should be by interpretation limited to cases in which the expenditure involved is that of moneys raised by taxation.

On the authority of these decisions, with which I assume you are familiar, I advise, therefore, that the director of public service may lawfully proceed, under the authority of council, already granted to him, to invite bids for the purpose stated, and to enter into contracts for the doing of the work contemplated. These contracts will be valid obligations of the municipality against the waterworks fund, which is, by the express provisions of section 3959, General Code, properly applicable to such purposes. When the time comes to make payments under these contracts, such funds may lawfully be drawn upon for that purpose, when regularly appropriated by council.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CHILDREN BETWEEN THE AGES OF FOURTEEN AND SIXTEEN YEARS MUST ATTEND SOME RECOGNIZED SCHOOL FOR THE FULL TERM THE SCHOOL IS IN SESSION.

Under section 7773 of the General Code, it is the duty of every parent, guardian or other person in charge of children between fourteen and sixteen years of age to cause such children to attend some recognized school. If such parent, guardian or other person in charge of such children fail to do this they neglect to perform a duty imposed upon them by law relating to compulsory education, and consequently violate this section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 9, 1913.

HON. DAVID H. JAMES, City Solicitor, Martins Ferry, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 16, 1913, in which you submit the following inquiries:

> "1. May the parent, guardian or other person in charge of a child between fourteen and sixteen years of age, who has passed a satisfactory test in the studies enumerated in section 7762, General Code, be prosecuted for failure to cause such child to attend a public, private or parochial school, if such person is able to do so?
> "2. If so, what provision of the statutes provides the penalty for such cases?"

Section 7762, General Code, prescribes the branches which children must be taught.

Section 7763, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Every parent, guardian or other person having charge of any child between the ages of eight and fifteen years of age, if a male, and sixteen years of age, if a female, must send such child to a public, private or parochial school, for the full time that the school attended is in session, which shall in no case be for less than twenty-eight weeks. Such attendance must begin within the first week of the school term, unless the child is excused therefrom by the superintendent of the public schools, in city or other districts having such superintendent, or by the clerk of the board of education in village, special or township districts, not having a superintendent, or by the principal of the private or parochial school, upon satisfactory showing that the bodily or mental condition of the child does not permit of its attendance at school, or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such superintendent or clerk, as the case may be, to teach the branches named in the next preceding section."

It will be noted that the statute just quoted is an amendment, appearing in 103 Ohio Laws 864; the difference between it and the law which it superseded being the raising of the school age of children, and making a distinction between boys and girls in this regard.

Section 7764, General Code, provides in part that:

"All children between the ages of fifteen and sixteen years, not engaged in regular employment, shall attend school for the full term the schools of the district in which they reside are in session."

Section 7765, General Code, provides for the granting of age and school certificates for boys under sixteen years of age and girls under eighteen years of age; while section 7766 authorizes the granting of such certificates to a boy over fifteen years of age, or a girl over eighteen years of age, when these children have passed a certain graded test in the studies enumerated in section 7762.

While it is not material in answering your question, nevertheless, I wish to call your attention to the fact that the word "eighteen," in reference to girls, has been construed by this department to mean "sixteen."

Section 7768, in part, reads thus:

"Every child between the ages of eight and fifteen years, if a male, or between the ages of eight and sixteen years, if a female, and every male child between the ages of fifteen and sixteen years, not engaged in some regular employment, who is an habitual truant from school, or who absents himself from school * * * shall be deemed a delinquent child, and shall be subject to the provisions of law relating to delinquent children."

The first clause of section 1771 requires the truant officer to institute proceedings against any parent violating the provisions of this chapter; while section 7773 contains a provision that:

"When any child between the ages of eight and fifteen years, or between the ages of fifteen and sixteen years, in violation of the provisions of this chapter is not regularly employed and is not attending school, the truant officer shall notify the parent, guardian or other person in charge of such child, of the fact, and require such parent, guardian or other person in charge, to cause the child to attend some recognized school within two days from the date of the notice; and it shall be the duty of the parent, guardian or other person in charge of the child so to cause its attendance at some recognized school. Upon failure to do so the truant officer shall make complaint against the parent, guardian or other person in charge of the child. * * * "

The foregoing sections make clear the fact that it is the duty of parents, guardians and others having charge of children between the ages of eight and fifteen years of age, if boys, and between the ages of eight and sixteen years of age, if girls, to send such children to school. All such children, not engaged in regular employment are required to attend school for the full term, when such schools are in session. To this there are certain exceptions, which are set out in section 7763, hereinbefore quoted, and also those appearing in the statutes authorizing employment under an age and schooling certificate. It must be observed, however, that this schooling certificate may only be granted when the boy is over fifteen years of age and the girl is over sixteen years of age. If the children have not reached these prescribed ages there is absolutely no excuse for their non-attendance, excepting in those cases where they are bodily or mentally unfit, or where they are taught at home. It is patent from this that no boy under fifteen and no girl under sixteen can be regularly employed under any circumstances. The whole purpose, aim and scope of the compulsory education and child labor laws indicate this.

The legislature failed, however, to provide any new penalty for violation of these provisions, it, evidently, having been under the impression that the old penal sections, which were not amended, would cover the situation.

Section 12977, General Code, in part, reads thus:

> "Whoever, being the parent or guardian or other person in charge of a minor between eight and fourteen years of age, or a minor between fourteen and sixteen years of age who has not passed a satisfactory fifty grade test in the studies enumerated in section 7762, or is not regularly employed, upon notice from a truant officer as provided by law, fails to cause such minor to attend a public, private or parochial school, unless such person proves his inability so to do, shall be fined not less than five dollars nor nore than twenty dollars, or the court may in its discretion require the person so convicted to give bond in the sum of one hundred dollars, with sureties to the approval of the court, conditioned that he or she will cause the child * * * to attend some recognized school within two days thereafter. * * * "

It will be observed, from the italicized language in the foregoing quotation, that the person in charge of the minor may be prosecuted if such minor is not regularly employed, and he does not cause such minor to attend school. As children, under the specified age, cannot be regularly employed, it must follow as a logical sequence that parents violate the statute last cited if, after notice from the truant officer, they fail to require the minor to attend school, the only defense being inability to force the child into school, in which latter event the child may be prosecuted as a delinquent. In those cases in which this section does not cover the situation, section 12983, General Code, would govern. This statute provides that:

> "Whoever violates any provision of law relating to the compulsory education or employment of minors for which a specific penalty is not provided by law, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars."

This would apply to the case of a boy between fifteen and sixteen years of age who did not have an age of schooling certificate, and who was employed in violation of statute, for which no penalty was prescribed. Furthermore, in case the parent, guardian or other person having charge of such boy should allow him to work without a schooling certificate, he could be prosecuted under section 13007-9, which provides graduated penalties for permitting a child to be employed in violation of the provisions of the child labor law.

In case it could be shown that the parent or person in charge of the child caused, encouraged or induced the child to remain away from school, he could be prosecuted for contributing to the delinquency of such minor, under the provisions of section 1654. This must be read in connection with section 7768, hereinbefore quoted.

Section 12981 provides that:

> "Whoever, being an officer or teacher, or other person, neglects to perform a duty imposed upon him by laws relating to compulsory education or employment of minors, for which a specific penalty is not provided by law, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offense."

It would seem that there should be no doubt that section 7773 makes it the absolute duty of the parent, guardian or other person in charge of children, such as those to whom you refer, to cause them to attend some recognized school. If such parents fail to do this they neglect to perform a duty imposed upon them by the laws relating to compulsory education, and, consequently, they violate this section.

In considering the application of the old statutes, remaining unrepealed, to the recent amendments herein discussed, it must be remembered that they are in pari materia, and consequently such amendments are presumed to have been passed in contemplation of the continuance of the sections which were allowed to stand; and, therefore, the latter are broad enough to cover new conditions brought within their terms by said amendments.

Trusting that this fully answers your question, I am,

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE A CHIEF OF POLICE IS SUSPENDED AND HIS PLACE IS TEMPORARILY FILLED, THE PERSON ACTING AS CHIEF OF POLICE MAY RECEIVE THE SALARY OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE—IF THE PERSON ACTING AS CHIEF OF POLICE RECEIVES THE SALARY OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE, THE CITY WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO THE CHIEF OF POLICE FOR HIS SALARY DURING PERIOD OF SUSPENSION AFTER HE IS REINSTATED—WHEN A POLICE OFFICIAL IS GRANTED A LEAVE OF ABSENCE HIS OFFICE MAY BE TEMPORARILY FILLED BY ANOTHER PERSON, AND HIS SALARY PAID TO THE PERSON FILLING THE OFFICE DURING SUCH LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

1. Where a chief of police is suspended by the mayor in a manner provided by law, pending a hearing of the charges before the civil service commission, and the chief of police is suspended by the commission after hearing, the chief of police so suspended may not recover from the city his salary during the period of suspension where this salary was paid to a de facto officer.

2. Where a chief of police is suspended and the de facto officer receives the salary of the chief of police, the city will not be liable to the de jure officer for the salary paid to the de facto officer.

3. Where a lieutenant of police is granted a leave of absence, the mayor may make a temporary appointment during said absence, and the person so appointed may receive the salary of the officer taking the leave of absence.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1913.

HON. JOHN T. BLAKE, City Solicitor, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of May 21, 1913, is received in which you inquire:

> "First. A chief of police is suspended by the mayor in the manner provided by law, pending the hearing of the charges before the civil service commission. If the chief is re-instated by the commission after hearing, is the chief so suspended entitled to his salary during the period of suspension?
>
> "Second. During the period of suspension of a chief of police, such suspension being duly made, pending the hearing of the charges before the civil service commission, has the mayor authority to appoint a person to act as chief during such period of suspension pending said hearing, and is the person so appointed entitled to the salary of a chief of police?
> "Third. A lieutenant of police is granted a leave of absence. During said absence has the mayor or other authority power to make a temporary appointment to fill said vacancy to continue during said absence, and is such person, if appointed, entitled to the salary of lieutenant of police?"

Under date of October 22, 1913, you submit a further letter giving dates of suspension and reinstatement of the chief of police. It appears that he was suspended by the mayor on November 23, 1912, and charges filed. On January 17, 1913, supplemental charges were filed making former charges definite and certain. The hearing before the civil service commission began on January 21, 1913, and ended on January 23. On January 29, 1913, the decision of the commission was rendered and the suspended chief re-instated in these words:

"Wherefore, we the members of the civil service commission of Canton, Ohio, find chief H. W. S_____ not guilty of any of the aforesaid specifications, and that said chief H. W. S_____ be reinstated to said office at once."

The order of the commission was that he should be re-instated "at once" and not as of the date of his original suspension.

You also stated that during the suspension a chief of police was appointed by the mayor and acted as such, and that the salary of the office was paid to the acting chief.

Your question asks for a general rule in case of suspension. A general rule cannot be given as each case must depend upon its peculiar circumstances.

The acting chief in your case would be considered as a de facto officer.

At page 1389 of 29th Cyc. a de facto officer is defined:

"One of the rules of the English common law was to the effect that the acts of one who, although not the holder of a legal office, was actually in possession of it under some color of title or under such conditions as indicated the acquiescence of the public in his action, could not be impeached in any suit to which such person was not a party. Such a person was called an officer de facto. This principle has been incorporated into the common law of the United States."

On page 1391 it is further said:

"One of the fundamental prerequisites to the existence of a de facto officer is the possession of the office and the performance of the duties attached to it."

And on page 1392:

"But the mere fact of the possession of the office is not sufficient to make the incumbent a de facto officer. Either he must have color of title or his possession must be acquiesced in by the public. The mere possessor of an office without these other conditions is an intruder whose acts have legally no effect. Color of title to the office may be defined as apparent right to the office. Such apparent right is usually to be found in a certificate of election or a commission of appointment, which certificate or commission is void because some other person is entitled thereto, * * * or because the incumbent has been irregularly appointed, * * *"

The acting chief in this case served under color of appointment by the mayor. The mayor has authority to appoint a chief of police. The appointment was irregular because another was entitled to the office.

The acting chief, therefore, not only had possession of the office and performed the duties thereof, but he had possession under color of title.

The general rule of payment of compensation to a de jure officer where the compensation has been paid to a de facto officer is stated in 29th Cyc. at page 1430:

"The payment of the official salary to a de facto officer is, however, a defense to a claim against the public corporation or disbursing officer making such payment in an action brought against it or him by the de jure officer. But payment of the salary to a person who is merely an intruder, or to a de facto officer who has been judicially determined not to be the de jure officer, will not be a defense in an action brought by the de jure officer for his salary."

This rule is discussed more fully by Dillon on municipal corporations at section 429, where he says:

> "It is generally but not universally held that the person who is de jure entitled to the office, and not the incumbent de facto who actually renders the service, is entitled in law to the emoluments of the office. * * *
> "But for reasons of public policy, and recognizing payment to a de facto officer while he is holding the office and discharging its duties as a defense to an action brought by the de jure officer to recover the same salary, it is held in many jurisdictions, that an officer or employe who has been wrongfully removed, or otherwise wrongfully excluded from office cannot recover against the city for salary during the period when his office was filled and his salary paid to another appointee."—(Citing Steubenville vs. Culp, 38 Ohio St. 18).

In Steubenville vs. Culp, 38 Ohio St. 18, it is held:

> "A police officer suspended from office by the mayor of a city, under the authority granted by sections 121 and 211 of the municipal code (66 Ohio L. 170, 184), is not entitled to wages during the period of such suspension, notwithstanding the council afterward declared the cause of suspension insufficient."

The statute under consideration in the above case is different from the present statute. This will be noted in answer to your second question.

In case of State vs. Eshelby, 1 Cir. Dec. 592, it is held:

> "An officer, to be entitled to the salary of an office, must have qualified thereto in the manner provided by law.
> "Where a municipal corporation has paid the salary of an office to a de facto officer, it will not be required to pay the salary a second time to a de jure officer, who has been excluded therefrom, pending litigation as to the title to the office."

This case is directly in point and follows the general rule. In your case I assume the salary was paid to the de facto chief of police before the decision of the civil service commission reinstating the former chief.

It has been contended that the so-called "Carter" case arising in the city of Columbus is decisive of your first question.

There have been two cases in reference to Carter's status. The first case was in reference to his title to the office. The other was in reference to his right to compensation during the period of his suspension. The first case was taken to the supreme court, and the second terminated in the court of common pleas.

The case which determined Carter's right to the office is reported as Karb, Mayor, vs. The State, ex rel. Carter, 87 Ohio St. 197. The right of compensation was not involved in this case.

After this decision was rendered an action was brought in the court of common pleas on behalf of Carter to require the auditor to draw a warrant in favor of Carter for compensation during the period of his suspension. No compensation had been paid to O'Neil, the de facto, or acting chief of police. This distinguishes that case from your case. The case was entitled State ex rel., Carter vs. Cain, Auditor, and is No. 64415 in the court of common pleas of Franklin county, Ohio. The opinion was rendered by Judge Evans on December 21, 1912, and he held that Carter was entitled to the salary during the period of his suspension.

In the Carter case the civil service commission ordered that Carter should be reinstated as of the date of his suspension. This further distinguishes your case from the Carter case.

Judge Evans says in his conclusion:

> "But not having drawn salary, I am of the opinion that inasmuch as there was no vacancy in said office, that the mayor had no authority by law to appoint another to fill a vacancy; that the question of title to the office as between Carter and O'Neil has been finally adjudicated; that O'Neil cannot now draw salary as against Carter, and that Carter is entitled to salary, so far as the pleadings show, from the date of said suspension."

You have been heretofore furnished a copy of Judge Evans' decision in the above case.

Therefore, following the general rule, where a municipality has paid a de facto officer the salary of such office, it is not liable to the de jure officer for such salary and the de jure officer cannot recover the same from the city for the period it was paid to the de facto officer. If such payment is made to the de facto officer after it has been determined in a proper proceeding that the de jure officer is entitled to the office, the municipality would be liable therefor to the de jure officer.

In your case the salary was paid to a de facto officer and the de jure officer cannot recover from the city.

In answer to your second inquiry the opinion of Judge Evans in State ex rel. Carter, vs. Cain, Auditor, supra, is in point and he answers the question as to the right of the mayor to appoint another during the suspension of an officer, pending a hearing before the civil service commission.

He says:

> "The distinction, as claimed by defendants, that the issues upon which the finding was made which held title to said office in Carter and not in O'Neil, was one predicated upon the removal from office of Carter by the mayor, and appointing O'Neil as chief of police, and the suspension of Carter from said office, and appointing O'Neil as acting chief during suspension, would, in my opinion, not avoid, for the reason that the provisions of law heretofore in force, giving the mayor power to appoint another to office for the time covering the period of suspension of an officer, were repealed, and the statutes now make no such provision, except in case of riot or emergency, or to prevent the stoppage of public business, or to meet extraordinary exigencies, as provided in sections 4373 and 4488, Code.
> "The act, 66 O. L. 184, expressly provided that the mayor may suspend any policeman for causes there designated, 'until the next regular meeting of council, and to appoint other persons to fill the temporary vacancy caused thereby.' That provision was repealed, and has not been re-enacted.
>
> "The court expressly say in Shotwell vs. Culp, 38 Ohio St., 18, that 'the statute speaks of the suspension creating a vacancy, and provides how that vacancy shall be filled. If the office is vacant it becomes, as to the suspended person, for the time being, as though it did not exist, and, as to the public, the person appointed to fill such vacancy is the sole incumbent of the office.'
> "It was upon the above provisions of the statute, then in force, that the court held that the suspended officer could not receive salary as pay for the time he was suspended, because the mayor then had authority of law to appoint another person to fill the vacancy, and there being such authority the person so filling the vacancy was for such time lawfully entitled to the office and also the salary.

"For some reason, probably arising from the radical changes made by law in providing for civil service in office, and reposing in the civil service board as final arbiters the removal from office of such as were in the civil service class the above provisions of statute giving such powers to the mayor were repealed, and where it is determined that an official was wrongfully suspended or removed by the mayor such official can be re-instated by such board. The statute does not create a vacancy, as formerly, when an official is suspended, nor can the mayor appoint another to fill such temporary vacancy, because there is no vacancy now recognized by statute."

Your question arises under the civil service law as it existed prior to the adoption of 103 Ohio Laws 698, et seq. The former sections will be quoted.

Section 4484, General Code, provides:

"Nothing herein shall prevent the dismissal or discharge of any appointee by the removing board or officer, except that the chiefs and members of the police and fire departments and of the sanitary police shall be dismissed only as provided by law and the appeal therefrom shall be made to the civil service commission under such rules as the commission may adopt."

Section 4485, General Code, provides in part:

"No officer or employe within the classified service shall be removed, reduced in rank, or discharged, except for some cause relating to his moral character or his suitableness to perform the duties of his position, though he may be suspended from duty for a period not to exceed thirty days, pending the investigation of charges against him."

It will be observed that by section 4485, General Code, the officer is "suspended from duty."

Section 4488, General Code, provides:

"To prevent the stoppage of public business or to meet extraordinary exigencies, as provided in this title, the mayor may make temporary appointments."

A de facto officer is not entitled to the salary of the office, but if he is paid the salary, the city is not liable to pay the same salary to the de jure officer.

In Ermston vs. Cincinnati, 9 Ohio Dec. 567, it is held:

"A de facto officer (although his acts are valid as to third persons) who has been ousted from office, cannot recover salary for fees for the time he performed the duties of the office."

Your third inquiry involves a different state of facts. An officer is granted leave of absence and I assume without pay. You inquire if the appointing authority can make a temporary appointment, and if such appointee can draw the salary of the position.

In such case there is no contest between a de jure officer and a de facto officer as to the right to the office or to the compensation thereof. There is no question of an illegal, unauthorized or wrongful suspension or removal from office.

Occasions may arise when it is necessary to grant a leave of absence to an officer, and during such absence it may be necessary to have some one to perform the duties of such office.

In such case the mayor would have power under section 4488, General Code, supra., in order to prevent the stoppage of public business to make a temporary ap pointment and the person so appointed would be entitled to the salary of the office. The municipality would not be liable to pay salary to two persons for the same office.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

WHERE IN A CITY OF LESS THAN 50,000 POPULATION THREE MEMBERS HAVE BEEN ELECTED ON THE SCHOOL BOARD WHERE ONLY TWO SHOULD HAVE BEEN ELECTED, THE PROPER WAY TO PROCEED IS TO DECLARE THE TWO RECEIVING THE HIGHEST NUMBER OF VOTES ELECTED.

Where in a city of less than 50,000 population three members are elected on the school board when only two should have been elected, the better way to clear up the situation is to declare that the two members receiving the highest number of votes at the November election are elected. If this is not satisfactory to all concerned the dissatisfied party can proceed in court in the proper manner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1913.

HON. GEO. C. VON BESELER, City Solicitor, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 5, 1913, you submit a statement of facts which may be summarized thus:

> "The board of education of the city of Painesville, which contains a population of less than 50,000, reduced its membership from six to five members. At the time of the reduction the terms of three members expire on January 1, 1914, and the terms of the remaining three on January 1, 1916. To effectuate this reduction the board of education, in an effort to comply with the law, certified to the deputy state supervisors of elections three members for election at the November election, 1913. This now creates the unfortunate situation of having six members, which is contrary to law, unless there is some method of obviating this difficulty."

Your query is as follows:

> "How shall one member be eliminated from the three holding over, in order that the number of members of the board may comply with section 4698, and their election from time to time with section 4702?"

The last few words of your query, with reference to compliance with section 4702 in future elections, involves a discussion of several sections of the act relating to boards of education, appearing in 103 Ohio Laws 275.

Section 4698 is clear upon the point that there shall not be more than five members of a board of education in a city of the size of Painesville.

Section 4699 provides for the determination of the number of members by the board of education, by resolution providing for the classification of the terms of members, so that they will conform to section 4702, "taking into consideration the terms of office of the existing members whose terms do not expire or terminate on the day preceding the first Monday in January, 1914."

Section 4701 governs the situation arising in your case, it providing for the election of additional members when the number fixed by the board of education is more than the number whose terms will not expire on the first Monday in January, 1914.

Your board originally consisted of six members, three of whom now are hold-over members; and when the number was reduced to five, it still left such number greater than the number of members whose terms will not expire on the day preceding the first Monday in January, 1914. The statute expressly states, under these conditions, that:

> "The additional members of such board shall be elected at the general school election in the year 1913, for such terms of two or four years as may be necessary to comply with the two provisions of sections 4698 and 4702."

Section 4702 provides for the term of office of members of the board, and unequivocally requires that all members in office at the time the act takes effect shall serve the unexpired portions of the terms for which they were respectfully elected, unless their terms shall have been terminated by section 4698 and section 4701. As these terms can only be concluded under the latter section cited, in the event that the total number fixed is less than the number of hold-over members, the provisions of sections 4701 do not, in this respect, govern.

The main difficulty in construing this law arises out of the second paragraph of section 4702, which is to the effect that if the number be even one-half shall be elected in the year preceding, and the remaining half in the year following the calendar year, divisible by four, which is the year 1916; and if the number be odd, one-half of the remainder after diminishing the number by one shall be elected in the year preceding, and the remaining number shall be elected in the year following the calendar year divisible by four.

It is absolutely impossible to reconcile this section with the others referred to when the number of members had been reduced from six to five. This is true because if the additional members are elected for a term of four years, then, the three hold-over members should have their successors elected in 1915, which would not be in compliance with section 4702, because if the number be odd one-half of the remainder after diminishing the number by one should be elected in the year preceding the calendar year divisible by four, which would require the election of two members instead of three in 1915. If on the other hand an attempt is made to work the matter out through consideration of this section together with section 4701, by electing one member for four years and one member for two years in 1913, this would cause the terms of four members to expire the day preceding the first Monday in January 1916. Following this out, if, at the November election, 1915, two members were elected for two years and two for four years, there being one hold-over member, three members could be elected for four years in 1917, and two for four years in 1919, which would then have the number to be elected conform to all of the provisions of the act. In arriving at this result, however, section 4702 would be violated, in that such section only permits elections for terms of four years, excepting at the election held in November, 1913. It would also be violative of section 4702, in providing for the manner in which division of members to be elected should be made, until the year 1917 shall have been reached.

Feeling that it it is not proper to hold the statute void for vagueness and uncertainty, it would seem that either of these two plans might properly be adopted: (a) Elect two members for four years at the November election in 1913, and three members for four years in 1915; or (b) elect one for four years and one for two years at the November election in 1913, and two for two years and two for four years in 1915 one holding over; and, finally, to elect three for four years in 1917, when the proposition would render the entire act workable.

As your board provided for the election of three members for terms of four years, as stated in your telegram to me under date of November 19, 1913, it would seem that you followed, to a certain extent the first plan suggested here, but disregarded it in other respects, by calling for the election of a greater number of members than proper.

It is my opinion that the theory of electing the additional members, viz.: two for four years, when the situation is that stated in your letter, is the proper one to follow, for the reason that it more nearly expresses the obvious policy and intent of the general assembly as gathered from the whole act, even though it results in disregard of another provision of the law. The fact that three members are to be elected when two should be elected prior to the year divisible by four is not material. What difference does this make, in view of the fact that the number to be elected is biennially divided as nearly equally as possible? There is no public policy or legislative intent that will be subserved by giving great significance to the division of number before a certain year. Two are to be elected at one election and three at another, and it is not important at which date either number is chosen. Much that might here be said is so clearly expressed in State vs. Mulhern, 74 O. S. 364, that I shall conclude this branch of the opinion with reference to that case.

Coming, now, to your chief inquiry, as to the manner of elimination of the surplus member, I am of the opinion that it would not be proper to cause any of the hold-over members to retire. Wherever this phase of the situation is discussed in the statutes it is unequivocally manifest that it was the legislative intention that the hold-over members should remain in office wherever it was possible so to permit. In one section their terms are to be taken into consideration; in another it is only members additional to the hold-over members who shall be elected; and in a third all members are to serve the unexpired portion of the terms for which they were elected. The only exception to this is in a case which arises when the total number of members is less than those who hold over, when lots are to be cast to decide who shall retire. This exception does not here obtain and cannot be read in to the situation you set out.

With these facts in mind we are driven to the position of accepting one of two alternatives:

(1) To declare the action of the board of education, that of the deputy state supervisors of elections, that of the nomination papers, and that of the electors in voting for the three persons absolutely void, and thus permitting all of the old members to hold over until their successors are properly elected and qualified; or

(2) To declare that the two members receiving the highest number of votes at the November election are elected.

It would be a regrettable thing to accept the first alternative, and consequently I am of the opinion that the latter should be taken advantage of. It is fully warranted by section 5121 of the General Code, which, in part, reads as follows:

> "In the canvass of the vote for members of the board of education * * * the person having the highest number of votes shall be declared elected, and the next highest, and so on until the number required to be elected shall have been selected from the number having the highest number of votes."

This section has no reference to what has taken place before the election, and clearly imposes upon the canvassers of elections the duty to declare elected the number required by law to be so elected; and in doing this they must take the highest number of votes. Therefore, it should be clear that the two receiving the highest number of votes should be given the office. If it be objected that the electors voted for three persons, and their tickets should therefore not be counted, my answer is that this cannot be determined by the canvassers. They are only to count the votes. If there have been errors or irregularities in the conduct of the election that should be determined in a contest proceeding. When certificate of election has been issued to the two persons receiving the highest number of votes, if anybody is not satisfied therewith he can proceed in court in the proper manner.

You do not state whether your city is a registration city. If it is, I desire to call your attention to section 5115, General Code, which provides that the returns of elections of members of the board of education shall be turned over to the deputy state supervisors of elections and canvassed by them and the city auditor. Of course, if it is not a registration city section 5111 obtains and the return should be made to the clerk of the board of education. I make this suggestion in the light of the concluding paragraph of your letter, in which you state that the board of education will meet in a few days to canvass the returns.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS OF A MUNICIPALITY SHOULD NOT PERFORM THE DUTIES OF A LINEMAN ON THE ELECTRIC LIGHT AND WATER WORKS PLANT AND RECEIVE COMPENSATION FOR THE SAME.

A person employed as a lineman on the electric light and water works plant, and while holding this position is elected a member of the board of trustees of public affairs, and inasmuch as the board of public affairs employs, fixes the wages of and pays the linemen, the same party should not occupy both positions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 24, 1913.

HON. GEO. W. ROSE, Solicitor, Glouster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 19, in which you inquire:

> "A fellow has been employed as a lineman on the electric light and water works plant, and at the last election was elected as a member of the board of trustees of public affairs.
> "The question is, can this fellow serve on the board, and also be employed in the capacity of such lineman, the board of trustees of public affairs having charge of this department, and draw salary from both positions? Or could he serve in both positions and relinquish the salary from one, say the salary as a member of this board?"

While it is true, as you state, that officials may hold many different positions, so long as they do not conflict, yet you state that the board of trustees of public affairs has charge of the department in which the party mentioned is employed as a lineman, and of course it follows from this that inasmuch as the board of public affairs employs, fixes the wages of, and pays the linemen, the same party should not occupy both positions—that of employer and employe, but he should let go of the one or the other and not permit himself to be placed in the position of hiring himself and fixing his own wages.

The statutes being very general as to the duties of trustees of public affairs and silent as to linemen, are not quoted.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE COUNCIL OF CIRCLEVILLE IS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO DONATE THE USE OF A COTTAGE TO THE BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF PICKAWAY COUNTY.

The council of a municipality is without authority to donate the use of a cottage to the benevolent society of Pickaway county, a society formed for and chartered as a free institution for the treatment of tuberculosis and other contagious diseases, also to visit the sick and needy poor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 4, 1913.

HON. C. A. LEIST, City Solicitor, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 27 as follows:

> "There is an organization here known as the Benevolent Society of Pickaway county. It is formed for and chartered as a free institution for the treatment of tuberculosis and other contagious and infectious diseases, also to visit the sick and needy poor. They employ a district nurse, who gives all her time in visiting the sick and poor and looks after the health and comfort of persons needing care. The city is the owner of a small cottage which it leases and which is used for no other purpose. This society desires the use of this cottage free for headquarters for the society and for the district nurse, and if it can be done council would like to donate the use of the cottage to the society. We have no city infirmary."

Section 6, article 8, of the constitution provides:

> "The general assembly shall never authorize any county, city, town or township, by a vote of its citizens, or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation, or association whatever; or to raise money for, or loan its credit to, or in aid of, any such company, corporation or association."

Corporations not for profit were in existence at the time of the adoption of the constitution in 1851, and are included in this section. The constitution makes no distinction between the types of corporations or associations, but provides against the evil of permitting a public corporation such as a county or city from raising money for, or loaning its credit to, or in aid of any corporation or association, and thus devoting public money to enterprises over which the county or city does not exercise management or control.

The supreme court in the case of Walker vs. Cincinnati, 21 O. S., 14, at page 53 said as to such section:

> "Its language is specifically comprehensive to embrace every enterprise involving the expenditure of money, and the creation of pecuniary liabilities."

The court also say on page 45:

> "The mischief which this section interdicts is a business partnership between a municipality or subdivision of the state, and individual or private corporations or associations. It forbids the union of public and private capital or credit in any enterprise whatever."

It was said by the common pleas court in the case of Crossland vs. Zanesville, unreported, affirmed in 56 O. S., 735, that:

> "It is for the public interest that the municipality retains control and management of the sick and disabled poor. One of the chief purposes of the local government is to preserve the health and safety of the inhabitants. If the municipality may escape its obligations and duties to the sick and disabled by farming out the same to the charitable associations or corporations, the public interests may suffer in that respect. 'The statutes will be construed the most beneficial way which their language will permit to oppose all prejudice to public interests.' (Sutherland on Statutory Construction, section 324.)"

Elliott in his work on "Municipal Corporations" in speaking of alms-houses and hospitals, page 61, says:

> "The power of taxation cannot be employed to support such institutions when they are under the control of private persons who are not accountable to the government."

It appears in this matter that aside from the constitutional question involved, for the council to devote the use of a cottage for headquarters for this society would be against public policy inasmuch as it would be a diversion of public money to a private purpose, and however charitable that purpose may be, such action on the part of council would be contrary to the general principles of ou government that the subdivisions of the state should spend directly the public money of each subdivision for the purpose authorized by law.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the council of your municipality is without authority to donate the use of a cottage to the benevolent society of Pickaway county.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

THE CITY COUNCIL HAS NO RIGHT TO MAKE A REDUCTION IN ASSESSMENTS FOR STREET IMPROVEMENTS ALONG A PART OF A PIECE OF PROPERTY THAT IS NOT IMPROVED.

Where in the improvement of a street a piece of property is worthless, or not improved, and the improvement of the street is made to extend along this property, the city council has no right to make any reduction in the assessment on the part of said street property that is not improved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1913.

C H. STOLL, City Solicitor, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of November 25th as to the power of the council to reduce the assessment for improving Main street charged against Gus Paine, who owns a triangular tract fronting 45 feet and 2 inches on Main street, 34 feet and 2 inches of which is covered by a building, and the corner 11 feet on Main street which you state is of no value to him (Paine) as he cannot extend his building much further than it is now.

You state that in your opinion "they (the council) have the right to reduce such assessment when they feel he is paying an exorbitant assessment and part of lot assessed is of no value to the owner, although the assessment does not exceed one-third of its value."

It must be kept in mind, while not so specifically stated by you, that this improvement has been made on the foot front plan. To do this it was necessary that the council should first pass a resolution of necessity to improve (section 3814, G. C.) The council shall determine the nature of the improvement; the grade of the street; elevation of same and of curbs, and shall approve plans, specifications, estimates and profiles, and the number of assessments to be made (section 3815, G. C.) All assessments shall be limited to special benefits conferred (section 3819.) The municipality shall pay not less than one-fiftieth and all intersections (section 3820.) It may issue bonds to pay its share of the improvement (section 3821) and in anticipation thereof (section 3815).

Assuming, which is only fair, that the municipality has taken the proper steps and in the orderly and proper manner, we must conclude:

1. Two classes of bonds have been issued,
   (a) To pay the share of the village,
   (b) In anticipation of collection of assessments.

As both classes are based on estimates before the council and it must be conceded that this three cornered piece is not an intersection, and that the payment for the improvement in front of it was not considered as a part to be paid by the municipality; then it follows that it was cared for in the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments, or, was not provided for at all.

However, another view remains, Mr. Paine's property is an entirety, regardless of its shape, and it must in this proceeding be treated as such. He bought it as an entirety; when he had notice of the intention to make this improvement he was so holding it and entered no objection to the manner of making the improvement or the character of the assessment, but remains quiet, permits the improvement to be constructed, not merely in front of that part of his lot covered by his house, the 34 feet 2 inches, but also in front of the addition, now claimed to be worthless, 11 feet.

The actual question propounded in this case, it appears to me is answered by Spear, J., in Schroder vs. Overman, Clerk, etc., et al., 61 O. S., p. 14, wherein he says:

> "Does the record show that the assessment was in excess of twenty-five per cent. of the fair market value of the lands to the depth of 150 feet after the improvement was made? The plaintiff owned a parcel of land fronting over 700 feet on the street. It was in one tract; land in bulk, in other words. A considerable part (some 250 feet of frontage) was below the grade of the street and had a ravine through it and was used for pasturage purposes. If that part should be assessed separately from the remainder of the tract on which the dwelling house is situated, the value would be less than four times the assessment for the improvement. But the value of the whole tract to a depth of 150 feet after the improvement was made, was much more than four times the amount of the assessment.
> "The contention is that the council, and upon its neglect to do so, the court, should have divided the parcel thus standing in bulk, and that the court should grant relief by enjoining the assessment as to that portion which is in value less than four times the amount of the assessment. There is plausibility in the claim that the rule adopted reaches an unfair and inequitable result, and perhaps it is sufficiently important to call for legislative action on the subject. But we are of opinion that the authorities giving construction to the statutes are against the claim as a legal proposition. Section 2269, Revised Statutes; Cincinnati vs. Oliver, 31 Ohio St., 371; Griswold vs. Pelton, 34 Ohio St., 482."

To my mind, the principles above stated and the very obvious result of adopting any rule, other than as there pointed out, conclusively determine that the council has no power to grant any relief to Mr. Paine. If Mr. Paine's wish were granted, every man who owned property abutting on an improvement, but a portion of whose lot was not covered by buildings, would be making the claim that the unoccupied portion of his lot was valueless, that he should not be assessed on such frontage, and the collection of assessments would be hindered, delayed, and surrounded with all sorts of questions and unsurmountable difficulties.

Besides, if Mr. Paine is relieved of the assessment against the eleven feet, against whom will it be charged? It was not considered when the amount to be paid by the municipality was fixed, is not an intersection, and as I understand your statement and diagram, is a portion of a general improvement and probably somewhere near the center thereof. Consequently, it is a central portion of a general improvement and cannot be taken out and divided among the other abuttors on the improvement.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A CORPORATION MAY NOT DETACH ITS PROPERTY FROM A CITY UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 4577, G. C., AS THE PROVISIONS OF THIS SECTION APPLY ONLY TO FREEHOLD ELECTORS

The city council of Warren, Ohio, has no right to pass an ordinance permitting a corporation owning a steel mill to detach its territory from the city. A petition for the detachment of property must be filed by a freehold elector under the provisions of section 3577 G. C. There is no power in the city council under this section to allow the property of a corporation to be detached in this manner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 4, 1913.

HON. GEO. BUNTING, City Solicitor, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of November 29, in which you inquire:

> "The city council of this city have passed an ordinance to its second reading which I feel is not right. A corporation owning a steel mill which is now within the city limits have filed a petition with the county commissioners to detach the territory from the city. The ordinance is to give the authority of the city and their consent.
>
> "I have held that this petition must be filed by a freehold elector and I have contended that a corporation is not within the provision of section No. 3577, G. C."

Section 3577 referred to by you, reads, in so far as applicable:

> "If a petition of a majority of the freehold electors owning lands in any portion of the territory of a municipality, accurately described in such petition with an accurate map or plat thereof, praying to have such portion of territory detached therefrom the commissioners of the county in which such portion of territory is situated, with the assent of the council of the municipality given in an ordinance passed for that purpose, shall detach such portion of the territory therefrom and attach it to any township contiguous thereto, or, if the petition so requests, they shall erect the territory into a new township, the boundaries of which need not include twenty-two square miles of territory * * *."

Section 3578, G. C., reads:

"The owner or owners of unplatted farm lands annexed to any municipality after the incorporation thereof may file a petition in the court of common pleas of the county in which the lands are situated, in which such owner or owners shall be named as plaintiffs, and the municipality shall be the defendant, setting forth the reasons why the land should be detached, and the relief prayed for. On the petition a summons shall issue as in other actions, and the case proceed as in other causes. Provided, however, that no such action shall be brought, or detachment ordered or decreed within five years from the time that such lands were annexed by any such municipality under the provisions of this or the preceding chapter."

That a corporation does not come within the meaning of "freehold elector," as used in section 3577, requires neither discussion nor citation of authorities, and it is equally clear that the lands mentioned by you do not come within the description of "unplatted farm lands" as used in section 3578.

I am of the opinion that as the proceeding you mention is evidently intended to be covered by section 3577, that there is no power in the council and commissioners to detach the property in the manner attempted.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE THE ONE PER CENT. LIMITATION OF SECTION 3940 G. C., AND OTHER LIMITATIONS OF BONDED INDEBTEDNESS ARE NOT EXCEEDED, IT IS NOT NECESSARY FOR THE COUNCIL TO PUT THE QUESTION OF A BOND ISSUE FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT UP TO A VOTE OF THE ELECTORS.

Where a village desires to improve two streets and its bonded indebtedness is not up to the limit, it is not necessary to put the question of improvement and the issue of bonds to pay for the improvement of these streets up to a vote of the electors, that is, provided the 1% limitation of section 3940, G. C., and the other limitations upon the bonded indebtedness are not exceeded.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1913.

HON. C. H. STOLL, City Solicitor, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 27, 1913, you submitted four inquiries to this department. Recently you withdrew the first, second and fourth inquiries, leaving only your third for answer.

Your third inquiry is as follows:

"We have parts of two streets that are almost impassable in wet weather. If our bonded indebtedness is not up to the limit, is it necessary to put the improvements and the issue of bonds to pay for the improvements of those streets up to a vote?"

You state that the bonded indebtedness of the village has not reached the limit prescribed by law. This will exclude any consideration of limitations.

Section 3821, General Code, provides:

"A municipality may issue and sell bonds as other bonds are sold to pay the corporation's part of any such improvement, and may levy taxes in addition to all other taxes authorized by law to pay such bonds and the interest thereon."

This section permits the municipality to "issue and sell bonds as other bonds are sold" to pay the corporation's part of the improvement.

Section 3939, General Code, provides in part:

"When it deems it necessary, the council of a municipal corporation, by an affirmative vote of not less than two-thirds of the members elected or appointed thereto, by ordinance, may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such period of time, and at such rate of interest, not exceeding six per cent. per annum, as said council may determine and in the manner provided by law, for any of the following specific purposes:

"22. For resurfacing, repairing or improving any existing street or streets as well as other public highways. "

This is a general statute covering the issue of bonds by municipal corporations.

Section 3940, General Code, provides:

"Such bonds may be issued for any or all of such purposes, but the total indebtedness created in any one fiscal year, by the council of a municipal corporation, under the authority conferred in the preceding section, shall not exceed one per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation, as listed and assessed for taxation."

Section 3914, General Code, provides:

"Municipal corporations may issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments. Such bonds may be in sufficient amount to pay the estimated cost and expense of the improvement for which the assessments are levied. In the issuance and sale of such bonds the municipality shall be governed by all restrictions and limitations with respect to the issuance and sale of other bonds, and the assessments as paid shall be applied to the liquidation of such bonds."

Section 3949, General Code, provides in part:

"* * * * * In ascertaining the limitations of one per cent., four per cent. and eight per cent. herein prescribed, the following bonds shall not be considered.

"c. Bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments, either in original or refunded form."

By virtue of the foregoing sections council may issue bonds for the improvement of a street without submitting the question of issuing such bonds to a vote of the people, provided the one per cent. limitation of section 3940, General Code, and the other limitations upon the bonded indebtedness are not exceeded.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLICATION OF ORDINANCES—PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL MAY NOT BE STOCKHOLDER IN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHING ORDINANCES OF SUCH CITY.

Wher a heavy stockholder in a printing company is elected president of the council of the city of Painesville the publication of said ordinanc by such printing company would disqualify the person holding stock in such company from acting as president of the city council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1913.

HON. GEO. C. VON BESELER, City Solicitor, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 18, you write as follows:

"We beg to ask your opinion based upon the following statement of facts:

"Mr. M. L. Harter is a very heavy stockholder in The Educational Supply Company. The Educational Supply Company publishes the 'Lake County Herald.' The 'Lake County Herald' is the only Democratic newspaper of general circulation in the city of Painesville. Mr. Harter has been elected president of the council for the term beginning January 1, 1914."

"Section 3808 of the General Code of Ohio is as follows:

" 'No member of the council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation.'

"At first thought one would immediately say that Mr. Harter would be disqualified from holding said office.

"There is this additional view, however. Section 4229, of the General Code, is as follows:

" 'Except as otherwise provided in this title, in all municipal corporations the statements, ordinances, resolutions, orders, proclamations, notices and reports required by this title, or the ordinances of a municipality to be published, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation therein.'

"Section 6251 of the General Code fixes definitely and absolutely the rate for all insertions.

"In view of these regulations, although of course Mr. Harter has an interest in such an expenditure of money, yet he can have no control over what shall be inserted or the rate to be charged therefor.

"Query—With the understanding that no printing other than the publication of ordinances required by law and for which the rate is fixed shall be done by The Educational Supply Company, will the publication of ordinances as required by law by the company in which Mr. Harter is a stockholder disqualify him from acting as president of the council?"

You suggest that in view of the fact that the officer in question is empowered to exercise no control whatsoever over the expenditure involved in such publications there might be grounds for modification of the prohibition of section 3808, General Code prohibiting an officer of a corporation from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation, other than his fixed compensation. This statute, however, presents an absolute and unquestionable prohibition against having any interest whatever in the expenditure of such moneys, and I am able to see nothing whatsoever in its terms which would justify the view that the question of control or lack of control over the amount of such expenditure would in any way vary the effect of having an interest in such expenditure.

With regard to your reference to the provisions of section 6251, General Code, which fix definitely and absolutely the rate for all insertions, and your suggestions in this connection that the policy of the statute might possibly not be expected to extend to amounts so fixed and determined, I beg to quote the following from the opinion of Judge Price, in the case of McCormick vs. City, 81 O. S., 253:

"The following is part of section 1536-619 (4229 G. C.) which prescribes the duty: 'All ordinances and resolutions requiring publication shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics, published and of general circulation in such municipality, if such there be * * *.' It is claimed, therefore, that publication in that manner is mandatory, and for that reason no express contract is necessary. To this claim is added another, that section 4366, revised statutes (6251, G. C.) fixes the rates per square for each publication which left mere clerical duty for the clerk to perform in calculating the cost of publication. But it must be observed that this statute fixes maximum rate, and no minimum rate. Hence it is practicable to contract for a much lower rate than the maximum and thereby make large savings for the city or village."

Following this decision, therefore it is not true that section 6251, General Code, fixes definitely and absolutely the rate for all insertions, but merely prescribes the maximum which may be expended for such purposes. Expenditures for such publications, therefore, are no different than expenditures made upon any other contract in behalf of the municipality.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that publication of ordinances by the company in question would disqualify the official from acting as president of the council.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT—CHANGING FROM VOLUNTEER TO PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT—CHIEF OF VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT WILL BECOME CHIEF OF THE PAID FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Where a city changes from a volunteer fire department to a paid fire department the chief of the volunteer department will become chief of the new fire department under the provisions of the recent civil service law and he will be protected by the provisions of this law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 23, 1913.

HON. R. E. MYGATT, City Solicitor, Conneaut, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of November 10, 1913, is received, in which you inquire:—

"The city of Conneaut is about to change from a volunteer fire department to a paid department.

"The volunteer department exists under authority of sections 62 and 63 of the codified ordinances of the city of Conneaut.

"Section 62 provided "the fire department shall consist of one chief, one first assistant chief, and one second assistant chief, one fire warden etc.'

"Section 63 of the codified ordinances provides for four different companies, and specifies the number of members in each company, together with the salary to be paid to the chief, other officers and volunteer members of the fire department.

"The city council has recently passed an ordinance to reorganize the fire department, and change the same from a volunteer to a paid department.

"This ordinance will go into effect soon, and I submit for your opinion the following question:

"Does the chief of the fire department who is now acting as such chief in the volunteer department, continue in office after the organizing of the paid department, or does the mayor have a right to appoint another person chief of the paid department?"

It appears that the volunteer fire department has been organized by ordinance of council. The chief of the volunteer department receives a salary, the amount of which is not given.

The office of chief of the fire department is a regularly created position of the city. The fact that the incumbent may not give all his time to the service of the city is not decisive as to his right of protection under the civil service law.

The first question to be determined is whether the chief of the volunteer fire department, organized by ordinance of council, was protected by the municipal civil service law, recently repealed.

Section 4377, General Code, provides:

"The fire department of each city shall be composed of a chief of the fire department and such marshals, assistant marshals, firemen, telephone and telegraph operators as are provided by resolution or ordinance of council. The director of public safety shall have the exclusive management and control of such other officers, surgeons, secretaries, clerks, and employes as are provided by ordinance or resolution of council."

This section creates the position of chief of the fire department where such department is maintained by the city. No distinction is made as between a volunteer and a paid fire department.

Section 4484, General Code prior to its repeal in 103 Ohio Laws 713, provided:

> "Nothing herein shall prevent the dismissal or discharge of any appointee by the removing board or officer except that the chiefs and members of the police and fire departments and of the sanitary police shall be dismissed only as provided by law and the appeal therefrom shall be made to the civil service commission under such rules as the commission may adopt."

By virtue of this section the chief of the fire department was protected in his position by the civil service law. No distinction is made as between the chief of a paid department and the chief of a volunteer department. The terms of the statute are broad enough to include both classes of chiefs.

It is my conclusion therefore, that where a volunteer fire department is organized by ordinance or resolution of council, and a salary fixed for the chief of such department that such chief is protected by the civil service law.

The fire department has been changed from a volunteer department to a paid department. The position of chief of the fire department is retained in the new ordinance. In fact the statute prescribes the position of chief.

The duties of the chief under the paid department will no doubt be greater than under the volunteer department. The general character of the duties, however will remain the same.

The reorganization of a department by ordinance of council and the repeal of the former organization ordinance does not deprive the incumbents of their positions, where the same positions are provided for in each ordinance. The instant one ordinance becomes effective the other ceases to be operative. There is no interim.

In the present case there is a chief of the fire department provided for in the old ordinance and also in the new ordinance. This is independent of the statute, which provides for a chief.

The chief of the volunteer department is protected by the civil service law and this protection will follow him into the paid department.

I am of opinion, therefore, that the chief of the volunteer department will become the chief of the new paid department under the provisions of the recent municipal civil service law, and the provisions of the new civil service law protect him in that right.

Section 31 of the state civil service law, 103 Ohio Laws 713, provides in part:

> "All officers and employes in the classified service of the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof holding their positions under existing civil service laws, shall when this act takes effect be deemed appointees under the provisions of this act."

The mayor, therefore, has not the right to appoint another person chief of the paid fire department.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION—CITY COUNCIL—QUALIFICATIONS OF MEMBERS OF A CITY COUNCIL.

1. Where a person a former resident of a city who has resided out of that city for a period of more than one year, and returns to this city within one year before election and is elected to the city council, such person is not eligible to hold the office of councilman for the reason that the law requires that he be a resident of his city for a period of one year before his election as councilman.

2. Where at the time of his election to the city council a person who is a member of the board of health of his city and did not resign as a member of said board until after his election, the fact of his not resigning his office as member of board of health does not prevent him from being eligible to office of councilman of his city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 27, 1913.

HON. ELMER E. BODEN, City Solicitor, Barberton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 3 you requested my opinion upon the following propositions:

> "First: At the recent municipal election, November 4, Joseph McCarty was elected councilman from the first ward for the city of Barberton. It now appears that, although Mr. McCarty was formerly a resident here and at one time a member of the council, he had been living in Ashtabula county for more than a year prior to about April or May of this year, and that he just returned to Barberton about that time. I am also advised that he voted in Ashtabula county at the election one year ago.
> "The question now arises as to whether or not he is eligible to the office of councilman.
>
> "Second: At the same election Albert Ling was elected councilman from the third ward for said city. At the time of his election Mr. Ling was a member of the board of health of said city, and did not resign as a member of such board until after the election, namely, on November 12.
>
> "The question also arises as to Mr. Ling's eligibility to the office of councilman."

The qualifications of a city councilman are set forth in section 4207, General Code, as follows:

> "Councilmen at large shall have resided in their respective cities, and councilmen from wards shall have resided in their respective wards for at least one year next preceding their election. Each member of council shall be an elector of the city, shall not hold any other public office or employment except that of notary public or member of the state militia, and shall not be interested in any contract with the city. A member who ceases to possess any of the qualifications herein required, or removes from his ward, if elected from a ward, or from the city, if elected from the city at large, shall forthwith forfeit his office."

I have had occasion, in several instances, to construe the requirement as to residence of a city councilman as the same is intended by this statute, and have always taken the view that the residence required is actual and not constructive or merely legal residence. In other words, it means residence of a different character than that required by the election laws. The purpose of this requirement as to residence is to secure the election to council of persons who are actual residents of, and familiar with the territory they are elected to represent.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that Mr. McCarty, not having resided in the ward for which he was elected, for a period of one year prior to his election, is not eligible to the office of councilman.

It will be observed, that one of the other qualifications of a councilman is that he "shall not hold any other public office or employment, except that of notary public or member of the state militia."

Most of the reported cases, in which this provision has been construed, involved the validity of the election or appointment to another public office or employment, of a person who was already serving as councilman. The leading reported cases involving the validity of the election to the office of councilman, of a person who, at the time of such election, held one public office, are Commissioners vs. Cambridge, 7 O. C. C., 72, and State ex rel. vs. Gard, 8 O. C. C., N. S., 599. In the former, the court held:

> "A member of a board of work-house directors of a municipal corporation is an officer, and holds an office, within the meaning of the constitution, and is ineligible to the office of councilman in such corporation, under section 1681, revised statutes, while holding such office of work-house director; and his election and induction into the office of councilman while holding the office of, and acting as, such work-house director, is illegal and void."

On page 82 of the opinion, it is said:

> "In State ex rel. vs. Kearns, supra, it was held that the appointment of a member of council to another office, does not work an abandonment of his office as councilman, but that the appointment to such other office is absolutely void; and we think the converse of this is equally correct—that the election to the office as councilman of one who, at the time of his election and induction into such office, holds another office in the corporation, is absolutely void, when there is no abandonment of such other office."

You will observe that the language of the syllabus is qualified by the phrase "when there is no abandonment of such other office." The court, in effect, held that where the incumbent of the other office relinquished the same before assuming his duty as a member of the city council, he did not forfeit the latter office.

In the Gard case, the court held:

> "The inhibition against the holding of another public office or employment, found in section 120 of the municipal code (revised statutes, section 1536-613), relating to the qualifications of councilmen, is not limited to other office or employment by the municipality, but extends to all public office or employment."

The following language of the opinion is significant:

> "We are of the opinion that at no time between his election and the hearing of this case did Fred Shearer have the qualifications of a member of council provided and required by section 120 of the municipal code. He held the public office of school examiner and the public employment of superintendent of one of the Hamilton public schools before the election and continuously during the entire time of his pretended incumbency as member of council * * * *."

The facts of these cases were different from the facts presented in your case, in that at the time the councilmen involved in them had entered upon the duties of their office, and when the action that was the principal subject of contention was had, the respective councilmen were holding another office in violation of the prohibition of the statute against the same. They had already forfeited the office of councilman. In your case, the man elected to council has resigned from the board of health, prior to his entering upon the former office.

In neither of these cases did the court hold that if the councilmen in question had ceased to hold the other incompatible offices at the time of their entering upon their duties as councilmen, and when the action complained of was taken, they would forfeit their office as councilmen. Because the facts in your case are different from the facts of the two cases above cited, I do not regard these cases as being in point.

It will be further observed that the prohibition of section 4207, goes to the holding by a member of a city council of any other public office or employment. That section does not say that a candidate for the office of councilman cannot hold any other public office or employment, nor that the election of a person to the office of councilman would be invalidated by reason of his holding another public office or employment at the time of such election.

In the case of School District vs. Dilman, 22 O. S., 194, the court recognized the principle that ineligibility existing at the time of election or appointment to an office, is not a bar to the assumption of the office, providing the ineligibility is removed prior to the taking of the office. That was a case involving the right of a teacher, who had no certificate to teach, as required by the statute then in force, to recover compensation under a contract of employment, the teacher having received such certificate prior to assuming his duties.

The court in the opinion say:

> "The law (S. & S. 707, section 7) forbids the employment of a teacher who has not a certificate. The teacher is not 'employed' within the meaning and intent of this provision, until he engages in the discharge of his duties as teacher."

So in this case, a person elected to the office of councilman, cannot be regarded as holding the office until he has qualified and acts in that capacity.

The general rule on this subject is laid down in a note to the case of State of Washington ex rel. vs. Howell, 41 L. R. A., N. S., page 1119, as follows:

> "The earlier cases upon this question are collected in a note to Bradfield vs. Avery, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1228.
> "As shown by that note, a part of which is quoted in the dissenting opinion in State ex rel. Reynolds vs. Howell, the greater number of cases take the view that eligibility to an office relates to the time of entering upon the office rather than the time of election or appointment.
>
> "The later cases tend to strengthen this view of the question rather than otherwise."

Decisions of courts of numerous states are cited and the great majority of them sustain the principle stated in the note.

See also note to Bradfield vs. Avery, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 228.

Inasmuch, therefore, as Mr. Long has resigned from the board of health, I am of the opinion that he is legally eligible to the office of councilman to the city of Barberton.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—POWER TO ISSUE BONDS TO LAY ADDITIONAL WATER MAIN FOR USE WHEN OLD MAIN IS OUT OF COMMISSION, AS A PROTECTION AGAINST FIRE.

Under the power granted by section 3619 to extend and enlarge the waterworks of a village, a village which receives its water from another village may issue bonds to lay an additional main to be used when the old main happens to be out of commission, as a means of fire protection, and providing such action is done within the tax limit and in compliance with the provision of law in relation to the issuing of bonds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 19, 1912.

HON. GORDON C. KINDER, Village Solicitor, Bridgeport, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of November 25 in which you state:

> "Bridgeport owns a line of water mains but does not own a pumping station, and the reservoir that it has has never been used by it. It gets its water supply from the city of Martins Ferry, which adjoins it, the inhabitants of Bridgeport that take water paying the same rate that the Martins Ferry citizens pay to the city of Martins Ferry, under a twenty year contract between the municipalities, executed in 1901. When the village of Bridgeport laid its water mains it issued bonds called 'Water Works Bonds.'
>
> "My understanding of the definition of 'water works' is that water works is a system for the collection, preservation and distribution of water, and if this is a correct definition, has the village the power, under the statutes, to bond itself to put down an additional main, to be used when the old main happens to be out of commission and as a means of fire protection?"

Section 3619, General Code, reads:

> "To provide for a supply of water, by the construction of wells, pumps, cisterns, aqueducts, water pipes, reservoirs and water works, for the protection thereof, and to prevent unnecessary waste of water, and the pollution thereof. To apply moneys received as charges for water to the maintenance, construction, enlargement and extension of the works, and to the extinguishment of any indebtedness created therefor.

Under this section the village has power to provide a supply of water by any of the means mentioned, and as your inquiry really ends with the query as to whether the council may make provision for a water supply, in advance of a failure of present means, I am constrained to the opinion that it has such power, either as an original proposition, as when it made the contract mentioned, or as a precautionary and protective measure, for use as a means of fire protection, and as an enlargement or extension of its present works.

Of course it has to be done within the tax limit of the village and in compliance with the provisions of law in relation to the issuance of bonds.

I can see, therefore, no reason why bonds may not be issued and the additional main put down, but would suggest that it be done for the purpose of "enlarging and extending the water-works of the village."

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM—BOND ORDINANCE INVOLVES EXPENDITURE OF MONEY AND IS SUSPENDED.

Inasmuch as the ordinance providing for the issuing of bonds in the sum of $100,000.00 for cemetery improvements, specifies a liability ultimately to be paid by the tax payer, such ordinance involves the expenditure of money within the meaning of the initiative and referendum and under section 4227-3 may not be declared an emergency measure, but must remain suspended for sixty days.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 2, 1913.

HON. E. P. WILMOT, Solicitor, Chagrin Falls, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 4th you advised me as follows:

> "On November 7, 1912, the council of Chagrin Falls village passed an ordinance declaring it to be necessary to purchase and provide land to enlarge and improve the cemetery, and levied a tax in the sum of $10,000 on all the property in the village for that purpose, and in the ordinance declared it to be an emergency measure."

You then submit for my opinion the question whether the ordinance in question is subject to a referendum vote of the electors upon a proper petition filed by the electors with the clerk of the village as provided by section 4227-2 and 4227-3 General Code.

In an opinion heretofore rendered to the Hon. Don J. Young, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio, under date of September 16, 1911, wherein the question was asked as to whether an ordinance providing for an issuance of bonds in the sum of $10,000.00 for the purchase of a fire engine, which ordinance authorized the expenditure of the money for that purpose, was within the Initiative and Referendum Act, I gave it as my opinion that the same was within such act for the reason that it involved the expenditure of money. In your case, however, it appears that the ordinance in question simply declares it necessary to purchase and provide land to enlarge and improve the cemetery, and to levy a tax on the property within the village for that purpose, and further provides for bonds in anticipation of receipts of such tax levy, nevertheless, it has been held by various common pleas courts throughout the state that a bond ordinance was an ordinance involving the expenditure of money, and consequently, was such an ordinance under the Initiative and Referendum Act as would not become effective in less than sixty days. While it is true that the ordinance in question itself does not expend the money, yet it seems to be the policy of the legislature that the electors shall be permitted to decide for themselves if they so desire what expenditures shall be made in a municipality and since the ordinance in question would create by the issuance of bonds for the purpose specified a liability ultimately to be paid by the tax payers of the municipality since the fund raised by such bond ordinance can be used for no other purpose than the purpose specified by the ordinance, I am of the opinion that the same would be considered as an ordinance involving the expenditure of money, consequently, since section 4227-3 specifically declares that such an ordinance cannot be declared an emergency measure, I am of the opinion that the ordinance in question is subject to a referendum vote of the electors on a proper petition filed with the clerk of the village.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BONDS SOLD TO SINKING FUND TRUSTEES PRIOR TO JANUARY 1, 1913, ARE EXEMPT FROM TAXATION AS PER CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Section 3913, General Code, speaks of the sale of bonds other than to the trustees of the sinking fund, and thereby discloses that the issuing of bonds to the sinking fund trustees, under section 3932, General Code, constitutes a sale thereof.

Therefore, when such bonds are issued to the sinking fund trustees prior to January 1st, 1913, they must be considered "at present outstanding," within the meaning of proposal 32 of the constitutional amendment, providing that bonds at present outstanding of the city, village, etc., shall be exempt from taxation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 13, 1912.

HON. JAMES I. BOULGER, Solicitor, Village of Frankfort, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 4, 1912, in which you inquire:

> "What will be the status of bonds as to taxation if they are sold to the sinking fund trustees prior to January 1, 1913? If the municipality sells them, they will have to be advertised for thirty days, which will not be the case if the sinking fund trustees would sell them, but whether or not that rule obtains, the important matter to be decided is whether bonds taken over by the sinking fund trustees before the first of the year are 'issued' so as to prevent the constitutional amendment applying to them, or does issuance mean the delivery of the bonds to those members of the general public who desire to purchase them? In other words, are the bonds issued before the village officials, viz., the sinking fund trustees dispose of them?"

Proposal 41, submitted and adopted at the election held September 3, 1912, reads:

> "The several amendments passed and submitted by this convention when adopted shall take effect on the first day of January, 1913, except as otherwise specially provided by the schedule attached to any of said amendments."

Proposal 32 provides for taxing all property,

> "excepting all bonds at present outstanding of the state of Ohio or of any city, village, hamlet, county or township in this state, or which have been issued in behalf of the public schools of Ohio and the means of instruction connected therewith, which bonds so at present outstanding shall be exempt from taxation."

In as much as the proposition takes effect upon January 1, 1913, the words "at present outstanding," as twice used must be held to mean January 1, 1913, and therefore bonds sold prior to that date come within the exception and exemption.

Section 3922 General Code provides as follows:

> "When a municipal corporation issues its bonds, it shall first offer them at par and accrued interest to the trustees of the sinking fund, in their official capacity, or in case there are no such trustees, to the officer or officers of such corporation having charge of its debts, in their official capacity."

It will be seen that the bonds must first be offered to the sinking fund trustees at par and accrued interest, and as provided in section 3923 it is only after failure of the persons named in section 3922 to take the bonds that they may be publicly offered for sale.

In answer to your query as to whether the bonds are issued before the sinking fund trustees dispose of them, I would call attention to section 3924, General Code, where it reads "sales of bonds other than to the trustees of the sinking fund of the city or to the board of commissioners of the sinking fund of the city school district as herein authorized by any municipal corporation, shall be to the highest and best bidder, etc."

Inasmuch as this section treats the taking of the bonds by the sinking fund trustees as a sale, I hold the bonds are issued when taken by and delivered to the trustees of the sinking fund, and therefore, if taken by the sinking fund trustees prior to January 1, 1913, are exempt from taxation.

In a recent opinion it was held by this department that when bonds are offered to and taken up by the sinking fund trustees, the trustees may not hold the proceeds to be paid out by them as needed by the city, but must pay the purchase price of the same to the treasurer on delivery of the bonds.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VILLAGES—POWER TO FUND INDEBTEDNESS—NECESSITY FOR CERTIFICATION OF CLERK THAT FUNDS ARE IN TREASURY AND NOT APPROPRIATED TO OTHER PURPOSES—POWER OF VILLAGE TO ISSUE NOTES.

Under Sections 3916 and 3917, General Code, municipal corporations are authorized to fund or refund existing valid and binding obligations. This power cannot extend to notes issued under sections 3913 and 3915, General Code, for the reason that such notes must be paid in accordance with these sections, out of the general revenue fund of any fiscal year and out of special assessments respectively; notes issued, however, for valid and existing indebtedness may be refunded by issuing bonds therefor under sections 3916-17, General Code.

By virtue of section 3806, General Code, a village clerk may not lawfully certify that money to meet a given expenditure is in the treasury, not appropriated for any other purpose, when council has not specified a fund by appropriation for the purposes contemplated. If council has failed to appropriate for salaries or fixed charges, but has appropriated for general expenses, the clerk may certify for the purpose of paying salaries that the funds in his possession are not appropriated to any other purpose, unless it is clear that it is the intention of council that salaries are not to be paid from such funds.

When council has failed to make an appropriation for salaries they may be compelled to do so by mandamus.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 21, 1912.

HON. O. H. STEWART, Solicitor, Village of Middleport, Ohio, Pomeroy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 7th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. May a village council issue "deficiency" bonds for the purpose of taking up notes issued by the village?

"2. May the village clerk lawfully certify that the money to meet a given expenditure is in the treasury, not appropriated for any other purpose, when the fixed salaries are sufficient to exhaust the appropriation and the fund as well?"

Answering your first question I beg to state that the only "deficiency" bonds which may be issued by council are those which are issued under section 3931, General Code, subject to a vote of the people. I take it that you do not have such bonds in mind, but that you refer to the funding or re-funding bonds issued under section 3916 General Code, which provides as follows:

"For the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation the corporation is unable to pay at maturity, or when it appears to the council for the best interests of the corporation, the council thereof may issue bonds of the corporation or borrow money so as to change but not to increase the indebtedness, in such amounts for such length of time and at such rate of interest as the council deems proper, not to exceed six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

Section 3917 of the General Code is to be read in connection with the foregoing section, which provides in part as follows:

"No indebtedness of such municipal corporation shall be funded, refunded, or extended, unless it shall first be determined to be an existing valid and binding obligation of the corporation by a formal resolution of the council thereof. * * "

Your letter does not clearly describe the nature of the notes which are outstanding in the case you submit. I have no hesitancy in advising, however, on the authority of Newton vs. Toledo, 18 Circuit Court 756, which you cite, and upon the plain language of section 3917, that bonds may not be issued under section 3916 for the purpose of taking up notes that were themselves not issued under specific authority of law. This is because if the notes themselves were not so issued they do not constitute a "valid and binding obligation of the corporation." The only authority of municipalities to issue notes is found in sections 3913 and 3915, General Code. The first section authorizes notes to be issued in anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year. Such notes should have been discharged as therein provided out of money received from taxes at the next succeeding settlement. Similar authority is given to issue notes under section 3915 in anticipation of the collection of special assessments. The assessments themselves should be sufficient to discharge such notes. I think it is obvious that neither one of these sections authorize the issuance of notes which can be refunded under section 3916.

Section 3916 itself, however, does authorize the issuance of notes in that it provides that council may "issue bonds * * * or borrow money." Once notes are issued under this section they may be refunded under the same section. However, the notes issued under section 3916 must themselves represent a valid and existing indebtedness of the municipality. No such indebtedness can be created without observing the requirements of section 3806, General Code, which provides in effect that no obligation shall be incurred unless the clerk shall certify that the money required therefore is in the treasury, and not appropriated for any other purpose, etc. Although you do not so state, I assume that the notes of which you speak were issued for current expenses in violation of section 3806. If that is the case bonds cannot be issued to take them up.

Answering your second question, I beg to state that the same involves a consideration of section 3806 which has just been cited. That section provides as follows:

"No contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or order for the expenditure of money be passed by the council or by any board or officer of a municipal corporation, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, first certifies to council or to the proper board, as the case may be, that the money required for such contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay such appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and not appropriated for any other purpose, which certificate shall be filed and immediately recorded. The sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the corporation is discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or so long as the ordinance, resolution or order is in force."

This section should be read in conjunction with sections 3797 et seq., which provide for semi-annual appropriations for each of the several objects for which the municipality must provide and in connection with section 5649-3d enacted in 1911 as a part of the Smith one per cent. law, so-called, which has supplanted certain provisions of these sections in part. In the same connection section 4285, General Code, which specifies the duties of the village clerk must be read. This section provides as follows:

"The auditor shall not allow the amount set aside for any appropriation to be overdrawn, or the amount appropriated for one item of expense to be drawn upon for any other purpose, or unless sufficient funds shall actually be in the treasury to the credit of the fund upon which such voucher is drawn. When any claim is presented to him, he may require evidence that such amount is due, and for this purpose may summon any agent, clerk or employe of the city, or any other person, and examine him upon oath or affirmation concerning such voucher or claim."

From all these sections the following appears to be the duty of the village clerk: He may not pay out any money whatever unless an appropriation has been made. If appropriations have been made to cover the fixed charges, which should have been done, I cannot understand how any question of the sort which you submit could possibly arise. If council has not been in the habit of making appropriations at the beginning of each half yearly period it has violated its duty and the auditor has violated his duty in paying out any money to any person whether for fixed charges or not. In other words, if proper appropriations have been made to cover salaries and other fixed charges then, of course, the money so appropriated cannot be considered "not appropriated" within the meaning of section 3806, supra. If, on the other hand, council has made no such appropriation for any purpose then the clerk is not authorized to make any certificate whatever or to pay any money to any person, but must hold the funds in his possession intact until council has made an appropriation.

If, again, council has failed to appropriate for salaries and other fixed charges, but has appropriated for general expenses, then the clerk is not bound to take cognizance of the amount of such fixed charges, but so long as the duty of council in the premises has not been discharged he may certify that the funds in his possession, though insufficient to meet such charges, are not appropriated for any other purpose. Unless it is clear that it is the intention of council that salaries are to be paid from such an appropriation for general expenses, it would be the duty of the clerk not to pay any salary vouchers. In the meantime, however, council might be compelled by mandamus to make some appropriation for salaries.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

FRANCHISE—CONTRACT BY MUNICIPAL CORPORATION WITH PUBLIC UTILITIES FOR FIRE HYDRANTS, INVALID, IN ABSENCE OF AUTHORIZATION OF ELECTORS IN ACCORDANCE WITH STATUTES.

On June 19, 1902, section 2434, Revised Statutes, required that a contract by a municipal corporation for water for fire purposes should be authorized by the electors. A contract entered into, therefore, on that date, without such authorization, is illegal and void, and in accordance with the authorities in Ohio, the court will leave the parties as it finds them.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 6, 1913.

HON. O. H. STEWART, Solicitor of Village of Middleport, Pomeroy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of December 30, 1912, recites: That on May 16, 1899, the village of Middleport granted a franchise for twenty years, to The P. and M. Water Company, to establish and maintain a waterworks system in said village; that no contract was entered into at the time for service to the city or private consumers; that no prices have been fixed by ordinance or contract, up to this date, for service to private consumers—the company charging therefor at pleasure; that at the date of said franchise, said village was not financially able to contract for fire hydrant service, but said company, in section 8 of the aforesaid franchise, had agreed to contract at any time, within the limit thereof, to furnish the same at $40.00 each, per year.

This was the situation up to June 19, 1902, when the village, by ordinance contracted with the water company to take sixteen fire hydrants at $40.00 each, per year, during the life of the franchise—about seventeen years. This contracting ordinance was never submitted to, or ratified by, a vote of the electors of the village; but the municipality has been paying for said hydrants until within a few months past.

Your letter then concludes as follows: "The one question upon which I would ask an opinion is this: Is the contract (ordinance), passed June 19, 1902, valid or not?"

On June 19, 1902, when your village entered into this contract with the water works company, the law on the subject was as follows: "Any municipal corporation, except cities of the first grade of the first class, shall have power to contract with any individual or individuals, or any other incorporated company for supplying water for fire purposes, or for cisterns, reservoirs, streets, squares and other public places within the corporation limits, or for the purpose of supplying the citizens of such municipal corporation with water for such time, and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, provided, that no such contract shall be executed or binding upon any such municipal corporation until the same shall have been ratified by a vote of the electors thereof, at a special or general election, etc." (Section 2434 Revised Statutes.)

The above section was carried into the General Code, and is now section 3981 thereof, and is still in force.

From the reading of this statute, it is apparent that the attempt of the village of Middleport to contract with the water works company, without submitting the same to the electors for ratification, is without authority of law and void.

No contract has ever been made that can be enforced. It was void from the beginning; and at any time the village could have refused to pay for the hydrants. The mere fact that the village has paid for service up to this time, does not compel it to do so any longer. If the contract was never valid, it was never binding on either party; and the courts will leave the parties thereto in the situation in which they have placed themselves, by granting relief to neither.

The manner of contracting for water supplies for a village is regulated and controlled by statute, and nothing is left to inference.

This whole question is fully covered in the 60 O. S. page 406. There the county commissioners entered into a contract with a bridge company to construct a bridge. The bridge was constructed and used by the public; but the contract therefore was not entered into according to the terms of the statute. The supreme court refused to grant any relief and the bridge company lost all its time, labor and money expended in the constructing of the bridge.

In the 65 O. S. 220, in the syllabus, the supreme court says: "Persons dealing with officers of municipalities must ascertain for themselves and at their own peril that the provisions of the statutes applicable to the making of the contract, agreement, obligation, or appropriation have been complied with." The supreme court in this case also decided that since April 8, 1876, there is no implied municipal liability ex con tractu in this state; and that no contracts can be entered into by municipalities otherwise than as provided by statute.

The doctrine of strict compliance with the statute, before a municipal corporation can be bound by a contract, is further enunciated in the 58 O. S. 558, and 61 O. S. 288. Without further discussion, I am of opinion that the contract of Middleport with the water works company for hydrants, not having been ratified by a vote of the electors of said village, is void, and cannot be enforced.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNCIL—POWER TO RESUBMIT AT SPECIAL ELECTION QUESTION OF ISSUING BONDS IS DISCRETIONARY.

The power of council to submit to the electors the question of issuing bonds, under sections 3942 and 3943, General Code, is a discretionary one, and whether or not such question may be immediately resubmitted, when the bond issue has been defeated, rests with the discretion of council and may not be interfered with in the absence of fraud, corrupt motive or flagrant abuse of discretion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 13, 1913.

HON. E. R. YOUNG, Legal Counsel, Ripley, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 25th, you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "The council of a village, under sections 3942 and 3943, G. C., having submitted the question of issuing bonds at a special election for the purchase of gas and electric works, and same having failed to carry, can the council proceed at once by resolution and notice and again submit the proposition to the voters?"

Section 3942, General Code, is as follows:

> "In addition to the authority granted in section one (1) (G. C. section 3939) of this act and supplementary thereto, the council of a municipal corporation, whenever it deems it necessary, may issue and sell bonds in such amounts, or denomination, and for such period of time and rate of interest not exceeding six per cent. annum, as it may determine upon for any of the purposes set forth in said section one (G. C. section 3939), upon obtaining the approval of the electors of the corporation at a general or special election in the following manner."

The only direction contained in the statutes as to the time at which action may be taken upon the issuing of such bonds, and the holding of a special election therefor, is contained within the words "whenever it (council) deems it necessary." These words make the duty entirely a discretionary one with the council.

The rule as to the exercising of discretionary duties by public officials is stated in section 849, Throop on Public Offices, as follows:

> "Doctrine as to enjoining discretionary power. The rule, with respect to granting an injunction, where the matter complained of is left by the law to the discretion or judgment of the officer, against whom it is asked, is the same, as where any of the other remedies, treated in this chapter, is asked in a similar case; namely, that the court will not interfere to review, control, or restrain the exercise of the powers by the officer or officers, in whom the law has vested the discretion or judgment to exercise the same. But in this respect, the power of a court of equity to interfere by injunction exceeds that of a court of law; for equity will review the exercise of discretionary power, which is tainted with fraud, or where it is necessary so to do, in order to prevent abuse, injustice, or violation of a trust."

and also in section 242, Dillon on municipal corporations, in the following terms:

> "Discretionary powers not subject to judicial control. Power to do an act is often conferred upon municipal corporations, in general terms, without being accompanied by any prescribed mode of exercising it. In such cases the common council, or governing body, necessarily have, to a greater or less extent, a discretion as to the manner in which the power shall be used. This discretion, where it is conferred or exists, cannot be judicially interfered with or questioned except where the power is exceeded or fraud is imputed and shown, or there is a manifest invasion of private rights. Thus, where the law or charter confers upon the city council, or local legislature, power to determine upon the expediency or necessity of measures relating to the local government, their judgment upon matters thus committed to them; while acting within the scope of their authority, cannot be controlled by the courts. In such case the decision of the proper corporate body is, in the absence of fraud, final and conclusive, unless they transcend their powers."

By the same authority, section 242, it is said that "discretionary powers are not, unless in extraordinary and exceptional instances of gross abuse, subject to judicial control."

Whether or not, therefore, council may proceed at once by resolution and notice to again submit a proposition to the voters in the present case, depends upon whether or not such action would be a reasonable and judicious exercise of the discretion vested in council, and whether or not such is the case depends upon the particular facts of the case. It is to be presumed that council does not act arbitrarily and bases its action upon some substantial reason, and its decision may not be considered invalid in the absence of evidence of fraud, corrupt motives or flagrant abuse of its discretion.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—MAYOR OF VILLAGE AND MEMBER OF BOARD OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES.

Inasmuch as, under section 7177, General Code, providing for the joint action of township trustees and a municipal corporation in the erection of a boundary line road, and under section 3402, providing for such joint action in the erection of a public building, a mayor and a member of a board of township trustees are obliged to represent conflicting interests, such office may not be held at one and the same time by a single individual.

The acceptance by an officer of an office incompatible with the one occupied by him, operates to vacate the office held.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 12, 1913.

HON. CLIFFORD L. BELT, Village Solicitor, Bellaire, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 8th, you request my opinion as follows:

> "May the office of a member of a board of township trustees, and the office of the mayor of a village situated in the same township, be held by one and the same person? If not, if the person was a member of the board of township trustees when elected and qualified as mayor of the municipality in the same township, does the person have the right to elect which office he shall hold, or is he ineligible to qualify as mayor?"

The rule as to incompatibility of public offices is stated in Throop on Public Offices, section 33, page 34:

> " 'Offices are said to be incompatible and inconsistent, so as not to be executed by the same person, when from the multiplicity of business in them they cannot be executed with care and ability, or when, their being subordinate and interfering with each other, it induces a presumption that they cannot be executed with impartiality and honesty.' And in Dillon on Municipal Corporations (section 166, note), it is said, that 'incompatibility in offices exists, where the nature and duty of the two offices are such as to render it improper, from considerations of public policy, for one incumbent to retain both.' " and in State vs. Gebhart, 12 Ohio Circuit Court, N. S., page 275, the court says.

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon the other, or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

Section 7177, General Code, is as follows:

> "If a road is established as a part of the line or boundary of a township or municipal corporation, the trustees of such adjoining townships and council of such corporation, shall meet at a convenient place as soon after the first Monday of March as convenient, and apportion such road between the townships, or township and corporation, as justice and equity requires. The trustees of the respective townships, and council of the corporation, shall cause the road to be opened and improved accordingly, and shall thereafter cause their respective portion to be worked and kept in proper repair."

Section 3402, General Code, providing for the erection of a public building, by the joint operation of the township and the municipal corporation, after an election by the people of each subdivision, authorizing the same, provides as follows:

> "If at such election two-thirds of the electors of the township and of the village voting, vote in favor of such improvement, the trustees of such township, and the council of the village shall jointly take such action as is necessary to carry out such improvement."

Under section 4255, General Code, the mayor of a village is required to act as president of the council and must preside at all regular and special meetings thereof, being permitted a vote in all instances of a tie.

The above quoted statutes, providing for the joint action of the trustees of a township and the council of a corporation, in the instances respectively, for the improvement of a boundary line road and the construction of a public building, contemplate representation on behalf of both the township and the village. In each case the duty is of an important nature, which clearly would not justify a refusal to act on the part of an official, acting either in the capacity of township trustee or of mayor of the village. Unless a person endeavoring to act in both capacities should refrain from taking part in these proceedings, he would be placed in a position requiring him to act in behalf of separate and distinct interests, which the statutes clearly contemplate should be represented by separate individuals.

Whilst recognizing the right of a mayor to withdraw and allow the president protem to act in his place, I am of the opinion that even though the mayor were not to be considered a member of the council, the interest and duty devolving upon him, as official head of the corporation, is sufficient in itself to justify the conclusion that as representative of the village in these proceedings, he should not, on grounds of public policy, be influenced by the practically contrary duties which would be incumbent upon him as township trustee. The statutes require consultation and agreement in both cases, and one individual could not act in a capacity which would be akin to consulting and agreeing with himself.

In the investigation which I have made, I have found no other provisions in the statutes which point to incompatibility in the duties of these offices, but I am of the opinion that the duties imposed by the statutes above quoted, are such as to make it impracticable, from considerations of public policy, to permit one individual to represent each subdivision in the negotiations therein provided for.

You furthermore inquire whether a person elected to both positions, has the right to elect which office he shall hold. In this connection, permit me to cite State ex rel. vs. McMillan, 15 Ohio Circuit Court, page 165, to the effect that under the common law the acceptance of an office, by an officer, incompatible with the first, ipso facto, vacates the first. Under this authority a person elected to both the positions mentioned, may qualify for either and if he qualifies for one and later qualifies for the second, the first office would be vacated by his acceptance of the second.

In conclusion, therefore, I am of the opinion that one individual cannot hold contemporaneously both the office of the townshp trustee and mayor of a village; and if he is elected to both he may elect which of the two offices he shall qualify for and hold.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

VILLAGE COUNCIL MAY ISSUE BONDS ONLY TO EXTENT OF ONE PER CENT. OF TOTAL TAX DUPLICATE WITHOUT AUTHORITY OF ELECTORS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1913.

HON. A. J. WORKMAN, Solicitor for the Village of Danville, Danville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 21st, and to express my regret at being unable to comply with your request for an earlier answer. The legislative session has resulted in an unusual pressure of business in this office and I have fallen considerably behind in my correspondence.

If I understand your letter correctly the following hypothetical statement of facts is sufficient for the purpose of showing the question upon which you request my opinion:

> "A village has a tax duplicate of three hundred thousand dollars. May the council of such a village, without a vote of the electors, incur a bonded indebtedness in the amount of fifteen thousand dollars, payable wholly from the proceeds of taxation, there being no outstanding indebtedness of the village?"

The answer to this question must be in the negative. The borrowing power of municipal corporations is defined and limited by section 3939 et seq., General Code. Section 3940 expressly limits the power of a council to incur indebtedness without a vote of the electors to an amount equal to one per cent. of the total tax duplicate in any one year. In the case of the village of Danville this amount would be three thousand dollars.

If it is of interest to you I might point out that under the joint operation of sections 3942, 3948 and 3952, General Code, the council could, by vote of the electors, issue exactly fifteen thousand dollars worth of bonds, to be paid out of general tax levies (assuming the duplicate to be three hundred thousand dollars), and no more.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNCILMAN WHO MOVES FROM VILLAGE DISQUALIFIED.

Inasmuch as a councilman, who moves his family from a village and resides with such family the greater part of the time outside of the village, ceases to be an elector, he becomes disqualified to hold his seat as councilman, by virtue of section 4218, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 1, 1913.

HON. ROBERT C. MYERS, Solicitor for the Village of New Boston, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 16th you inquire of me as follows:

> "At the last municipal election one, Mr. E., was elected member of the village council of New Boston, who was then residing in said village, living in his own property with his family, and has been and is now serving as councilman, but within the past 60 days he has moved his family into Porter Township, Scioto County, Ohio, and is now assisting in operating a saloon in said village, and stays a portion of his time in Porter Township, Scioto County, Ohio, and the balance of the time at his place of business in same village, and as I have been informed sleeps about half of the time in the village of New Boston, and the remainder of the time with his family in Porter Township. Personally he claims he is a resident of New Boston. The question has been raised whether or not he is a legal member of the village council."

The qualifications of a village councilman are prescribed by section 4218, General Code, as follows:

"Each member of council shall have resided in the village one year next preceding his election, and shall be an elector thereof. No member of the council shall hold any other public office or employment, except that of notary public or member of the state militia, or be interested in any contract with the village. Any member who ceases to possess any of the qualifications herein required or removes from the village shall forfeit his office."

Upon the facts before me, I am of the opinion that Mr. E. has ceased to be a resident of the village of New Boston, as required by section 4218, and he has therefore forfeited his office as councilman of said village.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS—POWERS SIMILAR TO THOSE OF DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE CONSIDERED—AUTHORIZATION OF COUNCIL FOR CONTRACT TO PROVIDE POWER FOR RUNNING WATERWORKS PLANT.

Under section 3619, General Code, council has authority to apply moneys received as charges for water, to the maintenance of the waterworks and this power includes the right to provide for power to run such plant.

Under section 4362, General Code, a village council may levy a tax for such purpose where the receipts are insufficient.

The powers of the board of trustees of public affairs are those formerly resting upon trustees of waterworks, but now transferred to the director of public service in cities.

Under the decision of Hutchins vs. City of Cleveland, the words "director of public service," and "board of trustees of public affairs" may be deemed interchangeable, and the provisions relating to the director of public service in cities must be held applicable to the board of trustees in villages.

If a contract, therefore, for the purpose of supplying power for the operation of a village water plant exceeds $500 such contract must first be authorized by the village council, after which the board of trustees may advertise and enter into the contract and pay the expenses for the same out of funds appropriated by council for the purpose, by order upon the village treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1913.

HON. WALTER S. STEVENSON, Village Solicitor, Leipsic, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am replying to your favor of June 18, 1912, in which you say the contract between the board of trustees of public affairs and one Cottingham, for furnishing electric power to run the water works will expire during the present term of said board and the council. You ask the following questions, and the proper mode of procedure:

"1. Who has authority to renew this contract, or in other words, whose duty is it to provide power for running the water works plant?

"2. Can the council, under section 3619 of the General Code, enter into a contract for the purchase of electric power to run said plant?

"3. Can the board of trustees of public affairs, under sections 4361 and 3961, or any other section of the General Code, enter into a contract for the purchase of power to run said plant?

"4. Should this contract be entered into under the provisions of section 4328 of the General Code?"

By virtue of section 3619 G. C., the council has authority "to apply moneys received as charges for water to the maintenance etc., of the works." Electric power to run the works falls within the scope of "maintenance" and, hence, council has the right to apply moneys so received for said purpose.

Section 4362 G. C., provides that where water works are owned and operated by a village, which receives its fire protection therefrom, and the proceeds from the operation thereof are insufficient to pay the operating expenses, council may levy a tax to pay the running expenses of the said plant.

Section 3960 G. C., provides that money collected for water works purposes shall be deposited weekly with the treasurer of the corporation; and that money so deposited shall be kept as a separate and distinct fund. It is further provided that "when appropriated by council" it shall be subject to the order of the director of public service, who shall sign all orders drawn on the corporation treasurer against such fund.

I cite the last three sections to show the origin of water works funds, their separate preservation, and that such funds are not under the control of the waterworks department of cities or villages until council has appropriated the same for that purpose, by dinance or resolution.

It follows, then, that the board of trustees of public affairs in villages does not have custody of water works funds, having no treasurer of its own, and only issues orders on the corporation treasurer for such bills and accounts as it approves.

Without a careful examination, comparison and knowledge of the history and judicial interpretation of the various statutes of Ohio on the subject of municipal water works, some doubts may arise as to the duties, powers and jurisdiction of the various statutory officers and boards in the maintenance and control thereof.

Chapter 1, Title XII, Division IV, and sections 4357 to 4362, inclusive, of the General Code, contain the present law on the subject as to both cities and villages. These statutes embrace the old laws revised in different language, and constitute part of the Municipal Code. Section 4357 G. C., under the title "Boards of Trustees of Public Affairs" provides that in villages having water works, the council shall establish the above named board of three members.

Section 4361, G. C., says:

"The board of trustees of public affairs shall have all the powers and perform all the duties provided in this title to be exercised and performed by the trustees of water works, and such other duties as may be provided by law or ordinance not inconsistent herewith."

In Ellis' Municipal Code, 5th Edition, Note 1, under the above section, page 598, the author, under the title "provisions referred to" clears up the situation as follows:

"There are no provisions in Title XII relating to the powers and duties of trustees of water works. The general provisions governing the management of water works are found in Chapter 1, Division 4, sections 3955 to 3981, inclusive. They provide the powers and duties of the director of public service in cities in the management of such works. These sections, however, are a revision of various sections of the Revised Statutes (2407 R. S., and others), which relate to the powers and duties of trustees of water works; and the reference is probably to these sections.

"Section 205 of the Municipal Code of 1902, of which sections 4357, supra et seq., are a revision, provides that the trustees of public affairs in villages should have all the powers and perform all the duties provided for the trustees of water works in sections 2407, 2409 and others of the Revised Statutes.

"These sections of the Revised Statutes provide for the trustees to manage water works, etc. In the revision of the statutes in the General Code, the substance of these provisions is carried in Chapter I, of Division IV, but 'director of public service' is substituted for 'trustees of water works' wherever those words occur, and thus no provisions are left relating to trustees of water works."

The same doctrine is laid down in Note 1, section 3955, G. C., page 388, by the same author.

In the case of Hutchins vs. The City of Cleveland, et al., decided February 11, 1907, 9 Circuit Court Reports, N. S., page 226, the Cuyahoga Circuit Court, in its first syllabus, says:

"In sections 2410 and 2411, Revised Statutes of Ohio (sections 1536-521 and 522 Bates' Annotated Statutes) the words 'trustees' and 'trustees or board' include the directors of public service in cities, as well as boards of trustees of public affairs in villages."

This was affirmed by the supreme court, 79 O. S. 478.

It follows, then, that the words "Director of Public Service" and "Board of Trustees of Public Affairs" are interchangeable, where the sense requires it, and hence the sections and chapter of the General Code heretofore cited and referred to must be construed together, and applied in a practical manner to the questions submitted in your letter.

The council has certain duties to perform in the construction, maintenance, etc., of water works, and when these duties are exhausted it devolves upon the director of public service, or board of trustees of public affairs, as the case may be, to supplement the council's action by managing, controlling and carrying into effect all necessary measures pertaining to a complete system of such municipal plant.

There can be no conflict between council and these directors and boards, provided each keeps within its own jurisdictional domain.

Let us see what the statutory powers and duties of council, directors of public service and boards of trustees of public affairs are, relative to such contracts as you mention.

Section 4328 G. C., gives the right to the board of trustees of public affairs (by the construction heretofore given, although the statute says director of public service), to make any contract relative to any matters under the supervision of that department, not involving more than $500. When the expenditure (exclusive of employes) exceeds $500, it shall be first authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the board must advertise not less than two weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the city, and award the contract to the lowest and best bidder.

You say in your letter that the use of electricity for motive power is to supplant the old boiler and engine system. This being a new feature, and the cost per annum probably exceeding $500, the manner of procedure should be as follows: Council should by ordinance outline and adopt this system, describing it sufficiently therein, and then authorize and direct the board of trustees of public affairs to advertise for bids thereon, and to enter into a contract with the lowest and best bidder thereon. Council should also appropriate sufficient funds to meet the annual expenses under this contract.

The powers of council are ended when they appropriate the money and authorize the board to advertise—after that the whole matter is jurisdictional with the board. Council should exercise care in the appropriation of this fund and in passing the ordinance, keeping within the safeguards of the general laws governing such matters.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

LONGWORTH ACT—LIMITATIONS ON OUTSTANDING INDEBTEDNESS OF A VILLAGE DOES NOT INCLUDE BONDS WHOSE PAYMENT IS COVERED BY FUND IN POSSESSION OF SINKING FUND TRUSTEES, NOR CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS.

Under sections 3939, 3940, 3941 and 3952, General Code, the total outstanding bonded indebtedness of a village may not exceed, without vote of electors, two and one-half per cent. of the revenues from all property listed and assessed for taxation therein. These limitations do not include bonds whose payment is provided for by moneys in the possession of the sinking fund trustees, nor certificates of indebtedness.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 16, 1913.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Village Solicitor, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 9th requesting my opinion upon the following facts:

> "The tax duplicate of the village of Hillsboro is $3,972,075.00. The outstanding bonded indebtedness amounts to $80,000.00, there being $15,000 in the sinking fund for the retirement of one of the issues included within this aggregate. The village is also indebted on certificates of indebtedness in the amount of $3,000.
> "Can the council of the village by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of its members, by ordinance, issue and sell bonds for the purpose of resurfacing, repairing and improving its streets in the amount of $5,000 without submitting the question to the approval of the electors?"

The general power to borrow money for the purpose of resurfacing, repairing and improving streets is found in paragraph 22 of section 3939, General Code, which I need not quote. Nor is it to be doubted that a municipal corporation may make such repairs and improvements by general taxation without assessing any part thereof upon the abutting property, if this is the purpose.

Section 3939 requires an affirmative vote of not less than two-thirds of the members elected or appointed to council, and that the action of council be by resolution or ordinance in order that the power of borrowing money thereunder may be properly exercised.

Section 3940, General Code, imposes a limitation upon the exercise of the power vested in council by section 3939 in the following words:

> "The total indebtedness created in any one fiscal year by council * * under the authority conferred in the preceding section, shall not exceed one per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation."

One per cent. of the total value of all the property in Hillsboro would, under the facts submitted by you, amount to $39,720.75. It follows that so far as this limitation is concerned the council is not restrained by it from exercising the borrowing power in the manner referred to by you.

Another limitation upon the exercise of this power is found in section 3941 and 3952, General Code, which must be read together for this purpose. They provide in part as follows:

> "Section 3941. The net indebtedness created or incurred by the council under the authority granted it in section one (1) of this act (section 3939 G. C.) and in an act passed April 29, 1902 (the so-called Longworth act which was the predecessor of present section 3939, etc., and was of similar import) * * shall never exceed four (4) per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation."
> "Section 3952. * * * On and after the first day of October, 1911, the said four per cent. limitation shall be reduced to two and one-half per cent. * * * and such reduced limitations shall be applied to and based upon the value of all the property listed and assessed for taxation in such municipal corporation as determined by the duplicate then or thereafter in force."

Two and one-half per cent. of the duplicate of the village of Hillsboro, as stated by you, would amount to $99,300, approximately. This exceeds the entire out-standing indebtedness of the village, as represented by you, but not all of the out-standing indebtedness of the village is to be counted in ascertaining this limitation as is apparent from the provisions of section 3949, General Code, which is in part as follows:

> "The 'net indebtedness' prescribed in sections three and ten * * * of this act shall be the difference between the par value of the outstanding and unpaid bonds and the amount held in the sinking fund for their redemption."

Therefore, the sum of $15,000 being the amount held in the sinking fund for the retirement of the water works bonds, referred to by you, must be deducted from the total of $83,000, leaving the sum of $68,000 as representing the outstanding indebtedness of the village, within the meaning of the statutes under consideration. From this total of $68,000 a still further reduction must be made because the certificates of indebtedness of which you speak are not to be counted in ascertaining any of the limitations of the law. The limitations of the Longworth act and its successor, the present group of statutes now under consideration, are appliable only to bonded indebtedness. This is apparent on the face of the statutes. Therefore, the sum of $65,000 is the sum total of the present outstanding indebtedness of the village of Hillsboro for the purposes of the limitations of the so-called Longworth act in its present form.

Although section 3948, for reasons which will become obvious, has nothing whatever to do with your question, yet I deem it proper to call your attention to its provisions in connection with section 3952. The joint effect of these sections is to impose an absolute limitation of five per cent. upon the amount of bonds which may at any time, either with or without the approval of the electors, be out-standing under the Longworth act. In ascertaining this limitation, however, the rule of section 3949, already referred to, must be applied.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that not only may the council of the village of Hillsboro by a two-thirds vote of the members elected thereto, and by ordinance or resolution, at the present time issue bonds in the amount of $5,000 for the purpose of resurfacing, repairing and improving its streets, but also that the total amount of bonded indebtedness which may be incurred under authority of the Longworth act, so-called, by the council of a village at the present time, without a vote of the people, is about $34,000.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM—ORDINANCE PROVIDING FOR RE-DATING OF BONDS FORMERLY AUTHORIZED BUT NOW SOLD MUST LAY OVER.

When by ordinance of council, an issue of bonds is authorized to bear the date of September 1, 1912, which bonds council failed to sell, a new ordinance amending the former ordinance so as to change the date of said bonds to April 1, 1913, involves the expenditure of money and would come within the initiative and referendum act and be required to lay over sixty days before going into effect.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1913.

HON. C. M. BABST, Solicitor, Crestline, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 10, 1913, you state:

> "Last fall the council of the village of Crestline passed an ordinance for the issue of bonds, in which it was recited that said bonds were to bear date of September 1, 1912. Owing to the lateness of the season the bonds were not sold.
> "We now desire to amend said ordinance so as to date the bonds at some future time, say April 1, 1913.
>
> "The question that arises is whether or not sixty days must elapse before the amendment to the original ordinance would become effective under section 4227-2, General Code.
> "The sixty days have elapsed from the passage of the original ordinance."

An ordinance seeking to amend an ordinance theretofore passed would, as I view it, be in effect an original ordinance, and while it appears that the only purpose of the amendment is to cause the bonds referred to to bear date at a later time than that fixed by the original ordinance, yet it would seem to me that such new ordinance amending the old ordinance would be in effect the same as if nothing had been done under the old ordinance and since an ordinance providing for an issue of bonds would be an ordinance involving the expenditure of money for which the bonds were issued, assuming that the bonds provided for are sought to be issued under section 3939, General

Code, the new ordinance amending the former ordinance would in my opinion be required to go through the same formalities as the former ordinance, and would, therefore, have to lie sixty days before going into effect.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

REFERENDUM PETITIONS IN MUNICIPALITY—RIGHT OF PETITIONERS TO WITHDRAW NAMES PRIOR TO CERTIFICATION TO BOARD OF ELECTIONS BY CLERK.

It is well settled that names may be withdrawn from a petition at any time before jurisdiction is acquired thereover by the board or officer entitled to exercise the same.

When a petition for the referendum on a municipal ordinance, therefore, has been filed with the clerk of the village, the names may be withdrawn therefrom at any time prior to the certification of such petition to the board of elections by said clerk.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1913.

HON. WILLIAM A. HUNT, Solicitor, Salineville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 1, you inquire as follows:

> "Information in regard to the municipal initiative and referendum section 4227-1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, Laws of Ohio, 1911, pages 521-3.
>
> "Briefly the facts are these: Two ordinances were passed by our village council within the last sixty days, one a resolution to pave a certain street. Referendum petitions were filed January 28 and 29 with the city clerk by a committee; this committee now wishes to withdraw the petitions. Can this be done? Or would a withdrawal petition, signed by those who had signed the referendum petition, and asking that their names be withdrawn from the referendum petition be of any effect?
> "Of course it is granted that the ordinances are such as the referendum will apply to."

There is no provision in the municipal initiative and referendum law providing for the withdrawal of names signed to a referendum petition. The only provisions of such law relative to the filing of petition is found in section 4227-2, General Code, the first paragraph of which provides that if within thirty days after the passage or adoption of any ordinance, resolution or measure by council there shall be filed with the clerk of a municipal corporation a petition filed by fifteen per cent. of the qualified electors ordering the submission of such ordinance, resolution or measure to a vote of the electors within ten days after the filing thereof the clerk shall certify the same to the board of elections, and in the second paragraph of said section it is provided in reference to certain ordinances that upon the filing of a petition signed by fifteen per cent. of the qualified electors the clerk shall certify the fact of the filing of such petition to the board of elections.

The right of a petitioner to withdraw his name after signing it to a referendum petition has so far as I am aware not been passed upon by the courts of Ohio. Such courts have, however, passed upon the withdrawal of names signed to a petition in other matters.

In the case of Hays et al. vs. Jones et al., 27 O. S. 218, the first three paragraphs of the syllabus read as follows:

> "1. The board of county commissioners, under the act passed March 29, 1867, (64, O. L. 80) as amended March 31, 1868, (S. & S. 673) and again amended May 9, 1869, (S. & S. 675-6) to 'authorize county commissioners to construct roads on the petition of a majority of the resident land owners along and adjacent to the line of said roads,' are not authorized to grant a final order for making such road improvement, except upon the petition of 'a majority of the resident land holders whose lands are reported benefited' by, 'and ought to be assessed' for the costs of the improvement.
> "2. The jurisdiction of the board of county commissioners to make the final order for the improvement, under these statutes, is special, and conditioned upon the consent, at the time the final order is to be made, of a majority of the resident land holders, who are to be charged with the costs of the improvement.
> "3. Resident land holders, who have subscribed a petition praying for such road improvement, may, at any time before such improvement is finally ordered to be made by the board of commissioners, withdraw their assent by remonstrance, or having their names stricken from the petition, and after withdrawal of consent, such persons can no longer be counted as petitioning for the improvement."

This case holds that names may be withdrawn from such a petition as was involved in that case at any time before the improvement is finally ordered to be made by the board of county commissioners on the ground that the jurisdictional majority must be found in the attitude of asking for the improvement at the time the proposed final order is to be made, and that one who has subscribed to the petition may at any time before the board makes the final order by remonstrance or other unmistakable sign signify his change of purpose, and that his assent is within his own control up to the time the commissioners make the final order.

In the case of Grinnell vs. Adams 34 O. S. 44, the syllabus is as follows:

> "After the jurisdiction of county commissioners, in the matter of laying out or altering a county road, has attached by the filing of a proper petition, etc., such jurisdiction cannot be defeated by any number of the petitioners afterward becoming remonstrants against the granting of the prayer of the petition."

It would appear from a reading of such case, however, that not only had the petition been filed but that notice had been given and a certain bond had been executed to pay the expenses in case the application failed, which was held to confer upon the county commissioners power to act in the premises. In other words, that the county commissioners had jurisdiction in the matter. It is distinctly stated in this case that they do not undertake to overrule the case of Hays vs. Jones, 27 O. S. 218.

In the case of Dutten vs. Village of Hanover, 42 O. S. 215, which was a case in mandamus to compel council of an incorporated village to order an election on the question of the surrender of its corporate power upon petition filed by council for that purpose the third paragraph of the syllabus is as follows:

> "While such petition is under consideration and before action thereon by the council, signers thereof may withdraw their names from such petition, and if thereby the number of names is reduced below the requisite number, it is the duty of the council to refuse to order such election."

Johnson, C. J., rendering the opinion of the court, on page 217, says:

> "Did the district court err in holding that persons who signed the petition, could withdraw their names therefrom before action had thereon? We think not. When the petition was presented it was the duty of the council to take proper steps to ascertain if the signatures were bona fide, and if it contained the requisite number who were electors. For that purpose the same might be referred to a committee and postpone action until time for such examination. Between the time the petition was presented and the next regular meeting, at which action was had thereon, several signers withdrew their names. This they had the right to do, the council not having acted thereon. Hayes vs. Jones, 27 O. S. 218.
> "If the council had ordered the election, it may be that petitioners could not thereafter defeat an election, nor authorize the council to rescind its order, by withdrawal of their names. It was held, they could not do this in a road case, after the petition for a road had been acted on, and a report of the viewers made. Grinnell vs. Adams, 34 O. S. 44."

In reference to a petition filed under the Brannock Law for a special election the court of common pleas of Lucas county in the case of In re petition for special election in Toledo, 2 N. P. n. s. 469, held:

> "Names may be withdrawn from the petition or added to it by the filing of a duplicate petition at any time before the order thereon is made."

In the above case the case of Grinnell vs. Adams, 34 O. S. 44, was distinguished. (See page 473.)

In the case of Cole vs. City of Columbus, 2 N. P. n. s. 563, Black, J., it was held:

> "It is quite true that persons, before the mayor or judge have acted, may add their names to or withdraw their names from the petition. (42 O. S. 215.)"

In the case of Haynes et al. vs. Hillsboro, 3 N. P. n. s. 17, the syllabus is as follows:

> "It is the privilege of electors signing a petition for a Beal Law election to withdraw their names from the petition, either with or without the consent of council, at any time before the election is ordered; and where such withdrawals reduce the number of signatures remaining on the petition to less than the requisite forty per cent. of the qualified voters, jurisdiction of council to order an election is lost."

On page 27 of said opinion the court states:

> "In 34 O. S. case, jurisdiction had been assumed and action taken, and practically only confirmation needed, while in 27 O. S. 218, no action had at all been taken and jurisdiction not assumed. Even if we were to give the contestees the benefit of all they claim on account of 34 O. S. the 42 O. S. 215, passes over it and cites 27 O. S. 218; and 42 O. S. case is so clear and clean cut in its terms that no room for doubt as to the rule established can be entertained."

In the case of Norwood vs. Board of Elections, 13 C. C. n. s. 465, the court on page 466 states as follows:

"But aside from this we are of opinion that each council not only had the right to determine, but it was its duty to determine whether the petition presented to it was signed by twenty-five per cent. of the resident electors of the territory to be annexed, and that its finding upon this question must stand and is final until set aside by some competent tribunal. And we are further of the opinion, following the case of Dutten vs. Village of Hanover, 42 O. S. 215, that up to the time that council took action on the petition, any signer had the right to withdraw his name from the petition, and if after such withdrawal there was not twenty-five per cent. remaining on the petition, it was the duty of council to reject the same and take no further action."

It would seem from the list of authorities which I have foregoing cited that the question is as to jurisdiction.

Section 4227-2 General Code provides a certain duty upon the clerk should a petition signed by fifteen per cent. of the qualified electors be filed with him. It would seem to me, therefore, that before the clerk would be authorized to either certify the ordinance or the fact of the filing of petition with the board of elections he must determine that there are sufficient names signed to such petition to constitute a valid petition, and that only after such ascertainment would he be authorized to certify. If the clerk has not certified the ordinance or the fact of the filing of the petition to the board of elections, I am of the opinion that the names signed to such petition may be withdrawn, but that after he has certified the names cannot be withdrawn.

There is no provision in the Initiative and Referendum Act for a withdrawal petition, and consequently, I do not believe that it would have any force or effect. The only power vested in those who have signed a referendum petition to withdraw their names is exhausted after the clerk has certified to the board of elections. Up until that time names may be withdrawn from such a petition.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM—ORDINANCE EMPLOYING A VILLAGE SOLICITOR, WITHIN.

An ordinance of council employing a village solicitor contemplates a contract involving the expenditure of money, and the same is subject to the municipal initiative and referendum law.

Since the duty of such position depends upon contract, the holder thereof may not be considered a public officer, and therefore, does not come within the provisions of article 16, section 4, of the constitution, requiring all persons elected or appointed to any office in this state to possess the qualifications of an elector.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1913.

HON. W. A. HUNT, Legal Counsel, Salineville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 11th wherein you submit for our opinion two questions as follows:

"1. Can section 4227-2, General Code, apply to an ordinance employing a village solicitor, and

"2. Does Article XV, section 4 of the constitution of Ohio apply to the employment or appointment of a village solicitor."

You refer in your letter to a village solicitor. As far as I am able to ascertain there is no legal authority recognizing a village solicitor.

Section 4220, General Code, reads as follows:

> "When it deems it necessary, the village council may provide legal counsel for the village, or any department or official thereof, for a period not to exceed two years, and provide compensation therefor."

It would therefore, appear that the position of legal counsel of the village was one that was contractual in its nature.

Section 4227-2 of the General Code provides that no ordinance, involving the expenditure of money shall become effective in less than sixty days and it shall be subject to referendum. A contract between the village council and an attorney at law employing him to look after the legal affairs of the village or any department thereof and fixing the compensation to be paid therefor would, as I take it, be an ordinance involving the expenditure of money in that the contract undoubtedly calls for the payment to such legal counsel for the services to be performed by him. Such being the case, I am of the opinion that such an ordinance would come within the provisions of section 4227-2 General Code and would be subject to referendum.

Second: Your inquiry involves a construction of article XV, section 4 of the constitution of Ohio. Such section reads as follows:

> "No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state, unless he possess the qualifications of an elector."

Since the relation which exists between the legal counsel of a village and the village itself is contractual in its nature it cannot be considered as an office, and, therefore, would not fall within the provisions of such section and article.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT—COUNCIL HAS NO POWER TO APPOINT A COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE—DUTY OF BUREAU OF INSPECTION AND SUPERVISION OF PUBLIC OFFICES.

Inasmuch as there is no statutory provision with reference to electric light plants similar to section 3962, General Code, empowering the council of a municipality to appoint a committee to investigate water works, such power cannot be exercised by council. Examiners of the department of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, however, may make such investigation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 22, 1913.

HON. W. E. COOPER, Legal Counsel, McComb, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 19th wherein you desire my opinion as to whether council of a village (having no waterworks but only an electric light plant) can appoint a committee for the investigation of books and papers in matters pertaining to the management of the electric light works, by reason of certain neglect of duty or malfeasance on the part of any officer as provided by section 3962 General Code taken in connection with section 4361 General Code.

Section 4361 General Code provides:

> "The board of trustees of public affairs shall have all the powers and perform all the duties provided in this title to be exercised and performed by the trustees of waterworks, and such other duties as may be prescribed by law or ordinances not inconsistent herewith."

Since the duties of the trustees of the waterworks in cities have been transferred to the director of public service, and the office of trustees of waterworks has been abolished this department has held that in section 4361 the words "trustees of waterworks" should now be read "director of public service."

Section 3962, General Code, provides as follows:

> "The council of a municipality in which waterworks are situated or in progress of construction may appoint a committee for the investigation of all books and papers and all matters pertaining to the management of the waterworks, at least once a year, and oftener, if necessary by reason of neglect of duty or malfeasance on the part of any officer of the works. Any such officer found by such committee so offending shall be liable to removal from office by the council."

Since your inquiry is solely in reference to section 3962, General Code, I have not undertaken to examine further to see whether or not there are any other statutes which would pertain to the subject. Section 3962, General Code, however, limits the right of council thereunder to "appoint a committee for the investigation of all books and papers, and all matters pertaining to the management of waterworks." I am unable to see how said section can be extended so as to include an electric light plant.

If there is any reason that you feel that an investigation of the management and affairs of the electric light plant should be made I would suggest that you take the matter up with the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, which Bureau, I do not doubt, upon proper showing made, would be very glad to send one of the state examiners there for a special investigation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VILLAGES—POWER OF COUNCIL TO DETERMINE METHOD OF LIGHTING STREETS—POWER OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

The board of trustees of public affairs, section 4361, General Code, conferring when the powers of boards of trustees of water works, intends to grant to such board the powers resting upon the directors of public service. Such board also has such powers as may be conferred upon it by ordinance of council.

Under section 3990, General Code, and relative sections, council has authority to determine whether streets are to be lighted by gas or by electricity and may confer upon the board of trustees of public affairs, by ordinance, powers exercisible by that board with reference to a municipal lighting plant.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 24, 1913.

MESSRS. E. H. & R. A. KERR, Solicitors for the village of Tippecanoe, Tippecanoe City, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 22nd, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "As solicitors of the village of Tippecanoe we write to inquire relative to the rights and powers of the council and the board of public affairs relative to the changing of the system of lighting in the village.
>
> "Prior to the first of the year the streets were lighted by what is known as the arc light system; since said date the board of public affairs has changed the system in such a manner that the streets are now lighted by incandescent lights. The village council differs from the board of public affairs relative to the comparative lighting powers of the two systems, and thus raises the question as to which body is entitled to determine the manner in which the streets shall be lighted. We have advised the village officers in accordance with the law as we construe it, but for the satisfaction of both the council and the board of public affairs we write to ask your opinion as to which body has the right to determine the method by which the streets shall be lighted."

Section 4357 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In each village in which waterworks, an electric light plant, artificial or natural gas plant, or other similar public utility is situated, or which council orders waterworks, an electric light plant, natural or artificial gas plant or other similar public utility, to be constructed or to be leased or purchased from any individual, company or corporation, council shall establish at such time a board of trustees of public affairs for the village, which shall consist of three members, residents of the village, who shall be elected for a term of two years."

Section 4361, General Code, provides as follows:

> "The board of trustees of public affairs shall have all the powers and perform all the duties provided in this title to be exercised and performed by the trustees of waterworks, and such other duties as may be prescribed by law or ordinances not inconsistent herewith."

There is a manifest defect in section 4361, in that it confers on the board of trustees of public affairs of villages all the powers of water works trustees, whereas there are no such officers as waterworks trustees mentioned in the code. In my opinion addressed to Hon. Allen C. Aigler, village solicitor of Bellevue, I held that the powers of the trustees of water works are the same powers now vested in the director of public service of cities by sections 3956 to 3981, General Code; and that these powers are the statutory powers of the board of trustees of public affairs of villages. I also held in that opinion that the board of trustees of public affairs has such powers as may be conferred upon it by ordinance of council.

Referring to sections 3956 to 3981, General Code, I find there is no statutory power given to the board of trustees of public affairs in reference to electric light plants; and there are no other duties prescribed by law for the board of trustees of public affairs in reference to a municipal lighting plant; but the village council may, by ordinance, prescribe their powers and duties in reference thereto.

Under section 3990 of the General Code and other sections relating to the powers of municipal corporations as to electric light plants council have certain duties to perform in the construction and maintenance thereof. Council has the authority to determine whether the streets are to be lighted, whether by gas or electricity, and the method by which this should be done. The board of trustees of public affairs is an administrative board, subject to the control and direction of the council; they have only such powers and duties as the council prescribes, in reference to a municipal light plant. All contracts made for the purchase of arc lights or incandescent lights, and all material for the electric light system should be made by council; though it may authorize the board of trustees of public affairs to make the purchases for them.

I am therefore of the opinion that the council has the right to determine the method by which the streets of your village shall be lighted

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNCIL MAY NOT PAY SECRET SERVICE MEN EMPLOYED BY INDIVIDUAL WITHOUT ITS KNOWLEDGE OR CONSENT.

There can be no implied contract against a municipal corporation, and when an individual hires detectives for the purpose of apprehending parties guilty of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, without knowledge or consent of council, such person and the parties hired by him, so far as the city is concerned, will be deemed mere voluntary inter-meddlers and will not be entitled to reimbursement from the city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1913.

HON. W. W. SCOTT, Village Solicitor, Loudonville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 10, 1913, is received wherein you ask an opinion upon the following state of facts:

> "Mr. ——— of this place presented a bill amounting to $281.55 to the council of this village, and asked the council to reimburse him for that amount, claiming that he had expended said amount in March, 1913, in employing secret service men relative to the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor in Loudonville. Mr. ——— bases his claim under section 6139, General Code. The money was expended by Mr. ——— without the knowledge or consent of the council. Fines have been collected in the sum of $150.00 during the month of April, 1913, on account of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors within said village.

"I would appreciate an opinion from you as to whether or not the council can legally reimburse Mr. ——— wholly or in part."

Section 6139, General Code, provides:

"The council of a city or village, by ordinance, may provide for the destruction of intoxicating liquor found to have been kept for illegal sale or distribution, or implements or vessels used for such illegal sale or distribution. Such council may use any part of the fines, collected for the violation of the local option law, for hiring detectives or secret service officers to secure the enforcement of such law, and may appropriate not more than one hundred dollars annually from the general revenue fund for enforcing the local option law when there are no funds available from such fines so collected."

As said by Goldsberry, J., in Powell vs. Ashville, 11 Nisi Prius (N. S.) 369, this section plainly confers upon municipal corporations authority to hire detectives to enforce the local option law.

It is to be observed that council may use the fines, or any part thereof, collected for the violation of the local option law for hiring detectives or secret service officers, and further that when there are no funds available from such fines that an amount not exceeding one hundred dollars per annum may be appropriated from the general revenue fund for such purpose. So that if your village council had passed ordinances providing for the hiring of detectives or secret service officers to secure the enforcement of local option laws, and had contracted with such officers, complying with all the requirements of law pertaining to such contracts, such detectives or secret service officers might be paid in an amount not exceeding the fines collected, if any there had been, or to the amount appropriated under section 6139 General Code, from the general fund. But as I understand your inquiry council had neither passed any ordinance providing for the hiring or contracting with any detectives nor did council or any officer of your village even attempt to make any contract with these detectives. In fact you state that Mr. ——— on his own motion, and without the knowledge and consent of council, hired and paid the detectives, and while the result of the activities of the detectives enriched the village treasury in the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars during the month of April, 1913, this fact attached no liability to the village.

Even if the detectives performed services for the village without any legal contract therefor, or at the instance of any of the village officers, but without complying with all the necessary requirements of the statute to make a valid contract, they would have no legal claim against the municipality, for it is well settled in Ohio that there could be no implied contract. (City of Wellston vs. Morgan, 65 O. S. 219.)

But in the case under discussion there was no contract of any kind with the municipality. The contract of the detectives was with Mr. ——— and they were paid by him under their contract and assert no claim against the village. Even if the detectives had a valid claim against the village and Mr.—— on his own volition, and without the knowledge and consent of the municipality, paid the amount agreed to be paid for their services, he would not have any claim against the village for the amount so voluntarily paid. He would be a volunteer. There was no obligation for him to make payment for the village nor did he have any interest which he was obliged to protect.

In the case of Wormer vs. Waterloo Ag. Works, 67 Iowa, 699 the court said:

"Where a person is in no manner bound, and on his own motion in the absence of a contract or expectation that he will be substituted in the place of a creditor, pays the debt of another he will be regarded as an inter-meddler and not entitled to subrogation."

In Aetna Life Ins. Co. vs. Middleport, 124 U. S. 534, speaking of the right of subrogation the court said:

"The right is never accorded in equity to one who is a mere volunteer in paying a debt of one person to another."

So it is readily seen that if Mr. ——— could not be subrogated even in a case where the municipality actually owed the debt to the detectives, there can be no possible ground on which he would be entitled to reimbursement either in whole or in part for moneys paid out by him to detectives who had no claim whatever of any kind against the municipality. It would be a mis-application of funds to make such payment, and any officer doing so would be liable for the amount paid out the same as on any other illegal payment.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that your council is entirely without authority to legally reimburse Mr. ——— in whole or in part for the amount of money he claims under his bill of $281.55.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNCILMAN APPOINTED BY MAYOR WITHIN THIRTY DAYS AFTER OCCURRENCE VACANCY SERVES AS DE FACTO MEMBER.—VOTE OF MAYOR IN ACCORDANCE WITH FRAUDULENT PRE-ELECTION PROMISE, VOID.

When a mayor in contravention of the terms of section 4226, General Code, appoints a member of council within thirty days after the occurrence of a vacancy therein, such appointee serves as a de facto member of council merely. All acts performed by him in such capacity are valid.

If a mayor, when casting the deciding vote upon a resolution to dismiss court proceedings in which the village is interested, acts solely in response to fraudulent pre-election promises without any regard to village rights, such vote is void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1913.

HON. W. O. WALLACE, Legal Counsel, Columbiana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of March 12, 1913, received. You state in your letter that on a regular meeting night of the village council, February 14, 1913, D. W. B. tendered his resignation as councilman, which resignation was accepted. The mayor, having been informed of Mr. B's intention to resign, had present at the meeting Mr. R. H. V., and, informing the members of the council that it was his duty to appoint a man to fill the vacancy, appointed R. H. V. and instructed council that they had authority to confirm the appointment, which council immediately did. You desire to know whether R. H. V. is a legal member of your village council.

Section 4236 of the General Code provides as follows:

"When the office of councilman becomes vacant, the vacancy shall be filled by election by council for the unexpired term. If council fail within thirty days to fill such vacancy, the mayor shall fill it by appointment."

Under said section 3246, General Code, it became the duty of council to fill the vacancy and the mayor had no authority to make the appointment at that time; his act in appointing R. H. V. to fill the vacancy was void, and council could have disregarded the appointment and filled the vacancy as provided by section 4236. However, R. H. V. was appointed by the mayor, and council by appropriate action confirmed the appointment and permitted him to act as a member of their body. It appears from your letter that shortly after February 4th the council, with R. H. V. sitting as a member and participating in the proceedings, passed a resolution to construct a general sewer system for your village, all members of the council being present and voting in favor of the resolution. You also state that subsequently thereto other proceedings were had by council; that the said R. H. V. was present and took part in those proceedings, without protest from other members of council.

Since R. H. V. actually performed the duties of the office of councilman, with an apparent right under claim of color of appointment or election, he was a de facto member of council and all his acts were valid; and the proceedings of council, had while he was acting as a de facto member, are legal and binding on the corporation, if otherwise in compliance with law. Ex Parte Strang, 21, O. S., 617; Ermston vs. Cincinnati, 9 Ohio Decisions, 657.

Having decided that R. H. V. was a de facto member of council, and that his acts were legal, it becomes unnecessary to answer your remaining questions, except as to the right of council to dismiss the case referred to in your inquiry.

You state that some time in 1893 council duly passed an ordinance requiring sidewalks to be constructed of sawed stone and of a width of eight feet on North Main street; that in 1908 certain residents on North Main street laid a seven foot walk and secured an injunction restraining the village from tearing up said walk and making the same to conform to the ordinance and other sidewalks on said street, which case is now pending in the circuit court. You further state that the present council decided it was necessary to employ special counsel to try this case in the circuit court, and Mr. E. H. Moore and yourself were employed; but that on March 4 one of the members of council made a motion to dismiss this action, and council voted—three members for the dismissal and three members against it, counting Mr. V. as a member; that the mayor cast the deciding vote in favor of dismissing the action, and instructed the solicitor to have the same dismissed before the circuit court, and that the village pay the costs.

You also state in your letter that, prior to the election of village officers in 1911, you were informed that the mayor was soliciting the support of parties, and received the assurance of the support of such parties on the promise that if he were elected he would guarantee to have the suit dismissed.

If the council and the mayor acted in good faith, believing it was to the best interests of the village that litigation between the village and the citizens who brought the action should cease, their action was legal and proper. On the other hand, if the mayor, in casting the deciding vote, acted fraudulently, or cast it in order to carry out a pre-election promise, without any regard to the village rights, or those of the citizens, then, his vote in deciding this question would be void. However, that would be a hard matter to establish. I would advise, if you think, the interest of the city demands that this case be prosecuted, that you report these matters to the court, who will no doubt take proper action thereon.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOTAN,
Attorney General.

CEMETERY—BOARD OF TRUSTEES HAS NO POWER TO IMPROVE STREET FRONTING UPON PROPERTY.

Inasmuch as the statutes do not confer such power, the board of trustees of a cemetery in a village may not improve a street fronting on its property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 29, 1913.

HON. N. H. MCCLURE, Village Solicitor, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 6, 1913, you say:

"The cemetery grounds in the village of Medina are under the control of a board of trustees consisting of three members appointed by the mayor.

"The west side of the grounds front upon Spring Grove street and occupy the entire frontage upon the east side of said street between E. Liberty and E. Washington street.

"The cemetery board desire to have Spring Grove street improved by grading, paving, curbing, etc., but the village council, owing to restrictions in the matter of raising taxes do not feel justified in proceeding with the improvement.

"More than twenty-one years ago the cemetery board desiring to make a better approach to the cemetery moved back their fence a distance of some thirty feet along the entire frontage, making the street about sixty feet wide, and the public have entered upon and used the same as a street ever since, but without any formal dedication or acceptance of the land for street purposes by the village.

"The improvement which it is desired to make, with the exception of about six feet in width, will fall wholly within the boundary of the lands formerly owned by the cemetery board.

"The board has on hand a large fund which has been derived from the sale of lots and they propose to use a portion of this fund in paying the entire cost and expense of the improvement of said street from this source. No taxes are levied upon the property of the village for the maintenance of said cemetery."

You then ask whether under the above conditions the cemetery board has any authority to employ its funds arising from the sale of lots in making said proposed street improvements.

The duties and powers of cemetery trustees are statutory; and they can do nothing by way of expenditure of money which is not expressly covered by the law.

Section 4178, General Code, gives the cemetery trustees the same power and imposes the same duties as the director of public service in cities.

Section 4162, General Code, says the said director shall direct all improvements and embellishments of the grounds and lots, protect and preserve them, etc.

Section 4165, General Code, gives the director authority to determine the price and sell lots, and give receipts for the money.

Section 4166, General Code, says he shall not charge more for the sale of lots "than is necessary to reimburse the corporation for the expense of lands purchased or appropriated for cemetery purposes, and to keep in order and embellish the grounds."

The power to improve streets in municipal corporations is conferred on the municipality by section 3629 of the General Code.

Section 3714 gives the council care, supervision and control of public streets in the municipality.

The municipal code provides that improvements of streets shall be made under the supervision of council; and the assessments for so much thereof as is just, shall be made upon the adjoining property. There is nothing in the statutes authorizing cemetery trustees to improve streets which belong to the municipality; and they can not do so without a statute to that effect. No money can be expended by them except as expressly provided for. The money raised from sale of lots must be used only for the purposes enumerated in the statutes heretofore quoted; and street improvements do not fall within the term "embellishment of the grounds." Any such use of the money is a diversion of such funds from the lawful purpose for which the same was raised and is not permissible.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BONDS ISSUED UNDER THE BENSE ACT FOR INSTALLATION OF SEWER WORKS AND WATER WORKS UPON ORDER OF THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH, NOT EXEMPTED FROM FIFTEEN MILL LIMIT OF SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW.

Inasmuch as bonds issued under the Bense act, sections 1249 and 1261, General Code, providing for the installation of sewer works upon the order of the state board of health, are not expressly exempted from the fifteen mill limit of the Smith One Per cent. law, such limitations may not be exceeded in making levies for the purpose of paying the interest or principal of such bonds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1913.

HON. HARRY A. SMITH, Counsel for the village of Caldwell, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 18, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Under the Bense act, sections 1249-1261, General Code of Ohio, can bonds be issued by a village, making the tax rate exceed the 15 mill limit?"

The sections referred to by you, and known popularly by the name which you give to them, were passed in 1908, 99 O. L., 74. They provide in effect that under certain circumstances the state board of health may order a municipal corporation to install works for disposing of sewage or acquiring a purer water supply. Section 1259, General Code, is the only section in the act relating to the financing of such a project. It provides as follows:

> "Each municipal council, department or officer having jurisdiction to provide for the raising of revenues by tax levies, sale of bonds, or otherwise, shall take all steps necessary to secure the funds for any such purpose or purposes. When so secured, or the bonds thereof have been authorized by the proper municipal authority, such funds shall be considered as in the treasury and appropriated for such particular purpose or purposes, and shall not be used for any other purpose. The bonds authorized to be issued for such purpose shall not exceed five per cent. of the total value of all property in any city or village, as listed and assessed for taxation, and may be in addition to the total bonded indebtedness otherwise permitted by law. The question of the issuance of such bonds shall not be required to be submitted to a vote."

It is to be observed that this section exempts the bonded indebtedness incurred under its favor from the limitations of the law, but is silent respecting the levy, and dispenses with the necessity of a vote on the bonds. There was, therefore, no purpose at the time this act was passed to create special levying power.

The Smith One Per Cent. Law, so called, being sections 5649-2 to 5649-5b, inclusive, General Code, was passed in 1911, and in comprehensive language, which I need not quote here, imposes limitations upon all levies made by a municipal corporation, with certain exceptions; among which, levies for the purposes of the so-called Bense act are not included. It is true that some of these exceptions are of levies made for purposes such as to replace destroyed county infirmaries or children's homes, etc. But the fact that these levies are of a nature similar to that of levies for the purposes specified in the Bense act merely strengthens the inference that the legislature, in enacting the Smith law, did not intend to exclude levies for the purposes mentioned in the Bense act from the limitations therein provided for. Having mentioned a number of similar things, and having failed to mention the levies in question, it necessarily follows, on familiar principles of statutory construction, that the levy in question cannot be regarded as exempted from the limitations in question.

In short, I know of no reason, save only the fact that proceedings under the Bense act are more or less compulsory, upon which it could be claimed that levies for its purposes are exempt from the limitations of the Smith One Per Cent Law, or from any of them, including even the five mill limit and the ten mill limit thereof, as well as the fifteen mill limit, to which you refer in your question. The suggested reason bears on the policy of the legislation, however, and not upon its interpretation. It affords, perhaps, grounds for a contention that the levies in question ought to be exempted from the Smith law limitations; but it does not afford sufficient ground for holding that they are exempt from such limitations in the face of plain statutory provisions to the contrary.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ORIGINAL MAP EMPLOYED IN INCORPORATION PROCEEDINGS OF A VILLAGE MUST BE DEPOSITED WITH AND RETAINED BY COUNTY RECORDER.

Under both sections 3524 and 3530, General Code, which specifically provide for the filing with and retention by the county recorder of all papers employedin the proceedings for the incorporation of a village, the original map must be left in the county recorder's office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19, 1913.

HON. A. M. BROWN, Solicitor, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I desire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the date of June 6, 1913, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "As legal counsel for the village of Holloway, Ohio, tl ere has been submitted to me for my opinion the following proposition.
> "When the village was incorporated a map was made and with the petition for incorporation, filed with the county commissioners; and later was filed with the recorder for record. Query: Should the original map, after record, be delivered to the agent of the petitioners of the village, or retained and filed by the recorder in the recorder's office?"

In reply thereto I desire to say that section 3517, of Tit. XII, Div. 1, Ch. 2, of the General Code, provides that villages may be created and incorporated in the manner provided in this title. Section 3517 of the General Code provides in substance, that the inhabitants of any territory laid off into village lots, a plat of which territory has been acknowledged and recorded as is provided with respect to deeds, or the inhabitants of any territory which has been laid off into such lots and surveyed and platted by an engineer or surveyor, who certified thereon under oath to its correctness, and which is recorded as is provided with respect to deeds, etc., may obtain the organization of a village in the manner provided in this title.

Section 3518 of the General Code provides how the application for such incorporation shall be made and that the same shall be made by petition to the county commissioners as follows:

> "Application for such purpose shall be made by petition, which, except as provided in the last preceding section, shall be signed by not less than thirty electors, residing within the proposed corporate limits, and addressed to the county commissioners, accompanied by an accurate map of the territory."

Sections 3519, 3520 and 3521 of the General Code, respectively, provide what such petitions shall contain; the time and place and the hearing of such petition and the giving of notice of the time and place of such hearing; and how such hearing shall be conducted and provides the manner whereby those opposed to incorporation may contest the granting of the prayer of such petition.

Section 3522 of the General Code provides that if such petition is granted by the commissioners, then the commissioners shall cause an order to be entered on their journal to the effect that the corporation may be organized.

Section 3523 of the General Code provides that the county commissioners shall deliver a certified transcript of their proceedings, together with all of the papers, including the map, to the county recorder, as follows:

> "The commissioners shall cause to be entered on their journal all their orders and proceedings in relation to such corporation, and they shall cause a certified transcript thereof, signed by a majority of them, to be delivered, together with the petition, map and all other papers on file relating to the matter, to the recorder of the county, at the earliest time practicable."

Section 3524 of the General Code prescribes the duty of the county recorder in relation to such papers, as follows:

> "The recorder shall file the transcript and other papers in his office, and at the expiration of sixty days thereafter, unless enjoined as hereinafter provided, he shall make a record of the petition, transcript, and map in the proper book of records and preserve in his office the orginal papers delivered to him by the commissioners, certifying thereon that the transcript, petition, and map are properly recorded."

In this connection it is to be noted that said section 3524 requires that the county recorder shall preserve in his office the original papers which are delivered to him by the commissioners, in accordance with said section 3523, supra, certifying on the same that they are properly recorded. Another method for the incorporation of villages is also provided by section 3526 of the General Code, which provides in substance that a petition for the incorporation of a village may be submitted to the trustees of the township, or, if the territory to be incorporated is located in more than one township, then such petition may be filed with the trustees of that township in which a majority of the inhabitants reside.

Sections 3527 and 3528 of the General Code provide for the holding of an election and the procedure to be followed in holding such election, for the purpose of determining whether or not a majority of the electors residing in such territory are favorable to such incorporation.

Section 3530 of the General Code provides that the trustees shall make a certified transcript of their proceedings and deliver the same to the county recorder, together with the petition and plat or map, and that said recorder shall make a record of such transcript, plat or map in the public book of records, and preserve the same in his office, as follows:

> "The trustees shall make a certified transcript of the journal entries of all their proceedings and a majority of them having signed it, with the original petition and plat they shall deliver it to the county recorder, who shall forthwith make a record of the petition, transcript and plat or map, in the public book of records, and preserve in his office the original papers delivered to him by the trustees, and certify thereon that the transcribed petition and map are properly recorded. When the recorder has so made such record, he shall certify and forward to the secretary of state a transcript thereof."

Said sections 3524 and 3530 of the General Code, Supra, are identically alike in their provisions in that all the papers including the map shall be recorded with and preserved in the office of the county recorder, whether incorporation is accomplished through the county commissioners under sections 3517 to 3525 inclusive, of the General Code, or through the township trustees under sections 3526 to 3531 inclusive, of the General Code.

For the reasons that both of said sections, to wit, 3524 and 3530 of the General Code, supra, specifically provide that the county recorder shall preserve in his office all papers delivered to him, either by the county commissioners or the township trustees, as the case may be, and inasmuch as the map is specifically included in the list of all the papers to be so delivered by the county commissioners or the township trustees to the county recorder—it is the opinion of this department, in direct answer to your question, that the original map, after being recorded in the county recorder's office, should be retained by the county recorder and preserved in the office of the county recorder.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—INTEREST IN SINKING FUND LEVIES—AUTHORITY OF COUNCIL FOR BORROWING MONEY—NOTES OF A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION.

1. As between the 1910 tax limitation and the one per cent. limitation, the distinction which has been universally adopted is that the lesser in amount must apply. If the levy subject to the 1910 limitation exhausts the limitation before the one per cent. limitationis reached, then the one per cent. limitation in a sense does not apply. If the levies subject to the one per cent. limitation exhausts that limitation, then the 1910 limitation does not apply.

2. Interest and sinking fund levies, to provide for the retirement of bonded indebtedness created prior to June 1, 1911, or thereafter, by vote of the people, are not subject to the one per cent. limitation, but are subject to the 1910 limitation.

3. The sole authority of council for borrowing money is found in section 3913, General Code. Under the provisions of this section notes may be issued in any fiscal year in anticipation of revenue funds, but these notes must not run for a longer period than six months.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 26, 1913.

MR. E. E. JACKSON, Solicitor for the Village of Rockford, Rockford, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 9th, requesting my opinion on the following questions:

"1. Under section 5649-3, General Code, may there be levied and collected in a taxing district an amount in excess of that produced by a rate of ten mills, if such excessive amount is within the limitation measured by the taxes levied in the year 1910 therein?

"2. May a council of a village borrow money on certificate of indebtedness running beyond the succeeding tax distribution period for the purpose of purchasing machinery for the water works; or must the borrowing power for such purpose be asserted by the issuance of bonds?"

Sections 5649-2 and 5649-3, General Code, are both involved in answering your first question. I quote the material portions of them:

"Except as otherwise provided in section 5649-4 and 5649-5 of the General Code, the aggregate amount of taxes that may be levied on the taxable property in any county, township, city, village, school district or other taxing district, for the year 1911 and any year thereafter, including taxes levied under authority of section 5649-1 of the General Code, and levies for state, county, township, municipal, school and all other purposes, shall not in any one year exceed in the aggregate the total amount of taxes that were levied upon the taxable property therein of such county, township, city, village, school district or other taxing district, for all purposes in the year 1910, provided, however, that the maximum rate of taxes that may be levied for all purposes, upon the taxable property therein, shall not in any one year exceed ten mills on each dollar of the tax valuation of the taxable property of such county, township, city, village, school district or other taxing district for that year, and such levies in addition thereto for sinking fund and interest purposes as may be necessary to provide for any indebtedness heretofore incurred or any indebtedness that may hereafter be incurred by a vote of the people.

Section 5649-3. * * * If in any year the taxing authorities of any taxing district shall desire to raise a less amount of taxes for a particular purpose than was levied for such purpose in the year 1910, the amount of taxes that may be levied for another or other purposes may be correspondingly increased; the intent and purpose of this act being to provide the total amount of taxes which may be levied in the year 1911 or in any year thereafter, for all purposes, shall not exceed in the aggregate, the total amount of taxes levied in the year 1910, plus six per cent. thereof for the year 1912, nine per cent. for the year 1913, and twelve per cent. thereof for any years thereafter, or, such less amount as may be produced by the levy of a maximum rate of ten mills on each dollar of the tax valuation of the taxable property therein, of any county, township, city, village, school district or taxing district, for that year, whether such taxes be levied for the same or other purposes, except to the amount of such levies as may be made for interest and sinking fund purposes as provided in section 5649-2 of the General Code as herein enacted, for emergencies as provided in section 5649-4 of the General Code and such additional levies as may be authorized by a vote of the people as provided in section 5649-5 of the General Code as herein enacted."

Whether or not the 1910 limitation imposed by these original sections is now in force, and whether or not an act passed by the last session of the general assembly, amending these sections so as to eliminate therefrom the 1910 tax limitation, has come into effect, are questions involved in a case now pending in the supreme court. Because of the view which I take of the case, however, it is perhaps not necessary to await the supreme court's decision, which, indeed, may be given publicity before this opinion reaches you.

The construction of these sections which has been universally adopted is that whichever of the two limitations, as between the 1910 tax limitation and the one per cent. limitation, is the lesser in amount must apply. That is to say, if the levies subject to the 1910 limitation exhaust that limitation before the one per cent. limitation is reached, then, the one per cent. limitation, in a sense, does not apply at all; conversely, if the levies subject to the one per cent. limitation exhaust that limitation then, despite the fact that the 1910 tax limitation may be larger in amount, there is no authority to violate the former because of this fact, and the latter has no such application.

I beg leave to point out, however, that interest and sinking fund levies, to provide for the retirement of bonded indebtedness created prior to June 1, 1911, or thereafter by vote of the people, are not subject to the one per cent. limitation but are subject to the 1910 tax limitation; so that the two limitations are not upon precisely the same thing. It may be that the village, of which you are the solicitor, is required to make levies of this sort. If that is the case such levies are not within the one per cent. limit at all. The exact application of the proper construction of the above quoted sections to your village cannot be stated without full knowledge of the facts.

Answering your second question, I beg to state that the sole authority of council to borrow money otherwise than in anticipation for special assessments is that found in section 3913, General Code. Under this provision the issuance of notes in anticipation of the general revenue fund in any fiscal year is authorized; but it is expressly required that the certificates shall not run for a longer period than six months. There being no other provision authorizing the borrowing of money on notes, I am constrained to advise that while council can, for the purpose you mention, borrow money on notes to run for a period of six months, in supposed anticipation of the general revenue fund, money cannot be borrowed on notes to run for a period longer than six months, or otherwise than in anticipation of such general revenue fund.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY DITCHES—PROPERTY OWNERS IN A VILLAGE MAY NOT START DITCH PROCEDURE—JOINT DITCH PROCEEDINGS.

1. When the boundaries of a municipal corporation become identical with those of a township, by strict compliance with the statutes, the municipality may take advantage of county ditch proceedings for the purpose of constructing and widening a ditch within the municipality.

2. Property owners in a village have no right to start ditch proceedings, under county ditch provisions, as there is no provision therefor, and they are not permitted to start ditch proceedings under municipal law.

3. Property owners in an adjoining township have no right to compel a village council to join with them in a joint ditch proceeding. Under section 6496, General Code, when a proposed improvement, which passes through or into a municipality, has been petitioned for by the residents outside corporation, the mayor upon being served with a copy of the petition and notice of its pendency is obliged to notify the council therefor; whereupon the council may confer with the commissioners with regard to such improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 11, 1913.

HON. WILLIAM MATHEWS, Solicitor, Village of Bay, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of December 16, 1912, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "In order that we may conform to the practice of other villages, it would be a great help if we had your advice on the following:
> "The statutes of Ohio provide minute proceedings for establishing and cleaning and widening ditches in townships. This village ceased to have a township government when it became a municipal corporation and also became a township with boundaries the same as a village. I have examined the statutes, but I can find no provision for the above ditch proceedings, which apply to villages. The officials of townships are allowed extra fees for these proceedings, but I cannot find that officials of villages have any right to accept such fees."

You then append the following questions:

1. "In the matter of ditches, is not our village limited to the general powers given them in which they have general right to establish proper drainage
2. "Have the property owners in a village any right to start ditch proceedings within the village?"
3. "Have the property owners in an adjoining township any right to compel the village council to join with them in joint ditch proceedings to establish or clean or widen a joint ditch?"

Answering question No. 1, section 3512 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, all township offices shall be abolished, and the duties thereof shall thereafter be performed by the corresponding officers of the city or village, except that justices of the peace and constables shall continue the exercise of their functions under municipal ordinances providing offices, regulating the disposition of their fees, their compensation, clerks and other officers and employes. Such justices and constables shall be elected at municipal elections. All property, moneys, credits, books, records and documents of such township shall be delivered to the council of such city or village. All rights, interests or claims in favor of or against the township, may be enforced by or against the corporation."

By this statute, when the limits of a municipal corporation become identical with those of a township, all township offices are abolished, but the duties thereof are transferred to the corresponding officers of the municipality, with the exception of the justices of peace and constables.

I have been able to find but two decisions which made comment upon this provision, in any way material to your inquiry. In the case of McGill vs. The State, 34 O. S., on page 251, in construing these acts as they existed prior to the enactment of the municipal code, the court said:

"The act of May 7, 1872, (69 Ohio L. 23) preserves the corporate existence of such township for the sole purpose of electing justices of the peace and constables, evidently to meet the constitutional requirement that justices of the peace shall be elected by townships. But for all other purposes the township organization in this class of cities and villages is abolished."

In the case of Curtiss v. McDougal, 26 O. S. 66, it was held that when the corporate limits of a city or village are identical with those of a township and by statute the office of township clerk was thereby abolished, under statutes which provided for depositing chattel mortgages with the township clerk, such mortgages should be deposited with the clerk of such city of village, if the mortgagor lived therein.

The legislature has conferred ample authority upon municipal corporations to establish the necessary drainage within the corporate limits. The mode of government described for a municipality, wherein the legislative powers are vested in a council consisting of representatives of the various portions of the municipality, are so entirely different from, and inconsistent with the authority conferred for the control of townships wherein the authorities conferred are vested in three trustees chosen at random, that it would seem highly improbable when the township lines have become identical with those of a municipal corporation and a municipal form of government given full sway within a territory, that the accumulative powers applicable to a township could also be intended to be exercised within the corporation. I am of the opinion that had such been the intent of the statute, the legislature would have made expression of the same in clear, direct and definite terms. The provision in the statute, therefore, transferring duties to corresponding officers must be construed to apply to only such duties as are necessary and applicable to a change of governmental system. An example of such duties is offered by the case of Curtis vs. McDougal in reference to the filing of chattel mortgages, which duty was in no wise provided for under a municipal form of government. This provision was to transfer duties; may also be held to be applicable to the obligations incumbent upon the municipal officers in reference to pending rights, claims and interests against the township. I therefore conclude that when the corporate limits become identical with those of a township, the corporation is confined to its municipal powers in ditch procedure and that individuals residing therein have no powers under the statute providing for prodecure in townships.

Also as regards your first question, reference should be made to section 6196 and section 6496 of the General Code. They are as follows:

Section 6494. "The council of a municipal corporation, by resolution, may authorize the mayor to present a petition, signed by him officially, and a bond to the county commissioners, to locate and construct a ditch described in the resolution, or authorize the mayor to sign officially a petition and bond for a ditch to be presented by parties interested whose lands are without the limits of the corporation, whenever the improvement will be conducive to the public health, convenience, or welfare of the whole or any portion of the inhabitants of the corporation. In such case the commissioners shall count the municipal corporation as an individual petitioner, and may direct the surveyor or engineer to locate the improvement in accordance with the petition, whether wholly within or wholly without, or partly within and partly without, the limits of the corporation. The surveyor or engineer, in making his schedule of lots and lands, benefited, may enumerate such lots and lands within or without the corporate limits, which will receive benefits to the health and welfare of their inhabitants."

Section 6492. "If the municipal improvement passes through or into a municipal corporation, the mayor of which has not signed the petition therefor, as provided in the next preceding section, he shall be notified of the pendency of the petition by being served with a copy thereof by the county auditor at the same time that the county commissioners are required by law to be notified. The mayor shall notify the council of the pendency of the petition, at its next regular meeting, or, if necessary, call a special meeting of the council therefor; and thereupon the council shall appoint a committee of its members, or the engineer of the corporation, or both, to meet the commissioners, at the time and place of their meeting and view, and confer with them in regard to such improvement."

Under these statutes, as construed by the court in the case of Village vs. Commissioners, 71 O. S., page 133, individual petitioners, living within the limits of a municipality, are excluded from the right of presenting a petition permitted to other residents of the county, under section 6446, General Code.

In the view of the court, under 6494 of the General Code, the only method by which a county ditch proceeding could be instigated from within a municipal corporation, would be by a petition signed by the mayor and authorized by the council, and when county ditch proceedings are instituted by property holders living without the municipality for the improvement of such a ditch, which is to pass through or into the municipality, the mayor of which municipality has not signed the petition, as provided by section 6494 of the General Code, that official is to be notified as therein provided, and council given an opportunity to confer with the commissioners with respect to the improvement.

The language of the court in this connection appears at pages 138 and 139 as follows:

"By section 2303, revised statutes, power and authority is vested in the council of any city or village to provide for the construction of ditches for necessary drainage within the corporation. And by section 1692, power is expressly conferred upon cities and villages within this state, 'to open, construct, and keep in repair sewers, drains and ditches' within the municipality; and section 2232, revised statutes, authorizes them, for such purposes, 'to appropriate, enter upon, and take, private property outside of the corporate limits.' From a consideration and comparison of these several statutory provisions, giving to each full force and effect, we are led to conclude that the manner in which drainage shall be accomplished within the municipal corporation is a matter primarily, and peculiarly, within the discretion and control of the municipality itself, by and through its legally constituted authorities. Dayton vs. Taylor's Admr., 62 O. S., 11, and we do not believe that it was the purpose or policy of the legislature to confer upon boards of county commissioner's jurisdiction and authority to locate and construct a ditch or drain within a municipal corporation, except where such municipality shall petition for the same, as provided in section 4483, or when the ditch or improvement being constructed by the commissioners, necessarily passes into or through the municipality as provided in section 4485."

I am of the opinion, therefore, that such a municipality may take advantage of the county ditch procedure by strict compliance with these two statutes.

Answering question 2, in view of the answer to question 1, I am of the opinion that in the village referred to by you, property owners have no right to start ditch proceedings, either under the township or county ditch laws and as there is no provision therefor, they are permitted no right to start ditch proceedings under municipal law.

Answering question 3, I find no statutory provision by which property owners in an adjoining township are given any right to compel a village council to join with them in joint ditch proceedings to establish or clean or widen a joint ditch. Under section 6496, General Code, above quoted, however, when a proposed improvement, which passes into or through a municipal corporation, has been petitioned for by residents outside of the corporation, the mayor upon being served with a copy of the petition and notice of its pendency, is obliged to notify the council thereof, whereupon the council may confer with the commissioners with regard to such improvement.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOND ISSUE—ASSESSMENT—INTEREST ON BOND ISSUE—COMPUTING INTEREST ON BOND ISSUE—SINKING FUND.

When bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of an assessment in an amount considerably greater than the amount of the assessment as it subsequently develops and the proceedings have been had in good faith, the interest on the entire issue of bonds is properly chargeable against the property owners as a part of the assessment. In computing interest so charged, there may be taken into consideration the anticipated earnings of the excessive amount paid into the sinking fund in the manner provided by section 3804, General Code, and invested in the manner provided by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 9, 1913.

HON. CILTON H. STOLL, Village Solicitor, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 29th in which you submit for my opinion the following question:

"The village of London has issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments to pay the property owner's portion of paving a certain street, bonds in the amount of $16,000. Subsequent to the issue of these bonds it has been discovered that the actual assessable cost of the improvement, exclusive of the interest on the bond indebtedness aforesaid will amount to only about $12,000. In determining the total cost of the improvement upon the basis of which assessments are to be made, should interest on the entire $16,000 of the bonds issued in anticipation of assessments be included therein; or must the interest to be included in the portion of the costs to be assessed against the property owners be limited to that upon the sum of $12,000?"

I have stated the question as I understand it to have arisen in your mind. That is, I understand that the whole $16,000 of bonds has been issued in anticipation of the collection of the special assessments alone, and that the money borrowed to meet the village's one-fiftieth of the entire cost and cost of intersections and paving in front of public places, etc., is separately provided for by a different bond issue. My opinion will be written upon this understanding.

Section 3896 General Code, which you cite, seems to me clearly to furnish on its face an answer to your question. It provides in part as follows:

"The cost of any improvement contemplated in this chapter (i. e. the cost assessable against property owners) shall include * * * interest on bonds, when bonds have been issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments, and any other necessary expenditure."

In connection with which section must be read certain other sections. For example section 3932 provides:

"Premiums and accrued interest received by the corporation from a sale of its bonds shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be by them applied on the bonded debt and interest account of the corporation, but the premiums and accrued interest upon bonds issued for special assessments shall be applied by the trustees of the sinking fund to the payment of the principal and interest of those bonds and no others."

Section 3817 of the General Code provides:

"When bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of the assessment, the interest thereon shall be treated as part of the cost of the improvement for which assessment may be made. If such assessment or any installment thereof is not paid when due, it shall bear interest until the payment thereof at the same rate as the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, and the county auditor shall annually place upon the tax duplicate the penalty and interest as therein provided."

Section 3804 General Code provides:

"When an unexpected balance remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds, the whole or part of which bonds are still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for, is no longer needed for the purpose for which such fund was created, it shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied in the payment of the bonds."

In my opinion interest on the entire amount of bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments is properly chargeable against the property owners as a part of the cost of the improvement for which assessment may be made.

Section 3817 General Code read in connection with section 3896 explicitly so provides. No statute requires that the amount of bonds shall correspond exactly with the total cost, exclusive of interest, for which it may be subsequently ascertained the improvement may be constructed. It is the evident intention of the statutes that the council shall not be required to wait until the actual cost of the improvement is ascertained before issuing the bonds of the municipality; but that an estimate of the total cost and the portion thereof to be assessed against abutting property be first made as a basis of the issuance of bonds. The statutes which I have quoted contemplate the possibility of an estimate too liberal for the actual needs of an improvement and provide explicitly what shall be done with the unexpended proceeds of bonds issued under such a liberal estimate and with premiums and accrued interest thereof.

It is clear therefore, that in the absence of fraud, at least, there is nothing illegal in the issuance of bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments in an amount which may subsequently develop to be considerably in excess of the principal sum of the assessable costs. When bonds are so issued the municipality becomes bound for their payment when due and for the payment of the interest thereon. Its obligation to the holders of its bonds is not directly bound up with the obligation of the assessable property owners to it. Thus it was held prior to the enactment of section 3817, supra, that the interest upon the deferred installments of the assessments need not correspond with the interest which the municipality is required to pay to the bond-holders; so that if the municipal corporation succeeds in refunding its bonds at a lower rate of interest than that for which it was originally bound, the property owners are not entitled to participate directly in the benefits of such lower rate of interest. Borger vs. Columbus, 3 N. P. n. s. 261.

It is my opinion, therefore, that when bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of an assessment in an amount considerably greater than the amount of the assessment as it subsequently develops, and the proceedings have been had in good faith and without fraud, the interest on the entire issue of bonds is properly chargeable against the property owners as a part of the assessment. I should add, however, that in computing the interest so chargeable there may, in equity, be taken into account the anticipated earnings of the excessive amount when paid into the sinking fund in the manner provided by section 3804 and invested in the manner provided by law. If it should happen that these anticipated earnings should equal the interest payable to the bondholders on account of the excessive amount (which is improbable) the property owners would, of course, by this method of figuring be relieved from the payment of the additional interest.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE ORDINANCE VALID WITHOUT MAYOR'S SIGNATURE—MAYOR OF A VILLAGE HAS NO AUTHORITY TO CHANGE THE WORDING OF AN ORDINANCE.

The signature of the mayor of a village is not necessary to the validity of an ordinance. His duty to sign an ordinance is ministerial. The ordinance will go into effect without his signature.

As a monthly payroll is similar to any other ordinance passed by council, the mayor has no authority to alter it in any way. It will go into effect without his signature should he refuse to sign it.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1913.

HON. CHARLES J. FORD, Legal Counsel, Geneva, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 12th you submitted the following inquiries:

"First. Whether the signature of the mayor of a village is necessary to the validity of an ordinance."

"Second. Whether there is anything about a monthly pay ordinance requiring the mayor's signature to make it valid, it being nothing more than an ordinance and being passed by unanimous vote of council and certified to by the clerk and whether the mayor has a right to alter the ordinances by drawing his pencil through certain items to which he objects."

The provision in section 4211, General Code, providing that the power of council shall be legislative only and that it shall perform no administrative duties whatever applies only to cities and does not in any way apply to villages. Consequently, villages have not only legislative but administrative powers as well.

Section 4224, General Code, which applies equally to cities and villages provides in part as follows:

"The action of council shall be by ordinance or resolutions, and on the passage of each ordinance or resolution the vote shall be taken by 'yeas' and 'nays' and entered upon the journal. * * * *"

Section 4227, General Code, which applies equally to cities and villages provides in part as follows:

"Ordinances, resolutions and by-laws shall be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer and clerk of the council. * * * As soon as a by-law, resolution or ordinance is passed and signed, it shall be recorded by the clerk in a book to be furnished by the council for the purpose."

Section 4255, General Code, which applies solely to villages, provides that the mayor of a village shall be the president of council, and shall preside at all regular and special meetings thereof, but shall have no vote except in case of a tie.

Section 4234, General Code, which provides that every ordinance or resolution of council shall, before it goes into effect, be presented to the mayor for approval, is limited in its provisions to cities only. Consequently the mayor of a village has no veto power over ordinances and resolutions passed by a village council.

It is to be seen, therefore, from the above quoted sections that the mayor of a village is the presiding officer of council and that it is his duty together with the clerk of council to authenticate the ordinances, resolutions and by-laws passed by council but that as mayor of a village he has no vote power whatsoever. As it is stated in section 4227, General Code, that ordinances, resolutions and by-laws shall be authenticated by the signature of the mayor as presiding officer of council the question arises as to whether or not the signature of such mayor is necessary to the validity of the ordinance. If such signature is necessary to the validity of the ordinance the effect would be that the power of a mayor of a village over the ordinances of a village would be greater than the powers of a mayor of a city over the ordinances of a city for the reason that under section 4234, General Code, on the failure of the mayor of a city to approve an ordinance within ten days or return it to council with his objections stated such ordinance takes effect in the same manner as if the mayor had signed it. It can hardly be doubted that the provisions of section 4227, General Code, requiring the signature of the mayor to ordinances, resolutions and by-laws is directory merely and not mandatory.

In the case of Blanchard et al. vs. Bissell 11 O. S. 96, decided at the December term 1860, the sixth paragraph of the syllabus reads as follows:

"An assessment of taxes made pursuant to an ordinance passed by a city council, is not rendered invalid by the omission of the presiding officer of the council to sign the ordinance."

Scott, J., rendering the unanimous opinion of the court on page 101 states as follows:

> "It was further objected, by the same party, that the ordinance which was passed by the city council in February, 1853, submitting the question of annexation to the vote of the electors of the city of Toledo, was never signed by the presiding officer of the council. But if, as the plaintiff below avers in his petition, this ordinance was, in fact, regularly passed by the council and recorded among their proceedings by the proper officer, we would be unwilling to hold that the omission of the presiding officer to attach to it his signature, would render the election held pursuant to its provisions wholly void. Its validity depends, as we think, upon the fact that it was regularly passed by the council, and this fact may be shown by the records."

and further in said opinion on page 102-3 says:

> "But it is further objected by the petition of the plaintiff below, that the ordinance of the city council for the levying of the taxes sought to be enjoined was not signed by the presiding officer of the council. We are strongly inclined to think that the signature of the presiding officer was not essential to the validity of an ordinance of this kind. It is admitted to have been regularly passed, by the proper body, and to have been duly recorded by the proper officer. And though it be true, that the statute directs him to authenticate all ordinances by his signature, it does not follow that his signature is essential to their validity."

This opinion was rendered after the rule of court adopted in 1898 to the effect that the syllabus of opinions should be prepared by the judge rendering the opinion. This case has been cited with approval in the case of Fisher vs. Graham, I Cincinnati Superior Court Report 113 by Taft, J., on page 115 wherein he states as follows:

> "An ordinance was not void because it was not signed by the president of the council, if it were actually passed and recorded. (11 Ohio St. 101). That was an ordinance for annexation, which was not signed by the president of the council. 'Though it be true that the statute directs him to authenticate all ordinances by his signature, it does not follow that his signature is essential to its validity.' " and again in the case of Street Railway Company vs. Street Railway Company 3 Ohio Circuit Decisions 504-5 therein the court says:

> "It appeared upon the hearing that the ordinance of March 27, 1889, and that of July 28, 1890, copies of which are attached to the petition, were never, in fact, signed by the presiding officers of the two branches of the council. The names of these officers were signed thereto before publication by the city clerk, in conformity with a custom and practice of long standing. It was objected that as reason of this omission, and for many other causes suggested upon the hearing, the ordinances were invalid; that the clerk had no authority to record them, and that the record book in which they had been recorded was not, as to these ordinances, competent evidence. The journals of both branches of the council, showing the due passage of the two ordinances, were offered and received in evidence. The court overruled the objections of counsel for plaintiff in error, and permitted the record of the ordinances to be given in evidence. It is now insisted that in this particular the court erred. We think that the court committed no error in receiving this evidence. Revised Statutes, sections 1693, 1699; Blanchard vs. Bissell 11 O. S. 96, 102-3; Chase vs. Hunter decided at the present term of this court."

The entire question has been summed up in the 21st American and English Encyclopedia of Law, Second Edition, 965 as follows:

"The true rule undoubtedly is that where the mayor or presiding officer of the city council is required simply to sign ordinances, and it is apparent that his act is ministerial in its nature and required merely to furnish evidence of the authenticity of the enactment, and the idea of approval is not involved, the requirement is directory only, and an omission to comply therewith will not render the ordinance invalid. But where a requirement that the mayor shall sign ordinances is couched in such language or appears in such a connection as to make it apparent that such signature is required as evidence of his approval, the requirement is mandatory."

See Dillon on Municipal Corporations 607; McQuillan on Municipal Ordinances 149

It has also been summed up in 25 Cyc 357 wherein it is said:

"Laws and charters providing that the mayor shall sign ordinances and resolutions are of such variant tenor or have received such different construction that they can scarcely be reconciled or harmonized. In some cases where signing seems to be treated as the equivalent of approval, the rules stated in the preceding section are followed. In others where the signing seems to be for the purpose of certification rather than approval, the provisions are held to be directory rather than mandatory, and lack of signature does not vitiate the measure, although in some jurisdictions lack of signature invalidates a by-law.

There can be no doubt that under the statutes of Ohio the provision that the ordinances and resolutions and by-laws passed by council shall be authenticated by the presiding officer and the clerk in so far as such provision relates to ordinances, resolutions and by-laws passed by a village council is not in order to give the mayor any right of approval or disapproval of such ordinances. This is clearly shown from the fact that the provision that every ordinance or resolution of council shall, before it goes into effect, be presented to the mayor for approval under section 4224 General Code, is by the provision of such section itself applicable only in cities. Consequently the signing of village ordinances by the mayor thereof is solely for the purpose of verification and not for approval.

A case exactly similar to the question submitted by you is found in Commonwealth vs. Williams, 120 Ky. 314, the first paragraph of the syllabus of which is as follows:

1. "Ordinances, Validity, Adoption, Publication. Approval by mayor. Under Kentucky statutes, section 3638 part of charter of cities of the fourth class, which provides that 'an ordinance shall be signed by the mayor, attested by the clerk, and published at least once in a newspaper in said city * * * and shall be in force from and after the publication thereof.' It appearing that the mayor of cities of the fourth class has no veto power, the council is the legislative body of the city, and an ordinance of such city is valid when passed by a vote of at least three members of the council and published, although it may not have been signed or approved by the mayor."

The evidence showed in that case that the mayor of the city in question had not signed the ordinance at the time that the offense charged in that case was committed, and, therefore, that the ordinance was not then in force. It further appears that the veto power had not been conferred upon the mayor and the court on page 319 after stating the rule set forth in 21 American and English Encyclopedia of Law, supra, says:

> "It will be observed, from the provisions of the statute above quoted, that the veto power is not conferred upon the mayor. His only power is to preside at the meetings of the council and to vote in case of a tie. The council is the legislative body of the city. Ordinances have validity or effect when passed by the vote of at least three members of the council and published. To hold that the failure of the mayor to sign an ordinance destroys its validity would be in effect to confer on him the veto power, withheld from him by the statutes; for he could in any case, by withholding his signature, accomplish the same result as by a veto of the ordinance. This is not the meaning or purpose of the statute. Its purpose is simply to provide an evidence of the authenticity of the ordinance by the signature of the mayor, and is as to this directory only."

From all of the foregoing I am of the opinion that the signature of the mayor of a village is not necessary to the validity of an ordinance. His duty to sign an ordinance being ministerial only he can of course be mandamused so to do, but the ordinance would go into effect without his signature.

Answering your second inquiry I can see no distinction between what you term a monthly pay ordinance, and any other ordinance that is passed by a village council. There is no distinction made in the statutes, nor should there be. It is simply an ordinance of council of no greater magnitude than any other ordinance of council. Since the ordinance would go into effect without the signature of the mayor, and since the approval of the mayor is not neccessary or required in any way for village ordinances he is without authority to alter in any way an ordinance passed by council. Should he attempt so to do before attaching his signature as required by section 4227 General Code his act is a nullity and the ordinance is the same after such attempt to strike out as before. It is only the mayor of a city by virtue of section 4324 General Code who is permitted to approve or disapprove the whole or any item of an ordinance appropriating money, and not the mayor of a village. He is powerless to either approve or disapprove any ordinance, resolution or by-law of a village council.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ORDINANCE LEVYING SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS ON LOTS BOUNDING AND ABUTTING ON AN IMPROVEMENT OF A STREET BY PAVING NEED NOT BE PUBLISHED.

It is not necessary to publish an ordinance levying special assessments on lots bounding and abutting on an improvement of a street by paving, the fact being they are special ordinances and not general, and are in reality ordinances adopting an assessment previously made, notice of which has been given under section 3895, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 8, 1913.

HON. CLINTON H. STOLL, Village Solicitor, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of August 2, 1913, in which you ask:

> "Is it necessary to publish an ordinance levying a special assessment on lots bounding and abutting on an improvement of a street by paving, etc?"

Assessments by municipalities are controlled by Chapter 5 Division III, Title XII of the General Code, and you will find that notice of passage of the resolution to improve shall be served by the clerk of the council upon the owner of each piece of property to be assessed, if residents of the county or if not, or owners cannot be found, publication must be made; see section 3818, General Code.

This does not answer your question, as I understand you refer to an ordinance levying the assessments.

Section 3895, General Code, reads as follows:

> "Before adopting an assessment made as provided in this chapter, the council shall publish notice for three weeks consecutively, in a newspaper of general circulation in the corporation, that such assessment has been made, and that it is on file in the office of the clerk for the inspection and examination of persons interested therein."

Section 4227 reads:

> "Ordinances, resolutions and by-laws shall be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer and clerk of the council. Ordinances of a general nature, or providing for improvements shall be published as hereinafter provided before going into operation. No ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of ten days after the first publication of such notice. As soon as a by-law, resolution or ordinance is passed and signed, it shall be recorded by the clerk in a book to be furnished by the council for the purpose."

This question was before the circuit court of Lucas county in the case of Brick Co. vs. Toledo, 10 C.C. (N.S.) 137 and it was held there that:

> "It is urged that thereby the report was made a part of the ordinance and should have been published with it. It appears that that was not done. But we are of the opinion that it was not necessary to publish this ordinance at all; so that we need not pass upon the question whether the schedule was made a part of the ordinance so that in case the publication of any part of it was required, the schedule should be published with it.

"Revised statute 1695 requires that:

"Ordinances of a general nature or providing for improvements shall be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the corporation.'

"This ordinance was not an ordinance providing for an improvement; the improvement had been provided for; and it was not an ordinance of a general nature, but was of a special nature."

To my mind this decision is decisive of the question submitted, is correct, and should be followed.

The answer to your question is: Publication of the so-called assessment ordinances is not necessary, the fact being they are special and not general, and are in reality ordinances adopting an assessment previously made, of which notice has been given under section 3895, G. C.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

THE LAW WHICH PROVIDES THAT WOMEN SHALL NOT WORK MORE THAN FIFTY-FOUR HOURS PER WEEK, APPLIES TO VILLAGES AND CITIES, EXCEPT MERCANTILE ESTABLISHMENTS, AND AS TO THESE IT APPLIES ONLY IN CITIES.

Amended section 1008, General Code, which provides that females shall not work at certain kinds of employment more than fifty-four hours per week, applies generally to villages and cities as to all establishments except mercantile establishments, and as to these latter it applies only in cities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1913.

HON. GEORGE W. ROSE, Village Solicitor, Glouster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 6th you state:

"O. L. 103, page 555 and 556 read as follows in part:

"Females over eighteen years of age shall not be employed or permitted or suffered to work in or in connection with any factory, workshop, telephone or telegraph office, millinery, or dressmaking establishment, restaurant or in the distributing or transmission of messages or in any mercantile establishment located in any city, more than ten hours in any one day, or more than fifty-four hours in any one week, etc.'

"I take it that it means just what it says, and that the above law will not apply to a village. Am I correct?"

The part section you quote is amended section 1008 of the General Code. This section was amended by inserting the following words:

"or in any mercantile establishment located in any city."

This was the sole amendment and the intention of the legislature was to make the so-called fifty-four hour law applicable to mercantile establishments in cities. There was no intention, nor do I think the language used justifies the interpretation that the entire law should only be applicable to establishments in cities. It applies generally to villages and cities as to all other establishments except mercantile establishments, and as to these latter it only applies to such establishments in cities.

In making this ruling I am construing the amended law as it no r stands, assuming its constitutionality, which I do not pass upon.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE MAY ISSUE BONDS FOR THE PURPOSE OF SECURING FUNDS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF ITS WATERWORKS SYSTEM.

A village may issue bonds, under the Longworth Act, to meet the expenses of drilling wells for the purpose of extending, enlarging, improving and securing a more complete waterworks system.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1913.

HON. J. C. MARTIN, Village Solicitor New Vienna, Wilmington, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 26, in which you request my opinion on the following question:

> "May a village issue bonds under the Longworth act for the purpose of securing new wells for waterworks purposes, and producing an additional water supply?"

Section 3939, General Code, provides that bonds may be issued under the limitations of the succeeding sections for the following specific purposes, among others:

> "11. For erecting or purchasing waterworks and supplying water to the corporation and to the inhabitants thereof."
> "2. For extending, enlarging, improving, repairing or securing a more complete enjoyment of a building or improvement authorized by this section * * *."

It seems reasonably clear to me that if the municipality were originally embarking upon the enterprise of securing a water supply it would find authority to borrow money for that purpose under paragraph 11, above quoted. In the procuring of a water supply it would be empowered, of course, to use such means as might, under the geological conditions in which it might find itself, seem most desirable, whether by the construction of a reservoir, the drilling of wells or otherwise.

Therefore, it would follow, I think, that the municipality might lawfully borrow money under the sub-section above referred to for the purpose of drilling wells for a new waterworks, in connection with the other works necessary to complete the entire equipment of the plant.

That being the case, then, I am of the opinion that paragraph 2 of section 3939, above quoted, affords sufficient authority for borrowing money for the purpose of drilling wells with a view to extending, enlarging, improving and securing a more complete enjoyment of the original improvement.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that a village may borrow money under the Longworth act for the purpose above referred to.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

VILLAGE COUNCIL MAY TAKE CENSUS IN ORDER TO DETERMINE NUMBER OF SALOONS THAT MAY BE PERMITTED UNDER THE LAW.

The council of a village has authority to take a census in order to determine the number of saloons that may be permitted, under the law, and may pay for taking such census out of any funds of the treasury not appropriated for any other purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 29, 1913.

HON. C. B. MCCLINTOCK, Solicitor for Village of Brewster, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 25th, 1913, you advise us that the village of Brewster now has a population of approximately six hundred, and that in order to determine the number of saloons permissible under the new liquor license law some of the members of council insist upon the village appropriating money so as to take the census, and you request our opinion as to whether the number of licenses permitted under the new liquor license law is to be determined by the population of the last census or the population at the time the license is allowed; also whether or not there is anything in the statutes which allow the village to appropriate money to take the census at this time.

Among the municipal powers granted are, section 3625, General Code, to take and authenticate a census of the municipality.

Section 24 of the license act provides:

> "Not more than one saloon shall be licensed in any township or municipality of less than five hundred population, nor more than one saloon for each five hundred population in other townships and municipalities."

The first paragraph of section 44 of the license act reads:

> "In determining the maximum number of licenses which shall be granted in any municipal corporation or township of the state, the license commissioners shall be governed in determining the population of said political subdivision by any official census which shall have been taken therein within the year next preceding that for which licenses shall be granted. If no such official census of the population has been taken, the board shall be governed by the latest estimates of the United States census bureau."

These sections make the matter clear and the council has the right to take and authenticate a census and the license commissioners are controlled by "any official census which shall have been taken therein within the year next preceding that for which licenses shall be granted and when no such census has been taken, the license commissioners are controlled by the latest estimates of the United States census bureau."

I am of the opinion that council has power to take a census of the village and to pay for the same out of any funds in the treasury not appropriated for some other purpose. Of course, if desired, the council or license commissioners can procure the latest estimates of the United States census bureau and act upon it.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

AT THE PRESENT TIME IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO OFFER MUNICIPAL BONDS TO THE STATE LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS FOR PURCHASE.

The act found in 103 Ohio Laws, 76, has not yet gone into effect, consequently, at the present time municipal bonds are not required to be offered for purchase to the State Liability Board of Awards.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1913.

HON. JOHN L. CANNON, Solicitor for the Village of Cleveland Heights, Marshall Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledging receipt of your letter of August 26, and noting your request therein for an early consideration of the question you present, which is as to whether or not municipal bonds, after having been offered to the sinking fund trustees of a municipality, and having been refused by them, must be offered for purchase to the state liability board of awards (or its successor, the industrial commission) as indicated by section 11 of the act found in 103 O. L. 76, therein designated as section 1465-58, General Code, I beg to advise as follows:

It is true that the act which you cite specifically requires bonds which have been refused by a municipal board of trustees of the sinking fund to be offered for purchase to the state liability board of awards.

Section 11 of the act provides inter alia:

> "And it shall be the duty of the boards or officers of the several taxing districts of the state in the issuance and sale of bonds of their respective taxing districts, to offer in writing to the state liability board of awards, prior to advertising the same for sale, all such issues as may not have been taken by the trustees of the sinking fund of the taxing district so issuing such bonds; and said board shall within ten days after the receipt of such written offer either accept the same * * * or any portion thereof at par and accrued interest, or reject such offer in writing; and all such bonds so purchased forthwith shall be placed in the hands of the treasurer of state * * * and it shall be his duty to collect the interest thereon as the same becomes due and payable, and also the principal thereof, and to pay the same, when so collected into the state insurance fund. The treasurer of state shall honor and pay all vouchers drawn on the state insurance fund for the payment of such bonds when signed by any two members of the board, upon delivery of said bonds to him when there is attached to such voucher a certified copy of such resolution of the board authorizing the purchase of such bonds. * * *"

I assume that you are familiar with the fact that by the act found in 103 Ohio Laws, page 95, and in particular by section 12 thereof, (103 O. L. 97), the newly created industrial commission succeeds to the powers and duties of the state liability board of awards.

Whenever the act found in 103 O. L. 76, was intended by the general assembly to become effective, I am of the opinion that it is not yet even the law in a complete sense. You are doubtless aware that within the ninety days prescribed by Article II, section 1 of the constitution, as amended, after the date when this act was filed by the governor in the office of the secretary of state, to wit, March 17, 1913, petitions were filed in the office of the secretary of state for the purpose of ordering a referendum thereon. Questions have been raised as to the sufficiency of these petitions, an as you are doubtless also aware the secretary of state is at present conducting a hearing into charges which have been made respecting the petitions. If a referendum election is held upon the petitions which have been presented it will be at the regular election in November of this year. (Article II, section 1c.)

If upon the hearing now in progress the secretary of state decides that the petitions are not sufficient, and if his decision be regarded as final, then "in such event ten additional days shall be allowed for the filing of additional signatures to such petition." (Article II, section 1g.)

The initiative and referendum provisions of the constitution while exceedingly detailed, do not prescribe two things which are of importance in this connection, viz.: The date from which the "ten additional days" shall run, and the date when, and as of which a law, against which a petition has been filed, shall go into effect, if the petition be held insufficient. In fact it is not specifically provided by section 1c or any other section in the new constitution as to when a law which has been referred to the people and has been approved by them shall go into effect. Presumably, however, the law becomes effective as of the date of its approval by the electors. It is seen, therefore, that the act which you cite, and the situation respecting it, at the present time, raise a number of very interesting questions which may occasion judicial interpretation of the constitution. In any view of the case, however, the act in question is not now in effect, even as a law. The petition challenged is under favor of section 1g of Article II," "presumed to be in all respects sufficient, unless not later than forty days before the election, it shall be otherwise proved." The effect of filing a sufficient petition is defined in section 1c of Article II as follows:

> "When a petition * * * shall have been filed with the secretary of state * * * ordering that such law * * * be submitted to the electors of the state * * * no such law shall go into effect until and unless approved by a majority of those voting upon the same."

Even if be assumed that the petition filed is insufficient, so long as it has not been officially determined to be so, the legislative act is not complete, and the act of the legislature is not in the full sense "law." Even after the official determination of insufficiency, should occur, the effectiveness of the law is apparently postponed until "ten additional days." Whether or not in that event further hearings might be had as to the sufficiency of the "additional signatures" is still another question.

At all events, however, the law in question is not yet in effect. Accordingly, I am of the opinion that at the present time municipal bonds are not required to be offered for purchase to the state liability board of awards, or rather, to the industrial commission.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A PERSON MAY NOT AT THE SAME TIME BE A MEMBER OF COUNCIL AND HOLD ANY OTHER PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT.

Under the provisions of section 4218, General Code, a person may not remain a member of council and at the same time hold any other public employment.

Where a member of council is holding another public office, he is a de facto officer and all measures passed by his vote would be legal, but he may be ousted from his office at any time.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1913.

MR. T. B. MATEER, Legal Counsel, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of September 8th you state:

> "In our village council we have one member who was elected two years ago and qualified, and on last January he was appointed and qualified as deputy sheriff of Morrow county, Ohio.
>
> "We also had a vacancy caused by the resignation of one of the members of the council and one J. D. Fate was appointed to fill the vacancy, he at that time being the treasurer of the county and now is acting as the deputy treasurer. The question has arisen—are either one of the above acting councilmen legally qualified to fill such position while holding the other public positions?
> "I, as city solicitor, held that they were not qualified as councilmen, and some other attorneys here have held that the deputy sheriff was qualified, and for that reason the mayor of the village has requested me to request the opinion of the attorney general.
>
> "I base my holding on section 4218, General Code, which provides that 'no member of the council shall hold any other public office or employment except that of notary public or member of the state militia, or be interested in any contract with the village. Any member who ceases to possess any of the qualifications herein required or removes from the village shall forfeit his office.'
>
> "Also the holdings under State ex rel. vs. Gaid, 8 C. C. N. S. 599.
> "The village will appreciate the opinion from your office."

It has been universally ruled by this department that the section quoted by you prohibits a person holding any other public office or employment and at the same time remaining a member of council. This prohibition undoubtedly extends to the offices held by the individuals in each case presented by you. These members, while occupying the position of councilmen, would, of course, be de facto officers, and all measures passed by their vote would be legal. The council, itself, however, may at any time declare their offices vacant, whilst they attempt to exercise the duties of both offices; or proceedings may be instituted in court to oust them.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE OWNING AND OPERATING MUNICIPAL LIGHT AND POWER PLANT MAY MAKE MINIMUM CHARGE OF FIFTY CENTS PER MONTH AND MAY OWN METERS AND RENT THE SAME.

Where a village owns and operates a municipal light and power plant, it may make a minimum charge of fifty cents per month per user. The village through its board of trustees of public affairs may retain the ownership of the meters and charge a reasonable rental of the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1913.

HON. BEN. H. DEWEY, Village Solicitor, Clyde, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 6, 1913, you say:

> "The village of Clyde, Ohio, owns and operates a municipal electric lighting and power plant and is about to put into effect a new schedule of rates. Will you kindly inform me whether or not there is any law which will prohibit the establishment of a minimum charge of $0.50 per user, and also as to whether or not the board of trustees of public affairs can require the payment of meter rent?"

I do not find much difficulty in answering your question.

Section 3618, General Code, gives municipal corporations the right to establish maintain and operate municipal lighting plants and to furnish the municipality and the inhabitants thereof with light. The same authority is more explicitly and extensively granted by section 3990, et seq, General Code.

Section 4357, General Code, provides for the establishment of a board of trustees of public affairs to have supervision of electric light plants and other public utilities. It only remains to ascertain what the duties and powers of this board are, in relation to the municipal electric light plant in your village.

Section 4361, General Code, as amended in 103 Ohio Laws, page 561, provides that said board shall manage, conduct and control electric light plants and other public utilities. Said board may also make such by-laws and regulations as it may deem necessary for the management of said public utilities, which shall have the validity of ordinances, unless repugnant to the constitution, state laws or other ordinances. In order to pay expenses, this statute further says that said trustees may assess a light, power or other utility rent, of sufficient amount, in such manner as they may deem most equitable, upon all tenements and premises supplied with light, water, etc., and if not paid may certify the same for collection as other taxes. In this section all the powers of director of public safety of cities are conferred on these village trustees of public affairs; and all powers and duties by statutes relating to waterworks are extended to electric light plants.

The supreme court of Ohio, 82 O. S., page 216, fully sustains the doctrine of the right of municipal corporations to enact and enforce such regulations as the above.

The powers of the board of trustees of public affairs, under the statute, are very extensive; and so long as their rules and regulations are reasonable, they can be enforced. The plant and all the necessary appliances, being the property of the village, it can make any reasonable rule of service of electricity to the inhabitants thereof, through its trustees aforesaid.

A minimum fee of $0.50 per user seems to me to be reasonable, as the current must be brought to the door of the consumer ready for use, and so maintained there in readiness for him, whether he uses it or not.

In my opinion, the right of the board to retain the ownership of the meters and charge a reasonable rental for their use, is a reasonable exercise of the authority vested in the said board by the statute.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WORKMEN EMPLOYED BY MUNICIPAL CORPORATION ON PUBLIC WORKS SHALL NOT WORK MORE THAN EIGHT HOURS PER DAY OR FORTY-EIGHT HOURS PER WEEK.

Municipal corporations are subject to the provisions of section 37, article 2, of the constitution and of the act in 103 Ohio Laws, 854, which provides that workmen engaged on public works shall not work more than eight hours per day or forty-eight hours per week. This applies to municipal corporations employing workmen on streets and highways.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 19, 1913.

HON. PIERCE D. METZGER, Solicitor of South Newburg, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 14 1913, you make inquiry as follows:

> "The council of the village of South Newburg request your opinion as to whether or not the village is required to observe what is known as the eight hour law with respect to employes of the village working upon streets and highways."

Section 37 of article 2 of the constitution of Ohio, as recently amended, provides:

> "Except in cases of extraordinary emergencies, not to exceed eight hours shall constitute a day's work, and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week's work, for workmen engaged on any public work carried on or aided by the state, or any political subdivision thereof, whether done by contract or otherwise."

The recent legislature passed an act to enforce this provision of the constitution. Section 1 of act of 103 Ohio 854, to be known as section 17-1, General Code, provides:

> "Except in cases of extraordinary emergencies, not to exceed eight hours shall constitute a day's work and not to exceed forty-eight hours a week's work, for workmen engaged on any public work carried on or aided by the state, or any political subdivision thereof, whether done by contract or otherwise; and it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation or association, whose duty it shall be to employ or to direct and control the services of such workmen to require or permit any of them to labor more than eight hours in any calendar day or more than forty-eight hours in any week, except in cases of extraordinary emergency. This section shall not be construed to include policemen or firemen.

The above constitutional provision and the act above quoted apply to any public work carried on "by the state, or any political subdivision thereof."

The question arises, is a municipal corporation a "political subdivision" of the state?

In Payne vs. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220, part of a syllabus reads:

> "A municipal corporation is a public institution created for public purposes. The municipality is a political subdivision or department of the state, governed, regulated and constituted by public law."

The above is quoted in volume 5, of Words and Phrases, at page 4620.

At page 907 of volume 31 of Cyc. it is said:

> "Political Division of the State. A division formed for the more effectual or convenient exercise of political power within the political localities."

The phrase "political subdivision" as used in the above constitutional provision is synonomous with the phrase "political division."

A municipal corporation is a political division formed to exercise functions of government. It is a political division subordinate to the state, and as such is a "political subdivision" of the state.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that a municipal corporation is subject to the provisions of section 37, article 2, of the constitution and of the act of 103 Ohio Laws 854, as to the number of hours which shall constitute a days work, or what is known as the eight hour law. This conclusion is borne out by the provision of the above act which exempts policemen and firemen from its operation.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MUNICIPALITY ENTITLED TO DAMAGES FROM A RAILROAD COMPANY WHERE THE RAILROAD COMPANY CONSTRUCTS A SIDE TRACK OVER A SEWER AND DAMAGES SEWER.

Where a railroad company permits a municipality to construct a sewer on its right of way and the railroad company afterwards constructs a side track over this sewer, and because of the heavy traffic on the side track the sewer pipe is broken and destroyed, the village, has a valid claim for damages against the railroad company for the breaking of the sewer. The amount of damages should be the cost of replacing that part of the sewer so destroyed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 24, 1913.

HON. O. A. BALYEAT, Solicitor of Ohio City, Van Wert, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 18, 1913, you submit for the consideration of this department, the following:

> "The facts in the case are as follows: Directly east of the village of Ohio City and perhaps some portion of it is within the boundaries of the village, there is an open county ditch into which numerous branches run. The village of Ohio City, some ten or twelve years ago, erected a sewer or drain which is used both as a sanitary sewer and for drainage, beginning in the western portion of the village and extending eastwardly and across the Toledo, St. Louis and Western Railway and emptying into the county ditch. The railroad not desiring to have the sewer across their right of way, by an arrangement with the village authorities, when the drain reached the northern boundary of its railroad, extended the drain or sewer on the railroad right of way along the north side of the track until it intersected the county ditch. Subsequent to that time, the railroad company desiring to facilitate its business within the village, built a side track over and along this sewer and running its heavy trains thereon has broken down the sewer in several places, which practically makes the sewer worthless. It will be remembered that this sewer is not an actual water course and had not been established long enough to become a water course at the time the damage occurred."

You enclose a letter of the president of council of the village, Dr. C. A. Musgrove. The facts are states in this letter as follows:

"About twenty-eight years ago the Toledo, St. Louis and Western Railway was built. In building the railroad, the road bed was so built that it cut off (damned up or destroyed) the natural water course of the land in which our town was built. After destroying this natural water course the railroad dug an open ditch along the north side of the railroad bed. The open ditch took the place of the natural water way that was destroyed in building the railroad. This was sufficient for some years and was used in carrying water from off the village land.

"During the year 1900 the village of Ohio City commenced to build its main sewer. It was completed the following year, 1901. The east end, eighty rods (eighteen inch sewer pipe) of this sewer was placed in this open ditch on the north side of the Toledo, St. Louis and Western Railroad. This is on the railroad right of way. At the time of locating and building this sewer there was no objection raised by the railroad company to building the sewer on the north side of the railroad on their ground.

"About five years after the building of the sewer the railroad company placed a passing track (side track) for nearly sixty rods over the sewer. All was well for some time and then the sewer began to break down, owing to the railroad being directly over it. (The sewer has not broken down any other place in its whole length.) This has been repaired at the expense of the corporation from time to time, until now it is past repair. Should the corporation have done this repairing at its own expense?

"All of that part of sewer under the railroad track must be replaced with a new sewer according to the advice of an engineer. The railroad company has been notified at different times, but have always ignored the notice.

"In addition to question asked above we want to know who will have to rebuild the destroyed sewer, the corporation, or the railroad company?

"Can we make them rebuild the sewer that they have destroyed?"

You call attention to several sections of the General Code which apply to nuisances and their abatement. The facts submitted do not make your situation a nuisance, although it may develop into a nuisance if the sewer becomes useless. It will not be necessary to consider that phase of the question at the present time.

It appears that the railroad company obstructed the natural drainage of this land, but that it constructed a ditch along its right of way to carry the surface water away in another direction. The railroad in effect changed the natural course of the water, to the extent of the drain along its right of way.

The principles of law governing the right of a railroad to divert the natural flow of water are stated in the following citations:

At page 1620 of Farnham on Waters and Waters Rights it is said:

> "So, it is the duty of a railroad company which by the construction of its roadbed across a natural watershed so as to constitute a dam, permits the accumulation of surface water, either to confine it there, or transmit it to adjacent lands in such a manner as to cause no material injury to such lands, and it is liable, if through its negligence, it escapes and injures lower lands."

Also on page 1677, Farnham further says:

> "So, persons engaged in making improvements which are intended to be for the benefit of the public have no right to interfere with the course of streams to the injury of riparian owners. A railroad company is liable for diverting the water from a stream for its own convenience in constructing its roadbed, to the lower proprietor who is thereby deprived of the use of the water; and, in case it attempts to change the channel of the stream, it will be liable for injuries caused by casting the water on to the lower proprietor in an unusual manner to its injury. So the company has no right to construct embankments which will deflect the flow of the water to the injury of an adjoining land owner."

The rule is stated in 33 Cyc. at page 326:

> "In crossing streams and water courses the railroad company must construct its road so as not to obstruct the flow of water, and must construct its bridges and culverts with sufficient openings and in such manner as properly to permit the passage of the water and prevent injury to riparian owners, taking into consideration the nature of the country, and making provision for the amount of water at all seasons, and under conditions of storm and flood which are likely to occur, and for the passage of floating ice which may be expected, and must subsequently maintain the same in proper condition and repair."

A railroad company in damming up a stream or changing a water course must take into consideration the rights of the adjoining landowners. The owner of the uplands has the right to have his lands drained of the surface water. The owner of the lowlands has the right to the use of the water of the stream. They also have other rights.

In the present case the railroad company obstructed the natural flow of the surface water by its embankment. In order to take care of the water it constructed a ditch along its right of way. In doing this it was doing only what was required of it. It was obliged to take care of the surface water which was obstructed in its flow by the embankment. This duty only applied to the surface water. It did not apply to the sewage of the community.

It appears that the ditch along the right of way was an open ditch, as constructed by the railroad. The village thereafter decided to construct a sewer which was used for both surface and sanitary drainage. A part of this sewer was constructed on the right of way of the railroad and in or under the open ditch. There appears to have been no written agreement between the railroad company and the village for the use of the right of way for this sewer. The agreement, if any, was verbal. Its terms are not given and probably are unknown. For the purposes of this opinion it will be assumed that there was no agreement.

It appears that the railroad company made no objection to the construction of the sewer on its right of way. It permitted the village to make improvements of some considerable cost upon its right of way and interposed no objection.

If the railroad company through its agents had knowledge of such construction and stood by and made no objection thereto, the doctrine of estoppel would apply.

At page 681 of Volume 16 of Cyc., it is said:

> " 'Estopped by silence' arises where a person who by force of circumstances is under a duty to another to speak refrains from doing so and thereby leads the other to believe in the existence of a state of facts in reliance upon which he acts to his prejudice."

Also at page 765 it is said:

> "One who with knowledge of the facts and without objection suffers another to make improvements or expenditures on or in connection with his property, or in derogation of his rights under a claim of title or right, will be estopped to deny such title or right to the prejudice of that other who has acted in reliance on and been misled by his conduct.

It is further said on page 768 of Volume 16 of Cyc.:

> "Where an owner permits the construction of a railroad on his land, he cannot after the road is completed and large sums of money are expended on the faith of his apparent acquiescence, deny to the railroad company the right to use the property."

It is the duty of an owner of land, when he sees improvements made upon his land, to object and protest. If he stands by and permits another to make improvements upon his land under a claim of right, he is estopped from asserting his complete title to the land to the prejudice of such other.

This principle is applied in favor of a railroad company when it constructs its railroad over the lands of another without protest. It will also be applied as against a railroad company when it stands by and without objection permits the construction of a sewer upon its right of way.

If the railroad company made no objection to the construction of the sewer in question at the time it was constructed, or as soon as it had knowledge thereof, it would be estopped to deny the right of the village to use its right of way for said sewer.

As the railroad company is estopped to deny the right of the village to use said right of way for the sewer, it could not so use its right of way as to damage said sewer, or to interfere with the right of the village therein. By reason of its silence when it should have objected, the railroad company cannot interfere with the rights of the village so acquired.

The railroad company constructed a switch or side track over the sewer and by reason thereof damaged the sewer and thereby interfered with the rights of the village to the use of the sewer.

The railroad company had a right to use its right of way for additional tracks, but in using the part of its right of way in which the sewer was located it was obliged to so construct its tracks as not to damage the sewer. In other words it must protect the sewer from damage by it.

In this connection it must be borne in mind that the railroad company is under obligation to take care of the surface water which was diverted by the construction of its embankment. Since the construction of the sewer the village has in effect relieved the railroad of this duty. If it was not for the sewer the railroad company would have to maintain a ditch of some kind to take care of this surface water.

The facts plainly show that the side track, and the use thereof by the railroad company, caused the damage to the sewer, as in other parts, the sewer is in good condition.

The village has a valid claim for damages against the railroad company for the breaking of the sewer. The amount of the damage to be recovered should be sufficient to compensate the village for placing the part of the sewer under the switch in the same condition as the other part of the sewer.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A VILLAGE COUNCIL MAY PASS AN ORDINANCE AND ENTER INTO A CONTRACT WITH THE WATER WORKS COMPANY FOR FURNISHING WATER FOR THE USE OF THE VILLAGE WITHOUT SUBMITTING THE QUESTION TO A VOTE OF THE PEOPLE.

Where a village council passes an ordinance and enters into a contract with the water works company and the contract is accepted by the water works company, the ordinance is valid without submitting it to a vote of the electors of the village, and the village authorities are authorized to pay the water works company at rates fixed in the ordinance for water furnished by it to the village for fire protection and other municipal purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 14, 1913.

HON. CILTON H. STOLL, Village Solicitor, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of October 8, 1913, asking opinion of me, in which you advise that in the year 1889 the village of London, Ohio, pursuant to the provisions of section 2434 Revised Statutes (now section 3981 G. C.), by ordinance, on submission of the same to the qualified electors of the village, entered into a contract with one Martin and his assigns, whereby he and his assigns agreed to construct and maintain a system of water works in or near said village, and for a period of twenty years to furnish a supply of water to the village for fire protection and other municipal purposes, and to the citizens thereof for private purposes, at certain rates fixed in the ordinance; that pursuant to said contract The London Water Works Company, on assignment of said contract to wit, by said Martin, constructed the contemplated water works system, maintained the same and furnished water to the village and its citizens until the expiration of the contract, after which time, following negotiations with reference to an extension of the contract over a considerable period of time, the village council on February 7, 1913, passed an ordinance fixing the rates at which The London Water Works Company was to furnish water to the village for fire protection and other municipal purposes and to the citizens of the village for private purposes for a period of seven and one half years, and that the terms of the ordinance were accepted by the water works company on April 12, 1913, and a schedule of the rates so accepted were filed by it with the public utilities commission.

The question submitted for opinion is, whether the ordinance and the contract embodied and made by its acceptance by the water works company are valid, and whether the village authorities are authorized to pay the water works company at rates fixed in ordinance for water furnished to the village for fire protection and other municipal purposes, it appearing that the ordinance was not submitted to a vote of the electors of the village.

In the consideration of this question I note that Section 3809 General Code, in terms authorizes a village council to enter into a contract with an individual or corporation for furnishing water to such municipality. This statute was enacted originally as a proviso, and primarily for the purpose of removing the contracts therein mentioned from the application and operation of the Burns law, and not primarily as an independent grant of power to municipalities with reference to such contracts. As indicated (96 O. L. 37, section 45), this statute provided that the contracts therein mentioned should be subject to the provisions of sections 2491 and 3551 Revised Statutes (sections 3994 and 9324 G. C.), and such undoubtedly is the proper construction of this enactment as carried into the General Code by revision.

State ex rel. vs. Commissioners, 36 O. S. 326, 330.

Section 9324 General Code (section 3551 R. S.) provides as follows:

> "The municipal authority of any city or village or the trustees of any township, in which a gas or water company is organized, may contract with such company for lighting or supplying with water the streets, lands, lanes, squares and public places in such city, village or township."

Undoubtedly this statute stands as full authority to a municipality to enter into a contract with a water works company organized therein for supplying water for the purposes therein mentioned, without submitting such contract to a vote of the electors of said municipality. Inasmuch, however, as the ordinance in question, as an entirety, is distinctly broader and more extensive in purpose than the contract authorized by this section, the application of this section to the ordinance at hand may be questioned, and in the view I take of the question submitted to me, the provisions of section 9324 are not of vital importance in the solution of the question.

Sections 3981 and 3982 General Code, provide as follows:

> Section 3981 (2434 R. S.) "A municipal corporation may contract with any individual or individuals or an incorporated company for supplying water for fire purposes, or for cisterns, reservoirs, streets, squares and other public places within the corporate limits, or for the purpose of supplying the citizens of such municipal corporation with water for such time, and upon such terms as may be agreed upon. But such contract shall not be executed or binding upon the municipal corporation until it has been ratified by a vote of the electors thereof, at a special or general election, and the municipal corporation shall have the same power to protect such water supply and prevent the pollution thereof as though the water works were owned by such municipal corporation."
> "Section 3982 (section 2478 R. S.) The council of a municipality in which electric lighting companies, natural or artificial gas companies, gas light or coke companies or companies for supplying water for public or private consumption, are established or into which their wires, mains or pipes are conducted, may regulate from time to time the price which such companies may charge for electric light, or for gas for lighting or fuel purposes, or for water for public or private consumption furnished by such companies to the citizens, public grounds, and buildings, streets, lanes, alleys, avenues, wharves and landing places, or for fire protection. Such companies shall in no event charge more for electric light, natural or artificial gas, or water furnished to such corporation or individuals, than the price specified by ordinance of council. The council may regulate and fix the price which such companies shall charge for the rent of their meters, and such ordinance may provide that such price shall include the use of meters to be furnished by the companies, and in such case meters shall be furnished and kept in repair by such companies and no separate charge shall be made either directly or indirectly for the use or repair of them."

The powers granted by these respective sections are widely different in object and nature.

The power granted by section 3981 is to the municipality, and is wholly contractual; that granted by section 3982 is to council, and is legislative in character. At the time of the passage of the original ordinance, embodying therein a contract between the village of London, Ohio, and Martin and his assigns, section 3981 G. C., then section 2434 R. S., was the sole sufficient authority for the contract then entered into, and such contract was governed by its provisions. As soon, however, as The London Water Works Company, as the assignee of this contract from Martin, established its water works system and entered on the performance of the contract in furnishing water to the village and its citizens, it became a public utility, subject, within constitutional limitations, to the police power of the state as to regulation of rates which it might charge for water furnished by it to consumers, such power being exercisable directly by the legislative power of the state, or by the municipality on delegation of such power to it by the legislature.

State ex rel. vs. Cincinnati Gas Light Co. 18 O. S. 262.
Spring Valley Water Works vs. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347.

The character of a water works company furnishing water to consumers as a public utility, is declared by statute (Section 614-2a G. C.). However, the statute in this respect is but declaratory of the unwritten law.

As to companies for supplying water for public or private consumption, the power of the state to regulate rates has been delegated to municipalities by the provisions of section 3982 G. C. The ordinance in question fixes the rates to be charged by the water works company for water furnished for both public and private consumption,which the statute itself makes the maximum price which may be charged for the particular service on which the rate is made. The rates for the particular services in furnishing water for municipal and private consumption named in the ordinance have been accepted by the water works company and it does not appear that any complaint on behalf of the electors of the municipality has been filed with the public utilities commission, as provided for in section 614-44 G. C., and by force of the provisions of this section the rates so fixed are operative.

I note that the ordinance in question is drafted in the form of a contract between the village and The London Water Works Company. In the view I take of the nature of the power granted by the provisions of section 3982, this form of the ordinance was unnecessary. However, as the ordinance is effective to fix the rates that may be charged by the water works company for water furnished to the municipality and its citizens, and such rates have been accepted by the water works company, the form of the ordinance in other particulars is unimportant, as by force of statute, the rates therein fixed are now in operation and effective, whether the acceptance of such rates by the water works company was effective to make a contract between it and the village or not. That such is the effect of such acceptance, is held in the opinion of the court n the case of State ex rel. vs. Cincinnati Gas Light Company, 18 O. S. at pages 299,300.

On the considerations above noted, I am of the opinion that the ordinance in question was valid without the submission of the same to the electors of the village, and that the village authorities are authorized to pay the water works company, at rates fixed in the ordinance, for water furnished by it to the village for fire protection and other municipal purposes.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A VILLAGE CLERK MAY NOT RECEIVE ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION FOR PREPARING, AT COUNCIL'S REQUEST, THE ANNUAL BUDGET REQUIRED TO BE SUBMITTED BY COUNCIL TO THE COUNTY AUDITOR.

Work performed by the village clerk for council outside of his statutory duties is presumed to be gratuitously performed, consequently, the clerk may not receive additional compensation for preparing the annual budget required to be submitted by council to the county auditor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 3, 1913.

HON. CHARLES W. KARR, Solicitor for the Village of North Bend, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR—In your letter of October 18th, receipt whereof is acknowledged, you request my opinion on the following question:

> "May a village clerk receive from the village treasury additional compensation voted to him by council for preparing, at council's request and under an agreement as to such compensation, the annual budget required to be submitted by council to the county auditor?"

The annual budget required to be submitted by council to the county auditor is set forth in section 5649-3a General Code and is required to contain the following items:

> "(1) The amount to be raised for each and every purpose allowed by law for which it is desired to raise money for the incoming year.
>
> "(2) The balance standing to the credit or debit of the several funds at the end of the last fiscal year."
>
> "(3) The monthly expenditures from each fund in the twelve months and the monthly expenditures from all funds in the twelve months of the last fiscal year."
> "(4) The annual expenditures from each fund for each year of the last five fiscal years.
>
> "(5) The monthly average of such expenditures from each of the several funds for the last fiscal year, and also the total monthly average of all of them for the last five fiscal years.
> "(6) The amount of money received from any other source and available for any purpose in each of the last five fiscal years, together with an estimate of the probable amount that may be received during the incoming year, from such source or sources."
> "(7) The amount of the bonded indebtedness setting out each issue and the purpose for which issued, the date of issue and the date of maturity, the original amount issued and the amount outstanding, the rate of interest, the um necessary for interest and sinking fund purposes, and the amount required for all interest and sinking fund purposes for the incoming year.

"(8) The amount of all indebtedness incurred under authority of section 5649-4 and the amount of such additional taxes as may have been authorized as provided in section 5649-5 of the General Code, setting out each issue in detail as provided in the next preceding paragraph.

"(9) Such other facts and information as the tax commission of Ohio or the budget commissioners may require."

By the provisions of section 3788 General Code the village clerk is required to furnish to the mayor and council and to each member thereof the following statements:

"1. A statement showing the balance standing to the credit or debit of the several funds on the balance sheet of the corporation, at the end of the last fiscal year.

"2. A statement showing the monthly expenditures from each fund in the twelve months, and the monthly expenditures from all the funds in the twelve months of the last fiscal year.

"3. A statement showing the annual expenditures from each fund for each year of the last five fiscal years.

"4. A statement showing the monthly average of such expenditures from each of the several funds for the last fiscal year, and also the total monthly average from all of them for the last five fiscal years."

By section 3789 General Code the clerk is "an officer provided for in this chapter" must, as a part of his official duties furnish, upon request, "to the mayor or council any information desired in relation to the affairs of their respective offices."

By force of the two sections last above cited, the village clerk might be required, as a part of his official duties, to furnish some of the information required to be set forth in council's annual budget. No statute, however, would require him to furnish information respecting bonded indebtedness in detailed form, as required by item 7 of section 5649-3a or to estimate the probable income of the corporation from sources of revenue other than taxation as required by item 6 thereof, nor, in short any of the information required to be set forth in the annual budget except that under items 2 to 5 inclusive.

Again, no statute requires the village clerk, or permits council to require him, to do the actual work of preparing the budget or any other measure coming before council.

Section 4280 General Code requires the clerk to keep a record of all proceedings, by-laws, resolutions and ordinances, but this is quite a different thing from preparing the measures upon which council acts, for its own action.

I, therefore, reach the conclusion that the services which the village clerk, in the case stated by you, has performed for council, are not within the purview of his official duties.

The next question which I encounter is, as to whether or not the services are such as council may contract for the performance of.

This question is not free from doubt as council has authority to provide legal counsel for itself (section 4220 G. C.), and to "provide such employes for the village as they may determine." (Section 4216 G. C.)

However, I am of the opinion that in procuring the services of the clerk in this particular, council was not exercising the authority to appoint employes for the village, because the duty to prepare the budget is cast upon the council itself.

On the whole, I am of the opinion that no express power exists in council to make any such employment.

Looking at the question from another angle of view, it appears that the village clerk, as an officer of the village, is precluded from sustaining any contractual relation to the village as such, resulting in receipt by him of money from the treasury aside from his official compensation. Section 3808 of the General Code provides that:

> "No * * * officer * * * of the corporation shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation."

This section would seem to preclude the making of such a contract with the village clerk, even if council had authority to enter into it. The strict law of the case then, is this: The clerk cannot be required by council to perform the services in question as a part of his official duties, which are defined by law. The council lacks power to contract with any person for the doing of this work unless the same be considered legal work to be done by the legal counsel appointed under the section cited; the clerk being an officer of the corporation in prohibited by a quasi penal statute from receiving compensation in excess of his official salary.

As a matter of fact, of course, village councils rely on their clerks for the performance of many services not exacted of such officers by the statutes themselves. Undoubtedly the performance of such services was contemplated by the framers of the municipal code. However, it was correctly assumed that such matters would be taken into consideration in fixing the salary of the clerk. In other words, it is proper and lawful for council to call upon the clerk who is, in one view of the case one of its officers, for the performance of any service which is of assistance to it, although if the clerk desires to be technical he may lawfully refuse to perform any service that is not required of him by statute. On the other hand, council is presumed to take into consideration the miscellaneous services that it may see fit to require of the clerk when it fixes his regular official compensation. As a result of these principles, work performed by the clerk for council outside of the pale of his statutory duties is presumed to be gratuitously performed.

The foregoing principles are sustained in the case of Jones vs. Commissioners, 57 O. S. 189, which presents a state of facts strikingly similar to that submitted by you.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the clerk may not receive additional compensation for performing the services in question.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WHERE A PETITION HAS BEEN FILED ASKING FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF A STREET, AND THIS PETITION HAS BEEN ACTED UPON BY COUNCIL, THE PETITIONERS MAY NOT THEN WITHDRAW THEIR NAMES FROM THE PETITION.

1. A petition under section 3753, General Code, was signed and filed with the village clerk and was taken up at a regular meeting of council, and a resolution passed granting the prayer of the petition. After this action has been taken by council the signers of said petition cannot withdraw their names.

2. It is not necessary that all the requisites spoken of in section 3753, General Code, be embodied in the petition. The fact that the number of square yards are not shown or the manner of the assessment and the period of time petitioners desire that the street be treated with oil were not contained in the petition would not prevent council from proceeding with the improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 31, 1913.

HON. J. GUY O'DONNELL, Solicitor for the Village of Covington, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your letter of June 26, wherein you state:

> "As the solicitor of the village of Covington, Ohio, I desire to submit to you two propositions in relation to the oiling of streets of a village and would like your opinion. I have rendered an opinion upon these matters to the village council and enclose you a copy of the same.
>
> "First proposition.—A petition, under section 3753 of the General Code of Ohio, was signed and filed with the village clerk, was taken up at a regular meeting of council and a resolution passed granting the prayer of the petition. After this action was taken by council, a petition by some of the parties who had signed, or were alleged to have signed the original petition, was presented to council asking to withdraw from the original petition. Question: Can the parties withdraw from the petition after it has been filed and acted upon as above stated?
> "Second proposition.—In section 3753 there are a number of requisites to be embodied in the petition among which are the description of the roadway area, the amount of square yards showing it to be more than five thousand, the manner of assessment and the period of time that the petitioners desire the street treated with oil. All of these requisites to the petition were not contained in the above petition, one especially, that of the period named for which they desire the street treated with oil. Question: In order to make the petition valid and to give the council jurisdiction to proceed under the petition and to so treat the district with oil, is it not necessary that all of these requisites to contained in the petition and thereby express the desire of the petitioners?

Sections 3753 to 3761, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, confer authority upon municipal corporations to treat the streets therein with oil and outline a method of procedure for the accomplishment of that purpose. Section 3753 provides:

> "When a written petition signed by the owners of the majority of the abutting feet of property on a street or alley, or part thereof, or of connecting or intersecting streets or alleys, or parts thereof, having a roadway area of not less than five thousand square yards, is presented to the director of public service in a city, or to the council in a village, praying that the roadways within the territory described be treated with oil, and for the assessment of the whole cost thereof on the property abutting such streets or alleys, the director or council shall forthwith declare, by resolution, such territory to be, and thereupon it shall be, a district within which the roadways will be treated with oil, for a period named in the petition, not to exceed the life of the contract, and the cost thereof assessed upon the property abutting the streets or alleys therein, by the abutting foot."

Section 3754 provides for the treatment of such streets with oil upon the initiative of the director of public service in cities and of the council in villages, without the filing of a petition by abutting property owners. Your inquiry does not involve a construction of that section, hence it need not be considered.

The general rule of law is that when a statute authorizes the presentation of a petition to a public officer or body clothed with the power to grant the prayer thereof, signers of such petition may withdraw their names at any time before action is taken thereon, but not after.

In the case of Hays et al, vs. Jones et al, 27 C. S. 218, the court held:

"The board of county commissioners, under the act passed March 29, 1867, (64 O. L. 80) as amended March 31, 1868, (S. & S. 673), and again amended May 9, 1869 (S. & S. 675-6) to 'authorize county commissioners to construct roads on the petition of a majority of the resident land owners along and adjacent to the line of said roads,' are not authorized to grant a final order for making such road improvement, except upon the petition of a 'majority of the resident land holders whose lands are reported benefited' by, 'and ought to be assessed' for the costs of the improvement. (1st Syllabus).

"The jurisdiction of the board of county commissioners to make the final order for the improvement, under these statutes, is special, and conditioned upon the consent, at the time the final order is to be made, of a majority of the resident land holders, who are to be charged with the costs of the improvement. (2nd Syllabus).

"Resident land holders, who have subscribed a petition praying for such road improvement, may, at any time before such improvement is finally ordered to be made by the board of county commissioners, withdraw their assent by remonstrance, or having their names stricken from the petition, and after withdrawal of consent, such persons can no longer be counted as petitioning for the improvement." (3rd Syllabus).

In Dutton vs. Village of Hanover, 42 O. S. 215, the court held:

"Upon the presentation of a petition to the council for such an election, it is the duty of the council, before taking action thereon, to satisfy itself that it contains the requisite number of qualified petitioners, and for that purpose may refer the same to a committee to make the necessary examination. (2nd Syllabus).

"While such petition is under consideration and before action thereon by the council, signers thereof may withdraw their names from such petition, and if thereby the number of names is reduced below the requisite number, it is the duty of the council to refuse to order such election." (3rd Syllabus).

In Grinnell et al. vs. Adams et al. 34 C. S. 44, it was held:

"After the jurisdiction of county commissioners, in the matter of laying out or altering a county road, has attached by the filing of a proper petition, etc., such jurisdiction can not be defeated by any number of the petitioners afterward becoming remonstrants against the granting of the prayer of the petition." (Syllabus).

Consideration of the facts upon which the decisions in these cases were based, discloses that in the first and second cases, the withdrawal of names from the original petitions was upheld by the court only because the county commissioners and municipal council, respectively, had not taken action. In the third case cited, the commissioners had ordered the improvement before the signers of the petition attempted to withdraw their names.

In view of these expressions of the supreme court, I am constrained to hold that after the village council had adopted the resolution granting the prayer of the petition to oil the streets, the signers of said petition cannot withdraw their names.

It will be noted that section 3751 limits the period for which the director of public service in cities and the council in villages may contract for the oiling of streets, to five years. This is a general limitation upon the power of these authorities to contract whether the streets are to be oiled upon petition of abutting property owners or upon the initiative of the proper municipal officers.

From a consideration of sections 3753 and 3754, it will be observed that when an improvement is to be made upon the petition of abutting property owners, the whole cost is to be so assessed against such owners and when the improvement is made on the initiative of the municipal officers, not to exceed 50% of the whole cost can be assessed. In a case where the property owners petition, inasmuch as they are required to pay the whole cost of the improvement, they have the right under section 3753 to name the period of time during which they desire the treatment with oil to continue. This right, however, is one which may be waived by the petitioners, either expressly or by their failure to mention it in the petition, and in either event the council in villages has the power to determine the length of time such oiling is to continue, not to exceed the period named in the statute, to wit, five years. The failure of the petition to show affirmatively that the area of the road way sought to be oiled is not less than 5,000 square yards, is not of itself sufficient to invalidate the petition or to prevent council from taking action thereunder, because that fact can and should be determined by the municipal authorities themselves. If the petition did contain such a statement, it would not be conclusive upon the municipal officers and they would have a right and it would be their duty, to satisfy themselves of its correctness before proceeding with the improvement.

The method of making assessments to pay the cost of such improvement is provided by the statute and the omission of any mention of that subject in the petition is not material.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that council may legally proceed with said improvement, notwithstanding the petition is deficient in the above mentioned respects.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOHAN,

Attorney General.

SHERIFF AND DEPUTIES—COMPENSATION—SALARY—ANNUAL SALARY OF SHERIFF BASED ON OFFICIAL, NOT CALENDAR YEAR—PAYMENT OF DEPUTY ACCORDING TO TIME EMPLOYED—AGGREGATE FIXED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR DEPUTY MAY NOT BE EXCEEDED.

The law providing for the annual salary to the sheriff contemplates that such annual salary shall be paid for the official and not for the calendar year. When the sheriff takes office, therefore, on the first Monday of January, and the term of the predecessor ends on such date, the sheriff is not entitled to extra compensation for time spent in office intervening the end of the calendar year and the first Monday of January, since the annual salary provided for contemplates all services performed by him during his official term.

Deputies and clerks, however, hold subject to the will of the head of the office and are entitled to receive pay for the actual calendar time employed. The payment of such deputies and clerks, however, should be governed by the limitations of sections 2980 and 2980-1, General Code, providing that the commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum which the head of the office shall expend for deputy and clerk hire during the year. In fixing the amount, therefore, to be so expended during the calendar year, the commissioners must proportion the amount to be expended by a sheriff for the interval between the expiration of the calendar year and the first Monday of January, when he leaves office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 2, 1913.

MR. FRED M. SAYRE, Auditor of Franklin County, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In answer to your request for opinion under date of December 23, in re fees and salaries; salary of sheriff and deputies between December 31, 1912, and January 6, 1913.

Section 2823 provides:

> "There shall be elected biennially in each county a sheriff and coroner each of whom shall hold his office for a term of two years beginning on the first Monday of January next after his election."

The language of this statute fixes a statutory rather than a calendar year, that is the two years term is from the first Monday in January next after his election until the first Monday in January third after his election.

The law provides for the payment only of annual salaries and the year necessarily is the year referred to by the statute creating the office, that is from the first Monday of one January until the first Monday of the next January.

Section 2989 which provides that each county officer shall receive out of the general county fund the annual salary provided by that chapter payable in monthly installments does not in any wise modify this.

In arriving at whether or not there is anything due the sheriff you should compute the entire amount of salary drawn by him during the present term, and deduct that from the total of the annual salary provided by the statute for two years. In other words, the sheriff is not entitled to draw any compensation for services between the thirty-first day of December, 1912, and the 6th day of January, 1913, in addition to his annual salary. This same reasoning will apply to all other county officers who draw annual salaries.

As to the deputies the situation is somewhat different. Deputies and clerks hold subject to the will of the head of the office and are entitled to receive pay for the actual calendar time employed. The only thing to be watched in this matter is section 2980 and 2980-1.

Section 2980 provides that the commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for the compensation of deputy assistants, etc.

Section 2980-1 provides that that aggregate sum shall not be exceeded and also contains the following provision:

> "When the term of an incumbent of any such office shall expire within the year for which such an aggregate sum is to be fixed the county commissioners at the time of fixing the same shall designate the amount of such aggregate sum which may be expended by the incumbent and the amount of such aggregate sum which may be expended by his successor for the fractional parts of such year."

As the commissioners fix the amount under section 2980 to be expended for the calendar year beginning January 1st, next thereafter they should have apportioned the amount of money to be expended by the present sheriff for the interim between December 31, and January 6 from the total amount of money allowed for that office for the calendar year 1913. The fact that the commissioners did not act as required by statute does not in my opinion prevent them from still making this apportionment which should be done at once.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Prosecuting Attorney.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT—LICENSE —DOW-AIKEN TAX STILL TO BE PAID UNTIL GENERAL ASSEMBLY PASSES LICENSE LAWS.

Inasmuch as the constitutional amendment providing for licenses for traffic in intoxicating liquors is not self-executing, and expressly provides that it shall not be construed so as to modify, repeal or suspend regulatory laws, and as furthermore the supreme court has decided that the tax upon traffic in intoxicating liquors is but a means of providing against the evils of such traffic, it follows that the regulatory law providing for the tax is still in force and county auditors shall still continue to assess the Dow-Aiken tax and receive the same until such time as the legislature may act upon the subject of licensing the sale of intoxicating liquors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 2, 1913.

HON. ROBERT E. EDMONSON, County Auditor, Court House, City.

DEAR SIR:—You requested my opinion on the question whether the recent amendment to the constitution repealing section 18 of the schedule to the constitution of 1851, and permitting the license of traffic in intoxicating liquors, prohibits the renewal of payments of the Dow-Aiken tax or prevents persons desiring to commence business, before action by the legislature, from paying such tax and operating saloons.

Article 15, section 9, of the constitution of Ohio, adopted by vote of the electors on September 3, 1912, went into effect on January 1, 1913, and repealed article 15, section 9, of the constitution of 1851, known as section 18 of the schedule to the constitution. The amendment adopted September 3, 1912, provides:

> "License to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall be granted in this state and license laws operative throughout the state shall be passed with such restrictions and regulations as may be provided by law. * * * *"

This amendment in its terms is not self operative but will require legislation on the subject by the general assembly before its provisions shall be effective.

The said article 15, section 9, of the constitution as adopted September 3, 1912, specifically provides that nothing therein contained shall be so construed as to modify, repeal or suspend any prohibitory or regulatory laws now in force.

In the case of Anderson vs. Brewster, 44 Ohio State, 576, at page 583, the supreme court of Ohio say:

> "But the general assembly under section 18 of the schedule to the constitution, as one of the means of providing against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors, has deemed it proper to assess the business of those engaged in such traffic, and to provide that the assessment shall operate as a lien upon the real property on and in which such business is conducted."

And at page 586:

> "But not only has the general assembly authority to make this assessment upon the liquor traffic, as being invested with all the legislative powers of the state, but by the schedule to the constitution it is permitted and in duty bound, we think, to use any or all of these powers, not expressly or by necessary implication prohibited, in providing against the evils resulting from such traffic. And, if, in the exercise of its judgment and discretion, the legislature sees fit to impose a burden on the traffic in the shape of a tax, for the purpose of diminishing those evils, it does not come within the province of this court to renew its action in selecting such means."

The said amendment to the constitution providing for the granting of license to traffic in intoxicating liquors not being self-executing, but requiring legislative action before licenses shall be granted, and the said section specifically providing that it shall not be construed so as to modify, repeal or suspend "regulatory laws," and the supreme court having decided that the tax upon traffic in intoxicating liquors is but a means of providing against the evils of such traffic, it follows that in the absence of legislative action the regulatory law providing for the tax is still in force, and you are authorized to continue the assessment of the tax, and to receive the same until such time as the legislature may act upon the subject of the license.

Respectfully submitted,
CHAS. A. GROOM,
Ass't Prosecuting Attorney.

MEMBER OF BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS FOR ERECTION OF STATE HOSPITAL MAY RESIGN AND BE APPOINTED TO SUPERINTEND WORK OF CONSTRUCTION.

Inasmuch as section 1843, General Code, which provided that no commissioner of a benevolent institution of the state or of a county could be eligible to the office of superintendent within one year after his term as member of such board expires, has been repealed, and as there are no other statutes prohibiting the same, a member of such board of commissioners may now resign and may be appointed superintendent of a state hospital.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 24, 1913.

HON. J. H. SECREST, Clerk of the board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima State Hospital, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 22, 1913, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "The board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima state hospital requests your opinion in writing, as to the legality of the election of one of its members to the position of superintendent of the Lima state hospital; provided, of course, such member first resign as member of the board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima state hospital."

Section 1989 provides for the appointment of a superintendent by the board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima state hospital. This section is as follows:

> "The commission may appoint a superintendent, who has had at least three years' experience in the care and treatment of insane, to superintend the work of construction and open such buildings as are ready for occupancy during the progress of the work. He also shall have charge of the buildings when occupied and all patients kept therein, and, under the direction of the commissioners, may employ necessary officers and employes."

Section 1843 as it formerly stood provides as follows:

> "No trustee, commissioner, manager or director of a benevolent, correctional or penal institution of the state or of a county shall be eligible to the office of superintendent or steward, as an employe of such institution during the term for which he was appointed, nor within one year after his term expires, nor shall any officer or employe of such institution be related by blood or marriage to him."

This section was expressly repealed by the act passed May 11, 1911, 102 O. L. 211, which is the act creating the board of administration. The section was probably repealed for the reason that under the board of administration act, the powers formerly lodged in the trustees of the different benevolent institutions were vested in the board of administration.

This act creating the board of administration does not apply to the board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima state hospital, (see section 40 of the act) until such time as the Lima state hospital is ready to be operated and to receive inmates as provided by law, and until such time, old section 1843 having been expressly repealed and not re-enacted, section 1989, above quoted is the only section of the code that now applies, and there would be no inhibition upon the commissioners electing a person as superintendent who had been one of the members of said board but who had resigned from the board prior to his election as superintendent.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

HOME RULE DOES NOT DEPRIVE STATE OF POLICE POWERS WITHIN MUNICIPALITIES—BUILDING CODE EFFECTIVE THEREIN—RECOMMENDATIONS OF BILL PROVIDING FOR CONSTITUTION OF BUILDING CODE COMMISSION AND FOR AMENDMENT OF BUILDING CODE.

Section 3 of the home rule amendment to the constitution reserves to the state its police powers over municipal affairs, by providing that municipalities shall have authority to exercise any powers of local self government except such as are not in conflict with general laws. Recommendations made for an act providing for continuance of building code commission and for amendment of building code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1913.

HON. THOMAS P. KEARNS, Chairman, State Building Code Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of October 25th is at hand in which you inquire:

> "Will the adoption of the Home Rule Amendment to the Constitution in cities where this plan of government is established effect in any way the jurisdiction of the state in matters relating to the enforcement of the state laws in these cities such as the State Building Code."

The answer to this is: No. that it certainly was not intended by said Constitutional Amendment to deprive the state of power to make all necessary police regulation in cities which may avail themselves of the provisions of this amendment. This I think is made clear by section 3 of the Amendment which reads as follows:

> "Municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self-government and to adopt and enforce within their limits such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations, as are not in conflict with general laws."

As to your inquiry in regard to the proper title to the head of your department, I would prefer Head, or Chief of the Department of Workshops and Public Buildings as being most comprehensive and less liable to give rise to misunderstandings, and misconceptions of the law, although when the title to the act and the act itself is considered, the matter of name may not be important.

You also state:

> "I am also submitting herewith a copy of a resolution prepared by the commission to be presented at the next session of the general assembly, which has for its purpose continuing this commission, fixing the salary of some of the appointees of that body, as well as appropriations for the expense of the commission in conducting the work, together with a copy of the administrative section of the code which has been revised by us, both of which we would be pleased to have you examine carefully and advise us whether or not they are in proper and legal form."

The paper enclosed is an act rather than a resolution, and is in proper and legal form, but I would call attention to the following facts:

1. Section 3 provides the commission shall maintain a suitable office in the City of Columbus, Ohio, shall appoint a consulting architect, stenographer and other assistants and limits "The total cost of maintaining such State Building Code Commission" to $6,000.00 per year.

Section 6 fixes the salary of the architect at $2,500.00 and the stenographer at $720.00; other salaries to be fixed by the commission and the clerk's bond to be considered as part of expenses.

2. I find no provision as to where this office shall be maintained other than in Columbus, Ohio, nor for rent of same, and it occurs to me that it might be better to so reframe the act as to take care of these matters and make it easy for the commission to keep within the prescribed limit.

I would also suggest that section 2 of the act be made a little more specific and that it be made to read:

"Shall upon request make examination and tests and decide when a fixture, device or construction at variance with what is prescribed in the State Building Code is or is not a substantial compliance therewith; to hear applicants who have been refused permits and holders of permits that have been revoked and determine whether such refused permit should have been granted, or such revocation should be set aside; to hear and determine questions in dispute relative to the application, interpretation and enforcement of the state building code, to investigate, etc."

I would suggest this additional section:

"Section —. All orders, rulings, holdings, determinations and findings of the commission shall be final unless within sixty (60) days after making the same party aggrieved shall file a petition in the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Ohio, asking that the same be set aside on account of its being unreasonable, or contrary to law in which event the enforcement of such order or ruling shall be suspended until the final determination thereof by said Court."

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

REFORMATORY—JUDGE OF JUVENILE COURT MAY TRANSFER INMATES OF BOYS' HOME—REFORMATORY NOT A PRISON.

The United States District Court in the case of in re Frank Januszewski, has decided that the Ohio juvenile court act does not contravene any constitutional guarantee of the federal government.

The reformatory at Mansfield is not intended for the purpose of punishment for crime, but rather to place prisoners under suitable guardianship for proper care and discipline, until reformed or until arriving at the age of majority. The further fact that the legislature, in section 2139, General Code, authorizes the transfer to such institution from the Boys' Industrial School, of inmates of the latter place, is declarative of the fact that the State Reformatory is not to be regarded as a prison.

The fact that a person convicted of a felony may be sentenced to the reformatory does not contravene the idea that a reformatory is not a prison.

The judge of a juvenile court, therefore, does not exceed his jurisdiction in transferring a boy whom he has committed to the Boys' Industrial Home, from that institution to the State Reformatory, since the boy has not been sentenced for a crime for which imprisonment in a prison has been constituted a penalty.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 11, 1913.

HON. GEORGE S. ADDAMS, Judge of the Juvenile Court of Cuyahoga County, Cleveland, O.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of January 25, 1913, you ask my opinion as to the legality of the commitment by you to the Ohio State Reformatory, at Mansfield, of one Sam Licker. Accompanying your letter is a communication from Mr. Ezra S. Brudno, attorney for said Sam Licker, who joins in your request. There is no disagreement between you and Mr. Brudno as to the facts in the case which have resulted in the commitment of said Licker to said reformatory. Habeas corpus is about to be instituted for his release.

The facts are substantially as follows:

> "Sam Licker, between sixteen and seventeen years old, was brought into said juvenile court as a delinquent, charged with grand larceny. On his plea of not guilty a hearing was had and the court committed him to the Hudson City farm. After serving there about six weeks the said juvenile judge, learning that the boy was afflicted with a bad disease, sentenced him to the Mansfield Reformatory without any new trial, hearing or proceeding. There was never any indictment against the boy."

You ask the following questions:

> "1. Did the court have the right, after committing the boy to the City Farm school, to change the commitment to the reformatory or any other institution?
>
> "2. Has the juvenile court a right to commit to the reformatory?
>
> "3. If the commitment is illegal should the boy be returned to the juvenile court for discipline and protection?

The question you present is one not free from difficulties:

> "1. That great care should be used before infringing upon the constitutional right of any citizen, young or old, is elementary;

"2. That at first blush many statutes may appear to be unconstitutional which, in fact, are not;

"3. Every reasonable intendment exists in favor of the constitutionality of a statute."

This proposition, as you are well aware, has been declared over and over; and notwithstanding its reiteration in about every decision ever handed down by a superior court involving constitutional questions, nevertheless the people of the state have felt that the intendments of the courts in that direction were not strong enough, and the policy of the state against holding statutes and enactments of the legislature unconstitutional was emphasized at the election held on September 3, 1912, at which time the people approved an amendment whereby all of the judges of the supreme court, save one, must concur before a statute is to be held unconstitutional. The particular effect of this is, that there should be little room for dispute about the unconstitutionality of an act before the court passing upon the question directly will hold such statute unconstitutional.

If there is any doubt whatever as to the validity of an act of the general assembly it becomes the duty of this department to hold in favor of such validity, even though if we were a court we might have concluded that the statute was not valid. I apprehend that the same rule applies to yourself when sitting as a court and not authorized to pass directly upon the constitutionality of an act; in other words, when the hearing before you does not directly raise the question of the constitutionality of the act.

The Ohio juvenile act does not contravene any constitutional guarantees of the federal government. Such was the holding of United States district court for the southern district of Ohio In Re Frank Januszewski in a decision by Hon. John A. Sater, judge of the United States court. This case is a lucid one and very valuable as an aid in the present question. The case is to be found in the Ohio Law Reporter of June 24, 1912, at page 151. The syllabus is as follows:

"Repugnancy of a state statute to the constitution of the state does not afford ground for the granting of a writ of habeas corpus by a federal court upon application of one convicted thereunder, unless the petitioner is in custody by virtue of such statute and the statute is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

"Delinquency has not been declared a crime in Ohio, and the Ohio juvenile act is neither criminal or penal in its nature, but is an administrative police regulation of a corrective nature; and while, as in the case at bar, the commission of a crime may set the machinery of the juvenile court in action, the accused was not tried in that court for his crime, but for incorrigibility.

"Inasmuch as the privileges and immunities of a citizen of the United States do not include the right to trial by jury in a state court even for a state offense or the right to be exempt from trial for an infamous crime except upon presentment by a grand jury, it follows that jury trial is not essential in all cases to due process of law; and the commitment of the petitioner in the present case to the Boys' Industrial School for incorrigibility by the juvenile court of Cuyahoga county was not rendered invalid by reason of the fact that it was without the intervention of a jury, notwithstanding the charge in the affidavit upon which he was arrested was that he was a delinquent in that he maliciously and purposely shot M. with intent to kill.

"Nor is there merit in the contention that the petitioner was denied his rights by reason of the fact that the juvenile act does not afford opportunity for appeal or prosecution of error, inasmuch as it is the settled rule in Ohio that there can be no appeal or proceedings in error from one judicial tribunal to another unless the right thereto is given by statute."

Judge Sater in that opinion inter alia says:

> "The evidence offered in the juvenile court must have shown that he shot as charged in the affidavit, but as he was charged with and tried for a species of delinquency only, such evidence could not, by any known rule, be used in such hearing to convict him of the crime of shooting with intent to kill. The only office which it could perform was to establish the particular kind of delinquency alleged. His commitment was not designed as and is not a punishment for crime, but to place him under suitable guardianship for proper care and discipline until he is reformed, or arrives at the age of majority. Nor is the industrial school a prison.
> "Citing Prescott vs. State, 19 O. S., 184, and other authorities."

The last sentence quoted from Judge Sater's opinion, to wit: "Nor is the industrial school a prison," might lead one hastily reading it to the conclusion that the juvenile court could not commit a delinquent to the Ohio State reformatory, because in one sense it might be said to be a prison. Let us see what the facts are in that behalf.

The act creating the Mansfield institution is to be found in Laws of Ohio, Vol. 81, page 206, and is entitled, "An act to establish an intermediate penitentiary, and to provide for the appointment of a board of managers to locate, construct and manage the same."

Section 1 whereof is as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio, That there be established an intermediate penitentiary, for the incarceration of such persons convicted and sentenced under the laws of Ohio as have not previously been sentenced to a state penitentiary in this or any other state or country."

It is apparent that when this act was passed it was the conviction of the legislature that a certain class of convicted persons should not be sent to the penitentiary at Columbus.

Section 8 of the act discloses this:

> "The discipline to be observed in said penitentiary shall be reformatory, and the managers and warden shall have power to use such means of reformation consistent with the improvement of the inmates as they deem expedient. Agricultural labor or mechanical industry may be resorted to by said managers and warden as an instrument of reformation. The contract system of employing convicts shall not exist in any form in said penitentiary, but the prisoners shall be employed by the state, and in such way as to in the least possible manner interfere with or affect free labor."

Had the Ohio legislature stopped with this the institution at Mansfield might well be designated a prison rather than a reformatory, although the discipline of such prison was reformatory in character. The idea of imprionment predominated. The legislature acted again as found in Laws of Ohio, Vol. 88, page 418. The title of the last mentioned act is as follows: "Anact to amend an act to establish an intermediate penitentiary, and to provide for the appointment of a board of managers to locate, construct and manage the same, passed April 14, 1884, and the act amendatory thereto passed April 18, 1890, and to change the name of said institution to the Ohio state reformatory."

Section 1 whereof is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio, That there be established an Ohio state reformatory, for the incarceration of such persons convicted and sentenced under the laws of Ohio, as have not previously been sentenced to a state penitentiary in this or any other state or country."

By the last mentioned act military training is added to the other branches of instruction. The Manfiseld institution is now known as the "Ohio State Reformatory." (See division No. 4 under the head of penal institutions.)

Section 2131 provides who may be sentenced to the reformatory. It is as follows:

"The board of managers shall receive all male criminals between the ages of sixteen and thirty years sentenced to the reformatory if they are not known to have been previoulsy sentenced to a state prison. Male persons between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years convicted of felony shall be sentenced to the reformatory instead of the penitentiary. Such persons between the ages of twenty-one and thirty years may be sentenced to the reformatory if the court passing sentence deems them amenable to reformatory methods. No person convicted of murder in the first or second degrees shall be sentenced or transferred to the reformatory."

Section 2136 provides for the discipline and labor of persons, as follows:

"The discipline to be observed in the institution shall be reformatory and the board of managers shall employ such means for reformation or improvement as may be expedient. The labor imposed upon the inmates or industrial pursuits prescribed for them shall be such as the board directs, but the contract system of prison labor shall not be employed."

Section 2139, among other things, provides:

"The board, upon the order of the governor, shall receive from the boys industrial school such of its inmates as the governor deems advisable to transfer to the reformatory."

This last section is a strong legislative declaration in favor of the proposition that the Mansfield institution is a reformatory rather than a prison; otherwise, the governor would not have the right to cause to be transferred one from Lancaster who had not been convicted of crime to Mansfield. The fact that a court sentences to Mansfield persons who have been regularly indicted and convicted is, in my mind of no moment. The relieving of prisoners from what would otherwise be the full consequences of their violations of the law is merely the humanity of the law. It will always be kept in mind that the commitment as stated by Judge Sater, is not designed and is not a punishment for crime but to place prisoners under suitable guardianship for proper care and discipline until they are reformed or arrive at the age of majority. So long as the institution at Mansfield is a place where the inmates receive proper care, training, discipline and education, certainly no objections can be made to it as a proper place for the detention of delinquents.

It is not necessary here to go into the statutes or the decisions to disclose that the common pleas court has the right to sentence to the industrial school at Lancaster boys between certain ages who have been convicted of crime. In the eye of the law such boys are felons just as well as those who have been sentenced to the penitentiary for burglary. Nevertheless, the boys industrial school, while in one sense a prison, is not a prison in the sense in which the people of this state, or for that matter the people of the different states of the country, understood a prison or a penitentiary to be when the various constitutions were adopted. That the legislature authorized delinquents sent to Mansfield is a legislative declaration, and delinquents are committed there not for the purpose of imprisonment but for the purpose of guardianship, and all that guardianship implies.

Section 2148-1, under the head of Ohio reformatory for women, provides:

> "The Ohio reformatory for women shall be used for the detention of all females over sixteen years of age, convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency as hereinafter provided, and for the detention of such female prisoners as shall be transferred thereto from the Ohio penitentiary and the girls' industrial home as hereinafter provided."

This is indicative. If the contention of Mr. Brudno be correct hopeless confusion will result with reference to the Ohio reformatory for women. The Ohio state reformatory at Mansfield, the industrial school at Lancaster, and may be other similar institutions.

Now, coming to the question of fact, I should pause long before recommending that you should recede from your position in sending the delinquent to Mansfield. The Ohio state reformatory under the management of Dr. Leonard has a reputation, which from personal observation I believe is deserved, of being one of the very best managed institutions for the guardianship of the youth to be found anywhere in the world. It has received the most favorable commendation from statesmen, courts, magazine writers, newspapers and everybody who ever visited it that I have talked to. It is, to my mind, just the place for delinquent boys, whether they have been tried before a jury for crime and convicted or tried by a court as delinquents.

Your committing the boy to the state farm school was not an act functus officio. The guardianship is a running one. The court had the guardianship, standing parens patriae, and in my judgment you had a perfect right to commit the delinquent to the reformatory at Mansfield. Of course, while at the reformatory such youth is subject to all of the rules of that institution.

I would advise you to adhere to your position until the court in the habeas corpus proceedings holds to the contrary.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—LEGISLATION UNNECESSARY FOR TAXATION OF MUNICIPAL BONDS UNDER CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Under the language of the constitutional amendment which removes the former constitutional exemption of municipal bonds, legislative enactment is unnecessary to bring about the exemption of such bonds, in view of the existing statutes providing for the taxation of bonds in general.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 1, 1913.

HON. S. GALE LOWRIE, Director, Legislative Reference Bureau, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I hasten, at my earliest convenience, to acknowledge and reply to your letter of March 21, in which you request my opinion as to the necessity of legislation in order to provide for the taxation of municipal bonds, issued since Jan. 1, 1913.

In my opinion such legislation is not necessary, and such bonds are now taxable without further act of the general assembly. The constitution, article XII, section 1, originally contained no reference whatever to bonds of municipal corporations of this state. In the year 1905 the following was incorporated into this section:

> "Excepting bonds of the state of Ohio, bonds of any city, village, hamlet, county, or township in this state, and bonds issued in behalf of the public schools of Ohio and the means of instruction in connection therewith, which bonds shall be exempt from taxation.

No legislation was ever had under this amendment, for the reason that it was palpably self-executing.

In 1913 this section of the constitution was again amended, so that this portion thereof now reads as follows:

> "excepting all bonds at present outstanding of the state of Ohio or of any city, village, hamlet, county or township in this state, or which have been issued in behalf of the public schools in Ohio and the means of instruction in connection therewith, which bonds so at present outstanding shall be exempt from taxation."

This provision simply withdraws from bonds issued after the date when it took effect, namely, January 1, 1913, the protection of the self-executing exemption adopted in 1905. Now the first sentence in the section I have referred to requires that all investments in bonds be taxed by a uniform rule at their true value in money. This provision is, of course, not self-executing. In pursuance thereof, however, numerous statutes have been passed asserting the intention of the legislature respecting the taxation of property (section 5328), and requiring the listing of specific items thereof, including investments in bonds (section 5376). It follows, I think, that these statutes automatically require the listing and taxation of all investments in bonds subject to the taxing power of the state not exempted from taxation.

I know of no principle of statutory construction which would require the legislature, for example, in doing away with an exemption which is purely statutory, to do otherwise than to repeal the exemption statute. The same principle, in my judgment, applies to the case of an amendment of a self-executing constitutional provision.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

JOINT RESOLUTION MAY NOT HAVE EFFECT OF LAW—MAY NOT PROVIDE FOR PRINTING OF LAW LIBRARY CATALOGUE EVERY FIVE YEARS BY JOINT RESOLUTION.

Since a joint resolution of the general assembly may not have the binding effect of law, the general assembly may not by such method, provide for the printing of a state law library catalogue every five years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1913.

HON. E. HOWARD GILKEY, State Law Librarian, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 28th in which you request my opinion upon the following:

> "Will you please advise this office in writing, if, under S. J. R. No. 30 (98 O. L. 421) we can proceed to get out another edition of the catalogue of the supreme court law library, over five years having elapsed since the edition of 1907, and constant demands being made upon us for a later guide to the volumes now in our library."

Senate Joint Resolution No. 30 was passed April 2, 1906, and provided as follows:

> "Be it resolved by the general assembly of the state of Ohio: That the supervisor of public printing is hereby authorized and directed to have printed and bound two thousand copies of the catalogue of the law library of the supreme court of Ohio, for general distribution among the judges, members of the bar, citizens and law libraries of the state, and to pay for the same out of the appropriations for state printing and binding. The commissioners of printing shall let the contract for the printing of the catalogue, by competitive bidding among bidders who are prepared to do catalogue work, and the quality of presswork and typesetting shall be considered in awarding the contract. The books shall be bound at the state bindery in a good quality of law buckram and shall be distributed by the law librarian under the supervision of the supreme court, the expense of such distribution to be paid from the contingent expense fund of the supreme court and law library.
> "Resolved, further, That the law librarian shall furnish copy for subsequent editions of the said catalogue, once in every five years hereafter, which editions shall be printed, bound and distributed hereafter, in the same manner as is above specified."

Printing for the state is governed by the provisions of sections 745 to 787 inclusive of the General Code. Section 754 divides such printing into seven classes and provides for the letting of contracts therefor as follows:

> "Section 754. The printing for the state shall be divided into seven classes and shall be let in separate contracts as follows
> "First Class:—Bills for the two houses of the general assembly, resolutions and other matters ordered by such houses or either of them to be printed in bill form.
> "Second Class:—The journals of the senate and house of representatives, and reports, communications and other documents which form a part of the journals.

"Third Class:—Reports, communications and other documents ordered by the general assembly or either house thereof, or by the executive departments, to be printed in pamphlet form, not including the bulletins of the agricultural experiment station.

"Fourth Class:—General and local laws and joint resolutions.

"Fifth Class:—Blanks, circulars and other work for the use of the executive departments, not including those to be printed in pamphlet form.

"Sixth Class:—The bulletins of the agricultural experiment station.

"Seventh Class:—The report of the secretary of state, auditor of state, commissioner of common schools, superintendent of insurance, rail oad commission, commissioner of labor statistics, state board of agriculture, and other reports of executive officers required by law to be bound in either cloth or half law binding, not including the laws, joint resolutions and journals of the house and senate.

"The printing for each of the classes except the seventh class shall be let in one contract; the printing for the seventh class may be let in one or more contracts as the commissioners of public printing in their discretion may require."

Section 786 General Code provides for printing for the state not included in the classification made by section 754 as follows:

"Section 786. All printing and binding for the state not authorized by the provisions of this chapter shall be subject to the provisions thereof so far as practicable, and, whether provided for by law or resolution, the commissioners of public printing may advertise for proposals and let contracts therefor as herein provided."

It will be observed that section 754 does not specifically include the catalogue of the books in the supreme court law library among the documents which may be printed at the state's expense. The same may be so printed, however, in pursuance of a resolution of the general assembly by virtue of the authority found in section, 786, but it remains to be determined whether the joint resolution adopted in 1906, which directs the law librarian to furnish copy for subsequent editions of said catalogue once in five years is sufficient to authorize the printing and distribution of another edition thereof at this time, more than five years having elapsed since the printing of the last edition.

In Blanchard vs. Bissell, 11 O. S. 103, Judge Scott in speaking of a resolution said, "It is of a temporary character and prescribes no permanent rule of government."

In the case of Mullen vs. State, 114 Cal. 578, it was held: "A mere resolution, therefore, is not a competent method of expressing the legislative will, where that expression is to have the force of law and bind others than the members of the houses adopting it."

The joint resolution adopted in 1906, in so far as it provides for the printing of said catalogue at intervals of five years has not in my judgment, the force and effect of law. The legislature is without power to pass laws by joint resolution. Provision for the periodical printing of said catalogue can be made only by statute.

I am of the opinion that you may not, upon the authority of said joint resolution, proceed to issue another edition of said catalogue. I would suggest that a new resolution be adopted at this session of the general assembly, or that a general statute be enacted providing for the printing and distribution of said catalogue at certain stated periods.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

STATE GEOLOGIST MAY NOT BE ALLOWED EXPENSES AND FEES FOR ATTENDANCE AT CONFERENCES OUTSIDE OF STATE.

Inasmuch as the statutes do not impose the duty nor do they authorize the expenses incurred by a state geologist in attending conferences outside of the state, that official may not be reimbursed for the same out of public funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1913.

HON. J. A. BOWNOCKER, State Geologist, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of February 3, 1913, you say that as state geologist you have calls to attend two types of meetings: (1). Conferences with federa, bureaus, such as the U. S. Geological Survey and the U. S. Bureau of mines; (2)l For the purpose of presenting and discussing various papers of a geological nature. which may or may not relate to the geology of Ohio.

Under these two heads, you set forth, in detail, the general object of such meetings, and the advantages which will enure to your department and the state, by these conferences, comparisons, data obtained and money saved.

You then ask: "To what extent can I draw on the appropriations for the geological survey of Ohio to meet the expense of such trips?"

Your department and office are creatures of statute law; and all matters pertaining thereto are covered in sections 799 to 810, inclusive, of the General Code.

The legislature is presumed to have fully covered all duties, powers and emoluments, which it intended should apply to this particular state department, by the above sections.

There can be no implied authority on your part, to expend money along lines not authorized in express terms of the law, and not covered by legislation appropriations.

The simple test is: Does the law provide for such expenses as you enumerate? Let us see what provisions are made for your duties, salary and expenses.

Section 802 says:

> "The state geologist shall investigate the geological structure and resources of the state. He shall determine as nearly as possible the number and extent of geological formations, and from time to time represent them upon maps and diagrams. He shall study the occurrence and distribution of useful minerals and products of such formations, determine their chemical composition and structure, investigate the soils and water supply of the state, and give attention to the discoveries of coal, building stone, natural cement, petroleum, gas and other natural substance of use and value. He may also collect and describe the fossils of geological formations of the state, but no expenditure shall be incurred therein unless authorized by the general assembly."

These are the only duties assigned to you, except such as relate to maps and reports.

Section 801 says:

> "The state geologist shall receive for his services two hundred dollars for each month for the time employed in the discharge of his official duties. Each assistant shall receive such compensation as the state geologist may allow.

The necessary traveling and incidental expenses of the geologist and assistants shall be paid each month from the state treasury on presentation of an itemized voucher approved by the governor. The compensation of the state geologist and assistants and the traveling and incidental expenses of the department shall not exceed in any year the amount appropriated by the general assembly for such purposes."

The duties of your office, as you can see from the law, are all confined within the bounds of the state; and no provision is made for attending conventions or meetings. Only "necessary traveling expenses" are provided for you; and these expenses, until further enlarged by statute, must be strictly confined to the duties performed by you, as enumerated in section 802. Moreover the appropriations by the legislature for your department in Vol. 102 O. L. do not specify any such items as you refer to. However beneficial such trips might be to the geological department of Ohio, there is no authority of law for incurring the expense thereof to be paid by the state. It will require legislative action to extend the law so as to include such items as valid expenses, payable by the state.

Yours very respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INTEREST OF STATE IN ITS CANALS—PENNSYLVANIA AND OHIO CANAL —TITLE OF STATE TO LANDS UPON ABANDONMENT—INTEREST OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IN MIAMI AND ERIE CANAL.

1. In the act incorporating the Pennsylvania and Ohio Canal Company, that company was given the fee simple or whatever other title it acquired by purchases, and upon dissolution of the company, the state and other stockholders shared equally in the distribution of such possession. By the same act, lands acquired by appropriation reverted to the original owners upon the dissolution of the company.

2. For the canals acquired by the state itself, its right of way is obtained:

(a) By purchasing rights and property of a private canal company, in which case upon abandonment of the canal, the state retains only such right and title to lands as were received by the company for which the purchase was made.

(b) By securing a right of way by taking the property owned by private persons, under the act of 1825, in which case the state acquired an absolute fee simple which remained in the state upon the abandonment of the canal.

(c) As regards the Miami and Erie canal, by securing its right of way directly from the United States, in which case the acts of congress granting such right of way, granted an absolute fee simple title to the state of Ohio subject to the condition that while such canals were operated they should be public highways for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or charge whatever for any property of the United States or persons in their service passing along the same, provided that the canal was completed wi hin the time prescribed in this act, which proviso was accomplished.

The state, therefore, upon abandonment of canals received in this manner, retains absolute fee simple title.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1913.

HON. W. A. WEYGANDT, Chairman of Canal Investigation Committee, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your committee has submitted the following questions to this department for opinion.

"First:—What interest, if any, has Ohio in the old Pennsylvania and Ohio canal?

"Second:—In case the state abandons the canals does the land revert to the abutting property owner?

"Third:—What interest, if any, has the United States government in the Miami and Erie canal?"

FIRST

The Pennsylvania and Ohio Canal Company was a private corporation organized by special acts of the legislatures of Ohio and of Pennsylvania.

Its organization and dissolution is referred to in case of McCombs vs. Stewart, 40 Ohio St., 646, by Justice Dickman, on page 661, where he says:

> "The Pennsylvania and Ohio Canal Company was incorporated in the year 1827, by a special act of the general assembly of the state of Ohio, and by a special act of the general assembly of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of constructing and maintaining a navigable canal from a point on the Ohio canal, at Akron, Ohio, to the waters of the Mahoning River, and thence to meet or intersect the Pennsylvania, or Chesapeake & Ohio canal at or near Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, etc. On account of the company's neglect to keep its canal in repair, it was, in 1872, by proceedings in the nature of quo warranto, ousted from its corporate franchises received from the state of Ohio, and dissolved, and a trustee was thereupon appointed as required by statute."

On page 663, Dickman J. further says:

> "It is obvious from the language and provisions of the act, that the legislature intended to authorize the company to acquire by donation or purchase an absolute estate in fee in lands, in aid of the objects of the corporation. Upon a dissolution of the corporation, the lands so held in fee simple would not revert to the original owners, but would remain to be disposed of for the benefit of the creditors and stockholders of the company."

On page 664, he further says:

> "But a different rule prevails where lands and easements are acquired by appropriation or proceedings in invitum. The Pennsylvania and Ohio Canal Company had the undoubted right to take and hold lands in fee, but such taking was to be by gift or purchase, and not by right of eminent domain. The right derived under section 3 'to enter upon, take possession of, and use' lands, real estate, and streams, cannot be enlarged by implication into an estate beyond the corporate existence of the company. The property being taken for public use, when that use ceases, it must revert to the owner of the soil from whom it was taken, relieved of the burden or easement which the sovereign power has imposed."

Therefore all land secured by appropriation for a right of way for the canal of The Pennsylvania and Ohio Canal Company would revert to the abutting property owners when the property was no longer used for such public purpose. Where property was secured by purchase or gift a fee could have been secured. In order to determine the title secured an examination would have to be made of the records of each county through which the canal passed.

The case dissolving this company is reported in 23 O. S. State 121. The proceedings for ouster were commenced in 1869, judgment for ouster entered and trustees appointed in 1873.

Minute Book No. 2, page 43, of the supreme court, where the case is docketed shows the appointment of the trustees but does not show that they, at any time, made a report. The original papers were also examined and no report of the trustees was found.

The legislature of Ohio at various times has passed acts in reference to this company. In 64 Ohio Laws 285 an act is set forth authorizing the company to sell or lease part or all of its right of way. The act of incorporation provided that any state could subscribe for stock in the company. It appears that the state of Ohio did hold such stock.

In the history of the canals published by the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, on page 44, it is said:

> "Gov. Medill in his message of Jan. 7, 1856, pointed out that there were 2,600 miles of railroad completed in Ohio and more than that many projected and in the course of construction. He said Ohio owned stock in the Cincinnati and Whitewater Canals, $150,000; Pennsylvania and Ohio and other canals, $420,000."

The state as a stockholder would have no more right in the right of way than any other stockholder would have.

The dissolution of the company terminated its rights to conduct a canal. The state, therefore, has no right of any kind in the Pennsylvania and Ohio canal which was operated by this company.

SECOND.

It appears from the decisions that the state of Ohio acquired the right of way for its canals in three ways:

(a) By purchasing the rights and property of a private canal company.

(b) It secured a right of way by taking the property owned by private persons under the act of 1825.

(c) On part of the Miami and Erie Canal, its right of way was secured directly from the United States.

a

When the state secured a right of way from a canal company it took only the right which the canal company had in the land.

This is determined in case of Vought v. Railroad Co., 58 Ohio St. 123, where it is held:—

> "Lands acquired for its use by a canal company, a private corporation, organized under the act of the general assembly before the adoption of the present constitution, as the Lancaster Lateral Canal Company, 24 Laws., 71, authorizing it to acquire lands for its use by donation, grant or appropriation, without expressing the interest or estate to be acquired thereby, revert to the owner from whom they were acquired, on the abandonment of the canal, or his successor in title. The general rule being, that where lands are acquired for a public use, an easement only is taken therein, unless the taking of a greater estate, as a fee simple, is expressly authorized by law. And the rule is the same where it afterwards disposes of its canals to the state, which, under the act of 1825, takes a fee simple in lands condemned by it to the uses of its canal system."

It will be necessary therefore, in such case, to ascertain what interest the private canal company took in the land in order to determine the right of the state therein.

If the private company had only an easement, the state has only an easement and upon abandoment the land would revert to the abutting property owner. If the private company held a fee, the state also secured a fee, and in such case the land would not revert to the abutting property owner.

b.

The title acquired by the state under the act of 1825, has been often determined by the supreme court of Ohio.

In State of Ohio vs. Griftner, 61 O. S., 201, it is held:—

> "The title acquired by the state to lands which it appropriated and used in the construction and operation of canals under the act of February 4, 1825, 23 O. L., 50, is a fee simple, and the former owners of such lands, by reason of such appropriation, parted with all their title and interest in such lands.
> "The fee simple title to such lands remains in the state after it ceases to use such lands for canal purposes, and the statute of limitations does not run against the state as to such lands.

It is well established that the title of the state to all land appropriated or taken for the use of the canals under the act of 1825, was an absolute fee simple. The abutting property owner has no right or interest in such land. Their entire title was divested when the state took the land.

Upon the abandonment of the canal the lands secured under the act of 1825 will not revert to the abutting property owners. And the state has an absolute right to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of this land. The state can grant an absolute fee simple title thereto.

THIRD.

(c) The third branch of the second question involves also the right of the United States in the Miami and Erie canal, and the two will be considered together.

The right of way of the Miami and Erie canal from Dayton north to Toledo and of the Wabash extension, with but few exceptions, was secured direct from the United States government by virtue of two acts which will be given in full. The land or part of the right of way which did not come under these acts was located through land which had been patented by the United States prior to the grants to the state.

The act of congress of May 24, 1828, is found in Volume 8, Laws of United States, pages 118, et seq. and provided:

> "Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that there be, and is hereby granted to the state of Ohio, for the purpose of aiding said state in extending the Miami canal from Dayton to Lake Erie, by the Maumee route, a quantity of land, equal to one half of five sections in width on each side of said canal, between Dayton and the Maumee river, at the mouth of the Auglaize, so far as the same shall be located through the public land, and reserving each alternate section of the land unsold to the United States, to be selected by the commissioner of the general land office, under the direction of the president of the United States; and which land, so reserved to the United States, shall not be sold for less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre. The said land hereby granted to the state of Ohio, to be subject to the disposal of the legislature of said state, for the purpose aforesaid and no other: Provided, That said canal, when completed, shall be, and forever remain, a public highway, for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or other charge, whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons, in their service, passing through the same; And, Provided, also, That the extension of the said Miami canal shall be commenced within five years, and completed within twenty years, or the state shall be bound to pay to the United States the amount of any lands previously sold; and that the title to purchasers under the state shall be valid.

"Section 2. And be it further resolved, that so soon as the route of said canal shall be located, and agreed on by the state, it shall be the duty of the governor thereof, or such other person or persons as may have been, or shall hereafter be, authorized to superintend the construction of said canal, to examine and ascertain the particular lands to which the said state will be entitled under the provisions of this act, and report the same to the secretary of the treasury of the United States.

"Section 3. And be it further enacted, That the state of Ohio, under the authority of the legislature thereof, after the selection shall have been so made, as aforesaid, shall have power to sell, and convey the whole, or any part of said land, and to give a title, in fee simple, therefor, to the purchaser thereof.

"Section 4. And be it further enacted, That the state of Indiana be, and hereby is, authorized to convey and relinquish to the state of Ohio, upon such terms as may be agreed upon by said states, all the right and interest granted to the state of Indiana, to any lands within the limits of the state of Ohio, by an act, entitled 'An act to grant a certain quantity of land to the state of Indiana, for the purpose of aiding said state in opening a canal to connect the waters of Wabash river with those of Lake Erie,' approved on the second of March, 1827, the state of Ohio to hold said land on the same conditions upon which it was granted to the state of Indiana, by the act aforesaid.

"Section 5. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the state of Ohio 500,000 acres of the lands owned by the United States within the said state to be selected as hereinafter directed for the purpose of aiding the state of Ohio in the payment of the debt or the interest thereon, which has heretofore been, or which may hereafter be, contracted by said state, in the construction of the canals within the same, undertaken under the authority of the laws of said state, now in force, or that may hereafter be enacted, for the extension of canals now making; which land, when selected, shall be disposed of by the legislature of Ohio, for that purpose, and no other; Provided, The said canals, when completed or used, shall be, and forever remain, public highways, for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or charge whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service passing along the same; And, provided further, That the said canal, already commenced, shall be completed in seven years from the approval of this act; otherwise the state of Ohio shall stand bound to pay over to the United States the amount which any lands sold by her within that time, may have brought; but the validity of the titles derived from the state by such sales, shall not be effected by that failure.

"Section 6. And be it further enacted, That the selection of the land granted by the fifth section of this act may be made under the authority, and by the direction of the governor of the state of Ohio, of any lands belonging to the United States within said state, which may at the time of selection be subject to entry at private sale, and within two years from approval of this act; Provided, That, in the selection of the lands hereby granted, no lands shall be comprehended which have been reserved for the use of the United States as alternate sections in the grants hitherto made, or which may be made during the present session of congress of lands within the said state, for roads and canals; And provided, That all lands so selected shall, by the governor of said state, be reported to the office of the register of the district in which the land lies, and no land shall be deemed to be so selected, 'till such report be made, and the lands so selected shall be granted by the United States to the state of Ohio.

"Section 7. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect, provided the legislature of Ohio, at the first session thereof, hereafter to commence, shall express the assent of the state to the several provisions and conditions hereof; and unless such expression of assent be made, this act shall be wholly inoperative, except so far as to authorize the governor of Ohio to proceed in causing selection of said land to be made previous to the said next session of the legislature.

Act of Congress, Vol. 8, Laws of United States, pages 118 et seq.
Approved May 24, 1828.

The act granting land to Indiana and which was afterwards transferred to Ohio is found in volume 7, Laws of United States, pages 585, et seq., and provided:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the state of Indiana, for the purpose of aiding the said state in opening a canal to unite at navigable points the waters of the Wabash river, with those of Lake Erie, a quantity of land equal to one-half of five sections in width, on each side of said canal, and reserving each alternate section to the United States to be selected by the commissioner of the land office, under the direction of the president of the United States, from one end thereof to the other; and the said lands shall be subject to the disposal of the legislature of said state, for the purpose aforesaid, and no other; Provided, That, the said canal, when completed, shall be, and forever remain, a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll, or other charge, whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service, passing through the same; Provided, That said canal shall be commenced within five years and completed in twenty years, or the state shall be bound to pay to the United States the amount of any lands previously sold, and that the title to purchasers under the state shall be valid.

"Section 2. And be it further enacted, That so soon as the route of the said canal shall be located and agreed on by the said state, it shall be the duty of the governor thereof, or such other person or persons as may have been, or shall hereafter be, authorized to superintend the construction of said canal, to examine and ascertain the particular lands to which the said state will be entitled under the provisions of this act, and report the same to the secretary of the treasury of the United States.

"Section 3. And be it further enacted, That the said state, under the authority of the legislature thereof, after the selection shall have been so made, shall have power to sell and convey the whole, or any part of the said land and to give a title, in fee simple, therefor, to whomsoever shall purchase the whole or any part thereof."

Act of congress, approved March 2, 1827; 7 Laws of United States, page 585.

The assent of the state of Ohio to the foregoing grants was given at the next general assembly as shown in 27 Ohio laws, page 16, passed December 22, 1828. Said act provided:

> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio, That the assent of the state of Ohio, be, and the same is hereby expressed, and declared to be given, to the several provisions and conditions of an act of the congress of the United States, approved 24th May, 1828, and entitled 'an act to aid the state of Ohio in extending the Miami Canal from Dayton to Lake Erie, and to grant a quantity of land to the said state, to aid in the construction of the canals authorized by law; and for making donations of land to certain persons in Arkansas territory.' "

It will be noted that the acts of congress do not say anything about a right of way for the canal. It will be noted also, that only alternate sections are given along the line of the canal. Therefore, the right of way must necessarily pass through land given to Ohio, subject to sale by it, and also through land which was reserved by the United States.

The supreme court of the United States, in construing a similar grant to the state of Illinois, has held that the right of way was granted by implication in the reserved sections.

In Werling vs. Ingersoll, 181 U. S., 131, it is held:

> "When congress, under the act of March 2, 1827, granted to the state of Illinois alternate sections of land throughout the whole length of the public domain, in aid of the construction of a canal to connect the waters of the Illinois river with those of Lake Michigan, it also granted by implication the right of way through reserved sections, but this implication would not extend to ninety feet on each side."

The act under consideration in the above cited case is found in volume 7, Laws of United States, page 582. This act also contained a clause that the canal when completed should remain a public highway free of toll to the United States. The proviso contained in said act was as follows:

> "Provided, That the said canal, when completed, shall be, and forever remain, a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll, or other charge, whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service, passing through the same."

This provision is the same as that contained in the above quoted acts granting land to the states of Ohio and Indiana.

The proviso in the grant to Ohio will be here repeated for convenience. Said proviso is as follows:

> "Provided, That said canal, when completed, shall be, and forever remain, a public highway, for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or other charge, whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service, passing through the same; And, Provided, also, That the extension of the said Miami canal shall be commenced within five years, and completed within twenty years, or the state shall be bound to pay to the United States the amount of any lands previously sold; and that the title to purchasers, under the state shall be valid."

This proviso is taken from section 1 of said act. A similar proviso is found in section 5 of said act, and also in section 1 of the act granting the land to the state of Indiana. The provisos are similar and are inserted for the same purpose.

It will be observed that there are two provisos, in said provision. The first one has reference to the canal being a public highway to be used free of charge by the United States, and the second is a limitation upon the time in which the canal must be started and completed.

The right, if any, of the United States in the land over which the canal is constructed must come by virtue of the first proviso. The act does not specifically provide for a forfeiture of the land if the state fails to maintain the canal as a public highway. There is a conditional clause to the second proviso and that is that the state shall be bound to pay for the land sold if the canal shall not be completed within the time specified. This provision limits the second proviso only, and does not limit the first. The canal has been completed and the state has complied with the second proviso.

In People ex rel. vs. The Lake Superior Ship Canal, 32 Mich. 233, it is held:

> "The right of the respondent company, under the legislation of congress and the state legislature in that regard, to the possession of the Portage ship canal, and to collect the tolls, is considered and sustained, as against the claim of the state as trustee of the United States.
> "The provision of the act of congress requiring the canal to be a public highway free of toll for United States vessels is held not to evince a purpose to create by the act a trust in the possession of the state for the United States. Similar provisions for free right of passage in United States land grants for railroads have never been construed as making the roads government roads."

The act of congress under consideration in the above cited case, contained this provision as shown on page 236 of the report:

> "And the said canal shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the government of the United States free from toll or charge upon the vessels of said government or upon vessels employed by said government in the transportation of any property or troops of the United States."

It will be observed that the court holds in the above case that the state does not hold the canal in trust for the United States. But the court does not touch upon the rights of the United States if the canal should be abandoned.

The rule of construction of grants of this nature is stated in Leavenworth L. & G. Railroad Co. vs. United States, 92 U. S. 733, as follows:

> "The rule announced in the former decisions of this court, that a grant by the United States is strictly construed against the grantee, applies as well to grants to a state to aid in building railroads as to one granting special privileges to a private corporation."

Rules of construction apply only where there is doubt as to the meaning of the grant or to the extent thereof.

The grant under the act of congress now under consideration is not doubtful. The doubt, if any, arises in the proviso.

A proviso is usually a limitation upon a grant or general provision of a statute The proviso will not be extended beyond its plain terms.

An example of a proviso by the federal government which amounts to a right of forfeiture is found in a grant to Illinois by act of March 30, 1822, as set forth in 181 U. S. 131, supra. at page 132. Said provision reads:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the state of Illinois be, and is hereby authorized to survey and mark through the public lands of the United States the route of the canal connecting the Illinois river with the southern bend of Lake Michigan; and ninety feet of land on each side of said canal shall be forever reserved from any sale to be made by the United States, except in the cases hereinafter provided for, and the use thereof forever shall be, and the same is hereby vested in the said state for a canal, and for no other purpose whatever, on condition, however, that if the said state does not survey and direct by law said canal to be opened, and return a complete map thereof to the treasury department within three years from and after the passing of this act, or if the said canal be not completed, suitable for navigation, within two years thereafter; or if said ground shall ever cease to be occupied by, and used for, a canal, suitable for navigation, the reservation and grant hereby made shall be void and of none effect."

Illinois did not act under this grant and afterwards congress made another grant, which contained a proviso similar to the one contained in the Ohio grant. This is the act which is quoted from and is construed in the case of Werling vs. Ingersoll, 181 U. S. 131, supra.

If the United States had desired to retain a right of forfeiture it would have so stated in plain and explicit terms. The right secured to the United States by the first proviso is a right to free tolls. It is not a condition that the state shall so maintain the canals forever as a public highway.

Forfeitures are not favored in law. Although grants from the government are construed in favor of the government, at this late date the courts would not favor a right of forfeiture under the doubtful terms of the proviso now under consideration, and which contains no specific right of forfeiture.

The difference in the terms of the two grants to Illinois shows a change of purpose in the federal government and a more liberal policy toward the states in aiding them in the construction of canals.

It is my opinion that the United States government has a right to free tolls on the canals so long as they are maintained as public highways; that it has parted with all its right or interest in the land used for the canal; and that the state has an absolute title in fee to the right of way of the Miami and Erie canal secured from the United States government.

The state of Ohio has the same right to dispose of this part of the canal system as it has to dispose of the part secured under the act of 1825.

Reference has been made to the Cleveland Terminal decision. This case is found in 85 Ohio St. 251, and is entitled, The Cleveland Terminal & Valley Railroad Co. vs. The State.

The syllabi of this case read:

"In conducting transactions with respect to its lands the state acts in a proprietary, and not in a sovereign capacity, and being amenable to all the rules of justice which it prescribes for the conduct of its citizens, it will not be permitted to revoke a grant of lands made upon a valuable consideration which it retains.

"When land is granted to a city upon a valuable consideration to be used for streets and other purposes, the title will not, in the absence of an express stipulation to that end, revest in the grantor because the land is subsequently used for street and railroad purposes.

"When the governor, in the exercise of authority expressly conferred upon him by statute, grants to a municipality "all the interest of the state" in lands which it owns in fee to be used for streets and other purposes, the municipality, reserving the right to use the same for street purposes without compensation, may execute a valid lease of such lands to a railroad company for its general purposes."

The land in controversy in the foregoing case was not a part of the Miami and Erie canal, and it is no aid in determining the right of the United States in the Miami and Erie canal.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

REVALUATION OF PROPERTY DESTROYED BY FIRE SHOULD BE MADE BY COUNTY AUDITOR.

When buildings are destroyed by fire, the board of review has no authority to make deduction on the tax duplicate unless acting in an appellate capacity from the decision of the county auditor. The application for relief should be made to the county auditor, who should act on the advice of the prosecuting attorney.

The county auditor should not take account of insurance money in making revaluation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 10, 1913.

HON. ALBERT J. DWYER, Special Counsel, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 4, requesting, on behalf of the board of review for the city of Dayton, my opinion as to the following question:

"When a building is destroyed or injured by fire may the board of review, in making deductions on the duplicate, set off against such deductions the amount of insurance money received by the owner on account of his loss? The particular destruction took place during the March, 1913, flood."

The board of review, let me say, in the first instance, has, by virtue of section 5578, General Code, authority to act in case of destruction of buildings by fire only in the event that the assessor of personal property fails at the time of taking the lists to return the proper reduction. As the section cited stood as originally codified, indeed, there was no recourse whatever, inasmuch as section 5593, General Code, applies only to personal property, and section 5583, General Code, is not exactly a grant of authority; and inasmuch also as section 5578, by undoubted inadvertence, referred only to the destruction of "new structures." This section still remains unamended. It originally afforded the only means of taking from the duplicate property destroyed or injured between the first day of October in one year and the second Monday in April in the succeeding year, which, unfortunately, includes the period during which the Dayton flood occurred.

Section 2591, General Code, originally provided a distinct method (with which, however, the board of review has nothing whatever to do) of taking from the duplicate for a current year property destroyed after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October. This statute was first enacted for the purpose of making deductions upon a duplicate the lien of which has already attached. In order that the county auditor might have authority to act under it, however, the destruction must have occurred between the times specified, and this fact was jurisdictional. This section wa amended, 103 Ohio Laws, 562, and at present reads as follows:

> "When after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October in any year it is made to appear by the oath of the owner or one of the owners of a building or structure and by the affidavit of two disinterested persons, resident of the city, village or township in which the building or structure is or was situated, that such building or structure has been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise, since the second Monday in April of the current year, the county auditor shall deduct from the tax list and duplicate the value of such building or structure or such part of the value thereof as shall correspond to the extent of the injury; and when it is made to appear in the manner herein provided that said building or structure has been so injured or destroyed since the first day of October of any year and prior to the first day of April of the succeeding year, the following deductions shall be made upon the taxes due in the following June, being the second one-half of the taxes for the current year, to wit: When such injury or destruction occurs during the month of October of any year, the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current year shall be entirely remitted; if in the month of November of any year, five-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of December of any year, four-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of January, three-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of February, two-sixths of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted; if in the month of March, one-sixth of the second one-half of the taxes on the amount deducted for such injury for the current tax year shall be remitted."

By reason of this amendment the relief which was necessary to meet the situation presented by the floods and the attendant fires was extended, for under the statutes as they formerly existed if a building was destroyed between the first of October and the following April, unless it were a "new structure," no alteration in the tax duplicate could lawfully be made on that account.

It being true that section 2591 provides the only method for relief, the provisions of the other sections referred to may be ignored.

Upon consideration of this section it appears, as already observed in connection with the section in its original form, that the board of review has no authority in the premises unless, possibly, when acting in an appellate capacity from a decision of the county auditor. The application for relief should be made to the county auditor, and he should act, of course, under the advice primarily of the prosecuting attorney.

Being cognizant, however, of the customs of city boards of review and the manner in which they work in co-operation with their respective county auditors I have no hesitancy in stating my view as to the question involved. In my opinion the phrase "the extent of the injury" as used in the section means substantially the same thing as the phrase found in section 5578, for example, which is as follows: "How much less valuable such tract or lot is in consequence of such destruction." That is to say, I do not believe that it is competent for the county auditor to take cognizance of the payment of insurance money in revaluing the real estate and making the necessary deductions. The insurance money, when paid, becomes the "personal property" of the owner, with which he is at liberty to do anything he pleases. He may erect another building in place of the one which has been destroyed, or he may decide to sell the land on which the building was located, in the condition in which it was found after the destruction. In either event he is possessed of the insurance money in some form or another not necessarily related to the real estate as such; that is, he may have it in the form of money in bank, in which event he would have to return it under the caption of "moneys" in listing his personal property; he may have invested the proceeds in non-taxable bonds, in which event the bonds themselves could not be taxed, and he would only be required to list the time during the year in which he had the fund in taxable form.

The thing listed on the duplicate as "real estate," under the section of the General Code pertaining to such listing, which I need not quote here, is the property itself as it lies or stands before the eye of the assessing officer. No deductions from the value of such property are allowable under our laws for liens thereon, such as mortgages and the like; conversely, no additions to the value of such property are permissible on account of the fact that the owner thereof may have received money as indemnity for the destruction of what was formerly a part thereof.

In short, the phrase "extent of the injury," as used in the statute, means in my opinion the injury to the real estate itself and not the injury to the owner.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY IS NOT PERMITTED TO RECEIVE SALARY FOR COLLECTING THE DOW-AIKEN TAX, AS THIS IS A PART OF HIS OFFICIAL DUTY.

Where the county commissioners of Licking county on December 7, 1909, adopted a resolution employing the prosecuting attorney as counsel in suits arising out of the collection of the Dow-Aiken tax at a salary of $15.00 per suit, the prosecuting attorney so acting is not entitled to receive this compensation as this is already his official duty to act as attorney for the county in these suits.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 9, 1913.

HON. J. HOWARD JONES, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of August 6, 1913, in which you inquire:

> "Enclosed please find copy of resolution by the county commissioners of this county, by virtue of which Mr. P. B. Smythe, former prosecuting attorney, claims certain attorney fees. Attached you will also find citations referred to me by Mr. Smythe. Will you kindly advise me if these fees can be legally paid Mr. Smythe?"

The resolution to which you refer reads:

RESOLUTION.

> "Whereas, C. L. V. Holtz, treasurer of Licking county, Ohio, and C. L. Riley, as auditor of Licking county, Ohio, have been made defendants in various suits now pending in the Common Pleas court of said county, wherein it is sought to enjoin said officials from collecting the Aiken liquor tax from the plaintiff in said actions, and whereas, said officials have requested this board to be permitted to employ counsel therein, and that said counsel fees be fixed.

"It is therefore resolved that said treasurer and said auditor be authorized and directed to employ Phil B. Smythe, prosecuting attorney for said county, to defend them in each of said suits, and that said Smythe be allowed and paid a fee of $15.00 in each case.

"Provided, however, that if it shall hereafter be determined that it is the duty of said Smythe to render said services as such prosecuting attorney, without extra compensation, then said sums or sum shall not be payable by reason thereof."

The references and citations referred to are section 1274, R. S., 5700 G. C. and State vs. Stafford, 11 O. D. 720.

The answer to your question depends upon a consideration of the above numbered sections. Section 845, R. S., and the determination as to whether it was a part of the duty of Mr. Smythe, as prosecuting attorney, to defend the suits in question.

The proviso found at the close of the resolution, as above copied, suggests the idea that there was at the date of its passage, some doubt in the minds of the commissioners whether it was not the duty of the prosecutor to defend said suits.

Section 5700, G. C., reads:

"When an action has been commenced against the county treasurer, county auditor, or other county officer, for performing or attempting to perform, a duty authorized or directed by statute for the collection of the public revenue, such treasurer, auditor or other officer, shall be allowed and paid out of the county treasury reasonable fees of counsel and other expenses for defending the action. The amount of damages and costs adjudged against him, with the fees, expenses, damages and costs shall be apportioned ratably by the county auditor among all the parties entitled to share the revenue so collected and be deducted by the auditor from the shares or portions of revenue at any time payable to each, including as one of the parties, the state itself, as well as the counties, townships, cities, villages, school districts and organizations entitled thereto."

This section was formerly section 2862, R. S., which was the same in so far as the matter under consideration is concerned, as section 5700.

It will be observed that this is a re-imbursement statute, and does not authorize the commissioners to employ counsel, nor require their approval of an employment made by a treasurer or auditor.

Section 1274, R. S., as amended March 31, 1906, and found in 98 O. L. 160, reads in part:

"The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and any and all of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in any matters connected with their official duties; he shall also perform all duties and services as are required to be performed by legal counsel under section 845 and he shall further be the legal adviser for all township officers, and no county or township officer shall have authority to employ any other counsel or attorney at law."

The language—"he shall also perform all the duties required to be performed by legal counsel under section 845" calls for inspection of said section as in force at that time. It reads in part:

> "Whenever the board of county commissioners of any county deems it advisable, it may employ legal counsel and the necessary assistants upon such terms as it may deem for the best interests of the county, for the performance of the duties herein enumerated. Such counsel shall be the legal adviser of the board of county commissioners and the board of control, where there is such board, and all of other county officers, of the annual county board of equalization, the decennial county board of equalization, the decennial county board of revision, and the board of review; and any of said boards and officers may require of him written opinions or instructions in any matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions, which any of the boards above named may direct, or, to which it or any of said officers may be a party, and shall also perform such duties and services as are now required to be performed by prosecuting attorneys under sections 799, 1277, 1278a and 3977 of the revised statutes, and as may at any time be required by said board of county commissioners."

Section 845 finds its way into the revision as sections 2409, 2412, General Code, in all of which reference to section 845 is omitted for the very obvious reason that the duties of counsel employed under section 845, and referred to in the amended section 1274, is carried into sections 2917 and 2918 of the General Code, which fact is of no influence in solving the question presented, further than as showing that the duties of prosecuting attorneys, as fixed by the act of March 31, 1906, have been carried into the General Code.

I think it perfectly clear from an inspection of sections 845 and 1274, of the revised statutes, in force when this resolution was passed, and as above set forth, that it was the duty of the prosecuting attorney as such, to defend the suits in question; that they are covered by the proviso attached to said resolution and that Mr. Smythe is not entitled to receive the $15.00 per suit mentioned in said resolution, his contract having been entered into December 7, 1909.

Of course, quite an argument might be made as to the effect of section 2862 R. S., now 5700, being in force during all of said time, and whether it was or was not repealed by implication to a very large extent, at least by the amendment of section 1274, supra, but it is not thought to be necesssry, as the provisions of that amendment and the intention of the legislature in making them are believed to be too plain to call for explanation.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE STATUTE SHOULD BE FOLLOWED IN PUBLISHING THE CITATIONS FOR NON-RESIDENT PARENTS THAT COME INTO JUVENILE COURT.

In publishing citations for non-resident parents that come into juvenile court as provided in section 1648, General Code, the language of the statute should be followed and the citation rather than an abstract of its contents, and the time and place of the hearing should be published.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 8, 1913.

HON. GEORGE S. ADDAMS, Judge of Juvenile Court, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have the letter from your deputy in which it is asked:

> "Will you kindly render us an opinion on section 1648, page 870, 103rd Ohio Laws, as regards publication of citation for non-resident parent of children that come into juvenile court. We have prepared a notice which seems to cover all requirements and upon which the newspapers have given us a flat rate of one dollar ($1.00) for publishing. Section 1648 says: 'The clerk shall cause such citation to be published once in a newspaper of general circulation.' Now, if we cause a copy of the citation to be published the newspapers want $2.00 and more for publishing same. Will you kindly let us know whether we are required to publish the citation in full or will the short form do?
> "As to payment for said publication, will we be required to use a voucher for payment or can we use a voucher in the form of subpoena vouchers which carry a stub giving title and numbe of case and which would be more convenient and would also give a check on all publications made an l paid for?"

Section 1648, General Code, as found on page 870 of 103 Ohio Laws, in so far as your query is concerned, reads:

> "Whenever it shall appear from affidavit that a parent or guardian or other person having the custody of such child resides or has gone out of the state or that his or her place of residence is unknown so that such citation cannot be served on him or her, the clerk shall cause such citation to be published once in a newspaper of general circulation throughout the county, and published in the county, if there be one so published. The citation shall state the nature of the complaint, and the time and place of the hearing, which shall be held at least two weeks later than the date of the publication; and a copy of such citation shall be sent by mail to the last known address of such parent, guardian or other person having custody of such child, unless said affidavit shows that a reasonable effort has been made without success to ascertain such address."

From this it is quite apparent that the legislature intended to give the parent, guardian or other person having custody of the child in question very full information as to the time and place of the hearing and nature of the charge.

Inasmuch as the only question made goes to the cost of publication, only amounts to one dollar in each case, and in the language of the statute, "the clerk shall cause such citation to be published, etc.," is plain and unequivocal, I advise you that it is best and safest to follow the language of the act, and publish the citation rather than an abstract of its contents showing the nature of the charge and the time and place of hearing.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

THE ONLY BORROWING POWER WHICH MAY BE LAWFULLY EXERTED TO MEET DEFICIENCIES IN THE REVENUES OF A MUNICIPALITY IS THAT POWER PROVIDED FOR IN SECTION 3931, GENERAL CODE.

Where the village of Ft. Recovery, Ohio, is indebted to the board of public affairs in the sum of $2500.00 for water and power furnished for said village, this indebtedness is simply a deficiency in the revenues of the municipality which should be met through the exercise of its taxing powers. The only borrowing power which may be lawfully exerted in the premises is that provided in section 3931, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 10, 1913.

HON. B. A. MYERS, Legal Counsel for the village of Ft. Recovery, Celina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of October 6, receipt whereof is acknowledged, you submit for my opinion the following question:

> "The village of Ft. Recovery, Ohio, is indebted to the board of public affairs of the village of Ft. Recovery, Ohio, in the sum of about $2,500, which debt is due to a shortage of funds under the tax limitation law. The village will be compelled to provide funds in some way to pay their board of public affairs for its light and water services, and to maintain their electric light and water plant, or otherwise it will be compelled to close down their plant which would cause a great amount of trouble with reference to insurance policies and otherwise.
> "Can the village council, under section 4506 of the General Code of Ohio, or under sections 3912 et seq., issue bonds or borrow money for the payment of this debt?"

I assume that what you term the "indebtedness" of the village to its board of trustees of public affairs consists of charges made by the board against the village for water furnished to the public places, and for lighting the streets, alleys and public places of the municipality. This is the only charge which the trustees would have authority to make against the village. That is to say, there is at least a serious question as to whether or not the trustees may operate the plant as a whole at a loss, and thus charge the general taxpayers for the electric current and water furnished to private consumers.

Assuming, then, that the deficiency exists by reason of the inability of the village within its tax limits, to pay the sums lawfully charged against it for the service furnished to the village as such, I am of the opinion that neither of the sections to which you refer authorizes the borrowing of money for the purpose of supplying this deficiency.

Section 4506, General Code, which I need not quote, authorizes the levy of taxes for sinking fund purposes. Section 3912, General Code, creates a general power to borrow money but is in itself in the absence of supplementary authority in the same chapter, not sufficient to invest a municipality with power to borrow money for a designated purpose.

The so-called obligation of the village is, at the most, not a funded one, to be met directly through the medium of the sinking fund levies. In point of fact it does not amount to a technical indebtedness at all. It is simply a deficiency in the revenues of the municipality, which should be raised through the exercise of its taxing power to meet a specific municipal purpose. Such being the case, the only borrowing power which may lawfully be exerted in the premises, in my opinion, is that provided for by section 3931, General Code, which is as follows:

"Council may issue deficiency bonds in such amount and denominations, for such periods of time, not to exceed fifty years and at such rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. as it deems best when in the opinion of council it is necessary to supply a deficiency in the revenues of the corporation. The total amount of deficiency bonds issued by a corporation, outstanding at any time, shall not exceed one per cent. of the total value of all property in the corporation as listed and assessed for taxation. The issuance of such bonds shall be approved by the votes of two-thirds of all the members elected to council, and approved by the votes of two-thirds of all the electors of the corporation voting upon such question at a regular or special election to be provided for by council."

The conditions and limitations upon the exercise of the power in question are explicitly stated in the section quoted.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A COUNCIL OF A MUNICIPALITY IN THE STATE OF OHIO HAS NO AUTHORITY TO CONTRACT WITH THE COUNCIL OF ANOTHER MUNICIPALITY TO FURNISH CURRENT FOR THE STREETS OR FOR THE CITIZENS OF THE SECOND MUNICIPALITY.

Where the village of Plymouth, Ohio, has installed an electric lighting system and is desirous of furnishing current to the village of Shiloh, the village of Plymouth is without authority to do this, as section 3618, General Code, applies only to the establishment, maintenance and operation of the municipal lighting, power and heating plants, and furnishing such power, light or heat by the municipality to the citizens thereof and does not apply to furnishing it to another village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 28, 1913.

HON. B. F. LONG, Legal Counsel, Shilo, Shelby, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—We are in receipt of your letter of April 24, 1913, submitting for my opinion the following questions:

"Shilo is a village situated four miles from Plymouth, another village in Ohio. Plymouth is installing an electric light plant, and is desirous to furnish current to Shiloh for her streets, and also for her citizens, and is desirous to enter into a contract with Shiloh by which Shiloh is to erect poles and string wires throughout the corporate limits of Shiloh, and then extend the light line, erect poles, etc., from Shiloh to the corporate line of Plymouth.

(1) "Can Shiloh and Plymouth enter into such a contract and legally incur the indebtedness necessary therefor?

(2) "If Shiloh can enter into this contract with Plymouth, could the necessity of electric lights be declared an 'emergency measure' and not be within the meaning of the Crosser Act?"

In answer to your first question I beg to state that it has been held repeatedly by the supreme court of this state that a municipal corporation has only those powers which are expressly granted to it and such others as are necessary to carry out the the powers expressly granted. In support of this statement I cite the following cases:

Collins vs. Hatch, 18 Ohio, 523.

Revenna vs. Penn Co., 45 O. S., 118.

Gas and Water Co., vs. Elyria 57 O. S.. 374.

Unless there can be found in the statute specific authority for Plymouth and Shiloh to enter into the contract as stated by you, the councils of the respective municipalities would have no authority to make it.

Section 3618, General Code, to which you refer, and by the terms of which you suggest that such a contract may be authorized by implication, is as follows:

> "To establish, maintain and operate municipal lighting, power and heating plants, and to furnish the municipality and the inhabitants thereof with light, power and heat, to procure everything necessary therefor, and to acquire by purchase, lease or otherwise, the necessary lands for such purposes, within and without the municipality."

This section authorizes the establishment, maintenance and operation of the municipal lighting, power and heating plants; and before its amendment, 99 vol. Ohio Laws, 34, it was held by our courts that it contained no authority for the furnishing of electricity to citizens by a municipal corporation. I am, therefore, of the opinion that section 3618 applies only to the establishment, maintenance and operation of the municipal lighting, power and heating plants and the furnishing of light, heat and power by such municipality to the citizens thereof, and does not authorize the council of a municipality to contract with another municipality, either to purchase from or to furnish to such other municipality light, heat or power.

Sections 3982 and 3984, General Code, to which you refer in your letter, provide substantially that a municipal corporation may contract with a company for electric lights and give such municipality the power to establish by ordinance, the price at which such light shall be furnished to the inhabitants of the municipality; and section 3994 authorizes a municipal corporation to contract with any company for electric lights, natural and artificial gas, for the purpose of lighting or heating the streets, squares and other public places and buildings in the incorporated limits. The companies referred to in these sections could not, by the most liberal interpretations of the statutes, be construed to mean municipal corporations, and I am, therefore, of the opinion that there is nothing in these sections that would authorize a contract such as contemplated by the villages of Shiloh and Plymouth.

Section 3973, General Code, to which you refer, applies only to municipal waterworks and can not include, by implication, contracts between municipalities for light.

In the case of Wright vs. The village of Kennedy Heights, 25 C. C. Rep. 409, it is held by the court that contracts to be authorized by this section must be strictly within the terms thereof. Therefore, I will hold that the villages of Shiloh and Plymouth have no authority to enter into this proposed contract.

Since your first question has been answered in the negative, the question as to whether or not the necessity of electric lights, under the proposed contract, could be declared an emergency measure and not be within the meaning of the Crosser Act, does not require answer, as the request for an opinion thereon is made conditional upon an affirmative answer of the first question.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

WHERE THE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION AND ITS DEPUTY IN CHARGE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF WORKSHOPS, FACTORIES AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS CONDEMN THE USE OF A PUBLIC SCHOOL BUILDING FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES, THE ORDER MUST BE COMPLIED WITH, AND AN EMERGENCY IS CREATED.

Where the industrial commission and its deputy in charge of the department of workshops, factories and public buildings condemn the use of a public school building for school purposes, the order must be complied with, and an emergency is created.

If bonds are issued by the board of education, with the approval of a majority of the electors, at a special election, the tax levies necessary to carry these bonds may be made outside of the limitations of the Smith One Per Cent. Law. Such is the effect of the amendment to section 5649-4, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 7, 1913.

HON. W. V. ANDERSON. Legal Counsel for the village of Bridgeport, Bridgeport, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 14, embodying a copy of an order addressed to the board of education of the Bridgeport school district by the industrial commission of Ohio and its deputy in charge of the department of workshops, factories and public buildings, relative to a certain school building in the Bridgeport school district, the essential portion of which is as follows:

> "Do not use this building for school purposes on account of the bad sanitary conditions of same; to be complied with at the close of the present term of school."

You ask whether the issuance of this order would entitle the board of education of the Bridgeport school district to take action under section 7630-1, General Code and otherwise under the act passed April 8, 1913, 103 Ohio Laws, 547. You also ask whether or not, in the event that a favorable vote of the electors of the school district might be obtained by the board of education, under favor of the section just cited, a levy in excess of fifteen mills of the tax valuation of the school district might lawfully be made to retire bonds which would, in that event, be issued.

Your question invites consideration of the act above cited, which provides in part as follows:

> "Section 7630-1. * * * if the use of any school house for its intended purpose is prohibited by any order of the chief inspector of workshops and factories, and the board of education of school district is without sufficient funds applicable to the purpose, with which to rebuild or repair such school house or to construct a new school house for the proper accommodation of the schools of the district, and it is not practicable to secure such funds under any of the six preceding sections because of the limits of taxation applicable to such school district, such board of education may, subject to the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven, and upon the approval of the electors in the manner provided by sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-five and seventy-six hundred and twenty-six issue bonds for the amount required for such purpose. For the payment of the principal and interest on such bonds * * * and to provide a sinking fund * * * such board of education shall annually levy a tax as provided by law.

"Section 5649-4. For the emergencies mentioned in sections * * * 7630-1 of the General Code, the taxing authorities of any district may levy a tax sufficient to provide therefor irrespective of any of the limitations of this act."

It appears on the fact of Section 7630-1 that in order to entitle a board of education to proceed thereunder, and to exercise the power thereby conferred, the following conditions must exist:

1. The use of the school house for its intended purpose must be prohibited by an order of the chief inspector of workshops and factories (now the industrial commission, which has succeeded to the powers and duties of that officer).

2. The board of education must be without sufficient funds to put the building in proper shape or to construct a new one.

3. The board must be satisfied that it is not practicable to secure the necessary funds because of the limits of taxation. This condition would exist whenever the tax limits were in dange of being exceeded by levies at the maximum rate or amount necessary for the current needs o the schools, and the discharge of funded obligations already incurred, so that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to float the necessary bonds by proceeding under section 7625, et seq., General Code.

I take it that your question assumes the existence of the above mentioned conditions, and raises the point only as to whether or not the order copied in your letter is a fulfillment of the first condition.

In my opinion it is: The prohibition contained in the order, as quoted, is a positive one, qualified only by the statement that it is not to be operative until the end of the present school term. An "emergency" is none the less created by this order because in order to have the building repaired or a new one erected in time for the succeeding term of school it would be necessary to commence proceedings to secure the necessary funds within a very short time.

As already pointed out the industrial commission now has succeeded to all the powers and duties of the chief inspector of workshops and factories so that the order is in compliance with the statute in this particular.

You also ask as to whether or not if bonds are issued by the board of education with the approval of a majority of the electors at a special election the tax levies necessary to retire these bonds may be made outside of the limitations of the Smith one per cent. law.

In my opinion the answer to this question is in the affirmative. Such is the effect of the amendment to section 5649-4. All that is mentioned in that section is outside of the fifteen mill limitation as well as all other limitations of the act as will more fully appear from the provision of section 5649-5b which as amended 103 Ohio Laws 57 provides for the fifteen mill limitation as follows:

"* * * in no case shall the combined maximum rate for all taxes levied in any year in any county city, village, school district, or other taxing district, under the provisions of this and the two preceding sections and sections 5649-1, 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code as herein enacted, exceed fifteen mills."

The omission of section 5649-4 from the catalogue of sections mentioned in section 5649-5b cannot be ascribed to any intention other than to exclude the emergency levies provided for by the last named section from the operation of the fifteen mill limitation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

THE ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN, DOCUMENT CLERK, LIBRARY ASSISTANT, SUPERINTENDENT OF TRAVELING DEPARTMENT, AND THE ASSISTANT IN THE TRAVELING DEPARTMENT ARE REQUIRED TO GIVE BOND IN THE SUM OF $1,000.00.

Under the provisions of section 794, General Code, the state librarian shall give bond in the sum of $10,000.00 to the state, the assistant librarian, document clerk, library assistant superintendent of the traveling department, and assistant in traveling department shall give bond in the sum of $1,000.00. The library organizer and assistant, by reason of section 794, General Code, and the stenographer, messenger and janitor, are not required to give bond.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1913.

HON. J. H. NEWMAN, State Librarian, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of August 20th wherein you submit the following for my opinion:

> "Would you kindly advise us as to the application of section 790 to the employees of the Ohio State Library? The section referred to reads as follows:
>
> "Section 790 (Bond of librarian and assistants.) Before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, the librarian and each assistant shall give a bond to the state, the former in the sum of ten thousand dollars and the latter in the sum of one thousand dollars, with two or more sureties approved by the board of library commissioners, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. Such bond, with the approval of the board and the oath of office indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the treasurer of state and kept in his office.
> "Heretofore, it appears, no one was required to give bond but the librarian and his first assistant. The pay-roll hereto attached will give you an idea of the positions held by the various employees. By consulting it, perhaps, you will be the better enabled to give an opinion. You will notice that some are recorded as clerks, others as stenographers, janitors and messengers."

Attached to your inquiry you give the positions that are held by the various people in your department as follows: Librarian, one assistant librarian, one document clerk, nine library assistants, one superintendent traveling department, five assistants traveling department, one janitor traveling department, one library organizer, one assistant library organizer, one stenographer, one messenger and janitor and one janitor.

The sections to which I would call your attention in this opinion are as follows: Sections 789, 790 and 798-2 General Code.

Section 789 General Code provides that the state board of library commissioners shall have the management of the state library and further that it shall appoint and remove the librarian with the consent of the Governor, and with the consent of the librarian shall appoint the assistants who shall serve during the pleasure of the board.

Section 790 General Code provides that the librarian and each assistant shall give a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties.

Section 792 General Code provides that the librarian shall have charge of the library and give personal attendance therein and attention thereto.

Section 794 General Code provides that the library commissioners may appoint a library organizer.

Section 798-2 General Code provides that the library commissioners shall appoint an assistant who shall be known as the legislative reference librarian, and is authorized to appoint such other assistants as the work of that department may require.

These are the only sections that deal with the question of library assistants. It is to be noted, however, that the statutes refer to assistants to the librarian and not to assistant librarians. That is to say, any position that could be considered as an assistant in the library would be within the purview of section 790 General Code and is not necessarily confined to what might be officially termed "assistant librarian." In fact there is no statutory position as "assistant librarian."

From an interview had with you in reference to this matter I am informed that the person designated "document clerk" in your department is in fact a library assistant in charge of the document room, and consequently I am of the opinion that such clerk would be considered as a library assistant. The same is true as to the superintendent of the traveling department and the assistants in such department for the reason that they handle the books that are sent out to the various libraries. The library organizer is specifically designated in section 794 General Code, but in such statute is not stated to be a library assistant, but is designated simply as library organizer. Consequently, I do not believe that such library organizer nor assistant library organizer are within the purview of section 790 General Code, nor would the stenographer, messenger or janitors be so considered.

Since section 790 General Code requires each assistant to give a bond in the sum of one thousand dollars to the state of Ohio, I am of the opinion that bond should be given in such sum by the assistant librarian, document clerk, library assistants, superintendent of traveling department and assistant in traveling department. And I am of the opinion that the library organizer and assistant by reason of section 794 General Code, and the stenographer, messenger and janitors are not required to give bond.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A VILLAGE COUNCIL IS NOT AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE BONDS IN MAKING TAX LEVIES FOR THE PURPOSE OF CREATING A SINKING FUND FOR THE RETIREMENT OF CERTAIN BONDS.

Where a village passes two ordinances providing for the making of tax levies, annually, for a period of a number of years in the future, for th purpose of creating a sinking fund for the retirement of certain bonds, the council acted illegally and the election is void. The bonds which are not yet delivered, and upon which bids have never been received, should not be delivered, but where the bonds have been issued and the money expended, the village should do its best under the Smith One Per Cent. Law to provide for their retirement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1913.

HON. ANDREW S. MITCHELL, Legal Counsel for the village of Granville, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 11, enclosing copies of two ordinances passed by the council of the village of Granville, an election notice given by the mayor of the village, and a sample ballot prepared for and used by the electors of the village at the recent election.

The two ordinances provide in substance for the making of tax levies, annually, for a period of a number of years (in one case twenty, in the other fifteen), in the future, for the purpose of creating a sinking fund for the retirement of certain bonds.

The ordinances also provide for the submission of the proposition of making the levy to the electors of the village. The election notice incorporates the substance of the two ordinances. The sample ballot is as follows:

GRANVILLE VILLAGE SPECIAL BOND ELECTION
	For the issue of bonds
	Against the issue of bonds

You inform me that one issue of bonds has actually been sold and delivered, while the other has been offered for sale and bids have been received therefor.

You also inform me that the mayor's notice was not published in a weekly newspaper which is printed in the village, but was posted in two conspicuous places.

You request my opinion as to whether or not the village "will be justified" in delivering the undelivered bonds, and in making the additional levy to take care of both such bonds, in view of the foregoing facts, and in view also of the fact that the levy for the coming year, as fixed by the budget commission, is insufficient to provide a necessary sinking fund.

I know of no statutory authority for the submission to the electors of any such proposition as that embodied in either of these ordinances. In levying taxes council must act annually and through the submission of its budget to the county auditor as provided in section 5649-3a et seq., General Code. No vote of the people is required or authorized, and each year's levy must be separately made. Furthermore, the levy for sinking fund purposes must be made through the agency of the sinking fund trustees, as provided by sections 4506 et seq., General Code, and not by a vote of the people.

The only section of the General Code authorizing or requiring the submission of any question, as to the levy of taxes for sinking fund purposes, to a vote of the people is section 5649-5, General Code, which with its two succeeding sections authorizes, in effect, the submission to the electors of a taxing district of a proposition to increase the tax levy beyond certain limitations of the Smith law, but within the fifteen mill limitation thereof. Such an increase is only effective for five years, and the question voted on is the increase and not the special levy. The effect of such a vote is to authorize the limitations of the act to be exceeded, and not to make the levy itself.

It occurs to me that the supposition of those who have managed this municipal undertaking has been based upon the provisions of section 2 of article 12 of the constitution as recently amended, which is as follows:

> "No bonded indebtedness of the state, or any political subdivisions thereof, shall be incurred or renewed, unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred or renewed, provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity."

The intention, evidently, has been to comply with the spirit of this section, by providing a continuous co-incidental sinking fund levy for each particular issue of bonds. The very facts of this case, as submitted by you, however, show very clearly that the constitutional section is not self-executing so far as the machinery necessary to enable its mandate to be carried into effect is concerned. The section may be and doubtless is self-executing with respect to the prohibition that no bonds shall be issued except under the circumstances therein referred to; but the section itself does no provide any machinery for the making of a co-incidental and special sinking fund levy required thereby.

I understand that in the case of Linke vs. Karb, mayor of Columbus, it has been held by the common pleas court and the court of appeals of Franklin county that the municipal sinking fund statutes sufficiently comply with this new section of the constitution. This decision, assuming its correctness, merely serves to emphasize the conclusion that the constitution does not contemplate a levying of the tax in the manner in which it is attempted to be levied by the action of the council of the village of Granville.

For the above stated reasons I am of the opinion that the election is void for lack of authority from the council of the village to submit any such proposition thereat

This conclusion makes it unnecessary for me to consider your question as to who should publish the notice of election and as to how it should be published. It also obviates the necessity of considering the effect of the use by the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the above described form of ballot.

I advise you, therefore, that the bonds which are not yet delivered, and upon which bids have never been received, should not be delivered, and that the village take such steps as may be in its power to cancel the other bonds of which you speak; using for that purpose, of course, the moneys derived from their sale. Obviously, however if these moneys have been expended, and the bonds have passed into the hands of innocent purchasers, the village will have to do its best under the Smith law to provide for their retirement, as it cannot escape the obligation of repaying them.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.
