Note from the Attorney General's Office:

1911 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 11-241 was overruled by 2009 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2009-018.

1911 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 11-66 was overruled by 1966 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-014.

(To the United States Senators)

305.

SENATE BILL PROVIDING FOR APPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES IN CONGRESS—CONSTITUTIONALITY—REPRESENTATIVES EXCEEDING CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS—EXTRA MEMBERS ELECTED AT LARGE—NOMINATION LIKE GOVERNORS AND STATE OFFICERS.

A United States senate bill having for its object the apportionment of representatives in congress, assigns to Ohio and several other states, a greater number of representatives than there are congressional districts in such states and provides that such additional members may be elected at large.

An amendment to such bill stipulating that such extra members, for whom the state provides no elections, may be nominated in the same manner as candidates for governor are nominated in such states, would be without objection, as such regulations are within the powers of congress under article I, section 4 of the constitution of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 27, 1911.

HON. THEODORE E. BURTON, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR:—I have given careful attention to the question which you ask in your letter of July 20th, as follows: "A bill now pending in the United States senate provides an apportionment of representatives in congress, which, if enacted into law, will assign to several states, among them Ohio, a greater number of representatives than the number of congressional districts in such states. To meet the obvious difficulty, the bill provides that if no apportionment is made by the states, the additional member or members allotted to such states under the remaining provisions of the bill may be elected at large.

"The state of Ohio has no law providing for the nomination of members at large of congress. Would it be sufficient and proper for congress to enact by way of amendment to this bill in effect that such additional member or members for the election of whom no provision is made by the states, and who are to be elected at large, by virtue of the provisions above referred to, may be nominated in the same manner as candidates for governor are nominated in such states?"

The form of your question suggests two inquiries, perhaps independent, namely, the effectiveness of such a regulation, and the power of congress to pass it.

As to the first inquiry which your question suggests, I am of the opinion that an amendment, such as that suggested, would be entirely effective and would meet all the difficulties which might arise by virtue of the passage of an apportionment act allows to the state of Ohio a greater number of representatives in congress than there are congressional districts therein. The election laws of this state provide the method for nominating all candidates for governor and other state officers. For congress to adopt this method and make it applicable to representatives at large would, on the one hand, meet the emergency that might otherwise arise, and, on the other hand, it would not preclude the state from legislating in the future, if it saw fit, with regard to the nomination of such representatives at large.

The second inquiry which your question suggests presents an interesting legal problem.

Article I, section 4 of the constitution of the United States provides in part:

> "The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives, shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof; but congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators."

If there were ever any doubts as to the plain meaning of this provision, and as to the vesting by it in congress of power to regulate the manner of electing representatives in congress, such doubts have all been dispelled by the repeated decisions of the federal courts:

Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S., 371.
Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S., 651.
Ex parte Coy, 127 U. S., 731.
Ex parte Geissler, 4th Federal, 188.
United States vs. Gale, 109 U. S., 75.
United States vs. Quinn, 8 Blatchf., 48.
United States vs. Badder, 4 Woods, 189.

It is also settled that congress may adopt and enforce by its own peculiar sanctions state laws relating to elections for the purpose of regulating the manner of holding elections for representatives, which elections are held at the same time at which state elections are held.

Ex parte Siebold, supra.
Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S., 399.

This, the only unsettled question presented in your second inquiry is as to whether or not the power to regulate nominations of candidates for congress can be by implication derived from the express grant of power to regulate the manner of holding elections for representatives.

The recognition of political parties, the requirement of official ballots, and in general all regulations pertaining to the nominations have, wherever their validity has been questioned been justified as measures tending to insure the purity of elections. Numerous state decisions might be cited upon this point, but it is sufficient for the present purpose to cite:

State vs. Taylor, 55 O. S., 391.
State vs. Poston, 58 O. S., 620.

It is equally well settled that congress has not only the powers expressly granted to it by the federal constitution, but also all powers necessary and proper to carry into effect the powers expressly conferred and to further any end which congress may constitutionally seek to attain.

Legal Tender Cases, 12th Wallace, 379.

For all of these reasons, it is my opinion that the proposed amendment would not exceed the constitutional powers of congress.

I assure you that it is a great pleasure to me personally to be of any assistance to you in this matter, but I am constrained to remark that I have felt some slight trepidation in assuming to pass upon the constitutional questions above referred to for the reason that in questions relating to the powers of congress, I suppose that the opinion of the attorney general of the United States might properly be solicited. For this reason I have not elaborately discussed the questions involved, but I have no hesitancy in saying that in my judgment the conclusions reached are amply sustained by the authorities cited.

I am at least certain if congress chooses to pass the amendment described to you, no exceptions to such action will be taken by any of the state authorities of Ohio.

Very respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Governor)

B 263.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1911.

HON. JUDSON HARMON, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR GOVERNOR:—I have considered the question presented in the letter of Rev. B. F. McKinnon, of Middletown, Ohio, enclosed herewith. Although it is not clear from the correspondence I assume that the question is as follows:

> "May an infirmary physician lawfully charge a fee for filling out insurance company blanks for the enforcement of a policy on the life of an inmate?"

The relation between the infirmary directors and the physician employed by them is clearly contractual and the terms of such contract are not prescribed by law. There is nothing, therefore, in the law to prevent the exaction of such a fee.

Furthermore, the service in question is rendered, not to the deceased or to his estate, but to the beneficiary of the life insurance policy, and while the fee may be unreasonable in amount I do not know of any rule of law which would prevent its exaction, or which would compel the physician to perform the services in question without being paid for them.

I herewith return the correspondence submitted to me.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the General Assembly)

55.

ELECTION OF JUDGES—SEPARATE BALLOTS—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ARRANGEMENT OF BALLOTS IN SERIES AND ALPHABETICAL ORDER.

The senate bill, with reference to the election of judges of the supreme court and other courts of this state, is not objectionable on the grounds; first, that it seeks to impose in effect, an educational requirement; second, that it imposes conditions which are not uniform and not impartial in effect as to all electors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 23, 1911.

HON. JAMES A. REYNOLDS, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested the opinion of this department as to the constitutionality of Senate Bill No. —, relating to the election of judges of the supreme and other courts of this state.

My particular attention is directed to that provision of the bill which requires that there shall be separate ballots for all judicial offices, and that the names of all the candidates for such offices shall be arranged thereon in alphabetical order and printed in series so that the order in which the names appear on such ballot shall be different in each series.

It is obvious that the effect of such provisions is to conceal the partisan allegiance or nomination of all candidates for judicial office, so that an elector desiring to vote for the candidates nominated by his party must know who they are.

The only conceivable constitutional objection to this scheme is that it tends to impose an educational qualification not authorized by the constitution. Section 1 of article V of the constitution of 1851 provides that:

> "Every white male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the state one year next preceding the election, and of the county, township or ward in which he resides such time as may be provided by law, shall have the qualifications of an elector, and be entitled to vote at all elections."

Section 2 of the same article provides that:

> "All elections shall be by ballot."

It is clear that the general assembly may not in the exercise of its general legislative power impose any qualifications upon the exercise of the elective franchise other than those embodied in section 1 above quoted, or regulate the manner in which such franchises shall be exercised so as to conflict with the mandate of section 2 above quoted. Yet the general assembly has undoubted discretion in the matter of regulating the exercise of the legislative franchise so as to prevent its abuse. In so legislating, however, the general assembly must not enact laws which are unreasonable, partial or which lack uniformity. Monroe vs. Collins, 17 O. S., 665; State ex rel. vs. Bode, 55 O. S., 229.

The questions then for determination in connection with this specific bill are as follows:

1. Does the bill seek to impose in effect an educational qualification whatever may be its professed purpose?

2. Does the bill, under the guise of regulating the mode of the exercise of the legislative franchise, impose conditions thereon which are not uniform and impartial in effect as to all electors?

With respect to the first of these questions, the answer must, in my judgment, be in the negative. It would be just as reasonable to say that the present Australian ballot law, which provides for straight tickets, headed by party emblems, is unconstitutional because it restricts the illiterate elector to the "straight ticket," as it would be to hold that this bill is unconstitutional because it presents such an elector from voting for the candidates of a particular political party as such. The supposed inference that the free choice of the elector is the same in both instances.

As a matter of fact it is physically impossible to provide any method of voting which will not seem to discriminate in a sense against some particular class of voters. Thus if viva voce voting were permitted under the constitution, and the general assembly should choose to provide for the election of public officers by this method, it might be objected thereto that dumb persons, possessing the qualifications of an elector could not exercise their franchise by this method. While this contention seems rediculous, it has been actually made. In the same manner those who are crippled and those who are blind might be said to be discriminated against by the present laws which require each elector to mark his ballot with a lead pencil. This is but another way of saying that the effect of a viva voce election law would be to add the qualification of audible speech to those defined in the constitution, and that the effect of the present Australian ballot law would be to add to the constitutional qualifications that of ability to make the lead pencil mark required by statute.

As above suggested, such difficulties are inherent in any scheme of voting which may be adopted by the general assembly, and especially inherent in the scheme required to be adopted by the constitution, viz., that of elections by ballot. The general assembly, however, has recognized these difficulties and has so safe-guarded the constitutional rights of qualified electors as to obviate all such objections.

It is provided by section 5078, General Code, that:

> "Any elector who declares to the presiding judge of elections that he is unable to mark his ballot by reason of blindness, paralysis, extreme old age or other physical infirmity, and such physical infirmity is apparent to the judge to be sufficient to incapacitate the voter from marking his ballot properly, may, upon request receive the assistance in the marking thereof of the two judges of elections belonging to different political parties, and they shall thereafter give no information in regard to the matter. * * * Such assistance shall not be rendered for any other cause which the voter may specify."

A close examination of this section discloses that inability to read is not such an infirmity as will justify the rendition of assistance thereunder.

It follows, therefore, that under the present laws, even if the elector desires to vote other than a straight party ticket, he must either be able to read the printed ballot or he must by an exercise of his memory, and upon an examination of an unofficial ballot, fix in his mind the positions thereon of all the candidates for whom he desires to vote. The only difference then between the situation which such a voter would find himself under existing laws and that in which such a voter would find himself under existing law and that in which he would find himself under the proposed law is that such a voter would be unable to fix in his mind the positions upon the official ballot of the candidates for which he desired to vote. He would still be able to fix in his mind the appearance of the printed name of the persons for whom he desires to vote, and to do this would, it would seem, require the exercise of no more native mental ability, and certainly no more education than the only method now available to such an elector. In other words the proposed bill goes no further in the direction of requiring educational qualifications for electors desiring to vote for particular individuals or for partisan candidates than the existing law goes toward requiring such educational qualifications if electors desire to vote other than a straight ticket.

In view then of the wide discretion which the general assembly undoubtedly has in the regulation of the exercise of the electoral franchise, I am of the opinion that so far as the first objection above referred to is concerned, the bill is constitutional.

All the foregoing discussion applies with equal force to the second of the above suggested objections. The bill requires in effect that each elector shall be obliged to single out from all the names on the special judicial ticket the names of the persons for whom he desires to vote, and this he may do through his ability to read or by any device of the memory which will enable him to fix in his mind the appearance of the printed name. To require all electors to make this independent choice, and thus presumably to make it more difficult for an illiterate elector to do so than for one who can read, is certainly no more of a discrimination against such an illiterate elector than is afforded by the present ballot law.

I have not, of course, considered other possible objections to the constitutionality of this law. I have, however, considered the only ones which have occurred to me. I have given the entire subject careful consideration and am satisfied that there is no valid constitutional objection to the bill.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

68.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ACT FOR APPOINTMENT OF TEACHERS—PERMANENT APPOINTMENT AFTER SIX YEARS SERVICE—PROVINCE OF COURTS, OF ATTORNEY GENERAL AND OF LEGISLATURE—PUBLIC BENEFIT.

The question of the constitutionality of an act being for the courts and it being the custom of the attorney general to withhold judgment except in cases of manifest clearness, it is simply stated in the way of suggestion that in amending section 7691, General Code, relating to the appointment of teachers in the public schools, the question should be borne in mind whether such act, in making a teacher's position permanent after six years service, "promotes the efficiency of the schools" as stipulated in article VI, section 2 of the constitution of Ohio.

The questions also figure as to whether such provision conflicts with the right of the school boards to contract for teachers' services, and whether such act would be contrary to the best interests of the public.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25, 1911.

HON. JOHN H. BROWDER, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am requested for an opinion regarding the constitutionality of House Bill No. 42, being an act to amend section 7691 of the General Code of Ohio, relating to the appointment of teachers in the public schools.

The question as to whether this act is constitutional or not depends upon the following paragraph, to-wit:

> "except that when a person has served as a teacher in the public schools in the same school district for six years his next appointment shall be permanent, such teacher being removable only under and in accordance with section 7701 of the General Code."

It is not within the province of this department, nor would it be proper for me to pronounce proposed acts, which have been introduced but which have not passed either house of the legislature, constitutional or unconstitutional. This is exclusively the province of the courts; and the rule is that acts of the legislature will only be pronounced unconstitutional when it clearly appears that they are so, but as you have requested an opinion, I can simply indicate my views on this matter.

Under the constitution it is the duty of the legislature to provide by suitable laws for the government of the schools, and the legislature has placed the management of the public schools exclusively under the control of directors, trustees and boards of education.

Section 2 of article VI of the constitution provides:

> "The general assembly shall make such provision by taxation, or otherwise, as, with the income arising from the school trust fund, will secure a thorough and efficient system of common schools throughout the state; but no religious or other sect, or sects, shall ever have any exclusive right to, or control of, any part of the school funds of this state."

It will be noted that under this section the general assembly shall make such provisions as will secure a thorough and efficient system of common schools throughout the state. Now the question would arise under the proposed bill, whether such an enactment as this would tend to promote the efficiency of the schools? If it does not do so, the act would probably be unconstitutional. It would be opening the door wide to make an absolute provision of this nature under which a person, no matter what his qualifications might be, if he had taught in the same school district for six years, would, solely on account of the fact that he had served for that period, be permanently employed. The word "permanent," of course, would mean for the balance of his or her life, or until removed under section 7701 of the General Code. This section is directly contrary to the provisions of the school laws relative to granting time certificates, and might be held to obviate them.

Another question that arises is whether such a provision does not conflict with the right of school boards to contract with teachers; that is after the teacher has served six years under this act, all school boards after he became eligible to the permanent employment, would have no power to employ or not employ such teacher.

The question also arises as to whether such an act would be contrary to the best interests of the public.

However, under the constitution the legislature is vested with the power and duty of making the laws under which the schools shall be operated and governed, and it is a question for the legislature, and in the first instance solely for it, to decide what laws shall be passed.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 98.

APPROPRIATION LAW—CLAIM—WHEN A MAJORITY AND WHEN A TWO-THIRDS VOTE NECESSARY—PROVISION BY PRE-EXISTING LAW.

If an act making an appropriation deals with "a claim, the subject-matter of which has not been provided for by pre-existing law" a two-thirds vote is necessary to pass the same. If otherwise, an appropriation may be passed by a majority vote.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1911.

HON. CHARLES W. KEMPEL, Clerk of House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of February 3d, which is as follows:

"What vote is required for the passage of bills carrying an appropriation?"

Section 9, article II, of the Constitution provides that:

"No law shall be passed in either house without the concurrence of a majority of all members elected thereto."

Section 22 of article II, is as follows:

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

Section 29 of article II, is as follows:

"No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into; nor shall any money be paid, on any claim, the subject-matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing law, unless such compensation, or claim, be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly."

Now the test to be applied to each bill providing for an appropriation to ascertain whether or not it requires a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly is, first, is the appropriation in fact a claim, and, second, if it is a claim, has the subject-matter of such claim been provided for by a pre-existing law? If it is not a claim, it only requires a majority vote.

If it is in fact a claim, and yet has been provided for by pre-existing law, still it only requires a majority vote. But if it is in fact a claim and has not been provided for by pre-existing law, it will require for its passage the vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

108.

ACT PROVIDING FOR ELECTION OF MEMBERS OF CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION — CONSTITUTIONALITY — SIMILAR TO NON-PARTISAN JUDICIARY ACT — CONSTITUTIONAL REQUIREMENT FOR REGULATIONS SIMILAR TO THOSE APPLIED TO ELECTION OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Section 7 of Senate Bill No. 15, providing for election to and assembling of a constitution is in form, substantially similar to the recently passed non-partisan judiciary bill and its constitutionality is supported by the reasons given in an opinion, with reference to the similar act.

Article XVI, section 2, of the constitution, providing that members shall be chosen in the same manner as members of the house of representatives, refers only to those regulations upon the election of such members as are made in other sections of the constitution itself and does not refer to regulations established by legislative act. There is, therefore, no apparent constitutional objection to the bill under consideration.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1911.

HON. WILLIAM H. GREEN, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to state my opinion as to the constitutionality of section 7 of Senate Bill No. 15, being a bill "To provide for the election to, and assembling of a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution of the state of Ohio."

Said section 7 is in form substantially identical with the corresponding provision of what is known as the non-partisan judiciary bill recently passed by the senate. I was asked to express my opinion as to its constitutionality in that bill, and my opinion then was, and still is, that the same is constitutional. As the supreme court said in the case of State ex rel. vs. Bowman, 55 O. S., 229, per Burket, J.:

> "No form of ballot is prescribed by the constitution, and therefore the general assembly is free to adopt such form as in its judgment shall be for the best interests of the state. * * *
>
> "It is argued that the voters have the right to have the names appear upon both 'partisan' ballots so that they may more easily vote for the candidates of their choice. No legislature and no court can know in advance how the electors desire to vote, and if an opportunity is given them to vote for the candidates of their choice by placing the names once in plain print upon the ballots, it is all that can in fairness be required. The ballot is the same for all and gives equal protection and benefit to all. There is no discrimination against or in favor of any one; and if any inequality arises, it arises, not from any inequality caused by the statute, but by reason of inequalities in the persons of the voters, and such inequalities are unavoidable.
>
> "But grant * * * that some voters may be somewhat inconvenienced by reason of the name of each candidate appearing but once upon the ballot, yet such voters are not thereby deprived of any protection or benefit in casting their ballot. The inconvenience is only that which is experienced by any one who votes other than a straight ticket."

It will be noted that this case fully supports the conclusions which I expressed in the opinion above referred to, viz.: That a ballot law requiring a non-partisan and separate ballot, does not in law, and under the constitution, discriminate against any class of voters, and does not amount to the imposition of an educational qualification for the exercise of the electoral suffrage. So far then as this aspect of the case is concerned it is my opinion that section 7 of Senate Bill No. 15 does not conflict with the constitution.

The most serious question is presented by a consideration of article XVI, section 2, of the constitution, under which Senate Bill No. 15 is presented, and will, if at all, be enacted. Said section 2 provides in part:

> "Whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly shall think it necessary to call a convention to revise, amend or change this constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote * * * for or against a convention: and if a majority of all the electors * * * shall have voted for a convention the general assembly shall, at their next session, provide by law, for calling the same. The convention shall consist of as many members as the house of representatives who shall be chosen in the same manner * * *"

What is the meaning of the italicized portion of the above quoted section? So far as the question now under consideration is concerned there are but two possible and antithetical meanings, viz:

1. Delegates to the convention must be elected in the same manner as representatives are required by law, at the time of the convention, to be elected.

2. Delegates to the convention are to be elected in the same manner as representatives are required by the constitution to be elected.

Under the first meaning, the general assembly would be without power to legislate especially concerning the manner of the election of delegates to the convention; that is to say, the general assembly could merely provide by law for calling the convention and for the time of its meeting, etc., but may not make any provisions of law for the manner of election delegates. Such manner of electing delegates would be the manner that at the time was prescribed by law, for electing representatives.

I believe it to be true that constitutions, like other written instruments, are to be construed by themselves so far as possible, and that, wherever in a constitution there is an adoption, in one provision, by reference of another provision, such adopted provision will be held to be the appropriate provision of the constitution itself; so here, the words "same manner as members of the house of representatives (are chosen)" must refer to and adopt by reference some other provision. It might adopt the provision of the constitution if there were any such provision, or, it might adopt the provisions of law which might be in force whenever the necessity of applying the section might arise. If then, there are any such sections of the constitution which could be adopted they, in my judgment, would be preferred.

Before seeking for such other provisions of the constitution, however, let it be observed that section 2 does not provide for the election of delegates. Section 3 of article XVI, which provides for the submission of a similar question to the electors every twentieth year, authorizes the general assembly to "provide, by law, for the election of delegates, and the assembling of such convention as is provided in the preceding section." The preceding section does not authorize the general assembly directly to provide for the election of delegates, although this provision of section 3 tends to throw some light upon the real meaning of section 2. Section 2, however, merely requires that delegates shall be chosen in the same manner as members of the house of representatives are chosen. If the authority of the general assembly were, to provide how members of the convention were to be chosen merely, without limiting that power in any way, it might, with some force, be urged that the general assembly might lawfully provide for the calling of mass conventions or any method of choosing, other than what is familiarly known as an election. Article II, section 2, however, provides that representatives "shall be *elected * * * by the electors of the respective counties,*" while article V, section 1, prescribes who shall be electors, and article V, section 2, provides that all elections shall be by ballot. It will be seen, therefore, that the constitution itself imposes several limitations upon the manner in which representatives shall be chosen, they must be elected; such election must be by the electors; such election must be within the several counties, and such election must be by ballot. It seems to me most reasonable to believe that the intention of section 2 of article XVI is, that delegates to the constitutional convention shall be selected in such manner as the general assembly shall prescribe, except that such provisions of the constitution itself as define and limit the manner of electing representatives shall also apply to the manner of choosing such delegates.

In my opinion, therefore, section 7 of Senate Bill No. 15 and related sections are constitutional.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

116.

VILLAGE COUNCIL—FILLING VACANCY BY "MAJORITY OF COUNCILMEN ELECTED" AND REMAINING QUALIFIED.

When a vacancy occurs in a village council, such vacancy, under section 4237, General Code, may be filled by a majority of the council elected and remaining qualified.

February 13, 1911.

HON. O. J. EVANS, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked my opinion and construction of section 4236 of the General Code, and which is as follows:

> "When the office of councilman becomes vacant, the vacancy shall be filled by election by council for the unexpired term. If council fail within thirty days to fill such vacancy, the mayor shall fill it by appointment."

And of section 4237 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "Council shall be the judge of the election and qualification of its members. A majority of all the members elected shall be a quorum to do business, but a less number may adjourn from day to day and compel attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as are prescribed by ordinance. The council shall provide rules for the manner of calling special meetings.", relative to the following situation, to-wit:

That in a certain village council being composed of six members who had been duly elected one of the members died, or removed from the town, thereby a vacancy is caused in the office of councilman, and you wish to know whether the vote of the three of the remaining five members of council would be sufficient to elect a councilman to fill the vacancy; or whether it would take the vote of four, to-wit: A majority of the members originally elected.

This question has practically been decided by the supreme court of Ohio in the case of The State of Ohio ex rel. vs. Orr found in 61 O. S., 384. This case after defining what creates a vacancy, in the third paragraph of the syllabus holds:

> "Where there is such a vacancy, a quorum will consist of a majority of all the members elected and remaining qualified."

In this case the council consisted of ten members, one of whom removed, thereby creating a vacancy; and at the next meeting five councilmen were present and organized the council and elected a president and the court held (page 385):

> "After such removal and failure to fill the vacancy, the council consisted of only nine members, only that number having been elected. Section 1675, Revised Statutes, provides that 'a majority of all the members elected shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.'
>
> "Five being a majority of nine, it follows that a quorum was present, and that Mr. Orr was elected president of the council by a majority of all the members elected to the council, and that his election was therefore valid."

So section 4237 provides:

> "A majority of all the members elected shall be a quorum to do business," and, therefore, in the situation you refer to three would be a majority of five, and, therefore, three votes only would be necessary to elect a councilman to fill the vacancy.

Therefore, it is my opinion that in case a vacancy exists in council a quorum will consist of a majority "of all the members elected and remaining qualified;" in this case the majority would be three, and the mayor would have no authority to fill the vacancy by appointment unless council failed to exercise its prerogative within the thirty days prescribed by sections 4236.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

124.

NO POWER IN BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS TO SELL LANDS WITHIN CANAL LINES—BRIDGE ON OHIO CANAL AT MASSILLON—ABUTMENT ON BERME SIDE OF CANAL.

The board of public works has no authority to surrender any property within the canal lines, and therefore would not have authority to permit the Massillon bridge to have its main abutment upon the berme side of the canal. Such authority must come from the legislature.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 20, 1911.

HON. BERNARD BELL, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In reference to the jurisdiction of the board of public works to grant permission to the commissioners of Stark county, Ohio, to occupy canal land for the purpurse of constructing a bridge across the Ohio canal at Main street in the city of Massillon, I beg to submit herewith copy of the opinion of Assistant Attorney General Miller upon the subject, dated August 29, 1910, and the opinion of Mr. Follett, special counsel in my office, supplementary thereto, dated February 20, 1911.

I concur fully in Mr. Follett's conclusion. This after a very careful examination. My opinion is, as stated by Mr. Follett, that the board of public works does not have authority to surrender any of the property embraced within the canal lines, and, therefore, would not have authority to permit the bridge in question to have its main abutment upon the berme side of the canal, but that such authority would have to come from the legislature.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

178.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—EXAMINATION AND CONSTRUCTION—CIVIL AND CRIMINAL PROVISIONS.

A construction of the contemplated corrupt practice act (Amended House Bill No. 250) presents a possible inconsistency in the seeming modification of the criminal provision by the requirement of the element of wilfullness in the provision for civil process.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 13, 1911.

HON. B. F. KIMBLE, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have examined Amended House Bill No. 200, entitled "A bill to prevent corrupt practices at elections," and in particular, the inter-relation of sections 2, 13, 14 to 21 inclusive, and 31 thereof. The particular questions which I have considered are as follows:

> "1. What are the penalties prescribed by section 2 of the act for failing to file a statement of election expenses?
>
> "2. What is the effect of the provision of section 21 requiring an investigation by the grand jury, in view of the provisions of sections 14 to 20 inclusive?"

Section 2 of the act makes it the duty of candidates voted for at any election or primary election to file a certain statement of election expenses and contributions. Section 13 provides that "any persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be held to be guilty of a corrupt practice." Section 31 provides that "any person convicted of a corrupt practice * * * shall be fined." Upon consideration of these three sections I am of the opinion that, if enacted into law, they would make it an offense to fail to file a statement showing a detail of expenses and contributions.

Sections 14 to 20 inclusive, provide for the filing of a petition in case statements or accounts have not been filed by persons whose duty it is to file the same, or that statements and accounts actually filed are false or incomplete, in courts of common pleas, probate courts and courts of insolvency, and for the summary hearing of certain issues to be raised by such petition, as follows:

1. The duty of the person in question to file a statement.
2. Whether a statement has been filed.
3. Whether the statement filed is false or incomplete.
4. Whether the failure to file a correct statement is wilful and intentional.

Section 21 provides that any of such courts in which such proceedings are brought may render judgment requiring the filing of a statement or amendment thereto within ten days, on penalty of contempt of court, but that, if the court is satisfied that the failure to file a correct statement is due to a wilful intent to defeat the provisions of the act, the court shall in addition transmit a copy of its decision to the prosecuting attorney for presentation to the grand jury.

It is apparent from the related sections already cited, and from section 25 of the act, that the procedure outlined in sections 14 to 21 inclusive, is civil in its nature, designed to enforce compliance with the law rather than to punish for violation of it. While this procedure is decidedly novel I know of no constitutional objection to it.

I know of no objection to the method outlined in section 21, that, while the findings of a court in such a civil proceeding are in a certain event to be transmitted to the grand jury, there is nothing in the section which attempts to invade the province of the grand jury in any way.

There is one difficulty which has occurred to me in the examination of this bill, however. As above stated, sections 2, 13 and 31 read together, make any violation of the requirement that a full and correct expense account be filed, a misdemeanor. Under section 21, however, the court in a civil case, while satisfied that a full and correct account has not been filed, is not to transmit its finding to the grand jury, unless satisfied that the failure to file such account was wilful, and with intent to defeat the provisions of the act. This sentence of section 21 then, could have one of two possible effects. That is to say, it might be construed as modifying by implication, the general provision of section 13, so that a person could not be found guilty of a corrupt practice on account of failing to file a correct statement unless such failure was wilful. Again, the result of this sentence might be that, while a person might be prosecuted and convicted of a corrupt practice through failure to file a correct statement regardless of the wilfulness of such failure, yet, the matter could not be brought to the attention of the grand jury in the manner outlined by section 21, unless his offense was wilful. I am inclined to doubt the validity of the first of these two possible constructions for the reason that the law leaves something to be desired in this particular.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

217.

CORONER AND INFIRMARY PHYSICIAN—EFFECT OF REMOVAL OF EITHER FROM COUNTY.

The removal of a coroner from the county creates a vacancy in the office. A physician employed as infirmary physician occupies such position only by virtue of contract, however, and his removal does not affect his position.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1911.

HON. JOHN C. COOPER, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have handed to me copy of the opinion of Hon. U. G. Denman to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, holding in effect that if a person occupying the office of coroner of a county removes from the county and becomes a resident of another county, such removal creates a vacancy in the office, and that if the same person is employed by the infirmary directors as infirmary physician, his removal from the county forfeits his employment. You have also handed me copy of a letter addressed to you by George T. Farrell, attorney-at-law, Lisbon, Ohio, in which Mr. Farrell questions the correctness of my predecessors ruling on the second of the two points above recited. You ask me to consider this question and you furnish me an opinion thereon.

I have carefully considered the opinion of my predecessor on the second point above referred to and I have concluded that it is incorrect. The authority of the infirmary directors to employ a physician is found in section 2522, General Code, under the broad grant of power "to make all contracts and purchases necessary for the county infirmary." There is no such office as that of infirmary physician, and the relation between such a physician and the directors is purely contractual. There is no requirement that such a physician be a resident of the county, and I know of no public policy such as that referred to in the opinion in question, which would require that such a physician be a resident of the county in which the infirmary is located.

For all the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the removal of a person employed as infirmary physician, from the county in which the infirmary is located does not operate as a recision of his contract, nor otherwise terminate his rights thereunder.

There might be some question as to whether or not the infirmary directors under such fact might lawfully elect to regard the contract as terminated and refuse to permit the physician to perform services further thereunder, and to compensate him for services that he might voluntarily perform. The facts which Mr. Farrell's letter discloses, however, are in effect that the infirmary directors did not regard the removal of the physician as ground for a recision of the contract on their part, and that they both permitted him to render his services at the infirmary and caused him to be paid for such services. Under these circumstances I am clearly of the opinion that the amount paid to such physician may not be recovered from him.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

218.

BOILER INSPECTION—STATE PROVISION NOT INCONSISTENT WITH MUNICIPAL POWERS—MUNICIPAL POWERS NOT REPEALED.

Section 3650, General Code, giving municipalities the power to provide for the regulation of steam boilers and steam boiler plants for the purpose of abating smoke nuisances, is not affected in any way by House Bill No. 248, providing for state inspection of steam boilers, for the reason that the powers conferred on municipalities are in no wise inconsistent therewith.

April 12, 1911.

HON. M. D. FRAZIER, Senate Chamber, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor inclosing copy of Senate Bill No. 32 and House Bill No. 248. House Bill No. 248 provides for the inspection of steam boilers and creates a department to be known as the board of boiler rules. Without quoting the bill in full, on account of its great length, it provides for such inspection and regulation on behalf of the state as to insure safety in operating steam boilers. Senate Bill No. 32 is to amend section 3650 of the General Code and gives municipalities power to provide by resolution:

> "To cause any nuisance to be abated, to prosecute in any court of competent jurisdiction any person or persons who shall create, continue, contribute, to or suffer such nuisance to exist; to regulate and prevent the emission of dense smoke, to prohibit the careless or negligent emission of dense smoke from locomotive engines; to declare each of the foregoing acts a nuisance, and to prescribe and enforce regulations for the prevention thereof; to prevent injury and annoyance from the same, to regulate and prohibit the use of steam whistles, and to provide for the regulation of the installation and inspection of steam boilers and steam boiler plants."

Your question is in brief whether if the municipality provided by ordinance for the proper inspection and regulation of steam boiler and steam boiler plants located within the municipality for the purpose of determining whether a smoke nuisance was being committed and to abate the same, and for the proper inspection of boilers that are about to be installed in such municipality for the purpose of determining whether such boilers will or will not create a smoke nuisance, and consequently to forbid the installation of such boilers in case it would create a smoke nuisance, would be void on account of the provisions of section 25 of House Bill No. 248, which provides that:

> "All acts and parts of acts in conflict or inconsistent with this act or its purposes are hereby repealed."

As before stated, the primary and practically sole purpose of House Bill No. 248 is to provide in an efficient manner for the insurance and safety in the operation of steam boilers, and there is nothing in said act that is in conflict with the power of the municipality to inspect and regulate steam boilers for the purpose of regulating and preventing the ignition of dense smoke, such inspection and regulation would be in addition to and independent of the purposes expressed by said House Bill No. 248, and so long as such ordinance was intended for and provided solely for the inspection and regulation of steam boilers so as to prevent what is commonly known as smoke nuisance, it would not be void as being in conflict with the provisions and purpose of House Bill No. 248.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

220.

STATE LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS ACT — CONSTITUTIONALITY — POLICE POWER — CLASS LEGISLATION — "TRIAL BY JURY" — OPEN COURTS — "OUSTING OF COURTS" — "DUE PROCESS OF LAW" — "EMPLOYERS OF LABOR"—PENALTY—CLASSIFICATION OF EMPLOYES AND EMPLOYERS.

The validity of an act is to be determined, not upon principles of abstract justice but upon the construction of constitutional provisions.

As it is well settled that parties may waive right of trial by jury and as the bill in question permits the parties to elect whether or not they will accept its terms and thereby impliedly waive such right, there is no conflict with the Ohio constitutional provision providing for the inviolability of such right.

With reference to the Ohio constitutional provision that "all courts shall be open" and that all persons shall have remedy by "due course of law" it is well settled that parties may refer a dispute as to rights or liabilities to a board or tribunal but may not stipulate that such determination shall be final and thereby oust the courts from power to review. As the effect of the bill, therefore, is to make the board in the first place the ultimate judge of certain preliminary questions (e. g.) First, is the applicant an employe for whom a premium has been paid? Second, did the injury take place in the course of employment? Third, Was the injury self-inflicted? It is suggested that bill be remedied so as to provide for a review of such facts upon appeal to the courts.

The constitutional requirements providing for "the guarantee to citizens of each state of all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states," the prohibition of abridgement of privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States" or the denial of "the equal protection of the laws" are all directed against "special or class legislation." It is well settled in this connection that their limitations extend only to unreasonable and arbitrary classification and that the legislature is given a wide discretion in establishing, under the police power, restrictions and regulations which affect equally the members of a special class or category, whose individual conditions make such regulations uniformly justifiable.

Under this principle, the classification of the bill in question of employers into paying and non-paying, giving them the right of election in this connection, is not objectionable. As the same privilege of election is extended to employes, although their only alternative is to seek work elsewhere, the classification of employes is also not objectionable.

Difficulty is presented by reason of the fact that employers are generally classified as "employers of labor" while employes are not classified as "labor employes." It is therefore suggested that the words "of labor" be either omitted in connection with employers or applied equally to employes.

With respect to the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States prohibiting a deprivation of property without due process of law, the fact that the bill permits the employer to pay into the fund in behalf of all employes, and permits the employes to enter into the contract only as a mass and subject to the first choice of the employer, does not in view of the privileges of elections conferred, present difficulty worthy of serious consideration. Under the same constitutional provision the taking away of the common law defense, of assumption of risk, fellow servant rule, and contributory negligence, is within the scope of a proper exercise of the police power, and it seems that such exercise may be based upon any substantial public use or benefit, held in view.

The fact that the bill does not expressly declare within its terms, the fact that it is an exercise of the police power is not objectionable.

The fact that the bill in the alternatives presented seems to provide a penalty for those who do not accept its provisions is also not derogatory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 12, 1911.

HON. RAYMOND RATLIFF, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:— The special committee of the house of representatives to which was referred Senate Bill No. 127, entitled, "A bill to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured and the dependents of killed employes and to provide for the administration of such fund by a state liability board of awards," has, through you, requested my opinion as to the validity of the bill in question, if enacted into a law by the general assembly, with certain amendments thereto. My consideration of the entire bill is not invited, but my attention is particularly directed to the provisions of certain sections thereof. In order, however, to present my views in orderly fashion, it is necessary for me to set forth herein the general scheme of the bill as well as to quote from the particular provisions in question.

The bill creates a liability board of awards and a state insurance fund to be administered and disbursed by said board. Said insurance fund is to be derived from premiums paid thereto by "employers of labor" and their employes, and is to be disbursed in accordance with the rules to be adopted by the board to injured employes of employers who have paid the premium and to the dependents of such employes in case of accidental death.

The bill is aptly described as "a workman's compensation bill," but as a part of the scheme of legislation embodied in it, sweeping changes are made in the existing laws with respect to the liability of such employers. The sections which it is proposed to insert in the bill are in part as follows:

> "Any employer of labor who shall pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act shall not be liable to respond in damages at common law or by statute save as hereinafter provided, for injuries or death of any such employe during the period covered by such premiums, provided the injured employe has remained in his service with notice that his employer has paid into the state insurance fund the premium provided by this act; the continuation in the service of such employer with such notice shall be deemed a waiver by the employe of his right of action as aforesaid. * * *
>
> "For the purpose of creating the state insurance fund * * * each employer and his employes shall pay on or before January 1, 1912, and semi-annually thereafter, the premiums of liability risks in the class of employment as may be determined and published by the liability board of awards. * * * The said employers for themselves and their employes shall make said payments to the state treasurer of Ohio

* * * in the following proportions, to-wit: ninety per cent. of the premium shall be paid by the employer and ten per cent. of the premium by the employes. Each employer is authorized to deduct from the pay roll of his employes ten per cent. of said premium for any premium period and to apportion the same in proportion to the pay roll of each employe.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"The receipt of benefits or compensation from the fund shall operate to bar such injured employe or his legal representatives from all right of recovery against or from the employer of such injured employe.

"All employers of labor who shall not pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall be liable to their employes for damages suffered by reason of personal injury sustained in the course of employment caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer or any of the employer's officers, agents or employes, and also to the personal representatives of such employe if death results from such injuries, and in such action the defendant shall not avail himself of the following common law defenses:

"The defense of the fellow servant rule, the defense of the assumption of risk, or the defense of contributory negligence.

"But where a personal injury is suffered by an employe or when death results to an employe from a personal injury while in the employ of an employer in the course of employment and such employer has paid into the state insurance fund the premium provided for in this act, and in case such injury has arisen from the malicious or wilful act of such employer or from the failure of such employer or any of such employer's officers or agents to comply wtih any municipal ordinance or lawful order of any duly authorized officer, or any statute regulating the health, comfort, life or safety of employes, then in such event, nothing in this act contained shall affect the civil liability of such employer, but such injured employe or his legal representatives, in case death results from the injury may, at his option, either claim compensation under this act or institute proceedings in the courts for his damage on account of such injury, and such employer shall not be liable for any injury to any employe except as provided in this section. In case of an election to sue as provided in this section, the defendant shall be entitled to all defenses under the law without regard to the provisions of this act."

Analyzing the foregoing, it appears that the scheme of the bill, in brief, is as follows:

A plan of insurance is provided as a substitute for the enforcement of personal injury claims by actions at law. Such plan, however, is not a complete substitute, but may be adopted or rejected—it is not compulsory. The election to adopt the plan is that of the employer in the first instance; he must choose whether or not he will pay into the state insurance fund and thus escape common law and statutory liability in a large number of cases, and thereupon must notify his employes. They are given the choice of permitting him to deduct from their wages for their portion of the premiums or leaving his employment; they cannot, while remaining in his employment, in any way object to his adoption of the scheme. But if they do remain, they not only must permit him to withhold from their wages the amount of the premium chargeable to them but they are also deemed thereby to waive certain rights of action.

Should the employer choose not to subscribe to the plan, he thereby forfeits, in a sense, his right to interpose in an action for personal injury or wrongful death of any of his employes certain defenses. It would seem that the operation of the bill in this respect might aptly be termed a forfeiture, inasmuch as the bill does not repeal other statutes providing for such defenses, nor does it affect the common law in these respects, except as to the persons directly affected.

It seems also that the bill does not in terms constitute a complete revision of the common and statutory law pertaining to employers' liability. The natural inference from its provisions is, that it is intended that a certain class of employers and employes shall be affected by its provisions, and that as to all other persons bearing this relation to each other, the rules pertaining to the existence and enforcement of rights of action for personal injuries and wrongful death shall be preserved intact. If this were not the intention of the bill there would be no reason for the repeated reference therein to "the rights of action and defenses existing at common law and under statutes."

The validity of this proposed legislation must be measured by the following constitutional provisions:

> "Article I, section 10, constitution of the United States. No state shall * * * pass any * * * law impairing the obligation of contracts. * * *
>
> "Article IV, section 2, constitution of the United States. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.
>
> "Fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States. Section 1. * * * No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.
>
> "Article I, section 2, constitution of Ohio. All political power is inherent in the people. Government is instituted for their equal protection and benefit, * * * and no special privileges or immunities shall ever be granted, that may not be altered, revoked or repealed by the general assembly.
>
> "Article I, section 5, constitution of Ohio. The right of trial by jury shall be inviolate.
>
> "Article I, section 16, constitution of Ohio. All courts shall be open, and every person, for an injury done him in his lands, goods, person, or reputation, shall have remedy by due course of law; and justice administered without denial or delay.
>
> "Article II, section 28, constitution of Ohio. The general assembly shall have no power to pass retroactive laws, or laws impairing the obligation of contracts;" * * *

I have included in the foregoing catalogue of constitutional provisions, those relating to the impairment of contractual obligations, merely because I anticipated that some question as to the effect of the bill might be raised upon this ground. The rule is, of course, that laws of this sort are never construed so as to affect subsisting contractual obligations. They are deemed prospective in their operation and will not be permitted to be enforced in such a manner as to interfere with contractual rights that have already accrued. The validity of the bill as a whole is not to be challenged upon such grounds, but it could not be made operative to authorize an employer, for instance, to deduct from the wages or salary of an employe, employed under a written or other express contract, in force at the time of the first premium paying period. I have called attention to this matter merely to point out the exact operation of these constitutional provisions.

The list of constitutional provisions which I have quoted is, I am satisfied, a complete one. Unless the bill in question, if passed by the general assembly, will infringe on them it must be regarded as valid and constitutional. The principle is too well settled to require citations of authorities in support of it, that laws are not to be declared invalid because of their conflict with supposed natural right or justice, or with the public policy which the common law has enforced.

As was said by Burket, J., in Probasco vs. Raine, 50 O. S. 378-390, "The validity of an act passed by the legislature must be tested alone by the constitution; and the courts have no right or power to nullify a statute upon the ground that it is against natural justice or public policy." It is obvious that some of the provisions above quoted, if applicable at all, tend to condemn the fundamental scheme of the bill. That is to say, the bill provides that upon a certain choice being made by an employer and his employes, the latter are deprived of recourse to the courts for the redress of certain injuries except in certain cases. If this is a violation of the constitutional provision that "All courts shall be open," then, of course, this basic feature of the plan—the waiver of the right to sue—could not be sustained. Again, the redress of injuries of the sort contemplated by the bill was at common law effected through the intervention of a jury which either party had a right to demand. Undoubtedly the right to trial by jury in cases of this sort is one of the rights preserved by this section of the constitution. Unless this right may be waived in the manner provided in the bill, the latter must be regarded as unconstitutional.

Because these possible objections go to the fundamental principle of the bill, I deem it proper to consider first, the sections of the constitution upon which they are based. In so doing, I shall consider that portion of the bill merely which deals with the effect of an election on the part of the employer to avail himself of the insurance features of the insurance plan, and shall, for the time, disregard the alternative provision of the bill which prescribes the effect of failure so to elect.

Legislation precisely like that contemplated by the bill in question, is novel in the United States, and so far as I have been able to ascertain, the constitutionality of such legislation has not been passed upon under provisions like those now under consideration. The only decision even remotely bearing upon the precise question at hand is the recent one of the supreme court of appeals of the state of New York in the case of Ives vs. The South Buffalo Railway Company, decided March 24, 1911. I have carefully examined the opinion of the court in this case and find that the decision relates to a statute of the state of New York imposing absolute liability for injury in certain extraordinarily hazardous employments upon the employer, regardless of his election or choice in the matter, and without the intervention of any state insurance fund. (See Laws of New York, 1910, Chapter 674.) This portion of the New York law is to be distinguished from that passed at the same session of the legislature of that state. (Laws of New York, 1910, Chapter 352, commencing with section 205 thereof, page 646, Birdsaye, Cumming & Guilbert's Consolidated Laws of New York, Supplement 1910.) This and the related sections of the New York law provide an elective insurance scheme similar to that of the bill now under consideration, and this portion of the New York law was not under review in the Ives case.

The law above described and involved in the decision in the case above cited was therein held unconstitutional. The description of this law which I have given is not complete, but it is sufficient for the present purpose. There are some significant passages in the opinion, however, which I deem it worth while to quote in connection with the inquiry as to the validity of that section of the bill in question which relates to the effect of the payment of a premium. Among others is the following:

> "Another objection urged against the statute is that it violates section 2 of article I of our state constitution which provides that 'the trial by jury in all cases in which it has been heretofore used shall remain inviolate forever.' This objection is aimed at the provisions * * * of the statute, which relate to the 'scale of compensation' and 'settlement of disputes,' and has no reference to the fundamental question whether the attempt to impose upon the employer a liability when he is not at fault, constitutes a taking of property without due process of law. In other words, the objection which we are now considering bears solely upon the question whether the two last mentioned sections of the statute deprive the employer of the right to have a jury fix the amount which he shall pay when his liability to pay has been determined against him. If these provisions relating to compensation are to be construed as definitely fixing the amount which an employer must pay in every case where his liability is established by the statute, there can be no doubt that they constitute a legislative usurpation of one of the functions of a common law jury. In all cases where there is a right to trial by jury there are two elements which necessarily enter into a verdict for the plaintiff: 1, the right to recover; 2, the amount of the recovery. It is as much the right of a defendant to have a jury assess the damages claimed against him as it is to have the question of his liability determined by the same body. (East Kingston vs. Towle, 48 N. H., 57; Wadsworth vs. Union Pacific Ry. Co., 18 Col., 600; Fairchild vs. Rich, 68 Vt., 202.) This part of the statute, in its present form, has given rise to conflicting views among the members of the court, and, since the disposition of the questions which it suggests is not necessary to the decision of the case, we do not decide it."

It is to be noted that the court reserved decision only on the point as to whether or not the portion of the law under consideration permitted the intervention of a jury for the purpose of determining the measure of the liability of the employer. It is clearly to be inferred that if the court had been satisfied that the right to have a jury was denied by the law it would have held the law unconstitutional.

The court in the New York case seems to have regarded the law from the standpoint of the employer exclusively. It is to be remarked of course that the employer's right to a jury trial is no more fundamental or extensive than that of the employe.

This portion of the decision in the New York case is, for reasons above suggested, scarcely applicable to the bill under consideration. The question in that case was, as to whether or not the legislature could, by providing a compulsory scale of compensation to be paid directly by the employer, deprive both the employer and the employe to the right of trial by jury. The question presented by the bill is, as above suggested, whether or not the general assembly may provide that by the commission of certain acts certain persons shall be deemed to have waived the right of trial by jury in advance of the accrual of any cause of action.

As above suggested, the scheme of the bill is such that both of two possible adversary parties in an anticipated controversy arising out of a possible personal injury, shall by appropriate acts constructively waive the right of trial by jury. It is well settled that parties may in open court, by word or deed, and regardless of statute waive the right. (Benewitz vs. Benewitz, 50 O. S., 373; Culver vs. Rodgers, 33 O. S., 537; Whitworth vs. Steers, 4 C. D., 556.) It is equally well settled that the parties to a contract may, previous to litigation thereon, or default thereunder, waive the right of trial by jury and authorize the confession of judgment. A typical case of such contracts is the familiar one known as "the cognovit note." The precise question, however, as to whether parties may by contract entered into prior to the accrual of any cause of action, mutually waive the right of trial by jury, with respect to any possible future cause of action in tort which may arise between them has, so far as I am able to find, never been judicially determined. Because of the absence of any decision to the effect that the constitutional right cannot be thus waived, and because this feature seems so essential in the scheme of the bill I cannot but reach the conclusion that the same does not violate the constitution in this respect. Indeed, it would seem that if parties can contract away the right of trial by jury with respect to an anticipated cause of action ex contractu they may do the same with respect to a future cause of action ex delicto.

The only question remaining in this connection is as to whether the bill provides an effectual waiver. The bill does not in terms state that the action of the employer in paying a six months premium shall constitute a waiver of his right to trial by jury, as to all causes of action arising out of personal injury during the period covered by the premium. But this inference is fairly raised by all of the provisions of the bill. The bill does expressly provide in the first of the proposed amendatory sections above quoted that "the continuation in the service of such employe with such employer (on the part of the employe) shall be deemed a waiver by the employe of his right of action." While this language does not expressly refer to the right of trial by jury the procedure outlined for the government of the state liability board of awards by other sections of the bill discloses that its effect is the same as it would be if express reference were made to the right of trial by jury. The question in the mind of the New York court with respect to the act under consideration in the case of Ives vs. The South Buffalo Railway Company is therefore not presented by the bill under consideration, as it is clear that the intention is to constitute the continuation of the employe in the service of his employer after the receipt of notice a waiver of the right to trial by jury.

The bill may, I think, be fairly construed as creating an implied contract between the employe and the employer whereby both, under certain conditions, are deemed to agree to waive the right of trial by jury.

A more serious question is presented with respect to the application of the above quoted provision of section 16 of article I of the constitution that "all courts shall be open, and every person, for an injury done him in his * * * person * * * shall have remedy by due course of law; and justice administered without denial or delay." As above stated, the implied contract which, under the bill if enacted into a law, would enter into and become a part of every contract of employment entered into after its passage, is not only that the parties shall waive the right of trial by jury, by the commission of certain acts, but also that the employe shall waive his right of action in certain cases. It has become well settled in this state that at least in the absence of any statute, a contract which stipulates against recourse to the courts in case of dispute or injury is void. This rule is sometimes said to be based upon considerations of public policy. If this were the case no difficulty would be encountered in sustaining the validity of a statute embodying a contrary rule of policy. The legislature in cases not covered by the constitution undoubtedly has power to determine what shall be the rules of public policy, and if a statute is enacted which does violence to the common law in this respect its validity nevertheless cannot be called in question. (Probasco vs. Raine, Supra.)

In this state, however, the rule that parties may not by contract agree to waive rights of action and ultimate recourse to the courts does not seem to be based solely upon common law rules of public policy. In B. & O. Railroad Company vs. Stankard, 56 O. S., 224, the supreme court of this state held invalid a contract between the railroad company and one of its employes whereby the latter agreed that in consideration of membership in the relief department of the railroad company and certain rights accruing under such membership, to himself and to his personal representatives in case of death, he, and the beneficiaries under the contract should be bound absolutely by the determination of the officers of the relief department as to the amount and validity of any claim. In commenting upon this contract, which was embodied in what was known as rule 11 of the relief department of the railroad company, Burket, C. J., uses the following language:

> "But in the case at bar the equivalent of an appeal was had, and the advisory committee acted upon and rejected the claim, and then the parents were compelled to either abandon the claim, or resort to an action at law.
>
> "Does rule eleven bar such action? We think not. A long line of decisions held that parties cannot by contract take away the jurisdiction of the courts in such cases, and that the attempt to do so is void.
>
> "Supreme Council of the Order of Chosen Friends vs. Forsinger, 125 Ind., 52; Whitney vs. National Masonic Accident Association, 52 Minn., 378; Insurance Company vs. Morse, 20 Wallace, 445; Stephenson vs. Insurance Company, 54 Maine, 55; Mentz vs. Insurance Co., 78 Pa. St., 475; Read vs. Insurance Co., 136 Mass., 572.
>
> "While courts usually base their decisions upon the ground that parties cannot by contract, in advance oust the courts of their jurisdiction of actions, a more satisfactory ground is, that under our constitution all courts are open, and every person, for an injury done him in his land, goods, person or reputation shall have remedy by due course of law. Article I, section 16.
>
> 'Courts are created by virtue of the constitution, and inhere in our body politic as a necessary part of our system of government, and it is not competent for anyone by contract or otherwise, to deprive himself of their protection. The right to appeal to the courts for the redress of wrongs is one of those rights which is in its nature under our constitution (in)alienable, and cannot be thrown off, or bargained away."

This significant language at once raises the question as to whether or not the general assembly may pass a law which, while in itself depriving the courts of no jurisdiction and not abolishing any causes of action, nevertheless permits parties by implied contract, which the law itself creates, to bind themselves not to resort to the courts for the enforcement of possible rights of action. Let it be noted that the bill in question not only provides for a waiver of causes of action, but in affording an alternative it seems to confer upon the state liability board of awards authority finally to determine all questions of fact involved in making its awards. Section 36 of the bill provides that "The board shall have full power and authority to hear and determine all questions within its jurisdiction, and its decision thereon shall be final." The "jurisdiction" of the board is not exactly defined, but it is provided by section 21 that it shall "disburse the state insurance fund to such employes of employers as have paid into said fund the premiums * * * that have been injured in the course of their employment and which have not been purposely self-inflicted." Thus, the board must have the power in the first instance to determine the following facts: 1. Is an applicant for relief, or was his decedent, an employe for whom a premium has been paid? 2. Did the injury take place in the course of the employment? 3. Was the injury self-inflicted? It would seem then, that the plain meaning of section 36 is that the decision of the board as to these questions shall be final. In this connection the following language from the opinion in the Stankard case is significant:

> "Such contracts are in their nature only applicable to cases wherein it becomes necessary to fix some facts, leaving the question of law to be settled by the courts upon proper proceedings. The ultimate question to be determined—the liability or non-liability of the parties—must be left to the courts. The construction of a written contract is a question of law for the court, and a provision in the contract that the construction of such contract, or the meaning of rules or regulations, shall be finally determined by some designated person, is void, because the court cannot be robbed of its jurisdiction to finally determine such questions. In insurance and other like cases, where the ultimate question is the payment of a certain sum of money, certain facts may be fixed by a person selected for that purpose in the contract, but the ultimate question as to whether the money shall be paid or not, may be litigated in the courts, and a stipulation to the contrary is void. The fixing of the particular fact by the person or persons named in the contract, and in the manner therein provided, is usually a condition precedent to the bringing of an action on the contract, and the performance of such condition should be averred in the petition, or some good excuse given for its nonperformance. Viney vs. Bignold, 27 Central Law Journal, 40."

It seems to me perfectly apparent from this language that the gist of the decision in the Stankard case is, that under the constitutional provision which we are now considering courts may not be deprived of their ultimate jurisdiction. That is, to say, while it is competent for parties to agree or for the general assembly to enact that they may agree that a certain question of fact be submitted for determination to a board or tribunal other than a court, it is not competent for the legislature to provide that the finding of such a board of tribunal as to the existence of any liability at all in the matter shall be conclusive. I fear, therefore, that in its present form the bill is in this respect unconstitutional. It should in my judgment be amended so as to provide that the decision of the board of awards on any of the three points above referred to might be reviewed at least as a question of law by a court of competent jurisdiction at the instance of any interested party.

Aside from this point I am satisfied, though by no means certain, that the decision in the case of Railroad Company vs. Stankard, supra., does not operate to render unconstitutional the provision of the bill for a waiver of unaccrued causes of action. But the alternative right that the bill does give must be subject to enforcement by judicial process and this is denied by the bill in its present form.

All but one of the remaining constitutional provisions above quoted may, for the sake of convenience, be considered together, with respect to their application to the bill. The guarantee to the citizens of each state of all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states, the prohibition upon the states as to the making and enforcement of laws which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States or deny to persons within their jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws, the declarations of our bill of rights, that government is instituted for the equal protection and benefit of all the people, and the prohibition against special privileges and immunities not subject to alteration or repeal, all may be said in a sense, to be directed against a single evil, namely, the enactment of special or class legislation. Thus, if a class is arbitrarily created and deprived of rights enjoyed by other members of society in the same situation, the members of such a class are denied the equal protection of the laws. If, however, the members of a special class are the recipients of specially created rights, then they are the grantees of special privileges or immunities, and the equality of the protection of the law is denied to those not members of the class. The two propositions are correlative.

None of the foregoing constitutional provisions forbids classification of the subjects of legislation. The legislature has the right, often assailed, but always sustained, especially to legislate concerning classes of subjects of legislation as to which the necessity for such special legislation exists. The constitutional provisions above quoted operate simply to forbid arbitrary and unreasonable classification of the subjects of legislation. A few of the leading cases will suffice to illustrate the nature and extent of the rule.

In Barbier vs. Connelly, 113 U. S., 27, the supreme court sustained the constitutionality of an ordinance of the city and county of San Francisco, prohibiting the carrying on of public laundries and wash houses within certain prescribed limits of the city and county from ten o'clock at night until six o'clock in the morning. Mr. Justice Feld in delivering the opinion of the court employed the following language:

> "There is no invidious discrimination against anyone within the prescribed limits by such regulations. There is none in the regulation under consideration. The specification of the limits within which the business cannot be carried on without the certificates of the health officer and board of fire wardens is merely a designation of the portion of the city in which the precautionary measures against fire and to secure proper drainage must be taken for the public health and safety. It is not legislation discriminating against anyone. All persons engaged in the same business within it are treated alike; are subject to the same restrictions and are entitled to the same privileges under similar conditions.
>
> "The fourteenth amendment, in declaring that no state 'shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws,' undoubtedly intended, not only that there should be no arbitrary deprivation of life or liberty or arbitrary spoliation of property but that equal protection and security should be given to all under like circumstances in the enjoyment of their personal and civil rights; that all persons should be equally entitled to pursue their happiness and acquire and enjoy property; that they should have like access to the courts of the country for the protection of their persons and property, the prevention and redress of wrongs, and the enforcement of contracts; that no impediment should be interposed to the pursuits of anyone except as applied to the same pursuits by others under like circumstances; that no greater burdens should be laid upon one than are laid upon others in the same calling and condition, and that in the administration of criminal justice no different or higher punishment should be imposed upon one than such as is prescribed to all for like offenses. But neither the amendment, broad and comprehensive as it is, nor any other amendment was designed to interfere with the power of the state, sometimes termed its 'police power,' to prescribe regulations to promote the health, peace, morals, education and good order of the people, and to legislate so as to increase the industries of the state, develop its resources and add to its wealth and prosperity. From the very necessities of society, legislation of a special character, having these objects in view, must often be had in certain districts, such as for draining marshes and irrigating arid plains. Special burdens are often necessary for general benefits. * * * Regulations for these purposes may press with more or less weight upon one than upon another, but they are designed, not to impose unequal or unnecessary restrictions upon anyone, but to promote, with as little individual inconveniences as possible, the general good. Though in many respects, necessarily special in their character, they do not furnish just ground of complaint if they operate alike upon all persons and property under the circumstances and conditions. Class legislation discriminating against some and favoring others is prohibited; but legislation which, in carrying out a public purpose, is limited in its application, if within the sphere of its operation it affects alike all persons similarly situated, is not within the amendment."

It is here to be remarked that a statute of the state of Ohio applicable only in a certain locality, would have to be held unconstitutional under that provision of article II, section 26, that "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state." The principle enunciated by Mr. Justice Field, however, is just as applicable to this constitutional provision of our own state as it is to the provision of the fourteenth amendment, to which his remarks relate. That is to say, the test of uniformity of operation is territorial rather than personal; a law may operate only upon a certain class, such as an act prescribing the duties of physicians in making and returning birth and death certificates; or an act prescribing the rules of neglect applicable to trial of causes arising out of injuries received in the service of a railroad company. If they would all operate alike in all sections of the state upon all persons and subjects of the legislation within the same category, they would not infringe upon either provision.

In Missouri Pacific Railway Co. vs. Mackey, 188 U. S., 205, the supreme court of the United States, for the first time, had under consideration one of the now familiar state statutes relating to the liability of railroad companies to employes, and which are sometimes termed "the fellow servant statutes." It was contended that inasmuch as the statute of Kansas, which was directly involved in the case, related solely to railroad companies as employers, and as to such companies prescribed a rule of liability different from that relating to other employers it thereby deprived such companies of the equal protection of the laws. Mr. Justice Field in delivering the opinion of the court makes use of the following language (page 209):

> "The objection that the law of 1874 deprives the railroad companies of the equal protection of the laws is even less tenable than the one considered. (That it amounted to a taking of property without due process.) It seems to rest upon the theory that legislation which is special in its character is necessarily within the constitutional inhibition; but nothing can be further from the fact. The greater part of all legislation is special, either in the objects sought to be attained by it or in the extent of its application. * * * Such legislation does not infringe upon the clause of the fourteenth amendment requiring equal protection of the laws, because it is special in its character; if in conflict at all with clause, it must be on other grounds. And when legislation applies to particular bodies or associations, imposing upon them additional liabilities, it is not open to the objection that it denies to them the equal protection of the laws, if all persons brought under its influence are treated alike under the same conditions. A law giving to mechanics a lien on buildings constructed or repaired by them for the amount of their work, and a law requiring railroad corporations to erect and maintain fences along their roads, separating them from land of adjoining proprietors so as to keep cattle off their tracks, are instances of this kind. Such legislation is not obnoxious to the last clause of the fourteenth amendment, if all persons subject to it are treated alike under similar circumstances and conditions in respect both of the privileges conferred and the liabilities imposed. It is conceded that corporations are persons within the meaning of the amendment. * * * But the hazardous character of the business of operating a railway would seem to call for special legislation with respect to railroad corporations, having for the object the protection of their employes as well as the safety of the public. The business of other corporations is not subject to similar dangers to their employes, and no objections, therefore, can be made to the legislation on the ground of its making an unjust discrimination. It meets a particular necessity, and all railroad corporations are, without distinction, made subject to the same liabilities.. As said by the court below, it is simply a question of legislative discretion, whether the same liabilities shall be applied to carriers by canal and stage coaches and to persons and corporations using steam in manufactories."

Missouri Pac. R. R. Co. vs. Humes, 115 U. S. 512-523.
Barbier vs. Connelly, 113 U. S. 27.
Soon King vs. Crowley, Id. 703.

A similar statute of Ohio, 87 O. L. 149, was held constitutional by the circuit court of appeals of the United States in the case of Lane vs. Erie Railroad Company, 67 C. C. A. 653, 68 L. R. A. 788. Richards, J., in delivering the opinion of the court uses the following language:

> "The contention is that the act violates the second section of the bill of rights of the constitution of Ohio, which provides that 'all political power is inherent in the people; government is instituted for their equal protection and benefit;' and which, as held in the case of The State ex rel. Schwartz vs. Ferris, 53 Ohio State 314, is not less broad than that clause of the fourteenth amendment which provides that no state shall 'deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law.' It is strongly urged that the statute, by conferring upon some employes a right to recover which is denied others, unjustly discriminates among those engaged in the same occupation, creating a favored class, and denying to those outside of it the equal protection of the law.
>
> "The doctrine is well settled that the general assembly, in the absence of an applicable prohibition, has power to classify subjects of legislation, conferring rights or imposing burdens on the created classes according to its views of what is just and expedient and will promote the general welfare, subject only to the limitation that there must be some reasonable ground for the classification made. Wagoner vs. Loomis, 37 O. S. 571; Adler vs. Whitbeck, 44 O. S. 539; State ex rel. vs. Jones, 51 O. S. 492; State vs. Nelson, 52 O. S. 88; Cincinnati vs. Steinkamp, 54 O. S. 285; Hagerty vs. State, 55 O. S. 613; France vs. State, 57 O. S. 1; State vs. Gardner, 58 O. S. 599; State ex rel. Taylor vs. Guilbert, 70 O. S. 229; * * * Mo. Pac. R. Co. vs. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205; Minn. & St. L. R. R. Co. vs. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210; Minneapolis & St. L. R. R. Co. vs. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26 (and citing numerous other cases on the same point).
>
> "Of the above cases, Missouri P. R. Co. vs. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205; Minneapolis & St. L. Railroad Co. vs. Herrick, 127 U. S. 210; Chicago M. & W. R. Co. vs. Pontius, 157 U. S. 209, and Tullus vs. Lake Erie & W. R. Co., 175 U. S. 348, sustain the validity of laws either abrogating or modifying the common law rule of fellow servants as applied to railroad employes.
>
> "The sole question in the case, therefore, is whether the exercise of authority in the service affords a reasonable ground for the classification of railroad employes. A valid classification for legislative purposes 'must always rest upon some difference which bears a reasonable and just relation to the act in respect to which the classification is proposed, and can never be made arbitrarily and without any such basis. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. vs. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150; Billings vs. Illinois, 188 U. S. 97, 102. It must be grounded upon a 'reason of a public nature,' and 'the act must affect all who are within the reason for its enactment. Judge Shauck in Miller vs. Crawford, 70 Ohio St., 217, 214."

The foregoing decisions which, as is apparent from the citations quoted from the last of them, are merely illustrative of the large number of decisions embodying the same rule, suggest both the extent and the limits of the rule defining the classification which is permissible under constitutional provisions prohibiting class legislation. The limits of the rule, however, are perhaps better illustrated by cases wherein similar laws have been held unconstitutional. An extremely well considered case of this kind is that of Ballard vs. Mississippi

Cotton Oil Company, 21 Miss. 507, 62 L. R. A. 407. In this case, a statute of Mississippi making all corporations liable for injuries to employes through defective machinery, notwithstanding the employes had knowledge of the defect, when the same liability was not placed on private individuals, was held unconstitutional, the court holding that there was no distinctive difference between a corporation and a private individual as an employer, under favor of which, the legislature could impose a rule of liability upon the former different from that imposed upon the latter. The opinion in the case is very lengthy and cites many authorities, but the reasoning of the court is sufficiently disclosed in the above statement of its decision. While the court in this case reached the conclusion that the statute under consideration was unconstitutional, it bases its decision entirely upon the line of decisions above cited, and is in no respect at variance with them.

In Lochner vs. New York, 198 U. S. 45, the supreme court of the United States held unconstitutional, an act of New York, prescribing the hours of labor of persons employed in bakeries. Mr. Justice Peckham in delivering the opinion of the court, after citing and commenting upon the decisions of the court respecting the extent of the police power of the states, uses the following language:

> "The question whether this act is valid as a labor law, pure and simple, may be dismissed in a few words. There is no reasonable ground for interfering with the liberty of person or the right of free contract, by determining the hours of labor, in the occupation of a baker. There is no contention that bakers as a class are not equal in intelligence and capacity to men in other trades or manual occupations, or that they are not able to assert their rights and care for themselves without the protecting arm of the state, interfering with their independence of judgment and of action. They are in no sense wards of the state. Viewed in the light of a purely labor law, with no reference whatever to the question of health, we think that a law like the one before us involves neither the safety, the morals, nor the welfare of the public, and that the interest of the public is not in the slightest degree affected by such an act. The law must be upheld, if at all, as a law pertaining to the health of the individual engaged in the occupation of a baker. It does not affect any other parties of the public than those who are engaged in that occupation. Clean and wholesome bread does not depend upon whether the baker works but ten hours per day or only sixty hours a week. The limitation of the hours of labor does not come within the police power on that ground."

From all the foregoing authorities, it is apparent that that is not class legislation, depriving any citizen of privileges and immunities afforded to other citizens or denying to citizens the equal protection of the law, which upon a reasonable and logical basis classifies the subjects of legislation and operates equally upon all within the same category; while that is class legislation resulting in an infraction of the various constitutional provisions now under consideration, which, without reason or logic and regardless of the economic necessities of the case, creates an arbitrary class, affording to such class privileges and immunities or denying to that class protection which the law affords to others in the same category.

Still considering, for the purpose of this opinion, the main or fundamental features of the bill—those defining the scheme known as the state insurance fund, and the effect of the election of the employer to pay into the fund, as well as the consequences in general, but not in particular of his failure to pay into the fund—it remains to test the same by the rule above defined. The first question which naturally arises is as to whether or not a class is created by the bill. In particular, does the two-fold aspect of the bill in its operation upon employers who elect to pay into the insurance fund and those who elect not to do so create a class within the subjects of the legislation upon which the bill acts; that is to say, are the paying employers and the non-paying employers separate classes? Does the fact that different acts of rights and remedies are afforded respectively to the members of these two classes and to the corresponding classes of employes, render the bill unconstitutional, as affording special privileges and immunities, or as denying the equal protection of the laws to the persons thereby affected?

This question is not without difficulty. As to the employers themselves I find it not difficult to reach the conclusion that there is no real classification. Each employer has the right to choose the class to which he shall belong; that is to say, the boundaries of these so-called classes are not fixed but depend upon the voluntary act of those who may constitute their membership. All the employers in any way affected by the act have the same rights. True, if they act in one way the consequences to them are different from what they would be if they had acted otherwise; but, as I have pointed out, the change in the legal rights of such an employer results through an implied contract, the right to make which, by appropriate acts he has at each recurring premium period. It would indeed be folly to hold that a law did not operate uniformly which failed to impose upon a citizen the privileges and liabilities which he might have had if he had entered into a contract into which the law permitted him to enter.

The case of the employe, under the bill, however, is slightly different from that of the employer. His election is between acceding to his employer's wishes and leaving his employment. Technically speaking, as above indicated, his right in the insurance fund depends upon an implied contract and his waiver of his future rights of action results from such a contract. I am not sure, however, that it is a contract into which he enters as a free agent. My doubt in this respect relates more appropriately to the application of the constitutional provision which prohibits a state from depriving persons of property without due process of law. In this connection, however, let it be noted that the employe whose employer has elected to pay into the fund, and the employe whose employer has elected not to pay into the fund constitute two separate classes of persons, the rights of which are not created by the same rule of law. These classes are not created by the voluntary act of the persons creating them, except insofar as the failure to leave an employment may be regarded as a voluntary act. That is to say, the employe whose employer does not desire to pay into the state insurance fund, but who himself desires to obtain the benefits of such a fund cannot secure the same without leaving his employment and seeking that of another employer who will subscribe to the scheme. Upon close analysis this point will, I think, be found to be superficial. As I have above suggested, the theory of the bill is that of implied contract. It is obvious that every contract must depend upon a meeting of the minds—the mutual assent of two adverse parties to the same proposition. If then, an employe is dissatisfied with the choice of his employer he is at a disadvantage no greater than he would be if he were dissatisfied with the wages which his employer chose to pay him. It is not essential to the validity of the scheme that the bill should provide against seeming hardships like this.

Although, therefore, the case of the employe is somewhat harder than that of the employer under the scheme of the bill I do not find that the classes into which the bill apparently divides employes are any more real than those into which it divides employers.

On the whole then, I conclude that insofar as the two sections prescribing the consequences respectively of election to pay into the insurance fund and of election not to pay into said fund are considered, said sections do not create two distinct classes either of employers or of employes, and that, therefore, the question as to whether such a classification would be reasonable is not even raised. As between those who are entitled to the benefits and subject to the liabilities conferred and imposed by a choice to pay into the fund, and those of the other so-called class there is no discrimination whatever.

A question more serious in theory, though perhaps of trifling importance in practice, is suggested by the use of the words "of labor" in connection with the word "employers" wherever it occurs in the bill. The mere qualification of the word "employers" by the phrase in question implies that it is not all employers that are to be affected by the act, but merely "employers of labor." I do not know what this phrase means. The words "labor" and "laborer" are of very indefinite meaning. Primarily, as will be found by consulting the lexicons, a "laborer" is one who works at any employment not requiring skill or technical training of any sort, but this meaning has long since departed in usage; now, we speak of "skilled" and of "unskilled" labor, while originally only the latter class were properly termed "laborers."

I deem it unnecessary to quote the numerous and confusing decisions as to what constitutes a "laborer." It is quite apparent that the intention of the bill is to make the phrase "employers of labor" refer to a class less extensive than the word "employers" would refer to if used without any modifying clause. The presence in the bill of this phrase creates at once a classification as between "employers of labor" and employers whose employes are not "laborers." Bearing in mind then, the rule that every such classification must depend for its constitutional justification upon some inherent difference in the classes thus created I fear that under the decisions above quoted the constitutionality of the bill might be seriously questioned.

Furthermore, while it is only an employer of labor who may pay into the insurance fund, and while it is only an "employer of labor" who, failing to pay into the insurance fund, is subject to suit without being permitted to avail himself of certain defenses, it is not clear with respect to the first of these classes as to what employes of such an employer become, upon the payment by such employer of a premium into the state insurance fund, subject to deduction from their pay roll on account of such premium, and entitled to a right of compensation from said fund in case of injury. That is to say, the law classifies all employers into two classes, employers of labor and other employers, but it does not expressly classify the employes of such employer into those who are laborers and those who are not laborers; that is, it might happen that an employer might have in his employ as his servant, a person who was clearly not a "laborer"—if indeed the word is capable of exact definition; another employer might have in his employ a person sustaining exactly the same relation to him, together with other persons, who would be "laborers" within the meaning of the bill. Both are employes engaged in similar pursuits, but by reason of the provisions of the bill, if enacted into law, the rights and liabilities of the one would be substantially different from those of the other. As to the first, all the existing rules of law applicable to the relation of master and servant would exist as they now are; as to the other the rules would be modified, as they are proposed to be modified by this bill. Clearly, this would be a case of arbitrary classification between persons within the same category, and would amount to a denial to such persons of equal protection of the law, and of the privileges and immunities granted to others in like circumstances.

The use of the word "such" in connection with "employe" where the latter first occurs perhaps obviates this objection, and this matter is perhaps trifling, but I feel obliged to suggest in the interest of the proposed bill that the classification suggested by the words "of labor" be eliminated or else clearly applied to employes as well as to employers.

So far in this opinion I have not considered the application to the proposed bill of that provision of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States which prohibits any state from making or enforcing any law which shall deprive any person of property without due process of law. Two features of the bill have attracted my attention in this connection, one of them inherent in the scheme of the bill itself and the other incidental thereto. In the first place it is provided in the bill that any employer who may choose to pay into the fund shall do so for and on behalf of himself and all of his employes. He is denied the privilege of paying into the fund for and on behalf of a part of his employes. His employes on the other hand, are denied the privilege of stipulating as individuals for relief under the provisions of the bill. As above pointed out, the only election which the individual employe has, is to leave the service or to abide by the arbitrary judgment of his employer. Again, it is provided by the bill that premiums shall be payable every six months. If then, an employer chooses to pay into the fund at the beginning of a half-yearly period and then changes his mind at the next premium paying period, his employe, that he might still reap the benefits of the insurance fund, must leave and seek employment elsewhere. But if the employe has an annual contract with his employer, made upon condition that the employer shall subscribe to the insurance fund, then it might be said that the effect of the bill, if enacted into law, upon such a contract, would be to impair its obligations by affording to the employer the right to terminate it by refusing to pay into the fund. This objection, however, is not weighty inasmuch as an employe would then have a right of action for breach of his contract of employment. On the whole I am satisfied that so far as the fundamental objection to the bill on this ground is concerned, the same is not well taken. It is to be borne in mind, however, that a long line of decisions of this and other states supports the rule that the right to contract respecting the terms of employment is a right which cannot be arbitrarily taken away or in any way abridged. The New York law above referred to (not the one passed upon in the Ives case, supra), provides for separate agreements between an employer and each of his employes as to entering the compensation plan prescribed by the law. And this statute appeals to me as avoiding the constitutional question which might be raised as to the bill under consideration, which provides for an implied contract which may be entered into only by the employer on the one side and all of his employes on the other. Indeed, it might seriously be questioned that because the employer may enter into an implied contract as an individual while his employes may only enter into the contract in the mass, so to speak, there is here a classification which is repugnant to the constitutional provision requiring that all persons shall be afforded the equal protection of the law. On all of these questions, however, I have been unable to find any authority, and I do not feel that I would be justified in advising your committee that the bill is to be regarded as unconstitutional on any of these grounds.

In the second place, the alternative feature of the bill, not yet discussed, presents a seeming difficulty. One of the proposed amendatory sections provides that:

"All employers of labor who shall not pay into the state insurance fund * * * shall be liable to their employes for damages suffered by reason of personal injury sustained in the course of employment, caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer or any of the employer's officers, agents or employes, and also to the personal representatives of such employes where death results * * * and in such action the defendant shall not avail himself of the following common law defenses:

" 'The defense of the fellow servant rule, the defense of the assumption of risk, or the defense of contributory negligence.' "

Now, it is perfectly apparent that if an employer chooses to subscribe to the fund and to pay premiums thereto, he also forfeits thereby his right to these defenses, or rather he is not subject to suit at all, and therefore has no need of making these defenses. It is of course provided that an employed electing to pay into the fund shall nevertheless be liable to suit in case an injury or death is caused by his willful act or by the failure of himself or his agents to comply with the rules of law or ordinance, or the orders of officers duly authorized in the premises, and that in such actions he shall be allowed to avail himself of all defenses which he might have under the law as it existed before this bill shall have been passed. The effect of the whole bill, however, is virtually to take away the three defenses above referred to, except in the class of actions last above described. In the case of Ives vs. South Buffalo Railway Company, supra, the decision of the court was based expressly upon the application of the assumption of risk rule. The statute in question in that case sought, like the particular section now under consideration, to abolish the fellow servant rule, the contributory negligence doctrine, and the law relating to the employe's assumption of risks. The court uses the following language in the opinion:

"The new statute, as we have observed, is totally at variance with the common law theory of the employer's liability. Fault on his part is no longer an element of the employe's right of action. This change necessarily and logically carries with it the abrogation of the 'fellow servant' doctrine, the 'contributory negligence' rule, and the law relating to the employe's assumption of risks. There can be no doubt that the first two of these are subjects clearly and fully within the scope of legislative power; and that as to the third, this power is limited to some extent by constitutional provisions.

"The 'fellow servant' rule is one of judicial origin engrafted upon the common law for the protection of the master against the consequences of negligence in which he has no part. In its early application to simple industrial conditions it had the support of both reason and justice. By degrees it was extended until it became evident that under the enormous expansion and infinite complexity of our modern industrial conditions the rule gave opportunity, in many instances, for harsh and technical defenses. In recent years it has been much restricted in its application to large corporate and industrial enterprises, and still more recently it has been modified and, to some extent abolished, by the labor law and the employers' liability act (of New York).

"The law of contributory negligence has the support of reason in any system of jurisprudence in which the fault of one is the basis of liability for injury to another. * * * In many of the states contributory negligence is a defense which must be pleaded and proved by the defendant, and in some states it has been entirely abrogated by statute. In our own state the plaintiff's freedom from contributory negligence is an essential part of his cause of action which must be affirmatively established by him, except in cases brought by employes under the labor law, by virtue of which the contributory negligence of an employe is now made a defense which must be pleaded and proved by the employer; and under the employers' liability act which provides that the employe's continuance in his employment after he has knowledge of dangerous conditions from which injury may ensue, shall not, as matter of law, constitute contributory negligence.

"Under the common law the employe was also held to have assumed the ordinary and obvious risks incident to the employment, as well as the special risks arising out of dangerous conditions which were known and appreciated by him. This doctrine, too, has been modified by statute so that under the labor law and the employers' liability act the employe is presumed to have assented to the necessary risks of the occupation or employment and no others; and these necessary risks are defined as those only which are inherent in the nature of the business and exist after the employer has exercised due care in providing for the safety of his employes, and has complied with the laws affecting or regulating the business or occupation for the greater safety of employes.

"We have said enough to show that the statutory modifications of the 'fellow servant' rule and the law of 'contributory negligence' are clearly within the legislative power. These doctrines, for they are nothing more, may be regulated or even abolished. This is true to a limited extent as to the assumption of risk by the employe. In the labor law and the employers' liability act, which define the risks assumed by the employe, there are many provisions which cast upon the employer a great variety of duties and burdens unknown to the common law. These can doubtless be still further multiplied and extended to the point where they deprive the employer of rights guaranteed to him by our constitutions, and there of course we must stop. * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"This legislation is challenged as void under the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution * * * which guarantees all persons against deprivations of life, liberty or property without due process of law. * * * The several industries and occupations enumerated in the statute before us are neededly lawful within any of the numerous definitions which might be referred to, and have always been so. They are, therefore, under the constitutional protection. One of the inalienable rights of every citizen is to hold and enjoy his property until it is taken from him by due process of law. When our constitutions were adopted it was the law of the land that no man who was without fault or negligence could be held liable in damages for injuries sustained by another. That is still the law except as to the employers enumerated in the new statute, and as to them it provides that they shall be liable to their employes for personal injury by accident to any workmen arising out of and in the course of the employment which is caused in whole or in part, or is contributed to, by a necessary risk or danger of the employment of one inherent in the nature thereof, except that there shall be no liability in any case where the injury is caused in whole or in part by the serious and wilful misconduct of the injured workman. It is conceded that this is a liability unknown to the common law and we think it plainly constitutes a deprivation of liberty and property under the federal and state constitutions, unless its imposition can be justified under the police power which will be discussed under a separate head. In arriving at this conclusion we do not overlook the cogent economic and sociological arguments which are urged in support of the statute. There can be no doubt as to the theory of this law. It is based upon the proposition that the inherent risks of an employment should in justice be placed upon the shoulders of the employer, who can protect himself against loss by insurance and by such an addition to the price of his wares as to cast the burden ultimately upon the consumer; that indemnity to an injured employe should be as much a charge upon the business as the cost of replacing or repairing disabled or defective machinery, appliances or tools; that under our present system, the loss falls immediately upon the employe who is almost invariably unable to bear it, and ultimately upon the community which is taxed for the support of the indigent; and that our present system is uncertain, unscientific and wasteful, and fosters a spirit of antagonism between employer and employe which it is to the interests of the state to remove. We have already admitted the strength of this appeal to a recognized and widely prevalent sentiment, but we think it is an appeal which must be made to the people and not to the courts. The right of property rests not upon philosophical or scientific speculations nor upon the commendable impulses of benevolence or charity, nor yet upon the dictates of natural justice. The right has its foundation in the fundamental law. That can be changed by the people, but not by legislatures. * * * The argument that the risk to an employe should be borne by the employer, because it is inherent in the employment may be economically sound, but it is at war with the legal principle that no employer can be compelled to assume a risk which is inseparable from the work of the employe, and which may exist in spite of a degree of care by the employer far greater than may be exacted by the most drastic law. If it is competent to impose upon an employer, who has omitted no legal duty and has committed no wrong, a liability based solely upon a legislative fiat that his business is inherently dangerous, it is equally competent to visit upon him a special tax for the support of hospitals and other charitable institutions, upon the theory that they are devoted largely to the alleviation of ills primarily due to his business. In its final and simple analysis that is taking the property of A and giving it to B, and that cannot be done under our constitutions. * * * There is, of course, in this country no direct legal authority upon the subject of the liability sought to be imposed by this statute for the theory is not merely new in our system of jurisprudence, but plainly antagonistic to its basic idea."

The court then cites Parrot vs. Wells Fargo & Co., 15 Wall. 534; Ohio & Miss. Ry. Co. vs. Lackey, 78 Ills. 55; Jonsen vs. Union Pacific Ry. Co. 6 Utah, 253; Ziegler vs. South & North Ala. Ry. Co., 58 Ala., 594; Birmingham Ry. Co. vs. Parsons, 100 Ala., 662; Biclingbery vs. Montana Union Ry. Co., 7 Montana, 271; Schenk vs. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 5 Wyoming 430; Gottrell vs. Union Pac. Ry. Co., 2 Wyoming, 540.

Continuing, the court say:

> "We conclude, therefore, that in its basic and vital features the right given to the employe by this statute does not preserve to the employer the 'due process' of law guaranteed by the constitutions, for it authorizes the taking of the employer's property without his consent and without his fault. So far as the statute merely creates a new remedy in addition to those which existed before it is not invalid. The state has complete control over the remedies which it offers to suiters in its courts even to the point of making them applicable to rights or equities already in existence. * * * We repeat, however, that this power must be exercised within the constitutional limitations which prescribe the law of the land." * * *

Proceeding further the court acknowledges that if the statute were a police regulation necessary for the protection of the lives, health or the safety of the public generally it might be upheld. Analyzing the law the court concludes that the statute is not a police regulation.

The feature of the New York law which was condemned by the supreme court of appeals of that state, as is clear from the foregoing quotation, was the deprivation of the employer's right to defend on the ground that the employe had assumed the risks inherent in the employment. Whether or not the reasoning and conclusion of the court in this respect are correct, they do not apply to the bill which you have presented to me. The section now under consideration and last above quoted discloses that the employer who does not enter the insurance scheme provided by the whole bill shall be subject to suit —not for any injury sustained in the course of employment by his employes but for such injuries as may have been "caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer or any of the employer's officers, agents or employes," and that in such an action he shall not have the defense of assumed risk. It seems to me to be perfectly plain that the only assumed risks upon which the employer is thus prohibited from defending are the risks of defective machinery known to the employe, and of incompetent fellow servants, etc. This language does not take away the right to defend on the ground of assumed risks inherent in the employment, or, as the New York court more properly puts it, it does not confer upon the employe the right to sue regardless of the delict of the employer, thereby making the employer absolutely liable for all injuries sustained by his servant. Thus, the reasons which led the supreme court of appeals of New York to hold the New York law under consideration, unconstitutional, are not presented by the bill under consideration. The court in that case concedes that the assumed risks which are taken away by the bill are such as may be taken away by the legislation without depriving anyone of property at all. Therefore, the questions as to what taking of private property is permissible under the police power and as to what degree of public interest in the subject of legislation will justify in the exercise of police power are not raised.

The New York court would seem to hold that the police power of the states is limited to the preservation and protection of the lives, health and safety of the members of the body politic, and that it does not extend to legislation for the general economic welfare of the people aside from the considerations of security, health, morals and the like. If this is the holding of the New York court it is clearly opposed to the weight of authority, although the authorities to be sure, are not uniform. In the New York case are cited cases like Barthoff vs. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y., 509; Mullen vs. Peck, 49 O. S., 447; Marvin vs. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, affirming Trout vs. Marvin, 62 O. S. 132. All of these cases sustain the constitutionality of police measures of statutes creating rights of action where no wrong had been committed.

The cases of Noble State Bank vs. Baskell, 219 U. S. 104, Shallenberger, et al., vs. The First State Bank, etc., 172 Fed. 999, and Assaria State Bank vs. Dolley, 219 U. S. 121, referred to in the opinion of the court of appeals of New York, are cases arising under the so-called "bank depositors guarantee acts" of Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas respectively. In these cases the supreme court of the United States sustains the validity of each of these acts, not on the ground alone that all business of banking is a privilege which may be made subject to franchise and license, but on the further ground that legislation of this sort constitutes a valid exercise of the police power of the states. In the opinion of Mr. Justice Holmes in the first of the above cited cases appears the following:

> "In the first it is established by a series of cases that an ulterior public advantage may justify a comparatively insignificant taking of private property for what, in its immediate purpose, is a private use. Clark vs. Nash, 198 U. S. 361; Strickly vs. Highland Boy Mining Co., 200 U. S. 527, 531; Offield vs. New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co., 203 U. S. 372; Bacon vs. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 315. And in the next, it would seem that there may be other cases besides the every day one of taxation, in which the share of each party in the benefits of a scheme of mutual protection is sufficient compensation for the correlative burden that it is compelled to assume. See Ohio Oil Company vs. Indiana, 177 U. S. 190. At least, if we have a case within the reasonable exercise of the police power as above explained, no more need be said.
>
> "It may be said in a general way that the police power in a general way extends to all the great public needs. Camfield vs. United States, 167 U. S. 518. It may be put forth in aid of what is sanctioned by usage, or held by the prevailing morality or strong and preponderant opinion to be greatly and immediately necessary to the public welfare. Among matters of that sort probably few would doubt that both usage and preponderant opinion give their sanction to enforcing the primary conditions of successful commerce. One of these conditions of the present time is the possibility of payments by checks drawn against bank deposits, to such an extent do checks replace currency in daily business. If then the legislature of the state thinks that the public welfare requires the measure under consideration, analogy and principle are in favor of the power to enact it." * * *

In the third of these cases the same justice says:

> "The case of Noble State Bank vs. Haskell, just decided, cuts the root of the plaintiff's case, except so far as the Kansas law shows certain minor differences from that of Oklahoma. The most important of these is that contribution to the fund is not absolutely required. On this ground it is said, and was thought by the circuit judge, that the law could not be justified under the police power. We cannot agree to such a limitation. If, as we have decided, the law might compel the contribution on the grounds that we have stated, it may try to bring about the same result by the creation of motives less compulsory than command and of disadvantages in holding aloof less peremptory than an immediate step." * * *

It therefore appears that there is weighty authority for holding that private property may be taken where there is any public use or benefit to be subserved by the taking. Perhaps the theory of the decisions is aptly phrased in our own constitution, article I, section 19—the only provision corresponding with that of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution which I have been discussing. Said section 19 provides that "private property shall ever be held inviolate but subservient to the public welfare."

Does then, the public welfare seem to justify the enactment of the bill under consideration? The general assembly is itself the first and almost the final judge of what constitutes the public welfare? Courts will only disturb its judgment when as in the Lochner case, supra, no ground whatever can be advanced for the enactment of the law in question.

It has been decided then, that in the exercise of the police power private property may be taken; that this taking may be by way of creating a right of action where no wrong has been suffered—by making those who profit by the carrying on of a business or by the fruits of the labors of others absolutely liable for injuries resulting from such business or in the course of such employment; that in ascertaining whether the public welfare is subserved by a measure which does take private property, or does interfere with the liberty of persons, the courts will investigate and take notice of economic conditions and physical facts underlying the law which is called in question. Mueller vs. Oregon, 238 U. S. 412, in which Mr. Justice Brewer says:

> "When a question of fact is debated and debatable, and the extent to which special constitutional limitation goes is affected by the truth in respect to that fact, widespread and long-continued belief concerning it is worthy of consideration. We take judicial cognizance of all matters of general knowledge."

(This is the case involving the Oregon law limiting hours of labor for women.)

All of these priciples having been established, and the economic soundness of the scheme of the bill being conceded, it seems to me reasonably certain that no feature of it constitutes such a deprivation of property or liberty as is inhibited by article XIV, section 1 of the constitution of the United States, or by article I, section 19, of that of this state.

The difficulty of the question arises from the fact that no court, excepting the New York court of appeals, has ever passed upon a statute precisely like the bill proposed.

Another difficulty arises from the fact that the bill in question does not explicitly or by necessary inference purport to be a police measure. Such a meaning, however, may be read into a statute, or rather the court will look to all parts of the statute, to ascertain its true intent.

Still another difficulty arises from the fact that the provision depriving the employer of the right to defend on the ground of assumed risk is inserted seemingly as a penalty or forfeiture which is to be visited upon him for not doing a thing which it is not made his duty to do. True, the case of Assaria State Bank vs. Dolley, supra, would seem to hold that it is competent for a state legislature in the exercise of police power to provide that persons who are subject to the legislation may do certain things and then to provide that if they do not do them, certain burdens shall be imposed upon them. If this decision is to be regarded as going to the length of holding that a person may be in a sense punished for not doing that which he has a right not to do, then it is decisive of the whole question. At any rate, in view of the importance of the bill which has been submitted to me and in view of its undoubted beneficence of purpose I am constrained on the authority of the case last above cited to hold, if the bill is a police measure, designed for the protection of the public interests, this manner of enforcing its prime object does not render it unconstitutional.

For the same reason and in spite of the decision in the Ives case, supra, I am inclined to the view that by the analogy of cases representing the decided weight of authority the bill in question must be regarded as a police measure.

In conclusion, I may say that I am very reluctant to pass upon the constitutionality of any bill as I feel that that function is one which should be left to the courts. I am more reluctant to reach an adverse conclusion as to the constitutionality of any of the features of this bill, the general object and aim of which is so humane and just. I have given to the consideration of the various questions involved in a study of this bill from a constitutional standpoint, as great care as the time at my disposal has afforded. I have in every instance resolved all doubts in favor of the constitutionality of the bill, and because of this presumption I have not held unconstitutional a few of its provisions concerning the validity of which I still have some doubt. As to these particular provisions, all of which are mentioned in the foregoing opinion I might perhaps be able to satisfy myself more fully by devoting more time to their study.

In spite of my reluctance to pass upon the constitutionality of the bill at all, and in spite of the presumption of constitutionality which I have afforded to all of the provisions of the bill called in question by your inquiry I have felt obliged to hold one feature of the proposed bill unconstitutional and to question seriously the constitutionality of the two other features. I trust that my advice in the matter will be useful to the committee and to both houses of the general assembly, and that changes can be conveniently made in the bill with a view to obviating the defects above referred to without sacrificing to any degree any of the basic principles thereof.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 222.

APPROPRIATION BY STATE TO ASSIST CITY IN BUILDING CULVERT—FORM—"SUNDRY BILL."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 14, 1911.

Finance Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have asked me to advise you as to the form in which an appropriation should be made for the following purpose:

> "The city is about to install a drain or culvert for a purpose which will relieve the state of the necessity of doing the same thing, and it is deemed proper and just that the state shall appropriate money in aid of the enterprise."

In my judgment it would be most proper to place said appropriation in a separate bill by itself, so that the conditions upon which the appropriation is made may be fully set forth. I know of no reason, however, why it should not be placed in any of the bills that are customarily made up and designated as "appropriation bills," although the item would seem to be such as should more properly be included in what is known as the "sundry bill."

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

233.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY LAW—CONSTITUTIONALITY—CLASSIFICATION OF "EMPLOYERS OF FIVE OR MORE MEN."

In the exercise of the police power, the legislature may establish classifications and impose special regulations upon each class when the classes are reasonably and logically distinct.

In the act under consideration however, the fact that all employes may avail themselves of its provisions but that only employers "of five or more workmen" are subject to the alternative contingencies presented where payment is not made into the fund, presents a possible imposition of an arbitrary and unreasonable classification which will impair the constitutionality of the bill.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 29, 1911.

HON. WM. GREEN, President, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 28th, requesting my opinion as to the constitutionality of sections 21-1 of Senate Bill No. 127, as amended and passed by the house of representatives. Said Senate Bill No. 127 is the same bill which I recently considered in an opinion addressed to Hon. Raymond Ratliff, chairman of the special committee of the house of representatives. I enclose a copy of that opinion.

You will note that I state therein that the established rule in all the courts upon the subject of class legislation is that the legislature may divide the subjects of legislation into such classes as can be reasonably and logically distinguished from each other, and may enact laws pertaining to one of such classes to the exclusion of the others. There must be, however, a real and substantial difference justifying such classification.

The enclosed opinion also states my conclusion as to the manifest object of the bill, which is to apportion between employers and employes the burden of insuring a community against the pauperism and suffering which are the inevitable result of industrial accidents. Whether or not the classifications made in the bill—and there are several of them—are reasonable depends upon whether or not they are in furtherance of this object. That is, the bill might be made applicable to certain employments only, on the theory that the risk to the public in certain other employments was so small on account of the number of accidents occurring therein as to make special legislation of this sort unnecessary in regard to such employments. Such a classification would probably be held reasonable. But the classification made by section 21-1 of the bill is not this classification. All employments, whatever their nature, are, in their application to individuals, divided into those in which five or more men are engaged under a single employer and those in which fewer than that number are so employed. Applying the above stated principle to this classification it is at once seen that it cannot be upheld unless it can be established that industrial accidents are less likely to occur in an employment where fewer than five men are engaged than where more than that number are engaged. It is not that more accidents are likely to occur where the body of employes is larger; that follows as a matter of course, for the number of accidents is always in proportion to the number of men employed—at least roughly so. The real question is as to whether an employe, engaged in a common enterprise with three others, is less likely to suffer injury than if he is engaged with five others.

As a matter of fact, of course, such an individual is more likely to be injured if he has more fellow servants because of the principle that the presence of each additional fellow servant introduces an element of risk on account of the possible negligence of such fellow servant.

It would seem, therefore, that it might properly be said that there is some basis for the classification which the bill makes in this particular, but no reason appears to me for the selection of the number five; it seems purely arbitrary. Unless it can be established that there is some logical classification between the employments in which five or more men are engaged and those in which fewer than that number are employed I fear that on this broad ground the classification would not be upheld, and that a court would hold that its effect was to deny to all parties in the same situation with respect to the main purpose of the bill, the equal protection of the law.

There is another ground, however, for criticising this classification—or rather the same fundamental reason, of the denial of the equal protection of the laws, operates in another way. Another section of the bill provides that all employers may pay into an insurance fund on behalf of themselves and their employes. As I understand, the operation of that section is not confined to employers employing five or more men and an employer employing fewer than five men may avail himself of its advantages. The object of section 21-1 is to induce by indirect methods employers to subscribe to the state insurance fund. In its present form, however, its persuasive force is exerted on a part only of those who may comply with the preceding section. In other words, we have two sections, one of which offers a course of conduct open to all of a given class, while the other threatens certain consequences if a part only of that class do not elect to follow such course of conduct. It seems to me that the preceding sections clearly indicate that the general assembly intends that the general object of the bill shall apply to all employers. If that is the case then the indirect penalty must also be made applicable to all or we shall have a classification within a classification which, by the very terms of the bill itself, is unreasonable as measured by the decisions quoted in my former opinion.

For both of the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the words "who employ five or more workmen or operatives in the same business or in or about the same establishment" if allowed to remain in Senate Bill No. 127 will seriously impair its constitutionality.

For a fuller discussion of the decisions establishing the principles which I have endeavored to apply to this question I refer you to the enclosed opinion.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

248.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—POWER TO RESURFACE MACADAM ROAD WITH BRICK WITHOUT VOTE OF ELECTORS—PROCEDURE.

Provided they adopt the proper procedure and keep within the taxation limitations, the trustees of a township may improve an existing highway now surfaced with macadam by resurfacing the same with brick, under section 3939, General Code, subhead 22, without submitting the proposition to a vote of the electors.

May 9, 1911.

HON. E. N. BOGGS, Representative of Belmont County, care House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested an opinion from me as to whether the trustees of a township can, without submitting the same to a vote of the electors, improve a certain piece of road which was originally paved with macadam by resurfacing the same with brick.

Section 3295 reads as follows:

> "The trustees of any township may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such periods of time and at such rate of interest, not to exceed six per cent., in such manner as is provided by law for the sale of bonds by such township, for any of the purposes authorized by law for the sale of bonds by a municipal corporation for specific purposes, when not less than two of such trustees, by an affirmative vote, by resolution deem it necessary, and the provisions of law applicable to municipal corporations in the issue and sale of bonds for specific purposes, the limitations thereon, and for the submission thereof to the voters, shall extend and apply to the trustees of townships."

Section 3939 states as one of the specific purposes for which bonds may issue:

> "22. For resurfacing, repairing or improving any existing street or streets as well as other public highways."

Section 3940 provides:

> "Such bonds may be issued for any or all of such purposes, but the total bonded indebtedness created in any one fiscal year under the authority of the preceding section, by a municipal corporation, shall not exceed one per cent. of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation, as listed and assessed for taxation, except as hereafter provided in this chapter."

Section 3941 provides:

> "When such council, by resolution or ordinance passed by an affirmative vote of not less than two-thirds of all the members elected or appointed thereto, deems it necessary in any one fiscal year to issue bonds for all or any of the purposes so authorized in an amount greater than one per cent. of the total value of all the property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation, it shall submit the question of issuing bonds in excess of such one per cent. to a vote of the qualified electors of the municipal corporation at a general or special election in the manner hereafter provided in this chapter."

Section 3942 (as amended February 22, 1911, 102 Ohio Laws —) provides:

"The net indebtedness incurred by any township or municipal corporation for the purposes mentioned in sections 3295 and 3939 of the General Code, shall never exceed four per cent. of the total value of all the property in such corporation or township, as listed and assessed for taxation, unless the excess of such amount is authorized by vote of the qualified electors of the township or corporation in the manner hereinafter provided."

Century dictionary—Surface: "To put a surface (of a particular kind) on, or give a (certain) surface to; specifically to give a fine or even surface to; make plain or smooth."

Webster—Surface: "To give a surface to; especially to cause to have a smooth or plain surface; to make smooth or plain."

The words "repair" and "improvement" are of such common use that it is not necessary for me to give a definition of such words.

It is my opinion, therefore, that under subhead 22 of section 3939, supra, the trustees of a township may improve an existing highway now surfaced with macadam by resurfacing the same with brick, and may issue bonds therefor without submitting the same to a vote of the electors, provided the total bonded indebtedness for any and all purposes created in any one fiscal year shall not exceed one per cent. as provided in section 3940, supra, and provided, further, that the provisions of sections 3942 and 3943 are not violated.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 251.

BILL CREATING A CHIEF INSPECTOR OF PUBLIC OFFICES AND STATE INSTITUTIONS CONSTITUTIONAL — FINDING OF INSPECTOR NOT BINDING UPON COURTS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1911.

HON. GEORGE K. CETONE, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have carefully examined Senate Bill No. 158, of which you are the author, being "A bill to create a chief inspector of public offices and state institutions and to repeal certain sections of the General Code."

I know of no reason for regarding this bill as unconstitutional or defective in any respect. My attention having been especially directed to section 6, I beg to state that said section does not seem to confer upon the chief inspector of public offices the power to pass upon the validity or legality of a claim excepting in an advisory capacity. This section and the other sections of the act do not make the findings of the chief inspector binding upon the courts or upon the taxing districts or upon the state; such findings are merely for the guidance of officers and taxpayers interested in the disbursements of public moneys. This being the case, I find no constitutional objection to this particular section.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

261.

HEADING FOR APPROPRIATION FOR APPRAISERS OF STATE PROPERTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1911.

Finance Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have asked me to advise you under what heading the appropriation to carry out the purposes of House Bill No. 378 should be placed.

In my judgment it would be most proper to place said appropriation under a separate heading, as follows: "Appraisers of state property. Per diem and expenses of members, $....."

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 295.

COMPENSATION OF CLERKS OF HOUSE AND SENATE—$5.00 PER DIEM FOR DAYS ACTUALLY EMPLOYED.

Under section 53, General Code, clerks of the senate and house of representatives are entitled to $5.00 per diem for only those days upon which they are actually employed in the work provided for in said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 14, 1911.

HON. W. V. GOSHORN, Clerk of the Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of a letter signed by Hon. Charles W. Kempel, clerk of the house of representatives, and yourself, jointly submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Please render us an opinion as to the compensation to which the clerks of the senate and house are entitled under the provisions of section 53 of the General Code."

Said section 53, General Code, is in part as follows:

> "The clerks of the senate and house of representatives shall be paid five dollars per day, each, for the time employed after the adjournment of the general assembly in making indexes to the recorded and printed journals, and reading the proof sheets of the printed journals. The bills therefor must be approved by the commissioners of public printing or a majority of them." * * *

The primary meaning of this provision is very clear. The compensation therein provided is five dollars per day for the time employed in certain work. Manifestly, no intention is apparent to compensate the clerks for days in which no services have been rendered. Broadly speaking, the compensation provided for by this section is in the nature of a per diem fee without any unusual features. It is the essential nature of compensation so measured that its amount at a given time is determined, not by the lapse of time alone but by the number of days on which official services have been rendered. (Cobrecht vs. Cincinnati, 51 O. S. 68.)

The intent of the statute in this particular is rendered absolutely clear by the provision that "the clerks shall render bills subject to the approval of the commissioners of public printing." Were it intended to make the compensation payable under the section in the nature of a salary, the amount of which would be dependent solely upon the lapse of time, such a method of ascertainment would have been unnecessary.

I am therefore of the opinion that the clerks of the senate and house of representatives are each entitled, under section 53, to the sum of five dollars for each day on which he is employed after the adjournment of the general assembly in making indexes to the journals and reading the proof sheets of the printed journals, but that neither clerk is entitled to any compensation for any day during the time when he is generally employed in such work on which he actually performs no services.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 301.

CANDIDATES FOR CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—NOMINATION BY PETITION NOT BY PRIMARIES—REGULATIONS.

It is not necessary for candidates for the constitutional convention to present their petitions to the board of elections prior to the date of filing petitions for county offices or on the date of their filing.

As many qualified electors as file nominating petitions may be candidates for members of the constitutional convention.

Candidates may not be nominated at the primaries but by nominating petitions only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1911.

HON. ADAM FRICK, Member House of Representatives, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 14th inst., in which communication you inquire as follows:

> "In your opinion is it necessary under Senate Bill No. 15 to have the candidates for the constitutional convention present their petitions to the board of elections prior to the date of filing petitions for county offices, or on the date of their filing?
>
> Also, if a candidate should file his petition in accordance with the law relative to filing petitions for county offices, would the fact that a candidate has been selected at such primaries prevent any other person from entering the contest and presenting his petition to the board of elections not earlier than sixty days, or later than thirty days prior to the general election at which such candidates are elected?

"Would a candidate selected in the coming primaries bar any other person from later becoming a candidate?

In answer to your inquiry section 6 of Senate Bill No. 15 provides that:

"Candidates for members of the constitutional convention shall be nominated by nominating petitions only."

Section 7 of Senate Bill No. 15 provides as follows:

"In any county, any qualified elector of said county may be nominated as a candidate for members of the constitutional convention for said county upon a petition in writing addressed to the county board of deputy state supervisors of elections, signed by not less than two per cent. of the qualified electors of said county, or by such as will be legally qualified electors at the election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1911. And the said percentage of two per cent. shall be based on the number of those who voted at the last preceding general election. In no case shall the number of signers to a petition be less than three hundred."

Section 12 of Senate Bill No. 15 provides as follows:

"Nominating petitions shall be filed with the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of each county not less than thirty nor more than sixty days prior to the day of election."

I can find no provision in said bill which requires that candidates for the constitutional convention shall present their petitions to the board of elections prior to the date of filing petitions for county offices or on the date of filing such petitions. However, by virtue of the provisions of the above cited sections 6 and 12 of said Senate Bill No. 15, I am of the opinion that any qualified elector of his respective county may be nominated as a candidate for member of the constitutional convention upon a petition in writing, addressed to the county board of deputy state supervisors of elections, provided said petition is signed by not less than two per cent. of the qualified electors of said county, or by such electors as will be legally qualified to vote at the election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1911, and in no case shall the number of signers to the petition be less than three hundred.

So that, therefore, in conclusion, it is my opinion, in answer to your first question, that it is not necessary that candidates for the constitutional convention should present their petitions to the board of elections prior to the date of filing petitions for county offices or on the date of such filing.

By the provisions of section 6 of said bill, and which is cited above, candidates for members of the constitutional convention shall be nominated by nominating petitions only, and by the provision contained in section 12 of said senate bill such nominating petition shall be filed with the deputy state supervisors of elections of each county not less than thirty days or more than sixty days prior to the date of election.

Therefore, it is my opinion that as many qualified electors as file petitions in accordance with the above provisions can be candidates for members of the constitutional convention, and that furthermore, there is no provision for nominating candidates for the constitutional convention by or at the regular primaries, and that said bill provides that candidates for said constitutional convention can be nominated only by petition as above stated.

I believe my answers to your first two questions also answers your third question in this to-wit, that a candidate for the constitutional convention cannot be selected by primary, and that no qualified elector of his respective county can be barred from being a candidate provided he has filed the required petition with the deputy state supervisors of elections not less than thirty nor more than sixty days prior to the date of election.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

360.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—MEMBER GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND DELEGATE TO CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—"PUBLIC OFFICE."

A member of the legislature may be elected delegate to the constitutional convention.

A member of the constitutional convention holds a lucrative public office, however, in that he acts in a public capacity and exercises duties delegated as a part of the sovereignty of the state, and therefore under article II, section 4 of the constitution, cannot retain at the same time his seat in the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1911.

HON. HARRY W. CRIST, Member, House of Representatives, Delaware, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 31st, and would say that I have not until now rendered an opinion upon the question which you submit. You state:

> "I understand sometime ago that an opinion had been rendered by you that a member of the present general assembly is eligible to membership in the coming constitutional convention. I would be greatly obliged if you would inform me as to whether you had given this matter attention and had rendered any opinion concerning it. The law itself would seem to make any elector eligible, and the constitutional provision forbidding senators and representatives to hold an office which they have created or as to which they have increased the salary, for one year after the expiration of their terms, would appear to apply only to appointive positions, in case it had any application to the matter in hand.
>
> "In case a member is eligible to membership in the constitutional convention, would it be necessary to resign as a member of the present general assembly?"

Article XVI, section 2 of the constitution provides as follows:

> "Whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly shall think it necessary to call a convention, to revise, amend, or change this constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote, at the next election for members to the general assembly, for or against a convention; and if a majority of all the electors, voting at said election, shall have voted for a convention, the general assembly shall, at their next session, provide, by law, for calling the same. The convention shall consist of as many members as the house of representatives, who shall be chosen in the same manner, and shall meet within three months after their election, for the purpose, aforesaid."

Article XVI, section 3 of the constitution provides as follows:

"At the general election, to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in each twentieth year thereafter, the question 'Shall there be a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution' shall be submitted to the electors of the state; and, in case a majority of all the electors, voting at such election, shall decide in favor of a convention, the general assembly, at its next session, shall provide, by law, for the election of delegates, and the assembling of such convention, as is provided in the preceding section; but no amendment of this constitution, agreed upon by any convention assembled in pursuance of this article, shall take effect, until the same shall have been submitted to the electors of the state, and adopted by a majority of those voting thereon."

These sections afford the scheme for the calling, membership, compensation, etc., of members, and the times for holding constitutional conventions. Nowhere in the constitution will be found provisions for the qualifications of delegates to such constitutional conventions.

The legislature having duly recommended an election for the purpose of holding a constitutional convention, and the election having resulted in favor of said convention, the last general assembly passed an act to provide for the election to and assembling of a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution of the state. (102 O. L. 298-303.)

Section 1 of this act provides for the election and the number of delegates, and that said delegates should possess "the qualifications of an elector."

Section 7 of the act (102 O. L. 299) provides:

"In any county any qualified elector of said county may be nominated as a candidate for member of the constitutional convention for said county" * * *

Section 20 (page 303) provides as follows:

"Any elector of the state shall be eligible to membership in such convention and any disqualification now imposed by law upon persons holding any other office under the laws of this state is hereby removed, insofar as the right to be a delegate to such convention is concerned. The delegates of the convention shall be entitled to the same compensation and mileage for their services as is allowed by law to members of the general assembly for one year." * * *

It is manifest from a consideration of the above act, providing for the convention, that any qualified elector is eligible to a seat in the constitutional convention, and any statutory provision providing a disqualification is specifically removed.

As suggested in your letter article II, section 19 of the constitution provides that:

> "No senator or representative shall, during the term for which he shall have been elected, or for one year thereafter, be appointed to any civil office under this state, which shall be created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased, during the term for which he shall have been elected."

I agree with your opinion that this provision of the constitution applies only to "appointive" offices. As originally introduced in the convention wherein it was adopted, the section read "elected or appointed to," but after some discussion the word "elected" was stricken out and the section was meant to apply only to appointive offices. (2 Debates, 1851, 562-832). I conclude that so far as your eligibility to membership in the coming constitutional convention is concerned, the fact that you are a member of the general assembly now and was at the time of the enactment of the law fixing the time of the holding of said convention, as well as the compensation of members, etc., would not interfere, and that you might be elected to membership in said constitutional convention.

A more serious situation is presented in your last inquiry, where you ask whether or not a member of the constitutional convention is eligible to a seat in the general assembly.

Section 4 of article II of the constitution provides that:

> "No person holding office under the authority of the United States, or any lucrative office under the authority of this state, shall be eligible to, or have a seat in, the general assembly; but this provision shall not extend to township officers, justices of the peace, notaries public or officers of the militia."

The general inhibition applies to a person holding office under the authority of the United States or a lucrative office under the authority of this state. The express exceptions are township officers, justices of the peace, notaries public or officers of the militia. I am inclined to believe that the well known maxim "Expressio unius exclusio alterius est" would apply in this instance, and that the only offices excepted under the general prohibition are such as are specifically set forth in the above section, and that a person holding any other office than those excepted would be ineligible to and could not have a seat in the general assembly.

It necessarily follows, then, that the sole question to be determined is whether or not a delegate to the constitutional convention holds a "lucrative office" under the authority of this state. Since the act of the general assembly provides that the compensation shall be the same, including mileage, as is allowed by law to members of the general assembly for one year, it would be lucrative, and I need only consider as to whether or not such delegate is an officer under authority of this state.

The delegate is elected by and represents his constituents in a convention held for the purpose of altering, amending or revising the state constitution. His is a duty of the highest type, that of revising, or amending and altering the fundamental law of the state. True, his term of office is not definitely fixed other than to the time necessary to faithfully do and perform the particular things for which he was elected, but, as stated in People vs. Bledsoe, 68 N. C. 257:

> "Duration and salaries are not of the essence of public office. The duty of acting for and on behalf of the state constitutes an office."

The delegate takes an oath of office—at least such has been the custom of previous conventions, doing this, I suppose, by virtue of section 7 of article V of the constitution.

Judge Spear says (49 O. S. 37):

> "An office, speaking in general terms, is the right and duty to exercise an employment. It is defined by the Century dictionary as 'a post, the possession of which imposes certain duties upon the possessor and confers authority for their performance;' by Cochran, in his Law Lexicon, as 'a position or appointment entailing certain rights and duties,' and Bouvier as 'a right to exercise a public function or employment, and to take the fees and emoluments belonging to it.' And in Bradford vs. Justices, 33 Ga., 332, 'Where an individual has been appointed or elected, in a manner prescribed by law, has a designation or title given him by law, and exercises functions concerning the public, assigned to him by law, he must be regarded as a public officer.'" * * *

Mason vs. State, 58 O. S. 30, holds:

> "A public office is a public trust held for the benefit of the public." * * *

In the leading case of State vs. Jennings, 57 O. S. 415-424, Judge Minshall says:

> "Many efforts have been made to define a public office; and it is only the incumbent of such an office whose rights can be challenged in a proceeding in quo warranto. But it is easier to conceive the general requirements of such an office, than to express them with precision in a definition that shall be entirely faultless. It will be found, however, by consulting the cases and the authorities, that the most general distinction of a public office is, that it embraces the performance by the incumbent of a public function delegated to him as a part of the sovereignty of the state."

In the case of Clark vs. Stanley, 66 N. C. 59-62, the court says:

> "A public officer is one whose duties are in their nature public, thus involving in their performance the exercise of some portion of the sovereign power, whether great or small, and in whose proper performance citizens, irrespective of party, are interested, either as members of the entire body politic or of some duly established division thereof."

From these definitions and expressions of the different courts it is clear to me that the position created by the act in question is an office and that the incumbent elected in the manner prescribed by law is an officer. The delegate to the constitutional convention is truly an agent of the state. He represents his constituency in suggesting changes in the organic law; his responsibility is the very highest; his obligation the greatest; he, in a way that is fast becoming popular, legislates—a legislation with a referendum, for the proposed new constitution must go before the public for acceptance or rejection.

The present legislature, while it adjourned sine die, is subject to call from the governor to assemble in extraordinary session; and although no one knows whether or not the governor will find it necessary, for any purpose, to convene the present general assembly in extraordinary session, it is at least possible that it may become necessary so to do. It would certainly not be held that in the event the general assembly reconvenes in extraordinary session in January next, and the constitutional convention should meet at that time, the same person could hold his right to sit in both meetings. Neither do I think that this person, holding both offices, would have the option of attending the one and resigning from the other at his own sweet will and pleasure. It would be possible in the event that a number of the present members of the general assembly were elected in their respective counties to the constitutional convention, to seriously inconvenience and delay the meeting of the convention if an extraordinary session of the general assembly became necessary. There would then be an incompatibility of time as well as duties of a person holding an office in the convention and in the general assembly at the same time.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that while a member of the general assembly is eligible to be elected a delegate to the constitutional convention, public policy would demand that such member resign as a member of the general assembly before accepting the office of delegate, as he would be in no event, were the general assembly reconvened in extraordinary session, entitled to have a seat in the general assembly, since his office of delegate to such constitutional convention is a lucrative office under the state, and so forbidden under our constitution herein cited.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

378.

MAYOR—POWER TO DESIGNATE JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—TO PERFORM JUDICIAL POWERS WHILE ABSENT—POWERS OF PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL EXECUTIVE ONLY.

The mayor of a city has the power to designate a justice of the peace to exercise his judicial functions during his absence.

The president of the council during the absence of the mayor succeeds only to the executive functions of the latter and not to his judicial functions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 19, 1911.

HON. S. S. DEATON, Member, Ohio Senate, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 13th in which you call my attention to the seeming conflicting provisions of section 4273 and section 4549 of the General Code, and to the additional fact that the former of these two sections was originally enacted at a later date than the latter; and in which you request my opinion as to whether, in the light of these two sections, the mayor of a city has power to designate a justice of the peace to exercise his judicial functions during the absence or disability of the mayor, or whether such functions during such absence or disability devolve upon the president of the council.

This question was submitted to this department during the incumbency of my predecessor, who held that the mayor now has the power as formerly, to designate a justice of the peace for the purpose aforesaid. The conclusion is based upon the decision of the circuit court, State vs. Hance, 26 C. C. 273, which is to the effect that the president of council during the absence of the mayor succeeds under the section above cited, only to the executive functions of the mayor, as distinguished from his judicial functions.

I concur in this opinion and therefore advise that in the case described by you, the mayor had the power to designate the justice of the peace to exercise his judicial functions during his absence. Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 390.

LEGISLATIVE ACT NOT WITHIN INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM ACT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 23, 1911.

HON. CHARLES KUHL, Member Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 13th you address me as follows:

> "Please give me your opinion on the following: There was an act passed in April, 1904, providing for the purification of the strongly polluted Mill creek running through Hamilton county and the city of Cincinnati. The county commissioners were held by that act to construct a trunk sewer for that purpose, but nothing was done by them so far. The state board of health declared the condition of the creek a menace to health, also did the city board of health lately and ordered the county commissioners to act according to the law. But now comes the commissioners and say we are not able to undertake this big problem which may take four or five years for its completion. As we are only elected for two years and overloaded with work now we demand that the next legislature give us the power to appoint a commission of experts to take hold and carry the problem through from beginning to end. To avoid any more delay in this urgent case, cannot the law be changed or amended to that effect by a popular vote on the strength of the initiative and referendum act?"

If you will refer to the initiative and referendum act as passed by the last legislature, and as found in 102 O. L., page 521, etc., you will note that section 4227-1 and section 4227-2 of said act applies only to resolutions, ordinances and measures of municipal corporations and does not refer at all to the acts of the legislature. Therefore, I would say that the act passed in April, 1904, by the Ohio legislature was not within the purview of the initiative and referendum act. Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

402.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—MEMBER OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND MEMBER OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS—"PUBLIC OFFICE."

As the position of the board of trustees of public affairs of a village is a lucrative office under the authority of the state, within the comprehension of article II, section 4 of the state constitution, such position may not be held by a member of the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 30, 1911.

HON. M. J. JENKINS, Member of the House of Representatives, Plain City, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith beg to acknowledge receipt of your inquiry under date of August 11th, 1911, in which you say:

> "I am the Madison county member of the seventy-ninth general assembly and I would like an official opinion from your department as to my eligibility to serve as a member of the board of trustees of public affairs of the village in which I reside.
>
> "I requested an opinion upon this question from your predecessor inasmuch as I was a member of such board when elected representative, but the information never reached me.
>
> "I have been certified to the board of elections as a candidate for the same office at the forthcoming primaries and if I am ineligible I wish to so notify the board before the ballots are printed."

In reply to your inquiries, I wish to say that section 4357 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In each village in which water works, an electric light plant, artificial or natural gas plant, or other similar public utility is situated, or when council orders water works, an electric light plant, natural or artificial gas plant or other similar public utility, to be constructed or to be leased or purchased from any individual, company or corporation, council shall establish at such time a board of trustees of public affairs for the village, which shall consist of three members, residents of the village, who shall be each elected for a term of two years."

Section 4358 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When the council, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, establishes a board of trustees of public affairs, the mayor of the village shall appoint the members thereof, subject to the confirmation of the council. Such appointees shall hold their offices until their successors have been elected according to law and such successors shall be elected at the next regular election of municipal officers held in such village."

Article 2, section 4 of the constitution provides as follows:

> "No person holding office under the authority of the United States, or any lucrative office under the authority of this state, shall be eligible to, or have a seat in the general assembly; but this provision shall not extend to township officers, justices of the peace, notaries public, or officers of the militia."

I take it that the office of member of the board of trustees of public affairs of the village of Plain City is a lucrative office under the authority of the state, and, therefore, comes within the prohibition of article 2, section 4 of the state constitution; and inasmuch as said office is not within any of the exceptions of the aforesaid sections of the constitution, I am of the opinion that so long as you are a member of the board of trustees of public affairs of your village, you are neither eligible to, nor entitled to have a seat in the general assembly. If you desire to retain your position in the general assembly you should resign from the board of trustees of public affairs at once, as you may not legally hold the office of member of the general assembly, nor draw any pay therefor while you hold the other office, but if you resign as member of the board of trustees of public affairs of your village at once, I apprehend no question will be raised about your membership in the general asembly.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Secretary of State)

2

CLEVELAND HUNGARIAN AID SOCIETIES DEATH BENEFIT ASSOCIATION—MUTUAL CORPORATION NOT FOR PROFIT—DOING INSURANCE BUSINESS—FEE FOR FILING ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

A corporation not for profit whose business substantially amounts to insurance, must pay a fee of $25.00 for filing its articles and must in every way become subject to the insurance laws of the state and particularly to sections 9427 et seq., General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 4, 1910

HON. CARMI A. THOMPSON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 30th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Cleveland Hungarian Aid Societies Death Benefit Federation, and requesting my opinion as to the fee chargeable for these articles.

The corporation is not for profit. The purpose for which it is formed is "aiding the families of its members in the event of death." It is further provided in the articles that "its proceedings and business shall be conducted agreeable to its constitutions and by-laws, and such amendments and alterations as it may from time to time adopt for its government." The association has no capital stock.

These articles of incorporation indicate that the federation mentioned therein is in one of two possible classes mentioned in section 176 of the General Code, viz:

"1. A mutual life insurance corporation having no capital stock.

"2. A corporation not organized for profit and not mutual in its character."

In my opinion the business which this company proposes to do substantially amounts to insurance and it must not only pay a fee of twenty-five ($25.00) dollars for filing its articles, but it must become subject in every respect to the insurance laws of the state and particularly to sections 9427 et seq. of the General Code. See section 665 of the General Code.

The articles in question are regular in form and may be filed upon the payment of the proper fee.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

4.

CORPORATIONS—LEGALITY OF PURPOSE CLAUSE OF WESTERN SECURITIES COMPANY—POWER OF CORPORATION TO OWN STOCK IN COMPETING COMPANIES.

A purpose clause of articles of incorporation conferring the power to hold stocks and securities of other competing and non-kindred corporations as owner thereof is a violation of public policy and statutes of the state of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 6, 1911.

HON. CARMI A. THOMPSON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 3d, submitting for my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause thereof the proposed articles of incorporation of the Western Reserve Securities Company, which said clause is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of taking charge of, caring for and managing real estate for owners, negotiating loans, acquiring, owning, holding and disposing of stocks, bonds, notes, bills of exchange, mortgages, leases, leasehold interests, or other securities either as owner, agent or broker, and to promote, finance, develop or otherwise further the lawful enterprises of others, and to do any and all other incidental acts and things."

The power to "acquire, own, hold and dispose of stocks, bonds, notes, bills of exchange, mortgages, * * * or other securities, either as owner, agent or broker; and to promote, finance, develop or otherwise further the lawful enterprises of others," is not only separate and distinct from the power "to take charge of, care for and manage real estate for owners," and thus objectionable under the rule laid down in State ex rel. v. Taylor, 55 O. S. 67, but the power as above referred to is one which may not lawfully be conferred upon any corporation in Ohio. The power of an Ohio corporation to hold stocks and securities of other corporations as owner is limited to the acquisition of stocks of kindred but not competing corporations. Under the powers attempted to be conferred upon this corporation it could commit acts directly violative of the established public policy of this state and of statute law relating to trusts and combinations. For a more complete discussion of the principles involved I beg to refer you to my opinion of December 21, 1910, respecting the admission of the U. S. Investment Securities Company to do business in Ohio.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

19.

January 13, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 11th, inclosing certified copy of the articles of incorporation of the U. S. Investment and Securities Company, a corporation organized under the laws of South Dakota, and seeking admission to do business in this state under the provisions of sections 178 and 183 of the General Code, formerly sections 1485 and 1486, respectively, Revised Statutes. The application is referred to me as to whether the business, or object of the corporation, as set forth in said articles, is such as may be legally carried out by a corporation organized under the laws of this state. I beg to refer you in this connection to the opinion of Hon. U. G. Denman, Attorney General, rendered to your department under date of December 21, 1910. I indorse the conclusion and opinion of that date of the attorney general as expressed in that opinion, that the object of the incorporation of the U. S. Investment and Securities Company are all contrary to the settled public policy of the state of Ohio. I therefore advise you that you may not lawfully issue a certificate authorizing the U. S. Investment and Securities Company to do business in the state of Ohio.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

7.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF B. F. FINK COMPANY—LEGALITY—POWER OF CORPORATION TO ENGAGE IN SEVERAL UNRELATED FORMS OF BUSINESS—REAL ESTATE CORPORATIONS—TWENTY-FIVE YEAR LIMITATION.

The word "purpose" in section 8623, General Code, is intentionally used in the singular and except in certain cases, expressly stipulated in the statutes, corporations may not lawfully be formed in Ohio for more than one purpose.

A corporation to engage in real estate business will expire in twenty-five years and the articles of incorporation should so state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 10th, enclosing articles of incorporation of the B. F. Fink Company and requesting my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause thereof, which is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of engaging in and conducting a general wholesale and retail business in all kinds of merchandise; also for conducting an undertaking business including the wholesale and retail and manufacturing of articles and goods used in the undertaking business and general merchandising business; also for the purpose of buying and selling and exchanging and owning real estate and improving and developing same."

I am unable to ascertain from this purpose clause just what is the real principal purpose of this company. If it is a general merchandise business, the first phrase of the clause ending with the semi-colon, while objectionable because of its vagueness and generality, is probably legal. With this principal business—assuming it to be such—however, the incorporators have sought to join the following unrelated purposes:

1. That of engaging in the undertaking business. 2. That of dealing at wholesale and retail in articles and goods used in the undertaking business. 3. That of manufacturing articles and goods used in the undertaking business. 4. That of dealing generally in real estate.

In the leading case of State ex rel. vs. Taylor, 55 O. S. 67, the supreme court of this state established the rule that the word "purpose" in former section 3235, Revised Statutes, now section 8623, General Code, was designedly used in the singular number, and that excepting in certain cases expressly provided for by statute, corporations may not lawfully be formed in Ohio for more than one purpose. The application of this rule would require the incorporators of the B. F. Fink Company to elect among the various unrelated purposes stated in the articles of incorporation presented to me, the one purpose for which they desire to incorporate.

In the same connection I beg to advise that if the incorporators desire that the company shall engage in the real estate business the corporation thus formed will expire by limitation in twenty-five years from the date on which its articles of incorporation are issued by you, and in my judgment the articles of incorporation themselves should so state. See section 8648, General Code.

For the foregoing reasons I advise that until the articles of incorporation are amended as above suggested, you do not file or record the same.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

27.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE DEAL-KERNS AGENCY COMPANY—GENERAL INSURANCE AGENCY BUSINESS — PURPOSE CLAUSE—"UNDERWRITERS."

A corporation formed for the purpose of engaging in a general insurance agency business, cannot, in the purpose clause of its articles, express such purpose as a "business of general insurance underwriters."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 16, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 14th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Deal-Kerns Agency Company and requesting my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause thereof, which is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of engaging in the business of general insurance underwriters."

The incorporators of these articles have used unfortunate language. It is apparent from the name of the corporation that they have employed the word "underwriters" in its derivative or popular sense, as being synonymous with "agents." Such, however, is not its original and technical meaning. The term "underwriter" is defined in Bouvier's law dictionary as follows:

> "The party who agrees to insure another on life or property, in a policy of insurance. He is also called the insurer."

The Standard dictionary gives a similar definition.

I take as above suggested, that this company was not intended to be organized for the purpose of doing an insurance business, but rather for the purpose of doing an insurance agency business. Defining the powers of an insurance company, the articles of incorporation are for obvious reasons insufficient; as attempting to create an agency company, the language employed is for the above reasons inaccurate.

I therefore advise, until the articles of incorporation are amended as above suggested, that you do not file the same. Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

28.

CORPORATIONS — HOLDING COMPANIES — OWNERSHIP OF STOCKS — LEGALITY OF ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF OHIO SECURITIES COMPANY, WESTERN RESERVE SECURITIES COMPANY AND THE AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY.

It is against the statutes and the settled policy of the state of Ohio to permit a corporation or association of natural persons to exercise rights of general ownership of corporate stocks.

The statute is against the common law and should be construed strictly, and articles of incorporation governed thereby must express only what is clearly legal.

2. Corporations may, however, be formed for the purpose of dealing in stocks and securities of other corporations as agents.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 16, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 11th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Ohio Securities Company with check of L. D. Weadock attached thereto; also your letter of January 14th, enclosing amended application for articles of incorporation of the Western Reserve Securities Company with letter of T. A. McCaslin and check attached thereto; also your letter of January 14th, enclosing amended certificate of incorporation of the American Bridge Company. All of these letters present the same general question, viz:

> "Can a corporation be legally incorporated under the laws of this state for the purpose of owning the stocks of other corporations?"

This department has repeatedly held that this may not be done: it is against the settled policy of this state to permit a corporation or association of natural persons to exercise the rights of general ownership of corporate stocks; the exercise of such a right would tend to monopoly.

It is true that certain statutes authorize corporations to acquire stock of other corporations under certain circumstances, and that section 8683 authorizes all private corporations to > "purchase or otherwise acquire and hold shares of stock in other kindred but not competing plant and corporations, domestic or foreign."

All such provisions, however, are to be strictly construed. All of them to define powers which are purely incidental and which may not be recited in the statement of the purpose for which the corporation is formed. In other words, it is not lawful in this state for a corporation to be engaged in the business of owning stocks; the power which all corporations have in this respect is purely incidental and may not be extended beyond the strict terms of the statute. This is because the statutes themselves are in derogation of the common law rule.

Bank v. Bank, 36 O. S., 354.
Ry. Co. v. Iron Co., 46 O. S., 44.
Peoples v. Trust Co., 130 Ill., 268.
State ex rel. v. Standard Oil Co., 49 O. S., 137.

In Mr. McCaslin's letter the point is made that inasmuch as the company has the right to own stocks of similar but not competing corporations, the ———— in its articles that the company is formed for the purpose of "acquiring, owning, holding and disposing of stock," etc., will be construed as if limited to the acquisition of stocks of kindred but not competing corporations. This, however, does not follow. The articles of incorporation of the Western Reserve Securities Company attempt to authorize that company to acquire the stocks of any corporation whether such corporations be kindred or not and whether or not they be competing corporations. They would authorize the company to acquire and to exercise the rights of ownership with respect to the stock of a number of unrelated manufacturing companies; in other words, they authorize the formation of what is familiarly known as "a holding company."

Mr. McCaslin in his letter states that the acts of the company are presumed to be legal. This is immaterial. Let the articles of incorporation recite what is clearly legal and there will be no objections to them.

It is, of course, to be understood that corporations may be formed for the purpose of dealing in stocks and securities of other corporations as agents.

For the foregoing reasons I beg to advise you that the articles of incorporation of the Ohio Securities Company of the Western Reserve Securities Company as drafted may not be filed by you, and that the American Bridge Company may not be admitted to do business in Ohio so long as it retains in its certificate of incorporation the power to "purchase, hold * * * or * * * dispose of the shares of the capital stock * * * of any other corporation or corporations * * * and * * * while owner of any such stock * * * to exercise all the rights, powers and privileges of ownership, including the right to vote thereon."

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

35.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF CONTRACTOR'S INVESTMENT COMPANY—BUILDING COMPANIES.

Section 10210 of the General Code does not authorize building companies to engage in a general rental business.

Corporations may be formed for a single purpose only, unless express authority to pursue more than one object has been conferred by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 17th, requesting my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause of the proposed articles of incorporation of the Contractor's Investment Company, which said clause is as follows:

> "managing and renting office buildings and other buildings designed for business and other purposes, and of acquiring, erecting and holding office buildings and other buildings designed for business and other purposes, and of acquiring, selling, holding and otherwise disposing of leasehold estates or other interests in land which may be necessary or proper in connection therewith, and of doing a general contracting business."

The incorporation and powers of building companies are especially provided for by section 10210, General Code, which provides in part as follows:

> "A corporation organized for the purpose of constructing and maintaining buildings to be used for hotel, store rooms, offices, warehouses and factories, may acquire by purchase or lease, and hold upon mortgage and lease all such real estate or personal property as is necessary, for such purpose. But no such corporation shall acquire or mortgage any real or leasehold estate, or lease it for a period exceeding * * * the term of five years, without the consent of the holders of two-thirds of the stock * * * Nothing herein shall authorize corporations to buy and sell, or to deal in real estate for profit."

The above quoted articles recite the following purposes:

1. Managing and renting buildings.
2. Acquiring, erecting and holding buildings.
3. Doing a general contracting business.

The purpose of acquiring and disposing of interests in land is also set forth in the articles, but this purpose, while probably superfluous, is clearly stated to be incidental to the other purposes of the company and therefore is not, strictly speaking, objectionable. The purpose of renting office buildings is not one of the purposes which may be independently pursued by a corporation organized under section 10210. The managing and renting of a building may properly be said to be an incident to its maintenance. However, it is obvious that the business of managing and renting office buildings may be carried on by a person or corporation without maintaining the building thus managed and rented. Section 10210 does not authorize corporations formed thereunder to engage in the rental agency business.

"General contracting" business is clearly an enterprise separate and distinct from that of constructing and maintaining buildings.

The rule in this state being that laid down in State ex rel. v. Taylor, 65 O. S. 67, that corporations may be formed for a single purpose only, excepting where express authority to pursue more than one object is conferred by law, I am of the opinion that until the phrase "of doing a general contracting business" is eliminated from the articles of incorporation of the Contractor's Investment Company, and until the purpose of managing and renting offices and other buildings is stated therein as clearly subordinate and incidental to the principal purpose of acquiring, erecting and holding such buildings, the said articles of incorporation of that company should not be filed by you.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

41.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE MOBERLY PAVING BRICK COMPANY—LEGALITY OF PURPOSE CLAUSE—COMBINATION OF CERTAIN PURPOSES ILLEGAL.

The articles of incorporation of the Moberly Paving Brick Company are somewhat superfluous in that they set out incidental powers which would accrue without their statement in the articles.

The articles are generally legal however, except that they combine certain purposes which may not be so united under the statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 18th, in which you request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause of the proposed articles of incorporation of the Moberly Paving Brick Company, application for which, together with voucher check for three hundred dollars, was enclosed with your letter.

The clause in question is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of acquiring, owning, constructing, selling, maintaining and operating quarries, mines, plants, works and factories for the making, manufacturing, and producing paving bricks, paving blocks, curbing blocks, building bricks, building blocks and any and all other kinds and varieties of bricks and blocks, tiling of all kinds, terra cotta products of all kinds, and clay, shale and cement products and manufactures of all kinds and descriptions; to buy, sell, own, trade and deal in all classes and kinds of clay, shale and concrete products, both natural and manufactured, and to mine and quarry all kinds of clays and shales; to engage in the contracting or construction business, or both, for any kind of construction or building work involving in whole or in part the use of any variety or form of clay, shale or concrete products, including the contracting for, and building of, streets, avenues, alleys and roadways and sidewalks; to buy, sell, construct, own, maintain and operate all classes of real estate and personal property necessary to the conduct of such business, and to own, maintain, improve, operate, and sell any such property, real or personal, as shall be received or acquired in the course of such business; to buy, sell, construct, maintain and operate tramways, dummy-lines and cable-lines and all necessary means of transportation for the proper handling and management of said business, not however, to include the business of a common carrier in any case; also to own, acquire, develop, maintain, operate and sell building stone of all kinds and stone quarries, and to manufacture, buy and sell, and deal in, crushed stone and all other varieties of commercial stone."

Much of the foregoing clause is merely superfluous, being the recital of incidental powers, which would vest in the corporation without such express mention. As to so much of the clause as may be so characterized I beg to advise that, while it is out of place in the articles of incorporation, it is not, strictly speaking, illegal, and if the incorporators insist upon retaining it therein, I know of no objection to such a course.

The company has joined several purposes, most of which are authorized to be so joined, by virtue of sections 10137 et seq. of the General Code, which authorize companies to be incorporated for the purposes of mining and manufacturing. These sections, however, do not authorize such companies to be formed for purposes such as that described in the clause:

> "to engage in the contracting or construction business, or both, for any kind of construction or building work involving in whole or part the use of any variety or form of clay, shale or concrete products, including the contracting for, and building of, streets, avenues, alleys and roadways and sidewalks;"

This purpose not being included within the purposes which may, under the statutes above referred to, be joined together, must be eliminated from the articles of incorporation, under the rule laid down in State ex rel. vs. Taylor, 55 O. S. 67.

For this reason, you should not in my opinion, file the articles of incorporation of the Moberly Paving Brick Company, until they are amended so as to obviate the above criticism.

Respectfully submitted,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

43.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE "BIG NIGHT TONIGHT SOCIAL CLUB"—LEGALITY OF PURPOSE CLAUSE—MUTUAL PROTECTION AND RELIEF.

A corporation organized for purely social purposes is incorrect in using in its purpose clause the terms "for mutual protection and relief" for the reason that such terms are applied to insurance companies in the statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 11th, enclosing application for articles of incorporation of the Big Night Tonight Social Club, together with two dollars in currency.

You request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause of said articles of incorporation, which is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of holding meetings, for social purposes by its members and their families, and for mutual protection and relief of the members thereof, and their families exclusively, and not with a view of profit. All expenses incurred is to be voluntarily contributed by its members."

While the objects of the proposed company, as stated in the above quoted clause, are in no sense illegal, they are not stated with sufficient definiteness, in my judgment, to permit you to file them. The language, "mutual protection and relief of the members thereof" has come to have a peculiar significance in our statutes. In section 9427, for example, it is used to describe the business of insurance to be conducted by what are known as mutual protective associations. If the incorporators of the club desire to conduct an insurance business they must more particularly describe the nature of that business in the articles of incorporation, and they must pay a fee of twenty-five dollars for filing the same. If, however, the object is purely social as indicated by the first portion of the clause in question, the phrase "mutual protection and relief" should be eliminated.

For the foregoing reasons, I beg to advise, that, in my opinion, you should not file the proposed articles of incorporation of the Big Night Tonight Social Club in their present form.

Respectfully submitted,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

72.

CORPORATIONS—INCREASE OF STOCK—CERTIFICATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

When a corporation increases its capital stock, a certificate of the action provided for in section 8698, General Code, must be filed with the secretary of state.

Certificate of subscription to the increased stock need not be filed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 26, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 20th, enclosing a letter addressed to you by Howard A. Couse, attorney-at-law, and requesting an opinion upon the question raised in said letter which is as follows:

> "When a corporation increases its capital stock must a certificate of subscription to the increased stock be filed with the secretary of state?"

The following provisions of the General Code of Ohio relates to this question:

> "Section 8633. When ten per cent. of the capital stock is subscribed, the subscribers to the articles of incorporation, or a majority of them at once shall so certify in writing to the secretary of state.
>
> "Section 8634. The incorporators shall be liable to any person affected thereby, in the amount of any deficiency in the actual payment of ten per cent. on the stock subscribed for at the time of so certifying to the secretary of state.
>
> "Section 8635. As soon as such certificate is made, the signers thereto, shall give notice to the stockholders * * * to meet * * * for the purpose of choosing * * * directors * * *
>
> "Section 8698. After its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, a corporation * * * may increase its capital stock

* * * by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers. After organization the increase may be made by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock * * * Or, the stock may be increased at a meeting of the stockholders at which all are present in person, or by proxy, * * * and also agree in writing to such increase, naming the amount thereof to which they agree. A certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

There are no other provisions of the General Code directly or indirectly applicable to the question at hand.

Section 8633, 8634 and 8635 above quoted, not only provide for what is known as a certificate of subscription, but also clearly indicate the purposes of such a provision, which are to fix the liability of the incorporators, and to make it possible for the incorporators to complete the organization of the company. The filing of the certificate of subscription is a necessary step in the formation of the corporation. Once the corporation is formed and directors are elected, the necessity for such a certificate is satisfied.

Section 8698 above quoted confers the right to increase capital stock upon such corporations only whose original capital stock is fully subscribed for. It provides for the filing with the secretary of state of but one certificate and that is a certificate of increase of capital stock.

In view of the absence of a specific provision requiring a certificate of subscription to the increased stock to be filed with the secretary of state, and in view also of the object and purpose of the requirement that such a certificate shall be filed as a step in the original organization of the corporation, I am of the opinion that the secretary of state may not require or file a certificate of subscription to stock acquired by a corporation by increase of its capital stock under section 8698 of the General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

73.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF GUARANTEED MORTGAGE AND BOND COMPANIES—GENERAL BROKERAGE BUSINESS.

A corporation may be formed for the purpose of carrying on a general brokerage business.

January 26, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 18th, inclosing articles of incorporation of the Guaranteed Mortgage and Bond Company with check for $50 attached thereto. You request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause of said corporation, which is as follows:

"Said corporation is formed for the purpose of buying and selling notes, bills of exchange and evidences of indebtedness, loaning money, leasing property, buying and selling securities, negotiating loans, endorsing and guaranteeing notes, bonds and other securities and doing whatever else that may be necessary to carry on a general brokerage business in securities."

While this clause is somewhat awkwardly framed it is all in my judgment to be construed in the light of the last few words thereof: "whatever else that may be necessary to carry on a general brokerage business." This purpose is lawful and all the enumerated acts which precede this language are to be construed as subsidiary thereto.

I therefore advise that the purpose of the Guaranteed Mortgage and Bond Company is lawful and that the articles of incorporation, now presented to you, may be filed.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 26th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Huron Realty Company, with letter and check attached thereto.

You request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause thereof, which is as follows:

"Said corporation is formed for the purpose of acquiring or constructing and maintaining buildings to be used for hotels, store rooms, offices, warehouses or factories, and, for such purpose, acquiring, by purchase or lease, and holding, using, mortgaging and leasing all such real estate or personal property as may be necessary therefor; and of doing all other things necessary, proper or incidental to the transaction of said business; this corporation being organized under section 10210 of the General Code of the state of Ohio."

This clause is a substantial transcription in words of the provisions of section 10210, General Code. I therefore advise that the articles of incorporation in question are legal and may be filed by you.

I note that the letter attached to the articles states that the company is to succeed a company of the same name now existing as a real estate corporation. The new company may not succeed such real estate company in every sense of the word as is disclosed by the last sentence of section 10210 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Nothing herein shall authorize corporations to buy and sell, or to deal in real estate for profit."

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

74.

CERTIFICATE OF AGREEMENT FOR CONSOLIDATION OF THE BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATIONS THE FINNISH TURVA TEMPERANCE SOCIETY AND THE FINNISH KUNTO TEMPERANCE SOCIETY OF ASHTABULA, OHIO, INTO THE FINNISH SOVINTO TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

The provisions of section 10039-10041, General Code, having been complied with, the certificate under consideration may be filed by the secretary of state.

January 26, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for my opinion thereon a certificate to the secretary of state of an agreement for the consolidation of the benevolent associations, the Finnish Turva Temperance Society, and the Finnish Kunto Temperance Society, both of Ashtabula, Ohio, under the new name and style of the Finnish Sovinto Temperance Society.

Section 10038 of the General Code provides that:

> "When two or more charitable or benevolent associations, societies or organizations formed or incorporated by or under any law of this state for charitable or benevolent purposes, desire to be consolidated or united as a single corporation, the trustees * * * of such associations * * * may enter into an agreement for such a consolidation and prescribe its terms and conditions; also, a corporate name for such united associations, * * * the time and place for the first meeting of the new corporation, the number of members of one or more or of each separate branch or organization to be chosen as directors, trustees, or other officers of the new corporation." * * *

Section 10039 of the General Code in part provides:

> "That no agreement so made shall be valid until it has been submitted to a separate meeting of the members, of which due and full notice has been given, according to the form and usage for calling meetings of each of such associations * * * and ratified by a two-thirds vote of all the members present at the meeting, in person or by proxy, entitled to vote." * * *

Section 10040 of the General Code provides in part:

> "When such agreement has been ratified by each association * * * the clerk or secretary of each meeting shall certify the record of the proceedings thereof, and deliver it to the clerk or secretary of the first meeting of the united associations."

Section 10041 of the General Code in part provides:

> "At the first meeting of the united associations * * *. If at the meeting the proceedings and acts of the several associations * * * are submitted to and approved by it, and a board of trustees * * * are chosen in accordance with the terms of the agreement, the clerk, or secretary of the meeting shall certify the approved agreement or terms of union agreement and file it in the office of the secretary of state, whereupon the several associations * * * shall be one corporation under the name by it adopted."

I have carefully examined the certificate submitted to me and find that it complies in every respect with the provisions above quoted. I presume that the question concerning which you desire my opinion is as to whether or not the two associations which have attempted thus to be consolidated are "charitable or benevolent associations" or "organizations incorporated for charitable or benevolent purposes" within the meaning of section 10038 above quoted.

The papers submitted to me do not disclose the nature and extent of the corporate power of either of the constituent societies. Yet, however, as indicated by the names thereof their objects are to further the cause of temperance generally among their members or among a certain defined class of persons; then in my judgment such societies are "societies incorporated for charitable purposes" within the meaning of said section.

See Harrington vs. Pier, 105 Wis. 465.
Saltonstall vs. Sanders, 11 Allen 466.

If, therefore, these societies are formed for purposes such as above described you should file and record the certificate which has been transmitted to you for that purpose as provided in section 10043 of the General Code, upon receipt of the fees chargeable therefor, which would seem to be provided for by paragraph twelve (12) of section 176 of the General Code.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

78.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE PLASTERING CONTRACTORS ASSOCIATION COMPANY—PURPOSE CLAUSE.

The use in the purpose clause of the words "promoting the business welfare of its stockholders and members" is too broad and too vague and until it has been satisfactorily amplified and explained, the articles of incorporation should not be filed.

January 27, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 21st, requesting my opinion of the purpose clause of the inclosed articles of incorporation of the Plastering Contractors Association Company, which said clause is as follows:

"Said corporation is formed for the purpose of promoting the business welfare of its stockholders and members; to inculcate just and equitable principles: to adjust, so far as practicable, all difficulties arising between its stockholders and members and their employes; to acquire, purchase, possess, lease and sell such real estate and personal property, and to do all other things necessary or incident to the carrying out of the purpose for which said corporation is formed."

The clause of "promoting the business welfare of its stockholders and members" should in my judgment be amplified or explained. This statement is not sufficiently definite. It is so broad as to seem to cover the fostering of agreements in restraint of trade and competition in violation of the statute law and public policy of this state, and especially when taken in connection with the name of the company which indicates that the stockholders of the corporation are intended to be persons who would otherwise be competing agents. If the principal business of the company as indicated by the language "to adjust, so far as practicable, all difficulties arising between its stockholders and members and their employes" is to deal in behalf of a certain class of employers with the employes of its stockholders or customers such a purpose would be lawful. If the purpose is intended to be broader than this, however, it must nevertheless be definitely stated.

I advise that until the clause in question is so amended as to obviate the above criticism you do not file the articles of incorporation of the Plastering Contractors Association Company.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

89.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF WOODROW-PARKER COMPANY—NECESSITY OF CLAUSE DEFINING TWENTY-FIVE YEAR LIMITATION OF REAL ESTATE CORPORATIONS.

It is to be recommended that articles of incorporation of companies formed for the purpose of dealing in real estate be made to include the specific statutory twenty-five year limitation, but such clause is not legally necessary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 26th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Woodrow-Parker Company, with check and letter attached thereto.

You request my opinion as to whether the purpose clause thereof is legal, as defining a single purpose, or whether it attempts to set forth a plurality of purposes. You also ask to be advised as to whether the clause in question should contain an express provision, that the powers to be conferred upon the corporation thereby, shall expire by limitation in twenty-five years.

I have carefully examined the purpose clause in question, which is very lengthy. The principal object or purpose of the corporation as therein defined, is the conduct of the real estate business. Without quoting the clause, suffice it to say, that I am satisfied that none of the objects set forth therein, are foreign to such business; many of them define powers which would be incidental to the real estate business, and, strictly speaking, their recital is merely superfluous and subject to criticism on that ground. However, such a statement of powers, clearly intended and stated to be incidental, while unnecessary, is not illegal, and does not invalidate the articles of incorporation. I therefore advise with respect to your first question, that the articles of incorporation of the Woodrow-Parker Company define but a single purpose, and are, in that respect, legal.

With respect to your second question I beg to state that section 8648 of the General Code provides that:

> "A corporation formed to buy or sell real estate shall expire by limitation in twenty-five years from the date on which its articles of incorporation were issued by the secretary of state."

It is clear from this section that the articles in question will expire by limitation in twenty-five years from the date on which they may be issued by you, whether or not the purpose clause thereof so states.

I have several times recommended to you that articles of incorporation of companies formed for the purpose of dealing in real estate include this specific provision, but as a strict matter of law, there is no such requirement. If, then, the incorporators of this company prefer not to include such a statement in the purpose clause of their articles of incorporation, you may not, on that ground, refuse to file or record the same.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the articles of incorporation of the Woodrow-Parker Company are legal in form and may be filed by you.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

91.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE OHIO MUTUAL TEMPERING COMPANY—PATENT AND INVENTION CORPORATIONS—MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS.

A corporation formed for the purpose of developing certain inventions and patents may not include in its articles of incorporation the purpose of manufacturing and selling the articles to which the patent processes are applicable.

On the other hand, however, a corporation formed for the purpose of manufacturing and selling certain articles may have as incidental thereto, the right of purchasing and selling patent rights.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 18th, enclosing articles of incorporation of the Ohio Metal Tempering Company, with letter and check attached thereto.

You request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause of the said articles of incorporation, which is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of purchasing, leasing, obtaining license or contract for, or otherwise acquiring, the title to, and right to the use of, by itself, or others to whom it may grant rights in the same, any and all inventions, patents, applications for patents, or other rights or privileges, in and to any and all processes for improving the physical properties of copper, iron, steel and other metals, especially such as relate to the tempering of such metals, and including what is known as the 'Lamon process of improving the physical properties of metals.' Also of purchasing, using and assigning, as above, any and all patents, or applications therefor, improvements, or additions thereto, or extensions thereof, including inventions or other rights or claims connected with and germane to such processes, and including not only such as may now, but such as may hereafter, be made, or arise, and be material to the successful operation of any such processes. Also of engaging in the business of manufacturing and selling any and all articles to which said processes are applicable. Also of engaging in the business of developing and disposing of the right to use said processes by others engaged in such manufacture. Also of acquiring, owning, operating and disposing of such real and personal property, including experimental and demonstrating laboratories, chemicals, machinery, scientific instruments, and all other appliances used, or relating to, any such processes, and necessary to accomplish the above purposes; also generally of doing all other acts and things necessary to carry out the purposes above mentioned."

The principal purpose of the corporation seems to be that of developing certain inventions and patents. This purpose is lawful, but it may not be extended as is attempted to be, to that of manufacturing and selling the articles to which the patented processes are applicable. If the incorporators desire to engage in the business of manufacturing, a corporation formed by them for this purpose would have the incidental right to purchase and dispose of patent rights; but it does not follow that a corporation formed for the purpose of developing patent rights may, as incidental to such purpose, engage in the business of manufacturing. It thus appears that the incorporators must elect as to whether the company will be organized for the purpose of manufacturing, or for the purpose of the development of inventions. Until this election is made and the articles are amended in compliance therewith, I advise you not to file or record the same.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

91a.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE WORTH McK. COMPANY—PROFESSIONAL BUSINESS.

A corporation may not be formed in Ohio for the purpose of carrying on a professional business.

A corporation formed for the purpose of acting as agent or broker in making of contracts when the actual object of the corporation requires that its business must be transacted by agents who must be publicly qualified and licensed is to be deemed professional and within the prohibition of the statute.

If, however, the scheme of the corporation was, for a compensation, to be paid to it by individuals, to arrange a contract between such individual and a professional, leaving the designation of the latter to the individual and the amount of compensation to be agreed upon between the individual and the member of the profession, such would be a brokerage or agency business and a lawful purpose for a corporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 2, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 25th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Worth McK. Company, as redrafted, with check for ten dollars thereto attached.

You request my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause thereof, which is as follows:

"Said corporation is formed for the purpose of acting as agent or broker in the making of contracts and especially in the following manner, to-wit:

"Said corporation will procure contracts from groups of individuals, partnerships or corporations, each group consisting possibly of one or more hospitals, physician, surgeon, optician, dentist and attorney, by the terms of which contract the members of said group shall grant, give and furnish to the members of another group, which last named group hereinafter referred to as certificate holders, certain concessions, inducements and advantages, as for example, certain free consultations and services and the contract which said corporation will procure from said first named group shall be expressly for the use and benefit of said group known as certificate holders of said corporation. A sample of said contract is in words and figures as follows, to-wit:

" 'Cleveland, O., ...

" 'It is hereby agreed by and between the Worth McK. Company, a corporation, acting as agent for its certificate holders, holding certificates numbering from 1 to ...., and for their sole and exclusive use and benefit, party of the first part and (Richard Roe, Optician, etc.) party of the second part.

" 'In consideration of the covenants and agreements hereinafter set forth and of the payments to be hereinafter made by the party of the first part, second party hereby agrees,

" '1. To give to each of the aforesaid certificate holders of first party during the twelve months following the date of this contract, five (5) free office consultations and other services at the following prices, to-wit:

" 'First party shall on the first day of each and every calendar month during the continuance of this contract, pay the second party ..... cents for each and every certificate issued and in full force between the numbers aforesaid.

" 'In witness whereof, the parties have hereunto affixed their signatures in duplicate this ..... day of ....., A. D. 1911.'

"Said corporation will issue to its certificate holders for a sum to be paid by them in regular installments a certificate entitling the holder thereof to the benefit of all the contracts made by said corporation for the benefit of its certificate holders a sample of said certificate in substance is as follows:

CERTIFICATE OF MEMBERSHIP of
THE WORTH McK. COMPANY, a Corp.
Incorporated under the laws of Ohio.

" 'The Worth McK. Company, a corporation, hereby certifies that John Doe is entitled to all the benefits, privileges and emoluments of certificate holders of said the Worth McK. Company and of all the contracts made by said the Worth McK. Company for the benefit of its certificate holders. Said certificate holder is entitled upon presentation of this certificate, for one year from and after the date of this certificate, to the following benefits, to-wit: Five (5) free consultations with a physician, five (5) free consultations with an attorney, free cleaning of the teeth twice, free consultation with an optician, in case of accident first aid to the injured free, not exceeding three (3) days free care and attention at a hospital within the city of Cleveland and care and attention thereafter while necessarily confined to said hospital at not to exceed $7.00 per week, including necessary medical attention and nurse.' "

Section 8623 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Except for carrying on professional business, a corporation may be formed for any purpose for which natural persons lawfully may associate themselves."

It is apparent upon examination of this section that three questions must always arise in the consideration of the legality of any particular articles of incorporation, viz:

1. Do they seek to authorize the carrying on of professional business?
2. Do they seek to authorize the pursuit of more than one purpose?
3. Is the purpose for which the corporation is formed one for which natural persons, lawfully, may associate themselves?

The above quoted clause, in my opinion, defines a single purpose, and the second of the above questions is not, therefore, raised by it.

The term "professional business" is not defined in the General Code, and the authorities construing the same are meager. It was held, however, in State ex rel. the Physicians' Defense Company v. Laylin, 73 O. S. 90, that a corporate charter which authorized a company to be formed for the purpose of aiding and protecting the medical profession "by the defense of physicians and surgeons against civil prosecutions for malpractice" defined professional business. The relator in this case proposed to conduct its business as stated in its charter, as follows:

"The association shall issue to physicians and surgeons * * * contracts by which it will undertake and agree to defend the holder of the contract at its own expense against any action brought against him for damages for alleged malpractice * * * But the association shall not, in any defense of contract issued by it, assume * * * or pay any judgment for damages * * * rendered against the holder of such contract."

The court, on page 99, employs the following language:

"* * * Is the business in which the Physicians' Defense Company proposes to engage * * * a professional business? This, we think, must be answered in the affirmative. * * * The business * * * proposed is that of defending physicians and surgeons against suits at law that may be brought against them for alleged malpractice. * * * The services necessary to be rendered by the company in the carrying out and performance of its said contract, being such, as in this state, may only be performed by a member of the legal profession * * * who shall be first duly authorized and licensed to perform the same, are professional services, and a business which in its conduct or transaction requires and permits only that character of services is essentially and certainly a professional business. But it is said by counsel * * * that the Physician's Defense Company, being a corporation, an impersonal entity, cannot and does not itself engage in the practice of law, or the management and conduct of defense in suits at law, but in what it does or obligates itself to do, it undertakes only to act as agent of the contract holder in retaining legal counsel and in managing and maintaining the defense of the suits. How else, we may ask, could the corporation, being an impersonal entity, discharge its contractual obligations other than by the employment of natural persons as its authorized agents to carry out and perform its said contract?

"The agents to be employed are and must be attorneys at law, and by the express terms of its contract they are to be employed and paid by the corporation. While, therefore, the services rendered by the persons thus employed are rendered to and in defense of the contract holder, they nevertheless are rendered for and in legal contemplation are performed by the corporation itself. If this be not the engaging in or carrying on of such professional business, then it would be difficult to conceive how professional business could be engaged in or carried on by a corporation. We are of opinion that the business proposed is professional business * * * This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider the further question suggested by counsel * * * viz: That the contract issued * * * is a contract, the making of which is against public policy * * *

The following principles may be deducted from the decision above quoted, although not explicitly set forth therein:

1. A profession is a calling or occupation requiring public authority or license as a condition precedent to its lawful pursuit.

2. When the principal purpose or object of a corporation requires that its business be transacted by agents, who must be so qualified and licensed, such business must be deemed professional and within the prohibition of the statute.

In connection with the decision of the Supreme Court, it is worthy to note that the Physicians' Defense Company, the relator therein, again sought admission to Ohio under an amended form of contract and articles of incorporation. Such altered plan of business as quoted in the report of the attorney general for 1906, page 51, was as follows:

"The business or objects of the corporation which it is engaged in carrying on or which it proposes to engage in or carry on in the state of Ohio, is to aid the medical profession in the practice of medicine and surgery by compensating attorneys and other persons employed by and rendering services to physicians and surgeons in the defense of civil prosecutions for malpractice."

The amended application having been submitted by the secretary of state to the attorney general for his opinion thereon, the attorney general made the following observations with respect to the same:

> "The counsel for the company claim that because the attorneys are not to be employed by the association, but that the employment thereof is to be left to the physician or surgeon holding a contract with the company, hence such provision has removed the criticism made by the court. The corporate articles provide that 'it,' the company, will undertake and agree to defend the holder of the contract, and the purposes as recited in the objects of the corporation contain provision that the company shall pay the attorney so employed.
>
> "The supreme court * * * has severely criticised the payment by the corporation after the employment. In other words, the scheme of the business of assuming to defend malpractice cases and to be responsible for the compensation of the attorneys engaged, is condemned by the court as being professional business * * *
>
> "I am of the opinion that the objections by the supreme court to this scheme have not been removed by the proposed change of plan now presented by this company, and that the scheme is still obnoxious to the criticisms then made * * *"

Referring now to the above quoted articles of incorporation of the Worth McK. Company, it appears that the company seeks authority to do business as agent or broker in the making of contracts. The contracts proposed to be made are contracts for the services of physicians, surgeons, dentists and attorneys, among others; all such persons are of course members of "professions" as impliedly defined in the above quoted decision of the supreme court. If, then, the statement in the first sentence of the articles of incorporation to the effect that the contracts are to be by the company "acting as agent or broker" is borne out by the remainder of the clause, it would seem that the decision above quoted and applied by the attorney general, as herein indicated, would not be applicable; that is to say, if the scheme of business of the company is simply to arrange for a compensation to be paid to it by individuals, contracts for certain kinds of professional services, leaving the payment of the member of the profession and his designation to the individual in each case, such business would be in the fullest sense of the word an agency or brokerage business, and not a professional business.

It is difficult for me, however, to reach the conclusion that the first paragraph of the purpose clause of the articles of incorporation of the Worth McK. Company does accurately describe the relation of the company to those with whom it deals, in pursuance of the scheme of doing business as fully set forth in the succeeding paragraphs of said clause. Two forms of contract are set forth. One purports to be a contract between the corporation and a member of a profession whereby the corporation agrees to pay to the other party a certain salary based upon the number of outstanding certificates issued by the company, and the professional man agrees to render services in consideration thereof to the holders of such certificates.

The certificates thus referred to seem to be contracts between the company and an individual, agreeing to furnish to the individual for a consideration, not named, services of a professional nature.

It appears that under this plan of operation the selection of the member of the profession who shall perform the services which constitute the subject matter of the contract or contracts, is made by the corporation, and that the compensation to be paid for such services is paid by the corporation. It matters not, in my judgment, that the contract entered into between the company and the professional man recites that the corporation shall "act as agent for its certificate holders." This cannot be accurate; it is as accurate to say that under the contract denominated "certificate of membership" the corporation is the principal of the professional man and that they are its agents.

It might be said that the first form of contract set forth in the articles of incorporation constitutes the professional man an independent contractor as distinguished from an agent of the company. However, all these refinements of logic are, in the face of the decision above quoted, beside the mark. Whether the attorneys, physicians, surgeons and dentists whose services are to be contracted for by the company are to be deemed agents or independent contractors, the fact remains that they are to be employed and paid by the company, and that the language of the supreme court in the above quoted case applies exactly to the contract in question.

I therefore conclude that the business proposed to be carried on by the Worth McK. Company is a professional business and that you may not, therefore, file its articles of incorporation.

This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider the other question above suggested as to whether or not this business is one for which natural persons, lawfully, may associate themselves. I may state, however, that the specific question in my mind in this connection is sufficiently answered by the decision of the supreme court in Railway Company v. Volkert, 58 O. S. 362, and that there is no objection to the articles of incorporation on this ground.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

92.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY—OWNERSHIP BY CORPORATION OF STOCK OF OTHER CORPORATIONS.

If, through error, or inadvertency, articles of incorporation have been filed which give the right to own stock of other corporations generally, it would be vain to institute proceedings in the absence of evidence of some user of the illegal franchise.

The secretary of state should not file the articles of incorporation of companies formed under the general corporation laws of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, North Carolina, Nevada or any other state whose laws confer upon its corporation the incidental power of ownership of stock or other corporations generally, unless such corporation expressly renounces this right.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 2, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 27th, enclosing a letter addressed to you by the Corporation Trust Company, in the matter of the proposed amendment of the certificate of incorporation of the American Bridge Company, a foreign corporation, heretofore admitted to do business in the state of Ohio.

The amended certificate of incorporation in question has already been submitted to this department for an opinion thereon as to the legality of that portion thereof which authorizes the corporation to exercise all rights of ownership of shares of capital stock of other corporations generally. I advised at that time that this portion of the amended certificate of incorporation is contrary to the settled public policy of the state, and that a corporation could not be admitted to this state for the purpose of exercising this franchise therein.

It now appears from the letter of the Corporation Trust Company that the objectionable clause has always been in the certificate of incorporation of the American Bridge Company during the entire period within which it has been admitted to do business in Ohio. You suggest that possibly the company is actually exercising in Ohio the powers which it has under this clause of its charter, and that if this is the case, it is violating the law of this state.

I have no means of knowing whether or not this possibility is a fact. The company may have the power to own stocks of other corporations, but may not be exercising it in Ohio, or elsewhere. While the company ought never to have been admitted to do business in Ohio, with this provision in its certificate of incorporation, yet it would be a vain thing to oust it from exercising a franchise which it is not in point of fact exercising; nor would it be worth while to institute proceedings without some proof that the franchise was actually being exercised. If, however, the company is actually exercising this franchise in Ohio, it must cease to do so, and if it refuses it will be my duty, upon a showing that it is exercising this franchise, to institute proceedings in quo warranto against it.

The letter of the Corporation Trust Company further discloses that under section 51 of the general corporation law of New Jersey, quoted in its letter, any corporation formed under the laws of that state may exercise the rights of ownership of the capital stock of any other corporation. The authorities quoted in the letter of the Corporation Trust Company establish the rule that this power inheres in every corporation formed under the laws of New Jersey as an incidental power, and it would seem, regardless of whether or not it is recited in the certificate of incorporation, that is to say, every corporation formed under the general corporation law of the state of New Jersey has the incidental power to own stocks of any other corporation, just as corporations formed under the general corporation laws of the state of Ohio have the incidental power to own shares of capital stock of kindred but not competing corporations. The letter of the Corporation Trust Company also states that provisions similar to those of the New Jersey law are to be found in the corporation laws of Pennsylvania, Delaware, North Carolina and Nevada, and that many corporations of these several states have been admitted to Ohio.

I am not informed as to what has been the practice in the office of the secretary of state, but it is my opinion that in the future, at least, you should not admit a corporation formed under the general corporation laws of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, North Carolina, Nevada or any other state whose laws confer upon its corporations the incidental power of ownership of stocks of other corporations generally, without express disclaimer of this power and right on the part of the corporation so applying. My reasons for recommending this course of action to you are set forth, I think, in the former opinion respecting the matter of the American Bridge Company.

With respect to the amended certificate of incorporation of the American Bridge Company I advise that you do not file the same until a disclaimer, such as that above referred to, is filed by said company.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

96.

INSURANCE COMPANIES—ELECTION OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS—SPECIAL LEGISLATION—REDUCTION OF CAPITAL STOCK OF A LEGAL RESERVE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

The directors and officers of a legal reserve life insurance company cannot be lawfully elected until the entire authorized capital stock is paid in.

Insurance companies are the subject of special legislation and, except when the intention is unmistakable, a general statute referring to ordinary corporations cannot be applied to an insurance company.

A legal reserve life insurance company may not reduce its authorized capital stock.

The fact that among the special insurance statutory regulations provision is made for increase of stock whilst nothing is provided for decrease of stock, supports the construction of the legislative intent to prohibit the reduction of the capital stock.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 3d, enclosing what purports to be a certificate of reduction of the capital stock of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company, a certificate of subscription of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company, seven dollars in currency, a brief on the reduction of the capital stock of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company and a certificate of reduction of the capital stock of the Western Reserve Insurance Company.

You request my opinion as to whether you may lawfully receive and file the certificates of reduction and the certificate of subscription above referred to, which, you state, are submitted to your office for filing. The certificate of reduction of capital stock of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company is upon a printed form of your department, prepared for the convenience of general corporations desiring to reduce their capital stock; it certifies that, at a meeting of the directors of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company, the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of capital stock of said company stood on the books of the company having first been obtained, the capital stock of the company was reduced from five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000.00) to one hundred thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars ($100,950.00). The certificate of reduction of the Western Reserve Insurance Company is similar in form excepting that the resolution of the directors of the company is set forth in full therein. Said resolution is in part as follows:

> "Be it resolved, that said capital stock of the Western Reserve Insurance Company be reduced from three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000.00) to two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00), and that the shares of stock be of the par value of twenty ($20.00) instead of one hundred dollars ($100.00), and that the stock be issued in accordance with said reduction of capital and said reduction as to the par value of shares, and that fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) of the capital stock heretofore subscribed and paid in be used to increase the surplus of the company."

The certificate of subscription of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company is signed by some fourteen incorporators of said company, and certifies that after legal publication of the opening of books of subscriptions to the capital stock had been made as required by law, said books were opened by the incorporators and were kept open "as required by law" until ten thousand and ninety-five (10,095) shares of the capital stock of the company, of the par value of ten dollars each, and of the amount of one hundred thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars ($100,950.00) was subscribed, and until all said capital stock was fully paid for, and that thereupon the incorporators proceeded to organize the company.

In the brief of counsel representing the Great Northern Life Insurance Company it is pointed out that there is no provision of law specifically authorizing legal reserve life insurance companies to reduce their capital stock, and it is contended that section 8700 of the General Code, which is in the chapter relating to the organization and general powers of ordinary corporations, applies to insurance companies and authorizes the reduction of the capital stock of such companies, in accordance with its provisions. Said section 8700 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "With the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of the capital stock thereof, stands on its books, the board of directors of such a corporation (referring evidently to the enumeration in section 8698, General Code, which includes a corporation for profit, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock) may reduce the amount of its capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof, and issue certificates therefor. The rights of creditors shall not be affected thereby, and a certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

Section 8698 of the General Code, which is in pari materia with section 8700, General Code, provides a method for the increase of the capital stock of a corporation for profit or a corporation not for profit. Section 9345, General Code, a section of the chapter relating to the organization and powers of legal reserve life insurance companies, provides a method for the increase of the capital stock of such companies; but, as above stated, there is no corresponding provision relating to the reduction of the capital stock of such companies. The question is thus presented as to whether the absence of such a section, co-ordinate with section 9345, General Code, and corresponding to section 8700, General Code, with reference to the reduction of the capital stock of legal reserve life insurance companies, is to be construed as evidence of a legislative intent to deny to legal reserve life insurance companies the power to reduce capital stock; or, on the other hand as evidence of an intent that the general provisions of section 8700 which, on their face, could be appropriately applied to such companies, govern the same, and authorize the reduction of capital stock by them. In connection with this general question, counsel cite section 8737 of the General Code, a part of the general corporation chapter, in pari materia with section 8700 supra, and which provides:

> "This chapter does not apply when special provision is made in subsequent chapters of this title, but the special provision shall govern, unless it clearly appears that the provision is cumulative."

This section, however, is not decisive in the case, because the question still remains as to whether or not special provision is made for the increase and reduction of the capital stock of legal reserve life insurance companies in the chapter relating to such companies; for it can, with much force, be urged that the increase of capital stock and the reduction of capital stock are matters so related that a special provision with respect to one of them, without a corresponding provision as to the other, would lead to the conclusion that the general assembly intended that the power not enumerated should not be conferred upon the class of corporations especially provided for.

With respect at least to the Great Northern Life Insurance Company, however, an answer to this question is, in my opinion, unnecessary; that is to say, I have chosen first, to ascertain in my own mind, whether or not the Great Northern Life Insurance Company has complied with section 8700, General Code; until it clearly appears that such compliance has been effected, it is manifest that the question as to whether or not section 8700, General Code, applies to the company cannot become material.

Referring now to section 8700 above quoted, it will be observed that the corporation which may, thereunder, reduce its capital stock must be such a corporation as may have directors and stockholders; that is to say, the organization of the company must have proceeded to the point at which the company is legally organized. This is the clearer upon consideration of section 8698, General Code, which provides one method of increase of capital stock, prior to organization, and another after organization. It is clearly the intention therefore of section 8700 that the capital stock of a general corporation may not be reduced prior to the organization of the corporation.

Is the Great Northern Life Insurance Company legally organized? The papers transmitted to me disclose that the authorized capital stock of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company—that is, the amount of capital set forth in its charter, comprised in its articles of incorporation—is five hundred thousand dollars, and that one hundred thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars of said authorized capital stock have been subscribed and paid in.

Section 9342 of the General Code sets forth in great detail the manner in which legal reserve life insurance companies shall be organized. It is as follows:

> "When the signers of such articles (of incorporation) receive from the secretary of state a certified copy thereof, and desire to organize such company, they shall publish their intention in a paper published and having general circulation in the county * * * After the publication has been made for six weeks, they may open books to receive subscriptions to the capital stock, keep them open until the amount required by this chapter is subscribed, distribute the stock among the subscribers, if more than the necessary amount is subscribed, collect the capital and complete the organization of the company."

The certificate of subscription discloses that publication was made in accordance with this section for six weeks, that books for subscription were opened, but that they were closed after $100,950.00 of the capital stock of the corporation was subscribed.

Section 9343 of the General Code provides that:

> "No joint stock company shall be organized under this chapter with less than one hundred thousand dollars capital. Before proceeding to business the whole capital shall be paid in and invested * * *

There are a number of questions involved in the question now under consideration, and arising out of the language of the last two related sections. In order that they may be satisfactorily answered an analysis of these sections is necessary.

It is clear that all the acts contemplated by section 9343 above quoted, are acts of the signers of the articles of incorporation, who may be called, for convenience, the incorporators of the company. These incorporators are required to keep books open until the amount required by the chapter is subscribed. What is the amount required by the chapter?

In a superficial view of the case, it would seem reasonable to suppose that the amount of one hundred thousand dollars, prescribed by the first sentence of section 9343, above quoted, and which is the only amount mentioned in the chapter, is meant by the provision "the amount required by this chapter" in section 9342. This view, however, must be abandoned upon a close analysis of the sections. In the first place, it is to be noticed that the amount of one hundred thousand dollars pertains to and modifies the word "capital" in section 9343. This word is used frequently throughout the chapter. The first occurs in section 9340, in the following connection:

> "* * * The charter shall set forth the name of the company * * * the place where it is to be located, the kind of business to be undertaken, the manner in which its corporate powers are to be exercised, the number of directors * * *, the manner of electing them and other officers, * * * the time of such election, the manner of filling vacancies, the amount of capital to be employed, and such other particulars as are necessary to explain * * * the objects * * * of the company, and the manner in which it is to be conducted.

It is clear that the word "capital" in the context last above quoted, means what is ordinarily and more exactly referred to as authorized capital stock, that is, the aggregate par value of the shares of stock, the right to have which the company acquired by filing its articles of incorporation. It is fair to presume that, unless a contrary intention appears in a succeeding specific section of the chapter, that meaning should be given to the word "capital" as manifestly attaches to it in section 9340. I cannot reach the conclusion that any meaning, other than that suggested, attaches to the word "capital" in section 9343. The primary meaning of the first sentence of section 9343 depends in part upon the word "organized" as used therein. In my opinion, this word does not alone refer to the organization of the company as effected and completed by the election of directors and other officers; it refers to every step required to be taken to put into being a legal reserve life insurance company. As paraphrased then, the sentence would, in my opinion, mean "no joint stock company shall be incorporated under this chapter with less than one hundred thousand dollars authorized capital stock."

But regardless of what may be the meaning of the first sentence of section 9343, General Code, a close examination of the second sentence of section 9342, General Code, will disclose that the phrase "the amount required by this chapter" cannot refer to the sum of one hundred thousand dollars. This whole sentence requires careful analysis, and all of its provisions must be read together. It is to be noted that the books are to be kept open until the required amount is subscribed, and if more than the necessary amount is subscribed the incorporators are to distribute the stock among the subscribers. The plain meaning of this last provision is that if the stock is over subscribed the incorporators shall have the power, and it shall be their duty to distribute the stock as they may deem best among the subscribers; thus, if "A" subscribes for ten shares, and the total stock is over subscribed, it will be necessary, in order that all subscribers may have the benefit of their subscriptions, for the incorporators to allot, say, nine shares to "A." This is what is meant by a distribution of the stock among the subscribers; in fact, it is the only thing that could be meant by this phrase.

It is manifest that if a company has an authorized capital stock of five hundred thousand dollars, such capital stock cannot be over subscribed unless the subscriptions in the aggregate exceed five hundred thousand dollars. It certainly cannot be the intention of section 9342 to authorize the incorporators ratably to distribute the capital stock among the subscribers if the aggregate subscriptions exceed one hundred thousand dollars, unless that sum also represents the total authorized capital stock.

From all the foregoing then, it follows that the incorporators of a legal reserve life insurance company must retain control of the organization of the company until the whole authorized capital stock of the company is subscribed.

This conclusion, however, is supported by other facts apparent upon the fact of sections 9342 and 9343 above quoted. By the former section it is made the duty of the incorporators to "collect the capital;" by the latter section it is provided that "before proceeding to business, the whole capital shall be paid." The word "capital" in this last sentence undoubtedly refers to the authorized capital stock, not only for the reasons above stated, but because the manifest object of this provision is to prevent fraud, through the advertisement by a legal reserve company of a large capital stock, when, in point of fact, it has but a portion of the same paid up. If, therefore, the whole capital must be paid in before the company proceeds to business, and if it is the duty of the signers of the articles of incorporation to collect the capital, then, manifestly, the incorporators must continue to manage the organization of the company until the entire authorized capital stock is paid in. Therefore, directors cannot be elected, certificates of stock cannot be issued, and officers cannot be chosen until the incorporators have collected the entire amount of the authorized capital stock of the company in money.

No construction other than that above indicated will harmonize all the provisions of sections 9342 and 9343 of the General Code. By adopting this construction all such provisions are completely harmonized; thus, it is provided in the last clause of section 9342 that the signers of the articles "shall collect the capital and complete the organization of the company." The entire section (9342) provides a scheme for the organization of legal reserve life insurance companies, and sets forth the steps which are necessary to be taken before the organization can be completed. It is entirely apparent to me that these steps are intended to be sequential, and that the completion of the organization of the company cannot be effected until the capital is collected, which, as above stated, must be the entire authorized capital.

It is equally clear to me that sections 9342 and 9343 of the General Code are special provisions, and that, under section 8737, above quoted, they must be held to supplant entirely, as to legal reserve life insurance companies, the provisions of sections 8630, 8631, 8632, 8633 and 8635 of the General Code. It follows, of course, that not only may not a legal reserve life insurance company organize by the election of directors, when ten per cent. of the capital stock is subscribed and one-tenth of each subscription paid in, as is the case with respect to general corporations, but that there is no provision thereof for the filing by such a company, with the secretary of state, of any such certificate of subscription as is now offered to you for filing by the Great Northern Life Insurance Company.

From all the foregoing it follows that the Great Northern Life Insurance Company has not been legally organized; that it has no stockholders, and no directors or officers legally elected; that the enterprise in the contemplation of the law remains in the hands of the signers of the articles of incorporation; and that, whether or not section 8700 of the General Code applies, its capital stock may not be reduced. I therefore advise as to the certificate of reduction of the capital stock of the Great Northern Life Insurance Company, and the certificate of subscription to the capital stock of the same company, that you do not file these papers.

It does not clearly appear to me from the certificate of reduction of the capital stock of the Western Reserve Insurance Company, whether the entire authorized capital of this company has been paid up or not. It is possible that the organization of this company has been legally completed, and that the sole question with respect to its certificate of reduction is as to whether section 8700 of the General Code applies to legal reserve life insurance companies. If that is the case, the question, suggested in the brief of counsel representing the Great Northern Life Insurance Company, but which, for reasons above stated is not raised by the facts in that case, must be answered. That question, as above stated, is as to whether within the meaning of section 8737 of the General Code a provision for the increase of capital stock of legal reserve life insurance companies is a complete special provision as to changes in the capital stock, or, whether, in the absence of a provision for the reduction of the capital stock of legal reserve life insurance companies, the general provisions of section 8700 apply to such companies.

This question is by no means easy of solution. Excellent reasons can be marshalled in support of either of the two possible conclusions; thus, was urged in the brief of counsel representing the Great Northern Life Insurance Company in view of the fact that the general policy of the state is to confer the right to reduce the authorized capital stock upon all corporations, and this right is not expressly denied to legal reserve life insurance companies, such companies would in the absence of a special provision respecting the reduction of their capital stock, be entitled to proceed under the general corporation law.

The whole matter, however, is one of construction. The intent of the general assembly must be ascertained from an examination of all the provisions relating to legal reserve life insurance companies. Upon such an examination it at once appears that the capital stock of such a company has a different status from that of the capital stock of the ordinary company. The general assembly has seen fit to prescribe what shall be done with the capital stock of a legal reserve life insurance company, whereas it has made no such requirement with respect to the capital stock of a general corporation. It is a familiar fact that the capital stock of a general corporation need never be paid in in cash, and that, so long as the company remains solvent and the rights of creditors do not intervene, subscribers need not be compelled to pay up the amount of their subscriptions. As to legal reserve life insurance companies, however, the situation is entirely different. As is apparent from the above discussion a legal reserve life insurance company may not be organized until the money representing its entire authorized capital stock is in the hands of its incorporators. By section 9343, above quoted, immediately upon organization and before proceeding to any other business, the directors and officers of the company are required to invest the capital in certain ways. The whole authorized capital when paid in, must be invested in "treasury" notes, in stocks or bonds of the United States or state of Ohio, or any municipality or county thereof, or in mortgages on unincumbered real estate, within this state, worth double the amount loaned thereon. Furthermore, one hundred thousand dollars of such securities must, under the provisions of section 9346, General Code, be deposited with the superintendent of insurance, and under section 9307, General Code, the superintendent holds such securities "as securities for policy holders in the company." It is clear from all these facts that the entire subject of the capital stock of legal reserve life insurance companies is one specially provided for by the various related provisions of the chapter relating to such companies. The omission, then, from such chapter of a section or provision authorizing the reduction of the authorized capital stock of such companies cannot be said to permit such companies to reduce their authorized capital stock, under the general provisions of section 8700, General Code. In other words, because of the interrelation of all the sections of the chapter pertaining to the organization of legal reserve life insurance companies, and relating to the capital stock of such companies, the scheme of such sections must be deemed complete in the chapter; and the entire subject is taken, both by implication and by the express provisions of section 8737 out of the scope of the sections relating to changes in the capital stock of general corporations.

In addition to this principle of statutory construction, there would seem to be equities against the contention of the Western Reserve Life Insurance Company, assuming it to be a going concern. It has secured policies and incurred debts upon the faith of an authorized and paid up capital stock of three hundred thousand dollars; it now seeks to transform one hundred thousand dollars of that capital stock into surplus, which may be dissipated by the stockholders and directors of the company at will. The reason, therefore, for the failure of the chapter, relating to organizations of legal reserve life insurance companies, to contain any provision authorizing the reduction of their capital stock, becomes apparent. The whole chapter is designed to secure and preserve what the legislature has deemed the rights of policy holders and creditors; and it is clear in my mind that the omission of such a provision was neither accidental, nor indicative, of an intent to preserve the same power to insurance companies as is conferred upon general corporations by section 8700 of the General Code. The maxim "Expression of one thing is the exclusion of all others" must be applied.

While the foregoing conclusions are manifest, in my opinion, upon the face of the statutes as they are at present phrased, however, I think there can be no dispute that at most the question as to the power of a legal reserve life insurance company to reduce its capital stock is open to doubt. Such doubt warrants an examination of the legislative history of these statutes to the end that the intent of the general assembly may be ascertained.

Both section 8700 and section 8690 of the General Code have been in substantially the form in which they appear in the General Code, since the adoption of the revision in 1880; in that revision the former was section 3264, Revised Statutes, and the latter was section 3592, Revised Statutes; in like manner section 8737, General Code, was section 3269, Revised Statutes. Said section 3264, Revised Statutes, at present section 8700, General Code, was a revision and codification of section 1 of the act of April 3, 1868, entitled "An act to authorize building associations and other companies and associations to reduce their capital stock." Said section 1 provided in part as follows:

> "Any building association, and any other association or company excepting insurance companies now existing or hereafter organized under any law of the state of Ohio, may reduce its capital stock in the manner hereafter mentioned * * *" 65 O. L. 51.

So far as that act was concerned then, the intention to prohibit insurance companies from reducing their capital stock was clearly manifest.

The only other section authorizing the reduction of capital stock, and in effect at the time of the adoption of the Code of 1880, was section 74 of an act of May 1, 1852, 50 O. L. 275-295, providing for the incorporation of various companies not including insurance companies. This section provided in part that:

> "The board of directors or trustees of any company * * * which may hereafter be formed under any law of this state, with the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of the capital stock thereof shall stand on the books of said company, reduce the amount of said capital stock * * *"

At the time of the enactment of the act last mentioned, however, there was no general law in force authorizing the incorporation of insurance companies. The insurance code of this state, or rather the chapter pertaining to the incorporation of legal reserve life insurance companies, was first enacted on April 27, 1872, 69 O. L. 140. The various sections of chapter two of this act have remained in substantially their original form ever since their first enactment. No provision is found therein authorizing insurance companies to reduce their capital stock; and no provision of law was in force prior to the adoption of the Code of 1880, from which such authority might be inferred, unless it be section 74 of the act of 1852, above quoted, which section was passed twenty years before the insurance code was passed. It seems, therefore, very clear to me that, prior to the adoption of the Code of 1880, a domestic life insurance company had no right to reduce its capital stock.

The revision and codification of 1880 did not change the law. It is a fundamental principle of statutory construction that an act passed for the purpose of revising and codifying all or a part of the statute laws of the state is not presumed to change the law; and in case of doubt arising under any provision of such a code, the prior law will be looked to for the purpose of resolving such doubt. When, therefore, the general assembly of 1880 adopted the plan evidenced by sections 3264 and 3269, Revised Statutes, being sections 8700 and 8737, General Code, it must be presumed that it did not intend to confer thereby, upon life insurance companies, a power which they had not theretofore had.

To obviate all doubt I have examined the report of the codifying commission of 1880 to the general assembly, and find that these two sections were adopted by the general assembly as reported by the commission, and that no amendment thereto was adopted by the general assembly in enacting the revision.

I therefore advise that you do not file the certificate of reduction of the capital stock of the Western Reserve Insurance Company. My conclusions of law may be summed up as follows:

1. The directors and officers of a legal reserve life insurance company cannot be lawfully elected until the entire authorized capital stock of the company is paid in.

2. A legal reserve life insurance company may not reduce its authorized capital stock.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

109.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE GREEN TOWNSHIP MUTUAL AID SOCIETY COMPANY—MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES—FEE FOR FILING.

A corporation formed for the purpose of giving aid to its members in case of sickness and death is to be regarded, under 9427, General Code, as a mutual life insurance corporation having no capital stock and must pay a fee of twenty-five dollars.

(See Section 176, General Code.)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 8th, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Green Township Mutual Aid Society Company, a corporation not for profit, the purpose clause of which is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of giving aid to its members in case of sickness or death."

This purpose clause does not disclose the manner in which the business of the company is to be conducted. It conforms substantially to section 9427 of the General Code, which authorizes the organization of mutual protection associations. Under these articles, therefore, a business substantially amounting to an insurance business could be conducted, and inasmuch as the articles specifically provide for the payment of death benefits, the company is in my opinion to be regarded as a "mutual life insurance corporation having no capital stock." As such the fee for filing the articles is twenty-five dollars. (Section 176, General Code.)

I enclose the two dollars in currency, attached to the articles of incorporation, and advise you not to file the articles or accept said fee as the proper filing fee.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

113.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE PLASTERING CONTRACTORS' ASSOCIATION COMPANY — BY-LAWS — CORPORATION FOR PROFIT MAY NOT DETERMINE QUALIFICATIONS OF MEMBERS.

An Ohio corporation may not make rules for the disposition and sale of its capital stock.

A corporation not for profit is not authorized to make rules for the expulsion, suspension and government of its stockholders nor to collect fines and dues from them nor to dispose of the shares of stock of deceased members.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 11, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have handed to me the proposed articles of incorporation of the Plastering Contractors' Association Company, as amended, and request my opinion as to the validity of the fourth section or clause of said articles of incorporation, which is as follows:

> "Said corporation shall have the power to make and adopt a constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations for the admission, suspension and expulsion of its stockholders or members and for their government, for the collection of fines and dues, for the disposition and control of the capital stock of its members and those who may cease to be members by death or otherwise, and for the doing of all other lawful acts incident to its corporate existence, and from time to time, to alter, amend and repeal such constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations."

This section was not considered by me when the articles were first presented to me by you. I confess that my failure to consider this clause was occasioned, not only by the fact that my attention was not specifically directed to it, but by the fact that companies of this kind have generally sought to exercise powers like those attempted to be conferred by said fourth clause, and so far as I am informed have done so without question. Upon careful consideration of the question now presented by you, however, I am of the opinion that the fourth article, insofar as it attempts to enlarge the powers of the corporation with regard to the adoption of by-laws and regulations, is not lawful. Section 8704 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When no other provision is specially made in this title, a corporation by its regulations may provide:
>
> "1. The time, place and manner of calling and conducting its meetings.
>
> "2. The number of stockholders or members constituting a quorum.
>
> "3. The time of the annual election for trustees or directors, and the manner of giving notice thereof.
>
> "4. The duties and compensation of officers.
>
> "5. The manner of election, or appointment, and the tenure of office, of all officers other than the trustees or directors.
>
> "6. The qualifications of members when the corporation is not for profit.

I have sought carefully for any other special provision in the title providing for the organization and powers of corporations generally, and can find no such special provision under favor of which, a corporation for profit, may determine the qualifications of its stockholders. The word "members" as used in the articles of incorporation of the Plastering Contractors' Association Company is meaningless. A corporation for profit cannot have members; this word as used in section 8704 pertains to corporations not for profit.

It is a mooted question as to whether or not corporations for profit may, by by-laws or regulations, lawfully provide the manner in which shares of its stock may be sold by its stockholders; this question has not been adjudicated in this state, but, in the face of the plain provisions of section 8704, General Code, which enumerates the only things which the regulations of a corporation may provide for, and those of section 8702, General Code, which restrict the by-laws to matters "consistent with the regulations," I doubt very seriously the power of an Ohio corporation to impose such restriction in the sale of stock of its members. By section 8682 of the General Code the shares of stock in a corporation are made personal property, and it would seem that to authorize a corporation, without the assent of all stockholders, to prescribe rules for the shares of its stock, such authority must be explicitly stated in the laws pertaining to the organization of such corporations.

In any view of the case, however, it seems clear to me that there is no authority for containing in the articles of incorporation a provision that the corporation shall have power to expel, suspend and govern stockholders, or to collect fines and dues from them, or to dispose of the shares of stock of deceased members. These powers, as suggested by you in your letter, might appropriately be conferred upon and exercised by a corporation not for profit, but not a corporation for profit. Accordingly, I return herewith the proposed articles of incorporation of the Plastering Contractors' Association Company, with check for ten dollars attached thereto, and advise you not to file the same.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

132.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF GERMAN GARDENERS' UNION AND BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATION—MUTUAL PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

The attorney general need not endorse his approval upon articles of incorporation of mutual protective associations in the same manner that he is required by other sections of the insurers' statutes to endorse articles of incorporation.

Fee for filing articles of incorporation of mutual protective association is $25.00.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 24, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I return herewith the articles of incorporation of the German Gardeners' Union and Beneficial Association, the purpose clause of which is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of providing benefits to sick members, and death benefits to the families of deceased members, and promoting the welfare and happiness of its members generally."

This purpose is lawful. It constitutes the company a "mutual protective association" within the intendment of section 9427, General Code. This section and related sections do not provide that the attorney general shall endorse his approval upon articles of incorporation in the same manner that he is required by other sections of the insurance law to endorse articles of incorporation. I have, therefore, not endorsed my approval on these articles.

You state in your letter that the correct filing fee of $2.00 has been paid to your office. Permit me to point out that this is not the correct filing fee. Section 176, General Code, paragraph 5, provides that the fee for filing articles of incorporation of "corporations not organized for profit and not mutual in their character" shall be $2.00; while paragraph 4 of the same section provides that the fee for filing articles of incorporation of a "mutual life insurance corporation having no capital stock" shall be $25.00. The kind of business in which this company proposes to engage is in part life insurance; it is, as above indicated, a "mutual company." I am, therefore, of the opinion that said paragraph 4 governs, and that the proper filing fee for these articles of incorporation is $25.00.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

166.

STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—FEE FOR COMMISSION OF MEMBERS.

Members of State Board of Agriculture receive a compensation as members of the State Board of Live Stock Commission and therefore, under section 139, General Code, are compelled to pay a fee of five dollars for their commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO. March 8, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You inquire whether members of the State Board of Agriculture are required to pay a fee to the secretary of state for the making, recording and forwarding their commissions, etc., as provided by sections 138 and 139 of the General Code.

Section 138 of the General Code provides:

> "A judge of a court of record, state officer, county officer, militia officer and justice of the peace, shall be ineligible to perform any duty pertaining to his office, until he presents to the proper officer or authority a legal certificate of his election or appointment, and receives from the governor a commission to fill such office."

Section 139 of the General Code provides:

> "Except militia officers, each of the officers designated in the preceding section who, for the discharge of his official duty receives any fee, compensation or salary, shall pay a fee to the secretary of state for the making, recording and forwarding his commission before being entitled to receive it. The fee to be paid by each justice of the peace shall be two dollars, and the fee of all such officers, five dollars."

Section 1079, General Code, provides for the appointment of the State Board of Agriculture.

Section 1081 of the General Code provides for the expenses of the members of the Board of Agriculture and expressly provides that they shall receive no compensation for their services as such members of such board. It would seem that they would not come under the provisions of sections 138 and 139 above quoted. However, section 1091 provides that the Ohio State Board of Agriculture shall constitute the State Board of Live Stock Commission, and section 1093, General Code, fixes the compensation of the State Board of Live Stock Commission at $3.00 per day for each and every day they are actually engaged in the investigation and eradication of diseases of domestic animals by direction of the board, etc.

Under the provisions of section 139 above quoted, each officer designated in section 138, General Code, who receives any fee, compensation or salary for the discharge of his official duty must pay a fee to the secretary of state as required by said section.

I am of opinion that because of the compensation provided in section 1093 of the General Code that members of the State Board of Agriculture receive compensation for the discharge of their official duties, and, therefore, are required to pay the fee provided in said section 139.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

196.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE HOLGATE MUTUAL HORSE INSURANCE COMPANY—INSURERS OF HORSES.

The articles of incorporation of the Holgate Mutual Horse Insurance Company do not comply with sections 9510, 9608 and 6609 of the General Code, and therefore cannot be filed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 21st, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Holgate Mutual Horse Insurance Company for such action in the premises as may be proper.

The articles of incorporation in question are in form those of a corporation not for profit and having no capital stock, to be formed for the following purpose:

> "To insure owners of horses against loss from disease, accident, fire, lightning or any cause of death of the horse or horses."

I find myself unable to approve these articles of incorporation as required by section 9512, General Code, for the following reasons. The statutes of this state contemplate the formation of two kinds of companies for the doing of this sort of insurance business, as follows:

1. Those organized under section 9510, the general section authorizing the organization of insurance companies other than life, the third paragraph of which provides as follows:

> "A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to make insurance on the lives of horses, cattle or other live stock against loss by death caused by accident, disease, fire or lightning, and against loss by theft and damage by accident. But such companies shall have a capital stock of one hundred thousand dollars with at least twenty-five per cent. of the capital stock paid up."

2. Mutual live stock insurance companies formed under sections 9608 et seq., of the General Code, the pertinent provisions of which are as follows:

> "Sec. 9608. Any number of persons of lawful age, residents of this state, not less than five, may associate themselves together for the purpose of becoming a body corporate, and insure themselves, and any person becoming a member of such corporation, in accordance with the rules and regulations thereof, against loss from death of domestic animals, and assess upon and collect from each other, such sums of money, from time to time, as are necessary to pay losses which occur from the death of such animals, to any member of the corporation, and incidental expenses * * *

"Sec. 9609. Such person shall make and subscribe a certificate setting forth therein:

"1. The name by which the corporation is to be known.

"2. The place which is chosen as its principal office.

"3. The object of the corporation, which shall only be to enable its members to insure each other against loss from death of domestic animals, and to enforce any contract by them entered into, whereby they specifically agree to be assessed for the payment of losses and incidental expenses."

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

The articles submitted to me do not comply with either of the above quoted provisions. I therefore return them to you advising you not to file or record them.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

211a.

THE OHIO NEWS BUREAU—PAYMENT FOR NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS OUT OF CONTINGENT FUNDS.

Paying for newspaper clippings out of contingent funds is not an act within the prohibition of the general appropriation act of 1910 against the payment for newspapers out of appropriations for contingent expenses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

"I understand that it is the practice of the different departments to pay the Ohio News Bureau an amount monthly for newspaper clipings of items referring to the departments.

"I have examined the different appropriation bills and I find that the appropriation for contingent expenses of the executive department is the only one including newspapers, and that such bills specifically state that no bills for newspapers shall be paid out of the appropriations for contingent expenses.

"Is there any authority for paying the Ohio News Bureau for these clippings?"

It is true as you state that various appropriations made from time to time have contained provisions of which the following, quoted from the so-called "General appropriation act" of 1910, 101 O. L. 177-190, is typical:

"No bills for clerk hire, for furniture or carpets or for newspapers shall be paid out of appropriations for contingent expenses."

I am, however, of the opinion that clipping service, such as that furnished by the Ohio News Bureau, is not within the intendment of such provision. Whatever may be the object of the law, there is a wide distinction between subscribing and paying for a newspaper and subscribing and paying for news clipping service. The construction which I am placing upon the law in complying with your request for an opinion is that which has been followed in this department for a number of years.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

212.

CERTIFICATES OF BIRTH—PAYMENT BY STATE OF POSTAGE EXPENSE INCURRED BY PHYSICIANS AND MIDWIVES.

No moneys may be withdrawn from the public treasury except in pursuance of specific statutory authority nor expended for any purpose not authorized by law.

No statute or law of this state authorizes the state to furnish postage to physicians and midwives for filing certificates of birth.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, submitting the following question for my opinion:

"Is the secretary of state or the registrar of vital statistics authorized to furnish postage at state's expense, to physicians and midwives, for filing certificates of birth?"

Section 218, General Code, provides in effect that, within ten days after a birth, the attending physician or midwife, shall file with the local registrar of the district in which the birth occurred the certificate of birth described in the succeeding section.

Section 12704 makes it a misdemeanor for such physician or midwife or other person charged by law with the responsibility of reporting births to neglect or refuse to file the certificate. I have examined the related sections and find therein no provision authorizing the furnishing of postage to the persons charged with the duty of filing birth certificates. It would be lawful for the state or local registrar to mail blanks to physicians, midwives and others requiring or requesting him, but in the absence of any specific provision I am clearly of the opinion that the expense of filing such blanks properly filled out may not be paid for by the state. It is elementary that money may not be withdrawn from the public treasury except in pursuance of specific statutory authority, nor expended for any purpose not authorized by law. In the case at hand not only do the statutes fail to authorize such an expenditure but, placing as they do the duty of filing birth certificates upon the physicians and others concerned, it must necessarily follow that their intent is that such physicians and other persons shall bear any expense incident to the discharge of such duty.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

A 212.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE L. C. I. MACHINE FABRIC AND RUBBER COMPANY—PURPOSE CLAUSE—"OBJECTS WHICH MAY BE COMBINED"—INCIDENTAL POWERS—"PREFERENCE OF PREFERRED STOCK."

The purpose clause of the articles in question while somewhat verbose in expressing powers which are clearly incidental to its main purpose, nevertheless does not combine objects not permitted and is legal.

The stipulations for premiums on preferred stock over and above 8% are legal as they do not establish a "preference" of more than 8% over other stockholders, within the comprehension of the statute.

The limitation as to preference in the statute is not violated so long as the difference between the dividend paid on preferred stock and that paid on other stock does not exceed 8%.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 23d, enclosing tentative articles of incorporation of the L. C. I. Machine, Fabric & Rubber Company, and requesting my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause and of the provisions which specify the dividend to which holders of preferred stock shall be entitled. The following clauses of the articles of incorporation are called in question by your inquiry:

> "Third. Said corporation is formed for the purpose of acquiring, developing, manufacturing, using, buying and selling specially designed machinery and fabrics constructed therefrom, wherein fibrous material, rubber or other cohesive compositions form the component parts thereof, from which all kinds of articles, substances and things relative thereto can be constructed or manufactured therefrom; and of buying, using, selling and dealing in the same, and of producing, manufacturing, using, buying, selling and dealing in all articles, substances and things which may be required and used in the development thereof, wherein all such products are made therefrom or therewith; and also of buying, using and disposing of all patented inventions and improvements thereon necessary and essential in the production, manufacture, use and sale of all such specially designed machinery, processes and devices, wherein fabrics can be produced therefrom and various articles made thereof; and of acquiring, holding and disposing of all such real estate as may be necessary or convenient to carry on the business herein contemplated and to convey, mortgage, lease, sell or otherwise dispose of the same, and as incidental thereto, of purchasing and otherwise acquiring and holding, shares of the capital stock in any other kindred but non-competing private corporations, whether domestic or foreign.

which may be deemed essential in the carrying out of the aforesaid objects and purposes; and of doing all and everything necessary, suitable, convenient, or proper for the accomplishment of any of the purposes or the attainment of any one or more of the objects herein enumerated or incident to the powers herein named, or which shall at any time appear conducive or expedient for the protection, advancement or benefit of said corporation.

"Fourth. * * * The holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to a dividend of six per cent (6%) per annum, payable semi-annually out of the net surplus profits of the company, the same being in conformity with the laws of Ohio.

"Fifth. The holders of the preferred stock shall also be entitled to further participate in the net surplus earnings of the company after the six per cent. (6%) dividend has been paid on said preferred stock as set forth in the articles of incorporation, fourth paragraph, it being mutually understood and agreed by the holders of the preferred and common stock that such net surplus earnings of the company thereafter shall be divided, apportioned, and paid to the holders of the preferred and common stock on the following basis, to wit:

"A. The preferred stock shall be entitled to further participate in the net surplus earnings of the company and receive an additional dividend of one per cent. (1%) or a total of seven per cent. (7%) after the common stock has been paid four per cent. (4%) and the same is earning equal to five per cent. (5%) per annum.

"B. The preferred stock shall be entitled to further participate in the net surplus earnings of the company and receive an additional dividend of two per cent. (2%) or a total of eight per cent. (8%) after the common stock has been paid five per cent. (5%) and the same is earning equal to six per cent. (6%) per annum.

"C. It is provided that when, in any one year, dividends not exceeding eight per cent. (8%) have been paid the preferred stock and dividends of eight per cent. (8%) have been paid upon the common stock in said year, any net surplus earnings additional thereto of the company for such year shall be divided, apportioned and paid in the following ratio, to wit: One-half (½) of one per cent. (1%) to the preferred capital stock, and one-half (½) of one per cent. (1%) to the common capital stock out of such net additional surplus earnings of the company in that year, and in no other manner shall the preferred stock participate in the net surplus earnings of the company thereafter."

I assume that there is no question as to the propriety of clauses six, seven, eight and nine. Upon careful consideration of the purpose clause of this corporation I am satisfied that while the same is very verbose, it does not state more than a single purpose, that of manufacturing and dealing in machinery, and fabrics constructed therefrom, wherein fibrous material, rubber or other cohesive compositions form the component parts thereof. The other enumerated objects are all expressly made incidental to the principal purpose, and while entirely superfluous cannot be regarded as illegal.

As to the provisions relating to the preferred stock I beg to state that they are essentially similar to those passed upon by Hon. Wade H. Ellis, attorney general, in an opinion to Hon. Carmi A. Thompson, secretary of state, under date of October 29, 1907. (See Annual Report of the Attorney General for that year, page 113.) The principle which my predecessor announced in that opinion is that, under the statutes then in force, any dividend might be paid upon preferred stock, provided that a preference of more than eight per cent. in favor of the preferred stock and against the common stock, should not thereby be created. The material part of this opinion is as follows:

> "The statute, while not expressly authorizing the preferred stock to pro rate with the common stock after the payment of not to exceed eight per cent. on the preferred stock, says only, that preference of more than eight per cent. shall not be created, and notwithstanding the opinion in an early Ohio case (Ryan vs. Little Miami R. R. Co., 6 O. D. Reprint 1071) it has been considered allowable to permit a further distribution of profits to preferred stockholders, limiting, however, the difference between dividends paid to common stockholders and those to preferred to a sum not to exceed 8%." * * *

The statute on which this opinion is based was section 3235a R. S., which provided in part as follows:

> "* * * it may be provided in the articles of incorporation that the holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to dividends not exceeding 8% per annum, payable quarterly, half yearly, or yearly, out of the surplus profits of the company each year in preference to all other stockholders, and such dividends may be made cumulative."

This provision is identical with that of the first sentence of section 8668, General Code. So that the question which you raise is exactly that upon which my predecessor has passed.

I have very carefully considered the provisions of the statute and the opinion to which I have referred, and upon such consideration I concur heartily in the finding thereof. The case cited in the opinion, Ryan vs. Railroad Company, does not, however, in my judgment, militate against the conclusion which Mr. Ellis reached in the matter. The question at issue in that case was not such as to render the remarks of the court directed to this point necessary in the decision thereof.

I may be permitted to add to Mr. Ellis's opinion my own construction of the statute, which is, that the phrase "in preference to all other stockholders" seems, because of the use therein of the word "stockholders" to be out of place. This phrase should follow the word "entitled" which it clearly modifies. The idea of the section is that it may be provided that holders of preferred stock shall be entitled in preference to all other stockholders to dividends not exceeding eight per cent. I do not understand that the statute means that it shall not be recited in the articles of incorporation that holders of preferred stock shall be entitled to other dividends not in preference to all other stockholders. In fact—though it is not necessary in this connection to decide this—I know of no reason why holders of preferred stock should not be considered as stockholders for every purpose whatever, having the additional right to receive preferred dividends up to the amount fixed in the articles of incorporation.

The articles of the L. C. I. Machine, Fabric & Rubber Company do not provide, as above indicated, a preference of more than eight per cent. True, they provide a preference of six per cent., a deferred preference of one per cent., a further deferred preference of two per cent, and a further right to pro rate with the common stock, which is not a preference at all. This matter however, of providing for the preferred stock is in my opinion clearly authorized by section 8669, General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

216.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE TEUTONIA FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY, OF DAYTON, OHIO—POWER TO AMEND.

A fire insurance company which has complied with the General Code laws under 8719 is authorized by this section to amend its articles of incorporation for the purpose of "diminishing" the objects or purposes for which the company was found. And the fact that the special provision mentioned in 8737, General Code, has not been made, does not argue against such right, as it does in the case of legal reserve life insurance companies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 7th, enclosing letter addressed to you by the secretary of the Teutonia Fire Insurance Company, of Dayton, Ohio, in which it is stated that the company desires to amend its articles of incorporation so as to eliminate therefrom a power originally granted to it, to insure a certain class of marine risks and to lend money on bottomry or respondentia. You request my opinion as to whether or not the amendment may lawfully be filed and recorded by you.

The power to amend its articles of incorporation is not expressly conferred upon a company organized under section 9510, General Code, and described in the title as a company for insurance upon property against certain contingencies. However, there is no provision whatever in the chapter in which the section in question is found relating in any way to the amendment of articles of incorporation. The case is therefore different from that of a legal reserve life insurance company, concerning which I recently addressed an opinion to you, and I am of the opinion that section 8737 of the General Code which provides that applies to and governs the matter of the amendment of the articles of incorporation of an insurance company of this class. It follows, therefore, that an insurance company having complied with the general corporation laws of the state embodied in section 8719 et seq., may amend its articles of incorporation.

> "This chapter does not apply when special provision is made in subsequent chapters of this title, but the special provision shall govern, unless it clearly appears that the provision is cumulative."

The amendment under consideration is for the purpose of "diminishing the objects or purposes for which the company was formed" within the meaning of paragraph 3, of said section 8719, and I am of the opinion that it may lawfully be filed and recorded by you.

It is interesting in this connection to note that a part of the objects and purposes sought to be stricken from the articles of incorporation in question are not authorized by section 9510 and section 9511 of the General Code in their present form. That is to say, under section 9511 a company formed for the purpose of insuring houses, buildings and other kinds of property against loss or damage by fire, and making insurance on goods, merchandise and other property in the course of transportation on land, water, or on a vessel, boat or whatever it may be, may not lawfully be authorized to lend money on bottomry or respondentia, etc. There would seem to be some question, therefore, as to whether or not the corporation in question was ever legally authorized to transact the kind of business, authority to transact which, it now seeks to part with.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

221a.

CORPORATIONS — CERTIFICATE OF INCREASE OF STOCK OF THE RIDGELY DECORATIVE COMPANY — POWERS OF AMENDMENT — POWERS TO INCREASE AND DECREASE CAPITAL STOCK, PAR VALUE, AND NUMBER OF SHARES.

A corporation cannot increase or decrease its capital stock by amendment to its articles of incorporation.

Section 8698, however, provides for an increase of the capital stock or of the number of shares. Section 8700 provides for a reduction of the capital stock, and the value of shares, or for the reduction of par value without a corresponding decrease of the capital stock. Neither of the above sections provides for the increase of par value or for a decrease in the number of shares of stock, and as there are no other provisions providing for the same these powers are not conferred.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 14, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, enclosing a document which purports to be a certificate of increase of the capital stock of the Ridgely Decorative Company. Said certificate provides for the increase of the authorized capital stock of the corporation, and for an increase in the par value of the shares thereof. You assume that the change in the par value of the shares amounts to an amendment of the articles of incorporation as distinguished from an increase of the capital stock. You point out that the certificate evidences full compliance with the legal formalities necessary to be observed by the directors and stockholders of a corporation in order to effect the increase of its capital stock, and the amendment of its articles of incorporation; and upon this assumption and these facts you submit for my opinion the following questions:

> "1. Can a corporation increase its capital stock and amend its articles of incorporation by the filing of one certificate, which certificate shows that the law authorizing both the increase of capital stock and amendment of its articles of incorporation, have been complied with, or should two certificates be filed, one showing a compliance with the law authorizing the increase of the capital stock, and the other showing a compliance with the law authorizing the amendment of its articles of incorporation?
>
> "2. If the filing of one such a certificate showing the compliance with the law providing for both the increase of its capital stock and the amendment of its articles of incorporation is sufficient, should this department exact both the fee for filing a certificate of increase of capital stock, and the fee for filing an amendment to articles of incorporation, as provided by paragraphs 2 and 9 respectively of section 176 of the General Code; if not, what fee should be required to be paid?"

Upon examination of the statutes relating to the subject, I find myself unable to agree with you in the assumption that the change in the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation amounts to an amendment of its articles of incorporation. Section 8719 provides what may be accomplished by an amendment of the articles of incorporation, and is as follows:

"A corporation organized under the general corporation laws of the state may amend its articles of incorporation as follows:

"1. So as to change its corporate name—but not to one already appropriated, or to one likely to mislead the public.

"2. So as to change the place where it is to be located, or its principal business transacted.

"3. So as to modify, enlarge or diminish the objects or purposes for which it was formed.

"4. So as to add to them anything omitted from, or which lawfully might have been provided for originally, in such articles. But the capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished, by such amendment, nor the purpose of its original organization substantially changed."

I have carefully considered this section and I do not find in it any authority to change the nominal or par value of the shares of stock of a corporation.

Section 8698 on the other hand provides for the increase of capital stock. It contains inter alia, the following provisions:

"After its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, a corporation for profit, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock, may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which it is divided, prior to organization, by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers. After organization the increase may be made by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock * * * Or the stock may be increased at a meeting of the stockholders * * * A certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

This section expressly contemplates a change in the par value of shares of capital stock of a corporation. It is quite apparent, it seems to me, that the number of shares into which the authorized capital stock of a corporation is divided, cannot be changed, the authorized capital stock remaining the same, without changing the par value of the shares.

Section 8700 provides that:

"With the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of capital stock thereof stands on its books, the board of directors of such a corporation may reduce the amount of its capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof, * * * and a certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

Curiously enough the provisions of section 8700 and of section 8698, insofar as they authorize a corporation to change the nominal value of its shares of stock are exactly the same in effect, although opposite terms are used. The one authorizes an increase in the number of shares without a corresponding increase in the capital stock; the other authorizes a decrease in the par value of shares without a corresponding decrease in the capital stock. Both of them in effect authorize the same thing.

The foregoing analysis of sections 8698 and 8700 has been made for the purpose of disclosing the fact that neither one of them authorizes an increase in the par value of the shares, or a decrease in the number of shares of stock of a corporation. The assumption of your letter is, that such an increase of par value or decrease of the number of shares may be made, but that it must be made by amendment. I have already stated that I found in the section authorizing amendment no authority for making changes in capital stock, either in the amount thereof, or in the par value of shares, and the number thereof. That such a change cannot be made by amendment seems to me the more certain upon consideration of sections 8698 and 8700. These two sections constitute a scheme whereby corporations may make changes in their capital stocks. It seems to me that the intention is to provide for every change which may be made, and that when a possible change is found to be omitted from these sections, such omission must be deemed to withhold from the corporation the power to make the change in any manner, by amendment or otherwise.

Whatever may be the policy of these statutes in these respects, and whether or not they are founded upon considerations of public policy, I do not think it can be held that the omission was by accident. I am firmly of the opinion that no corporation has the power to increase the par value of its shares or decrease the number of shares into which its capital stock is divided.

To summarize them, my conclusions of law are that if a corporation desires to increase its total authorized capital stock it must at the same time increase the number of shares into which such stock is divided; if such an increase of the number of shares occurs as an incident to an increase in the capital stock itself, one certificate—that provided for by section 8698—is sufficient, and that is the certificate provided for by paragraph 2 of section 176 of the General Code. If a corporation desires to reduce its capital stock, it may at the same time reduce the par value of the shares; and here again one certificate—that provided by paragraph 7 of section 176—is sufficient. If a corporation desires to increase the number of shares without changing the total capital stock, this may be done both under section 8698 and section 8700, but the certificate filed in either case is that, the fee for which, is prescribed by paragraph 12 of section 176. No corporation may lawfully increase the par value of its shares of stock as an incident to an increase in the total authorized capital stock. In fact, no corporation has any power whatever to increase the par value of its shares. As to whether or not a corporation, in reducing its capital stock, may decrease the number of shares into which it is divided, I make no holding.

For the foregoing reasons I advise that you do not accept the certificate of the Ridgely Decorative Company, because of the fact that it attempts to increase the par value of the shares of stock of said company.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

223.

CORPORATIONS—CERTIFICATE OF INCREASE OF PREFERRED STOCK OF THE NORTHERN OHIO TRACTION AND LIGHT COMPANY.

A certificate of increase of preferred stock as provided for in section 5699, General Code, must show upon its face that its original capital stock is fully subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. on each share has been paid in as laid down in section 8698, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of April 14th received. You state:

> "Section 8698 of the General Code, 1910, provides, in part, that
>
> " 'After its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, a corporation for profit, * * * may increase its capital stock,' etc.
>
> "Section 8699 of the General Code, 1910, provides that:
>
> " 'Upon the assent in writing of three-fourths in number of the stockholders of a corporation, representing at least three-fourths of its capital stock, to increase the capital stock, it may issue and dispose of preferred stock in the manner by law provided therefor,' etc.
>
> "The accompanying certificate of increase of capital stock of the Northern Ohio Traction and Light Company, upon a comparison with the said section 8699 of the General Code, will be found to contain all that is contained in said section, and in addition thereto, conforms, in part, to some of the conditions contained in said section 8698 of the General Code."

And inquire:

> "Please advise this department in writing, whether said certificate of increase of capital stock is regular in the form presented, or whether it should contain, in addition, another part of section 8698, namely, that the original capital stock was fully subscribed for and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock had been paid thereon, as is provided for at the beginning of section 8698, quote above?"

The gist of your inquiry is, whether or not section 8699 is to be interpreted standing alone, or whether you are to look to section 8698 as a guide to its meaning?

I am of the opinion that section 8699 must be read in the light of section 8698, and that before there may be an increase by preferred stock, all of the original capital stock must be subscribed for and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock fully paid. The language "upon the assent in writing of three-fourths in number of the stockholders of a corporation, representing at least three-fourths of its capital stock," unquestionably means three-fourths in per cent. of its capital stock upon the basis of one hundred per cent. The order in which the statutes occur sustains this theory. Moreover, it is not reasonable that there might be an increase by preferred stock by conforming to fewer requirements than that required for an increase of capital stock.

I therefore hold that the certificate of increase of capital stock of the Northern Ohio Traction and Light Company is irregular in the form presented, and in order to make it regular it should contain a statement that the original capital stock was fully subscribed and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock had been paid thereon as is provided for in section 8698 of the General Code.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 280.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE TOLEDO GLASS INSURANCE ASSOCIATION—MUTUAL PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATIONS OTHER THAN LIFE—LIMITATIONS—MUTUAL PROTECTIVE STOCK COMPANIES.

Mutual protective associations may be formed for the purpose of insuring against only such risks as are enumerated in section 9593.

Stock companies governed by a board of directors may however insure against loss to property from causes other than fire or lightning.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 27, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 23d enclosing for my consideration the proposed articles of incorporation of the Toledo Glass Insurance Association, which said proposed articles of incorporation are in part as follows:

> "These articles of incorporation of the Toledo Glass Insurance Association witnesseth, that we, the undersigned, all of whom are citizens of the state of Ohio, desiring to form a corporation, not for profit, under the general corporation laws of said state, do hereby certify:
>
> "First. The name of said corporation shall be the Toledo Glass Insurance Association.
>
> "Second. Said corporation is to be located at Toledo, in Lucas county, Ohio, and its principal business there transacted.
>
> "Third. Said corporation is formed for the purpose of enabling its members to insure each other against loss by accidental breakage to glass wherever located, and to enforce any contract by them entered into whereby the parties thereto agree to be assessed specifically for incidental purposes and for the payment of losses which occur to members."

An analysis of the foregoing articles discloses that it is evidently intended to form what is designated in the General Code of this state as a "mutual protective association other than life." The business is to be conducted not for profit and the members are required to enter into contracts, agreeing to be assessed specifically for incidental purposes and for the payment of losses. The validity of the articles, therefore, are to be measured by section 9593 General Code, the first sentence of which is as follows:

> "Any number of persons of lawful age, not less than ten in number, residents of this state, or an adjoining state, and owning insurable property in this state, may associate themselves together for the purpose of insuring each other against loss by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes or wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas, on property in this state, and also assess upon and collect from each other such sums of money, from time to time, as are necessary to pay losses which occur by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes, wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas to any member of such association."

* * *

Section 9593 has been twice amended since its original enactment as a section of the General Code, but neither of these enactments in any material respect changes the above quoted language.

It is to be observed that while any property or class of property may be insured by a mutual protective association it is not every risk or class of risks that may be insured against but only loss by fire, lightning, cyclone, tornadoes, wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas.

The articles of incorporation of the Toledo Glass Association on the other hand seek to authorize the association to insure against any loss by accidental breakage to glass.

In my opinion, therefore, the articles of incorporation measured by section 9593 are invalid. That is to say, a mutual protective association may not be organized under the laws of Ohio for the purpose of insuring the members mutually against any loss which may occur with respect to a specific class of property but only against loss by the causes specified in section 9593.

Section 9510 authorizes the formation of companies for the purpose of making insurance against loss or damage resulting from loss to property from causes other than fire or lightning. Such companies, however, must be stock companies, governed by a board of directors, as is apparent from a consideration of section 9512, etc., in pari materia with section 9510.

Furthermore such stock companies may not insure against any accidental loss of property but only against accidental loss arising from causes other than fire or lightning. This follows because of the provisions of section 9511 General Code.

Because, therefore, the articles of incorporation under consideration do not witness the formation of a stock company, and because further they do not except loss from fire or lightning from the accidents proposed to be insured against by the company, I am of the opinion that the articles of incorporation cannot be filed under section 9512 General Code.

For all of the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that you may not file or record the proposed articles of incorporation of the Toledo Glass Insurance Association.

I herewith return said proposed articles.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 301.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION ELECTION—GENERAL ELECTION—CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

The question of a constitutional convention should not be submitted at any election held in the year 1911.

The correct and essential grammatical intendment of Article XVI, section 3, of the constitution of 1851 is that the question of a constitutional convention shall be submitted at the general election of every twentieth year after such election of 1871; i. e., the election at which state officers and members of the general assembly are determined.

Mere dates and periods are "subsidiary" to the general framework, and the requirement that the above question shall be submitted at a general election is controlling as against the direction that such question shall be presented at strict intervals of twenty years.

Article XVII, passed in 1905, and known as the "Biennial Election Amendment," causing general elections to be held in the odd instead of the even years, works a repeal of former constitutional provisions which are inconsistent therewith.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 20, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 17th, in which you request my advice as follows:

> "Please advise this department if at the election to be held in November, in the year 1911, the question 'Shall there be a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution' shall be submitted to the electors of the state, as provided in section 3, Article XVI, of the constitution of Ohio?
>
> "Also please advise this department if the manner of electing the members of the constitutional convention, as provided in Senate Bill No. 15, is contrary to the provisions of section 2 of Article XVI of the constitution of Ohio, wherein it is provided that such members 'shall be chosen in the same manner' as members of the house of representatives."

Section 3 of Article XVI of the constitution of Ohio to which you refer in your first question provides in part as follows:

> "At the general election, to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in each twentieth year thereafter, the question 'Shall there be a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution,' shall be submitted to the electors of the state; * * *

Your question is of practical importance because in the event of the foregoing provision being held to require a submission of the question therein set forth to the electors of the state on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1911, an anomalous situation will be presented to-wit: The electors will be called upon to vote at the same election for delegates to a constitutional convention already called under section 2, Article XVI of the constitution, and at the same time "to vote upon the question upholding another convention for the same purpose."

This peculiar situation would seem almost to justify a holding that the submission of the question under section 3 of Article XVI of the constitution would be entirely superfluous and that the intention of the adopters of the constitution of 1851 could not have been that said question should be submitted under section 3, as all events regardless of a prior determination of the electors under section 2 of Article XVI to hold a convention for the purpose of revising, altering or amending the constitution at a time practically co-incident to a time when a convention as ordered under section 3 would have to be held.

It is a dangerous thing to decide a question of such importance on the grounds of expediency. Fortunately in the case presented there is no necessity for resting a conclusion in the matter upon such an unstable foundation.

It will be observed that the mandate of the above quoted provision of section 3 is that, the question therein set forth shall be submitted "at the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in each twentieth year thereafter." The primary grammatical construction of this phrase is that which requires the phrase "in each twentieth year thereafter" to be regarded as co-ordinate with the phrase "in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one," and accordingly as modifying the same phrase, viz: "to be held." The phrase "to be held" in turn modifies the word "election" so that the grammatical analysis of the clause in question leads to the following as a complete paraphrase thereof: "At the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one and at the general election to be held in each twentieth year thereafter, the question: 'Shall there be a convention * * *' shall be submitted to the electors of the state."

Nor is this manifest correction of the grammatical construction inconsistent with the obvious intent of the adopters of the constitution of 1851 as indicated thereby. Weight must be given to every word found in the context of a constitutional provision. None are deemed superfluous or unimportant. Now it was evidently the intention of the electors of 1851 that the first periodical resubmission of the question as to the policy of holding a convention to revise the constitution shall be at a particular election, viz: the general election to be held in the year 1871. The choice of the electors of 1851 fell upon the general election of 1871 to the conclusion of any other election which might be held in that year. This follows by necessary inference; that is to say, it expressly respects the first resubmission to be at the general election of 1871. The electors of 1851 clearly indicate that they did not intend that the first resubmission should be held at a special election to be held in the year 1871, or at any local election, though simultaneous throughout the state, which might be held in that year unless the phrase "the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one" was without a definite meaning at that time. If this phrase did have an ascertained meaning, in the light of the remaining provisions of the constitution of 1851, that meaning must be given to it in this clause.

Now the phrase "the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one" did have a definite meaning at the time of the adoption of the constitution. Sections 2, 3 and 4 of the schedule of the constitution of 1851 required the first election for members of the general assembly, the executive officers of the state and the judicial officers of the state and the districts thereof to be held "on the second Tuesday of October, 1851." Each of these several officers were given terms, an even number of years, to commence in January next after the election. (Art. 2, Sec. 2; Art. 3, Sec. 2, except as to common pleas judges; Art. 4, Sec. 12.)

In 1895 the date of the fall election for state officers was changed to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November. (82 O. L., 446.)

It is apparent, therefore, that the adopters of the constitution of 1851 contemplated the election which should be the general election throughout the state, and which would have been held in the year 1871—not some special election throughout the state, nor any series of local elections which might be held at the same time throughout the state in that year. It is not difficult to find the motive for fixing upon the general election. It is a notorious fact that because of the added interest in such elections many more votes would likely be cast thereat than at a special or local election although held throughout the state at the same time.

It is, therefore, very clear that by the phrase "at the general election to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one" the adopters of the constitution of 1851 contemplated the fall election (then held in October) for state officers and members of the general assembly, and that this intention precluded the submission of such a question at any special or local election.

There would be no reason whatever for holding that the submission of 1871 did not extend to the resubmission of the same question at succeeding intervals of twenty years; that is to say, that it would be unreasonable to suppose that the adopters of the constitution of 1851 intended particularly to require that the question be submitted in 1871 at the election for state officers and at the same time state that the submission in the year 1891 might be made at a special election or at that election (then held in the spring) for local officers. It would be most reasonable to presume that the electors of 1851 cherished the same intention with respect to all resubmissions. Thus the primary grammatical construction of the first phrase of section 3 of Article XVI of the constitution as above analyzed becomes the only construction consistent with reason.

From all the foregoing, then, it follows that the requirements that the mandatory periodical resubmission of the question of holding a convention to revise the constitution be at the election at which state officers and members of the general assembly are determined is the essential requirement of the said section.

In 1905 the electors adopted what is known as Article XVII of the constitution and which has been frequently referred to as the "biennial election amendment." Without quoting all of the provisions of this article, which consists of three sections, suffice it to say that it changes the year in which the general election for state officers and members of the general assembly shall be held from the odd numbered years to the even numbered years. Accordingly, it is obvious there will be no such "general election" in the year 1911 as was contemplated by the adopters of the constitution of 1851 and referred by them in the first phrase of section 3 of Article XVI.

What, then, was the effect of the adoption of Article XVII upon section 3 of Article XVI? In State ex rel. v. Creamer, 83 O. S., the supreme court of this state held in effect that Article XVII is capable of working a repeal by implication of such sections of the original constitution of 1851 as might be inconsistent or inharmonious with its requirements.

In like manner, the effect of the article in question upon a given section of the constitution might be more properly defined in a given case as that of implied amendment.

The same case—State ex rel. v. Creamer—is authority for the contention that in the constitution of 1851, mere dates or periods, at which governmental acts are required by the original constitution to be performed, are subsidiary to the general frame work of the government erected by the whole instrument and where a change is effected in the latter by means of a constitutional amendment, the former, being regarded as non-essential, is to yield. In the Creamer case the specific holding was that the provision "that all regular sessions of the general assembly shall commence on the first Monday of January. The first session under this constitution shall commence on the first Monday of January, 1852." Insofar as it might be construed to create a biennial sequence of the regular sessions to be held in even numbered years it was amended or repealed by implication by the adoption of Article XVI requiring state officers and members of the general assembly to be elected in even numbered years for terms to begin in January of odd numbered years.

The courts found the interrelation of the constitutions to be such that the real intent of its framers and adopters was to make the commencement of the regular session of the general assembly dependent upon the commencement of the terms of the executive officers of the state, and that the express requirement as to holding the regular sessions biennially beginning with the year 1852 ought to yield to such controlling intent.

So, in the case you submitted, the controlling intent is that the submission of the question shall be at an election for the state officers and the members of the general assembly; the subsidiary intent is that such submission shall be at periods of twenty years, and the other essential provision is that such twenty-year periods begin with the year 1871.

It follows then that upon a careful consideration of the intent of section 3 of Article XVI and of the effect thereon of Article XVII as established by analogy from the decision of State ex rel. v. Creamer, the question "Shall there be a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution" ought not to be submitted to the electors at any election held this year. Whether or not such question should be submitted to the electors at the general election to held in the year 1912 is a matter upon which my opinion is not solicited and as to which no opinion is expressed.

As to your second question, I beg to state that the same was submitted to me by the author of the act to which you refer therein, and an opinion was rendered to him thereon on February 10, 1911. I enclose you a copy of this opinion which fully answers the question asked by you.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

323.

PRIMARY ELECTIONS — QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTER — AFFILIATION WITH PARTY.

The fact that a voter has not previously affiliated himself with the party whose ticket he desires to vote shall be cause for challenge at a primary election.

Under section 4982, General Code, the judges at the election in question have a wide discretion and are sole masters of the question whether or not said voter has affiliated with his party at the last general election.

Their judgment shall be determined when the individuals vote at said election. It should at least be shown that said elector cast his vote for his party's candidate for congress, for state senator and representatives, and for a majority of the state ticket.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 12, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication to me of August 11th you state:

> "According to the provisions of section 4980 et seq., it is provided, in substance, that a voter at the primary election shall have previously affiliated with the party whose ticket he now desires to vote and that affiliation shall be determined by the vote of the elector making application to vote at the last general election held in even numbered years."

And you ask for my opinion:

> "As to what extent the voter shall have previously voted the party ticket that he may be held to have affiliated with such party."

Section 4980 of the General Code which provides who may vote at primary elections, is as follows:

> "At such election only legally qualified electors or such as will be legally qualified electors at the next ensuing general election may vote and all such electors may vote only in the election precinct where they reside, and it shall be the duty of the challengers and of the judges, and the right of any elector, whenever there is reason to doubt the legality of any vote that may be offered, to interpose a challenge. The cause of a challenge shall be: That the person challenged has received or been promised some valuable reward or consideration for his vote; that he has not previously affiliated with the party whose ticket he now desires to vote. Affiliation shall be determined by the vote of the elector making application to vote, at the last general election held in even numbered years."

Section 4982 of the General Code specifies when the vote of a person desiring to vote at such primaries shall be rejected, and is as follows:

> "If a person challenged refuses to be sworn, or being sworn, refuses to answer any questions, or if his answers show that he lacks any of the qualifications herein required to make him a legal voter at such primary election, his vote shall be rejected. The judges, or either of them, shall have the power to make further investigations, and he or they may call and examine witnesses as to the qualifications of the person challenged, and, if the judges of the party to which the person asking the ticket claims affiliation are not satisfied that he is a legal voter under this chapter, they shall reject his vote."

I wish to call your special attention to the last paragraph of said section 4982, especially the last clause of said paragraph:

> "If the judges of the party to which the person asking the ticket claims affiliation are not satisfied that he is a legal voter under this chapter, they shall reject his vote."

From this language of section 4982 it seems clear that if the judges of the party to which the voter claims affiliation are not satisfied that the voter has complied with all the essentials necessary to entitle him to vote as provided in section 4980, they have full power to reject his vote. In other words, they have a wide discretion in the matter, their decision is final, and it is necessary for the person desiring to vote to satisfy them that he possesses the necessary qualifications provided by section 4980, and, therefore, he must satisfy said judges that he has in fact previously affiliated with the party whose ticket he desires to vote.

It seems to me, therefore, that the only restriction upon the judges in satisfying themselves whether or not the person desiring to vote has affiliated with the party whose ticket he proposes to vote, is that they shall determine said fact, as provided in section 4980, from the vote of said person at the last general election held in the even numbered years.

Further than specifying that they must so determine this fact from the vote of the elector at said last general election the statute is silent, and, therefore, it must necessarily be held that said judges have the final authority to determine from the manner in which the applicant voted whether he thereby affiliated himself with the party whose ticket he now desires to vote. This matter being left solely to the discretion of the judges, I take it that no ruling by yourself or by me as to the extent to which the voter shall have previously voted the party ticket to entitle him to be classed as affiliated with the party, would be binding upon said judges. Whatever ruling might be made would simply have the force of a suggestion which the judges should follow in determining this question; and as it is almost universal that the vote of each man is influenced by circumstances and conditions applying to him individually, and which properly would not apply in toto to any other particular voter, it follows that the question as to the affiliation of each man desiring to vote must be determined by the judges from the peculiar facts relating to his individual vote. As a general rule to apply to all cases, and which in view of what I have stated above, would not and could not be an inflexible rule, I would say that a person could only be held to be affiliated with a party when his vote showed that he thereby endorsed and advocated the principles of the party with which he claims to be affiliated. That is, his vote must show that he has an individual interest in the success of that party at the polls and in the enactment of its principles. This I think would be shown by the vote of the individual for the majority of the state ticket of a party and for the candidate of said party for congress, and for state senator and representative; anything less than this would be insufficient to indicate that a man had affiliated with a party. I think that in determining this question the vote of the individual for the county ticket, except for state representative and state senator could possibly be disregarded, but that he must at least vote for the candidate of said party for congress, state representative and senator and a majority of the state ticket.

I further think that the applicant should have an opportunity to explain his vote, and finally as above stated his vote must clearly indicate that it was cast from principle and conviction, and was not influenced by local issues, enmity for candidates, personal friendship or spite.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

335.

ILLEGALITY OF CERTIFICATE OF REDUCTION OF CAPITAL STOCK OF THE WESTERN RESERVE INSURANCE COMPANY—FIRE INSURANCE.

The provisions of the General Code in reference to domestic fire insurance companies are similar to those respecting legal reserve life insurance companies.

Such companies are subject to special provisions and cannot be permitted to reduce their capital stock under the general incorporation statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 24th, submitting for my opinion, as to the duty of the secretary of state in the premises, a certificate of reduction of the capital stock of the Western Reserve Insurance Company, a domestic fire insurance company, sent to you for the purpose of filing the same. You also ask as to the proper fee to be charged in case it is the duty of the secretary of state to file the proposed certificate of reduction.

The certificate in question shows on its face, compliance with section 8700 of the General Code, which said section authorizes corporations, formed under the general corporation laws of the state, to reduce the amount of their capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof, by proceeding in a certain manner. If this section applies to domestic fire insurance companies the question is an easy one.

If this section does not apply to such companies, a question of some difficulty is presented, inasmuch as in the chapter relating to the powers of such company is found a section expressly authorizing an increase of capital stock, but not authorizing such companies to decrease their capital stock. (Section 9531, General Code.)

There is, of course, a general provision (section 8737, General Code), which discloses that the legislative policy of the state with regard to the powers of corporations is that the general laws shall apply unless it is apparent that a special provision relating to a certain class of corporations is intended to apply.

In this connection I have carefully read the brief courteously furnished to me with regard to the matter, by counsel for the company, in which it is urged that the general law applies.

Upon careful consideration of the points enumerated by counsel, however, I am of the opinion that section 8700 of the General Code does not cover the Western Reserve Insurance Company, and that the certificate offered you for filing may not lawfully be filed by you.

Let me recall the fact that on February 4, 1911, I addressed to you an opinion upon your duty as to the filing of this very certificate of reduction, in which I held that you should reject the same. At the time I was under the impression that the Western Reserve Insurance Company was a legal reserve life insurance company, and the observations of the opinion are based upon this assumption. Having carefully examined the General Code, however, I find that its provisions with regard to the powers of domestic fire insurance companies are in all essential respects similar to those respecting legal reserve life insurance companies; and that the history of legislation with respect to the two classes is practically the same. The reasons, therefore, stated in my former opinion, apply as well to the case of a fire insurance company as to that of a legal reserve life insurance company.

To recapitulate, these reasons are as follows:

1. The provision as to the increase of capital stock, found in section 9531, General Code, is to be regarded as a complete exhaustion of the legislative intent, so to speak, regarding changes in the capital stock of fire insurance companies. The case is one, therefore, where there is a special provision which controls to the exclusion of the general provision of section 8700.

2. All provisions respecting the capital stock of fire insurance companies are essentially dissimilar from parallel provisions respecting the capital stock of general corporations. The former is required to be paid in and invested in a certain manner before the company may begin business; the latter need not be paid in, in full, nor is there any requirement as to investment before proceeding to business. This distinction makes it clear that the legislature intended to deal separately with the whole subject of the capital stock of fire insurance companies.

3. There are stronger equities against holding that a fire insurance company may not reduce its capital stock than there are in favor of such a holding, and than there would be in case of a reduction of the capital stock of an ordinary corporation. In this connection I am informed by counsel that the stockholders have agreed among themselves that the amount of paid up capital stock proposed to be surrendered by them shall go into the surplus of the corporation, subject to the claims of creditors and policy holders. This agreement, however, is entirely extra legal, so far as the relation of the corporation to the state is concerned. If an insurance company might act at all under section 8700 it would have the power simply to present to its stockholders a part of their paid up capital, so long only as actual creditors were not prejudiced. The intent of the insurance law on the other hand is, not only that creditors having actual claims, shall be secured, but that policy holders, the claims of whom are merely contingent, shall also be secured.

4. The legislative history of section 8700 clearly discloses that when it was first passed it was not intended to apply to any kind of an insurance company (65 O. L. 51). Since the passage of this act the section has not been amended except in process of codification, insofar as any such amendment affects the question at hand. The principle of statutory construction is that verbal changes made in process of codification are not deemed to have been made with intent to change the meaning of a statute. Therefore, section 8700 is to be construed now in the light of the express language used at the time of its original enactment, which was in part as follows:

> "Any * * * company, excepting insurance companies, now existing or hereafter organized under any law of the state of Ohio, may reduce its capital stock in the manner hereafter mentioned." * * *

This last consideration alone is sufficient upon which to base an opinion that a domestic fire insurance company has no right to reduce its capital stock.

I herewith return the certificate of reduction in question.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

347.

FRATERNAL ASSOCIATION—COMPLIANCE WITH MUTUAL BENEFIT INSURANCE PROVISIONS—EXCEPTIONS THERETO.

A fraternal order having power to render aid or assistance to its members but lacking the power to issue insurance certificates, is within the exception provided for in section 29 of the act of June 19, 1911 (102 O. L. 533), and such company need not be incorporated by the filing of articles of incorporation with the superintendent of insurance.

The averment that a society is organized for the benefit of its members by aiding them in sickness, distress and death is an absurdity which should be amended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 7, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 1st, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of the Independent Order of Rangers, and requesting my opinion as to your duty to file such articles in the form in which they are presented to you, and as to the proper fee for filing the same, if they should be filed at all, is received.

The articles seek to form a corporation, not for profit, for the following purpose:

"Conducting and operating a voluntary fraternal association, not for profit, having a representative form of government, to be organized and conducted solely for the mutual benefit of its members, and having a supreme governing or legislative body and subordinate lodges into which members are elected and initiated or admitted in accordance with its constitution, laws, rules, regulations and prescribed ritualistic ceremonies, which subordinate lodges must meet in regular session at least once during each month, with power and authority to render aid and assistance to its members in distress, sickness and death; provided, however, that neither the supreme governing body nor any subordinate lodge shall issue an insurance certificate."

The act of June 19, 1911 (102 O. L. 533), applies to and governs the organization of fraternal benefit societies, so-called, and probably repeals by implication sections 9462 to 9509, General Code, which said sections formerly applied to and governed the subject-matter.

Section 1 of said act provides in effect that any corporation without capital stock, organized for the mutual benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit, and having a lodge system with ritualistic form of work, and which shall make provisions for the payment of benefits in accordance with section 5 of the same act, shall be deemed to be a fraternal benefit society.

Sections 2 and 3 of said act define the phrase "lodge system" and "representative form of government" as used throughout the act and in section 1.

Section 4 provides that:

"Except as herein provided, such societies shall be governed by this act, and shall be exempt from all provisions of the insurance laws of this state, * * *"

Section 5 of the act provides that:

"Every society transacting business under this act shall provide for the payment of death benefits."

And prescribes in detail the manner of exercising this power.

Section 6 prescribes who shall be the beneficiary, and by inference provides that each member shall have issued to him a certificate entitling such beneficiary to such benefits.

Section 8 further provides for the form of such certificate.

Sections 9, 10 and 11 govern the fiscal management of fraternal benefit societies.

Section 12, which is particularly to be considered in connection with your question, provides for the organization of fraternal benefit societies in the following language:

"Seven or more persons, citizens of the United States, and a majority of whom are citizens of this state, who desire to form a fraternal benefit society, as defined by this act, may make and sign (giving their addresses) and acknowledge before some officer competent to take acknowledgment of deeds, articles of incorporation, in which shall be stated:

"1st. The proposed corporate name of the society. * * *

"2d. The purpose for which it is formed * * * and the mode in which its corporate powers are to be exercised.

3d. The names, residences and official titles of all the officers, trustees, directors or other persons who are to have and exercise the general control and management of the affairs and funds of the society for the first year. * * *

"Such articles of incorporation * * * shall be filed with the superintendent of insurance" * * *

Section 29 of the act provides in part as follows:

"Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to effect or apply to grand or subordinate lodges of Masons, Odd Fellows or Knights of Pythias * * * and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics * * * or the National Council Daughters of America Benefit Department, or societies which limit their membership to any one hazardous occupation, nor to similar societies which do not issue insurance certificates" * * *

Section 8623, General Code, provides that:

"Except for carrying on professional business a corporation may be formed for any purpose for which natural persons may lawfully associate themselves."

The corporation proposed to be formed through the filing of the articles proffered to you is not given the power to issue insurance certificates. It or its subordinate lodges are given power to render aid or assistance to its members. Lacking the power to issue certificates and being a fraternal order, the association, in my opinion, is a "similar society which does not issue insurance certificates" within the meaning of section 89 of the act above quoted. That being the case the remaining provisions of the act, some of which are also quoted in this opinion, do not apply to this proposed order, and therefore it need not be incorporated by the filing of the articles of incorporation with the superintendent of insurance.

Said section 29 implicitly recognizes the lawful existence of fraternal orders other than fraternal benefit societies within the meaning of the act, I know of no reason why the formation of such fraternal order should be deemed other than a purpose for which persons lawfully may associate themselves, within the meaning of section 8623, General Code. That is to say, I believe that a fraternal order other than a fraternal benefit society may lawfully be incorporated under the general laws of the state as a corporation not for profit by filing articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. In general then, the procedure adopted by the incorporators of this proposed fraternal order is legal. I doubt, however, whether you ought to file the particular articles offered to you for that purpose unless the word "death" is eliminated therefrom or the last phrase in which it is found is amplified and is less ambiguous than in its present form. The purpose clause of the corporation provides that the association or its subordinate lodges (it is not exactly clear as to which is meant) shall have the power and authority to render aid and assistance to its members in distress, sickness and death. It is also provided that the association shall be a "voluntary fraternal association * * * to be organized and conducted solely for the mutual benefit of its members." These two phrases read together lead to an absurdity. Strictly speaking they mean that the association is organized for the benefit of its members and may render them aid and assistance in death.

The draftsman of the articles probably intended that the association should have the power to render financial or other assistance to the families of the members after the death of the member. I have been unable to imagine any aid or assistance which an association of this sort might render to an individual member after his death. The purpose clause is therefore ambiguous and uncertain in its present form and should be amended. If it is amplified by including language authorizing the rendition of aid and assistance to the members of families of members it must not be filed in your department unless the language chosen clearly negatives the idea of fraternal insurance as defined in the act above quoted. Whatever business the association does it must not be authorized to enter into a contract with its members substantially amounting to insurance, as this would violate the fraternal benefit act; that is to say, if the proposed articles authorize the writing of insurance contracts then the order must be incorporated in the manner prescribed in the fraternal benefit society act.

Assuming that the articles of incorporation will be corrected in the manner suggested and again offered to you for filing, I beg to advise, in answer to your second question, that in my opinion the sum of $25.00 is the proper fee for filing such articles as these. Section 176, General Code, paragraph 4, provides that:

> "For the filing of articles of incorporation of a mutual life insurance corporation having no capital stock, or of other mutual corporations not organized strictly for benevolent or charitable purposes and having no capital stock the secretary of state shall charge and collect a fee of $25.00, "except as hereinafter provided."

The exception refers to certain societies and associations enumerated in paragraph 5 of the section, and being societies and associations composed exclusively of any class of mechanics, express, telegraph, railroad or other employes, and formed exclusively for the mutual protection and relief of members thereof and their families, and for the filing of which articles of incorporation the secretary of state is to charge and collect a fee of $2.00. The proposed corporation is clearly a mutual corporation. Furthermore, it is clearly not organized strictly for benevolent or charitable purposes; on the contrary it is formed exclusively for the mutual benefit of its members. It is not such a corporation as is described in the last part of paragraph 5 of section 176. Therefore, the matter of the fee for filing such articles of incorporation is governed by paragraph 4 of section 176, and said fee is $25.00.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 359.

CERTIFICATE OF AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE AMERICAN MULTIGRAPH COMPANY—PREFERRED STOCK.

The certificate of amendment to the articles of incorporation of the American Multigraph Company are legal and should be filed.

Under section 8668 the holders of preferred stock may be given the right to receive dividends of more than eight per cent. in the aggregate, provided that not more than eight per cent. of such dividends shall be in preference to all other stockholders. They may, therefore, be entitled to aggregate dividends of eleven per cent., seven per cent. of which shall be preferred.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 14, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 29th, enclosing proposed amendment to the articles of incorporation of the American Multigraph Company, and requesting my opinion as to the legality of the same.

The certificate of amendment is in form a substitution of an entirely new fourth article for the corresponding article of the original articles of incorporation, which said article stated the amount of the authorized capital stock of the corporation and the number of shares into which it was divided, and the par value thereof. The question was at once raised in my mind as to the propriety of the procedure adopted by the corporation in view of that provision of section 8719, General Code, which is as follows:

> "The capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished * * * by amendment."

However, by examination of the original articles of incorporation of the company together with several increases and reductions of capital stock filed in your office by the corporation, I have ascertained that the amount of the authorized capital stock, the portion thereof which is preferred stock, the par value of the shares and their number are all the same in the amended articles as what the corporation was entitled to have under such certificate of reduction filed by it, being the last change in its capital stock. (Certificate of reduction filed May 20, 1910.)

The only change then that has been made in the articles of incorporation of the company consists of the minutely detailed provisions of amended article fourth concerning the dividends payable to the holders of preferred stock, the right of the company to redeem such stock, the obligation of the company to maintain a surplus for the payment of dividends upon preferred stock and the voting powers of holders of preferred stock, etc. These provisions are too lengthy to be quoted herein. I have examined them carefully and find ample authority for each specific provision thereof in the following sections of the General Code:

Section 8668:

> "When the capital stock is to be both common and preferred, it may be provided in the articles of incorporation that the holders of the preferred stock shall be entitled to yearly dividends of not more than eight per cent., payable quarterly, half yearly, or yearly out of the surplus profits of the company each year in preference to all other stockholders. Such dividends also may be made cumulative."

Section 8669:

> "A corporation issuing both common and preferred stock may create designations, preferences and voting powers, or restrictions or qualifications thereof, in the certificate of incorporation, and if desired, preferred stock may be made subject to redemption at not less than par, at a fixed time and price, to be expressed in the stock certificates thereof."

Section 8670:

"Upon the insolvency of the corporation no holder of preferred stock shall be liable for its debts until after the remedy against the common stockholders upon their liability, as provided by law, has been exhausted, and then only for such amount as remains unpaid. Such liability in no event shall exceed that fixed by law for the common stock of such corporation."

Section 8671:

"On the insolvency or dissolution of the corporation, the holders of preferred stock shall be entitled to receive from the assets remaining after paying its liabilities, the full payment of its par value, before anything is paid to the common stock."

I may add that the question as to whether under section 8668 the holders of preferred stock may be given the right to receive dividends of more than eight per cent. in the aggregate, provided that not more than eight per cent. of such dividends shall be in preference to all other stockholders has been before this department on more than one occasion. The ruling of the department has been that such a provision is lawful, and I have concurred in that ruling.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the provision of the certificate of amendment to the general effect that the holders of preferred stock shall be entitled to aggregate dividends of eleven per cent., seven per cent. of which shall be preferred, is legal under section 8668.

The remaining provisions of the certificate of amendment are all justifiable in my opinion as "designations, preferences, voting powers, restrictions and qualifications" within the meaning of section 8669, and in particular the provision as to the retirement of preferred stock is proper under the latter portion of that section. Inasmuch as no increase or diminution of capital stock of the corporation has been made, and inasmuch as in my opinion the remainder of article fourth constitutes matter "which lawfully might have been provided for originally in such articles" in the meaning of section 8719, and inasmuch also as the certificate evidences full compliance with sections 8720 and 8721, General Code, which provides proceedings by which amendments may be effected, I am of the opinion that it is your duty to file and record the certificate of amendment of the American Multigraph Company which I return herewith.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

362.

USURPING EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—APPOINTMENTS TO FILL VACANCY RECOMMENDED BY TWO COMMITTEES, EACH CLAIMING TO BE THE DULY AUTHORIZED COMMITTEE—DUTY OF STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE AND OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

Where two presumptive executive committees each claiming to be the duly authorized committee of their party, recommend a candidate for appointment to a vacancy in the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, the question as to which committee is to be recognized must be left to the state central committee.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested my opinion as to the proper solution of a problem which has arisen in your department with reference to the appointment of a Republican member of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections for a certain county, caused by the rival recommendations of two committees, each purporting to be the rightful Republican executive committee for that county.

An abridged statement of facts, so far as pertinent to the question, are these:

> "On May 21, 1910, the Republican central committee of Jackson county elected an executive committee for that county, which committee was officially recognized by the Republican state central committee.
>
> "On July 8, 1911, the Republican central committee of Jackson county passed a resolution purporting to dissolve the existing executive committee of Jackson county and elected a new executive committee in its stead.
>
> "Executive committee No. 1, elected May 21, 1910, and executive committee No. 2, elected July 8, 1911, have each recommended a candidate for appointment to the vacancy in the board of deputy state supervisors of elections for Jackson county, and the question arises as to which recommendation is to be followed, if either, by the secretary of state in making the appointment, or if neither is to be followed, then, as to what is the proper procedure under the existing circumstances."

Section 4807 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "If, within five days after such vacancy occurs in the membership of a board of deputy state supervisors, the executive committee of the party entitled to the appointment to fill such vacancy recommends a qualified person to the state supervisor, he shall appoint such person to fill such vacancy for the unexpired term. If no such recommendation is made, the state supervisor shall make the appointment as provided in this chapter."

Under this section, if a qualified person is recommended for the appointment to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections within the proper time, by the proper committee, then the secretary of state must appoint that person. He has no discretion. In the present instance there is no question raised as to the qualification of the person or persons, or as to the time; the doubtful proposition is as to which is the executive committee. And how is this to be determined? Is the matter of the determination to devolve upon the secretary of state, or must we look for statutory direction in this contingency?

Section 4808 of the General Code provides the answer. Such section reads:

> "When recommendations are made to the state supervisor for appointment to new terms or to fill vacancies in the office of deputy state supervisor by more than one committee, each claiming to be the rightful executive committee of a political party entitled to recommend qualified persons for appointment on such board, such state supervisor, before making any such appointment, shall notify the chairman of the state central committee of the political party entitled to such appointment, and he shall recognize that committee as the rightful executive committee which such state central committee shall certify to be the rightful committee of such party. If such committee fails to make such certification for ten days from the giving of such notice, the state supervisor shall determine which of such disputing bodies or committees is the rightful committee of such party and shall make the appointment as provided in this chapter."

The statute states specifically and unequivocally,

> "When recommendations are made by more than one committee, each claiming to be the rightful executive committee * * * such state supervisor before making any such appointment, shall notify the chairman of the state central committee of the political party entitled to such appointment, and he shall recognize that committee as the rightful executive committee which such state central committee shall certify to be the rightful committee of such party."

The statute is mandatory. No discretion is left to the secretary of state. The moment the condition specified in the statute exists, he must do one thing, and only one; he must notify the chairman of the state central committee of the party and abide by the decision of that committee, as to which is the rightful executive committee entitled to make the recommendation. As to the foundation upon which the respective committees base their claims, or as to the sufficiency or propriety of these claims, he has no concern.

The objection that as there can be only one rightful executive committee, therefore, one proper recommendation, and, therefore, no necessity for a reference to the state central committee for the purpose of deciding between the conflicting claims of the self-styled executive committees, has no force, for two reasons: First, because the wording of the statute is, not "the rightful committee," but "committee claiming to be the rightful executive committee;" and second, because there is no way provided by which the merits of the respective claims of the respective executive committee can be tested.

To hold otherwise would be to place the power of arbitrary declaration in the hands of the secretary of state.

Other apparent objections might be urged, such as the one that the primary election enactments are rendered nugatory so far as is held operative, but upon examination none of these objections will be found to stand the test of proper legal interpretation or sound logical analysis, while on the other hand the conclusion, irresistibly forced upon us by a reading of the statute, finds support and confirmation in the unvarying policy of the legislature and courts of this state in leaving to the respective political parties the settlement of their own disputes and the control and management of their own internal affairs.

Therefore, my ruling is that the situation here presented is one in which the secretary of state should leave the determination as to which is the rightful Republican executive committee of Jackson county to the state central committee of that party.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

371.

NOTICES OF ASSESSMENT AGAINST THE STATE FOR SEWER IMPROVEMENTS—SECRETARY OF STATE NOT REQUIRED TO ACKNOWLEDGE SAME.

As there is no manner provided by law for the service of summons in civil cases except as provided in enabling acts, the secretary of state is not required to acknowledge service of notice of a proposed sewer assessment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 17th inst., wherein you ask whether it would be proper to comply with letter of R. Y. McCray, city clerk of Cleveland, Ohio, requesting you to "sign acknowledgment on back of second notice inclosed."

Said notice being directed to "the state of Ohio" and giving notice of a proposed sewer improvement and assessment to the "owner of each parcel of property to be assessed for said sewer as shown by names appearing upon the tax duplicate, who are residents of the county of Cuyahoga."

Under the statutes such notices are to be served "in the manner provided by law for the service of summons in civil cases." (Section 3818, G. C.)

Since generally the state cannot be sued without an enabling act which usually provides upon whom service is to be made, and since section 194 of the General Code permitting certain suits for fees paid to the secretary of state under protest, provides for service of process upon the attorney general who shall represent the state, and as there does not seem to be any statutory provision rquiring service of summons on the secretary of state in matters wherein the state of Ohio is a party defendant, I am of opinion, therefore, that you are not called upon to sign an acknowledgment of service of the notice concerning which you make inquiry.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

381.

NOMINATION AND ELECTION—CANDIDATES—MUNICIPAL COURT OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Where there is an act which is general in its terms and applicable to a multitude of subjects and another act is passed with regard to one of the particular subjects and making special and different provisions therefor, the latter act should be construed as an exception to the general act unless its terms provide otherwise.

Under this rule of construction, the act relating to the election of candidates to the municipal court of Cleveland is exclusive and its terms provide the only possible means of nomination and election of its officials provided for therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 20, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your verbal inquiry as to whether or not section 5 of the act passed May 10, 1911 (102 O. L., page 155), is exclusive, has received the most careful consideration of this department. Said section 5 of the act aforesaid is as follows:

> "The judges of the municipal court including the chief justice shall be nominated by direct vote, unless the city controlling committee of any party shall, by a majority vote, at least forty days before the time fixed by law for a primary, direct its candidates for said positions to be nominated by delegate conventions, the delegates to which shall be elected at the primary, in which case they shall be nominated. And they shall be elected by the electors of the city of Cleveland. The first election of said judges shall be held at the regular municipal election of 1911, at which time three judges shall be elected for two years and three judges and the chief justice for four years. At the regular municipal election next preceding the expiration of the term of office of each judge a successor shall be elected for a term of four years. The term of office of each judge shall commence on the first day of January next after his election and he shall hold office until his successor is elected and qualified."

My answer to your inquiry is in the affirmative. It is argued by some in Cleveland, I am informed, that section 5 of the act aforesaid is not exclusive with reference to the nomination of judges of the municipal court of Cleveland, but that the nominations for said judges may be made by petition under favor of section 4996 of the General Code.

I have at hand the brief of Hon. Newton D. Baker, city solicitor of Cleveland, a very able and distinguished lawyer, addressed to E. W. Horn, clerk of the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, wherein the view is advanced that an alternative method of nomination is provided because section 4996 of the General Code has not been repealed. It is urged by Mr. Baker that the language of the sections of the General Code, to-wit, 4996 et seq., is universal and that the principle of construction applying is that the language should be given full effect, unless there is some unnecessary inconsistency between it and some other statute.

Mr. Baker further advances the idea that no such inconsistency seems to exist, and he is, therefore, of the opinion that independent candidates securing the requisite number of signatures to their petitions and otherwise complying with the requirements of the statutes regulating nominations by petition are entitled to have their names on the ballot.

I subscribe entirely to the principle of construction that he announces, but I am not able to concur in his conclusion that no inconsistency exists between section 4996 of the General Code and section 5 of the act under consideration.

I might first revert to sections 4949 et seq., of the General Code, which provides how candidates for public office are to be nominated. These sections recognize what might be called "the primary method of making nominations."

Section 4950 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Nothing in this chapter shall repeal the provisions of law relating to the nomination of candidates for office by nomination papers, and no elector shall be disqualified from signing a petition for such nomination of candidates for office by nomination papers, because such elector voted at a primary provided for herein to nominate candidates to be voted for at the same election or because such elector signed nomination papers for such primary."

Section 4996 of the General Code provides:

> "Nominations of candidates for any county, township, municipal or ward office may be made by nomination papers, signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than three hundred qualified electors of the county or fifty electors of the city or twenty-five electors of the township, ward or village, respectively. In counties containing annual registration cities, such nomination papers shall be signed by petitioners not less in number than one for each fifty persons who voted at the next preceding general election in such county."

The sections which I have just quoted are to be found in Chapter 6, Title 14, Part I.

Section 4992 of the General Code, found under Chapter 7, of the said title, provides as follows:

> "Except as provided by the preceding chapter of this title, nominations of candidates for public office may be made as herein provided by a convention, caucus, meeting of qualified electors, primary election by such electors or central or executive committee representing a political party, which at the next preceding November election for state officers polled at least one per cent. of the entire vote cast in the state. One nomination may be made for each office to be filled at the following election, and when not invalidated or withdrawn, the names of the candidates so nominated shall be printed on the ballot. The nominations so made to be valid must be filed as hereinafter provided."

From the foregoing it will appear that there are three different methods of making nominations under the general statutes for municipal officers.

Summarizing from the statutes before quoted, these three methods are:

1. Compulsory primary, where the party polled at least one per cent. of the entire vote cast therein in the municipality.
2. Nominations by petition.

3. Nomination of candidate by convention, caucus, etc., which is a privilege accorded to a party polling more than one per cent. of the total vote cast in the state at the last election and less than ten per cent. of that cast in the municipality.

Now, the question to be considered is whether section 5 of the act under consideration may be harmonized with either of the statutes quoted, or the methods therein provided for, or with the scheme denoted by either of the three methods.

To start with, section 4950 of the General Code has no effect or control over section 5 of the act aforesaid, because section 5 of the act aforesaid is not embraced in Chapter 6 and has no place thereunder, it being a special statute in relation to the city of Cleveland.

Now, the sections that I have quoted provide for, as aforesaid, three methods of nomination: (a) direct primary, (b) nomination by petition, (c) nomination by convention, caucus, etc., where the party at the next preceding November election for state officers polled at least one per cent. of the entire vote cast in the state.

It will be noted that the last does not provide for nomination by petition.

Now, then, section 5 of the act aforesaid provides that judges shall be nominated by direct vote, unless the city controlling committee of any party shall, by a majority vote, at least forty days before the time fixed by law for a primary, direct its candidates for said positions to be nominated by delegate conventions. It will be seen that two methods are provided in section 5: (a) direct vote, (b) nomination by delegate conventions. It will appear clear that section 5, insofar as it provides for nomination by a delegate convention, is clearly in conflict with each of the foregoing, and said section 5, so far as it provides for a delegate convention, provides a method entirely different from each of the three sections aforesaid.

The intent of the legislature in the act of May 10, 1911 (102 O. L. 158), is further shown by section 29 thereof, providing for the election of a clerk. Said section 29 is in part as follows:

> "At the municipal election of 1911 and every four years thereafter, there shall be nominated and elected a clerk of the municipal court in the same manner as other municipal officers are nominated and elected." * * *

It will be noted that it is provided therein that the clerk of the municipal court shall be nominated and elected in the same manner as other municipal officers are nominated and elected. It, therefore, appears that the clerk may be nominated by that one of the three general methods above described which is appropriate in a particular case, and cannot be nominated in the manner provided in section 5.

This appears as one of the first reasons why section 5 is exclusive, but there is another reason that we think is controlling, and that is the inconsistency of section 5 with either of the other three methods hereinbefore pointed out. Lewis Sutherland on "Statutory Construction," section 346, lays down this doctrine: (I shall quote the entire section.)

> "Sec. 346. PARTIAL CONFLICT RESOLVED INTO AN EXCEPTION. The law will not allow the revocation or alteration of a statute by construction when the words may have their proper operation without it. But, in the nature of things, contradictions cannot stand together. Where there is an act or provision which is general, and applicable actually or potentially to a multitude of subjects, and there is also another act or provision which is particular and applicable to one of these subjects, and inconsistent with the general act, they are not necessarily so inconsistent that both cannot stand, though contained in the same act, or though the general law were an independent enactment. The general act would operate according to its terms on all the subjects embraced therein, except the particular one which is the subject of the special act. That would be deemed an exception, unless the terms of the later general law manifested an intention to exclude the exception. If the general and special provisions are in the same act, or passed on the same day in separate acts, or at the same session of the legislature, the presumption is stronger that both are intended to operate. In adjusting the general provisions in a general act to the particular provisions of a special act, considerations of reason and justice, and the universal analogy of such provisions in similar acts, are proper to be borne in mind, and ought to have much weight and force. A local act provided that the auditor of a particular county should receive an annual salary of $700 in full for his official services. On the following day a general act was passed imposing additional duties on auditors; and it provided a compensation by a percentage on certain funds. It was held that these were to be construed as one act, and that the first act exclusively controlled as to the particular county. A general act made the term of revenue commissioners four years; by another act, passed the same day, the charter of a particular city was amended so as to make the official term of its revenue commissioners two years; it was held that this amendment made a special exception to the general rule. If an act in one session authorizes a corporation to sell a particular piece of land, and in another prohibits it from selling any land, the first section is not repealed, but will be treated as creating an exception. An absolute direction in one section to set off for a widow and children the decedent's homestead, free from all his debts, though absolute in terms, was held qualified by a subsequent section, which in terms embraced such homestead, subjecting it to debts contracted prior to the passage of the act."

The principles enunciated in the foregoing not only clearly apply, but the examples given fit the case under consideration exactly. The following from "Black on Interpretation of Laws" is, we think, to use a popular but expressive phrase, "on all fours" with the present consideration. At page 117 he says:

> "A local statute, enacted for a particular municipality, for reasons satisfactory to the legislature, is intended to be exceptional and for the benefit of such municipality." * * *

It might be observed in a general way that the act found in 102 O. L., page 155, is an amendment to an act providing for and establishing a municipal court in the city of Cleveland, passed May 10, 1910. The act not only provided for the method of nomination of a court, but the same act provided for the creation of the very court itself. It specified in considerable detail all the provisions in relation to the creation, jurisdiction, nominations and election of a court and all of its officers. It is well known that for the past few years there has been before the legislature almost constantly proposed laws in reference to the primaries, delegate conventions, nominations by petition, nominations by convention, caucus and otherwise, and in the face of all of the proposed laws, together with a great many acts that were passed on this subject, it is hard to conceive how any other meaning was intended by the legislature than that expressly stated in section 5, so that, aside from the rules of construction which are controlling, there is no reason to believe in a given case that the legislature had in mind any exception to what is contained in said section 5. Further, a review of all the election statutes will disclose, I think without exception, that the legislature in reference to the method of nomination and election has taken pains in each instance to make an expression as to whether an exception was intended, or otherwise.

For the foregoing reasons, while desirous of honoring the widest interpretation to the statutes in reference to nominations of candidates, I am constrained to hold that section 5 is exclusive and provides the only method for nominating candidates for the municipal court of Cleveland.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 22, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 20th, enclosing a letter from T. L. Gifford, attorney-at-law, and proposed substitute purpose clause of the articles of incorporation of the Independent Order of Rangers, as to the original of which I recently rendered you an opinion.

The proposed substitute purpose clause is as follows:

> "For the purpose of conducting and operating a voluntary fraternal secret society, not for profit, having a representative form of government, and having a supreme governing, or legislative body, and subordinate lodges into which members shall be elected and initiated, or admitted, and which shall be conducted in accordance with the constitution, laws, rules, regulations and prescribed ritualistic ceremonies adopted by the supreme governing, or legislative body; provided, however, that neither the supreme governing body nor any subordinate lodge shall have any right or authority to issue any insurance certificate or enter into any insurance contract with any of its members."

Upon consideration thereof I am of the opinion that the same is in all respects legal and that a corporation formed for this purpose would be a "secret society" within the meaning of paragraph 5 of section 176 of the General Code, and in no sense a "mutual corporation" within the meaning of paragraph 4 of that section.

With respect to other matters referred to in my former opinion I beg to advise that the proposed substitute is similar to the original draft.

I therefore advise that you may lawfully receive and file articles of incorporation of the association referred to when presented to you, embodying the purpose clause aforesaid, and that the fee chargeable for filing the same would be two dollars.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

459.

CERTIFICATE OF AMENDMENT TO THE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE REPUBLIC ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY—INCREASE OF PAR VALUE OF SHARES.

A corporation cannot increase the par value of its shares by amendment to its articles of incorporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 3d, transmitting the proposed certificate of amendment to the articles of incorporation of the Republic Accident Insurance Company, and requesting my opinion as to the right of the company to amend its articles of incorporation in the manner therein set forth. The copy of the amendment set forth in the certificate is as follows:

> "Resolved, That the articles of incorporation of the Republic Accident Insurance Company be and the same are hereby amended, so as to change the corporate name from the Republic Accident Insurance Company to the Republic Casualty Company, and so as to change the capital stock from one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00) divided into one thousand (1,000) shares of one hundred ($100.00) dollars each, to one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00) divided into ten thousand ($10,000) shares of ten dollars ($10.00) each."

Insurance companies are not given express power to amend their articles of incorporation but may exercise this power, of course, under the general law, section 8719. This section of the General Code provides as follows:

> "A corporation organized under the general corporation laws of the state, may amend its articles of incorporation as follows:
>
> 1. So as to change its corporate name, but not to one already appropriated, or to one likely to mislead the public.
>
> 2. So as to change the place where it is to be located, or its principal business transacted.
>
> 3. So as to modify, enlarge or diminish the objects or purpose for which it was formed.
>
> 4. So as to add to them anything omitted from, or which lawfully might have been provided for originally, in such articles. But the capital stock of a corporation shall not be increased or diminished, by such amendment, nor the purpose of its original organization substantially changed."

While this section does not expressly prohibit a change in the capital stock by amendment, yet the effect is the same, because section 8719, standing by itself, could not have been intended to apply to changes in the capital stock. Such section is a grant of power and is, therefore, subject to the application of the rule that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of all others; furthermore, all changes in capital stock which may be made by a general corporation must be made in the manner provided by sections 8698 to 8700, inclusive, General Code. The changes therein provided for include changes in the par value of the shares as well as in the total authorized capital stock.

I may add that for the reasons heretofore stated, in other opinions to you, I am of the opinion that all possible changes in the capital stock of an insurance company other than life are provided for by section 9531.

For all of the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that a corporation formed for the purpose of insuring against accident may not change the par value of the shares of its stock by amendment to the articles of incorporation.

I may add that the change of names sought to be made by the amendment is within the power of the corporation and may be accomplished in this way.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

497.

CORPORATIONS--ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—PURPOSE CLAUSE—RIGHT TO USE NAME WHICH IS MISLEADING.

It is illegal in this state for persons to form an association in the guise of a corporation "not for profit" when the real object as disclosed by the articles of incorporation is the promotion of the pecuniary benefit of its members.

2. It is in the discretion of the secretary of state to determine whether or not a corporation name is misleading.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 20, 1911.

HON. CHARLES H. GRAVES, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 15th, requesting my opinion as to the legality of the purpose clause of the articles of incorporation of the John Robert Crouse Savings & Trust Association submitted to me therewith, and also as to the right of such corporation to use the name selected.

In my opinion you may not lawfully file and record the articles of incorporation submitted to you for the reason that the purpose clause of the association as set forth therein, whether in itself lawful or unlawful, and whether single or multifarious, measured by the rule in State ex rel. vs. Taylor, 55 O. S. 67, is clearly for the pecuniary profit of the members thereof. It is not lawful in this state for persons to form an association in the guise of a corporation "not for profit" when the real object of the incorporators, as disclosed by the articles of incorporation, is the promotion of the welfare of its members by any form of business enterprise or management which will reap a pecuniary profit for them. The clause in question expressly states that the welfare of the members of the association is to be promoted in part by the investment of money and the disbursement of interest, profits and avails thereof, and by disposing of the same in part to its members or their legal representatives.

Again, I do not feel that the secretary of state should permit a corporation of this kind to use the name "Savings and Trust Association."

The question is scarcely one of law inasmuch as under section 8628, General Code, it is incumbent upon the secretary of state in the exercise of discretionary power to determine in the first instance whether or not the corporate name chosen by the signers of articles of incorporation "is likely to mislead the public as to the nature or purpose of the business its charter authorizes." The name "Savings and Trust Association" is one which has a definite significance in our statute law as referring to a certain class of banking corporations. It would seem, therefore, that the use of a name containing the sequence of words "Savings and Trust Association" by a corporation other than a savings and trust company would have a tendency to mislead the public as to the nature of the business authorized by the charter of such corporation.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

131.

(To the State Registrar of Automobiles)

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—STATE REGISTRAR OF AUTOMOBILES AND CLERK OF COURTS—TEMPORARY AND PERMANENT ABSENCE DISTINGUISHED.

A holder of the office of clerk of courts of Ashland county who accepts the position of state registrar of automobiles cannot retain the former office. The second position necessitates a permanent absence from the office of the former and as it furthermore demands substantially all of the time and attention of its incumbent, the occupancy of such position would make impossible the demand of the law that the clerk of courts be found at all office hours in his office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 24, 1911.

HON. JOSEPH A. SHEARER, State Registrar Automobiles, Office Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You inquired of me verbally yesterday as to your right to continue to hold the office of clerk of the court of Ashland county, Ohio, which position you have held for some time. You further informed me that your term as clerk will expire in August, 1911, and further that you have been appointed to the position of state registrar of automobiles in the office of the secretary of state, which said latter office is in Columbus, Ohio. I assume that the duties of your position as state registrar of automobiles which you are now occupying requires all of your time, and requires that you should remain at Columbus.

I am of opinion that your acceptance of the position of state registrar of automobiles, and your being in this city to discharge the duties thereof, and it being necessary that you remain here for that purpose, works an abandonment, in contemplation of law, of your office as clerk of court of Ashland county. The presumption of law is that one elected to an office, such as clerk of court, may ordinarily be found at the office. True, there are exceptions to the rule, growing out of temporary absence, sickness or other matters that customs justify, but it is not the intention of the law that one may accept another office requiring his presence elsewhere and retain an office in his home county to be filled by deputies. From what you stated, I take it that you do not expect to return to Ashland during the term of office for which you were elected. This is not an instance of temporary absence from Ashland county or inability for the time being to perform the duties of the office of clerk of court, but one wherein you have accepted a permanent appointment in Columbus, the duties of which will require your whole time and attention, and such a situation is entirely inconsistent with the proper performance by you of the duties of clerk of the court of Ashland county.

Assuming that you desire to retain your present position this department advises that you tender your resignation as clerk of the court of Ashland county.

This opinion is in harmony with one rendered by my predecessor on April 21, 1910, to Hon. E. B. Keck, acting mayor of the village of McArthur, Ohio.

Very respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

P. S. This case is to be distinguished from the Mayor Anderson case at Fostoria in this, that Mayor Anderson's absence was held by the court to be but temporary.

A 390.

REGISTRATION OF AUTOMOBILE DEALERS—CERTIFICATES—CHANGE OF FIRM MEMBERSHIP OR FIRM NAME.

As the object of the registration statutes is to afford a means of identification of dealers in motor vehicles, a certificate of registration issued to a firm no longer applies to the remaining members where one member withdraws his connections with the firm.

The same rule applies when a firm remains the same but changes the firm name.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 23, 1911.

HON. J. A. SHEARER, Registrar of Automobiles, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion upon the following questions:

> "Early in the year we issued to the firm of King-Dillow & Sons, certificate of registration as dealers, and assigned to them a distinctive number. Since that time Mr. King has withdrawn from the firm, and the firm as it is now constituted is known as C. C. Dillow and Son. Now the question arises can the firm as now constituted retains the registration which was issued to King-Dillow & Sons? Would we be authorized to issue to this firm certified copies of the original registration number issued to King-Dillow & Sons?
>
> "We also desire your opinion upon the following question:
>
> "A firm which has registered as dealers in * * * had assigned to them a distinctive number, changes their firm name, but retains all of the original members of the firm, can they, under the law, operate under the registration issued in the name of the original firm, and are we authorized to issue to the firm as now constituted certified copies of their original registration number?"

Answering your first question I desire to cite section 6301 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "A manufacturer or dealer in motor vehicles shall make application for the registration, in a like manner, as hereinbefore provided, of each gasoline, steam, electric or other make of motor vehicle, so manufactured or dealt in, and pay a registration fee of ten dollars for each make of motor vehicle named therein, to be determined by the motive power of such vehicles. Thereupon the secretary of state shall assign to each make of motor vehicle therein described a distinctive number which must be carried and displayed by each motor vehicle of such make in like manner as provided in this chapter while it is operated on the public highway until it is sold or let for hire. Such manufacturer or dealer, so registering a make of motor vehicle, may procure certified copies of such registration certificate upon the payment of a fee of two dollars for each such copy. With each of such certified copies the secretary of state shall furnish two placards with the same numbering provided in the original registration certificate."

It is apparent from a reading of the above section that it is intended primarily to afford a means of identification of dealers in motor vehicles; and anything which tends to make identification difficult or uncertain is contrary to the plain purpose of this statute. It is a familiar principal of law that the withdrawal of a member of a firm ipso facto dissolves the firm, and accordingly upon the retirement of Mr. King, the firm of King-Dillow & Son ceased to have a legal existence. The firm of Dillow and Son is a new entity—entirely distinct from King-Dillow & Son, and a transfer to the above named firm of the certificates issued in the name of King-Dillow & Son would be misleading to the public and contrary to the statute. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the certificate issued to King-Dillow & Son cannot be transferred to the firm of Dillow and Son.

In answer to your second question I beg to say that a change of a firm name without a change of membership would render identification difficult, if not impossible. Identification being the principal object of the statute, as heretofore stated, the transfer of the certificate issued in one firm name to a firm of a different name, although composed of the same persons as the former, would be unwarranted.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Board of Deputy State Supervisors and Inspectors of Elections)

B 280.

TELEPHONE IN PRIVATE RESIDENCE OF CLERK AND DEPUTY CLERK OF BOARD OF DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS—ALLOWANCE OF EXPENSE—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

As the expense of installing a telephone in the private residence of the clerk and deputy clerk of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections is not an expense whose amount is fixed by law or which is authorized to be paid out of the county treasury upon voucher of the board, a claim for such expense may not be allowed except upon approval of the county commissioners under sections 4821 and 2460, General Code.

June 27, 1911.

HON. W. B. GONGWER, Deputy Clerk, Board of Deputy State Supervisors and Inspectors of Elections, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 13th you submitted for my consideration the following:

"Acting under authority of section 4821 of the General Code, some six months ago the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors for Cuyahoga county by resolution duly passed at a regular meeting of said board, authorized the installation in the homes of the clerk and deputy clerk of this board and payment therefor by the board of main line telephones. The board took this action with a view to increasing the efficiency of the office for the reason that the board felt the business of the office was of such importance as to preclude the use of party line telephones.

"Several weeks ago when bills for said services were presented by the telephone companies, vouchers were forwarded to the county commissioners for the payment of the same. The legal adviser of the county commissioners acting as he said under authority of section 4821 declared the payments to be illegal.

"Will you kindly give us at your early convenience your opinion of the authority of our board in this matter, and whether or not the bills in question constitute a legitimate expenditure, and if so, whether the county commissioners must pay the same?"

Section 4821 of the General Code provides:

"All proper and necessary expenses of the board of deputy state supervisors shall be paid from the county treasury as other county expenses, and the county commissioners shall make the necessary levy to provide therefor. In counties containing annual general registration cities, such expenses shall include expenses duly authorized and incurred in the investigation and prosecution of offenses against laws relating to the registration of electors, the right of suffrage and the conduct of elections."

Section 4822 of the General Code provides:

"Each deputy state supervisor shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of four dollars for each election precinct in his respective county. The compensation so allowed such officers during any year shall be determined by the number of precincts in such county at the November election of the next preceding year. The compensation paid to each of such deputy state supervisors under this section shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars each year and the compensation paid to the clerk shall in no case be less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars each year. Such compensation shall be paid quarterly from the general revenue fund of the county upon vouchers of the board, made and certified by the chief deputy and the clerk thereof. Upon presentation of any such voucher, the county auditor shall issue his warrant upon the county treasurer for the amount thereof, and the treasurer shall pay it."

Section 4942 of the General Code provides:

"In addition to the compensation provided in section forty-eight hundred and twenty-two, each deputy state supervisor of elections in counties containing cities in which registration is required shall receive for his services the sum of five dollars for each election precinct in such city, and the clerk in such counties, in addition to his compensation so provided, shall receive for his services the sum of six dollars for each election precinct in such cities. The compensation so allowed such officers during any year shall be determined by the number of precincts in such city at the November election of the next preceding year. The compensation paid to each such deputy state supervisor under this section shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars each year and the compensation paid to the clerk under this section shall in no case be less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars each year. The additional compensation provided by this section shall be paid monthly from the city treasury on warrants drawn by the city auditor upon vouchers signed by the chief deputy and clerk of the board."

Section 4944 of the General Code as amended 101 O. L. 344, provides as follows:

"The registrars of each election precinct in such cities shall be allowed and paid for their services as registrars four dollars per day and no more for not more than six days at any one election. In registration cities having a population of three hundred thousand or more by the last preceding federal census, the judges of election, including the registrars as judges and the clerks of election, shall each be allowed and paid ten dollars for each general election and five dollars for each special election, at which they serve and no more, either from the city or county. In all other registration cities, the judges of election, including the registrars as judges and clerks of election, shall each be allowed and paid five dollars for each election at which they serve and no more, either from the city or county. No registrar, judge or clerk shall be entitled to the compensation so fixed except upon the allowance and order of the board of deputy state supervisors made at a joint session, certifying that each has duly performed his duty according to law as such, and stating the number of days' service actually performed by each. Such allowance and order shall be certified by the chief deputy and clerk of the board to the city or county auditor."

Section 4945 of the General Code provides:

"For November elections held in even-numbered years, the county in which such city is located shall pay the general expenses of such election other than the expenses of registration. Such allowance and order of the board for such expenses and compensation to such judges and clerks of elections shall be certified by the chief deputy and clerk to the auditor of such county, who shall issue his warrants upon the county treasury for the amounts so certified."

Section 4946 of the General Code provides:

"The additional compensation of members of the board of deputy state supervisors and of its clerk in such city hereinbefore specified, the lawful compensation of the deputy clerk and his assistants and all registrars of electors in such city, the necessary cost of the registers, books, blanks, forms, stationery and supplies provided by the board for the purposes herein authorized, including poll books for special elections, and the cost of the rent, furnishing and supplies for rooms, hired by the board for its offices, and as places for registration of electors and the holding of elections in such city, shall be paid by such city from its general fund. Such expense shall be paid by the treasurer of such city upon vouchers of the board, certified by its chief deputy and clerk and the warrant of the city auditor. Each such voucher shall specify the actual services rendered, the items of supplies furnished and the price or rates charged in detail."

Section 4991 of the General Code provides:

"All expenses of primary elections, including cost of supplies for election precincts and compensation of the members and clerks of boards of deputy state supervisors, and judges and clerks of election, shall be paid in the manner now provided by law for the payment of similar expenses for general elections, and the county commissioners, township trustees or council of municipal corporations or other taxing bodies duly authorized, shall make the necessary levies to meet them."

Section 5052 of the General Code provides:

"All expenses of printing and distributing ballots, cards of explanation to officers of the election and voters, blanks, and other proper and necessary expenses of any general or special election, including compensation of precinct election officers, shall be paid from the county treasury, as other county expenses."

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

Section 2460 of the General Code provides in part:

"No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim."

It is my opinion that in view of the provisions of section 2460 supra that the county commissioners have the right to exercise supervision over all expenses incurred by the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, except those the amount of which is fixed by law or authorized to be paid out of the county treasury or city treasury upon voucher of the board of deputy state supervisors and certified by the chief deputy and clerk of such board as specially set forth in the various sections of the General Code relating to board of deputy state supervisors as above enumerated.

Therefore, the expenditure incurred by the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections for Cuyahoga county in authorizing the installation of telephones in the homes of the clerk and deputy clerk of the said board, not being covered by any of the above sections specifically, the board of county commissioners have the authority by virtue of section 4821 supra and section 2460 supra to supervise such expenditure. There being no provision of law authorizing the installation of telephones in the homes of the clerk and deputy clerk, I am of the opinion, that the act of the board in authorizing telephones to be so installed is without authority of law, and the payment therefor would be illegal.

In my interpretation of the statutes I am always inclined to liberality for the purpose of accomplishing the necessities of the public. On the other hand the public have no right to impose upon the privacy of homes. The imposition is two-fold: The imposition of the individual upon the public in the way of graft and dereliction of duty, is treasonable, while the imposition of the public upon the privacy of the home is unpardonable. A public official that honestly and conscientiously, and during recognized and reasonable hours, gives his entire service to the public, owes it to his wife and family to have the privacy of the home after hours; the obligations are mutual: Those of the public to the official, and of the official to the public. Recognizing the principle that the public has no right to break into the privacy of one's home, I cannot bring myself to the conclusion that the public have a right to order a public telephone in any man's private home, and therefore, payment for any such telephone bill is unauthorized.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

139.

(To the Auditor of State)

DOW-AIKEN TAX—SOCIAL CLUBS—LIABILITY TO PAY.

A social club or any other club, giving a ball or dance, and selling intoxicating liquors and retaining the receipts, even though they sell the liquors in a building where a saloonkeeper is properly listed, is amenable under the Dow-Aiken tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 27, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 16th, together with letter addressed to you by F. S. Krug of Cincinnati, Ohio.

You inquire:

> "Is a social club or any other club, giving a ball or dance, and selling intoxicating liquors, and retaining the receipts, in a building where a saloonkeeper is properly listed, amenable under the Dow-Aiken tax?"

Mr. Krug states in his letter that under a recent ruling of the United States revenue office, social clubs giving balls where intoxicating liquors are sold must take out a revenue license, notwithstanding the fact that a saloonkeeper in the same building is properly listed in the revenue office and in the county auditor's office. He also states that the county auditor notified a certain social club in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, that their Dow tax was due, and that they refused to pay the same upon theory that the saloonkeeper renting them the hall, having a saloon in the same building, and being properly listed in the county, they were permitted thereby, under his Dow-Aiken tax, to sell liquors.

Section 6071 of the General Code, providing for tax on the liquor business, reads as follows:

> "Upon the business of trafficking in spiritous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquor there shall be assessed yearly, and paid into the county treasury, as hereinafter provided, by each person, corporation, or co-partnership engaged therein, and for each place where such business is carried on by or for such person, corporation, or co-partnership, the sum of one thousand dollars."

According to the state of facts presented by Mr. Krug, in his letter, it seems to be admitted that the social club mentioned, sells liquor, but they claim to have the right to sell it under the license of the owner of the building, who has paid his Dow-Aiken tax.

The circuit court of Hamilton county, in the case of the University Club vs. Frank Ratterman, treasurer, and Fred Raines, auditor, of Hamilton county, under the following state of facts:

> "A bona fide social club, incorporated under the laws of this state, 'for the promotion' of higher education, and of social and friendly relations between its members,' and not for profit, leased a building in which were reading, dining, sitting and other rooms, and a library, which was open to the members of said club at all reasonable hours; and with the funds of said corporation it purchased food, wines, liquors, and cigars, which during the years 1886 and 1887 were furnished at such club house, to such members as desired the same, and which were there used and paid for by the persons receiving the same, at a price fixed by the management, so as simply to pay the cost of procuring and serving them. No dividends or profits can be received by any member, nor does any officer receive a salary, and the club is not engaged in any business with a view to profit. During such period by the rules and regulations of the club, a member was authorized to introduce strangers having certain qualifications, who thereupon, for a limited period, became entitled to the privileges of such club house, and to be furnished with food, wines, liquors, etc., at the price so fixed as aforesaid—the member introducing such guest being liable for all supplies furnished him, if not paid for by such guest. During these years this privilege was occasionally exercised by the members of the club, and persons so introduced were furnished by the club with wines, liquors and other supplies, which were paid for by them or the persons introducing them.

"Held, That, the furnishing of such wines and liquors so purchased by said club to its members in this manner was a 'trafficking in intoxicating liquors,' within the meaning of Sec. 8, of 'An act providing against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors,' passed May 14, 1886 (82 Ohio L. 157), the same being a sale by said club to its members, and rendered it liable to assessment under the terms of said statute, as did also the furnishing of such liquors to the guests of such club in the manner stated."

In the case just quoted, of a bona fide social club which bought liquors for the use of the club, it was held, under that state of facts that they must pay their liquor tax.

In the case of Leonard vs. Bowland, treasurer, 4 N. P. (n. s.), page 577, it was held that the sale of four bottles of beer which were obtained from the saloon at fifteen cents per bottle, and sold for one dollar a bottle at the same place where the seller formerly carried on the business, was "a traffic in intoxicating liquors and would be liable to be assessed under the Aiken law."

I am therefore of the opinion, that a social club or any other club, giving a ball or dance, and selling intoxicating liquors and retaining the receipts even though they sell the liquors in a building where a saloonkeeper is properly listed, is amenable under the Dow-Aiken tax.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

143.

STATE'S LIABILITY FOR RENTAL OF AUTOMOBILE EMPLOYED IN COLUMBUS STRIKE—FEDERAL OWNERSHIP OF SAID MACHINE.

The state would be justified in paying a reasonable amount to the trustee thereof for the rent of an automobile used in the Columbus street car strike, and rightly belonging to the federal government.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 2, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Sometime ago you submitted to this department a specific inquiry relating to the bill submitted by Edward T. Miller, trustee, for rent of automobile during the Columbus street car strike. You desired advice as to whether or not this automobile is owned by the state, and if in any case the state should pay the bill for rental of the machine.

At the time the question was submitted there was no evidence in this department bearing upon the question, which is, in the last analysis, a question of mixed fact and law. Recently, however, Col. Miller, to whose order as trustee the voucher is made out, has presented to this department an affidavit setting forth the facts relating to the car in question, a copy of which affidavit is attached hereto. It appears therefrom that the fund out of which the automobile was purchased was derived from the use of a fund appropriated by the Congress of the United States, and disbursed by the assistant quartermaster general of Ohio, not in his capacity as such, but as United States disbursing officer and agent of the federal war department. It would seem that the machine belongs primarily to the federal government. It further appears from the affidavit that the funds appropriated by the United States government are to be applied by the disbursing officer in connection with the rifle range at Camp Perry. It further appears that the purchase of the automobile has been approved by the federal authorities as an incident to the "promotion of small arms practice" at the rifle range at Camp Perry. It appears that the automobile so owned and used was brought into service by the direction of the adjutant general and presumably with the consent of the federal authorities in the city of Columbus in the summer of 1910.

On all the foregoing facts it appears to me that the adjutant general in securing the use of this automobile acted precisely as if he had rented a similar machine from a citizen of Columbus. The automobile is not the property of the state of Ohio. It belongs to the federal government and is, so to speak, an appurtenance of Camp Perry as an agency in the promotion of rifle practice thereat.

The state of Ohio would be justified in paying a reasonable sum to the trustee having charge of this automobile for the use of the fund by him to be disbursed under the direction of the federal government. I do not, of course, pass upon the reasonableness of the amount of the voucher, nor upon any facts other than those apparent upon the face of the affidavit.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

187.

REQUISITION FOR FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE—COST BILL—AUTHORITY OF OFFICIAL TO ALLOW OR DISALLOW COSTS.

The question of the reasonableness of the expenses of pursuing and bringing back a fugitive is vested in the county commissioners and their determination in this respect is conclusive.

The commissioners may or may not, as their discretion dictates, allow the expenses of a hired assistant to the agent as a necessary expense, although the hiring of such assistant is not expressly authorized by law.

The auditor of state may disallow items of cost of extradition which are unauthorized by law. Under this rule, while it would be more reasonable to allow compensation to the agent himself, nevertheless as the law does not authorize any such compensation to the agent himself, the auditor of state is vested with the authority to disallow such compensation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 16th, submitting cost bill in the case of State vs. Gardner, certified to you from Shelby county for payment under the provisions of the General Code. You request my opinion as to the legality of the following items charged therein:

Per diem of agent and assistant.....$20 each
Expenses of assistant.....$27.11
Jury fee $6.00

The following provisions of the General Code are applicable to the various questions suggested by these items:

Section 2491: "When any person charged with a felony has fled to another state, territory or country, and the governor has issued a requisition for such person, or has requested the president of the United States to issue extradition papers, the commissioners may pay from the county treasury to the agent designated in such requisition or request * * * all necessary expenses of pursuing and returning such person so charged * * *."

Section 13722: "Upon sentence of a person for a felony, the officers, claiming costs made in the prosecution, shall deliver to the clerk itemized bills thereof, who shall make and certify, under his hand and the seal of the court, a complete bill of costs made in such prosecution, including the sum paid by the county commissioners for the arrest and return of the convict on the requisition of the governor, or on the request of the governor to the president of the United States. Such bill of costs shall be presented by such clerk to the prosecuting attorney, who shall examine each item therein charged, and certify to it if correct and legal."

Section 13724: "If the convict is sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary or to death, and no property has been levied upon, the sheriff shall deliver such certified cost-bill, having accredited thereon the amount paid on costs, with the convict, to the warden of the penitentiary."

Section 13726: "When the clerk certifies on the cost bill that execution was issued according to the provisions of this chapter, and returned by the sheriff 'No goods, chattels, lands or tenements, found whereon to levy,' the warden of the penitentiary shall allow so much of the cost-bill and charges for transportation as is correct, and certify such allowance, which shall be paid by the state."

Section 13727: "Upon the return of the writ against the convict, if an amount of money has not been made sufficient for the payment of the costs of conviction, and no additional property is found whereon to levy, the clerk shall so certify to the auditor of state, under his seal, with a statement of the total amount of costs, the amount made and the amount remaining unpaid. Such amount so unpaid as the auditor finds to be correct, shall be paid by the state, to the order of such clerk."

Carefully examining the above quoted sections and construing them together, I have reached the conclusion that the auditor of state may reject such items as are found by him to be incorrect in the sense that they are not authorized by law. Where a specific item is one the amount of which is not fixed by law but depends upon extraneous facts, such as the actual incurring of expenses and the reasonableness of the amount thereof, the auditor's authority, under the last of the quoted sections, must be determined by ascertaining whether or not the power to pass upon and approve the amount of such charges is vested in any other officers or board.

With respect to the expense of returning a felon upon requisition, the authority to pass upon the necessity and reasonableness of items of such expense is clearly vested in the county commissioners. The auditor of state, then, is without authority to set aside or in any way modify the allowance of the county commissioners excepting in particulars in which they have clearly acted beyond the scope of their jurisdiction. In all other cases the action of the county commissioners is binding upon the state.

The two items concerning which you speak in this connection are aptly illustrative of the principle of action embodied in the related statutes. Section 2491 authorizes the commissioners to pay "all necessary expenses of pursuing and returning" the person charged with a felony, and by necessary inference the commissioners are given the authority to pass upon the necessity of a given item of expense, provided the money expended was actually and legally paid out in pursuance of the purpose authorized. In the case at hand the agent designated by the governor has paid out $20.00 as compensation of an assistant employed by him, and the sum of $27.11 as the expenses of such assistant.

It is true that no authority is found in the statute, or in this section for the employment of an assistant. If an agent, then, employs an assistant, he clearly does so at his own risk and he is not entitled, as a matter of rights, to be reimbursed for any outlay he may have made actually or constructively by way of compensation and expenses of such assistant. When, however, he presents his itemized statement to the county commissioners and it shows that an assistant was actually employed, and actually did participate in the return of a felon, the necessity of such employment must be determined and conclusively determined by the county commissioners. If, in their judgment, the necessity existed and the rate of compensation paid or agreed to be paid by the agent to the assistant is reasonable and the expenses incurred on his account were actually paid out, the commissioners clearly have the authority, in my opinion, to allow such compensation and expenses as "expenses of pursuing and returning" person so charged. It is not that the commissioners are allowing compensation and expenses directly to the assistant, the theory of the proceeding is that they are allowing these items of expense of the agent, and their discretion in this particular cannot be disturbed.

Under section 13722 the sum paid by the county commissioners must be included in the cost-bill which is to be paid under certain circumstances by the auditor state. It thus clearly appears that the finding and judgment of the commissioners in the matter of such items as above discussed are conclusive.

It is otherwise, however, with regard to per diem of agents. Section 2491 above quoted authorizes payment of expenses of agents and there is no provision so far as I have been able to ascertain which authorizes such an agent to receive any compensation whatever. I am told that it has been the practice to allow certain compensation to such agents. It is certainly more reasonable to allow compensation to the agent than it is to disallow such compensation, and allow like compensation to his assistant. We are dealing, however, with the statutes as we find them, and not as they ought to be, and I am clearly of the opinion that the county commissioners are without any authority whatever to allow any pay to the agent designated in the requisition any compensation for himself. In this particular, then, the auditor of state is clearly vested with authority to set aside the finding of the county commissioners and disallow the item.

The foregoing questions have been passed upon by former attorneys general. I should be inclined to follow the rulings of my predecessors if they had agreed among themselves. However, I find that Hon. James Lawrence, former attorney general, advised the then auditor of state on June 15, 1885, in his opinion the county commissioners had authority to allow the agent designated in the requisition a reasonable compensation for his time and services; while Hon. Wade H. Ellis, attorney general, advised the prosecuting attorney of Lucas county, February 12, 1908, that the commissioners were without authority to allow any per diem compensation to the agent. As above indicated, I prefer the latter holding.

With respect to the third item mentioned in your question, I beg to refer you to the opinion of this department under date of December 14, 1910, in which it was held that a jury fee of $6.00 may be taxed as costs in a felony case and recovered from the defendant, but that such fee may not be included in the bill of costs which the auditor of state may be obliged to pay. I concur in the holding of this opinion.

I herewith return the certified cost-bill submitted to me.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

247.

INSPECTORS OF BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS—OFFICIAL RESIDENCE—TRAVELING EXPENSES.

As the salaries of inspectors of building and loan associations are not fixed by law, the appropriation items confer ample authority upon the chief inspector to reimburse his examiners for traveling expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties.

As there is no provision requiring examiners to maintain a permanent office in any particular portion of the state, the chief inspector may assign one as the official residence of his examiners.

Street car fare to and from the office or residence of an examiner, and the office of the building and loan association of a designated place of work outside the examiners' regular place of work, or extra expense may be properly classed as traveling expenses. So also are any extra expenses incurred while absent from his home city on official business.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 8, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 5, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "Should inspectors of building and loan associations be allowed expenses for street car fare, hotel and meals while making inspections in the city where they reside?
>
> "Providing an inspector whose residence is in another city be assigned to inspect an association in Columbus, should he be entitled to living expenses while engaged in that work?
>
> "What should be considered as an inspector's official residence?"

I have carefully examined the provisions of the General Code relating to the Bureau of Building and Loan Associations, sections 674 to 695, inclusive, and find therein nothing relating in any way to the official residence, or the right to reimbursement of the examiners of that bureau. The right to appoint examiners is conferred by section 676.

I find, by examining the appropriation laws passed by the recent sessions of the general assembly, that it is customary to provide an appropriation for traveling expenses of these examiners, as well as to provide for their salaries. Inasmuch as the salaries of these examiners are not fixed by permanent law, I am of the opinion that such appropriation items confer ample authority upon the chief inspector to reimburse his examiners for "traveling expenses" incurred by them in the performance of their duties.

The exact duties of the examiners are not prescribed by law except in so far as section 684 may be regarded as prescribing them. This section provides that:

> "At least once each year the inspector of building and loan association shall make an examination into the affairs of each such association, or cause it to be made by a person appointed by him for that purpose."

While therefore, the general duty of the examiners is to examine building and loan associations, the particular duties are such as may be prescribed by the chief inspector of building and loan associations.

It follows, therefore, that the orders of the chief inspector of building and loan associations are sufficient to authorize an examiner in his department to incur an item of "traveling" expenses. It follows also that inasmuch as there is no provision requiring examiners to maintain a permanent office in a particular portion of the state, the orders of the inspector in this respect are also conclusive, that is to say, should the inspector assign one of his examiners, say to the city of Cincinnati and direct him to maintain permanent headquarters there, that city would become the official residence of such examiner, otherwise the examiner's official residence would be the same as his domicile.

Regarding your first two questions, I may be permitted to observe they are rather questions of fact than of law. An inspector who is making an examination in the city in which he resides, is not "traveling" when so doing, except in going to and from the office of the building and loan association of which he is examiner. It is not necessary for him to procure his meals at a hotel nor secure lodging other than that provided in his own residence. Such items are not properly payable as "traveling expenses." On the hand, street car fare necessarily expended in visiting the office of such building and loan association might properly, in my opinion, be regarded as such "traveling expenses." I do not mean it to be understood that any officers having a regular office is entitled to his street car fare from his home to his office, but outside of this any extra expense to which he is put in the discharge of his duties in the way of traveling, whether on the street cars or railroad, are properly expenses that the public should pay.

When an inspector is assigned to inspect an association in a city other than that of his residence, whether that city be the capital of the state or not, all expenses incurred by him while absent from his home are, in my opinion, "traveling expenses." The fact that the principal office of the bureau is in Columbus does not, in my opinion, make it the residence of all the members of the department.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 247.

BUILDING AND LOAN EXAMINERS—COMPENSATION— OFFICIAL RESIDENCE—ALLOWANCE OF TRAVELING EXPENSES—CONTROL OF CHIEF INSPECTOR.

The appropriation items made by the general assembly for the reimbursement of examiners of building and loan associations, confer ample authority upon the chief inspector to allow traveling expenses.

The official residence of the examiners is a matter within the control of the chief inspector.

The question of traveling expenses is one of fact, and they might be justified in the home city of the examiner under circumstances when they are incurred outside of the ordinary expenses of his living routine when incurred as an incident to his official duties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 8, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 5th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "Should inspectors of building and loan associations be allowed expenses for street car fare, hotel and meals while making inspections in the city where they reside?
>
> "Providing an inspector whose residence is in another city be assigned to inspect an association in Columbus, should he be entitled to living expenses while engaged in that work?
>
> "What should be considered as an inspector's official residence?"

I have carefully examined the provisions of the General Code relating to the bureau of building and loan associations, sections 674 to 695, inclusive, and find therein nothing relating in any way to the official residence or the right to reimbursement of the examiners of that bureau. The right to appoint examiners is conferred by section 676.

I find, by examining the appropriation laws passed by the recent sessions of the general assembly, that it is customary to provide for their salaries. Inasmuch as the salaries of these examiners are not fixed by permanent law, I am of the opinion that such appropriation items confer ample authority upon the chief inspector to reimburse his examiners for "traveling expenses" incurred by them in the performance of their duties.

The exact duties of the examiners are not prescribed by law except in so far as section 684 may be regarded as prescribing them. This section provides that:

> "At least once each year the inspector of building and loan associations shall make an examination into the affairs of each such association, or cause it to be made by a person appointed by him for that purpose."

While, therefore, the general duty of the examiners is to examine building and loan associations, the particular duties are such as may be prescribed by the chief inspector of building and loan associations.

It follows, therefore, that the orders of the chief inspector of building and loan associations are sufficient to authorize an examiner in his department to incur an item of "traveling" expenses. It follows also that inasmuch as there is no provision requiring examiners to maintain a permanent office in a particular portion of the state, the orders of the inspector in this respect are also conclusive, that is to say, should the inspector assign one of his examiners, say to the city of Cincinnati and direct him to maintain permanent headquarters there, that city would become the official residence of such examiner, otherwise the examiner's official residence would be the same as his domicile.

Regarding your first two questions, I may be permitted to observe they are rather questions of fact than of law. An inspector who is making an examination in the city in which he resides, is not "traveling" when so doing, except in going to and from the office of the building and loan association of which he is examiner. It is not necessary for him to procure his meals at a hotel nor secure lodging other than that provided in his own residence. Such items are not properly payable as "traveling expenses." On the other hand, street car fare necessarily expended in visiting the office of such building and loan association might properly, in my opinion, be regarded as such "traveling expenses." I do not mean it to be understood that any officer having a regular office is entitled to his street car fare from his home to his office, but outside of this any extra expenses to which he is put in the discharge of his duties in the way of traveling, whether on the street cars or railroad, are properly expenses that the public should pay.

When an inspector is assigned to inspect an association in a city other than that of his residence, whether that city be the capital of the state or not, all expenses incurred by him while absent from his home are, in my opinion, "traveling expenses." The fact that the principal office of the bureau is in Columbus does not, in my opinion, make it the residence of all the members of the department.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

263.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF SENATE BILL NO. 40 PROVIDING FOR THE PAYMENT OF MILEAGE TO EMPLOYES OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY —NECESSITY FOR APPROPRIATION FUND—POWERS OF SINGLE BRANCH OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY—PRE-EXISTING LAW.

As there is no appropriation fund providing for the payment of railroad fare to officers of the Senate, a resolution passed by that body authorizing such payment is in conflict with article 2, section 22, of the constitution of Ohio.

Even if such a fund existed a single branch of the assembly could not provide for such compensation out of the same, unless the services were provided for by a pre-existing law, or unless a provision making the allowance be ratified by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You request my opinion as to whether or not, you, as auditor of state, can legally issue warrants upon the state treasurer in favor of the officers and employes of the state senate of Ohio for the aggregate amount of railroad fare to and from their respective homes and the capitol, on the basis of two trips per month, from January 2, 1911, to date of sine die adjournment of the 79th general assembly, as provided in senate resolution No. 40, a copy of which was submitted to me with your request for my opinion. Said senate resolution No. 40 provided as follows:

> "WHEREAS, the General Code does not provide for the allowance of railroad fare to officers and employes of the general assembly, and
>
> "WHEREAS, it is but just and right that an allowance for same be made;
>
> "Therefore, be it resolved:
>
> "Section 1. That officers and employes of the senate be paid the amounts hereinafter stated, the same to represent the aggregate amount of railroad fare to and from their homes and the capitol, on the basis of two trips per month, from January 2, 1911, to date of sine die adjournment of the general assembly, and that the auditor of state be, and is hereby directed to draw his warrant on the state treasurer for the amounts hereinafter set out, and in the name of each officer and employe or their authorized agent, the said amounts to be paid out of the legislative fund."
>
> (Followed by the names of the respective officers and employes of the senate, and the amount to be paid to each.)

The only legislative fund in existence is that which was created by house bill No. 105, entitled "An act to make sundry appropriations." Said act provided as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio;
>
> "Section 1. That there be and is hereby appropriated from any moneys in the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund, and not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $250,000 for salaries and mileage of members, per diem of clerks, sergeants at arms, and other officers and employes of the general assembly; $5,000 for contingent expenses of the house."

This bill was passed January 26, 1911, and approved by the governor on February 6, 1911. The said act specifically provided and appropriated said sums therein stated, for specific purposes, as follows:

1. Salaries and mileage of members.
2. Per diem of clerks.
3. Sergeants at arms.
4. Other officers of the general assembly.
5. $5,000 for contingent expenses of the house.

Section 22 of article II of the constitution of Ohio provides that,

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation, made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer term than two years."

The appropriation act, House Bill No. 105, above referred to, does not appropriate or provide any specific fund for the payment of mileage or railroad fare for the officers and employes of the senate, and makes no provision for a contingent fund for the state senate.

The supreme court of Ohio, in the case of State ex. rel., George L. Riley, vs. John F. Oglevee, Auditor of State, 36 O. S. at page 324 held that,

> "Neither branch of the general assembly can alone appropriate money from the treasury; but where a fund is provided by law for the contingent expenses of either branch, the disbursement of the fund for such purposes is subject to the control of such branch."

The said Senate Resolution No. 40, above referred to, having provided that said amounts be paid out of the legislative fund, is not specific enough or sufficient to meet the requirements of the law as to moneys being paid from the treasury, as provided by said section 22 of article II of the constitution.

The supreme court of our state in the case of State of Ohio, ex. rel. Field, et al, vs. Williams, Auditor of State, 34 O. S. 218, held that,

> "A single branch of the general assembly cannot, by resolution, allow compensation for extra services performed by its sergeants at arms, such compensation being inhibited by section 29, article II, of the constitution, unless the services were provided for by pre-existing law, or the allowance be ratified by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly."

The railroad fare or mileage sought to be paid to the officers and employes of the senate by said Senate Resolution No. 40, aforesaid, was not provided for by pre-existing law, and said resolution having been passed by the senate only, even were there a specific fund known as the "legislative fund" as set forth in said resolution, from which to pay said mileage aforesaid, unless ratified by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly, would under said decision of the supreme court nevertheless be illegal and you would be unauthorized to issue a warrant upon the treasurer for the payment of the same.

In view of the decisions of the supreme court, above quoted, and of section 22 of article II of the constitution, I am of the opinion that you are without legal authority to issue warrants to said officers and employes of the state senate, as provided by said Senate Resolution No. 40.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 275.

INVENTORY OF STATE LIBRARY BY AUDITOR OF STATE—NO NECESSITY TO LIST EACH BOOK SEPARATELY.

The provisions of section 273-1 with reference to taking of inventories of departments upon the retirement of their respective heads is satisfied in the case of the state library inventory by such an examination as will substantially show that all volumes are on hand.. It is not necessarily required that every book be listed separately.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 24, 1911.

Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 19th you state:

> "In making the inventory of the state library provided under this act, is it necessary to list each book separately, indicating the name, > subject, etc., or is it in compliance with the law to count or otherwise determine the number of volumes on file in the library, and depend upon the record of the librarian for the number of volumes in circulation? We are informed that there are, approximately 145,000 volumes in this library, a great number of which are always in circulation, thereby rendering it impossible to at any time find all the volumes in place in the library. You can readily see the enormity of this undertaking, if, under the provision of this law, it is necessary for our examiners to handle and list 145,000 volumes."

and you call my attention to section 273-1 of the General Code found in 101 O. L. 213.

Section 273-1 provides as follows:

> "The auditor of state, not more than twenty days nor less than ten days prior to the expiration of the term of office of any state official, who is the head of a department, shall send an accountant to the office of such retiring official for the purpose of making an inventory of all properties, supplies, furniture, credits and moneys, and any other thing belonging to the state, which it shall be the duty of such retiring official to turn over to his successor in office, or pay into the state treasury, and when such inventory has been made, such said accountant shall prepare a schedule thereof, and sign the same as such state accountant; one copy of which shall be delivered to such retiring state official, one copy thereof, to his successors in office, and one copy thereof to be filed with the governor, one copy thereof to be filed with the auditor of state, and one copy thereof to be filed with the attorney general."

It is my opinion that the meaning of the above section is that the auditor of state shall make such inventory of the property belonging to the office of the retiring state officials as will satisfy him that the property belonging to that department is to be found there, and that he should make such a list thereof as will show that to be a fact.

I do not believe that it is necessary to make a complete catalogue of the state library providing he can be satisfied without going to the time and expense of so doing that the number of volumes are on file in the library.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

297.

DOW-AIKEN TAX—INTOXICATING LIQUORS—THE EFFECT OF REMOVAL OF BUSINESS UPON AIKEN TAX.

A person engaged in the traffic of intoxicating liquors who discontinues business in one place, and opens in another will be taxed $1,000.00 under section 6071, General Code, upon each place of business, unless under section 6074 he be allowed a refunding order from the county auditor upon discontinuance of business in place No. 1.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 5, 1911, in which you ask this department for a written opinion upon the following question:

> "Can a person engage in the traffic of intoxicating liquors, who has paid the tax imposed by title II, 'Police Regulations,' chapter XV, 'Intoxicating Liquors,' General Code, commonly known as the Aiken law, during the fiscal year change the location of his business and continue the traffic without again paying said tax?"

In consideration of this question in the light of section 6071, General Code, I will not stop to consider or discuss the legislation and judicial decisions treating upon the question as to whether the assessment of $1,000 upon the business of trafficking in spiritous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquors is a tax or a license.

Section 6071 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Upon the business of trafficking in spiritous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquor, there shall be assessed yearly, and paid into the county treasury, as hereinafter provided, by each person, corporation or co-partnership engaged therein, and for each place where such business is carried on by or for such person, corporation or co-partnership, the sum of one thousand dollars."

Section 6081 of the General Code provides that an accurate description of the premises where the liquor business is conducted, and the name of the owner of the premises in which the business is carried on, must be furnished the county auditor.

Section 6080 of the General Code provides that in case of failure to collect the amount due under section 6071, the county auditor shall place the amount due and unpaid upon the tax duplicate against the real estate in which such traffic is carried on, and it shall be collected as other taxes and assessments.

By the terms of sections 6071, 6080 and 6081 General Code, it was plainly the intent of the legislature to make an assessment of $1,000 on each place where the business is carried on by any person, corporation or co-partnership, and the assessment is made a lien upon the particular place where the business is conducted, whether owned by the party carrying on the business or not.

Section 6074 General Code provides as follows:

> "When a person, company, corporation or co-partnership, engaged in such business, has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment and afteward discontinues such business, the county auditor. upon being satisfied thereof, shall issue to such person, corporation or co-partnership a refunding order for a proportionate amount of such assessment so paid, but the amount of such assessment so retained shall not be less than two hundred dollars unless such discontinuance of business has been caused by an election under a local option law or a lawful finding of a mayor or judge on a petition filed in a residence district as provided in this chapter, in which case the proportionate amount of such tax shall be refunded in full."

This section provides a method whereby any person, corporation or co-partnership that desire to change their place of business or discontinue it in such place, may secure a refunder of the assessment paid under section 6071 General Code.

Since the statute makes an assessment against the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors for each place where such business is carried on and provides for a refunder in case any person, corporation or co-partnership desires to make a change in the location of its business or quit the business, I am of the opinion that the assessment having been paid by a particular person, corporation or co-partnership upon the business of trafficking in spiritous, vinous or other intoxicating liquors, for a particular place, there can be no change in location of the business except by taking out a refunding order as provided by section 6074, and payment of a new assessment under section 6071.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

314.

TAX COMMISSION—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF SECTION 128 OF THE HOLLINGER BILL—APPROPRIATION LAW MUST BE SPECIFIC—REPAYMENT OF EXCESS TAXES.

That part of section 128 of the Hollinger bill which provides for an appropriation for an amount equal to such tax as the tax commission shall find to have been overpaid is in conflict with article 2, section 22 of the constitution of Ohio, because it is not specific and not limited to two years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 4, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 27th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

"Pursuant to the provisions of section 128 of House Bill No. 491, passed May 31, 1911,the tax commission of Ohio has made a finding in favor of the above company of an amount of corporation tax that appears to have been overpaid, due the state, and have directed the auditor of state to draw his warrant on the treasurer of state in favor of said company for the amount of such taxes so erroneously paid.

"There is no question in my mind as to the authority of the tax commission to make such review and correction, and to direct me, as auditor of state, to draw warrant on the treasury. There is some question in my mind as to whether the appropriation made in section 128 is sufficiently specific to comply with the requirements of article

II, section 22, of the constitution. The last paragraph of section 128 of the act referred to reads as follows:

"'The county treasurer or the treasurer of state, as the case may be, shall pay such warrant, and there is hereby appropriated from the general revenue fund of any such county and from the general revenue fund of the state not otherwise appropriated such amount as may be necessary to pay such warrant.'

"Heretofore, in similar instances, the attorney genral has held that an appropriation, to be available, must be for a specific amount. I have no desire to withhold the payment of this tax, which has been erroneously paid by the claimants, and to which they are evidently entitled, but in view of former decisions on such matters, I desire your opinion as to whether the appropriation provided for in section 128 is sufficient for the treasurer to honor the warrant of the auditor of state."

Section 128 of the Hollinger bill, so called, being the act passed May 31, 1911, provides in part as follows:

"In case any such bank, public utility or corporation has paid the tax or fee assessed against it under mistake, and such mistake is corrected by the commission * * * so that the amount due from such bank, public utility or corporation * * * is less than the amount paid, the * * * auditor of state * * * shall upon certificate of such correction * * * draw his warrant on the treasurer in favor of the bank, public utility or corporation for the amount so erroneously paid by it. * * * the treasurer of state * * * shall pay such warrant; and there is hereby appropriated from the general revenue fund of the state, not otherwise appropriated, such amount as may be necessary to pay such warrants."

Are these provisions constitutional? This section is permanent in its effect; that is to say, will remain the law until it is amended or repealed, unless it conflicts with the constitution. The amount sought to be appropriated is undetermined.

The constitution of the state, section 22 or article II, provides:

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

The appropriation attempted to be made by section 128 as above quoted, is not specific. Furthermore, it is attempted to be made for a longer period than two years. For both of these reasons, section 128 of the Hollinger bill insofar as it seeks to authorize the auditor of state and the treasurer of state by their joint action to draw money from the treasury of the state is in my judgment unconstitutional.

I deem it proper to state that the infirmity of the section in this particular does not, in my opinion, affect the remaining provisions of the section itself, or of the act in general. I may also state the only relief which can be constitutionally accorded to a public utility or corporation which has erroneously paid an excessive sum of money into the state treasury, is through the legislature by means of a specific appropriation for that purpose.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

319.

DOW-AIKEN TAX—ASSESSMENT IN DRY TERRITORY—DISCRETION OF AUDITOR IN ALLOWING REFUNDER.

Section 6074, General Code, providing a tax of $1,000.00 upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors applies as well to dry as to wet territory.

Under section 6089 such assessment in dry territory must carry with it a penalty of twenty per cent., and not until all of this has been paid in, can the auditor consider a refunding order.

The allowance of the refunding order is entirely at the discretion of the auditor, and he may take into consideration all surrounding facts and circumstances.

It is not for the court to restrain the treasurer from collecting such taxes nor has the court anything to do with the discretion of the county auditor in allowing a refunder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 9, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of August 7th, wherein you state:

> "I hereby request your written opinion as to the provision of section 6074, General Code, so far as the same relates to the duties of county auditors in the matter of refunding liquor tax assessments.
>
> "Does this apply to assessments in what is known as 'dry' as well 'wet' counties?"

Section 6074 of the General Code provides:

> "When a person, company, corporation or co-partnership, engaged in such business, has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment and afterward discontinues such business, the county auditor, upon being satisfied thereof, shall issue to such person, corporation or co-partnership, a refunding order for a proportionate amount of such assessment so paid, but the amount of such assessment so retained, shall not be less than two hundred dollars unless such discontinuance of business has been caused by an election under a local option law or a lawful finding of a mayor or judge on a petition filed in a residence district as provided in this chapter, in which case the proportionate amount of such tax shall be refunded in full."

This section is one of the sections relating to the taxation upon the business of the liquor traffic in this state, which law is included between sections 6071 and 6096 inclusive, and is familiarly known as the "Aiken tax."

The supreme court of Ohio in the recent cases familiarly known as the Newark liquor tax cases, has declared that the Aiken law tax operates uniformly throughout the state, that is, in what is known as "dry" as well as in "wet" territory, and that insofar as the assessments under such law are made, the law does not take cognizance of whether the party against whom the assessment is levied is within prohibited territory or not. Such being the rulings of the supreme court, it seems to me that insofar as the question of taxation of liquor business is concerned, the question of the legality or illegality of such business is not to be considered.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the entire Aiken law tax and all the provisions thereof operate within "dry" territory as well as "wet" territory, and that it is no concern of the state in assessing such business whether it is assessed in "wet" or "dry" territory.

Such being my view, I am of the opinion that section 6074 applies to assessments in "dry" counties as well as in "wet." To hold otherwise, would be to hold that although the Aiken law tax operates in each and every part of the state, and consequently, the state does not take into consideration whether or not the business of trafficking in liquor is prohibited, yet that certain sections of such statutes do not so operate. As far as the Aiken law tax is concerned, I can see no distinction in the matter of allowing refunders between the failure of a party engaged in the liquor business in the territory in which it is not prohibited to make due returns under the law and the failure to make returns by a party who is carrying on such business in territory wherein the traffic is prohibited.

Replying further to your inqury as to the duties of the county auditor in the matter of refunding liquor tax assessments, I invite your attention again to section 6074, quoted in the first part of this opinion, and its requirements in brief are:

> "When a person * * * engaged in such business has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment, and afterwards discontinues such business, the county auditor, upon being satisfied thereof shall issue * * * a refunding order * * * for a proportionate amount of such assessments so paid, but the amount of such assessment so retained, shall not be less than two hundred dollars * * *."

This is all of said section that need be considered in answering your inquiry. From these provisions, it is plain that before a refunding order can be issued in any case, the full amount of the assessments must be paid into the treasury, and the auditor, nor anyone else could make a refunder or issue a refunding order until the entire assessment has been paid. Where the assessment, which in "dry territory under section 6089 must carry with it a penalty of twenty per cent. has been paid into the treasury by the person assessed, and not until then, the auditor may consider an application for a refunding order; it will be observed, under the provisions of section 6074, the matter as to whether or not a refunding order shall be issued is left entirely to the discretion of the auditor. The person applying for such refunding order must satisfy the auditor that he has discontinued such business, and it seems to me that under this section the auditor in satisfying himself whether the applicant has actually discontinued such business, may take into consideration such facts as in his judgment may enlighten him on this question. To consider the character of the applicant, his previous reputation, whether or not he has before violated the liquor laws, the circumstances surrounding the premises which he occupies and upon which said business has been carried on, unless all the paraphernalia usually found about a saloon or about a place where intoxicating liquors are sold lawfully or unlawfully, is removed or disposed of or destroyed, it might well be doubted if the applicant were making the application in good faith.

It seems to me further, that there are so many facts and circumstances which an auditor in satifying himself upon this question, might take into consideration that it would be impossible to enumerate or call attention to all of them, and that, therefore, as the decision of the matter is within the discretion of the auditor the means by which he may reach his decision must necessarily be held to be within his discretion also, and it may well be said that in satisfying himself upon such question, he may not act as judges frequently do, when called upon to pass sentence on a person convicted of crime. That is, make such outside investigation personally or otherwise as may tend to throw light upon the matter under consideration.

I wish further to call your attention to the fact that section 6090 of the General Code provides that ten per cent. of the penalty imposed by section 6089 upon pesons certified to the auditor of state as trafficking in intoxicating liquors by the dairy and food commissioner under section 6087 et seq., shall be set apart and paid into the state treasury, and that the remainder shall be distributed as provided in section 6093.

It will be kept in mind that the Aiken law and the Rose law are not the same. The one recognizes the right to sell liquor in any part of the state upon paying tax upon the liquor business; the other recognizes the right of the people to vote the liquor business out of existence in a given county. The former, under the decision of the supreme court, provides for the enforcement of the collection of taxes without reference as to whether the territory is wet or dry; it provides that upon the business of trafficking in spiritous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquor, there shall be assessed yearly and paid into the county treasury as provided in sections subsequent to section 6071 by each person, corporation or co-partnership, engaged therein and in each place where such business is carried on by such person, corporation or co-partnership, the sum of $1,000.00.

Section 6074 provides that:

> "When a person, company, corporation or co-partnership engaged in such business, has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment and afterward discontinues such business, the county auditor, upon being satisfied thereof, shall issue to such person, company, corporation or co-partnership a refunding order for a proportionate amount of such assessment so paid."

I see no reason for reading into the statutes the idea of voluntary payment. The court, in my judgment, has nothing whatever to do with the whole controversy except in so far as its aid is necessary to enforce the collection of the assessment.

I have no hesitancy in saying that the action of Judge Nicholas in refusing a restraining order upon the treasurer of Coshocton county is correct. It is not for the court to restrain the treasurer from collecting such taxes, and that distinguished jurist is undoubtedly right upon the question. On the other hand, the court has nothing to do with the discretion of the county auditor in allowing a refunder.

Suppose a man sold one drink of whiskey, and as a consequence was compelled to pay the Aiken-Dow tax; that within a month after such payment he was killed; that all of this occurred within three months, could it be claimed for a moment that the state of Ohio is not to refund to his estate for the nine months that he is out of business? I cannot conceive of an interpretation that would forbid this refunder. The object of the refunder is perfectly apparent. The state of Ohio does not desire to collect taxes on a traffic not in existence. The penalties provided are ample to meet all of the trouble arising from having to go to court to enforce collection. To my mind, the letter of the law, the spirit of the law and common honesty suggest the giving of the county auditor discretion to make a refunder. On the other hand, the auditor should be quite sure that no refunder should be issued to one except a person who has beyond doubt discontinued business. The latter is sufficient protection to the public—the former is common honesty to be practiced by the state.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

324.

APPROPRIATIONS—PERRY CENTENNIAL AND PERRY MEMORIAL BUILDING—LEGISLATIVE INTENT.

The Perry Centennial appropriation bills of 1911 and 1912 express clear and specific intents of their own and therefore are free and independent of, and not to be governed or restricted by the Perry Centennial appropriation bills passed May 9, 1910.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 15, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The answer to your communication of July 28th, in regard to the appropriations for the Perry Victory Centennial Commission of Ohio has been unavoidably delayed until this time. Your letter in regard to this matter is as follows:

> "There was appropriated in the general appropriation bill for 1911, $25,000 for 'expenses Perry memorial and centennial celebration.' The question arises as to whether any part of this appropriation can be used by the Perry's Victory Centennial Commission for the expenses of the members of the commission and any other necessary expenditures that they may have made in carrying out the provisions of the act of May 9, 1910, page 176, vol. 101, O. L. There would be no question in my mind but that this appropriation could be used for such expenses were it not for the preamble to the act referred to, which clearly indicates the intention of the general assembly that a total sum of $75,000 should be apppropriated in the aid of the erection of a permanent memorial building. Twenty-five thousand dollars of this amount was appropriated (page 176, 101 O. L.) in 1910, 'solely toward the erection of the said memorial building on Put-in-Bay island.' In addition, on the same page, is appropriated the sum of $5,000 for the use of the commission for its actual and necessary expenses. The general appropriation bill of 1911 carried an item for the commission of $25,000 for 'expenses Perry memorial and centennial celebration.' The appropriation bill of 1912 carried an item of $20,000 for the same purpose.
>
> 'I would be pleased to have your written opinion as to whether it was the intention of the legislature that these two columns, namely, $25,000 in 1911 and $20,000 in 1912, should be used solely for the purpose of the erection of a memorial building on Put-in-Bay Island, as was the $25,000 appropriated in 1910, or if any part of the appropriations of 1911 and 1912 can be used by the Perry's Victory Memorial Commission for the expenses of the members, and salaries of secretary or other employes of the commission."

The act of April 26, 1910, making the first appropriation for this centennial and memorial is found in 101 O. L., page 175. The preamble to this act is quite lengthy, but it seems necessary, in order to arrive at the intention of the legislature, to set it out in full. The act is entitled:

> "An act making an appropriation in behalf of a Perry's victory centennial celebration and the erection of a permanent memorial on Put-in-Bay Island during the year 1913 in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the battle of Lake Erie and of General William Henry Harrison's northwestern campaign in the War of 1812."

and the preamble is as follows:

> "WHEREAS, The state of Ohio by joint resolution of the general assembly, passed February 28, 1908, authorized its governor to appoint, and in pursuance thereof he did appoint, five commissioners to prepare and carry out plans for a Perry's victory centennial to be held during the year 1913 on Put-in-Bay Island, Lake Erie, state of Ohio, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the battle of Lake Erie, fought and won off that island in Lake Erie, September 10, 1813, the primary objects of the celebration to be the erection of a permanent memorial to Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry and the observance of the centenary of his naval victory and of the military campaign of General William Henry Harrison the same year, and of the peace of 1814; also to take the form of an educational, military, naval and historical exposition; and
>
> "WHEREAS, By like resolution of the general assembly adopted in 1909, the governor of Ohio was authorized to and did appoint four additional members of said commission for the like purpose; and,
>
> "WHEREAS, The governors of the states of Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, New York, Rhode Island and Kentucky by the unanimous votes of their respective legislatures have each since appointed five commissioners to likewise co-operate the same ends, and with said Ohio commissioners in such Perry victory centennial so to be held; and,
>
> "WHEREAS, The states of Indiana and Minnesota will be invited and are expected to also appoint commissioners for the same purpose; and
>
> "WHEREAS, Said states have taken and are expected to take further action to aid in securing said centennial and exposition; and
>
> "WHEREAS, Said commissioners of Ohio and of the other states herein named, have organized with the name 'Perry's Victory Centennial Commission,' and the Ohio commissioners have submitted to the governor and general assembly an exhaustive report embodying appropriate and practical plans for the proper celebration of said centennial anniversary; and,
>
> "WHEREAS, It is a part of the said plans to erect on said island, with the aid of the national government and the states participating in the said centennial celebration, a permanent 'Perry memorial,' combining the objects of a monument and lighthouse, wireless telegraph, meteorological and life-saving stations and aquarium, to be of perpetual usefulness for such and other purposes; and,
>
> "WHEREAS, House Bill No. 16368, introduced by Congressman J. Warren Keifer, of Ohio, as representing the Ohio delegation and appropriating the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in aid of the erection of said memorial in conjunction with the said centennial celebration, is now pending in congress with every prospect of favorable consideration; and,

"WHEREAS, The commission appointed by the governor of Ohio, as aforesaid, in said report to the governor recommends a suitable appropriation to carry out the plans and purposes therein outlined; and,

"WHEREAS, It is the sense of the general assembly that there shall be appropriated the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars in aid of the erection of a permanent memorial building, and an appropriation of five thousand dollars for the use of the commission for its actual and necessary expenses; therefore * * *."

From this it is clear that it was the intention of the legislature to make an appropriation or appropriations not only to erect a permanent memorial, but also in behalf of the Perry's victory centennial celebration, and the first purpose as contemplated in the appointment of commissioners was to prepare and carry out plans for a Perry's victory centennial to be held during the year 1913.

Afterwards, as further appears from the said preamble, other states and the United States were invited to participate in the said celebration, and the legislatures of the several states expressed their intention to co-operate in the said celebration; and when the Ohio commissioners submitted their preliminary report to the governor, in addition to plans for the proper celebration of the said centennial, said report included plans for the erection of a permanent Perry memorial as set forth in the said preamble. Therefore, the plan as it now exists and as it existed at the time of the passage of the said act was two-fold; first, a centennial celebration to be held in 1913 on Put-in-Bay Island; second, the erection of a permanent memorial on said island.

The last clause of the preamble would seem to indicate that it was the intention of the legislature, that is of the 78th general assembly of Ohio, to make an appropriation of $75,000 "in aid of the erection of a permanent memorial building and an appropriation of $5,000 for the use of the commission for its actual and necessary expenses," but when we come to the enacting clause, section 1, we find that the legislature did not at this time appropriate $75,000, and the only sum it appropriated was $25,000, which was specifically appropriated to be used "solely toward the erection of the said memorial building on Put-in-Bay Island." There was also an appropriation of $5,000 for the use of the commission for actual necessary expenses.

This ends the matter so far as this particular act and specific appropriation are to be considered. The said $25,000 can only be used towards the erection of the memorial building.

The 79th general assembly by the act of May 31, 1911, House Bill 566, being an act to make the general appropriations for the year 1911, made the following appropriations, "Expenses Perry memorial and centennial celebration at Put-in-Bay to be disbursed by Perry's Victory Centennial Commission of Ohio—$25,000." Taking the language of this act, "Expenses of Perry memorial and centennial celebration" and the title to the act previously referred to, namely, 101 O. L. 175, "Making an appropriation in behalf of a Perry's victory centennial celebration and the erection of a permanent memorial on Put-in-Bay Island * * " it seems to be clear that it was the intention of the last legislature (i. e., the 79th general assembly of Ohio) to appropriate $25,000 for the expenses of the Perry memorial and centennial celebration. This language is explicit, brief and clear and corresponds with the purposes heretofore expressed by the legislature. It seems to me that it would be doing violence to the wording of the act as used to say that it is to be construed as modified and limited by the language used in the last clause of the preamble to the act of 1910, that appropriation, as heretofore pointed out, was to be used "solely toward the erection of the said memorial building." It may have been the intention of that legislature that subsequent legislatures should appropriate $50,000 additional to be used solely toward the erection of the memorial building, but the subsequent legislature (in this case the 79th general assembly) was not bound by the mere intent expressed by the 78th general assembly. If it wished to carry out said intent, all that would have been needed would have been to put in the present appropriation bill "Expenses Perry memorial" and omit the words, "and centennial celebration," but it did not do this, and this act stands by itself without any reference to former acts, and as its terms are too clear to admit of any other construction, I must necessarily hold that the act is to be construed as it reads, that is, an appropriation is made of $25,000 for the expenses of the Perry memorial and centennial celebration, which is to be disbursed by the Perry's Victory Centennial Commission of Ohio. This also applies to the appropriation bill for 1912 carrying a similar item of $20,000.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

329.

STATE BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—MERGER OF APPROPRIATIONS—DUTIES OF BOARD, STATE AUDITOR AND THE STATE TREASURER.

The state board of administration under act of May 7, 1911 (102 O. L., 211) is empowered to merge appropriations into the three heads of "Maintenance," "Ordinary Repairs and Improvements," and "Specific Purposes," so as to conform to said act.

The state auditor and the state treasurer are fully authorized to open a new set of accounts so far as the appropriations are concerned, agreeably to the act aforesaid.

It would be well, however, to adopt a system which would apprise the state treasurer and state auditor of the fact that the voucher drawn for a certain purpose under the three general heads does not exceed in amount the specific sum appropriated by the legislature for any specific purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 31, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of the 29th inst. just received, wherein you inquire:

> "Can the treasurer of state and auditor of state legally merge the appropriations made by the last general assembly for the use of each institution for the year ending February 15, 1912, except specific purposes, under maintenance and ordinary repairs and improvements?
>
> "Can the auditor of state legally issue his warrant on the treasurer of state in payment of vouchers authorized by the Ohio board of administration, and draw on the funds when so merged?"

Section 7 of the act approved May 17, 1911, found in year book 102, at page 211, provides as follows:

"The board, in addition to the powers expressly conferred, shall have all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive, administrative and fiscal supervision over all said institutions."

Section 31 of the said act provides as follows:

"Each managing officer shall before each session of the general assembly present to said fiscal supervisor an itemized list of appropriations desired for maintenance, repairs and improvements and special purposes, as he considers necessary for the period of time to be covered by appropriations. The fiscal supervisor shall tabulate such statements and present them to the board of administration with his recommendations. It shall then be the duty of the board to present the needs of the institutions to the general assembly. For this purpose a per capita allowance for the inmates, patients and pupils of each of the institutions shall be arrived at and a total allowance for maintenance asked for on the basis of actual number and estimated increase. The fiscal supervisor and the board shall furnish to the governor and to the general assembly such information as may be required regarding appropriations requested. It is the intent and meaning of this section that all requests for appropriations for said institutions shall be placed under sole control of the board, and that appropriations for the maintenance and for ordinary repairs and improvements thereof shall be made to the board in single sums to be used for the several institutions according to their varying needs.

"Hereafter the appropriations for said institutions shall be of three classes:

"(1) Maintenance.

"(2) Ordinary repairs and improvements.

"(3) Specific purposes.

"Appropriations for specific purposes shall cover all items for construction, extraordinary repairs and purchase of land and shall be used only for the institutions and purposes specified therein."

Section 30 of the said act provides as follows:

"The state treasurer shall have charge of all funds under the jurisdiction of the board and shall pay out the same only in accordance with the provisions of this act; provided, that the moneys designated and approved by the board and the state auditor as salary and contingent funds in the monthly estimates shall be placed, not later than the first day of each month, in the hands of the managing officer of each institution, who shall act as treasurer thereof. Moneys in the hands of the officials of the several institutions at the organization of the board shall be transferred forthwith to the state treasurer. Moneys collected from various sources such as the sale of goods, farm products and all miscellaneous articles, shall be transmitted on or before Monday of each week to the state treasurer and a detailed statement of such collections made to the fiscal supervisor by each managing officer; but the receipts from manufacturing industries shall be used and accounted for as provided in section 32 hereof."

Section 29 of the said act provides as follows:

"For the purpose of proper regulation, recording and auditing the various expenditures of said institutions the managing officers thereof shall prepare and present to the fiscal supervisor in triplicate, not less than fifteen days before the first day of each month, and on forms furnished by the board, a detailed estimate of all supplies, materials, improvements and money needed during each month. The fiscal supervisor shall renew such estimates, and in writing advise changes, if any, giving his reasons therefor, and present them to the board. The officer making the estimate may appeal to the board on any change so advised, due notice of which shall be given him. Estimates for periods longer than one month may be made in the same manner by the managing officer for staple articles designated by the board or for other supplies. Each estimate may include a contingent fund of not to exceed three per cent. of the total amount for maintenance for the period of the estimate, for which no detailed account need be given in the estimate, but such fund shall be drawn upon only in due form as herein provided and under the rules of the board. The fiscal supervisor shall return to the managing officer one copy of every estimate with the board's approval or alterations in writing, furnish one copy to the state auditor, and file the third in the office of the board. The state auditor shall ascertain that the estimates so received do not exceed the respective appropriations, and shall draw warrants on the state treasurer monthly for the salary and contingent funds for each institution, which shall be placed in the hands of the managing officer thereof. Itemized payrolls or vouchers for all payments shall be drawn in triplicate. One copy shall be kept on file by the managing officer, one be given to the fiscal supervisor, and one to the state auditor, who shall issue a warrant on the state treasurer thereon. Each voucher shall contain a statement of the managing officer, or of some other bonded officer designated by him, certifying that the supplies and materials purchased conform to the contract and samples, and that the improvements or repairs made or special services rendered were fully satisfactory; that the approving officer was in no way financially interested in the transaction to which the same relates, and that he has full knowledge of the value of the purchase or work or services in question; such statement to be made according to forms provided by the board; provided, that payrolls for temporary employments in cases of emergency may be made at any time after the services are performed, but all such payrolls shall be certified by the managing officer in the same manner as other vouchers, who shall also certify that each person named in the payroll actually rendered the services for the time and at the rate charged therein."

In connection with your inquiry I have one from the Ohio board of administrations, a copy of which is as follows:

"Section 31, paragraph 2, of an act 'to create a board of administration for the institutions of the state * * * passed May 17, 1911, reads as follows:

" 'Hereafter the appropriations for said instiutions shall be of three classes:

(1) Maintenance.

(2) Ordinary repairs and improvements.

(3) Specific purposes.'

"It is the desire of this department to merge the several appropriations made by the legislature to the institutions into the funds above named. For example:

Boys' Industrial School	Partial	General	Total
Current expenses	$50,000 00	$65,000 00	$115,000 00
Salaries of officers, teachers and trustees' expenses	20,000 00	23,000 00	43,000 00
Ordinary repairs and improvements including gas wells		7,000 00	7,000 00
Rewards		700 00	700 00
Necessary additions and improvements in power plant		2,500 00	2,500 00
	$70,000 00	$98,200 00	$168,200 00

"The board desires to merge the above appropriations as follows:

MAINTENANCE

Current expenses	$115,000 00
Salaries of officers, teachers and trustees' expenses	43,000 00
	$158,000 00

ORDINARY REPAIRS AND IMPROVEMENTS

Ordinary repairs and improvements	$ 7,000 00
	$ 7,000 00

SPECIFIC PURPOSES

Rewards	$ 700 00
Necessary additions and improvements in the power plant	2,500 00
	$ 3,200 00
Total	$168,200 00

"You will observe that the above merger is no diversion of funds, but is simply a change in the manner of bookkeeping. The appropriations made by the legislature for the institutions for the year ending February 15, 1913, is made in the same manner as outlined in the above statement, and it is the intention of this department, providing the auditor and treasurer are satisfied that this matter of merging the funds is no violation of the law, to request them to classify their several appropriations as they now carry them and merge them in this way.

"I attach hereto a full statement showing the manner in which it is desired that these funds should be merged for the several institutions, and you will note, for instance, the appropriations for the salaries of managers at the penitentiary; inasmuch as these officers no longer exist, such appropriations should be turned back into the general revenue fund.

"I trust you will take this matter under immediate consideration, and advise the state auditor and state treasurer and, also, this department, of your opinion as to the legality of the merger outlined above."

From the foregoing you will observe that by the provisions of section 7 of the act, the board is given all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive, administrative and fiscal supervision over all said institutions.

You will observe that section 30 aforesaid, provides that the state treasurer shall have charge of all funds under the jurisdiction of the board and shall pay out the same only in accordance with the provisions of the act referred to before, to-wit: the act of May 17, 1911.

You will further observe that by provision of section 31, it is provided hereafter the appropriations for the said institutions shall be of three classes: 1. Maintenance. 2. Ordinary repairs and improvements. 3. Specific purposes.

Section 12 of the aforesaid act provides as follows:

> "The board shall cause to be kept in its office a proper and complete set of books and accounts with each institution, which shall clearly show the nature and amount of every expenditure authorized and made thereat, and contain an account of all appropriations made by the general assembly and of all other funds, with the disposition thereof. It shall prescribe the form of vouchers, records and methods of keeping accounts at each of the institutions which shall be as nearly uniform as possible. The board or any member or officer thereof shall have the power to examine the records of each institution at any time. It shall also have the power to authorize its bookkeeper, accountant, or any other employe to examine and check the records, accounts and vouchers or to take an inventory of the property of any institution, or to do whatever may be deemed necessary, and to pay the actual and reasonable expenses incurred in such service upon an itemized account thereof being filed and approved."

You will further observe that the appropriation act providing money available to pay liabilities incurred on and after February 16, 1912, so far as relates to the Ohio board of administration, is to be found in year book 102, page 407, and the same is divided under the heads of Maintenance, Ordinary repairs and improvements, and Specific purposes, so that as to any period after February 16, 1912, there can be no question, and the only matter of concern is as to the power of the state board of administration to merge the appropriations made for the year prior to February 16, 1912, and group them under the three heads of Maintenance, Ordinary repairs and improvements, and specific purposes.

Without going into detail in this opinion, it is sufficient to say that the act establishing the state board of administration for state institutions sets forth in the beginning its intents and purposes as follows, to-wit:

> "Section 1. The intent and purpose of this act are to provide humane and scientific treatment and care and the highest attainable degree of individual development for the dependent wards of the state;
>
> "To provide for the delinquent such wise conditions of modern education and training as will restore the largest possible portion of them to useful citizenship:
>
> "To promote the study of the causes of dependency and delinquency, and of mental, moral and physical defects, with a view to cure and ultimate prevention;
>
> "To secure by uniform and systematic management, the highest attainable degree of economy in the administration of the state institutions consistent with the objects in view;

"This act shall be liberally construed to these ends."

Section 8 of the said act provides:

"The board on its organization shall succeed to and be vested with the title and all rights of the present boards of trustees, boards of managers, and commissions of and for said several institutions in and to land, money or other property, real and personal, held for the benefit of their respective institutions, or for other public use, without further process of law, but in trust for the state of Ohio. Said several boards of trustees, boards of managers, and commissions now charged with duties respecting the institutions above named shall on and after August 15, 1911, have no further legal existence and the board is hereby authorized and directed to assume and continue, as successor thereof, the construction, control and management of said institutions, subject to the provisions of this act."

From the foregoing it is perfectly apparent that the object of the act is that the board of administration shall succeed to and be vested with the title and all the rights of the present boards of trustees, boards of managers and commissions of the aforesaid several institutions in and to the lands, moneys, and other property, real and personal, held for the benefit of the respective institutions or for any other public use.

You will also notice that the said "several boards of trustees, boards of managers and commissions" now chargeable with the duties respecting the institutions above named, shall on and after August 15, 1911, have no further legal existence, and the board by the said act is authorized and directed to assume and continue as successor thereof in the construction, control and management of the said institutions.

In short, it is unreasonable to assume that the legislature would provide for an entirely new method of managing state institutions and abolish the old method of management and relieve the former managers and trustees, and at the same time deprive the new board of all the fiscal necessities and advantages of the old.

The appropriations for the year ending February 12, 1912, were made agreeably to the old order of things, but the board of administration, together with the state treasurer, are required under the statutes to conform to the new order of things. It is not reasonable to assume that the new board is to institute two systems of bookkeeping. On the other hand, it is only fair to believe that the new board will start out with its new system of bookkeeping as a permanent one in conformity with the new order of things as made by the act aforesaid, and not in respect to any other.

I wish to state that the board of administration has a perfect right to merge the funds appropriated by the legislature so as to conform to the act of May 17, 1911. By so doing the said board is not making any appropriation—it is simply merging the funds already appropriated so as an account of same may be kept in accordance with the act aforesaid.

My holding is, therefore, that the state board of administration is empowered to merge the said funds and certify its action to the state auditor and to the state treasurer, and the state auditor and the state treasurer are fully authorized to open a new set of accounts, so far as the appropriations are concerned, agreeably to the order of the board of administration, and the act of May 17, 1911, aforesaid.

In order to avoid the possibility of exceeding the amount appropriated for specific purposes after the funds have been merged in accordance with the act creating the state board of administration, it would be well to adopt some system which would apprise the state treasurer and the state auditor of the fact that the voucher drawn for a certain purpose under the three general heads does not exceed in amount the specific amount appropriated by the legislature for any specific purpose.

Very respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

338.

DEPUTY COUNTY AUDITOR AND DEPUTY SEALER OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES—OFFICES ARE COMPATIBLE.

County auditor in his capacity as sealer of weights and measures may appoint his deputy auditor to serve in the capacity of deptuy sealer of weights and measures.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 5, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 19th, requesting an opinion on the question submitted by J. M. Fischer, auditor of Clinton county, to-wit:

> "Is it permissible for a county auditor as sealer of weights and measures to appoint a person who is serving in his office as deputy auditor, to the position of deputy sealer or weights and measures? That is, can a person fill the positions of deputy auditor and deputy sealer of weights and measures and legally draw pay for service in each capacity?"

Section 2622 of the General Code, as amended May 31, 1911 (102 O. L. 426), provides as follows:

> "Each county sealer of weights and measures shall appoint by writing under his hand and seal, a deptuy who shall compare weights and measures wherever the same are used or maintained for use within his county, or which are brought to the office of the county sealer for that purpose, with the copies of the original standards in the possession of the county sealer, who shall receive a salary fixed by the county commissioners, to be paid by the county, which salary shall be instead of all fees or charges otherwise allowed by law. Such deputy shall also be employed by the county sealer to assist in the prosecution of all violations of laws relating to weights and measures."

The sole question is whether the respective positions of deputy auditor and deputy sealer of weights and measures are compatible. As Lord Mansfield (Rex vs. Guyer, 1st Burt 226) long ago said, each case must be judged by its own peculiar circumstances. There is no constitutional or statutory prohibition against the person holding the two offices mentioned, and in the event that the taking on of the added duties did not so interfere with the duties of the office he already held, I can see no reason why the same person could not hold the two offices and legally draw pay for services in each capacity.

I am therefore of the opinion that the inquiry should be answered in the affirmative.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

343.

COUNTY COMMSISIONERS—RIGHT TO PAY EXPENSES OF DEPUTY SEALER OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 5, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of July 19th, enclosing a letter from H. A. Buerhaus, auditor of Muskingum county, requesting an opinion upon the following question:

> "Can the county commissioners pay the expenses of the deputy sealer of weights and measures in going over the county listing measures, etc.? I can find nothing in the code one way or the other, and we must know before we fix his salary?"

On June 28th, this department answered this question in an opinion to the state sealer of weights and measures, as follows:

> "* * * if by 'necessary traveling expenses' is meant any of the personal expenses of the officer, then the law is well settled that no such allowance can be made. But if in the performance of his duties as a county official it became necessary to incur any expense, which expense would be for the county rather than for himself, personally I am inclined to the belief that the county commissioners could reimburse him for such expense. It is difficult to lay down a rule which would be applicable to all cases; every particular case would have to be considered individually, and while there is no provision of law fixing the exact expense for which reimbursement may be made, the ancient custom, which has become the law, allows reimbursement for what is really the expense of the political division.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

357.

TAX COMMISSION—NOTIFICATION TO STATE AUDITOR AND STATE TREASURER OF CORRECTED FINDINGS.

The auditor of state within the meaning of section 128 of the Hollinger bill is the proper officer to whom the tax commission should certify any correction made by it of its findings.

The proper procedure for the tax commission would be also to authorize the treasurer of state of such corrected findings.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 13, 1911.

HON. D. S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 27th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Section 128 of the Hollinger law says that 'the tax commission upon application may make such correction in its determination, finding or order, as it may deem proper and its decision in the matter shall be final. Such correction shall be certified to the proper official who shall correct his records and duplicate in accordance therewith.'
>
> "The tax commission has been notifying the auditor of state as the proper official, and this department gets no certification or official authority to change its records in accordance with the findings of the tax commission, although the treasurer of state has the original duplicate.
>
> "I would therefore ask your opinion as to who is the proper official mentioned in section 128 of the Hollinger law and how the treasurer of state should receive official notice to change the duplicate in accordance with the findings of the tax commission."

Said section 128, which is sufficiently quoted in your letter, is to be read in connection with section 99 of the Hollinger law, which provides that,

> "After determining the amount of taxes or fees payable to the state * * * the auditor of state shall thereupon prepare proper duplicates and reports, and certify them to the treasurer of state for collection * * *."

and with section 100 of said act, which provides that,

> "The treasurer of state shall * * * render a daily itemized statement to the auditor of state of the amount of taxes or fees collected and the name of the company from whom collected, under all provisions of this act."

The question which you present is perhaps as much a question of administrative management as of law, but inasmuch as three separate departments are concerned, and inasmuch as no one department has authority to prescribe rules for the government of others, I have no hesitancy in submitting to you my views as to the proper procedure.

Under the above cited and quoted sections it is my opinion that the auditor of state is the "proper officer" within the meaning of section 128 to whom the tax commission should certify any correction made by it of its findings. This is true because the auditor of state must in all cases compute the tax due. Again, the auditor of state is himself required to keep a record of the sums charged for collection as well as a record of payments thereon. On the other hand, the treasurer of state, who is the custodian of the duplicates, must have some authority to make a change therein. This authority ought properly to emanate from the auditor.

In my judgment, therefore, when the tax commission has reviewed and corrected its findings in a given particular, it should notify the auditor of state, who should correct his own records in accordance therewith and thereupon by letter or upon such blank forms as may be prepared, notify the treasurer of state of the amount due under such corrected finding from the company affected thereby. Thereupon, the treasurer would be authorized to correct all his own records and duplicates in the matter.

By following the above suggested procedure and by formulating blanks if necessary, in accordance therewith, it seems to me that any difficulty which may now be present in the administration of the law in question would be obviated.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

367.

RESOLUTION OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS PROVIDING FOR COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES OF COUNTY AND ASSISTANT SURVEYORS AND ENGINEERS—STATUTORY AUTHORIZATIONS AND INHIBITIONS.

A resolution of the county commissioners passed Oct. 4, 1904, providing for compensation and expenses for county surveyors and assistants is invalid, for the reason that the same is provided for by statute.

A similar resolution providing for compensation of engineers and assistants is valid by virtue of sections 2403-2413 G. C.

2. The term "mileage" includes general expenses of travel on official business.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of July 1, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the legality of mileage paid by virtue of the following resolutions:

> "Under a resolution of the commissioners of Franklin county, page 286 of the journal in use October 4, 1904, Walter Braun was appointed deputy engineer from September 1, 1904, to September 1, 1905; seven assistant engineers were provided for. Per diem for both engineer and first four assistant engineers was fixed at $4.00 per day for bridge and $5.00 per day for road work. The three additional assistants were to receive $4.00, $3.00 and $2.00 per day respectively. In addition, the engineer and all the assistants and deputies were to be allowed 5 cents per mile.
>
> "July 31, 1905, Commissioner's Journal No. 12, page 520, another resolution was adopted reciting that the extra amount of work in the county surveyor's office required the appointment of an engineer and assistants and that, under the act of 97 O. L. 304, certain assistants named therein were appointed and their compensation fixed at a flat rate per month.

"We understand that the prosecuting attorney's department of Franklin county has rendered written opinion that mileage could be legally charged and collected from the county at least under the first, if not under the second of the above resolutions.

"Kindly advise this department whether or not findings should be made against such surveyor and deputies for the mileage so charged."

The county surveyor is often known as county engineer, and I take it that the resolution of October 4, 1904, appointed Walter Braun as county surveyor to fill a vacancy in that office, and that the assistants were deputy county surveyors.

The compensation of a county surveyor is fixed by statute.

Section 282 of the General Code provides as follows:

"When employed by the day, the surveyor shall receive five dollars for each day and his necessary actual expenses. When not so employed he shall be entitled to receive the following fees:" (Here follows schedule of fees.)

In 1904 the compensation was $4.00 per day.

The compensation of a county surveyor and his deputies is fixed by statute and the commissioners had, at that time, no authority to fix the same. The statute does not provide for any mileage, and therefore mileage could not be collected by a county surveyor or his deputy.

However, if Mr. Braun was appointed as engineer by virtue of 97 O. L., page 304, a different statute governs the compensation. This act is now known as sections 2408 to 2413, inclusive, of the General Code. Section 2411 authorizes the county commissioners to make appointments of engineers and assistants upon request of the county surveyor. I might add that the commissioners had no authority to appoint deputy county surveyors.

The method of fixing the compensation of engineers appointed under this act is provided in section 2413 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"The board of county commissioners shall fix the compensation of all persons appointed or employed under the provisions of the preceding sections, which, with their reasonable expenses shall be paid from the county treasury upon the allowance of the board. No provisions of law requiring a certificate that the money therefor is in the treasury, shall apply to the appointment or employment of such persons."

The compensation is left to the discretion of the county commissioners. Under the resolution of October 4, 1904, they have fixed the compensation at so much per day and five cents per mile. The mileage allowed is part of the compensation. This method of paying officials was used by the legislature in fixing the compensation of county commissioners.

In the case of Richardson vs. State, 66 O. S. 108, Williams, C. J., in the opinion of the court on page 111, says:

"It must be conceded that the three dollars per day allowed the commissioners is the limit of his compensation for his day's work, in whatever way it may be performed in the discharge of his official duties. He cannot lawfully claim that the county is also bound to pay his board or other personal expenses. And, the 'mileage allowed him is intended to compensate him for expenses of his travel on official business.' That is the legal meaning and import of the term."

Section 2413 of the General Code delegates to the commissioners the power of fixing the compensation of the engineer and his assistants. The commissioners exercised that power under resolution of October 4, 1904, and the per diem and mileage so fixed is legal.

Under the resolution of July 31, 1905, the compensation was fixed at so much per month, and as no mileage was provided for in the resolution, none could be collected.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

Addendum:

While we hold that mileage cannot legally be charged and collected from the county under the second of the above resolutions, and that there should be a finding under this second head against those that unlawfully collected it, yet when the matter of settlement comes up it may be found that these officers did not collect their reasonable expenses to which they are entitled under the act found in 97 O. L. 304. Under that act they are entitled to their expenses, and it may be that they did not receive them, must mistakenly took mileage instead.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

396.

OHIO NATIONAL GUARD CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL—PAYMENT FOR COST OF POSTAGE CANNOT BE PAID FROM THE "MAINTENANCE OHIO NATIONAL GUARD FUND."

By reason of article 2, section 22, providing for specific appropriation for all moneys to be drawn from the treasury, the cost of postage connected with a correspondence school for officers of the Ohio National Guard cannot be paid out of the fund for "Maintenance of Ohio National Guard."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 28, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 14th, requesting an official opinion upon the question submitted in the letter of General C. C. Weybrecht, which is as follows.

"In conjunction with the officers of the regular army, who have been detailed to the state of Ohio by the war department, this department proposes to inaugurate a correspondence school for officers of the Ohio National Guard, commencing November 1st.

"A ruling has been made by the attorney general of the United States that government penalty envelopes carrying free postage cannot be used for this work, and it would be up to us to pay postage on all this correspondence.

"It has been estimated that it will cost at least $600 to cover the postage, over and above what this department uses annually. Our fund for 'contingent expenses' is barely large enough to carry on the regular work of this department, and it cannot stand this extra draft. Inasmuch as this work is for the benefit, use and maintenance of the Ohio National Guard, would it not be possible to pay this postage out of the fund for 'Maintenance Ohio National Guard?' "

As I take it, the matter of the correspondence school for officers of the Ohio National Guard is a new proposition and novel venture, and I conclude that no suggestion of this matter ever entered the legislative mind when appropriations were made for the various matters pertaining to the adjutant general's department and the Ohio National Guard by the last general assembly.

Section 5265 of the General Code provides:

"The auditor of state shall credit to the 'state military fund' from the general revenues of the state, a sum equal to ten cents for each person who was a resident of the state, as shown by each last preceding federal census. Such fund shall be a continuous fund and available only for the support of the organized militia. It shall not be diverted to any other fund or used for any other purpose."

Section 5266 of the General Code provides:

"The general assembly shall appropriate annually, and divide into two funds, the amount authorized by the preceding section. Such funds shall be respectively known as the 'state armory fund' and 'maintenance Ohio National guard fund.' "

Section 5267 of the General Code provides:

"From the 'maintenance Ohio National Guard fund,' the adjutant general shall pay the per diem, transportation, subsistence and incidental expenses of militia companies, inspections and incidental expenses of camp, including horse hire, fuel, lumber, forage of horses, and medical supplies."

Section 5268 of the General Code provides:

"From the 'state armory fund,' the board shall provide armories by leasing, purchasing or constructing as provided in this chapter."

General Weybrecht asks if the cost of the correspondence school can be paid out of the fund for "maintenance Ohio National Guard." Inasmuch as article II, section 22, of the constitution provides:

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation, made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

and since section 5267 of the General Code specifically states what can be paid out of the maintenance fund, I am of the opinion that the cost of the correspondence school referred to cannot be paid out of the "maintenance fund, Ohio National Guard." Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 396.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—DOW-AIKEN TAX—STOREHOUSE—TRAFFICKING.

The maintenance of a storehouse for intoxicating liquors is subject to the Aiken tax where in actual fact orders are taken at or sale made from such place.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 28, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of some time ago, wherein you request an opinion upon a question submitted in a letter addressed to you by the Bruckman Brewing Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which reads as follows:

> "In reply to your letter of April 20th, will say that we were thinking of starting a bottle beer route through this county, and in doing so we must establish a depot as a storage room for the bottle beer, also for horses and wagons, which would be central and more convenient to make deliveries from, instead of making daily deliveries from our plant. Would you kindly let us know if we must procure Aiken license for the same?"

As I understand the inquiry it is desired to have a depot or storage place for supplies, to-wit: bottled beer, at some point in the county other than the manufactory, and from this depot make deliveries by wagon, of bottled beer.

In order to determine the question whether such a manner of conducting such a business would be liable to the payment of the Aiken tax, it is necessary to determine whether the sales of said beer, in law, would take place at the manufactory or elsewhere, for if the sales are at the manufactory they come within the exception of the law and no Aiken tax is assessable, while, if the sales are made anywhere else the tax necessarily attaches. You do not state specifically how or where the orders for the beer are to be taken. I take it, as you say you are "thinking of starting a bottle beer route through the county" that the drivers or the wagons, or the custodian of the depot, or some other agent, is to solicit or receive orders which are filled from the storage place, and under such state of facts, I am inclined to the opinion that this would constitute sales other than at the manufactory, and therefore would entail a liability for the payment of the Aiken tax.

In Reyman Brewing Company vs. Brister, 92 Federal Report 28, (an Ohio case) the United States Court of the Southern District of Ohio held:

> "A manufacturer of beer who leases a room in a cold storage warehouse at a certain railroad, in which to store beer shipped to that station, which has not been ordered in advance, and from which it is sometimes sold directly, is 'traffic subject to taxation.'"

In the Village of Bellefontaine vs. Vassaux, 55 O. S., 323, the court held: (in the syllabus)

> "The general rule is that title to goods intended to be transported passes from the vendor to the purchaser upon delivery by the former to a common carrier consigned to the purchaser whether paid for or not. But if the vender consigns the goods nominally to the purchaser, but actually in care of his own storekeeper, who is to retain them in control and give possession to the purchaser only on payment of the purchase price, then the delivery to the common carrier is not, in law, delivery to the purchaser.
>
> "Under such circumstances, the shipment being, in effect, to the vendor himself, the delivery, when it occurs, would be at the storehouse to the vendor; and the transaction would not be a completed sale at the point of shipment.
>
> "As a general rule, a sale of personal property is not completed when anything remains to be done to identify the thing sold, or discriminate it from other like things."

While the proposition under which the above cases was decided is not presented here, there is sufficient analogy to consider it, for the effect of the holding is that the place where the seller releases possession and control of the beer to the purchaser and the purchaser assumes control thereof and pays the purchase price, is to be regarded as the place of sale.

In the case of Jung Brewing Company vs. Talbot, 59 O. S. 511, where it appeared that the driver of a beer wagon made sales to the retail dealers, and that beer was supplied from a storehouse, where it was kept on hand for sale in that manner, the court announced in the syllabus:

> "1. A manufacturer of intoxicating liquors who carries on the business of selling them elsewhere than in the manufactory, is engaged in the traffic within the purview of sections 4364-9 of the Revised Statutes, and subject to the tax thereby imposed.
>
> "2. It is not essential to a valid imposition of the tax that the traffic be carried on in a building or structure, or fixed place of business. Selling and delivering the liquors to customers from a vehicle provided for that purpose is a method of carrying on the business that is subject to the tax, unless it is done in connection with, and as a part of a traffic in which the proprietor is engaged on which he has paid the tax.
>
> "3. When the traffic is so carried on by the sale and delivery from wagons as a separate and independent business, and the liquors are supplied from a storehouse where they are kept on hand for sale in that manner, in charge of a local agent, the storehouse may properly be regarded as the seller's place of business. Hanson v. Luce, and Monaghan v. Luce, 50 Ohio St., 440, distinguished."

The latest case in point, bearing upon the proposition involved here, is the case of the Diehl Brewing Company v. Beck, et al, 10 C. C., M. S., 351. The court held (in the syllabus):

> "A brewing company manufacturing and selling beer at wholesale, which maintains a cold storage house in a location separate from its manufactory, and from which cold storage house daily deliveries of beer are made to customers on orders previously taken by a soliciting agent, thereby becomes a trafficker in intoxicating liquors within the meaning of R. S., 4364-9, and is subject to the Dow tax provided for by that act. Diehl Brewing Co., v. Spencer, 9 C. C., N. S., 577, not followed."

This case was affirmed without report, late in 1910, being case No. 11178 in the supreme court.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that if the driver of the wagon or other soliciting agent takes the orders and fills the same from the depot, such sales being at another place than the manufactory, are without the exceptions of the Aiken tax statute and, therefore, one conducting a business in that manner is liable for the payment of the tax.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

416.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE—BOARD OF REVIEW—VILLAGE BOARD OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS—EMPLOYMENT—BUSINESS.

The office of the board of review may be held by a township trustee, or by a member of the village board of public affairs.

A man may hold a public office which is neither a business nor an employment within the meaning of section 5621, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 9, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State and Secretary of the State Board of Appraisers and Assessors. Columbus Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Complying with the request of the state board of appraisers and assessors, made of me by virtue of its resolution adopted July 31, 1911, I have investigated the following legal questions:

1. Are the offices of township trustee and member of board of review compatible?

2. Are the offices of member of a village board of public affairs, the village having been advanced to the grade of city by the late federal census, and member of board of review of such city compatible?

Section 5621 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

"No member (of the board of review) shall be engaged in any other business or employment during the period of time covered by the session of the board."

This is the only provision of statute which would in any way create a question as to the compatibility of these two sets of offices. The duties in no wise conflict and the doctrine of common law incompatibility does not apply.

In my opinion, section 5621 of the General Code does not prevent a member of a board of review from holding another office. If the general assembly had intended to accomplish this purpose its intention would have been otherwise expressed. As it is, the legislature has merely enacted that the members shall not be engaged in other business, or have other employment.

Now, there are offices which as a matter of fact, constitute a business during the time they are held by the incumbent, and there are still other offices which in point of fact constitute an employment. Thus, the office of city engineer, the office of water works superintendent, that of chief of police, and others too numerous to mention, require the continuous employment and attention of the incumbent.

There is another class of offices, however, which in fact—regardless of the theory of the matter—do not require continuous attention to duty. It is notoriously true that township trustees upon assuming their offices do not forsake their usual occupations; neither, on the other hand, do members of a village board of trustees of public affairs.

Customarily they do not find it necessary to give up their usual occupation. The duties of these respective offices are such as may be discharged by meeting at intervals with the other members of the respective boards, and acting upon matters legally coming before such boards.

In determining whether one person may hold the two offices mentioned in your first question, or whether one person may hold the two offices mentioned in your second question, at the same time, we must consider the law aside from the statute, section 5621, General Code. There may be a disqualification outside of said section, as well as within. The test outside is as follows:

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate or in any way a check upon the other, or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."
>
> State, ex rel., Attorney General vs. Gebert, 12 O. C. R., N. S. 274.

This test governs the question outside of the statute, and we see nothing in this doctrine making incompatible the offices mentioned in either of your two questions.

Coming, now, again, to the statute, section 5621, I take it that so long as a member of the board keeps himself free to be present at the opening hour in the morning, at the usual and proper time, free to remain all day during the session until the proper closing time, he may be engaged in his private business in the morning before hours or in the evening after hours; and there is no conflict of duty or violation of the statutes, because the session referred to is a daily session and not the entire period of time within which the board may, in a given year, sit.

The same principle applies to employment. If a man be an engineer in a city and it requires his time until noon, there would a physical conflict between the two duties of engineer and member of the board of review, and he should not hold the two offices. Anyone with an employment, of whatever general character it may be, whose duties require him to attend to the employment during the time of day when he should be in attendance upon the board of review, is not eligible to hold the two offices. But knowing, personally, the situation in Jackson, Ohio, to which, I think, your question refers, I see no inconsistency in the one man filling the offices embraced in question number one and question number two.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 439.

OFFICES—ADJUTANT GENERAL'S EXPENSES AS COMMISSIONER OF OHIO SOLDIERS' CLAIMS UNDER APPOINTMENT BY THE GOVERNOR.

The right of the adjutant general to incur contingent expenses under appointment from the governor as commissioner of Ohio soldiers' claims is perfectly vaild.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 27, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under section 12 of the General Code the governor has the power to file a vacancy in office by appointment. If such vacancy occurs when the senate is not in session and no appointment has been made and confirmed in anticipation of such vacancy, the governor shall fill the vacancy and report the appointment at the next session of the senate.

I am informed that the governor has directed General C. C. Weybrecht to act as commissioner in the department of Ohio soldiers' claims. This being the case, his voucher for ordinary expenses will be safely honored.

I am not hereby passing upon the question of the right of the adjutant general to hold two offices, but I am quite confident that his right to incur contingent expenses under appointment from the governor are perfectly valid, and that you are safe in making warrant for the amount of the attached bill.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 459.

VALID TITLE OF STATE TO LANDS SITUATED IN VILLAGE OF KENT—PURCHASED FOR PURPOSE OF NORMAL SCHOOL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 10, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to state that at your request I have this day examined an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, rendered January 5, 1911, respecting the title which the state will acquire by conveyance at that time tendered of real estate situated in the village of Kent, Portage county, Ohio, as a site for the location of the proposed normal school in said village.

In connection with this opinion I have also examined a quit claim deed from Newton H. Hall and Stella A. Hall to the state of Ohio, executed January 5, 1911, and recorded October 18, 1911, in which the grantors convey all their right, title and interest in and to a part of township lot No. 14, Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio. This deed, in my opinion, corrects the only serious defect in the title to the premises noted by my predecessor.

The other matter to which my predecessor called attention is one not affecting the title of the state to any premises conveyed but relates only to a discrepancy of description as between the deeds and other conveyances and the plat submitted in the abstract. This matter in no wise affects the state's title.

Without in any way reviewing my predecessor's opinion but basing my conclusions wholly on those reached by him together with the additional conveyances tendered to the state for the purpose of correcting the title, I am of the opinion that the state's title under the deeds of George A. Hines, trustee to the state of Ohio, William Stewart Kent and Mary P. Kent, his wife, to the state of Ohio, Jennett K. Sawyer and Willard N. Sawyer to the state of Ohio, and Newton H. Hall and Stella A. Hall to the state of Ohio, is good and perfect in and to the premises therein described.

I herewith return the papers submitted to me.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

505.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY—SALARY—COMPENSATION—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF SECTION 50, GENERAL CODE AND OF THE AMENDMENT THERETO.

That part of section 50 of the General Code providing in those years in which a session is held for the payment to members of the general assembly, of the balance of the year's salary in a lump sum at the end of the regular session: and also that part of the amendment to section 50 providing for the payment in a lump sum at the end of the session, of the entire balance of the members' salary for their term; are in direct and absolute conflict with the constitutional inhibition against the change of a public officer's salary during his term of office.

The amendment to section 50, General Code, must be disregarded entirely and section 50, with its unconstitutional part eliminated must be allowed to govern.

Vouchers should be issued at the rate of $200.00 per month during attendance at sessions and the balance of the members' salary in equal monthly installments, i. e., at the rate of $83 1-3 per month.

2: An elected and duly qualified member who temporarily moves away from his district with a bona fide intention to return thereto should not be denied his vouchers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 26, 1911.

HON. E. M. FULLINGTON, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—A few days ago you verbally requested my opinion as to the validity of an act of the general assembly, known as House Bill No. 594, entitled "An act to amend section 50 of the General Code, relating to the salary and mileage of the members of the general assembly." The following is a copy of said act:

AN ACT

"To amend section 50 of the General Code relating to the salary and mileage of the members of the general assembly.

Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio.

SECTION 1. That section 50 of the General Code be amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 50. Every member of the general assembly shall receive as compensation a salary of one thousand dollars a year during his term of office. Such salary for such term shall be paid in the following manner: two hundred dollars in monthly installments during the first session of such term, and the balance of such salary for such term at the end of each session.

"Each member shall receive two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session from and to his place of residence, by the most direct route of public travel to and from the seat of government to be paid at the end of each regular or special session. If a member is absent without leave, or is not excused on his return, there shall be deducted from his compensation the sum of ten dollars for each day's absence.

"SECTION 2. That section 50 of the General Code be, and the same is hereby repealed."

You further inquire as to your duty with reference to the issuance of vouchers to members of the general assembly of the state of Ohio for the year 1912, especially upon the following points:

"1. Whether such members are, under the constitution of this state, entitled to a salary of one thousand dollars.

"2. If they are, may this salary be paid to the members in a lump sum, in advance?

"3. If they are not entitled to the latter, and are entitled to the salary of one thousand dollars, each, per year, at what times should voucher be issued to such members and for how much?

"4. Whether a member who was elected a member of the general assembly and duly qualified and acted in that behalf during the session, and who moved away from the state, or from his county or district, is entitled to a salary in case the members generally are found to be so entitled."

On account of the importance of the questions you submit, both to the state and to the members of the general assembly, I have given the subject of your inquiry long and careful consideration, and have investigated the matter somewhat fully in order to ascertain the true meaning of section 31 of article 2 of the constitution of the state of Ohio, which is as follows:

"Compensation of members and officers of the general assembly. The members and officers of the general assembly shall receive a fixed compensation to be prescribed by law, and no other allowance or perquisites, either in the payment of postage or otherwise, and no change in their compensation shall take effect during the term of office."

1. What is the meaning of compensation as used in this section?

2. What is meant by the expression "no change in their compensation shall take effect during their term of office?"

Webster's New International Dictionary defines "compensation" as follows:

"That which constitutes, or is regarded as, an equivalent or recompense. Remuneration; recompense.

"Compensation comes from the Latin word 'compensatio' which means weighing, a balancing of accounts.

"Compensate comes from the Latin verb 'compensare'—to weigh several things with one another; to balance with one another; to be equivalent in value or effect to; to counter balance; to make up for; to make amends for."

It will readily be seen that the plain meaning intended to be conveyed by the word "compensation" is a return; an equivalent rendered; and is, therefore, intended to be a return or an equivalent rendered by the state to a member of the general assembly for his services as such member, and such services may be rendered either in the way of actual attendance upon the session of the general assembly, or in keeping himself in readiness to respond to the call of the governor in case of an extraordinary session, thus keeping himself qualified by residence and otherwise to perform whatever duties may be required of him as such member of the general assembly during the two years for which he is elected.

Section 40 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, under the head of "Salary and Mileage of Members of the General Assembly," provided as follows:

> "Each member of the general assembly shall receive a salary of one thousand dollars a year, to be paid in monthly installments of not exceeding two hundred dollars during the year; and also twelve cents per mile each way for traveling not exceeding twice per month from and to his place of residence, by the most direct route of public travel to and from the seat of government to be paid out but once in any regular or special session; but if any member is absent without leave, or is not excused on his return, there shall be deducted from his compensation the sum of ten dollars for each day's absence."

The first question to be determined is as to the constitutionality of said section 40. Some question has been raised that a member of the general assembly may not be paid a salary, but that he should receive his return after service is rendered, in an amount to be prescribed by law, dependent upon the service rendered; that the payment is not one dependent on time but on the amount of service rendered. In my judgment, and for reasons hereinafter stated, the word "compensation" is used in the constitution of Ohio as embracing more than the word "salary," but as including the word "salary"; that so far as the two terms are concerned, compensation is generic and salary specific; and it is perfectly competent for the general assembly to enact a law fixing the compensation upon a salary basis, because the whole may always include a part.

Section 20 of article II of the constitution, under the head of "term of office, and compensation of officers in certain cases," provided:

> "The general assembly, in cases not provided for in this constitution, shall fix the term of office and the compensation of all officers; but no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term, unless the office be abolished."

The supreme court of this state, in a per curiam, in the case of Thompson, Relator, vs. John Phillips, 12 O. S. 617, said:

> "The relator, to show that he is not affected by the act of April 9, 1861, relies on the following section of the constitution:
>
> " 'The general assembly in cases not provided for in this constitution, shall fix the term of office, and the compensation of all officers, but no change therein shall affect the salary of any officer during his existing term, unless the office be abolished.'
>
> "It is manifest, from the change of expression in the two clauses of the section, that the word 'salary' was not used in a general sense, embracing any compensation fixed for an officer, but in its limited sense, > of an annual or periodical payment for services—a payment dependent on the time, and not on the amount of the service rendered. Where the compensation, as in this case, is to be ascertained by a percentage on the amount of money received and disbursed, we think it is not a salary within the meaning of the section of the constitution."

We have from the foregoing the clear statement that the word "compensation" is used in a more comprehensive sense than the word "salary" in the constitution.

up to this point it appears there can be no fair doubt as to the constitutionality of section 40 of the Revised Statutes and, too, said section is in harmony with this provision of the constitution of the state of Ohio, to-wit: section 2 of article II, under the head of "When chosen:"

> "Senators and representatives shall be elected biennially, by the electors of the respective counties or districts, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November; their term of office shall commence on the first day of January next thereafter, and continue two years."

From this it clearly appears that a member of the general assembly is an officeholder with a term, and that said term is two years; and payment of one holding an office for a term that is definitely fixed is entirely in harmony with the legislative idea of payment dependent on time, and payment, too, either annually or periodically, such as by the quarter or by the month. But I conceive that any payment based on time should be at the end of the period and not in advance.

Section 40 of the Revised Statutes, passed into the General Code as section 50, which is as follows:

> "Each member of the general assembly shall receive as compensation a salary of one thousand dollars a year, which shall be paid in monthly installments of not exceeding two hundred dollars during the year, but in any year in which a session of the general assembly is held the balance of the salary for such year shall be paid at the end of the session. Each member shall receive two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session from and to his place of residence, by the most direct route of public travel to and from the seat of government, to be paid at the end of each regular or special session. If a member is absent without leave, or is not excused on his return, there shall be deducted from his compensation the sum of ten dollars for each day's absence."

The only difference as to salary between section 50 of the General Code and section 40 of the Revised Statutes is found in the following clause, contained in said section 50, and not found in section 40:

> "but in any year in which a session of the general assembly is held the balance of the salary for such year shall be paid at the end of the session."

I do not hesitate to hold that that clause is clearly inhibited by the constitution; it comes under neither compensation nor salary; it is neither compensation for services rendered, nor salary dependent upon time. It is a clause clean-cut against the plain meaning of any reasonable interpretation of the constitution. It violates the most favorable interpretation that can be given to the constitution with reference to payment to members of the general assembly.

However, the last general assembly, in House Bill No. 594, supra, went still further in its amendment of said section 50, General Code. After said section 50, in its amended form, passed both branches of the general assembly, it was presented to the governor for his action thereon, and the governor returned the bill to the house of representatives without his approval, stating his reasons therefor as follows:

> "Under General Code, section 50, the salaries of members are made $1,000 per annum, payable in monthly installments during each year. In any session year 'the balance of the salaries for such year may be paid at the end of the session.' The purpose of the bill is to make the entire remainder of the salaries for the full term of two years payable at the end of the first session, which is always at the beginning of the first year.
>
> "It is drawn so as to take effect at once.
>
> "If it were a mere matter of policy the payment of salaries in advance would not be right. True, 'they also serve who only stand and wait' a further call for active duty, but the service should precede the pay whether it be work or waiting. It cannot be foretold that nothing will occur to require an extra session and if there should be one the lack of present funds might prove inconvenient to some members. There are already three vacancies in the membership and others may occur. In such cases the new members chosen would have to serve without compensation or the public be subjected to double payment for the same service.
>
> "But apart from these considerations the action proposed by the bill would, in my opinion, violate the constitution, article II, section 31, which in terms forbids any change in the compensation of members during their term of office. Time of payment is an essential element of compensations as well as the amount, and the prohibition of any change covers both.
>
> "The remainder of the salaries for 1911 may be paid at the close of the present session by the law as it now stands, but the salaries for 1912 are payable only in monthly installments during that year. With state funds drawing liberal interest, as they now do, the difference against the taxpayers involved in paying the entire salaries for 1912 on May 31st, 1911, can be readily calculated and would be a very considerable amount, though this is not so important as the principle at stake.
>
> "It is said the bill follows precedents. I find that from the time biennial sessions were resumed in 1894, the law provided for monthly installments until 1904, when a law like the bill now before me passed (97 M. 316). But this was repealed at the following session in 1906, and payment for the full year only authorized at the close of the session (98 V. 8). Though this act was in turn repealed and only monthly payments permitted (id. 287), the provision of the earlier act for payment for the remainder of the session year got somehow into General Code, section 50.
>
> "Beginning with 1908 there have been annual sessions. So there is the single precedent of 1904, and that promptly repudiated, standing alone against the action of all the other biennial sessions since 1894.

"For these reasons I am constrained to return the bill to the house of representatives without my approval, which I herewith do."

The reasons stated by the chief executive of the state in reference to the constitutionality of an act should always have great weight, but when coming from one who is not only the governor but at the same time a lawyer of great experience in the interpretation of the laws, both national and state, and one who is recognized as an authority of the highest standing, these reasons become practically binding. In my judgment, the message of Governor Harmon to the house is unanswerable, constitutionally, legally, logically, morally and ethically. Notwithstanding this the general assembly passed the bill over the head of the governor, and it is now section 50, General Code, supra. The question is: is such section constitutional and binding upon you to issue vouchers to members of the general assembly for their salary for the year 1912 in lump sum, and in advance? The answer is no. While the governor's reasons were intended to apply in support of his veto of the measure they well apply here. They apply to the unconstitutionality of the act as well as to the policy against the enactment thereof. Before having read the reasons stated by Governor Harmon that part of this opinion was already written, holding invalid the following clause in section 50 of the General Code:

"but in any year in which a session of the general assembly is held the balance of the salary for such year shall be paid at the end of the session."

With this clause left out of section 50 it is entirely legal and constitutional.

Section 50, General Code, as amended at the last session of the General assembly, is constitutional with the following eliminated:

"Such salary for such term shall be paid in the following manner: two hundred dollars in monthly installments during the first session of such term and the balance of such salary for such term at the end of such session."

However, inasmuch as such act was unquestionably passed for the sole purpose of enabling the members to draw their two years' salary or compensation at the end of the first session of the general assembly and inasmuch as there is no provision therein providing for monthly payments, I am satisfied that said House Bill No. 594 should be entirely disregarded by you, and that you should be governed entirely by section 50 of the General Code, with the following clause left out:

"but in any year in which a session of the general assembly is held the balance of the salary for such year shall be paid at the end of the session."

To avoid confusion, be governed by the following:

"Section 50. Each member of the general assembly shall receive as compensation a salary of one thousand dollars a year, which shall be paid in monthly installments of not exceeding two hundred dollars during the year * * *. Each member shall receive two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session from and to > his place of residence, by the most direct route of public travel to and from the seat of government, to be paid at the end of each regular or special session. If a member is absent without leave, or is not excused on his return, there shall be deducted from his compensation the sum of ten dollars for each day's absence."

This, of course, is to be your rule with reference to all members who, in the language of the chief executive are serving by "standing and waiting."

The answer to your first question discloses that members of the general assembly are not entitled to their second year's salary in one lump sum in advance.

In answer to your second question, to wit:

> "If they are not entitled to the latter, and are entitled to the salary of one thousand dollars, each, per year, at what times should vouchers be issued to such members and for how much?"

I beg to advise that the statute does not determine the amount by which you shall be governed, beyond saying: "Each member of the general assembly shall receive a salary of one thousand dollars a year, which shall be paid in monthly installments of not exceeding two hundred dollars during the year." Evidently, payment was not provided in equal monthly installments for the reason that it was intended that members of the general assembly in attendance upon a session should receive more per month than when not in attendance upon a session, and it is proper that during the session each member should receive the maximum of two hundred dollars per month; but as to the monthly payments when the general assembly is not in session but are keeping themselves in readiness to respond to the executive call, it is clearly to be deduced that the usual rule of equal monthly installments should apply. Therefore, my advice to you, in response to this inquiry, is to issue voucher at the end of each month to each qualified member of the general assembly during the months that the general assembly is not in session, for the sum of eighty-three and one-third dollars.

Answering your fourth inquiry, to wit:

> "Whether a member who was elected a member of the general assembly and duly qualified and acted in that behalf during the session, and who moved away from the state, or from his county or district, is entitled to a salary in case the members generally are found to be so entitled."

I beg to advise that section 3 of article II of the constitution of Ohio provides:

> "Senators and representatives shall have resided in their respective counties or districts one year next preceding their election, unless they shall have been absent on the public business of the United States, or of this state."

The constitutional limitation would deny a man the right to election to the general assembly, who voted in, for instance, Butler county, and resided in Columbus temporarily, unless his absence from Butler county was on account of public business of the United States or of this state, although such person would unquestionably be eligible to election to offices generally in Butler county.

This constitutional provision discloses that the intention to return, so far as qualification for election is concerned, would not save the right to election. However, the constitution only goes to qualification for election to office, and does not reach to the question of forfeiture. In the absence of the latter I am inclined to the view that the same rule would apply in relation to the right of a member of the general assembly to represent his district in such general assembly as applies to the right of one to vote, who was temporarily absent. Section 4866, General Code, paragraph 3, provides as follows:

> "A person shall not be considered to have lost his residence who leaves his home and goes into another state or county of this state for temporary purposes, merely, with the intention of returning."

Whether or not the absence is temporary and the intention to return, which must be a fixed one, exists, is a question of fact for you to determine in each specific case. Unless the absence is temporary, and unless there is a fixed purpose to return to the state, such person would no longer be a citizen of this state, and, undoubtedly, would not be entitled to any of its privileges as such. But, if you are satisfied, after a careful examination, that any member of the general assembly has removed from his district but temporarily, and that it is his fixed purpose to return, I am not prepared to hold in such case that you would be warranted in declining to issue voucher.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 282.

OFFICE OF STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER VACATED—REPEAL OF STATUTE BY IMPLICATION—VETO OF REPEALING CLAUSE—SALARY.

The office of the state highway commissioner as held by Mr. Wonders under section 1178 G. C., became vacant on the 9th day of June, 1911.

Senate Bill No. 165, excepting sections 5258 and 5259 which were not approved by the governor, became law on the 9th day of June, 1911.

Said bill covers the ground of and is intended as a substitute for sections 1178 and 1231 G. C., providing for a state highway department, and therefore repeals the former sections by implication, in spite of the fact that section 58, repealing section of said bill, was vetoed by the governor.

Where a later act covers the whole subject of an earlier act, and is plainly intended as a substitute for the former, the former act is impliedly repealed.

By the repeal of an act which created an office, the office itself must necessarily be abolished.

The salary of Mr. Wonders and his employes should be calculated up to June 9, 1911.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 29, 1911.

HON. A. W. BEATTY, Deputy Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of June 19, 1911, in which you submit the folowing questions:

> "When did Senate Bill No. 165, passed May 31, 1911, and approved by the governor June 9, 1911, vacate the office of state highway commissioner?
>
> "Did Mr. Wonders legally hold the office until his successor was appointed and qualified?
>
> "When did the terms of the clerks in his office and other employes appointed by and acting under the direction of Mr. Wonders cease, and to what date should salaries of Mr. Wonders and his employes be paid?
>
> "How shall the proportionate part of the salaries of Mr. Wonders and his employes be determined; the salary of Mr. Wonders being fixed by statute at $2,500, and the salary of the employes being fixed by Mr. Wonders, and payable from a blanket appropriation covering the salaries or compensation of the several employes?"

To properly answer your questions, it is necessary to consider the provisions of S. B. 165 and the facts connected with its passage, and the veto of certain of its sections by the governor.

The bill was passed on the 31st day of May, 1911, and on the 9th day of June, 1911, the governor approved all of the provisions of the said act, except sections 52, 58 and 59. Therefore, as section 16 of article II of the constitution provides: "Every bill passed by both houses of the general assembly shall, before said bill can become a law, be presented to the governor. If he approves, he shall sign said bill and thereupon said bill shall be law." Therefore, all of the provisions of Senate Bill No. 165, excepting sections 52, 58 and 59, which were not approved by the governor, became law on the 9th day of June, 1911.

This act, Senate Bill No. 165, covers the whole subject formerly provided for by chapter 18, division 2, title 2 of part I of the General Code of Ohio as embraced in sections 1178 to 1231 of the General Code, providing for the state highway department "for the purpose of affording instruction, assistance and co-operation in the building and improvement of the public roads of the state." and for the appointment of a state highway commission, and is plainly intended as a substitute for the said former act, as the purpose ofthe act is the same, in all important respects, and the new sections correspond in all important particulars with the old sections. It is clearly apparent from the act as passed, which contained section 58, that it was intended as such substitute for the former act as section 58 especially repeals all of the section of the old act, which were changed in any respect whatever.

This section 58 having been vetoed by the governor, the question arises, and I suppose is partly responsible for your inquiry as to whether or not said repealing sections being vetoed and therefore not now a part of the act, does the present act repeal the former act by implication? My opinion is that it does.

There can be no doubt in this case about the intention of the legislature. The intention is plainly expressed by section 58, which, though repealed, is nevertheless the legislative expression of its intention, and it is further made plain by the message of the governor transmitted with this bill, and expressing reasons why it was necessary for him to veto section 58. I herewith copy a portion of the said veto message which relates to this subject:

> "This of course, is not enough for rapid progress, so the bill raises the amount the counties may levy annually from one mill to one and one-half mills, and Senate Bill No. 225, a twin measure, requires a state levy of half a mill each year on all property correspondingly to increase the amount available for state aid.
>
> "This state levy must be counted in the ten mill limit and reduce by so much what may be levied for other purposes. And section 52 of said bill No. 165, not only increases the authorized levy, as above stated, but in express terms puts the entire mill and a half outside of the ten mill limit. So if both of those provisions were approved the limit would at once become eleven and one-half mills instead of ten, and the availability of the ten mills be reduced by half a mill besides.
>
> "The owners of property of all kinds have been assured that the limit shall be ten mills, and on the faith of this they have generally acquiesced in the action of the taxing authorities with respect to fair returns and valuations. It would be most unfair now to permit the limit to be raised for any purpose which the people do not specifically and expressly approve, as provided in the tax limit law.
>
> "This interference with the tax limit is quite unnecessary, too, because the funds raised by the additional county levies cannot be spent until the state furnishes a like amount. And while the state levy begins at once, the money raised cannot be used until it is appropriated by law, which has not been done and cannot be done until 1913. In fact the object stated in the bill is to provide a fund for future, not for present, use.
>
> "I, therefore, with these objections, file with the secretary of state, unapproved, said section fifty-two (52) of said bill No. 165, and also section fifty-eight (58) and fifty-nine (59) thereof. The two last named are the repealing sections which cover section 1224 of the General Code authorizing the present levy of one mill by the counties. I am compelled to include the repealing sections in my disapproval of section 52, because otherwise no levy at all by the counties would be authorized.

But while the entire repealing sections are struck out by my action, there will be no real difficulty, because they cover only the old state highway law which this bill replaces, re-enacting most of it. Being later and on the same subject the bill will repeal by implication the parts of the old law which are different.

"I regret to take this course, but it is the only one open unless I abandon the settled policy of standing by the tax limit, which I cannot justly nor honorably do."

Even if this were not so, and we were without the expression of the legislature as to its intention to repeal the old act, and without the light thrown upon the situation by the message of the governor, still it is my opinion that if this new act contained no repealing section whatever, it nevertheless would operate as a repeal of the former act. Upon the same subject is the case of State, ex rel. Witt vs. Craig, Auditor, 22 O. C. C. Reports, page 441, the first syllabus of which is as follows:

"The general rule of construction is, that where a later act covers the whole subject of an earlier act, and is plainly intended as a substitute of the former, the former act is impliedly repealed."

The circuit court, in deciding this case, stated that the opinion in court below was given by Judge Phillips of the Cuyahoga county common pleas court, and thereupon proceeded to set forth Judge Phillips' opinion in toto and adopted the same as its opinion in disposing of the case. The opinion of Judge Phillips is a very instructive one and goes fully into the questions of repeals by implication. but I shall content myself, as the opinion is somewhat lengthy, by quoting simply the following extracts which seem particularly applicable to the present question:

"It is claimed that this act of 1896 repealed section 8 by implication, the claim being that the new act is a substitute for the old act, covering the whole scheme of compensation by salary, and that, being such substitute, it operates by implication to repeal the whole of the former act upon the same subject.

"The rule is well settled, that where a later act covers the whole subject of an earlier act, and is plainly intended as a substitute for the former, the former act is impliedly repealed.

"The authorities in support of this general doctrine are so numerous they need not be stated. The doctrine is held by our supreme court in United tSates vs. Tynene, 78 U. S. (11 Wall) 88.

"But where the substituted act contains a clause repealing all former enactments inconsistent with the substituted act, such repeal, it is held, is operative; that is, that form of repeal is operative and limits the repealing act according to the terms of its repealing clause.

" 'The doctrine that a statute is impliedly repealed by a subsequent act revising the whole matter of the first, does not apply when the revisory statute itself prescribes its operation upon the previous act; when this is done, no other effect can be given to the revisory act.' What I have just read is part of the syllabus in Patterson vs. Laturn, 3 Sawyer, 164, the opinion in which case was delivered by Justice Field. In this case, the revisory act repealed such provisions of the original act as were inconsistent with the new act."

The syllabus in the case of the Lorain Plank Road Company vs. Newton Cotton, 12 O. S., page 263, reads as follows:

> "2. Said section, which revises the whole subject matter of the amendatory act of March 10, 1836 (S. & C. Stat. 355), 'for the regulation of turnpike companies,' and is evidently intended as a substitute for it, is to be regarded as superseding the latter act, and not as furnishing an additional or cumulative remedy."

And on page 271 the court says:

> "Prior to the passage of the act of 1852, the plaintiff in error was subject to the provisions of the amendatory act of March 10, 1836 (S. & C. Stat. 335), 'for the regulation of turnpike companies,' which contains provisions similar to those of section 58 of the act of 1852, for the suspension of tolls upon roads which the companies have failed to keep in repair, except that inspectors, who are upon view to determine the truth of the complaint, are to be appointed, under the former law, by the court of common pleas, or, as the case may be, by an associate judge of such court. It is insisted that the law of 1836 is neither expressly nor impliedly repealed by the act of 1852, and is, therefore, still in force as to all companies, incorporated prior to the passage of the act of April 9, 1852.
>
> "If this were true, the result anticipated by the counsel for the plaintiff—that proceedings could not be sustained against the plaintiff under said section 58—would by no means follow.
>
> "If we are right in the conclusion, that the general provisions of the law of 1852 are applicable to corporations created prior to its passage, and the law of 1836 is also in force as to them, then the law of 1852 must be regarded as providing a cumulative or auxiliary remedy, to which the party aggrieved may resort, if he elects to do so.
>
> "We incline, however, to a different opinion, and that the law of 1836, above referred to, is superseded by the 58th section of the law of 1852.
>
> "Section 58 is a re-enactment of the law of 1836, with the single exception of the tribunal, invested with the duty of appointing the inspectors—the same complaint is to be made—the same facts must exist—the same course of procedure is prescribed for the inspectors—the same notices of the preliminary and final action upon the complaint are to be given, and the same disabilities and penalties are imposed, if the complaint is found to be true.
>
> "It is manifest, therefore, that if section 58 is applicable to pre-existing corporations, it was intended as a substitute for the act of 1836, and must be held to supersede it."

This disposes of the contention that might possibly be raised that as the repealing clause of the present act has been vetoed it should not be regarded as repealing by implication the old act, but rather as being cumulative and in addition thereto.

It might also probably be contended that as repeals by implication are not favored, the former act would still be in existence because its provisions are not expressly repealed by the present act as section 16 of article II of the constitution provides:

"* * * and no law shall be revived, or amended unless the new act contain the entire act revived, or the section or sections amended, and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed."

Should this contention be raised, it is expressly disposed of by the case of Lehman vs. McBride, 15 O. S., 573:

"5. The clause of the 16th section of the 2d article of the constitution, which provides that 'the sections or sections so amended, shall be repealed,' is directory only to the general assembly and was not intended to abrogate the long established rule as to repeals by implication."

In this case the court says:

"A farther objection is raised as to the validity of this law on account of the form in which it was enacted. The 16th section of the 2d article of the constitution provides as follows:

" 'Every bill shall be fully and distinctly read on three different days, unless, in case of urgency, three-fourths of the house in which it shall be pending, shall dispense with this rule. No bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and no law shall be revived or amended, unless the new act contain the entire act revived, or the section or sections amended; and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed.' Now, it is said, that the law in question is invalid, because it fails to comply with the requirements of the third and last clause, or provision, of the section just quoted, in this: that, though in several of its provisions it changes, and, therefore, is amendatory of the general election laws of the state, yet it does not contain the sections of the old law which are thus amended, nor does it expressly repeal any of them. Let us briefly examine this objection. The constitutional provision supposed to be violated (omitting what is irrelevant), reads thus: 'No law shall be * * * amended, unless the new act contain * * * the section or sections amended; and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed.'

"From the argument of counsel, we are led to suppose that the objection to be considered rests, mainly, on what we conceive to be a misunderstanding or the meaning of this clause. We understand the main objection to be, that in the new act, the sections of the prior statute, which it is supposed to modify or amend, are not set out and recited in full. We think the phraseology, reasonably construed, does not require this to be done. As we understand this clause of the constitution, it requires, in the case of an amendment of a section or sections of a prior statute, that the new act shall contain, not the section or sections which it proposes to amend, but the section or sections in full, as it purports to amend them. That is, it requires not a recital of the old section, but a full statement, in terms, of the new one. Such has been the almost uniform legislative construction given to this clause: and a different judicial construction would invalidate nine-tenths of the amendatory acts of state legislation passed since 1851. Whatever inference might be drawn from the debates in the constitutional convention, every provision of the constitution should be construed agreeably to the import of its terms, as they may be fairly presumed to have been understood by the people, whose ratification alone gave validity to the whole instrument.

"Now, in regard to the act before us, it may be said that it does not, either in its title or anywhere in the body of it, purport, in terms, to be amendatory of a former statute or statues, or of any section or sections of a former act. Very few of its provisions were intended to supersede or take the place of any former enactments. It is, in fact, in its main provisions, and in its general scope and purpose, an independent and original act of legislation, upon a subject not embraced in prior statutes, and in respect to which there had been no previous legislation. Its purpose, as declared in its title, was 'to enable qualified voters of this state, in the military service of this state, or of the United States, to exercise the right of suffrage.' On this subject there was no prior legislation to be amended.

"The act was intended to provide for a particular case, not hitherto provided for—that of voters in the military service; and as to the place and manner in which all other electors should exercise the right of suffrage, prior enactments were left unchanged and in full force. As to them, the law was not amended, and it was properly not repealed, because it was intended that it should still operate with full vigor.

"But if we regard the act under consideration as properly amendatory of prior election laws (as some of its provisions, no doubt, are), yet all its sections are fully set out, in express terms. The constitutional provision to which, it is said, this act does not conform, was intended, mainly to prevent improvident legislation; and with that view, as well as for the purpose of making all acts, when amended, intelligible, without an examination of the statute as it stood prior to the amendment, it requires every section which is intended to supersede a former one to be fully set out. No amendments are to be made by directing specified words or clauses to be striken from, or inserted in, a section of a prior statute which may be referred to; but the new act must contain the section as amended. In this particular, we think, the act before us is not liable to exception. It is true, that some of its provisions are intended to change and supersede kindred provisions in the general election laws of the state. For example: it extends the time for receiving and opening the return of votes cast under the act, and of making abstracts thereof, and for giving certificates of election, to thirty days from the day of election; whilst the general election law of 1852 required the same acts to be performed within six days from the day of election; and it extends the time for giving notice of a contest of the election, to twenty days after the opening of the returns, whilst the law of 1852 required such notice to be given within twenty days from the day of election.

"The only just ground of exception to the regularity of these amendatory sections is, that the former provisions of the statute, which are thus amended and superseded, are not expressly declared to be repealed. But, we are satisfied that the clause of the constitution which requires, that 'the sections so amended shall be repealed,' is merely directory to the general assembly; and that a statute cannot be judicially declared invalid because that direction has not been complied with. This section of the constitution contains two distinct provisions preceding the one under consideration: 1st, 'that every bill shall be distinctly read on three different days,' etc.; 2d, that 'no bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title.' In the case of Miller & Gibson vs. the State (3 Ohio St. Rep. 475), the first of these provisions came under examination, and was held to be directory only. At least, the court says, 'this is an important provision, without doubt; but, nevertheless, there is much reason for saying that it is merely directory in its character, and that its observance by the assembly is secured by their sense of duty and official oaths, and not by any supervisory power of the courts. Any other construction, we incline to think, would lead to very absurd and alarming consequences.' The second provision was considered in the case of Pim vs. Nicholson (6 O. State Rep. 176), where the court held, that 'this clause was incorporated into the constitution for the purpose of making it a permanent rule of the houses. It is directory only, and the supervision of its observance must be left with the general assembly.' We think the reasons are equally cogent for regarding the subsequent clause in regard to repeals, as also directory in its character, and that a contrary holding would result in consequences truly 'alarming.' It would at least nulify many statutes which the courts and the people of the state have hitherto regarded as valid and governed themselves acordingly in their transactions. We cannot think that this clause was intended to abolish the doctrine of repeals by implication, and to reverse the established maxim, that where statutes are inconsistent with each other, the latter repeals the former. On the contrary, it was intended to secure and enforce the application of the principle embodied in this maxim, by directing the general assembly to act in accordance with it, by expressly declaring the former inconsistent and amended statute to be repealed.

"The constitution of Maryland contains the following clause: 'No law shall be revived, amended, or repealed by reference to its title only.' In giving a construction of this clause in the case of Davis vs. the State (7 Md. Rep. 152), the court said: 'this was intended to prevent incautious and fraudulent legislation. It does not apply to an independent act establishing a new, or reviving some previous, policy of the state. In such cases the enactment of one law is as much a repeal of inconsistent laws, as if the latter were repealed by express words.' The application of this principle to the act before us is apparent."

This case has been cited with approval many times throughout the courts of Ohio. One specific instance, which indicates that the question is no longer of any doubt is shown by the following extract of the opinion of Judge Okey in the case of Kennedy vs. State, 34 O. S., page 310 (at page 313):

"Chapter 8, section 39, is evidently a substitute for the first clause of the 20th section of the act of 1870 (67 Ohio L. 106), and hence the clause is repealed thereby. Lehman vs. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 573. The remaining part of section 20 falls, in the revision of the laws, under another title, which could not be submitted for re-enactment at the session of 1877, and that is the reason there was no express repeal of the section."

Finally, upon this proposition the whole matter is succinctly stated by Judge Shauck in delivering his opinion in the case of Thornily vs. State, 81 O. S., 108 (at page 118):

"That the section relief upon has been repealed by implication by the act of April 21, 1904 (97 O. L. 254), which placed county commissioners upon a salary instead of allowing them compensation by fees as formerly. That act in its first section (section 897, R. S.) affixes to the office of county commissioners a prescribed salary in every county of the state, and the second section of the act provides: 'the compensation provided in the preceding section shall be in full payment of all services rendered as such commissioners.' It is true that the later act does not expressly repeal the former provision now relied upon as authority for the payment of the fees claimed by the commissioners. It is also true that repeals by implication are not favored, the meaning of which is, and it must be, only that a court will not, in the absence of an express repeal, consider former legislation as repealed by implication when the former and later acts may be harmonized by reasonable construction so as to continue both in operation. It is consistent with the elementary rule, always recognized as indispensable to the right administration of the written law, that the present will of the legislature is found in its latest expression."

On page 119 he says:

"Here is expressed affirmatively by the language employed in the act the legislative will with respect to the subject so comprehensive that it cannot be doubted that the express repeal of section 4903 was omitted by mere inadvertance. The last named section being incompatible with the later legislation must yield to it because of the impracticability of harmonizing the earlier and the later acts so that they may be enforced together."

It seems to me, from the foregoing authorities, there can be no doubt but that Senate Bill No. 165, even with the repealing clause veto as stricken out, and without looking to the plainly expressed intention of the legislature, as shown by the enactment of the repealing section and its veto by the governor, clearly repeals all of the sections of the former act which are incorporated in it, therefore, as it became a law on the 9th day of June, 1911, and as Mr. Wonders, the former state highway commissioner, was appointed under the provisions of section 1178 of the General Code, which section was repealed by the enactment of section 1 of the said Senate Bill No. 165, his office, therefore, became vacant—or, more properly, was abolished on the 9th day of June, 1911, by the repeal of the said section 1178 of the General Code under which he was appointed.

State vs. Jennings, 57 O. S., 415. "1. An office created by an ordinance is abolished by the repeal of the ordinance, and the incumbent thereby ceases to be an officer."

And at page 423, Judge Minshall says:

"There is no question but that the council had the power to repeal the former ordinance: and this being so, and all the offices created by it, whatever they were, being thus abolished, the incumbents cease to be officers, for there can be no incumbent without an office." and it cites upon this proposition Flynn vs. State, 70 O. S., 333; Gano vs. State ex rel., 10 Ohio St., 236; State ex rel. vs. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St., 98. This proposition is equally true in regard to offices created by the legislature. By the repeal of an act which created an office, the office itself must necessarily be abolished, for without the law creating it there is no valid reason for its existence. (See also Knoup vs. Bank, 1st Ohio St., 603, where the court say at page 616):

> "It is true, that an officer elected by the legislature, or the people, cannot be expelled from his office, arbitrarily, by a resolution, or act, because the constitution prescribed an impeachment, or other mode of trial for such cases, but if the office be created by the legislature, it may, in the absence of express constitutional restriction, be abolished or suspended; and yet the officer cannot claim compensation, for the loss of his office. He has no property, or individual right in it. He is but a trustee for the public; and whenever the public interest requires that the office should be abolished, or the duties of the office become unnecessary, the incumbent cannot object to the abolition of the office."

In the case of State ex rel. Flinn vs. Wright, Auditor, 7 Ohio St., 334, the fact that an office is abolished by the repeal of the act creating it is clearly expressed. I quote from the decision of Judge Brinkerhoff as follows:

> "By an act of the general assembly, passed March 12, 1852, entitled 'an act to create a court of criminal jurisdiction in Hamilton county,' the criminal court of Hamilton county was established; the court to consist of a single judge to be elected by the electors of that county, and whose term of office should be five years.
>
> "The relator was duly elected and commissioned as such judge for the term of five years from the second Monday of February, 1852.
>
> "On the first day of May, 1854, the general assembly passed an act, to take effect from and after the first day of January following, repealing the aforementioned act, and transferring the business of said criminal court to the court of common pleas of Hamilton county.
>
> "The court and the office being thus abolished by the repeal of the act creating them, and the business pending in that court being transferred elsewhere, prior to the expiration of the time for which he was elected and commissioned, the relator claims that the repealing act insofar as it attempted to abolish his office prior to the expiration of the time for which he was elected and commissioned, is contrary to the constitution of the state, and therefore inoperative; that his office continued in being notwithstanding the repealing act; and he now seeks, by his motion, to compel the auditor of state to issue his warrant on the treasurer of state for his salary accruing subsequently to the time fixed for the taking effect of the repealing act.
>
> "That the general assembly has full power to control, modify, and abolish the courts and judicial offices of the state, except so far as its powers in this respect are restrained and limited by the provisions of the constitution, will be conceded. And the inquiry before us, therefore, is, whether there is, in the constitution, any limitation, either expressed or implied, upon the general power of the legislature over courts and their judges created by its authority?"

The foregoing citations seem to be necessary to properly answer your questions, and now answering the same in order, and basing my answers upon the authorities above cited and quoted, I take up the rest of your questions.

My opinion is, that the office of the state highway commissioner, as held by Mr. Wonders under section 1178 of the General Code, became vacant on the 9th day of June, 1911, on which date Senate Bill No. 165 became a law.

You ask whether Mr. Wonders legally held the office until his successor, Mr. Marker, was appointed and qualified on the 17th day of June, 1911. My opinion is that he did not. The office held by Mr. Wonders became vacant on the 9th day of June, 1911, by the repeal of the act under which he was appointed, and therefore there was no further office for him to hold. A new office was created by Senate Bill No. 165 (see section 1 of the said act), and there was no incumbent of the said office until Mr. Marker was appointed and qualified.

Your next question is: "When did the terms of the clerks in his office and other employes employed by and acting under the direction of Mr. Wonders cease, and to what date should the salaries of Mr. Wonders and his employes be paid?" The terms of the clerks and other employes appointed by Mr. Wonders and acting under his direction cease upon the same date that the office of Mr. Wonders ceased, namely, the 9th day of June, 1911, as the sections of the code under which they were appointed were repealed by the enactment of the new bill; therefore, as there was no authority in law after said date for their employment or pay, the salaries of Mr. Wonders and his employes should be paid to June 9th, 1911.

Your next question is: "How shall the proportionate part of the salaries of Mr. Wonders and his employes be determined; the salary of Mr. Wonders being fixed at $2,500, and the salaries of the employes being fixed by Mr. Wonders, and payable from a blanket appropriation covering the salaries or compensation of the several employes?" The amount of salary due Mr. Wonders up to the 9th day of June, 1911, should be paid out of the appropriation made for the payment of his salary; and the salary of the other employes should be paid, as fixed by him, calculating the amount due up to the 9th day of June, 1911, and from the appropriation made for that purpose.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

291.

OHIO NATIONAL GUARD—APPROPRIATION FOR EXPENSES IN COLUMBUS STRIKE STRIKE—PAYMENT THEREFROM FOR LOSS BY MEMBERS OF CLOTHING THROUGH BURGLARIZATION OF ARMORY.

The appropriation for "the expenses of the National Guard in riot duty at Columbus in the summer of 1910" cannot be drawn upon to reimburse members for loss of clothing through burglarization of the armory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 10, 1911.

HON. A. W. BEATTY, Deputy Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 6th, answer to which has been unavoidably delayed on account of the unusual pressure of business in this department.

Your letter encloses correspondence between Captain Willis Bacon of Company I, 8th Infantry, O. N. G., and General Charles C. Weybrecht, adjutant general, with reference to a claim against the state arising in the following manner:

> Certain members of said Company I, the headquarters of which is at Tiffin, upon being called into active service because of the riotous conditions in the city of Columbus in the summer of 1910, were forced in compliance with regulations of the National Guard to make a change of clothing from their ordinary costumes into the uniforms of the service at the armory of said company in Tiffin and to leave their own clothing in their lockers in said armory. While the company was absent at Columbus the armory was burglarized and the clothing in question lost. The members of the guard thus damaged, desire to have the amount of their loss ascertained by a surveying officer of the National Guard and paid out of the appropriation for the expenses of the National Guard on riot duty in Columbus in the summer of 1910.

You request my opinion as to whether or not payment may lawfully be made to the members who have been thus damaged, out of the appropriation above referred to, after ascertainment of the amount of loss in the manner above described.

In my opinion the fund referred to may not be expended in this manner. The appropriation is for "the expenses of the National Guard at Columbus, etc." These items are not in the most liberal sense of the term "expense of the National Guard;" they are the losses of the individual members as private citizens, occasioned, however, by their active service as members of the National Guard. Their claims constitute obligations of the state of Ohio which the general assembly of the state is in good morals bound to pay. The appropriation in question, however, is not broad enough to permit payment therefrom.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Bureau)

33.

COUNTY AUDITOR—PAYMENT OF ESTIMATES MADE BY ARCHITECT OR COUNTY SURVEYOR—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

It is legal and regular for the county auditor to pay estimates made by an architect or county surveyor under contracts for buildings or bridges without the approval thereof by the county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Office, Columbus, Ohio, MR. A. B. PECKINPAUGH,

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 22d, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Sec. 2360, G. C., provides that estimates upon contracts for the construction or repair of bridges and buildings shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, apparently without the allowance of the county commissioners. Section 2572, G. C., provides that all bills payable out of funds controlled by the county commissioners shall be filed five days before allowance and remain on file five days after allowance by the commissioners before their payment by the county auditor. Taking the provisions of these two sections together, is it proper for the county auditor to pay estimates made by an architect or county surveyor under contracts for buildings or bridges without the approval thereof by the county commissioners?"

Section 2360 referred to by you is a part of the chapter of the General Code entitled, "Building Regulations."

Section 2333, et seq., of this chapter, describe in minute detail the procedure to be followed in the construction of county buildings and bridges.

Section 2359 provides in part that,

> "At the times named in the contract for payment to the person with whom it was made, the county commissioners or an architect employed by them to superintend the contract, shall make a full, accurate and detailed estimate of * * * the amount due * * *."

Section 2360 provides in part that,

> "When presented to him, the county auditor shall compare such estimates carefully with the contract * * * and with previous estimates. If he finds the last estimate correct, he shall * * * give to the person entitled thereto, a warrant on the county treasurer for the amount shown by the estimate to be due * * *."

Section 2572 also referred to by you is found in the chapter relating to the powers and duties of the county auditor. It provides in part that,

> "A bill or voucher for the payment of money from any fund controlled by the commissioners or infirmary directors must be filed with > the county auditor * * * at least five days before its approval for payment by the commissioners or infirmary directors when approved * * * payment thereof shall not be made until after the expiration of five days after the approval has been so entered."

The procedure outlined in the chapter relating to the construction of public buildings is, in my judgment, exclusive and complete in itself. These provisions are specific, while section 2572 is evidently general and applies to the payment of general claims against the county. It is, therefore, my opinion that when an estimate has been approved in accordance with section 2359, the county commissioners have nothing further to do with it, and that the auditor, if satisfied that the estimate is correct, may lawfully pay the amount thereof without allowance by the commissioners.

Your question suggests another question, as to the propriety of the approval of an estimate under the public building act by the county surveyor. Referring to the above quoted provisions of section 2359, it will be noted that the powers to make up an estimate is vested in the commissioners or in the "architect employed by them." While the word "architect" is used in this section, I believe the plain intent of it is, that when the structure to be constructed is a county bridge, the engineer employed by the commissioners shall make up the estimate.

Since the adoption of section 2792, General Code, formerly section 1166 R. S. in its present form, the supreme court has held in the unreported case of Hibbard vs. Biddle, 81 O. S., that all engineering work for the county must be performed by the county surveyor, who is entitled to be employed by the county commissioners for that purpose. The designing of a county bridge and superintending the construction thereof, constitute, in my opinion, such engineering work, and the county commissioners are entitled, if not required, to employ the county surveyor therefor. The surveyor so employed, is, in my opinion, entitled to make up the estimates required to be made by section 2359 of the General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

37.

COSTS IN FELONY CASE—JAIL RULE FIXED BY COMMON PLEAS COURT —PAYMENT WHEN DEFENDANT PROVES INSOLVENT.

A jail rule fixed by common pleas court providing for the inclusion in the bill of costs of the prisoner's expenses of board, and incidental expenses, cannot extend to felony cases and such costs may not be paid out of the state treasury under 13726 G. C. in case defendant proves insolvent.

January 15, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 9, 1911, in which you state:

> "Under section 3162 of the General Code, the court of common pleas, in one part of the jail rules governing the county jail, established the following:

"'He (the sheriff) shall keep a separate account of in his jail register with each prisoner and charge the same with board, washing, shaving, clothing and any articles by him or her damaged, the expense of guards, physicians, nurses and all other expenses incidental to his or her imprisonment, to be taxed in the bill of costs and collected as other costs are or may be by law collected.'" and you ask my opinion whether under this provision of the jail rules, such expenses as board, etc., may be included in the costs in a felony case, and, in case the defendant proves insolvent, be legally paid out of the state treasury under section 13726 of the General Code.

Section 3162 ofthe General Code is as follows:

"The court of common pleas shall prescribe rules for the regulation and government of the jail of the county, not inconsistent with the law, upon the following subjects:

"First. The cleanliness of the prison and prisoners.

"Second. The classification of prisoners as to sex, age, crime, idiocy, lunacy and insanity.

"Third. Bed and clothing.

"Fourth. Warming, lighting and ventilation of the prison.

"Fifth. The employment of medical or surgical aid when necessary.

"Sixth. Employment, temperance, and instruction of the prisoners.

"Seventh. The supplying of each prisoner with a copy of the Bible.

"Eighth. The intercourse between prisoners and their counsel, and other prisoners.

"Ninth. The punishment of prisoners for violation of the rules of the prison.

"Tenth. Other regulations necessary to promote the welfare of the prisoners."

This section, it will be observed, gives a schedule of the subjects upon which the courts shall prescribe rules for the regulation and government of the jail of the county, and there is nothing in this section which can possibly be held to grant any authority to include the expenses charged against the prisoner, in the rule you refer to, in the cost bill so as to have the same paid by the state.

Section 2850 provides as follows:

"The sheriff shall be allowed by the county commissioners not less than forty-five nor more than seventy-five cents per day for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail, but in any county in which there is no infirmary, the county commissioners, if they think it just and necessary, may allow any sum not to exceed seventy-five cents each day for keeping and feeding any idiot or lunatic. The sheriff shall furnish at the expense of the county to all prisoners confined in jail, except those confined for debt only, fuel, soap, disinfectants, bed, clothing, washing and nursing when required, and other necessaries as the court in its rules shall designate."

Under this section, it will be observed, the sheriff is to be allowed by the county commissioners a certain amount for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail; and that he is also to furnish, at the expense of the county, to all prisoners confined in jail (except those confined for debt only), fuel, soap, disinfectants, bed, clothing, washing, and nursing when required, and other necessaries as the court in its rules shall designate. In case a common pleas court has authority to make such a rule as the one you refer to, and which is quoted in the first part of this opinion, the expenses charged against the prisoner under such a rule would have to be paid by the county under section 2850; and to make a rule by which the same could be shifted upon the state, instead of the county, would be contrary to the plain meaning of the statutes and without authority in law.

Further calling your attention to section 13722, which is as follows:

> "Upon sentence of a person for a felony, the officers claiming costs made in the prosecution, shall deliver to the clerk itemized bills thereof, who shall make and certify, under his hand and the seal of the court, a complete bill of the costs made in such prosecution, including the sum paid by the county commissioners for the arrest and return of the convict on the requisition of the governor, or on the request of the governor to the president of the United States. Such bill of costs shall be presented by such clerk to the prosecuting attorney, who shall examine each item therein charged, and certify to it if correct and legal."

The only items that can be included in the cost bill in the prosecution for a felony are costs made in such prosecution, including the sum paid by the county commissioners for the arrest and return of the convict, etc.

Therefore, my opinion is that under this provision of the jail rules the expenses enumerated in said rule cannot be included in the costs in a felony case, and, legally paid out of the state treasury under section 13726 of the General Code, in case the defendant proves insolvent.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

46.

COMPENSATION—REDUCTION OF SALARY OF CHIEF OF POLICE—CIVIL SERVICE RULES—POWERS OF COUNCIL.

On February 9, 1909, the city council of the city of Troy was authorized to fix a new salary of chief of police, and to reduce the same from $75 to $70, and against this action the then incumbent had no ground of complaint.

The statutory restraints imposed upon the powers of removal and other similar powers, in the civil service provisions are applicable to the executive or administrative branch of the city government and not to the legislative branch.

It is the rights of the individuals rather than the rights of the office or position which is sought to be safeguarded by the civil service rules.

The chief of police has no official term, and is therefore not affected by section 126 M. C., providing against increase or decrease of salary during the term of office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted to this department for opinion thereon, an inquiry of the city auditor of Troy, which is as follows:

"On February 9, 1909, council of the city of Troy, enacted an ordinance fixing the salary of the chief of police at seventy dollars per month. The ordinance previously in effect had fixed the salary of this position at seventy-five dollars per month. The same person occupied the office of chief of police prior to the enactment of the ordinance, and has at all times since so occupied said office. Was the ordinance valid?"

The city auditor, in his letter addressed to you, cites section 4487 of the General Code, formerly section 166 Municipal Code, which provides as follows:

"No officer, secretary, clerk, sergeant, patrolman, fireman or other employe in the police or fire departments of any city shall be removed or reduced in rank or pay except as provided in this chapter for removals by the chiefs of the police and fire departments."

This section, however, can have no direct application to the question at hand. It was originally section 166 of what is popularly known as the Paine law, 99 O. L. 567. This law was passed after the date above referred to, and did not go into effect with respect to chiefs of police until January 2, 1910. However, there were similar provisions in the law in force at the time of the adoption of this ordinance. Section 149, Municipal Code, provided in part, "The chief of police shall be appointed from the classified list of such (safety) department." This reference to the "classified list" is to the list prescribed by former section 164 Municipal Code, one of the sections relating to the civil service then in force. Section 167 of the code, in force in February, 1909, provided in part that, a provision essentially similar to that of section 4487 General Code, above quoted. Without quoting from the other sections of the civil service provisions of the former Municipal Code, suffice it to say that the restraints imposed upon the power of removal and other similar powers therein, are all applicable to the executive or administrative branch of the city government, and not to the legislative branch. I find there is no intention, either express or implied, to restrict council in its general power to fix the salaries of officers of the city, and persons holding official positions and employments in the department of public safety.

"No officer, secretary, clerk, sergeant, patrolman, fireman or other employe of any city of the state, at the time this act goes into effect, shall be removed or reduced in rank or pay except in accordance with the provisions of this act."

Furthermore, the clear intention of the old civil service regulations, as well as of those now incorporated in the General Code, is to protect the individual members of the civil service. It is the rights of the person that are safeguarded—not the rights, if such they may be called, of the position. I am, therefore, of the opinion that, the provision that no officer shall be reduced in pay, except after the perferment of charges, that the bearing thereon, etc., is intended to protect an officer of the police department, for instance, from reduction of pay by executive order. It is not intended to preclude council from changing the salaries which shall be paid to the occupants of a given position, whenever it may see fit. All the provisions of the Municipal Code relating to a given subject must be read together; and section 167 must be construed together with section 126 Municipal Code, which provides that:

> "Council shall fix the salaries of all officers, clerks, and employes in the city government, except as otherwise provided in this act. * * * The salary of any officer * * * so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during a term for which he may have been or appointed."

The chief of police has no official term and is not therefore protected by the last sentence above quoted.

In view of all the foregoing considerations, I am of the opinion that, the city council was on February 9, 1909, authorized to fix anew the salary of the chief of police; and that the then incumbent of the office was not protected by any provision of law then in force, from the effect of a reduction of salary resulting from such an act of council.

Respectfully submitted,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

65.

SHERIFF'S AUTOMOBILE EXPENSE—AUTHORIZATION OF STATUTE TO "MAINTAIN" VEHICLES, DOES NOT INCLUDE "PURCHASE."

By section 2997, General Code, the county commissioners are authorized to allow a sheriff the expenses of "maintaining" the necessary horses and vehicles necessary for the proper administration of his office, but such authorization does not extend to the purchase or permanent renting of horse, automobile, or other vehicle.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of January 19, 1911, in which you state:

> "We enclose herewith a letter from the prosecuting attorney of Franklin county, in which he submits the question as to the legality of the purchase or rental by the county commissioners of an automobile for the use of the sheriff in the performance of his official duties."

The letter you refer to, from the prosecuting attorney of Franklin county, has been mislaid, and I am, therefore, unable to refer to it, but I presume from your statement that you desire an opinion as to whether the county commissioners have legal authority to purchase or rent an automobile for the use of the sheriff in the performance of his official duties.

You refer to the opinion of the attorney general rendered your department on December 20, 1906, holding that the commissioners were authorized to purchase the necessary horses and vehicles for the use of the sheriff and to maintain the same, and to the case of State vs. Commissioners, 10 Circuit Court n. s. 398, which disapproves of this opinion.

The only section of the statutes upon which the authority of the commissioners to purchase or rent an automobile for the use of the sheriff is section 2997 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institute for the feeble minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare and street car fare, mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

This section was originally section 19 of the salary law, as passed March 27, 1906, 98 O. L. 89, etc., and as thus passed it did not contain the clause allowing the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases. As the law stood, and without this added clause, allowing the sheriff his railroad fare, etc., the opinion of the attorney general that you refer to, and the case of State vs. Commissioners, supra, were both rendered. I call your attention to the language of the circuit court in said case, beginning on page 399 as follows:

"As we view it there is nothing in the section which indicates an intention on the part of the legislature in the use of the word 'maintaining' of using it in, or giving to it, any other than its ordinary meaning. On the contrary, every word in the section indicates otherwise.

"There is no provision in it for the allowance of expenses in the purchase of any article by name, but feed; and all other intended articles can be ascertained only by implication. Public officers can be allowed only such compensation, or fees, as are provided for in express terms, or by necessary impilcation from the terms used, and the words 'expense of maintaining,' as applied to horses and vehicles, cannot, by implication, include, or refer to, the expense of their purchase. If the legislature intended to have county commissioners supply sheriffs with horses, vehicles and harness, or to allow them the expense necessarily incurred in their purchase, it certainly would have so provided in unambiguous terms. Simple words only were needed to make such a provision.

"What, then, is the definition—the ordinary meaning—of the word 'maintaining,' especially when applied to animals and vehicles?

"All lexicographers define maintenance as 'maintaining; supporting; upholding; keeping up; sustenance; supply of the necessaries of life; subsistence;' and the word maintain, 'to hold or keep up in any particular state or condition; to support; to sustain; to keep up.' So > that the meaning of the word 'maintaining' as used in this section in reference to horses and vehicles, means supporting; sustaining; keeping up; supplying with the necessaries of life; and the legislature therefore in this provision only meant and intended that sheriffs should be allowed the necessary expenses incurred in supporting, sustaining and supplying their horses with the necessaries of life, and in keeping their vehicles in good condition, and not in the purchase of them."

You will note that the court expressly says, "public officers can be allowed only such compensation, or fees, as are provided for in express terms or by necessary implication from the terms used." (See also 82 O. S. 186 and 81 O. S. 108).

And again in this same decision the circuit court says:

> "If the legislature intended to have the county commissioners supply sheriffs with horses, vehicles and harness, or to allow them the expenses necessarily incurred in their purchase, it certainly would have so provided in unambiguous terms. Simple words only were needed to make such a provision."

As stated above, this decision of the circuit court had been rendered, and the defects, if any, in this law pointed out at the time the legislature amended the law on April 7, 1908, (See 99 O. L. 73) and yet the only amendment the legislature made was to allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases.

Therefore, my opinion is that the commissioners are without authority to purchase or rent an automobile for the use of the sheriff in the performance of his official duties. If the legislature had intended to give the commissioners any such right, or the right to purchase horses and vehicles, or to rent the same, it certainly would have said so in this section, especially after attention had been called to this section in such an emphatic manner by the opinion of the circuit court; and it would have made the provision in unambiguous terms, as the court says, "simple words only were neeed to make such provisions," and as such a provision was not made, and there is nothing in the statutes expressly giving the commissioners such power my opinion is that they did not possess it.

The commissioners, I believe, have the right to allow the sheriff his actual necessary expenses, whatever the same may be, incurred and expended in pursuing or transferring persons accused or convicted of crimes or offenses, etc., as provided in section 2997, General Code, but only for the express purposes therein provided; and if it becomes actually necessary to hire an automobile for any of the purposes therein expressly enumerated he should be allowed for the same, but not otherwise.

In construing this section and upon all the questions arising as to the compensation or fees of county officers, not expressly provided for by statute, I call your attention to the clear statement of the rule on this subject, by Judge Shauck, on page 188 of 82 Ohio State Reports, as follows:

> "That if a statute imposes a duty upon a public officer it is presumed to be performed by him in consideration of the general emoluments of his office unless the legislature has clearly indicated the intention that the compensation shall be paid for the performance of the duty so imposed."

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

71.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TEACHER AND JANITOR SERVICE—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Before a teacher may be entitled to $2.00 per day for attendance at an institute as provided by section 7870 G. C., he must have attended such institute at least for four days, and the rule is the same whether during such attendance school is in session or not.

A teacher cannot be compelled to do janitor work by the board of education unless under the terms of a special contract with said teacher and providing for extra compensation therefor.

Section 7610 provides for relief through the county commissioners, where the board fails to provide janitor service.

January 26, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You submit the following questions:

1. How many days must a teacher attend an institute while the schools are not in session to entitle him to the $2.00 per day, provided for such attendance by section 7870 of the General Code?

2. How many days must a teacher attend an institute while the schools are in session to entitle him to his regular salary for the week he attends such institute?

3. What remedy has a teacher when a township board of education by resolution has provided that each sub-district teacher in the township might employ a janitor at not to exceed $1.00 per month, to be paid out of the school funds, and such teacher is unable to secure janitor services for less than $2.00 per month, whereas the board refuses to make any allowance in excess of $1.00 per month?

1. Section 7870 of the General Code provides that:

"If the institute is held when the public schools are not in session, such teachers or superintendents shall be paid $2.00 a day for actual daily attendance as certified by the president and secretary of such institute, for not less than four nor more than six days of actual attendance to be paid as an addition to the first month's salary after the institute, by the board of education by which such teacher or superintendent is then employed."

It would seem from the above language of the statute that a teacher must actually attend an institute for "not less than four" days in order to be entitled to $2.00 per day provided for such attendance by section 7870 of the General Code.

2. The statute makes no specific provision for the number of days a teacher must attend an institute while schools are in session in order to be entitled to a regular salary for the week of such institute. However, the above quoted language of section 7870, forbidding any payment to a teacher unless such teacher attends an institute for "not less than four days" of actual attendance, amounts to practically a definition of what constitutes an institute within the meaning of said section 7870 as far as the payment to teachers is concerned.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that attendance at an institute such as to entitle a teacher to compensation under section 7870 while schools are in session, means "not less than four days" of actual attendance, and that a teacher must attend an institute while schools are in session at least four days to be entitled to his regular salary for the week of such institute.

3. Section 7707 of the General Code provides that:

> "No teacher shall be required by any board to do the janitor work of any school room or building, except as mutually agreed by special contract, and for compensation in addition to that received by him for his services as teacher."

Under the above section the board of education cannot compel a teacher to do janitor work with or without compensation, and no teacher is compelled to perform janitor work with compensation unless such teacher agrees to the same by special contract. I find no authority of law which authorizes the board of education to permit the hiring of janitor by the teacher, such janitor to be paid out of the school funds. Unless the teacher makes a contract to do the janitor work himself, it is the duty of the board of education and not the teacher to engage the services of a janitor.

If the board of education refuses to perform such duty, and if by reason of such refusal such board of education fails "to provide suitable school houses for all the schools under its control," then under section 7610 of the General Code the county commissioners "shall perform any or all of such duties and acts, in the same manner as the board of education by this title is authorized to perform them."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the board of education above mentioned has no right to expect or compel its teachers to employ janitors as they have attempted to do according to the above facts presented in your letter.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

79.

TAXES AND TAXATION—PERSONAL PROPERTY EXEMPTIONS TO "INDIVIDUALS" ONLY—RETURNS OF TRUSTEES OF SOCIETIES, ESTATES AND MINOR HEIRS.

As the constitution restricts personal property exemptions to "individuals" only:

A trustee of an "estate" designated by will, may not deduct $100 as exemption in personal property returns, nor may the trustees of a secret society. A guardian for minor heirs however, may deduct such exemptions in returning the property of his ward or wards.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 27, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 24th received. You request my opinion upon the following:

> "Under section 5360, General Code, may a trustee of an estate deduct $100.00 from the amount of taxable property in his return to the assessor? Also, may a guardian for minor heirs make such deduction from the property of his ward or wards? Also, may the trustees of a secret society make such deduction from their taxable property?"

The state may impose such taxes on persons or things within its dominion as it deems proper, and it may apportion them according to its discretion or judgment; and it may, if it deems advisable to do so, exempt certain descriptions of property from taxation. The constitution of the state of Ohio, article 12, section 2, uses very comprehensive language in describing what property may be taxed under the laws of Ohio, and embraces therein property of every description. Said section 2 also sets forth what property may be exempted under the laws of Ohio, and among the exemptions, it provides that "personal property, to an amount not exceeding in value two hundred dollars, for each individual may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation."

It is not mandatory upon the general assembly under the provision just quoted to exempt any personal property from taxation; but it has been the policy of the state to allow a certain amount of personal property as exempt, and in carrying out this policy the legislature enacted section 2732, Revised Statutes, paragraph 9, which reads as follows:

> "Each individual residing in this state may deduct a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars as exempt from taxation, from the aggregate listed value of his taxable personal property of any kind of which such individual is the actual owner, except dogs."

This section has been carried to the General Code, is now section 5360 of the General Code, and reads as follows:

> "A resident of this state may deduct a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, to be exempt from taxation, from the aggregate listed value of his taxable personal property of any kind, except dogs, of which he is the actual owner."

The language having been changed, but the legal effect thereof remaining the same. However, it has been held by a numerous line of decisions that statutes exempting property from taxation must be construed strictly.

You ask first—may a trustee of an estate deduct one hundred dollars from the amount of taxable personal property in his return to the assessor? Under authority of section 5360, General Code, the supreme court of Ohio, in construing article 12, section 2 of the constitution, in the case of Exchange Bank of Columbus vs. Hines, page 14, says in reference to the exemptions of personal property allowed by the constitution:

> "The only exception or exemption allowed in favor of individuals, is to be found in the words, 'personal property to an amount not exceeding two hundred dollars in value, for each individual, may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation.' It has ever been the humane policy of our laws to allow a certain amount of personal property, sufficient to include the most essential and necessary articles for the support of a family, to be exempt from execution for the payment of debts. And it is in accordance with this benevolent regard for the necessities of life, that this limited exemption from taxation, in favor of individuals, is authorized by the constitution. But the very fact of this express exemption, excludes the idea that any other or further exemption can be made."

The court takes the view that, the exemption of $100 from taxation is following out the humane policy of our laws to allow certain amounts free from payment of debts; and it is in accordance with this benevolent regard for necessities of life that this exemption is made by the constitution. The court indicates that the exemption is to be to individuals and not to corporations, societies, estates, etc.,

In view of the fact that exemptions from taxation are to be construed strictly, and in view of the decision of the supreme court in the case above cited, I am of the opinion that the word "individual" in the constitution and in the statutes is used in its ordinary meaning, and does not include corporations, societies, estates, etc.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that, a trustee of an estate designated by will may not deduct $100 from the amount of taxable personal property in his return to the assessor; and following out the same principle I am of the opinion that a guardian for minor heirs may make such deductions from the property of his ward or wards: but the trustees of a secret society, liable to be taxed by the Ohio laws may not deduct the $100 allowed by section 5360 of the General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 79.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—MONTGOMERY TOWNSHIP—COLLECTION AND DISPOSAL OF FEES.

From a view of all provisions, justice of the peace in and for Montgomery township, Franklin county, Ohio, must charge fees for performing marriage ceremonies, fees for the execution of deeds and like instruments for taking affidavits for private parties, and for other similar services, and the clerk of the justice's court must collect such fees and pay them over to the city as provided in the ordinance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 27, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 20th, in which you request my opinion as to whether, under ordinance No. 23608 of the city of Columbus, justices of the peace in and for Montgomery township, Franklin county, Ohio, are entitled to retain for their own use, fees for performing marriage ceremonies, for execution of deeds, leases and mortgages, for taking affidavits for private parties and like services?

You state that the boundaries of Montgomery township, Franklin county, Ohio, are identical with those of the city of Columbus, and that the said ordinance is passed under section 3 M. C., section 3512 General Code, which provides that:

> "When the corporate limits of a city or village become identical with those of a township, all township offices shall be abolished, * * * except that justices of the peace and constables shall continue the exercise of their functions under municipal ordinances providing offices, regulating the disposition of their fees, their compensation, clerks and other officers and employes * * *."

The ordinance in question is in part as follows:

> "Sec. 1. That in the township of Montgomery, city of Columbus, Ohio, each justice of the peace for services rendered, shall receive in lieu of all fees, an annual salary of two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) * * * but no * * * warrant shall be issued by said auditor until the justice asking for the same has made and filed with him a statement setting forth the number of days he has been in actual attendance at his court room, ready for business, during the period which the warrant is intended to cover; and for such time thus spent in attendance to business only, shall he be allowed in such warrant, a deduction of six dollars being made for each day's absence * * *."
>
> "Sec. 2. There shall be one clerk * * *, for said justice of the peace. The said clerk shall be known as the clerk of the justices' courts of said city * * *."
>
> "Sec. 5. Before entering upon the duties of office, the clerk shall file in the office of the city clerk, a bond in the penal sum * * * conditioned that the clerk shall faithfully perform the duties of such office. It shall be the duty of said clerk to keep a true and complete record of all proceedings before each of said justices, and all judgments shall be entered in the docket in the time and manner prescribed by law. He shall also keep true and correct accounts of all moneys received by him or his deputies, as court fees, for the use of said city or for any other purpose, and shall properly account for and pay over the same to the party entitled thereto * * *.

"It shall be the duty of the clerk to tax and collect the fees as provided in section 615 and 621 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, and make return under oath to the auditor of said city * * * monthly * * * of all fees collected by him and all fees taxed by him and uncollected during the month previous, give the style of the case and number of pages of the docket in which they are recorded. He shall pay into the city treasury before noon of each day all such fees collected by him during the next preceding day.

"It is made the duty of said clerk to have one deputy clerk devote three half days each week exclusively to the collection of unpaid fees and costs. It is further made the duty of said clerk to turn over to the city solicitor * * *, all cost bills which he has failed to collect within sixty days after same are due and payable."

The foregoing are all the pertinent provisions of said ordinance regulating the disposition of the fees of said justices of the peace.

Sections 615 and 621 Revised Statutes, referred to therein are at present sections 13427 and 1746 General Code. The former provides the fees of justices of the peace for signing bills of exceptions and copying and certifying transcripts and bills of exceptions for error proceedings.

Section 1746 contains a general schedule of fees for justices of the peace in civil and criminal actions. Among other items included therein are the following:

"Acknowledging deeds or other instruments of writing with certificates thereon, forty cents * * * taking depositions and certifying them, ten cents per hundred words; marrying and making return, two dollars; taking and certifying proof of an account or claim against the estate of testators or intestates, twenty-five cents; taking and certifying affidavit, forty cents."

The specific question presented by the ordinance above quoted is, as to whether it is made the duty of the clerk to collect all fees included in section 621 Revised Statutes (section 1746 General Code); in other words, whether the ordinance disposes of these fees? If it does, and the clerk must collect them and turn them over to the city treasurer, then, of course, the justices are not entitled to retain them for their own use. If, on the other hand, it is not made the duty of the clerk to collect the kind or class of fees illustrated by the specific examples above referred to, then, no machinery being provided whereby the justices of the peace themselves shall account for these fees, they would in my judgment be entitled to retain them.

All the sections of the ordinance must be read together for the purpose of ascertaining the intent thus called in question.

Section 1, above quoted, provides that the salary therein provided for, shall be for services rendered and in lieu of all fees; but the remaining provisions of the section indicate that the services for which the justices are to be paid are services rendered in actual attendance at the court room.

Again, section 5, above quoted, makes it the duty of the clerk to keep a true and complete record of all proceedings before each of such justices, and it is specifically provided that all judgments shall be entered as therein prescribed; he is required to keep a true and correct account of all court fees; is required to tax and collect the fees prescribed in section 621 R. S., and make return of such fees to the auditor of the city.

A fair construction of all these related provisions indicates to me that the clerk is required to collect all fees which may lawfully be charged by justices of the peace under section 621 R. S. It is to be noted that the clerk is required especially to keep a true and correct account of all court fees, for the use of the city or for any other purpose, but that he is required to collect "the fees" as provided in section 615 and 621. This difference in language is significant; it shows that the council in adopting the ordinance had in mind the distinction between court fees and other fees; and in failing to use the phrase "court fees" in connection with the phrase "as provided in section 615 and 621 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio," council clearly indicated that the fees referred to in said phrase are all the fees provided in said section. This is the more clear from a consideration of section 1, which provides that the salaries therein provided shall be in lieu of all fees."

In spite, therefore, of the decision in St. Louis vs. Summers, 148 Mo., 398, I am of the opinion, that justices of the peace in and for Montgomery township, Franklin county, Ohio, must charge fees for performing marriage ceremonies, fees for the execution of deeds and like instruments, fees for taking affidavits for private parties and fees for other similar services, and that the clerk of the justice's court must collect such fees and pay them over to the city as provided in the ordinance above quoted.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

80.

PROBATE JUDGES—STATEMENT OF UNPAID FEES, ETC., TO COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—END OF CALENDAR YEAR.

The amendment to section 2983 G. C., in 101 O. L. 199, requiring probate judges to file with the county commissioners a statement of unpaid fees, costs, etc., at the end of each year of his incumbency, is to be construed as intending the end of the "calendar year."

January 30, 1911.

HON. JAMES J. WEADOCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of recent date inclosing a letter addressed to you by Hon. John W. Hutchinson, probate judge, in which he calls attention to section 2983 of the General Code as amended 101 O. L. 199, and asks when he is required to file with the county commissioners the statement of unpaid fees, costs, etc., required to be paid. You request my opinion as to the question asked by Judge Hutchinson.

The amended section in question is in part as follows:

> "At the end of each quarter, each such officer shall pay into the county treasury * * * all fees * * * of whatever kind * * * and he shall also, at the end of each year of his incumbency in office and at the close of the term for which he shall have been elected, make and file sworn statement with the county commissioners, of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances, prerequisites of whatever kind, which are due his office and unpaid."

This section is a party of the county officers' salary law, which is chapter one, division three, title X, part one, General Code. This chapter embodies a scheme of the fiscal year management of certain county offices, which scheme is based upon yearly allowances and quarterly payments. The year for which such allowances are made is defined by section 2980 as being the "calendar" year. The word "year" is repeatedly used in the act, and wherever so used the presumption is that it designates the calendar year; in like manner the word "quarter" is repeatedly used throughout the act, and wherever so used must be presumed to refer to a quarter of the calendar year. It is therefore, apparent that the word "year" as used in the above quoted section must be deemed to mean the calendar year, unless a contrary intention clearly appears. The phrase "at the end of each of his incumbency in office" is fairly susceptible of two meanings:

1. At the end of one year from the time the officer assumes his office.
2. At the end of each calendar year during his incumbency in office.

The presumption above referred to would lead to the adoption of the second meaning thus suggested. In addition thereto, it would seem that if the first meaning were adopted the phrase "at the close of the term for which he shall have been elected" would be unnecessary, inasmuch as county officers are elected for terms of years, and the adoption of this meaning would require the last annual report to be filed at the close of the term. That meaning should be given to this doubtful phrase which will conform to the general scheme of the act of which it is a part.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the annual report required to be made by each county officer affected by section 2983 of the General Code must be made at the end of the calendar year, and that in addition to such annual reports, each such officer at the close of his term must file a like statement of the unpaid fees, etc., due to his office. The probate judge also inquires as to when he shall commence his statement. The question is immaterial inasmuch as that all that is required is a list of fees, costs, percentages, allowances and perquisites due the office and unpaid on a day certain.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

101.

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—SURPLUSAGE OF SECTION 2845 G. C.

The words in section 2845 G. C., "for summoning a jury, to be allowed on each issue, including traveling fees forty cents" under the present practice has no application or bearing and should be treated as surplusage.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 6, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your favor of January 19, 1911, received.

You state:

> "Section 2845 of the General Code fixing the fees of sheriffs, contains the following:
>
> "For summoning a jury, to be allowed on each issue, including traveling fees, forty cents."

and you inquire:

> "Will you kindly render this department your written opinion as to the meaning of this provision?"

The supreme court of Ohio, 46 O. S. 510, construed that part of section 1230 Revised Statutes, relating to compensation of sheriffs, although they include in their opinion the whole paragraph of the fee bill, relating to the summoning of juries by the sheriffs, yet, in their opinion they do not throw any light on the meaning of that part of the fee bill about which you inquire.

I have gone carefully into the history of section 1230 Revised Statutes, and find it was passed in 1877, found in 84 Ohio laws 118. That part of the section quoted by you, originally read as follows:

> "For removing a jury, to be allowed on each issue, including traveling fees, fifty cents."

In codifying this section, the codifiers changed the word "removing" to "summoning." The statute referred to provides for fees for the summoning of regular and special juries; and the supreme court in the case just cited, decided that sheriffs should not be allowed any additional fees for filling up a panel. The fee bill allows $4.50 for summoning a petit or a grand jury, and the same amount for summoning a special jury; the fees for summoning a jury in the probate court are especially provided for by statute. Therefore, under the present practice, that part of the section quoted by you—"for summoning a jury, to be allowed on each issue, including traveling fees, forty cents" has no meaning, and should be treated as surplusage; but as the section originally read—"for removing a jury, to be allowed on each issue, including traveling fees, fifty cents," I am of the opinion, it was intended that the sheriff should be allowed fifty cents on each issue, for taking charge of juries in viewing premises, etc., and he could charge fifty cents in each case for such services. However, they do not use a very appropriate word to express even that meaning.

I am, therefore, of the opinion, as above stated, that has no application or bearing under our present practice, and should be treated as surplusage.

"For summoning a jury, to be allowed on each issue, including traveling fees, forty cents,"

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

114.

SURVEYORS—ASSISTANTS—EXPENSES—COUNTY TREASURY—VIEWERS, REVIEWERS, CHAIN CARRIERS AND MARKERS.

Viewers and reviewers, chain carriers and markers are entitled to actual and necessary expenses to be paid out of the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 13, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 2d, in which you submit for my opinion the following question:

"Are viewers and reviewers, chain carriers and markers entitled to actual and necessary expenses to be charged as costs and expenses and paid out of the county treasury under section 6920, General Code?"

Section 6920 of the General Code is as follows:

"Persons required to render services under this chapter shall receive compensation for each day they are necessarily employed, as follows: Viewers and reviewers, chain carriers and markers, two dollars each, and surveyor, five dollars, and actual and necessary expenses to be charged as costs and expenses and paid out of the county treasury when approved and allowed by the county commissioners, on the order of the county auditor."

While this section is very ambiguous, I am of the opinion that the natural and primary meaning thereof is, the actual and necessary expenses therein provided for, may be allowed and paid to all of the persons mentioned in the section. Therefore, viewers and reviewers, chain carriers and markers should, in my judgment, be allowed their actual and necessary expenses, as well as their per diem fees for services rendered under the provisions of the chapter relating to county roads.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

115.

PROBATE JUDGE'S STATEMENT OF FINES DUE—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

In the amendment to section 2983, 101 O. L. 199, providing for a statement of costs due and unpaid the word "due" is used in its ordinary sense.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 13, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 2d, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Are fees in the probate judge's office for the purpose mentioned in section 2983 G. C., as amended in 101 O. L., 199, to be considered due and unpaid prior to the final disposition of the case or the matter in which they were taxed?"

Said amended section 2983 provides in part as follows:

> "* * * each such officer shall * * * at the end of each year of his incumbency in office and at the close of the term, for which he shall have been elected, make and file a sworn statement with the county commissioners, of all fees, costs * * * and perquisites of whatever kind, which are due his office and unpaid."

I do not find in this section anything to indicate that the word "due" is therein used in any unusual sense. The probate judge's office being a court, costs in court proceedings therein become due as costs in other actions. It is unnecessary, in my judgment, to lay down any general set rule as to when such costs become due; as a general rule, they are not payable until judgment is awarded, because until that time the party liable therefor, is not ascertained. There are exceptions to this general rule, but as I take it, neither the rule itself, nor the exceptions are important in this connection. The principal question is sufficiently answered by stating that the section under consideration is not to be construed as, in any way, or for any purpose, creating a different rule with respect to the time that costs in the probate court become payable, from the rule which would otherwise obtain.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

119.

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—MEANING OF THE WORD "DUE"—PROBATE JUDGE'S STATEMENT OF FINES DUE AND UNPAID.

The fees of the probate judges in the administration of estates become "due" under the meaning of 101 O. L. 20, amending section 2953 G. C., when they are payable under 10740 G. C., 15-18 months after the filing of the administration bond.

February 14, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—We are in receipt of your letter of January 21st, in which you state:

> "The act of April 30, 1910 (101 O. L. 200), amending section 2983 G. C., provides that each of the officers named in the salary law shall at the end of each year of his incumbency in office and at the close of the term for which he shall have been elected, make and file a sworn statement with the county commissioners, of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind, which are due his office and unpaid."

and ask:

> "When the fees of the probate judges in the administration of estates become due."

Section 10714 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "Every executor or administrator shall proceed with diligence to pay the debts of the deceased, applying the assets in the following order:
> "1. The funeral expenses, those of the last sickness, and the expenses of administration."

Section 10740 provides in part:

> "No executor or administrator shall be liable to the suit of a creditor of the deceased until after the expiration of eighteen months from the date of his administration bond, etc."

It follows, therefore, that no executor or administrator can be required to pay any claims against the estate until the expiration of eighteen months from the date of his administration bond, and the costs of administration would not be preferred over funeral expenses and expenses of last sickness.

The only question is what is meant by these "costs, fees, etc.," becoming "due." In United States vs. Bank, 31 U. S. (6 Pet.) 29, 36, Mr. Justice Story, says the word "due" is used in different senses:

> "It is sometimes used to express the mere state of indebtment, and then is equivalent to owed, or owing; and it is sometimes used to express the fact that the debt has become payable. Thus, in the latter sense, a bill or note is often said to be due when the time for payment has arrived."

I think that the word "due" is used in the statute in the sense of payable; that the time of payment has arrived. I hold that said fees, costs, etc., spoken of, do not become due until eighteen months after the date of filing the administration bond. Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

125.

COUNTY RECORDER—FEES—FILING, SEARCHING AND REFILING CHATTEL MORTGAGES.

Under 8572 G. C., the county auditor is entitled to 24 cents for all services connected with the filing of a chattel mortgage, with one grantor and one grantee.

The statutory words, "Searching each paper" means to go through and examine carefully and in detail.

The same fees may be charged for refiling as are charged for the original filing of a chattel mortgage.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 17, 1911, requesting my written opinion upon the following questions:

"Under section 8572 G. C., what are the legal fees for all the services rendered by a county recorder in the filing of a chattel mortgage with one grantor and one grantee, when such instrument is not recorded?

"What does the phrase, 'for searching each paper' mean, and under what circumstances is a county recorder entitled to make a charge of 6 cents for the same?

"May the same fees be charged for refiling as for the original filing of a chattel mortgage?"

Section 8572 General Code, which provides the fees of the recorder for services in respect to chattel mortgages, is as follows:

"For services in respect to chattel mortgages, or instruments for conditional sales, as provided in this chapter, the officer shall be entitled to receive the following fees: for filing each instrument or copy, six cents; for searching each paper, six cents; for making the entries upon the filing of an instrument, six cents for each party thereto; for recording such instrument, ten cents per hundred words; for recording any affidavit, credit or statement added to an instrument between the time of its record and refiling, twenty-five cents; and the like fees for certified copies of such instrument, or copies, as are allowed by law to county recorders for like service."

This section is unambiguous in its provisions as to what fees shall be charged, and the same are as follows: for "filing each chattel mortgage or copy, six cents; for searching each paper, six cents; for making the entries upon the filing of an instrument, six cents for each party thereto;" and as your question is as to what the fees shall be when there is but one grantor and one grantee in a chattel mortgage, the recorder would be entitled to charge six cents for each party thereto—twelve cents for the two; and the total fees provided in this section on filing a chattel mortgage would therefore, be twenty-four cents.

Your second question is as to the meaning of the phrase, "for searching each paper."

Section 8562 General Code, specifies the duties to be performed by the recorder upon the filing of a chattel mortgage with him, and is as follows:

> "The officer receiving such an instrument shall indorse thereon the time of receiving it and its consecutive number, and enter in a book to be provided by the county the names of all parties thereto, alphabetically arranged, with the number of the instrument, its date, the day of filing it, and the amount secured thereby, which entry must be repeated, alphabetically, under the name of every party thereto. He also shall deposit the instrument in his office to be there kept for the inspection of all persons interested. When such mortgage is refiled or cancelled, the date of such refiling or cancellation must be entered upon the margin of such record opposite the original entry."

My view of the meaning of the words, "for searching each paper," is that it means, "to go through and examine carefully and in detail." (See Century dictionary, definition of the word search). This is in order to obtain the data for making the entries required by section 8562, to-wit: the names of the parties, the date of the instrument, and the amount secured thereby, etc.

Your third question is as to whether the same fees may be charged for refiling as for the original filing of a chattel mortgage.

Section 8565 of the General Code, provides for what is commonly known as refiling a chattel mortgage, which is done by filing a true copy of the original statement and verification; section 8572, first quoted in this opinion, providing for the fees to be charged, states that for "filing each instrument or copy"; and the recorder would, therefore, be entitled to charge the same fees upon a refiling as for the original.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

137.

JAIL MATRON—TERM OF EMPLOYMENT—REMOVAL.

A jail matron holds only for the term of the sheriff appointing her, during which term she may be removed only for cause after hearing before the probate judge.

February 27, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In re jail matron; length of term. Under date of February 7th, you inquire as follows:

"Can a jail matron duly appointed under the statutes, hold for a term longer than that of the sheriff who made the appointment? What is the length of term of a jail matron?"

Section 3178 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The sheriff may appoint not more than three jail matrons, who shall have charge over and care for the insane, and all female and minor persons confined in the jail of such county, and the county commissioners shall provide suitable quarters in such jail for the use and convenience of such matrons while on duty. Such appointments shall not be made, except on the approval of the probate judge, who shall fix the compensation of such matrons not exceeding sixty dollars per month, payable monthly from the general fund of such county upon the warrant of the county auditor upon the certificate of the sheriff. No matron shall be removed except for cause, and then only after hearing before such probate judge."

The law makes it optional with the sheriff to appoint a jail matron. I construe this section to mean that it is a matter that is optional with each succeeding sheriff.

My opinion is, that a jail matron holds during the term of the sheriff so appointing her and no longer, but that she is removable at any time during her employment, for cause, after hearing before the probate judge.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 138.

COUNTY SURVEYOR AS TAX MAP DRAUGHTSMAN—COMPENSATION—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO COMPENSATE.

Inasmuch as section 5552 G. C. provides an annual salary for a tax map draughtsman, it is very questionable whether the county commissioners can fix a per hour compensation.

But assuming this power, such draughtsman cannot draw a per diem as tax map draughtsman, and also as county surveyor for the same day.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 27, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You call the attention of this department to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Denman to your department on June 20, 1910; and submit the following question:

"The county surveyor is employed by the county commissioners as tax map draughtsman, his compensation being fixed by the commissioners at a certain amount per hour for the time actually employed in such work. In the event the surveyor charges the county a full per diem of $5.00 for a particular day, may he charge for a day or any part of a day as tax map draughtsman on that day?"

It is very doubtful whether the county commissioners can fix the compensation of tax map draughtsman at a fixed amount per hour for the time actually employed in such work, as section 5552 of the General Code provides for an annual salary for such draughtsman. Said section is as follows:

> "The board of county commissioners shall fix the salary of the draughtsman at not to exceed two thousand dollars per year. They shall likewise fix the number of assistants not to exceed four, and fix the salary of such assistants at not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per year. The salaries of the draughtsman and assistants shall be paid out of the county treasury in the manner as the salary of other county officers are paid."

But disregarding, for the purpose of your inquiry, this question, it is my opinion that when the commissioners have so fixed the compensation of the tax map draughtsman at a fixed amount per hour for the time actually employed in such work, and have appointed the surveyor as such tax map draughtsman, that such surveyor cannot charge for services as tax map draughtsman, rendered on a given day, subsequent to his receipt of a per diem as surveyor for that particular day; and that if he received pay under such employment as tax map draughtsman on a certain day, he cannot receive his per diem for the same day as surveyor. In brief, that he cannot draw a per diem as surveyor and as tax map draughtsman for the same day.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

154.

TELEPHONE IN SHERIFF'S OFFICE OR RESIDENCE IN COUNTY JAIL—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

By virtue of the discretion vested in them by section 3157 G. C., the county commissioners may provide the office of a sheriff in a county jail with a telephone.

The same is true with regard to their right to place a telephone in the residence of a sheriff when such residence is in the county jail.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—We are in receipt of your favor of the 7th ult., in which you state:

> "Where an office of the sheriff is maintained in the court house supplied with telephone (paid out of the county funds), is the rent of a telephone in the sheriff's residence a legal charge against the county where the sheriff's residence is in and a part of the county jail? Would such rent be a legal charge against the county if placed in an office of the sheriff maintained and kept in the county jail separate and apart from his residence?"

Section 2419 of the General Code provides as follows:

"A court house, jail, offices for county officers, and an infirmary, shall be provided by the commissioners when, in their judgment, they, or any of them, are needed. Such buildings and offices shall be of such style, dimensions, and expense, as the commissioners determine * *."

Section 3157 of the General Code is as follows:

"The sheriff shall have charge of the jail of the county, and all persons confined there, keep them safely, attend to the jail, and govern and regulate it according to the rules and regulations prescribed by the court of common pleas."

The county commissioners are vested, by the virtue of the above section, 2419 of the General Code, with a wide discretion in building a county jail, and they have determined in this case that in order to carry out the provisions of the above section 3157 General Code, it is for the best interest of the public that the residence of the sheriff should be located in said jail. If in the judgment of said county commissioners it is for the best interest of the county that a telephone for the use of the sheriff and the public shall be located in the jail for the proper performance of the duties of said sheriff, they may so locate one, and it is also discretionary with them as to the exact location of said telephone in said jail.

My opinion, therefore, is that the rent of a telephone in the sheriff's residence where said residence is in and a part of the county jail, is a legal charge against the county, provided the county commissioners shall determine that it is for the best interest of the public and necessary for the sheriff in the proper performance of his duties that such a telephone shall be so located in the jail.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

174.

CITY SOLICITOR—COMPENSATION—REIMBURSEMENT FOR OFFICE EXPENSES PAID BY HIMSELF—NECESSITY FOR APPROPRIATION OR AUTHORIZING ORDINANCE.

The council has the power of paying office rent for quarters for the city solicitor by virtue of section 4214 G. C., but it is not morally nor legally obligated to do so.

Therefore, when the council neglects to make an appropriation for such purpose, its failure to authorize by ordinance the reimbursement of the city solicitor for office rents, makes it impossible for the city solicitor to be reimbursed for office expenses paid out of his own pocket, for the reason that he is in the position of an unauthorized agent, and could not bind the corporation.

The fact that the solicitor's salary was based upon the assumption that such expenses were to be paid in addition thereto, is too light a supposition to sustain the interpretation of a legislative direction to that extent

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 10, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 3d, requesting my opinion upon a question submitted to your department by the city solicitor of Coshocton. You have phrased the question in your inquiry to me as follows:

> "May a city council, in their appropriation for the first six months of 1911, provide for the payment of office rent for the city solicitor incurred during the year 1910, without an appropriation for that purpose available?"

Upon examination of the correspondence enclosed, however, I am persuaded that the real question is more specific than that submitted by you. The facts disclosed in the letter enclosed in your original communication, and in the letters that have subsequently passed between your department and the city solicitor, are as follows:

> "It has always been the custom in the city of Coshocton that the city solicitor should be furnished an office. The practice has been for the council to appropriate to the incidental fund of the city solicitor, an amount sufficient to pay office rent because the buildings owned by the city do not contain rooms suitable for offices for the city solicitor. There has never been any ordinance, however, expressly providing that the city should furnish the solicitor with an office, or that the solicitor, as part of his compensation should be reimbursed for office rent."

During the year 1910, doubtless by inadvertence, council neglected to make the customary appropriation for the office rent for the city solicitor; the solicitor, however, contracted for an office and paid the rent thereof monthly out of his personal funds. In the first semi-appropriation ordinance of 1911, council inserted an appropriation for the office rent of the city solicitor for the year 1910. The validity of this appropriation is called into question by your department.

It will be observed, therefore, that the question is somewhat narrower than as phrased by you, and relates in reality to the legality of the appropriation made under the facts and circumstances above detailed. I might state my opinion at the outset, that if the city were under a legal or moral obligation to pay the office rent of the city solicitor, the mere fact that an appropriation for that purpose is retroactive would be immaterial, as would be the fact that the obligation had been incurred in the absence of a specific appropriation for that purpose. In either of such events it would be perfectly legal for council to make an appropriation similar to that described in your general question.

Was there, then, an existing legal or moral obligation in favor of the solicitor, or his lessor, and against the city, which council might legally recognize in the matter above described?

The following sections of the General Code are applicable to the solution of this question:

> "Section 3806. No contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into * * * by any board or officer of a municipal corporation, unless the auditor or clerk thereof first certifies to council that the money required for such contract, agreement or other obligation * * * is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and not appropriated for any other purpose * * *.

"Section 3807. All contracts, agreements or other obligations * * * entered into * * * contrary to the provisions of the preceding section shall be void, and no person whatever shall have any claim or demand against the corporation thereunder * * *.

"Section 3808. No member of council, board, officer or commissioner of the corporation, shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. A violation of any part of this or the preceding two sections shall disqualify the party violating it from holding any office of trust or profit in the corporation, and shall render him liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other things he may receive contrary to the provisions of such sections, and if in office he shall be dismissed therefrom.

"Section 4211. The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties * * *. All contracts requiring the authority of council for their execution shall be entered into and conducted to performance by the board or officers having charge of the matters to which they relate * * *.

"Section 4214. Except as otherwise provided in this title, council, by ordinance or resolution, shall determine the number of officers, clerks and employes in each department of the city government, and shall fix by ordinance or resolution their respective salaries and compensation * * *.

"Section 4240. That council shall have the management and control of the finances and property of the corporation, except as may otherwise be provided * * *.

Section 4326. The director of public service shall manage * * * have charge of the maintenance of public buildings and other property of the corporation not otherwise provided in this title. He shall have the management of all other matters provided by the council in connection with the public service of the city."

I can find no other sections of the General Code relating in any way to the question under consideration. I have sought in vain for a provision expressly authorizing council to empower the executive officers of the city to rent offices for their use. I have failed to find any section of the General Code which commands, either expressly or by implication, council to furnish offices for the executive officers of the city. I am forced to the conclusion that it is not the duty of council to furnish such offices or to authorize the executive officers to contract for them.

In my opinion, however, council has full power to authorize an executive officer of the city to rent an office for his official use, and to bind the city by a contract in furtherance of such authority. Such offices and such contracts are not under the control of the director of public service under the sections above quoted, relating to the power and duty of that officer. Whence then does council derive the power in question? The power is not one of the enumerated powers of a municipal corporation as found in section 3615 etsq. of the General Code, nor, as above intimated, is it expressly conferred upon council by any statute whatever.

I base my conclusion, above expressed, that council has the power to authorize the city solicitor to incur office rent and to reimburse him therefor, from section 4214 of the General Code, above quoted. The power to fix the compensation of an officer carries with it the power to reimburse him for expenses incurred by him in the discharge of his official duties, and to authorize the incurring of such expenses. In my opinion, the expense of office rent, when the city does not furnish an office to the solicitor, is one which is necessarily incurred by the solicitor in the performance of his duties. Council could lawfully provide, in fixing the compensation of the city solicitor, that in addition to the salary or other compensation to be allowed to the solicitor, he should be reimbursed for all necessary and actual expenses incurred by him in the performance of his official duties, including office rent not to exceed a certain sum annually, and that the solicitor should be authorized to enter into a contract, either in his own name or in behalf of the city, for suitable offices and not to exceed an annual rent prescribed in ordinance.

The procedure above outlined is, in my opinion, the only proper and legal method of providing offices outside of a city building for the executive offices of a city otherwise than from year to year by semi-appropriation ordinance. Of course, when council in such an appropriation ordinance sets aside a fund for the use of the city solicitor for office rent, such fund may be lawfully expended by the city solicitor for that purpose, and the appropriation carries with it the authority to make such contract as may be proper to carry the appropriation into effect. In such a case, of course, the absence of general legislative authority of council, such as above described, would be immaterial. It is only in case council neglects, as in the present instance, to make such an appropriation that its failure to authorize by general and permanent ordinance the reimbursement of the city solicitor for office rent does become material. In such event the solicitor finds himself without any authority whatever to bind the city by a contract for the rental of his office. If he attempts to bind the city under such circumstances he renders himself liable to the provisions of section 3808, above quoted.

Again, the executive officers of the city other than the director of public service and the director of public safety are given no express authority to enter into contracts binding the city. Their authority, if any, with regard to such contracts must arise out of an ordinance of council adopted in pursuance of authority above described. The case, therefore, is not merely one in which a public agent, having the authority to act, has failed to observe the formalities such as those enumerated in section 4036, above quoted, but it is rather the case of total lack of authority on the part of the agent with regard to the subject-matter of a contract by which he attempts to bind his principal. It is therefore, unnecessary to rely upon such cases as Wellston vs. Morgan, 65 O. S. 219; Lancaster vs. Miller, 58 O. S. 558; Buchanan Bridge Company vs. Buchanan, 60 O. S. 406, and Comstock vs. Nelsonville, 61 O. S. 288, nor in the case similar to that of State ex rel. vs. Fronizer, 77 O. S. 7. In all of these cases, officers vested with authority to make certain contracts have neglected to take certain steps in entering into such contracts, and the rule established then is that under such circumstances, a public corporation acquires no ex-contractu liability, but in case it recognizes a claim and pays out its moneys thereon, it cannot recover them back.

Because, therefore, the city solicitor has not been authorized by council to rent an office for his use, and because also by virtue of this omission he was without authority to bind the city by any contract in the premises, I am of the opinion that the lessor of the office acquired no contractual right against the city by virtue of his agreement with the solicitor.

The principles above defined establish the conclusion that the solicitor himself acquired no contractual right against the city, and indeed the solicitor could acquire no contractual right. His rights in the premises are such as he has by virtue of his office and no other. Unless he is clearly entitled to reimbursement for expenses as a part of his official compensation, he is deemed to incur such expenses gratituously, and as an officer of the corporation, he is prohibited both by principles of common law and by the express provision of section 3808 from having any contractual relations with the city. That is to say, the law is that a municipal officer may have no interest in municipal contracts.

Upon the foregoing, I conclude that neither the city solicitor himself nor the lessor of the office used by him has, in the absence of previous appropriations made by council, or an ordinance reimbursing the solicitor for expense of office rent, or authorizing him to enter into contract for office room, an enforcible and legal right against the city.

Have either of these individuals, then, a moral right giving rise to a moral obligation on the part of the city which would justify a subsequent appropriation to discharge such obligation?

I have intimated that if such a moral obligation exists, it may be discharged in the manner described in your question. As to this principle there seems to be no doubt, but a moral obligation is not created by a mere determination of council as it exists. While the term "moral obligation" would seem to be so broad as to include all claims as to the justice and equity of which a legislative body or an administrative officer might be satisfied, such is not its legal significance. The term has a fixed and definite meaning in law; that meaning may be defined as follows: "A moral obligation sufficient to support as a consideration a subsequent agreement consists of a legal obligation which by virtue of some positive rule of law is or has become unenforcible." Instances of such moral obligations are claims barred by the statutes of limitation, agreements of persons of abnormal status and perhaps public contracts entered into by officers authorized in the premises without following the procedure required by law. See Page on Contracts, section 320. Bailey vs. Philadelphia, 167 Pennsylvania State 569; Goulding vs. Davison, 25 How. Pr. 483; Tabetts vs. Dowd, 23 Wend. 379.

In the case which the city solicitor presents the essential element of moral obligation is lacking. There never was a legal obligation, nor could there have been; the solicitor being without any power whatever to enter into contract could not have bound the city either to himself nor to his lessor by complying with any of the formalities relative to entering into contract prescribed by the General Code. The fact that it had been the custom of the city of Coshocton, through the appropriation ordinances enacted from time to time by its council, to furnish the solicitor with an office by apportioning to his use a sum to be expended for office rent, does not alter the case. Each such appropriation constituted, it is true, and as I have above stated, authority to the city solicitor to rent an office and to pay for same out of the funds so appropriated, but such authority was temporary merely and was terminated in each instance by the lapse of the appropriation.

It is clear, therefore, that by his attempted contract he could not create against the city and in favor of his lessor a moral obligation in the legal sense.

It is clear, also, that there was no moral obligation against the city and in favor of the solicitor. The principle that a public officer is not entitled to reimbursement is too well settled in this state to require citation of authority. reimbursement for expenses unless the law or an ordinance expressly authorizes such reimbursement is too well settled in this state to require citation of authority. Here, again, the mere fact that it has been customary to allow reimbursement for a certain expense under authority of periodical appropriation ordinance is immaterial. Custom establishes no legal obligation against a municipal corporation. The right of the officer against the city being non-contractual, this principle applies a fortiori to the determination of such right.

For all of the above reasons and upon the assumption that at the time the solicitor incurred the expenses in question there was no permanent ordinance of the city of Coshocton providing that he should be reimbursed for such expenses, I am of the opinion that the city is under no legal or moral obligation to allow the same. In the absence of an obligation of one of these two classes, it is not lawful for the council to appropriate money for the payment of office rent paid out by the solicitor under the circumstances above outlined, and this item of the current appropriation ordinance is void.

I have reached the above conclusion most reluctantly in view of the facts stated in the various letters of the solicitor. It is indeed unfortunate that the solicitor cannot be permitted to be reimbursed for his outlay, especially in view of the facts as stated by him that the annual salary of the solicitor was undoubtedly based upon the supposition that he was to receive his office rent in addition thereto. The rights of the solicitor in the premises, however, must be established upon a foundation more substantial than a supposition. If council, in fixing the salary of the solicitor, had enacted in a permanent ordinance the real intent that may have been in the minds of the members of council, and if such ordinance had been in the form above suggested, a different conclusion would have followed.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

184.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL—POWER OF COUNCIL TO FIX COMPENSATION—MAYOR'S SALARY PAYABLE DURING TEMPORARY ABSENCE.

The president of council of a city cannot be allowed compensation for services as acting mayor during the temporary absence of the mayor, and the mayor is to be allowed his usual salary while temporarily absent.

The president of the council is not a member of the council and his salary is not governed by the provisions of section 126, Municipal Code. The council may fix the compensation of the president of the council under sections 4213 and 4214, General Code, at a yearly or a per meeting rate as it sees fit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter in which you submit to this department the following questions:

> "1. May the president of council receive compensation for services as acting mayor, provided he is required to render services as acting mayor during the absence of the mayor from the city, in addition to the regular salary or compensation fixed in the salary ordinance of the city? Is the mayor entitled to the salary attached to the office for the period of time absent from the city and during which the duties of the office are performed by the president as acting mayor?
>
> "2. Is it legal for city councils to fix a compensation of $1.00 per meeting for the services of the president of council, or should it be a regular annual salary?"

Answering your first question, it is the opinion of this department that the president of council cannot receive compensation for services as acting mayor during the absence of the mayor, and that the mayor is entitled to the salary attached to the office even if temporarily absent from the office.

Answering your second question, original section 126 of the Municipal Code provides as follows:

> "Council shall fix the salaries of all officers, clerks and employes in the city government, except as otherwise provided in this act, and all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury. The salary of any officer, clerk or employe so fixed, shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he may have been elected or appointed; provided, that the compensation of members of council, if any is fixed, shall be in accordance with the time actually consumed in the discharge of their official duties, but in no event shall exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per year, each, in cities having a population according to the last or any succeeding federal census of 25,000, or less, and for every 30,000 additional inhabitants determined as aforesaid, said compensation may be, but shall not exceed, an additional one hundred dollars per year each, but the salary shall in no city be greater than twelve hundred dollars per annum; and provided further, that the salaries of members of council shall be paid semi-monthly and a proportionate reduction in said salaries shall be made for the non-attendance of any member upon any regular or special meeting thereof."

The foregoing original section of the Municipal Code appears in the General Code under section 4213 and section 4214, and is as follows:

Section 4213.

> "The salary of any officer, clerk or employe shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected or appointed, and, except as otherwise provided in this title, all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury."

Section 4214.

> "Except as otherwise provided in this title, council, by ordinance or resolution, shall determine the number of officers, clerks and employes in each department of the city government, and shall fix by ordinance or resolution their respective salaries and compensation, and the amount of bond to be given for each officer, clerk or employe, with surety subject to the approval of the mayor."

The foregoing citations show some difference between the original section in the Municipal Code and as the same now appears in the General Code.

On October 5, 1909, this department rendered an opinion upon said section 126 of the Municipal Code, as follows:

"That the president of council is not a member of council, and that section 126 of the Municipal Code does not govern the salary of the president of council as it does the other members of the city council."

I am unable to find any statutory provision for the compensation of the president of council, other than section 4213 and section 4214 of the General Code, cited above.

It is my opinion that council, by the authority vested in it by said sections, can legally fix the compensation of the president of council at $1.00 per meeting or can grant him a regular annual salary, as in the discretion of the council seems best.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

201.

DEPUTY SHERIFF ACTING AS COURT BAILIFF—COMPENSATION AND ITS DISPOSITION WITH REFERENCE TO SHERIFF'S FEE FUND.

When deputy sheriff receiving a regular salary from the sheriff's fee fund is oppointed bailiff, a per diem compensation for such service cannot be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the sheriff's fee fund for the reason that there is no statutory provision for the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith note the receipt of your inquiry of March 2, 1911, in which you ask the following question:

"May a deputy sheriff receiving a regular salary from the sheriff's fee fund be appointed court bailiff, his per diem compensation for such service to be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the sheriff's fee fund?"

Section 2977 General Code provides as follows:

"All the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected or received by law as compensation for services by a county auditor, county treasurer, probate judge, sheriff, clerk of courts, or recorder, shall be so received and collected for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which they are elected, and shall be held as public moneys belonging to such county and accounted for and paid over as such as hereinafter provided."

Section 2983 General Code as amended, 101 O. L. 200, provides:

"At the end of each quarter, each such officer shall pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor, all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by this office during such quarter, for his official services, which money shall be kept in separate funds by the county treasurer, and credited to the office from which they were received, 'and he shall also, at the end of each year of his incumbency in office and at the close of the term for which he shall have been elected, make and file a sworn statement with the county commissioners, of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind, which are due his office and unpaid.'"

In the construction of the above sections, it is the opinion of this department that the court bailiff not being such officer as enumerated in said section 3977, and further, that the per diem compensation paid to the court bailiff or constable not being any part of and not being in any way connected with the fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind of the sheriff's office, therefore, such per diem compensation received by the court bailiff cannot be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the sheriff's fee fund for the reason that, there is no statutory provision for the same.

I trust that this satisfactorily answers your inquiry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

205.

COUNTY RECORDER—RIGHT TO BID ON CONTRACT FOR MAKING PLATS FOR USE OF THE QUADRENNIAL REAL ESTATE BOARD—LEGALITY OF PAYMENT FOR SERVICES RENDERED ON SUCH CONTRACT FROM THE COUNTY TREASURER.

Where the county commissioners advertise for bids for making plats for the use of the quadrennial real estate appraisers and the recorder of the same county submitted a bid, was awarded the contract, rendered the services and was paid the amount of his bid, there should be no recovery as there is no prohibition in the law against the letting of such a contract to the county recorder.

March 30, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor of March 22d, wherein you state:

"In 1910 the county commissioners advertised for bids for making plats for the use of the quadrennial real estate appraisers, and the recorder of the same county submitted a bid and was awarded a contract, rendered the service and was paid from the county treasury an amount approximating $2,000. What finding shall be made by this department in the matter?"

Section 5549 General Code provides:

"If, in the opinion of the county commissioners, it is necessary to the proper appraisal of the real estate of such county, on or before their June session, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, and every fourth year thereafter, they may advertise for four consecutive weeks in one or more newspapers of general circulation in the county, for sealed proposals to construct the necessary maps and plats to enable the assessors in the county, or any district thereof, to correctly reappraise all real estate. The maps and plats shall be made under the supervision of the county auditor, and such advertisement shall particularly specify the extent and character of the work to be done. Each bid shall be accompanied by a good and sufficient bond of not less than one thousand dollars conditioned that said bidder will not fail or refuse to enter into contract in accordance with the advertised proposals, in case his bid is accepted. The commissioners shall open the bids on the day named in the advertisement, and, within three days thereafter, award the contract to the lowest and best bidder, if, in their opinion, it is to the interest of the county so to do, or they may reject any and all bids."

Section 5550 General Code provides:

"If the contract is awarded, the bidder to whom it is awarded, shall forthwith give a good and sufficient bond, with two or more sureties, in an amount of not less than two thousand dollars, nor more than ten thousand dollars, as required by the county commissioners, conditioned for the prompt, faithful, and accurate performance of the work to be done. On completion of any city, village, township or district, the work shall be paid for out of the county treasury, on the warrant of the county auditor, after it has been duly accepted, and approved by the county commissioners. No bill shall be allowed until the auditor and commissioners are satisfied that the labor has been performed in accordance with the contract on file with the county auditor. In counties or districts having no map, the commissioners shall furnish it under the provisions of this chapter."

The county recorder having under the provision of section 5549 supra, submitted a bid for the making of plats for the use of the quadrennial appraisers, and the contract having been duly awarded to him and said county recorder having rendered the services under said contract, and received the money therefor, upon approval of the county commissioners, the presumption is that he rendered said services at such times, either personally or by third parties, as that such work of making said maps did not interfere with his service as county recorder, and that, therefore, the payment of such services was proper.

As the county has received the benefit of such services and has paid for the same the charge should be allowed, there being no prohibition in the law to the letting of such a contract to a county recorder.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 207.

INSURANCE—RIGHT OF MEMBER OF BOARD OF REVIEW OF A CITY TO SELL TO A COUNTY—NECESSITY OF ADVERTISEMENT AND BIDS—PUBLIC OFFICIAL'S RIGHT TO CONTRACT WITH PUBLIC DIVISIONS.

Inasmuch as a member of the city board of review is not connected with the county within the meaning of section 12910 G. C., he is not absolutely precluded from selling insurance to the county in which the city is located.

If, however, the interest of the insurance company therein exceeds the sum of $50.00, the contract is within section 12911 G. C., and must be let on bids duly authorized by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Is a member of a city board of review prohibited by either section 12910 or 12911, General Code, from selling fire insurance to the county in which the city is located?"

Said sections 12910-12911 in so far as they are applicable to the question at hand are as follows:

> "Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit by election or appointment, * * * is interested in a contract for the purchase of * * * fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education, or a public institution with which he is connected, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

Section 12911:

> "Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit * * * is interested in a contract for the purchase * * * of fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education, or a public institution with which he is not connected, and the amount of such contract exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

These sections together constitute section 6969 Revised Statutes. In their present form they afford some doubt as to whether the phrases "with which he is connected" in section 12910 and "with which he is not connected" in section 12911, modify any of the preceding nouns excepting the word "institution." If, however, they do not modify any of the preceding nouns the two sections are mutually inconsistent. I am satisfied that this point is doubtful enough at least to permit of comparison of the two sections being in pari materia, and also of the original section 6969 Revised Statutes. In the said original section, the language is such as to make it perfectly apparent that these two phrases modify all the nouns immediately preceding them respectively.

Nevertheless there still remains some ambiguity in section 12911 because of the use of the article "the" before the word "county." The corresponding word in section 6969 was "any" and the effect of that section, as embodied in the engrossed bill which was passed by the general assembly, was to make it unlawful for any public officer to have any contract with any political subdivision unless that contract was let on bids. Section 12911 corrects that defect in the former section 6969, and in my judgment the mere use of the word "the," although it makes the meaning somewhat obscure, does not vitally affect it. Under section 12911 any public officer commits a crime if he sells fire insurance for an amount exceeding fifty ($50.00) dollars to any public institution or political subdivision unless the contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law.

In my opinion, a member of the city board of review is not "connected with" the county in the sense that he is a county officer. To be sure, the board of which he is a member discharges, within a limited area, functions otherwise devolving on county officers, namely, the equalization and revision of tax valuations. However, the office is not in the complete sense a county office, and in view of the strict construction which must be given to penal statutes, I am inclined to the opinion that section 12910 does not preclude a member of the board of review from selling fire insurance to the county in which the city is located.

It is otherwise, however, with section 12911. In my opinion, this section applies to the case cited by you and makes it unlawful and felonious for a member of a city board of review to sell fire insurance to the county in which the city is located if the premium—i. e. the interest of the company, not of the agent—thereon exceeds the sum of fifty ($50.00) dollars, unless the contract is let on bids duly advertised according to law.

If, however, the amount of the company's interest in the contract is less than fifty ($50.00) dollars, a member of a city board of review may lawfully sell fire insurance to the county.

While some courts have held this section is declaratory of the common law, these holdings relate, in my opinion, to that part of the former section which is included in section 12910. It never was unlawful at common law for a public agent to be interested in a contract with a political subdivision with which he was in no way connected as an officer.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

211.

COUNTY OFFICERS' FEE FUND—PAYMENT THEREFROM OF OFFICERS' SALARY—TRANSFER TO FUND BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Where under authority of 2984 G. C., the commissioners make the last transfer in the fee fund on the 1*st Monday in January,* 1911, the fees earned in the several county offices for the quarter beginning January 1, 1911, are not applicable to the payment of the salaries of officers and their deputies for the quarter beginning April 1, 1911.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of March 11th, in which you submit to this department the following inquiry:

"Kindly advise this department when the last transfers to officers' fees funds may be made under the provisions of section 2984, as amended in Ohio laws, vol. 101, page 200. Are the fees earned in the several county offices the present quarter, and which are required to be paid in to the credit of the respective fee funds April 1st, applicable to the payment of salaries of the officers and their deputies for the quarter beginning April 1st, if transfers are made to said fee funds any time during the present quarter?"

The amended section referred to, reads as follows:

"Section 2984. On the first Monday of April, July, October, and January, whenever necessary, during the year after April 1, 1910, the county commissioners, by order entered on their journal, shall transfer from any other fund or funds of the county, in their discretion, to any county officer's fee fund, such sums as are necessary to make good any deficiency in such fee fund likely to arise during the ensuing quarter in consequence of the payment of such officer, deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes during such period from the amounts then in or estimated to come into such fee fund for that period from such office. Provided that the aggregate amounts so transferred to the fee fund of any such officer, except the county clerk, probate judge and sheriff, shall not exceed the aggregate amounts paid into or authorized to be paid into the general fund from the fee fund of such officer during such period."

I take it that the phrase "On the first Monday of April, July, October and January, whenever necessary after April 1, 1910," means whenever it is necessary to transfer during one year after April 1, 1910, on any of the occasions therein specified, to-wit: the first Monday of April, July, October and January respectively, that is to say, the first transfer would be made on the first Monday of April, the second transfer would be made the first Monday of July, the third transfer would be made the first Monday of October, and the fourth and last transfer on the first Monday in January, 1911.

Under authority of the said act, as amended, the commissioners make the last transfer on the first Monday in January, 1911, so that it necessarily follows that the fees earned in the several county offices for the quarter beginning January 1, 1911, are not applicable to the payment of the salaries of officers and their deputies for the quarter beginning April 1, 1911.

I trust that this answers your inquiry, and beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 211.

STATUTES OF LIMITATIONS AGAINST THE STATE AND AGAINST ITS SUBDIVISIONS—SUITS AGAINST CITIZENS AND OFFICERS—SUITS ON BOND—WHARFAGE CHARGES.

Statutes of limitations do not run against the state in the absence of special provisions to the contrary, and this rule applies wherever the state is the real party in interest regardless of the form of action or the style of the record.

This immunity from the statute of limitations does not exist, however, in favor of subdivisions of the state such as counties, township, school districts and municipal corporations.

A claim in behalf of a municipality for wharfage charges is a claim founded upon a statute within the meaning of section 11222 G. C., and action thereon is barred within six years.

Action is advised, however, on all claims including those more than six years back, leaving the defence of the statute to be interposed by the parties delinquent. The form of statute which runs against a city in an action against a citizen (not an officer or employe) depends on the nature of the claim and is governed by the ordinary rules relative thereto.

The limitation against a city, suing a collector of public funds unaccounted for, is 10 years if action is brought upon the bond and six years if brought upon the contractual or statutory liability, unless other provisions appear, or a penalty is connected with the delinquency.

The same principles apply to an action brought by a city against a city officer for fees or compensation illegally drawn.

If fraud exists in any of the above cases the statute would be suspended until the discovery of the fraud.

The time when rights of action accrue differ with different circumstances.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. An audit discloses that the owner of a wharf boat on the Ohio river moored to the bank of said river within the corporate limits of a city is delinquent in the payment of wharfage charges as fixed by city ordinance, since February, 1900. The delinquency approximates $3,000.00, and the owner is financially responsible. Should our finding include the delinquency from February, 1900, or would the statute of limitations prevent the recovery of any part?
>
> "2. We desire the opinion of your department as to when the statute of limitations begins to run against a city in an action to recover from a citizen (not an officer or employe) moneys found due to the city; also against the city in an action to recover from a collector of public revenue, who may not have accounted for the public funds collected by him in his official capacity; also against the city in an action to recover for fees or compensation illegally drawn by a city official.
>
> "3. Does the statute of limitations run the same against the principal and surety on official bonds?

"1. Said statute begins to run at the time the right of action accrues. Query: When does right of action accrue, at the time the act was committed, or at the time it was discovered and demand made of the party concerned, or at the time it is given publicity in a legally filed report?"

You have also submitted to me, a letter addressed to your department by Hon. Jay S. Paisley, prosecuting attorney of Jefferson county, which raises a question not specifically stated, but from which I assume, that he desires to be advised as to the application of the statutes of limitation to certain findings of a report of the examiner of your bureau as to delinquencies of county officials. At the outset, permit me to state that I cannot return specific and complete answers to all of your questions. I shall endeavor, however, to state as fully as practicable the general principles relating to the application of the statutes of limitation to the various classes of cases enumerated in your letter.

Sections 11221, 11222 and 11223 of the General Code, constitute the statutes of limitation respecting causes of action upon contracts other than official bonds, and are as follows:

"Section 11221. An action upon a specialty or an agreement, contract or promise in writing shall be brought within fifteen years after the cause thereof accrued.

"Section 11222. An action upon a contract not in writing, expressed or implied, or upon a liability created by statute other than a forfeiture of penalty, shall be brought within six years after the cause thereof accrued.

"Section 11223. If payment has been made upon any demand founded on a contract, or a written acknowledgment thereof, or a promise to pay it has been made and signed by the party to be charged, an action may be brought thereon within the time herein limited, after such payment, acknowledgment or promise.

Section 11224 General Code provides in part as follows:

"An action for either of the following causes, shall be brought within four years after the cause thereof accrued:

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"2. For the recovery of personal property, or for taking, detaining, or injuring it;

"3. For relief on the ground of fraud;

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"If the action be * * * for the wrongful taking of personal property, the cause thereof shall not accrue until the wrongdoer is discovered; nor, if it be for fraud, until the fraud is discovered."

Section 11225 provides in part as follows:

"An action * * * upon a statute for a penalty or forfeiture, shall be brought within one year after the cause thereof accrued."

Section 11226 provides in part as follows:

"An action on the official bond, or undertaking of an officer, * * * or on a bond or undertaking given in pursuance of statute, shall be brought within ten years after the cause thereof accrued."

Section 11227 provides in part that,

"An action for relief not hereinbefore provided for, shall be brought within ten years after the cause thereof accrued * * *."

Section 11236 provides in part that,

"The provisions of this chapter, respecting lapse of time as a bar to suit, shall not apply in the case of a continuing and subsisting trust * * *."

While the letter of the prosecuting attorney, submitted to me in connection with your request for an opinion, does not so state, I have assumed that among the items which might be included in the findings of an examiner of your bureau with respect to a county is taxes collected by a treasurer and not accounted for by him in his settlements with the auditor of the county. I mention this case particularly because it presents a rather novel problem in connection with the general question. There is a general principle that statutes of limitation do not run against the state unless it is expressly so provided, regardless of the nature of the cause of action which exists in favor of the state. In Wasteney vs. Schott, 58 O. S. 410, the first branch of the syllabus, it was held that,

"The rule that statutes of limitation do not run against the state unless it is expressly so provided, is applicable in actions where the state, though not a party to the record, is the real party in interest."

The action was one by the county treasurer for the recovery of delinquent personal taxes. It was argued that inasmuch as the treasurer was party plaintiff, the statute would run against his cause of action as against a private individual; that inasmuch as a part of the taxes at least, were for county and local purposes, the question was as to whether or not the statute of limitations applied to a cause of action in favor of the county and the municipalities and townships for the use of which the taxes were being collected, on the theory that these political subdivisions were real parties in interest; and that in any event, the petition not so stating, it could not be presumed that the state was a party in interest at all. The supreme court accepted none of these views, but held per Williams, J. at page 414:

"It is not claimed that our statute of limitations is, in terms, made applicable to the state; and the rule is universal that, in the absence of such provision, statutes of limitation do not run against the state, for the reason that laches cannot be imputed to it, and its rights cannot be prejudiced by the neglect of its officers. The proper application of the rule, in an action, is controlled however, by the nature of the rights involved, and the real parties in interest, rather than by the form of the action and names of the parties as they appear on the record. When the action, though brought in the name of the state, is prosecuted for the enforcement of some private or individual right, and the state has no substantial interest in the litigation, the plea of the statute may be interposed. On the other hand, if the state is the real party in interest, the plea of the statute is not available though the action be not prosecuted in its name; and actions under section 2859 of the Revised Statutes, for the recovery of personal taxes are, we think, of that character, and not subject to the bar of the statute, notwithstanding they are required to be brought in the name of the county treasurer. Revenues are essential to the maintenance of the state and the execution of its governmental functions. Taxation is a recognized constitutional and lawful means of raising such revenues for most, if not all public needs; and the courts will take notice that general taxes levied by the state directly, or through local agencies to which it has delegated that power, constitute a source of revenue for use in the due performance of the functions of the state government. Whether voluntarily paid, or collected by suit, they go partly to the general funds of the state for its disbursement in the administration of public affairs, and are in part disbursed in the due course of local administration by officers exercising the delegated powers of the state, deemed necessary and proper for that purpose. In the latter case, as well as the former, the fund belongs to the state's revenues, and the disbursement is for the public benefit, although local advantages may also result. Through county, township, municipal, and other organizations, they are paid out in the administration of public justice, the maintenance of the public order and security, the support of the public schools, and other purposes of a public nature pertaining to the state government. Hence for all such taxes levied on real property the lien thereon provided by statute is declared to be in favor of the state; and while it was probably deemed impracticable to create a lien on personal property for the taxes laid against it, the fund derived from them is expended in common with that arising from real estate taxes, and for the same purposes."

Under this decision it seems to me perfectly logical to hold that taxes, if collected by the treasurer and wrongfully detained by him, may be collected from him or from his estate at any time. If, however, a treasurer's liability in such a case is sought to be enforced by action on his official bond, a question which, so far as I am informed, has never been raised in this state, would be presented. Many official bonds are in terms, required to be made payable to the state of Ohio by statute. It might be said that, because official bonds are required to be made payable to the state, section 11126 must be regarded as expressly applicable to the state, and as affording protection to the sureties on an official bond, regardless of the fact that the state might be the real party in interest in an action brought thereon. On the other hand, however, it is a familiar fact that many actions on official bonds may be brought by private individuals for the enforcement of rights purely private. This being the case, it does not necessarily follow that section 11226 is intended as a waiver, so to speak, of the state's immunity to its own statutes of limitation, but that, on the contrary, the limitation is applicable only when the action on the bond is for the enforcement of private rights. I hesitate to express any opinion as to whether or not an action on an official bond for the enforcement of a right possessed by the state as the real party in interest, is limited either as to principal or sureties by section 11226.

The foregoing distinction relates exclusively to actions in which the state is the real party in interest. If the state as such real party in interest seeks to enforce its rights either in its own name or through an officer duly authorized in the premises by action on an official bond, for recovery on account of defalcations occurring more than ten years prior to the filing of the action, the questions above suggested would be squarely raised.

I have thus discussed the liability of a county treasurer as distinguished from other matters presented in your letter, and that of the prosecuting attorney, because I assume that this question might have been raised in the reports to which the prosecuting attorney refers. The immunity from the statute of limitations above described, does not exist in favor of any of the subdivisions of the state. Counties, townships, school districts and municipal corporations are subject to the statutes like private individuals. Cincinnati vs. First Presbyterian Church, 8 Ohio report, 299.

Coming now to the specific questions asked in your letter, I beg to state that, in my opinion, the liability of an owner of a wharf boat for wharfage charges, exacted by a city ordinance, is a "liability created by statute other than a forfeiture or penalty" or an "implied contract" within the meaning of section 11222 above quoted. I deem it unnecessary to distinguish between these two forms of liability for the purpose of this opinion, as in my judgment, section 11222 clearly governs the cause of action described in your first question. That is to say, the authority of a municipal corporation to impose wharfage charges is derived from statute. In this respect it is similar to the authority to make and levy assessments. Liability for such assessments has been held to be "a liability created by statute" within the meaning of the section referred to.

Hartman vs. Hunter, 56 O. S. 175.
Eddy vs. Leithe, 26 C. C. 657; 74 O. S. 462.
Brown County vs. Martin, 50 O. S. 203.

To hold, however, that the six-year statute of limitations applies to classes of this sort is not to hold that the findings of your department should not include liabilities incurred more than six years prior to the date of your examiner's report. The statute of limitations does not operate as an extinguishment of the right of action. It is in the nature of a privilege of which a defendant may avail himself at his pleasure. (See section 11218 General Code.) I would advise, therefore, that the findings of the bureau be based upon liabilities actually existing in favor of the city, and that suit be brought to recover the several installments of wharfage upon which the city's claim is based, thus making it necessary for the defendant to interpose the plea of the statute, especially, as provided in the above cited section.

Your second question consists of three subdivisions. With respect to that portion of it which relates to claims of a city against a third party, not an officer or employe, I beg to state that the nature of the claim will, in each instance, determine the statute of limitation applicable thereto. If the action is for the recovery of real property, the twenty-one-year limitation imposed by section 11219 would apply; if it is upon a contract in writing, the claim will be barred in fifteen years, and so on.

The second subdivision of your second question inquires as to the statute of limitations applicable to an action by a city to recover from a collector of public revenue public funds collected by him in his official capacity and due the city, but unaccounted for. The answer to this question in part involves the answer to your third general question, and I shall, for the sake of clearness, consider the two together. If the moneys collected, held for the city and unaccounted for, are within the terms of the official bond of the collector, so that his failure to account for them constitutes a breach thereof, an action for recovery may be brought within ten years. Such an action may be against the collector as principal and against his sureties, although the exact nature thereof will depend upon the form of the bond. Since the adoption of the present code of civil procedure it has been held that all actions on official bonds, with the possible exception above referred to, in case the state is the real party in interest, are barred in ten years, regardless of the period within which the individual liability of the principal would otherwise have been barred.

King vs. Nicholas, 16 O. S. 80.
State vs. Orr, 16 O. S. 523.
State vs. Kelley, 32 O. S. 421.

If the action is not on an official bond, however, and the duty to account to the city results, as it undoubtedly would result from the provisions of some statute, then the liability of an officer would be one created by statute other than a forfeiture or penalty, and the action must be brought within six years under section 11222 General Code.

State vs. Kilgore, N. P. (m. s.) 81.
Commissioners vs. McClure, 7 N. P. 187.
State vs. Newman, 2 O. S. 567 (an action on a bond brought prior to the adoption of the present code of civil procedure).

The third subdivision of your second question relates to an action brought by a city against a city officer for fees or compensation illegally drawn. Here again, the principle above defined applies. If the drawing of the illegal compensation constitutes a breach of the official bond of the officer, then an action may be brought at any time within ten years; otherwise, the action is one for the enforcement of a liability created by statute, or at the least upon an implied contract, and is barred within six years.

Your fourth question is not capable of an explicit answer. As a general rule, rights of actions upon contracts or upon liabilities created by statute, or upon breach of official bonds accrue at the time the act giving rise to such rights, was committed, and the mere failure of the city or other political subdivision through its officers or citizens to discover the commission of the act does not postpone the commencement of the statutory period. Some causes of this sort, however, do not accrue until demand is made. But here, again, the rule is, that demand must be made within reasonable time, and the statute will begin to run even against a political subdivision after such reasonable time, succeeding the commission of the wrongful act, has elapsed.

The foregoing comments all relate to actions upon contractual liabilities. That is to say, if a director of public service fails to account for water rents collected by him, and so conceals his action as to prevent the discovery, and a suit is brought for the recovery of the moneys withheld by him, on the theory that it was a statutory duty to pay them over, or that he was liable as upon an implied contract to pay them over to the city, then the action will be barred in six years from the time that his duty to pay first existed and was broken. Such an action would be said to sound in contract or to be an ex-contractu action. If however, the defalcation of a public officer is such as to give rise to a right of action in tort, or to afford ground for special relief in equity a different rule will prevail. That is to say, if the action is for damages rather than for the recovery of a specific sum due, with interest, and the injury giving rise to the right of action has not been discovered until some time subsequent to the commission of the act the cause of action does not under section 11224 accrue until the discovery of the fraud. At the present time I can imagine no occasion for the resort of a city to a court of equity for special relief on the ground of fraud; but in case such a situation should arise, the same principle would apply.

Carpenter vs. Canal Company, 35 O. S. 307.
Fee vs. Fee, 10 Ohio 470.
Stanglein vs. State, 17 O. S. 462.
Leffland vs. Bush, 26 O. S. 559.
State vs. Standard Oil Co., 49 O. S. 188.

As a general rule, however, I am convinced that the postponement of the accrual of the cause of action until the discovery of the fraud does not apply to most, if not nearly all, of the causes of action discovered by the investigations of your department.

I deem it proper to state that where the statute affords a penalty or a forfeiture as a punishment for official malfeasance, an action therefor must be brought within one year after the cause thereof accrued, and regardless of the discovery of the fraud. I mention this particularly because of the provisions of section 3808 General Code, which provides that an officer of a city who violates those provisions of the municipal code prescribing the formalities with which contracts shall be entered into, and prohibiting such officer from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation, shall be liable to the corporation for all sums of money or other thing he may receive through such violation of law. I do not hold that in all cases the application of this statute would constitute the exaction of a penalty or forfeiture. It certainly would amount to such a penalty however in some cases, and if an action were brought under this section against an officer personally it would be barred in one year. Harrison vs. Halliday, 4 C. C. (n. s.) 281.

I deem it also not out of place to state that the statutes of limitation above quoted, apply only in the absence of a special statute of limitation. I have not examined the statutes relating to municipal and other public officers, but if there are therein any such special statutory limitations qualifying the right of the political subdivision in a given case, such special provisions will not only take precedence over the general provisions of the statute of limitations, but they operate as an extinguishment of the right.

Errett vs. Howard, 78 O. S. 112.
Railway Co. vs. Howatt, 35 O. S. 284.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

214.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—COMPENSATION AS MEMBERS OF THE QUADRENNIAL COUNTY BOARD OF EQUALIZATION.

County commissioners are not entitled to receive for their own use the sum of $3.00 each per day for acting as members of the quadrennial county board of equalization.

When statutes are repealed and re-enacted for the purpose of revision and codification the presumption is that no change in the existing law is that no change in the effect of existing laws is intended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 7, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, enclosing copy of opinion drawn by the prosecuting attorney of Guernsey county, addressed to the board of county commissioners of that county respecting the compensation of the commissioners as members of the quadrennial county board of equalization.

You call my attention to an opinion of my predecessor reaching a conclusion opposite to that reached by the prosecuting attorney. I have carefully examined both the opinion of the prosecuting attorney and that of my predecessor. The prosecuting attorney concedes that prior to the adoption of the General Code the county commissioners were not entitled to additional compensation as members of the board of equalization. His contention is that the adoption of the code gave equal force and effect to all sections therein, and that the re-enactment of section 5597 served to neutralize the effect of the adoption of the county officers' salary law, and particularly that portion of it which is embodied in section 3001 General Code.

I find myself unable to agree with the prosecuting attorney. It seems to me that there is a patent ambiguity in the General Code as disclosed by comparison of sections 3001 and 5597; the former expressly provides that the annual salary of county commissioners "shall be in full payment of services rendered as such commissioners," while the latter provides that each member of the quadrennial county board of equalization shall be entitled to receive for each day necessarily employed in the performance of his duties the sum of $3.00.

The prosecutor acknowledges this ambiguity but seeks to remove it by harmonizing the two sections. In order thus to harmonize the sections it becomes necessary to hold that services as members of the quadrennial county board are not "services rendered as such commissioners" within the meaning of section 3001. This, however, is contrary to the meaning of that provision of the law of which section 3001 was a re-enactment. Under the old law it was held, upon the better reasoning, as the prosecuting attorney himself concedes, although not without dissent, that the above quoted language referred to services as members of the board of equalization as well as to other services which might be exacted of county commissioners in their official capacity.

Neither of the statutory provisions under consideration in the opinion of the prosecuting attorney were in any way materially changed in the General Code as compared with the form in which they appeared in the Revised Statutes. The rules of statutory construction to which the prosecutor refers are not applicable to the code; that is to say, when sections are repealed and re-enacted for the purpose of revision and codification the presumption is that no change in the effect of existing laws is intended, and this presumption over-rides all the considerations which the prosecuting attorney mentions.

In order then to reach the conclusion which the prosecuting attorney has reached it will be necessary to assume that before the adoption of the General Code, and after the adoption of the county commissioners' salary law, the law was in effect that county commissioners were entitled to additional compensation for serving as members of the annual and decennial county boards of equalization. It seems to me that it is now clearly established that this was not the law.

For all the foregoing reasons I concur in the opinion of my predecessor to the effect that county commissioners are not entitled to receive for their own use the sum of $3.00 each per day for acting as members of the quadrennial county board of equalization.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 214.

CITY POLICE COURT—DISPOSITION OF FINES AND COSTS IN CITY CASES—REPORT OF CLERK OF POLICE COURT TO CITY AUDITOR.

Money collected in city police courts must be turned over to the clerk of court and by him paid over to the city treasurer and reported to the city auditor.

April 7, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your recent inquiry in which you state:

> "What disposition should be made by the superintendent of the Columbus work house of fines and costs collected of prisoners sentenced to said work house from the police court of said city, said fines being imposed for violation of city ordinances? Should they be paid into the city treasury direct or to the clerk of the police court?"

Section 4599 of the General Code provides:

> "On the first Monday of each month, he shall make, under oath, to the city auditor, a report of all fines, penalties, fees and costs imposed by the court in city cases, showing in what cases they have been paid, and in what cases they remain unpaid, and, at the same time, he shall make a like report to the county auditor as to state causes. He shall immediately pay into the city and county treasuries, respectively, the amount then collected, or which may have come into his hands, from all sources, during the preceding month."

As the above section contemplates that it shall be the duty of the clerk of the police court to keep an accurate report of all fines, penalties, fees and costs imposed by the court in city cases, and that he shall so report to the city auditor and shall pay the moneys received into the city treasury, it is my opinion, that all moneys that are paid by way of fines and costs imposed by the judge of the police court of a city should be turned over to the clerk of the police court and by him paid into the city treasury and that he should report the same to the city auditor.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 222.

DIRECTOR PUBLIC SAFETY CONTRACTS FOR SUPPLIES—NOTICE IN NEWSPAPER.

From a general view of statutory provisions a director of public safety in contracting for apparatus and supplies for the use of his department, need under section 4328 General Code publish notice of such contracts in only one newspaper of general circulation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 14, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have handed to me a letter addressed to you by Horace Holbrook, publisher of the Western Reserve Democrat, and have requested my opinion upon the question which he asks therein, which is as follows:

> "Must a notice for bids given by a director of public safety in contracting for apparatus and supplies for the use of his department be published in two newspapers of opposite politics?"

Section 4371 of the General Code relates to and prescribes the powers and duties of the director of public safety in making contracts and expenditures, and is in part as follows:

> " 'The director of public safety may make all contracts and expenditures of money for * * * the purchase of engines, apparatus and other supplies necessary for the police and fire departments, and for other undertakings and departments under his supervision, but no obligation involving an expenditure of more than five hundred dollars shall be created unless first authorized and directed by ordinance of council.' In making, altering or modifying such contracts, the director of public safety shall be governed by the provisions of the preceding chapter relating to public contracts, except that all bids shall be filed with and opened by him. * * *"

"The provisions of the preceding chapter" referred to in this section are those of section 4328, et seq. General Code, which apply to and govern the director of public service in making contracts within his department. Said section 4328 provides in part as follows:

> "* * * the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

These two sections read together would seem to dispose of the question. However, section 4229 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in this title, in all municipal corporations the statements, ordinances, resolutions * * * notices, and reports required by this title * * * to be published, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation therein * * * and for the following times: * * * notices of contracts * * * once a week for four consecutive weeks; * * *"

It is "otherwise provided in this title" with respect to the publication of notices for bids by directors of public service and public safety, by the sections above referred to. I am therefore, of the opinion that publication of notices to contractors under section 4328 in one newspaper of general circulation within the city is sufficient.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

M 222.

TAX COLLECTOR—COMPENSATION—ILLEGAL PAYMENT BY COUNTY TREASURER—STATUTORY CONDITION PRECEDENTS—RECOVERY AGAINST TREASURER.

Where a tax collector appointed by the treasurer has been compensated for his services in that connection, but the journal of the proceedings of the county commissioners does not show that the provisions of section 5696 have been complied with, the compensation has been illegally paid and the treasurer and his bondsmen would be liable in an action to recover said money so paid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—We herewith note the receipt of your inquiry of the 4th inst., of which the following is a copy:

> "Section 5696 G. C., authorizes the employment of collectors to collect delinquent personal taxes.
>
> "Such collector was appointed by a treasurer and allowed 20 per cent. of all such taxes collected. The journal of the proceedings of the county commissioners does not show that the list of persons delinquent was publicly read or that they authorized the treasurer to employ collectors or that they prescribed the compensation of such collectors. Can an action be maintained against such collector for the recovery of the collector's fees paid in such case? If not, what should be the finding of this department in the premises (see Commissioners vs. Arnold, 65 O. S. 479)."

Section 5696 General Code, to which you refer in your letter is as follows:

> "The county commissioners, at each September session, shall cause the list of persons delinquent in the payment on personal property to be publicly read. If they deem it necessary, they may authorize the treasurer to employ collectors to collect such taxes or part thereof, prescribing the compensation of such collectors which shall be paid out of the county treasury. All such allowances shall be apportioned ratably by the county auditor among all the funds entitled to share in the distribution of such taxes."

Said statute provides the procedure by which a collector shall be employed to collect delinquent taxes on personal property. The case of County Commissioners vs. Arnold, 65 O. S. 479, holds that this section is mandatory and must be strictly followed. It is ordinarily the rule that payments made voluntarily, contrary to the law, cannot be recovered back. This rule, however, does not apply to public money so wrongfully paid contrary to law.

Page in his work on contracts, volume 2, section 796, says:

"Payments of public money form an exception to the ordinary rule as to voluntary payments and payment under mistake of law, since payments are always made by public officers and not by the public, which is really beneficially interested in such money. Thus, money which is paid out by public officers in violation of the law, may be recovered from the person to whom it is paid. The fact that the payment was voluntary on the part of the officer does not prevent the public from recovering. A government may recover money paid by a public officer under an erroneous construction of the law, and without any legal authority therefor. So if the money is paid out by a public officer upon a contract which the corporation represented by him had no power whatever to make, or upon a claim which the corporation had no power under any circumstances to allow such payment may be recovered.

"Accordingly, if a public officer draws money from the public treasury as his compensation, such as his salary, or fees collected by him from the public treasury without authority of law, such payments may be recovered in an action for money had and received.

"The fact that money paid to a state officer as compensation for services was paid upon the advice of the attorney general does not prevent the recovery thereof, if unauthorized by law; nor does the fact that the payment was made voluntarily, with full knowledge of the facts and without fraud, or under a mistake of law, even if such mistake is shared by the officer to whom payment is made, who takes in good faith."

In the case of City of Tacoma vs. H. M. Lilis, 18 L. R. A. 372, it was held:

"A payment of salary in excess of the lawful amount by order of a municipal council to one of its members is not within the rule which precludes recovery of money voluntarily paid."

In Railroad vs. United States, 164 U. S. 190, the court held:

"Parties receiving moneys illegally paid by a public officer are liable ex aequo et bono to refund them."

In McElrath vs. United States, 102 U. S. 426, it was held:

"A claimant received from the government the amount ascertained by the proper accounting officer to be due him, protesting at the time that he was entitled to a larger sum, and announcing his purpose not to be bound by such settlement of his accounts. He then sued the government for the additional amount claimed by him. Held, that the government was entitled to go behind the settlement of its accounting officers, and reclaim any sum which had been improperly allowed the claimant in such settlement."

In the last cited case the court further says in its opinion,

"The government declining to plead the settlement of 1874 in bar of the suit, meets the claimant upon his own chosen ground, insisting that its officers, misapprehending the law, paid to him out of the treasury money to which he was not legally entitled, asks, as we think it may rightfully do, judgment for the amount thus improperly paid to claimant."

In view of the foregoing, and the reasoning therein contained, I am of the opinion that an action can be maintained against such collector for the recovery of the collector's fees paid to him in the manner described in your inquiry, under and by authority of section 2921 of the General Code.

I noted from your letter that the journal of the proceedings of the county commissioners does not show that the list of persons delinquent was publicly read, nor that the commissioners authorized the treasurer to employ collectors, nor that they prescribed the compensation of such collectors. The case of Commissioners vs. Arnold, 65 O. S. 479, holds in express terms that all three of the requirements above noted, namely: the reading of the list, the authorizing of the treasurer to employ a collector, and the prescribing of the compensation must be complied with before a valid employment of a collector by the treasurer can be made. Your letter states that none of these steps were taken by the commissioners; therefore, the employment of the collector by the treasurer was absolutely without authority and void. I am, therefore, of the opinion that any money paid to the collector by the treasurer on account of such employment was a misapplication of funds of the county in the hands of the county treasurer, and an illegal payment of the same, and that the treasurer and his bondsmen would be liable in an action to recover said money so paid.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 229.

COUNTY FEE FUNDS—MANDAMUS TO COMPEL TRANSFERS THERETO—TRANSFER FROM SINKING FUNDS—WITHIN WHAT TIME, VALID—EXISTENCE OF SUFFICIENT UNCOLLECTED FEES AS A DEFENCE TO MANDAMUS.

Where the proper officials under 2984 G. C., as amended, 101 (O. L.) 200, fail to make transfers to deficient fee funds as direct in the act, these officials can be compelled to make the transfer, and a transfer so compelled which was made on April 1, 1911, is valid.

Such transfer cannot be made from a sinking fund specifically provided for the payment of interest on bonds.

A transfer otherwise legal, is not invalidated by reason of the fact that it is made on a legal half holiday.

The fact that the county clerk has sufficient fees which are earned but uncollected and might easily be collected is not a defence in mandamus to compel a transfer as such a defence would defeat the intention of the statute which was to create a guaranty of county fee funds for the respective officers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 24, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of April 6th enclosing therein letter from J. E. Brate, auditor of Butler county, upon which you request my written opinion in regard to the following statement of facts and inquiries in relation thereto:

> On Tuesday, March 28th, a peremptory writ of mandamus issued from the court of common pleas of Butler county to the commissioners of Butler county, Ohio, on the relation of Charles Brunson, clerk of courts, ordering said board to make certain transfers of funds to the clerk's fee fund to meet the deficiencies therein up to January 1, 1911. On Saturday, April 1, 1911, at 12:40 p. m., resolutions making transfers to meet said deficiencies, and deficiencies existing on March 31, 1911, were attempted to be made by said board of county commissioners out of the "sinking fund A," which was created by act of the legislature of Ohio, found in 94th vol. of Laws of Ohio, page 489 and 490, for the purpose of paying principal and interest of a certain bond issue of $70,000.00 authorized by said act. By section 3 of said act the auditor of Butler county, Ohio, "is hereby ordered, directed and empowered at each semi-annual distribution of taxes to deduct and take out of the amounts due and payable to each of the said several funds replenished by the issue of the bonds as herein provided, such sum of money as is sufficient to pay such bonds and the interest thereon as may at said time be due and payable, which said sum so deducted, shall not exceed at any one time the sum of five per centum of each of said funds, which amount shall be paid into what shall hereafter be known and designated as 'sinking fund A,' which is hereby created, and said several funds shall be used for the payment of the bonds and the interest thereon issued under the provisions of this act, and the same shall be so taken out and deducted until said bonds and interest are fully paid, and any surplus remaining at the expiration of such period shall be refunded and paid back into said several funds."

The county auditor was not a party to the mandamus proceedings, and desires to know whether he has the legal right to recognize said transfers so attempted to be made by said board of county commissioners. He, therefore, desires your written opinion on the following questions:

"1st. Under section 2984 of the General Code, as amended April 30, 1910, 101 vol. laws of Ohio, page 200, said transfers are authorized 'on the first Monday of April, July, October and January whenever necessary during one year after April 1st, 1910,' does the transfer made April 1, 1911, come within this limitation of time?

"2d. 'Sinking fund "A"' from which said transfers were sought to be made, not being raised by levy of the county commissioners, nor expended by them for any purpose whatsoever, but being solely for the purpose of meeting principal and interest on the bonds issued under said act, may the county commissioners legally transfer permanently from this fund any amount of money, however small, to any other county fund whatsoever, or is the language of section 2984 of the General Code, above cited, broad enough to supersede the act in question?

"3d. On February 14, 1911, the legislature of Ohio amended section 5978 of the General Code, as follows: 'Every Saturday of each year shall be a one-half legal holiday for all purposes, beginning at twelve o'clock noon, and ending at twelve o'clock midnight.' This transfer not having been made prior to twelve o'clock noon on said April 1, 1911, will the attempted transfer at 12:40 p. m., on said date be a legal and valid act of the county commissioners, such as would be binding upon the county auditor?

"4th. If the fee book of the clerk of courts shows that ample fees have been earned and uncollected, which might easily be collected with reasonable effort by said officer to meet all deficiencies in said fee fund existing January 1, 1911, or March 31st thereafter, would this be a good defense as against a proceeding in mandamus against the county auditor to compel him to recognize said attempted transfers? Or must this question be raised on appeal from commissioners?"

(The writer's opinion on this proposition was supported in a case wherein he represented the plaintiff, Homer V. Atkinson, clerk of the court of common pleas, Vinton county, Ohio, tried in the common pleas court there, and decided by Hon. Geo. E. Martin, now judge of the customs court of appeals.)

In answer to the first question submitted to you by the auditor of Butler county, it is my judgment that inasmuch as the transfer of funds is for the purpose of guaranteeing the salary of county officers, if the commissioners of the county fail to so transfer at the time they are required by law, such county officers are not bound by that fact to be deprived of the benefit of such guarantee, and that the county commissioners can be required to transfer such fund on any other day of the quarter, since they failed to make such transfer at the time fixed by law. I am of the opinion that the transfer could be made on April 1, 1911, under the above circumstances.

In answer to your second question I think that the expression "any other fund or funds of the county" means general funds thereof, and does not refer to a special fund which is for a particular purpose, such as section 3 of the act found in 94 O. L. 489-490, which reads as follows:

"For the purpose of paying the interest on all outstanding bonds issued and sold under this act, and to redeem the said bonds as they respectively mature, the county auditor of Butler county, Ohio, is hereby ordered, directed and empowered at each semi-annual distribution of taxes to deduct and take out of the amounts due and payable to each of the said several funds replenished by the issue of the bonds as herein provided, such sum of money as is sufficient to pay such bonds, and the interest thereon as may at said time be due and payable, which said sum so deducted shall not exceed at any one time the sum of five per centum of each of said funds, which amount shall be paid into what shall hereafter be known and designated as 'sinking fund A,' which is hereby created, and said several sums shall be used for the payment of the bonds and the interest thereon issued under the provisions of this act, and the same shall be so taken out and deducted until said bonds and interest are fully paid, and any surplus remaining at the expiration of such period shall be refunded and paid back into said several funds."

I am of the opinion that the commissioners cannot legally transfer permanently from that fund any amount of the fund to any other fund for the reason above given.

As to your third question that such attempted transfer was made on Saturday after twelve o'clock, noon, which by statute is a legal half-holiday, has no legal bearing on the question one way or the other. That is to say, I do not believe that the transfer being made on a legal half-holiday would in and of itself invalidate the transfer, if such transfer was legal in the first instance.

As an answer to your fourth inquiry, I am of the opinion that inasmuch as the provision for the transfer of funds was for the purpose of guaranteeing the salaries of the respective county officers, the fact that the county clerk has sufficient fees which are earned and uncollected, and which might be easily collected, and which are sufficient to meet all deficiencies up to January 1, 1911, or March 31, 1911; would not be a good defence for the reason that to hold otherwise would not be giving such clerk the legal rights to which he is entitled under the law of the guarantee of county fee funds of the respective county officers. I am further of the opinion that the question cannot be raised on appeal from a decision of the county commissioners.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 231.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION—POWER TO INSURE IN MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANIES—CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION.

Under the restriction of art. 8, section 6, of the constitution of Ohio, the legislature could not authorize boards of education to insure in mutual fire insurance companies when the board might be compelled to meet a pro rata share of the loss.

Furthermore, the board of education is not an "owner" of property so as to enable it to come within the meaning of section 9593 G. C., as amended 101 Ohio laws 294.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 28, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of April 20th, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Is it a violation of the constitution of the state of Ohio for a board of education to insure the property of the school district in a mutual fire insurance company where, in case of loss, the board of education could be compelled to meet a pro rata share of such loss? (See article 8, section 6.)"

I am of the opinion that as a fundamental principle, the board of education of a school district could not legally have the right to make a contract of insurance wherein the amount of premium, for which such board might be liable, is indefinite and uncertain, that is to say, that the board of education has no statutory authority to make any contract whereby the board may become liable for an indefinite and uncertain amount.

Section 9593 of the General Code, as amended in 101 Ohio laws, page 294, reads as follows:

> "Any number of persons of lawful age, not less than ten in number, residents of this state, or an adjoining state, and owning insurable property in this state, may associate themselves together for the purpose of insuring each other against loss by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes or wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas, on property in this state, and also assess upon and collect from each other such sums of money, from time to time, as are necessary to pay losses which occur by fire, and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes, wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas to any members of such association. The assessment and collection of such sums of money shall be regulated by the constitution and by-laws of the association, which shall require such assessments to be made directly and specifically upon the members and to be paid directly and specifically by them and not out of any fund deposited with the association or other trustee in anticipation of assessments or in any other manner except that any such association may borrow money for the payment of losses and expenses, such loans not to be made for a longer period than the collection of their next assessment; and such association may also accumulate a surplus from its assessments not exceeding $2.00 on each $1,000.00 of insurance in force, such surplus to be used in paying losses and expenses that may occur and if invested to be under the provisions of sections ninety-five hundred and eighteen and ninety-five hundred and nineteen of the General Code. Such associations may only insure farm buildings, detached dwellings, school houses, churches, township buildings, grange buildings, farm implements, farm products, live stock, household goods, furniture and other property not classed as extra hazardous and such property may be located within or without the limits of any municipality; provided that an association whose membership is restricted to persons engaged in any particular trade or occupation, and its insurance confined to any particular kind or description of property may insure property classed as extra hazardous and located in any county or counties in this state."

In construing the said section, I might add that the board of education does not own property in their respective school districts in the sense as such ownership is understood by the term "owner" in the said section, but holds it only in trust for the purposes and uses to which the public of such school districts have dedicated the property. It is, therefore, my conclusion, as deducted from the foregoing, that the board of education, being unable to meet the requirements of the said section, 9593 of the General Code, cannot, therefore, legally insure the property of the school district in a mutual fire insurance company. Article VIII, section 6 of the constitution, to which you refer, would make unconstitutional any attempted act on the part of the legislature to even authorize a school board to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation or association.

I trust that I have fully answered your inquiries, and beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 231.

CENSUS—VILLAGES BECOMING CITIES WHEN—OFFICERS OF CITY—HOW ELECTED AND WHEN.

Villages becoming cities by the recent census will adopt a city form of government January 1, 1912, the officers thereof being elected at the regular November election, 1911, and the village officers continue until succeeded by the proper officers of the city at the next regular election.

April 26, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your inquiry in which you state:

"When will villages which, by the recent federal census, have a population of over 5,000, be required to assume the city form of government? It is presumed that they will be required to adopt the city form of government on January 1, 1912, the city officials being elected at the regular November election, 1911, but is there any process of law by which villages can assume the city form of government at an earlier date?"

Section 3499 General Code, reads as follows:

"Officers of the village advanced to a city, or of a city reduced to a village, shall continue in office until succeeded by the proper officers of the new corporation at the next regular election, and the ordinances thereof not inconsistent with the laws relating to the new corporation, shall continue in force until changed or repealed."

I am of the opinion that the municipalities will adopt a city form of government on January 1, 1912, the officers thereof being elected at the regular November election, 1911, as there is no provision of law for holding any special election for the purpose prior to such time, and as the statute continues the officers of the village in office until succeeded by the proper officers of the city at the next regular election.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 233.

COUNTY FEE FUNDS—DATE OF LAST TRANSFER—FEES PAID IN ONE QUARTER MAY BE APPLIED TO SALARIES OF ENSUING QUARTER—DISPOSITION OF EXCESS FUNDS.

Under the provisions of section 2984 as amended (101 O. L. 200), the last transfer to officers' fee funds in the first Monday in January, 1911.

Under section 2985 fees earned in the several county offices during the first quarter of 1911 which are paid into the credit of the respective fee funds April 1, 1911, are applicable to the payment of salaries to officers and their deputies for the ensuing quarter beginning April 1, and if there is an excess in the fee fund above the amount required to pay said expenses for the ensuing quarter then the excess can be transferred by the commissioners to reimburse a fund theretofore used under authority of section 2984 G. C.

April 29, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of March 11th, in which you submit to this department the following inquiry:

" Kindly advise this department when the last transfers to officers' fee funds may be made under the provisions of section 2984, as amended in Ohio laws, vol. 101, page 200. Are the fees earned in the several county offices the present quarter and which are required to be paid in to the credit of the respective fee funds April 1st, applicable to the payment of salaries of the officers and their deputies for the quarter beginning April 1st, if transfers are made to said fee funds any time during the present quarter?"

The amended section referred to reads as follows:

"Section 2984. On the first Monday of April, July, October and January, whenever necessary, during one year after April 1, 1910, the county commissioners, by order entered on their journal, shall transfer from any other fund or funds of the county, in their discretion, to any county officer's fee fund, such sums as are necessary to make good any deficiency in such fee fund likely to arise during the ensuing quarter in consequence of the payment of such officer, deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes during such period from the amounts then in or estimated to come into such fee fund for that period for such office. Provided that the aggregate amounts so transferred to the fee fund of any such officer, except the county clerk, probate judge and sheriff, shall not exceed the aggregate amounts paid into or authorized to be paid into the general fund from the fee fund of such officer during such period."

I take it that the phrase "On the first Monday of April, July, October and January, whenever necessary after April 1, 1910" means whenever it is necessary to transfer during one year after April 1, 1910, on any of the occasions therein specified to wit: the first Monday of April, July, October and January respectively, that is to say, the first transfer would be made on the first Monday of April, the second transfer would be made the first Monday of July, the third transfer would be made the first Monday of October, and the fourth and last transfer on the first Monday in January, 1911.

Replying to your second inquiry:

"Are the fees earned in the several county offices the present quarter and which are required to be paid in to the credit of the respective fee funds April 1st, applicable to the payment of salaries of officers and their deputies for the quarter beginning April 1st, if transfers are made to said fee funds any time during the present quarter?"

Fees derived from any county office must be paid into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor at the end of each quarter. The receipts collected from each county office after January 2, 1911, becomes a credit to the expense of conducting said office, and the amount credited to each office is available at any time to pay the current expenses of each respective office regardless of the time said collection is paid into the county treasury. Thus each office may draw their expense from any funds that have been collected by them and are in the hands of the county treasurer for distribution.

Section 2985 (amended 101 O. L. 346) of the General Code provides:

"In case any transfer of moneys has been theretofore made to a fee fund, the board of county commissioners, at the end of any such quarter, shall transfer from the fee funds any amount therein, derived from any such offices, in excess of that necessary to pay the compensation of such officer and his deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks, or employes, except court constables, for the ensuing quarter, to the funds from which such transfers were made, until fully reimbursed. Thereafter, or where no transfer has been made such funds shall be transferred from the fee funds to the credit of the general fund of the county. Such transfers may be made upon the authority herein provided, any law to the contrary nothwithstanding. From such action of the commissioners, an appeal may be taken to the common pleas court by a taxpayer of the county, which shall be heard and determined by the court or judge thereof within twenty days after being perfected."

You will note that section 2985 provides that the moneys that theretofore have been paid into the fee funds that the board of county commissioners at the end of any quarter shall transfer from the fee funds any amount therein, derived from any such offices in excess of that necessary to pay the compensation of such officers, and their deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or employes for the ensuing quarter to the funds from which said transfers are made until fully reimbursed. That is, section 2985, just quoted, seems to provide that only the excess of the amount necessary to pay the expenses of the office for the ensuing quarter can be transferred by the commissioners from the fee funds back to the funds used by the commissioners under authority of section 2984 G. C.

Therefore, fees earned in the several county offices during the present quarter which are paid into the credit of the respective fee funds April 1, 1911, are applicable to the payment of salaries to officers and their deputies, for the ensuing quarter beginning April 1, and if there is an excess in the fee fund above the amount required to pay said expenses for the ensuing quarter then the excess can be transferred by the commissioners to reimburse a fund theretofore used under authority of section 2984 General Code.

Respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 241.

RELIEF OF POOR—TOWNSHIP CONTAINING A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION —TOWNSHIP CO-EXTENSIVE WITH A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION— DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SAFETY.

Levies for relief of poor are made upon all property in the township, and therefore township trustees may not lawfully refuse to extend aid to indigent persons who happen to reside within the limits of a municipal corporation within their township.

Where the identity of the township however is lost by reason of the limits of both corporation and township being co-extensive, the director of public safety in the municipality is the proper officer to have recourse to.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 3, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 25th, enclosing letter by Harvey Elam, township clerk Xenia, Ohio, in which the following question is presented upon which my opinion is asked:

> "Where a municipal corporation lies entirely within a township, should temporary relief to the poor within such municipal corporation be afforded by the township trustees or by the director of public safety?"

Section 3476 of the General Code provides that:

> "Subject to the conditions, provisions and limitations herein, the trustees of each township are the proper officers of each municipal corporation therein, respectively, shall afford at the expense of such township or municipal corporation, public support or relief to all persons therein, who are in condition requiring it."

Section 3480 of the General Code provides:

"When a person in a township or municipal corporation requires public relief * * * complaint thereof shall be forthwith made by a person having knowledge of the fact to the township trustees or proper municipal officer. * * *"

Section 3481 of the General Code provides in part that:

"When complaint is made to the township trustees or to the proper officers of a municipal corporation that a person therein requires public relief or support, one or more of such officers * * * shall visit the person needing relief, forthwith, to ascertain his name * * * present condition and in what township and county in this state he is legally settled. The information so ascertained shall be transmitted to the township clerk, or proper officer of the municipal corporation. * * *"

The foregoing sections are typical of all the sections in the chapter in which same are found. All of them prescribe the powers of "trustees of the township or the proper officer of the municipal corporation" in the matter of affording outside relief, and otherwise, in connection with their duties pertaining to the relief of the poor.

Section 4089 of the General Code provides in part:

"* * * the granting of outdoor relief to the poor, shall be vested in the director of public safety."

These sections by themselves seem to create an ambiguity which is difficult of solution. It is to be observed that none of them provide that a city as such shall afford temporary relief to the poor within its corporate limits to the exclusion of a township, the boundaries of which are more extensive than those of a city.

Section 5646 of the General Code provides in part:

"* * * The county auditor shall levy, annually, for township purposes, including the relief of the poor * * * such rates of taxes as the trustees of the respective townships certify to him to be necessary * * * on each dollar of the taxable valuation of the property of the township. * * *"

Section 5647 of the General Code provides:

"In counties where there are no county infirmaries, a township tax in addition to the tax provided in the next preceding section * * * may be levied for the relief of the poor * * * on each dollar of the taxable property of the township."

Section 5648 of the General Code provides in part that,

> "The trustees of any township which incurs liabilities for the relief of the poor, beyond the amount raised by the levy authorized by law, may make an additional levy * * * on the dollar of the taxable property of such township."

From these three sections it is apparent that the township levy for the relief of the poor is upon all the property within the township though there may be within the boundary of such township a city. It seems clear, therefore, that it cannot be regarded as the intent of the general assembly to make the proceeds of such levy applicable only to the relief of the poor in the township outside of the municipal corporation.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that township trustees may not lawfully refuse to extend aid to indigent persons who happen to reside within the limits of a municipal corporation within their township.

I am of the opinion that the trustees of the township are the proper persons to take care of the indigent poor mentioned in your communication, in all cases except where the township and municipal boundaries are coextensive, and the township thereby loses its identity. Where the township, as is commonly understood, loses its identity, the director of public safety in the municipality is the officer that corresponds with the trustees so far as poor persons are concerned in the municipal corporation. We have in Ohio some municipal corporations that are in two counties; we perhaps have one municipal corporation at least, in three counties. We can see only one consistent way for relief to be afforded to the poor in such municipal corporations, and that is that each township must take care of its own poor within that corporation.

My conclusion therefore is, that where a municipal corporation lies entirely within a townhip, temporary relief to the poor within such municipal corporation should be afforded by the township trustees unless the boundaries of the township and the municipal corporation are coextensive. In the latter case there would of course be no township trustees.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 242.

PROBATE JUDGE—AUTHORIZATION OF PUBLICATION OF REPORT OF EXAMINATION OF THE COUNTY TREASURY—NEWSPAPERS.

The publication of the report of the examination of the county treasury, as authorized by the probate judge, is governed by section 2703 only of the G. C.

Such publication is not a "notice" nor an "advertisement of general interest to taxpayers," but is merely news "which shall be published one week in two newspapers of opposite politics, and of general circulation in the county."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 5, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 25th, in which you submit for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "What publication of the report of the examination of the county treasury is the probate judge authorized to make?"

You call my attention to the provisions of sections 2703, 6252 and 6253 of the General Code, which are in part as follows:

Section 2703.

> "The accountants shall certify in writing * * * the exact amount of money in the treasury, the amount belonging to each fund, and all property, bonds, securities, vouchers, assets and effects, one copy of which * * * shall be delivered to the probate court and entered on record therein. The probate court shall furnish a copy of such record for publication one week in two newspapers of opposite politics and of general circulation in the county."

Section 6252.

> "A proclamation for an election, an order for fixing the times of holding court, notice of the rates of taxation, bridge and pike notices, notices to contractors and such other advertisements of general interest to taxpayers as the auditor, treasurer, probate judge or commissioners may deem proper, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics at the county seat, if there be such newspapers published thereat."

Section 6253.

> "In addition to the publications provided in the next preceding section, the county officers therein named shall publish such notices and advertisements in a newspaper printed in the German language, if such newspaper be printed and of general circulation among the inhabitants speaking that language in the county within which such advertisements are intended to be made."

In my opinion, the publication of the report of examination of the county treasury is governed solely by section 2703, and sections 6252 and 6253 have no application thereto. Let it be noted that all of the advertisements specifically mentioned in section 6252 are of a certain type, viz: advertisements in which the element of notice has a quasi condition to the performance of some duty is present. Thus, the duty to vote at an election, and consequently the validity of an election may be in a sense said to depend upon notice to the electors of the time and place of holding such an election.

It is well settled that where a catalogue of things is set forth in the statutes, concluding with the general language "and other things," or words to that effect, such general language will be deemed to refer to other things of the same sort. It seems to me that the publication of the report of the examination of the county treasury is in no sense a notice. It does not define the date of any future official act; it merely states an existing condition; it is not an "advertisement" in the full sense of the word; it is merely "news;" therefore, in my opinion, the probate judge is without authority to determine that the report of the examination of the county treasury is "an advertisement of general interest to taxpayers." Accordingly he is authorized to publish the same in two newspapers of opposite politics, of general circulation in the county, and in such newspapers only. With respect to such newspapers it is to be noted that they need not be published at the county seat, as is required in section 6252; furthermore, both must be printed in the English language, it follows, therefore, that the probate judge has in no event authority to authorize publication of the report of the examination of the treasury in German newspapers. The case cited by you (Schloenbach vs. State, 53 O. S. 345), while not fully reported, sustains this conclusion.

Cincinnati vs. Bickett, 26 O. S. 29;

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 244.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—NO ALLOWANCE OF EXTRA COMPENSATION FOR SERVICES UNDER 2923 G. C.—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—REPEAL OF FORMER STATUTE BY IMPLICATION.

Section 3003 of the General Code, providing for the payment of county prosecutors' salaries in a lump sum was passed subsequently to and by implication, repeals section 2923 of the G. C., which provides an extra compensation for certain services.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 20, 1911, in which communication you submit the following inquiry:

> "We call your attention to the opinion of your predecessor rendered this department under date of May 11, 1910, in regard to the allowance to prosecuting attorneys for services rendered under section 2921, General Code, and respectfully request that you review and advise us whether or not you approve the same."

Section 2923 of the General Code, section 1278-A Revised Statutes, provides as follows:

> "If the court hearing such case is satisfied that such taxpayer is entitled to the relief prayed for in his petition and judgment is ordered in his favor, he shall be allowed his costs, including a reasonable compensation to his attorney, and for all services rendered by the prosecuting attorney under the provisions of section twenty-nine hundred and twenty-one, in which the state is successful, the court shall allow the prosecuting attorney reasonable compensation for his services and proper expenses incurred."

Section 3003 of the General Code, section 1297 Revised Statutes, provides as follows:

> "Each prosecuting attorney shall receive an annual salary, not to exceed sixty dollars for each full one thousand of the first fifteen thousand of the population of the county as shown by the federal ceusus next preceding his election;

"Fifty dollars for each full one thousand of the second fifteen thousand of such population of the county;

"Sixty dollars for each full one thousand of the third fifteen thousand of such population of the county;

"Forty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the fourth fifteen thousand of such popuation of the county;

"Thirty dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the fifth fifteen thousand of such population of the county;

"Ten dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of the sixth fifteen thousand of such population of the county;

"Ten dollars per thousand for each full one thousand of such population of the county in excess of ninety thousand.

"No prosecuting attorney shall receive a salary in excess of five thousand five hundred dollars. Such salary shall be paid in equal monthly installments, from the general fund, and shall be in full payment for all services required by law to be rendered in an official capacity on behalf of the county or its officers, whether in criminal or civil matters."

Section 2923 of the General Code, cited above, was passed by the legislature in 1896, and section 3003 was passed in 1906. The two sections are clearly contradictory to each other. It was undoubtedly the intention of the legislature that the salary of the prosecuting attorney provided by section 3003, General Code, should be in full payment for all official duties required of him. This being the case, and said section 3003 of the General Code having been enacted subsequent in time to the enactment of section 2923 of the General Code, it is my opinion that the latter section was repealed by the enactment of the former section by implication.

My conclusion herein is not affected by the fact that both sections happened to be included in the new General Code and were adopted therein at the same time. The question of priority as to time is to be determined by the date of the original enactment of the said respective sections.

Since the opinion referred to in your inquiry was rendered by my predecessor, the supreme court has held, and I have rendered an opinion of date April 29, 1911, based on the said court decision; that county commissioners cannot receive the per diem mentioned in section 5597 General Code, in addition to salaries mentioned in section 3001 of the General Code; and also that the county auditor cannot receive per diem provided in said section 5597 in addition to the salary mentioned in said section 2996 of the General Code, for the reason that the salary of the auditor provided in section 2996 of the General Code, and the salary of the commissioners provided in section 3001 of the General Code, shall be in full payment for all services that such respective county officers shall perform.

The two cases are on an exact par in reference to the above inquiry in regard to the prosecuting attorneys, and the same reasoning applicable to the county commissioners and county auditors with respect to drawing per diem compensation as members of the county equalization board as applies to prosecuting attorneys in enforcing the provisions of section 2921 of the General Code, for the reason that the enforcement of the said latter section comes within the official duties and requirements of the prosecuting attorney. Therefore, because of the foregoing reasons, I cannot concur in the opinion of my predecessor of date May 11, 1910, but on the contrary, I am firmly of the opinion that the prosecuting attorneys of the various counties are only entitled to the compensation provided for in section 3003 of the General Code, and are not legally entitled to the compensation provided in section 2923 of the General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 248.

COUNTY PROSECUTOR—NO FEES FOR COLLECTING FINES AFTER TERM HAS EXPIRED AND AFTER SECTION 1298 R. S. WAS REPEALED.

A county prosecutor, who prosecuted certain violations of the liquor laws before the act of April 14, 1906, which repealed section 1298 R. S., which provided for certain fees to prosecuting attorney for the collection of such fines, cannot step in after the passage of the repealing act aforesaid, and after his term as prosecutor has expired and by then collecting the fines receive the compensation provided for in the act which was repealed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 15th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following questions:

> "Some years ago, certain parties in Knox county, Ohio, were prosecuted for violation of the liquor laws and certain fines were assessed by the court, but the cases were carried to a higher court which affirmed the common pleas. The fines were then collected and the ex-prosecuting attorney (who was in office at the time the suits were instituted and prosecuted the cases) drew a certain amount of fees for the collection of the said fines and costs under section 1298. A state examiner of this department is now making an audit of the financial affairs of Knox county and we desire your advice as to what finding should be made in this case."

The papers which you submit, and which I return herewith, show that the collections in question and the allowances of the commissioners were all made subsequently to April 14, 1906, the date when the repeal of section 1298 Revised Statutes, in its original form, by the prosecuting attorneys' salary act, so called, 98 O. L. 161, became effective. Said original section 1298 Revised Statutes, provided as follows:

> "In addition to his salary the prosecuting attorney is entitled to ten per cent. on all moneys collected on fines, forfeited recognizances and costs in criminal causes, provided that such commission shall not in any one case exceed one hundred dollars."

From your statement of facts and from the papers submitted, it appears that a certain prosecuting attorney instituted certain prosecutions and secured convictions in the lower court prior to the expiration of his term, and prior also to the repeal of section 1298 of the Revised Statutes, as above quoted; that these cases were carried to a higher court and there affirmed, but that before any fines and costs therein were collected the term of the prosecuting attorney expired and section 1298 was repealed; and that after the expiration of such term and the repeal of the section in question, the former prosecuting attorney assumed to direct the clerk of court to issue process for the collection of these fines, which said process was issued, the fines collected, and ten per cent. thereof paid by allowance of the county commissioners to such former prosecuting attorney.

In my opinion, the allowance by the commissioners to the former prosecuting attorney was illegal, and the amount thereof may now be recovered from him for the use of the general fund of the county.

This conclusion follows, it seems to me, both from a construction of original section 1298 and from the fact that the same has been repealed. In the first place, the ten per cent. fee is not in the nature of payment for services rendered in prosecuting criminal causes; the amount of the fee is computed upon the collection of money and is in the nature of compensation for such collection. Accordingly, even under section 1298, were it still in force at the time of the payment in question, an ex-prosecuting attorney, who had successfully prosecuted a criminal case, would not be entitled thereby to a per cent. of the fine and costs collected by his successor. This has been the uniform ruling of this office under original section 1298. (See Opinions of the Attorneys General of Ohio, volume 3, page 477.)

The case is easily distinguishable from that of Thomas vs. Auditor, 6 O. S., 113, cited by the former prosecuting attorney. In that case a statute provided that a county treasurer, in case taxes remained unpaid until the 21st day of December of any year, should "forthwith demand payment of the amount of such tax, and five per centum penalty thereon, which penalty shall be for the use of the treasurer." The court, per J. R. Swan, J., held that, the penalty accrued and the right of the treasurer thereto attached upon demand as provided in the section. It will be seen that the statutes involved in the two cases are quite dissimilar.

In the case submitted by you, the ex-prosecuting attorney seems in part to have realized the necessity of his making the actual collection; for he issued precipes to the clerk of courts for process in aid of the collection of the fines and costs. It appears, therefore, that he actually did make the collections. This, however, does not alter the case. At the time he filed the precipes, he was not an officer of the county; he was performing services for the county as a mere volunteer, and such performance vested in him no right, either legal or moral, against the county, much less any right to compensation prescribed by law as pertaining to an office which he did not hold.

In addition to the foregoing reasons, however, another and perhaps a stronger one appears for establishing the illegality of the allowance in question. At the time these collections were made no law authorized the payment of any percentage thereon to the prosecuting attorney or to any person. As above pointed out, the right under the old statute to the percentage did no accrue until the collection was made. This must necessarily have been so; for the amount upon which it was to be computed was not ascertainable until the money was actually paid into the county treasury. When, therefore, old section 1298 was repealed, such repeal put an end to any right of any person to receive percentages on fines and costs thereafter collected; and on this ground alone, the illegality of the payments in question is established.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

251.

BOARD OF REVIEW—APPOINTMENT AND COMPENSATION OF CLERK, WHO IS ALSO DEPUTY COUNTY AUDITOR—PAYMENT FROM COUNTY FEE FUND.

When a clerk of the board of review is selected by the board and the same person is appointed deputy county auditor, his compensation being fixed at $3.00 a day by the county auditor, and no further compensation fixed by the board, he can receive such compensation only as deputy auditor and the same must be paid from the auditor's fee fund.

May 11, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor of May 4th, in which you ask my opinion upon the following state of facts, to wit:

"The city board of review of Wellston, upon its organization in 1910, appointed a clerk.

"The county auditor is ex-officio secretary of the city board of review and received $5.00 per day, which was properly paid into his fee fund. The clerk selected by the board was appointed at the same time a deputy county auditor, and the secretary's duties were rendered by the clerk selected by the board and appointed deputy auditor by the county auditor. The said clerk was paid $3.00 per day for his services, the rate thereof being fixed by the auditor. Should the compensation of said clerk have been paid from the auditor's fee fund or from the general fund of the county?"

Section 5622 General Code provides:

"The board of review may employ a chief clerk, and appoint such other clerks, not exceeding six, and such messengers, not exceeding six, as it may deem necessary, and fix their compensation, which shall be paid out of the county treasury upon the order of said board, and the warrant of the county auditor. * * *"

Section 5623 of the General Code provides:

"The county auditor of a county in which any of such municipal corporations are located shall be secretary to such board, and in addition to his other duties provided by law, shall be present at each meeting of the board in person or by deputy. * * *"

Section 2563 of the General Code provides that the county auditor may appoint one or more deputies to aid him in the performance of his duties.

Section 2981 of the General Code provides:

"Such officers (among which is the county auditor) may appoint and employ necessary deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers or other employes for their respective offices, fix their compensation and discharge them, and shall file with the county auditor certificates of such action. * * *"

Section 5622 supra authorizes the board of review on appointing a person as clerk thereof to fix his compensation, which shall be paid out of the county treasury upon order of said board and the warrant of the county auditor.

In the case in question, the board did not fix any compensation of the clerk, and not having so fixed it, the clerk is not entitled to any as such clerk.

Section 2981 supra authorizes the county auditor to appoint the necessary deputies and fix their compensation.

In the case in question, the auditor did so appoint such deputy auditor and fix his compensation. The only compensation, therefore, that was received by the party in question was compensation as deputy auditor, and his salary should have been paid from the auditor's fee fund and not out of the general fund of the county.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 251.

COUNTY AUDITOR—NO FEES FOR INDEXING COMMISSIONER'S JOURNAL UNDER THE G. C.—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—REVISION AND CODIFICATION.

When general statutes on a particular subject are revised and codified and it is clear from the words that a change in substance was intended, the changed form must be allowed to govern.

Since, therefore, in the codified sections, provision for compensation to the county auditor for indexing the commissioners' journal is omitted, none can be allowed for that purpose.

Personal compensation to that official is further precluded by the sections providing for the dispensement of fees to county officials.

May 12, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your favor of recent date you submit to me the following inquiry:

> "Before the adoption of the General Code, section 850 R. S. authorized the payment of compensation to the county auditor for indexing the commissioners' journal. Said section is now 2406 of the General Code. The codifiers omitted that part of the section relating to the compensation of the county auditor for indexing.
>
> "Can county auditors now be legally paid any compensation for indexing the commissioners' journal?"

Prior to the enactment of the General Code, section 850 Revised Statutes, provided as follows:

> "The clerk shall keep a full and complete record of the proceedings of the board, and a general index thereof, in a suitable book provided for that purpose, entering every motion with the name of the person making the same on the record, and he shall call and record the yeas and nays on every motion which involves the levying of taxes or the appropriation or payment of money; he shall state fully and clearly in the record any question relating to the power and duties of the board which is raised for its consideration by any person having an interest therein, together with the decision upon the same, and shall call and record the yeas and nays by which said decision was arrived at; and shall record, when requested by the parties interested in the proceedings, or by their counsel, any legal propositions decided by the board, together with the decisions thereon and the votes by which the decision was reached; and if either party, in person or by counsel, except to said decision, the clerk of the board shall record such exceptions in connection with the record of the decision. Immediately upon the opening of each day's session of the board, the complete records of the proceedings of the session of the previous day shall be read by the clerk and, if the same be found correct, approved and signed by the commissioners. The record book of the board of county commissioners shall be kept, when the board is not in session, in the auditor's office, and open to public inspection at all proper times; it shall be duly certified by the president and clerk, and shall be received as evidence in every court in the state; and in counties where no index has been made of such record, the commissioners thereof are hereby authorized to cause an index to be made of such past records for such period of time subsequent to the first day of January A. D. 1880, as the judgment of the county commissioners may determine; and the clerk shall receive for indexing, provided for in this section, such compensation as is provided for like services in other cases."

Section 2406 General Code provides as follows:

"The clerk shall keep a full record of the proceedings of the board, and a general index thereof, in a suitable book provided for that purpose, entering each motion with the name of the person making it on the record. He shall call and record the yeas and nays on each motion which involves the levying of taxes or the appropriation or payment of money. He shall state fully and clearly in the record any question relating to the power and duties of the board which is raised for its consideration by any person having any interest therein, together with the decision thereon, and shall call and record the yeas and nays by which the decision was made. When requested by a party interested in the proceedings, or by his counsel, he shall record any legal proposition decided by the board, the decision thereon and the votes by which the decision was reached. If either party, in person or by counsel, except to such decision, the clerk shall record the exceptions with the record of the decision."

Section 2407 of the General Code provides:

"Immediately upon the opening of each day's session of the board, the records of the proceedings of the session of the previous day shall be read by the clerk, and if correct, approved and signed by the commissioners. When the board is not in session, the record book shall be kept in the auditor's office, and open at all proper times to public inspection. It shall be duly certified by the president and clerk, and shall be received as evidence in every court in the state."

Sections 2406 and 2407 purport to be a re-enactment of said section 850 R. S., but it will be noted that the words in italics in section 850 R. S., as above set forth, were omitted in said sections 2406 and 2407 General Code.

The question is, therefore, whether such omitted words are to be read into the sections of the code which purport to codify said section 850 R. S.

Section 850 of the Revised Statutes was repealed on the adoption of the Code. (See section 13767 sub-section 22). While it was not the intention of the codifying commission to omit or repeal any substantive law, and such codification is not presumed to change the law, yet when the general assembly repealed section 850 R. S. and adopted in the place thereof sections 2406 and 2407 General Code, the law as it now stands must govern.

The rule of law governing codification of statutes is clearly set forth in the opinion of Okey, J., in the case of Allen vs. Russell, 39 O. S. 337, as follows:

> "But where all the general statutes of the state or all on a particular subject, are revised and consolidated, there is a strong presumption that the same construction which the statutes received, or, if their interpretation had been called for, would certainly have received, before revision and consolidation, should be applied to the enactment in its revision and consolidated form, although the language may have been changed. * * * Of course, if it is clear from the words that a change in substance was intended, the statute must be enforced in accordance with its changed form."

I am, therefore, of the opinion as the Generad Code omits that part of section 850, R. S., relating to the compensation of county auditor for indexing, that such auditor cannot now be legally paid any compensation for commissioners' journal.

Furthermore, section 2977, General Code, provides:

> "All the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected or received by law as compensation for services by a county auditor, * * * shall be so received and collected for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which they are elected, and shall be held as public moneys belonging to such county and accounted for and paid over as such as hereinafter provided."

Section 2989 provides as follows:

> "After deducting from the proper fee fund the compensation of all deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers and other employes, as fixed and authorized herein, each county officer herein named shall receive from the balance therein the annual salary hereinafter provided, payable monthly upon warrant of the county auditor."

Section 2990 fixes the fees of the county auditor in the various counties in accordance with the population of each of said counties.

If the county auditor could have received the compensation for indexing the commissioners' journal he would under section 2997 supra have been required to pay it into the auditor's fee fund, and would have received under section 2990, General Code, only the salary specified therein. Consequently under no circumstances could the county auditor have received any compensation personally for indexing the said journal.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

260.

ASSISTANTS TO CITY SOLICITOR ENGAGED BY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE —CANNOT BE COMPENSATED BY CITY—MORAL OBLIGATION—SEMI-ANNUAL APPROPRIATION ORDINANCE.

When a chamber of commerce employs legal talent to assist the city solicitor in a matter of city business, and later refuses to pay for the services, the city cannot by a special ordinance authorize the payment of the bill.

Where there is no legal moral obligation a council cannot expend the funds of the corporation for matters not provided for in the semi-annual appropriation ordinance. A special appropriation passed at another time is invalid.

A moral obligation does not exist in law unless there has been a legal obligation, which, because of the operation of some rule of law, has become barred or otherwies inoperative or without full satisfaction or discharge.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 9th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "The proper officers of a city were enjoined from entering into a contract for certain improvements. The chamber of commerce of the city employed counsel to assist the city solicitor. The contractor to whom the contract had been let also employed counsel who assisted the city solicitor.
>
> "The lawyers employed by the chamber of commerce failed to receive their compensation from their employers, and sought payment from the city. The council of the city on January 6, 1911, after the employment of the services which are conceded to be of value to the city, and in a special ordinance—not in the semi-annual appropriation ordinance—authorized the payment of the bill of said lawyers, and appropriated the sum of $300 from the general fund of the city for that purpose.
>
> "The city auditor refuses to pay the bill, and requests an opinion as to the legality of the same.

In my opinion, the appropriation of council was illegal for two reasons. In the first place, it was not included as an item in the semi-annual appropriation ordinance. The authority of council to make appropriations is limited to two semi-annual ordinances, and this department has repeatedly held that a special appropriation passed at another time is invalid.

The ordinance is invalid further, because the attorneys for whom the appropriation was made had no claim against the city at the time of the passage of the appropriation ordinance. The attorneys in question were not officers of the city, nor did they at any time have any contractual relations with the city. They performed the services as mere volunteers, and while the services were beneficial to the city, they are on that account not entitled to payment. Nor is there a moral obligation on the part of the city toward the beneficiaries of the appropriation. In a recent opinion addressed to your department in the matter of the office rent of the city solicitor of Coshocton, I attempted to define a moral obligation. At the risk of repetition, permit me to state that a moral obligation in law does not exist unless there has been a legal obligation which, because of the operation of some rule of law, has become barred or otherwise inoperative without full satisfaction and discharge. In this case there never was any legal obligation.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 260.

COUNTY PROSECUTOR—LEGAL ADVISER OF COUNTY INFIRMARY DIRECTORS—NOT ENTITLED TO EXTRA COMPENSATION FOR SUCH SERVICES—REMOVAL OF GUARDIAN OF INMATE.

It is a part of the prosecuting attorney's official duties to act as legal adviser for the county infirmary directors. He is not entitled therefore, to a fee of $35.00 in addition to his salary for removing a guardian of an inmate of the infirmary, and collecting moneys due said inmate from the said guardian.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1911.

Subject: A prosecuting attorney is not entitled to extra compensation for collecting for the board of infirmary directors the pension of an inmate of the county infirmary.

Department of Auditor of State, Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your letter of February 9th, 1911, wherein you furnished this department with a letter from Harry P. Black, prosecuting attorney of Seneca county, presenting certain facts and asked this department for a written opinion upon the question therein contained and which is as follows, viz:

> "The prosecuting attorney of Seneca county, Ohio, Harry P. Black, filed a motion in the probate court of said county to remove Charles Deppen, as guardian of Delilah Six, a pensioner of the United States by reason of being a widow of a soldier, and an inmate of the infirmary of said county, because of the fact that as such guardian, said Deppen, collected the pension of said Delilah Six and failed to account to the board of directors of the county infirmary. Deppen was removed, and suit instituted against Deppen's bond, the money was collected and paid to the infirmary directors by the prosecuting attorney, less thirty-five dollars ($35.00), a fee charged for said services by prosecuting attorney. Is such charge legal and is said prosecuting attorney entitled to retain the said fee?"

Beg to advise that it is made the duty of the prosecuting attorney to represent the board of infirmary directors, and assuming that the board of infirmary directors were entitled to the money due Delilah Six, from her guardian, Charles Deppen, for her maintenance, it was the duty of Harry P. Black, prosecuting attorney, to collect the money and pay it over to the board of infirmary directors without deducting a fee for his services.

> "The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county board, and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party, and no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county, except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve. He shall be the legal adviser for all township officers, and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees duly entered upon their journal, in which the compensation to be paid for such legal services shall be fixed. Such compensation shall be paid from the township fund. (R. S., Sec. 1274).
>
> General Code, Sec. 2917.

The prosecuting attorney is the legal adviser of the board of directors of the county infirmary, and he shall prosecute all suits which such board may direct, connected with their official duties, and for such service is not entitled to extra compensation.

Therefore, this charge of thirty-five dollars ($35.00) is not authorized and the same should be refunded.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 261.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF A UNION CEMETERY—PAYMENT TO MEMBER FOR AUDITING BOOKS—VACANCY—ELECTION OF SUCCESSOR—ELECTION AND POWERS OF CLERK—EXPENSES OF SUPERINTENDENT IN ATTENDING STATE ASSOCIATION MEETING.

Trustees of a union cemetery hold office until a successor is elected and qualified.

By virtue of section 8, G. C., in elective offices no vacancy occurs because of failure to elect a successor at the regular time, and incumbents hold their offices until their successors are duly elected and qualified, unless special provision appears to the contrary.

The trustees of a union cemetery cannot elect a secretary and invest him with authority to collect and disburse money on his individual checks, as this is specifically made the duty of the managing trustee.

An expenditure of $400, given to a member of said board for auditing the books of the board is illegal.

As there is no duty imposed upon the superintendent of the cemetery to attend the meetings of the state association of cemetery superintendents, and no authorization for the payment of expenses incurred thereby, such expenses may not be paid by the board.

May 31, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your letter of March 21, 1911, in which you ask this department for an opinion on the following questions, viz:

> "1. In the audit of a union cemetery owned by a city and adjacent township, we find that there has been no election of trustees since 1905. Is there a vacancy in said offices, and should the same be filled by the council and trustees of the township as provided by law, or does the old board continue in office until the election and qualification of their sucessors?
>
> "2. May said trustees elect a secretary other than a member of the board and invest him with the authority to collect the revenue and disburse same upon his individual check?
>
> "3. A member of the board of trustees was paid $400.00 for auditing the books of the cemetery. Is such payment legal?
>
> "4. Are the personal expenses of the superintendent of the cemetery, incurred in attending the meetings of the state association of cemetery superintendents, a legal charge upon the cemetery funds?"

In answer to your first question, beg to advise that there is no vacancy on such board of trustees of a union cemetery, by reason of the facts set forth in your query.

The trustees of a union cemetery are elective and not appointive officers:

> "When such bodies are united for cemetery purposes, or where a municipal corporation and a precinct in which it is located have united in establishing a joint cemetery, three cemetery trustees shall be chosen for a term of two years by the electors residing within the limits of the territory comprising the joint cemetery district, at the time and places provided by law for the election of corporation and township officers, and the terms of office of such cemetery trustees shall commence on the first Monday of January next after their election. Vacancies in the board shall be filled by council of the corporation or corporations, and the trustees of the township in joint session convened for that purpose. (R. S. sec. 2533.)"

General Code, section 4184.

In elective offices, such as the trustees of a union cemetery, where no special provision is made by law, no vacancy occurs because of failure to elect their successors, but only by death, resignation, disability or removal, and they should hold their offices until their successors are duly elected and qualified, by virtue of section 8, General Code.

"A person holding an office of public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws."

General Code, section 8.

The supreme court decided this question in the case of State vs. Wright, in construing what is now section 4294, General Code. In passing on a "quo warranto" to oust a mayor under a statute providing for a term of two years or until his successor be elected and qualified. Section 8 of General Code (supra) is construed with section 4184, General Code (supra), and this case is decisive on the point under consideration.

"A mayor of a municipal corporation, who has been regularly elected to the office, is entitled to serve until his successor is qualified; and while he continues to so serve on account of a failure to elect his successor, there is no vacancy in the office, nor is the council authorized to make an appointment thereto."

56 Ohio state, 540.

In answer to your second inquiry, will advise that when the duly elected and qualified trustees of a union cemetery organize, the president, secretary and managing trustee should be members of said board, and the board cannot elect a secretary and invest him with authority to collect and disburse money on his individual checks, as this is made the positive duty of the managing trustee, who is specifically required to be a trustee, and especially enjoined not to expend any of the funds except on order of the board.

"The board of trustees, when chosen as provided in the preceding section, shall organize by electing a president, a secretary and a managing trustee, the latter of whom shall receive and hold all moneys coming into the hands of the board.

"Before entering upon the discharge of his duties, the managing trustee shall give bond, with sureties to be approved by the president and secretary of such board of trustees payable to them as such officers in such sum as they determine, and conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties and the paying over according to law upon the order of the board, of all moneys that may come into his hands by virtue of his office."

General Code, section 4185.

In determining your third query the authority for an expenditure of four hundred dollars to a member of the board of trustees of a union cemetery to audit the books of said board is not given, and such expenditure is not only excessive, but illegal. Section 4189 of the General Code referring to union cemeteries provides:

> "The cemetery so owned in common, shall be under the control and management of the trustees, and their authority over it and their duties in relation thereto, shall be the same as where the cemetery is the exclusive property of a single corporation."
>
> General Code, section 4189.

While section 4178 of the General Code referring to cemeteries of villages, and being the section referred to in section 4189 (supra), in part provides,

> "The board of cemetery trustees shall have the powers and perform the duties prescribed in this chapter for the director of public safety. * * *"
>
> General Code, section 4189.

While section 4170 of the General Code referring to cemeteries, defining the duties of the director of public service is applicable to section 4189 of the General Code (supra), by construing with section 4178 of the General Code (supra), and provides as follows:

> "The director shall appoint a clerk and keep accurate minutes of all his proceedings and report quarterly to the council all the moneys received and directed by him in the management and control of the cemetery."
>
> General Code, section 4170.

It is the duty, therefore, of the board of trustees of a union cemetery to keep accurate books of their proceedings, and they have no power other than those expressly granted by law. The trustees of union cemeteries are public officers of the municipality or township and are elected by the people, and cannot employ one of their number for extra pay to do any necessary work.

The same question was presented to Norris, J., in the case of Findlay vs. Parker, 17 Ohio Circuit Court Reports 294, where he held that trustees of gas works were public officers, and his reasoning in this case is applicable and reaches the same conclusion to the hypothesis presented in this your third question, where he uses this language:

> "These trustees of the gas works are public officers; they are elected by the people, they qualify, they take the oath of office and give an official and are entitled to the emoluments of the office, and without any of this, the nature of their duties makes them officers of the corporation and make more applicable to them than any other officers of the municipality these sections of the statute which look to the honest administration of every department of the municipal government."

And on page 301 says:

> "And an officer of a municipal corporation who has retired from the office to which he has been elected or appointed may not be interested either directly or indirectly in any work or service for said corporation until after the expiration of one year after his retirement from office."

The duties of the board of trustees of union cemeteries being defined by law as above set forth, no member of such board has the right to receive any compensation for any work or labor except such as is paid to every member of the board by virtue of the public office which they hold.

In answer to your fourth question, the superintendent of a cemetery is not required by law to attend the meetings of the state association of cemetery superintendents, and no authority is granted by statute which permits him to charge his personal expenses in attending such state association meeting to the cemetery funds, the rule being that where the authority is not granted by statute or where the officer is not required by statute to perform a duty no implied authority exists for him to make a charge either for his services or his expense against a public fund.

Very respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 262.

WHARFAGE RATES—COUNCIL TO FIX IN MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—LEGISLATIVE POWER—DIRECTOR OF SERVICE.

The matter of fixing wharfage rates for landing of steamboats is a legislative power and under sections 3640, G. C., and 4211, G. C., belongs to the council and not to the director of service.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 1, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 11th you ask my opinion upon the following question:

"What is the proper authority of a city to fix wharfage rates for landing of steamboats at municipal wharves, the council or the director of service?"

Section 3616, General Code, provides:

"All municipal corporations shall have the general powers mentioned in this chapter, and council may provide by ordinance or resolution for the exercise and enforcement of them."

In the same chapter as section 3616, General Code supra, is found section 3640 of the General Code, which provides:

"To regulate public landings, public wharves, public docks, public piers and public basins, and to fix the rates of landing, wharfage, dockage and the use thereof."

Section 4211, General Code, provides in part:

"The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as is otherwise provided in this title."

Section 4324 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

"The director of public service shall manage and supervise all public works and undertakings of the city, except as otherwise provided by law, and shall have all powers and perform all duties conferred upon him by law."

From an examination of the above sections it will be seen that the council of a city is vested with legislative power only, and that the director of public works is vested with administrative power over municipal wharves.

The question, therefore, is whether the fixing of wharfage rates for landing of steamboats at municipal wharves is the exercise of a legislative or administrative power.

It is my opinion that such power is legislative, and that if it is desired to fix such wharfage rates council is the proper authority so to do.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

264.

FINDINGS OF EXAMINERS AND INSPECTORS OF THE BUREAU OF INSPECTION AND SUPERVISION OF PUBLIC OFFICES—COMPROMISES OF CLAIMS BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

Compromises made by county commissioners prior to the act of May 10, 1910 (101 O. L., 382), by virtue of 2416, G. C., with respect to claims in favor of the county as disclosed by the examinations of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices are valid if (a) none of the commissioners are personally interested. (b) A statement of the facts in the case and the reasons for the release are enterd upon the journal, and (c) the power is honestly exercised and the officials act free from semblance of fraud or mistake.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 6th, enclosing two transcripts from the journal of the county commissioners of Jackson county, and requesting my advice as to the duty of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices in the premises.

The first of these transcripts, in point of time, is that of the session of January 4, 1909, volume 9, page 139, which is in part as follows:

"WHEREAS, on the 4th day of April, 1903, W. J. Shumate, auditor of Jackson county, Ohio, presented to the board of county commissioners a bill for fees due under the provisions of section 1070 (95 O. L., page 488) for the year ending October 19th, 1903, and

"WHEREAS, said bill was then and there approved by A. E. Jacobs, prosecuting attorney of said county and was thought to be a true bill legal debt of the said county and properly due the said W. J. Shumate and was on the 6th day of April, 1903, duly allowed by the board of county commissioners and paid to the said W. J. Shumate, and

"WHEREAS, said section 1070 (95 O. L., page 575) was repealed and some contention has now arisen as to whether said bill was due and a legal charge against the said Jackson county, and

"WHEREAS, the said W. J. Shumate has agreed and does hereby agree to pay to the said Jackson county, in full settlement of said claim and as an adjustment under the provisions of section 855 of the R. S. of Ohio, the sum of ten and no hundredths ($10.00) dollars, the same is hereby accepted as in full settlement by said Jackson county."

Another abstract from the Commissioners' Journal No. 4, page 80, shows that the amount of compensation under section 1070, R. S., paid to W. J. Shumate on April 6th, 1903, was $300.00.

The second of the two transcripts referred to in your letter is in part as follows:

"WHEREAS, by the findings of L. C. Tattmon, state examiner of county offices of date Dec. 1st, 1908, W. J. Shumate, as county auditor, is found to have drawn from the county treasury the following amount, to wit:

Turnpike record	$197 71
Recording journal	45 00
Appraising railroad	28 40
	$271 11

"And where as there is some controversy and question as to the legality of such drawing said amounts, and

"WHEREAS, there is due the said W. J. Shumate the sum of $166.40 for record work not charged on county road record, and

"WHEREAS, the said W. J. Shumate has tendered the county the sum of $76.31 in full settlement of said controversy, and

"WHEREAS, it is the opinion of this board of commissioners that there is some question as to the recovery of said amounts and that the same will cause the county great expense for litigation with perhaps failure of collection, and that the acceptance of said proposition is and will be for the best interests of the county; it was moved by H. D. West, seconded by R. D. Thomas, that the above proposition of settlement of said W. J. Shumate be and the same is hereby accepted in full settlement of said claim."

(From Commissioners' Journal, September 20, 1909, vol. 10, p. 17.)

By computation it will be ascertained that the difference between the tender of W. J. Shumate, referred to in the last paragraph above quoted, and the amount of the finding against him is the sum of $28.40 which, it will be observed, is the amount of the finding against him for "appraising railroad."

Prior to the amendment of section 286 of the General Code by the act of May 10, 1910 (101 O. L., 382), there was no special restriction upon the power of the county commissioners to compromise claims in favor of and against the county disclosed by the examination of the inspectors and examiners of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices. This power to compromise was derived from section 855, R. S., now section 2416, General Code. Said section 855, in force at the time of the alleged settlements described in the transcripts, above quoted, provided as follows:

> "The board shall have power to compromise for or release in whole or in part any debt, judgment, finding or amercement due the county and for the use thereof, except in cases where it or either of its members is personally interested; and when the commissioners compound for the release in whole or in part any debt, judgment, finding or amercement it shall enter upon their journal a statement of the facts in the case and the reasons that governed them in making such release or composition."

The power conferred by this section has been defined as "plenary" in re McAdams, 21 O. C. C., 450. Indeed, the language used would seem to justify such a definition. It will be noted that the board was expressly given power to release the whole claim. The only limitations upon the plenary power of the board were those apparent upon the face of the statute, to wit, that the claim must be due the county for its use, that none of the commissioners must be personally interested and that a statement of the facts in the case and the reasons for the release be entered upon the journal, together with that limitation which applies to the acts of all officers having discretionary power—that the power shall be honestly exercised and the official act free from fraud or mistake.

So far as the records above quoted show, the claims compromised by the county commissioners, as therein described, were due the county and for its use.

The compensation of the county auditor under section 1070, R. S., as amended 95 O. L., 488, and later repealed would, if lawfully drawn at all, have been drawn from the general revenue fund of the county, and the claim of the county against the auditor was in favor of that fund. In like manner the fees drawn by the auditor as referred to in the second of the above quoted transcripts were drawn from the general revenue funds of the county and the claims in each case existed in favor of said fund.

The record does not show that any person other than the auditor himself had any interest in the claims. The record shows that the board of commissioners has in each case attempted at least to enter upon its journal a statement of the facts and the reasons for the respective releases and compositions made by it.

With regard to the second settlement above described, I think there can be no doubt as to the sufficiency of the reason set forth as a compliance with section 855. It is recited, "there is some question as to the recovery of said amounts and that the same will cause the county great expense for litigation with perhaps failure of collection, and that the acceptance of the proposition is and will be for the best interests of the county."

This recital renders the action of the commissioners, with respect to the findings described in the entry in which it appears, lawful and binding upon the county in the absence of fraud.

The case is not so clear in respect to the first entry above quoted. The statement of facts in the case is fully set forth in said entry, but there does not seem to be any reason alleged in the entry for the release and composition made thereby. Furthermore, the peculiar facts apparent upon the face of this entry tend to negative the existence of any valid reasons for making the compromise in question and raises some inference of fraud.

My conclusions with respect to the question submitted are in brief as follows:

1. The compromise of January 4, 1909, was, in my judgment, illegal because the commissioners did not enter upon their journal a statement of the reasons for making a release or composition of the county auditor's claim against him, and for the further reason that there would seem to be some evidence of fraudulent action on the part of the commissioners.

2. With respect to the entry of September 20, 1909, I beg to state that in my judgment the same is legal on its face and sufficient to constitute a binding release of the claim of the county against the county auditor therein described, unless it can be shown that the whole transaction was tainted with fraud. There is no evidence on the face of the record tending to show such fraud. The mere fact that the amount released coincides with the item of compensation for appraising railroads is not material in view of the fact that in any event the commissioners had authority to release entire claims.

I trust that the foregoing will enable your department to determine its policy in the premises.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

267.

CITY SCHOOL DISTRICT—RIGHT TO PAY FOR PUBLICATION OF RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES IN A NEWSPAPER—LIABILITY OF PARTIES.

A city school district is not authorized to pay for publication in a newspaper of a statement of receipts and expenditures for the year.

When such action is performed.

1. The newspaper cannot be held, as the payment was voluntary.

2. The members of the board of education who voted for the move are guilty of a misfeasance and are subject under the terms of 286, G. C., to civil action by the proper legal officer for a recovery.

3. The president, clerk and treasurer, acting in good faith, in their respective capacities performed merely ministerial acts and are therefore not liable.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of June 1st, wherein you state as follows:

> "A city board of education published a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures for the year in a newspaper, paying the newspaper the sum of $94.45 for such publication. What finding should be made by this department? Can recovery be had of the paper which published the report? If not, is the board itself liable for the amount? (See section 4776, G. C.)."

Section 4776, General Code, provides:

"Except city districts, the board of education of each district shall require the clerk of the board annually, ten days prior to the election, to prepare and post at the place or places of holding such elections, or publish in some newspaper of general circulation in the district, an itemized statement of all money received and disbursed by the treasurer of the board within the school year next preceding."

Section 2921 of the General Code provides in part:

"Upon being satisfied that funds of the county, or public moneys in the hands of the county treasurer or belonging to the county, * * * have been misapplied, or that any such public moneys have been illegally drawn, * * * the prosecuting attorneys of the several counties of the state may apply, by civil action in the name of the state, to a court of competent jurisdiction, * * * to recover, for the use of the county all public moneys so misapplied or illegally drawn. * * *"

Section 4752, General Code, as amended 101 O. L., 316, provides in part as follows:

"A majority of the members of a board of education shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Upon a motion * * * to pay any debt or claim * * * , the clerk of the board shall publicly call the roll of the members composing the board and enter on the record the names of those voting 'aye' and the names of those voting 'no.' If a majority of all the members of the board vote aye, the president shall declare the motion carried."

Section 284, General Code, as amended 101 O. L., 384, reads in part as follows:

"The chief inspector and supervisor * * * shall examine the condition of each public office, such examination of * * * school district offices to be made at least once in every two years."

Section 286, General Code, as amended 101 O. L., 384, reads in part as follows:

"A report of the examination shall be made in triplicate, one copy thereof filed in the office of the auditor of state, and one copy filed in the auditing department of the taxing district reported upon, and one in the office of the legal officer of the taxing district or in the case of a village having no solicitor or legal counsel, with the mayor thereof. If the report discloses malfeasance * * * on the part of an officer or an employe, upon the receipt of such copy of said report it shall be the duty of the proper legal officer * * * to institute * * * civil actions in behalf of the state or the political divisions thereof to which the right of action has accrued, and promptly prosecute the same to final determination to recover any * * * public funds misappropriated or to otherwise determine the rights of the parties in the premises."

Section 4768, General Code, as amended 101 O. L., 264, provides in part as follows:

"No treasurer of a school district shall pay out any school money except on an order signed by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the clerk of the board of education, and when such school moneys have been deposited as provided by sections 7604-7608 inclusive, no money shall be withdrawn from any such depository, except upon an order signed by the treasurer and by the president or vice-president and countersigned by the clerk of the board of education."

Section 4782 of the General Code provides as follows:

"When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, may dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys, belonging to such school district. In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

From a reading of section 4776 supra, it is clear that a city board of education is without authority to publish a detailed statement as set forth in your letter, and that consequently payment to the newspaper therefor is illegal. It was, however, a voluntary payment to such newspaper which in the absence of an enabling statute could not be recovered back unless such payment was made through fraud or mistake of fact.

Printing Company vs. State, 68 O. S., 362.

The only enabling act I can find in the law is section 2921 supra, which applies solely to the frauds of a county and not to school funds.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that no recovery can be had from the newspaper in question.

By virtue of section 4752 supra, it is the duty of the board of education to pass on the payment of debts and claims, and I assume that the payment to the newspaper was made upon motion duly adopted by the board of education. Such payment being illegal, the members who voted for it were guilty of malfeasance in authorizing the payment, and the money so paid out was misappropriated under the provisions of section 286 supra.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the members of the board of education who voted for the payment to the newspaper as set forth above should be held liable for the funds so misappropriated.

From a reading of section 4768 supra and section 4782 supra, I am of opinion that the duties of the president, clerk and treasurer, as therein set forth, are purely ministerial in character, and that they were not required, if acting in good faith, to inquire into the question of the legality of the motion passed by the board authorizing the payment to the newspaper, but were fully protected in signing, countersigning and paying the order issued in pursuance of said motion.

To sum up, therefore, I am of the opinion that:

(a) The newspaper cannot be held.

(b) That the members of the board of education who voted for the motion authorizing the payment for the publication can be held for malfeasance.

(c) That the president, clerk and treasurer, acting in good faith, were protected in signing the order, and paying the claims by virtue of the motion passed bythe board of education, their act in the matter being purely ministerial.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 273.

TEACHERS—INSTITUTE—POWERS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION TO PAY TRANSPORTATION OF TEACHERS.

By virtue of the powers conferred in 7872, G. C., a board of education may pay the transportation and expenses of teachers in visiting schools of other cities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 20, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 12, 1911, in which you inquire as follows:

"May a board of education, under section 7872, G. C., pay the transportation and expenses of teachers in visiting schools of other cities?"

Section 7872, General Code, provides as follows:

"The expenses of such institute shall be paid from the city institute fund hereinbefore provided for. In addition to this fund the board of education of any district annually may expend for the instruction of the teachers thereof, in an institute or in such other manner as it prescribes, a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars, to be paid from its contingent fund."

You will note the reading of the above section in this, that it provides that in addition to the regular institute fund the board of education of any district annually may expend for the instruction of the teachers thereof in an institute or in such other manner as it prescribes, a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars, etc.

By the authority vested in the respective boards of education of the state, as prescribed in the above section, I am of the opinion that a board of education may pay the transportation of teachers in visiting schools of other cities, provided such visitation is for the instruction of the teachers.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 280.

TOWNSHIP HALL—POWERS OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES TO PURCHASE OR ERECT—WHEN VOTE OF ELECTORS NECESSARY.

If the township has sufficient unappropriated funds in the treasury the trustees, upon the clerk's certification of such fact, may purchase a site and erect a township house at a cost not to exceed two thousand dollars.

When the money is not on hand, however, and it is necessary to pledge the credit of the township for such purpose, the question must be submitted to a vote of the electors, as provided by 3260, G. C.

June 27, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter, in which you ask this department for a written opinion upon the following questions, viz:

> "Providing they have sufficient money, are township trustees authorized to acquire a site and erect a township hall without a vote of the people?
>
> "What restrictions, if any, are imposed upon township trustees in acquiring a site and in advertising for bids for the erection of a township hall?"

The first legislation upon this subject was passed by the general assembly of Ohio, March 14th, 1853, in an act for the incorporation of townships, 51 Ohio Laws, 489, section 24, which is as follows:

> "The trustees of each and every township in this state, shall have power to determine on, and fix the place of holding elections within their townships, for which purpose they are hereby authorized to lease any house already erected, or contract for, on permanent lease, or otherwise, a site, and erect thereon a house for the purposes aforesaid."
>
> Section 24, 51 Ohio Laws, 489.

This law was amended May 6th, 1869, 66 Ohio Laws, 120, which act provides:

> "That the trustees of any township in this state be and hereby are authorized to levy tax on all the taxable property of their township, not exceeding ten thousand dollars, to purchase a site and erect a township house; and they are hereby authorizd to purchase said site and erect thereon a town house, at a cost for both site and building not to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars."
>
> 66 Ohio Laws, 120.

Again the general assembly had this question before it April 18, 1874, and passed an act to amend the act authorizing township trustees to levy a tax to purchase a site and erect a township house thereon, passed May 6, 1869, 71 Ohio Laws, 95:

> "That the trustees of any township in this state be and they are hereby authorized to levy a tax on all the taxable property of their township, not exceeding two thousand dollars, to purchase a site and erect a township house, and they are hereby authorized to purchase said site and erect thereon a town house, at a cost for both site and building not exceeding said sum of two thousand dollars: Provided, that before any tax shall be levied under this act, the trustees of the township shall submit the question to a vote of all the electors of their township at a general election, and shall give at least thirty days' notice before said election by posting up written notices in at least five of the most public places therein, and said vote shall be taken at the usual place of holding elections in said township, and if a majority of the votes cast at any such election shall be in favor of a tax, then the trustees of said township shall be authorized to levy the tax and carry out the provisions of this act.

"Sec. 2. That said original section one shall be and hereby is repealed."

71 Ohio Laws, 95.

This act was again amended by the general assembly April 11, 1876, and the act of April 18, 1874 (supra), was repealed, 73 Ohio Laws, 203:

"That the trustees of any township in this state, be and they are hereby authorized to levy a tax on all the taxable property of any township, or any voting precinct in the same, not to exceed two thousand dollars to purchase a site and erect thereon a town hall, at a cost for both site and building not to exceed the sum of two thousand dollars. Provided, that before any tax shall be levied under this act the trustees of said township shall submit the question to a vote of such township or precinct (as the case may be), at a general election and shall give at least thirty days' notice before said election by posting up written notices in at least five of the most public places in such township or precinct, and said vote shall be taken at the usual place or places of voting in said township or precinct; and if a majority of the votes be cast at such election shall be in favor of the tax, then the trustees of such township shall be authorized to levy the tax and carry out the provisions of this act. The act passed April 18, 1874, is hereby repealed."

73 Ohio Laws, 203.

These statutes remained practically without change and now appear in the General Code, Section 3260, in the following form:

"The trustees shall fix the place of holding elections within their township, or of any election precinct thereof. For such purpose they may purchase or lease a house and suitable grounds, or by permanent lease or otherwise acquire a site and erect thereon a house. If a majority of the electors of the township or a precinct thereof, voting at any general election, vote in favor thereof, the trustees may purchase a site and erect thereon a town hall for such township or precinct and levy a tax on the taxable property within such township or precinct to pay the cost thereof, which shall not exceed two thousand dollars. At least thirty days' notice shall be given in at least five of the most public places in the township or precinct, that at such election a vote will be taken for or against a tax for such purchase."

Section 3260, General Code.

By a careful survey of the history of this legislation we find that the restriction as to voting is a restriction that applies only when the trustees are about to involve the township in an expenditure for a township house when they have not sufficient money to pay for the same, but must levy and collect a tax for the purpose. When it becomes necessary to so levy a tax to pay for the erection of such township house the question must be submitted to a vote. But, if the trustees of the township have a sufficient amount of money with which to build a suitable township house without raising the same by taxation, then they are authorized to purchase suitable grounds and erect thereon a house, under, of course, the restrictions which apply to all contracts entered into by township trustees.

In the beginning of this legislation the trustees of each and every township were authorized to contract for a site, and erect thereon a house for the purpose of holding elections, and they were not restricted in any particular. In the growth of this legislation the restriction grew out of the fact that in many instances it was necessary to pledge the credit of the township for the erection of such township house, and, then the restriction that the credit of the township or precinct should not be pledged for the erection of a township house without the consent of the taxpayers by amendment became the law of 1853, which is apparent for comparison, 51 Ohio Laws, 498, section 24 (supra), read:

> "Trustees * * * are hereby authorized to lease any house already erected, or contract for, on permanent lease, or otherwise, a site, and erect thereon a house."

While the present law, section 3260, General Code (supra), reads as follows:

> "The trustees * * * may purchase or lease a house and suitable grounds, or by permanent lease or otherwise acquire a site, and erect thereon a house."

The restriction put into this law by amendment, therefore, is one of taxation, for the amendment which was added reads:

> "If a majority of the electors * * * voting at any general election, vote in favor thereof, the trustees may purchase a site and erect thereon a town hall * * * and levy a tax on the taxable property * * * to pay the costs therefor, which shall not exceed two thousand dollars."

Therefore, it was the intention of the legislature to restrict the trustees of the township in pledging the credit of the township for the erection of a township house without the consent of the taxpayers, and not to restrict them in building a suitable township house to provide a place of holding elections when they have sufficient money without levying and collecting a tax. This construction of this legislation is fortified by the fact and the reason is made very clear by the restriction that is placed upon the township trustees in entering into any contract by the terms of section 5660, General Code. A general restriction is imposed as follows:

> "The trustees of a township * * * shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or the expenditure of money, unless the clerk thereof * * * certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn or has been levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose."

Section 5660, General Code.

Therefore, with the money in the treasury the clerk can make the necessary certificate and the trustees can proceed with the erection of a township house. If the money be not in the treasury and must be raised by taxation, the legislature provided for the erection of a township house by having a tax question submitted at a general election and after a favorable vote thereon said tax would be in the process of collection and the restriction of section 5660, General Code (supra), would not apply and prevent the township trustees from purchasing a site and erecting thereon a township house. Of course, it is clear that the cost thereof must not exceed the sum of two thousand dollars as expressly stated in the statute.

If a more expensive township house is contemplated, the township trustees are governed by entirely different statutes.

In conclusion, if the township trustees have on hand sufficient money in the treasury unappropriated to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and the clerk shall so certify, then they may proceed to purchase a site and erect a township house at a cost of not more than two thousand dollars, and in the erection of such township house the trustees must use their sound discretion, for there are no other restrictions than those above set forth.

Respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

281.

CONTRACTS—INTEREST OF MEMBERS OF BOARDS IN CONTRACTS OF BOARD—BOARD OF HEALTH—HIRE OF MEMBER'S AUTOMOBILE—OVERPAYMENT OF ESTIMATE THROUGH MISTAKE OF FACT—RECOVERY BY CITY

It is against public policy and prohibited both by the common law and by statute for a member of the board of health to be paid for the use of his automobile used by members of the board of health, the health officer and a representative of the state board of health.

If a city pays to a bank, as the assignee of a contractor having a claim against the city, under a mistake of fact, a greater amount of money than was actually due to said contractor, the city may recover the excessive amount so paid from the bank itself.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On account of an unusual pressure of business in this office your letter of April 6th, submitting for my opinion certain questions, has been unanswered until the present. The questions submitted therein are as follows:

"1. Is it legal for a member of the board of health of a city to be paid for the use of his automobile used by the members of the board of health, health officer and a representative of the state board of health investigating a smallpox epidemic?

"2. An audit of the transactions of a city discloses that overpayments have been made upon a street paving contract. These payments were made upon an estimate of the engineer and at a price higher than named in the contract. Payment was made by the city auditor without discovering such overpayment. The contractor assigned all of his estimates to a bank and in accordance with said assignment, the bank drew the warrants and received checks from the treasurer for all payments on said work. These checks show the endorsement only of the bank and not of the contractor. In a suit to reimburse the city, against whom should the action be brought?"

In respect to the first question asked by you, I beg to state that section 3808 of the General Code prohibits any member of any board of a municipal corporation from having any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation.

Section 4404 of the General Code authorizes the establishment of a board of health, which said board of health exercises very broad powers and undoubtedly constitutes a board "of the corporation" within the meaning of section 3808.

The members of the board of health serve without compensation and in a liberal view of section 3808, said section might be deemed not to apply to such member.

I am of the opinion, however, that section 3808 does apply to members of the board of health and does preclude such members from receiving any money whatever out of the city treasury.

Whether or not section 3808 applies, however, there is a principle of common law, supported by a uniform line of authorities, upon which payment of money to a member of the board of health, under the circumstances stated by you, would have to be condemned. The principle in question prohibits, as against public policy, any interest on the part of a public officer in a contract with the making or enforcement of which he has anything to do in his official capacity. In the case you suggest, payment to the member would be justified at all only upon the theory that his automobile had been hired either by himself or by the health officer—a person under his direct supervision. The case would amount therefore to the making of a contract by the officer with himself as an individual, and would clearly be void as against public policy.

Statutes other than section 3808, above cited, as well as that section itself, authorizes the recovery of money illegally expended.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is not lawful for a member of the board of health of a city to be paid for the use of his automobile used by members of the board of health, the health officer and a representative of the state board of health out of the city treasury. I assume, of course, that your question relates to the payment from the city treasury.

Answering your second question, I beg to state that in my opinion if a city pays to a bank, the assignee of a contractor having a claim against it, under a mistake of fact, a greater amount of money than was actually due to said contractor, the city may recover the excessive amount so paid from the bank itself. The action in such case would have to be for money had and received, and not in any sense upon the contract. It is well settled that an assignee may be sued in certain cases, as for a breach of the contract of his assignor. That question, however, is not in this case. The right to recover the excessive payment is not, strictly speaking, contractual, but is more appropriately defined as quasi contractual, and the original contractor may be left out of consideration entirely.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 284.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—INTEREST ON PROCEEDS OF BONDS—DISPOSITION OF—SINKING FUND TRUSTEES.

As the statutes contain no reasonable ground from which to deduce an intent to the contrary, the general rule that interest follows the fund will be allowed to govern so that interest upon the proceeds of bonds sold for the purpose of meeting the expense of a particular improvement, will not be turned over to the sinking fund trustees but will be credited with the special fund created by the bond issue, and expended for the purpose of the fund, after the accomplishment of which purpose all balance of said fund will go to the sinking fund as provided in section 3804, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of two letters from you, one under date of June 13th and one under date of June 26th, both stating substantially the same question, and requesting my opinion thereon, viz:

> "Should the interest received by a city from the proceeds of bonds sold for the construction of a particular improvement from the city depository, be turned over to the sinking fund trustees, or should it be credited to the special fund created by the issuance of the bonds and expended for the purposes for which the bonds were issued?"

The following sections of the General Code must be considered in the determination of this question.

Section 3932.

> "Premiums and accrued interest received by the corporation from a sale of its bonds shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be by them applied on the bonded debt and interest account of the corporation, but the premiums and accrued interest upon bonds issued for special assessments shall be applied by the trustees of the sinking fund to the payment of the principal and interest of those bonds and no others."

Section 4295.

> "The council may provide by ordinance for the deposit of all public moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer. * * *"

Section 4512.

> "Upon demand of the board, the city auditor or village clerk shall report to it balances belonging to the city or village, to the credit of the sinking fund, interest accounts, or for any bonds issued for or by the corporation, and all officers or persons having them shall immediately pay them over to the trustees of the sinking fund, who shall deposit them in such place or places as the majority of such board shall select."

Section 4514.

"The trustees of the sinking fund shall invest all moneys received by them in bonds of the United States, the state of Ohio, or of any municipal corporation, school, township or county bonds, in such state, and hold in reserve only such sums as may be needed for effecting the terms of this title. All interest received by them shall be re-invested in like manner."

Section 4515.

"At least once every three years, the trustees of the sinking fund shall advertise for proposals for the deposit of all sums held in reserve, and shall deposit such reserve." (As amended 101 O. L. 243.)

Section 4517.

"The trustees of the sinking fund shall have charge of and provide for the payment of all bonds issued by the corporation, the interest maturing thereon and the payment of all judgments final against the corporation, except in condemnation of property cases. They shall receive from the auditor of the city or clerk of the village all taxes, assessments and moneys collected for such purposes and invest and disburse them in the manner provided by law. For the satisfaction of any obligation under their supervision, the trustees of the sinking fund may sell or use any of the 'securities or money in their possession.'"

Section 3804.

"When any unexpended balance remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds, the whole or part of which bonds are still outstanding, unpaid and unprovided for, is no longer needed for the purpose for which such fund was created, it shall be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied in the payment of the bonds."

I know of no other statutory provisions in any way affecting the solution of the question presented. Upon an analysis of the foregoing provisions the following facts will appear:

Under section 3932 it is the duty of the fiscal officers of the city to transfer the premiums and accrued interest received by the corporation from a sale of its bonds to the trustees of the sinking fund. This, in my opinion, refers to the amount of money received by the corporation at the time the bonds are sold in excess of the face value, so to speak, of the bond issue. By comparison of section 4295 and succeeding sections with section 4514, etc., as above quoted, a clear distinction appears as between the moneys in the custody of the trustees of the sinking fund on the one hand and the moneys to be kept in the legal custody of the city treasurer on the other hand. These two classes of funds are to be deposited in different depositories and constitute separate interest producing accounts.

Section 4512 refers to the city auditor making a report of the balances to the credit of the sinking fund and interest accounts, and provides that he shall pay the balances to the trustees of the sinking fund; this section, however, does not define, of itself, what moneys are to be credited to the sinking fund and interest accounts.

Section 4517 further defines the sphere of the powers of the trustees of the sinking fund, and authorizes such trustees to receive from the city auditor all moneys collected for the purpose of retiring bonds.

Section 3804 makes it the duty of the fiscal officers of the city to transfer to the sinking fund unexpended balances remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds.

By further analysis of the foregoing sections it is apparent that two kinds of funds are always created in the issue and retirement of the bonds of a municipal corporation, viz: 1. The fund derived from the sale of the bonds—the amount borrowed by the municipality; 2. The fund derived from taxation, assessment and other moneys collected for the purpose of retiring bonds of the corporation, and paying interest thereon—the moneys raised for the purpose of paying the corporate debt. These two funds are separately managed and controlled. The sum borrowed by the municipal corporation is, of course, immediately expended for some corporate purpose, such as the making of a particular improvement. Its disbursement is in the hands of one of the administrative departments of the city government, and its care and custody is within the sphere of the duties of the city treasurer. It must be deposited in what may be referred to as the regular city depository.

Funds raised for the payment of municipal debts, on the other hand, pass at once into the control of the sinking fund trustees and will be administered and expended by such trustees.

The foregoing general rules are subject to certain well defined exceptions. In the first place, the premiums and accrued interest received by the city authorities at the time of the sale of the bonds, and being as above defined the excess over and above what may be termed the face value of the bond issue are, because of the provisions of the statute, not to be regarded as a part of the amount borrowed, but rather as a part of the fund raised to pay the debt. Again, the unexpended balance remaining in the fund created by an issue of bonds after the object for which the money was borrowed has been achieved belongs not to the fund of which it was originally a part, nor to the general revenue fund of the municipal corporation, but to the fund from which the municipal debt is to be discharged.

The statutes are silent with respect to the disposition of the interest received by the city from its depositories and derived from the deposit produced by the sale of bonds; but by the express provision of section 4514, above quoted, interest produced by deposit of moneys in the hands of the sinking fund trustees is by them to be reinvested or otherwise devoted to the purpose mentioned in section 4517.

The general principle is that interest produced by the investment or deposit of a public or trust fund follows the principal and becomes a part of the principal. There being no specific provision of statute creating an exception to this principle in the case of interest produced by the deposit of the proceeds of a bond issue, it remains to be ascertained whether or not the general assembly has evidenced an intent from which by implication it must be determined that such interest must be disposed of in some other manner. On the one hand it might be urged that inasmuch as premiums and accrued interest received from the sale of municipal bonds must at once be credited to the sinking fund, the legislative intent evidenced by this provision, is that the amount of money which may be expended and otherwise administered by the administrative authorities of the city, as above described, is to be limited to the face value of the bond issue, and that if in any manner in a sale of bonds or otherwise, the amount of money produced by a given issue exceeds such face value, the excess should at once be applied to the payment of the debt.

Color is lent to such an assumption by that provision of section 4517 which authorizes and directs the trustees of the sinking fund to receive from the city auditor "all taxes, assessments and moneys collected" for the purpose of providing for the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds of the municipality. That is to say, the language of this provision shows that the legislature contemplated the possibility of moneys available for sinking fund purposes being "collected" otherwise than by way of taxation or assessment. This, however, is inconclusive inasmuch as water rentals and the like are in certain cases to be devoted to the retirement of municipal bonds. On the other hand, section 3084 contemplates the possibility of a bond issue exceeding the ultimate needs of the corporation for the particular purpose, and at the same time provides that the excess shall go into the sinking fund. From this section it appears that the ascertainment of such excess is to be postponed until the particular purpose for which the money was borrowed is achieved.

On the whole, I am of the opinion that no controlling intent on the part of the general assembly is disclosed by any of the foregoing provisions, to make an exception to the general rule in the case of interest derived from the deposit of moneys raised by the sale of bonds.

Because then the evident intention of the statutes is that what may be termed "improvement fund" shall be kept separate from what may be termed the "retirement fund," and that both such funds shall be deposited and invested so as to produce interest, and because no intent clearly appears to make an exception as to either kind of interest to the general rule that the interest follows the principal, I am of the opinion that the interest produced by the deposit of the money derived from the sale of bonds for a specific improvement less the premiums and accrued interest received at the time of sale must be credited to such fund and not to the sinking fund, and must remain so credited until the object for which the bonds were issued has been achieved, at which time it must, together with any balance remaining in the principal fund, be transferred to the trustees of the sinking fund to be applied to the payment of the bonds.

I have not, of course, considered a possible case in which the particular bonds in question are retired prior to the ascertainment of the fact that the balance in the fund created by their sale is no longer needed for the purpose for which such fund was created. It would seem, however, that in such case the interest and the balance in the fund should be transferred to the general revenue fund of the corporation.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 289.

COUNTY AUDITOR—NOTICE OF MEETING OF BOARD OF EQUALIZATION AND COMPLETION OF QUADRENNIAL EQUALIZATION—ONE PUBLICATION SUFFICIENT.

In order to comply with sections 5596 and 5600, G. C., requiring the auditor to give ten days' notice by advertisement of both the completion of the quadrennial equalization as well as the time and place the board of equalization will convene as a board of revision, one publication by the auditor will suffice.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 7, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication, wherein you ask this department for a written opinion upon the following question, viz:

> "How many insertions is the county auditor required to make in giving ten days' public notice by advertisement in one or more newspapers that the quadrennial equalization has been completed, or of the time and place the board of equalization will convene as a board of revision?"

The notices inquired about are required to be given by sections 5596 and 5600 of the General Code, which provide as follows:

> "Section 5596. The auditor shall immediately thereafter, give ten days' public notice by advertisement in one or more newspapers, that the equalization has been completed, and that complaints against any valuation may be filed with the auditor of the county on or before the fifteenth day of April next following and will be heard by the board of revision, stating in the notice the time and place of the meeting of said board. Such complaints shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of May next following.
>
> "Section 5600. After the completion of the equalization by the board, complaints against any valuation may be filed with the auditor of the county, and, if such complaint has been filed on or before April 15th thereafter against any valuation of a quadrennial county board, or, if the auditor deems it advisable, he shall notify the members of the proper board of equalization in writing to meet and sit as a board of revision on the day at the place provided by law for the meeting of the board. He shall give ten days' public notice, by advertisement, in one or more newspapers, of the time and place of the meeting of the board of revision and the purpose thereof."

By the terms of section 5596 and 5600 of the General Code, just quoted, the county auditor is required to give ten days' public notice by advertisement in one or more newspapers that the equalization of the property in the county has been completed and that complaints may be filed with the county auditor on or before the date mentioned in section 5596, General Code; and the auditor is also required to give ten days' notice by advertisement in one or more newspapers of the time and place of the meeting of the board of revision and the purpose thereof.

In order to comply with the terms of sections 5596 and 5600, General Code, you inquire, how many insertions is the county auditor required to make in one or more newspapers in giving the ten days' public notice.

A similar statute (Swan's Statutes 474) requiring public notice of time and place of sale on execution, by advertisement at least thirty days before the day of sale in some newspaper printed in the county, was construed in the case of Adm'x of Craig vs. Fox et al., 16 Ohio report, page 564. It is urged in this case that thirty days' notice required consecutive insertions of the notice during the period of thirty days. The court in passing upon the question held:

> "The next objection to the notice is, that the publication was not made according to law. The statute requires that lands taken in execution shall not be sold until the officer cause public notice of the time and place of sale to be given, for at least thirty days before the day of sale, by advertisement in some newspaper printed in the county (Swan's Stat. 474), and it is urged that these words require consecutive insertions of the notice during the period of thirty days.
>
> "This construction of the statute has been practiced upon very generally in many parts of the state; and were it possible that private rights could be injuriously affected by not adopting and sustaining it, I might hesitate in expressing an opinion that consecutive insertions of the notice are not required. No such right can, however, be affected. I look then to the statute in order to gather the meaning and intention of the legislature. Its words will be answered by one publication, inserted in a newspaper thirty days before the day of sale, and will not require an insertion in each paper that may be issued between the date of the first insertion and the sale. Insertions daily or weekly, when intended to be provided for, are always indicated in indefinite language, as in the advertisement for a tax sale, where this is the form of expression 'shall cause notice to be advertised four weeks successively.'"

This statute, regarding notice of sale on execution, has been since amended, requiring that notice be published for five consecutive weeks.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the county auditor complies with sections 5596 and 5600 of the General Code, by one publication of the notice required by said section in one or more newspapers ten days before the date of sale.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 304.

SHERIFFS—FEES FOR KEEPING PRISONERS—DISPOSITION OF—COUNTY FEE FUNDS.

The thirty-five cents a day provided by section 1981, G. C., is a fee which should be paid into the county fee fund and the allowance made by the county commissioners under section 2850 for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail may be retained by the sheriff for his own use in addition to his salary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 26, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication of June 1st, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Whether the thirty-five cents (35c) per day to the jailer for keeping an idiot or insane person, allowed under section 1981 of the General Code, is a fee which should be paid into the sheriff's fee fund or is it a compensation in the nature of the board of such prisoner to be retained by the sheriff for his personal use?"

In answer to your question I would say section 2850 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The sheriff shall be allowed by the county commissioners not less than forty-five nor more than seventy-five cents per day for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail."

I am of the opinion that an insane person while confined in the jail is a prisoner within the meaning of the above quoted provision of section 2850 of the General Code.

Section 2997 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners as provided by law.

Section 2977 provides that all the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected for services by a county sheriff shall be collected for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which he is elected, etc.

The section about which you inquire, section 1981, provides for a fixed fee for the sheriff or jailer of thirty-five cents (35c) per day for keeping an idiot or insane person.

There is a difference between the two sections above quoted, namely: sections 2997 and 1891 of the General Code, in that the allowance to be made to the sheriff in addition to his compensation and salary allowed is for "keeping and feeding," while the fee provided in section 1981 is for "keeping" only.

In view of the difference between said sections of the General Code, above quoted, I am of the opinion that the 35c per day provided by said section 1981 is a fee which should be paid into the sheriff's fee fund and the allowance made by the county commissioners under section 2850 may be retained by the sheriff for his own use, in addition to his salary.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

306.

COUNTY WORKHOUSE—BOARD OF DIRECTORS—POWERS OF BOARD AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO ERECT AND ALTER BUILDING.

The erection, or alteration of the Stark county workhouse are matters beyond the authorization of the board of workhouse directors.

Under Section 2343, the work is that of county commissioners to be undertaken in accordance with the methods prescribed therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 28, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 26th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Have the trustees of the Stark county workhouse, constructed and operated pursuant to act in vol. 89, O. L. 687, et seq., authority to employ an architect at an expense of $500.00, and erect new cells, etc., at an expense of $8,000? If so, should the bills for the same be allowed by the county commissioners upon the certificate of the secretary of the board of workhouse directors, or should they be paid from the county treasury upon such certificate alone?
>
> "The custom has been for the commissioners to allow the bills certified to them by the directors, but they now question their authority to allow bills of the nature mentioned above unless the same have been duly advertised and let by competitive bidding as provided by law."

I have examined the act of April 18, 1892, 89 Ohio Laws 687. Without quoting any of its provisions in detail I may say that the purchase of a site for the workhouse thereby authorized to be constructed and maintained and the erection thereon of a building was entrusted by said act to the commissioners of Stark county; but that it was provided by section seven of said act that after the erection of the building and when it was ready for use, the direction, management and control of the workhouse and maintenance and care of the convicts therein should be vested in a board of workhouse directors. This board was given complete power over the ordinary management of the workhouse, including power to make and enter into contracts.

Section twenty of the act provided that the ordinary cost of maintaining the workhouse over and above the proceeds arising from its income should be paid from the county treasury upon the certificate of the secretary of the workhouse and the approval of the commissioners of the county.

The act is absolutely silent as to the mode and manner of proceeding in case of enlargement or alteration of the building.

It is my opinion that the powers of the board of workhouse directors, as enumerated in the act above cited, are not sufficiently broad to authorize them to exercise supervision over the making of an alteration in and addition to the workhouse building. Such building is a county building, and such matters in respect to it are within the jurisdiction of the county commissioners. In my judgment, therefore, the provisions of section 2343 et seq. of the General Code, which prescribes the steps to be taken when the commissioners of a county find it necessary to erect an addition to or alteration of a public building, apply to and govern the proposed addition to the Stark county workhouse.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 309.

TOWNSHIP CLERK AND TOWNSHIP TREASURER—POWERS OF ACTING AND REFUSING TO ACT AS CLERK AND TREASURER RESPECTIVELY OF SCHOOL BOARD—VACANCIES AND FILING THEREOF BY THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

From the principles established by the decision in the case of State ex rel. Stolzenbacher vs. Felty, Auditor, No. 9372, decided by the supreme court in 1905, but not reported.

1. The treasurer of a city, village or township may by failing to qualify as treasurer of the school funds refuse to serve as such treasurer.

2. If the township clerk fails to qualify as clerk of the township board of education, such failure does not affect his status as township clerk.

3. If a township treasurer resigns as treasurer of the school funds the board of education has the right if it chooses, to accept his resignation, and in such cases may elect a successor to him as treasurer of the school fund.

4. If by reason of the establishment of a depository, the treasurer of the school district is dispensed with according to law, and the clerk gives the additional bond required of him as treasurer by virtue of section 4783, G. C., he will then be obliged to perform the duties of the treasurer without extra compensation unless he resigns. He may, however, refuse to qualify as such treasurer and the board may elect a substitute.

5. The refusal of a township clerk to qualify for the duties which devolve upon him by the establishment of a depository under 4783, G. C., will not in any way affect his status as township clerk, and under such circumstances the board may select a substitute to act as treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 31, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 18th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following questions:

> "Section 4783, G. C., provides that each city, village and township school district, the treasurer of the city, village or township funds, respectively, shall be the treasurer of the school funds. May such treasurers refuse to serve as treasurers of the school funds if they deem the compensation fixed by the board of education insufficient?
>
> "If a township clerk should refuse to act as clerk of the township board of education, what effect, if any, will such refusal have upon his status as township clerk?

"A township treasurer being a member of the township board of education and deeming the position of treasurer and member of the board incompatible, resigned as treasurer of the school funds. What is the proper proceeding in such case?

"If a board of education dispenses with its treasurer under the provisions of sections 4782, 4783 and 4784, G. C., is the clerk of said board required to perform the duties of the treasurer without extra compensation?

"If, under such conditions, a township clerk refuses to qualify and act as treasurer for the compensation fixed by the board, what effect, if any, will this have upon his status as township clerk?

Would the board of education in case of such refusal be authorized to select its own treasurer?"

The statutes involved in these questions are as follows:

"Section 4763. In each city, village and township school district, the treasurer of the city, village and township funds respectively, shall be the treasurer of the school funds.

"Section 4764. Before entering upon the duties of his office, each school district treasurer shall execute a bond. * * *

"Section 4765. Thereafter such treasurer may be required to give additional sureties on his accepted bond. If he fail for ten days after service of notice in writing of such requisition, to give such bond or additional sureties as so required, the office shall be declared vacant and filled as in other cases.

"Section 4782. When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, may dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys, belonging to such school district. In such case the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

Section 4747, as amended 101 O. L., 138:

"The board of education of each school district shall organize on the first Monday of January after the election of members of said board. One member of the board shall be elected president, one as vice-president and in township school districts the clerk of the township shall be the clerk of the board. * * *"

In connection with these several questions I have examined the case of State ex rel. Stolzenbacher vs. Feltz, Auditor, No. 9372, decided by the supreme court of this state in 1905 but not reported. I have read the record and briefs of opposing counsel therein and find that the facts in that case were as follows: A city treasurer upon the taking effect of the school code of 1904 in which the language above quoted from section 4763, General Code, first appeared, filed with the board of education of the city school district a bond, but made such filing conditional upon his salary as custodian of the school moneys being fixed at a certain sum. The board refused to accept the bond so filed, and having declared that the city treasurer had failed to qualify as treasurer of the school funds, and that a vacancy in such office therefore existed, proceeded to elect another treasurer of the school funds. To this treasurer so elected, the county auditor refused to pay over funds due from the county to the school district, and the action which originated in the supreme court was in mandamus to compel such delivery.

The judgment of the court was that a pre-emptory writ issue commanding the county auditor to pay over to the treasurer elected by the school the funds due the district from the county. Upon analysis of the decision in this case the following I think will appear clear:

1. If the board of education had no authority to elect a treasurer of its own in any case then the court would not have decided the case as it did.

2. If the effect of the failure of the city treasurer to qualify was to disqualify him from holding the office of city treasurer as well as from acting as treasurer of the school fund, then there would have been a vacancy in the office of city treasurer which should have been filled in the manner prescribed in the municipal code, and the person thus appointed would have been the local custodian of the school funds, so that if the court had taken this view of the law it could not well have decided the case as it did.

I think therefore, that the only propositions of law consistent with the court's decree in the case above cited are as follows: and they are those put forth by counsel for the relator.

1. The offices of city, village and township treasurer on the one hand and treasurer of the city, village and township school funds on the other hand are separate and distinct.

2. Each successive treasurer of the city, village or township, as the case may be, must in the first instance qualify as treasurer of the school funds of the appropriate district. If, however, he fails to do so, then the board of education has the right, and it is its duty to secure another treasurer.

3. The failure of the treasurer of the city, village or township, as the case may be, to qualify as treasurer of the school funds of the appropriate district does not create a vacancy in the first office.

I am further of the opinion that there is no essential difference between the provisions of section 4747 as amended in 1910, and which relates to the clerk, and the above created provisions of section 4763 relating to the treasurer of the school funds. The same principles of law apply to both cases.

Answering now the particular questions which you submit, I beg to state in answer to your first question that in my opinion the treasurer of a city, village or township may by failing to qualify as treasurer of the school funds refuse to serve as such treasurer.

In answer to your second question I beg to state that in my opinion if a township clerk fails to qualify as clerk of the township board of education, such failure does not in any respect affect his status as township clerk.

Answering your third question I beg to state that if a township treasurer resigns as treasurer of the school funds, the board of education has the right, if it chooses, to accept his resignation, and in such case may elect a successor to him as treasurer of the school fund.

Answering your fourth question I beg to state that in my opinion if the treasurer of the school district has been dispensed with according to law, and the clerk gives the additional bond required of him as treasurer by virtue of section 4783, General Code, he will then be obliged to perform the duties of treasurer without extra compensation, unless he resigns. He has, however, a perfect right under the decision above quoted to refuse to qualify by filing the additional bond or to resign as treasurer of the school funds at any time. Furthermore, if he should refuse to perform the duties of his office the board may lawfully declare that he has abandoned the same, thus creating a vacancy therein, and elect another treasurer of the school funds.

Answering your fifth and sixth questions together I beg to state that in my opinion the refusal of a township clerk, in the event that the duties of treasurer of the school district devolve upon him by virtue of the selection of a school district depository and the other proceedings set forth in section 4783, to qualify and act as treasurer of the school fund, will not have any effect whatever upon his status as township clerk, and that under such circumstances the board of education might lawfully proceed to select its own treasurer.

The conclusions above set forth are the only ones, in my opinion, consistent with the decision of the supreme court in the case above cited.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

311.

CLERK OF COURTS—COMPENSATION BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR EXTRA WORK PERFORMED OUTSIDE OF OFFICE HOURS—SORTING, ARRANGING, JACKETING AND REFILING PAPERS.

The work of resorting, rearranging, rejacketing and refiling papers filed in the office of the clerk of courts under former administration, is not within the regularly prescribed duties of that official and when he is employed by the county commissioners to perform such task outside of his regular office hours, he is legally entitled to extra compensation therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 31, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your inquiry of May 4, 1911, and wish to say that the delay in answering your inquiry has been due to the large number of inquiries which this department has received for consideration. In your communication you inquire as follows:

> "The commissioners of Defiance county installed new metallic filing cases and upon the request or recommendation of the common pleas court contracted with the clerk of the courts for sorting, arranging, jacketing and refiling the papers in the new case at a price that seems reasonable for the work involved. It is not disputed that the work was performed by the clerk outside of his regular office hours. The compensation for the service received by the clerk was retained by him and not paid into his fee fund, the contract having been entered into subsequent to the time the salary law took effect. Should the clerk be held to account to his fee fund for the money received for this service?"

In reply thereto I wish to say that section 2874 of the General Code provides for the general duties of the clerk of the court as follows:

> "The clerk shall indorse on each pleading or paper in a cause filed in his office the time of filing, enter all orders, decrees, judgments and proceedings of the courts of which he is by law the clerk; and make a complete record of each cause unless by law or by the order of the court record is dispensed with, and pay over to the proper parties all moneys coming into his hands as clerk."

Section 2875 of the General Code provides that the clerk shall file and preserve the papers delivered to him as follows:

"The clerk shall file together and carefully preserve in his office all papers delivered to him for that purpose in every action or proceeding."

Section 2876, General Code, provides as follows:

"The clerk shall indorse upon every paper filed with him the date of the filing thereof, and upon every order for a provisional remedy and upon every undertaking given thereunder, the date of its return to his office."

Section 2878 of the General Code provides, what books are to be kept by the clerk of the court as follows:

"The clerk shall keep at least five books, to be called the appearance docket, trial docket, and printed duplicates of the trial docket for the use of the court and the officers thereof, journal, record and execution docket. He shall keep an index to the trial docket and to the printed duplicates of the trial docket and of the journal direct, and to the appearance docket, record and execution docket, direct and reverse."

Section 2880 provides that the clerk shall keep the books and make records as follows:

"The clerk shall keep the journals, records, books, and papers appertaining to the court and record its proceedings."

Section 2883 of the General Code provides that the clerk of the court shall make a complete record of each cause as follows:

"Unless by order on the journal a record is dispensed with, the clerk shall make a complete record of the cause within six months after final judgment or order of the proper court. On his failing to make such record within such time, the clerk may be removed by the court of common pleas."

Section 2884 of the General Code provides that the clerk shall make an index of all judgments not dormant as follows:

"Each clerk of the common pleas, circuit and superior courts shall make an alphabetical index of the names of all plaintiffs and defendants to pending suits and living judgments, showing therein in separate columns the names, court and number of the suit, or execution, and when there is more than one suit or judgment for or against the same party, it shall be sufficient to index the name but once and make entries opposite thereto, of the court and the number of the suit or execution. No such index shall be made in counties where it has already been done."

The sections of the General Code cited above, provide generally as to what are the duties of the clerk of the courts, and it is not part of the duties of the clerk of the courts to sort, arrange, jacket and refile the papers filed in the office of the clerk of the courts under former administrations, therefore, the work of sorting, arranging, jacketing and refiling is not the duty of that particular office, and inasmuch as the clerk of the courts of said county performed said work of sorting, arranging, jacketing and refiling said papers in his office which had been filed under former administrations, and inasmuch as he performed this work outside of his regular office hours, I am of the opinion that said clerk of the courts of Defiance county is legally entitled to said fees, and that he should not be held to account for the same to the fee fund of his respective county for the performance of the aforementioned services.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

312.

COUNTY OFFICERS—YEAR'S SALARY—NO REDUCTION WHEN ACTUAL TERM IS SLIGHTLY MORE OR LESS THAN A CALENDAR YEAR.

Each county officer is entitled under section 2989, G. C., to receive a full year's salary for each year of the term which he served, regardless of whether or not he happened to serve a few days more or less than a full year by reason of his term beginning on a certain Monday of a certain month and ending on the same Monday of the same month.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 1, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 21st, in which you inquire as follows:

"If a county officer elected for a certain number of years, by reason of beginning his term on a certain Monday of a certain month and ending upon the same Monday of the same month, should actually serve a few days more or less than a full year, should his compensation be based upon the actual time served, and if so should the last month's salary be prorated as the days served in the last month are to the whole number of days in the month, or should the year's salary be prorated as the number of days served in the last year is to the number of days in the year? Or should he receive a full year's salary for each year of the term which he served?"

In reply to your inquiry section 2989 of the General Code provides as follows:

"After deducting from the proper fee fund the compensation of all deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers, and other employes, as fixed and authorized herein, each county officer herein named shall receive from the balance therein the annual salary hereinafter provided, payable monthly upon warrant of the county auditor."

You will note that the above section speaks of the salary of the respective county officers as an annual salary. I am acordingly of the opinion that each respective county officer of the respective counties of the state is entitled to receive a full year's salary for each year of the term which he served, regardless of whether or not he happened to serve a few days more or less than a full year by reason of his term beginning on a certain Monday of a certain month and ending on the same Monday of the same month.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

313.

TAXES AND TAXATION--CREDITS ERRONEOUSLY RETURNED AS MONEYS BY PARTY WHO MISTAKENLY BELIEVED HIMSELF OWNER—LEGISLATIVE REMEDY.

When a person has for several years, returned for taxation $1,000 in money which the courts decide later to belong to another person, the county cannot allow a refunder to the aggrieved party even in the face of the further fact that such money was returned as "money" when in reality it should have been listed "credits," which would have permitted a reduction of debts.

The only remedy is through an act of the legislature.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 1, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices. Department of Auditor of States, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of July 6, 1911, of which the following is a copy:

"We hand you herewith a letter from C. W. Pettay, prosecuting attorney, Cadiz, Ohio, and respectfully request that you give us your written opinion in answer thereto."

Mr. Pettay's letter is as follows:

"We have a case in this county in which a man, some three or four years ago, gave in $1,000.00 to the assessor of personal property as money for tax purposes, and paid taxes on said money for at least three years without protest, he thinking that the $1,000.00 belonged to him and that it belonged to him by virtue of a certain will and testament, but the will having been placed in the courts for construction, the courts have recently held that this $1,000.00 was not willed to him, but to another person, and the courts held that he pay the $1,000.00 to the person in question to whom the court finally decreed the legacy to belong, also to pay interest on the said money for the time which he had held it in his possession.

"Now, this party who has lost his supposed legacy has not only had to pay back the money that he thought was bequeathed to him under the will according to a late decree of the circuit court of this district, but also to pay interest on same. Therefore, since he has had to pay this money back together with interest, he thinks that the taxes which he has paid on the said money for the past three or four years, as the case may be, should be refunded to him by order of the county commissioners; and in going into the case carefully it occurs to me that the law is in favor of the board of commissioners retaining the money, but on the contrary the equity in the case seems to be very strongly in favor of complainant, and it is up to us to decide as to whether the law and equity in the case will justify the commissioners in ordering the taxes on the said money returned to this said party.

"Now, as said before, this money was handed into the assessor as money and not as credits, but said complainant says that as a matter of fact, even though it was put down by the assessor as so much money, it was in reality credits and that since it was credits in fact, that he now should be allowed to deduct his debits from that sum, which would not leave him anything in money to be returned to the assessor aforesaid.

"Would say that the question has come up that even though this man should escape paying the taxes on the said money as aforesaid, that the real legatee as held by the circuit court in construing the said will, should be held to pay said taxes, but that legatee seems to be greatly in debt and therefore the same principle would apply to him, and if he be allowed to deduct his debits then he too would have nothing left for taxes.

"Then again, if we have interpreted section 5402 of the General Code as enacted May 31st, 1911, correctly, we probably would be barred from charging these taxes to anyone else any way.

"From the above you have a pretty fair statement of this case, and from a standpoint of equity it seems as though the said complainant has been wronged and the question now is, has he a remedy?"

"Would be pleased to hear from you at once giving me a ruling on this case, for if the law on the subject will justify the county commissioners in passing a resolution for the refunding of this money I think there is enough equity in the case to justify them in so doing, but if your bureau holds that that would be error to do so we shall not do it.

"Hoping that we may have this matter taken up at once, I am, etc."

Under date of July 14, 1911, Mr. Pettay submitted to your additional data, as follows:

Re-taxation and taxes.

Refund on legacy subsequently held by court to belong to another party.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

"GENTLEMEN:—On the 29th ult., I wrote you with reference to your opinion as to whether or not, there is any law that would justify the board of county commissioners in refunding the taxes on a legacy which the court subsequently held to belong to another party, and I might incidentally add that the said court not only compelled the payment of the legacy, but also the interest on said legacy, for the number of years that it had been erroneously held by the party who is now complaining of having had to pay said taxes on money which did not belong to him.

"This money was turned into the assessor for three or four years as so much money, but the complainant now says that if we will give him a chance that he will prove to our satisfaction that the property so handed in as money was in reality credits instead of money, and further that he will make sufficient proof that not only the amount of the said legacy that was held by him under a misconstruction of the will and testament that gave said legacy, but also interest on said legacy, has had to be paid over to another party.

"Now the question is, 'Is there any law that will justify or uphold the county commissioners in taking steps to refund said taxes that have been paid as aforesaid, if said complainant can make the proper showing that said property was credits instead of money?'

"In reply to the said letter you stated that you had referred the question to the attorney general and would give me a copy of his opinion as soon as received, but to date I have not received said opinion.

"Thanking you in advance for trying to get me an opinion on this matter within the next few days, I am, etc."

Inasmuch as the party about whom you inquire gave in the $1,000.00 for the purpose of taxation thereon for three or four years, as stated in the above data, I am of the opinion that he is without any remedy as against the county. I am unable to find any statutory authority whereby the county commissioners can legally refund to said party the taxes so paid by said party under the statement of facts as given above.

It is certainly to be regretted that the legatee under the will who lost out in the litigation returned the amount of $1,000.00 each year as stated in Mr. Pettay's letter, for taxation, for several years. His honesty would appeal to anyone to afford relief if it were possible. The trouble is the only authority to do this is the legislature. This comes in the nature of a claim against the state, which I believe the legislature would rectify, especially if a recommendation were made by you as prosecuting attorney or your successor in case you should not be prosecutor at the time.

Every principle of equity and morality is in favor of this legatee, but as I have hereinbefore indicated, I am unable to find any statute warranting the county commissioners in making a refunder. One of the chief difficulties with respect to any taxing board making a refunder, as you know, is this: the amount of taxes received each year is distributed to the various taxing districts, such as municipalities, townships and counties, and of course, the county cannot stand legally the expense of a refunder in respect to moneys that have been distributed to the various taxing districts. The legislature is the only source of remedy that I can see. If there were any legal route reaching to a correction of the wrong to which you refer in your letter I certainly would be pleased to follow it under these circumstances.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

317.

COUNTY INFIRMARY—METHOD OF PAYMENT FOR PLANTING OF SHRUBBERY ON THE INFIRMARY GROUNDS—DUTIES OF SUPERINTENDENT, DIRECTOR AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Bills for shrubbery on the infirmary grounds are not bills for "current supplies" and may not be legally paid by the superintendent of the infirmary out of his reserve fund under 25289, G. C. They are rather "purchases necessary for the county infirmary" within the meaning of section 2522 and are to be contracted for by the infirmary directors under authority of section 2522.

The powers and duties of county commissioners with respect to the county infirmary are primarily to provide a site and erect buildings thereon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 8, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 1st, submitting for my opinion thereon the following:

> "The infirmary directors of Stark county desiring to beautify the infirmary grounds by planting a large quantity of shrubbery, requested the county commissioners to enter into a contract for the purchase and planting of the same, which request was refused by the said commissioners.
>
> "Thereupon the infirmary board (it is claimed upon legal advice other than that of the prosecuting attorney) contracted for the planting of shrubbery expecting to pay for the same in four or five different vouchers, each amounting to less than two hundred dollars, out of the 'reserve' fund of the superintendent, none of which have been paid.
>
> "Query: Can such bills be legally paid by the superintendent out of his 'reserve' fund, or may they be paid upon the allowance of the infirmary directors?
>
> "Which board, the county commissioners or the infirmary directors, has the authority to contract for improving or beautifying the infirmary grounds?"

Section 2528 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "At the request of the superintendent, the infirmary directors shall set apart from the poor fund a reserve fund not to exceed at any time two hundred dollars, which upon their order shall be paid to the superintendent and expended by him as needed for current supplies and expenses. * * *"

Section 2522 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The board of infirmary directors shall make all contracts and purchases necessary for the county infirmary and prescribe such rules and regulations as it deems proper for its management and good government, and to promote sobriety, morality and industry among inmates. * * *"

Without citing or quoting from sections, suffice it to say that the powers and duties of county commissioners with respect to the county infirmary are, in the main, to provide site and erect buildings thereon. In my opinion the planting of shrubbery upon the grounds of the county infirmary is a matter of maintenance rather than a matter of original cost, and is within the jurisdiction of the infirmary directors to the exclusion of that of the commissioners.

Such shrubbery is not, however, in my opinion, "current supplies" within the meaning of section 2528 above quoted. It is rather a "purchase necessary for the county infirmary" within the meaning of section 2522.

I therefore conclude that the bills to which you refer may not legally be paid by the superintendent of the infirmary out of his reserve fund, but that they may be contracted and paid by the infirmary directors under authority of section 2522.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 317.

PUBLIC RELIEF—LEGAL RESIDENCE—REIMBURSEMENT OF FOREIGN COUNTY WHICH GIVES "POOR RELIEF" TO A LEGAL RESIDENT OF ANOTHER COUNTY.

Where a family which had lived for twelve months in Licking county and under 3437 obtained a "legal residence" therein and then moved to Union county where they were given "poor relief" and before they had acquired a legal residence therein, had moved to Madison county and caused the latter county to incur an expense of $315.00 for caring for the family during a spell of smallpox, Madison county can be reimbursed by Licking county under the terms of sections 4438 and 3394, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 8, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 7th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "In 1908, one B, wife and child, moved from Licking county to Union county. Before they had resided in the last mentioned county for a period of one year, they applied for and received public relief at the hands of the township trustees of the township in which they resided in Union county. This was in February, 1909, October, 1909, and March, 1910.
>
> "The said B and family, in the summer of 1910, moved to Madison county where, on December 2, 1910, the entire family contracted smallpox. Madison county incurred an expense of $315.00 in caring for the said family. Will you kindly advise this department which county is liable for the amount of the said bill?"

Section 4438 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When a person with a contagious disease quarantined in a county is a legal resident of another county of the state, and is unable to pay such expenses, they shall be paid by the county in which he has a legal residence, if notice and a sworn statement of the amount of such expenses are sent to the infirmary directors of such county within thirty days after the quarantine in such case was discharged."

This section is found in that portion of the General Code which relates to the powers and duties of a municipal board of health. But section 3394, General Code, however, provides that township trustees, acting as a township board of health, are vested with "the same duties, powers and jurisdiction within the township * * * as by law are imposed upon or granted to boards of health in municipalities." My opinion, therefore, is that section 4438 applies to township boards of health as well as to municipal boards of health.

The reference in section 4438 to "legal residence" must be regarded, in my judgment, as being made to the term as defined in the poor laws. Section 3477, General Code, provides as follows:

"Each person shall be considered to have obtained a legal settlement in any county in this state in which he or she has continuously resided and supported himself or herself for twelve consecutive months, without relief under the provisions of the law for the relief of the poor, subject to the following exceptions: * * *"

(Exceptions are unimportant in this connection, as they do not apply to the case at hand.)

The difficulty in the question that you submit arises, if at all, because of the fact that the family in question received public relief at the hands of the township trustees of the township in which they resided in Union county, in the year 1909. This could not lawfully have been done except upon the theory that the family had acquired a legal settlement in Union county. The determination of the township trustees upon this point, however, is not conclusive upon the officials of Madison county, and if erroneous they may, in my judgment, ignore it.

Although your letter does not so state I shall assume that the family have resided without public support twelve consecutive months in Licking county. If that is the case, then, the legal settlement of the family is in Licking county.

Inasmuch as the legal settlement of the family is in Licking county, and inasmuch as, as I have above indicated, the phrase "legal residence" as used in section 4338, General Code, above quoted, should be construed as meaning "legal settlement," I am of the opinion that the infirmary directors of Licking county are liable for the amount of the bill contracted by the authorities in Madison county in caring for the family referred to, while suffering from smallpox.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 320.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—PUBLICATION OF STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES—RIGHT TO EMPLOY NEWSPAPER THEREFOR.

The word "publish" as employed in section 7785, G. C., leaves it discretionary with the board of education to publish said annual report in any manner it sees fit, and a publication in a newspaper of such annual report is fully authorized by said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 9, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of June 1st you requested my opinion on the following state of facts:

> "A city board of education published a detailed statement of receipts and expenditures for the year, in a newspaper, paying the newspaper the sum of $94.45 for such publication. What finding should be made by this department? Can recovery be had of the paper which published the report? If not, is the board itself liable for the amount? (See section 4776, G. C.)."

From the wording of your request and the fact that you cited me to section 4776, General Code, I assumed that the published detailed statement of receipts and expenditures was the one provided for in said section 4776, and that such publication was in addition to the annual report of the city school board. From a later letter addressed to me, I am informed that I was in error in regard thereto, and that the report referred to by you in your former request was the annual report which is provided for in section 7785, General Code, and, I, therefore, write this supplementary opinion in order to cover the facts as I now understand them.

Section 7785 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The board of education of each city district shall prepare and publish annually a report of the condition and administration of the schools under its charge, and include therein a complete exhibit of the financial affairs of the district."

Said section authorizes the board of education to publish annually a report. The word "publish" is defined in the Century dictionary as follows:

> "To make public; to make known to the people in general, promulgate or proclaim as a law or edict."

In Webster's dictionary:

> "To make public, to make known to mankind or people in general; to divulge, as a private transaction; to promulgate or proclaim as a law or edict."

In United States vs. William, 3rd Fed., 484-486 "publish" is defined:

> "As to issue; to make known what before was private; to put into circulation; the idea of publicity, of circulation, or intending distribution."

In the case of City of Chicago et al. vs. McCoy, 136 Ill., 344, the court on page 350 in construing section eighteen of the schedule to the constitution of 1870 which provides "all laws of the state of Illinois, and all official writings, and executive, legislative and judicial proceedings, shall be conducted, preserved and published in no other than the English language."

The court on page 352 of its opinion says:

> "It is insisted that the word 'published' as used in said section of the constitution, is restricted in its application to publications in book or pamphlet form. The word 'publish' is broad enough to include, and in its ordinary and usual acceptation does include, publications in newspapers. * * * The constitutional provision in question contemplates publications in newspapers as well as publications in books and pamphlets."

I hold, therefore, that the word "publish" as used in said section 7785 of the General Code leaves it discretionary with the board of education to publish said annual report in any manner it sees fit, and that a publication in a newspaper of such annual report is fully authorized by said section.

Therefore, no finding should be made by your department against a city board of education which publishes its annual report as provided for in section 7785, General Code, in a newspaper.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 323.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—ROAD DISTRICT LIMITATIONS—VOTE OF ELECTORS AUTHORIZING BOND ISSUE.

A levy for the purpose of meeting the interest and principal of bonds issued by a special road district under section 7033, G. C., is included within the ten mill limitation of the Smith One Per Cent. law so-called?

The procedure formerly outlined in section 3939, G. C., now supplanted by substantially similar provisions, is not applicable to the issuance of bonds in a township road district under 7035, G. C. The issuance of such bonds must, by virtue of section 7042, G. C., be authorized by a vote of a majority of the electors voting thereon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1911.

HON. F. M. STEVENS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 4th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. Is a levy for the purpose of meeting the interest and principal of bonds issued by a special road district under section 7033 of the General Code, to be included within the ten mill limitation of the Smith One Per Cent. law, so-called?

"2. Section 7036 of the General Code provides that the proposition of issuing bonds for road district improvements shall receive a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, while under sections 3939 and 3295, General Code, the township trustees are authorized upon the approval of two-thirds of the electors to issue bonds for highway improvement purposes. Do these sections conflict; and in the event that they do conflict, do these sections, 3939 and 3295, control, so that a township which is also a road district may not issue bonds without the approval of two-thirds of the electors?"

Answering your first question, I am of the opinion that levies for the purpose therein mentioned are within the ten mill limitation of the act of June 2, 1911. I have already held that levies "over which the budget commissioners shall have no control" as provided by section 5649-3a, are not necessarily excluded from consideration in ascertaining the ten mill limitation, although they are expressly excluded from the internal limitations of five, three and two mills, respectively.

Section 7035 of the General Code, which is one of the sections authorizing the creation of township road districts for the purposes therein mentioned, provides in part that the bonds to be issued by the trustees thereunder "shall not run longer than twenty years." Under this section, therefore, it is possible to distribute the indebtedness of the township, incurred under authority thereof, over a period of twenty years; bonds are to bear interest at a rate not exceeding five per cent., payable semi-annually: so that, in the case of an issue of one hundred thousand dollars, the amount mentioned by you, it would be necessary for the township road district to levy an annual tax, slightly in excess of five thousand dollars, in order to provide for the retirement of, and the interest on such issue. If, then, the levies made by the township, the county, the state and the school district, and any other levies operating within LaGrange township—the township mentioned by you—are such as not to leave room, so to speak, for a levy in the township of such an amount in excess of five thousand dollars, without exceeding the ten mills allowed by the Smith bill, then, as you suggest, it would probably be necessary for the electors to vote additional taxes under authority of section 5649-5 of the Smith bill, for road district taxes are not exempt from the one per cent. limitation.

Answering your second question I beg to state that sections 3295 and 3939 jointly constitute what is popularly referred to as the Longworth Bond act, as applicable to townships. Section 3952, in pari materia therewith, does provide that no issue of bonds, as to which a vote of the electors is required, under favor of the remaining provisions of the act, shall be made unless two-thirds of the voters, voting at the election, vote in favor thereof.

It seems to me, however, that there is a vital difference between section 7033, et seq., and section 3939. Sections 7033 to 7052, inclusive, provide in general, a scheme for improving all the public ways of a township as distinguished from the improvement of specific highways. Furthermore, although this is not clear, there seems to be a suggestion in section 7038, and again in section 7033, that the boundaries of the township road district need not be coincident with those of the township. In other words, the road district and the township are quite separate and road district improvements are quite distinct from the specific improvements to which section 3939 refers. See particularly, paragraphs 4, 22 and 23 of said section 3939, all of which describe specific improvements.

For all the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the procedure outlined in sections 3939 and succeeding sections is not applicable to the issuance of bonds in a township road district under section 7035, General Code. The issuance of such bonds, must, by virtue of section 7042 of the General Code, be authorized by a vote of a majority of the electors voting thereon.

For your information I beg to state that sections 3939 to 3954 have been repealed by the late session of the general assembly, and an act substantially identical therewith, by making a few changes therein, has been enacted in their stead. This fact, however, in no way influences the decision of the question submitted to me.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 323.

SHERIFF—RIGHT TO HAVE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS PAY FOR INJURIES INCURRED BY HORSE—PAYMENT TO VETERINARY SURGEON.

The county commissioners under 2997 may pay for the services of a veterinary surgeon, made necessary by the injury to a horse owned by the sheriff while being used by the sheriff in performing his official duty.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 13, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 24, 1911, in which you inquire as follows:

> "May the county commissioners, under section 2997, pay for the services of a veterinary surgeon, made necessary by the injury to a horse owned by the sheriff while same was in use by the sheriff in performing his official duty?"

In reply thereto I desire to say that section 2997 of the General Code, as amended, 102 O. L. 93, provides as follows:

> "In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble-minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided, a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

You will observe that the county commissioners shall make allowance quarterly to each sheriff for many things, among them as follows: "and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office." In the maintenance of a horse the services of a veterinary may become necessary and when a sheriff is performing the duties of his office and it is proper that he should procure the services of a veterinary surgeon for his horse while he is using it in the discharge of his duties, the expenses thereof in my judgment are not only lawful but proper to be charged against the county.

My conclusion, therefore, is that the county commissioners should pay for the services of a veterinary surgeon under the conditions which you named.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 324.

SECRET SERVICE OFFICERS—APPOINTMENT AND COMPENSATION—ACT GRANTING RIGHT OF APPOINTMENT BY PROSECUTOR REPEALED—THE NUGATION OF A REPEALING ACT REVIVES THE REPEALED SECTION.

When a repealing act is held inoperative and void the acts attempted to be repealed thereby remain in force unless legislative expression to the contrary appears.

Under this rule since section 2915, G. C., which provides for the appointment of a secret service officer by the prosecuting attorney is invalid and void and the original sections which it attempted to repeal, 2916, 1541, 6184, 6186, G. C., remain in full force and effect.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 16, 1911.

HON. B. F. ENOS, Prosecuting Attorney, Cambridge, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have received from you the following inquiry dated August 12, 1911:

> "Your opinion as to the matter of appointing secret service officers, in which you hold that section 2915-1 of the General Code, passed April 18th, 1911, is ineffective and void has been received.
>
> "Now, in view of the decision in the 67 O. S. 303, 68 O. S. 273, 59 O. S. 368, 48 O. S. 211 and 5 N. P. N. S. 161, I should like to have your opinion as to whether or not sections 1541, 2915, 2916, 6184, 6185 and 6186 of the General Code remain in full force and effect. In other words, are said sections repealed by the act of the general assembly?
>
> "Please give me your opinion at your earliest convenience and oblige."

My former opinion applied to supplemental section No. 2915-1 and was not that said section was unconstitutional, but that it was inoperative because there was no officer known to the law named by said section to fix the compensation of a secret service officer.

This supplemental section 2915-1 is incorporated in, and a part of House Bill No. 17, passed April 18, 1911, and found in 102 O. L. 77, the title of said act being as follows:

> "To better provide for the administration of criminal justice by amending sections 1541 and 2916 and supplementing section 2915 of the General Code in such manner as to more clearly define the powers and increase the facilities of prosecuting attorneys and to repeal sections 6184, 6185 and 6186 of the General Code."

Section 1541, as it originally stood, was as follows:

> "The judges of the court of common pleas of a county, or the judges of such court in a county in joint session, if they deem it advisable, may appoint either or all of the following:
>
> "First. A court interpreter, who shall take an oath of office, hold his position at the will of such judge or judges, and under the direction of the court, or any judge thereof, shall interpret the testimony of witnesses, translate any writing necessary to be translated in court, or in a cause therein, and perform such other services as are required by the court or a judge thereof. The interpreter shall, without extra compensation, render such services in the circuit court, superior court, probate court, and the court of insolvency, as the judges of those courts may require. He shall receive for his services a compensation fixed by the judges appointing him, not to exceed twelve hundred dollars in any year, or such sum in each particular case as the court requiring his services deems just. If a stipulated salary, such compensation shall be paid monthly from the county treasury, upon the warrant of the county auditor, in other cases at the conclusion of his services, upon the certificate of the judge of the court in which they were rendered.
>
> "Second. A criminal bailiff, who shall be a deputy sheriff and hold his position during the pleasure of the judge or judges of such court. He shall receive compensation to be fixed by such judge or judges at the time of his appointment, not to exceed the amount permitted by law to be allowed court constables in the same court, which shall be paid monthly from the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor.
>
> "Third. A secret service officer for the prosecuting attorney's office, who shall aid the prosecuting attorney in the collection and discovery of testimony to be used in the trial of criminal cases and in matters of a criminal nature. Such appointment may be made for such term as the judge or judges deem advisable, subject to termination at any time for cause sufficient within the judgment of the judge or judges of the court. He shall receive such compensation, payable monthly from the county fund upon the warrant of the county auditor, as the judge or judges so appointing shall determine, not exceeding the rate of fifteen hundred dollars for each year."

It will be seen that the only change made by its amendment was to omit the third paragraph of the said section, authorizing the appointment of a secret service officer for the prosecuting attorney's office by the judge or judges of the common pleas court. The first and second paragraphs of the said section 1541 in the amended act are identical with the first and second sections in the original act.

The only change made by the amendment to section 2916 from said section as it originally stood is to give the prosecuting attorney power to inquire into the commission of crimes in the county. This section, 2916, as amended, is in no way influenced by section 2915-1, unless it be that said supplemental section 2915-1 was intended to give the prosecuting attorney the means with which to exercise the power of inquiry granted him by section 2916, but it can be readily seen that section 2916, as amended, by this act, can stand alone and should be considered independently of section 2915-1, and, therefore, neither my original opinion, nor this opinion, should be considered as casting any doubt upon section 2916, as amended 102 O. L. 78.

It will be noted, however, that the act of April 18th, 1911 (102 O. L. 77), in addition to repealing the original section 2916, also expressly repeals original sections 1541, 6184, 6185 and 6186 of the General Code. Original section 1541 was copied in the first part of this opinion; and the original sections 6184, 6185 and 6186 of the General Code are as follows:

> "Section 6184. The prosecuting attorney in any county, in which the sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage is prohibited, may appoint a secret service officer or officers, to aid in discovering evidence to be used at the trial of cases for violation of local option laws prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor. Such appointment shall be made for such term as the prosecuting attorney deems advisable and subject to termination at any time by the prosecuting attorney.
>
> "Section 6185. If the prosecuting attorney fails to appoint the secret service officer or officers, under the provisions of the next preceding section, within three months after the date on which the prosecuting attorney enters upon the duties of his office, the probate judge of such county may appoint such secret service officer or officers.
>
> "Section 6186. Such secret service officer or officers, appointed as provided in the next two preceding sections, shall not receive for any month a total amount of more than one hundred and twenty-five dollars. If appointed as provided in section sixty-one hundred and eighty-four, such officer or officers shall be paid out of the county fund on the warrant of the prosecuting attorney, or, if appointed as provided in the next preceding section, shall be paid out of the county fund on the warrant of the probate judge."

It will be seen that these sections, prior to the enactment of supplemental section 2915-1, gave the prosecuting attorney in counties in which the sale of intoxicating liquor is prohibited, the power to appoint a secret service officer or officers to aid in securing evidence in cases of violation of local option laws, and also provided for the appointment of such officer by the probate judge in case of the failure of the prosecuting attorney to appoint within a specified time, and also provided for the fixing of the compensation to be paid such secret service officer and for the payment of the same.

It seems clear that it was the intention of the legislature, by the enactment of supplemental section 2915-1, not to restrict or take away from the prosecuting attorneys the power to appoint secret service officers given by sections 6184, 6185 and 6186 of the General Code, in dry counties, nor to preclude the appointment of secret service officers generally, as given by original section 1541; but that the intention was to increase and add to the powers of the prosecuting attorneys as to the appointment of secret service officers; and, instead of having two methods of appointment, namely, one by the prosecuting attorney in dry counties, the other by common pleas judges in all counties, to provide one manner of appointment and one method of fixing compensation of said secret service officers, which would apply throughout the state, and which would place the power of the appointment entirely in the hands of the prosecuting attorneys. This being so, sections 6184, 6185, 6186 and 1541 (so far as said section provides for the appointment of secret service officers) were repealed for the reason that with the enlarged powers given to the prosecuting attorneys by section 2915-1, the old sections were entirely unnecessary; that is, the powers and duties given and imposed by the said original sections were merged and included in the larger powers and duties provided by the new act.

In brief, it is clearly the intention of the legislature to provide more fully for the appointment of secret service officers and not to forbid their appointment or restrict their powers. Consequently, if said section 2915-1 had been held to be unconstitutional and void, the repealing clause of this act (which must be—so far as sections 6184, 6185, 6186 and 1541 are concerned—the repealing clause attached to supplemental section 2915-1) would also fall, and said original sections 6184, 6185, 6186 and 1541 and would remain in full force and effect. (See 67 O. S. 303, 60 O. S. 273, 59 O. S. 368, 48 O. S. 211, 219 and many other decisions in point.)

The only difficulty that has suggested itself to my mind upon this matter is that I have held this supplemental section 2915-1 not to be unconstitutional, but simply inoperative, but the basis of these decisions is that the statute under consideration was void; whether void because unconstitutional or for some other reason makes no difference. In addition, there is a case which seems to me to be directly in point. That is the case of State vs. Schoepf et al, 5. N. P. n. s., 161. This case held that the same ruling applies to inoperative or void acts which applies to unconstitutional acts. The second paragraph of the syllabus in this case is as follows:

> "Where an inoperative or void act, amendatory of a previous valid statute, contains a section attempting to repeal such previous valid statute, said repealing section is also void and said previous valid statute remains in full force and effect as it was prior to said attempted amendment, unless it clearly appears that it was the intention of the legislature to repeal said former statute without reference to whether the attempted amendment was valid or not."

The decision is by Judge Bromwell, of the Hamilton county court of common pleas, and is a well considered and strong opinion. On page 164 he states the exact question we have here very succinctly, as follows:

> "Briefly stated, the issue raised is this: What is the effect upon a valid existing act if an attempt is made to amend it by an inoperative or void act which at the same time attempts to repeal the original valid act? Does it destroy the original act by the attempted repeal and, at the same time, create a new act incapable of enforcement? Or, does it merely render the amendment futile both as to the new matter attempted to be added to the offense, and as to the attempted repeal of the original act?"

and his answer is:

> "Having already decided that the act * * * was inoperative, we now further decide that the repealing section of that act is also inoperative, and the original act stands as it was prior to the attempted amendment."

The reasoning in this case seems to me to be sound, and the holding in it, and also in the present case, consistent with the clearly expressed intention of the legislature; and, therefore, basing my opinion upon the decisions of the supreme court above referred to and upon this last decision from which I have quoted, I would say that, in my judgment, section 2915-1, being inoperative for the reasons pointed out in my former opinion, the repealing of sections 6184, 6185, 6186 and 1541 of the General Code is also inoperative, and that these last sections stand as they did before the passage of said supplemental section 2915-1.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

October 28, 1911.

ADDENDUM.

The foregoing opinion was prepared on August 16, 1911, but was not given out at that time because an action was then about to be brought in the common pleas court of Franklin county to compel the auditor of Franklin county, by mandamus, to issue a warrant for the payment of the salary of a secret service officer appointed by virtue of section 2915-1. Said secret service officer had originally been appointed under the third section of section 1541, and, after the passage of 2915-1, and consequent repeal of the original section 1541, a new appointment was made by the prosecuting attorney under 2915-1, and it was upon this latter appointment that the suit was instituted.

This case was clearly presented to the court and full briefs submitted on behalf of the prosecuting attorney and on behalf of the auditor. The case was tried before Judge Rathmell of the Franklin county common pleas court, and after considering it very carefully, he decided that section 2915-1 was inoperative and void; and he further decided that on account of said section being inoperative and void, section 1541, which was attempted to be repealed by it, was still in force, and that the appointment of the secret service officer made under it was valid, and that such secret service officer was entitled to have a warrant issued for his salary as fixed by the judges in making said original appointment.

I am informed that the circuit court of Richland county issued a mandamus under section 2915-1, yet, as I am advised, the order directing said mandamus to issue was made in a case which was in its nature ex parte. No pleading seems to have been filed on behalf of the defendant auditor, and no briefs submitted; there is no opinion given by the court and nothing to indicate upon what its decision was based; while the decision of Judge Rathmell was the result of the most careful examination and investigation and after having both sides of the controversy fully presented to him by brief. This department will, therefore, follow the opinion of Judge Rathmell, unless his judgment be reversed, and prosecuting attorneys are requested to do likewise.

C 324.

COUNTY RECORDER AND DEPUTY—COMPENSATION--DISPOSITION OF MONEYS RECEIVED ON CONTRACT WITH COMMISSIONERS FOR INDEXING REAL ESTATE—FEE FUND.

A county recorder is obliged under the statutes to index all records of real estate upon the direction of the commissioners, and to keep up such indexing as a part of his official duties. He cannot be allowed any personal compensation therefor, outside of his regular salary and the fees allowed for such work shall be paid into the county treasury.

A contract with such county recorder or with his deputy for such work is invalid. Any moneys received from such contract shall be paid into the county except, where the office is not self sustaining in which case, the amount due as salary to the said recorder or deputy, may be deducted from the moneys received on such contract and the balance paid into the county treasury to the credit of the fee fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 15, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, SAM A. HUDSON, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 11, 1911, you ask the opinion and advice of this department upon the following:

> "Nov. 5, 1906, the commissioners of Crawford county authorized C. F. Matthew, recorder, to make sectional or abstract indexes under the provisions of section 1154, R. S. (2776, G. C.). For services under this contract, said Matthew was paid between March 22, 1907 and March 3, 1910, $6,651.80. Said Matthew paid no part of said sum or any other of the fees earned by him after the first quarter of 1907, into the recorder's fee fund, neither were the salaries of himself and his deputies paid out of the county treasury after first quarter of 1907. In short, he ignored the salary law entirely.
>
> "On the 16th day of April, 1909, the commissioners of said county entered into a contract with one George Matthew, deputy recorder, "to bring up to date the revised numbers of lots, both inlets and outlets in the various lots and tracts of land in the cities, villages and municipalities within said county." The compensation to be paid on this contract was fixed at 10 cents per line. Under this contract, February 7th, 1910, the said George Matthew drew from the county treasury $2,915.20.
>
> "While the contract is worded a little differently, the services rendered by George Matthew were identical with those rendered by Charles Matthew.
>
> "What finding should be made by the state examiner of this department in this case."

I will first consider the duty and the acts of the commissioners and the recorder under sections 2766 and 2767 of the General Code.

Section 2766 provides:

> "When in the opinion of the commissioners of any county they are needed, and they so direct, in addition to alphabetical indexes, the county recorder shall make, in books prepared for that purpose, general indexes to the records of all the real estate in the county by placing under the heads of the original surveyed sections or surveys, or parts of a section or survey, squares, subdivisions, or lots, on the left page of such index book; first, the name of the grantor or grantors; second, next to the right, the name of the grantee or grantees; third, the number and page of the record where the instrument is found recorded; fourth, the character of the instrument, to be followed by a pertinent description of the property conveyed by the deed, lease, or assignment of lease; and on the opposite page, in like manner, all the mortgages, liens, or other incumbrances affecting such real estate. For his services in making such description and noting incumbrances, he shall receive for each tract described five cents, in addition to his other fees.

Section 2767, General Code, provides:

"When brought up and completed, the recorder shall keep up the general indexes described in the next preceding section, or any other indexes authorized by the county commissioners. He shall receive for indexing any lot or parcel of land, ten cents, to be paid from the county treasury."

By virtue of section 2766, General Code, the commissioners are authorized to determine when general indexes are needed, and to direct that the same be provided. When they have so determined and directed "the county recorder shall make" "general indexes to the records." The commissioners cannot exceed the power conferred upon them by statute. When the commissioners of Crawford county directed that sectional or abstract indexes be made, they exercised all the power conferred upon them by statute. Their fixing the compensation was unauthorized and illegal.

The commissioners having directed this work to be done, it was the duty of the recorder to do it. If not completed at the expiration of his term of office his successor should complete the work without further direction of the commissioners. The recorder's fees, until the indexes had been brought up and completed are fixed by section 2766, General Code, at five cents for each tract described, which would be five cents for each transfer or incumbrance of a tract or lot.

The contract of April 16, 1909, entered into with George Matthew, was illegal and unauthorized. It was the duty of the recorder to do this work by the direction of the commissioners under date of November 5, 1906.

"Where the commissioners of a county have directed the county recorder to bring up and complete such general indexes to a given date, and thereafter the recorder keeps up such indexes by entering thereon each instrument as it is recorded, in an action brought by the recorder to recover for such subsequent services, the fact that they were not ordered by the commissioners, is irrelevant."

In re Holiday, 6 Cir. Dec., 751.

When such indexes are brought up and completed, it is the duty of the recorder to keep up such indexes, and then his compensation is fixed by section 2767, General Code, at ten cents per lot or parcel of land indexed.

I now come to the county salary law and the disposition of the fees.

Section 2977 provides as follows:

"All the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected or received by law as compensation for services by a county auditor, county treasurer, probate judge, sheriff, clerk of courts, or recorder, shall be so received and collected for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which they are elected and shall be held as public moneys belonging to such county and accounted for and paid over as such as hereinafter provided."

Section 2978, General Code, provides:

"Each probate judge, auditor, treasurer, clerk of courts, sheriff and recorder, shall charge and collect the fees, costs and percentages, allowances and compensation allowed by law."

Section 2983, General Code, provides:

"At the end of each quarter, each such officer shall pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor, all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by his office during such quarter, for his official services, which money shall be kept in separate funds by the county treasurer, and credited to the office from which they were received."

The provisions of the foregoing sections are broad and comprehensive. They include every fee collected by the officials in their official capacity. The fees due from the county for the making of sectional or abstract indexes are included and should be paid into the county fee fund.

The salary of the recorder is fixed by section 2995, General Code, and section 2996, General Code, provides what that salary shall be for, as follows:

"Such salaries shall be instead of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and all other perquisites of whatever kind which any of such officials may collect and receive, provided that in no case shall the annual salary paid to any such officer exceed six thousand dollars."

The circuit court, in the case of Rutan, et al vs. Tinlin, et al, 20 C. D. page 572, as follows:

"Public officers are not entitled to compensation, in addition to their salary, for services required of them by statute, unless the statute provides therefor in express terms; and as Rev. Stat. 1029 (Lan. 2369) does not expressly so provide, auditors are not entitled to such additional compensation for services in furnishing blanks to assessors."

The recorder is entitled to no further compensation than his salary fixed by section 2995, General Code.

Section 2989, General Code, provides how salaries shall be paid:

"After deducting from the proper fee fund the compensation of all deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers, and other employes, as fixed and authorized herein, each county officer herein named shall receive from the balance therein the annual salary hereinafter provided, payable monthly upon warrant of the county auditor."

The allowance for and compensation of deputies, clerks, and other help is fixed by the following sections:

Section 2981, General Code, provides:

"Such officers may appoint and employ necessary deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers or other employes for their respective offices, fix their compensation and discharge them, and shall file with the county auditor certificates of such action. Such compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate for each office the amount fixed by the commissioners for such office. When so fixed, the compensation of each duly appointed or employed deputy, assistant, bookkeeper, clerk and other employe shall be paid monthly from the county treasury, upon the warrant of the county auditor."

Section 2987. General Code, provides:

"The deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers, and other employes of each of such offices shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, from the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances, and other perquisites or sums of whatever kind collected and paid into the county treasury and credited by the treasurer to the fee fund of such offices, or transferred as hereinbefore provided."

Section 2999, General Code, provides as follows:

"Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to make a county, or an officer thereof, liable to any of the officers named herein or his deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers, or other employes, for the payment of compensation in excess of the amount herein authorized, or except in the manner herein provided."

It is apparent that all fees collected by a recorder in this official capacity must be paid into the county fee fund, and that the salary of the recorder and of his deputy and other assistants shall be paid from the fee fund credited to that office.

A finding should be made against C. F. Matthew for all fees paid him for work done on general indexes on and after January 1, 1907. It appears, however, from the report of Examiner Tallman, attached to your letter, that the recorder's office in Crawford county is not self sustaining. If the other fees of his office were not sufficient to meet the salary of himself and assistants, as provided in the sections quoted, the deficiency can be allowed from the fees paid him for these general indexes and a finding made against him for the balance.

The work done on these general indexes by George Matthew should have been done by the recorder and the fees paid into the fee fund. The only compensation he could draw for his services was that allowed him as deputy recorder. A finding should be made against him for all fees paid him under contract of April 15, 1909, above the allowance made him as deputy recorder. provided such allowance has not been otherwise paid.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 325.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—PUBLICATIONS OF ORDINANCES—NEWSPAPERS AND POSTING—STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

1. Publications of ordinances of a general nature providing for improvements in villages in which two newspapers of opposite politics are published and of general circulation in the municipality shall be published in these papers. 4228, G. C.

2. Such ordinances in villages in which no newspaper is published and in which there is no newspaper having general circulation may be published by posting as provided in 4232, G. C.

3. In villages in which no newspaper is published but in which two newspapers of opposite politics have a general circulation, such ordinances shall be published in these newspapers. (Sec. 4229, G. C.)

4. In villages in which no newspaper is published but in which an independent paper only has a general cirulation such ordinance may be published by posting. (4232, G. C.)

5. In villages in which no newspapers are published but in which one political newspaper and also one independent newspaper have general circulation, such ordinances may be published by posting. (4232, G. C.)

6. In villages in which an independent newspaper only is published and has general circulation and in which also two newspapers of opposite political faith have general cirulation such ordinances may be published in the political papers. (4229, G. C.)

7. Villages in which an independent newspaper only is published and has general circulation are not within any of the provisions of the General Code.

Applying the principle of Allen vs. Russell, 39 O. S. 336, stating that "Revised and consolidated statutes shall, if possible, receive their original interpretation," the situation may be governed by section 1695, R. S., of which 4227 and 4230 are a codification and such ordinances may be published in the independent newspaper.

8. In villages in which an independent and political newspaper are published and have a general circulation therein, under the rule of construction aforesaid publication may be made in either of such papers.

9. The same rule applies to villages in which one political newspaper is published and has a general circulation therein, where no other paper is published or circulated.

10. In villages wherein a political newspaper is published and has a general circulation therein, and in which an independent paper also has general circulation but is not published therein, under this same rule such ordinances may be published in either of said papers.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor of August 7th, wherein you state:

"We respectfully request your opinion upon the following questions relative to the legal publication of the ordinances and resolutions of village councils. We would ask how publication of ordinances of a general nature or providing for improvements shall be made under the following conditions:

"First: Villages in which two newspapers of opposite politics are published and of general circulation within the municipality.

"Second: Villages in which no newspaper is published nor no paper having general circulation.

"Third: Villages in which no paper is published, but two papers of opposite politics have a general circulation therein.

"Fourth: Villages in which no paper is published, but an independent paper only has a general circulation therein.

"Fifth: Villages in which no paper is published, but one political newspaper and also one independent newspaper have general circulation therein.

"Sixth: Villages in which an independent paper only is published and has general circulation therein, as do also two newspapers of opposite political faith.

"Seventh: Villages in which an independent paper is published and has general cirulation therin, but no other paper has a general circulation or is published therein.

"Eighth: Villages in which an independent and political paper are published and have a general circulation therein.

"Ninth: Villages in which one political paper is published and has general circulation therein and no other paper circulates or is published in the municipality.

"Tenth: Villages in which a political paper is published and has general circulation, and also an independent paper has general circulation but is not published therein.

"These are a few of the many conditions obtaining in the 700 villages of the state and we ask an interpretation of the laws relating to said publications in order that we may advise the proper parties by printed circular."

Section 4227 of the General Code provides:

"Ordinances, resolutions and by-laws shall be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer and clerk of the council. Ordinances of a general nature, or providing for improvements shall be published as hereinafter provided before going into operation. No ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of ten days after the first publication of such notice. As soon as a by-law, resolution or ordinance is passed and signed, it shall be recorded by the clerk in a book to be furnished by the council for the purpose."

Section 4228 of the General Code provides:

"Ordinances and resolutions requiring publication shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics, published and of general circulation in such municipality, if such there be, and shall be published in a newspaper printed in the German language if there is in such municipality such a paper having a bona fide paid circulation within such municipality of not less than one thousand copies. Proof of such circulation shall be made by the affidavit of the proprietor or editor of such paper, and shall be filed with the clerk of the council."

Section 4229 of the General Code provides:

"Except as otherwise provided in this title, in all municipal corporations the statements, ordinances, resolutions, orders, proclamations, notices and reports required by this title, or the ordinances of a municipality to be published, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation therein, if there are such in the municipality, and for the following times: The statement of receipts and disbursements required shall be published once; the ordinances and resolutions once a week for two consecutive weeks; proclamations of elections once a week for two consecutive weeks; notices of contracts and of sale of bonds once a week for four consecutive weeks; all other matters shall be published once."

Section 4230 of the General Code provides:

"When ordinances are revised, codified, rearranged and published in book form and certified as correct by the clerk of council and the mayor, such publication shall be sufficient publication, and the ordinance or several ordinances so published in book form, under appropriate titles, chapters and sections, shall be held the same in law as though they had been published in a newspaper or newspapers. A new ordinance so published in book form, which has not been published according to law, and which contains entirely new matter shall be published as heretofore required by law. Such revision and codification may be made under appropriate titles, chapters, and sections, and in one ordinance containing one or more subjects."

Section 4231 of the General Code provides:

"Immediately after the expiration of the period of such publication, the clerk shall enter on the record of ordinances, in a blank to be left for such purpose, under the recorded ordinances, a certificate stating in which newspaper and of what dates such publication was made, and sign his name thereto officially, and such certificate shall be prima facie evidence that legal publication of such ordinance has been made."

Section 4232 of the General Code in part provides:

"In municipal corporations in which no newspaper is published, it shall be sufficient publication of ordinances, resolutions, statements, orders, proclamations, notices and reports, required by this title to be published, to post up copies thereof at not less than five of the most public places in the corporation, to be determined by the council, for a period of not less than fifteen days prior to the taking effect thereof."

Section 1695 of the Revised Statutes provides:

"By-laws, resolutions and ordinances shall be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer and clerk of the council. Ordinances of a general nature, or providing for improvements shall be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the corporation; if a daily, twice and if a weekly once, before going into operation. No ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of ten days after the first publication of such notice. And as soon as any by-law, resolution or ordinance is passed and signed, it shall be recorded by the clerk in a book to be furnished by the council for the purpose, provided that whenever ordinances shall be revised, codified, rearranged and published in book form and certified as correct by the city or village clerk and the mayor thereof, such publication in book form shall be taken and held to be in lieu of publishing the same in a newspaper or newspapers as required by law, and shall be a sufficient publication to all intents and purposes, and the ordinance or several ordinances so published in book form under appropriate titles, chapters and sections, shall be held the same in law as though they had been published in a newspaper or newspapers, provided that any new ordinance so published in book form, which has never been published according to law, and which contains entirely new matter shall be published as heretofore required by law."

Sections 4227 and 4230 of the General Code supra purport to be a codification of section 1695 of the Revised Statutes above set out.

Coming now to answer your questions I shall do so in the order in which they are stated, taking each one separately.

First. Your inquiry in reference to publication of ordinances of a general nature or providing for improvements in villages in which two newspapers of opposite politics are published and of general circulation within the municipality.

This condition is fully provided for in section 4228, General Code supra.

Second. You inquiry as to the publication of such ordinances in villages in which no newspaper is published and in which there is no newspaper having general circulation.

This condition is fully provided for in section 4228, General Code supra.

Third. Your inquiry as to the publication of such ordinances in villages in which no newspaper is published but in which two newspapers of opposite politics have a general circulation.

This condition is fully met by the provisions of section 4229, General Code supra.

Fourth. Your inquiry as to the publication of such ordinances in villages in which no newspaper is published but in which an independent newspaper only has a general circulation.

This condition may be met by the provisions of section 4232 of the General Code supra.

Fifth. Your inquiry as to the publication of ordinances in villages in which no newspapers are published but in which one political newspaper and also one independent newspaper have general circulation therein.

This condition may be met by the provisions of section 4232 of the General Code supra.

Sixth. Your inquiry as to the publication of such ordinances in villages in which an independent newspaper only is published and has general circulation therein, and in which also two newspapers of opposite political faith have general circulation.

This condition is fully met by the provisions of section 4229 of the General Code supra.

Seventh. Your inquiry as to the publication of ordinances in villages in which an independent newspaper is published and has general circulation therein, but in which no other newspaper is either published or has a general circulation.

This condition is not met by the provisions of either sections 4228, 4229 or 4232 of the General Code supra, yet section 4227 of the General Code supra requires that ordinances of a general nature or providing for improvements shall be published * * * before going into operation. The word "publish" does not necessarily mean that the publication shall take place in a newspaper, yet the section further provides that no ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of ten days after the first publication of such notice. Furthermore, section 4230 provides that "when ordinances are revised * * and published in book form * * * such publication shall be sufficient publication, and the ordinance * * * so published in book form * * * shall be the same in law as though they had been published in a newspaper or newspapers."

We are, therefore, confronted with the proposition that publication must take place before the ordinances shall take effect, and yet there is no provision as to how such publications shall be made. In other words, there is an ambiguity in the statute. The proper interpretation of the statutes that are revised and consolidated is set forth in the case of Allen vs. Russell, 39 Ohio State 336, at page 337, wherein the court says:

> "But where all the general statutes of a state, or all on a particular subject, are revised and consolidated, there is a strong presumption that the same construction which the statutes received, or, if their interpretation had been called for, would certainly have received, before revision and consolidation, should be applied to the enactment in its revised and consolidated form, although the language may have been changed."

It seems to me, therefore, that it is necessary in order to determine the proper meaning of sections 4227 and 4230 of the General Code to refer back to the section of the Revised Statutes, which in this instance we find is section 1695, and in which we find that the language of section 4227, General Code, to wit:

> "Ordinances of a general nature, or providing for improvements shall be published as hereinafter provided before going into operation." was prior to the codification as follows:

> "Ordinances of a general nature, or providing for improvements shall be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the corporation; if a daily, twice, if a weekly, once before going into operation."

Finding such language in the Revised Statutes which fully covers the conditions which the present condition of the Code leaves uncovered, I am of the opinion, that it is necessary to reach such words in section 4227, General Code supra; therefore, I am of opinion that the publication of such ordinances shall be made in the independent newspaper.

(Conditions stated in the fourth and fifth questions of this opinion are likewise within the provisions of section 4227 supra with the language restored to such section as above stated.)

Eighth. Your inquiry as to how publication is to be made of such ordinances in villages in which an independent and a political newspaper are published and have a general circulation therein.

I am of opinion in view of my reading of section 4227, General Code supra, with the necessary change of the language thereof, that the ordinances may be published in either the one or the other of said papers.

Ninth. Your inquiry as to the publication of such ordinances in villages in which one political newspaper is published and has general circulation therein, and no other newspaper circulates or is published in the municipality.

In view of my interpretation of section 4227, General Code supra with the necessary change of the language thereof, I am of opinion that the ordinances shall be published in such newspaper.

Tenth. Your inquiry as to the publication of such ordinances in villages in which a political newspaper is published and has general circulation and also in which an independent newspaper has general circulation but is not published therein.

I am of opinion in view of my reading of section 4227, General Code, with the necessary change in the language thereof that the ordinances may be published in either the one or the other of said papers.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 325.

COUNTY PROSECUTOR—SALARY—NO COMPENSATION BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES FOR SERVICES RENDERED THAT BODY.

The county prosecutor is the statutory legal adviser of the township trustees and as his compensation is to be provided for from the county treasury he cannot be further compensated by the township trustees for legal services rendered that body.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1911.

Bureau or Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 24th, in which communication you inquire as follows:

> "May the prosecuting attorney receive from the trustees of a township of his county compensation for conducting a suit in behalf of said township or any of its officers, in addition to his annual salary?"

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that section 2917 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party, and no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve. He shall be the legal adviser for all township officers and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees duly entered upon their journal, in which the compensation to be paid for such legal services shall be fixed. Such compensation shall be paid from the township fund."

Section 3003 of the General Code provides for the salary of the prosecuting attorney and further provides that such salary shall be paid in equal monthly installments from the general fund and shall be paid in full payment of all services, etc.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the prosecuting attorney cannot receive from the trustees of his township or any other officer of any township of his county any compensation for conducting or defending a suit in behalf of the said township or any of its officers.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 326.

CORONER—COMPENSATION FOR TRANSCRIBING RECORD—NO POWER TO ENGAGE OFFICIAL STENOGRAPHER AT EXPENSE OF COUNTY.

There is no statute authorizing the coroner to engage a stenographer and when he does, it must be at his own expense.

When upon the certification of the coroner, compensation is paid to a stenographer from the county treasury, a finding should be made against the coroner for the amount so paid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, SAM A. HUDSON, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of July 7, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion upon the following:

"A coroner employes a stenographer to take notes of the testimony of the witnesses in coroner's inquest, certifies and pays from the county treasury upon the allowance of the county commissioners a per diem for taking the notes and the regular rates per folio for transcribing the same. The coroner himself received from the county full pay at 10 cents per 100 words for necessary writings. What finding should be made under such circumstances? Should it be against the stenographer for the entire amount received, or should it be for the same amount against the coroner, or should it be against the coroner for the amount received by him for necessary writings?"

The compensation and fees of a coroner are fixed by section 2866, General Code, which provides as follows:

"Coroners shall be allowed the following fees: For view of dead body, three dollars; for drawing all necessary writings, and return thereof, for every one hundred words, ten cents; for traveling, each mile, to the place of view, ten cents; when performing the duties of sheriff, the same fees as are allowed to sheriffs for similar services."

Part of the duies of a coroner are found in section 2856, General Code, and it is in this section that I find the only reference in the statutes to a stenographer of a coroner.

Section 2856 provides:

"When informed that the body of a person whose death is supposed to have been caused by violence has been found within the county, the coroner shall appear forthwith at the place where the body is, issue subpoenas for such witnesses as he deems necessary, administer to them the usual oath, and proceed to inquire how the deceased came to his death, whether by violence from any other person or persons, by whom, whether as principals or accessories before or after the fact, and all circumstances relating thereto. The testimony of such witnesses shall be reduced to writing, by them respectively subscribed, except when stenographically reported by the official stenographer of the coroner, and, with the finding the recognizances thereinafter mentioned, if any, returned by the coroner to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county. If he deems it necessary, he shall cause such witnesses to enter into recognizance, in such sum as may be proper, for their appearance at the succeeding term of the court of common pleas of the county to give testimony concerning the matter. The coroner may require any and all such witnesses to give security for their attendance, and if they or any of them neglect to comply with his requirements, he shall commit such person to the prison of the county, until discharged by due course of law."

This section provides that when the testimony of a witness at an inquest is stenographically reported by the official stenographer of the coroner, the witness need not sign the same. It does not authorize the payment from the county of the compensation of the stenographer. There is no statute empowering a coroner to employ a stenographer, and if he does so it must be at his expense.

It is a well known principle of law that no officer, or person, can draw compensation from public funds except by authority of statute or ordinance.

The allowance to the coroner of ten cents per one hundred words for a necessary writings is the only proper charge to be paid from the county for such writings. The amount paid to the stenographer was illegal. The allowance was made upon certificate of the coroner for work for which he drew the full pay. The payment by such certificate was unauthorized and the finding should be made against the coroner for the amount so paid.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

328.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—DEPUTY SHERIFF AND COURT CONSTABLE—DEPUTY CLERK OF COURTS AND COURT CONSTABLES.

The offices of deputy clerk of courts and of court constable are not of themselves incompatible nor are those of deputy sheriff and court constable. Nor is such a union of official services prohibited by statute. Such incumbents, however, cannot be paid twice for the same services.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, SAM A. HUDSON, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of May 27, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "A deputy sheriff and deputy clerk of courts, in addition to their regular salaries of such deputies, receive compensation from the county treasury for services as court constables. What should be the finding of this department?"

The provisions of the statute governing court constables are as follows: Section 1692, General Code:

> "When, in the opinion of the court, the business thereof so requires, each court of common pleas, circuit court, superior court, insolvency court, in each county of the state, and, in counties having at the last or any future federal census more than seventy thousand inhabitants, the probate court may appoint one or more constables to preserve order, attend the assignment of cases in counties where more than two common pleas judges regularly hold court at the same time, and discharge such other duties as the court requires. When so directed by the court, each constable shall have the same powers as sheriffs to call and impanel jurors, except in capital cases."

Section 1693, General Code:

> "Each constable shall receive the compensation fixed by the judge or judges of the court making the appointment. In counties where four or more judges regularly hold court, such compensation shall not exceed twelve hundred and fifty dollars each year, in counties where more than one judge and not more than three judges hold court at the same time, not to exceed one thousand dollars each year, and in counties where only one judge holds court, two and one-half dollars each day, and shall be paid monthly from the county treasury on the order of the court. Such court constable, when placed by the court in charge of the assignment of cases, may be allowed further compensation not to exceed one thousand dollars as the court by its order entered on the journal determines."

The duties of a deputy sheriff and of a deputy clerk of courts are to assist and do the work of sheriff and clerk of courts respectively.

The general duties of a sheriff are prescribed in sections 2833 and 2834 of the General Code, which read as follows:

> "Section 2833. Each sheriff shall preserve the public peace and cause all persons guilty of breach thereof, within his knowledge or view, to enter into recognizance with sureties to keep the peace and to appear at the succeeding term of the common pleas court of the proper county and commit them to jail in case of refusal. He shall return a transcript of all his proceedings with the recognizance so taken to such court and shall execute all warrants, writs and other processes to him directed by proper and lawful authority. He shall attend upon the common pleas court and the circuit court during their sessions, and, when required, upon the probate court. In the execution of the duties required of him by law, the sheriff may call to his aid such person or persons or power of a county as may be necessary. Under the direction and control of the county commissioners, he shall have charge of the courthouse.
>
> "Section 2834. The sheriff shall execute every summons, order or other process, make return thereof as required by law and exercise the powers conferred and perform the duties enjoined upon him by statute and by common law."

The general duties of a clerk of courts is found in section 2874, General Code, which provides:

> "The clerk shall indorse on each pleading or paper in a cause filed in his office the time of filing, enter all orders, decrees, judgments and proceedings of the courts of which he is by law the clerk, make a complete record of each cause unless by law or by order of the court such record is dispensed with, and pay over to the proper parties all moneys coming into his hands as clerk."

The constitution has provisions preventing the same person holding two of certain offices. Neither of these provisions apply to the question in hand.

Section 11 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "No person shall hold at the same time by appointment or election more than one of the following offices: sheriff, county auditor, county treasurer, clerk of the court of common pleas, county recorder, prosecuting attorney, probate judge, and justice of the peace."

Your question has two phases: First, the right of a deputy sheriff to act as court constable and to draw compensation for each position; second, the right of a deputy clerk of courts to act as court constable and to receive compensation for each office.

The first proposition has been decided in the case of Wolf vs. Shaffer, 18 Ohio Dec., 303, the syllabus of which case is as follows:

> "The same person may, at the same time, hold the positions of deputy sheriff and court constable, neither of which is a public office as that term is known to the law, and such incumbent may lawfully receive the emoluments peculiar to each, provided he is not paid twice for the same service.
>
> "A person holding the appointment of deputy sheriff is not ipeo facto, required to present himself to the court, at the expense of the sheriff, in that capacity, and the court may very properly appoint him court constable as these offices are not incompatible."

A note to the above decisions states that it was affirmed without report by the circuit court on December 6, 1906.

This decision was made before the salary law went into effect. The court, on page 306 of opinion, discusses the effect of the salary law and holds that it will not change the rule therein laid down.

"* * * and under the new salary law it is possible for the same person to be deputy sheriff and court constable and draw pay in both capacities, provided he is not paid twice for the same service."

Second, the right of a deputy clerk of courts to act as court constable. The statute provides that no person shall hold the office of sheriff and clerk of courts at the same time. The court constable is not a sheriff, nor deputy sheriff, although performing similar duties, such as preserving order, attending court; neither is he a clerk of courts, nor deputy, although he may attend to the assignment of cases for trial. As he is neither a deputy sheriff nor deputy clerk of courts the statute, section 11, above quoted, would not prohibit a deputy clerk of courts holding the position of court constable.

If the two positions are incompatible they cannot be held by the same person although the statute is silent thereon.

The rule of incompatibility of office is laid down in the opinion of Dustin, J., in case of State vs. Gerbert, 12 C. C. N. S. 274, on page 275 as follows:

"Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon, the other; or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

Applying this rule to the case at hand. A court constable is neither subordinate to, nor a check upon the position of deputy clerk of courts, nor of a deputy sheriff. Whether it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both, will depend upon the amount of work to be done in each position. There are many counties in this state in which such work could be done by the same person. It is for those who appoint these officers and fix their compensation to determine whether or not it is physically impossible for the same person to fill both positions. The law does not prevent it.

The offices of deputy clerk of courts and of court constable are not of themselves incompatible; neither are the offices of deputy sheriff and court constable incompatible. They may be held respectively by the same person. Such person, however, cannot draw compensation twice for the same service; that is, he cannot be paid for performing certain duties as a deputy sheriff or deputy clerk of courts, and then be paid for the same work as a court constable. The service performed in each capacity must be separate and distinct from the other.

Compensation can be drawn from the county treasury by the same person as deputy sheriff and court constable; and also as deputy clerk of courts and as court constable.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 330.

SHERIFF'S PROCLAMATION OF ELECTIONS—COMPLIANCE WITH STATUTORY FORMS AND NON-COMPLIANCE WITH THE FORMS PRESCRIBED BY THE BUREAU OF INSPECTION AND SUPERVISION OF PUBLIC OFFICES.

A sheriff in making proclamations of elections in even numbered years is to be guided primarily by statutory directions and may therefore include in such proclamations a detailed list of the polling places in the county notwithstanding the fact that the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices has prescribed a different form.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 31, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of August 1, asking for my opinion upon the following:

> "On page 20 of a pamphlet issued by this department, entitled, 'Instructions for Legal Advertising and Forms,' issued by this department September 1, 1909, you will note a form for sheriff's proclamation and that the same reads that electors will assemble at the places duly appointed for holding elections in their several townships, etc. Section 4825, General Code, provides that the sheriff shall give notice by proclamation through his county of the time and place of holding such election.
>
> "Kindly give us your opinion as to whether the form of notice as found on page 20 of said pamphlet complies with said section as to publishing the place of holding election, or whether the sheriff should give a detailed list of the voting places in each precinct. If you should hold that the form in the pamphlet is sufficient compliance with the law, what finding should be made by the examiners of this department who find that sheriffs have published a long detailed list of the voting places in each township, ward or precinct?"

As you state, the form on page 20 of the pamphlet referred to does not designate the places of holding elections in the odd numbered years, save by referring to them as "places duly appointed for holding elections in the several townships, wards and precincts." The statute under which the proclamation is to be issued is 4827 of the General Code (not 4825, which applies to notices of election for presidential electors).

Section 4827 provides as follows:

> "At least fifteen days before the holding of any such general election, the sheriff of each county shall give notice by proclamation throughout his county of the time and place of holding such election and the officers at that time to be chosen. One copy of the proclamation shall be posted at each place where elections are appointed to be held, and such proclamation shall also be inserted in a newspaper published in the county."

Notice of three things must be given by the sheriff to the electors: 1. The time of the election. 2. Places of election. 3. Officers to be chosen.

The time of holding the elections are fixed by law. All persons are presumed to know the law. Notice required by statute as to this item, then, is for the purpose of acquainting the electors with things they are already supposed to know.

The officers to be elected at a general election are also safe in certain cases which might arise by the necessity of filling a vacancy supposed to be known by the electors. The statutes state what officers shall be elected in even numbered years, and the notice as to this item would seem to be in a strict legal sense superfluous.

On the other hand the places of holding elections are not fixed by law. In registration cities such places are determined by the board of deputy state supervisors of elections; in other cities by the council, and in township precincts by the township trustees (Section 4844, General Code). I have searched in vain for any statutory provision authorizing or directing deputy state supervisors, council or township trustees to notify the electors in any manner of the places they have severally fixed upon for holding elections. Apparently the dissemination of this necessary knowledge is left to chance.

However, the sheriff is required in the proclamation to notify electors as to the place of elections. The peculiar condition of the statutes would seem to indicate that this item is of more importance than the other two. In practice, of course, this is not so, and I think it can be stated as a fact that electors are usually more familiar with the polling place of their ward, precinct or township than they are with respect to the officers to be elected.

It is perfectly well settled, of course, that the failure of the sheriff, or other officers charged with like duties, to issue and publish the necessary election proclamation does not vitiate such an election, unless it can be shown that because of such failure electors did not have a fair opportunity to record their choice. In other words, courts have not regarded election proclamations as of great importance in the machinery of elections. We are not considering this aspect of the question, however. We might concede that it might not be necessary for a sheriff to publish a detailed list of the polling places in the county without deciding that if he did publish such a detailed list he or the newspaper publishing it would be liable as for an excessive publication.

The question is one of power or authority rather than one of necessity; of the maximum power rather than the minimum power.

Because there is no other way legally to acquaint the electors of the places of holding elections in the county, I am constrained to hold that it is perfectly proper for a sheriff to include in his proclamation of elections a detailed list of the polling places in the county, and in so holding I do not wish to be thought as criticizing the form as promulgated by the bureau. This in almost every conceivable case would be entirely sufficient on account of the principle of law above referred to. The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, however, has no power to prescribe exactly what shall be published by a sheriff in his proclamation. He is to be guided in making such publication only by the statutes.

For the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that a sheriff may lawfully include in his proclamation of elections in even numbered years a detailed list of the polling places in his county and that in such cases the examiners of the department of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices should make no finding whatever.

I might add that the above statements and conclusion apply as well to the publication under section 4825 as to the publication under 4827.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

A 331.

CHIEF OF POLICE—FEES IN MAYOR'S COURT—RIGHT TO RETAIN.

For all services in a mayor's court which a chief of police is called upon to perform and for which if performed a constable fee is provided by the sections relating to constables, that fee should control. Where a chief of police is called upon to perform a service for which no fee is provided in the case of constables, and for the same service a fee is provided in the case of a sheriff, the latter measure shall control.

A fee taxed in favor of a chief of police may, when paid in, be turned over to the chief and retained by him personally in addition to his salary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 30, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 5th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following questions:

> "1. Under section 4534 of the General Code, as amended June 17, 1911, what, if any, fee may legally be taxed in favor of the chief of police or his deputies in cases other than those arising out of violations of ordinances?
>
> "2. May such fee in these cases be taxed in favor of a patrolman of a city police department, and if so, may such patrolman retain such fee in addition to his regular salary?
>
> "3. In case any fee may legally be taxed under said amended section in favor of any member of the police department of cities, including its chief, may any such member retain such fee in addition to his salary, or must same be paid into the city treasury?"

Said amended section 4534 of the General Code (102 O. L., 476) provides in part as follows:

> * * * "The fees of the mayor in all cases, excepting those arising out of violation of ordinances, shall be the same as those allowed the justices of the peace for similar services and the fees of the chief of police or his deputies in all cases, excepting those arising out of violations of ordinances, shall be the same as those allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases."

The entire section relates to the criminal jurisdiction of the mayor and applies to cities in which there is no police court. The fees "allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases" are plainly the fees allowed such officials in criminal cases. The following statutory provision determines these fees as applicable to the two officers named: Section 2845, as amended 102 O. L., 277-285:

> "For the services hereinafter specified, when rendered, the sheriff shall charge and collect the following fees and no more; * * * warrant to arrest, each person named in the writ, one dollar; attachment for contempt, each person named in the writ, seventy-five cents; * * * subpoena, each person named in the writ, twenty-five cents; venire, each person named in the writ, twenty-five cents; summoning each juror, other than on venire, ten cents; * * * all summons, writs, notice or notices, for the first name, seventy-five cents; and for each additional name, twenty-five cents; in addition to the fee for service and return the sheriff shall be authorized to charge on each summons, writ, order or notice, except as otherwise specifically provided by law, a fee of eight cents per mile going and returning * * *; taking bail bond, twenty-five cents; jail fees for receiving, discharging or surrendering each prisoner, to be charged but once in each case, fifty cents; taking a prisoner before a judge or court per day, seventy-five cents; * * * calling jury, ten cents; calling each witness, five cents." * * *

Section 3347 of the General Code provides:

"For services rendered, duly elected and qualified constables shall be entitled to receive the following fees: For service and return of copies, orders of arrest, warrant * * * or mittimus, forty cents for each person named in the writ; service and return of summons, twenty-five cents for each person named in the writ; service and return of subpoena, twenty-five cents for one person, service of each additional person named in the subpoena, ten cents; service of execution on goods or body, four per cent.; * * * on each day's attendance before a justice of the peace, or jury trial, one dollar; each day's attendance before justice of the peace on criminal trial, one dollar; * * *; summoning jury, one dollar; mileage, twenty cents for the first mile, and five cents per mile for each additional mile; assistants in criminal causes, one dollar and fifty cents per day each; transporting and sustaining prisoners, allowance made by the magistrate and paid on his certificate; serving all other writs or notices not herein named, forty cents and mileage as in other cases; copies of all writs, notices, orders or affidavits served, twenty-five cents; * * * each day's attendance on the grand jury, two dollars."

It is apparent at a glance that the fees of the sheriff and those of the constable are different in nearly every instance for services which may be rendered in a criminal case; there is, therefore, no such thing as "fees allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases."

Amended section 4534 may be construed so as to allow the taxation in favor of the chief of police of either the fees allowed a sheriff for similar services or those allowed a constable, as the mayor taxing the fees might, in his discretion, determine. Such a construction, however, would at once destroy the validity of the section. It would impose in the magistrate the arbitrary power to tax a higher fee against one litigant and a lower fee for the same services against another. The power would be arbitrary because no guide is furnished by the statute as to the class of cases in which the sheriff's fees shall be taxed and as to those in which the constable's fees shall be taxed against a litigant or a defendant. Such arbitrariness is violative of that provision of the fourteenth amendment of the federal constitution which forbids the several states to deny persons in their respective jurisdictions the equal protection of the law. Therefore this construction must be rejected.

At first glance it might seem that the rejection of this construction destroys the only possible meaning of the section. However, the legislature will be presumed to have intended something definite. I would not assume to hold any statute void for indefiniteness, although in an extreme case a court might do so.

It should at least be the duty of the administrative officers affected by the statute to find its most probable meaning and to adhere to that meaning so long as the invalidity of the statute is not judicially determined.

On careful consideration of the amended section I can conceive of but one meaning other than that already referred to and rejected which can be inferred from the ambiguous phraseology thereof. In seeking for such a meaning I have had regard to the remainder of the section as above quoted, which relates to the fees of the mayor and provides that these fees shall be "the same as those allowed justices of the peace for similar services." Now it is, I think, obvious that the services rendered by a mayor in his magisterial and judicial capacity are in nearly all respects similar to those required of a justice of the peace in such capacities. Evidently then the legislature was seeking to authorize the taxation of costs in a mayor's court by the same rule as it had already authorized the taxation of costs in the court most nearly like that of a mayor, viz., that of a justice of the peace. This intention then may be fairly imputed to the legislation as its controlling motive. Applying it to the exact question it is at once seen that a chief of police is more like a constable than he is like a sheriff. He is an officer of a court of limited jurisdiction just as is the constable. He ordinarily exercises his executive functions within a limited territory just as does the constable. His office lacks the common law dignity of that of the sheriff, nor is it one created by the constitution of the state, in which respect it is similar to that of constable and dissimilar to that of sheriff.

For these reasons then I am of the opinion that for all services which a chief of police is called upon to perform, and for which, if performed by a constable a fee is provided by the sections relating to the constable, that fee should control.

Such a holding does not entirely reject the word "sheriff and" in the section—at least not necessarily. There may be, and doubtless are, many minor differences between the duties of the constable and those of the chief of police. Such difference may cause the catalogue of fees prescribed for constables to be incomplete as applied to the duties of a chief of police. If that is the case then, and in such case only, would the chief of police, in my opinion, be entitled to the fees of the sheriff for such services, if such fees are prescribed by statute relating to the sheriff. At least I believe this to have been the intention of the legislature. As strengthening the conclusion thus reached permit me to point out the difference between section 2845 and section 2347, General Code, with respect to the item of mileage.

A sheriff is entitled to eight cents per mile going and returning; a constable is entitled to twenty cents for the first mile and five cents per mile for each additional mile. There is a reason for this difference between the two officers. The sheriff in the ordinary course of his official duty is called upon to serve writs throughout a county, and a constable in a great majority of cases confines his activities to the township, or at least to an adjoining township. Ordinarily then, the constable travels shorter distances than does the sheriff and for this reason he is given a greater mileage upon the first mile than upon the other miles traveled by him, while the sheriff is compensated by the same mileage fee for every mile he travels. This fact illustrates the controlling principle which has actuated the legislature in passing these statutes. That principle is that compensation for specific services is to be measured by the kind of services to be rendered as determined in turn by the manner in which the particular officer customarily discharges his duties; that is to say, the general assembly has striven to make the fees appropriate in each case. That being the case, it is fair to presume that the legislature intended that the controlling fee taxable to a chief of police under section 4534 should be that of the constable—the appropriate fee.

By reason of all the foregoing I am of the opinion that in cases other than those arising out of violations of ordinances, the fees of a constable should be taxed in favor of the chief of police under section 4534, General Code, as amended, unless section 3347, which prescribes the fees of a constable fails to provide a fee for the specific service performed by the chief of police; in which case the chief is entitled to the fee provided for the sheriff by section 2845 as amended.

Answering your second question, I beg to state that in my opinion such a fee may not lawfully be taxed in favor of a patrolman of a city police department. He is not the "deputy" of the chief of police unless he is made so by ordinance. One is a deputy, who has authority to perform all and singular the duties of his principal. Section 9, General Code. Ordinarily a mere patrolman would not have all the powers and duties of a chief of police. Ordinarily also, there is no such officer as "deputy chief of police." The existence of deputies, however, in the city government, is recognized in the municipal code, especially by section 4479, which speaks of "deputies in the office of the city auditor and city treasurer." Council has general power under section 4214, General Code, to determine the number of officers in each department of the city government. It is my opinion that council may constitute an incumbent of any position in the police department the "deputy" of the chief, but that in the absence of any such legislation by council no chief could be said to have a "deputy."

Answering your third question, I beg to state that in my opinion the fee, which by virtue of section 4534, as amended, may be taxed to and in the name of the chief of police or his deputy as defined above, may be retained by the person in whose favor it is taxed in addition to his salary, and need not be paid into the city treasury.

Your third question involves another reconsideration of the two cases of Portsmouth vs. Millstead and Matthews vs. Delaware, the decisions in which have been the subject of advice by this department to the bureau in the past. It will be recalled that the last opinion emanating from this department upon these two cases distinguished them upon the following ground: In Portsmouth vs. Millstead it was assumed by the court that the right to tax fees in the name of the chief of police existed, and the question was simply as to whether or not the city might recover the fees taxed in his name and retained by him personally. The court did not directly pass upon the question as to whether the fees could lawfully be taxed in the first instance. In Matthews vs. Delaware, however, the circuit court in an action brought by the chief to recover fees paid by him into the city treasury, held that there was no right of recovery for the reason that there was no right to tax fees in his name in the first instance. If the court had been able to hold by virtue of a statute like section 4534, as amended, that the fees had originally been taxed in the name of the chief of police, its decision would not necessarily have been the same, and certainly if it had followed the reasoning of Portsmouth vs. Millstead an opposite opinion might have been reached.

Inasmuch as both of these circuit court decisions have been affirmed without report by the supreme court they must both, for reasons pointed out in the previous opinion, be regarded as correct statements of the law. Therefore, the sole question is as to whether or not the reasoning of Portsmouth vs. Millstead is applicable to section 4534, as amended, and to section 4213, General Code, which provides that "all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury." The decision in question is reported in 8 C. C. n. s. 114. I shall not quote from it. Suffice it to say that it is decided upon the following reasoning:

Section 126, Municipal Code, now 4213, General Code, does not confer upon municipal corporations the power to provide salaries for any of its officers who have extra municipal duties to perform, which shall be in lieu of all fees which such officers might receive by reason of the performance of such extra municipal duties. Of itself and in itself it is not to be construed as authorizing a city to require any of its officers having such duties to perform to pay fees arising therefrom, and pertaining to the extra municipal functions of their offices, into the city treasury. The true meaning of the section is that a municipal corporation may not provide that the fees payable under statutes or ordinances to municipal officers for purely municipal duties shall be retained by such officers in addition to the fixed salaries provided for them by ordinance. In a word, the section does not relate to fees in state cases and other matters not local at all. The distinction recognized in this case is the fundamental one between the two kinds of functions of a municipal corporation and the officers thereof. It is well recognized that a municipality partakes both of the nature of an independent corporate body having functions purely local and municipal to discharge and of a territorial governmental subdivision within and for which the police power of the state itself is exercised. In like manner the powers and duties of the mayor and chief of police, the principal magisterial and executive officers of the city, possess this dual nature. The mayor is an ex-officio justice of the peace with criminal jurisdiction territorially coextensive with the boundaries of the county. In the exercise of this jurisdiction he furthers no municipal purpose but acts as the agent and officer of the state. So also the chief of police, when acting as an officer of the mayor's court in a state case is not accomplishing a purely local and municipal object, but is just as much an officer of the whole state as is a constable or a sheriff. Therefore, the presumption is that legislation as ambiguous as the court found section 126 Municipal Code, now section 4213, General Code, to be, is intended to relate solely to the municipal side, so to speak, of the officer's duties.

This reasoning, which must be taken to be correct, for reasons already stated, applies as well to section 4534, as amended, as it did to the statutes as the court in Portsmouth vs. Millstead assumed them to be. In other words, it is just as true of section 4534, as amended, that it deals with a non-municipal matter as it was of the section which the court relied upon in that case, and it is just as true of section 4213 that it deals with matters purely municipal as it was of section 126, Municipal Code, as construed by the circuit court.

For all the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion, as above stated, that a fee taxed in favor of a chief of police by the rule above laid down may, when paid in, be turned over to the chief and retained by him personally in addition to his salary.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

336.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—CITY TREASURER AND COUNTY TREASURER.

As it is the duty of the city treasurer to require the county treasurer to account to him for all taxes and assessments collected for city purposes, the offices act as a check upon one another and therefore cannot be held by the same individual at the same time.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Jos. T. Tracy, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of August 1, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "We respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:
>
> "May the treasurer of the city of Fostoria, Ohio, whose term of office will expire January 1, 1912, continue to serve as such city treasurer after assuming the office of treasurer of Seneca county on September 4, 1911? We find no statutory inhibition and recall no incompatibility unless it be that the offices are separated by a distance of about twelve miles."

There is no statutory or constitutional provision against one person holding, at the same time, the offices of city treasurer and county treasurer. In the absence of such a prohibition the same person may hold two offices at the same time, provided the two offices are not incompatible.

The rule of incompatibility is laid down in the case of State ex rel. vs. Gebert, 12 Cir. Ct. N. S., 274, by Dustin, J., on page 275 of the opinion, as follows:

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon the other; or, when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

In order to determine this incompatibility it is necessary to look to the statutory duties of a city treasurer to receive money from the county treasurer.

Section 3795, General Code, provides:

> "The taxes of the corporation shall be collected by the county treasurer and paid into the treasury of the corporation in the same manner and under the same laws, rules and regulations as are prescribed for the collection and paying over of state and county taxes. The corporation treasurer shall keep a separate account with each fund for which taxes are assessed, which account shall be at all times open to public inspection. Unless expressly otherwise provided by law, all money collected or received on behalf of the corporation shall be promptly deposited in the corporation treasury in the appropriate fund, and the treasurer shall thereupon give notice of such deposit to the auditor or clerk. Unless otherwise provided by law, no money shall be drawn from the treasury except upon the warrant of the auditor or clerk pursuant to the appropriation by council."

Section 2688, General Code, provides:

"After he has made each semi-annual settlement with the county auditor, the county treasurer shall pay into the state treasury, on the warrant of the state auditor, the full amount of all sums found by the auditor of state on an examination of the duplicate settlement sheets sent to him by the county auditor, to belong to the state."

Section 3892, General Code, provides:

"When any special assessment is made, has been confirmed by council, and bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness of the corporation are issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, the clerk of the council, or before the second Monday in September, each year, shall certify such assessment to the county auditor, stating the amounts and the time of payment. The county auditor shall place the assessment upon the tax list in accordance therewith and the county treasurer shall collect it in the same manner as other taxes are collected, and when collected pay such assessments to the treasurer of the corporation, to be by him applied to the payment of such bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness and interest thereon, and for no other purpose. For the purpose of enforcing such collection, the county treasurer shall have the same power and authority as allowed by law for the collection of state and county taxes."

Section 4298, General Code, provides:

"The treasurer (cities and villages) shall demand and receive from the county treasurer taxes levied and assessments made and certified to the county auditor by authority of the council, and by the auditor placed on the tax list for collection, and from persons authorized to collect or required to pay them, moneys accruing to the corporation from judgments, fines, penalties, forfeitures, licenses and costs taxed in the mayor's or police courts, and debts due the corporation, and he shall disburse them on the order of such person or persons as may be authorized by law or ordinance to issue orders therefor."

Section 4301, General Code, provides:

"On the first Monday of February and August in each year, the county treasurer shall pay over to the treasurer of the corporation all moneys received by him up to that date arising from taxes levied and assessments made belonging to the corporation."

Section 4300, General Code, provides:

"The treasurer shall receive and disburse all funds of the corporation including the school funds, and such other funds as arise in or belong to any department or part of the corporation government."

It appears that the county treasurer collects the taxes and assessments in the first instance from the taxpayer, then he is required to make settlement with and pay over to the city treasurer, all moneys collected for municipal purposes including the school funds. Section 4298 requires the city treasurer to "demand and receive from the county treasurer" money paid for taxes and assessments. Section 4301 provides that the city treasurer shall receive from the county treasurer "all moneys" belonging to the corporation.

In order to perform the above duties properly the city treasurer should check up and ascertain if the accounts of the county treasurer are in accordance with the settlement made, and that all moneys belonging to the corporation are accounted for. He would also be required to give a receipt for same, when paid him.

Applying the rule laid down in 12 Cir. Ct. N. S. 274, supra, are not the acts and duties imposed upon a city treasurer by the above sections a check upon the county treasurer? It is my opinion that they are.

In the case of State vs. Bus, 135 Mo. 325, Macfarlane, J., in the opinion of the court on page 338, lays down the rule of incompatibility as follows:

> "At common law the only limit to the number of offices one person might hold was that they should be compatible and consistent. The incompatibility does not consist in a physical inability of one person to discharge the duties of the two offices, but there must be some inconsistency in the functions of the two; some conflict in the duties required of the officers, as where one has some supervision of the other, is required to deal with, control or assist him."

Also in the case of Wells vs. State, 94 N. E. 321 (Indiana Supreme Court), the sixth syllabus reads as follows:

> "Under Burns' Ann. St. 1908, section 6475, making it the duty of the auditor and his deputy to apportion the school revenue, sections 6406, 6477, making it their duty to approve the bond of school trustees, sections 6442, 6443, 6454, 6461, 10312-10317, requiring school trustees to make certain tax levies and the auditor to make certain assessments and to compute and extend the taxes and collect the funds arising from the transfers of pupils between school corporations, and sections 6434, 6475, requiring the auditor or his deputy to apportion and disburse certain of the school funds and the trustees to receive them through him, the offices of deputy county auditor and school trustee are incompatible, so that a school trustee vacates his office by accepting the office of deputy county auditor."

In rendering the opinion in the above case, Myers, C. J., at page 323, says:

> "Whether the duties of deputy county auditor and trustee of the school of a town are incompatible, and therefore forbidden by the policy of the common law, it is not necessary to determine, as the statutory prohibition is the same in effect, as the common law prohibition. There are, however, several particulars in which the duties are incompatible. Among the duties of the auditor, and of his deputy, is that of apportionment of the school revenue (Burns 1908, sec. 6475); approving the bonds of school trustees, Burns 1908, sec. 6406, 6477. The school trustees make certain tax levies, and the auditor makes certain assessments, and the auditor and his deputy computes and extends the taxes on the duplicates. He collects the funds arising from the transfer of pupils between school corporations. Burns, 1908, sections 6454, 6461, 6442, 6443, 6454, 10312–10317. The auditor or his deputy apportions and disburses certain of the school funds and the trustees receive them through him. There is such a connection between the two offices with respect to the school funds that leads to such incompatibility with respect to their management, and the supervision of one over the other, that the acceptance of one is the vacation of the other."

The city treasurer deals with the county treasurer and therefore comes within the rule laid down in 135 Mo. 325, supra. He receives funds from the county treasurer and therefore comes within one of the particulars of incompatibility specified in 94 N. E. 321, supra. As far as city funds are concerned the city treasurer, in a sense, must have supervision of the collection of taxes by the county treasurer, or rather its distribution. That is, it is his duty to require the county treasurer to account to him for all taxes and assessments collected for city purposes.

The offices of city treasurer and county treasurer are a check upon each other so far as city and school funds are concerned. It is not the policy of the law that such offices should be held by the same person at the same time. It would likely lead to many irregularities in the performance of official duties.

The offices of city treasurer and county treasurer are incompatible and cannot be held at the same time by the same person.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 345.

SHERIFFS—DISPOSITION OF FEES RECEIVED WHEN ACTING AS RECEIVER — OFFICIAL AND PRIVATE CONNECTION — COUNTY FEE FUND.

Where a sheriff is obliged to act as receiver by provision of statute he acts as such receiver in his official capacity and all fees received in this connection shall be paid into the county fee fund.

When a sheriff is appointed receiver in any manner outside of that which is directly imposed by statute as an incident to his office as sheriff, he is entitled to the fees accruing as an individual.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 6, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Sam A. Hudson, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 3, 1911, you ask an opinion upon the following:

"If a sheriff is appointed receiver, should the allowance made him by the court for services as such receiver be paid into his fee fund, or is he entitled to retain the same for his own use."

The following sections govern the payment of fees into the county fee fund:

Section 2977, General Code, provides:

"All the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected or received by law as compensation for services by a county auditor, county treasurer, probate judge, sheriff, clerk of courts, or recorder, shall be so received and collected for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which they are elected and shall be held as public moneys belonging to such county and accounted for and paid over as such as hereinafter provided."

Section 2983, General Code, as amended 102 Ohio Laws, page 136, provides:

"On the first business day of April, July, October and January, and at the end of his term of office, each such officer shall pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor, all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by his office during the preceding quarter or part thereof for official services. which money shall be kept in separate funds and credited to the office from which received; and he shall also at the end of each calendar year, make and file a sworn statement with the county commissioners of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind which has been due his office and unpaid for more than one year prior to the date of such statement is required to be made."

The Code provides that the sheriff may act as receiver in the following instances:

Section 11842, General Code, provides:

"When a receiver is not appointed, the officer who attaches the property shall have the powers and perform the duties of a receiver appointed by the court or judge and, if necessary, as such officer may commence and maintain actions in his own name. He also may be required to give security other than his official bond."

Section 11782, General Code, provides:

"The judge by order, may appoint the sheriff of the proper county, or other suitable person, a receiver of the property of the judgment debtor. He also, by order, may forbid a transfer, or other disposition of, or interference with, the property of the judgment debtor not exempt by law."

Section 11783, General Code, provides:

"If the sheriff be appointed receiver, he and his sureties shall be liable on his official bond as such receiver. If another person be appointed, he must take an oath and give a bond as in other cases."

Section 11842, General Code, is applicable to proceedings to attach property. Section 11782, General Code, governs in proceedings in aid of execution. These are the only instances in which the sheriff is required by statute to act as receiver. In both instances he seizes property upon legal process. He does this in his official capacity as sheriff. If he acts as receiver of the property by appointment of court under section 11782, or by failure of the court to appoint as prescribed in section 11842, he acts in his official capacity as sheriff and not as an individual.

Fees received as receiver in such cases, namely, proceedings in aid of execution and for attachment, are received in his official capacity as sheriff and should be paid into the fee fund.

There are a number of other instances in which receivers are appointed by the courts. The statute places no duty upon a sheriff, as such, to act as receiver in such cases. There is no inhibition against a person, who is sheriff, acting in the capacity of receiver. Such receivership would be an additional employment, the same as if the person who is sheriff should carry on a private business. The same person may, and often does, hold two of certain offices, for each of which he draws compensation from public funds. In the same manner, a person may perform the duties of a public office and also conduct a private business.

Each public official should perform the duties required by his office. If he does this, that is all the public can require of him as such officer. It is not required that he perform no other service, so long as such additional work does not interfere with nor impede the performance of his official duties.

The fees to be paid into the county fee fund by a sheriff are those received in his official capacity as sheriff, for services prescribed by law to be performed by a sheriff. The fees received by a sheriff as receiver, except in proceedings in aid of execution and for attachment, do not come to him in his official capacity as sheriff. The allowance for such services belong to the sheriff individually and do not go to the county fee fund.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 353.

CITY AUDITOR—DUTY TO CONTROL FORMS OF ACCOUNTS OF OTHER DEPARTMENTS—DUTY TO REFUSE VOUCHERS FOR PAYMENT OF EXPENSE OF KEEPING UP SYSTEM RECOMMENDED BY OTHERS.

Under section 4289, General Code, it is the mandatory duty of the city auditor to prescribe the form of accounts and reports to be rendered to his department, and subject to the State Bureau of Inspection and Supervision he shall have the inspection and supervision thereof.

It is therefore the duty of that official to refuse vouchers drawn by other city departments for expenses of keeping additional forms of accounts prescribed or installed upon the recommendation of other bodies or individuals. He should also refuse payment of vouchers for the necessary books and supplies to keep said additional accounts.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 12, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 7th, in which you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. Is it the duty of the city auditor of any city to refuse vouchers drawn by other city departments for expense of keeping additional forms of accounts prescribed or installed upon the recommendation of other bodies or individuals?
>
> "2. Should he refuse payment of vouchers for the necessary books and supplies to keep said additional accounts?"

In reply I beg to state that section 277 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The auditor of state, as chief inspector and supervisor, shall prescribe and install a system of accounting and reporting for public offices. Such system shall be uniform in its application to offices of the same grade and accounts of the same class, and shall prescribe the form of receipt, vouchers and documents, required to separate and verify each transaction, and forms of reports and statements required for the administration of such offices or for the information of the public."

Section 4284 of the General Code provides as follows:

"At the end of each fiscal year, or oftener if required by council, the auditor shall examine and audit the accounts of all officers and departments. He shall prescribe the form of accounts and reports to be rendered to his department, and the form and method of keeping accounts by all other departments, and, subject to the powers and duties of the state bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, shall have the inspection and revision thereof. Upon the death, resignation, removal or expiration of the term of any officer, the auditor shall audit the accounts of such officer, and if such officer be found indebted to the city, he shall immediately give notice thereof to council and to the solicitor, and the latter shall proceed forthwith to collect the indebtedness."

It is plain to be seen that the intent of the legislature was that, first, it should be the duty of your department, and also the duty of the city auditor, to prescribe forms of accounts in the various city departments. In that respect, these statutes are mandatory and not discretionary. Again, it becomes the mandatory duty of the city auditor, under section 4284 above quoted, to prescribe the form of accounts and reports to be rendered to his department, and the form and method of keeping accounts by all other departments; and, subject to the powers and duties of the State Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, he shall have the inspection and revision thereof. These duties being mandatory on the city auditor I am of the opinion, in answer to your first question, that it is also the duty of the auditor to refuse vouchers drawn by other city departments for expense in keeping additional forms of accounts prescribed or installed upon recommendation of other bodies or individuals, there being no legal authority for the contracting of any expense for supplies for keeping accounts by any department of a city, other than those prescribed by the city auditor, as provided in section 4284.

It is the duty of any person at the head of any department of a city government, other than the city auditor, to apply to the auditor for forms of accounts and vouchers to be used by their respective departments, and no other body or individual has the right, under the code, to recommend or prescribe such forms.

In respect to your second question I desire to say that the city auditor, for the reasons set forth in my answer to your first question, should refuse payment of vouchers for the necessary books and supplies to keep any additional accounts, the bills for which were created by the head of any department upon the recommendation of any other person than the city auditor.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 356

COUNTY TREASURERS—TERM ENDING SHORT OF TWO CALENDAR YEARS—NO REDUCTION OF SALARY BY REASON THEREOF.

Though a county treasurer whose term by statute ends September 4, 1911, in reality serves four days less than two calendar years, nevertheless he has srved his statutory two years and there shall be no reduction in salary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 12, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Jos. T. Tracy, Deputy. Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 23, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "All county treasurers will retire by expiration of term on the first Monday of September, 1911, which is the fourth day of the month. What, if any, portion of the monthly salary for September will be due to a retiring treasurer? We would cite you to 47 Pacific Reporter, 937."

The term of office of a county treasurer is set forth in section 2632, General Code, as follows:

> "A county treasurer shall be elected biennially in each county, who shall hold his office for two years from the first Monday of September next after his election."

Section 2989, General Code, as amended in 102 Ohio Laws, page 137, provides the manner of paying the salary, as follows:

> "Each county officer herein named shall receive out of the general county fund the annual salary hereinafter provided, payable monthly upon warrant of the county auditor."

The county treasurer whose term expired September 4, 1911, was elected in 1909, and took his office on September 6, 1909. He has served two days less than two full years, that is, calendar years. There is no provision that salaries shall begin on the first day of the month and end on the last day of the month. The statute says the county officer shall receive his annual salary payable monthly, which would mean twelve equal installments. This disposes of your question.

However, you have cited me to 47 Pacific 937, and another question presents itself. The treasurer has served two days less than two calendar years. Should he have a reduction in his salary for these two days?

An examination of the calendar shows that the terms of a county treasurer will run as follows: From September 6, 1909, to September 4, 1911; from September 4, 1911, to September 1, 1913; and from September 1, 1913, to September 6, 1915. Practically the same result will occur from any three consecutive terms. One serves two days less than two full calendar years, another three days less and another five days more. Two serve for 104 weeks and the other for 105 weeks to complete his term. If each was to be paid in accordance with the calendar years it would make no difference to the public treasury, for the days short for the two officers are equalled by the days over for the other.

The syllabus in the case cited by you, namely, Dillon vs. Bicknell, 47 Pa. 937, is as follows:

> "2. Under the county government act of 1891, providing that certain county officers, whose compensation is fixed at an annual sum shall hold office from the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election, till their successors are qualified, such officers are entitled to be paid for the actual time they serve."

Haynes, Judge, on page 937, says:

> "* * * Section 4109 of the political code as amended March 7, 1881, is as follows: 'All elective county, city and township officers, except superior court judges, superintendents of schools and assessors, shall be elected at the general election to be held in the year 1882, and at the general election to be held every second year thereafter, and shall take office on the first Monday after the first day of January next succeeding their election, and shall serve for two years. The years that said officers are to hold office are to be computed respectively from and including the first Monday after the first day of January of any one year to and including the first Monday after the first day of January of the next succeeding year; provided, etc.' It is conceded that, if that section of the political code is still in force, it is conclusive as to what constitutes the official year, and that under its provisions the demand made by the plaintiff was unauthorized."

Plaintiff in the above case served five days more than two full calendar years and demanded extra pay for those five days.

Again on page 938 the court says:

> "Indeed, under the statute fixing the commencement and termination of the terms of county officers it can never happen that the term consists of precisely two years, it being sometimes more and sometimes less; and therefore the provision fixing the compensation at an annual sum should be construed as fixing the rate of compensation to be paid for the time the officer actually serves. This construction will do exact justice between the preceding and succeeding officers, and not increase the burden to be borne by the people."

Our statute, section 2632, General Code, says the county treasurer "shall hold office for two years from the first Monday of September next after his election."

Section 8 of the General Code provides:

> "A person holding an office or public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws."

No definite term of office is specified in the rule laid down in the syllabus of the above case. The officers serve from a certain day till their successors are qualified. Section 2632, General Code, specifies a definite term, and the rule laid down in the syllabus does not apply, unless the officer should hold over by virtue of section 8 of the General Code.

Our statute is more like that set out in the opinion, but not going so fully into detail as to what is the official term. A county treasurer is elected every two years and takes office from the first Monday of September following his election. It is apparent that the statute intends and means that the treasurer shall serve for two years from the first Monday of September following his election to the first Monday of September following the election of his successor, two years later. That is the official term. Whether it is shorter or longer than two calendar years makes no difference, as the statute makes that the term of two years.

Each county treasurer is entitled to his full two years' salary as provided by statute whether his term is two or three days less or five days more than two calendar years, provided of course that he serves his full term. There is no authority for deductions or for extra allowances.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

359.

COUNTY AUDITOR—REIMBURSEMENT FOR POSTAGE AND DRAY EXPENSE INCURRED IN DISTRESS AND SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—TREASURER'S FEES IN SUCH CASES—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

There is no express provision in the statutes for the payment to the county treasurer of his expenses incurred in hiring a dray or moving van in making distress and sale of goods and chattels of delinquent taxpayers under section 2650, General Code, nor of postage expense incurred in notifying delinquent taxpayers of his instructions to distrain property.

By implication, however, the county commissioners are authorized to reimburse him for such expenses.

Section 2659, General Code, providing that the treasurer's fees in such cases shall be the same as those of constables refers to section 3347, General Code. These fees are to be paid into the fee fund of the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 14, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—At the request of Hon. Edward C. Turner, prosecuting attorney of Franklin county, Ohio, I beg to state my opinion upon the following questions submitted by him to you:

> "What, if any, authority of law is there for the county treasurer to incur the following items of expense in connection with making distress and sale of goods and chattels of delinquent personal taxpayers under section 2658 of the General Code:
>
> "1. Hiring or purchasing a dray or moving van;
>
> "2. Postage incurred in notifying delinquent personal taxpayers of the treasurer's intention to distrain property."

As to the first question I beg to state that section 2658 authorizes the treasurer, when taxes are past due and unpaid to "distrain sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the persons charged with such taxes, if found within the county, to pay the taxes so remaining due and the costs that have accrued

* * *" Nowhere in the chapter relating directly to the election, powers and duties of county treasurers is there any express provision of law authorizing the reimbursement of the treasurer for any expense incurred by him in the discharge of his official duties. The county officers' salary law, sections 2977 to 3000, inclusive, General Code, and the various amendments thereto do not expressly authorize the county officers therein named to be reimbursed for any expenses incurred by them or any of them in the performance of duties enjoined upon them by law.

It is manifest, however, that some expense must be incurred by the county treasurer in performing the various duties of his office. He must, for instance, at the very least consume large quantities of stationery and the like. If I am not mistaken, the practice has been to call upon the county commissioners to furnish such supplies and to pay for them out of the general county fund. No specific statute directly authorizes this practice, but it is justified, I think, by section 2640 of the General Code, which by inference authorizes the commissioners to allow and pay claims against the county, and by section 2419 of the General Code, which enjoins upon the commissioners the imperative duty of furnishing "offices for county officers."

This seeming departure from the otherwise strict rule that statutory authority must be found for the payment of any money from the public treasury may be explained upon the assumption, which I think is proper, that the county commissioners constitute the board of general or residuary power.

To all intents and purposes this board is the county, and where power to do a thing necessary to the transaction of the county's business is not expressly conferred upon some other officer or board of the county, that power by implication must be held to reside in the board of county commissioners.

For the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the county treasurer, if he deems it advisable, with a view to collecting a large amount of delinquent personal taxes, to mail notices to the delinquent taxpayers, and to hire a vehicle for the purpose of distraining goods under the section above cited, should make his opinion known to the county commissioners and request of them that they furnish from the general county fund the necessary postage and other supplies, including the vehicle in question. The commissioners may, in such case, in my opinion, lawfully grant the request of the county treasurer.

The case at hand is to be distinguished from two other similar cases, to-wit:

1. Under the law as it existed prior to the enactment of the county officers' salary law, expenses of this sort were chargeable against the officer personally, and he was expected to reimburse himself out of his fees. Now, that each county officers affected by the county officers' salary law, including the county treasurer, receives a stated salary from the general county fund (by virtue of the amendment of recent date) his expenses are properly chargeable against such fund, especially inasmuch as they are not made chargeable against the various fee funds.

2. Cases like that of the sheriff, whose expenses under section 2997 of the General Code, are expressly provided for are to be distinguished. Section 2997, for example, is to be regarded as a limitation upon what would otherwise be the general power of the county commissioners rather than as an indication that without such a section no county officer is entitled to be reimbursed for expenses incurred by him, or outlays occasioned by the purchase of necessary supplies for his office.

The prosecutor's second question involves the construction of section 2659 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

"For making distress and sale * * * the treasurer shall be allowed the same fees as are allowed to constables for making levy and sale of property on execution. Traveling expenses shall be computed from the seat of justice of the county to the place of making the distress."

The reference here is, in my opinion, to those provisions of section 3347, which are as follows:

"For services rendered, duly elected and qualified constables shall be entitled to receive the following fees: * * * service of execution on goods or body, forty cents; on all money made on execution, four per cent.; * * * mileage, twenty cents for the first mile and five cents per mile for each additional mile." * * *

The fees thus earned and so computed must in my opinion be paid into the fee fund of the county treasury.

I have sent a copy of this opinion directly to Mr. Turner.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

370.

COUNCIL—NEWSPAPERS—PUBLICATION OF ORDINANCES UPON CONTRACT—MANDATORY TO PUBLISH AT MAXIMUM RATE—REFUSAL OF PAPER TO PUBLISH.

Where there are published in a municipality, two newspapers of general circulation in accordance with section 4228, General Code, it is mandatory upon the council to publish its ordinances at the maximum rate provided in section 6251, General Code, if they cannot contract for a less rate.

If one newspaper refuses to contract at said maximum rate, the council may act as it would in a situation where only one newspaper is published.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 16, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor of July 15th, wherein you state:

"If, in a city there be only two papers published, the same being of opposite politics and the authorities of the city and the publisher of one of the papers cannot agree on the prices to be paid for publication of city ordinances and in consequence no publication of 'ordinances of a general nature or providing for improvements' is made, what would be the effect on the validity of such ordinances published only in one newspaper?"

Section 4228 of the General Code provides:

"Ordinances and resolutions requiring publication shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics, published and of general circulation in such municipality, if such there be, and shall be published in a newspaper printed in the German language if there is in such municipality such a paper having a bona fide paid circulation within such municipality of not less than one thousand copies. Proof of such circulation shall be made by the affidavit of the proprietor or editor of such paper, and shall be filed with the clerk of the council."

Section 4229 of the General Code is as follows:

"Except as otherwise provided in this title, in all municipal corporations the statements, ordinances, resolutions, orders, proclamations, notices and reports required by this title, or the ordinances of a municipality to be published, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation therein, if there are such in the municipality, and for the following times: The statement of receipts and disbursements required shall be published once; the ordinances and resolutions once a week for two consecutive weeks; proclamations of elections once a week for two consecutive weeks; notices of contracts and sale of bonds once a week for four consecutive weeks; all other matters shall be published once."

Section 6251 of the General Code provides:

"Publishers of newspapers may charge and receive for the publication of advertisemts, notices and proclamations required to be published by a public officer of the state, county, city, village, township, school, benevolent or other public institution, or by a trustee, assignee, executor or administrator, the following sums, except where the rule is otherwise fixed by law, to wit: For the first insertion, one dollar for each square, and for each additional insertion authorized by law or the person ordering the insertion, fifty cents for each square. Fractional squares shall be estimated at a like rate for space occupied. In advertisements containing tabular or rule work, fifty per cent. may be charged in addition to the foregoing rates."

You do not state in your inquiry that the two newspapers have a general circulation in such municipality, but I assume for the purposes of answering your inquiry, that they and each of them has a general circulation therein.

The first syllabus of the case of McCormick vs. the City of Niles, 81 O. S. 246, reads as follows:

"The liability of a municipal corporation to pay for the publication of ordinances, resolutions and legal notices required by law to be published, must rest on express contract, and not upon a mere account for the rendition of such services."

The plain provision of the law as set forth in section 4228, General Code, supra, is that if there are two newspapers of opposite politics published in a municipality the ordinances and resolutions requiring publication shall be published in such newspaper.

As I view the above section it leaves no discretion in council to publish ordinances requiring publication in any other manner if there be two newspapers of opposite politics published and of general circulation in the municipality.

The case of McCormick vs. City of Niles, supra, has declared that in order for a newspaper to be entitled to compensation for publishing ordinances an express contract must exist.

Section 6251, General Code, supra, provides a maximum rate that can be paid for publication of such ordinances.

First: It is my opinion that if there are two newspapers and only two newspapers that meet the requirements of section 4228, supra, and such newspapers are willing to publish the ordinances of the municipality at the maximum rate fixed by section 6251, supra, and the municipality cannot obtain a lower rate it is incumbent upon such municipality to enter into a contract at the maximum rate in order to give validity to the ordinances of such municipality.

Second: If one of the newspapers refuses to contract at all for the publication of such ordinances it is the same, as I view it, as if such paper did not exist, and, consequently the provisions of section 4229, supra, may be consulted in order to see if there are two newspapers in such municipality as therein provided for.

If there are no newspapers of opposite politics of general circulation in such municipality other than the two published therein as stated in your question, I am of opinion that under the ruling recently given you in reference to section 4227 the publication in the one of said papers would render the ordinances valid should the other refuse to contract for the publication thereof even at the maximum rate.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

373.

MEDICAL WITNESSES—RIGHT TO SUMMON IN TRIAL OF INMATES OF BOYS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL AND GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL HOME—FEES SAME AS ORDINARY WITNESSES.

There is no statutory requirement as to the physical suitableness of an inmate of the Boys' Industrial Home, nor is there any power conferred upon the trustees of that institution to determine such suitableness and therefore, medical witnesses may not be summoned in the trial of a prospective inmate.

The trustees of the Girls' Industrial Home, however, are empowered to determine the physical fitness of prospective inmates and in the trial of such, medical witness, may be summoned but may receive as fees for attendance, not more than the amount allowed to ordinary witnesses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 1, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 4th, submitting for my opinion thereon, the following question:

> "What, if any, are the legal fees of a physician called by the probate judge to make examination and certificate in commitments to the Boys' Industrial School and Girls' Industrial Home (Sections 2093 and 3109, G. C.)?

The two sections to which you refer, one of which applied to the Boys' Industrial School, and the other of which applied to the Girls' Industrial Home, provide in part as follows:

> "Section 2093. * * * The costs in such case in like manner shall be paid upon the certificate of the proper officer of the court in which the youth was convicted. * * *
>
> "Section 2109. The fees of the probate judge, sheriff and other costs incurred in the proceedings shall be the same as are paid in similar cases, and be paid by the proper county in the same manner."

Neither of these sections in itself provides any fees taxable in favor of and payable to a physician called by the probate judge to make examination and certificate in commitments to the institutions in question. No provision of the chapter of the General Code which relates to the Boys' Industrial School, or of that which relates to the Girls' Industrial Home, defines any such fee; nor does any provision of either chapter authorize or direct the calling of a physician by the probate judge to make any examination or to execute any certificate in such cases. You inform me that the custom of calling a physician for such purpose has arisen because of the exercise by the board of trustees of each institution of its supposed power to make rules and regulations for the admission of inmates. In this connection permit me to state that I find no statute conferring any such power upon the board of trustees of the Boys' Industrial School. I am at least of the opinion that no rule or regulation of the board of trustees of the Boys' Industrial School is sufficient to authorize the taxation of any particular fee to any physician making any certificate required by such rule.

I find no express recital of power on the part of the trustees of the Girls' Industrial Home to require any examination or the execution of any such certificate as that referred to by you. However, under section 2108 a probate judge is required to be satisfied that a girl is a suitable subject for the home before committing her thereto. In my opinion the board of trustees are justified in defining what constitutes suitableness in this sense and probate judges are justified in adhering to the definition adopted by the board.

The question of suitableness being one of the issues in the proceeding, any testimony which the probate judge may see fit to avail himself of for the purpose of determining this question is proper and a person producing such testimony is to be regarded as a witness and entitled to the fees of a witness in the probate court. It is expressly provided that the same fees shall be taxed in proceedings of commitment to the Girls' Industrial Home as are taxed "in similar cases." The case most similar, in my judgment, to the one at hand is that of commitment to a hospital for the insane, or to some other state institution. The schedule of fees payable in such cases is found in section 1981 of the General Code as amended, 101 O. L. 359. This section is in part as follows:

> "* * * The taxable costs and expenses to be paid under the provisions of this chapter shall be as follows: * * * to the medical witnesses who make out the certificate, three dollars and mileage as allowed by law in civil cases each; to witnesses * * * the same fees allowed by law for like services in other cases; * * *"

The fee allowed by law to witnesses in other cases is, of course, a fee of one dollar for each day's attendance, and five cents a mile from his place of residence to the place of holding court and return, as described in section 3012, General Code.

The only question is as to whether a physician who testifies or certifies as to the facts which constitute a girl a suitable inmate of the Girls' Industrial Home is to be regarded as a medical witness or as an ordinary witness. In my opinion such physicians are to be regarded as ordinary witnesses. Section 1954 of the General Code provides that in lunacy cases two medical witnesses shall be called. There is no such provision, as I have already pointed out, in the statutes relating to the Girls' Industrial Home. The law therefore fails to make any distinction between a medical witness and any other witness called in proceedings for commitment to the Girls' Industrial Home; and I am of the opinion that the technical term "medical witness" as used in section 1931, as amended, supra, cannot be applied to a physician who testifies in such a case.

It is my opinion, therefore, that inasmuch as the suitableness of a boy as an inmate of a Boys' Industrial School is not a proper issue in a proceedings to commit to such institution, brought under the chapter relating thereto, expert medical testimony is not competent in such proceedings, and, therefore, the probate judge is without authority on his own motion to call such a witness; and that if he does call a physician under a rule promulgated by the board of trustees of the institution his act is not thereby rendered valid, because the board of trustees had no power to make such a rule. If a physician is called, however, for the purpose of testifying to a material matter in a proceeding to commit to the Boys' Industrial School—and it will be presumed in all instances, if he is called, that it would be for the purpose of inquiring of him as to some material matter—then the physician would be entitled to the ordinary witness fees.

I am further of the opinion that in case of commitment to the Girls' Industrial Home the physician who certifies to the physical condition of the girl is entitled to a fee of one dollar for each day's attendance and mileage as provided by law for witnesses in civil cases.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

374.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—POWER TO HIRE LEGAL COUNSEL—NECESSITY FOR WRITTEN REQUEST OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEY.

The county commissioners are not empowered to employ legal counsel to act either independently or as assistant to the prosecuting attorney except upon the written request of that official.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 14, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 7th, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "If a suit is brought by the prosecuting attorney against the board of commissioners of his county to restrain them from allowing a bill for material furnished by them, have such commissioners, as a board, the right to employ attorneys for their defense at the expense of the county? In such case, has either of the commissioners the right to employ independent counsel at the expense of the county in defense of such action?"

In reply thereto I wish to say that section 2917 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party, and no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve. He shall be the legal adviser for all township officers, and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees duly entered upon their journal, in which the compensation to be paid for such legal services shall be fixed. Such compensation shall be paid from the township fund."

You will note the language contained in the above quoted section, to the effect that no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county, except as provided in section 2412 of the General Code. Said section 2412 provides as follows:

"If it deems it for the best interests of the county, upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, the board of county commissioners may employ legal counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney in the prosecuting or defense of any suit or action brought by or against the county commissioners or other county officers and board, in their official capacity."

Under date of February 16, 1909, this department rendered an opinion upon practically the same question about which you inquire. That opinion was rendered to the prosecuting attorney of Darke county, and I herewith quote said opinion in full:

"HON. JOHN F. MAHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—Your communication of February 11th is received, in which you inquire as to the authority of county commissioners, under section 845, R. S., as amended 99 O. L. 388, to employ legal counsel without the written request of a prosecuting attorney. In reply I beg to say section 845 as amended is in part as follows:

'Whenever, upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, the board of county commissioners of any county deems it advisable, it may employ legal counsel and the necessary assistants upon such terms as it may deem for the best interests of the county, for the performance of the duties herein enumerated.'

"The above quoted section only authorizes the county commissioners to employ legal counsel upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney. It follows, therefore, that the county commissioners are without authority to employ legal counsel, as provided in said section, until a written request for such employment is first made by the prosecuting attorney."

I fully concur with that opinion and it is my final conclusion in answer to your inquiries, that the county commissioners are without authority to employ legal counsel at the expense of the county, except upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, and that, furthermore, the board of county commissioners have not the legal right to employ independent counsel at the expense of the county, except upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, as provided in section 2412 of the General Code, quoted above.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

377.

WARRANTS—PROBATE JUDGE MAY NOT ISSUE TO HIMSELF—COLLECTIONS OF FEES EARNED FOR SERVICE OF SAME BY PROSCUTING ATTORNEY.

A probate judge is obliged to issue warrants for the conducting of persons to the various state institutions to the sheriff and he is not authorized nor in any way empowered to issue such warrants to himself. When he does so, findings should be made against him for the amount received and the same collected by the prosecuting attorney and paid into the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 19, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your inquiry of August 31st, in which you ask:

"Under date of June 24th we submitted an inquiry to your department, stating that a probate judge follows the practice of issuing warrants to convey persons to various state institutions to himself, and that he himself serves the warrant. We call your attention to sections 1959 and 2044, G. C., and ask your advice as to the finding to be made by state examiners of this department under such circumstances.

"What we intended to inquire was whether or not the fees on warrant to convey paid out of the county treasury to the probate judge in such cases may be recovered of said judge, and if the finding of our department should be that the money should be refunded? If in your opinion such finding is not proper to be made, what should be the finding of the state examiner?"

In reply thereto I desire to say that section 1959 of the General Code provides as follows:

"When advised that the patient will be received, the probate judge shall forthwith issue his warrant to the sheriff, commanding him forthwith to take charge of and convey such insane person to the hospital. If the probate judge is satisfied, from proof, that an assistant is necessary, he may appoint one person as such. If the insane person is a female, he shall appoint a suitable female assistant to accompany the sheriff and such insane person to the hospital."

Section 2044 of the General Code provides as follows:

"In the commitment and conveyance to the hospital, the care and custody while there, and the discharge therefrom, of epileptic insane or epileptics whose being at large is dangerous to the community, like proceedings shall be had, and like powers exercised by officers charged with like duties in the premises as is provided by law for the commitment and care of the insane."

I furthermore desire to say that there is no statutory provision which gives the probate judges of the various counties of the state the authority and right to issue warrants to themselves for conveying persons to the various state benevolent institutions. The sections of the General Code which are above cited clearly provide that the probate judge, upon being advised that the patient will be received in such institution, shall forthwith issue his warrant to the sheriff of the said county commanding him to take charge of and convey such person to the said institution. It is no part of the statutory duty of the probate judge to convey persons to the various state institutions, and I am, therefore, of the opinion that a probate judge is not legally entitled to any fees for conveying persons to the state institutions. The fees for conveying persons to the various benevolent institutions of the state, and particularly to the insane asylums of the state, are to paid to the sheriffs of the respective counties from which such persons are sent by the probate courts of that county, and I am, therefore, of the opinion that any fees received by the probate judge of the respective counties of the state for conveying persons to such benevolent institutions should be refunded to their respective counties, and that the prosecuting attorneys of any such counties should see to it that any funds so paid out should be paid back into the treasury of their respective counties.

I am not able, in my official capacity, to do more than to advise your department as above set forth and to further advise that any fees illegally paid to the probate judges of the respective counties of the state should be recovered for the respective counties by the prosecuting attorneys thereof.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General

391.

DAUGHTER OF SHERIFF MAY NOT BE DEPUTY—WOMAN NOT A "QUALIFIED ELECTOR"—ASSISTANTS AND CLERKS NOT "OFFICERS" AND NEED NOT BE QUALIFIED ELECTORS—CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

A deputy in the office of the sheriff is required to be a qualified elector, by section 2830, General Code, and as a woman cannot be such, a daughter of the sheriff may not serve in that capacity.

Assistants or clerks in said office are not expressly required to be electors nor are such to be considered officers within the meaning of article XV, section IV of the constitution. Said daughter may, therefore serve in such capacities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 25, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices. SAM A. HUDSON, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 3, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "The sheriff of Union county appointed his daughter deputy in his office. She has been paid three months' salary and one month's time has elapsed since the payment of the last salary. Section 2850 provides that each deputy sheriff shall be a qualified elector of the county. Of whom, if anycne, should recovery of the salary already paid be sought?
>
> "Can a sheriff legally employ a female as a clerk, assistant, bookkeeper or other employe of his office?
>
> "The prosecuting attorney of said county has directed the county auditor to withhold payment of any further salary to such deputy and furthermore that the compensation heretofore paid should be refunded by the sheriff."

First: Can a female be appointed and serve as deputy sheriff?

The qualifications of a deputy sheriff are set forth in section 2830 of the General Code, as follows:

> "The sheriff may appoint in writing one or more deputies. If such appointment is approved by a judge of the court of common pleas of the subdivision in which the county of the sheriff is situated, such approval at the time it is made, shall be indorsed on such writing by the judge. Thereupon such writing and indorsement shall be filed by the sheriff with the clerk of his county, who shall duly enter it upon the journal of such court. The clerk's fees therefor shall be paid by the sheriff. Each deputy so appointed shall be a qualified elector of such county. No justice of the peace or mayor shall be appointed such deputy."

The statute specifically provides that each deputy sheriff shall be a qualified elector of the county. A female is not a qualified elector. She has only a limited vote.

A female cannot serve as deputy sheriff. The appointment was illegal. All moneys paid her were paid without authority of law. The finding should be made against the sheriff who made the appointment and authorized the payment in the first instance.

Second: Can a female fill the positions of clerk, assistant, bookkeeper, or other employe of a sheriff.

Section 2981, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Such officers may appoint and employ necessary deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers or other employes for their respective offices, fix their compensation and discharge them, and shall file with the county auditor certificates of such action. Such compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate for each office the amount fixed by the commisioners for such office. When so fixed, the compensation of each duly appointed or employed deputy, assistant, bookkeeper, clerk and other employe shall be paid monthly from the county treasury, upon the warrant of the county auditor."

Section 4 of article 15 of the constitution provides:

> "No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state, unless he possess the qualifications of an elector."

The first syllabus in the case of Theobald vs. State, 20 Cir. Dec. 414, reads as follows:

> "An officer in the constitutional sense is one who is elected or appointed to a state office, and he must possess the qualifications of an elector; he is one who takes the oath of office and is responsible for the official acts of himself and subordinates; hence his deputy assistants and other employes are not 'officers' within the meaning of the constitution, and the act changing the compensation of all officers from the fee system to a fixed salary is not unconstitutional as in violation of article 2, section 20 of the constitution, which provides that the compensation of an officer shall not be changed during his term."

The above case was affirmed without report in 78 O. S., 000.

The second syilabus in the case of Warwick vs. State, 25 O. S., 21, is as follows:

> "Section 4 of article 15 of the state constitution, which provides that 'no person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state unless he possess the qualifications of an elector,' does not apply to the office of deputy clerk of the probate court, and therefore a female is eligible to that office, and may lawfully discharge its duties."

The statute does not provide that the clerks, assistants or other employes of a sheriff shall be a qualified elector. As these positions are not offices within the meaning of section 4, article 15 of the constitution, that section does not control. A female may, therefore, be appointed to fill any of the positions of clerk, assistants or other employe of a sheriff.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ADDENDUM.

For a full discussion of the principles of this case see the case of the State of Ohio, ex rel., Burt F. Mills vs. the Board of Elections of the city of Columbus and Ida M. Earnhart, 9. C. C. Reports of Ohio, 134.

Under the principle of that decision you will find that a woman may not be under the constitution of Ohio a qualified elector. She merely has the right to vote at a school election and the control of schools is given exclusively to the general assembly and do not come within the constitutional requirement of the electors.

B 394.

CIVIL SERVICE—"DEPUTY" AUDITOR IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE—CLERKS AND ASSISTANTS.

A person authorized to act instead of a city auditor and to perform for and in behalf of the latter, all of his duties, is a "deputy" and in the unclassified service within the meaning of section 4479, General Code.

A person who is now and then deputized to perform one or several of the duties of the auditor is not a "deputy" within the meaning of the act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 26, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 8th, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Section 4479, G. C., states that the unclassified service of a city shall include deputies in the office of city auditor. The ordinances of a city in its statement of positions established in the city auditor's department provides that there shall be three deputies and twenty-nine clerks and stenographers. Many of the clerks in the office act for and perform certain duties at times for the auditor.
>
> "Under section 4479 what employes of the office are placed in the classified service by law? Does the phraseology of the ordinance denominating the duties as that quoted determine the matter, or do the duties required of the incumbent determine the matter as to whether or not the incumbent is in the classified or unclassified service."

Section 4479, General Code, provides the list of the classified and unclassified service in a municipal corporation, and in reference to your question it provides that:

> "The civil service shall be divided into classified and unclassified service. The unclassified service shall include * * * deputies in the office of the city auditor."

The question you ask arises in Cleveland, Ohio. The deputy auditor has written you a letter, which you enclose to me, with your inquiry, stating that the revised ordinances of the city of Cleveland give the auditor the right to appoint three deputies and twenty-nine clerks and stenographers, and he desires to know whether all deputies and clerks are included in the classified or unclassified list. He states that the clerks suggested that as they are all deputized at some time to act for the auditor, therefore, all employes of the auditor's office are deputies and come under the unclassified list.

I take the situation at Cleveland as a basis to answer your inquiry, which is general.

Section 4479 of the General Code provides that all deputies in the office of the city auditor are in the unclassified list and therefore do not come under the civil service. The deputy city auditor states that the clerks are all deputized at some time to act for the auditor, and, as before stated, claim to come under the unclassified service. The legislature in using the term "deputies" no doubt used it in its ordinary legal sense. "Deputy" is defined in the Century dictionary as follows:

> "One who by authority exercises another's office, or some function thereof, in the name or the place of the principal, but has no interest in the office."

Webster's unabridged dictionary defines "deputy" as:

> "One appointed as a substitute for another and empowered to act for him and in his name, or on his behalf."

Bouvier defines "deputy" as:

> "One authorized by an officer to exercise the office or right which the officer possesses, for and in place of the latter. A deputy should always act in the name of the principal."

Section 9 of the General Code provides that:

> "A deputy when duly qualified may perform all and singular the duties of his principal." * * *

I take it that when a statute or ordinance creates in one act, deputies and clerks, they will have different duties; that persons designated as "deputies" are those who are empowered to exercise the office or right which the officer possesses, for and in his place; that is to say, a person so designated has more authority than mere clerk, who acts entirely in a ministerial capacity; he may perform all the functions of the principal and act in his name and stead and hind him. If any officer in a city auditor's office, regardless of his title, exercises and performs all the functions of his principal and has this authority conferred by ordinance, to act in the name and stead of his principal, he is a deputy within the meaning of the law; but if a person is only deputized by the auditor at times to act for him and he acts by virtue of his orders only he is not a "deputy" within the spirit and meaning of section 4479, General Code.

Answering the inquiry of the deputy auditor of Cleveland specifically, it is my opinion that the general ordinances of the city of Cleveland, having authorized the city auditor to appoint three deputies and twenty-nine clerks and stenographers, the three deputies so named come under the unclassified service and can act for the auditor and in his name and on his behalf in his absence, but the clerks named by the said auditor under said ordinance come under the classified list.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 399.

FEES OF "DISCREET PERSON" FOR SERVICE OF WRIT ISSUED BY CORONER IN EMERGENCY, NOT AUTHORIZED.

Section 2485, General Code, providing a compensation not exceeding one dollar per day to any person summoned to aid any sheriff or constable "or other officer" in the "execution" of any writ or process in favor of the state, presupposes that a writ has already been issued, the "other" officers therein included applies only to such persons, other than sheriff and constable, as the statutes authorize to serve writs and processes.

A discreet person therefore, to whom the coroner issues a writ in emergency, under section 2858, General Code, is not authorized to tax any fees for such service in the cost bill.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 29, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 10th, in which you state:

> "Under section 2858, General Code, the coroner may, if in his opinion the emergency so requires, issue any writ to any discreet person of the county. Section 11504, General Code, provides that, 'if service is not made by a sheriff or constable * * * no costs shall be taxed.'
>
> "If a coroner, in his discretion, appoints a discreet person to execute the writs issued by him in connection with a coroner's inquest, what, if any such fees, is such discreet person entitled to tax in the cost bill to be paid by the county?"

This department, under former Attorney General Denman, held on this question as follows:

> "I beg to call your attention to section 913 of the Revised Statutes, which is as follows:
>
> > "'The county commissioners shall audit and allow a reasonable compensation to any person who is summoned to aid any sheriff or constable or other officer, as the case may be, in the execution of any writ or process in favor of the state, but such compensation shall not exceed one dollar per day, and be allowed only upon certificate of such officer.'
>
> "I am, therefore, of the opinion that under the authority of the above section, where a discreet person in emergency cases has been appointed by a coroner under section 1223, R. S., to serve a writ issued by said coroner, that such discreet person is entitled to compensation under section 913, Revised Statutes."

I cannot, however, agree with the construction placed upon said section 913, Revised Statutes, now section 2485, General Code, by my distinguished predecessor. Section 919, Revised Statutes, is the so-called posse comitatus statute and does not apply to a situation arising under section 2858, General Code, where the coroner designates a discreet person to serve his writs.

You will note that under section 2485, General Code, "the county commissioners shall * * * allow a reasonable compensation to any person who is summoned to aid any sheriff or constable, or other officer, in the execution of any writ or process in favor of the state." * * *

Section 2486 presupposes that a writ or process has already been issued and this section authorizes the sheriff or constable, or other officer, to call upon some one to assist in the serving or carrying out of the writ or process—or, as the statute puts it, "aid * * * in the execution of any writ or process."

Section 11504, General Code, authorizes a coroner to serve subpoenas.

Section 2828, General Code, recites that:

> "When the sheriff, by reason of absence, sickness or disability is incapable of serving any process required to be served, or by reason of interest is incompetent to serve it, the court of common pleas * * * may appoint a suitable person to serve such process or to perform the duties of sheriff during the continuance of such disability."

There are, perhaps, other provisions of the General Code authorizing other persons than the sheriff or constable to serve writs or processes, and they are covered by the expression "other officers" in section 2485, General Code; and under authority of that section, if the coroner or other person designated by the common pleas court to serve subpoenas or writs needs assistance in the execution of such subpoenas or writs, they may call upon some bystander to assist them; it is my opinion, in this connection, that the term "other officer" as used in section 2485, General Code, means officers whose duties are similar to those of sheriffs or constables, and refers to a "coroner" only when he acts in a capacity similar to that of sheriff, under authority of section 11504, G. C.

There being no other provision of the General Code authorizing fees or compensation for the "discreet person" who serves the writs or processes for the coroner under section 2858, General Code, it is my opinion that such "discreet person" would not be entitled to any fees to be taxed in the cost bill to be paid by the county.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 404.

FEES DUE THE CLERK OF COURTS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY NOT MAKE CONTRACT FOR COLLECTION OF—DUTY OF PROECTUTOR TO COLLECT—COLLECTION BY CLERK OF COURTS—DISPOSITION OF COLLECTION—FEE FUND.

The county commissioners, prior to the amendment to section 2979, General Code, were not authorized to enter into a contract for collection of costs and fees due the clerk of courts, for a stated per cent. of the amount collected, and all contracts so made are illegal and void.

By provision of section 2917, General Code, the prosecuting attorney is made the legal adviser of the county commissioners and as such it is his official duty to collect such unpaid fees as moneys due the county, and for such services, he cannot be allowed any further compensation than his official salary.

The duty of the prosecuting attorney to collect such fees is simply an additional method of collecting such fees, and the officer who earns such fees or his successor, may collect them even after they have been certified to the commissioners or the prosecuting attorney for collection. All such fees earned prior to May 25, 1911, when collected, should be credited to the fee fund of the officer who earned the same. All fees earned after that date shall be paid into the county treasury, to the credit of the office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 1, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, JOS. T. TRACY, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of August 15, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion of the following:

> "We respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:
>
> "1. Have the county commissioners the authority under section 2979, previous to the amendment of June 7, 1911, to make a contract at a stated per cent. of the amount collected for collection of costs or fees due to the clerk of courts, which fees have remained unpaid for one year or more prior to January 1, 1911?
>
> "2. Was it the duty of the prosecuting attorney to make such collections under his regular salary, or may he be allowed an additional fee therefor?
>
> "3. Does the amendment of June 7, 1911 (Sec. 2979, G. C.), make any change in regard to the duties of the prosecuting attorney or his compensation for services in connection with the collection of such moneys?
>
> "4. If litigants who have been notified by a collector employed by the county commissioners pay such delinquent fees to the clerk of the court, may he receive the same and make credit to his fee fund at the close of the quarter?"

Section 2979, General Code, prior to the amendment of June 7, 1911, provided:

> "When it appears from the books kept by the probate judge, auditor, treasurer, sheriff, recorder and clerk of the court of common pleas, that any fees, costs, percentages, penalties, or allowances of whatever kind, remain due the county and unpaid, for more than one year, the county commissioners, in conjunction with the prosecuting attorney shall collect them in any manner provided by law, and pay the amount so collected into the county treasury to the credit of the general fund of the county."

This section as amended, June 7, 1911, 102 Ohio Laws, 290, reads:

"On or before January 15th annually, each of said officers shall file with the prosecuting attorney of his county, a report in writing showing the amount of fees, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites due his office from each person or corporation which has remained due and unpaid for more than one year prior to January 1st, next preceding, and it shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney to immediately proceed to collect the same by any of the means provided by law, and to pay the amount so collected into the county treasury to the credit of the general county fund. The county auditor shall not issue his warrant to either of said officers for his salary for the month of January in any year, until said report has been filed with the prosecuting attorney as herein required."

Prior to the amendment of June 7, 1911, the county officers were not required to make any report of unpaid fees of their offices. They are now required to file annual reports of such unpaid fees with the prosecuting attorney of the county.

Also prior to the amendment of June 7, 1911, it was made the duty of the "county commissioners in conjunction with the prosecuting attorney," to collect such unpaid fees. It is now the sole duty of the prosecuting attorney to make such collections.

Your first inquiry is as to the right of the county commissioners to enter into a contract for the collection of such unpaid fees and pay a percentage of the amount collected as payment for such services.

Said section 2979, General Code, before amended, stated that the commissioners should collect such fees in any way provided by law. This section does not authorize the commissioners to enter into a special contract for the collection of these fees. They are required to make the collections in any manner as may be provided by law. And no specific authority is found in any other statute authorizing the commissioners to enter into such contract.

Gholson, J., on page 190 of the opinion in case of Treadwell vs. Commissioners, 11 O. S., 183, says:

"The board of commissioners of a county is a quasi corporation, 'a local organization which, for the purposes of civil administration, is invested with a few of the functions characteristic of a corporate existence.' Commissioners of Hamilton County vs. Mighels, 7 Ohio St. 109, 115. A grant of powers to such a corporation must be strictly construed. Ib. When acting under a special power, it must act strictly on the conditions under which it is given. The Queen vs. Ellis, 6. Q. B., 501, 516; Stricker vs. Kelly, 7 Hill, 9-25."

In case of Beebe vs. Scheidt, 13 O. S., 406, Sutliff, C. J., delivering the opinion of the court, says on page 415:

> "But a different rule is generally applicable to inferior jurisdictions, which are governed in their proceedings strictly by statutory provisions. The general rule applicable to such inferior jurisdictions is, that in their proceedings they are to be held to the strict limits of their authority, as conferred and prescribed by the statute. And this rule is doubtless applicable to county commissioners as well as to justices of the peace."

The county commissioners are limited to the authority granted them by statute. As no authority is granted the commissioners, by statute, to enter into a special contract for the collection of unpaid fees of county officers, all such contracts are illegal and void.

Your second and third inquiries are as to the payment of additional fees to the prosecuting attorney for making collection of unpaid fees of county officers.

Neither the original section 2979, General Code, nor the amendment of June 7, 1911, provide any fees for the prosecuting attorney for making such collections.

The general duties of a prosecuting attorney are set forth in section 2917, General Code, which provides:

> "The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party, and no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve. He shall be the legal adviser for all township officers, and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees duly entered upon their journal, in which the compensation to be paid for such legal services shall be fixed. Such compensation shall be paid from the township fund."

There is no provision of statute authorizing the payment of fees to a prosecuting attorney for the services performed by him under section 2979, General Code, in the collection of unpaid fees of a county officer.

The prosecuting attorney is the legal adviser of the county and of the county officers. The unpaid fees of such officers are moneys due the county, which it is made the duty of the prosecuting attorney to collect. It is one of the duties of his office covered by his regular salary, and for which services he cannot draw any fee or pay in addition to the annual salary provided in section 3003, General Code.

Your fourth inquiry is to the right of a clerk of courts to collect delinquent fees and credit them to his fee fund, after the litigants have been notified by a collector employed by the county commissioners.

As any special contract entered into by the county commissioners for the collection of these fees is void, the notice by a collector so employed would be of no avail to alter the rights of the clerk of courts.

Section 2979, General Code, authorizing the collection of such fees, makes it the duty of the prosecuting attorney "to pay the amount so collected into the county treasury to the credit of the general county fund."

Section 2986, General Code, as amended in 101 Ohio Laws, 345, and before its repeal in 102 Ohio Laws, 137, provided:

> "If a probate judge, sheriff, clerk of the court of common pleas, or recorder has not received the full amount of his salary for any year, as provided in this chapter, but, during such year, has earned fees payable to his office in an amount equal to the aggregate of his salary and the compensation paid for that year to his deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks and other employes, except court constables, he shall be entitled to receive from the proper fee fund, on the allowance of the county commissioners, an amount equal to the difference between his salary for such year paid to him during his incumbency and the salary for that year, as herein fixed, whenever that amount is collected by a successor to him in office from the unpaid fees earned during such years, or, if the entire difference be not collected, he shall receive such part thereof as is so collected."

By this section fees collected by a successor in office are to be used in meeting any deficiency in the salary of the officer earning such fees. Such fees so collected must of necessity be credited to the fee fund of such officer.

Section 2979, supra, does not prohibit the collection of such unpaid fees by the respective officers. The duty therein prescribed is an additional means of collecting such fees. Section 2986, recognized the right of a successor to collect fees earned by a predecessor in such office. This right is not taken away by section 2979, General Code. If a successor in office can collect unpaid fees, certainly the officer who earned the fees can collect them and such collection can be made after such unpaid fees have been certified to the commissioners or, prosecuting attorney for collection.

Can such collections be credited to the fee fund of such officer?

Section 2983, General Code, as amended in 102 Ohio Laws, 136, reads:

> "On the first business day of April, July, October and January, and at the end of his term of office, each such officer shall pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor, all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by his office during the preceding quarter or part thereof for official services, which money shall be kept in separate funds and credited to the office from which received; and he shall also at the end of each calendar year, make and file a sworn statement with the county commissioners of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind which has been due his office and unpaid for more than one year prior to the date of such statement is required to be made."

Original section 2983, General Code, provided:

> "At the end of each quarter, each such officer shall pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor, all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by his office during such quarter, for his official services, which money shall be kept in separate funds by the county treasurer, and credited to the office from which they were received."

The above provisions were retained in the amendment to said section in 101 Ohio Laws, 199

As section 2983 now reads, all moneys collected for official services during the quarter shall be credited to the office. While prior to May 25, 1911, all moneys collected for "his official services," that is, for the services of the officer making the quarterly report, were to be credited to his office.

The purport of this difference is seen when it is considered that prior to the act of May 25, 1911, 102 Ohio Laws, 136, the salary of the county officers was to be paid from the fees collected by such office, and now such salary is paid from the general fund of the county.

The purpose of the salary law was, as existed prior to the act of May 25, 1911, that the salary of said officers should be paid from the fees earned by such office, and that any deficiency should be paid from collections of unpaid fees, however such collections might be made.

In my opinion all fees earned prior to May 25, 1911, whether collected by the officer earning such fees or by his successor, should be credited to the fee fund of the officer earning such fees. This applies also to the fees reported delinquent and collected by such officer or a successor in office.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

405.

NEWSPAPERS—PURCHASE OF BY CITY SOLICITOR FOR PROCURING FORMS OF ORDINANCES, ILLEGAL IN ABSENCE OF AUTHORIZING ORDINANCE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 19, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your inquiry of August 4th, in which you inquire as follows:

> "Is it a legal use of the public funds of a city to be disbursed in payment of subscription to the daily papers of the larger cities for the solicitor's department, it is claimed, for the purpose of obtaining forms of ordinances in those cities which were supposed to be up-to-date and bear the approval of the best legal minds?"

In reply thereto I desire to say that in the absence of an ordinance passed by the council of a city, authorizing the purchase of daily papers for the solicitor's department, it is clearly illegal for the solicitor to supply his own department with the daily papers of the larger cities out of the public funds, even though such papers are purchased for the purpose, as stated in your inquiry, of obtaining forms of ordinances in those cities which are supposed to be up-to-date and bear the approval of the very best legal minds.

I believe that this fully answers your inquiry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 405.

AUDITOR'S SALARY LAW — COMPENSATION THEREUNDER FOR EXPENSES INCURRED IN DUTIES PERFORMED BEFORE THE REPEAL OF THE STATUTES PRESCRIBING THEM—"VILLAGE"—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

The statutes prescribing for the county auditor the duty of appraising railroads and his compensation therefor, all of which are now repealed allowed $3.00 per day and five cents a mile for the traveling incidental thereto. For duties performed under this statute while in force the auditor should be allowed his "mileage," i. e., his five cents a mile for traveling expenses as that term is intended in the section of the auditor's salary law stating that his salary shall be instead of all "fees," "costs," "penalties," "percentages," "allowances," or "perquisites." When a statute is susceptible to two constructions the fairest interpretation should be upheld.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 27th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "What, if any, expenses incurred by a county auditor in connection with the appraisement of railroads subsequent to the enactment of the county officers' salary law might such auditor be legally reimbursed for?"

The duties of a county auditor as a member of the board of appraisers and assessors for railroads, or suburban or interurban electric railroads were prescribed by sections 5415 to 5431 inclusive, General Code, now all repealed. I presume, of course, that your question relates to transactions occurring while these sections were in force. The only section of the entire chapter in any way bearing upon compensation of the auditor was section 5430, which provided as follows:

> "Each county auditor shall be paid from the county treasury of his county the sum of $3.00 for each day's attendance as a member of any board under this chapter, and five cents a mile going to and returning from its place of meeting."

Section 2996 of the General Code, one of the sections of the county officers' salary law to which county auditors become subject upon its enactment and going into effect, provides as follows:

> "Such salaries shall be instead of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and all other perquisites of whatever kind which any of such officials may collect and receive." * * *

As you are doubtless aware, the courts in applying this section, after giving full meaning and effect to this language, have held that, together with sections 2977 and 3000 of the same act, which it is unnecessary to quote, it takes from each county officer subject to the salary law the right to the personal use and enjoyment of the fees pertaining to his office, such fees still being chargeable but being payable to his fee fund.

The real question to be determined is whether or not the word "mileage" is embraced in any of the following expressions:

(a) Fees.
(b) Costs.
(c) Percentages.
(d) Allowances.
(e) And all other perquisites.

A fee is defined by Webster to be:

> "A reward or compensation for services rendered or to be rendered.
> "A charge fixed by law for the services of a public officer or for the use of a privilege under the controlling government; as sheriffs' fees, custom house fees, license fee."

By "costs" are unquestionably meant, amounts assessed in favor of the sheriff, by some officer, as due him for services rendered.

"Percentage" means, of course, a certain allowance, duty, rate of interest on a hundred. In plain English, it means an amount due and payable to one, based on a per cent. of some fund handled, or an amount due for services in reference to some fund, based on per cent.

An "allowance" is a sum granted as a reimbursement, or a bounty, or as appropriate for any purpose. Webster says the word means, in law:

> "A sum in addition to the regular taxable costs awarded by court to a party in a difficult case."

"Perquisites" are gains or profits incidentally made from employment in addition to a regular salary or wages.

I do not believe the word "mileage," as used in the Revised Statutes, section 5430, is embraced in any of the foregoing expressions. It will be kept in mind that the auditors were to receive three dollars for each day's attendance as their per diem; this measures their compensation. They were also to receive five cents a mile, going to and returning from the place of meeting. What is this five cents per mile for? Evidently it is the statutory measure of expenses incurred in traveling and for hotel bills, and is not a fee, or a cost, or a penalty, or a percentage, or an allowance. Mileage is defined by Webster as "an allowance for traveling expenses at a certain rate per mile." Mileage is defined in the Century dictionary as "an allowance or compensation for travel, or conveyance, reckoned by the mile; especially payment allowed to a public functionary for the expenses of travel in the discharge of his duties, according to the number of miles passed over; as the mileage of a sheriff, circuit judge or member of congress, or of a legislature."

It may readily be seen that the mileage of a circuit judge would surely not be considered as part of his compensation, nor as a fee, nor as a perquisite, nor as an allowance, nor as a cost, nor as a percentage; in my judgment, it is simply the legislative measure of reasonable expenses of the officer.

I mean this in connection with section 5430, Revised Statutes, and do not intend that the term "mileage" is always applied in that sense. I think this interpretation is equitable and fair. It would hardly be expected that a county auditor should travel over different sections of the state at his own expense. While section 5430 is now repealed it was not repealed until the auditor was relieved from the labor of appraising railroads.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that county auditors may be legally paid through the county treasury for the expenses incurred in the discharge of the duties imposed upon them by Chapter 5, Title I, Volume II, General Code.

It may be said further that the law being repealed there will be no occasion for this question arising in the future, and I think no injury will be done by allowing auditors who rendered this service, reimbursement for their actual expenses, and the statutory measurement thereof seems to be entirely reasonable. When a statute is subject to two interpretations a court will always give it that one which is consonant with just and fair dealing. In a county like Vinton, where the auditor receives a small salary, it would be a great hardship upon him to appraise two railroads, if not three, and meet the expenses of travel and hotel bills from his own pocket. The same is true of a county like Jackson, penetrated by at least four railroads.

My opinion is, therefore, that the auditors, to whom you refer in your inquiry, are legally entitled to be paid their mileage, not under any of the heads stated but as statutory expenses.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 405.

SALARY OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—LIMITATION OF 115% OF SALARY OF 1911 DOES NOT COMPRISE DITCH FEES—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION—"IN THE AGGREGATE."

The limitations placed upon the salary of county commissioners by 102 O. L. 514, amending 3001 G. C., stating that the salary shall not exceed 115% of the compensation for the year 1911, is to be construed as excluding the item of ditch fees notwithstanding the words "in the aggregate" used in this connection.

This conclusion is necessary in order to allow the application of further provisions to the effect that the salary shall be paid in equal monthly installments, which would be an impossibility were "ditch fees" with their irregularity and uncertainty to be allowed to constitute part of the measure. The construction is further necessary to sustain the rule of uniformity, allowing equal compensation for equal work to all county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 29th, calling attention to the question arising out of my opinion to you under date of August 10th, said opinion relating to the manner of computing the annual salary of county commissioners under House Bill No. 183, amending section 3001, General Code, 102 O. L. 514.

In passing upon one of the questions which you asked in the letter which called for this opinion I used the following language:

> "It provides that the compensation for the year 1912 and each year thereafter 'shall not in the aggregate exceed 115% of the compensation' for the year 1911. The phrase 'in the aggregate' indicates that this limitation is not upon the primary compensation of the commissioners alone, but upon their entire compensation, including that for ditch work."

As an examination of my previous opinion will disclose, this language was employed for the purpose of illustrating an entirely different point, and I confess that my attention was not especially directed to the exact meaning of the phrase "in the aggregate."

Your letter of September 29th points out several practical difficulties, inequalities and inconsistencies which will arise if the maximum compensation of county commissioners be measured by 115% of the entire amount received for the year 1911, including ditch work, and suggests reasons why it should be held that the basis of the computation made necessary by the inclusion of this limitation in the amended section should be the salary of each county commissioner for the year 1911 exclusive of ditch work fees.

As you state the literal and primary meaning of amended section 3001 is that which I defined in my former opinion. Excellent reasons sometimes exist, however, for disregarding the literal language employed in a statute. Directing my attention now for the first time to this particular question which was not raised in the letter which called for the previous opinion, I beg to state that in my judgment the language which I used in said opinion is not justified by a careful examination of the amended section in connection with other related statutes. Said amended section provides in part that:

> "Such compensation (referring primarily to all compensation described in the preceding provisions of the statute, and thus including ditch compensation) shall be in equal monthly installments from the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor."

I confess that when I first read this provision I was of the impression that it applied, as it seems to apply, to ditch fees, as well as to the salary of the commissioner. Strength is lent to such a conclusion by the fact that the previous sentence of the section is as follows:

> "Such compensation shall be in full payment of all services rendered as such commissioner and shall not in any case exceed $4,000 per annum."

This sentence directly follows the sentence in which the compensation for ditch work is provided for, and in reason and logic it imposes a limitation upon the amount which any commissioner may receive, whether from ditch work or otherwise.

This question, so far as I am able to ascertain, has never been judicially determined, and inasmuch as it is not directly before me at the present time I am not disposed to make any holding as to whether or not the limitation of $4,000 per annum includes compensation for ditch services.

There is at least one good reason for holding that the phrase "such compensation" as used in the last sentence of section 3001, as amended, does not include compensation for ditch work, regardless of whether or not the same phrase as used in the preceding sentence does include such compensation. That reason grows out of the fact that ditch fees cannot in the very nature of things be paid in equal monthly installments or be regarded as a part of the salary payable in equal monthly installments. Until the limit of $300 per annum is reached, the compensation of each commissioner for ditch work is in the purest sense of the word a per diem fee. The phrase is "$3.00 for each day of time he is actually engaged in ditch work."

Section 6535, General Code, governs the manner of payment of such compensation as follows:

"Fees under this chapter shall be paid out of the county treasury as soon as the bill of items thereof is examined and allowed by the county commissioners and the auditor shall issue orders therefor on such allowance." * * *

That is to say, itemized bills must be presented by each commissioner to the board of commissioners and allowed by the board before payment. By further examination of the statute, which it will not be necessary here to quote, it appears that ditch services exacted of county commissioners thereby are specific, and it cannot be ascertained in advance what the amount of compensation due to a given commissioner will be for such services. In short, the liability of the county to the commissioner is not fixed until his itemized bills have been filed.

This reason then is a sufficient one for holding that the phrase "such compensation" as used in the last sentence of amended section 3001 could not have been intended to embrace ditch fees. The same phrase is used in the same connection in original section 3001, General Code, and the same construction must be given to that sentence. From the foregoing, then, the following conclusions are to be drawn:

1. Both in original section 3001 and in amended section 3001 the word "compensation" either refers solely to the salary of the county commissioners, exclusive of their ditch fees, or is used in a different sense in connection with the limitations of $3,500 and of $4,000 respectively imposed by these two sections from that in which it is used elsewhere in the same section.

2. It is not accurate therefore to suppose that because the word "compensation" as used in the sentence of the section which imposes the $4,000 limitation might be regarded as including ditch fees, therefore, the same word as used earlier in the section must be given this broad meaning even in connection with the phrase "in the aggregate."

It is true that the use of the last mentioned phrase "in the aggregate" lends a great deal of color to the conclusion which I expressed in the former opinion. A close examination of the section, however, will disclose the fact that this phrase does not necessarily indicate that the legislature meant thereby to include ditch fees. The first sentence of section 3001 provides for the measurement of the annual compensation of each county commissioner by the aggregate of the tax duplicate for real estate and personal property on the 20th day of December, 1911. The method is to allow $900 for each five million dollars on the duplicate and $3.00 on each one hundred thousand additional. The result thus obtained might appropriately be referred to as "an aggregate compensation" inasmuch as it is a compensation ascertained by adding together the different products or sums arrived at by making the computations referred to in the first sentence.

In this sense then the ordinary salary of a county commissioner is his "aggregate" compensation. This is certainly a forced and unusual meaning to give to the phrase "in the aggregate," yet I am satisfied that it is the meaning which must prevail for the following reasons:

1. To hold otherwise, as I seem to hold in my previous opinion, renders it impossible to pay the aggregate compensation of each county commissioner "in equal monthly installments from the county treasury," and would render meaningless a part of section 3001 as amended.

2. To hold otherwise would be to produce a law of unequal operation and a result prohibited by the constitution. That is to say, under original section 3001 it was possible and indeed probable in many counties that no two commissioners would receive the same compensation if ditch work fees be regarded as a part thereof. Each commissioner was paid what he earned as ditch fees and the results were not equal unless each of the commissioners earned $300 by ditch work. Therefore, the amount "paid to each county commissioner for the year 1911" would not be equal in every case if ditch fees be included therein.

For all of the foregoing reasons then, I am of the opinion that the amount upon which the computation of 115% on which section 3001, General Code, is to be based, is the amount received by each commissioner during the year ending in September, 1911, exclusive of ditch fees. For similar reasons I am likewise of the opinion that the 115% so ascertained is a limitation not upon the amount which each commissioner may receive from all sources including ditch fees, but only upon the amount which he may receive as salary based upon the duplicate of the county in force on the 20th day of December, 1911.

I herewith return copy of opinion of August 10th, which upon careful examination I find to be correct in all respects save only the one particular reviewed and corrected in this opinion. In making this statement, however, I do not wish to be regarded as having held in either opinion that the maximum limitation of $4,000 per annum is upon the amount which may be received by each county commissioner including ditch fees. I regard this question as extremely doubtful especially in view of the express provision that "such compensation shall be in full payment of all services rendered as such commissioner." I would advise, however, that this sentence be construed by your bureau in the same manner as the corresponding sentence of original section 3001, which imposes the $3,500 limitation, has been construed and applied in the past.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your inquiry of August 4th, in which you inquire as follows:

> "Is it a legal use of the public funds of a city to be disbursed in payment of subscription to the daily papers of the larger cities for the solicitor's department, it is claimed, for the purpose of obtaining forms of ordinances in those cities which were supposed to be up-to-date and bear the approval of the best legal minds?"

In reply thereto, I desire to say that it is clearly illegal for the solicitor to supply his own department with the daily papers of the larger cities, out of the public funds even though such papers are purchased for the purpose, as stated in your inquiry, of obtaining forms of ordinances in those cities which are supposed to be up-to-date and bear the approval of the best legal minds.

I believe that this fully answers your inquiry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General

408.

POOR RELIEF TO INDIGENT FAMILY OF A POLICE OFFICER KILLED ON DUTY—POWERS OF COUNCIL—STATUTORY LIMITATIONS.

As it has not the statutory authorization, a council cannot pass a special ordinance for the payment of money to the bereaved family of a worthy police officer killed in the performance of duty.

Such relief may be had only through the establishment of a police relief fund under 4616, General Code, or by a general ordinance as provided in 4383, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Jos. T. Tracy, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of July 8, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion upon the following:

> "A city has never created a police relief fund, but desires to pay to the family of a deceased policeman a sum of money authorized by ordinance of council as a means of relief to said family. The policeman was a regularly appointed and qualified official of the city and was killed in attempting to make an arrest while in the discharge of duty. Would the provisions of section 4383 authorize the city to make such expenditure?"

Section 4383, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Council may provide by general ordinance for the relief out of the police and fire funds, of members of either department temporarily or permanently disabled in the discharge of their duty. Nothing herein shall impair, restrict or repeal any provision of law authorizing the levy of taxes in municipalities to provide for firemen's police and sanitary police pension funds, and to create and perpetuate boards of trustees for the administration of such funds."

Section 4616, General Code, et seq., provide for the establishment of a police relief fund. It appears that the city in question has not taken advantage of these statutes and therefore any relief granted must be by virtue of section 4383, supra.

It is well established that money can be paid from a public fund only for such purposes as are authorized by statute or ordinance, and that council can only exercise those powers conferred upon it by the statutes.

By virtue of section 4383, General Code, council is authorized to grant relief to members of the police or fire departments who become temporarily or permanently disabled in the discharge of their duty. The relief to be provided is "of members" of the department. There is no provision in this section for relief of the family of the member of the department. Council must stay within the authority granted them by statute, and this authority cannot be extended by implication. The case you cite is no doubt worthy of relief, but relief cannot be granted by virtue of this section.

The city would not be authorized under section 4383, General Code, to make an expenditure for the relief of the family of a policeman killed while in the discharge of his duty.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

409.

COUNTY'S LIABILITY FOR EXPENSES OF DEPUTY SUPERVISOR OF ELECTION IN PUBLISHING LIST OF CANDIDATES OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS—NO NECESSITY FOR CLERK OF SCHOOL BOARD TO RECEIVE A LIST OF CANDIDATES.

As the deputy state supervisor of elections is required by section 4998 to publish a list of the names of candidates for all school districts it is legal to pay out of the county treasury the expenses of making such publication.

It is not necessary for the clerk of the board of education to be furnished the names of candidates for members of the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 4, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of September 18th you submitted for my opinion the following:

> "Section 3897*a*, Revised Statutes, applied only to city school districts. The last clause of said section provides for publishing or posting a list of the names of the candidates by the deputy state supervisors of elections. Said provision of said section is now section 4998, General Code. Section 3970-11, Revised Statutes, now section 4839, General Code, seemed to apply to all districts and both sections as enacted in the Code seem applicable to all school districts. Question: Is it legal to pay out of the county treasury expenses incurred by the deputy state supervisors of election for posting notices under section 4998 outside of city districts? When nominations have been made by petition, there seems to be no way provided by statute by which the clerk of the board of education is to be furnished the names of candidates for members of the board. Is this necessary?

Section 3897*a*, Revised Statutes, provides as follows:

> "Boards of education in city school districts shall organize on the first Monday in January after the election held for members of the board of education by the election of one of their members as president, and the election of a clerk who may or may not be a member of the board, the president to be elected for one year and the clerk to be elected for a term not to exceed two years; they shall fix the time of holding regular meetings. Upon the organization of the first boards of education elected under this act, the previously existing boards of education are thereby abolished and said newly boards shall be their successors in all respects.
>
> "Not less than fifteen days before the election of members of boards of education, nominations of candidates therefor may be made by nomination papers, signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than twenty-five qualified electors of either sex of the school district, except that in city school districts, such nomination papers shall be signed by petitioners not less in number than one for every one hundred persons who voted at the next preceding general election in such city; and whenever each of such candidates shall be so nominated and his or their names shall be presented to the county board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county in which such district is situated not less than fifteen days prior to the ensuing election, the said board of deputy state supervisors of elections shall publish on two different days prior to such election the names of such candidates in two newspapers of opposite politics in the school district, if there be such printed and published therein, or, if no newspaper is printed therein, by posting such list of names in at least five public places in the school district."

Section 4997 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Nominations of candidates for the office of member of the board of education may be made by nomination papers, signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than twenty-five qualified electors of either sex of the school district, except in city school districts, such nomination papers shall be signed by petitioners not less in number than one for every hundred persons who voted at the next preceding general election in such city."

Section 4998 of the General Code provides as follows:

"When nominations of candidates for member of the board of education have been made by nomination papers filed with the board of deputy state supervisors, as herein provided, such board of deputy state supervisors shall publish on two different days prior to the election a list of the names of such candidates in two newspapers of opposite politics in the school district, if there is such printed and published therein. If no newspaper is printed in such school district, the board shall post such list in at least five public places therein."

Section 4839, General Code (which is, save for minor changes, identical with section 3970-11, Revised Statutes), provides as follows:

"The clerk of each board of education shall publish a notice of all school elections in a newspaper of general circulation in the district or post written or printed notices thereof in five public places in the district at least ten days before the holding of such election. Such notices shall specify the time and place of the election, the number of members of the board of education to be elected, and the term for which they are to be elected, or the nature of the question to be voted upon."

By an examination of section 3897*a*, Revised Statutes, above set forth, it will be noted that while the first paragraph thereof applies solely to city school districts, that the second paragraph thereof is not so restricted in its operation, as it states that nominations for candidates for boards of education generally may be made by nomination papers signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than twenty-five qualified electors, but that in city school districts such nomination papers shall be signed by not less than one for each one hundred persons who voted at the next preceding general election in such city. This section was codified by the commission as section 4997 of the General Code, and is general in its application.

The remaining part of the second paragraph of said section 3897*a*, Revised Statutes, states that whenever each of such candidates shall be nominated, etc., and I construe such provision of said section to likewise be general in its operation. Said portion of said section was codified under section 4998, General Code, supra.

The provisions of said section 4998 of the General Code are general in their operation and apply to township, village and special school districts as well as to city school districts, and as said section provides that the board of deputy state supervisors shall publish on two different days prior to the election a list of the names of candidates for members of boards of education I construe the provisions of such section as mandatory upon the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, and that the same applies to all school districts.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is legal to pay out of the county treasury the expenses incurred by the deputy state supervisor of elections for posting a list of the names of such candidates as required by section 4998, General Code, outside of city districts.

Under section 4839, General Code, supra, it is made the duty of the clerk of each board of education to publish a notice of all school elections as therein provided, which notices shall specify the time and place of the election, the number of members of the board of education to be elected, and the term for which they are to be elected.

It is not, however, made the duty of such clerk to publish the names of the candidates to be voted upon, and, therefore, in answer to your second inquiry I am of opinion that it is not necessary that the clerk of the board of education be furnished the names of candidates for members of the board, his duty as defined by section 4839 being limited in that regard to publishing notice of the number of members of the board of education to be elected and the term for which they are to be elected.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 412.

REPORTS AND OPINIONS OF THE BUREAU OF INSPECTION AND SUPERVISION OF PUBLIC OFFICES—PUBLIC RECORDS.

The reports of examinations and all opinions and advices to public officials of the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices are public records and as such should be accessible to the public at any time during reasonable office hours.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 6, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your inquiry of August 1, 1911, in which inquiry you ask as follows:

> "Are the letter copying books of this office, containing instructions to our examiners, opinions and advices to public officials, public records which are accessible to the public at any time during reasonable office hours?
>
> "We might add that we have always considered the same as such and they have been accessible to anyone desiring to consult same, but desire your opinion on the matter."

The department of the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices was created by an act entitled "An act to create a bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, and to establish a uniform system of public accounting, auditing and reporting, under the administration of the auditor of state." Said act provides in substance that there shall be in the department of the auditor of state a bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, that the auditor shall be the chief inspector and supervisor with authority to appoint deputies and clerks, and it fixes the salaries and provides for the payment of their expenses.

In the case of the State of Ohio ex rel. vs. Shumate, in 72 O. S., 487, at page 491 of the opinion, the supreme court uses the following language:

> "It also provides upon the installment of the bureau for the appointment of examiners by the auditor with compensation fixed by the statute and for the examination by him or his deputies into the financial affairs of all public offices and that reports of such examinations be made matters of record in said office."

And inasmuch as the department is entirely concerned in looking after public accounts of the state generally and of all of the counties of the state, and inasmuch as the reports of examinations made by the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices are made matters of record in said department, I am of the opinion that such records are public records and as such are open and accessible to the public within reasonable office hours, and I am of the further opinion that all opinions and advices to public officials are likewise public records and as such are accessible to the public any time during reasonable office hours.

I believe I have fully answered your inquiry and beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 412.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—RIGHT OF TAXPAYER TO MAINTAIN MANDAMUS TO COMPEL DEPOSIT OF FUNDS AS PER STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

The duty of the board of education to deposit the money of the school district on competitive bidding is such an obligation of public interest and right as to permit an individual taxpayer to maintain a mandamus suit for its compulsion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 6, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your communication of April 11, 1911, in which you enclose a letter of inquiry received by your department from Horace Holbrook, Esq., of Warren, Ohio.

I wish to say that the delay in answering your request has been due to the large number of matters which have come to this department for our consideration.

In his letter to your department, Mr. Holbrook inquires as follows:

"I wish you would also submit this letter to the attorney general without delay, as it concerns the enforcement of an important law which is practically nullified by the non-feasance of the local school boards. I refer to section 7604, General Code, as amended 101 O. L., 290, requiring school moneys to be deposited in banks at competitive bidding. This statute was passed April 25, 1904, and gave school boards the right to establish depositories and solicit bids from banks for school moneys at competitive bidding. The law was made mandatory May 10, 1910. Not the slightest attention has been paid to the law in this county. July 15, 1907, Examiner J. C. Fowler said in his Warren report: 'We would recommend that the board take advantage of the protection and profits granted under section 3968, Revised Statutes, and select a depository for the funds. Under the present arrangement the treasurer is provided with no protection, and the board is failing to get several hundred dollars annually that properly belongs to this school district.'

"The treasurer tells me that ever since he took the office he had labored in vain to have the board to observe this law. He frankly attributes their non-action to bank influence. You may judge whether he is right. There are three banks in Warren. The president of one is president of the school board; the cashier of another is a member; and the daughter of the president of the third bank is also a member.

"So far as I know not a school board in the county has taken advantage of the law to get interest on the funds. The school moneys of the county amount to about $260,000 a year, and in Warren to about $60,000. The Warren banks at the present time have about $30,000 of the local school money on which they pay not a cent of interest. One bank a few months ago bought $50,000 Warren school bonds, and not a dollar passed in the transaction. The bank simply credited the district with the amount, drew interest on the bonds and also had the use of the money until it was checked out from time to time for building purposes.

"I am informed by the treasurer that Examiner Fowler made an examination last May and again recommended taking advantage of the law. The clerk cannot find the report and thinks it was never filed.

"Now I am going to make an attempt to enforce this law in Trumbull county, and would be pleased to have the advice and assistance of the bureau and the attorney general's office.

"Monday, April 10, I will serve the enclosed demands on the prosecuting attorney and the city solicitor.

"I am not sure that a taxpayer's action in mandamus can be maintained in a district where there is no city or village solicitor. It appears from sections 4313, 4314, General Code, that such action is proper when the solicitor refuses to bring it, but I can find no analogous section applicable to a prosecuting attorney. Section 2921 defines the duties of a prosecuting attorney as to a restraining order, but says nothing about mandamus, and section 2922 does not in tenus confer the right upon a taxpayer to bring mandamus.

"It seems to me that it is an idle thing for your bureau to uncover violations of law unless the prosecuting attorney promptly and vigorously follows it up in the courts. When he refuses to act I presume the duty devolves upon the attorney general, but if he has no authority in these school matters I will bring the actions as a taxpayer if the statutes confer that right."

Mr. Holbrook in his letter inquires with regard to the depository laws of school funds and also as to the enforcement of said depository laws. This department construed sections 7604 and 7605 of the General Code (101 O. L. 290), 7606 and 7607, General Code (101 O. L. 290), in an opinion rendered to Harry D. Smith, city solicitor of the city of Xenia, Ohio, and I herewith enclose a copy of that opinion. This department held in that opinion that a board of education is without legal authority to deposit its funds in any bank without interest, and that no school funds can be deposited in any bank unless interest not less than two per cent. is paid upon such deposits.

Mr. Holbrook further inquires as to his right as a private citizen to institute a suit in mandamus to compel the respective boards of education of his city and county to deposit the school funds in accordance with section 7604, as amended, 101 O. L., 290; section 7605, amended, 101 O. L., 290; section 7606 and section 7607, as amended, 101 O. L. 290. In reply thereto, I desire to say that the supreme court of this state in the case of State ex rel. vs. Henderson, 38 O. S., at page 648, in the opinion thereof state the reasons as follows:

> "As regards the degree of interest on the part of the relator, requisite to make him a proper party on whose information the proceedings may be instituted, a distinction is taken between cases where the extraordinary aid of a mandamus is invoked, merely for the purpose of enforcing or protecting a private right, unconnected with the public interest, and those cases where the purpose of the application is the enforcement of a purely public right, where the people at large are the real party in interest, and, while the authorities are somewhat conflicting, yet the decided weight of authority supports the proposition that, where the relief is sought merely for the protection of private rights, the relator must show some personal or special interest in the subject-matter, since he is regarded as the real party in interest, and his rights must clearly appear. On the other hand, where the question is one of public right and the object of mandamus is to procure the enforcement of a public duty, the people are regarded as the real party, and the relator need not show that he has any legal or special interest in the result, it being sufficient to show that he is a citizen, and as such, interested in the execution of the laws."

Therefore, I am of the opinion that under the holding of the court in the above cited case that inasmuch as this is a question of public right and that the object of the suit in mandamus would be to procure the enforcement of a public duty that Mr. Holbrook would have the legal right to institute a suit in mandamus for the purpose of compelling the respective boards of education of his city and county to deposit the school funds in accordance with section 7604 to 7607, inclusive, of the General Code, which sections of the General Code are fully set out in the opinion to which I have called your attention and cited above.

Section 12283 of the General Code provides for what purpose a writ of mandamus may be issued, as follows:

> "Mandamus is a writ issued, in the name of the state, to an inferior tribunal, corporation, board or person commanding the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust or station."

Section 12286 provides generally for the application for a writ of mandamus as follows, to-wit:

> "The application for the writ must be by petition, in the name of the state on the relation of the person applying, and verified by affidavit. The court may require notice of it to be given to the defendant, or grant an order to show cause why it should not be allowed, or allow the writ without notice."

In the case of State ex rel. vs. the Board of Education of Perrysburg township, 27 O. S., 96, the court held that:

> "Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the board to appropriate moneys already in their treasury for that purpose, toward the payment of such bonds, and to levy such tax as may be necessary to complete such payments."

Therefore, it seems to me that the school boards in question can be compelled by suit in mandamus to deposit their money in banks as required by sections 7604, 7605, 7607 and 7609 of the General Code, as the same were amended by the 1910 session of the Ohio legislature, 101 O. L. 290.

In view of all the foregoing I am clearly of the opinion that a taxpayer can legally maintain a suit in mandamus to require school boards to deposit the money of such school districts on competitive bidding, as provided in sections 7604, 7605, 7607 and 7609 of the General Code, as amended, 101 O. L., page 290.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

E 412.

FEES OF MARSHAL, SPECIAL POLICE OFFICERS—AND REGULAR POLICE OFFICIALS FOR SERVICES IN MAYOR'S COURT—POWERS OF DISCRETION VESTED IN MAGISTRATE.

Where a marshal of a village, accompanied by a regular police officer and a special officer sworn in by a mayor, go to Salem, Ohio, about ten miles distant and are there joined by two special officers sworn in by the mayor of Salem, where they arrest nine men and are brought to Lisbon in charge of three officers who reside there, separate affidavits being filed and warrants issued for each person, seven of whom plead guilty and two of whom are bound over, the fees should be charged as follows:

The marshal under section 4387, General Code, 20 cents only for each person conducted by himself or his deputies or other officers into court and the other officers $1.50 each as assistants.

The total amount of the costs to all officers should be divided pro rata among the several defendants.

The magistrate may, however, allow such additional amount for transporting and sustaining prisoners as in his discretion seems necessary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 6, 1911.

Hon. W. B. Moore, Village Solicitor, Lisbon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of April 7, 1911, and I wish to apologize for the delay in this matter, which has been due to the overwhelming volume of business that has been flowing into this department, much of which being of such a nature as to command almost my entire attention.

In reply to your inquiry, which is as follows:

> "The marshal of the village, accompanied by a regular police officer and a special officer sworn in by the mayor, go to Salem, Ohio, a city about ten miles distant, and are there joined by two special officers sworn in by the mayor of Salem. All of the officers then proceed to a room in Salem where they arrest nine men, who are brought to Lisbon in charge of the three officers who reside here. Separate affidavits are filed and warrants issued against each person, seven of whom plead guilty as charged, and the other two waive hearing and are bound over to the grand jury.
>
> "What fees, in your opinion, can be charged for mileage and what fees to cover a compensation paid by the mayor to the special officers employed, and in what cases?"

I beg to say that section 3347 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "For services rendered, duly elected and qualified constables shall be entitled to receive the following fees: For services and return of copies, order of arrest, warrant, attachment, garnishee, writ of replevin, or mittimus, forty cents each, for each person named in the writ; service and return of summons, twenty-five cents for each person named in the writ; service and return of subpoena, twenty-five cents for one person, service on each additional person named in subpoena, ten cents; service of execution on goods or body, forty cents; on all money made on execution, four per cent.; on each day's attendance before justice of the peace, or jury trial, one dollar; each day's attendance before justice of the peace on criminal trial, one dollar; on each day's attendance before justice of the peace in forcible detainer, without jury, one dollar; sumoning jury, one dollar; mileage, twenty cents for the first mile, and five cents per mile for each additional mile; assistance in criminal causes, one dollar and fifty cents per day, each; transporting and sustaining prisoners, allowance made by the magistrate, and paid on his certificate; serving all other writs or notices not herein named, forty cents, and mileage as in other cases; copies of all writs, notices, orders or affidavits served, twenty-five cents; summoning and swearing appraisers in case of replevin and attachment, one dollar in each case; advertising property for sale on execution, forty cents; taking bond in replevin, and all other cases, fifty cents; each day's attendance on the grand jury, two dollars."

For the fees of marshal section 4387 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In the discharge of his proper duties, he shall have like powers, be subject to like responsibilities and shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases, for services actually performed by himself or his deputies and such additional compensation as the council prescribes. In no case shall he receive any fees or compensation for services rendered by any watchman or any other officer, nor shall he receive for guarding, safe keeping or conducting into the mayor's or police court any person arrested by himself or deputies or by any other officer a greater compensation than twenty cents."

I am of the opinion, and which opinion is based upon section 4387 of the General Code, cited above, that the marshal of the village of Lisbon can only receive twenty cents (20c.) for each person conducted by himself or his deputies or other officers into the mayor's or police court, and that the regular police officer and the special officer sworn in by the mayor of Lisbon, and also the two special officers sworn in by the mayor of Salem are legally entitled to $1.50 each as assistants, which would be a total of $6.00 for the four officers.

It is further my opinion that the total amount of the costs of all the officers should be divided, pro rata, among the several defendants.

However, the magistrate may allow such an additional amount for transporting and sustaining prisoners as in his judgment seems necessary, and whatever amount so allowed is discretionary upon the part of the magistrate. I am,

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 417.

CLERKS AND ASSISTANTS IN AUDITOR'S OFFICE—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO AUTHORIZE COMPENSATION OF—LIABILITY OF AUDITOR FOR RECOGNITION OF ILLEGAL VOUCHER DRAWN ON EXCESS ALLOWANCES.

When the county commissioners have once resolved upon and fixed the allowance of the county auditor's office for clerk and assistants as provided by sections 2980, 2981 and 2629, a further allowance is beyond their powers. The county auditor is charged with knowledge of these limitations and if he allows vouchers drawn upon our excess allowance so fixed by the commissioners, recovery may be had against him for such amounts as he thus illegally warrants.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 10, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Sam A. Hudson, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 3, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

"The following entry appears upon the journal of the proceedings of the commissioners of Preble county under date of July 25, 1910:

"'By reason of the quadrennial appraisement, and owing to the fact that the present force in the auditor's office is insufficient to complete the work within the stated time, we therefore order the auditor to procure the additional help to complete said work and such help be paid from the county fund.'

"The earnings credited to the fee fund, including the 25% additional allowance under section 2629, was at the time of this action exhausted by the payment of the salaries of the auditor and his deputy.

"Who, if any one, is financially responsible for the amount paid for extra clerk hire in the auditor's office under this alleged order and from whom, if any one, may the same be recovered in an action at law?"

Section 2980, General Code, as amended in 101 Ohio Laws, page 348, provides:

"On the twentieth of each November such officer shall prepare and file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks and other employes, except court constables, of their respective offices, showing in detail the requirements of their offices for the year beginning January 1st next thereafter with the sworn statement of the amount expended by them for such assistants for the preceding year. Not later than five days after the filing of such statement, the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended by them for such period for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes of such officer, except court constables, which sum shall be reasonable and proper, and shall enter such finding upon their journal."

Section 2981, General Code, provides:

"Such officers may appoint and employ necessary deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers or other employes for their respective offices, fix their compensation and discharge them, and shall file with the county auditor certificates of such action. Such compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate for each office the amount fixed by the commissioners for such office. When so fixed the compensation of each duly appointed or employed deputy, assistant, bookkeeper, clerk and other employe shall be paid monthly from the county treasury, upon the warrant of the county auditor."

Section 2629, General Code, provides an additional allowance for clerk hire in the auditor's office, when the real property is to be appraised, as follows:

"The county commissioners of the several counties shall make an additional allowance to the county auditor for clerk hire, not exceeding twenty-five per cent. of the annual allowance made in the preceding sections in the years when the real property is required by law to be reappraised."

The above statutes govern the allowance to be made for deputies, clerk hire and other assistants in the office of the county auditor. By virtue of section 2981 the compensation of such assistants shall not exceed the allowance made by the county commissioners.

It appears from your letter that the allowance made by the commissioners for the auditor's office, and also the additional amount allowed by section 2629, have been expended.

The resolution in question had the effect of increasing the allowance for assistants in the office of the auditor. The county commissioners have limited jurisdiction. They must act within the provisions of the statute. There is no provision of the statutes granting the county commissioners power to increase an allowance for deputies and clerks of a county office after an allowance for the year has once been made. The resolution passed by the commissioners of Preble county set forth in your letter was therefore without authority of law and was void and illegal.

The last legislature has provided a means by which an additional allowance may be secured, but this law cannot affect your question.

The payment of the compensation of deputies and clerks is made by the county treasurer, upon warrant of the county auditor, as provided in section 2981, General Code.

In the case of Jones, Auditor, vs. Commissioners, 57 O. S., 189, the second syllabus finds that the auditor is not entitled to extra compensation for certain services therein enumerated, and the third syllabus reads:

> "The presentation by a county auditor to the commissioners, of a claim for any of such claimed services, and the drawing of money for the same from the county treasury, by means of his own warrant attempted to be authorized by an allowance by the commissioners, is a violation by such auditor of official duty, and a breach of that condition of his bond which provides for the faithful discharge of the duties of such office."

On page 217 of the opinion, Spear, J., says:

> "* * * We have already found that the several claims were all illegal; that is, there was no warrant of law for any claim whatever in either instance. This fact it must be presumed the auditor knew. Whether in fact he knew or not, it was his duty to know. The subject related to his own duties and his own compensation."

In the case in question the extra services were for clerk hire of the auditor. Compensation therefor was paid upon warrant of the auditor and was illegal. The auditor is presumed to know, and should know, the limitations placed upon him by law for clerk hire. And unauthorized resolutions of the commissioners would not protect him in drawing his warrant for payment of clerks employed under such resolution. The act of the auditor in drawing his warrant for such services was a violation of his official duty.

Recovery can be had from the auditor for all moneys paid from the county treasury for compensation of deputies, clerks and other assistants, over and above the annual allowance made by the commissioners and the twenty-five per cent. additional allowed in the years in which the real property is reappraised.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

419.

SHERIFFS—WHAT WRITS OF JUSTICE OF THE PEACE MUST BE SERVED IN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL CASES—STATUTORY PROVISIONS—DISPOSITIONS OF FEES RECEIVED.

A justice of the peace may issue writs to the sheriff and the sheriff is required to serve the same in civil cases only under the conditions provided for in 10242, General Code, where service cannot be had upon a railroad company within the county in which the justice of the peace holds office. Such fees are earned by the sheriff in his official capacity and must be turned into the fee fund.

A sheriff may be appointed special constable by a justice of the peace under 3331, General Code, however, and may retain for his personal benefit the fees so earned.

In criminal cases by virtue of 13500, General Code, the sheriff is required to serve all warrants issued to him by a justice of the peace and the fee accruing to him thereby being perquisites adjunctive to his official capacity must be turned into the fee fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 12, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter in which you inquire as follows:

> "May a justice of the peace issue writs to the sheriff and is the sheriff required to serve writs issued to him by a justice of the peace? If so, should the fees thereby earned be paid into his fee fund? If a sheriff is appointed special constable for a justice of the peace under section 3331, may the fees earned in such case be retained by the sheriff for his personal use?"

Replying to your inquiry, section 3334 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "All constables shall be ministerial officers in justices' courts, in their respective townships, in civil cases, and in their respective counties in criminal cases, and civil processes may be executed by them throughout the county, under the restriction and provisions of the law."

Section 10242, General Code, provides that, in civil cases before a justice of the peace, when the cause of action is against a railroad company, and the president of such railroad company does not reside in the county, and there is no person having charge of the ticket office or freight depot of such railroad company in said county, then the justice of the peace can issue summons to the sheriff of the county where such railroad company has its principal business office located. Said section reads as follows:

> "When the president of such company does not reside, and there is no such officer or depot in the county, then the justice of the peace shall issue a summons directed to the sheriff of the county where the principal business office of the company is located, with an indorsement on the back of the writ, of the name of the postoffice to which it shall be returned. Upon the receipt of the writ, the sheriff shall forthwith serve it personally upon the president, if found, or by leaving a copy at the business office of such company with the person having charge thereof, and immediately return the writ to the justice issuing it, by mail, directed to the postoffice named on its back."

So that, it is my opinion, based upon the provisions of the above quoted section, that a justice of the peace cannot legally issue writs to the sheriff as such officer in civil cases, except as provided in said section 10242; and the sheriff is not required to serve writs issued to him in civil cases by a justice of the peace unless such writ is received by him in accordance with the provisions contained in the above section, to-wit: Section 10242, General Code.

In criminal cases, however, a different rule seems to obtain as to the serving of warrants by a sheriff, when such warrants are issued to him by a justice of the peace. Section 13500 of the General Code provides that:

"The warrant shall be directed to the sheriff or to any constable of the county, or, when it is issued by an officer of a municipal corporation, to the marshal or other police officer thereof, and, by a copy of the affidavit inserted therein or annexed and referred to, shall show or recite the substance of the accusation and command such officer forthwith to take the accused and bring him before the magistrate or court issuing such warrant, or other magistrate of the county having cognizance of the case, to be dealt with according to law."

My deduction therefrom is that in criminal cases a justice of the peace may issue warrants to the sheriff of his respective county, and when so issued to him the sheriff is bound to receive and serve such warrants.

Replying to your second question I am of the opinion that fees earned by a sheriff in serving writs issued to him in civil cases by a justice of the peace, by virtue of section 10242, General Code, should be paid by the sheriff into his respective county fee fund. Likewise, any fees earned by the sheriff in serving warrants issued to him in criminal cases by a justice of the peace by virtue of section 13500 of the General Code should be paid into the fee fund of his county.

Answering your third question, section 3331, General Code, and which you cite in your inquiry, provides as follows:

"A justice of the peace may appoint a constable or constables for a special purpose, either in civil or criminal cases:

"1. When there is no constable in the township;

"2. In case of disability of one of the regular constables in the township;

"3. When the constable therein is a party to the suit;

"4. When, from the pressure of official business, the constables therein are not able to perform the duties required by the office.

"The justice making the appointment shall make a memorandum thereof on his docket, and require the person appointed to take an oath, as in other cases."

In my opinion, under the above provisions, the sheriff in his respective county is a ministerial officer of the justice courts of such county for serving warrants in criminal cases and cannot, therefore, be appointed a special constable in criminal cases by a justice of the peace of his county. As hereinbefore stated the sheriff, by virtue of being such officer, is legally required by the provisions of section 13500, General Code, to serve any warrants in criminal cases which are issued to him by a justice of the peace of his county.

It follows, therefore, that a sheriff may be appointed a special constable by a justice of the peace of his county only for the purpose of serving writs in civil cases, and he can be appointed such special constable in civil cases only when some one or more of the statutory grounds, enumerated in section 3331, General Code, makes it necessary.

Any fees that a sheriff may receive as special constable are no part of the receipts received by him as sheriff. In this connection I desire to quote section 2977, General Code, as follows:

> "All the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected or received by law as compensation for services by a county auditor, county treasurer, probate judge, sheriff, clerk of courts, or recorder, shall be so received and collected for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which they are elected and shall be held as public moneys belonging to such county and accounted for and paid over as such as hereinafter provided."

I am therefore of the opinion, in answer to your last question, that a sheriff who is appointed special constable by a justice of the peace under and by virtue of section 3331, General Code, can legally retain the fees so earned by him in that service for his own personal use, for the reason that such fees are not allowances or perquisites collected or received by him as compensation for his services as sheriff and do not, therefore, come within the provisions of section 2977, above quoted.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

421.

EXPENSES OF SHERIFF—PAYMENT BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF A LUMP SUM PER MONTH—NECESSITY FOR SWORN ITEMIZED STATEMENT.

Under the provisions of 2997, General Code, as amended 102 O. L. 93, it is made mandatory that only the exact expenses of the sheriff be allowed upon a sworn itemized statement of the same.

A motion of the county commissioners therefore providing for the reimbursement of the sheriff at the rate of $37.00 a month for the purpose of covering such expense is invalid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 13, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Sam A. Hudson, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of July 6, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "The board of county commissioners of Williams county recently adopted the following motion:

"'In conformity to amended section 2997 of the General Code of Ohio as approved May 6th, nineteen hundred and eleven, by the governor of Ohio, it is moved and duly seconded that the sheriff of Williams county, Ohio, be allowed the sum of $37.00 per month to cover all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office and to cover his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office.'

"In your opinion, is this transaction in accordance with said section 2997?"

Section 2997, General Code, as amended, 102 Ohio Laws, page 93, provides:

"In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

This section authorizes the county commissioners to make allowance to a sheriff for "all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office," and they "may allow his necessary livery hire."

The rule as to the limitation placed upon the powers of the commissioners is laid down by Sutliff, C. J., on pages 415-416, of the opinion in the case of Beebe vs. Scheidt, 13 O. S., 406, as follows:

"But a different rule is generally applicable to inferior jurisdictions, which are governed in their proceedings strictly by statutory provisions. The general rule applicable to such inferior jurisdictions is, that in their proceedings they are to be held to the strict limits of their authority, as conferred and prescribed by the statute. And this rule is doubtless applicable to county commissioners as well as to justices of the peace."

In the case of State vs. Ashland County, 14 Ohio Dec. 568, the first syllabus is as follows:

"The office of county commissioner is a creature of statute, and the incumbent thereof can exercise no power or do any act in his official capacity which will bind the county unless expressly authorized and done in the manner provided by statute; and when the statute conferring power directs what shall be done preliminary to the expenditure of public money, these requirements, if mandatory, must be complied with or the contract is illegal."

The resolution in question purports to make a monthly allowance for maintenance of horses and vehicles and for livery hire, in lieu of the amount actually expended by the sheriff for this purpose. This allowance may be less, or it may be more than is actually expended.

The courts held that the commissioners must act within the powers prescribed by statute, and the expenditure of money must be made in the manner provided by statute.

This section, 2997, General Code, provides what the commissioners shall pay for and what shall be done before it shall be paid. The language is plain and unambiguous. "The county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for * * * all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office," and "may allow his necessary livery hire." The statutes also provides that "each sheriff shall file under oath * * * a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section * * * before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

Nowhere in the statute is there an authority to make an allowance instead of the actual expenses. The last sentence of the statute requiring an itemized account of such expenditures before payment shows conclusively that no such authority was intended to be granted. Only the amount actually expended can be paid, and then only upon a sworn itemized statement of such expenditures. The resolution allows for the expenditures before they are made, while the statute makes it mandatory that such allowance cannot be made until the sworn and itemized account is filed.

The above resolution does not comply with the provisions of section 2997, General Code, as amended in 102 Ohio Laws, page 93, and is unauthorized in law.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

422.

PAYMENTS ON UNAUTHORIZED CONTRACTS—NO RIGHT OF RECOVERY BY MUNICIPAL CORPORATION WHERE PAYMENT WAS VOLUNTARY AND WITHOUT FRAUD OR MISTAKE—PUBLICATIONS IN NEWSPAPERS.

Liability for municipal corporation for publication of ordinances, resolutions, etc., in a newspaper must rest on express contract authorized by council and the amounts chargeable for such work specified in section 6251 are intended as designations of the maximum rate.

Where, however, such services have been performed and the maximum rate actually paid therefor, though no contract for the services had been authorized by council, no recovery may be had of the publishing company if the payment to them was voluntary and made without fraud, or mistake of fact, as there is no enabling statute authorizing any officer to make such recovery.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 13, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Jos. T. Tracy, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 7, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "A contract was entered into with a certain newspaper for the publication of the ordinances of a city, in May, 1901. Such contract has never been superseded, but the newspaper, on and after May 4, 1903, the date of the going into effect of the Municipal Code, has charged the full statutory fee of $1.00 per square. Can recovery be made of the amount paid in excess of the said contract of May, 1901?
>
> "Contract and letter of solicitor enclosed."

The first paragraph of the contract in question provides:

> "Second party hereby agrees to do all the legal printing and advertising of the city of Salem, as provided by statute, and in accordance with the resolution passed by the council of the city of Salem on the 19th day of February, A. D. 1901, for and during the legal existence of the present council of said city. Said matter to be published in the Salem Daily News."

The contract does not specify how long it shall be in force, except as stated in the above paragraph. The contract is entered into "for and during the legal existence of the present council of said city." That particular council passed out of existence May 4, 1903, and the new council provided for by the Municipal Code, succeeded it. The limitation in time of this contract was to May 4, 1903. After that date it was binding upon neither party thereto.

The letter of the solicitor enclosed contains the following statement:

> "This contract was complied with until the new Municipal Code became effective and thereafter the publishers began charging the full legal rate, unknown to the various councils, up until about a year ago, when council discovered what was being done, and since then have been paying the full legal rate."

It is evident from this state of facts that there was no express contract with the publishers for public printing during the period after May 4, 1903, and until the discovery was made by council.

In the case of McCormick vs. City, 81 O. S. 246, it is held that no recovery can be had from the city for such publications unless there is an express contract therefor.

The syllabi of this case read as follows:

> "The liability of a municipal corporation to pay for the publication of ordinances, resolutions and legal notices required by law to be published, must rest on express contract, and not upon a mere account for the rendition of such services.
>
> "Where the statute has not prescribed the person who shall execute such a contract in behalf of a municipal corporation, it is consistent with section 1536-653, Revised Statutes, for the council, by ordinance or resolution, to authorize the clerk thereof to execute such contract according to the directions of the council."

In that case the publications were alleged to have been made at the "request of said city, by its auditor and clerk of council, and approved by its city solicitor." The court held this was not sufficient. There must be an express contract authorized by council.

The duty of council in making this contract is set forth in the opinion of Price, J., on page 253, of said case, as follows:

> "* * * To this claim is added another, that section 4366, Revised Statutes (now section 6251, General Code), fixes the rates per square for each publication which left mere clerical duty for the clerk to perform in calculating the cost of publication. But it must be observed that this statute fixes maximum rate, and no minimum rate. Hence it is practicable to contract for a much lower rate than the maximum and thereby make large savings for the city or villages. The printing bills in the larger municipal corporations loom up to large proportions at times, and the legislature has not undertaken to prevent the obtaining the publication or advertising at as low rate as may be agreed upon."

Section 6251, General Code, provides the rates of legal advertising as follows:

> "Publishers of newspapers may charge and receive for the publication of advertisements, notices and proclamations required to be published by a public officer of the state, county, city, village, township, school, benevolent or other public institution, or by a trustee, assignee, executor or administrator, the following sums, except where the rate is otherwise fixed by law, to-wit: For the first insertion, one dollar for each square, and for each additional insertion, fifty cents for each square. Fractional squares shall be estimated at a like rate for space occupied. In advertisements containing tabular or rule work, fifty per cent. may be charged in addition to the foregoing rates."

This section prescribes the maximum rate for legal advertising. It is permissible and desirable that a better rate be secured by contract. No payment can be made therefor without an express contract. As there was no express contract for the legal advertising done after May 4, 1903, payment therefor could not have been enforced against the city.

But payment has been made and it is now a question of its recovery.

The rule of recovery in such cases is laid down in the case of Vindicator Co. vs. State, 68 O. S. 362, the second and third syllabi of which are as follows:

> "But where a claim for such excessive publications has been presented to the board and allowed, and payment made by the treasurer on the warrant of the auditor prior to April 25, 1898, the prosecuting attorney cannot maintain an action, in the absence of both fraud and mistake of fact, to recover back the money.
>
> "The act of April 25, 1898 (93 O. L. 408), clothes the prosecuting attorney with power to recover back money so illegally drawn from the treasury on and after the date of its passage."

On page 370 of the opinion, Spear, J., says:

> "* * * The situation then was that the company had received moneys of the county, in a way apparently regular but to which it was not in strict law entitled. But an accounting officer, the proper officer, had paid the money voluntarily, upon vouchers issued by another accounting officer, in form duly approved, and it is difficult to see why in these respects, as to a stranger, they did not represent the county, and why the facts do not present a case of voluntary payment with the usual legal result that, in the absence of an enabling statute and where there is no showing of fraud or mistake of fact, there can be no recovery back. The rule recognizes the fact that the money paid was unjustly paid; that the claim itself was illegal, one which the party, had he sought to do so, could have resisted. He chose not to resist but to pay, and he cannot afterwards ask the law to rectify his mistake."

Section 2921, General Code, grants unto prosecuting attorneys power to recover funds of a county that have been misapplied or illegally paid. This authority is not extended to municipal funds. There is no such law authorizing the city solicitor, nor any other city official, nor the city, to recover funds illegally paid or misapplied. Without such authority the rule laid down in 68 O. S. 362, supra, must apply.

Section 4311, General Code, prescribes the duties of a city solicitor as follows:

> "The solicitor shall apply in the name of the corporation, to a court of competent jurisdiction for an order of injunction to restrain the misapplication of funds of the corporation, or the abuse of its corporate powers, or the execution or performance of any contract made in behalf of the corporation in contravention of the laws or ordinance governing it, or which was procured by fraud or corruption."

This statute authorizes the city solicitor to apply for an injunction restraining the misapplication of funds, but grants no authority to recover funds after they are paid out.

Without an authority of statute the rule for the recovery is as follows: If the payment of the money for such publications was voluntary and was made without fraud, or mistake of fact, there can be no recovery from the publishing company, although payment might have been resisted in the first instance.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

427.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—NO RIGHT TO INVEST IN PRIVATE ENTERPRISES—WHERE PAYMENT IS MADE ON ILLEGAL CONTRACT NO RECOVERY MAY BE HAD AT LAW—RECOVERY IN EQUITY—TRUST FUND, RIGHT TO FOLLOW—ACTION AGAINST OFFICIALS.

A municipal corporation cannot financially aid or be pecuniarily interested in any joint stock company, corporation or association, or private business enterprise, for the reasons that:

1. It is constitutionally prohibited in Ohio;

2. It is not authorized by statute, therefore a taking of private property without due process of law.

Under these rules the payment funds raised by an issue and sale of bonds, showing on their face their intended devotion to the purpose of road repair work, which bonds are in turn to be paid for by the levy of taxes, to a manufacturing firm, for the consideration of locating in said village is illegal.

Considering the application of the following rules:

I. Money paid under mistake of law cannot be recovered.

II. Courts will not permit a municipal corporation to take advantage of the wrong of its officers and whilst retaining the benefits of an illegal transaction, to recover a consideration paid by it.

III. Courts will not interfere for the purpose of enforcing or protecting any alleged rights growing out of an illegal transaction.

IV. No authority is conferred by law upon any officer to institute or cause to be instituted any action for recovery of moneys illegally expended by village officers.

There can be no recovery of funds so expended at law.

Of the above rules the application of number two must be eliminated by reason of the fact that the village cannot be said to have technically received any benefit.

These circumstances, however, disclose the existence of grounds for procedure in equity. As the money expended was a trust fund devoted to a specific purpose held by the municipal corporation as trustee in behalf of the taxpayers, as cestui que trusts, the village or the taxpayer may by appropriate proceedings in equity compel the repayment of the money thus illegally expended, by the corporation or firm which received it.

As equity will follow a trust fund the plant and all tangible property of the firm may be proceeded against.

Also inasmuch as the officials through whose acts the deal was consummated were guilty of a breach of trust and presumably a fraud, the bureau should also make a finding against them.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 17, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 6th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "A village issued $10,000 of street repair bonds. The proceeds, except the premium and accrued interest, were donated and turned over to a manufacturing firm as an inducement for locating in said village

Is such action illegal and should our examiner make a finding for recovery? If so, against whom?"

The constitution of this state, article VIII, section 6, provides as follows:

> "The general assembly shall never authorize any * * * city, town or township, by vote of its citizens, or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation or association whatever; or to raise money for, or loan its credit to, or in aid of, any such company, corporation or association."

Possibly, this section does not apply to the case which you state, as the firm to which the credit of the village has been loaned might not be held to be "a joint stock company, corporation or association" within the meaning of the constitutional provision. Such a distinction, however, is, in my judgment, immaterial for the following reasons:

1. All municipal corporations are governments of delegated powers. Cities and villages as such, as well as the officers of such municipalities, have no powers which are not conferred upon them by express provisions of statute, enacted under article XIII, section 6, of the constitution, or which flow by necessary implication from such express power. The statutes of this state, being carefully examined, will disclose that the general assembly has not sought to delegate to municipal corporations the power to aid by the use of public money or moneys, for the payment of which the public credit is pledged, any private enterprise, excepting, possibly, such private enterprises as assist the municipality in the discharge of its own public functions, as children's homes, hospitals and the like. Therefore, the act of the village officers, described by you, is illegal because it is beyond the corporate powers of the village itself, and, hence, outside of the authority of the officers.

2. Even if there were no such constitutional provision as article VIII, section 6, above quoted, and even if the general assembly had attempted to pass a law authorizing cities and villages to loan money to, or borrow money for and on account of, manufacturing concerns, as an inducement to secure their location in the municipality, such an act would, in my opinion, be unconstitutional and void, on the principle announced in Loan Association vs. Topeka, 20 Wallace, 365. That principle is, of course, that taxation must be for a public purpose and that the attempted exercise of the power of taxation for purposes other than public purposes constitute a taking of private property without due process of law. See also:

Lowell vs. Boston, 111 Mass. 454.
State vs. Osawkee Tp., 14 Kansas, 418.
Allen vs. Inhabitants of Jay, 60 Mo., 124.
Brewer Brick Co. vs. Brewer, 62 Mo., 62.
Bissell vs. Kankee, 64 Ill., 249.
Mather vs. Ottawa, 114 Ill., 659.
Bank vs. Iowa, 20 Wallace, 655.
Weisler vs. Douglas, 64 N. Y., 91.
Feldman vs. Charleston, 23 S. C., 57.
Dillon vs. Municipal Corporations, 5th Ed. Sec., 319.

In connection with these authorities, reference may be made to the interesting line of decisions relating to municipal aid of railroad enterprises, with respect to which judicial opinion has now crystallized on the proposition that such enterprises are sufficiently public in their nature to permit taxation for their support in the absence of constitutional provisions like section 6 of article VIII. In so holding, however, the courts have very carefully limited their decisions to railway enterprises, and have distinguished the question as to the validity of aid by taxation to purely private enterprises.

It might appear that the infirmity in the transaction described in your letter is less fundamental than suggested by the authorities above cited. The bonds issued by the village, of which you speak, were lawfully issued in the first instance; that is to say, being issued in conformity with the statutes, they recite on their face that they are for the purpose of repairing streets. As against bona fide holders of such bonds, the defense on the part of the village could not have been made, that the real intention of the village authorities was to raise money in aid of a private enterprise. The bonds are therefore a valid debt of the municipality. However, all the principles above referred to apply, inasmuch as there is no real distinction between levying taxes for the express purpose of aiding a private enterprise and borrowing money, ostensibly for other purposes, but really for such prohibited purposes. and discharging the loan out of the proceeds of taxation.

Upon the foregoing elementary principles, there is no doubt whatever that the payment of the funds of a village to a manufacturing firm, as an inducement for locating in said village, is illegal, whether said funds are funds already raised by taxation or funds raised by the issue and sale of bonds, which bonds in turn are to be paid for by the levy of taxes.

This point being established, the further question is raised in your letter as to whether or not the sum so paid may be recovered from the firm which has received the same. As a defense in an action for recovery of any such funds, the recipient of them would probably plead a contract; it would be asserted that the money was paid as a consideration for the agreement of the manufacturer to locate in the village; that said agreement was entered into by and between the manufacturer on the one side, and the officials of the village on the other. It would also be asserted that though this may have been an illegal contract, and the payment may have been illegal, yet the money could not be recovered because of the application of one or all of the following principles:

1. Money paid under mistake of law cannot be recovered back.

2. Courts will not permit a municipal corporation to take advantage of the wrong of its officers and, retaining the benefits of an illegal transaction, to recover a consideration paid by it.

3. Courts will not interfere for the purpose of enforcing or protecting any alleged rights growing out of an illegal transaction.

4. No authority is conferred by law upon any officer to institute or cause to be instituted any action for the recovery of moneys illegally expended by village officers.

Inasmuch as the village has clearly been wronged, and inasmuch as it is to be presumed that for every such wrong the law or equity affords a remedy, and inasmuch also as the manufacturing concern, in the case you state, has received all the benefits of the wrongful transaction, the foregoing three possible defenses ought, in my judgment, to be carefully considered with a view to determining the form of the action which would be appropriate to enforce the rights of the village, if any.

In Cincinnati vs. Gas Light & Coke Company, 53 O. S. 278, the city by its cross petition, in an action against it by the Gas Light & Coke Company, with which it had a contract for gas to be furnished to the city, alleged that because of a misconstruction of the contract its fiscal officers had paid excessive amounts to the Gas Light & Coke Company. All the courts refused to allow the claim of the city on its cross petition, and with respect to this feature of the case the supreme court used the following language, in the third branch of the syllabus:

> "Payment made by reason of a wrong construction of the terms of a contract is not made under a mistake of fact, but under a mistake of law, and if voluntary cannot be recovered back."

The effect of this decision, then, was to apply to a municipal corporation, the principle applicable to individuals, namely, that voluntary payments under a mistake of law are not recoverable.

Again, in Vindicator Printing Company vs. State, 68 O. S. 362, the action was by the prosecuting attorney, on behalf of the county and in the name of the state, against the printing company, to recover sums, paid to it for publishing certain legal notices, in excess of the sums due for lawful publication. The court held the action maintainable solely by virtue of the provisions of what was then section 1277, Revised Statutes, which authorized the prosecuting attorney to "apply by civil action, in the name of the state, to a court of competent jurisdiction to * * * recover back for the use of the county all such public moneys * * * so illegally drawn out * * * from the county treasury." There is no question as to the reasoning of the court; not only is it clearly and concisely stated by Judge Spear, on pages 370-371, but the judgment of the court could only have been predicated upon such reasoning. That judgment was that as to payments made prior to the passage of section 1277, Revised Statutes, there could be no recovery on the part of the county, notwithstanding the entire illegality of such payments and the entire lack of authority in the county commissioners to enter into contracts supporting such payments, or to make compromises ratifying them.

In fact, it seems to be the perfectly established rule in this state, if these cases are to be taken as a guide, that a municipal corporation is subject to the rule that money paid voluntarily under mistake of law is not recoverable.

The second principle above referred to was laid down in State vs. Fronizer, 77 O. S. 7. In that case section 1277, Revised Statutes, which was held to authorize recovery, in the Vindicator Printing Company case, supra, was decided to be insufficient to sustain the recovery by a county of money paid by it for a bridge under a contract, void because of failure to comply with the statute regulating the manner of entering into such contract. Recovery was denied on the ground that the county had not offered and could not in reason offer to return the bridge, and that in equity and justice a readiness to put the opposing party in statu quo is a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action under such circumstances. This principle, however, may be dismissed from consideration in the case you present. It applies only where the opposite party has parted with a thing of value to the municipality. At least that is the ground relied upon by the court in distinguishing State vs. Fronizer from Vindicator Printing Company vs. State. The following language of Judge Spear in the former case, on page 17 of the report, establishes this point:

> "Vindicator Printing Company vs. State, 68 Ohio St., 362, * * * is authority for the proposition that there may be a recovery back by the prosecuting attorney where the money has been paid for the publishing of certain notices the publication of which was not authorized by law. The publications were not only without authority of law but they were of no value to either the county or the public. Therefore no property of the company had been obtained by the county."

The learned judge could not have meant that the newspaper in the Vindicator Printing Company case had not parted with a thing of value to it; it devoted its columns to the publication of the notices in question when it might have used them for other profitable purposes. But these publications were of no value to the county, therefore the county was not subject to the equitable rule requiring the return of what it had received, as a prerequisite to recovery of what it had paid. In the bridge case, however, the public had, through the illegal contract, acquired a thing of value to it and the court would not permit it to have both the bridge and the money which it had paid for it.

In the case which you present the manufacturing concern has in a sense parted with a thing of value to it, namely, its right of locating its plant wherever it might choose. The municipality, however, has not received a thing of value, in a technical sense. It might be argued that the location of a manufacturing plant in a given community is a benefit to all the citizens of that community, and to the community itself, considered as a public corporation, because it brings to the community persons and property which would not otherwise be located there, because it gives employment to persons already residents of the community, and because it tends to enhance the tax duplicate of the corporation. These benefits, however, are in my opinion too remote to subject the municipality to the operation of the rule of State vs. Fronizer. I have already pointed out the fact that the law is that the securing of the location of a manufacturing concern in a municipal corporation is not a public purpose for which taxes may be levied and expended. As corollary to this rule it follows, I think, that such location is not a thing of value to the public.

Again, even if by the location of a manufacturing concern in a municipal corporation the municipality could be said to have acquired a thing of value, the thing acquired could be no more than the obligation of the corporation to remain in the municipality. If no such obligation exists, then, there is nothing which the corporation can "return" as required by the rule in State vs. Fronizer.

From all these considerations, then, it appears that the manufacturing concern has been the recipient of a mere gift on the part of the village, in return for which the village has received nothing. Therefore, the case is not only more like that of Vindicator Printing Company vs. State, than like that of State vs. Fronizer, but it is even stronger than the former case. Accordingly, the second of the four principles upon which reliance might be placed to defeat recovery by the village of the money paid by it under the circumstances stated by you does not apply.

The third principle, that courts will not interfere for the purpose of enforcing or protecting alleged rights growing out of an illegal transaction, but will leave the parties thereto as it finds them, is a well settled rule of law. Doubtless, it would be applied to municipal corporations in the same manner in which the first principle, above stated, has been applied to them by the courts, although I know of no decision in this state upon the exact point. Generally, it may be stated of the first and third principles that insofar as the mistaken, fraudulent or illegal acts of the agents and officers of a municipal corporation can bind the municipality or work an estoppel against it, either in law or in equity, these principles must be applied when such agents or officers have misapplied the funds of the corporation, in the absence of a statute specifically authorizing recovery by the municipality of the sums so misapplied.

This general statement leads to the consideration of the fourth principle, above referred to. In Vindicator Printing Company vs. State it was held that where defenses like the first and third, above mentioned, are, upon the facts available, in favor of one from whom a municipal corporation seeks to recover money wrongfully paid from its treasury, they are valid unless prevented by a statute like section 1277, Revised Statutes. In the case of a village, no such statute exists. As to city solicitors it is provided by sections 4311 to 4314, inclusive, that that officer may, in the name of the corporation, enjoin the misapplication of the funds of the corporation; the abuse of its corporate powers; the execution of a contract made in its behalf, where illegal; may apply in the name of the corporation for the forfeiture of a contract or grant of the municipality in a proper case, or may bring mandamus to compel the performance of an official duty; if he fails in the performance of his duty in these respects it is further provided by sections 4314 to 4316, inclusive, General Code, that a taxpayer may, upon demand of the solicitor and refusal by him to bring such suit or proceeding, institute the same in his own name on behalf of the corporation. These sections, however, neither authorize the recovery of money illegally paid from the treasury of a municipal corporation, nor do they apply to villages. There is no corresponding section relating to villages; therefore, a village is, with respect to a suit such as that of which we are speaking, in precisely the same situation as a county was held, in Vindicator Printing Company vs. State to have been prior to the enactment of section 1277, Revised Statutes.

Seemingly, then, from all these considerations, a municipality is precluded from recovering its funds illegally paid out by its officers, regardless of the nature of the illegal payment and regardless also of the benefit or lack of benefit accruing to the municipality by virtue of the transaction.

Examination of the cases cited discloses the fact that all of them are actions of law for the recovery of money had and received. In all of them the court determined the legal rights of the city or county only. The court was not called upon in any of these cases to consider the equitable rights of the citizens and taxpayers of the political subdivision, or those of the government itself, considered as a trustee. In all of these cases the acts of the officers of the city or county were properly deemed and considered as being the acts of the public. In so regarding the official acts of the public officers involved the courts are but following an established principle, particularly applicable to municipal corporations as distinguished, for instance, from counties. Such corporations like private corporations can act only by and through their agents and officers, and in all cases the acts of such agents and officers are conclusively presumed in law to be the acts of the corporation.

Equity, however, refuses to be bound by a rule so hard and fast as this. Rather, it recognizes rights which the law does not recognize, and applies its peculiar appropriate remedies for the enforcement of such rights.

Dillon on Municipal Corporations, Fourth Edition, section 914, contains the following lucid statement, made in discussing the right of a taxpayer to maintain a proper action regardless of statute:

> "In this country, the right of property holders or taxable inhabitants to resort to equity to restrain municipal corporations and their officers from transcending their lawful powers or violating their legal duties in any mode which will injuriously affect the taxpayers—such as making an unauthorized appropriation of the corporate funds, or an illegal or wrongful disposition of the corporate property, or levying and collecting void and illegal taxes and assessments upon real property under circumstances presently to be explained—has, without the aid of statute provision to that effect, been affirmed or recognized in numerous cases in many of the states.
>
> "It is the prevailing, we may now add, almost universal doctrine on this subject. It can, we think, be vindicated upon principle, in view of the nature of the powers exercised by municipal corporations and the necessity of affording easy, direct and adequate preventive relief against their misuse. It is better that those immediately affected by corporate abuses should be armed with a power to interfere directly in their own names than to compel them to rely upon the action of a distant state officer. The equity jurisdiction may, in such cases, usually rest upon fraud, breach of trust, multiplicity of suits, or the inadequacy of the ordinary remedies at law. It is advisable, in view of its importance, briefly to examine the doctrine above mentioned, and the grounds upon which it rests, in the light of some of the leading judgments of the courts, the better to see its scope, limitations and application.

"The doctrine of the preceding section is also supported by an analogy supplied by a settled rule of equity applicable to private corporations. In these the ultimate cestuis que trust are the stockholders. In municipal corporations the cestuis que trust are in a substantial sense the inhabitants embraced within their limits. In each case the corporation, or its governing body, is a trustee. If the governing body of a private corporation is acting ultra vires or fraudulently, the corporation is ordinarily the proper party to prevent or redress the wrong by appropriate action or suit in the name of the corporation. But if the directors will not bring such an action our jurisprudence is not so defective as to leave creditors or shareholders remediless, and either creditors or shareholders may institute the necessary suits to protect their respective rights, making the corporation and the directors defendants. This is a necessary and wholesome doctrine. Why should a different rule apply to a municipal corporation? If the property or funds of such a corporation be illegally or wrongfully interfered with, or its powers be misused, ordinarily the action to prevent or redress the wrong should be brought by and in the name of the corporation. But if the officers of a corporation are parties to the wrong, or if they will not discharge their duty, why may not any inhabitant and particularly any taxable inhabitant, be allowed to maintain in behalf of all similarly situated a class suit to prevent or void the illegal or wrongful act? Such a right is especially necessary in the case of municipal and public corporations, and if it be denied to exist they are liable to be plundered, and the taxpayers and property owners on whom the loss will eventually fall are without effectual remedy."

That is to say, a municipal corporation itself holds title to the funds in its treasury, raised by taxation, only as trustee, in a sense, for all of its inhabitants and taxpayers. In the discharge of its trust it is limited by the condition that it expend the moneys only in pursuance of enterprises upon which it is permitted by the constitution and laws to embark. The corporation considered as an entity in turn commits the disbursement of its funds to certain officers, legislative and executive. These officers are, in the legal sense, agents of the municipality; but they are also, in the equitable sense, its trustees, and those of the inhabitants and taxpayers of the corporation; the funds in their possession are trust funds upon which the accomplishment of certain trust purposes has been charged.

The above quoted paragraphs from Dillon on Municipal Corporations were relied upon by Cook, J., in delivering the opinion of the circuit court in the case of Walker vs. Dillonvale, 11 C. C. N. S. 385. That action was one wherein the taxpayers brought suit in the name of the village to recover from certain members of council, fees alleged to have been illegally drawn by them. The action, however, was not in law but in equity. Though the prayer of the petition was for a money judgment, the court treated the case as an appeal to the chancery side and upon the authorities therein cited, which I shall not herein refer to, held that inasmuch as the law, because of the three principles already referred to in this opinion, afforded no remedy and inasmuch also as an equitable right existed and had been invaded equity would assert its jurisdiction and apply a remedy to suit the case, even though that remedy take the form of a decree requiring the payment of a certain sum of money.

This decision, insofar as it related to the right of a taxpayer to sue in equity on behalf of a village to recover money illegally drawn from the village treasury, was affirmed in Walker vs. Dillonvale, 82 O. S. 137. Additional authorities are cited in the opinion by Judge Summers, sustaining the principle that is laid down by Judge Cook in the court below.

By this decision it is settled, then, in this state, that a taxpayer of a village may sue in equity to compel repayment of money illegally drawn from the treasury of a village.

The decision in reality goes further than this; it also establishes the right to trace the funds of a municipality, as trust funds, into the hands of strangers; that is, persons other than officers. It might seem that because the original defendants were officers of the village the case could not necessarily be relied upon to sustain a suit against such a stranger. On page 147 of the report, however, Judge Summers uses the following language:

> "The object of the present suit is to recover from the defendants personally and not as councilmen, money averred to have been illegally paid to them from the village treasury. No judgment or relief against them as officials is asked, and we think they as councilmen are misjoined as defendants."

The court then decided the case upon the theory, not that the defendants were guilty of misappropriating money from the village treasury, but upon the theory that they had received money which some one, not necessarily themselves, had misappropriated from the treasury and paid to them.

I think that the case is also authority for holding that the village itself may, in its own name, maintain a proper equitable action to compel the repayment into its treasury of moneys illegally drawn therefrom. Though the court held that the action should have been brought in the name of the taxpayers, on behalf of the village, yet, it is clear that the rights ought to be enforced were, in a sense, those of the village; that is to say, the decree of the court was that the money should be paid into the treasury of the village, and the village itself is a corporation having the power to sue and be sued. Surely, it may sue in its own name to recover for the use of its own treasury, moneys illegally drawn therefrom. This follows from the elementary provisions of our code of civil procedure, that actions may be brought in the name of the real party in interest.

There is no officer of a village who is authorized to bring such an action. The proper procedure, as you are doubtless aware, is for council to legislate upon the subject, determining to bring the suit and employing counsel to prosecute it.

Upon all the foregoing authorities, then, and for the reasons stated, I am of the opinion that while no action could be maintained at law by a village or any officer thereof, for the recovery of moneys illegally paid by it to a manufacturing concern as an inducement for the location of its plant within the corporate limits, yet, the village or a taxpayer thereof might, by appropriate proceedings in equity, compel the repayment of the money, thus illegally expended, into the treasury by the corporation or firm receiving it.

I may add that the specific case which you present affords a particularly apt instance of the application of the trust fund doctrine. By section 3804, General Code, it is provided that an unexpended balance remaining in a fund created by an issue of bonds shall be transferred to the sinking fund, to be applied in payment of the bonds. The manifest intention of this section is that money derived from the sale of an issue of bonds shall be used for the declared purpose of the issue, or for the payment of the bonds and for no other purpose whatever. This fact would have, perhaps, been sufficient as a basis upon which to hold the payment of the village's money to the manufacturing concern illegal, although the illegality of such payment is established by other reasons even more fundamental, as heretofore pointed out. But section 3804 seems to establish the conclusion that not only is a general trust for municipal purposes engrafted upon the proceeds of a bond issue, but also a specific trust, to the effect that the money shall be expended for a single definite purpose. For this reason I have not the slightest doubt that a court would have no difficulty in applying the equitable doctrine above referred to and in restoring to the treasury the money drawn from it under the circumstances which you describe.

A complete discussion of the subject would include analysis of the manner in which the remedies of equity are applied in a case like this. The general principle may be thus stated: Equity will follow a trust fund so long as it can be distinguished, until it reaches the hands of an innocent purchaser without notice. Whether in a given case its commingling of such a trust fund with other funds of all into whose hands it has come with notice would defeat the application of the remedy, is a question which it would not be profitable to discuss in this opinion, inasmuch as the plant and other tangible property of the manufacturing firm, described above, may undoubtedly be seized by a court of equity in aid of the enforcement of its decree.

I therefore advise that in the first instance your bureau, upon the facts above stated, make a finding for recovery in favor of the village against the manufacturing firm.

At the same time it is my opinion that the bureau should make a finding for recovery against the officials through whose act the money was drawn from the treasury. All such officers who participated in such action are guilty of a breach of trust and presumably a fraud, and if the city loses thereby, through the failure of the corporation to recover the money from the manufacturing firm, or through the insolvency of the latter, then, in my judgment, the village is entitled to recoup itself for the injury which it has suffered against its guilty officers.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General

A 428.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS — PUBLIC SERVICE DEPARTMENT — CONTRACTS FOR SUPPLY OF WATER TO OUTSIDE MUNICIPALITIES OR INDIVIDUALS—RULE OF UNIFORMITY.

Where the service department of Marietta, Ohio, acting under authority of the council let a contract to furnish water to one Geo. W. Hunter at a place across the Ohio river at a less rate than was charged by the department to consumers of water within the city of Marietta, it not appearing whether Hunter represented a municipal corporation or a private enterprise, held:

I. If the contract was one to Hunter as a representative of the city of Williamstown, W. Va., it was illegal for the reason,

(a) That the latter municipality was not within Ohio, and

(b) Being separated from Marietta by the Ohio river it could not be deemed "contiguous" to that city within the meaning of section 2425, Revised Statutes, which was in force at the time the contract was made.

II. If the contract was one to Hunter as a private individual or as the representative of a private enterprise the same was illegal for the reason that it constituted a violation of the rule requiring that all sales be made by a uniform rule and that the rate be made the same to all persons under similar circumstances.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 18, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Jos. T. Tracy, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of April 6, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "May the service department of a city acting under authority granted by the council make a contract to furnish water through its municipal waterworks to a party or corporation operating a distribution system without the city limits at a less rate per thousand gallons than is allowed to large consumers of water within the city limits as fixed by the regular adopted rates for such service?
>
> "Copy of contract and ordinances enclosed herewith, which you will please return for the use of our examiner.

The contract was entered into on October 6, 1906, by the city of Marietta with one George W. Hunter, to supply him water at the rate of 8 cents per thousand gallons for amounts less than 25,000 per day, 7 cents per thousand gallons for amounts less than 50,000 per day, and 6 cents per thousand gallons for amounts of more than 50,000 per day. The water is to be taken at the intersection of Fourth and Hart streets, and the contract runs for ten years. There is nothing in the contract showing that it was for "surplus water," nor does the contract show for what purpose the water was to be used.

The rules and regulations of the waterworks' department of Marietta show the rates to be 35 cents per thousand gallons for amounts of from 100 to 500 gallons per day, and gradually ranging from this price down to the rate charged the larger consumers to whom the rate is 12 cents per thousand gallons for amounts from 10,000 to 20,000 gallons per day, and 10 cents per thousand for amounts 20,000 gallons per day and above.

The ordinance authorizing the contract does not state the purpose for which the water was to be used, but the minutes of the meeting of council at which the ordinance was passed, show:

> "Underwood of the special committee on a contract to furnish water for the town of Williamstown, reported in favor of an ordinance giving the board of public service to enter into such contract with Geo. W. Hunter and others. Said ordinance was read for the first time. On motion of Underwood seconded by Wharff, etc.
>
> "An ordinance authorizing the board of public service to enter into a contract wtih Geo. W. Hunter and others.
>
> "Be it ordained by the council of the city of Marietta, state of Ohio:
>
> "Section 1. That the board of public service be and they are hereby authorized to enter into a contract with Geo. W. Hunter and others for furnishing of water at the best terms and prices obtainable per thousand gallons meter measurement."

The first steps by the city to secure this contract appear to have been taken by the board of public service and the resolutions of the board in part, read:

> "WHEREAS, Parties representing a company to furnish the town of Williamstown, West Virginia, with water for domestic and manufacturing purposes have applied to the board of public service for water from the waterworks, and
>
> "WHEREAS, The supply of water at our pumping plant is far in excess of any immediate demands that may be made upon the waterworks, and whereas the taking on the business of the company now applying would largely increase our water receipts, with a very small increase in cost of operating the plant; be it
>
> "Resolved, That it is the sense of this board that a contract be entered into with the applicants upon an equitable business basis, and be it further resolved that the city council be requested to give the necessary authority for the execution of the contract above referred to for a term of years to be agreed upon."

These are matters of public record and the contract refers to the above ordinance as follows:

> "This agreement is made under authority of the city council of the city of Marietta, Ohio, as shown by an ordinance passed on the 21st day of September, 1906, entitled an ordinance authorizing the board of public service to enter into a contract with George W. Hunter and others."

This contract was presumably authorized and entered into by virtue of section 3973, General Code, which provides:

> "A municipality which has waterworks may contract with any other municipality for the supply of the latter with water upon such terms as are agreed upon by their respective councils. A municipality which has water may dispose of surplus water, for manufacturing or other purposes, by lease or otherwise, upon such terms as are agreed upon by the director of public service or trustees and approved by the council thereof. Moneys received for such surplus water in either case shall be applied to the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds issued for the construction of such waterworks, or other expenses incident to the maintenance of the waterworks, but no lease shall be made for a longer term than twenty years."

At the time this contract was entered into the first sentence of this statute, then section 2425, Revised Statutes, read:

"Any city or village which has established, or hereafter establishes waterworks, may enter into a contract with any contiguous city or village for the supply of the latter with water, upon such terms as shall be mutually agreed upon by the councils of the respective municipal corporations."

The word "contiguous" was stricken out and the words "any other" were inserted by act found in 99 O. L. 249, approved April 30, 1908.

The authority of the director of public service to assess water rents is provided in section 3956, General Code, which reads:

"For the purpose of paying the expenses of conducting and managing the waterworks. such director may assess and collect from time to time a water rent of sufficient amount in such manner as he deems most equitable upon all tenements and premises supplied with water. When more than one tenant or water taker is supplied with one hydrant or off the same pipe, and when the assessments therefor are not paid when due, the director shall look directly to the owner of the property for so much of the water rent thereof as remains unpaid, which shall be collected in the same manner as other city taxes."

The legality of this contract entered into with George W. Hunter is in question. All formalities pertaining thereto appear to have been properly taken and it was authorized by ordinance of council, although it does not appear that the rates were afterwards approved by council.

The question then is, was the making of this contract authorized by section 3973, General Code? The question asked in your letter is as to the effect of the difference in the rates.

The regular rate for from 10,000 to 20,000 gallons per day is 12 cents per thousand gallons, while the contract fixes the rate at 8 cents per thousand gallons for amounts less than 25,000 gallons per day, one-third less than the regular rates. For more than 20,000 gallons per day the regular rate is 10 cents, while the contract provides a rate of 7 cents for amounts less than 50,000 gallons per day and a rate of 6 cents for amounts above 50,000, making a reduction of from 30 to 40 per cent.

Upon the face of the contract, Mr. Hunter stands in no isolated condition, but takes water under the same conditions and circumstances that other large consumers take water.

There are two authorities granted by section 3973, General Code, one to sell to municipalities, the other to sell surplus water for manufacturing or other purposes.

This section has been construed by the circuit court in the case of Wright vs. Kennedy Heights, 15 Cir. Dec., 409, the syllabus of which is as follows:

"The provisions of the second clause of section 2425, Revised Statutes, that, * * * 'any city or village which has waterworks is here> by authorized and empowered to dispose of any surplus water for manufacturing or other purposes,' is to be understood as referring to consumption for private enterprise alone, and the phrase, 'or other purpose' as qualified by the preceding word 'manufacturing.' Moreover, as it is provided by the first clause of the section that for one municipal corporation to supply another with water there must be a contract under terms 'mutually agreed upon,' and, consequently, mutually enforceable, and such a contract for more surplus water not being mutually enforceable, it is not authorized by this section."

The contract in question must come under one or the other of the provisions of this statute, but cannot come under both. Upon the face of the contract it must come under the clause for selling surplus water for manufacturing or other purpose. From the records of council and the board of public service the water was for the use of a municipality, although contracted for through a third party.

First, let it be assumed that this contract was entered into by virtue of the first part of this statute, a sale to a municipality. At the time this contract was entered into the statute authorized a contract with such municipalities as were "contiguous" to the municipality furnishing the water.

The town of Williamstown, W. Va., is not contiguous to Marietta, as they are separated by the Ohio river. The city of Marietta could not have entered into such contract in 1906, directly with Williamstown, and if this contract was an attempt to do indirectly what could not have been done directly, it should be held null and void as against public policy.

If this is a contract between two municipalities, it would not be legal for another reason.

In Peck on Municipal Corporations, the following is found in a foot note on page 545 of the fifth edition:

> "Section 2425. The provisions of this section apply only to cities within the state, and do not authorize a municipal corporation within the state to contract to furnish one without the state with water. Nor is such a contract valid under the general power given to contract. The performance of such a contract will be enjoined on the application of a taxpayer, when the solicitor declines to proceed. Kleiner vs. Cincinnati, Hamilton District Court, Ms."

This contract, then, cannot be held legal as one between two municipal corporations. It must be authorized, if it is legal, by the clause of the statute which authorizes the sale of "surplus water for manufacturing or other purposes." This clause has been construed to apply to consumption for private enterprise only. 15 Cir. Dec., 409, supra. It authorizes the sale of surplus water by lease or otherwise upon such terms as are agreed upon.

Does this provision authorize a special contract for furnishing water for private enterprise at a special rate?

Dillon on Municipal Corporations in section 1317, in volume 3 of the fifth edition, says:

> "The principle that the city or the company must supply all impartially and without discrimination does not prevent it from entering into reasonable special arrangements or agreements with consumers growing out of special circumstances and the fact that by reason of such special circumstances a reduced rate, reasonable under the circumstances, is given to particular individuals does not affect the validity of the arrangement. But this is delicate ground, and the rates we think must be the same unless the circumstances are substantially dissimilar and reasonably justify a difference."

In the case of Bellaire Goblet Co. vs. Findley, 3 Cir. Dec., 205, the second, third and seventh syllabi read as follows:

"The only power conferred, so far as the price of gas is concerned, under section 2489, Revised Statutes, is, that the city council, by ordinance, shall adopt such rules and regulations and the manner of using gas, as to the council shall appear just and equitable, subject to the limitation that the rules and regulations and the manner of using gas, shall be uniform, applying alike to all the inhabitants under similar conditions. That the board of gas trustees following the rules, regulations and manner of using gas adopted by the city council, shall prescribe by by-laws the price to be charged for gas, subject to the limitation that the price thus fixed shall be uniform to all the inhabitants under similar conditions.

"Special contracts entered into by the city council or the board of gas trustees of a municipality which owns and controls gas works or a natural gas plant, in reference to the price of gas furnished, are unauthorized by law, and are void.

"Equity will not interfere with the different boards of a municipality in reference to the price to be charged for gas, unless there has been a discrimination, and that discrimination compels the party to pay more than others similarly situated."

On page 210, of the opinion, Saney, J., says:

"Again, article VIII, section 6, of the constitution of the state, provides:

"The general assembly shall never authorize any county, city, town or township, by vote of its citizens, or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation or association whatever, or to raise money for, or to loan its credit to or in aid of any such company, corporation or association.

"This section of article VIII, of the constitution, received a construction from our supreme court in Walker vs. Cincinnati, 25 O. S. 54, wherein Scott, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, says:

"It forbids the union of public and private capital or credit in any enterprise whatever; they (meaning cities, towns, etc.) may neither become stockholders, nor furnish money or credit for the benefit of the parties interested therein. * * * It is but applying an axiom to say that what the general assembly is thus prohibited from doing directly, it has no power to do indirectly.

"So that if the council or board of gas trustees, under section 2489, Revised Statutes, have the power to enter into special contracts for furnishing gas, they could do indirectly what the general assembly, under this article of the constitution, is directly prohibited from doing —conferring such power."

The above decision was construing the law governing the price to be charged by a municipal owned gas plant and the same principles apply to a city waterworks. The municipality has the right to fix the rate, subject to the constitutional rule that all rates must be uniform to all persons or corporations under similar conditions. Section 3973, General Code, must be construed as granting authority to municipalities to dispose of surplus water upon such terms as may be agreed upon, subject to the rule that the rates must be uniform to all persons under similar conditions.

Is there any substantial difference between the circumstances under which Mr. Hunter, a large consumer, takes water, and the circumstances under which any other large consumer takes water? No such difference is apparent unless we assume that Mr. Hunter was purchasing this water as a representative of the municipality of Williamstown, and if he was acting in such capacity the contract must be held illegal, because Williamstown was not contiguous to Marietta and because it is not within Ohio. The fact that Mr. Hunter purchased this water to resell it from his pipes does not make such a difference. Mr. Hunter buys water to make a profit thereon; a manufacturer or person engaged in any other enterprise buys water to make a profit; Mr. Hunter must have water pipes to successfully carry out his purpose, the manufacturer must have machinery and raw material to carry out his purpose. As far as the purchase and use of water is concerned there is no difference in their circumstances. The rates are made in accordance with the amounts used per day, and all who come within those classes should pay the rates provided.

In conclusion. This contract cannot be held legal as a contract by the city of Marietta to furnish water to the town of Williamstown, W. Va., because such municipalities are not contiguous, and because both are not within Ohio.

Section 3973, General Code, does not authorize a municipality to make a special rate for the sale of water for a private enterprise. All sales must be made by uniform rule and the rate must be the same to all persons under similar circumstances.

In my opinion the contract in question is unauthorized and is illegal.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ADDENDUM.

I have given considerable thought as to what this department should advise in reference to the matter discussed in the foregoing opinion. The contract referred to, as you are aware, is between a municipality of this state and a municipality in a neighboring state.

Doubtless the citizens of Williamstown, W. Va., are relying upon the city of Marietta fulfilling its contract.

While the citizens of every municipality must know the laws of their own state with reference to the powers conferred on the municipality, and the same rule would apply as to the knowledge imputed to the citizens of municipalities of any other state, yet, in practice, there should be some allowance made for the lack of knowledge on the part of the citizens of a foreign state.

If the facts be that the city of Marietta is benefitted by this contract, if the council, solicitor and the officers of Marietta are satisfied there is no danger from its continuance, I am of the impression that it would be well not to interfere at present but to seek the advice of the governor of the state of Ohio as to what should be done, if anything, in the premises. It might be found otherwise, inasmuch as the contract has been in existence something over five years, to let it continue until the legislature would convene so that it and similar cases, if there be any, might be submitted to the law making body by the governor with such recommendations as his judgment suggests. At any rate, this department does not recommend that any action be taken at this time except upon the advice of the governor.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 429.

TOWNSHIP TREASURER—NO COMPENSATION AS TREASURER OF THE PARK FUNDS—TOWNSHIP PARK LAW UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

A township treasurer is allowed as compensation, two per cent. on all money paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees. Moneys paid out by that official in his capacity as treasurer of the township park funds, are excluded from this provision by reason of the fact that they are paid out upon the order of the park commissioners. As there are no other legal authorizations for compensation to the treasurer for these services, the services are intended to be voluntary and no reimbursement can be allowed for the same.

The township park law, however, providing for park commissioners, is unconstitutional.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 18, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Sam A. Hudson, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 24, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "We hand you herewith letter from E. A. Pearce, treasurer of Ashtabula township, Ashtabula county, and request your opinion to this department thereon. The opinion of the attorney general referred to in the second paragraph of said letter may be found on page 191 of the Opinions of Attorney General, 1909-1910. We might add that this department has never made findings against township treasurers for compensation for handling the park funds for the reason that trustees have usually allowed not to exceed the two per cent. provided by law as compensation to township treasurers for handling the township funds.
>
> "The township park law is found in section 3415, et seq., General Code."

The letter enclosed states in part as follows:

> "I am treasurer of Ashtabula township and by virtue of that office am also treasurer of the township park funds for which a levy is made each year on grand duplicate of our township.
>
> "The custody of these funds was awarded me sometime ago as the result of a ruling of your office and also of the attorney general, and the funds are disbursed by orders drawn on the township treasurer by the township clerk and countersigned by the park commissioners of Ashtabula township.
>
> "I contend that I am entitled to compensation of two per cent. on the disbursement of the park funds of our township, but one of the park trustees, who is an attorney, is of the opinion that my compensation is not fixed by law but is discretionary with the park trustees.

"I enclose herewith his letter to me under date of the 20th inst., and you will note he refers to sections 4781 and 3318 of the General Code, in support of his opinion."

Section 4781, General Code, provides in part:

"The board of education of each school district shall fix the compensation of its clerk and treasurer, which shall be paid from the contingent fund of the district."

This section applies to school funds and cannot apply to township park funds.

The duties and compensation of a township treasurer may be ascertained from the following section.

Section 2689, General Code, provides:

"Immediately after each semi-annual settlement with the county auditor, on demand, and presentation of the warrant of the county auditor therefor, the county treasurer shall pay to the township treasurer, city treasurer or other proper officer thereof, all moneys in the county treasury belonging to such township, city, village or school district."

Section 3316, General Code, provides:

"No money belonging to the township shall be paid out by the treasurer, except upon an order signed personally by at least two of the township trustees and countersigned personally by the township clerk."

Section 3318, General Code, provides:

"The treasurer shall be allowed and may retain as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, two per cent. of all moneys paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees."

By virtue of section 2689 all moneys belonging to the township shall be paid to the township treasurer. The money raised by a special levy by a township for park purposes is township money and should be paid to the township treasurer.

By virtue of section 3318 the township treasurer receives a compensation of two per cent. upon all moneys paid out upon the order of the township trustees. By virtue of a ruling of Attorney General Denman given March 24, 1909, and found on page 191 of his report of 1909-1910, the funds of the township for park purposes are paid out upon order of the park commissioners, and not upon order of the board of trustees.

The law establishing a township park commission is found in section 3415, et seq., of the General Code. The park commission is now appointed by the court of common pleas or a judge therof. The only authority of the township trustees over the proceedings of the board of park commissioners is found in sections 3417, 3418 and 3419, General Code, which provides that the park commissioners shall make a report of their findings and recommendations for park sites to the township trustees, and directing the trustees to submit the question to the voters at the next general or township election. After such election the trustees have nothing more to do with the park commission.

Section 3121, General Code, provides:

"The township park commissioners shall devise plans for the improvement of the park, and award all contracts therefor, in the manner provided by law governing township trustees in awarding contracts for public improvements. They may appoint a guardian for the park and all other necessary officers and employes, fix their compensation and prescribe their duties, prohibit selling, giving away or using as a beverage any intoxicating liquors therein, pass by-laws, rules and regulations for the government thereof, and protect it from injury and provide for their enforcement by fines and penalties, but such by-laws, rules and regulations shall not conflict with the constitution and laws of the state."

Section 3422-2, General Code, 101 Ohio Laws, 130, provides:

"Money arising from the sale of said land may be expended by said board of park commissioners for the purchase of other land for park purposes or may be applied to the payment of any outstanding bonds unprovided for. Any money not so expended shall be deposited in the particular fund by which said property was acquired, or in the general fund of said township."

Section 3426, General Code, provides:

"Such commissioners shall make an annual report for the public, showing in detail all financial transactions of the board, which report shall be audited by a committee of two competent accountants appointed by the court of common pleas. Such auditing committee, shall report a summary of its findings to the court for its approval. When approved, the summary shall be entered upon the records of such court. The auditing committee and the costs of records in common pleas court shall be paid by the park board."

From these sections it appears that the park commission shall have control of all expenditures for parks, free from the supervision of the board of trustees.

It is claimed that the park commissioners have the right to fix the compensation of the township treasurer for handling park funds.

The only clause granting such authority, if any, is this found in section 3421, General Code: "They may appoint a guardian for the park and all other necessary officers and employes, fix their compensation and prescribe their duties." The phrase "all other necessary officers and employes is qualified by that which precedes it, to-wit, "a guardian for the park," and has reference to employes and officers necessary to maintain the park. It does not have reference to the township treasurer who handles the funds, nor does it authorize the park commission to appoint a treasurer. Unless such officers and employes are appointed by the commission they cannot fix their compensation.

The statute does not fix the compensation of a township treasurer for handling park funds. To warrant payment of compensation for such services, it must be authorized by statute. Such authority cannot be made to appear by implication.

The syllabi in the case of Debolt vs. Trustee, 7 O. S., 237, are as follows:

"An officer whose fees are regulated by statute can charge fees for those services only to which compensation is by law affixed.

"The office of township treasurer having been abolished in Cincinnati, and the county treasurer of Hamilton county being required to hold all moneys in his hands belonging to the township of Cincinnati, subject to the orders of the trustees of the township, the county treasurer cannot charge the fees allowed by law to the township treasurers for the receipt and disbursement of township funds, in the absence of any law allowing him to do so."

In the case of Clark vs. Commissioners, 58 O. S., 107, the first syllabus is as follows:

"To warrant the payment of fees or compensation to an officer, out of the county treasury, it must appear that such payment is authorized by statute."

The law pertaining to parks does not fix nor does it authorize anyone to fix the compensation of the township treasurer in receiving and paying out the funds of the park commission. Section 3420, General Code, provides that the park commissioners shall serve without compensation, and it is my opinion that no compensation can be allowed a township treasurer for handling park funds distributed upon order of the board of park commissioners.

I have expressed my opinion thus fully upon the question which you asked, because I suspect that the township park law has been in operation in different communities for some time. So far as the future is concerned, however, I feel compelled to advise you that in my opinion this law is absolutely unconstitutional.

I enclose a copy of opinion recently sent to the prosecuting attorney of Ashtabula county, stating my conclusions on this subject.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

432.

CHANGE OF VENUE OF CRIMINAL PROCEEDING—PAYMENT OF COSTS UPON FAILURE TO CONVICT OR INSOLVENCY OF DEFENDANT—SHERIFF'S FEE—LIABILITY OF COUNTIES—"LOST COSTS."

In a criminal case where the venue is changed to an adjoining county, and the state fails to convict or the defendant proves insolvent, the county in which indictment is found, is not liable for the fees of the sheriff, for the reason that section 2846, General Code, provides for an allowance of not exceeding three hundred dollars for fees in such cases. An amount of $130 paid by the county where indictment was found to the county to which venue was changed and remitted by the auditor of the latter county to the sheriff of the former county should be paid into the general fund and considered as lost costs.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1911.

HON. JOSEPH T. TRACY, Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of August 9th received, wherein you request my written opinion upon the following question:

> "The sheriff of Licking county served all the witnesses in the case of the State of Ohio vs. Bolton on change of venue to Knox county. The state failed to convict. The fees of the sheriff in serving said witnesses, amounting to $130.30, were paid by Licking county and remitted by the auditor of Knox county to the sheriff of Licking county.
>
> "Should said fees be considered as lost costs under section 2846 and be paid into the general fund, or should they be considered under section 13636 as earnings of the office and be paid into the sheriff's fee fund of Licking county?"

Section 2846 of the General Code, prior to the amendment thereof (102 O. L., 287) provides:

> "In each county the court of common pleas shall make an allowance of not more than three hundred dollars in each year for the sheriff for services in criminal cases, where the state fails to convict, or the defendants prove insolvent, and for other services not particularly provided for. Such allowance shall be paid from the county treasury."

This section was, of course, amended, but the Bolton case referred to in your inquiry was tried and the service performed by the sheriff prior to the amendment, consequently the amendment of this section of the General Code does not in any manner have any bearing upon your question.

Section 13636 of the General Code provides:

> "Criminal cases shall be tried in the county where the offense was committed. If it appear to the court thereof by affidavits, that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had therein, such court shall order that the accused be tried in an adjoining county."

Section 13637 defines proceedings on change of venue.

Section 13638 provides for costs as follows:

> "The cost accruing from a change of venue, including the compensation of the attorneys so appointed, the reasonable expense of the prosecuting attorney incurred in consequence of the change of venue, the fees of such clerk and the sheriff, and the fees of the jury sitting in the trial of the case in the court of the county to which the venue is changed, shall be allowed and paid by the commissioners of the county in which such indictment was found."

It is my opinion, in a criminal case where the venue is changed and the state fails to convict or the defendant proves insolvent, that the county in which the indictment is found is not liable for the fees of the sheriff; that sections 13636, 13637 and 13638 of the General Code, prescribing the course of procedure in such cases, does not affect the right of that officer to compensation; and that the only compensation which the sheriff is entitled to receive in cases where the state fails to convict, or the defendant proves insolvent, is that allowance not exceeding three hundred dollars provided for by said section 2846 of the General Code, and the fees of the sheriff in serving said witnesses, amounting to $130.30, should be considered as lost costs and be paid into the general fund.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

433.

CITIES—LEGAL COUNSEL FOR DEPARTMENTS—CITY SOLICITOR'S DUTIES—PAYMENT OF EXTRA COUNSEL FROM GENERAL FUND—POWERS OF COUNCIL—INTEREST OF PUBLIC OFFICERS IN CONTRACTS OF MUNICIPALITY—SUBCONTRACTS—MEMBER OF PUBLIC SERVICE—CITY'S RIGHT TO EXACT WHARFAGE ON GOVERNMENT STREAMS — INTERSTATE COMMERCE — MAYOR'S INTEREST IN NEWSPAPER PUBLISHING FOR MUNICIPALITY.

Moneys appropriated for a specific department of a municipality may not be employed for the purpose of engaging legal counsel. The city solicitor is primarily shouldered with the obligation to act as legal counsel for the various departments, but in extreme cases where it would be impossible for him to so act, as in the case where two departments are engaged in litigation against one another, counsel may appoint legal counsel for one or the other departments and pay for the same from the general fund.

Where impeachment proceedings are brought against an officer, he defends in his individual capacity and must pay for his own counsel.

Section 3808, General Code, comprehends a prohibition against officers of municipality corporation having any "pecuniary" interest whatever in contracts of the municipality. Therefore, a member of the board of public service who is interested in a subcontract connected with a municipal contract is within the prohibition and the principle applies the more forcibly when the interest is attached to material being supplied by the subcontractor to the main contractor, the estimate of which material must be approved by the board of public service.

An ex-mayor retired from office within a year, may freely contract with the city for work let at competitive bidding or otherwise, though he may not act as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer in work of the city during the year succeeding his retirement from office.

The control of the federal government over agencies of interstate commerce, is subject to the proper exercise of local police power regulations and a city has the right in the exercise of this power to exact wharfage from boats or vessels plying on government streams.

A contract of a municipality for legal advertising with a newspaper in which the mayor owns stock would be illegal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 18th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following questions:

"1. A mandamus action was instituted by the council to compel the mayor and city auditor to sign improvement bonds. The council employed attorneys other than the city solicitor, as did the mayor and auditor. No request was made of the solicitor to act for either party. What, if any, finding should be made for moneys paid to said attorneys and against whom?

"2. The mayor of a city filed charges against the members of the board of public service. At the hearing of the impeachment proceedings before council, the city solicitor represented the mayor and an attorney was employed by the board of public service to serve as their counsel. By order of council, said attorney was paid $250.00 for his services in said hearing, the same being paid from the service fund. Was this a proper charge against the city; if so, should it not have been paid out of the general fund from the appropriation for special counsel, solicitor's department? If not a proper charge against the city, against whom should the finding for recovery be made?

"3. A contract for the construction of a city hall was let at competitive bid to a brother of a member of the board of service having charge of the improvement. Was it legal for the member of the board of public service who was interested in a lumber company to furnish the lumber to the contractor, receiving payment therefor from said contractor upon estimates approved by the board of which he was a member? The question is, is it legal for a member of the board of public service who is interested in business to approve for payment and pass upon the quality of the material used by a contractor in work performed for the city, said material having been purchased by said contractor from the firm in which the official is interested?

"4. Has a corporation of which an ex-mayor of a city is secretary and treasurer, the right to enter into a contract with the city for improvement work let at competitive bid before the expiration of one year from the time of his going out of office as mayor?

"5. Has a city the right to levy and exact wharfage from boats or vessels plying on government streams?

"6. The mayor of a city owns stock in the only newspaper of his political party within the city. The ordinances of said city are published in said paper. Would the payment for the publication of same be legal. We desire an interpretation of the decision of the supreme court in the case of McCormick vs. the City of Niles?"

The first two questions you present are somewhat similar, although not identical. The General Code contains no express authority for the employment, by or on behalf of any department of the city government of legal counsel other than the city solicitor.

It is by section 4305 of the General Code expressly made the duty of the solicitor to "serve the several directors and officers mentioned in this title as legal counsel and attorney."

It is, of course, inherent in the office that the city solicitor shall act as legal counsel for the city itself. If the provisions of law relating to the powers and duties of the city solicitor in such matters are to be deemed exclusive, the conclusion would have to follow that no counsel other than the city solicitor could be employed under authority of council or otherwise to represent the city or any of its officers. I am not prepared, however, to hold that this conclusion is valid. The very facts which you recite in the first two questions disclose the probability of controversies between departments of the city government and suggest the necessity in many instances of counsel other than the city solicitor being employed.

In the case of State ex rel. vs. Noble, decided by the circuit court of Franklin county, March 1, 1911, the question was whether funds appropriated to the use of the safety department could be devoted, under authority of the resolution of council to the payment of counsel employed by the director of public safety in an action brought by a city solicitor for the purpose of testing the validity of the director's tenure of office. Judge Alread in delivering the opinion of the court employed the following language:

"The power of the director of public safety to contract and expend money is fixed by sections 147 and 154 of the act of April 24, 1908, 99 O. L. 562 * * *. When funds are therefore set apart by council under section 1536-203 R. S., from the general funds of the corporation for the department of public safety, such funds are thereby appropriated for the specific use of that department and cannot be diverted to any other purpose. * * *

"The department of public safety is a subordinate agency of the city having limited and express powers. There being no authority granted to the director of public safety to contract for attorney fees, the defense of a test case, even if it involves the existence of the department, devolved upon the city.

"It is urged, however, that the resolution of council authorizing the director of public safety to make the contract and charge the payment therefor against the funds of the department creates an agency and authorizes the contract.

"We do not doubt—in fact the city solicitor does not dispute the proposition—that the city council by proper resolution may provide for the employment of counsel to defend any of its departments * * * especially where the city solicitor declines, and may provide for the payment thereof out of proper funds of the corporation."

It is to be observed that in this case it was held merely that funds appropriated to the use of departments could not be expended for attorney fees. The paragraph last above quoted from the decision is perhaps obiter. I agree, however, with so much of it as indicates the court's opinion that council may in a proper case employ attorneys other than the city solicitor. As the court points out, the furnishing of legal counsel for any of the departments is an obligation of the city, which the city may discharge in any way it sees fit. In the first instance the duty devolves upon the city solicitor, but if he cannot act, as would be the case if the controversy was between the city and one of its officers, or between two departments of the city government, then it would be proper for council itself to employ attorneys other than the solicitor to represent the department or officer other than the one whom the solicitor elected to represent. Inasmuch as section 4305, General Code, provides as follows:

"Section 4305. The solicitor shall prepare all contracts, bonds and other instruments in writing in which the city is concerned, and shall serve the several directors and officers mentioned in this title as legal counsel and attorney."

It would seem to follow that under the law, it is the duty of the several directors and officers mentioned in this title to accept the advice of legal counsel, and only an extraordinary occasion would seem to me to warrant any departure from this principle. In any event, no authority short of the council would be warranted in authorizing the employment of counsel beyond the city solicitor.

Coming now to the first of the two similar questions submitted by you, a difficulty is presented thereby which is not solved in the decision in the case above cited. It appears that council employed attorneys for both parties of a controversy, in fact, if not in name between two branches of the city government, and that no request was made of the solicitor to act for either party. In my opinion the payments in this case were illegal, inasmuch as it was the duty of council in the first instance to call upon the city solicitor to represent at least one of the two parties. Inasmuch as this was not done, it cannot now be ascertained as to which attorneys, as between those representing council and those representing the mayor and auditor were, so to speak, superfluous. Both must, therefore, be regarded as unauthorized employments. The money having been paid to the attorneys, however, I cannot advise that at this time it may be recovered back. In an action to recover the same the burden would be upon the city to show, not only the illegality of the contract of employment, but also that the services rendered were worthless to the city—unless, of course, the principle embodied in the case of State ex rel. vs. Fronizer, 77 O. S. 7, is not applicable to payments of this sort. Attorneys for both parties have rendered services to the city; council had power to employ counsel for one side, and counsel so employed would be entitled to such compensation as might be allowed by direct appropriation of council. The city then would be unable to allege and prove as to either defendant that the services rendered by him or them, were worthless to the city.

In your first question you do not identify the fund from which the remittances in question were made, and I have assumed in answering the same that council appropriated moneys from the general fund of the city for the purpose mentioned.

Your second question presents a state of facts substantially different from that embodied in the first question. The impeachment proceeding is only brought against an officer in his personal capacity and not as an official. It devolves then upon an officer so accused to defend himself, and the city is in no way liable for the expense of his defense.

For this reason, and because further the payment in question was made from the service fund—a thing expressly condemned in the decision above quoted—I advise that the same was in all respects illegal, and the finding should be made against the attorney to whom it was paid.

Answering your third question I beg to state that the facts set forth therein would seem to afford a strong presumption of an interest in fact on the part of the member of the board of public service in question. I have examined certain opinions of my predecessor relating to the general question of interest of public officials in public contracts and in referring to an "interest in fact," I am following the rules which he has laid down for the guidance of your department. At the risk of repetition, however, permit me to say that the rule appears to be that certain relations on the part of public officials to public contracts, such as those of partner, stockholder, etc., in the firm or corporation with which the contract is made, constitute an interest in law, and however remote or inconsequentional such interest may be it is illegal, both at common law, and under statutes prohibiting such an interest; but if the public official while sustaining no such relation to the contracting party as those described, nevertheless has a pecuniary interest of any sort in the performance of the contract or in the profits therof, such an interest is equally illegal, but the fact of the interest must be proved in order to establish its illegality. In the case at hand, the member of the board of public service was not interested in the principal contract with the city in law. By virtue of the subcontract, however, between the principal contractor and the lumber company with which he was interested, he undoubtedly acquired an indirect interest in fact in the proceeds of the contract. The fact, too, that in his official capacity he was called upon to pass upon the quality of material used, with power to reject same, constitutes an additional element tending to establish the fact of an unlawful interest on his part. The statutes applicable to the case in this respect broaden the common law, but they may with propriety be cited in this connection.

Section 3808 of the General Code provides that:

> "No * * * officer * * * of the corporation shall have any interest in the expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed salary."

Inasmuch as a part of the money expended under the contract in question was to be paid for material subject to the approval of the member of the board of public service, I am of the opinion that the facts, as stated by you, constitute a violation of this section. It will be necessary, however, to prove, in an action to recover moneys from the member of the board under this section, the exact amount of profit which the member himself derived from the contract. The principal contract itself was not illegal nor was the subsidiary contract—in which respect the question differs from any in which the interest of the member is an interest in law.

Section 12912 of the General Code provides:

> "Whoever being an officer of a municipal corporation or member of council thereof * * * is interested in the profits of a contract, job, work or services for such corporation * * * shall be fined." * * *

This section and possibly section 12910, General Code, clearly make the act of the member in question unlawful and criminal, but do not invalidate either of the contracts in question or enable the city to recover any sum from him in a civil action.

In conclusion as to the third question I beg to state that while the relation which the member of the board of public service had to the contract seems to have been illegal, the contract itself is not impaired by such relation, and the city can recover civilly such amount only as can be traced as profits of the transaction to the member himself.

Answering your fourth question I beg to state that section 12912, above cited, provides that,

> "Whoever being an officer of a municipal corporation * * * is interested in the profits of a contract * * * for such corporation, or acts as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer in work undertaken or prosecuted by such corporation * * * during the term for which he was elected or appointed, or for one year thereafter shall be fined." * * *

My predecessor in an opinion addressed to you construed the phrase "for one year thereafter" as used in this section, as modifying the word "undertaken." On examination of his opinion I am satisfied that it is correct. The thing prohibited then by the section is not an interest of an ex-official in a contract acquired during the year succeeding his retirement from office, but this acting as commissioner, architect, superintendent or engineer in work undertaken by the city during such year.

It follows, therefore, that an ex-mayor retired from office within a year may freely contract with the city for work let at competitive bidding or otherwise.

Your fifth question relates to the right of "the city to levy and exact wharfage from boats or vessels plying on government streams."

The federal legislation respecting navigable streams and the protection of navigation thereon does not in any way assume to regulate wharfage or local police regulations imposed under authority of the several states. The mere fact that the Ohio river is a navigable stream and subject to the federal laws insuring freedom of navigation prohibiting the exaction of tolls, etc., does not preclude the state from authorizing its municipalities to exact wharfage charges, pilot licenses, etc.

Wiggins Ferry vs. St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365.
Chilvers vs. People, 11 Michigan, 43.
Marshall vs. Grimes, 41 Miss. 27.
Glouchester Ferry Co. vs. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196.

Nor under authority of the above cited cases is it material that a boat or other water craft may be plying between ports of different states and may be thus engaged in interstate commerce. The regulation of wharfage and other similar matters is a function exercised under the police power of the state and delegated by it to the various municipalities. The control of the federal government over the agencies of interstate commerce has in many cases been held subject to the proper exercise of such local police regulations.

With respect to your sixth question I beg to state that the statutes above quoted, in express terms, forbid a city officer from being interested in any expenditure of money on the part of the corporation other than his fixed compensation. The authorities are practically unanimous in holding that the interest possessed by a stockholder of a corporation in the contracts of the corporation is such an interest as that inhibited by statutes such as this and by the common law rules of which they are sometimes said to be declaratory. Whether or not then the relation of the city and the newspaper in which its legal publications are made is contractual, the payment to such newspaper of money would certainly be an expenditure of money on the part of the corporation. But it is not necessary to consider the effect of an interest in an expenditure not contractual in its nature.

In the case of McCormick vs. City of Niles, 81 O. S. 246, it was held that,

> "The liability of municipal corporations to pay for the publication of ordinances, resolutions and legal notices required by law to be published, must rest on express contract, and not upon a mere account for the rendition of such services."

Under this decision every payment made by a city to a newspaper for legal advertising inserted therein must be deemed to have been made under a contract between the city and the newspaper. If then an officer of the city own stock in a newspaper, a contract between such newspaper and the city would be illegal and the newspaper would be precluded, so long as the officer retained the ownership of his stock, from publishing the legal notices required to be published even though the law requires publication in two newspapers of opposite politics, and the disqualified newspaper is the only one of its politics in the city.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 434.

TAX MAP DRAFTSMAN—LEGAL COMPENSATION—CONTRACT BETWEEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND COUNTY SURVEYOR—RECOVERY OF EXCESS OVER LEGAL RATE.

Inasmuch as section 2789, General Code, provides that the salary of the tax map draftsmen shall not exceed the rate of $2,000 per year, contract of the county commissioners with the county surveyor to make the tax maps of the county within seven and one-half months for a compensation of $2,000 is illegal as to the excess compensation represented by the difference between a rate of $3,000 per year as the contract actually allowed and the rate of $2,000 a year as allowed by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 23, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 6th, enclosing transcript of the journal of the board of county commissioners of Marion county, which shows that such commissioners entered into a contract appointing the county surveyor of that county to make a complete set of tax maps for the county under section 2789a, Revised Statutes, at a salary of $2,000.00, and specifying that all services under the appointment should be performed in seven and one-half months, and that the salary should be payable in monthly installments of $266.66, at which rate said $2,000 would be exhausted in the period of seven and one-half months. It is further stipulated by said agreement that the county surveyor was to do the work himself without assistance, or in the event that assistants were employed by him that he should be responsible for their payment.

You inquire whether or not the commissioners were within their statutory authority in entering into this contract, and whether, further, in the event that the contract should be held illegal there may not be a recovery from the county surveyor.

Said section 2789a, R. S., provides in general for a contract similar to that entered into by the commissioners of Marion county. It will not be necessary to quote the entire section, but the following language is significant:

> "The board of county commissioners may appoint the county surveyor * * * to provide for making, correcting and keeping up to date a complete set of tax maps of the county, and which maps shall show all original lots or parcels, etc." * * *

Section 2789b provides that:

> "The board of county commissioners shall fix the salary of the draftsman at not to exceed $2,000 per year."

It seems to me that the contract which you have submitted to me is clearly in violation of law. The authority of the county commissioners with respect to employing the county surveyor does not extend to fixing the time within which his work shall be completed except by inference. It is probable, however, that a grant of power to appoint carries with it the power to fix the term for which the appointment is made. So that the limitation of time which appears in the contract is probably not in contravention of law. However, the authority of the commissioners in the matter of compensation is strictly limited to a certain maximum amount, to wit, $2,000 per year. This does not mean that the commissioners may expend the sum of $2,000 in any one year for the purpose of hiring a draftsman. The sum fixed by statute is in the nature of a salary, and the position of tax map draftsman is in the nature of an office rather than an employment.

In the case submitted the surveyor was paid at a rate equal to $3,000.00 a year—at a rate of of $266.66 a month. It is expressly provided by section 2789b that the salaries of the draftsman and assistants shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officers are paid.

It is a familiar fact that salaries of other county officers were, at the time this law was enacted, paid out of the county treasury in equal monthly installments. It is clear, I think, that if the county commissioners choose to appoint the county surveyor for a limited period of less than a year under these sections, they must fix his compensation for such services at such proportion of $2,000 as is represented by the portion of the year for which he is appointed and no more.

From all the foregoing I am of the opinion that the contract in question is illegal as to the amount of compensation therein provided for. I am further of the opinion that its illegality does not affect the entire contract or rather the entire appointment, so to speak, but only applies to the excess over and above the amount of compensation which the county commissioners were actually entitled to fix and allow. As I have hereinbefore pointed out the position of tax map draftsman is an office, and the draftsman's relation to the county is not purely contractual. The case is, therefore, one of excessive compensation drawn by a public officer, and the rule of law applicable to a recovery in such cases is that on the one hand the officer must pay back into the treasury the excessive amount which he has drawn, while on the other he is entitled to retain the amount which he ought to have been allowed.

In my opinion, therefore, recovery may be had from the county surveyor for the difference between the amount of $2,000 drawn by him under this appointment, and the amount represented by seven and one-half months' salary at the rate of $2,000 per annum.

I have reached the above conclusion with some reluctance in view of the fact that the contract of appointment in question was undoubtedly an economical one for the county, but the law in the matter seems plain to me.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

447.

DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS — SALARY INCLUDES TRAVELING EXPENSES OF MEMBERS — EXPENSES OF BOARD AS A WHOLE.

The salary provided for the members of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections is in full for all services and the personal expenses of the individual members of the board in traveling from their homes to the place of meeting of the board is covered by such salary.

Section 4821 of the General Code refers only to certain expenses incurred by the board as a whole.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your favor of September 22d received. You inquire whether the actual personal expenses of the members of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections for attendance at the meetings of the board can be paid from the county treasury.

Section 4821 of the General Code provides that:

> "All proper and necessary expenses of the board of deputy state supervisors shall be paid from the county treasury as other county expenses, and the county commissioners shall make the necessary levy to provide therefor. In counties containing annual general registration cities, such expenses shall include expenses duly authorized and incurred in the investigation and prosecution of offenses against laws relating to the registration of electors, the right of suffrage and the conduct of elections."

It is my opinion that "all proper and necessary expenses of the board of deputy state supervisors" applies only to the expenses of the board as a whole, and cannot be made to apply to the personal expenses or mileage of the members of the board in their attendance upon meetings.

This conclusion is strengthened by the fact that section 4821, General Code, which was formerly section 2966-4, Revised Statutes, as originally passed, 89 O. L., 455, provided for mileage of the members at the rate of five cents a mile, going to and returning from the county seat, and a salary or compensation of two dollars a day, not to exceed twenty days in any year. The salary or compensation of members of the board is now increased, as provided in sections 4822 and 4990, General Code, which are as follows:

Section 4822:

> "Each deputy state supervisor shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of four dollars for each election precinct in his respective county. The compensation so allowed such officers during any year shall be determined by the number of precincts in such county at the November election of the next preceding year. The compensation paid to each of such deputy state supervisors under this section shall in no case be less than one hundred dollars each year and the compensation paid to the clerk shall in no case be less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars each year. Such compensation shall be paid quarterly from the general revenue fund of the county upon vouchers of the board, made and certified by the chief deputy and the clerk thereof. Upon presentation of any such voucher, the county auditor shall issue his warrant upon the county treasurer for the amount thereof, and the treasurer shall pay it."

Section 4990:

"For their services in conducting primary elections, members of boards of deputy state supervisors shall each receive for his services the sum of two dollars for each election precinct in his respective county, and the clerk shall receive for his services the sum of three dollars for each election precinct in his county, and judges and clerks of election shall receive the same compensation as is provided by law for such officers at general elections."

The provision in reference to mileage is repealed and the compensation is increased. I therefore hold that the compensation provided for in sections 4828 and 4990, General Code, is in full for all services rendered, including the personal expenses of the individual members of the board in traveling from their homes to the place of meeting of the board, or otherwise incurred in attending meetings of such board.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

449.

GUARDIAN AND WARD—FILING OF SEPARATE ACCOUNT BY GUARDIAN OF SEVERAL WARDS—PROBATE JUDGE—POWERS OF DISCRETION —STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

When a person is appointed guardian of several minor children of the same parentage and inheriting from the same estate, there is no provision of the laws of Ohio which requires him to file a separate account for each ward and if the account filed by him meets all the requirements of subdivision three of section 10933, General Code, as applied to each ward, such account should be allowed.

If, however, the probate judge considers that the safety and best interests of any estate in the hands of a guardian, require the filing of separate accounts that official in the exercise of the wide discretion vested in him may compel the submission of such accounts separately.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 2, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am, in receipt of your letters of July 6th and 11th, asking my opinion as to whether a guardian of more than one ward is required to file separate accounts for each ward, for which the probate judge shall receive a separate fee; or may the accounts of all the wards be combined in one account, for which the probate judge shall charge one fee.

Section 10492, General Code, provides in part as follows:

"Except as hereinafter provided, the probate court shall have exclusive jurisdiction; * * *

"4. To appoint and remove guardians, direct and control their conduct and settle their accounts;" * * *

Section 10933, General Code, provides as follows:

"The following are the duties of every guardian appointed to have the custody and take charge of the estate of a minor:

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"2. To manage the estate for the best interest of his ward;

"3. On oath, to render to the proper court an account of his receipts and expenditures, verified by vouchers or proof, and as part of the account, a full, itemized statement of the funds of his ward's estate, the date and nature of their investment, the security thereof, and the rate of interest or income accruing thereon, once in every two years, or oftener, upon the order of the court, made on motion of any person interested in such ward or his or her property, for good cause shown by affidavit. Failure so to do for thirty days after he has been notified of the expiration of the time by the probate judge, no allowance shall be made for his services, unless the court enters upon its journal that such delay was necessary and reasonable. But when the whole estate of such ward, or of several wards jointly, under the same guardianship, does not exceed two hundred dollars, in value, the guardian shall only be required to render such account upon the termination of his guardianship, or upon the order of the court made upon its own motion, or the motion of a person interested in the ward or wards, or in his, her, or their property, for good cause shown and set forth upon the journal of the court;

"4. At the expiration of his trust, fully to account for and pay over to the proper person all of the estate of his ward in his hands;" * * *

The above are the only provisions of the General Code as to the accounts of guardians.

Section 10927, General Code, is as follows:

"When a person is appointed guardian of several minors, children of the same parentage and inheriting from the same estate, separate bonds shall not be required. In such cases only one application is necessary, and the letters of guardianship issued to such guardian shall be in one copy, and not one for each minor. The court approving and recording such bond, and issuing such letters, shall charge the fees allowed by law for such services, to be charged but once and not once for each ward."

It has been suggested that this section indirectly sustains the contention that a guardian should file a separate account for each ward, for the reason that it expressly provides that only a single fee shall be charged for letters of guardianship and the guardian's bond, in case one person is appointed as guardian of several minors, children of the same parentage, etc., and that therefore separate proceedings must be had and separate fees charged for each ward, for all requirements of a guardianship not exempted by this section; but it seems to me that if this section has any bearing at all upon the question under consideration it sustains the opposite view that, where a person is appointed guardian of several minors, children of the same parentage and inheriting from the same estate, the matter, or estate, in the probate court shall be treated as joint, rather than several, as the authority under which the guardian acts for the several minors is given by one document, and only one bond is required, which bond covers the liability of the guardian for the estates of each and all of the wards; that is, for the entire estate left by the decedent. The matter is thus only docketed once upon the appearance docket of the court and all the proceedings of a guardian are docketed under this one head. This statute, section 10927, does not specify that in such cases only one inventory shall be required of a guardian, yet, if it be held that separate proceedings are required unless otherwise specified, in a case of this kind, a guardian would have to file as many inventories as there were wards. Such a requirement, to the best of my knowledge, has never been enforced or required by any probate court in Ohio, and, unless it be for the purpose of augmenting the fee fund of the probate court, there can be no reason for such a requirement.

It seems to me, in the matter of a guardian's accounts, the last sentence of section 10933, General Code, above quoted, amounts practically to a statutory expression that, where the estate belongs to several wards jointly, under the same guardianship, the accounts of all the wards may be placed in one account, to be filed in the probate court. This sentence is as follows:

> "But when the whole estate of such ward, or of several wards jointly, under the same guardianship, does not exceed two hundred dollars, in value, the guardian shall only be required to render such account upon the termination of his guardianship," * * *

This sentence may be read in connection with the other portions of said section 10933, above quoted, as follows:

> "It is the duty of the guardian, on oath, to render to the proper court, on account of his receipts and expenditures * * * once in every two years; * * * but when the whole estate * * * of several wards jointly, under the same guardianship, does not exceed two hundred dollars, in value, the guardian shall only be required to render such account upon the termination of his guardianship." * * *

It seems to me that this is a plain expression by the legislature that a single account may be rendered to the probate court, combining the accounts of several wards jointly under the same guardianship; at any rate, it may be given this construction, and there is every reason of right and justice for giving such construction to it.

The probate court, as will be seen from a portion of section 10942, quoted in the first part of this opinion, has exclusive jurisdiction to appoint and remove guardians and direct and control their conduct, and to settle their accounts; this jurisdiction is very broad and practically covers everything that a guardian may be required to do; all of his conduct is under the direction and control of the court, and the court, through the guardian, has entire and complete management and control of the trust estate. The purpose of the account, of course, is to show at regular periods the exact situation of the estate belonging to each ward, so that the court, or any person interested in the ward's estate, may file exceptions in case the same is not being managed properly; provided the account filed by the guardian shows the exact situation of the estate, the amount received for each ward and the amount expended in his behalf, the items of expenditure being verified by vouchers, as per the requirement of the statute, and the account shows the other details required by law to be shown in a guardian's account, all the requirements of the law have been complied with and I cannot see that it makes any difference whether these facts are shown by one document, which includes the accounts of each ward, or by separate documents for each ward; the result reached is the same.

In this state, and I presume in most of the states of the Union, when the necessity for the appointment of a guardian arises, it is usually the case that the estate is small, while the family is large; and in a great number of instances, perhaps the majority, a mother is left with a family consisting of several children, all of them so young that she must necessarily file a large number of accounts before the guardianship can be terminated. In these cases, the matter of court costs is important; the estate is generally so small that if the guardian be compelled to file separate accounts for each ward, to pay the probate court a separate fee for filing each account and to pay an attorney for preparing the different accounts, the costs of so doing will amount to as much or more than the income from the whole estate, for the period covered by the account filed.

If the provisions of the General Code as to this matter of a guardian's accounts, while silent, yet, necessarily implied that a separate account should be filed for each ward in estates of this kind, I would feel bound by the implication, though I failed to see the wisdom of such a requirement; but when, as I have above pointed out, the implication to be drawn from the statute is that separate accounts are not required in such an instance, I take pleasure in expressing the opinion that when a person is appointed guardian of several minors, children of the same parentage and inheriting from the same estate, there is no provision by the laws of Ohio which requires him to file a separate account for each ward, and that if the account filed by him meets all of the requirements of subdivision three of section 10933, as applied to each ward, then that such account should be allowed as to form.

My personal experience as a practicing attorney strengthens me in the above conclusion. In my practice I have always combined the accounts of several wards, children of the same parentage and inheriting from the same estate, under one account; and I am informed that this practice prevails generally throughout Ohio. Of course, custom does not make the law, but in this instance, in the absence of express statutory requirement to the contrary, and in view of what is right and just, custom should have a very large place in interpreting the law.

I wish it understood, however, that it is further my opinion that the probate court is vested with a very wide discretion in guardianship matters, and the probate judge, in the exercise of this discretion, whenever in his view the safety or the best interests of any estate, in the hands of a guardian, requires the filing of a separate account for each ward inheriting from the said estate, has full authority to compel the filing of separate accounts by such guardian.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

454.

COUNCIL—POWER TO AUTHORIZE SOLICITOR TO EMPLOY LEGAL COUNSEL FOR THE BOARD OF PUBLIC SERVICE—RIGHT OF COUNSEL TO FEES WITHOUT FURTHER CONTRACT OR AGREEMENT.

A city council authorizes and directs the city solicitor to employ specific attorneys to defend the board of public service in injunction proceedings and the city auditor certified that there was $1,350.00 in the treasury for such purposes. Under these circumstances where the solicitor advised the designated attorneys to perform the services without any further contract or agreement, and such services were performed, the attorneys may be compensated at the rate of $250.00 each when such a bill is presented by them.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 4, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 17th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following:

> "A city solicitor asked for an order to restrain the board of public service from entering into a contract for the construction of a mechanical filtration plant. No application was made to the solicitor by the members of the board of public service for counsel to represent the board in the case, but the city council by resolution authorized and directed the city solicitor to employ certain attorneys to represent said board, and the city auditor certified that there was $1,350.00 in the treasury standing to the credit of the fund for special counsel. The solicitor notified the attorneys designated in the resolution of council, but entered into no contract of employment nor agreed upon any terms for compensation for their services. The litigation resulted in the dismissal of the application for an order of injunction and the attorneys were each (three) paid $250.00 for their services out of said appropriation upon vouchers approved by the city solicitor, members of the board of service and by the chairman of the finance committee of council, that, if any, finding should be returned by this department."

In my opinion, the bureau should make no finding for recovery in the premises. It is quite an ordinary form of contract, employing legal counsel, simply to retain counsel, leaving the amount of their fees to be determined after the services are rendered. The effect of the arrangement described by you was virtually a contract on the part of the city solicitor to pay special counsel the amount of their fees, up to $1,350.00. The services exacted from counsel under said arrangement were rendered on behalf of the whole city, the proceeding being one to determine a question affecting the city's interest, and the board of public service being made defendants in their official capacity as distinguished from their personal capacity.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the transaction referred to by you is in all respects regular and lawful.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 455.

VILLAGE COUNCILMEN—SALARY—LEGISLATIVE FIXTURE—NO RIGHT OF COUNCIL TO CHANGE.

Ever since the passage of the act of 1905, the salaries of village councilmen have been fixed by law at the rate of $2.00 per meeting and the members are entitled to said sum regardless of any ordinance fixing a lesser rate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 6, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 17th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "A village council in 1905 fixed the salaries of members of council at $1.00 per meeting, not to exceed 24 meetings in any one year. On January 14, 1910, the council which had assumed their offices on January 1, 1910, passed a resolution fixing their compensation at $2.00 per meeting, not to exceed 24 meetings in any one year and have drawn compensation in accordance with said resolution. What is the legal compensation of said members of council, and what finding, if any, should be made by this department?"

The second branch of the syllabus in the case of Walker vs. Dillonvale, 82 O. S. 137, is as follows:

> "Section 197, Municipal Code, as amended in 1904 (97 O. L. 118), fixes the compensation of a member of council of a village at two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year, and it is not necessary that it should have been fixed by an ordinance, passed before the commencement of his term of office, but the council may authorize its payment by a resolution passed after the services have been rendered."

In the opinion the court, per Summers, J., on page 149, uses the following language:

> "The right of a councilman of a village to compensation for his services as such, when it has not been fixed by ordinance, depends upon whether it is fixed by statute, and upon this depends also the answer to the question whether the petition states a cause of action. The Municipal Code of 1902 (section 126) provides that the compensation of members of council in cities, 'if any is fixed, shall be in accordance with the time actually consumed in the discharge of their official duties,' and is limited not to exceed a stated sum per year. It is further provided that the salaries shall be paid semi-monthly and that a proportionate reduction shall be made for non-attendance upon any regular or special meeting; and that code twice provides (sections 194 and 197) that no compensation shall be allowed to the members of the council of a village; but in 1904 (97 O. L., 118) these prohibitions were repealed and section 197 was amended as follows: 'Provided that members of council may receive as compensation the sum of two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year.' The amended section does not provide, as does section 126, respecting members of council in cities, that the compensation of members of council, 'if any is fixed,' shall not exceed a stated sum per year, but that they may receive two dollars for each meeting. The statute itself fixes the compensation and we do not think the legislature intended that an ordinance should be necessary to fix it. The statute does not fix it at $48.00 per year, but authorizes the payment of that amount if twenty-four meetings are held in one year, and the petition does not aver that a less number were held."

It is clear to me, from the foregoing, that the court held, in the case cited, that the salaries of members of a village council are fixed by law, so far as the rate per meeting of council is concerned. This being the case, the provision of that which was section 197, Municipal Code, to the effect that "the compensation so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which any officer * * * shall have been elected," does not apply to the salary of members of council, it not being "compensation so fixed" by the council itself.

The somewhat similar provision of the constitution as to the changes in the salaries of state officers has been repeatedly held, as you are doubtless aware, to apply only to officers of the state.

There is, therefore, no reason why the genral assembly may not at any time change the salary of members of village councils, fixed by it, subject to be effective during the term of any council member.

In the case you submit neither the ordinance of 1905 nor the resolution of 1910 were of any effect whatever. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the legal compensation of the members of a village council, at all times since 1904, has been and now is two dollars for each meeting. Whether or not members who have accepted less, prior to the decision in Walker vs. Dillonvale, are entitled to the difference between the amounts accepted by them and the amounts determined by the application of the principles of that decision, it is clear that those who have been paid in accordance therewith cannot be compelled to return any part of the sums received by them.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 467.

COMPROMISE OF CLAIMS IN FAVOR OF STATE OR COUNTY BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS — STATUTORY RESTRICTIONS — APPROVAL OF ATTORNEY GENERAL.

County commissioners may not compromise findings of claims due the state. They may compromise claims due the county but the same shall first be submitted to the attorney general, and a statement of the facts together with the reasons for the release or compromise entered on the journal.

Attorney general's recommendations as to specific findings.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 16, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—I herewith desire to acknowledge receipt of your communication of November 10, 1911, as follows, to-wit:

> "The writer recently visited Ross county and took up the matter of the proposed compromises with the several officers of that county on account of findings made by this department, the same being thoroughly canvassed with the prosecuting attorney and with some of the officials. After due consideration of the nature of the several findings and matters in which the finding was a matter of estimate or judgment, we believe that the interests of the county would be well subserved by compromises as follows: With F. L. Gibbs, ex-coroner, for $125.00; John C. Staggs, clerk of courts, $60.00; the Chillicothe News Advertiser, $150.00; Scioto Gazette Company, $175.00; the Fromm Printing Company, $175.00; ex-Sheriff Latta Morrison, $400.00."

The letter of Mr. Boulger to which you refer and which you enclose in your communication raises the question as to whether or not such compromises or settlements can be made and entered into by the county commissioners, as follows, to-wit:

> "I herewith enclose proposed settlement of findings of the state examiners against ex-County Clerk Staggs and ex-Coroner Gibbs and also findings against the Scioto Gazette, News Advertiser and Unsere Leit Publishing Companies. In regard to this settlement I have already talked the matter over with Mr. B. S. Johnson of your office, the understanding being that after a settlement proposition had been made which would be approved by the county commissioners of this county, that the same should then be submitted to you.
>
> "The findings against the ex-coroner and the ex-county clerk involve certain questions of fact, and for that reason the compromise herewith submitted, was tentatively agreed upon subject to your approval.
>
> "In regard to the findings against the newspapers the proposed settlement should possibly be submitted to the state auditor as it is in part upon the statement of Examiner John A. Bliss, who recently made an examination of certain offices in this county, that this settlement is being agreed upon. The findings against the newspapers all cover a period prior to September, 1909, and are made up mostly of charges for what is termed excessive measurement, and in view of the fact that there had been great variation in setting up advertisements by various newspapers throughout the state and as there were great differences of opinion as to the number of insertions required by law, a pamphlet was gotten out by the auditor of state and bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, which was approved by the attorney general in August, 1909, and the newspapers claim that there were to be no findings made against them for any charges made prior to that time arising out of the differences of opinion just stated, and that after such pamphlet had been uniformly distributed throughout the state they were to be governed by the forms and instructions therein approved. It is on the theory just stated that the settlements with the newspapers are submitted to you and any further information you might desire in regard to the claims of the publishers could be obtained in the department of auditor of state.

"It has occurred to me that there is some question under the statutes of this state as to the right to compromise claims of this character. In the reports of the attorney general of year 1906 to 1907, I find that an opinion has been rendered by the assistant attorney general to the effect that under section 855, Revised Statutes, the county commissioners have the power to compromise claims wherein the money is due the county and not the state, but there seems to be no statutory authority for settlement wherein any part of the claim is due the state. In the recent amendment of section 286 of the General Code of Ohio, as found in 101 O. L., page 384, simply forbids any settlement or compromise without notice being given to the attorney general and allowing him to be heard in the matter, but does not in any way authorize a compromise.

"Hon. J. M. Sheets, formerly attorney general, on November 30, 1901, rendered an opinion in which he held that section 856, Revised Statutes, does not authorize the compromise of the claims of this character. So far as I can learn this matter has not been directly decided in this state and I would like to have your opinion as to our right to make the compromise herein suggested."

I concur with the opinion of this department which was rendered August 9, 1906, by one of my predecessors to the effect that the county commissioners have the power to compromise and settle claims wherein the money is due the county, and that they do not have such authority to compromise claims due the state. The county commissioners are given authority to compromise claims due the county by section 3416 of the General Code, as follows, to-wit:

> "The board may compound or release, in whole or in part, a debt, judgment, fine or amercement due the county, and for the use thereof, except where it, or either of its members, is personally interested. In such case the board shall enter upon its journal a statement of the facts in the case, and the reasons for such release or composition."

Section 286 of the General Code, as amended 101 O. L. 384, provides in substance that such compromise shall not be made until after the same is submitted to the attorney general and he is allowed to be heard in the matter, where such compromise is made before or after suit for recovery is started by the proper legal officer.

I take it that the amounts enumerated in your communication are all of them due the county and not to the state, and in that event the county commissioners have authority to make said compromise, subject to the limitation in section 286 of the General Code as aforesaid.

I am advised by Mr. Boulger regarding the claim against F. L. Gibbs, ex-coroner, and John C. Staggs, ex-county clerk, that it is very doubtful under the facts in those cases, whether or not the full amounts could be recovered, and on that hypothesis I advise and approve the compromises in their cases.

I understand that there were to be no findings made against the newspapers and the printing company for any claim existing prior to August, 1909, as per an understanding between the said newspapers and printing company, and the department of auditor of state. For that reason I approve the compromise so made with the said newspapers and said printing company.

I reserve passing on the compromise made with ex-Sheriff Latta Morrison until a later date, for the reason that I am not familiar with the facts involved in that case and meantime, I would deem it a favor if a full statement of the facts in the Morrison case could be furnished to this department.

I have assumed the liberty to combine the opinion in response to Mr. Boulger's inquiry and my reply to your communication, for the reason that both involve the same subject matter and the same set of circumstances and could be more readily answered together than separately. I am,

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

E 468.

SHERIFF—ALLOWANCE BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR EXPENSE OF KEEPING UP OR HIRING AN AUTOMOBILE—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

By section 2997, General Code, as amended May 6, 1911, the county commissioners are authorized to pay out of the county treasury the expenses of maintaining an automobile owned by the sheriff if in the exercise of the discretion vested in them they deem such expense necessary to the proper administration of the sheriff's duties.

Under the same act, 102 O. L., 93, the commissioners with the same limitation are authorized to rent an automobile under the power granted to allow expenses for "livery hire."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Department of Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 20th, in which you submit the following questions:

> "1. Are the county commissioners authorized by section 2997, General Code, as amended May 6, 1911, to pay out of the county treasury the expenses of maintaining an automobile owned by the sheriff, the same being used, at least in part, in the discharge of the official duties of the sheriff?
>
> "2. Are the commissioners authorized to rent an automobile for the use of the sheriff? We understand that there has been a court decision on the latter question, and we would appreciate your referring us to the same or giving us the gist of the decision if the same is available."

Answering the first question, section 2997, General Code, provides as follows:

"* * * In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office." * * *

It will be noted that the above statute embraces the following expression: "expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary, etc.," and the question necessarily arises as to whether or not an automobile is a vehicle. I am of the opinion that it is, and the following authorities hold that an automobile is a vehicle:

"The automobile is a vehicle of quite recent times, carrying its motive power within itself."
77 N. Y. Supp., 276.

In the case of Christy vs. Elling, 216 Ill., 31, at page 40 of the opinion, the automobile is referred to by the court as being a vehicle.

In the case of Diocese of Trenton vs. Toman, 70 Atl. Dep. 606, the court held:

"An automobile is a carriage within the meaning of a covenant in a deed reserving a strip of land for a carriageway forever."

See also:

Simon vs. Lindsay, 65 Atl., 778.
House vs. Kramer, 134 Iowa, 374.

An automobile being a vehicle, it follows that the county commissioners shall make allowance to the sheriff for all expenses in maintaining the same, subject to the sole limitation that such expense must be necessary to the proper administration of the duties of the sheriff's office; and I take it that some discretion is therefore left to the county commissioners, by the legislature, to decide whether or not the expense of maintaining horses and vehicles (which includes automobiles) is necessary to the proper administration of the duties of the sheriff's office. In other words, if such expense of maintaining an automobile is not necessary, then, in my judgment, it is the duty of the county commissioners to refuse such allowance to the sheriff.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the county commissioners are authorized by section 2997, General Code, to repair and maintain an automobile owned by the sheriff, provided it is necessary to the proper administration of the sheriff's office.

Answering your second question, section 2997 of the General Code provides as follows:

* * * "The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office." * * *

This question was recently decided by the Franklin county common pleas court, Judge Rathmell delivering the opinion, in the case of State of Ohio, ex rel., Sartain, Plaintiff, vs. Sayre, Auditor of Franklin County, et al., Defendants. I herewith quote from the opinion of the court:

"The question arises on demurrer to the petition praying that a writ of mandamus issue commanding Auditor Sayre to issue and deliver a warrant in favor of relator on the treasurer of Franklin county, covering automobile livery hire alleged to have been incurred and necessary for the proper administration of the duties of his said office in serving such writs and processes as were directed to him as such sheriff.

"It appears from the petition that relator filed a full, accurate, itemized and verified account of said livery with the board of county commissioners as a part of his last quarterly report; that the same was approved and allowed by said board and that a voucher was issued to him for the payment of said livery bill in the sum of four hundred and twenty dollars ($420); that same was presented to defendant, Sayre, auditor, with request for a warrant on the treasurer for its payment and same was refused.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"It is provided in section 2997, General Code, as amended April 26, 1911, 103 O. L., 93, that in addition to his compensation and salary, the commissioners shall make an allowance to the sheriff quarterly (among other things) for all expense of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. And may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"An automobile is a vehicle; but to insist that 'vehicle' in the definition of 'livery' is limited in meaning to horse-drawn vehicles, seems hardly warranted in modern usage of the word.

"I am of the opinion that the expense account claimed, and incurred or alleged, comes fairly within the spirit provision and intendment of the statutes mentioned as 'livery hire,' and the rounder, within the commissioners' discretion for allowance.

"The demurrer is therefore overruled."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the commissioners are authorized to hire or rent an automobile for the use of the sheriff.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

473.

BOARD OF EDUCATION — POWERS TO PAY PREMIUM ON CLERK OR TREASURER'S BOND—TRAVELING EXPENSES OF MEMBERS, TEACHERS, PRINCIPAL OR SUPERINTENDENT FOR ATTENDANCE AT CONFERENCE OR ASSOCIATION MEETINGS.

As there is no statutory authorization for the payment by the board of education of the premium on the clerk's or treasurer's bond that expense may not be borne by it.

As there is no duty imposed upon the superintendent of schools or the teachers to attend a national education association, nor upon the members of the board of education or its clerk to attend a meeting of the state association of school boards, and as there is no statutory authorization for the payment of such expenses, the board may not pay the same out of the school funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 22, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Sam A. Hudson, Deputy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of November 14, 1911, is received, in which you submit the following questions:

> "May a board of education legally pay the premium on a surety bond of its clerk or treasurer?
>
> "May such board legally pay the expenses of its superintendent or principals or teachers in attending a national education association?
>
> "May such board legally pay the expenses of any of its members or of its clerk in attending a meeting of the state association of school boards?

Section 4774, General Code, provides that the clerk of the board of education shall give a bond as follows:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, the clerk of each board of education shall execute a bond, in an amount and with surety to be approved by the board, payable to the state, conditioned for the faithful performance of all the official duties required of him. Such bond must be deposited with the president of the board, and a copy thereof, certified by him, shall be filed with the county auditor."

Section 4764, General Code, 101 Ohio Laws, 264, provides for the bond of the treasurer as follows:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, each school district treasurer shall execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, in a sum not less than the amount of school funds that may come into his hands, payable to the state, approved by the board of education, and conditioned for the faithful disbursement according to law of all funds which come into his hands, provided that when school monies have been deposited under the provisions of sections 7604-7608, inclusive, the bond shall be in such amount as the board of education may require."

"In each case the bond is required before the person shall enter upon the duties of his office. In order to qualify for the office the bond must be given. It is not an expense of the office, for the person furnishing the bond through a surety company is not yet an officer.

There is no statute authorizing the board of education to pay the premiums upon the bonds of its clerk or treasurer, and in the absence of statutory authority such premium cannot be paid from the funds of the school district.

The same principle applies to the other inquiries.

There is no statutory duty placed upon superintendents, principals or teachers to attend the meetings of a national educational association, nor is there any statutory authority to pay the expense of any such attendance out of the school funds.

Neither is there any statutory authority for paying the expense of a member of the board of education or its clerk to a meeting of the state association of school boards, nor is such attendance required by statute.

In conclusion:

The board of education cannot legally pay the premiums on a surety bond of its clerk or treasurer.

A board of education cannot legally pay the expense of its superintendent, principal or teachers in attending a meeting of national education association.

A board of education cannot legally pay the expenses of any of its members, or of its clerk in attending a meeting of the state association of school boards.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

476.

MAYOR'S VETO—TEN DAYS' TIME ALLOWED FOR APPROVAL—DATE OF PASSAGE AND DATE OF PRESENTATION.

If the mayor does not sign an ordinance or resolution within ten days after its passage or adoption without regard to the time of its presentation to him by the clerk, such ordinance or resolution shall take effect as if he had signed it.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 23, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On October 31, 1911, you submitted the following request for opinion, to-wit:

> "Is the mayor of a city limited to ten days after the passage or adoption of an ordinance of the city council for consideration as to whether or not he shall veto same and making return to council of his veto message in case he desires to make veto of any provision of the ordinances or is he granted ten days from the presentation of the ordinance to him by the clerk of council?"

Section 4234, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "Every ordinance or resolution of council shall, before it goes into effect, be presented to the mayor for approval. The mayor, if he approves it, shall sign and return it forthwith to council. If he does not approve it, he shall within ten days after its passage or adoption return it with his objections to council, or if council is not in session, to the next regular meeting thereof, which objections council shall cause to be entered upon its journal. * * * If he does not return such ordinance or resolution within the time limited in this section, it shall take effect in the same manner as if he had signed it, unless council by adjournment prevents its return."

It is my opinion that the clear reading of the statute will not permit the words "passage or adoption" as above italicized to be interpreted as presentation.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

495.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—ELECTION AND APPOINTMENT—QUALIFICATION—ELECTION OF SUCCESSOR.

Justice of the peace after his appointment must take oath, forthwith, i. e., within a reasonable time.

A vacancy caused by the failure of the justice of the peace-elect to take oath or furnish bonds within required time, should be filed by appointment by the township trustees and a successor elected at the next regular election for justice of peace.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 20, 1911.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your favor of December 5, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

"If a justice of the peace fail to file a bond as required by section 1721, General Code, how many days must elapse after his election before his office becomes vacant because of his refusal or neglect to file such bond?

"In case of a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace caused by the failure to file the required bond, how shall such vacancy be filled; shall the trustees give notice of a new election to fill the vacancy as provided in section 1721, or shall the trustees fill the vacancy by appointment under section 1714?

Section 1721, General Code, provides that a justice of the peace shall within ten days after taking the oath of office give bond, as follows:

"Within ten days after taking the oath, each justice of the peace so qualified, before he is authorized to discharge the duties of his office and within ten days after taking the oath, shall give a bond to the state of not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, at the discretion of the trustees, with at least two sufficient sureties. Such bond shall be approved by the trustees of the township and be deposited with the township treasurer or with the township clerk if the township treasurer is the justice-elect. Such bond shall be conditioned that the justice shall well and truly pay over according to law all money which may come into his hands by virtue of his commission, and faithfully perform every ministerial act enjoined upon him by law. On refusal or neglect to give such bond, the office shall be vacant and the trustees shall give notice of a new election to fill the vacancy."

Section 7, General Code, provides:

"A person elected or appointed to an office who is required by law to give a bond or security previous to the performance of the duties imposed on him by his office, who refuses or neglects to give such bond or furnish such security, within the time and in the manner prescribed by law, and in all respects to qualify himself for the performance of such duties, shall be deemed to have refused to accept the office to which he was elected or appointed, and such office shall be considered vacant and be filled as provided by law."

By virtue of the provisions of these sections the office of justice of the peace becomes vacant upon refusal or neglect of the person elected or appointed to give bond with the time required.

Section 1720, General Code, provides when a justice of the peace shall take the oath of office, as follows:

"When a person elected justice of the peace receives a commission from the governor, he shall forthwith take and subscribe the oath of office before the clerk of the court of common pleas or before a justice of the peace of his county. Such officer is authorized to administer such oath and shall file and make a record thereof in a book provided for that purpose. Such justice of the peace within ten days shall transmit such oath to the clerk of the court."

The word "forthwith" as herein used, means within a reasonable time, that time which is required when due diligence is used by the person, who has been elected. The time required will depend upon the circumstances in each particular case.

This term "forthwith" has been variously defined. These definitions are set forth in 10 Cyc, at page 1413 and 1444, some of which are as follows:

"Forthwith. In its ordinary signification, immediately as soon as by reasonable exertion, confined to the object, it may be accomplished; as soon as is reasonably convenient, as soon as reasonably can be; * * * with all reasonable diligence and dispatch; with diligence, with due diligence; with reasonable diligence; * * *

In case of Kirk and Co. vs. Ohio Valley Insurance Co., the first syllabus reads:

"A policy of insurance provided that proof of loss must be presented forthwith; that the loss should be payable within sixty days; and all claims should be barred unless prosecuted within one year from the date of loss. Held: First, that forthwith meant within a reasonable time under all the circumstances after the loss, and the question of reasonable time was one for the jury to determine."

The justice of the peace-elect must use due diligence and take the oath of office as soon as possible after receiving his commission from the governor.

He is required by section 1721, General Code, to give bond within ten days after taking the oath of office. Failure to file such bond within such time will cause a vacancy in the office. The time within which a bond is required, is not based upon the date of the election, but upon the time at which he receives his commission from the governor.

In State vs. County Commissioners, 61 O. S., 506, the syllabus reads:

> "If one elected to the office of sheriff fails, without justification, to give an official bond before the first Monday of January next after his election there occurs on that day a vacancy in the office which the county commissioners should fill by appointment."

In this case the bond was presented the day after the first Monday in January, and the office was held to be vacant. The rule is strictly applied. An officer must qualify within the time prescribed or his office is vacant. No days of grace are given.

In answering your first inquiry: A justice of the peace-elect must take the oath of office as soon as possible after receiving his commission from the governor, and must give bond within ten days after taking such oath of office. Upon failure to give bond wthin ten days thereafter, the office becomes vacant.

Your second inquiry is as to the manner of filling such vacancy.

Section 1714, General Code, provides for filling a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace, as follows:

> "If a vacancy occurs in the office of justice of the peace by death, removal, absence for six months, resignation, refusal to serve, or otherwise, the trustees within ten days from receiving notice thereof, by a majority vote, shall appoint a qualified resident of the township to fill such vacancy, who shall serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The trustees shall notify the clerk of the courts of such vacancy and the date when it occurred."

In this connection it will be observed that section 1721, General Code, supra, says that upon a vacancy caused by refusal to give bond "the trustees shall give notice of a new election to fill the vacancy."

Section 1715, General Code, provides:

> "At the next regular election for such office, a justice of the peace shall be elected in the manner provided by law, for the term of four years commencing on the first day of January next following his election."

The failure to qualify by giving a bond is in effect a refusal to accept the office, in fact, section 7, General Code, provides that upon failure to qualify the officer-elect "shall be deemed to have refused to accept the office." Section 1714, General Code, specifies that if a vacancy occurs by reason of "refusal to serve, or otherwise," the trustees shall appoint a person to fill the vacancy. This clause includes a vacancy caused by failure to give bond within the required time.

The clause in section 1721, General Code, requiring notice of a new election, in my opinion, refers to the following regular election in the odd numbered years. It is then that notice of new election for justice of the peace shall be given and a successor elected as prescribed in section 1715, General Code. Section 1721, General Code, does not authorize the township trustees to call a special election for that purpose.

A vacancy in the office of justice of the peace, caused by failure of the officer-elect to furnish a bond within the required time, should be filled by appointment by the township trustees and a successor elected at the next regular election for office of justice of the peace.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Treasurer of State)

141.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR STATE FIRE MARSHAL—RULES FOR DISBURSEMENT—CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS.

Under article II, section 22 of the constitution of Ohio, an appropriation specifically made for expenses of the state fire marshal incurred between Feb. 15, 1910, and Feb. 15, 1911, remains available for two years from date of passage, for the payment of all expenses incurred during that period.

Expenses incurred after that period, however, may not be paid therefrom.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1911.

HON. D. S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to this department for opinion, thereon, the following question:

> "The partial appropriation bill passed by the last session of the general assembly, 101 O. L., 18, contains the following item:
>
> "'STATE FIRE MARSHAL
> Receipts and balances.....'
>
> "At the present date there remains in the fund thus appropriated and derived from receipts and balances paid into the state treasury by the department of the state fire marshal between February 15, 1910 and February 15, 1911, a considerable sum. Warrants are presented to me against this fund on account of expenditures made and liabilities incurred since February 15, 1911. May I lawfully pay these warrants?"

Article II, section 22 of the constitution provides in part that:

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation, made by law, * * *"

The act cited in your question is in part as follows:

> "An act to make partial appropriations for the last three-quarters of the fiscal year ending November 15, 1910, and the first quarter of the fiscal year ending February 15, 1911.
>
> "Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:
>
> "Section 1. That the following sums, for the purposes hereinafter specified, be, and the same are hereby, appropriated out of any moneys in the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund, not otherwise appropriated, to wit:
>
> * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
>
> "'STATE FIRE MARSHAL
> Receipts and balances.....'
>
> * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Section 2. The moneys appropriated in the preceding section shall not be in any way expended to pay liabilities or deficiencies existing prior to February 15, 1910, nor shall they be used or paid out for purposes other than those for which said sums are specifically appropriated as aforesaid.

"Section 3. * * * * * * * * * * * *

"No money herein appropriated shall be drawn except upon a requisition upon the auditor of state, approved by the head of each department, * * * which shall set forth in itemized form the services rendered * * * or expenses incurred, and the date of purchase, and the time of service * * *; and it shall be the duty of the auditor of state to see that these provisions are complied with. * * *"

It is clear from a consideration of the above quoted provisions, that the amount appropriated by the act of 1910 is the amount of receipts and balances deposited in the state treasury by the department of the state fire marshal, between February 15, 1910 and February 15, 1911. The balance that remains on hand in this fund therefore, is appropriated; and in accordance with the uniform interpretation of the constitution and statutes of the state, remains so for a period of two years from the date of the passage of the act. That is to say, the balance of which you speak would not lapse into the general revenue fund of the state on February 15, 1911, but remains appropriated for the purpose for which it was originally appropriated, and may be lawfully used to discharge liabilities within that purpose until it is exhausted.

On the other hand, however, it is clear from a reading of the whole act, and especially the title thereof, that the purpose for which the appropriation is made is definite. The act is "an act to make partial appropriations for the last three-quarters of the fiscal year ending November 15, 1910, and the first quarter of the fiscal year ending February 15, 1911." This can mean but one thing, viz: the appropriations made by the act are for the purpose of conducting the business of the several departments for which they are made, during the fiscal year defined in the title. Acordingly, the amounts appropriated by the act may lawfully be used to discharge liabilities incurred within that period, but not to discharge liabilities incurred either before the commencement of that period, or after its expiration. Section 2 of the act makes clear the conclusion that liabilities existing prior to February 15, 1910, may not be discharged out of the appropriation; but all of the provisions construed together lead just as clearly to the conclusion that the appropriation may not lawfully be used to discharge liabilities created after the expiration of the period, to wit: after February 15, 1911.

I therefore advise you, that while the balance remaining in the fund of which you speak may lawfully be expended to discharge liabilities created prior to February 15, 1911, it may not be used to discharge liabilities created since that date.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

159.

APPROPRIATIONS—PAYMENT OF EXPENDITURES MADE AFTER PERIOD PROVIDED FOR—ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS' CUSTOM AS JUSTIFYING DEPARTURE FROM STRICT LEGAL CUSTOM.

As a principle of law, the ruling of the opinion rendered to the treasurer of state to the effect that expenditures made by the state fire marshal after Feb. 15, 1911, cannot be made from appropriations specifically providing for the period prior to that date, must be adhered to.

However, there is authority for the rule that a contemporaneous construction of doubtful statutes by the administrative officers having duties under them, is entitled to weight. In view of the fact therefore, that the auditors have for a long period been observing a custom contrary to law, it may be advised that the balance of the fund in dispute may be applied, as customary, to expenditures make subject to Feb. 15, 1911.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1911.

HON. D. S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—A few days ago you submitted to me the question as to whether the appropriation made by the general assembly of 1910 for the use of the state fire marshal's office, and being the receipts and balances of that office for the fiscal year ending February 15, 1911, could be lawfully used to discharge liabilities incurred after that date.

In conformity to your request I prepared an opinion in which I held that such liabilities could not lawfully be discharged out of the appropriation in question. That opinion was based upon the consideration of the body of the appropriation, the title of the act and the provisions of article II, section 22 of the constitution of the state.

I have been asked to reconsider this opinion by the chairman of the finance committee of the house of representatives. Upon such reconsideration I have become more firmly of the opinion that the conclusion which I reached upon the legal facts considered by me was correct. Several considerations have served to confirm me in this opinion. Among them I may mention the fact that general and partial appropriation acts, so-called, have been passed in practically the same form for more than fifty years, and that the language found in the title of the acts of 1910, which language was relied upon by me, not because it was a part of the act but, because it disclosed an intent, imperfectly disclosed by the act itself, has not always been in the titles of the several acts. That is to say, I find that in the earliest form of such appropriation bills, the statement that the appropriation was for the last three-quarters of one fiscal year and the first quarter of the succeeding fiscal year, was customarily included in the body of the act, and that by process of evolution so to speak, it became transferred to the title.

This and other facts have, as above indicated, served only to make me more confident of the correctness of my construction of the act of 1910 in its strictly legal aspect. Each one of the appropriation acts passed during the period of time over which my investigation extends, has contained the sentence quoted from the appropriation act of 1910, which in effect makes it the duty of the auditor of state to enforce the remaining provisions of the act. It has always been the duty of the auditor of state, under the statutes relating to his official powers and duties, to scrutinize all vouchers presented to him for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are legally due, and whether there is money in the treasury duly appropriated to pay them. (See section 243, General Code, section 154, Revised Statutes).

It is therefore clear, that each auditor of state has had the very question which you raise presented to him under each of the succeeding appropriation laws. At some period, not ascertained by my investigation, some auditor of state has adopted a ruling contrary to that of my former opinion. This ruling has always been followed by successive auditors of state; it must be deemed to have been in the minds of the general assembly, in determining the amounts to be appropriated for the use of the several departments and institutions of the state from session to session.

I have ascertained, however, that it has always been the practice of the auditor of state to regard balances in all appropriations made under such general and partial acts, as that of 1910, as available for the discharge of liabilities incurred after the end of the appropriation period and until the lapse of the appropriation by force of article II, section 22 of the constitution.

The question which you submitted is, in the first instance, an administrative one which must be determined by the department of the auditor of state. The ruling of the auditor of state having been acted upon and accepted practically, it is clear that great inconvenience would result from reversing it at this time, and applying the new rule to the appropriations made by the general assembly of 1910. There is much authority for the rule that the contemporaneous construction of statutes, doubtful as to their meaning, by the administrative officers whose duty it is to carry them into effect, is entitled to weight in resolving the doubt which exists. I am unable to hold, as a matter of law, that this principle applies in the present instance, because the title of the act is, in my judgment, better evidence of the intention of the general assembly than this extraneous fact. Practically, however, it would seem that, to avoid endless confusion and to conform to the established practice, it would be proper to disregard the technical aspect of the case and to pay warrants presented against funds appropriated in the general and partial appropriation acts of 1910, regardless of whether or not the liability was incurred prior to February 15, 1911.

The general assembly is now in session, and the validity of its acts has today been upheld by the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. the C. C. C. & St. L. Railway Company vs. Creamer, Treasurer. I trust that in view of what seems to be the clear principles of law applicable to the question originally asked by you, as stated in my former opinion, the general assembly will see fit to remove all doubt by reappropriating the balances in the funds created by the appropriation acts of 1910 and that, in the future, the general assembly will not limit to the fiscal year appropriations which in practice are really required to extend over a greater period.

In view of the peculiar situation that has given rise to your inquiry, and in view also of the favorable decision of the supreme court above referred to, I advise that the balance in the fund referred to in your original inquiry, and in all other funds created by the partial or general appropriation acts of 1910 be regarded as available for the discharge of liabilities created since February 15, 1911. In so holding, however, I do not, as above indicated, wish to be understood as departing from the principle of law upon which my former opinion was based.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

C 326.

"PEDDLERS" AND "ITINERANT VENDERS"—LICENSE PROVISIONS—EXCEPTIONS OF SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND MANUFACTURERS.

Within the meaning of the state license statutes, an "itinerant vender" is one who conducts a business while moving from place to place and retaining in each place for a period of less than ninety days, a store room or building for the purposes of said business.

A "peddler," within the same provisions, is one who "travels" from place to place and sells his goods generally from house to house, or to passersby. A person who sells from a stand upon a street corner may come within the meaning of either "peddler" or "itinerant vender" according to circumstances.

Soldiers or sailors who served during the Civil or Spanish war, and were honorably discharged, are excepted from the license provisions. So also are persons who manufacture within the state, the goods they intend to sell.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1911.

HON. D. S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 28, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department in reference to peddler's license, as follows:

> "The enclosed letter from Chas. Murray, 1722 Euclid Ave., Cleveland, asking for information with reference to peddler's license is herewith submitted for reply."

The letter enclosed states in part as follows:

> "I have been informed that there is a state law requiring a state license from individuals going from town to town selling goods on streets.
>
> "I make a living selling specialties on streets of cities and towns incorporated and have been in Michigan for last nine months. Wherever I operated I was required to pay a license for selling, which license ranged from $1.00 to $5.00 per day."

The legislature has provided for the licensing by the state of peddlers, and also of itinerant venders. It has also empowered councils of municipalities to regulate and license these occupations. This power granted to council is found in sections 3669, et seq., General Code, and does not apply to the question asked.

Sections 6317 to 6356, General Code, apply to peddlers and sections 6357 to 6369, General Code, to itinerant venders.

The provisions as to securing a peddler's license are as follows:

> "Section 6347. When a person files with the auditor of a county, under oath, which may be administered by such auditor, a statement of his stock in trade in conformity with the law requiring the listing of such stock for taxation by merchants or others, and pays to the treasurer of such county the proportionate amount of taxes on such stock in trade in conformity with law, and complies with the terms set forth in section sixty-three hundred and forty-nine, such auditor shall issue to him a license to peddle such stock anywhere in this state.

"Section 6348. A merchant or his agent desiring such license shall not be required to make the statement provided for in the next preceding section if such stock has been otherwise listed for taxation.

"Section 6349. Before receiving such license the applicant, if intending to travel on foot, shall file with the county auditor the county treasurer's receipt for twelve dollars; if intending to travel on horseback or in a one horse vehicle, he shall file such receipt for twenty dollars; if intending to travel in a two horse vehicle, he shall file the receipt for twenty-eight dollars; or, if intending to travel in a boat, watercraft or on a railroad car, he shall file it for sixty dollars. He shall also pay to the auditor the sum of fifty cents as the auditor's fee for granting the license.

"Section 6351. An applicant for the license, provided in section sixty-three hundred and forty-seven, proving to the auditor to whom such application is made that he has served as a soldier or sailor in the service of the United States during the late rebellion or the Spanish-American war and has been honorably discharged therefrom, shall pay to such auditor as his fee for such license the sum of fifty cents, and shall not be required to make any other or further payment. He shall be exempted from paying any fee for a municipal or other license, as required by law or ordinance, during the period covered by the license issued to him by such auditor.

"Section 6353. A license granted in conformity with this chapter shall authorize the person named therein to sell goods, wares and merchandise for one year from the date of the receipt of the treasurer, as a peddler or traveling merchant. Such person may take out a license to peddle for three or six months, and pay for it proportionately in accordance with the provisions of section sixty-three hundred and forty-nine.

"Section 6354. A license to peddle shall not authorize the person named therein to sell goods, wares or merchandise at auction, vendue or public outcry, nor to sell them by the agency of another person.

"Section 6355. If a peddler or traveling merchant sells goods, wares or merchandise, except such as are manufactured within this state by himself or employer, without having obtained a peddler's license so to do, he shall forfeit and pay for each offense the sum of fifty dollars to be recovered in a civil action before any justice of the peace of the county where the offender is found. Such sum shall be paid into the treasury of the township in which the judgment is rendered, for the use of the township school fund, except ten per cent. thereof, which shall be paid to the informer."

Provisions as to itinerant venders are as follows:

"Section 6358. An itinerant vender, whether principal or agent, before beginning business, shall take out state and local licenses in the manner hereinafter set forth, but the right of a municipal corporation to pass such additional ordinances relative to itinerant venders, as may be permissible under the general law or under its charter, shall not be affected.

"Section 6359. An itinerant vender desiring to do business in this state shall deposit with the secretary of state the sum of five hundred dollars as a special deposit, and thereafter, upon application in proper form and the payment of a further sum of twenty-five dollars as a state license fee, such secretary shall issue to him an itinerant vender's license, authorizing him to do business in this state in conformity with the provisions of this chapter for one year from the date thereof. Such license shall set forth a copy of the application upon which it is granted. The license shall not be transferable nor permit more than one person to sell goods as an itinerant vender, either by agent or clerk, or in any other way than in person.

"Section 6360. A licensee, described in the next preceding section, may have the assistance of one or more persons who may aid him in conducting his business, but not act for or without him.

"Section 6361. The words 'wearing apparel,' for the purpose of this chapter, shall mean and include clothing, underwear, hats and shoes. The words 'itinerant vender,' for the purposes of this chapter, shall mean and include persons, both principals and agents, engaging in a temporary or transient business of selling goods, wares and merchandise in this state and remaining in one place for less than ninety days.

"Section 6362. This subdivision of this chapter shall not apply to sales made to dealers by commercial travelers or selling agents in the usual course of business, nor to bona fide sales of goods, wares and merchandise by sample for future delivery.

"Section 6363. Applications for licenses shall be sworn to, shall disclose the names and residences of the owners or persons in whose interest such business is conducted, and be kept on file by the secretary of state, with a record of all licenses issued upon such applications. All files and records of the secretary of state and the respective clerks of municipal corporations shall be in convenient form and open for public inspection."

In construing these statutes the first proposition to be determined is, who is a peddler, and who is an itinerant vender.

The following definitions of these terms are found:

"Strictly speaking a hawker is a peddler who cries out his goods, although for all practical purposes the terms are considered synonymous."

21 Cyc., page 367.

"* * * In the absence of a definition by statute or municipal ordinance, a peddler, or hawker, within the generally accepted meaning of the word, is a small retail dealer who carries his merchandise with him, traveling from place to place, or from house to house, exposing his or his principal's goods for sale and selling them."

21 Cyc., 367-8.

"The term 'itinerant vender,' or its equivalent, is often used as synonymous with 'peddler,' although usually the former is defined by statute or ordinance as one who hires, leases or occupies a building for a limited time, that is, a merchant who goes from town to town but not from house to house."

21 Cyc., 370.

Spiegel, J., in the case of United Cigar Stores Co. vs. Von Bargen, Auditor, 7 N. P. N. S., page 420, on page 423 of opinion, says:

"The word peddler has a well defined meaning. It means an ambulatory person, not a merchant with a fixed location, and council has no authority to add to or widen this meaning, unless directly authorized by the state so to do."

It is sometimes difficult to determine whether a person is a peddler or an itinerant vender. That there is a difference between them is recognized by the legislature when it provides different laws governing them.

The difficulty in distinguishing them is also recognized in 21 Cyc., page 370, in foot note 37:

"There is a difference between an itinerant 'merchant' and a peddler, although it is not always easy to determine who is a merchant. Carrollton vs. Bazette, 159 Ill., 284."

In our statutes governing peddlers, the word "travel" and "traveling" seem to be emphasized. As in section 6359, "travel on foot," "travel on horseback," etc. In the statutes governing "itinerant venders," the word "business" seems to be emphasized. As in section 6358, "before beginning business;" section 6359, "authorizing him to do business;" in section 6361, defining an itinerant vender, "temporary or transient business."

One who goes from town to town, or from locality to locality, and sells goods, wares or merchandise from a room, or building, or from a fixed stand in the street, and who remains in the same place for less than 90 days, is an itinerant vender. He is engaging in a business of a temporary or transient nature, renting a room for a week, month or two months, then moving on another locality.

One who goes from house to house, soliciting the sale of goods or wares which he carries with him for immediate delivery is a peddler. By virtue of section 6349 he may travel on foot, on horseback or in a one or two horse vehicle, or in a boat, watercraft, or in a railroad car. The idea of travel is prevalent. He is an ambulatory person and has no fixed stand or room from which he makes his sales.

The difficulty arises in determining the status of one who goes upon a street corner and sells his goods by outcry, or otherwise, from a temporary stand, or table, which is moved to different corners, or places in the street, at the will of the seller. Such a person has some of the characteristics of a peddler and hawker, and also some features of an itinerant vender. He does not have a fixed stand, neither does he travel about in either of the modes specified in section 6349. There is no provision of the statute exempting such persons from securing a license. He must secure either a peddler's or an itinerant vender's license. Which one will depend upon the particular circumstances of each issue.

I am of the opinion that a person who puts a table or stand in a hallway, building entrace, or on a street corner, from which he sells his wares is an itinerant vender. If he passes along the street carrying his goods, selling them to passersby, I am of the opinion that such a person is a peddler.

There are two exceptions to the law requiring a person to take out a peddler's license.

By virtue of section 6351, General Code, a sailor or soldier of the United States during the late rebellion of the Spanish-American war, who has been honorably discharged, can secure a license upon payment of 50 cents to the county auditor.

Section 6255, General Code, authorizes a person to sell as a peddler, goods or wares manufactured within the state by himself or employer, without securing a state license.

Which license Mr. Murray must secure will depend upon the manner in which he makes his sales, and whether or not he comes within either of the above exceptions.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

345.

APPROPRIATIONS—OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATIONS—MERGER OF FUNDS—"MAINTENANCE," "ORDINARY REPAIRS AND IMPROVEMENTS" AND "SPECIFIC PURPOSES"—DUTY OF STATE TREASURER AND STATE AUDITOR.

The auditor of state and the treasurer of state may merge the appropriations made for the period prior to Feb. 15, 1912, under the three classes, "maintenance," "ordinary repairs and improvements" and "specific purposes" and may pay warrants issued by the board of administration through its proper offices against said funds as merged, although the appropriations for the aforesaid period were for specific purposes and for specific institutions. So too, the auditor of state may issue warrants on the treasurer against these three classifications in payment of accounts which were otherwise specifically appropriate.

Such a change is merely a change in methods of bookkeeping and not a diversion of funds, and it is within a necessary interpretation of the board's powers in order to carry out the spirit of the act creating the board with the object of entirely superseding the former trustees and providing a simple, uniform and economic system of administration.

It would be well, however, to adopt a system which would apprise the state treasurer and the state auditor of the fact that the voucher drawn for a certain purpose, does not exceed in amount the specific appropriation made by the legislature for its stated purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 6, 1911.

HON. D. S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to own receipt of your favor of September 1, 1911, wherein you advise me as follows:

> "Under section 31, paragraph 2 of an act to create a board of administration for the institution of the state passed May 17, 1911, reads as follows:
>
> > "'Hereafter the appropriation for said institutions shall be of three classes: Maintenance, ordinary repairs and improvements and specific purposes.'
>
> "I would like your opinion upon the following questions:
>
> "(A). The appropriation bill appropriating the several amounts for the several institutions for the year ending Feb. 15, 1912, having specifically appropriated certain sums for certain specific institutions and purposes without classifying said funds, can the auditor of state and treasurer of state merge the said appropriations for said year aforesaid under three classes, namely: Maintenance, ordinary repairs and improvements, specific purposes, and pay warrants issued by the board of administration through its proper officers against said funds as merged where the same was by the act of the general assembly specifically appropriated for specific purposes and for specific institutions.

"(B) Are the auditor of state and treasurer of state legally authorized to merge or classify their several appropriations so made as above stated and carry them as stated in my first question, or in other words, is the auditor of state legally authorized to issue his warrant on the treasurer of state against an account or for money which was not specifically appropriated by the legislature, and is the treasurer of state legally authorized to pay such warrants when presented?"

In reply thereto permit me to say that section 7 of the act approved May 17, 1911, found in year book 102, at page 211, provides as follows:

"The board, in addition to the powers expressly conferred, shall have all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive, administrative and fiscal supervision over all said institutions."

Section 31 of the said act provides:

"Each managing officer shall before each session of the general assembly present to said fiscal supervisor an itemized list of appropriations desired for maintenance, repairs and improvements, and specific purposes, as he considers necessary for the period of time to be covered by appropriations. The fiscal supervisor shall tabulate such statements and present them to the board of administration with his recommendations. It shall then be the duty of the board to present the needs of the institutions to the general assembly. For this purpose a per capita allowance for the inmates, patients and pupils of each of the institutions shall be arrived at and a total allowance for maintenance asked for on the basis of actual number and estimated increase. The fiscal supervisor and the board shall furnish to the governor and to the general assembly such information as may be required regarding appropriations requested. It is the intent and meaning of this section that all requests for appropriations for said institutions shall be placed under sole control of the board, and that appropriations for the maintenance and ordinary repairs and improvements thereof shall be made to the board in single sums to be used for the several institutions according to their varying needs.

Hereafter the appropriations for said institutions shall be of three classes:

"(1) Maintenance.

"(2) Ordinary repairs and improvements.

"(3) Specific purposes.

"Appropriations for specific purposes shall cover all items for construction, extraordinary repairs and purchase of land, and shall be used only for the institutions and purposes specified therein."

Section 30 of the said act provides as follows:

"The state treasurer shall have charge of all funds under the jurisdiction of the board and shall pay out the same only in accordance with the provisions of this act; provided, that the moneys designated and approved by the board and the state auditor as salary and contingent funds in the monthly estimates shall be placed, not later than the first day of each month, in the hands of the managing officer of each institution, who shall act as treasurer thereof. Moneys in the hands of the officials of the several institutions at the organization of the board shall be transferred forthwith to the state treasurer. Moneys collected from various sources such as the sale of goods, farm products and all miscellaneous articles, shall be transmitted on or before Monday of each week to the state treasurer and a detailed statement of such collections made to the fiscal supervisor by each managing officer; but the receipts from manufacturing industries shall be used and accounted for as provided in section 32 hereof."

Section 29 of the said act provides as follows:

"For the purpose of proper regulation, recording and auditing the various expenditures of the said institutions the managing officers thereof shall prepare and present to the fiscal supervisor in triplicate, not less than fifteen days before the first day of each month, and on forms furnished by the board, a detailed estimate of all supplies, materials, improvements and money needed during each month. The fiscal supervisor shall review such estimates, and in writing advise changes, if any, giving his reasons therefor, and present them to the board. The officer making the estimate may appeal to the board on any change so advised, due notice of which shall be given him. Estimates for periods longer than one month may be made in the same manner by the managing officer for staple articles designated by the board or for other supplies. Each estimate may include a contingent fund of not to exceed three per cent. of the total amount for maintenance for the period of the estimate, for which no detailed account need be given in the estimate, but such fund shall be drawn upon only in due form as herein provided and under the rules of the board. The fiscal supervisor shall return to the managing officer one copy of every estimate with the board's approval or alterations in writing, furnish one copy to the state auditor, and file the third in the office of the board. The state auditor shall ascertain that the estimates so received do not exceed the respective appropriations, and shall draw warrants on the state treasurer monthly for the salary and contingent funds for each institution, which shall be placed in the hands of the managing officer thereof. Itemized payrolls or vouchers for all payments shall be drawn in triplicate. One copy shall be kept on file by the managing officer, one be given to the fiscal supervisor, and one to the state auditor who shall issue a warrant on the state treasurer thereon. Each voucher shall contain a statement of the managing officer, or of some other bonded officer designated by him, certifying that the supplies and materials purchased conform to the contract and samples, and that the improvements or repairs made or special services rendered were fully satisfactory; that the approving officer was in no way financially interested in the transaction to which the same relates, and that he has full knowledge of the value of the purchase or work or services in question; such statement to be made according to the forms provided by the board; provided, that payrolls for temporary employments in cases of emergency may be made at any time after the services are performed, but all such payrolls shall be certifid by the managing officers in the same manner as other vouchers, who shall also certify that each person named in the payroll actually rendered the services for the time and at the rate charged therein."

In connection with your inquiry I have one from the Ohio board of administrations, a copy of which is as follows:

"Section 31, paragraph 2, of an act 'to create a board of administrations for the institutions of the state * * *' passed May 17, 1911, reads as follows:

"Hereafter the appropriations for said institutions shall be of three classes:

"(1) Maintenance.

"(2) Ordinary repairs and improvements.

"(3) Specific purposes.

"It is the desire of this department to merge the several appropriations made by the legislature to the institutions into the funds above named, for example:

Boys' Industrial School:	Partial.	General.	Total.
Current expenses	$50,000 00	$65,000 00	$115,000 00
Salaries of officers, teachers and trustees' expenses	20,000 00	23,000 00	43,000 00
Ordinary repairs and improvements including gas wells		7,000 00	7,000 00
Rewards		700 00	700 00
Necessary additions and improvements in power plant		2,500 00	2,500 00
	$70,000 00	$98,200 00	$168,200 00

"The board desires to merge the above appropriations as follows:

MAINTENANCE.

Current expenses	$115,000 00
Salaries of officers, teachers and trustees' expenses	43,000 00
	$158,000 00

ORDINARY REPAIRS AND IMPROVEMENTS.

Ordinary repairs and improvements	$7,000 00
	$7,000 00

SPECIFIC PURPOSES.

Rewards	$700 00
Necessary additions and improvements in the power plant	2,500 00
	$3,200 00
Total	$168,200 00

"You will observe that the above merger is no diversion of funds, but is simply a change in the manner of bookkeeping. The appropriations made by the legislature for the institution for the year ending February 15, 1913, is made in the same manner as outlined in the above statement, and it is the intention of this department, providing the auditor and treasurer are satisfied that this matter of merging the funds is not a violation of the law, to request them to classify their several appropriations as they now carry them and merge them in this way.

"I attach hereto a full statement showing the manner in which it is desired that these funds should be merged for the several institutions, and you will note, for instance, the appropriations for the salaries of managers at the penitentiary; inasmuch as these officers no longer exist, such appropriations should be turned back into the general revenue fund.

"I trust you will take this matter under immediate consideration and advise the state auditor and state treasurer and, also, this department of your opinion as to the legality of the merger outlined above."

From the foregoing you will observe that by the provisions of section 7 of the act, the board is given all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive, administrative and fiscal supervision over all said institutions.

You will observe that section 30, aforesaid, provides that the state treasurer shall have charge of all funds under the jurisdiction of the board and shall pay out the same only in accordance with the provisions of the act referred to before, to wit: the act of May 17, 1911.

You will further observe that by provision of section 31, it is provided hereafter the appropriations for the said institutions shall be of three classes: 1. Maintenance, 2. Ordinary repairs and improvements, 3. Specific purposes.

Section 12 of the aforesaid act provides as follows:

"The board shall cause to be kept in its office a proper and complete set of books and accounts with each institution, which shall clearly show the nature and amount of every expenditure authorized and made thereat, and contain an account of all appropriations made by the general assembly and of all other funds, with the disposition thereof. It shall prescribe the form of vouchers, records and methods of keeping accounts at each of the institutions which shall be as nearly uniform as possible. The board or any member or officer thereof shall have the power to examine the records of each institution at any time. It shall also have the power to authorize its bookkeeper, accountant, or any other employe to examine and check the records, accounts and vouchers or to take an inventory of the property of any institution, or to do whatever may be deemed necessary, and to pay the actual and reasonable expenses incurred in such service upon an itemized account thereof being filed and approved."

You will further observe that the appropriation act providing money available to pay liabilities incurred on and after February 16, 1912, so far as relates to the Ohio board of administration, is to be found in year book 102, page 407, and the same is divided under the heads of maintenance, ordinary repairs and improvements, and specific purposes, so that as to any period after February 16, 1912, there can be no question, and the only matter of concern is as to the power of the state board of administration to merge the appropriations made for the year prior to February 16, 1912, and group them under the three heads of maintenance, ordinary repairs and improvements, and specific purposes.

Without going into detail in this opinion, it is sufficient to say that the act establishing the state board of administration for state institutions sets forth in the beginning its intents and purposes as follows, to wit:

> "Section 1. The intent and purpose of this act are to provide humane and scientific treatment and care and the highest attainable degree of individual development for the dependent wards of the state;
>
> "To provide for the delinquent such wise conditions of modern education and training as will restore the largest possible portion of them to useful citizenship;
>
> "To promote the study of the causes of dependency and delinquency, and of mental, moral and physical defects, with a view to cure and ultimate prevention;
>
> "To secure by uniform and systematic management, the highest attainable degree of economy in the administration of the state institutions consistent with the objects in view;
>
> "This act shall be liberally construed to these ends."

Section 8 of said act provides:

> "The board on its organization shall succeed to and be vested with the title and all rights of the present boards of trustees, boards of managers, and commissions of and for said several institutions in and to land, money or other property, real and personal, held for the benefit of their respective institutions, or for other public use, without further process of law, but in trust for the state of Ohio. Said several boards of trustees, boards of managers, and commissions now charged with duties respecting the institutions above named shall on and after August 15, 1911, have no further legal existence and the board is hereby authorized and directed to assume and continue, as successor thereof, the construction, control and management of said institutions, subject to the provisions of this act."

From the foregoing it is perfectly apparent that the object of the act is that the board of administration shall succeed to and be vested with the title and all the rights of the present board of trustees, boards of managers and commissioners of the aforesaid several institutions in and to the lands, moneys, and other property, real and personal, held for the benefit of the respective institutions or for any other public use.

You will also notice that the said "several boards of trustees, boards of managers and commissions" now chargeable with the duties respecting the institutions above named, shall on and after August 15, 1911 have no further legal existence and the board by the said act is authorized and directed to assume and continue as successor thereof in the construction, control and management of the said institutions.

In short, it is unreasonable to assume that the legislature would provide for an entirely new method of managing state institutions and abolish the old method of management and relieve the former managers and trustees and at the same time deprive the new board of all the fiscal necessities and advantages of the old.

The appropriations for the year ending February 12, 1912, were made agreeably to the old order of things, but the board of administration, together with the state treasurer, are required under the statutes to conform to the new order of things. It is not reasonable to assume that the new board is to institute two systems of bookkeeping. On the other hand, it is only fair to believe that the new board will start out with its new system of bookkeeping as a permanent one in conformity with the new order of things as made by the act aforesaid and not in respect to any other.

I wish to state that the board of administration has a perfect right to merge the funds appropriated by the legislature so as to conform to the act of May 17, 1911. By so doing the said board is not making any appropriation—it is simply merging the funds already appropriated so as an account of same may be kept in accordance with the act aforesaid.

My holding is, therefore, that the state board of administration is empowered to merge the said funds and certify its action to the state auditor and to the state treasurer, and the state auditor and the state treasurer are fully authorized to open a new set of accounts, so far as the appropriations are concerned, agreeably to the order of the board of administration and the act of May 17, 1911 aforesaid.

In order to avoid the possibility of exceeding the amount appropriated for specific purposes after the funds have been merged in accordance with the act creating the state board of administration, it would be well to adopt some system which would apprise the state treasurer and the state auditor of the fact that the voucher drawn for a certain purpose under the three general heads does not exceed in amount the specific amount appropriated by the legislature for any specific purpose.

Answering your questions specifically I have to advise as follows in reference to "(A)," "That the auditor of state and the treasurer of state may merge the said appropriations for said year aforesaid under the three classes, viz:

Maintenance,

Ordinary repairs and improvements,

Specific purposes,

and may pay warrants issued by the board of administration through its proper officers against said funds as merged, upon your receiving a properly certified copy of such merger of the auditor of state and the board of administration merging said funds." While said funds were specifically appropriated by the act of the general assembly for specific purposes and for specific institutions, yet for the reasons aforesaid, the subsequent act of the legislature in passing the board administration law is superior to, and in my judgment authorizes the merger aforesaid.

Coming now to your second question "(B)," "Are the auditor of state and treasurer of state legally authorized to merge or classify their several appropriations so made as above stated and carry them as stated in my first question, or in other words, is the auditor of state legally authorized to issue his warrant on the treasurer of state against an account or for money which was not specifically appropriated by the legislature, and is the treasurer of state legally authorized to pay such warrants when presented," I beg to advise that the auditor of state and the treasurer of state are legally authorized to merge or classify the several appropriations so made as stated in your question, and carry them as stated in your first question, provided the merger be made according to the foregoing opinion by the state board of administration under the three heads:

Maintenance,
Ordinary repairs and improvements,
Specific purposes.

In short, it is my holding that you and the auditor of state are entirely warranted in recognizing the certificate of the board of administration merging the funds under the three heads aforesaid.

This opinion refers only to the subject matter of the right of the board of administration to use all of the funds appropriated for the institutions within its jurisdiction.

Very respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ADDENDUM.

It is my judgment that the auditor of state has the right, and it is his duty to issue the warrants after said appropriations have been merged; and the treasurer of state is authorized, and it is his legal duty to honor the warrants of the auditor of state in accordance with the said merger.

357.

TAX COMMISSION—CERTIFICATION OF CORRECTED FINDINGS TO STATE AUDITOR AS "PROPER OFFICIAL"—NOTIFICATION TO STATE TREASURER BY STATE AUDITOR.

When the tax commission has reviewed and corrected its findings in a given particular, the auditor of state is the "proper official" to whom they should certify their correction within the meaning of the Hollinger bill.

The auditor in turn should notify the treasurer of state of the change.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 13, 1911.

HON. D. S. CREAMER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 27th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Section 128 of the Hollinger law says that 'the tax commission upon application may make such correction in its determination, finding or order, as it may deem proper and its decision in the matter shall be final. Such correction shall be certified to the proper official who shall correct his records and duplicate in accordance therewith.'
>
> "The tax commission has been notifying the auditor of state as the proper official, and this department gets no certification or official authority to change its records in accordance with the findings of the tax commission, although the treasurer of state has the original duplicate.
>
> "I would therefore ask your opinion as to who is the proper official mentioned in section 128 of the Hollinger law and how the treasurer of state should receive official notice to change the duplicate in accordance with the findings of the tax commission?"

Said section 128, which is sufficiently quoted in your letter, is to be read in connection with section 99 of the Hollinger law, which provides that:

> "After determining the amount of taxes or fees payable to the state * * * the auditor of state shall thereupon prepare proper duplicates and reports, and certify them to the treasurer of state for collection. * * *"

and with section 100 of said act, which provides that:

> "The treasurer of state shall * * * render a daily itemized statement to the auditor of state of the amount of taxes or fees collected and the name of the company from whom collected, under all provisions of this act."

The question which you present is perhaps as much a question of administrative management as of law, but inasmuch as three separate departments are concerned, and inasmuch also as no one department has authority to prescribe rules for the government of the others, I have no hesitancy in submitting to you my views as to the proper procedure.

Under the above cited and quoted sections it is my opinion that the auditor of state is the "proper officer" within the meaning of section 128 to whom the tax commission should certify any correction made by it of its findings. This is true because the auditor of state must in all cases compute the tax due. Again, the auditor of state is himself required to keep a record of the sums charged for collection as well as a record of payments thereon. On the other hand, the treasurer of state, who is the custodian of the duplicates, must have some authority to make a change therein. This authority ought properly to emanate from the auditor.

In my judgment, therefore, when the tax commission has reviewed and corrected its findings in a given particular it should notify the auditor of state who should correct his own records in accordance therewith and thereupon by letter or upon such blank forms as may be prepared notify the treasurer of state of the amount due under such corrected finding from the company affected thereby. Thereupon, the treasurer would be authorized to correct all his own records and duplicates in the matter.

By following the above suggested procedure and by formulating blanks if necessary, in accordance therewith, it seems to me that any difficulty which may not be present in the administration of the law in question would be obviated.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Board of Public Works)

203.

POWER TO APPOINT AND GOVERN A COLLECTOR OF TOLLS AND RENTALS.

Under the sections of the act conferring its powers, the board of public works may appoint a collector of tolls, or rentals with an office at Columbus, and may authorize him to collect whatever rentals and tolls the board may prescribe and may govern such appointee by such rules and regulations as are deemed advisable.

March 28, 1911.

Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of March 2d, 1911, which is as follows:

"The state board of public works having dismissed the collectors of tolls on the canal system of the state, desires to appoint a collector of rentals with his office in Columbus, authorizing him to collect rentals on water leases, pipe leases, land leases and boat licenses. Can the board, by resolution, legally make such an appointment and govern said appointee by such rules as they may prescribe?"

Section 415, 416, 417 and 418 of the General Code are as follows:

"Section 415: Members of the board of public works shall be the superintendents of the canals of the state, and shall give their entire time and attention to the care and maintenance of the canals and public works of the state. The board of public works shall appoint such superintendents of repairs, lock tenders, and other employes as it deems necessary, and assign them to duty under the rules and regulations as the board prescribes.

"Section 416: The board of public works shall regulate the rate of tolls to be collected on the public works of the state, and appoint collectors of tolls, water rents and fines, at such places within the state as the board directs. Collectors of tolls so appointed shall be governed by such rules and regulations as the board prescribes.

"Section 417: Each superintendent of repairs and collector of tolls shall serve for a term of one year, and all other employes of the board of public works shall serve during the pleasure of the board. The salaries of such officers and the compensation of such employes shall be fixed by the board, and paid from the canal fund of the state upon the order of the board and the warrant of the auditor of state. A vacancy occuring in the office of an appointee shall be filled by the board.

"Section 418: Before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, each superintendent of repairs and each collector of tolls shall give a bond to the state in such sum as the board of public works may require, with two or more sureties approved by the board, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. Such bond, with the oath of office and the approval of the board indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the treasurer of state and kept in his office."

These sections give the board the power not only to appoint collectors of tolls, water rents and fines, but such other employes as the board deems necessary.

Section 433 of the General Code is as follows:

"Collectors of tolls shall collect water rents as they become due under the lease of water power, and such tolls on canals or other improvements of the state as the board of public works prescribes. Rent from lease of water power or other property of the state, made by the board or other state officer, shall be a first lien upon the estate created by such lease. Whenever such estate is sold or disposed of by judicial process the court shall order rent due thereon to be paid from the proceeds. Moneys received from water rents, tolls, fines, leases, sales of canal lands and other sources, shall be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the canal fund."

This section provides that the collectors of tolls shall collect water rents as they become due under the lease of water power, and such tolls as the board of public works prescribes.

Under the section above quoted I think that the board has the authority to appoint a collector of tolls, of rentals, with his office at Columbus, and to authorize him to collect rentals under water leases, pipe leases, land leases and boat licenses, or any other rentals or tolls the board may prescribe, and govern such appointees by such rules as they may establish.

This authority is further indicated by section 218-123 Bates' Revised Statutes, which is as follows:

"The board of public works, until otherwise provided by law, shall appoint so many collectors of canal tolls on each of the canals of this state, as they shall deem necessary for the punctual collection of tolls on such canals; shall require each collector to give bond, with sufficient security for the faithful performance of his duties, in such sum as the board shall prescribe; and shall designate the place where the office of such collector shall be kept: and shall determine what reasonable salary or other allowance shall be received by each collector for his services."

This section does not appear in the present General Code, but it was not repealed thereby and is still in effect.

Section 218-12 Bates' Revised Statutes, which is as follows:

"Collectors' offices on the Ohio canal, are hereby established at Cleveland, Akron, Massillon, Dover, Roscoe, Dresden, Newark, Carroll, Columbus, Circleville, Chillicothe, Waverly and Portsmouth; on the Miami and Erie canal, at Cincinnati, Lockland, Middletown, Dayton, Piqua, St. Marys, Delphos, Defiance, Maumee City and Toledo; on the Hocking canal, at Carroll and Logan; on the Walhonding canal, at Roscoe; on the Muskingum improvement, at Marrietta, McConnellsville, Zanesville and Dresden; provided, that if, in the opinion of the board of public works, any one or more of said offices can be dispensed with without detriment to the public interest, said board may abolish the same; and, provided, further, that said board may establish additional offices if the public interest will, in its judgment, be promoted thereby," was considered obsolete by the codifying commission and not carried into the General Code, but in my opinion this section simply provides for the establishment of offices for collectors of tolls; and whether or not it is still in force is not material for your present request as in my opinion the sections of the General Code first quoted in this opinion give your board the authority to which you referred.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

228.

POWER TO EMPLOY CANAL COLLECTOR WITH DUTY OF KEEPING BOOKS—SECRETARY AS DUPLICATE BOOKKEEPER.

When a canal collector is appointed by the board of public works, the board has the power to accord him the duties of keeping the complete books of his office and is not required to employ a secretary to keep a duplicate set of books.

April 21, 1911.

Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of March 31st, which is as follows:

"On February 15th, 1911, this board discharged all canal collectors and ordered them to close up their accounts and send in their books to this office.

"On March 14th, 1911, a collector was appointed by the board to make all collections whose office is to be in our main office, in the state house, Columbus, Ohio.

"As the new collector will run a complete set of books, consisting of a journal, cash book and ledger, will the secretary of our board be required to keep the above named books, which would be an exact duplicate of the collector's?"

I find no explicit provision in the statutes as to what officer or employe shall keep the books you refer to, namely, the journal, cash book and ledger for collection of rentals.

As both the secretary and collector are subject to the order of your board and as your board has full control and authority over all the books and records of your department, I am of opinion that if you require the collector to keep a certain set of books, that it would be entirely unnecessary, and in fact a needless expense and waste of time, to have the secretary keep an exact duplicate of the same books.

I believe your board can designate the secretary or collector to keep said books.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 228.

SALE OF LAND BY STATE—CORRECTION OF DEFECTIVE DESCRIPTION BY DEED FROM GOVERNOR.

Land was sold to O. S. Applegate by the canal commission and a certificate of purchase issued to the purchaser with the understanding that when an unpaid balance had been paid by him, the deed would be executed to him. Mr. Applegate died before payment of the balance and it was then discovered that the certificate contained a defective description.

Held: Under sections 8527 and 8528, General Code, the heirs now entitled to the deed might make application for a deed from the governor who might give a deed with the properly intended and corrected description.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 22, 1911.

HON. E. E. BOOTON, Engineer Canal Land Department, Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of April 18th, 1911, which reads as follows:

"On November 23, 1888, the canal commission sold at public sale in Paulding county, Ohio, a tract of land containing 35 acres, described as 'the central part of the northeast quarter of section 31, town three north, range two east, Paulding county, Ohio,' One-third of the purchase money was paid and a certificate of purchase was issued to O. S. Applegate, the purchaser, receipting for the cash payment, and reciting that upon the payment of the balance of the purchase price with the accrued interest theron, he would be entitled to a deed for said land upon presenting his certificate of purchase. For some reason the deferred payments were never made during the lifetime of Mr. Applegate.

"Messrs. Snook and Savage, of Paulding, Ohio, attorneys for the heirs of Mr. Applegate, find that the description in the certificate of purchase is defective, for the reason that it does not describe the land which the state had to sell. I enclose a pencil sketch of the northeast quarter of section 31, 3 N. R. 2 E., which includes the property in question. Our records show that 60 acres were sold out of the south part of the west half of this quarter, leaving 20 acres, more or less, in the north end of the west half of the quarter unsold. The records also show that 65 acres were sold off the south end of the east half of this quarter, leaving 15 acres, more or less, in the north end of the west half of the quarter unsold.

"In volume No. 2, page 7½, of the plats of the Miami and Erie canal survey, there is a plat on which the 60 and 65 acre tracts are platted in lead pencil as shown on the enclosed sketch. I have shown the 35 acres in two tracts of fifteen and twenty acres, respectively, on the plat enclosed.

"The heirs are anxious to pay the deferred payments and accrued interest, but desire to have the description corrected. There is no doubt in my mind as to what was intended, viz: 15 acres, more or less, off of the north end of the east half of the northeast quarter of section 31, town 3 north, range 2 east, Paulding county, Ohio, lying immediately north of a 65 acre tract of land, deeded by the state of Ohio to Frances

B. DeWitt, March 12, 1892. Also 20 acres, more or less, off of the north end of the west half of said quarter section, lying immediately north of a 60 acre tract of land conveyed by the state of Ohio to O. S. Applegate by deed dated July 21st, 1892.

'The finding of the canal commission in case No. 283 of the canal commission records states that Applegate was in possession of the land at the time that the sale was made.

"We respectfully ask you to direct us as to the best method of correcting the description so that the deed will convey the land intended and as occupied by Mr. Applegate during his lifetime.

"A solution of this legal question will be greatly appreciated."

From your letter I take it that the difficulty in this situation is that, the certificate issued to O. S. Applegate did not correctly describe the land which was sold to him, that he never received a deed for the land and that he is now dead. I wish to call your attention to sections 8527 and 8528 of the General Code which are as follows:

"Section 8527. When the purchaser has died before deed made, and the lands have passed to another, by descent or devise, and the title still remains in him, or when the person to whom the lands have so passed, has conveyed them, or his interest therein, to another person, by deed of general warranty or quit claim, upon the proof of such facts being made to him and the attorney general, the governor shall execute the deed directly to the person entitled to the lands, according to the true intent and meaning of this chapter, although he derives his title thereto through one or more successive conveyances from the person to whom the lands passed by descent or devise.

"Section 8528. When, by the satisfactory evidence, it appears to the governor and attorney general, that an error has occurred in a deed executed and delivered in the name of the state, under the laws thereof, or in the certificate of any public officer, upon which, if correct, a conveyance would be properly required from the state, the governor shall correct such error by the execution of a correct and proper title deed, according to the intent and object of the original purchase or conveyance, to the party entitled to it, his heirs, or legal assigns, as the case may require, and take from such party a release in due form, to the state, of the property erroneously conveyed."

These two sections, in my opinion, cover all the difficulties suggested in your letter. The proper course would be for the persons now owning this land, or the persons entitled to a deed, to make application for a deed from the governor. To this application should be attached an abstract, and affidavits showing that the claimants are the only heirs of O. S. Applegate, that they are now in possession of the land and entitled to a deed, and any other facts that may bear upon the case.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

B 251.

ACT CREATING A STATE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS—CONSTITUTIONALITY—ESSENCE OF BOARD'S DUTIES—SUPERINTENDENCE.

Sections 12 and 13 of article VIII of the constitution of Ohio, conferring upon the legislature the power to create a board of public works, intended that such board should have the powers of superintendence of public works. Therefore, those sections of the amended House Bill No. 336, which takes these powers of superintendence from the board whose members are elective officers, and places them upon the engineer whose office is an appointive one, would probably make the bill constitutional.

Recommended changes in the bill.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1911.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, Chief Engineer, Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—With your letter of May 10th, receipt whereof is acknowledged, you enclosed a copy of House Bill No. 336, Mr. Gebhart, entitled " a bill to amend sections 407, etc., * * * of the General Code, and to repeal sections 411, etc., * * * of the General Code, relating to the board of public works." You stated in your letter that a question had been raised as to the constitutionality of that bill and requested me to consider the same and render an opinion upon this point.

Upon examining said original House Bill No. 336 I came to the conclusion that the same was clearly unconstitutional, and was about to advise you to that effect when you informed me that you had been in error in handing me original House Bill No. 336; that said bill had been amended in the house of representatives, and that the bill with regard to which my opinion was intended to be invited is amended House Bill No. 336.

I have carefully read over the entire amended House Bill No. 336 and have compared it with the General Code in its present form. I find that all of the sections of chapter 9, division 1, title 3, part first, General Code, being the chapter at present relating to the board of public works, are repealed or amended by the bill with the following exceptions:

> "Section 408. The board of public works shall organize by the election of a member as president, and the appointment of a secretary and a clerk. The secretary shall receive a salary not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per annum. The clerk shall receive such compensation as the board directs, not to exceed seven hundred dollars each year, to be paid upon the order of the board from moneys appropriated for that purpose.
>
> "Section 409. Before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, the secretary of the * * * public works shall give a bond to the state in the sum of five hundred dollars, with two or more sureties approved by the board, conditioned to the faithful discharge of the duties of his office. Such bond with the oath of office and the approval of the board indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the treasurer of state and kept in his office. (This section is slightly but not materially changed.)
>
> "Section 410. The board of public works shall keep a journal of its proceedings which shall be open to the inspection of a committee of either house of the general assembly, or to an officer or person interested therein.

"Section 413. The board of public works may maintain an action in the name of the state for violation of the law relating to the public works of the state, for an injury to property appertaining to the public works or for other causes necessary to the performance of its duties.

"Section 414. Each member of the board of public works and the secretary may administer oaths to persons required by law to file affidavits or statements with the board of public works, and to witnesses examined before the board of public works in matters relating to the discharge of its duties.

"Section 416. The board of public works shall regulate the rate of tolls to be collected on the public works of the state. * * * (The original section is amended in other particulars.)

"Section 419. The governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint a chief engineer of public works, who shall be a practical engineer, and hold his office for a term of two years from the date of his appointment.

"Section 423. In addition to the general duties imposed upon him by the preceding section, the chief engineer of public works shall prepare plans and specifications of all contracts, leases and other work in connection with the improvement, maintenance and operation of the public works. If in the opinion of the board of public works and of the chief engineer of public works it is possible and practicable all such work shall be let by contract in the manner provided by law.

"Section 432. Within thirty days from the making of the new lease of water power, or the renewal or modification of an old lease, the board of public works shall furnish the auditor of state an attested copy thereof. * * * (This section is amended in immaterial respects by the bill.)

"Section 438. A copy of such certificate (in condemnation proceedings) shall be deliverd to each owner of the property taken, or left at his usual place of residence within this state. * * * The original certificate with the date and proof of service of a copy thereof shall be filed in the office of the board.

"Section 441. (Relates to the issue of a venire for jury in condemnation proceedings.)

"Section 446. (Relates to drawing jury in such proceedings.)

"Section 447. (Relates to service of notice in such cases.)

"Sections 448, 449, 452, 453, 454 and 456. (Relate to service of notice in such cases.)

"Section 457. Upon the filing of such application, the board of public works may appoint three disinterested persons as commissioners to consider the claim. If the board fails to agree in the selection of commissioners, it may apply to the governor, who shall appoint them. * * *

"Section 458. Such commissioners shall meet at a time and place to be fixed by the board of public works and give each applicant for damages reasonable notice thereof by letter. * * *

"Section 459. * * * The commissioners shall make their decision in writing, subscribe and deliver it to the board of public works together with the subpoenas by it issued, their records and a statement of the number of days they were engaged in the discharge of their duties.

"Section 460. * * * The costs incurred by the commissioners shall be paid after the presentation of their award and report, upon the approval of the board of public works from moneys appropriated for that purpose, but if the damages awarded do not exceed the costs of the hearing, no payment of such damages shall be made. If no damages are awarded, the complainant shall pay the costs of the hearing. At any time before the decision of the commissioners, the board of public works may tender a claimant such sum of money as it deems him entitled to, and if he accepts it, his claim shall be discharged. If he refuses to accept the tender, the applicant shall pay the costs incurred thereafter unless a larger sum is awarded him by the commissioners as damages.

"Section 461. The board of public works shall cause each decision of commissioners upon an application for damages to be recorded in a book kept for that purpose. The award of the commissioners together with all records pertaining thereto, shall be submitted to the general assembly at their next regular session. Payments of compensation for damages so awarded shall be made from moneys specifically appropriated for that purpose.

"Section 469. (Defines and describes state parks.)

"Section 471. (Relating to the leasing of land adjacent to Buckeye Lake, etc., has been amended in immaterial respects.)

"Section 485. (Relates to the protection of birds, fish and game in state parks.)

The powers conferred by the amended bill upon the board of public works, as such, are such only as are set forth in the sections above quoted. They are as follows:

1. The power to elect a secretary.
2. The power to purchase property on behalf of the state.
3. The power to maintain an action in the name of the state in certain cases.
4. The power of each member of the board to administer oaths.
5. The power to regulate the rate of tolls to be collected on the public works of the state.
6. The power to appoint commissioners to consider damage claims, to fix the place of hearing of such claims, and to approve the award of such commissioners.

The board of public works under the amended bill will be denied all independent powers except those above enumerated.

Further analyzing the amended bill, the following powers are under its provisions, not above quoted, to be exercised jointly by the board of public works and by the chief engineer of the public works, the presumption being that in the exercise of such powers the board on the one hand and the chief engineer on the other would have equal voice in the determination of a given policy:

1. The power to determine the possibility and practicability of letting work in connection with the improvement, maintenance and operation of the public works by contract.
2. The power to enter into such contracts.
3. The power to lease surplus water power; but in this instance the rules and regulations under which the leases are to be entered into are to be prescribed by the chief engineer, while the amount of rent due at a given time is to be fixed by the board and leases are to be cancelled or forfeited by the board.

4. The power to determine the amount of money which the state will offer to the owner in condemnation proceedings in case of public exigency.

5. The power to act in all essential respects for the state in condemnation proceedings in cases other than where a public exigency exists.

The following powers, at present vested in the board of public works, are under the amended bill taken from that board and vested in the chief engineer of the public works:

1. The power to divide the public works of the state into grand divisions and to designate them by name and to change the boundaries thereof. (See section 411, General Code, repealed by the bill, and section 424, General Code, as amended by the bill.)

2. The power to have the care and control of the public works of the state; to protect, maintain and keep them in repair; to remove obstructions therein or thereto; to make alterations and amendments thereon; and to determine the necessity of constructing feeders, dikes, reservoirs, dams, locks or other works, devices or improvements as the board deems proper. (See section 412, General Code, as it now exists, and as amended in the bill.)

3. The power to be the superintendent of the canals of the state. (See section 415, General Code, repealed by the bill, and section 422, General Code, as amended in the bill.)

4. The power to appoint superintendents of repairs, lock tenders, and other employes than field engineers and other employes of the engineering corps. (See section 415 and section 420, General Code, repealed by the bill, and sections 424 and 426, General Code, as amended in the bill.)

5. The power to appoint an assistant engineer of public works. (See section 420, General Code, repealed in the bill. This power is really abolished entirely rather than conferred upon the chief engineer.)

6. The power to prescribe the rules and regulations under which the chief engineer shall perform his duties, and to prescribe the duties of the chief engineer, other than those prescribed by statute. (See section 422, General Code, and same section as amended in the bill.)

7. The power, now possessed jointly by the board and the engineer, to allow and pay claims against the state for superintendence of canals or improvements. (See section 427, General Code, as it now is and as amended in the bill.)

8. The power to approve the time rolls, bills of materials and other contingent expenses. (Section 430, General Code, repealed by the bill, and section 427 as amended in the bill.)

9. The power to appropriate easements to guard against damages from possible overflow. See section 462, General Code, and same section as amended in the bill.)

10. The power to take and use materials excavated from a canal or feeder. (See section 463, General Code, and same section as amended in the bill.)

11. The power to execute powers and duties heretofore conferred upon the Ohio canal commission. (See section 464, General Code, and the same section as amended in the bill.)

12. The power to have the custody and control of the books, records, documents, etc., heretofore under the possession and control of the canal commission. (See section 465, General Code, and the same section as amended in the bill.)

13. The power to exercise control and management of lakes, reservoirs and state lands dedicated and set apart for the use of the public, and to make and enforce police rules and regulations with respect to the same. (See sections 472 to 486, inclusive, General Code, and the same sections as amended in the bill.)

Of the powers above prescribed as being under the bill jointly vested in the board and the engineer, the following are under the existing law vested solely in the board:

1. The power to determine the necessity of contracts.
2. The power to make and enter into such contracts.
3. The power to lease surplus water power and to prescribe the rules and regulations for such leases.
4. The power to proceed to appropriate property in cases other than where a public exigency exists.

The constitutional question involved in this bill arises from a consideration of sections 12 and 13 of article VIII of the constitution, which are in part as follows:

> "Section 12. So long as this state shall have public works which require superintendents there shall be a board of public works to consist of three members who shall be elected by the people. * * *
>
> "Section 13. The powers and duties of said board of public works and its several members, and their compensation, shall be such as now are or may be prescribed by law."

It will be noted that section 13 confers upon the general assembly the authority to prescribe in detail the powers and duties of the board of public works, and refers to the duties as they existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution. That the board of public works existed as a distinct agency of the state, having powers and duties fairly defined, prior to the adoption of the constitution of 1851, is clear by an examination of the session laws.

The board was first created on March 4, 1836, 34 O. L. 13, section 1 of which provides in part:

> "For the purpose of promoting and maintaining a general system of internal improvements within this state, and of uniting all of its various branches under the same supervision and direction there shall be created a board of public works. * * *"

This act consists of some nine sections, some of the provisions of which remain in the statute law to the present day.

It is very clear that what may be termed the general scope of the powers and duties of the board of public works as they existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution of 1851 must have been in the minds of the electors in adopting sections 12 and 13 above quoted. The board of public works did not spring into being as a department of the state government in 1851, nor were its powers and duties such, and only such, as have been prescribed by law passed under the constitution of 1851. That constitution raised the board of public works to the dignity of a constitutional department. The instrument does not specifically enumerate the powers and duties of the board. On its face, however, it indicated their nature. Section 12 provides that the board itself shall exist only "so long as this state shall have public works which shall have superintendence." Manifestly, therefore, the constitution recognized and established the board of public works for the purpose of superintending the public works of the state. Furthermore, the powers and duties of the board as then prescribed were in part at least adopted by section 13. Nevertheless, the general assembly was given the power also by section 13 to change such powers and duties.

What, then, is the extent of the power of the general assembly under the constitution to change the powers and duties of the board of public works as they existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution in 1851? More specifically, do any changes in the powers and duties of the board of public works, proposed to be effected by amended House Bill No. 336, exceed the power of the general assembly in the premises?

At the outset, permit me to call attention particularly to the provisions of the first sentence of section 412, and those of section 422, as amended in the bill, in connection with the repeal of section 415, General Code, by the bill. The language employed in these various provisions is very broad and general. That of the existing law vests in the board of public works the general care, supervision and superintendence of the public works of the state; that of the amended bill simply transfers these general powers to the chief engineer of the public works.

In my opinion these general powers are of the essence of the constitutional powers of the board of public works and cannot be taken from that board by the general assembly and conferred upon an appointive officer.

Authorities are not lacking to support this view. In State ex rel. vs. Brunst, 26 Wis. 412, an act of the general assembly of the state of Wisconsin, taking from the sheriff and conferring upon the inspector of the house of correction of Milwaukee county, powers and duties relating to the care of the county jail, and of the prisoners therein, was held unconstitutional. In reaching this decision the court relied upon the fact that the office of sheriff was recognized in the constitution, it being provided therein that the sheriff with other county officers therein enumerated should be elected by vote of the people. The office of sheriff was of ancient origin and the powers and duties pertaining to it had become well understood at the time of the adoption of the constitution of Wisconsin. Among those powers and duties were those pertaining to the officer in his capacity of jailer. These powers and duties, though not expressly conferred upon the sheriff by the constitution, were impliedly vested in the office, and the office having been mentioned in the constitution, could not be taken from the office and vested in another. Furthermore, the office of sheriff was an elective office and that of the inspector of the house of correction was an appointive one. In this fact the court found additional reason for holding that powers conferred upon the former could not be taken from it and devolved upon the latter.

A similar case is that of Warren vs. People, et al, 2 Denio, 272. The constitution of the state of New York recognized and provided for the elective office of the clerk of the city and county of New York. The duties of this office as they existed at the time of the adoption of the constitution of New York were fixed by law. An act of the legislature of New York attempted to take from this office a part of such duties, and to confer them upon a newly created appointive office known as clerk of the court of common pleas. The act was held unconstitutional on precisely the same grounds embodied in the decision of State ex rel. vs. Brunst, supra. It is to be noted, however, that in this case the powers and duties of the first office were defined by statute, rather than by common law, at the time of the adoption of the constitution—a case more nearly like the one which you submit than that embodied in the decision of State ex rel. vs. Brunst, supra.

To the same general effect are the following cases:

King vs. Hunter 65 N. C. 603.
Dankhe vs. People, 168 Ill. 102, 39 L. R. A. 197.
State ex rel. vs. Fox, 56 L. R. A. 893 (Ind.).

In all of the cases above cited, acts were held unconstitutional which attempted to take from a constitutional office powers and duties recognized as inherent therein at the time of the adoption of the constitution and to vest the same in other offices. In most of them, too, the fact that the constitutional office was elective, while the other office in question was appointive, was relied upon as supporting the decision reached by the court.

I do not think there can be any serious doubt as to the proposition that sections 12 and 13 of article VIII of the constitution recognize a certain class of powers and duties as those properly and necessarily pertaining to the department of the board of public works. These powers and duties are those that were in existence at the time of the adoption of the constitution. They were very broad and included the entire superintendence of the public works of the state. These facts being established, the rule of law embodied in the decisions above cited applies immediately, and the conclusion which I have reached necessarily follows.

For the reasons above suggested I have entertained some doubt as to the validity of those provisions of the bill which take from the board of public works and vest in the chief engineer the power to appoint all of the subordinate employes of the department. I have, however, come to the conclusion that these provisions of the amended bill are valid. The power which may not be taken away from the board of public works is its constitutional power of superintendence. The word "superintendence," even in its broadest significance, does not necessarily include the appointment of subordinates. The verb, of which the noun is a derivative, is defined as follows in the Century dictionary:

> "To have charge and direction of, as of a school; direct the course and oversee the details of, * * *; synonymous with 'supervise!'"

I take it that it is well know that in practice, officers designated as "superintendents," having general supervisory powers over a given department or undertaking, are nevertheless not given the power to appoint subordinates. Thus, a superintendent of schools does not have the power to employ the teachers under his supervision.

I apprehend no constitutional objection to requiring the approval of the chief engineer to the contracts necessary to be made in the department; nor to making the chief engineer the disbursing officer of the board, with power to pass upon the validity of a claim; nor to making him the collector of all moneys due the board; nor to giving him joint power with the board in condemnation proceedings, and exclusive power in the case of the appropriation of an easement; nor to giving to the engineer instead of to the board power to use materials excavated from a canal or feeder; nor conferring upon the engineer instead of the board the powers and duties heretofore conferred by law upon the Ohio canal commission, which said powers and duties more appropriately belong in any event to the engineer. All these changes in the existing law, proposed to be made by the bill, are proper in my judgment under the constitution.

Whether or not it is proper to make the chief engineer the superintendent and manager of the state lands and reservoirs set apart as public parks depends upon whether or not such public parks are to be regarded as "public works" within the meaning of the constitution in its express and implied provisions. Inasmuch as these reservoirs are necessary parts of the canal system of the state I am inclined to the view that they are to be regarded as a portion of the public works and that the board may not constitutionally be deprived of all of its managerial and supervisory control over them. Possibly, as division of functions as between the board and the chief engineer with respect to such public parks might be made; otherwise, it would be in my judgment best to make the chief engineer's proposed power with respect to such parks subject to the general supervision of the board.

I believe I have referred to all of the principal changes proposed to be made by the amended bill in the existing law. As to any which I have not mentioned, I may say, that I do not regard them as of any importance in connection with the question submitted.

For the foregoing reasons, then, I am of the opinion that the provisions of the amended bill which undertake to deprive the board of public works of its general power of superintendence and management of the public works of the state are unconstitutional and invalid; but that the remaining provisions of the bill are not so repugnant to the constitution as in my judgment to render them void. I am aware that there is some doubt as to the validity of some of these remaining provisions; in view, however, of the undoubted authority of the general assembly under section 13 of article VIII of the constitution to prescribe in detail the powers and duties of the board of public works, and in view further of the presumption in favor of the constitutionality of every law duly passed by the general assembly I have reached the above conclusions.

In conclusion, then, I recommend that the first sentence of section 415, General Code, be retained in the law instead of repealed; that in section 412 as amended by the amended bill, the phrase "under the direction of the board of public works" be prefixed; that the same or a similar clause be prefixed to section 422 as amended by the bill, and the words "he" and "such" in line 55, and "as he may deem necessary" in line 57 be stricken from said amended section; that section 472, General Code, as amended in the bill be so amended to provide either for the joint control of state parks, which exists under the present law, or for immediate control and management of such parks by the chief engineer under the general direction and supervision of the board of public works; and that a similar amendment be made in sections 474 and 484 as set forth in the amended bill. With these changes the bill as an entirety would probably be unconstitutional.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

292.

VOID LEASE OF STATE BANK LANDS—NO RECOVERY BY LESSEES WHEN FUNDS HAVE BEEN DISPOSED OF—LEGISLATIVE ASSISTANCE.

When the state has received funds from the lease of certain bank lands which leases were subsequently held by the court to be void, and the funds received from said leases have been exhausted in accordance with statutory direction for their specific purpose of improving a reservoir, there can be no recovery by the lessees without the aid of special legislative action.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 10, 1911.

State Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Through Mr. E. E. Booton, engineer of the canal land department, on July 7th, 1911, you request my opinion upon the following state of facts:

> "Nearly four years ago the board of public works and the chief engineer of the public works granted about twenty-two leases known as berme bank lots along the water front at Buckeye Lake. This bank was a natural embankment, and several of the owners of abutting lands either commenced injunction proceedings against the state's lessees or threatened such proceedings.
>
> "The case of the Ohio Electric Railway Co. vs. Lena Nelson and John Nelson was made a test case, the state defending its lessees, and both before the common pleas and circuit courts of Licking county, the state's title was upheld, and the circuit court held that the berme bank should not have been included in the lease and that it should have been reserved as a means of ingress and egress for the use of the public.
>
> "This has rendered the leases useless for the purposes for which they were leased, viz, cottage sites and landings.
>
> "The state has collected something more than five hundred ($500.00) dollars, in rentals from these leases and has expended the same on the improvement of the lake. The law dedicating this and other reservoirs as public parks and pleasure resorts specifically provides that the earnings from leases and special privileges shall be credited the reservoir producing the same and be expended in maintaining and beautifying the same. Thus a special fund is created for each reservoir and can only be expended upon that particular reservoir.
>
> "What the board desires to know is whether or not they can refund to these lessees the amount of rentals paid upon these leases out of the earnings accredited to Buckeye Lake. As a matter of justice this should be done if there are no legal obstacles."

I take it that these leases were all duly entered into between the board of public works on behalf of the state and the different lessees; the state actually owned the land leased, and a certain amount was paid in on the respective leases, such payments being made until the decision in what is known as the "Nelson" case (to which you refer) held the board was without authority to lease the berme bank: this being so the leases were practically valueless to the lessees, for without the berme bank they were without access to the lake front, and that thereupon the leases were abandoned or forfeited by the lessees. This entire transaction having been in good faith and the money paid in, on account of these leases having been expended by your board on the improvement of the lake, there is no provision of law that will authorize your refunding the same or any part thereof to the lessees.

It may be that as a matter of right refunders should be made in this case, but without express provision of law authorizing you to do so, you are without power to make such refunder. The only way in which relief could be given would be through the legislature.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

341.

POWER OF BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS TO GRANT DAMAGES TO PROPERTY HOLDERS—OVERFLOW OF STATE WATER FACILITIES—PURCHASE OF EASEMENT OR FEE DAMAGED BY REPAIR OF CANAL LOCKS.

To compensate a damaged property holder. The board of public works, under section 462, General Code, has the power to appropriate easements in lands subjected to a permanent or continuous damage by reason of the operation, change or creation of state water facilities, or if deemed necessary, said board may purchase such lands outright, under section 412, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 5, 1911.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Chief Engineer Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of September 2, 1911, you ask for my opinion upon the following matter:

> "Lock No. 4 in the Ohio canal is nine miles north of the city of Massillon. Lock No. 5 of original construction was situated in the south part of that city. Lock No. 5, becoming dilapidated and weakened by age, was removed and this level merged into the level immediately below where a new lock was built.
>
> "The new lock thus built was made higher than such structures usually are built owing to the fact that the two different levels were thrown into one.
>
> "As a result certain adjacent low-lying lands are partially submerged along the lower part of the above named level next to the new lock.
>
> "The parties controlling the said lands have petitioned for damages on account of the back water that is held, in the manner above stated, on this land.
>
> "Query: Does this case come under section 455 or 462 of the General Code?"

Section 455 of the General Code provides for damage caused by a break, leakage or overflow of a canal, etc., and is meant to cover particular cases and not cases of continuous injury, or damages of a continuing or permanent nature. The situation to which you refer might very properly come under section 462 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "When the board of public works is of the opinion that an overflow of a canal, slack water, pool or reservoir under its control, will be of frequent occurrence, and that injury to property will result thereby, it may appropriate an easement in such property to the extent to which it deems it liable to overflow or injury."

I understand from your letter that certain lands are practically submerged on account of the building of new locks. You do not state, but I presume, that these lands are practically submerged all the time, and therefore it would be quite proper for you to acquire an easement to the extent to which the lands are or may be submerged.

It also seems to me that by building these locks and overflowing these lands, the board of public works have appropriated the lands already as provided by section 8 of the act of 1825 (23 O. L., pages 56, 57), and that compensation could be made to the land owners, as provided in that act, and that the state has thus obtained the fee simple title to the lands submerged.

I wish further to call your attention to section 412 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "The board of public works shall have the care and control of the public works of the state, and shall protect, maintain and keep them in repair. It shall have power to remove obstructions therein or thereto, and shall make such alterations or amendments thereof, and construct such feeders, dikes, reservoirs, dams, locks, or other works, devices or improvements as the board may deem proper. It may purchase on behalf of the state such real or personal property, rights or privileges as it deems necessary to accomplish such purposes."

Under this section the board of public works would have the right to purchase the land which is submerged. Therefore, you may act either under section 412 of the General Code, section 8 of the act of 1825, or under section 462 of the General Code, whichever may seem to you to be the most applicable to this particular situation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

342.

CONSISTENCY OF TWO LEGISLATIVE ACTS PROVIDING FOR SALE BY BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS OF BERME BANK CANAL LANDS, (A) GENERALLY, AND (B) TO THE NORFOLK RAILWAY COMPANY—SPECIAL SALE PERMISSIVE, NOT MANDATORY—APPROVAL OF SALE BY GOVERNOR AND ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Two legislative acts were passed on the same day, one (102 O. L. 293) giving a general right to the board of public works to sell certain designated lands and the other (102 O. L. 305) providing for a sale of the same lands to the Norfolk and Western Railway Company.

Held: The act providing for the sale, generally, being passed later in the day than the act providing for the special sale, and provision being made in the first act for the approval of the governor and the attorney general as a condition precedent to the special sale, that the act with reference to the special sale, was a permissive rather than a mandatory provision, made necessary by reason of an existing doubt as to the right of the board to sell the lands in question (berme banks of a canal) to a railway company.

Though the board has the right, therefore, to sell the land as it sees fit, it is recommended that in conjunction with the governor and attorney general, the feasibility of the special sale be carefully considered before resorting to the general sale.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 5, 1911.

State Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of a letter under date of August 24th from M. E. E. Booton, engineer of the canal land department, in which he submits for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Must the board of public works sell the real property described in the act found in 102 O. L. 305, as provided in said act; or may the board of public works and the chief engineer of public works proceed under authority of the act found in 102 O. L. 293, to sell this land which is a part of the land authorized to be sold by the latter act?"

The first of the two acts referred to by you provides in part as follows:

> "Section 1. * * * The state board of public works by and with the approval of the governor and attorney general, be and it is hereby empowered to sell at private sale to Norfolk & Western Railway Company, its successors and assigns, the following real estate, to wit:
>
> "Situated in Pickaway county, Ohio, commencing at a point in the east water line of the Ohio and Erie canal, * * * containing four and two-tenths (4.2) acres, more or less, comprising what is known as the berme bank of said canal.
>
> "Section 2. There is hereby reserved to the state of Ohio an easement in said * * * strip for a berme embankment for the purpose of restraining the waters of the Ohio canal within its proper channel, but for no other purpose.
>
> "Section 3. Said conveyance is to be made upon the condition that said Norfolk & Western Railway Company pay into the state treasury ot the credit of the general revenue fund the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000.)."

The other act to which you refer provides in part as follows:

"Section 1. * * * that portion of said Ohio canal commencing at the flume that connects Buckeye Lake with said Ohio canal at the west end of said reservoir * * * and extending thence southwesterly and southerly with the line of said Ohio canal to the junction with the Ohio river, near Portsmouth in Scioto county, Ohio, be and the same is hereby abandoned for canal purposes.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Section 3. As soon as * * * surveys and plats have been completed, the state board of public works, and the chief engineer of public works, acting as a joint board, shall proceed to appraise and lease or sell, as they may deem for the best interests of the state, subject to the approval of the governor and attorney general, said canal lands, except as hereinafter noted, in strict conformity with the various provisions of the statutes of Ohio relating to the leasing and selling of state canal lands, except that * * * the bed and banks of said abandoned canal property may be included in any lease of such canal lands.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Section 8. Nothing in this act shall interfere with any leases, rights or privileges heretofore granted by the state of Ohio and in force at the date of approval of this act."

The two acts in question were passed on the same day and approved in the order in which they are above quoted. So that what may be termed the general act is of the more recent date.

I do not believe that the board of public works is obliged to sell the land in question under what may be termed the special act, to the Norfolk & Western Railway Company. The exact language is that "the board with the approval of the governor and attorney general is hereby empowered to sell" the land in question. In form then, the act is permissive, not mandatory, and the Norfolk & Western Railway Company has acquired no right thereunder to compel the state board of public works to sell the land to it. That the act is permissive in effect as well as in form is further apparent from a consideration of the fact that the power of the board of public works, therein provided for, is to be exercised with the approval of the governor and attorney general. The approval of other officers is not a proper incident to the exercise of mandatory duty.

I think it is clear, therefore, that the act of June 6, 1911, being the special act above quoted, vests in the state board of public works, with the approval of the governor and attorney general, the discretionary power to sell to the Norfolk & Western Railway Company the land therein described, or not to sell at all at private sale.

I have reached this conclusion in spite of the reservation made in section 2 and the express disposition of funds made in section 3 of the first act. Although the general assembly has in these two sections dealt expressly with the subject matter of the whole act, yet the sections themselves must be construed as contingent upon the determination of the board of public works with the approval of the governor and attorney general to sell the land to the Norfolk & Western Railway Company.

The reference in section three of the second act, wherein said section speaks of the various provisions of the statutes of Ohio relating to the leasing and selling of state canal lands, is to sections 218-221 to 218-231 of the Revised Statutes, for which sections there are no corresponding sections of the General Code, the subject matter of the whole section having been reserved for the appendix. (See General Table, volume 3, General Code, page v.) These sections provide in part as follows:

> "Section 218-225. * * * each and every tract of land, and any part of the berme bank of any canal * * * which said commission shall find to be the property of the state of Ohio, the use of which, in the opinion of said commission, the board of public works and the chief engineer of the public works, if leased, would not materially injure or interfere with the maintenance and navigation of any of the canals of this state, shall be valued by said commission (now the board of public works) at its true value in money, and * * * may be leased for any purpose or purposes other than for railroads operated by steam, but said commission, the board of public works and the chief engineer of the public works shall have power to make leases, * * * for the necessary use, for railroad purposes, of any part of the berme banks of the canal * * * for a distance not exceeding two miles. * * *
>
> "Section 218-231. Any land or lands belonging to the state of Ohio, near or remote from the line of any canal in this state, that cannot be leased so as to allow six per cent. on the valuation thereof, * * * may be sold * * * at not less than three-fourths of such valuation, upon such terms of payment as may be fixed by the commissioners of the sinking fund, and such land shall be offered for sale at public vendue, at the court house in the county where the same is situated, after at least thirty days' notice * * *; provided * * * that such land or lands shall not be sold or offered for sale, unless the said commission, board of public works and the chief engineer of the board of public works shall have, by a majority vote in joint session, determined that such land or lands are not necessary or required for the use, maintenance or operation of any of the canals of the state."

By reading these statutory provisions in connection with those of the more general act, above quoted, I think it will clearly apepar that the board of public works and the chief engineer of the public works, acting jointly, have power under the latter to sell the land in question to a railway company. The only question which is presented by the above statutory provisions is as to whether or not the board of public works and the chief engineer of the board of public works have power to sell to a railway company any part of the berme bank of a canal, exceeding two miles in length. Such a strip could not under section 218-225, above quoted, be leased to a railway company. In my judgment, however, the limitation of that section is not applicable to section 218-231; and if any portion of the berme bank of the canal is not necessary for navigation purposes the same may be sold to a railway company, although the strip so sold may exceed two miles in length. The general act above quoted abandons the portion of the Ohio canal which includes all land under consideration for canal purposes, and the chief engineer and the board of public works need not therefore make the determination required by section 218-231, that the berme band is not necessary for canal purposes.

For the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the board of public works and the chief engineer of the board of public works with the approval of the governor and the attorney general may proceed under what I have designated, for convenience, the general act, above quoted, and under the provisions of section 218-231, Revised Statutes, therein incorporated by reference, to sell the land described in what I have designated as the special act.

As a matter of practice I beg to advise that it is the duty of the board of public works and the governor and attorney general to determine first what action, if any, they will take under the act found in 102 O. L. 105. Only in the event that it is determined not to proceed under this act will it be the duty of the board of public works to have the land described therein appraised and leased or sold under the second act. Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

B 431.

LEASE OF SURPLUS CANAL WATERS—RIGHT TO ABANDON OR LEASE CANALS TO CITIES OR OTHERS—EFFECT OF ABANDONMENT OF CONTRACTS.

The state board of public works is given, by statute, the power to abandon its canals or any part of them and such abandonment will give no right of action to lessees of surplus water rights by reason of the consequent discontinuance of their contracts. Therefore, when the board grants to a city the right to execute a lease of a certain portion of a canal which lease may be entered into at any future time, there is no abandonment of the canal until the lease has been executed and pending such execution, the board may enter into contracts for the lease of the surplus water rights.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 21, 1911.

HON. CHAS. W. DIEHL, Secretary, Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of August 10, 1911, is received in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "At the request of the state board of public works, I enclose herewith copy of letter of Walter M. Schoenle, acting city solicitor of the city of Cincinnati to Hon. J. H. Sundmaker, director of public service of said city, which letter is self explanatory.
>
> "The board, on July 11th, 1911, as you will note from the letter, granted to the Split Keg Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, permission to insert into the level of the Miami and Erie canal in said city a three-inch pipe, at the usual rate per annum, viz: $106.00.
>
> "The board would like an opinion as to its authority to grant such a permit, since the passage of the act by the recent general assembly, turning over to the city of Cincinnati about seven miles in length of said canal for boulevard and other purposes."

The act granting the city of Cincinnati the right to lease part of the Miami and Erie canal for boulevard purposes is found in 102 Ohio Laws, page 168, and provides in part as follows:

> "Section 1. Permission shall be given to the city of Cincinnati, in the manner hereinafter provided, to enter upon, improve and occupy forever, as a public street or boulevard, and for sewerage, conduit and if desired for subway purposes, all of that part of the Miami and Erie canal which extends from a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue to the east side of Broadway in said city, including the width thereof, as owned or held by the state, but such permission shall be granted subject to all outstanding rights or claims, if any, with which it may conflict, and upon the further terms and conditions of this act.

"Section 2. Such permission shall be granted upon the further condition that said city, in the uses aforesaid of all or any portion herein mentioned of such canal, shall construct or cause to be constructed suitable and sufficient works for a convenient outlet for the discharge of the water of said canal, at a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue, so as not to obstruct the flow of water through the remaining part of such canal, nor destroy nor injure the present supply of water for mechanical or commercial purposes. Such outlet shall be constructed in accordance with plans and specifications to be drawn or approved by the state engineer, and the city of Cincinnati shall give bond in such sum as shall be prescribed by the state board of public works, to be approved by the attorney general for the faithful performance of the work.

"And such permission shall be granted upon the further condition that said council shall adopt and construct appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water along that portion of the canal to be abandoned, in order to and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations now resting upon it by virtue of certain contracts now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the terms of said contracts, in the same quantity and under the same conditions and at the same rate of rental provided for in said contracts, and provided further that during the period of construction of a street or subway or of appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water, as herein provided said city of Cincinnati shall cause no cessation or diminution of the supply of water to the said lessee water users to which they are entitled under their respective contracts or leases with the state of Ohio except in so far as such cessation or diminution of such supply of water may be absolutely necessary.

"Section 3. Upon the passage of this act the governor shall appoint three (3) arbitrators, none of whom shall be residents of Hamilton county, who shall, whenever the council of said city decided that such canal be used for all the purposes mentioned in section one (1) hereof, proceed to act as provided in section four (4) of this act."

Section four prescribes the duties of the arbitrators and the rental to be paid by Cincinnati.

Section 5 provides in part:

"Upon approval by resolution of the council of said city of the amount of such valuation as fixed by such board of arbitration or a majority of them, and upon the governor being satisfied that the interests of the state are fully protected and that the valuation placed upon such property is adequate, which fact shall be endorsed upon such lease by the governor, he shall execute and deliver to the city of Cincinnati a lease for ninety-nine years, renewal forever, which lease shall not be assign-able, of such canal so to be taken by the said city of Cincinnati for the uses and purposes before mentioned, and upon the terms and conditions specified in this act;"

The remainder of section five has reference to the covenants of the lease and section six prescribes certain regulations.

This act grants to Cincinnati the privilege of leasing the part of the canal therein specified. It does not state any time in which this privilege must be exercised. Section three provides that the arbitrators shall act whenever the council of Cincinnati decides that such canal shall be so used. After the valuation has been fixed by the arbitrators, it must be approved by council of Cincinnati and by the governor of Ohio before the lease can be formally executed and the grant consummated. This lease may be entered into within a year or it may be several years before it is finally executed.

The city of Cincinnati is to pay the state an annual rental for this property. This rental will not begin until the lease has been entered into. In the mean time should the state be denied the privilege of granting leases for surplus water to be taken from this part of the canal?

The power of the board of public works to grant such leases is found in section 431, General Code, which provides:

"The board of public works may lease surplus water power on any of the public works, under such rules and regulations as it prescribes. From time to time it shall examine such leases, adjust and fix the amount of rent due and unpaid as it deems just, and cancel existing leases with the consent of the lessees, or when they have become forfeited. If rents are in arrears for thirty days or more, or if the lessee fails to put in guages as required by lease, the board may shut off the water until such rent is paid or guages are furnished, or cancel the lease."

The first syllabus in the case of Hubbard vs. Toledo, 21 O. S., 379, is as follows:

"The execution of the grant, pursuant to the act of March 20, 1864, ' to authorize the city of Toledo to enter and occupy a part of the Miami and Erie canal as a public highway and for sewerage and water purposes," was an abandonment by the state of that part of her public canals known as the Manhattan branch."

The passage of the act granting permission to the city of Cincinnati to lease part of the canal is not of itself an abandonment of this part of the canal. It is necessary that the lease provided for therein shall be excuted before it shall constitute an abandonment.

The rights of lessees of water upon the abandonment of the canal is set forth in the following decisions:

In the case of Hubbard vs. Toledo, 21 O. S. 379, supra, the fourth syllabus reads:

"The abandonment of her public canals by the state, creates no liability on her part to respond in damages resulting therefrom to parties holding leases of 'surplus water,' under the act of March 23, 1840, 'to provide for the protection of the canals of the state of Ohio, the regulation of the navigation thereof, and the collection of tolls.' "

The lease under consideration in the above case, and also the statute under which it was made, contained a reservation that the state, "may at any time resume the privilege or right to the use of water, or any portion thereof, whenever it was deemed necessary." There was no clause or reservation as to the abandonment of the canal.

The fourth syllabus in the case of Vought vs. Columbus, etc., R. R. Co., 58 O. S. 123, reads:

> "Contracts made with the board of public works or other agents of the state, for the use of the water of the canal, terminate with the abandonment of the use of the canal by the state and no action will lie against the state for damages resulting from such abandonment."

On page 161 of the opinion Minshall, J., says:

> "* * * It is certainly settled by the decisions just cited, that a contract made by the state through its board of public works with an individual for the use of the water of any of its canals for a period of years, terminates with the use of the canal, and that it is under no obligation to keep up the canal for such purpose, after the canal has become useless for the purpose of navigation and has been abandoned. The agents of the state have no power to make such a contract in the name of the state or to bind it thereby."

The board of public works is authorized by section 421, supra, to lease surplus water power. And from the decisions above cited the rule is found to be, that the state has the right of abandon its canals and that the rights of all lessees of water terminate with such abandonment, even though they are granted for a term of years.

In the letter of Walter M. Schoenle, acting city solicitor, to the director of public service of Cincinnati, directing him to refuse a permit to the Split Fiber Keg Manufacturing Co., to lay a pipe in Plum street for connection with the canal, he states:

> "It is evident that the state board of public works can by such repeated action prevent the realization of the boulevard and subway and make it practically impossible for the city to comply with additional burdens thus imposed."

The burdens to which he refers are evidently found in the latter paragraph of section two of the act in question. This section requires the city to construct appropriate works "for the purpose of supplying water to lessee users of said water along that portion of the canal to be abandoned, in order and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations now resting upon it by virtue of certain contracts now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the terms of said contracts." This provision has reference to "obligations now resting" upon the state by virtue of "contracts now subsisting and in force." The word "now" has reference to and is of the date of the approval of said act, to wit: May 15, 1911. It places no such obligations or burdens upon the city for future contracts nor for contracts entered into after the passage of the act.

As the state has the right to abandon the canal and thereby terminate all leases, it was under no obligation to preserve the rights of water users. However, the legislature has seen fit to preserve their rights and has placed this burden upon Cincinnati if it accepts the grant.

There is nothing in the act to show that the power of the board of public works to lease water has been withdrawn as to this part of the canal. And I am of the opinion that the board still has the power to enter into leases for this water. The city of Cincinnati may never execute the lease provided in this act. It would be unfair to the state to deny it the privilege of securing rental for water during the time it is awaiting the action of the council of Cincinnati.

It is my opinion that all leases entered into after May 15, 1911, will terminate upon the abandonment of the canal by virtue of this act, without any reservation therefor in such leases. It would be better policy, however, that all such leases or permits contain a condition that such lease or permit shall terminate upon the abandonment of the canal, or upon the execution of the lease to the city of Cincinnati provided for in the act of May 15, 1911, 102 Ohio Laws, 168.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

438.

CONTRACTS FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS BY STATE NOT WITHIN MECHANIC'S LIEN LAW—MATERIAL MEN AND SUBCONTRACTORS HAVE NO RIGHTS AGAINST THE STATE.

The mechanic's lien law has no application to contracts for public improvements made by the state.

A fortiori—when the board of public works enters into a contract with a contractor, the board can, under no consideration, recognize demands of subcontractors or material men who have not been paid by the main contractor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 25, 1911.

HON. W. KIRTLEY, JR., President Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of September 13, 1911, is received in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "During the year 1909, the board of public works entered into a contract with T. H. Watson & Sons to construct a revetment wall along the south embankment of the Lewistown reservoir; said contractor purchased certain reinforcing steel of the Bostwick-Braun Co., of Toledo, Ohio. This material was used in the wall above mentioned, and was not paid for.
>
> "Under date of October 4, 1910, Mr. T. R. Wickenden, former assistant engineer in charge of the work, called the attention of Jas. R. Marker, who was then chief engineer of this department, to several unpaid accounts of said contractors, including that of the Bostwick-Braun Co.
>
> "The final estimate in payment for the work was approved by the board of public works, and a warrant drawn to Mr. Marker, who on Oct. 17, 1910, paid to T. H. Watson & Sons $1,079.91. Mr. Marker paid certain unpaid accounts to which his attention had been called by Mr. Wickenden, but ignored the claim to the Bostwick-Braun Co., which company now presents its bill to this department for payment.

"I herewith attach the papers and correspondence in the matter, and respectfully ask your opinion as to who is responsible for the non-payment of this claim, and to whom the Bostwick-Braun Co. should look for payment."

The contract was entered into between the state of Ohio by the board of public works and T. H. Watson and Sons. Said T. H. Watson and Sons were to "furnish all necessary tools and implements also all necessary material, except cement," and were to "furnish and perform all necessary labor." In order to carry out their part of the contract, T. H. Watson and Sons purchased from the Bostwick-Braun Co. certain material. There was no contract between the state of Ohio and the Bostwick-Braun Co. for this material. The material was purchased by T. H. Watson and Sons from said Bostwick-Braun Co., to be used in fulfilling their contract with the state.

The Bostwick-Braun Co. was in the situation of a subcontractor or material man to the head contractor, T. H. Watson and Sons, as defined in section 8324, General Code, which section grants the right to such subcontractor or material man to take a lien upon the fund due the head contractor under his contract.

There is no claim that the Bostwick-Braun Co. did take advantage of this statute, and even if they had it would have availed them nothing. The claim was merely called to the attention of the agent of the state. Any payment that the agent of the state might have made to the subcontractors, material men, or laborers of T. H. Watson and Sons from the sums to be paid them under their contract with the state, could have been made only with the consent of said T. H. Watson and Sons.

The right of a subcontractor, material men, or labor of a contractor making public improvements for the state of Ohio, to secure a lien upon the fund is adversely decided in the case of State ex rel. vs. Morrow, 10 N. P. N. S., 279, the third syllabus of which reads:

"The mechanic lien law, although general in its nature, and the language in the code broad enough to include public improvements of the state, does not apply to any public improvement made by the state. And any steps taken pursuant to the mechanic lien act to establish a lien or claim against the funds in the hands of the state set apart for any public improvements have no effect in law and afford no ground for action either in law or equity against the state."

This decision was affirmed by the circuit court on October 21, 1910, in the following memorandum opinion, set forth in a note to the above report of this case:

"We think that the judgment of the lower court should be affirmed for the reasons given by Judge Kyle in his opinion, and in addition this reason:"

The additional reason does not cover the question in hand.
On page 285 of the opinion, Kyle, J., says:

"* * * * The trustees know no one in the transaction save the principal contractor, and under the law it was the duty of them to have an estimate made to such principal contractor, and having certified such estimate to the auditor it was the duty of the auditor to pay the same to such principal contractor, there being no provision for the determination of any other person's rights to such fund by them. Hence it is my opinion that the state of Ohio is not subject or bound by the provisions of the lien law, and no person can acquire any interest in any money by any steps taken under such lien law against any fund in the hands of the board of trustees or the auditor of state, and that, therefore, the relator is not entitled to a peremptory writ of mandamus, and the writ will be quashed and the petition dismissed at the costs of the plaintiff."

In the above case all the steps necessary to secure a subcontractor's lien had been taken, and after the filing of such claim, money was paid to the head contractor. If no lien of a subcontractor can attach to the funds of a head contractor in the hands of the officers of the state by virtue of the mechanic's lien law, certainly no lien could attach thereto merely upon presentation of the claim to the agent of the state. The only person known to the state in this contract was T. H. Watson and Sons.

The contract to furnish material by the Bostwick-Braun Co. was made with T. H. Watson and Sons, and it is to them that the Bostwick-Braun Co. must look for payment. The state is not liable to them.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

440.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS ON LAKE ERIE—NAVIGATION RIGHTS OF STATE AND NATIONAL GOVERNMENT—ESTABLISHMENT OF DOCK LINE—RECLAMATION—INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The ownership of submerged lands of Lake Erie within the boundaries of Ohio is in the state in trust for public interest and benefits and subject only to the right of the United States to regulate interstate commerce.

The title of the riparian owner in the shore land, extends to the line where the water usually stands when free from disturbing causes.

Riparian rights on navigable rivers are property rights in Ohio which cannot be taken by the state without compensation. The riparian rights of property holders on the shore of Lake Erie are also property rights but are subject to the right of the national or state government to take for their respective authorized public uses without compensation as the owner takes his title subject to the burdens of navigation.

As a general rule, the riparian owner has the right to build piers, docks or wharves out from his land to the point of navigability but no further.

When a dock line has been established by the state or national government, the point of navigability is thereby established and furthermore by the weight of authority, gives to the riparian owner, the implied right to reclaim the submerged land between the shore and the dock line by improving or filling in. This right, however, may be revoked by the legislature at any time before it has been taken advantage of.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 1, 1911.

State Board of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 14, 1911, the following communication was received by this department from your honorable board:

"A communication was received from Col. John Millis, U. S. engineer's office, Cleveland, Ohio, stating that in connection with the harbor improvement work on Lake Erie within the limits of the state of Ohio, the question of ownership of the lake bottom and rights of ownership of lands bordering the lake has been one of interest and importance and asked what the attitude of the state or the board was on the subject.

"On action of Mr. States, the communication was referred to the attorney general, and the secretary directed to write Mr. Millis stating that his communication had been referred to the attorney general.

The communication of Col. John Millis, enclosed states as follows:

"In connection with harbor improvement work on Lake Erie within the limits of the state of Ohio, the question of the ownership of the lake bottom and rights of owners of lands bordering the lake has been one of much interest and importance, particularly in case of the harbor improvements at Cleveland. The department appears to take the view that ownership of submerged areas in the lake is in the state. Will you kindly advise me as early as practicable what is the attitude of the state or of your board on this question. I shall be very glad to receive references to any instances where the state ownership in submerged areas under the lake may have been asserted, and to cases where such questions may have been decided in the courts, or to authoritative opinions on the subject. We also have similar questions affecting the Maumee river at Toledo, and Sandusky bay at and near Sandusky. Any advice or assistance you may be able to give relative to the present status of these questions from the state's point of view or otherwise will be greatly appreciated."

Under date of June 27, 1911, this department received the following communication from R. Y. McCray, city clerk of Cleveland, Ohio:

"I am requested by the chairman of the council committee on harbors and wharves to ask you for all data that you may have pertaining to the rights of this city, state of Ohio or individuals in lake front lands beyond the low water mark and any data as to riparian rights where dock lines have been established by the United States government. Of course I refer to the south shore of Lake Erie within the boundaries of this state. In enclose herewith a copy of resolution which prompts the writing of this letter and which resolution will probably more fully explain just what is wanted."

The resolution of council referred to provides:

"Whereas the city of Cleveland is contemplating important harbor improvements, involving the expenditure of large sums of money; and, whereas, the city, the state and the national government have now under consideration questions relating to the ownership of lands bordering on Lake Erie, and especially the submerged areas of lands in Lake Erie adjacent to the shore line of the city of Cleveland; and, whereas, it is important that the various claims as to such ownership should be ascertained at this time, resolved that the committee on harbors and wharves be instructed to confer personally or by mail with the proper city, state and national officers, and such other persons as the committee may deem best as to the various claims relating to the ownership of such lands in and adjacent to the harbor of Cleveland, together with the reasons for such claims, and to report back to the city council within one month, all data and information that they are able to procure upon this subject."

These several inquiries ask opinion upon the following:

First: The ownership of the submerged lands of Lake Erie within the boundary of Ohio.

Second: The rights of the owners of land bordering upon the lake.

Third: The riparian rights where dock lines have been established.

These questions are so broad and cover such an extensive filed of inquiry and such a diversity of property rights that it will not be possible to treat of them fully in this opinion. However, if this opinion does not cover the questions involved, other inquiry should be made stating the facts and specifying the particular rights to be determined.

First, as to the ownership of the submerged lands of Lake Erie.

The supreme court of the United States has decided that the ownership of submerged lands in navigable waters is to be determined by the respective states.

In Packer vs. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, the second syllabus reads:

"Whatever incidents or rights attach to the ownership of property conveyed by the United States bordering on navigable streams, will be determined by the states in which it is situated, subject to the limitation that their rules do not impair the efficacy of the grant, or the use and enjoyment of the property by the grantee.

The ownership of the state and the nature of its title to submerged land is set forth in the case Illinois Central Railroad vs. Illinois, 146 U. S., 387, the first and second syllabi of which are as follows:

"The ownership of and dominion and sovereignty over lands covered by tide waters, within the limits of the several states, belong to the respective states within which they are found, with the consequent right to use or dispose of any portion thereof, when that can be done without substantial impairment of the interest of the public in the waters, and subject always to the paramount right of congress to control their navigation so far as may be necessary for the regulation of commerce with foreign nations and among the states.

"The same doctrine as to the dominion and sovereignty over and ownership of lands under the navigable waters of the great lakes applies, which obtains at the common law as to the dominion and sovereignty over and ownership of lands under tide waters on the borders of the sea, and the lands are held by the same right in the one case as in the other and subject to the same trusts and limitations."

On page 452, Justice Field in delivering the opinion of the court says:

"That the state holds the title to the lands under the navigable waters of Lake Michigan, within its limits, in the same manner that the state holds title to soils under tide waters, by the common law, we have already shown, and that title necessarily carries with it control over the waters above them whenever the lands are subjected to use. But it is a title different in character from that which the state holds in lands intended for sale. It is different from the title which the United States held in the public lands which are open to pre-emption and sale. It is a title held in trust for the people of the state that they may enjoy the navigation of the waters, carry on commerce over them, and have liberty of fishing therein freed from the obstruction or interference of private parties. The interest of the people in the navigation of the waters and in commerce over them may be improved in many instances by the erection of wharves, docks, piers therein, for which purpose the state may grant parcels of the submerged lands; and, so long as their disposition is made for such purpose, no valid objection can be made to the grants. It is grants of parcels of land under navigable waters, that may afford foundation for wharves, piers, docks and other structures in aid of commerce, and grants of parcels which, being occupied, do not substantially impair the public interest in the lands and waters remaining, that are chiefly considered and sustained in the adjudged cases as a valid exercise of legislative powers consistently with the trust to the public upon which such lands are held by the state."

In the case of United States vs. Mission Rock Co., 189 U. S., 391, Justice McKenna on page 404 of the opinion says:

"* * * And Mr. Justice Gray said, delivering the opinion of the court in Shively vs. Bowlby 'each state has dealt with the lands under the tide waters within its borders according to its own views of justice and policy, reserving its own control over such lands, or granting rights therein to individuals or corporations, whether owners of the adjoining uplands or not, as it considered for the best interest of the public.'

"This right is an attribute of the sovereignty of the state, and it follows that in the exercise of the right, as said by Mr. Justice Gray, the state may 'dispose of its tide lands from any easement of the upland proprietor.'"

The rule of ownership of submerged lands is set forth by Pomeroy in his work on Water Rights, at section 238, (Black 1893), as follows:

"It is well settled that the state is the owner in fee of the seashore, and of the shores of all tidal rivers, estuaries, inlets and bays within its territorial jurisdiction, except in so far as portions of the same may have been already granted to private owners, and subject to the paramount right of congress to regulate commerce and navigation."

The rule of ownership of submerged lands in navigable streams is established in the case of Gavit vs. Chambers, 6 Ohio 496, the syllabus of which reads:

"In Ohio, owners of lands situate on the banks of navigable streams running through the state, are also owners of the beds of the rivers to the middle of the stream, as at common law."

That this rule of ownership is not applicable to Lake Erie in Ohio is established by the case of Sloan vs. Biemiller 34 O. S., 492, the first and fourth syllabi of which read as follows:

"The rule of the English common law that the owners of land situate on the banks of non-tidal streams, though navigable in fact, are owners of the beds of the rivers to the middle of the stream, is not applicable to the owners of lands bounding on Lake Erie and Sandusky bay.

"Where no question arises in regard to the right of a riparian owner to build out beyond his strict boundary line, for the purpose of affording such convenient wharves and landing places in aid of commerce as do not obstruct navigation, the boundary of land, in a conveyance calling for Lake Erie and Sandusky bay, extends to the line at which the water usually stands when free from disturbing causes."

On page 512, White, J., in delivering the opinion says:

"We are not called upon in this case to review the doctrine laid down in Cavit vs. Chambers. The question before us is, whether the rule there laid down, as applicable to navigable rivers, applies to the owners of land bounding on Lake Erie and Sandusky bay. In our opinion, it clearly does not. In the Canal Commissioners vs. the People, 5 Wend. 423, Chancellor Walworth said: 'Our large fresh water lakes or inland seas are wholly unprovided for by the law of England. As to these there is neither flow of the tide nor thread of the stream; and our local law appears to have assigned the shores down to ordinary low water mark to the riparian owners, and the beds of the lakes, with the islands therein, to the public.' And in Kent's commentaries it is laid down that, 'in this country our great navigable lakes are properly regarded as public property, and not susceptible of private property any more than the sea.'" 3 Kent's Com 429, note a.

The above decision is decisive of these propositions:

a. That the fee of the riparian owner on Lake Erie "extends to the line at which the water usually stands when free from disturbing causes."

b. That the fee to the submerged lands of Lake Erie and its bays from the line at which the water usually stands outward to the boundary line of the state, is in the state of Ohio.

The nature of the title of the state of Ohio to the submerged lands of Lake Erie, has recently been passed upon in the common pleas court of Cuyahoga county, in the case of White vs. Cleveland, 21 Lower Decisions 311 (Ohio Law Bulletin of July 31, 1911), the seventh syllabus of which case reads as follows:

"The title of the state to land under the water of Lake Erie is not that of a proprietor, but it is held in trust by it for public purposes of navigation and fishery. Riparian ownership embraces all such facilities and instrumentalities as will further navigation and fishery purposes, and includes access to navigable water and the right to wharf out to it. The fact that a municipality has used public funds for piling, and for filling in submerged land for park purposes, does not defeat the right of reversionary riparian owners in such lands."

On page 329, Chapman, J., delivering the opinion says:

"* * * * Neither the city nor the state had any proprietary title in the submerged lands, and therefore neither could fill in front of these lands and claim a proprietary right, any more than it could, by filling in front of lands of other riparian owners on the lake, acquire a proprietary right."

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Confusion has arisen by reasons of the fact that some of the courts have failed to discriminate between decisions made in respect to waters in which the Crown held the underlying title as a proprietary right, and waters in which the Crown held title to the underlying soil in trust for public purposes only. In this country the states have succeeded to the right of the Crown under the common law. In those casses where the title to the underlying soil has been held to be in trust for public purposes of navigation and fishery, the riparian owner has generally been held to have the right of access to navigable waters, and the right to wharf out so long as he did not interfere with the public right of navigation and fishery. Where title to the underlying soil has been held to be proprietary, the right of access and to wharf out has been denied. I do not say that this rule has always been followed, but it serves to distinguish most of the cases."

This decision limits the rights of the state in the submerged lands to a narrower sphere than is done in a great majority of the cases, and I believe it be too restrictive of the rights of the state, especially as to the submerged land between the shore line and the harbor line, the point of navigability. It makes the rights of the state very little, if any, more than the state possesses in its sovereign capacity.

That the state of Ohio may grant submerged lands to private individuals I believe to be established by the case of Hogg vs. Beerman. 41 O. S., 81, the first syllabus of which case is as follows:

"Land covered by the water of a navigable land locked bay, or harbor, connected with Lake Erie, may be held by private ownership, subject to the public rights of navigation and of fishery, provided the holder derives his title from an express grant made, or sanctioned, by the United States."

On page 95, Granger, C. J., delivering the opinion says:

"Is east harbor capable of private ownership? An absolute sovereign, holding both ownership and jurisdiction of land and water, may vest in a private grantee such portions of either, as the grantor may designate. A sovereign whose powers are limited by constitutional provisions may do the like, so far as the grant does not contravene any constitutional provision or limitation. So long as navigable waters are left free to the public, for unembarrassed passages to and fro, we know of no reason why the United States, or any state, holding ownership and jurisdiction of land and water, may not vest in a private grantee such a body of land, marsh and water as 'east harbor.' History is full of instances of the exercise of such power by governments, and instances in which the courts have protected such a grantee against intrusion are not rare."

On page 98, he also says:

"* * * * The private grantee of the land cannot do anything that will interfere with the channel, or hamper the passage of watercraft through it. But he may, without the limits of the channel, erect fishing house or such other structures as his means and the depth of water will permit; he may convert shallow portions into cranberry patches; he may fill up other parts and make solid ground. Although such action by him may lessen the water surface available for the fishing boats the fisherman cannot complain. Such public right to fish always yields to any permanent improvement by the owner of the land on which the water rests.

On page 427 of the case of Home for Aged Women vs. Commonwealth, 202 Mass., 422, Knowlton, C. J., says:

"The waters and the land under them beyond the line of private ownership are held by the state, both as owner of the fee and as the repository of sovereign power, with a perfect right of control in the interest of the public. The right of the legislature in these particulars has been treated as paramount to all private rights, and subject only to the power of the government of the United States to act in the interest of interstate or foreign commerce. All rights granted to individuals by general laws are made subject to this paramount right of the legislature to do what is deemed necessary for the promotion of navigation."

Sections 239 and 240 of Pomeroy on Water Rights, (Black 1893) read in part as follows:

"While the state is thus the proprietor of its sea coast and of the areas of tidal rivers and bays, it does not follow that it holds such property in quite the same manner as a private person may hold the fee simple of an estate in land. 'It has been very common,' says the learned court in Rhode Island, 'to speak of the right of the state in the shores as a fee. This is proper only by analogy. To hold that the state owns the shores in fee in the same sense in which it owns a court house or a prison, or in which the United States owns public lands, or a citizen may hold land in fee, would lead to consequences which need only to be considered in order to show that such can never have been the nature of the right.' The true doctrine is that such property of the state 'is a trust for the public, a power to control and regulate, to subserve the good of the public, and not a private property.' And this view has the support of unimpeachable authority, as well as of sound reason.

"Some few cases are to be found in the books which seem to assert an absolute and unqualified right in the state to grant away the tide lands as it may see fit, without reference to the rights of the public of which it is the conservator. But these cases, if their particular facts require them to go this far, are inconsistent with the generally accepted doctrine stated in the preceding section, that the title of the state to such lands is only a trust for the preservation and improvement of these public rights. As a necessary consequence of this doctrine it follows that the power of disposal vested in the state is limited to the sale or lease of the usufruct of the shore or waters, as by granting exclusive rights of fishery or the like, or the sale or grant of definite portions of its shore lands, not so great in amount as materially to impair the public rights, and made with the special intention that such grants shall be used for the building of wharves or other structures designed to be in aid of the public rights of navigation and commerce."

The eighth, ninth and tenth syllabi in case of Shively vs. Bowlby, 152 U. S., 1, read:

"The title and rights of riparian or littoral proprietors in the soil below high water mark are governed by the laws of the several states, subject to the rights granted to the United States by the constitution.

"The United States while they hold country as a territory, have all the powers both of national and of municipal government, and may grant for appropriate purposes, titles or rights in the soil below high water mark of tide waters.

"Congress has not undertaken, by general laws, to dispose of lands below high water mark of tide waters in a territory; but, unless in case of some international duty or public exigency, has left the administration and disposition of the sovereign rights in such waters and lands to the control of the states, respectively, when admitted into the union."

In the case of Illinois Central Railroad vs. Illinois, 146 U. S., 387, supra, it is determined that congress has the paramount right to control navigation in navigable streams and waters, so far as may be necessary for the regulation of interstate and foreign commerce.

This right to regulate interstate and foreign commerce may be exercised to such an extent as to take away the riparian rights of the owner of the bank without compensation for his loss.

In case of Gibson vs. United States, 269, the syllabus is as follows:

"Riparian ownership on navigable waters is subject to the obligation to suffer the consequences of an improvement of the navigation, under an act of congress, passed in the exercise of the dominant right of the government in that regard; and damages resulting from the prosecution of such an improvement cannot be recovered in the court of claims."

In Scranton vs. Wheeler, 179 U. S., 141, the supreme court of the United States held:

"The prohibition in the constitution of the United States of the taking of private property for public use without just compensation has no application to the case of an owner of land bordering on a public navigable river whose access from his land to navigability is permanently lost by reason of the construction, under authority of congress, of a pier resting on submerged lands away from, but in front of his upland, and which pier was erected by the United States, not with any intent to impair the right of riparian owners but for the purpose only of improving the navigation of such river.

"It was not intended, by that provision in the constitution, that the paramount authority of congress to improve the navigation of the public waters of the United States should be crippled by compelling the government to make compensation for an injury to a riparian owner's right of access to navigability that might incidentally result from an improvement ordered by congress."

On page 163, Justice Harlan, delivering the opinion of the court, says:

"Whatever the nature of the interest or a riparian owner in the submerged lands in front of his upland bordering on a public navigable water, his title is not as full and complete as his title to fast land which has no direct connection with the navigation of such water. It is a qualified title, a bare technical title, not at his absolute disposal, as is his upland, but to be held at all times subordinate to such use of the submerged lands and of the waters flowing over them as may be consistent with or demanded by the public right of navigation."

The same principle has been applied in Ohio by the superior and common pleas courts of Hamilton county.

In case of Covington Harbor Co. vs. Phoenix Bridge Co., 23 Bull, 34, the syllabus reads:

"Plaintiff's harbor for anchoring coal boats upon the Ohio river on the Kentucky side was injured by the change in the currents and flow of the stream caused by the V-shaped breakwater placed some distance above the harbor in the stream to protect false work used in the construction of a railway bridge from Covington to Cincinnati. The bridge was authorized by act of congress, and was built as therein directed in accordance with plans approved by the secretary of war. The breakwater and the false work were necessary in completing the bridge. Held, That the loss sustained by plaintiffs, was a remote or consequential damage arising from the exercise of the paramount right of congress to regulate navigation, and was therefore damnum absque injuria."

The syllabi in case of Winifrede Coal Co. vs. Central Railway and Bridge Co., 24 Bull. 173, are as follows:

"The right of access to navigable water of a riparian proprietor on the Ohio river is subordinate to the power of congress over subjects of interstate commerce.

"Congressional authority to erect a bridge between Kentucky and Ohio is an exercise of power over interstate commerce.

"Hence, a riparian proprietor on the Ohio river cannot enjoin the erection of a pier for such bridge opposite his front but below low water mark authorized by congress and the two states."

In Massachusetts it has been held that the state has the right, in the exercise of its powers to regulate and improve navigation, to diminish or take away the rights of the riparian owner without compensation therefor.

In the case of Home for Aged Women vs. Commonwealth, 202 Mass., 422, the first and second syllabi, read:

> "The right of a riparian owner upon navigable tide waters of direct access from his land to navigable waters, which is a special and peculiar right different from the public right of passage over the water, is subject to the right of the commonwealth for the public good, to take and fill the land lying below low water mark between his land and the tidewater, so as to cut off direct access from his land to the navigable water.
>
> "The change in the Charles river authorized by St. 1903, c. 465, as amended by St. 1906, c. 402, was for the improvement of navigation as well as for other useful purposes and the fact that this was one of the purposes of the legislature was enough to warrant the legislation and the action under it even if such a change in the river could not have been authorized for the other useful purposes alone without providing compensation for riparian proprietors."

On page 429 of the opinion, Knowlton, C. J., says:

> "In a sense there is a valuable right of access to the waterway or to the street, so long as the waterway or street is there. But it does not follow that the abutter on the waterway can insist that the government shall make no change in the waterway on its own land, in the interest of more convenient and valuable navigation, which shall leave him with a less convenient passageway to the channel, or perhaps with no passageway at all. The government has this paramount right to do what is necessary for the public good, in promoting better navigation. The benefits enjoyed by the abutting land owner are held subject to the possibility of diminution or less by the exercise of this right."

The right of the state to establish dock lines is set forth in 29 Cyc., page 302, as follows:

> "The state has the power by legislation to prescribe the lines in a harbor beyond which piers, docks, wharves, and other structures—other than those erected under the authority of the general government—cannot be built by riparian owners in the waters of the harbor which are navigable in fact."

The same is set forth in Pomeroy on Water Rights (Black 1893), at section 251, as follows:

> "It is undoubtedly within the power of the state legislature to prescribe the lines in its harbors, beyond which wharves, piers, docks, and other structures (other than those erected under express or implied authority of the general government) may not be built by riparian owners in the navigable waters of such harbors."

From these authorities the following conclusions can be drawn:

The state of Ohio is the owner in fee of the submerged lands of Lake Erie, subject to the para mount right of congress to improve navigation in the exercise of its power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce.

The title of the state to the submerged lands is not an absolute fee, but it holds the title in trust for public navigation, fishing and other public uses.

The riparian rights of the owners of land to the shore line can be diminished or entirely taken away without compensation therefor, by congress in the exercise of its power to regulate navigation between the states and with foreign nations.

The state also has the right to take away or diminish the rights of the riparian owner without compensation therefor in the exercise of its power to regulate and improve navigation.

The riparian rights of the owners of banks of navigable waters are to be determined by the state in which such land is situated.

The state may grant or lease the submerged lands for purposes of improving and promoting navigation.

Whether the state can grant the submerged lands for private purposes or for public purposes other than navigation is not here determined as no such question appears to be involved.

In the exercise of its paramount right to regulate interstate and foreign commerce the United States may establish dock lines and improve harbors in such manner as it sees fit.

The state may also establish dock and harbor lines, improve harbors and regulate wharves and piers, subject to the paramount right of congress.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

The next inquiry is as to the rights of the riparian owners.

This subject may include any one of the following, with many divergent rights under each subdivision: Use of water: access to the water; use of shore and banks; reclamation and improvement of submerged lands; wharves, piers and docks; accretion, etc.

The riparian rights on navigable streams have been held by the supreme court of Ohio, to be property rights which cannot be taken or materially interfered with without compensation.

In case of Mansfield vs. Balliett, 65 O. S., 451, the first and second syllabi read:

> "Riparian rights are property within the purview of section 19 of the bill of rights, of which the owner cannot be deprived without just compensation, though taken for, or subjected to a public use.
>
> "Any actual and material interference with such rights, which causes special and substantial injury to the owner, is a taking of his property."

In case of White vs. Cleveland, 21 Low. Dec. 311, supra, Chapman, J., on page 331, says:

> "Even if the right of access of a riparian owner is not such property right as to require compensation if taken by the United States or the state, in furtherance of the paramount right of navigation as held in Scranton vs. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, the state or the United States are the only agencies that can rightfully deprive the owner of such right, and then only in furtherance of the public right of navigation and commerce."

The extreme right of a state to submerged lands is set forth in Stevens vs. Paterson, etc., 34 N. J. L. 532, as follows:

"The state is the absolute owner of the land in all navigable waters within its territorial limits, and such land can be granted to any one, either public or private, without making compensation to the owner of the shore."

Even in this case the right of reclamation is recognized in the second syllabus, which is as follows:

"By the local custom of this state, the shore owner can reclaim the land between high and low water marks, but such privilege is a mere license, which the legislature may revoke at any time before execution."

The absolute fee of the state is recognized in Hoboken vs. Pennsylvania Railroad Co., 124 U. S. 656, the third syllabus of which case reads.

"By the laws of New Jersey lands below high water mark on navigable waters are the absolute property of the state, subject only to the power conferred upon congress to regulate foreign commerce and commerce among the states, and they may be granted by the state, either to the riparian proprietor, or to a stranger, as the state sees fit."

In Ohio the riparian rights on navigable rivers are property rights, which cannot be taken without compensation. The same rule will no doubt extend to the riparian rights on Lake Erie, but subject to the right of the United States and the state of Ohio to take those rights in the improvement of navigation, as the riparian owner takes his title subject to the burden of navigation.

As there is no specific inquiry concerning any particular riparian right, it will be possible to set forth only a few of them.

It is a general rule that the riparian owner has the right to build piers, docks or wharves out from his land to the point of navigability, but no further. Where dock lines have been established by the United States or by the state, that determines the point of navigability.

This principle is established in the case of Dutton vs. Strong, 1 Black (66 U. S.) 23, the syllabus of which reads:

"Riparian proprietors have a right to erect bridge piers and landing places on the shores of navigable rivers, lakes, bays and arms of the sea, if they conform to the regulations of the state and do not obstruct the paramount right of navigation.

"The right to make such erections terminates at the point of navigability."

This right to build docks and wharves attaches to land owned by private individuals and corporations as well as to land owned by municipal corporations. In fact riparian rights to attach to the owners of the bank whoever such owners might be.

The establishment of dock lines does not materially alter the rights of a riparian owner. The purpose of dock lines is to establish the point of navigability and to prohibit the building of obstructions beyond that line.

The establishment of dock or harbor lines also fixes the point to which submerged lands may be reclaimed if that right is inherent to the title of the shore owner.

The only other question which shall be considered in this opinion is the right of a riparian owner to fill up and reclaim submerged lands from his boundary to the dock line or point of navigability, or any part thereof.

The right to fill up land by the owner of the fee is stated in Hogg vs. Beerman, 41 O. S. 81, supra, by Granger, C. J., on page 98, as follows:

> "The private grantee of the land cannot do anything that will interfere with the channel, or hamper the passage of watercraft through it. But he may, without the limits of the channel, erect fishing houses or such other structures as his means and the depth of water will permit; he may convert shallow portions into cranberry patches; he may fill up other parts and make solid ground. Although such action by him may lessen the water surface available for the fishing boats, the fisherman cannot complain. Such public right to fish always yields to any permanent improvement by the owner of the land on which the water rests."

In this case the fee to the submerged lands in question was in the riparian owner by grant. In Lake Erie the fee is in the state. The riparian owner cannot interfere with the channel; that must be free to navigation. So on Lake Erie no interference can be made outside the dock lines. As inside the dock lines there is no navigability, except for small watercraft, the filling up of such lands would not interfere with navigation. It would, however, lessen the available fishing space, but it is seen that this right to fish must yield to permanent improvements.

The right of reclamation of submerged lands is set forth in 29 Cyc., page 339, as follows:

> "In many of the states, by statute or custom, the private owner of lands to high water marks has the privilege of reclaiming the lands of the state lying under water in front of his land up to the line of navigability. The establishment by legislative authority of a harbor or dock line in navigable waters is an implied grant to the owners of the adjacent upland of the right to build on or fill up the land under water up to such line. The right to reclaim has been held a mere franchise, or license, which may be revoked by the legislature at any time before such reclamation actually takes place; but when the license is executed, it becomes irrevocable. In some states, however, the right of a riparian owner is a vested property right which cannot be taken away even by the state for a public use without compensation."

Pomeroy on Water Rights (Black 1893) at page 511 of section 240, says:

> "It is also held that the title to the shore will not pass by implication. That is, a grant by the state of the upland will not carry the adjacent tide land without express words. But it seems that title to tide lands may be acquired by the littoral owner making improvements upon them or reclaiming them, under an implied license from the state, or by force of a local custom, and perhaps also by disclaimer by the paramount owner and the recognition of title in the claimant."

In Aborn vs. Smith, 12 R. I., 370, the fifth syllabus reads:

"The establishment of a harbor line does not itself divert the title of the state in the tide flowed land; it, however, permits the riparian owner to take and occupy it by filling. This permission accrues to the ownership of the upland, however such ownership has been gained."

In the case of Bailey, Trustee vs. Burger, 11 R. I. 330, the syllabi are as follows:

"Land bordering on tide waters was platted into house lots, some of which extended below low water mark, all the lots being defined shoreward by a fixed line, outside of which no lots were platted. Conveyance of these lots was made, and subsequently a harbor line was fixed by the state, running in front of the lots:

"Held, on a trustee's bill for instruction:

"a. That the fee of the soil below high water mark was in the state.

"b. That the establishment of a harbor line was permission given by the state to fill out to it.

"c. That the grantee of a lot touching tide water who fills out to the harbor line, holds the filled land not under his grantor, but directly from the state."

In Miller vs. Mendenhall, 43 Minn. 95, it is held:

"The riparian owner is entitled to fill and make improvements in the shallow waters in front of his land to the line of navigability, and such improvements in aid of navigation are recognized as a public as well as private benefit. These rights pertain to the use and occupancy of the soil below low water mark and are valuable property rights, and the exercise thereof, though subject to state regulation, can only be interfered with by the state for public purposes.

"The establishment of a dock or harbor line in pursuance of legislative authority, is to be considered as giving to the owners of the upland the privilege of filling and building out to such line."

In case of Lockwood vs. New York, etc., Railroad, 37 Conn. 387, the syllabi read:

"In this state the owners of land bounded on a harbor own only to high water mark, and whatever rights such owners have of reclaiming the shore are mere franchises.

"When, however, such reclamations are made, the reclaimed portions in general become integral parts of the owner's adjoining lands."

While authorities and text writers do not agree upon the right of the riparian owner to reclaim the submerged lands, the weight of authority is that the riparian owner has a right to fill in and reclaim the submerged lands, so long as he does not interfere with the rights of the public to use the waters for navigation; that this right is a license or franchise, revocable at the will of the legislature, but when the license has been exercised by filling in the right is irrevocable.

The title to the made or reclaimed land attaches to the owner of the uplands.

In many states this is a subject of legislative control and the rights of the riparian owners are governed by statute.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

(To the Dairy and Food Commission)

172.

COLORING OF TEA—MISBRANDING—ADULTERATION.

The determination of whether or not the artificial coloring of tea would be an adulteration under section 5778, General Code, hangs on the question of fact whether or not such coloring effects a concealment of damage or inferiority, or gives a false impression as to the quality or adds a substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 9, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 25, 1911, received, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "I would like to have an opinion from you whether or not artificial coloring of tea would be considered misbranding of foods under section 5778 of the Ohio Statutes."

Section 5778 of the General Code provides:

> "Food, drink, confectionery or condiments are adulterated within the meaning of this chapter (1) if any substance or substances have been mixed with it, so as to lower or depreciate or injuriously affect its quality, strength or purity; (2) if any inferior or cheaper substance or substances have been substituted wholly, or in part, for it; (3) if any valuable or necessary constituent or ingredient has been wholly, or in part, abstracted from it; (4) if it is an imitation of, or is sold under the name of another article; (5) if it consists wholly, or in part, of a diseased, decomposed, putrid, infected, tainted or rotten animal or vegetable substance or article, whether manufactured or not or, in the case of milk, if it is the product of a diseased animal; (6) if it is colored, coated, polished or powdered, whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, if by any means it is made to appear better or of greater value than it really is; (7) if it contains any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health; (8) if, when sold under or by a name recognized in the eighth decennial revision of the United States pharmacopœia, or the third edition of the National Formulary, it differs from the standard of strength, quality or purity laid down therein; (9) if, when sold under or by a name not recognized in the eighth decennial revision of the United States pharmacopœia, or the third edition of the National Formulary, but is found in some other pharmacopœia, or other standard work on materia medica, it differs materially from the standard of strength, quality or purity laid down in such work; (10) if the strength, quality or purity falls below the professed standard under which it is sold; (11) if it contains any methyl or wood alcohol."

The section just quoted refers to adulteration instead of misbranding of foods, and I presume that you desire to know whether or not artificial coloring of tea would be considered an "adulteration" within the meaning of chapter 1, title II, of the police regulations, instead of "misbranding" of foods under said chapter.

In answering your question as to whether artificial coloring of tea would be considered an adulteration within the meaning of section 5778, I would say it would come under clauses six and seven of said section which are as follows:

> "(6) if it is colored, coated, polished or powdered, whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, or if by any means it is made to appear better or of greater value than it really is;
>
> "(7) if it contains any added substance or ingredient which is poisonous or injurious to health;"

If the tea is colored, coated, polished or powdered for the purpose of covering damage or inferiority, or for the purpose of making it appear better or of greater value than it really is, or if the coloring matter is poisonous or injurious to health, then, under section 5778 it would be considered adulterated.

To determine whether artificial coloring of tea would come under this section is a question of facts for you to decide under the law as set forth in clauses six and seven of section 5778.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

173.

DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSION—TRAVELING EXPENSES OF INSPECTORS AS WITNESSES IN JUSTICE OF PEACE CASES.

For traveling expenses incurred by inspectors acting as witnesses in cases prosecuted by the dairy and food commission before justices of the peace, the commission may make allowances under sections 375 and 379, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 9, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 25th, in which you inquire as follows:

> "There are quite a number of cases pending in the courts throughout the state, based upon samples taken by inspectors under the administration of Mr. Dunlap and these inspectors are, of course, needed as witnesses.
>
> "When the cases come on for trial, as it involves considerable traveling expenses the question has been raised whether this department can pay the inspectors on the basis of their former work while with the department.
>
> "We would be very glad to have a ruling on this question as it is one that will recur frequently."

Section 375 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state dairy and food commissioner shall enforce the laws against fraud, adulteration or impurities in food, drinks or drugs, and unlawful labeling within the state. The state commissioner, each assistant commissioner and each inspector shall inspect drugs, butter, cheese, lard, syrup and other articles of food or drink, made or offered for sale in the state, and prosecute or cause to be prosecuted each person, firm or corporation engaged in the manufacture or sale of an adulterated drug or article of food or drink, in violation of law."

Section 13495, General Code, provides in part as follows:

"Justices of the peace, police judges and mayors may issue subpoenas and other process to bring witnesses before them. In complaints to keep the peace and cases of misdemeanor, the subpoena must be served within the county, and in other cases, it may be issued to or served in any county."

There is no express provision of the General Code authorizing the payment of mileage or fees for witnesses, other than section 13495, and similar sections relating to cases in the common pleas and probate courts. And there is no express statutory authority permitting your department to allow traveling expenses and compensation to inspectors formerly employed in the dairy and food commissioner's office, who are necessary witnesses for the state, in prosecutions for that office. However, section 379 of the General Code provides as follows:

"All charges, accounts and expenses, authorized by the provisions of this chapter shall be paid by the state on the warrant of the auditor of state, upon vouchers certified by the state dairy and food commissioner."

I am of the opinion that under the authority of section 375 which makes it the duty of the dairy and food commissioner's department to enforce the laws as provided in said section, and section 379 which authorizes the dairy and food commissioner to pay all charges, accounts and expenses authorized by the provisions of chapter 7, title III, division I of the General Code, that the dairy and food commissioner has the implied authority to pay the traveling expenses and allow mileage, and provide compensation for witnesses for the state for time necessarily taken in attendance upon trials brought by your department; however, if these witnesses live in the county where the affidavit is filed they can be compelled to attend by process issued under authority of section 13495, General Code. To hold otherwise would retard the administration of justice, as these inspectors cannot be compelled to attend by process in these cases outside of the county in which they live.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

215.

DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSION—JUSTICE'S AND CONSTABLE'S BILL OF COSTS—NO LIABILITY OF COMMISSION.

The dairy and food commission is not authorized to pay the justice's and constable's bill for costs where the defendant is convicted or recognized.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 8, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I wish to herewith acknowledge receipt of your communication of February 27th, and to say in explanation of the delay in answering the same that this department has been very busy with a large volume of inquiries similar to yours and this is the first opportunity I have had to give your inquiry consideration. Your communication encloses a civil cost bill of a justice of the peace in and for Ashtabula township, Ashtabula county, Ohio, and reads as follows:

> "The enclosure relates to a prosecution for a violation of the turpentine statute.
>
> "On investigation, I find that it is not the custom of the dairy and food department to pay the fees in the justice's court, in these prosecutions. As this is the first bill that has been rendered to the department, we desire to get the opinion of the attorney general as to whether this department should pay the justice's and constable's bills. The department feels that these costs should follow the cases and that we are in no case liable for fees such as are indicated by the bill enclosed.
>
> "We desire to make your opinion in this case a precedent for our future guidance."

Section 3016 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In felonies, when the defendant is convicted the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury. In all cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction is had, such costs shall be paid from the county treasury."

Section 3017 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In no other case whatever shall any cost be paid from the state or county treasury to a justice of the peace, police judge or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police or constable."

After a careful examination of the above sections I am of the opinion that you are not authorized by the statute to pay the justice's and constable's bills for costs. The state, particularly in view of the provisions of section 3017, is not liable for the payment of such costs. Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 296.

SEALERS, STATE, COUNTY, CITY OR VILLAGE—FEES AND SALARY—JURISDICTION—TRAVELING EXPENSES—DUTIES—BOND—SEALERS' CONVENTION.

The copies of original standards, under section 7965 for sealers of weights and measures, must be paid for by the state sealer under sections 7698 and 7699, General Code.

City sealers and county sealers have concurrent jurisdiction in municipalities.

The county sealer may charge the fees specified in section 2633 of the General Code, but must pay the same into the county fee fund.

A single person may serve in dual capacities of county sealer and city sealer and may receive the salary provided for both positions.

Section 4322 provides alone for services of city sealers and does not authorize the county sealer or his deputy to perform the services therein specified.

There is no provision requiring a deputy county sealer to give bond.

When there is no village or city sealer provided for, the deputy sealer can act as usual in that territory as county sealer but not in the capacity of city or village sealer.

County commissioners may reimburse county sealers for necessary traveling expenses within their counties. The question of whether or not such expenses are justified is one of fact governed by custom and the exercise of a reasonable discretion.

A convention of sealers is not made necessary by law, nor are traveling expenses to and from such, authorized by law, and therefore such expenses may not be paid out of public funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 10, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have the honor to reply to your communications of June 28th, and July 5th and 7th, wherein you request opinions upon the following questions:

"1. Who pays for the copies of the original standards required to be procured under section 7965?

"2. Do the city sealer and the county sealer and his deputy have concurrent jurisdiction in municipalities?

"3. Does section 2623 authorize the county sealer to collect the fees therein specified, and if so, is he entitled to the fees or must they be turned into the county fee fund? Or, does section 2622 as amended wipe out the fees provided for in section 2623?

"4. Is there anything to prevent a mayor from appointing a deputy county sealer as city or village sealer, or a county sealer from appointing a city or village sealer as deputy county sealer? If one person can serve in this dual capacity, can the county and municipality each contribute to his salary? (Sections 2622 and 4318.)

"5. Does section 4322 authorize the state sealer and his deputies and the county sealer and his deputy to perform the service therein required, or is the work under that section restricted to the city sealer?

"6. Is there any provision for requiring a deputy county sealer to give bond? If so, to whom?

"7. If a mayor of a municipality neglects or refuses to appoint a city or village sealer can the deputy county sealer exercise jurisdiction the same as if he were city or village sealer?

"8. Can county commissioners pay deputy county sealers their necessary traveling expenses within their counties?

"9. A convention of the state sealers, city sealers, county sealers and their deputies, has been called by this department to be held at Cedar Point, July 11th and 12th, for the purpose of instructing the local sealers in their duties under the weights and measures laws, and to promote uniformity in the work of the sealers throughout the state. The question has been raised whether the city can allow the necessary traveling and hotel expenses of the city sealers and whether the county commissioners can allow the necessary traveling and hotel expenses of the county sealers and their deputies, to attend this convention."

I will answer the questions according to their numerical order as above.

With respect to your first question, the provisions of law for the payment for copies of the original standards of weights and measures required by the statute are found in sections 7968 and 7969 of the General Code. Section 7966 of the General Code provides that copies of said standards for the use of the various counties of the state shall be procured by the state sealer, and section 7969 provides that:

"The state sealer shall render accounts to the auditor of state of all moneys by him paid or liabilities incurred in procuring and delivering copies of the standards to the counties; and the auditor shall audit such accounts and draw his warrants on the state treasurer for the amounts he finds due, which must be paid by the treasurer out of any moneys to the credit of the general revenue fund."

So it is evident from the section last quoted that the auditor will draw his warrants on the state treasurer for such amount as is due the state sealer for providing such copies for the counties. It is different with the copies provided for cities and villages, as the state sealer is only required to furnish such copies upon application made therefor and payment of the cost of said copies. This is apparent from the provisions of section 7968, which are as follows:

"The state sealer shall furnish like copies of the original standards to the sealer of any city or village upon application therefor, and payment of the cost thereof, by such city or village."

Replying to your second question, the duties of the county sealer and his deputy are found in the General Code, chapter 3, division 2 of title 10. Section 2616 of the General Code provides that:

"The county sealer shall compare all weights and measures, brought to him for that purpose, with the copies of standards in his possession. When they are made to conform to the legal standards, the officer comparing them shall seal and mark such weights and measures."

Section 2622 of the General Code, as amended May 31, 1911, provides as follows:

> "Each county sealer of weights and measures shall appoint by writing under his hand and seal, a deputy who shall compare weights and measures wherever the same are used or maintained for use within his county, or which are brought to the office of the county sealer, for that purpose, with the copies of the original standards in the possession of the county sealer, who shall receive a salary fixed by the county commissioners, to be paid by the county, which salary shall be instead of all fees or charges otherwise allowed by law. Such deputy shall also be employed by the county sealer to assist in the prosecution of all violations of laws relating to weights and measures."

So it is seen that the duties of the county auditor, ex-officio county sealer of weights and measures, as also the duties of his deputy when so appointed under amended section 2622, are co-extensive with the county, which would include such municipalities as are situated in said county. The statutes applicable to the appointment and duties of the city sealer are found in chapter 7 of subdivision 2, division 5, title 12, sections 4318 to 4322 of the General Code, from a reading of which sections it is readily apparent that the sealer of weights and measures for the municipality is confined in his duties to the municipality of which he has been appointed the sealer of weights and measures. While the jurisdiction of the municipal officer is confined to his respective municipality, the duties of the county sealer or his deputy are co-extensive with the confines of the county and include the municipalities therein. I am therefore of the opinion that the city sealer and the county sealer, as also his deputy, have concurrent jurisdiction in municipalities.

With respect to your third question, section 2623 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Each sealer may receive for his services, the following fees: For sealing and marking every beam, ten cents; for sealing and marking measures of extension, at the rate of ten cents per yard, not exceeding twenty-five cents for any one measure; for sealing and marking each weight, five cents; for sealing and marking liquid or dry measures, if of one gallon or more, ten cents, and if less than one gallon, five cents; and a reasonable compensation for marking such weights and measures, so as to conform to the standards."

Section 2622, General Code, before amendment provided as follows:

> "Each county sealer of weights and measures may appoint by writing under his head and seal a deputy, who shall compare weights and measures brought to the office of the county sealer for that purpose, with the copies of the original standards in the possession of the county sealer, and who shall receive for the performance of that duty, the compensation in each case provided by law."

The amendment of section 2622, supra, provides further duties for the deputy, and for the fixing of a salary for said deputy instead of the fees or charges otherwise allowed by law. Under the old section the deputy was not authorized to compare weights and measures unless they were brought to the office of the county sealer for that purpose, and under the amended section it becomes his duty under the direction of the county sealer to make comparisons of weights and measures wherever the same are used or maintained for use within his county. I do not think that the fees provided for under section 2623, General Code, are abolished, but believe that whenever weights and measures are brought to the office of the county sealer for comparison, the county sealer or his deputy may charge the fees provided in section 2623, which said fees shall be paid into the county fee fund. He of course can make no charge for such comparisons as he goes out of the office and makes of his own volition.

The fourth question presents the proposition as to whether or not a deputy county sealer can be appointed city or village sealer, or whether a city or village sealer can be appointed deputy county sealer. You are aware of the rules laid down by the authorities as to whether or not two offices are compatible. From an examination of the statutes I can find no provision of law prohibiting a person from filling the two respective positions at the same time, and there is no constitutional inhibition. The only question would be whether or not the duties of the respective offices would so conflict and so interfere one with the other as to make a proper discharge of the respective duties practically impossible. I am of the opinion that the duties would not be so conflicting as to interfere one with the other; in fact, the duties are of a similar character and I can see no reason, nor would it be against public policy to have the duties of the respective offices referred to in your question performed by one person.

As to the question of salary, while the county and municipality could not contribute to make up the entire amount of salary, the county commissioners under the law could fix the salary for the county sealer (Sec. 2622 as amended) and the municipality could fix by ordinance the salary of such person as municipal sealer of weights and measures. (Sec. 4319, G. C.)

Answering your fifth inquiry, it will be found upon examination of the General Code, as stated in a former answer herein, that section 4322, General Code, is a part of title 12, referring to municipal corporations, and comes under chapter 7, subdivision 2, division 5 of that title. The chapter refers to the appointment, compensation and duties of sealers of weights and measures for cities and villages, and I cannot see how the provisions of section 4322 as amended can have application to any other sealer of weights and measures than the sealer of weights and measures of cities and villages. The work referred to in that section, in my opinion, is restricted to the city sealer. Of course, it may happen that under the general duties of the general authority conferred upon the county sealer and his deputy he might be permitted in his comparison of weights and measures to take action along similar lines as those provided for the city sealer, but the additional authority given in the section referred to only applies to the municipal officer.

With regard to your sixth question, I find no provision of law requiring a deputy county sealer to give bond.

Answering your seventh question, in the event a mayor of a municipality refuses to appoint a city or village sealer, the deputy county sealer having jurisdiction co-extensive with his county can perform the duties required of him within the confines of said municipality, but he does not act "the same as if he were city or village sealer," nor is he by reason of the fact that there is no such officer invested with any additional powers or functions. His position is the same as though the law did not provide for the appointment of any such municipal sealer.

With respect to your eighth question, if by "necessary traveling expenses" is meant any of the personal expenses of the officer, then the law is well settled that no such allowance can be made. But if in the performance of his duties as a county official it became necessary to incur an expense, which expense would be for the county rather than for himself personally, I am inclined to the belief that the county commissioners could reimburse him for such expense. It is difficult to lay down a rule which would be applicable to all cases; every particular case would have to be considered individually, and while there is no provision of law fixing the exact expense for which reimbursement may be made, when ancient custom which has become the law allows reimbursement for what is really the expense of the political division.

In your ninth question you inquire whether it is the right of a city or county to allow necessary traveling and hotel expenses to sealers of weights and measures or their deputies to attend a convention called by the dairy and food commissioner for the purpose of instructing the sealers in their duties. It has been repeatedly held and the law is so well settled that there is no need of quoting authority that to warrant the payment of expenses to a public official two things are necessary; first, the services rendered for which compensation or reimbursement is sought, or in the performance of which the expenses have been incurred, must be enjoined upon the officer by law; second, there must be express warrant for the payment of such expenses out of the public treasury. Now, while it is most commendable that the various officers should confer to give and receive instructions in their respective duties, as well as to promote the uniformity of their work throughout the state, still I can find no authority of law for the calling of any conference or convention. In the event that a sealer did not care to attend such conference he could not be compelled so to do and the gathering not being provided for by law it is wholly voluntary. Likewise, an examination of the statutes reveals no provision, express or implied, for the allowing of such expenses.

I am therefore of the opinion that the respective municipalities and county commissioners would not be authorized to make any allowance to the respective sealers for expenses of any kind incurred in an attendance upon such conference or convention.

I will reserve the first inquiry in your communication of July 7th for separate answer.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

344.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—DOW-AIKEN TAX—SEVERAL PERSONS BUYING BEER BY KEG—INCORPORATED SOCIETY'S BEER PICNIC—MEMBERSHIP FEE.

When several persons go in together, each putting up a dollar to buy beer by the keg, a "trafficking in intoxicating liquors" is consummated and such transactions are liable for the Dow-Aiken tax.

So too, when an incorporated society holds a picnic, charges a dollar a membership and permits members for that fee to drink all the beer they desire, a liability for the tax results.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 5, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 8th, enclosing a letter from a Mr. Peters of Cincinnati, Ohio, and asking my opinion upon the questions he propounds, to wit:

> "1. Many of my friends desire to know the law in regard to the Dow or Aiken state law tax. In case, say one or two dozen persons go in together, each puts up a dollar, and buy beer by the keg, do they require a state liquor license for that day?
>
> "2. If an incorporated society—say of about thirty members—holds a picnic and offers to any a membership ticket good for that picnic, for say a dollar, then he or she will have the privilege of drinking as much beer as they want, passing no money, the society having no government license; is a this club required to take out the Dow or Aiken liquor tax?"

Answering your first question I would say the law regarding the Dow or Aiken liquor state tax is found in volume two, chapter fifteen of the General Code of Ohio. Section 6071 provides as follows:

> "Upon the business of trafficking in spiritous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquor there shall be assessed yearly, and paid into the county treasury, as hereinafter provided, by each person, corporation or co-partnership engaged therein, and for each place where such business is carried on by or for such person, corporation or co-partnership, the sum of one thousand dollars."

Section 6065 provides as follows:

> "The phrase 'trafficking in intoxicating liquor' as used in this chapter and in the penal statutes of this state, means the buying or procuring and selling of intoxicating liquor otherwise than upon a prescription issued in good faith by a reputable physician in active practice, or for exclusively known mechanical, pharmaceutical or sacramental purposes. Such phrase does not include the manufacture of intoxicating liquor from the raw material, and the sale thereof at the manufactory, by the manufacturer thereof in quantities of one gallon or more at one time."

The question does not state whether the parties sell or drink the beer. If they sell it, either directly or indirectly, they are amenable to the tax, and it makes no differnce how many furnish the capital with which to buy it; but if they drink it, they are not trafficking in intoxicating liquor and, therefore, are not liable to the Aiken tax.

Replying to your second inquiry it strikes me the procedure outlined is a very feeble way to attempt to circumvent the law and to seek to make it appear that the beer is not sold directly. Our courts have repeatedly declared in the language of almost every enactment on the subject that the object of all tax laws on the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors was and is to provide against the evils resulting therefrom.

In the case of Ratterman vs. University Club, 3 C. C. 18, it was held that the furnishing of wines and other liquors by a social club to its members, if they paid for the same when received, such sums as were necessary to defray their cost, is a sale to such members and renders it liable to a tax under the Dow law.

I am unable to see any material difference between a person receiving payment in advance for a dollar ticket entitling the holder to "as much beer as he wants," and a person receiving payment on delivery from a person drinking as much as his capacity and pocketbook can stand; the person furnishing the beer in either instance is selling it and is engaging in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors and is liable for the payment of the Dow-Aiken tax.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

D 394.

DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSION—TRAVELING EXPENSES OF INSPECTORS IN HOME CITY.

The dairy and food commission has ample power to allow traveling expenses to inspectors, etc., and the question of the allowance of such claims is generally one of fact to be determined on common sense principles. Under this principle, it is easily possible to allow an inspector, under proper circumstances, such traveling expenses for meals, car fare, etc., while working in his home city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 26, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of recent date wherein you request my opinion as follows:

> "If the report in the newspapers of your opinion on the legality of employes of the state in charging for meals in their home cities is correct, this department is much interested in your ruling and desires to submit to you the following, which applies to the work of inspectors of this department in their home cities:
>
> "For instance, in Cleveland and Cincinnati, and no doubt other cities in the state, an inspector in the line of his duty may be working anywhere from five to fifteen miles from his home. Heretofore under former administrations of this department and down to the present time, it has been the custom to allow inspectors for meals in their home towns in such cases as those referred to above, for the reason that the expense to the state for car fare and loss of time would be far greater than the small amount spent for a noon-day lunch. We would be glad to have a prompt ruling from you as to whether this department should continue or discontinue the custom referred to, as expense accounts will have to be passed upon the fifteenth of this month."

I did make some rulings in relation to the legality of certain state employes of the departments of building and loan and public service commission charging for meals in their home towns, and these holdings apply to your inspectors under like conditions. The fact of the specific appropriation for traveling expenses of inspectors in your department, made by the general assembly, coupled with the powers given the dairy and food commissioner by section 371, General Code, to appoint inspectors and other subordinates, and further, the provisions of section 374 authorizing such inspectors, etc., to "be allowed such compensation as may be fixed by the commissioners" confer ample power on the commissioner to reimburse his inspectors, etc., for all "necessary traveling expense" incurred by them in the performance of their duties.

The duties of such inspectors, etc., are fixed by section 375 of the General Code, and these officers are under orders of the commissioners.

So it follows that the inspector goes to such particular post of duty as his superior officer assigns him. If that post of duty happens to be the city of the inspector's domicile, then, what may be his "traveling expenses" is a question of fact which must be determined by the peculiar circumstances of each case. If he is within easy reach of his home he certainly is not entitled to reimbursement for a meal taken down town, even though it should be convenient or time saving; likewise, he could not claim reimbursement in any event for lodging in the city of his domicile; but if his duty calls him to a distant part of his home city, or, as stated in your question "five to fifteen miles from his home," then, it is my opinion that he is entitled to reimbursement for meals taken at that point; his itemized expense account showing the place being sufficient evidence that it was while enroute and in the line of duty.

The question of "traveling expenses" must be determined by the application of common sense rules. No hard and fast regulation can be laid down; close fine spun distinctions need not be drawn, either for the purpose of defeating a claim for reimbursement or for charging to the state an expense not contemplated by the term "traveling expenses."

The commissioner, in the exercise of his judgment, can soon determine from an inspection of an itemized expense account what would or would not be a proper charge of such an item as "traveling expense." The interest of the state should be closely safeguarded, yet, it should be remembered that since the laborer is worthy of his hire he is entitled to all that would reasonably come under the term "traveling expenses."

I enclose copies of opinions to the building and loan department and the public service department, which may be of assistance to you.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

477.

TAXES AND TAXATION—DOW-AIKEN TAX—ALLOWANCE OF REFUNDER WHEN PROCEEDING AGAINST THE REALTY AFTER DISCONTINUANCE OF BUSINESS.

In proceedings for the satisfaction of the Dow-Aiken tax against the realty upon which intoxicating liquors have been sold by a tenant of the owner thereof, but which traffic has been discontinued, the auditor is obliged to allow the same refunder which section 6074 allows to a party who has paid his tax and discontinues the business.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 29, 1911.

HON. S. E. STRODE, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of Nov. 20th, wherein you state:

> "The auditor of Clark county has submitted to this department a question relating to the collection of the Aiken tax in the case as follows:
>
> "On evidence furnished by an inspector of this department one was certified to the county auditor for the collection of the Aiken tax. When the treasurer went to the street number, where the trafficking in intoxicating liquors was supposed to be conducted, he found that the woman was running a boarding house and had discontinued the selling of intoxicants. The treasurer found no chattel property against which to levy, therefore he certified the collection of the Aiken tax against the realty. Now, the question is (the trafficking in intoxicants having been discontinued) is the realty owner entitled to a refunder as if he occupied the same position as a dealer or trafficking in intoxicants? Of course, it must be established to the satisfaction of the treasurer that the trafficking has been discontinued."

While section 6074, General Code, provides that:

> "When a person, company, corporation or co-partnership, engaged in such business, has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment and afterward discontinues such business, the county auditor, upon being satisfied thereof, shall issue to such person, corporation or co-partnership a refunding order for a proportionate amount of such assessment so paid, but the amount of such assessment so retained shall not be less than two hundred dollars unless such discontinuance of business has been caused by an election under a local option law or a lawful finding of a mayor or judge on a petition filed in a residence district as provided in this chapter, in which case the appropriate amount of such tax shall be refunded in full."

and while a strict reading of the section provides only for refunders to a person, corporation or co-partnership which has been assessed and has paid the full amount of the assessment, still since under section 6071 the tax is upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, it is only proper, just and right that the tax be retained for that time only which a business was continued.

In the case of Simpson vs. Service, Auditor, et al, reported in the 3d circuit court reports at page 433, the auditor had placed upon the assessment duplicate the amount of the tax against a landlord, the tenant having been engaged in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors. The tenant satisfied the auditor of the time when the business was discontinued and the landlord was seeking to take advantage of the right to a refunder for the proportionate part of the unused tax. The court at page 440 said:

> "The dealer having discontinued the business on December 2, 1887 was, and therefore plaintiff was, entitled to a refunder of so much of said sum of $300 as the period between December 2, 1887, and the fourth Monday of May, 1888, bears to the period between November 1st, 1887 and the fourth Monday of May. The auditor having refused this, and threatening to enforce the payment of the whole assessment with penalty, the plaintiff was entitled to relief."

This is a direct holding that the landlord, who was the plaintiff in error, stepped into the shoes of his tenant who had been engaged in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors and on account of whose failure to pay the tax the property of the landlord was rendered liable. This view of the law finds support in the great principle of natural justice and common honesty by which the conduct of the state as well as the conduct of individuals should be guided.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that when the authorities are satisfied that the business has been discontinued, a refunder can be granted to the owner of the property against which the tax is levied in the same manner as a refunder would lie to the party who, having paid his tax, discontinues the business.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

(To the State Commissioner of Common Schools)

21.

SCHOOL ELECTIONS—BOND ELECTION—RETURNS TO CLERK OF BOARD OF EDUCATION—FIRST CANVASS OF RETURNS BY BOARD.

From the language of relative statutory sections, and from the fact that the subject is treated under the head of schools, and from the further fact that the question is a purely local one, affecting only the voters of the school district in which it is held, a special election held upon the question of issuing bonds for school purposes is to be considered a school election under section 5120, and returns thereof should be made to the clerk of the board of education of the district, and such board is the authority that shall first canvass said returns.

January 14, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 11, 1911, in which you ask the following question:

> "In the case of special elections, held for the purpose of voting on the question of issuing bonds for school purposes, what authority should first canvass the returns from the different wards or precincts?"

Section 8120 of the General Code provides:

> "In school elections, the returns shall be made by the judges and clerks of each precinct to the clerk of the board of education of the district, not less than five days after the election. Such board shall canvass such returns at a meeting to be held on the second Monday after the election, and the result thereof shall be entered upon the records of the board."

Therefore the sole question to be determined in order to answer your inquiry is, whether a special election, held for the purpose of voting on the question of issuing bonds for school purposes, is a school election.

Section 7688 of the General Code is as follows:

> "When the board of education of any school district determines that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses, to complete a partially built school house, to enlarge, repair or furnish a school house, or to do any or all of such things, that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-six hundred and thirty are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary, the board shall make as estimate of the probable amount of money required for such purpose or purposes and at a general election or special election called for that purpose, submit to the electors of the district the question of the issuing of bonds for the amount so estimated. Notices of the election required herein shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections."

This section is the authority for submitting the question as to issuing bonds at a general election or a special election called for that purpose.

Now, the last clause of the above section, number 7688, provides that notices of the election shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections.

The section of the General Code which provides for the notice to be given for school elections is section 4832 and reads as follows:

> "The clerk of each board of education shall publish a notice of all school elections in a newspaper of general circulation in the district or post written or printed notices thereof in five public places in the district at least ten days before the holding of such election. Such notices shall specify the time and place of the election, the number of members of the board of education to be elected, and the term for which they are to be elected, or the nature of the question to be voted upon."

Especial attention is called to the last paragraph of this section and the last clause of said paragraph, to wit:

> "Such notices shall specify the time and place of the election, the number of the members of the board of education to be elected, and the term for which they are to be elected, or the nature of the question to be voted upon."

From the foregoing sections and the fact that the authority for an election of this character is found only in the school acts, and the further fact that the question is a purely local one affecting only the voters of the school district in which it is held, and that such elections are for school purposes only; I am of opinion that such an election is a school election, and therefore, under section 5120 and returns should be made to the clerk of the board of education of the district, and such board of education is the authority that shall first canvass said returns.

In support of the view given above I further call your attention to the opinion of Hon. L. C. Laylin, as secretary of the state of Ohio, rendered June 18th, 1903, which is as follows:

> "The election laws provide that all public elections shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of the ballot laws. I am of the opinion that, where a board of education of a city has ordered a special election at which a proposition for the construction of a new building or the issue of bonds is submitted to the voters of the school district, such election should be conducted under the supervision of the deputy state supervisors of elections and should be held at the regular voting precincts of the school district; that the returns of such election should be made by the judges and clerks of the several precincts to the clerk of the school district, and that the expenses of the conduct of such election should be borne by the school district."

This opinion bears date June 18, 1903, and is upon the same question.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

30.

FRATERNITIES IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS—CRIMINAL PROVISION—ENFORCEMENT OF PENALTY—CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

Section 12906, General Code, is a criminal statute and must be strictly construed, and unless a pupil of the public schools joins a "fraternity, sorority or like society, which is composed or made up of pupils of the public schools," the section does not apply.

The penalty provided for can be enforced only by proper prosecution and conviction through criminal procedure and may not be assessed by the board of education.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 11th, 1911, in which you ask, first:

> "Do 'fraternities' that admit to membership pupils from the high school as well as those who have not attended the high school, or even the public school, come within the provisions and penalties of sections 12906, 12907, 12908, 12909 (pp. 95 and 96) of the Ohio School Laws?"

Section 12906 of the General Code is as follows:

> "Whoever, being a pupil of the public schools, organizes, joins or belongs to a fraternity, sorority or other like society composed of or made up of pupils of the public schools, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars for each offense."

It will be observed that this section applies to a pupil in the public schools who "organizes, joins or belongs to a fraternity * * * composed of or made up of pupils of the public schools." The sections following contain the same language as to the character of the fraternity, and in each of them the words are "composed of and made up of pupils of the public schools."

These provisions do not apply to the fraternities themselves, but to the pupils in the public schools and, therefore, as these statutes are criminal in their nature they must be strictly construed, and it would follow that unless the fraternity, sorority or like society is composed or made up of pupils of the public schools, the sections would not apply; that is, if the fraternities, sororities or societies are composed of or made up of, in whole or in part, of persons other than pupils of the public schools, a pupil joining such a fraternity or society would not be liable for so doing.

Your second question is:

> "Can the penalty provided in said law for illegal membership in the fraternity mentioned in said section, be assessed by the board of education?"

The penalty or penalties provided for by said sections, to wit: 12906, etc., are criminal in their character, and a fine for an offense cannot, therefore, be assessed by the board of education.

Your third question is:

"How may such fines be assessed?"

The only way in which the penalty provided by said sections can be assessed is by proper prosecution and conviction under the acts relating to criminal procedure.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

76.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—BOND ELECTION FOR ERECTION OF SCHOOL BUILDING AND PURCHASE OF SITE.

The intention of 7625, General Code, is clearly expressed therein, to comprise within its terms the authority to call for an election upon the question of issuing bonds for the erection of a school house as well as for the purpose of a site for such purpose.

January 27, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of January 26th, 1911, requesting my construction of section 7625 of the General Code on the question of the power of the board of education under said section to call for an election for the purpose of voting on a bond issue to erect a school house on a site which the board of education already owns. The particular point to which you call attention is that it has been claimed to you that this section only gives the power for purchasing a site or sites upon which to erect a school house or houses, and gives no power to erect a school house or houses.

Section 7625 reads as follows:

> "When the board of education of any school district determines that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses, to complete a partially built school house, to enlarge, repair, or furnish a school house, or to do any or all of such things, that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-six hundred and thirty, are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary, the board shall make an estimate of the probable amount of money required for such purpose or purposes and at a general election or special election called for that purpose, submit to the electors of the district the question of the issuing of bonds for the amount so estimated. Notices of the election required herein shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections."

I suppose the contention has arisen solely as to the construction of the first clause of said section to wit: "When the board of education of any school district determines * * * that it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses" it being claimed that because there is no comma after the word "sites" the clause shall be taken to give authority only for the purchase of a site or sites.

It seems to me that any such construction is doing great violence to the plain and unambiguous meaning of this statute and to the words used.

The object of judicial investigation in the construction of a statute is to ascertain and give effect to the intent of the legislature. If the provisions are ambiguous or the meaning is doubtful punctuation may be changed or disregarded; words transposed, or those necessary to a clear understanding and manifestly intended, inserted. But this intent is to be sought first of all in the language employed; if the words are free from ambiguity and express clearly and distinctly the sense of the law making body there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation. The statute should be held to mean what it plainly expresses, and there is no room left for construction. See 66 O. S. 621.

To construe section 7625 of the General Code as meaning that a board of education has the power, under it, to purchase a site or sites, but not to erect a school house or houses, would require that the words "upon which" be inserted after the word "sites." As the statute reads there is no necessity whatever for inserting these words, and their insertion would defeat the intention of the legislature as expressed. The meaning is clear: it might possibly be made clearer by inserting a comma after the word "sites," but I doubt, even if the comma were inserted, that the meaning would be any clearer. The statute reads "to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses * * * or to do any or all of such things." Now, what are any or all of such things provided for in the statute? Certainly there can be no doubt as to this. One is to purchase a site, one is to erect a school house, another is to complete a partially built school house, etc.

Therefore, it seems to me that this statute is so clear and unambiguous that it requires no construction, and it would be both contrary to the language of the statute itself and to the intention of the legislature, clearly expressed, to construe it in any other manner than above indicated.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

83.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS' HOME AND BOARD OF EDUCATION — NO AUTHORITY TO JOINTLY BUILD A SCHOOL BUILDING.

There is no statutory authority for the joint building of a school by the board of education of a school district and the trustees of an orphans' home in the same district for the accommodation of the pupils of the school district and those of the orphans' home.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 30, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of January 21st, which is as follows:

> "Whether in a certain school district where a new school building is needed, and near which the orphans' home of the same county is located, and said orphans' home is crowded beyond its capacity for admitting its children, the directors of the home and the board of education of the school district can jointly erect a building to accommodate both the pupils of the orphans' home and the school district, and whether such building can be erected upon the grounds of the school district and the charge and management of the same be vested in the board of education of the school district?"

The sections of the General Code which provide for schools for children who are inmates of children's or orphans' homes are as follows:

"Section 7676. The board of any district in which a children's home or orphans' asylum is established by law or in which a county infirmary is established, when requested by the board of trustees of such children's home, orphans' asylum or the directors of such infirmary, shall establish a separate school in such home, asylum or infirmary, so as to afford to the children therein, as far as practicable, the advantages and privileges of a common school education. Such schools at infirmaries must be continued in operation each year until the share of all the school funds of the district belonging to such children, on the basis of the enumeration, is expended, and at such homes and asylums not less than forty-four weeks. If the distributive share of school funds to which the school as such home or asylum is entitled by the enumeration of children in the institution is not sufficient to continue the schools for that length of time, the deficiency shall be paid out of the funds of the institution.

"Section 7677. All schools so established in any such home, asylum or infirmary, shall be under the control and management of the respective board of trustees or directors of such institutions, which boards in such control and management so far as practicable shall be subject to the same laws that boards of education and other school officers are who have charge of the common schools of such district.

"Section 7678. In the establishment of such schools the commissioners of the county in which such children's home, orphans' asylum or county infirmary is established, shall provide the necessary school room or rooms, furniture, fuel, apparatus and books, the cost of which for such schools must be paid out of the funds provided for such institution. The board of education shall incur no expense in supporting such schools."

These sections all plainly indicate that such schools shall be established in such children's home or orphans' asylum. Therefore, as these are the only sections that provide for such books I find no authority in the statutes for the trustees of the home and the board of education of the school district or township entering into any such an arrangement as above specified. Such an arrangement or undertaking, if undoubtedly for the benefit of the public and of the pupils of the township and the children in the home, might possibly be upheld, if actually carried into effect, but upon this point I express no opinion.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

126.

MONROE HIGH SCHOOL—CREATION BY SPECIAL ACT UNCONSTITUTIONAL—DE FACTO HIGH SCHOOL.

Inasmuch as the legislature is without power to pass special acts with reference to matters which may be covered by general laws and as the act re-establishing special school districts has on this ground been adjudicated unconstitutional, the Monroe high school having been created by such a special act is not a legal high school but a de facto high school only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have recently referred to me an inquiry from residents and taxpayers who reside in Monroe high school district. These gentlemen make the following statement and inquiry:

> "In 1880, April 5th, the general assembly passed a special act, creating a special high school district composed of parts of Lemon township, Butler county, Ohio, and Liberty township said county, together with a part of Turtle Creek township, Warren county, Ohio, to be known as the Monroe high school. This act is found in vol. 77 of Ohio laws, page 399.
>
> "Now we wish you would call the attention of the attorney general to this act, and the decisions upon this subject, especially to State vs. Spellmire, 67 O. S. 77, and the decisions therein cited.
>
> "Noting that in this act in (95 O.L. 743) upon which the Spellmire case is decided, make no provisions, for an election to create the special district; while in the act creating the Monroe high school it has a provision in the first section in language as follows:
>
> " 'Provided however that a majority of the electors within said territory shall vote in favor of said special school district, at an election to be held in manner following'—then details the plains and conditions of the election.
>
> "Query: Is said Monroe high school a legal high school?"

The above case of State vs. Spellmire, 67 O. S. 77 lays down the rule that:

> "Whenever a law of a general nature having a uniform operation throughout the state, can be made fully to cover and provide for any given subject matter, the legislation, as to such subject matter, must be by general laws, and local or special laws cannot be constitutionally enacted as to such subject matter."

Subsequent to this decision, the legislature on April 25, 1904 (97 O. L. 334) passed "an act to provide for the organization of the common schools of the state of Ohio, and to amend, repeal and supplement certain sections of the Revised Statutes and laws of Ohio herein named," which was embodied in the Revised Statutes, and one of which sections sought to re-establish the special school districts then existing. (Sec. 3928.)

Barton vs. State, 73 O. S. 51, declared this provision unconstitutional "in so far as they declare to be legal and valid special school districts, all special school districts which have been created under the provisions of special acts of the general assembly." This section is now section 4734 of the General Code.

It is my opinion therefore, that the Monroe high schoal is not a legal high school. It is a de facto high school only.

Yours very truly,

Attorney General.

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

128.

COUNTY BOARD OF TEACHERS' EXAMINERS—EXAMINATION ON SATURDAY CONSTITUTIONAL—MANDATORY PROVISION OF STATUTE.

Section 7817, General Code, providing that examination of applicants for teachers' certificates shall be held on the first Saturday of every month, does not interfere with rights of conscience and therefore, is not inconsistent with article 1, section 7 of the constitution.

The provisions of the aforesaid statute are mandatory and a departure therefrom by holding examinations on other days will not be permitted.

February 23, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 17th you state:

> "Section 7817, G. C., provides that each county board of examiners shall hold an examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates on the first Saturday of every month of the year. Section 7834, G. C., provides for the remuneration of said board of county examiners.
>
> "Query: Would it be legal for any county board of school examiners to hold one or more extra examinations, and if so may the examiners be paid legally for their services in conducting extra examination or examinations? If they may receive pay for same, will their fee be the same as described in said section 7834?"

Inclosed in your communication of the above date is a letter as follows:

> "ROCKFORD, OHIO, Feb. 7th, 1911.
>
> "HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, Columbus, Ohio.
>
> "DEAR SIR:—Enclosed you will find request of Miss Watts. She objects to taking the examination on a Saturday because of religious convictions. We held a special examination last year, some time in June. Will her request be granted?
>
> "Yours truly,
>
> "S. Cotterman, Clk."

Section 7817 of the General Code provides for meetings before the county board of examiners and is as follows:

> "Each board shall hold public meetings for the examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates on the first Saturday of every month of the year, unless Saturday falls on a legal holiday, in which case, it must be held on the succeeding Saturday, at such place or places within the county as, in the opinion of the board, best will accommodate the greatest number of applicants. Notice thereof shall be published in two weekly newspapers of different politics printed in the county, if two papers thus are published, if not, then a publication in one only is required. In no case shall the board hold any private examination or antedate any certificate."

Section 7819 of the General Code provides for a uniform system of examination as follows:

"The questions for all county teachers' examination, shall be prepared and printed under the direction of the state commissioner of common schools. A sufficient number of lists must be sent, under seal, to the clerks of such board of examiners not less than five days before each examination, such seal to be broken at the time of the examination at which they are to be used, in the presence of the applicants and a majority of the members of the examining board."

Section 7834 of the General Code provides for the compensation of the board and is as follows:

"Each member of the county board of school examiners is entitled to receive ten dollars for each examination of fifty applicants or less, fourteen dollars for each examination of more than fifty applicants and less than one hundred, eighteen dollars for each examination of one hundred applicants and less than one hundred and fifty, twenty-two dollars for each examination of one hundred and fifty applicants and less than two hundred, and four dollars for each additional fifty applicants, or fraction thereof, to be paid out of the county treasury on the order of the county auditor. Books, blanks, and stationery required by the board shall be furnished by the county auditor."

Article 1, section 7, of the constitution of Ohio contains the following provision:

"And no preference shall be given by law to any religious society; nor shall any interference with the rights of conscience be permitted."

There are no statutory provisions granting power to the county board of examiners to hold any special examinations, and the statute itself (section 7817, G. C., above set forth) expressly prohibits private examinations.

In my view of the law the above statute, section 7817, General Code, in no way interferes with the right of conscience, but simply prescribes the day on which applicants for county teachers' certificates shall be examined and the manner of giving notice thereof.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the provisions of section 7817 are mandatory on the board of county examiners, and that it has no power or authority of law to hold any meeting for examinations for applicants for county teachers' certificates at any other time or times than is specified in said section; and that any relief from the situation in which the teacher in question finds herself lies with the legislature.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

142.

VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT ADVANCING TO CITY SCHOOL DISTRICT BY FEDERAL CENSUS—ELECTION OF SUCCESSORS—FIXING OF MEMBERSHIP—TERM OF TEACHERS AND SUPERINTENDENT CONTINUES.

When a village school district, by reason of the last federal census, advances to a city school district, the members of the board of education of the old village district, under sections 4686 and 4700, General Code, shall decide the number of members which shall compose the city board of education.

The successors of the members of the board of education in such instance, shall be elected at the next annual election for school board members.

A superintendent or teacher who had been elected for a legal term of years by said village board, may hold for said term under the city school district regime.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 20, 1911, you have submitted to me several questions in regard to boards of education in municipalities which have been advanced from villages to cities, as follows:

> "When a village, which under the last federal census has been advanced to a city, becomes a city school district, what power decides the number of members which shall compose said city board of education?"

Section 4686 provides:

> "When a village is advanced to a city, the village school district shall thereby become a city school district. * * * The members of the board of education in village school districts that are advanced to city school districts. * * * shall continue in office until succeeded by the members of the board of education of the new district, who shall be elected at the next succeeding annual election for school board members."

Section 4698, General Code, is as follows:

> "In city school districts which at the last federal census contained a population of less than fifty thousand persons, the board of education shall consist of not less than three members nor more than seven members, elected at large by the qualified electors of such districts."

Section 4700, General Code, is in part as follows:

> "The board of education in each city school district, by resolution, shall fix within the limits so prescribed the number of members of the board of education, to be elected at large, and the number of members of the board to be elected by city districts."

It is my opinion that under the above sections the board of education of the village school district, which by reason of said village being advanced to a city, continues to act as the board of education in the city school district, shall decide the number of members which shall compose the city board of education.

"2. When shall the successors of the members of the village board of education be elected?"

It is my opinion that under the provisions of section 4686, supra, the successors of the members of the village board of education are to be elected at the next annual election for school board members.

"3. Can a superintendent or teacher who had been elected for a term of years by said village board of education before it was advanced to a city, hold said position for the term for which he was elected by said village board of education?"

Section 7705, General Code, provides:

"The board of education of each village, township and special school district may appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent, and to employ the teachers of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than three school years, to begin within four months of the date of appointment. But nothing herein shall prevent two or more districts uniting and appointing the same person as superintendent."

It is my opinion that a superintendent or teacher who has been appointed under the provisions of the above section can hold said position for the term for which he was appointed by the village board of education.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

147.

BOARD OF EDUCATION, TOWNSHIP—FAILURE TO ORGANIZE—LEGALITY OF OFFICIAL ACTS OF BOARD HOLDING OVER—DUTIES OF BOARD.

When a township board of education did not organize as required on the first Monday in January, and under the board which held over an election to issue bonds was carried, the election is valid as is every action of said board up to the time of the organization as required by section 4747, General Code.

The board may and should, nevertheless, organize as soon as possible, despite their failure to do so within the stipulated time.

March 4, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 17th you state:

"A township board of education did not organize on the first Monday in January, 1911, as provided in section 4747, General Code. All the officers, including the clerk, are 'holding over' from the organization the first Monday in January, 1910. Under the direction of this board an election was held February 11, 1911, on the proposition to issue bonds to build additional rooms to the school building. The bond issue carried.

"Query: (1) Is the above described election legal and are the bonds issued as the result of said election of any value?

"(2) Should the above described officers of the board of education continue to serve in their several capacities or should the board at this time proceed with the reorganization?"

Section 4747, General Code, provides:

"The board of education of each school district shall organize on the first Monday of January after the election of member of such board. One member of the board shall be elected president, one as vice president and in township school districts the clerk of the township shall be clerk of the board. The president and vice president shall serve for a term of one year and the clerk for a term not to exceed two years. In all other districts a person who may or may not be a member of the board shall be elected clerk. The board shall fix the time of holding its regular meetings."

Section 8, General Code, provides:

"A person holding an office or public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws."

In answer to the first inquiry above set forth would state that under the facts above given a township board of education having failed to organize under section 4747, General Code, the officers thereof, under section 8, General Code, hold over until their successors are elected and qualified.

Therefore, my opinion is, that the above described election of February 11, 1911, on the proposition to issue bonds is legal, and that the bonds issued as a result thereof are valid bonds.

In answer to your second question would state that said board of education not having organized as provided under section 4747, General Code, should proceed to do so at once.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

152.

DISMISSAL OF TREASURER OF SCHOOL BOARD UPON ESTABLISHMENT OF A DEPOSITORY—NO FURTHER LIABILITY TO TREASURER FOR COMPENSATION—INDEFINITE TERM OF OFFICE.

Though the office of the township treasurer is of definite duration, the office of the same individual as treasurer of the school board is of indefinite duration and may be terminated at any time by the school board through the establishment of a depository.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 17th you state:

> "A township board of education has provided a depository for the school funds, as provided in section 7604, G. C. By resolution they dispensed with their treasurer and required the clerk of the board to perform said treasurer's duties as provided in section 4782, G. C."

and you ask:

> "Query: Does section 4782, G. C., conflict with section 4763, G. C., to the extent that a board of education may not dispense with their treasurer? If it does not, may the treasurer who was acting under authority of section 4763, compel said board of education to pay him for services from the time since the clerk assumed the office, as provided under section 4782?"

Section 4763 provides in part as follows:

> "In each city, village and township school district, the treasurer of the city, village and township funds, respectively, shall be the treasurer of the school funds."

Section 4781 provides as follows:

> "The board of education of each school district shall fix the compensation of its clerk and treasurer, which shall be paid from the contingent fund of the district. If they are paid annually, the order for the payment of their salaries shall not be drawn until they present to the board of education a certificate from the county auditor stating that all reports required by law have been filed in his office. If the clerk and treasurer are paid semi-annually, quarterly, or monthly, the last payment on their salaries previous to August thirty-first, must not be made until all reports required by law have been filed with the county auditor and his certificate presented to the board of education as required herein."

Section 4782 provides as follows:

> "When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, may dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys, belonging to such school district. In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

Section 4782, General Code, is the code revision of section 4042a, Revised Statutes, passed and approved April 27, 1908.

When the township treasurer was elected he became by virtue of his election to said office the treasurer of the school funds. His office as township treasurer was for a fixed duration, but his duties as treasurer of the school funds was of indefinite duration, to wit: until dispensed with by the board of education upon the establishment of a depository.

It is my opinion that section 4782, General Code, does not conflict with section 4763, General Code, to the extent that such board of education may not dispense with their treasurer. When the towship treasurer was elected he was, or should have been, aware that his duties as treasurer of the school fund were of indefinite duration, and that his services could be dispensed with at any time by a majority vote of the board of education upon a depository for the school funds moneys being provided for.

I am, therefore, of opinion that although section 4781 providing for the compensation of the treasurer of the school funds provides for either annual, semi-annual, quarterly or monthly payments, that upon the board of education dispensing with the services of such treasurer that he cannot compel said board of education to pay him for services after the time that his services are so dispensed with.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

177.

COMMON SCHOOL FUND—IRREDUCIBLE DEBT OF STATE—DISPOSITION OF FUND DEVISED.

When a devisor leaves a certain fund for the use of the common school fund, such fund must be paid over to the state, and become vested in the "common school fund." Through section 7580, General Code, such moneys then become a part of the "irreducible debt" of the state upon which shall be paid 6% interest per annum to be applied under section 7581, General Code, according to the intention of the devisor.

March 13, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your recent favor wherein your state:

"In Mt. Pleasant township, Jefferson county, a Mr. Rex. Patterson about sixty years ago made a will, one item of which read as follows: 'The balance of my estate, real and personal, I give and devise to the township of Mt. Pleasant for the use of the common schools therein; the principal of which I hereby authorize my executors hereinafter named to place in some permanent fund and the interest thereof to be paid annually into the common school fund of the said township of Mt. Pleasant forever, the principal to remain forever as a permanent fund for the purposes above specified.'

"Upon the settlement of the estate the Mt. Pleasant special fund was about $5,200.00, which amount has been held by different individuals since that time, and upon which interest ranging from three to five per cent. has been paid to school officials.

"The provisions of said will have never been carried out, because the fund has never been placed in any permanent form. The prosecuting attorney purposes to have an executor de bonus non appointed immediately, and desires him to carry into effect the intent of said will."

and you ask:

"Query: Does section 7581, G. C., apply to this case, and is the state under obligation to take this money and pay the six per cent. income therefrom, to the Mt. Pleasant district according to the intent of the grantor?"

Section 7580 of the General Code provides:

"The common school fund shall constitute an irreducible debt of that state, on which it shall pay interest annually, at the rate of six per cent. per annum, to be computed for the calendar year, the first computation on any payment of principal hereafter made to be from the time of payment to and including the thirty-first day of December next succeeding. The auditor of state shall keep an account of the fund, and of the interest which accrues thereon, in a book or books to be provided for the purpose, with each original surveyed township and other district of country to which any part of the fund belongs, crediting each with its share of the fund, and showing the amount of interest thereon which accrues and the amount which is disbursed annually to each."

Section 7581 of the General Code provides:

"When any grant or devise of land, or donation or bequest of money or other personal property, is made to the state, or to any person, or otherwise, in trust for the common school fund, it shall become vested in such fund. When the money arising therefrom is paid into the state treasury, proper accounts thereof must be kept by the auditor of state, and the interest accruing therefrom shall be applied according to the intent of the grantor, donor, or devisor."

Section 7581 of the General Code was in force as far back as March 2d, 1831, and is to be found in 29 Ohio Laws 425, section 5, and is in the following language:

"That whenever any donation or devise shall be made, by gift, grant, last will and testament, or in any other manner whatever, of any estate, either real, personal or mixed, to the state of Ohio, or to any person, or otherwise, in trust for the said common school fund, by any individual, body politic or corporate, the same shall be vested in said common school fund; and whenever the moneys arising from such gift, grant or devise, shall be paid into the state treasury, the proper accounts thereof, shall be kept, and the interest therefrom shall be appropriated according to the intent and design of such donor, grantor, or devisor."

You state that Mr. Patterson made the will in question about sixty years ago. So that the above section in the 29th Ohio Laws applies.

It is my opinion that the fund left by Mr. Patterson "for the use of the common school fund" became vested in the common school fund and that said money should be paid over to the state under section 7581, and becomes, under section 7580, a part of the irreducible debt of the state and receive interest at the rate of 6% per annum. Section 7581 provides that the interest accruing from this fund shall be applied according to the intent of the devisor.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

294.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—POWER TO BORROW MONEY BY FUNDING EXISTING DEBTS—SALARY OF TEACHER.

The board of education under sections 5656 and 5658, G. C., may fund valid existing and binding indebtedness to meet current binding obligations which they are unable to pay by reason of the limits of taxation.

The salary of a teacher is such a binding obligation as to be within this rule.

March 30, 1911.

HON. J. W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under recent date you submitted to me a letter addressed to your department as follows:

"The board of education of Jefferson township, Scioto county, has applied to me for a loan of $453.00 for the purpose of making final payment to the school teachers of that county. It seems that the board will require that much to pay all the teachers. They have maintained an eight months school, pay the teachers $40.00 per month, and levied 9 mills. I presume they will get state aid in August from which they will pay the amount of the proposed loan. Will you be kind enough to advise me whether the board can legally make this loan or not. It seems quite clear to me that we ought to aid them if possible.

"I would appreciate an early reply as I am expecting the clerk in every day.

"Yours truly,
"Henry Bannon."

and you ask the following:

> "If we find this board is entitled to state aid, may they legally borrow this money?"

The employment of a teacher constitutes a contract between the board of education and the teacher, and the teacher having performed his part of said contract is entitled to his compensation for such services and the sum so due is an indebtedness of the board of education.

Section 5656, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "* * * * the board of education of a school district * * * for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * district * * * is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money * * * so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time, and at the rate of interest that said * * * board * * * deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

Section 5658, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "No indebtedness of a * * * school district * * * shall be funded * * * unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such * * * school district * * * by a formal resolution of the * * * board of education * * *. Such resolution shall state the amount of the existing indebtedness to be funded, * * * the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of their maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear and the place of payment of principal and interest."

In the case of Bower vs. Board of Education, 18 Ohio Circuit Court Reports 624 (18th Circuit Decisions 624) the second syllabus is as follows:

> "Money borrowed by a board of education on its note as such, used for the purpose of meeting accruing obligations to teachers, janitors, etc., must be repaid, and its repayment may not be enjoined on the ground that the statutory requirements respecting resolutions and certificates have not been complied with, because of the latter part of Rev. Stat. 2834b (Lan. 4286), commencing with the words, 'provided that' and the principles declared in State vs. Van Buren Tp. (Bd. of Ed.) 5 Circ. Dec. 477 (11 R. 41)."

As the payment of salaries of teachers is an obligation binding upon the board of education and if not paid when due the amount due on such salaries is entitled to legal interest until paid, and as the purpose of borrowing the money as set forth in the above letter is solely for the purpose of paying such salaries I am of opinion that such board of education can fund said indebtedness under section 5656, General Code, by borrowing such money. The language of Hitchcock, J., in the case of Bank of Chillicothe vs. Mayor, 7 Ohio Reports, (part 11) page 35, decided in 1836 is especially applicable here. In that case the judge said:

> "I cannot see the great difference whether a corporation shall be indebted to A. for labor in repairing streets or buildings; or to B. for money borrowed to pay A. for this same labor. The moral obligation to pay would be the same in either case."

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 229.

CITY SCHOOL DISTRICTS—FEDERAL CENSUS—DISTRICTING AND REDISTRICTING—EFFECT UPON TERM OF MEMBERS OF BOARD OF EDUCATION.

When the federal census shows a city to have passed the 50,000 population mark and the city school district consequently passes from the first to the second class, it is necessary, under section 4703, General Code, to elect all the members of the board of the second class and the term of the members of the board under the first class regime shall be cut off, upon the induction into office of said board of the second class.

The contrary rule prevails under section 4707, General Code, when a city school district of the second class is redistricted, and the terms of members shall not be affected thereby.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 24, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to use a letter as follows:

"The city of Akron has, by the last census report, passed the 50,000 mark in population, and will, therefore, be governed by sections 4699 and 4705 of the General Code in the matter of the membership and the election of the next board of education.

"The present board contains 7 members elected at large. The terms of three of them expire this year and the other four in two years. Now in complying with the law the question of what to do with the four members who hold over for two years naturally arises. The law seems to imply that in fixing the number of members at large and by subdistricts, all members will have to be elected this fall and that none will hold over, unless they hold over as extra members for two years. To put the case a little plainer, perhaps, suppose it should be decided to have seven members, four elected by subdistricts and three at large or vice versa, would seven new members have to be elected and the four present members hold over for two years, making eleven members for that time and seven thereafter, or would the readjustment of the matter compel an election of all members and a termination of the present board with this year?"

Section 4698 of the General Code provides as follows:

"In city school districts which at the last federal census contained a population of less than fifty thousand persons, the board of education shall consist of not less than three members nor more than seven members, elected at large by the qualified electors of such district."

Section 4699 of the General Code provides as follows:

"In city school districts which at the last federal census contained a population of fifty thousand persons or over, the board of education shall consist of not less than two members nor more than seven members, elected at large by the qualified electors of the school district and of not less than two members nor more than thirty members elected from subdistricts by the qualified electors of their respective subdistricts."

Section 4700, General Code, provides in part as follows:

"The board of education of each city school district, by resolution shall fix within the limits so prescribed the number of members of the board of education, to be elected at large, and the number of members of the board to be elected by city districts. At the same time, the board shall subdivide such city school district into subdivisions equal in number to the number of members of the board of education in the district, who are to be elected from subdistricts therein so established. * * *"

Section 4701, General Code, provides as follows:

"Within three months after the official announcement of the result of each succeeding federal census, the board of education of each such city school district shall redistrict such district into subdistricts in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. If the board of education of any such district fails to district or redistrict, as herein required, then upon application of the president of the board of education, the state commissioner of common schools shall forthwith district or redistrict such city school district, subject to the requirements of this chapter."

Section 4703 of the General Code provides as follows:

"In city school districts, at the first election, all members of the board of education at large shall be elected for terms as follows: If there are but two members of the board of education elected at large, one shall be elected for two years and one for four years. If there are more than two, and the number thereof is divisible by two, the one-half of such board shall be elected for two years and one half for four years, but, if the whole number of members elected at large is not divisible by two, the number to be elected for two years shall be the quotient obtained by dividing the whole number to be elected at large less one by two, and the remaining members shall be elected for four years. At the expiration of their respective terms, their successors shall be elected for four years."

It is apparent from a reading of sections 4698 and 4699, supra, that it is the intention of the general assembly to provide under the head of "city school districts" for two distinct classes of city school districts, first, those having a population of less than 50,000, hereinafter called the first class, and, second, those having a population of 50,000 persons or over, hereinafter called the second class.

Section 4700, supra, provides what shall be done when a city school district passes from the first to the second class; and section 4701, supra, provides that if the provisions of section 4700, supra, are not carried out within the time limited the state commissioner of schools shall proceed to carry such provisions into effect.

While it may be noticed that the first sentence of section 4701 only uses the word "redistrict," yet in order to give effect to the succeeding sentence of such section, it is believed that the word "redistrict" should be read "district or redistrict."

Section 4703, supra, provides that at the first election after a school district has been redistricted all of the members of the board of education at large shall be elected.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the clear meaning of the general assembly is that when a city school district passes from the first class to the second class it is necessary at the next succeeding election for members of the board of education to elect all the members of the board of such second class, and that the term of the members of the first class shall cease upon the induction into office of said board of the second class.

Section 4745 of the General Code reads as follows:

> "The terms of office of members of each board of education shall begin on the first Monday in January after their election, and each such officer shall hold his office four years and until his successor is elected and qualified."

But as this is a general provision of law it must yield to the special provisions of section 4703, supra, which declares that all of the members must be elected at the first election next succeeding each federal census.

Section 4707 of the General Code provides:

> "The redistricting of a city school district shall not affect the membership of the then existing board of education in such district. All members thereof shall continue to serve for the full term for which they were elected. After the expiration of such terms, the election of members of the board of education from subdistricts shall be by the subdistricts as redistricted."

This provision of law relates solely to the redistricting of city school districts and not to the original districting of a city school district. In fact by providing that a redistricting of a city school district shall not affect the membership of the then existing board of education of such district, the intention of the general assembly is clear, that when a city school district passes from the first class to the second class, the membership of the then existing board shall cease.

It is my opinion, therefore, that as the city of Akron has passed into a city school district of the second class, a readjustment of the matter compels an election of all members, and the termination of the present board with the election and qualification of the members of the new board to be elected.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

237.

HIGH SCHOOL—VOTE OF ELECTORS AUTHORIZING—TIME LIMIT FOR ISSUE AND SALE OF BONDS BY THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

When the electors of a school district have voted favorably upon the necessity of erecting a high school, there is no statutory limit as to the time when the board shall issue the bonds. The fact of the necessity which exists, however, and its recognition by the voters, imposes upon the board the obligation to proceed within a reasonable time.

May 3, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commisisoner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of recent date, in which you state:

> "A township school district voted on a bond issue for $25,000.00, for the building of a centralized high school. The proposition carried by a large majority. Some of the members of the board deem it advisable not to build this year.
>
> "Query: Is there a limit on the time as to when a board of education, under the above named conditions, must issue and sell the bonds for the erection of said building?"

Section 7625 of the General Code provides that when the board of education of a school district determines that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses the board shall make an estimate of the probable amount of money required for such purpose, and submit to the electors of the district the question of bonds for the amount so estimated. Section 7626 provides that if a majority of the electors voting on the proposition vote in favor thereof the board shall be authorized to issue bonds for the amount indicated by the vote. There is no limit placed on the board of education as to the time within which such board must issue and sell the bonds for the erection of said building, but as the board is not authorized to submit the question of erecting a building until it has determined that it is necessary, I am of opinion, that as the necessity for such building is presumed to exist it is the duty of the board to proceed within a reasonable time to sell the bonds and erect a school building. What is a reasonable time must depend upon the circumstances. As the electors of the school district have voted in favor of the bonds because they deemed the erection of the school house in question to be necessary, it would seem to me that the board of education is required to proceed with due diligence in the erection thereof, and if there is no serious reason why such building should not be erected this year it is the duty of the board to proceed so to do.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

B 257.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—POWERS AND DUTIES AS TO PAYMENT OF TRANSPORTATION ON TEXT BOOKS.

Section 7714, General Code, merely gives the board of education, the power to pay for transportation on text books and is not a mandatory direction to the effect that it must always do so.

May 23, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me the following query:

> "Has a board of education the right to require by contract, that the publishers of text books in use in the schools under control of said board, prepay the freight on text books, which they order from the publishers of same?"

As the law authorizes the board of education to secure text books at less than the maximum price and as the prepaying of freight on text books results in a lower price to be paid on such books, I am of opinion that the board can require by contract that the publishers prepay the freight.

Section 7714, General Code, reads in part as follows:

> "The board of education must pay all charges for the transportation of the books, out of the school contingent fund. But if such boards of education at any time can secure of the publishers books at less than such maximum price, they shall do so, and without unnecessary delay may make effort to secure such lower price before adopting any particular text book."

The first sentence of section 7714 of the General Code above quoted, as I view it, is simply a direction to the board of education in case it has to pay charges for the transportation of books to pay the same out of the school contingent fund, and is not a requirement that the board of education must under all circumstances pay for the transportation of such books.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

258.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION--STATE AID TO SCHOOL DISTRICTS—POWER TO FUND INDEBTEDNESS—TEACHERS' SALARIES.

State aid to board of education under section 7595, General Code, is to be granted only when the maximum legal levy is insufficient to pay its teachers a minimum salary of $40 per month for eight months of the year, and then only when the numbers of persons of school age in the district is twenty times the number of teachers therein employed.

Where the shortage arises without these limitations as by reason of inability to comply with contract to pay teachers $50 per month, such indebtedness is a "valid, existing and binding one" and if the board is unable to meet the same by reason of taxation limitations, bonds may be issued and the debts funded under authority of sections 5656, 5658 and 5659, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On recent date you submitted to me a statement of facts as follows:

> "The village of Byesville, Guernsey county, Ohio, pays its superintendent $1,100.00 per year, the high school principal $90.00 per month, the assistant principal $50.00 per month, one elementary school principal $50.00 per month, one elementary teacher $50.00 per month. The entire number of teachers employed by the board is twenty-three. The board of education maintains school thirty-two weeks each year. The maximum levy for school purposes has been made.
>
> "With these conditions, the board finds itself confronted with a shortage in the tuition fund of $1,600.00, or perhaps more. The board is of the opinion that even the past year too many pupils have been assigned to each teacher."

On the above statement of facts you submit two inquiries for my opinion. You first inquire whether:

> "Under section 7595, G. C., is the Byesville village school district entitled to state aid?"

Section 7595 of the General Code reads as follows:

> "* * * When a school district has not sufficient money to pay its teachers forty dollars per month for eight months of the year, after the board of education of such district has made the maximum legal school levy, three-fourths of which shall be for the tuition fund, then such school district may receive from the state treasurer sufficient money to make up the deficiency."

Section 7597 of the General Code reads as follows:

> "No district shall be entitled to state aid as provided in the next two preceding sections, unless the number of persons of school age in such district is at least twenty times the number of teachers employed therein."

State aid, under section 7595, General Code, supra, is to be granted to a school district only when the money raised by the maximum legal school levy is insufficient to pay its teachers the minimum salary of forty dollars per month for eight months of the year, and then only when the number of persons of school age in such school district is at least twenty times the number of teachers employed therein as provided in section 7597, supra.

In other words, the purpose of section 7595, supra, is to aid a school district which cannot by levying the maximum legal school levy raise money enough to pay the necessary teachers the sum of forty dollars per month for eight months of the year, and does not contemplate the payment of salary of superintendent, which, under section 7690 of the General Code, a board of education may appoint.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that Byesville village school district is not entitled to state aid under the facts set forth by you.

Coming now to your second inquiry as follows:

"If the foregoing question is answered in the negative, what course would you suggest that the board of education pursue?"

Section 5656 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

"* * * the board of education of a school district * * * for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * district * * * is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time, and at the rate of interest that said * * * board * * * deems proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

Section 5658 of the General Code provides in part:

"No indebtedness of a * * * school district * * * shall be funded * * * unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such * * * school district * * * by a formal resolution of the * * * board of education * * *. Such resolution shall state the amount of the existing indebtedness to be funded, * * * the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of their maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear and the place of payment of principal and interest."

Section 5659 of the General Code provides in part:

"For the payment of the bonds issued under the next three preceding sections, the * * * board of education * * * shall levy a tax, in addition to the amount otherwise authorized, each year during the period the bonds have to run sufficient in amount to pay the accruing interest and the bonds as they mature."

The unpaid portion of the salaries of the various persons mentioned in your statement of facts is an indebtedness which is an existing, valid and binding obligation of such school district, and by virtue of sections 5656, 5658 and 5659, supra, the board of education, being unable from its limit of taxation to pay the same at maturity, is authorized to fund said indebtedness and issue its bonds in payment thereof.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 267.

BOXWELL-PATTERSON GRADUATE—RIGHTS TO ENTER HIGH SCHOOL—LIABILITY OF VILLAGE TO OUTSIDE HIGH SCHOOL FOR TUITION OF RESIDENT.

The holder of a Boxwell-Patterson diploma moved to a city and entered a high school, completed two years therein and received credit therefor and then moved to a village which maintained only a high school of the third grade, by reason of which he was forced to attend the nearest high school of a higher grade.

Held, as there is no statutory provision therefor, the village cannot be charged for the tuition of such student for attendance at the last high school.

A Boxwell-Patterson graduate, under section 7744, General Code, is entitled to enter any high school in the state.

June 10, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of April 25th you presented for my opinion two requests:

First: You ask my opinion on the following:

> "The holder of a Boxwell-Patterson diploma moved to a city and entered the high school. After completing two years' work in said high school and receiving credit therefor, he moved to a village which maintains a high school of the third grade. Not being able to get the desired studies in said village high school, he attended the nearest high school of a higher grade.
>
> "Query: Is said village in which the pupil has legal school residence liable for the tuition of said pupil?"

Section 7748 of the General Code, as amended 101 O. L. 296, provides:

> "A board of education providing a third grade high school as defined by law shall be required to, pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year and a first grade high school for one year. Such a board providing a second grade high school as defined by law shall pay the tuition of graduates residing in the district at any first grade high school for one year; except that, a board maintaining a second or third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when a levy of twelve mills permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district. No board of education is required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four school years: except that it must pay the tuition of all successful applicants, who have complied with the further provisions hereof, residing more than four miles by the most direct route of public travel, from the high school provided by the board, when such applicants attend a nearer high school, or in lieu of paying such tuition the board of education maintaining a high school may pay for the transportation of the pupils living more than four miles from the said high school, maintained by the said board of education to said high school. Where more than one high school is maintained, by agreement of the board and parent or guardian, pupils may attend either and their transportation shall be so paid. A pupil living in a village or city district who has completed the elementary school course and whose legal residence has been transferred to a township or special district in this state before he begins or completes a high school course, shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of a Boxwell-Patterson graduate."

On reading the above section it will be noted that there is no provision therein which is applicable to the facts stated by you, and consequently is not covered by the law.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the board of education in this instance is not liable for the tuition of the pupil in question.

Second: Your next inquiry is as follows:

"A seventh grade pupil in a village district receives a Boxwell-Patterson diploma.

"Query: Is said pupil entitled to enter the village high school the following September, or may he be required to complete the eighth grade work before being admitted to the high school? Shall section 7744 or 7667, G. C., control?"

Section 7665, General Code, provides:

"When a township board of education establishes and maintains a high school or high schools within the district under its control, it shall have the management and control thereof, and may employ and dismiss teachers, and give certificates of such employment, and for services rendered, directed to the township clerk."

Section 7666, General Code, provides:

"Such board of education shall build, repair, add to and furnish the necessary school houses, purchase or lease sites therefor, or rent suitable rooms, and make all other provisions relative to such schools as may be deemed proper."

Section 7667, General Code, provides:

"Such board of education may regulate and control the admission of pupils from the elementary schools under its charge to such high school or high schools, according to age and attainments, may admit adults over twenty-one years of age, and pupils from other districts on such terms and under such rules as it adopts. It shall maintain such high school or high schools not less than twenty-eight nor more than forty weeks in any school year."

Section 7744, General Code, provides:

"The board of county school examiners shall provide for the holding of a county commencement not later than August fifteenth, at such place as it determines. At this commencement an annual address must be delivered, at the conclusion of which a diploma shall be presented to each successful applicant who has complied with the provisions hereof. Such diploma shall entitle its holder to enter any high school in the state."

From a reading of section 7667, supra, it will be seen that such section applies solely to township boards of education. Therefore, section 7744, supra, would control and is general in its nature allowing the holder upon receipt of such diploma to enter any high school in the state.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the pupil is entitled on receiving a Boxwell-Patterson diploma to enter the village high school.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

287.

STATE SCHOOL COMMISSIONER—TERM OF OFFICE—DATE OF ASSUMPTION OF DUTIES.

When the law requires that the state school commissioner will commence his term on Monday, July 10, the term of his predecessor expires on Sunday, July 9, at midnight, and Monday, July 10, belongs to the administration of the elected commissioner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 6, 1911.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Elect, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the date of July 5th, 1911, and in which communication you inquire as follows:

"The law says that the state commissioner of common schools shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the second Monday of July following his election. I will assume the duties of that office next Monday, July 10, and what I wish to know is whether Monday, July 10, will belong to my administration or to that of my predecessor, Mr. Zeller? We are not agreed on this point and I would like to know the exact condition."

In reply to your inquiry beg to say section 352 of the General Code provides as follows:

"There shall be elected biennially a state commissioner of common schools who shall hold his office for a term of two years, commencing on the second Monday of July following his election. He shall have an office in the state house, in which the books and papers pertaining to his office shall be kept."

In view of the fact that said section 352 of the General Code specifically says that the state commissioner of common schools shall hold his office for a term of two years commencing on the second Monday of July following his election, I am of the opinion that the term of your predecessor expires on Sunday, July 9, 1911, at midnight, and that your term commences immediately upon the expiration of his term, that is July 10, 1911, and that, therefore, Monday, July 10th, belongs to the term of your administration rather than to that of your predecessor, Mr. Zeller.

I trust that I have fully answered your inquiry.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

C 290.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF VILLAGE—BONDS—EXTRA TAX LEVY—AUTHORIZATION OF ELECTORS—PROCEDURE OF BOARD.

When a village board of education was authorized by electors under section 7592, General Code, to levy an additional tax of five mills for five years, such board may proceed to issue bonds without further authorization of the electors provided that the conditions of 7626 and 7679, General Code, with reference to the quality and nature of the bonds and the provisions of section 7629 with reference to the amount of the bonds and the procedure of the board be complied with.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 8, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 28th you have submitted to me for opinion the following:

"A village board of education was authorized under section 7592, G. C., to levy an additional tax of five mills for five consecutive years. Said board then proceeded to offer for sale $5,000.00 in bonds, according to sections 7629 and 7630.

"Are the bonds so issued legal without a further vote of the people to sell said bonds?"

Section 7591 of the General Code reads:

"Except as hereinafter provided, the local tax levy for all school purposes shall not exceed twelve mills on the dollar of valuation of taxable property in any school district, and in city school districts shall not be less than six mills. Such levy shall not include any special levy for a specified purpose, provided for by a vote of the people."

Section 7592 of the General Code reads:

"A greater or less tax than is authorized above may be levied for any or all school purposes. Any board of education may make an additional annual levy of not more than five mills for any number of consecutive years not exceeding five, if the proposition to make such levy or levies has been submitted by the board, to a vote of the electors of the school district, under a resolution prescribing the time, place and nature of the proposition to be submitted, and approved by a majority of those voting on the proposition."

Section 7625 of the General Code, amended 102 Ohio Laws, page —, reads:

"When the board of education of any school district determines that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses, to complete a partially built school house, to enlarge, repair or furnish a school house, or to purchase real estate for playground for children, or to do any or all of such things, that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-six hundred and thirty, are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary, the board shall make an estimate of the probable amount of money required for such purpose or purposes and at a general election or special election called for that purpose, submit to the electors of the district the question of the issuing of bonds for the amount so estimated. Notices of the election required herein shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections."

Section 7626 of the General Code reads:

"If a majority of the electors, voting on the proposition to issue bonds, vote in favor thereof, the board thereby shall be authorized to, issue bonds for the amount indicated by the vote. The issue and sale thereof shall be provided for by a resolution fixing the amount of each bond, the length of time they shall run, the rate of interest they shall bear, and the time of sale, which may be by compeitive bidding at the discretion of the board."

Section 7627 of the General Code reads:

"Such bonds shall bear a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum payable semi-annually, be made payable within at least forty years from the date thereof, be numbered consecutively, made payable to the bearer, bear date of the day of sale and be signed by the president and clerk of the board of education. The clerk of the board must keep a record of the number, date, amount, and the rate of interest of each bond sold, the amount received for it, the name of the person to whom sold, and the time when payable, which record shall be open to the inspection of the public at all reasonable times. Bonds so issued shall in no case be sold for less than their par value, nor bear interest until the purchase money for them has been paid."

Section 7629 of the General Code reads:

"The board of education of any school district may issue bonds to obtain or improve public school property, and in anticipation of income from taxes, for such purposes, levied or to be levied, from time to time as occasion requires; may issue and sell bonds, under the restrictions and bearing a rate of interest specified in sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-six and seventy-six hundred and twenty-seven. The board shall pay such bonds and the interest thereon when due, but provide that no greater amount of bonds be issued in any year than would equal the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills, for the year next preceding such issue. The order to issue bonds shall be made only at a regular meeting of the board and by a vote of two-thirds of its full membership, taken by yeas and nays and entered upon its journal."

Section 7630 of the General Code reads:

"In no case shall a board of education issue bonds under the provisions of the next preceding section in a greater amount than can be provided for and paid with the tax levy authorized by sections seventy-five hundred and ninety-one and seventy-five hundred and ninety-two, and paid within forty years after the issue on the basis of the tax valuation at the time of the issue."

I am of the opinion that as the board of education has been authorized under section 7592, supra, to levy an additional tax, and as section 7629, supra, authorizes the board of education to issue and sell bonds in anticipation of the income from taxes under the restrictions and bearing the rate of interest specified in sections 7626 and 7627, supra, that the first sentence in section 7626, supra, applies only to bonds issued under section 7625, supra, and that the restrictions mentioned in said section 7629, supra, refer to the issuing and sale of bonds by resolution fixing the amount of the bond, the length of time, the rate of interest, and time of sale which may be by competitive bidding at the discretion of the board, and consequently, the electors of such district having authorized an additional annual levy of five mills for five consecutive years, that the bonds so issued are legal without a further vote of the people to authorize the issuing of such bonds, provided that no greater amount of bonds be issued in any year than would equal the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills for the year next preceding such issue, and provided further, that the order to issue such bonds be made at a regular meeting of the board and and by a vote of two-thirds of its full membership, taken by yeas and nays and entered upon its journal, and further provided that the provisions of section 7630, supra, are complied with.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

D 290.

VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—VALUATION NECESSARY—ATTACHMENT OF TERRITORY.

An incorporated village which forms part of a township school district, becomes ipso facto a village school district upon the attainment of a tax valuation of one hundred thousand dollars.

Said village may attach territory for school purposes under section 4092, General Code, et seq.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 8, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of April 25th has remained unanswered until the present moment because of further information which I have but lately received from you.

You desire my opinion upon the following facts:

> "An incorporated village forms part of a township school district. It is now desired to form a village district with certain attached territory.
>
> "What is the method of procedure?"

From later information furnished me on June 10th, I ascertain that such incorporated village has a total tax valuation of more than one hundred thousand dollars.

Section 4681 of the General Code reads as follows:

> "Each village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, and having in the district thus formed a total tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars, shall constitute a village school district."

Section 4682, General Code, amended 102 Ohio Laws, reads as follows:

> "A village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, with a tax valuation of less than one hundred thousand dollars, shall not constitute a village school district, but the proposition to dissolve or organize such village school district shall be submitted by the board of education to the electors of such village at any general or a special election called for that purpose, and be so determined by a majority vote of such electors."

Said section 4682 as above amended is the same as original section 4682 except for the words above underscored.

Section 4681 and section 4682, supra, are a codification of section 3888, Revised Statutes, and are in substance identical with said section 3888, Revised Statutes.

The principle question submitted by you has been judicially determined in the case of Buckman, Auditor vs. the State, ex rel., Board of Education, 81 O. S. 171, the syllabus of which is as follows:

"Village school district—Vote of electors not necessary to create, when. Section 3888, Revised Statutes, amended—Act of April 2, 1906.

"By force of the provisions of section 3888, Revised Statutes, as amended April 2, 1906, and in effect April 16, 1906 (98 O. L. 217) each incorporated village then existing—April 16, 1906, or since created, 'together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, and having in the district thus formed a total tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars,' constitutes and is a village school district, no vote of the electors of such village being necessary to the creation or establishment of such district."

Your attention is respectfully called to the opinion in said case which fully sets out the reasoning of the court in regard to section 3888, Revised Statutes.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that such village on attaining a total tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars ipso facto constitutes a village school district.

If said village desires to attach thereto certain territory for school purposes it may be done by virtue of sections 4902, et seq. of the General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

300.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—PROVISION FOR ADOPTION OF TEXT BOOKS DIRECTORY AS TO TIME—CHANGE OF TEXT BOOKS WITHIN FIVE YEARS AND AFTER.

The stipulation of section 7713, General Code, to the effect that the adoption of text boks shall be made at a regular meeting between "the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August" is directory and not mandatory in accordance with the general principle of construction and in view of the further fact that the duty is a positive one enjoined by law.

Text books shal not be changed within five years except by a vote of five-sixths of the members of the board. After the lapse of five years, however, a majority vote shall be sufficient to make such change.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 19, 1911.

MR. FRANK W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of recent date is duly received, wherein you ask, first, "Can a board of education adopt text books by a majority vote after the first Monday in August provided it has not previously done so?" and, second, "An adoption was made in August, 1906. In June, 1911, the board of education of that township adopted another list of books. Four of the five members voting in favor of said adoption, * * * Is this last adoption legal?"

Section 7713, General Code, provides:

"At a regular meeting, held between the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August, each board of education shall determine by a majority vote of all members elected the studies to be pursued and which of such text books so filed shall be used in the schools under its control. But no text books now in use or hereafter adopted shall be changed, nor any part thereof altered or revised, nor any other text book be substituted therefor for five years after the date of the selection and adoption thereof, as shown by the official records of such boards, except by the consent at a regular meeting, of five-sixths of all members elected thereto. Books so substituted shall be adopted for the full term of five years. (99 v. 460 par. 5.)"

Answering your first question, I am of the opinion that the provision of the statute referring to the regular meeting "held between the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August" is directory and not mandatory. It is a well settled principle of law that provisions regarding the duties of public officers, and specifying the time for their performance, are, in that regard, generally directory "though a statute directs a thing to be done at a particular time, it does not necessarily follow that it cannot be done afterwards."

Southerland on Statutory Construction, Sec. 612.

As stated by the author just named, the designation of the time in this instance is not a limitation on the power of the board, and since the duty is enjoined by law, even though it be delayed beyond the particular time designated in the statute, it can be legally performed at a later date, so, it is my opinion, that the board of education in question, at a meeting subsequent to the first Monday in August, may adopt text books by a majority vote in the event that it had not previously done so.

Answering your second question: A reading of section 7713, G. C., supra, shows that the text books in use at a particular time cannot be changed and other text books substituted for five years after the date of the selection and adoption thereof, except by the consent, at a regular meeting, of five-sixths of all members elected thereto, but, as I read your question, in this instance the former adoption of the list of books was made in August, 1906, consequently the five years would be up in August, 1911.

I take it, there can be no question that the board of education, which will be composed of the same membership in August, can hold a regular meeting in June, 1911, and at said meeting adopt another list of books to be substituted for the list adopted at the meeting of August, 1906, which substitution shall become effective in August, 1911.

For this change, all that is required is a majority vote of all members elected, and, since you state that four of the five members elected voted in favor or said adoption, it is my opinion that the adoption of the substituted list was regular and legal.

Trusting that this answers your inquiries, I am,

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

304.

TEXT BOOKS—RIGHT OF PUBLISHER TO CONTRACT WITH SCHOOL BOARDS AT RATE FIXED BY COMMISSIONER—FIVE YEAR LIMITATION—REFILING, CONDITION PRECEDENT TO RIGHT OF COMMISSIONERS TO CHANGE LISTING PRICE.

The object of section 7709, General Code, is to fix certain conditions, compliance with which shall entitle publishers of text books to contract with boards of education for the sale of their books.

After fixing the price which the books of a certain publisher may be sold at, 75% of the wholesale price, the state school commissioner cannot within five years reduce such price unless the publisher refiles such book for listing with the commission.

Where a text book company has made a contract for 75% of the wholesale price as fixed by the commission, but which contract extends beyond the five years' time for which such price was listed, and such company refuses to refile such book with the commission after such period has expired, the contract may be treated as terminated for the reason that said company's rights to so contract is limited to the five year period for which the price was fixed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO. July 26, 1911.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of July 21st, in which you inquire as follows:

> "The state school book commission in previous years fixed the maximum price at which books may be listed to be sold to our public schools at 75% of the publishers' wholesale list price.
>
> "The commission a few weeks ago fixed the maximum price at 60% of the wholesale list price. Many publishers say they will not list their books at this price. Many books were listed in 1910 and since they were listed for a period of five years their time would not expire until 1915. Other books were listed in 1909 and their time will not expire until 1914.
>
> "We should be glad to have your interpretation on this question. If a book was listed at 75% of the list price as required at the time by the book commission, and the time covered by the listing has not yet expired, will it be legal to sell the books thus listed at 75% of the list price during the entire time for which they were listed even though the time extend beyond the time at which the maximum was placed at 60%.
>
> "To illustrate: A book was listed at 75% of list price in 1910, must that book be sold at 60% of list in 1912, or may it be sold at 75% of list as per contract?
>
> "May we also have your interpretation on this question: A book was listed in 1906. The time has just expired and the company refuses to relist the book. They made a contract in 1909 with a board of education for a period of five years to sell them the book at 75% of the list price. The five-year contract between the publisher and board of education has not yet terminated, but the book is not listed. What is to be done next year?"

In reply to your inquiry, section 7709 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Any publisher or publishers of school books in the United States desiring to offer school books for use by pupils in the common schools of Ohio as hereinafter provided, before such books may be lawfully adopted and purchased by any school board, must file in the office of the state commissioner of common schools, a copy of each book proposed to be so offered, together with the published list wholesale price thereof. No revised edition of any such book shall be used in the common schools until a copy of such edition has been filed in the office of the commissioner together with the published list wholesale price thereof. The commissioner must carefully preserve in his office all such copies of books and the prices thereof."

Section 7710 of the General Code provides:

"When and so often as any book and the price thereof is filed in the commissioner's office as provided in the next preceding section, a commission consisting of the governor, secretary of state and state commissioner of common schools immediately shall fix the maximum price at which such books may be sold or published by boards of education, as hereinafter provided, which price must not exceed seventy-five per cent. of the published list wholesale price thereof. The state commissioner of common schools immediately shall notify the publisher of such book so filed, of the maximum price fixed. If the publisher so notified, notifies the commissioner in writing that he accepts the price fixed, and agrees in writing to furnish such book during a period of five years at that price, such written acceptance and agreement shall entitle the publisher to offer the books so filed for sale to such boards of education."

Section 7711 of the General Code provides:

"Such commissioner, during the first half of the month of June, in each year, must furnish to each board of education the names and addresses of all publishers who during the year ending on the first day of the month of June in each year, agreed in writing to furnish their publications upon the terms above provided. A board of education shall not adopt or cause to be used in the common schools any book whose publisher has not complied, as to such book, with the provisions of law relating thereto."

Section 7712 of the General Code provides:

"If a publisher who agreed in writing to furnish books as above provided, fails or refuses to furnish books as above provided to any board of education or its authorized agent upon the terms herein provided, such board at once must notify such commission of such failure or refusal, and it at once shall cause an investigation of such charges to be made. If it is found to be true the commission at once shall notify such publisher and each board of education in the state that such book shall not thereafter be adopted or purchased by boards of education. Such publisher shall forfeit and pay to the state of Ohio five hundred dollars for each failure, to be recovered in the name of the state, in an action to be brought by the attorney general, in the court of common pleas of Franklin county, or in any other proper court or in any other place where service can be made. The amount, when collected, must be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the common school fund of the state."

Coming now to respond to your inquiry you say:

"We should be glad to have your interpretation on this question. If a book was listed at 75% of the list price as required at the time by the book commission, and the time covered by the listing has not yet expired, will it be legal to sell the books thus listed at 75% of the list price during the entire time for which they were listed even though the time extend beyond the time at which the maximum was placed at 60%."

I think some difficulty arises from the fact that your question may not be in conformity with what might be regarded as an interpretation of the statute. The statute to my mind is plain, and really requires no interpretation and is not susceptible of one. It speaks clearly for itself.

The general purpose and effect of section 7709 of the General Code is to prescribe conditions which must be complied with before any publisher or publishers of school books in the United States may have a legal right to offer books for sale for use by pupils in the common schools. This section of the General Code, to wit: Section 7709 provides what such publisher or publishers must do in order to have a privilege. Section 7710, General Code, provides that the commission shall fix the maximum price at which school books may be sold or purchased by boards of education. Under this section it is not intended that the board of education shall pay the maximum price. They have the right of contract, and should purchase books under the most favorable prices for the benefit of the public. The object of the statute is evidently to prevent impositions upon the public by school book publishing companies. If a publisher or publishers of school books desires to file a book in the office of the state commissioner of common schools that has been filed within five years and listed, I think such publisher or publishers have the privilege of so doing, but unquestionably only with the understanding that the price should be lower and not higher; while the statute does not seem to provide for the filing of any book oftener than once in five years, unless revised, yet, as the object of the law is the reduction of price and not the increase, I am of opinion that if a publisher or publishers desires to file the same book the second time, or oftener, within the five year period, with a reduction in list price, the same may be lawfully done.

Coming now to the power of the commission to fix the maximum price at 60% of the wholesale list price, I beg to advise that I am not able to see how this may be done lawfully unless the publisher or publishers of the book in question file certain book anew that was previously filed within five years. In case such publisher or publishers do this, I think they waived their rights and will be held to the maximum fixed by the commission under such circumstances. But in case a publisher or publishers do not file such book a second or third time, as the case may be, and the five years have not expired, it is my opinion that such publisher or publishers may lawfully sell such book at the maximum to boards of education during the five years provided for, subject to the discretion of the boards of education in making the contract. Such boards of education should, of course, purchase text books at the least possible price, but the privileges given to the publisher or publishers under the statute seem to be plain.

The attention of boards of education should be especially called to the following section of the General Code, to wit: Section 7713:

> "At a regular meeting, held between the first Monday in February and the first Monday in August, each board of education shall determine by a majority vote of all members elected the studies to be pursued and which of such text books so filed shall be used in the schools under its control. But no text books now in use or hereafter adopted shall be changed, nor any part thereof altered or revised, nor any other text book be substituted therefor for five years after the date of the selection and adoption therof, as shown by the official records of such boards, except by the consent at a regular meeting, of five-sixths of all members elected thereto. Books so substituted shall be adopted for the full term of five years."

It will be seen from the foregoing that the statute gives the right to a publisher or publishers of text books to offer for sale their books to boards of education in Ohio; that when such publisher or publishers comply with the conditions precedent they have the right to offer their text books for sale; that when these text books are adopted there shall be no change in their use and there shall be no alteration or revision of them, or shall any other text book be substituted therefor for five years after the date of the selection and adoption thereof as shown by the official records of such board, except by the consent at a regular meeting of five-sixths of the members elected thereto. It is further provided that books so substituted shall be adopted for the full term of five years.

The object of the law in preventing a change during the period of five years is undoubtedly to correct abuses that were existing compelling the parents of children to buy one set of text books one year, and another set within perhaps another year or two.

Unfortunately, these statutes, to wit: Sections 7709, et seq., operate in favor of the publisher of text books, but the protection to the public is with the board of education in that they have the full power of contract to purchase at the lowest possible price, and this they should do.

You further say:

> "May we also have your interpretation on this question: A book was listed in 1906. The time has just expired and the company refuses to relist the book. They made a contract in 1909 with a board of education for a period of five years to sell them the book at 75% of the list price. The five-year contract between the publisher and the board of education has not yet terminated, but the book is not listed. What is to be done next year?"

In answer thereto I beg to advise that section 7710 of the General Code, I think, effectually settles this question.

Inter alia, it provides as follows:

> "The state commissioner of common schools immediately shall notify the publisher of such book so filed, of the maximum price fixed. If the publisher so notified, notifies the commissioner in writing that he accepts the price fixed, and agrees in writing to furnish such book during a period of five years at that price, such written acceptance and agreement shall entitle the publisher to offer the books so filed for sale to such boards of education."

Under the foregoing cited section the privilege of the publishing company to sell in this state ends in five years. After notification by the state school commissioner to publishers that said commissioner accepts the price fixed by such publisher or publishers school boards in making their contracts must be governed thereby.

It is not conceivable that a publisher would be compelled to do business in a state beyond the time within which the state licenses him so to do, by virtue of its own statutes. My conclusion is, therefore, that the publishing company is not compelled under the law to relist its books. There is no statute so to compel it, and boards of education must proceed just as it would if the full five years' time has expired.

Very respectfully yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

307.

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION—DUTIES OF STATE SCHOOL COMMISSIONER—EXPENSES.

The statutes do not recognize the National Education Association and therefore, a bill presented by the state school commissioner for attendance at such association, cannot be allowed by the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 29, 1911.

HON. JOHN W. ZELLER, Ex-State School Commissioner, and HON. FRANK W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You inquired verbally of me as to whether or not a certain bill of $40.30, presented by Mr. Zeller on account of his expenses in attendance upon the convention of the National Educational Association at San Francisco for the year 1911, is one properly to be allowed. You state the following facts:

"The association convened on July 8, 1911, and lasted until July 14, 1911. Mr. Zeller's term of office expired on July 10th and it appears therefore that Mr. Zeller's term of office expired and Mr. Miller's term of office began about two days after the association convened.

With this state of facts you ask this department as to whether or not the bill presented by Mr. Zeller is a valid claim against the state.

I take it from the form of your question that you both have assumed that the only question to be considered is that arising from the expiration of the term of office of one and the coming into office of the other during the time of the meeting of the association.

Responding to your inquiry permit me to say that I am of opinion that the question as to the validity of the claim does not depend upon the state of facts in this case which you have presented. The claim is invalid without any reference to the term of office. It seems that heretofore allowances of this kind were made under favor of section 354 of the General Code of Ohio, formerly Revised Statutes, sections 356 and 357. Said section 354 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state commissioner of common schools shall give attendance at his office not less than ten months each year, except when absent on official duty. While holding such office he shall not perform the duties of teacher or superintendent of a public or private school, or be employed as teacher in a college or hold any other office or position of employment. Each year he shall visit each judicial district of the state, superintend and encourage teachers' institutes, confer with boards of education and other school officers, visit schools and deliver lectures on topics calculated to subserve the interests of popular education."

You will observe that so far as the payment of expenses is concerned the following would control:

Each year he (the state school commissioner) shall visit each judicial district of the state, superintend and encourage teachers' institutes, confer with boards of education and other school officers, visit schools and deliver lectures on topics calculated to subserve the interest of popular education.

I am not able to say under which of the foregoing heads the claim could be based. First, the state school commissioner is required to visit each judicial district of the state. This evidently means to visit schools or educational institutions under the control of the state. Second, it is the duty of the state commissioner to superintend and encourage teachers' institutes. Teachers' institutes are under the control of the state. Third, he should confer with boards of education and other school officers. Such boards and school officers are creations of the state in respect to the schools. Fourth, he shall visit schools. This evidently means public schools. Fifth, he shall deliver lectures on topics calculated to subserve the interests of popular education. This unquestionably means, deliver lectures before bodies in connection with the public school or colleges or institutions within the control of the state, doing educational work.

The National Educational Association does not seem to be recognized by the Ohio statutes, and however worthy its purposes may be, it is a voluntary association and the state school commissioner is not permitted to select voluntarily any association that might be of his choice for attendance by himself, and charge the state therefor. Sometimes, unfortunately, when an opinion is rendered affecting expenses in relation to the public schools and expense bills are ruled against the friends of education entertain the erroneous notion that the attorney general's department has control of the subject-matter. This is not true. If bills of the kind in question are proper to be allowed the remedy is with the legislature; but in this connection I might say that the legislature itself is without constitutional authority to authorize the payment of any bills for school purposes except those within the control of the state.

For the foregoing reasons this department is constrained to hold that the bill is invalid.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

326.

EXAMINER OF TEACHERS—SINGLE DAY FOR ALL SUBJECTS—SINGLE FEE—LISTING ACCORDING TO APPLICANTS.

It is the intention of the statutes that each applicant for teacher's examination shall be examined on all subjects at one examination held on a single day and that the examiners shall receive but a single statutory fee therefor.

It is illegal, therefore, to divide the examination, to distribute the subjects over a period of two days, to charge a fee for each day and to list the examinations according to applications instead of according to applicants.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 18, 1911.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of August 16th, wherein you advise:

> "The custom for years among county boards of school examiners has been to give teachers who apply for certificates, the privilege of two days' examination if they take this examination in consecutive months. The county examiners in most cases have required the applicants to pay a fee at each examination; or, in other words, each month. The county board of examiners in making up their report count the name of the applicant in making up their report for each month and in that way the applications are double the number of applicants.
>
> "The bureau of uniform accounting that examined the books of the county examiners have found against the board of examiners for making up their list from the number of applications instead of the number of applicants. They also object to the county examiners charging a fee for each application, which means two fees for each applicant before the applicant finishes the examination."

and you ask the following question:

> "Can a county board of school examiners divide the examination in two parts, and can they charge a fee for each part? And can they count the name of the applicant in both months when the board of examiners make up their list on which list depends the pay of such examiners?"

In reply thereto I beg to advise that the provisions of the General Code relating to county boards of examiners commences with section 7811 and continues to and includes section 7837, G. C. It is only necessary to quote a few of these sections to determine the questions which you ask.

Section 7817 of the General Code, under the heading of "Meetings for Examinations; notice" provides as follows:

> "Each board shall hold public meetings for the examination of applicants for county teachers' certificates on the first Saturday of every month of the year, unless Saturday falls on a legal holiday, in which case, it must be held on the succeeding Saturday, at such place or places within the county as, in the opinion of the board, best will accommodate the greatest number of applicants. Notice thereof shall be published in two weekly newspapers of different politics printed in the county, if two papers thus are published, if not, then a publication in one only is required. In no case shall the board hold any private examination or antedate any certificate."

You will notice from the above that the date fixed for holding meetings for examinations of applicants for county teachers' certificates is the first Saturday of every month of the year with the exceptions contained in the section quoted. This means, of course, that the applicants shall be examined for the teachers' certificate and not partially examined.

I appreciate the fact that in recent years numerous branches have been added to the list to be submitted to the teachers who are applicants for certificates; however, for a great many years within my own personal knowledge, and when there were comparatively few branches in which the teachers were examined, the law fixed a given day for the meeting of the board of school examiners. If one day be not sufficient, the correction should be made by the legislature.

Section 7834 of the General Code provides for the "Compensation of Board" and is as follows:

"Each member of the county board of school examiners is entitled to receive ten dollars for each examination of fifty applicants or less, fourteen dollars for each examination of more than fifty applicants and less than one hundred, eighteen dollars for each examination of one hundred applicants and less than one hundred and fifty, twenty-two dollars for each examination of one hundred and fifty applicants and less than two hundred, and four dollars for each additional fifty applicants or fraction thereof, to be paid out of the county treasury on the order of the county auditor. Books, blanks and stationery required by the board shall be furnished by the county auditor."

Under this section you will notice that each member of the county board of school examiners is entitled to receive ten dollars for each examination of fifty applicants or less; fourteen dollars for each examination of more than fifty applicants and less than one hundred. * * * The theory of the law unquestionably and unanswerably is that the board must have examined the applicant upon all the branches required for teachers' certificates for each examination. When the school examiners divide the time and charge additional fees, it is a subversion of the purpose of the legislature in fixing a fee based upon the applicants for an entire examination. If it were intended that the fee should be for a partial examination, the statute would say so.

Section 7837 of the General Code, under the head of "Compensation of Clerk," provides as follows:

"The clerk shall receive for his services as clerk four dollars for each examination of sixty applicants or less, six dollars for each examination of more than sixty applicants and less than one hundred, eight dollars for each examination of one hundred applicants or more, to be paid out of the county treasury on the order of the county auditor. But no order shall be drawn for the month of August until the clerk produces a receipt from the state commissioner of common schools that he has filed all the reports for the year required by him."

I do not see how the work of the clerk could be increased because the applicant appeared twice. My mind in this matter is perfectly clear to the effect that examiners have no right whatever to require the applicant to pay a fee for each examination. I do not think it is the purpose of the law to divide the examinations irrespective of the fees. However it is the fee question which makes the matter criticisable.

I do not wish in this opinion to be understood as making any reflection upon any official who sanctioned this practice. Honest men are liable to be mistaken, but I certainly trust that the school authorities will show a disposition, after the law is explained to them, to conform to the opinion of their legal advisers, especially in matters so clear as not to be reasonably disputable.

With my best wishes personally and officially, believe me to remain,

Very sincerely yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

E 326.

WATER RENT OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS—LIABILITY TO CITY OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS PARTLY WITHIN AND WITHOUT PARTLY WITHOUT A CITY.

Under the language of section 3963, General Code, the water furnished to school buildings which are located in cities whose school district is partly in the city and partly comprises territory outside of the city, must be paid for by the director of such district to the city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 19, 1911.

HON. F. W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 31st you state in reference to the board of education of Newark, Ohio, as follows:

> "The board of public service proposes to compel the board of education of the city to install meters and pay for all water consumed in the fifteen school buildings located within the limits of the city. They base their position in this matter upon an amendment of May 6, 1911, of section 3963 of the General Code, which without limitation exempted school buildings from payment of water rate or rather denied to the director the right to charge therefor. The amendment still exempts public school buildings, but contains the following provision taken from 56 bulletin 219:
>
> "'But in any case where the said school building or buildings are situated within a village or cities, and the boundaries of the school district include territory not within the boundaries of the village or cities in which said building or buildings are located, then the director of such school district shall pay the village or cities for the water furnished for said building or buildings.'

The question the school commissioner wishes to submit is as follows:

> "Under the amendment quoted above would a board of education having control of buildings situated within the city limits having territory of the school district without the city limits be compelled by the board of public service to install meters and pay for the water used?"

Section 3963 of the General Code, as amended 102 Ohio Laws 94, reads in part as follows:

"No charge shall be made by the director of public service in cities * * * for supplying water * * * for the use of public school buildings; but, in any case where the said school building, or buildings, are situated within a village or cities, and the boundaries of the school district include territory not within the boundaries of the village or cities in which said building or buildings, are located, then the director of such school district shall pay the village or cities for water furnished for said building or buildings."

While the intention of the legislature may have been different from its expression of such intent in the wording of the provision of the statute, as amended, above underscored, in my view the language so used in susceptible of but one meaning, to wit: that where the school building is situated within a city, the school district of which, includes territory attached to it for school purposes, the director of such district shall pay the city for the water furnished to the school building.

While this may work a hardship and an unjust discrimination between city school districts which are composed solely of territory within the city limits, and such school districts that have attached territory for school purposes, yet the language of the statute, as I view it, is plain, and the remedy is with the legislature.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A-360.

WAIVER OF STATUTORY PROVISION—TEACHER'S CONTRACTS FOR SERVICES AT LESS THAN $40.00 PER MONTH.

The provision of section 7595, General Code, stipulating that no teacher shall be employed at less than $40.00 per month may be waived and a contract by a teacher for service for a less sum would be legal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 15, 1911.

HON. F. W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 13th you wrote me as follows:

"Section 7595 of the General Code designates the minimum salary for school teachers. Many boards of education have contracted with teachers to teach for less than the minimum allowed by law under this section. We understand that the supreme court has decided that such a contract is binding to both parties concerned.

"Question: Is it legal for boards of education to employ teachers at a salary less than $40.00 per month for the full school year of eight months?"

Section 7595 of the General Code provides:

> "No person shall be employed to teach in any public school in Ohio for less than forty dollars a month. When a school district has not sufficient money to pay its teachers forty dollars per month for eight months of the year, after the board of education of such district has made the maximum legal school levy, three-fourths of which shall be for the tuition fund, then such school district may receive from the state treasurer sufficient money to make up the deficiency."

The case to which you refer as having been decided by the supreme court is the case of Layne, Administrator of the Estate of Irwin Vermillion, deceased vs. the Board of Education, No. 11428 in the supreme court.

I have examined the records and brief in the said case, and find the facts to be as follows:

The case was originally brought in the common pleas court of Lawrence county, Ohio, by one Irwin Vermillion on two causes of action: First. To recover the sum of thirty dollars, being the difference in amount between thirty-five dollars a month—the amount for which he signed to teach for the board of education of Aid township, Lawrence county, and which amount he duly received—and forty dollars a month, the minimum amount to be paid a teacher, as fixed by what is now section 7595 of the General Code, supra, on the ground that he was entitled thereto by virtue of the said section.

Second. To recover from the said board of education the sum of ten dollars for attending the Lawrence county teachers' institute for the term of one week, "It being the amount of money that the plaintiff would have earned had he taught school for the said week at the lawful price of forty dollars."

A demurrer was sustained to the said first cause of action; the said common pleas court holding, as stated in the brief for plaintiff in error in the supreme court, that the legislature did not have the power or authority to fix the minimum wages for public school teachers and that the board of education was not bound by such law.

A demurrer was overruled to the said second cause of action and the defendant, not desiring to plead further, a judgment for the plaintiff against the defendant was rendered for $7.75 (it is suggested that the amount should have been $8.75 and which, as I figure it, was based on the contract price of $35.00 a month.

Said judgment of the court of common pleas was affirmed by the circuit court and again by the supreme court without report on December 13, 1910, the latter court in the journal entry ordering "that judgment of the said circuit court be and the same is hereby affirmed."

The contentions of the plaintiff in error in the supreme court were that:

1. The legislature had authority to pass section 7595 of the General Code, supra, and,

2. Irwin Vermillion did not waive such statutory provisions nor was he stopped from claiming under such statutes.

The defendant in error contended:

1. That the said Vermillion had waived by agreement the benefits of the provisions of section 7595 of the General Code, supra, and

2. That the contract being illegal and void and of no effect, the plaintiff in error could not recover and the courts would leave the parties where it found them.

The supreme court in affirming the judgment of the circut court in the first cause of action might have done so on either of the two grounds contended for by the defendant in error, but the said court affirmed the judgment of the circuit in toto, i. e., as to the second cause of action as well. Had the said court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court as to the first cause of action on the ground that the contract was illegal and void and of no force and effect, it is submitted that said court could not then have affirmed the judgment of the circuit court on the second cause of action for which judgment was given for the plaintiff in the common pleas court for $8.75, being the amount due for one week's attendance at the institute as based on the contract price of $35.00 per month for the reason that if the contract was illegal and void and of no effect, it could not be used as a basis for computing the attendance at the institute, and the court would leave the parties as it found them.

It is to be noted that the petition in error filed in the supreme court complained of error only as to the first cause of action set forth in the plaintiff's petition in the common pleas court and judgment of the common pleas and circuit courts thereon, but the supreme court in its journal entry stated that "the judgment of the said circuit court be and the same is hereby affirmed." My conclusion, therefore, is that in so doing the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court in its entirety and not simply as to the first cause of action.

Therefore, the supreme court having sustained the judgment of the circuit and common pleas courts in toto, I am forced to the conclusion that it was on the grounds that the provisions of section 7595, G. C., supra, might be waived by agreement.

In view of the decision of the supreme court above referred to, and feeling it my duty to follow such decision, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 7595 of the General Code, supra, may be waived by agreement and that, therefore, it is legal for the board of education to employ teachers at a salary less than forty dollars per month for the full school year of eight months, provided such teachers agree to serve at a salary less than forty dollars per month.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

418.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION—POWER TO FUND INDEBTEDNESS—LIMITATIONS—"RUNNING EXPENSES"—AUDITOR'S CERTIFICATE.

Section 5656, General Code, empowers the board of education when pressed by reason of taxation limitations, to issue bonds or borrow money for the purpose of meeting such valid existing and binding indebtedness among its running expenses as are excepted under section 5661, General Code, from the necessity of the auditor's certificate to the effect that funds are in the treasury.

The power is extended alone to these enumerated expenses namely, "contracts authorized to be made by other provisions of law for the employment of teachers, officers and other school employes of boards of education."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 11, 1911.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 29th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. Does section 5656, Ohio School Laws, give boards of education power to borrow money to meet the usual running expenses of the schools under their control?

"2. If this section does not grant them the power, under what section may they be able to do this?"

Section 5656, General Code, to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "* * * the board of education of a school district * * * for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * district * * * is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time and at the rate of interest that said * * * board * * * deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

This section applies as well to indebtedness not funded as to bonded or funded indebtedness. This is made quite clear, not only by the provisions of sections 5657 and 5658, but also because of the construction given to said sections in the case of Commissioners vs. State, 78 O. S. 287. I am, therefore, clearly of the opinion that under section 5656 a board of education may borrow money and issue bonds for the purpose of meeting an indebtedness not funded. Section 5658, however, which is in pari materia with section 5656, provides that before the action authorized by section 5656 shall be taken the board shall, by resolution, determine the indebtedness sought to be funded to be an "existing, valid and binding obligation of such * * * school district."

Now, section 5660, General Code, provides that:

> "The board of education of a school district shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money * * * unless the * * * clerk * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation * * * is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. * * *"

Section 5661 provides that:

> "All contracts, agreements or obligations * * * entered into * * * contrary to the provisions of the next preceding section shall be void, but such section shall not apply to contracts authorized to be made by other provisions of law for the employment of teachers, officers, and other school employes of the boards of education."

All of the above quoted sections must be considered together. Upon such consideration it appears that contracts for employment of teachers, officers and other school employes of boards of education are excepted from the general rule requiring the presence of money in the fund at the time of entering into the contract, as a condition precedent to the validity of such contract. That being the case, it would be possible for such a contract to be a subsisting and valid obligation of the district, for which, in a given year, it would not have money, either in the treasury or levied and in process of collection. Being a valid obligation of the district the board of education might lawfully pass the resolution referred to in section 5658. Therefore, such obligations, which, I suppose, are within the purview of your question, being "the usual running expenses of the schools" may be met by borrowing money under section 5656.

As to other "usual running expenses" I find it difficult to imagine any debts that, in the face of sections 5660 and 5661, as above quoted, could be lawfully created by the board of education without the board first having in the treasury and unappropriated for any other purpose, or in process of collection, money sufficient to discharge such obligations.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that except as to contracts of employment, and obligations arising therefrom, a board of education may not borrow money to meet the usual running expenses of the schools; but as to such contracts of employment the board has ample power under the sections cited to borrow money to meet any deficiency which may be created in their funds by the existence of such contract.

In passing, permit me to remark that none of these sections authorize a prospective borrowing of money. That is to say, under none of them may the board of education first borrow the money and then enter into contracts to spend the money borrowed. The contract must have been made and must have been valid when made, and the board of education must find itself unable to pay its obliagtion under the contract, before money may be borrowed under section 5656.

Upon careful examination of the statutes I fail to find any other provision of which a board of education may avail itself in order to meet an existing or anticipated deficiency in its funds for running expenses. The other statutory provisions relating to the powers of such boards to borrow money have reference only to the construction, repair or improvement of school houses, or the acquisition of sites therefor.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

420.

TRAVELING EXPENSE OF STATE COMMISSIONER OF SCHOOLS, ON TRIP TO CONFERENCE OF STATE SUPERINTENDENTS OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION NOT ALLOWED.

As there is no law ordering or authorizing the state commissioner of common schools to attend a conference of state superintendents of instruction, the traveling expenses incurred on such trip may not be allowed from the traveling expense fund appropriated for that official.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 13, 1911.

HON. F. W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of October 11th, you submitted for my opinion the following:

> "A conference of state superintendents of public instruction will be held in Topeka, Kansas, October 18, 19 and 20, to consider questions which are of mutual interest to the different states, and one question especially which is of interstate significance. While in Columbus a few weeks ago the U. S. commissioner of education urged me to attend this meeting, stating that it was important that all state superintendents attend.

"The question I ask is: Will my necessary expenses connected with this trip be paid from the traveling expense fund of the state school commissioner, or must I pay it out of my own pocket?"

Section 354 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The state commissioner of common schools shall give attendance at his office not less than ten months each year, except when absent on official duty. * * * Each year he shall visit each judicial district of the state, superintend and encourage teachers' institutes, confer with boards of education and other school officers, visit schools and deliver lectures on topics calculated to subserve the interests of popular education."

Under the appropriation bill found in 102 Ohio Laws 18, there was appropriated for the expenses of the state school commissioner the sum of $800.00.

The question of which you inquire is whether or not such money or any part thereof can be used to pay your expenses to a conference of the state superintendents of public instruction to be held at Topeka, Kansas.

As I view the matter, said appropriation mentioned is to be used by you exclusively for traveling expenses in pursuance of your duty under section 354, above quoted, and, consequently, cannot be used for the purpose desired.

In a well considered case decided by the circuit court of the eighth circuit, the case of State ex rel. Marani vs. Wright, Auditor, Henry, J., in reference to the payment of traveling expenses of the building inspetcor of the city of Cleveland incurred by him on a trip to Columbus to attend a convention of building inspectors of the various municipalities, says:

> "We hold that in the absence of any specific statutory provision for such cases, the test of the city's liability must be deemed to be, is the trip or journey in which the expenses were incurred necessarily implied in or reasonably and directly incident to the prescribed duties of the municipal officer who undertakes such journey."

I am of the opinion that the same rule would apply to state officers, and as I consider the matter the trip that you propose taking is not governed by any specific statutory provision, nor is it necessarily implied in or reasonably incident to the duties devolving upon you as set forth in sections 352-367 of the General Code, being the provisions relative to the state commissioners of common schools.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that your necessary expenses connected with this trip cannot be paid from the traveling expense fund of the state school commissioner.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

440.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATIONS — LICENSE — CERTIFICATES — RENEWALS EFFECT OF AMENDMENT REQUIRING "ELEMENTARY AGRICULTURE"—IMPAIRMENT OF CONTRACT—ELEMENTARY, SPECIAL AND TEMPORARY CERTIFICATES.

A teacher's license is not a contract and is subject to existing and reasonable future restrictions.

Renewal certificates are provided by statute for persons holding a provisional certificate of two or three years, who have been continuously engaged in practice for the past five years, upon examination in theory and practice only.

Professional certificates may re renewed without examination if the holder has been teaching continuously for four years prior thereto. Renewals may be granted however, only at the termination of the original certificate.

Since section 7830, General Code, was amended so as to require after September 1, 1912, "elementary agriculture" in addition to the subjects formerly required, a certificate issued under the former law as an "elementary school certificate" and valid for "all" branches of study required at that time, can now be considered only as a "special certificate" valid as to certain specific studies but not for "all" subjects now required.

The holder of a teachers' elementary certificate which was issued prior to the amendment above stated and which certificate extends beyond Sept. 1, 1912, will be required to take an examination in elementary agriculture, in order to teach after Sept. 1, 1912, unless already under contract to teach for a period extending beyond such date in which case the law cannot be allowed to affect an impairment of such contract.

It would not be legal to place "elementary agriculture" upon a teacher's elementary certificate issued prior to the amendment aforesaid, after the holder had passed an examination in this subject. A special certificate for the added branch may in such case be issued however,

After the amendment and prior to Sept. 1, 1912, elementary agriculture should be added as a required branch.

Former elementary certificates may be renewed only as "special certificates."

A renewal certificate issued after passage of the amendment may have "elementary agriculture" included therein provided, both the applicant's special certificates which are of the same class, including one for "elementary agriculture" and one for all subjects formerly required, run out at date of contemplated renewal.

As section 7821, General Code, has been amended so as to make all certificates ineffective until the first of September following, holders of certificates which terminate prior to that date, may under section 7826, General Code, be granted temporary certificates extending from said date of termination to the first of September following.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 30, 1911.

HON. F. W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 13, 1911, you call my attention to section 7830 of the General Code as amended 102 Ohio Laws 129-130, and likewise to section 7821 of the General Code as amended 102 Ohio Laws 419.

Section 7830 as amended was so amended in order to include "elementary agriculture" as a required branch of study, an examination on which a teacher applying for a certificate is required to pass.

Section 7821 of the General Code as amended was so amended in order to establish a date on which the certificate should begin.

In your letter you state that teachers' elementary certificates have been issued by the county board of examiners prior to the passage of the amendment of section 7830, which will continue in force for one, two, three or more years after September 1, 1912, and that such certificates do not have "elementary agriculture" thereon.

Under the above state of facts you have submitted for my opinion the following questions:

First: Whether it will be necessary for the holder of a teacher's elementary certificate, which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, General Code, and which continues beyond September 1, 1912, to take an examination in "elementary agriculture" in order to teach after September 1, 1912.

Second: Whether it would be legal to place "elementary agriculture" on a teachers's elementary certificate which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, General Code, and which certificate continues beyond September 1, 1912, on the holder passing an examination in "elementary agriculture."

Third: Whether "elementary agriculture" could be added as a required branch in examinations held after the passage of the amendment of section 7830, General Code, and before September 1, 1912.

Fourth: Whether the holder of a teacher's elementary certificate which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, General Code, on making application for a renewal of said certificate after the passage of such amendment, should be required to pass an examination in "elementary agriculture."

Fifth: Whether on renewing a teacher's elementary certificate the renewal certificate issued after the passage of the amendment of section 7830, General Code, should have "elementary agriculture" included in such certificate, the applicant having passed an examination in such subject.

Sixth: In view of the amendment of section 7821, General Code, at what time may a teacher's certificate be renewed?

Section 7821, General Code, (referred to in your letter of inquiry) was amended June 8, 1911, (102 Ohio Laws 419) to read in part as follows:

> "County board of school examiners may grant teachers' certificates for one, two, three, five and eight years which shall be valid in all village, township and special school districts of the county wherein they are issued. * * *
>
> "Such certificate shall be valid for one, two, three, five and eight years from the first day of September following the day of the examination."

The language of such section is the same as the section previous to the amendment thereof with the exception of the language above underscored.

Section 7830, General Code, (referred to in your letter of inquiry) was amended May 18, 1911, (102 Ohio Laws 129) to read as follows:

> "No person shall be employed or enter upon the performance of his duties as a teacher in any elementary school supported wholly or in part by the state in any village, township or special school district, who has not obtained from a board of school examiners having legal jurisdiction a certificate of good moral character; that he or she is qualified to teach orthography, reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar and composition, geography, history of the United States, including civil government, physiology, including narcotics, literature, and on and after September first, 1912, elementary agriculture, and that he or she possesses an adequate knowledge of the theory and practice of teaching."

The language of the above section is the same as that of such section before amendment with the exception of the words above underscored.

Section 7691 of the General Code provides in part:

"No person shall be appointed as a teacher for a term longer than four school years, nor for less than one year, except to fill an unexpired term, the term to begin with four months of the date of the appointment."

By virtue of the provisions of section 7691, General Code, supra, all contracts with teachers made prior to the amendment of section 7830, General Code, would have to begin within four months from the date of their appointment, and, consequently, each school teacher appointed prior to the amendment of section 7830, G. C., supra, would have to enter into the performance of his duties not later than September 19, 1911, or in other words, during the present school year, and therefore, such teachers would have entered upon and be in the performance of their duties at the present time.

A teacher's certificate is in no sense a contract, but is simply a license to teach, and evidences that such teacher has the necessary qualifications in order to teach.

"A license or certificate of qualification which under some statutes a teacher must possess before he is eligible to teach in the public schools has none of the elements of a contract, and does not confer upon the holder thereof an absolute right but only gives him a personal privilege to be exercised under existing restrictions, and under such as may thereafter be reasonably imposed."

35 Cyc. 1066, paragraph C.

Section 7830, General Code, (as amended) supra, provides that no person shall be employed or enter upon the performance of his duties as a teacher in any elementary school in a township, village or special school district, unless such person is the holder of a certificate to teach.

In the case of school district No. 2, Oxford township vs. Dilman, 22 O. S. 194, which was a suit based on a provision of the school law of 1864 that no person shall be "employed" as a teacher unless he first obtain a certificate required by law, it was decided that a contract for employment made with a teacher before he obtains a requisite certificate is valid provided he obtains it before entering upon the duties of his employment.

In view of such decision, I am of the opinion that a similar rule would apply to the present statute (section 7830, supra) and that the words "employed" and "entered upon the performance of his duties as teacher" as used in such statute, are to be construed as synonymous.

Any teacher who has a legal teacher's certificate issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, supra, who was under contract to teach prior to the passage of such amendment, and whose contract of employment extends beyond September 1, 1912, may under such contract continue so to teach without having a certificate of qualification to teach "elementary agriculture." At the time of entering into the contract he was the holder of a legally recognized certificate, and the contract so entered into was in every way valid. To require him to pass an examination in "elementary agriculture," because since the contract was entered into the law had been changed in reference to the requirements of teachers' certificates, would, should he fail to pass such an examination, annul his contract, and would, therefore, be an impairment of the obligation of such contract.

Any teacher employed after the passage of the amendment of section 7830, supra, the term of whose employment will extend beyond September 1, 1912, must before performing such service under such contract after September 1, 1912, be the holder of a teacher's certificate that he is duly qualified to teach "elementary agriculture," as such contract was entered into under the provisions of law then in force, which requires that after September 1, 1912, a teacher shall have a certificate that he is qualified to teach "elementary agriculture."

Section 7822 of the General Code provides:

> "All teachers' certificates granted for one, two or three years shall be regarded as provisional certificates, and be issued and renewed only in compliance with such reasonable regulations and standards and upon such ratios as the board adopts. But when any teacher holds a two or three years' certificate, and for the last five years preceding has been continuously engaged in teaching in this state, such teacher shall be entitled to have such certificate renewed by passing an examination in theory and practice."

Section 7823 of the General Code, as amended, 102 O. L. 49, provides:

> "Applicants for five-years' or eight-years' certificates shall have had not less than forty months' experience in teaching and shall make not less than eighty-five per cent. in any branch and a general average of not less than ninety-two per cent. All five-years' and eight-years' certificates shall be regarded as professional certificates, and shall be renewed without examination at the discretion of the examining board, except that no such certificate will be renewable if the holder thereof has not been actively engaged in teaching within the four years preceding. Such professional certificate shall be valid in any county in the state."

It will be noted by an examination of the above quoted sections that teachers' certificates granted for one, two and three years are "provisional certificates" and that teachers' certificates granted for five or eight years are professional certificates.

Further, that a teacher holding a provisional certificate of two or three years, and has continuously engaged in teaching in this state for the last five years, shall be entitled to have such certifiacte renewed without an examination in other than "theory and practice," and that professional certificates may be renewed without examination, provided the holder thereof has been actively engaged in teaching within the four years prior thereto.

A teacher's certificate cannot be renewed except that the renewal thereof shall take effect at the termination of the original certificate. For example, if a teacher holds a three-years' certificate, only one year of which has expired, leaving a balance of two years for which said certificate is to run, he cannot make application to the board of examiners at the expiration of said one year, to surrender his said certificate and have a new certificate issued for three years from such application. He is only entitled to a renewal of such certificate, which renewal certificate shall begin at the expiration of the original.

Section 7829, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Three kinds of teachers' certificates only shall be issued by county boards of school examiners, which shall be styled respectively, 'teacher's elementary school certificate,' valid for all branches of study in schools below high school rank, 'teacher's high school certificate,' valid for all branches of study in recognized high schools and for 'superintendents and teacher's special certificate,' valid in school of all grades, but only for the branch or branches of study named therein."

It will be noted, therefore, that in elementary schools there are two kinds of teachers' certificates issued by school examiners, the teachers' "elementary school certifiactes," valid for all branches of study in elementary schools, and "special certificates" valid only for the branch or branches or study named therein.

Section 7830, General Code, having been amended so as to require the certificates thereunder to include a further subject, and as "teachers' elementary school certificates," both provisional and professional, are by the provisions of section 7829, supra, issued as valid for all branches of study, I am of the opinion that such elementary school certifiactes issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, must after such amendment either be considered as rendered entirely invalid, because of said amendment, or else are to be considered since such amendment as "special certificates" by reason thereof.

I do not believe that it was the intention of the legislature by such amendment to absolutely nullify all such certificates, and, therefore, I am of the opinion that such certificates are to be considered after the amendment as "special certificates."

If an elementary school certificate has been issued to a teacher prior to the amendment of section 7830, supra, which said certificate does not show that he is qualified to teach "elementary agriculture" he should present himself to the county board of examiners for an examination in such a subject if he desires to teach after September 1, 1912, provided such teacher is not at present in the performance of his duty under a contract entered into prior to the amendment of section 7830, the term of which extends beyond said date. If he passes such an examination a "teacher's special certificate" should be issued therefor, which it is suggested should be so issued as to terminate as nearly as possible with the termination of the other certificate held by him.

The two certificates, to wit: the certificate issued prior to the amendment of section 7830 and the teacher's special certificate issued on the examination in "elementary agriculture" will together certify that the teacher is qualified to teach all of the branches provided for in said section 7830, and will satisfy the provisions of said section.

All examinations held by county examiners, the successful candidates of which will receive teachers' elementary school certificates bearing date September 1, 1912, as provided in section 7821, General Code, as amended, should include an examination in "elementary agriculture."

Coming now to answer your specific inquiries I shall do so in the order in which they are presented.

> "First: Whether it will be necessary for the holder of a teacher's elementary certificate, which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, General Code, and which continues beyond September 1, 1912, to take an examination in 'elementary agriculture' in order to teach after September 1. 1912."

I am of the opinion that unless a teacher is in the performance of his duties under a contract, entered into before the passage of section 7830, General Code, as amended, the term of which contract will extend beyond September 1, 1912, it will be necessary for a teacher in order to teach after September 1, 1912, to take an examination in "elementary agriculture," although the certificate heretofore issued prior to the passage of section 7830, G. C., as amended does not expire until after September 1, 1912.

> "Second: Whether it would be legal to place 'elementary agriculture' on a teacher's elementary certificate which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, General Code, and which certificate continues beyond September 1, 1912, on the holder passing an examination in 'elementary agriculture.'"

I am of the opinion that it would not be legal to place "elementary agriculture" on a teacher's elementary certificate which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830, G. C., the term of which extends beyond September 1, 1912, but that such teacher's elementary certificate, since such amendment is to be considered as a "special certificate," and not a "teacher's elementary certificate," and further, that a special certificate on the subject of "elementary agriculture" should likewise be granted. These two certificates cover all the branches required under said section 7830, G. C., as amended. It will be well for the county examiners to fix the term of such certificate in "elementary agriculture" at such period as will cause the two certificates to expire at or about the same time.

> "Third: Whether 'elementary agriculture' could be added as a required branch in examination held after the passage of the amendment of section 7830, General Code, and before September 1, 1912."

I am of the opinion that an examination in "elementary agricuture" should be given together with an examination on the other subjects required by section 7830, G. C., as amended, at each examination subsequent to the amendment of section 7830, G. C., the certificate of which is to be dated September 1, 1912, in accordance with section 7821, G. C., as amended.

> "Fourth: Whether the holder of a teacher's certificate which was issued prior to the amendment of section 7830 on making application for a renewal of said certificate after the passage of such amendment should be required to pass an examination in 'elementary agriculture.'"

I am of the opinion that a teacher's certificate, which prior to the amendment of section 7830, G. C., was a "teacher's elementary certificate" is now to be considered as a "teacher's special certificate," and that such certificate may be renewed as a "special certificate" without such teacher having to pass an examination in "elementary agriculture." However, if such teacher desires to comply with the provisions of section 7830, G. C., as amended, he must pass an examination in "elementary agriculture" and receive a "teacher's special certificate" therefor.

> "Fifth: Whether a renewal certificate issued after the passage of the amendment of section 7830, G. C., should have 'elementary agriculture' included in such certificate, the applicant having passed an examination in such subject."

I am of the opinion for the reasons above stated in answer to your fourth inquiry that what was before the passage of the amendement of section 7830, G. C., a "teacher's elementary certificate" is, since the passage thereof, to be considered as a "teacher's special certificate" and cannot have "elementary agriculture" included in such certificate, but that an additional special certificate in such subject is to be granted. Should at any time the two certificates of a teacher be of the same class, i. e., as to being a provisional or professional certificate, and the terms of which will expire about the same time, I can see no reason, on a renewal of said two certificates, why a teacher's elementary certificate should not be issued in renewal of said two certificates.

> "Sixth: In view of the amendment of section 7821, General Code, at what time may a teacher's certificate be renewed?"

Prior to the amendment of section 7821, General Code, certificates were issued at each examination for the yearly periods set forth in said certificate and valid for such period from the date of examination. The present law provides that all teachers' certificates shall be valid from September first, following the day of the examination. This in many cases would leave a hiatus of several months between the expiration of the certificates issued prior to the amendment of section 7821, G. C., and the time from which certificates issued under such amendment shall be valid.

It is a principle of law that teachers in order to draw their salaries must have a certificate of their qualifications covering the period for which such salary is drawn, at the time of performing the service.

In many instances, the certificates heretofore issued would lapse before the completion of the term of the contract, and the teacher on presenting himself to a board of examiners for examination and passing the same, would receive a certificate under such examination valid only from September first, following, and would not, therefore, have any certificate to cover the term of his employment between the date of the expiration of his former certificate and the commencement of the new.

Furthermore, as I am of the opinion, that a renewal certificate must be dated to begin at the expiration of the certificate of which it is a renewal, and as all certificates are now required to begin on September 1, 1912, there would likewise be a hiatus between said two dates.

Realizing the difficulties above stated, the legislature amended section 7826 of the General Code (102 Ohio Laws 419), by adding to such section the following:

> "and at any regular examination such board upon proper application being made, subject to the same rules and regulations as applied to the granting of regular certificates shall issue temporary certificates, which shall be valid from the date of issue until the first day of September following."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that under the above provision the board of school examiners shall issue temporary certificates to cover the period from the date on which the certificate issued prior to the amendment of section 7821, G. C., shall terminate, to the first day of September following, from which time a new certificate or a renewal certificate is to be valid.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

458.

VILLAGE ADVANCING TO CITY—TEACHER'S CERTIFICATE—BOARD OF EDUCATION—BOARD OF SCHOOL EXAMINERS.

When a village advances to a city by reason of the federal census, the village officials remain in office until the city officers elected in the next election have been inducted into office.

The village board of education may determine the number of members to be elected to the city board of education but the power to appoint the city board of examiners resides only in the board elected under the city plan.

The county certificates will be sufficient to carry teachers through the present year but for later periods a certificate must be obtained from the regularly appointed city board of school examiners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 9, 1911.

HON. F. W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 11th, you state that the village of Wapakoneta, having the necessary population according to the last federal census, became the city of Wapakoneta, and you desire to know whether certificates granted by the county board of examiners in Auglaize county will be sufficient for the teachers now teaching in the schools of Wapakoneta in order for them to draw their salaries.

Section 4686 of the General Code provides:

"When a village is advanced to a city, the village school district shall thereby become a city school district. When a city is reduced to a village, the city school district shall thereby become a village school district. The members of the board of education in village school districts that are advanced to city school districts, and in city school districts that are reduced to village school districts shall continue in office until succeeded by the members of the board of education of the new district, who shall be elected at the next succeeding annual election for school board members."

Section 7838, General Code, provides in part as follows:

"There shall be a city board of school examiners for each city school district, to be apopinted by the board of education of the district."

I have heretofore held that in reference to the civic government of a city the said city would still remain under the village form of government until the induction into office of the city officers to be elected this fall.

I have likewise held that it is the duty of the village board of education to determine the number of members to be elected at large as members of the city board of education.

Section 4686, General Code, supra, states that the members of the village board of education shall continue in office until succeeded by the members of the city board of education, and Section 7838, General Code, supra, provides that the city board of school examiners shall be appointed by the board of education of the district.

As I view the matter, the village board of education beyond having the power to determine the number to be elected as members of the city board of education which will succeed them, have only the powers of a village board of education, and, consequently, are not authorized under section 7838, General Code, to appoint a city board of school examiners.

Such being the case, and it being a requirement of law that teachers employed in the public schools shall have certificates of their qualifications so to do, and as the county board of school examiners is the only board of school examiners who can issue such certificates, until the creation of a city board of school examiners, I am of the opinion that the certificates granted by the county board of examiners will be sufficient for teachers teaching in the schools of Wapakoneta to entitle them to legally draw their salaries. Having entered upon their duties for the present school year, it will not be necessary for them to obtain from the city board of school examiners to be appointed, a certificate from such board in order to finish out the present school year, but such teachers must obtain from the city board of school examiners a certificate in order to continue their service in such district beyond the present school year.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 461.

VILLAGE ADVANCING TO CITY—BOARD OF EDUCATION—POWER TO APPOINT SUPERINTENDENT.

When a village advances to a city by reason of the last federal census, the board of education of the village continues its duties until the induction into office of the city board of education, but with the powers only of a village board of education. Such village board therefore, has the power only to appoint a superintendent for a term of three years as provided for villages under section 7705, General Code.

An appointment by such board of a superintendent for a longer term as provided for cities under section 7702, General Code, is therefore void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 11, 1911.

HON. F. W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Common Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of October 5th, wherein you state that you desire my written opinion upon the following question:

"The school laws of Ohio say that a superintendent may be employed for three years in a village and five years in a city.

"Barberton, Ohio, has the required population for a city at the last census, and will go under a city government January 1, 1912, with the officers elected at the coming election.

"A superintendent was employed last May for a term of four years. Was it legal?"

Section 4686 of the General Code provides:

"When a village is advanced to a city, the village school district shall thereby become a city school district. When a city is reduced to a village, the city school district shall thereby become a village school district. The members of the board of education in village school districts that are advanced to city school districts, and in city school districts that are reduced to village school districts shall continue in office until succeeded by the members of the board of education of the new district, who shall be elected at the next succeeding annual election for school board members."

Section 7705, General Code, provides:

"The board of education of each village, township and special school district may appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent, * * * for a term not longer than three school years, to begin within four months of the date of appointment. * * *"

Section 7702, General Code, provides:

"The board of education in each city school district shall appoint a suitable person to act as superintendent of the public schools of the district, for a term not longer than five school years, and to begin within four months of such appointment."

I have heretofore advised you that it is my opinion that the members of the board of education of the village school district continue to serve until the election of the members of the city board of education, but continue so to do only with the powers which by law are given to a village board of education. Consequently, I am of the opinion that the village board of education serving in the interim between the time that the municipality is declared by law to be a city, and the induction into office of the members of the city board of education, have only power to appoint a superintendent under the provisions of section 7705, General Code, supra, and have not the power to appoint a superintendent under the provisions of section 7702, General Code, supra.

Therefore, in answer to your question, I am of the opinion that the employment of a superintendent last May for a term of four years by such board of education is without authority in law, and is not binding upon the members of the city board of education to be elected.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

B 468.

BRIBERY—PENALTY OF DISFRANCHISEMENT—NOT A DISQUALIFICATION OF OFFICE HELD ON SCHOOL BOARD—CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISION—FELONIES.

Section 13314, General Code, provides the penalty for bribery at elections and defines such offense to be a misdemeaner.

As there is no further penalty provided for such offense by law, when the penalty thereon prescribed has been inflicted and the defendant disfranchised as therein provided, such defendant is not disqualified thereby from holding office on the board of education to which he was elected prior to the commission of the offense.

Section 12390 disqualifying defendants from holding offices of trust applies to felonies only and article 15, section 4 of the Ohio constitution disqualifies disfranchised persons for "appointment or election to an office but is not extended to offices already held."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 17, 1911.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, State Commissioner of Schools, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of October 11, 1911, is received, in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "A member of a school board was a worker at the election, and for this work he received $2.00. The judge of the common pleas court brought this man before him and on his pleading guilty of being bribed, disfranchised the school member for five years. This board member holds office for about two years from this date, and as a township member is entitled to $20.00 each year.
>
> "Question: Under conditions mentioned in this letter can this board member legally retain his position as a member of the board of education, and as such, draw $20.00 a year compensation for such services?"

The penalty imposed upon an elector receiving a bribe for influencing his vote, is set forth in section 13314, General Code, which provides:

> "Whoever, being an elector, before, during or after an election, receives, agrees or contracts for money, gift, loan or other valuable consideration, office, place or employment, for himself or another for registering or agreeing to register, or refraining or agreeing to refrain from registering for an election, or for voting or agreeing to vote, or refraining or agreeing to refrain from voting at an election, or for voting or agreeing to vote, or refraining or agreeing to refrain from voting for a particular person, question or proposition at al election, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than one year, or both, and be excluded from the right of suffrage for five years next succeeding such conviction."

The constitution of Ohio specifically grants power to the general assembly to disfranchise any person convicted of bribery, in section 4 of article 5, which provides:

"The general assembly shall have power to exclude from the privilege of voting, or of being eligible to office, any person convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crime.

It appears that the person in question was charged with bribery and plead guilty thereto; and that sentence was passed upon him by a court of competent jurisdiction. Part of that sentence was that he should be excluded from voting for five years. It further appears that this person at the time of accepting the bribe was a member of the township board of education.

Section 4 of article 15 of the Ohio constitution provides that all officers appointed or elected to office must be electors, as follows:

"No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state, unless he possess the qualifications of an elector."

At the time of his election he, no doubt, was an elector of the township and qualified to be a member of the board of education. Since his election and acceptance of the office he has been disqualified as an elector.

The question arises: Does the disfranchisement of an officer after he becomes such officer disqualify him from further holding such office?

In the case of State vs. Pritchard, 36 N. J. L., 101, it is held that disfranchisement of an officer does not, ipso facto, cause forfeiture of the office. On page 105 of the opinion, Beaseley, C. J., says:

"At the hearing in this court, the counsel for the relators strongly pressed the conclusion that, inasmuch as a conviction of the crime of conspiracy, by force of the act concerning witnesses, incapacitates the convict from being a witness, in a judicial proceeding, and in consequence thereof, the constitution prohibts such convict from enjoying the right of suffrage, that, as a necessary result, there was a deprivation also of the prerogative to hold office. But this, I think, is a manifiest non sequitior. Because, as a punishment, the law has denounced the loss of two of the rights of citizenship, it does not follow that a third right is to be withheld from the delinquent. Indeed the reverse result is the reasonable deduction, because, it is clear on common principles, that no penalty for crime but that which is expressly prescribed can be exacted. The fact that severely penal consequences are annexed by statute to the commission of a breach of law, cannot warrant the aggravation, by the judicial hand, of the punishment prescribed. In this case it is impossible for this court to say to these officials, that in consequence of their crime, the statute declares that they cannot be witnesses, and that the constitution deprives them, on the same ground, of the right to vote, and that therefore, the law inflicts upon them a forfeiture of office. It may well be, that the provision would be both just and expedient, which should declare that the conviction of any official delinquency should, ipso facto, work a forfeiture of the office which had been so abused. It is possible that the legislature, upon attention being called to the subject might pass an act with such an aspect, but all that the court can say is, that no such law is now in existence. The punishment of the crime of conspiracy is definitely fixed by the constitution and by the statute; no addition can be made to this measure except with the legislative sanction. The severity of the present punishment, may indeed denote that the crime is of a higher grade; but that fact leaves the question at issue still to be solved, whether a conviction of any crime operates, in the absence of any adjudication to that effect, and without express statutory provision, so as to forfeit an office as a legal result."

The same doctrine is applied in case of People vs. Thornton, 25 Hun. (N. Y.) 456. On page 463, Bockes, J., delivering the opinion, says:

"The right to hold office and to exercise its functions and to enjoy its honors and emoluments constitute the highest privileges of citizenship. In our form of government these rights inhere in every male citizen of full age, unless incapacitated to have and enjoy them by reason of some express provision of the constitution or law; and the courts cannot take those rights away save by virtue of a declared power of disfranchisement based on some specified wrongful or criminal act. Wrongdoing or criminal conduct which will constitute or work ineligibility, or disability to hold office, to be enforced through the judicial power of the state must be expressly defined and declared by the constitution or laws. Granting then, that the promises and pledges made by the defendant to the electors of the county in this case constituted an offer of a bribe to them to cast their votes for him, where in the constitution or in the law is such offer declared to create ineligibility to office? We do not find it to be so declared in terms either in the constitution or laws of this state. The offer of a bribe to an elector is unquestionably a grave offense and is punishable as such, but it is punishable only in the manner and to the extent prescribed by the constitution and laws. Section 2 of article 2 of our state constitution excludes from the right of suffrage every person who shall either accept or offer a bribe for the giving or withholding of a vote at any election. And by statute bribery of an elector as well as the offer to him of a bribe, having in view the influence of his vote, is made a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment. Such are the penalties prescribed by the constitution and laws of our state against those offenders. But they are not declared to be also ineligible to office, or to be disqualified from holding office."

The rule established by these cases is that the right to hold office can be taken away only by express provision of the constitution or laws of the state.

The constitution, article 5, section 4, supra, grants power to the legislature to "exclude from the privilege of voting, or of being eligible to office, any person convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crime." It is left to the discretion of the general assembly to determine what offenses shall cause ineligibility to hold office, and what offenses shall cause disfranchisement. The constitution does not prescribe that the conviction of such an offense shall be punished by disfranchisement or disqualification for office.

The general assembly, in pursuance of this power, has made the conviction of certain offenses cause for forfeiture of office.

Section 12390, General Code, prescribes the penalty for conviction of a felony, as follows:

"A person convicted of felony, unless his sentence is reversed or annulled, shall be incompetent to be an elector or juror, or to hold an office of honor, trust or profit. The pardon of a convict shall effect a restoration of the rights and privileges so forfeited, or they may be restored as provided elsewhere by law, but a pardon shall not release a convict from the costs of his conviction unless so stated therein."

Section 13312 and 13316 of the General Code provide for forfeiture of office when the person elected to such office has used bribery in securing his election or nomination to such office.

Section 13312 provides:

"Whoever gives, or lends, or offers or promises to give, lend, procure or endeavor to procure money or other valuable consideration, to or for an elector or other person, to induce such elector to register or to refrain from registering for an election, or vote or refrain from voting at an election, or vote or refrain from voting at an election for a particular person, question or proposition, or on account of such elector having registered or refrained from registering, or voted or refrained from voting, or voted or refrained from voting for a particular person, question or proposition, shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than three years, or both, and shall forfeit the office to which he was elected at the election with reference to which such offense was committed."

Section 13316, General Code, provides:

"Whoever, being a candidate for nomination to an office in a convention held as provided by law, pays or promises to pay money or property to a delegate for obtaining his influence or vote for such nomination, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and, if nominated and elected to such office, shall forfeit it and be disqualified from voting or being nominated at such election or convention."

The offense of receiving a bribe, defined in section 13314, General Code, supra, is a misdemeanor and not a felony, and cannot therefore come within the provision of section 12390, General Code. The penalty prescribed for such an offense is that which is set forth in section 13314, General Code. The court, in passing sentence exercised its power to fix the penalty, and fixed it as a fine and disfranchisement for five years.

The statute does not provide that a conviction of such an offense shall be cause for forfeiture of office, and in the absence of constitutional or statutory authority conviction of an offense does not cause forfeiture of office.

The receiving of a bribe at an election to influence one's vote does not cause a forfeiture of an office held by the person receiving the bribe.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

(To the Clerk of the Supreme Court)

202.

PRINTING BY CLERK OF SUPREME COURT AND OFFICIAL DUTY--EXTRA COMPENSATION ILLEGAL—DISPOSITION OF COMMISSION ILLEGALLY RECEIVED FROM PRINTER.

The work of attending to certain printing for parties involved in cases before the supreme court forms a part of the official duties of the clerk and his salary is intended as full compensation for the same.

Where the clerk has received from a printer a commission for assignment of such work to such printer, the money so received must be returned to the parties legally entitled to the same or turned into the state treasury in trust for such parties. If such commission has been taxed as part of the costs of the case against the parties having the printing done, it should be returned to such parties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1911.

HON. FRANK E. MCKEAN, Clerk of Supreme Court, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of recent date in which you state:

> "Rule 5 of Rules of Practice now in effect by the supreme court of Ohio, under the caption 'Printing Records, etc.,' provides that the clerk of the supreme court shall attend to certain printing, etc.
>
> "For your information I beg to advise that Mr. Jno. S. McNutt, my immediate predecessor, has informed me that it has been the practice by him, also by Clerks Obermeyer and Emerson, to turn this work over to printing firms and have received for so doing a ten per cent. commission, such commission being paid the clerks of the supreme court by the printer, and that such commission has been claimed by the clerks of the supreme court as belonging to them and consequently such commission has been retained by the clerks of the supreme court as their own.
>
> "Mr. F. B. Toothaker, Columbus, has been favored with a large portion of such printing in the past, and he too informed me that he has paid ten per cent. commission to other clerks of the Ohio supreme court for turning such printing over to his firm, and proposed doing the same with me, which offer I have refused to consider. The things that I desire to know, however, is whether former clerks of the supreme court are legally entitled to such commission referred to in the foregoing; if the charge is legal then should not the fee or commission be paid into the state treasury; or if such fee or commission has been illegally collected and retained by former clerks of the Ohio supreme court what action should be had to cause such fees or commissions to be returned and do they belong to the printer paying same, or should such moneys be paid over to the person or persons against whom the costs in the case are finally taxed?"

The salary of the clerk of the supreme court is fixed by section 2254 of the General Code in the sum of four thousand dollars annually, and section 2259, General Code, provides that no fees whatever in addition to the salaries and compensation named in section 2254 shall be allowed to any such officer. Section 1512 of the General Code provides the fees which the clerk of the supreme court shall charge and collect, but nowhere in that section is he allowed to charge and collect a fee for the printing of records under his supervision.

Prior to April 16, 1906, the clerk of the supreme court was allowed in addition to his salary to retain certain fees which, when collected, he is now required to pay over to the state treasurer under section 2264, General Code. But at no time has the clerk of the supreme court been allowed to charge a fee for attnding to the printing of records of cases pending in the supreme court. Rule 5 of the rules of the supreme court is in accord with section 12254 of the General Code which reads in part as follows:

> "The plaintiff in error may have the printing done, or he may deposit with the clerk sufficient money to pay its costs."

thus making it a part of the duties of the clerk of the supreme court to attend to the printing of the records of cases in said court, if required by plaintiff in error. The printing of records by the clerk of the supreme court, when so required, has been one of his duties as far back as April 18, 1883 (80 O. L. 170).

All services that the clerk of the supreme court has to render in his capacity as clerk are deemed compensated by the salary attached to the office and any additional compensation is illegal and void. Burkett, J., in the case of Clark vs. Commissioners, 58 O. S., page 107, at page 109 says:

> "It is well settled that a public officer is not entitled to receive pay for services out of the public treasury unless there is some statute authorizing the same. Services performed for the public, where no provision is made by statute for payment, are regarded as a gratuity, or as being compensated by the fees, privileges and emoluments accruing to such officer in the matters pertaining to his office. Jones vs. Commissioners, 57 Ohio State, 189."

Section 1508, General Code (Section 421c, R. S.), provides:

> "On the first Monday of June in each year, the clerk of the supreme court shall make out a certified list of causes in which money has been paid and has remained in his hands or in the possession of a former clerk for one year next preceding such time, and state the amount of money so paid, and in whose possession it is. Such list forthwith must be posted in a conspicuous place in his office for a period of thirty days."

Section 1509, General Code (Section 421*d*, R. S.), provides:

> "The clerk of the supreme court shall pay such advertised moneys, fees and costs in his hands at the expiration of such thirty days, to the treasurer of state on the warrant of the auditor of state. He must also indicate in his cash book the disposition of each item of such fees and costs. The treasurer of state shall hold such moneys as a special fund entitled 'unclaimed costs in supreme court.' Immediately before ceasing to be clerk each clerk shall pay over to his successor all moneys in his hands, received by virtue of his office."

The clerk of the supreme court is an officer of the state of Ohio and all money received by him is received on behalf of the state of Ohio. All money received for printing the records of the cases pending in the supreme court is received by the clerk in trust for the specific purpose and he is not allowed to obtain any unjust advantage or special compensation therefrom. Section 12254, General Code, provides that the fair expense of the printing of records shall be taxed as part of the costs of the case. I construe the words "fair expense" to mean the actual expense of such printing.

You state in your letter that a commission of ten per cent. has been paid to former clerks of the supreme court by the various printers for having the work given to them. As the clerk is not entitled to any fee for supervising the printing and as he is only entitled to such salary and fees as have been from time to time provided by law, the giving of a commission of ten per cent. to the clerk has the same effect as if it were an over-payment made by the clerk to the printer of ten per cent. of the bill for printing the record, and should on being received from such printer be refunded to the party transmitting the money. As it has not been so refunded it should have been paid over to the state treasurer under section 1509, General Code (former section 421*d*, R. S.), to be held by such treasurer for the party who ultimately paid the costs of the case, the entire bill of the printer plus the commission having been taxed as part thereof.

I hold therefore that the former clerks of the supreme court are not legally entitled to such commissions, nor can such commissions be considered as a part of the fees which the clerk under the law is entitled to charge, but that the same should have been returned to the party transmitting the same, and the costs of printing of the record should have been charged as a part of the costs of the case only to the extent of ninety per cent. of the amount so charged. As I assume, however, that the whole amount of the printing bill plus the commission has been charged as a part of the costs in such cases it is the duty of the state of Ohio to recover said commissions so illegally received and held by the former clerks, the recovery to be for the benefit of those parties against whom the costs were ultimately taxed.

This matter is of such supreme importance I am of the opinion that you as an officer of the court should call the attention of the judges of the supreme court to it.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Various Appointive State Officers)

(To the Adjutant General)

194.

ASSIGNMENT OF ROOMS IN STATE HOUSE—JOINT RESOLUTIONS—STATUTORY PROVISIONS.

Joint resolutions of the general assembly with respect to the assignment of rooms in the state house are valid and shall have effect in so far as they do not conflict with general provisions of law or statutory provisions for special departments.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1911.

HON. CHARLES C. WEYBRECHT, The Adjutant General, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 22d, requesting my advice as to the authority of certain state departments to use and occupy offices in the state capitol building.

Replying thereto I beg to state that the following state departments are specifically authorized or required by law to have their offices in the state capitol building; I append to this list a list of the sections of the General Code providing that the offices of such departments shall be in the capitol building:

State Commissioner of Common Schools	Section 352
Dairy and Food Commissioner	Section 369
Commissioner of Sinking Fund	Section 383
Board of Public Works	Section 407
Fire Marshal	Section 820
Commissioner of Labor Statistics	Section 872
Chief Inspector of Mines	Section 903
Chief Inspector of Workshops and Factories	Section 980
Chief Inspector of Stationary Engineers	Section 1043
State Board of Arbitration	Section 1061
State Highway Commissioner	Section 1180
Board of State Charities	Section 1350

This list may be incomplete as my examination has been somewhat hasty. It is not, however, provided by law that the chief executive departments of state, such as that of the governor, auditor of state, treasurer of state, secretary of state and attorney general shall have their offices in the state house; it is only inferentially provided that the legislative hall and offices of that department of the government shall be in the state house; there is no provision to the effect that the supreme court, its clerk, reporter and library shall be in the capitol building.

So far, then, as the law of this state applies, comparatively few of the state departments lawfully occupy the rooms used by them. At the time the building now known as the judiciary building, or the state capitol annex, was finished, the general assembly, by joint resolution—not by law—assigned certain rooms in both of the buildings to certain state departments. (See 94 O. L., 763.) A reassignment of these rooms was made at the following session of the general assembly. (See 95 O. L., 970.) And another partial reassignment in 1904. (See 97 O. L., 647.) So far as I am able to find, these are the only legislative assignments of rooms.

It is provided by section 146 of the General Code:

> "By virtue of his office, the adjutant general shall be superintendent of the state house. He shall have supervision and control of the state house." * * *

The adjutant general is not, however, expressly authorized to assign rooms, and inasmuch as this statute was in force at the time the general assembly saw fit to assign rooms by joint resolution, it would seem that at the time the adjutant general was not regarded as possessing this authority. I refer to his powers under the section above quoted, however, because it occurred to me that the adjutant general may have been exercising it in this matter from time to time.

Referring to the list submitted to me in your letter, I beg to state that the board of medical registration and examination and the state board of pharmacy, concerning which you particularly inquire, were authorized to occupy certain rooms in the judiciary building both by the resolution of 1902 and the resolution of 1904 above referred to. I am unable, however, to state what rooms were contemplated by the resolutions.

With respect to the flag and relic room, the following provision of the resolution of 1902 may be quoted:

> "The large room formerly used as the supreme court room is assigned as the flag room and for an assembly room to be under the authority of the adjutant general."

I do not find that any room has ever been assigned to the supervisor of printing, but my time has been so limited that I may have overlooked some joint resolution; nor do I find that any room has been assigned to the bureau of labor statistics, but this department is required to have its office in the state house. All the other departments mentioned in your letter are assigned rooms in one or the other resolutions above referred to, or are expressly authorized to have their offices in the state house.

As to the effect of these joint resolutions, I am of the opinion that they confer upon the departments affected thereby ample authority to occupy rooms in the capitol building. Such joint resolutions have not the force and effect of law, and if there were any general law applicable to the assignment of rooms in the state house and passed either before or after such joint resolutions, it would have to govern. Furthermore, the provisions of the law applicable to the various departments take precedence over a joint resolution, and if it be found that an officer who is entitled to have his office in the state house is not provided for in a joint resolution, such failure to provide for him does not deprive the department of its right to have its office in the state house.

I trust that the information furnished will be sufficient for your needs and those of the house committee.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

467.

ADJUTANT GENERAL AND ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER GENERAL—POWERS TO BID ON ROAD IMPROVEMENTS.

Neither the adjutant general nor his assistant quartermaster general are authorized to bid on or contract for the building or constructing of a road outside of the confines of Camp Perry.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 15, 1911.

HON. CHARLE. C. WEYBRECHT, Adjutant General, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of November 10th, wherein you state:

> "Bids will be received at La Carne, Ohio, on November 23, 1911, for the improvement of what is known as the Bell road, in Ottawa county.
>
> "This road, which is about one-half mile long, extends south from Camp Perry and connects with the road leading to Port Clinton. During the winter and in wet weather the road is unserviceable for the purpose of transportation to Camp Perry. For this reason it is essential that the road be improved at as early a date as is possible.
>
> "An opinion is respectfully requested as to whether the improvement of this road can be bid in by the assistant quartermaster general of Ohio as an official of this department. On account of certain facilities at his command, it is desired that he make an effort to secure the contract so that a better road can be built than would ordinarily be constructed by some outside contractor."

An examination of the General Code will disclose that section 82 defines the general duties of the adjutant general, while section 84 provides that he "shall have an assistant quartermaster general of the grade of colonel. * * * The assistant quartermaster general shall perform all duties devolving upon an assistant quartermaster general, and aid the adjutant general in the performance of such duties as the adjutant general may assign him. Under the direction of the adjutant general, he shall have charge of all ordnance and quartermaster stores and of the military property of the state."

Neither of the above sections requires or gives to the adjutant general or assistant quartermaster general the right to engage, by reason of his office, in the business of constructing roads.

Section 5278 of the General Code provides:

> "The adjutant general shall have general direction over the state arsenal, state camp grounds and other military property of the state. He shall employ such labor thereat, as the governor deems the necessities and best interests of the state require."

Section 5279 of the General Code provides:

> "The adjutant general shall direct the assistant quartermaster general in the charge of all ordnance, quartermaster's and other military stores received from the United States government or purchased by the state. He shall direct the issue of such stores to the organizations of the national guard, and the return of such stores from the organizations and provide for the collection and recovery of arms and equipments in the possession of any persons not authorized to retain them."

Nor is there any authority in the two sections just quoted permitting the performance of the work required of in your communication.

Section 5283 of the General Code provides:

"The adjutant general shall be the custodian of the state rifle range and military camp ground, which is hereby dedicated and set apart forever as a state park for military purposes to be known and designated as 'Camp Perry' in honor of Commodore Oliver Hazzard Perry and the naval victory won by him September 10, 1813, near this park."

Section 5283 of the General Code provides:

"The adjutant general may make such changes and improvements in existing roadways and otherwise in such range and ground as the needs of the state and the exigencies of the service may require. All improvements made upon the lands of such park belonging to the state from moneys received from any source, shall become the property of the state of Ohio."

While it may seem from section 5284, supra, that the adjutant general is authorized "to make changes and improvements in the roadways and otherwise in the state park" known as Camp Perry, he is limited by the sections above quoted to the confines of this military park. I am unable to find any statute which would authorize the assistant quartermaster general of Ohio as an official of the adjutant general's department to bid on the proposed road, and while I have no doubt, if he could do so, that the facilities at his command coupled with the interest he would have in the work might be productive of a better road, yet I am constrained to hold that your department is without power to bid on or contract for the building or constructing of this road outside of the confines of Camp Perry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

(To the Ohio State Armory Board)

22.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE—ICE HARBOR LOT—LAFAYETTE PLACE—RIGHTS OF CITY OF MARIETTA—RELEASES—DEFEASANCE CLAUSE.

Title to Ice Harbor lot or Lafayette place is legally in the state subject to certain claims for religious purposes reserved by act of congress and to the right of the city of Marietta to build public buildings thereon.

The city should release its privilege and the defeasance clause providing that the property shall revert to that city when it ceased to be used for armory purposes should be omitted. The release from the trustees for the aforementioned charitable purposes should also omit such defeasance clause.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 14, 1911.

Ohio State Armory Board, Col. Byron L. Bargar, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have carefully examined the written information and letter of Attorney Charles C. Middleswart concerning the following part of the Ice Harbor lot or Lafayette place, situated in Marietta, Washington county, Ohio, bounded and described as follows:

> "Beginning at a point on Front street where the southerly line of the lot deeded to the United States for the purpose of a lock tender's house intersects Front street; thence from said point southerly along the westerly line of Front street 185 feet; thence westerly on a line at right angles to Front street to the Muskingum river; thence northerly along the east bank of the Muskingum river to a point where the southerly line of the property deeded to the United States for a lock tender's house intersects the Muskingum river; thence along the said southerly line of said United States property to the place of beginning; together with any and all right, title or interest which the said city of Marietta may own or have in said property.", and have also examined the statutes and court decisions concerning the above described premises and from such examination I am of the opinion that the title to said premises is good of record in the state of Ohio, subject, however, to the claim for religious purposes as provided by the acts of congress and the authority vested by the state in the city of Marietta to erect and permanently maintain city buildings and structures for public use on said premises, together with the necessary and proper rights of way to and across the same. I have also examined the accompanying deed conveying said premises which deed provides that if the state should cease to use the property for armory purposes the same should revert to the city of Marietta.

I am of the opinion that all that is required from the city of Marietta is that it should release to the state the privilege heretofore granted and would suggest that the defeasance clause contained in the deed be eliminated.

The release also, from the trustees managing the lands granted for religious purposes contains a similar provision regarding the reverting of the land to the city in case the state fails to erect or maintain an armory building upon the premises. While I am of the opinion that the title to the property is vested in the state, subject to the claim for religious purposes and the authority given the city of Marietta to build city buildings on the premises, still I think that it would be better for the trustees to pass a resolution eliminating the defeasance clause therein.

I am herewith returning to you the abstract of information and the deed.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

24.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE—CITY OF BUCYRUS—DEED FROM BUCYRUS INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 14, 1911.

Ohio State Armory Board, Col. Byron L. Bargar, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have carefully examined the accompanying abstract of title to lot No. 1246 of the revised numbers on the city of Bucyrus, Crawford county, Ohio, prepared by C. W. Kennedy, abstractor, under date of December 23, 1910, and from such examination I am of the opinion that said abstract shows a good marketable title of record at the date thereof in the Bucyrus Industrial Association of Bucyrus, Ohio.

I have also examined the accompanying deed, purporting to convey the property from the Bucyrus Industrial Association to the state of Ohio, and believe that it is correct in form and when accepted by the state will be sufficient to convey the title.

I am herewith returning to you the abstract and deed.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

90.

DEED AND ABSTRACT OF TITLE—BALDWINS AND WRIGHT TO STATE OF OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

In the deed of A. J. Baldwin, Wright, et al., to the state of Ohio, the words "its successors and assigns" should be inserted in order to convey a fee simple.

The abstract does not disclose whether or not one of the early grantors was married and so either a quit claim deed from the wife should be obtained or affidavits must be obtained to the effect that said grantor was unmarried.

As there are no probate court records to show that the present grantors are the "heirs at law" of the party in whom the abstract shows the title to rest an affidavit to the effect that said party died intestate and that the present grantors are in fact "heirs at law" should be procured.

Futhermore as the abstract discloses only an examination of the records of the recorder's office, nothing being shown as to pending suits, judgments, assignments or other similar proceedings, nor as to taxes, mortgages, nor special assessments, the deed should not be accepted by the state armory board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1911.

COLONEL BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 16th, enclosing deed from A. J. Baldwin and Katie Baldwin, his wife, A. W. Baldwin, an unmarried man, and Sam'l B. Wright, an unmarried man, being all the heirs at law of Rebecca Baldwin, deceased, to the state of Ohio, for the following described real estate.

> "Lying and being situate in the county of Clinton and state of Ohio, and further described as follows: Town lot No. one (1) in Jonathan Baldwin's addition to the town of Blanchester which said town lot will be more fully described by reference to the recorded plat of said addition to said town."

Said deed is duly signed and acknowledged, but does not convey a fee simple title to the state of Ohio. The words "heirs and assigns" in the printed form are stricken out; in their place should be the words "its successors and assigns" if your board desires to acquire a fee simple title to the property.

You also submit in connection with the above described deed an abstract of title to the property therein described. There are some defects in the early history of the title as disclosed by the abstract, which, however, are not of sufficient importance to warrant mention. The abstract does not disclose whether Samuel Baldwin, the grantor of Rebecca Baldwin, was married; the deed by which this conveyance was effected was dated April 10, 1891, and it is obvious that if the grantor was married there may be an outstanding inchoate right of dower. If such is the case a quit claim deed from the wife of Samuel Baldwin should be obtained; otherwise, express affidavits should be furnished showing that Samuel Baldwin was, at the time of the execution of this deed, an unmarried man.

The abstract discloses that title is in Rebecca Baldwin; the deed by which is to be conveyed to the state is that of A. J. Baldwin and Katie Baldwin, his wife; A. W. Baldwin, an unmarried man, and Samuel B. Wright, an unmarried man, "being all the heirs at law of Rebecca Baldwin." No proceedings in the probate court are shown by the abstract whereby these persons are identified as all the heirs at law of Rebecca Baldwin, deceased; nor is there any showing that Rebecca Baldwin is deceased, or that she died intestate. In the absence of any probate or administration proceedings, proper affidavit should be furnished showing that Rebecca Baldwin died intestate, and that the above named persons are all her heirs.

The certificate of the abstractor is merely that, the abstract is "true and correct as taken from the records at the recorder's office at Wilmington, Clinton county, Ohio." If this is the extent of the examination of the abstract you should not, in my opinion, accept this deed, for the certificate seems to disclose that no examination has been made in any of the courts of record of Clinton county for pending suits or judgments, for assignments or other similar proceedings. Nor does the certificate show the payment of taxes or the existence or non-existence of tax titles, the existence or non-existence of mortgages, cancelled or otherwise, any examination of the courts of the United States for pending suits and judgments, or any examination of the records of the village of Blanchester for special assessments of any sort.

Until therefore, the deed is so amended as to conform to the above suggestions, and the abstract is so amplified as to obviate the above criticisms I advise that you do not accept the deed tendered to you by the alleged heirs of Rebecca Baldwin, deceased.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

193.

NO POWER IN MUNICIPALITY TO ISSUE BONDS FOR PURCHASE OF LAND FOR STATE ARMORY PURPOSES—CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION.

A municipality has been delegated by no statute the power to purchase lands for the purpose of donating them to the state for armory purposes.

The sale of bonds by a municipality for such purpose would moreover effect a violation of article 12, section 2 of the constitution of Ohio, that taxes for general purposes must be levied by a uniform rule upon all property within the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1911.

COLONEL BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of March 18th, requesting the opinion of this department upon the following question, viz:

> "Under the armory law and other provisions of the General Code, can a municipality issue bonds for the purchase of a tract of land, which tract is to be conveyed to the state in fee simple?"

In reply I desire to say that under the state armory law, section 5256, General Code, provides:

> "The board may receive gifts or donations of land, money or other property for the purpose of aiding in the purchase, building, furnishing or maintaining of an armory building. All lands so acquired shall be deeded to the state of Ohio, and all property received under the provisions of this section from any source, shall become the property of the state."

Section 3939 of the General Code provides for what purpose a municipal corporation may issue and sell bonds, but in none of the subsections is there any provision for a municipality issuing or selling bonds for the purpose of purchasing land by the municipality for the purpose of giving it to the state of Ohio upon which to erect a state armory.

The question you have submitted to this department has been decided by the supreme court of our state in the case of Hubbard vs. Fitzsimmons, 57 O. S., 436, in which that court held:

> "1. The erection of an armory for the use of the national guard is a general purpose of the state, and taxes to be devoted to that purpose, must, in obedience to the requirement of section 2 of article 12 of the constitution, be levied by a uniform rule upon all the taxable property within the state.
>
> "2. The * * * act to authorize the commissioners of any county containing a city of the first class, second grade, to borrow money and issue bonds therefor, for the purpose of building and furnishing a central armory in such city for the use of the Ohio national guard, and procuring a site therefor, is void, being an attempt to make such general purpose the subject of a local imposition."

The expenses incident to the purchase of land by a municipality for the purpose of deeding it to the state under the armory law, for the purpose of the erection and maintaining of a state armory would be the performance of a duty of a general character, and, therefore, under the decision above quoted cannot be made the subject of local imposition, and for that reason I am of the opinion that no municipality in this state has the legal authority to issue or sell bonds for the purchase of a tract of land for the said purpose of conveying the same to the state in fee simple for armory purposes without cost to the state.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

198.

DEED AND ABSRACT OF PROPERTY OF B. A. BECKER AND WIFE—DEFECTS OF TITLE—STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS—RECORD TITLE.

The deed of B. A. Becker and wife to the state of Ohio is not materially defective and provided the title of the grantors is good, would convey a fee simple.

All defects of title disclosed in the abstract have been cured by the statute of limitations. The record title should be cleared, however, by the definite disclosure of the heirs of Elizabeth Christy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1911.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 4th, submitting for my opinion the question as to what title would be acquired by the state under and by virtue of the deed of B. A. Becker and wife to the state of Ohio executed January 9, 1911, but not filed for record. Said deed, which was enclosed in your letter, purports to convey to the state inlot No. 658 in the village of Clyde, Sandusky county, Ohio. The reservations which it makes are unimportant, and if the title of the grantors was good, the state would acquire under this deed a fee simple title to the said premises.

With the deed you submitted the following papers:

"Abstract of title of said lot 658 showing title, if any, in Elizabeth Christy:

"A deed of Joseph Birdseye to Elizabeth Christy;

"A deed of R. J. Christy and wife,

"W. C. Christy and wife,

"Charles J. Christy and wife,

"Stella C. Ensly and husband, and

"Jennie Barnsby and husband to B. A. Becker, duly signed, witnessed, delivered and recorded October 31, 1910; a tax receipt for the said lot 658 for the entire taxes due for the year 1910, including the installment thereon due June 20, 1911."

The obvious question is as to the title of R. J. Christy, et al., signers of the deed to B. A. Becker, above referred to. I have examined the abstract of title and find that the same does not disclose a good record title in Elizabeth Christy. The following defects may be noted: No patent from the United States to David Bright is on record (see page 1).

The abstract fails to disclose the manner in which Abraham Crable, grantor of Joseph Clapp in the deed (shown at page 3) acquired title to the premises.

I have been unable to account for all the interests possessed by members of the Clapp family under the deed shown at pages 3 and 4, and the will shown at page 5 of the abstract.

It appears that Joseph Clapp, grantor in the first deed, has thereby parted with the undivided three-fourths of the N. E. quarter of section 14, T. 4 N, range 16 east, in which quarter the land now said to be conveyed to the state is located, and that by the deed (shown at page 4) the remaining one-fourth interest of so much of the quarter section as contained the premises under consideration was conveyed by the said Joseph Clapp to Edmund Clapp. Evidently, then, Edmund Clapp at that time acquired a half interest, and Ambrose Clapp and Robert Clapp each got one-fourth interest in the quarter section, with the exception of the eleven acres with which we are not concerned.

The will of Ambrose Clapp (shown at page 5) gives and bequeaths to Hannah Clapp, his wife, the undivided half of all of his real estate. It does not show whether or not this gift and bequest was intended to be a life estate, but, evidently, it has been treated as such by the parties. The remainder is devised, subject to legacies to Edmund Clapp and Robert Clapp, but it nowhere in the abstract appears that these parties are the same as those of the same name, grantors of the deed shown at page 3. Subsequently, Edmund Clapp acquired all the title of Robert Clapp and all the interest of his brothers and sisters in the property by the deeds shown on pages 6 to 11 inclusive, some of which are defective, but he does not acquire the interest of Hannah Clapp, his mother, if such interest was more than a life estate; nor does he acquire the interest of Clary Ann Clapp, if any, who acquired an undivided half interest in the estate of Elizabeth Burdze. As said interest of Elizabeth Burdze was, however, merely an equitable one, I do not regard this defect as important in any event.

The abstractor has secured several affidavits showing the history of the Clapp family, but the facts above stated are not explained thereby.

The deed of Joseph Birdseye and wife to Elizabeth Christy is for lot No. 658 in the village of Clyde, of the same description as the property thought to be conveyed to the state. The abstract fails to show any record plat of the Birdseye addition to the village of Clyde, being a subdivision of outlot No. 26 in the said village, and unless the approval of Eaton's map of the village of Clyde (referred to on page 16) by the county commissioners suffices, there is no such land of record as inlot No. 658.

Elizabeth Christy, however, had possession of the premises from the year 1872 to her death in 1908—a period of thirty-six years. The abstractor certifies that her possession and that of Joseph Birdseye, her grantor, was at all times adverse, open and notorious, and I assume that such possession in every respect satisfies the requirements of law as to adverse possession.

The affidavit shown at page 19 states that Elizabeth Christy dies intestate and that no administration of her estate was had, and that she left three sons and two daughters. The identity of these three sons and two daughters is not disclosed in the abstract, and, strictly speaking, I am not informed as to whether the grantors in the deed from R. J. Christy, et al., to B. A. Becker are all the heirs of Elizabeth Christy. In order that the title of the state may be as completely shown as possible under the circumstances, additional affidavits should be obtained on this point.

The abstractor's certificate does not show any examination for street assessments or other local improvements; nor any examination in the federal courts for pending suits or judgments. There is a general statement that there is no mortgage uncancelled or other lien of any kind against the property, and I presume that the abstractor's examination extends to judgment records of the county courts.

All of the defects above discussed, excepting the failure of the abstractor to disclose the identity of Elizabeth Christy's heirs, are so remote as to time that the undisputed possession of Elizabeth Christy, and her predecessors and successors in the title, is such as to vest the grantee, B. A. Becker, with a good and sufficient title, by prescription.

It appears that, excepting in the one particular above referred to, the abstractor has made every effort to amplify the records by such affidavits as might be available, and that the title to the premises in question is as good as that of any property in the village of Clyde, or at least in that portion of it which is included in the northeast quarter of section 14.

I therefore advise you that the title of the state of Ohio under the deed of B. A. Becker and wife, above referred to, would be good in all likelihood, and beyond any reasonable doubt by virtue of the operation of the statute of limitation. I cannot advise that the record title is good and I recommend that before the deed is accepted the abstract show definitely the identity of the heirs of Elizabeth Christy.

I herewith transmit the papers submitted to me.

Very respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

199.

DEED AND ABSTRACT OF PROPERTIES OF MARY HYMAN, EMMETT SAVAGE AND SADIE C. SAVAGE, AND EMMETT L. SAVAGE, SITUATED IN PAULDING, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, 1911.

COL. B. L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of several letters from you submitting for my opinion thereon the following papers: Abstract of title to inlot No. 169 and the west 22 feet of inlot No. 170, original plat of the village of Paulding, Paulding county, Ohio; a continuation of said abstract to March 16, 1911; deed from Mary Hyman to the state of Ohio, dated March 13, 1911; deed from Emmett L. Savage and Sadie C. Savage, his wife, to the state of Ohio, dated March 11, 1911; and deed of Emmett L. Savage, et al., to the state of Ohio, dated March 11, 1911.

With respect to the abstract I beg to state that it commences with the dedication of the original town plat of the town of Paulding by George Marsh on his own part and as attorney in fact of J. D. Loomis and J. Watson Riley. This dedication is dated August 10, 1856. The first warranty deed shown by the abstract, being a deed from William Moneysmith and Serena Moneysmith, his wife, to Robert McCreary, is dated May 5, 1856, and filed for record May 13, 1856. This deed purports to convey inlot No. 169 of the original plat of the village of Paulding, Ohio. At that time apparently, there was no such thing as lot 169, nor does the abstract disclose the manner in which William Moneysmith acquired title to the land which subsequently became inlot No. 169.

The foregoing defect is in all probability cured by lapse of time, but I may state at the outset that I cannot hold that the record title of any of the premises under consideration is good, in consideration of the fact that the abstract itself does not commence prior to 1850.

The abstract does not disclose whether or not Henry A. Fergerson, grantor of Corinthe C. Russell in the deed executed January 19, 1880, was married. Affidavit should be secured as to this fact inasmuch as it is possible that there may be an outstanding inchoate right of dower in the wife of Henry A. Fergerson.

The abstract does not disclose whether Alexander Sankey Latty, grantor of Edwin N. Day, in the deed executed September 5, 1853, was married. The remoteness of this deed, however, is such as to preclude all reasonable possibility of the existence of an inchoate right of dower. If possible, however, affidavit should be secured on this point.

The grantor Will Thompson, in the deed executed June 26, 1897, is probably the same person as Isaac W. Thompson, the grantee in the deed shown on the preceding page. It would be better, however, if this fact were shown by affidavit as the deed of these conveyances is comparatively recent.

Affidavit should be furnished showing that the recital in the deed of March 11, 1911, to the effect that Emmett L. Savage, et al., are the sole and only heirs at law of W. L. Savage, deceased, is true. The same note may be made regarding the recital in the deed of February 24, 1911, of Josephine Powell, et al., to Emmett L. Savage.

The abstractor's certificate discloses that all taxes and special assessments charged against the premises for the year 1910 are paid in full, and the general certificate made by him relates to all possible liens excepting those existing by virtue of pending suits and judgments in federal courts, concerning which no examination has been made.

The deeds submitted are sufficient in my judgment to vest in the state of Ohio a good and sufficient title to the premises sought to be conveyed. In so holding I advise that the failure of the abstract to disclose the history of the title of the premises prior to 1850 may safely be ignored, but that the other defects above noted with the exception of the possibility of suits and judgments in federal courts should be cured in the manner above suggested.

I herewith return the papers submitted to me.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 199.

DEED AND ABSTRACT—LANDS RESERVED BY CONGRESS FOR SUPPORT OF RELIGION IN OHIO COMPANY'S AND JOHN CLEEVE SYMME'S PURCHASES—INTEREST OF CITY OF MARIETTA AND MINISTERIAL TRUSTEES—QUIT CLAIM DEEDS—NECESSITY FOR LEGISLATIVE ACT.

In order to sell the lands reserved for the support of religion in the Ohio Company's and John Cleeve Symme's purchases or any part of such land, the legislature will have to provide by enactment therefor, in order to convey a fee simple title.

Quit claim deeds from the intended beneficiaries, i. e., the city of Marietta and the ministerial trustees, will not cure the title as the title is already in the state of Ohio for certain purposes only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, 1911.

The Ohio State Armory Board, Col. Byron L. Bargar, Secretary, Columbus. Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of March 19, 1910, in which you state:

> "1. The city of Marietta did not convey an absolute fee simple estate, having specified that the conveyance was for a certain purpose. The board understands that this objection will be removed by the city of Marietta; probably by a curative deed.
>
> "2. The ministerial trustees, who have, or formerly had, color of title to this land, refuse to quit claim to the state. The board desires a perfect title, so that they can sell the land and the armory for the state, when no longer used for military purposes. If the ministerial trustees have such title as would interfere with the state's title, in the event that the state desires to subsequently sell, the board deems the title objectionable."

I am also in receipt of letters written to you by C. C. Middleswart, secretary of the board of trade of Marietta, Ohio, dated January 25, 1910, and March 8, 1911; also the abstract of title presented to me.

After having carefully examined the letters and the abstract as submitted, I am of the opinion that unless the provisions in Mr. Middleswart's letter of January 25, 1910, on the second page thereof, are complied with, no fee simple title can be acquired by your board. The said provisions are as follows:

> "No. 133. An act to authorize the legislature of the state of Ohio to sell the land reserved for the support of religion in the Ohio Company's and John Cleeve Symmes' purchases.
>
> "Be it remembered, etc., that the legislature of the state of Ohio shall be, and is hereby, authorized to sell and convey, in fee simple, all or any part of the lands heretofore reserved and appropriated by congress for the support of religion within the Ohio Company's (a) and John Cleeve Symmes' purchases, (b) in the state of Ohio, and to invest the money arising from the sale thereof, in some productive fund; the proceeds of which shall forever be annually applied, under the direction of the said legislature, for the support of religion within the several townships for which said lands were originally reserved and set apart, and for no other use or purpose whatsoever, according to the terms and stipulations of the contracts of the said Ohio Company's, and John Cleeve Symmes' purchases within the United States:

"Provided, said land, or any part of it, shall, in no case, be sold without consent of the person who may be lessee thereof, nor without the consent of the inhabitants of the township within which any such land may be situated, to be obtained in such manner as the legislature of said state shall, by law, direct:

"And provided also, that in the apportionment of the proceeds of the said fund, each township within the districts of country aforesaid, shall be entitled to such portion thereof, and no more, as shall have accrued from the sum or sums of money arising from the sale of the church land belonging to such township."

It is expressly provided that the legislature of the state of Ohio shall be, and is hereby, authorized to sell and convey, in fee simple, all or any part of the lands heretofore reserved and appropriated by congress for the support of religion within the Ohio Company's and John Cleeve Symmes' purchases in the state of Ohio, and invest the money arising from the sale thereof in some productive fund; the proceeds of which shall be forever annually applied, under the direction of the said legislature, etc.

I am of the opinion that the legislature of the state by enactment will have to provide for the sale of any part of this real estate, and for a sufficient consideration in money, in order to convey a fee simple title.

Regarding the quit claim deeds which are proposed by the city of Marietta and the ministerial trustees, I do not think that they will cure the title; for the state of Ohio is already the owner of the title, but only for the purposes set forth as hereinbefore noted. Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

206.

DEED AND ABSTRACT OF PROPERTY OF DUNHAM AND HOPPING SITUATED IN LEBANON, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1911.

The Ohio State Armory Board, Col. Byron L. Bargar, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your favor of March 28th, also paper purporting to be an abstract of title signed by W. Z. Roll, attorney at law, Lebanon, Ohio, and you ask for my opinion regarding the abstract of title to the following described real estate:

"Situate in the village of Lebanon, county of Warren and state of Ohio, and being east part of lot No. ninety-two (92) as the same is known and described in the recorded plat of the village of Lebanon, Warren county, Ohio, being eighty-two and one-half (82½) feet front on Broadway and one hundred (100) feet deep, containing eight thousand two hundred and fifty (8,250) square feet."

You also ask what further papers we need for completion of this abstract, if any, and what title the state may acquire thereunder on proper deed from Dunham and Hopping.

I am returning you herewith the said paper purporting to be an abstract of title as too vague for consideration.

Each conveyance should at least show all the grantors, grantees, kind of deed, consideration, witnesses, description of the property, acknowledgment by the proper officer, record page, and the covenants. Mortgage record should also be more clearly shown.

The abstract should further show the title from the government to Silas Hurin and Agnes Hurin; title from Joseph Canby and wife to Ichabod Corwin, et al., and who all the parties were in this conveyance; Ichabod Corwin, et al., to Dunlevy and who the other parties in addition to Ichabod Corwin are; whether A. H. Dunlevy was married or unmarried; how Sellers and Hagerman acquired title; the proceedings in the estate of John A. Bone; the proceedings in the estate of Jonathan Conroy; and how Appleyard became trustee and what he was trustee for.

Until these matters are properly presented to me I shall be unable to give you a proper opinion on the title to this property.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 228.

DEED AND ABSTRACT OF PROPERTIES OF B. A. BECKER AND WIFE SITUATED IN CLYDE, OHIO—DEFECTS REMEDIED.

The defects of the abstract having been remedied in accordance with the suggestions of a former opinion, title of state would, beyond reasonable doubt, be good not as regards the record but by reason of the adverse possession of former owners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 21, 1911.

COL. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of abstract of title to inlot No. 628 in the village of Clyde, Sandusky county, Ohio, with deeds for same from Joseph Birdseye to Elizabeth Christy, R. J. Christy and others to B. A. Becker, and B. A. Becker and wife to the state of Ohio, and requesting my opinion as to the title of the state under said deed from B. A. Becker and wife as disclosed by said abstract. In a former opinion addressed to you regarding the title of this lot you were advised that the identity of Elizabeth Christy's heirs was not disclosed by the abstract. This difficulty is now remedied by the deed submitted to me in connection with the affidavits attached to the abstract since my former examination thereof.

As stated in the former opinion, the curing of this defect enables me to advise you that the title of the state under the deed of B. A. Becker and wife would, in all likelihood and beyond any reasonable doubt, be good—not as a matter of record, but because of the adverse possession Elizabeth Christy and Joseph Birdseye, to which the abstractor certifies. For a more specific discussion I refer you to my former opinion.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

246.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE OF PROPERTIES OF PETER B. DUNHAM AND W. H. HOPPING SITUATED IN LEBANON, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1911.

COL. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Arbory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In compliance with your request of April 24th, I have examined the enclosed abstract of title to an armory site in Lebanon, Warren county, Ohio, being one hundred feet off the east end of lot No. 92 in the village of Lebanon, with a view to ascertaining the title which the state will acquire under proper deed from Peter B. Dunham and W. H. Hopping.

The said lot No. 92 was subdivided in 1825 while Joseph Canby was seized thereof. The east half was conveyed by deed shown at page 9 of the abstract to Ichabod Corwin. There is nothing shown in the abstract, however, as to how the west half passed from Joseph Canby. The deed shown at page 15 vests in Samuel Perrott the title, if any, of S. Hageman to the said west half, but the exact nature or extent of the grantor's interest is not established.

The same remark may be made with respect to the deed shown at page 14. These matters, however, are of remote date, and Jonathan Conray who secured Samuel Perrott's title has evidently held possession of the property for a period of fifty-one years, so that I assume that the break in the chain of title to the west half of lot No. 92 is at this time unimportant and may be safely disregarded.

The abstractor certifies on page 19 that "George M. Conrey is the heir of Jonathan Conrey, deceased." The grantor in the deed shown on page — is John M. Conrey, so that the memorandum of the abstractor is not clear. Furthermore it would be insufficient to certify that the grantor in the deed is the "heir of Jonathan Conrey, deceased." Affidavits should be filed showing that George M. Conrey is the sole heir of Jonathan Conrey, deceased, and capable of transmitting the entire interest of the said Jonathan Conrey in said lot No. 92. This conveyance is of such recent date that I would not feel justified in approving the title without being satisfied upon this point.

The abstractor certifies on page 20 that he is of the opinion that the title "trustee" appended to the name of the grantee in said deed shown at page 21 is meaningless. If possible it would be well to secure the affidavit of Arthur E. Appleyard showing that he was not a trustee in fact, so that his power to convey by deed shown at page 21 may be established.

The abstractor's certificate at the end of the abstract is quite complete and shows a very thorough examination. Taxes for the last half of the year 1910 are unpaid and a lien, as is a special assessment of $2.10 for sewer.

I am of the opinion that if the grantors in the deed shown at page 19 were at the time seized of the entire interest of Jonathan Conrey, and if Arthur E. Appleyard, "trustee," had the power to convey a fee simple title by the deed shown at page 21 the present title of Peter B. Dunham and W. H. Hopping to the site now proposed to be conveyed to the state of Ohio is good and that the same may be accepted by your board. Before such acceptance, however, affidavits should be furnished showing the facts with regard to the two questions above suggested.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

253.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE OF PROPERTIES OF CHARLES B. UNGER AND JESSIE N. WISEHART' SITUATED IN EATON, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1911.

Ohio State Armory Board, Col. B L. Bargar, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of May 5, 1911, enclosing abstracts of lots 273 and 274 in Eaton, Preble county, Ohio, in which you state:

> "I herewith have the honor to transmit abstract of title to lots 273 and 274, of the village of Eaton, Ohio. These lots are to be conveyed to the state of Ohio for an armory site.
>
> "The state armory board requests opinion as to title of said lots in Charles B. Unger and Jessie M. Wisehart as shown by said abstract."

After having carefully examined said contract, I am of the opinion that the following changes should be made:

1. The deed from Cornelius Van Ausdal to Thomas J. Larsh, page 21 of said abstract, should be secured, but if it is lost or destroyed, an affidavit should be made setting up the facts;

2. Also an affidavit by some other heirs showing who all the heirs of said Cornelius Van Ausdel were and their line of descents so that it can be ascertained whether or not all of the heirs of said Cornelius Van Ausdel have quit claimed all their right, title and interest to Charles B. Unger and Jessie M. Wisehart in said property.

With these additions I am of the opinion that the abstract submitted will show a good title in Charles B. Unger and Jessie M. Wisehart subject to the dower interests of John H. Unger, who should join in the deed of conveyance.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

424.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE OF LOT No. 151 IN THE VILLAGE OF SPENCERVILLE, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1911.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary of Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of the abstract of title of lot No. 151 in the village of Spencerville, Allen county, Ohio, upon which you request my opinion. The abstract as submitted shows numerous defects, and I shall discuss them in their order.

The deed from Evan B. Jones and wife to William Tyler attempts to convey the undivided one-third part of lot No. 151. Reference to the previous deeds shows that said Jones never owned more than one undivided third part of the said land, which he had theretofore conveyed to A. C. Conover (see No. 6).

The abstract fails to disclose that William Tyler owned more than one undivided third part of the said premises at the time he attempted to convey one undivided half thereof to Alexander G. Conover (see No. 8).

There is nothing to establish how the grantors in No. 9 acquired title to the land therein conveyed. These defects, in my judgment, are rather immaterial because of the long continued operation of the statutes of limitation. A further search of the records might disclose instruments curing these defects, and I would suggest that such search be made.

The mortgage from A. F. W. Meyers to Johnzy Keeth is not of record and the estate of A. F. W. Meyers does not appear to have been settled. It would seem that the mortgage was adjudicated in proceedings to sell the real estate to pay debts brought by the administrator of the estate of the said Meyers. These proceedings, together with the showing of the settlement of the estate should be abstracted.

There are no liens so far as disclosed by the abstract. No examination appears to have been made for liens of the records of the United States district and circuit courts.

Upon the execution and delivery of proper warranty deed from the present owner and correction of the abstract in the respects indicated, the state will derive good and sufficient title to the land above mentioned.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

425.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE OF PROPERTY OF LOT No. 152 IN THE VILLAGE OF SPENCERVILLE, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 17, 1911.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of the abstract of title of the south half of lot No. 152 in the village of Spencerville, Allen county, Ohio, upon which you request my opinion. There are numerous defects in the title as disclosed by the abstract, and I shall discuss them in their order.

The title to this lot runs the same as that of lot No. 151, upon which I have rendered an opinion, down to and including the deed from Johnzy Keeth to A. F. W. Meyers, and the objections therein stated apply equally to the title of the lot mentioned herein.

The premises in question seem to have been sold by the sheriff of the said county to Robert H. Harrison, but the court proceedings of the said sale are not abstracted.

No showing has been made of the settlement of the estate of Richard Slonson and Edward R. Farrington. The deed of the administrator of the Slonson estate conveys one undivided third interest, and so far as the preceding deeds show, Richard Slonson was owner of one undivided half interest, thus leaving one-sixth interest outstanding, which must be satisfactorily accounted for before the state can acquire good title.

Numerous mortgages have been given which are not released. They appear to have been adjudicated in court proceedings, which proceedings should be set out more fully than by mere reference.

There are no liens disclosed by the abstract. No examination appears to have been made in the United States circuit and district courts for liens.

On execution and delivery of proper warranty deed and correction of the abstract in the particulars above mentioned, and especially with reference to the accounting for the outstanding undivided one-sixth interest, I am of the opinion that the state will acquire a good and sufficient title to said property.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

502.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE—JONATHAN BALDWIN'S ADDITION TO TOWN OF BLANCHESTER.

Failure to release dower cured by act of May 31, 1911, 102 O. L. 461.
Mortgage liens against said real estate should be specifically noted in said abstract together with date and cancellation of same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 22, 1911.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of December 12, 1911, enclosing the abstract of title and deed for the following described premises:

> "The following described real estate lying and being situate in the county of Clinton and state of Ohio, and further described as follows: Town lot No. one (1) in Jonathan Baldwin's addition to the town of Blanchester which said town lot will be more fully described by reference to the recorded plat of said addition to said town."

I have very carefully examined the deed and find no defects in the same. I have likewise very carefully examined the abstract of title and find the following defect, to-wit:

In the deed of conveyance from Benjamin Baldwin and Martha Baldwin, his wife, to Jonathan Baldwin, dated October 31, 1848, there is no release of dower on the part of the wife, Martha Baldwin. However, I am of the opinion that such defect is cured by an act of the legislature entitled "An act to cure and make valid certain deeds and the record thereof," passed May 31, 1911, and found in 102 Ohio Laws, 461; said act provides as follows:

> "When any deed conveying real estate shall have been of record in the office of the recorder of the county within this state, in which such real estate is situated, for more than twenty-one years prior to the taking effect of this act, and the record thereof shows that there is a defect in such deed, for any one or more of the following reasons: Because the husband did not join with the wife or the wife with the husband in all the clauses of the deed conveying such real estate, but did join with each other in one of them, in the execution and acknowledgment of such deed; or because any grantor in such deed omitted to affix his seal thereto; or because such deed was not properly witnessed; or because the acknowledgment to such deed does not show that the wife was examined separate and apart from her husband; or because the officer taking the acknowledgment of such deed, having an official seal, did not affix the same to the certificate of acknowledgment; or because the certificate of acknowledgment is not on the same sheet of paper as the deed; or because the executor, administrator, guardian, or assignee or trustee making such deed, signed the same individually instead of in his official capacity; or because the corporate seal of the corporation making such deed was not affixed thereto, such deed and the record thereof shall be cured of such defects, and be effective in all respects as if such deeds had been legally made, executed and acknowledged. Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect rights vesting after the record of such defective deed, and prior to the passage of this act, or operate on any suit, or action now pending, or which may have been heretofore determined in any court of this state, in which the validity of the making, execution or acknowledgment of any such deed has been or may hereafter be drawn into question. Any person claiming adverse title thereto shall bring proceedings within one year from the taking effect of this act, if not already barred by limitation or otherwise."

I am further of the opinion that each of the mortgage liens against said real estate should be specifically noted in the abstract, together with the date of cancellation of the same.

For the purpose of correcting said abstract along the line of the last suggestion I am herewith returning the same for that purpose.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Tax Commission of Ohio)

64.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BANKING CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS —TAX ON SHARES OF STOCK—STOCKHOLDERS PRIMARILY LIABLE —COLLECTION THROUGH CORPORATION AND ASSOCIATION—APPLICATION TO UNITED STATES BANKS—UNITED STATES AND CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS—NON-RESIDENT SHAREHOLDERS.

Section 5408 of the General Code, et seq., provides that the tax upon shares of stock of incorporated banks or banking associations of Ohio shall be assessed against the shareholders and not against the association as such.

Section 5673 of the General Code provides that such bank or association may pay the taxes assessed upon its shares in the hands of shareholders and deduct the amount thereof from dividends or other funds in its possession belonging to such shareholder.

Under this section, the bank cannot be obliged to pay such in the absence of agreement except by garnishee process.

Such a tax is not in conflict with section 5133, et seq., Revised Statutes of the United States, and may therefore be applied to shareholders of United States banks under the permissions and restrictions therein provided for. Nor is it in conflict with section 5219, Revised Statutes of the United States, providing against a taxation "at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of each state," for the reason that article 2, section 12, of the constitution making a distinction between "credits" and "investments in stock" sustain section 5327, General Code, providing that debts may be deducted only from "credits" for purposes of taxation.

This tax on national bank shares must be assessed against shareholders who are not residents of the state of Ohio, and the valuation of such shares shall under section 5606, General Code, which is in compliance with section 5219, Revised Statutes of the United States, be placed upon the tax list of the counties in which the respective banks are located.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25, 1911.

To the Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 18th, enclosing a copy of a circular letter addressed to W. C. Rowland by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue of the United States, and a letter addressed to you by the president of the Franklin National Bank of Newark.

These communications both relate to the collection of the tax assessed by the state of Ohio, upon the shares of stock of incorporated banking companies and associations. With respect thereto, you make the following comments and requests:

> "The disposition on the part of the banks appears to be, that if they are not required to pay these taxes as banks, but the payments made by them are for the accommodation of the individual stockholders, they will decline to make such payments in the future; and they suggest the additional question, that, if the stockholders are liable for these taxes and not the bank, non-resident stockholders are not liable.
>
> "If such contention can be maintained, the effect would be to greatly reduce the amount of taxes collectible from the banks of the state.

"Insofar as this matter relates to national banks, it involves a consideration of the extent to which the state may tax national banks.

"In view of the importance of the matter, the commission is not disposed to make a ruling without first submitting it to you for an opinion, and the question it desires to submit may be stated as follows:

"(1) Are the taxes assessed against shares of national banks, liabilities of the corporations, as such, and enforceable against the property of the banks, or are they liabilities of the shareholders?

"(2) If liabilities of the individual shareholders, can the tax be assessed against shareholders not residents of the State of Ohio?"

The following provisions of the General Code of Ohio must be considered in connection with these questions:

"Section 5408. All the shares of the stockholders in an incorporated bank or banking association, located in this state, incorporated or organized under the laws of the state, or of the United States, * * * the capital stock of which is divided into shares held by the owners of such bank, * * * shall be listed at the true value in money and taxed only in the city, ward or village where such bank is located.

"Section 5410. There shall be kept in the office, at all times, where the business of such bank or banking association is transacted, a full and correct list of the names and residences of the stockholders therein, and the number of shares held by each, which at all times during business hours, shall be open to the inspection of all officers who are or may be authorized to list or assess the value of such shares for taxation.

"Section 5411. The cashier of each incorporated bank * * * shall return to the auditor of the county in which such bank is located, between the first and second Mondays of May, annually, a report in duplicate under oath, exhibiting in detail * * * the resources and liabilities of such bank at the close of business on the Wednesday next preceding the said second Monday, with a full statement of the names and residences of the stockholders therein, the number of shares held by each, and the par value of each share." * * *

"Section 5412. Upon receipt of such report the county auditor shall fix the total value of the shares of such banks, * * * according to their true value in money and deduct from the aggregate sum so found * * * the value of the real estate included in the statement of resources as it stands on the duplicate. Thereupon he shall make and transmit to the annual state board of equalization for banks a copy of the report so made by the cashier * * * with the valuation of such shares * * * as so fixed by the auditor.

"Section 5413. If a bank fails to make and furnish to the county auditor the statement required, within the time herein fixed, the auditor shall examine the books of the bank; and also any officer or agent thereof under oath, and such other persons as he deems proper, and make such statement. The auditor shall have like powers, and the probate judge of the county shall exercise like powers and perform like duties in aid of the auditor * * * as are authorized by law in cases where the county auditor is informed, or has reason to believe, that any person has failed to make a return, or has made a false return for taxation. The statement so made out by the auditor shall stand as the statement required to be made by the cashier.

"Section 5414. A bank officer who fails to make out and furnish to the county auditor the return required by section fifty-four hundred and eleven, or wilfully makes a false statement on such return, shall forfeit not more than one hundred dollars. * * *

"Section 5602. The governor, auditor of state and attorney general shall constitute a board of equalization of the shares of incorporated banks. * * *

"Section 5604. The board shall hear complaints and equalize the value of the shares and property, representing capital employed. * * * If in the judgment of the board * * * the aggregate value of all the bank property so reported to the board by the county auditor is not its true value in money, it may increase or diminish the value of the shares and property representing capital employed by such a per cent. as will equalize each to their value in money.

"Section 5606. The auditor of state forthwith after such equalization is made, shall certify to the auditor of the proper counties, the valuations, as equalized, of the shares of * * * banks situated in such counties, which valuation shall be placed upon the proper tax duplicate."

(Sections 5602 to 5606, inclusive, providing for and defining the powers and duties of the annual state board of equalization for banks were repealed, 101 O. L., 399-430, section 123; but the powers and duties created and defined under said sections were by section 115 of the same act, 101 O. L., 425, imposed upon and vested in the tax commission of Ohio.)

"Section 5672. Taxes assessed on shares of stock, or the value thereof, of a bank or banking association, shall be a lien on such shares from the first Monday of May in each year until they are paid. If such taxes are not paid at the time required by law by a shareholder, and after notice received of the county treasurer of the non-payment thereof, the cashier * * * of such bank or banking association shall not transfer or permit to be transferred the whole or any portion of such stock until the delinquent taxes thereon * * * are paid in full. No dividend shall be paid on stock so delinquent so long as such taxes, * * * or any part thereof remain due and unpaid.

"Section 5673. Such bank or banking association may pay to the treasurer of the county in which it is located, the taxes assessed upon its shares, in the hands of its shareholders respectively * * * and deduct the amount thereof from dividends that are due or thereafter become due on such shares, or from any funds in its possession belonging to such shareholder."

It is first to be observed, regarding these provisions, that they deal with all incorporated banks in the same manner. The law does not provide one method of procedure with respect to the assessment and collection of a tax upon the shares of stock of state banks, and another with respect to the taxes assessed and collected from national banks. It is to be presumed, therefore, that, if the act is to be given any certain construction on account of its applicability to national banks, that same construction will govern its application to all other incorporated banks.

It has now become well settled that, in the absence of specific permission on the part of congress, a state may not, either directly or indirectly tax an agency of the federal government or any capital employed or invested therein. (Mc-Cullouch vs. Maryland, 4 Wheaton, 316; Osborne vs. Bank of the United States, 9 Wheaton, 738.) Laws of the kind now under consideration, therefore, are to be upheld, if at all, by recourse to some such federal legislation, and their provisions if doubtful, must be construed in the light of such legislation.

The national bank act of the United States as revised, constitutes section 5133, et seq., Revised Statutes of the United States. Section 5219 of said act provides as follows:

> "Nothing herein shall prevent all the shares in any (national banking) association from being included in the valuation of the personal property of the owner or holder of such shares, in assessing taxes imposed by authority of the state within which the association is located; but the legislature of each state may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within the state, subject only to the two restrictions, that the taxation shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state, and that the shares of any national banking association owned by non-residents of any state shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located, and not elsewhere. * * *"

It is manifest from the language of the above quoted federal law that no authority or permission is thereby granted to any state to impose a tax upon a national banking association as such, nor does it provide for an assessment of taxes upon the shares of stock in such an association for which the association itself shall be solely liable. (Radley vs. People, 4 Wallace, 459; Bank Tax Cases, 3 Wallace, 573.) On the other hand, however, it was held early in the history of the national banking act that a state in collecting the taxes assessed against the shares of stock of a national bank might make the bank or its officers primarily liable therefor, as agents of the stockholders. First National Bank vs. Commonwealth, 9 Wallace, 353. The statute of the state of Kentucky, under review in this case, imposed a tax on "bank stock or stock in any moneyed corporation of loss and discount, of fifty cents on each share thereof, equal to one hundred dollars of stock therein, owned by individuals, corporations or societies," and provided that "the cashier of a bank, whose stock is taxed, shall, on the first day of July in each year pay into the treasury the amount of tax due thereon." Mr. Justice Miller in delivering the opinion of the court employed the following language:

> "We entertain no doubt that this provision (referring to the first of the two provisions above quoted from the Kentucky statute) was intended to tax the shares of the stockholders, and that if no other provision had been made, the amount of the tax would have been primarily collectible of the individual or corporation owning such shares, in the same manner as other taxes are collected from individuals. * * *
>
> "But it is strongly urged that to be deemed a tax on the capital of the bank, because the law requires the officers of the bank to pay this tax on the shares of its stockholders. Whether the state has the right to do this we will presently consider; but the fact that it has attempted to do it does not prove that the tax is anything else than a tax on those shares. It has been the practice of many of the states for a long time to require of its corporations, thus to pay the tax levied on their shareholders. * * * In the case of shareholders not residing in the state, it is the only mode in which the state can reach their shares for taxation. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the law of Kentucky is a tax upon the shares of the stockholders. If the state cannot require the bank to pay the tax on the shares of its stock it must be because the constitution of the United States or some act of congress forbids it. There is certainly no express provision of the constitution on the subject.

"But it is argued that the banks, by instrumentalities of the federal government * * * cannot be subjected to such state legislation. The principle * * * has its limitation, a limitation growing out of the necessity on which the principle itself is founded. What limitation is, that the agencies of the federal government are only exempted from state legislation, so far as that legislation may interfere with or impair their efficiency in performing the functions by which they are designed to serve that government. * * * It is only when the state law incapacitates the banks from discharging their duties to the government that it becomes unconstitutional. We do not see the remotest possibility of this in their being required to pay the tax which their stockholders owe to the state * * * when the law of the federal government authorizes the taxes.

"If the state of Kentucky had a claim against a stockholder of the bank who was a non-resident of the state, it could undoubtedly collect the claim by legal proceeding in which the bank could be attached or garnisheed and made to pay the debt out of the means of its shareholders under its control. This is, in effect, what the law of Kentucky does in regard to the tax of the state on the bank shares. It is no greater interference with the functions of the bank than any other legal proceeding to which its business operations may subject it. * * *

"We are of opinion that, while congress intended to limit state taxation to the shares of the bank as distinguished from its capital, and to provide against a discrimination in taxing such bank shares * * * it did not intend to prescribe to the states the mode in which the tax should be collected. * * *"

This case, which is the leading decision upon the point involved, establishes the principle that a state may make a national bank primarily and directly liable for the payment of the tax on its shares, although it may not assess the tax against the bank as such.

Statutes similar to the Ohio statute above quoted have been enacted in substantially all the states of the Union. Comparison of such statutes and the decisions construing some with the Kentucky statute involved in the case last above cited and quoted from, on the one hand, and with the Ohio statute above quoted, on the other hand, is interesting and profitable in the solution of the problem under consideration.

In Sumter County vs. National Bank, 62 Ala., 464, a leading case among such decisions, it was held that, in the absence of a specific provision compelling banks to pay taxes on their shares, such taxes could not be collected therefrom, but must be collected from the shareholders personally.

In Hirshire vs. First National Bank, 35 Iowa, 273, the action was brought by the county treasurer against the bank as such for taxes and penalties due from non-resident shareholders. It was averred that the shares had been legally assessed for taxation, and that the holders had refused to pay. The statute of Iowa involved in the case, provided a method of collection, different from both the Kentucky statute above quoted, and from the Ohio statute. It provided in part that:

"For the purpose of securing taxes assessed upon said shares, each banking association shall be liable to pay the same, as the agent of each of its shareholders, under the provisions of section 725 of the revision of 1860; and it shall be the duty of the association to retain so much of any dividend or dividends belonging to any shareholder as shall be necessary to pay any taxes levied upon his or her shares."

Said section 725 of the revision of 1860 provides:

"Any person acting as the agent of another and having in his possession or under his control * * * any money, credits, * * * or properly belonging to such other person, with a view of investing * * * the same for pecuniary profit, shall be required to list the same. * * *"

In sustaining a demurrer to the petition, the supreme court of Iowa used the following language (page 275):

"It will be observed upon the bare reading of our statute that it does not, like the Kentucky statute * * * make the banking association directly liable for the taxes levied upon the shares. * * * The banking association could only be made liable, when it had the money, property or credits of its shareholders under its control, or when it retained or failed to retain dividends. * * *

"The shares of the banking association are the property and under the control of the shareholders * * * not * * * of the banking association.

"In brief, our view of the statute is, that it effectuates a statutory garnishment of the bank, to secure the payment of the tax due from its shareholders, * * * whereas, the Kentucky statute makes the bank liable absolutely for the taxes upon shares. If that is better than ours it is for the legislature and not for us to enact it here."

In First National Bank vs. Fancher, 48 N. Y., 524, it is held that in the absence of a statute authorizing a levy upon the property of a bank, a collector might levy only upon the property of the shareholders.

In all of the foregoing cases, the Kentucky statute and the decision thereunder, in Commonwealth vs. Bank, supra, were distinguished and regarded antithetical to the statutes under consideration. On the other hand, however, the statutes of many states have been drawn similarly to that of Kentucky, and so long as the assessment is in terms against the stockholders, direct and compulsory collection from the bank under such statutes is upheld. Thus, in Mechanics National Bank vs. Baker, 65 N. J. L., 113, the court upheld a statute of New Jersey, providing that it should be the duty of each bank to retain and pay the amount of taxes assessed to each shareholder out of the dividends, and that "in case said owner * * * shall be a non-resident of this state, then, and in that case, such banks shall be assessed to the amount of such shares as owned or held by non-residents." In construing this statute the court did not regard the assessment provided for in case of non-residents as a direct assessment against the bank, and for which the bank would be ultimately and solely liable, but rather as creating a primary liability against the bank, leaving it "to charge against each non-resident shareholder his true proportion" thereof.

The statute of Missouri makes the bank primarily liable, though the assessment is against the shareholder. Lyonberger vs. Rowse, 43 Mo., 67, Springfield vs. National Bank, 87 Mo., 441.

The statute of the state of Washington, construed and upheld in First National Bank vs. Chehalie County, 166 U. S., 440, assessed a tax against "the aggregate amount of capital, surplus and undivided profits" of all banks; and Mr. Justice Shires in delivering the opinion of the court plainly indicates that "if this section stood alone there might be ground for the contention that it contemplates taxation of the capital of the bank." The constitutionality of the law was established because another section provided that "each bank and banking association shall be liable to pay any taxes hereafter assessed against them, as the agent of each of its shareholders, owners or owner, under the provisions of this act, and may pay the same out of their individual profit account or charge the same to their expense account or to the accounts of such shareholders, owners or owner in proportion to their ownership."

From all the statutes involved in the cases above cited certain types may readily be distinguished, as follows:

1. Statutes making the bank liable for the entire aggregate amount assessed against the holders of its shares of stock, as agent of such holders, and regardless of its possession of any funds or property of such shareholders, or its present or future liability to them for dividends. Under statutes of this type, of course, the tax may be collected directly from the bank.

2. Statutes making the bank liable to pay the tax assessed against its shareholders in the event that it owns or controls property of such shareholders, or owes or will owe dividends to them. Under such statutes the liability of the bank to pay the tax is contingent upon the existence of such facts and cannot be simply and directly enforced.

3. Statutes which do not require the bank to pay the tax assessed against its shares of stock. In such cases the collection of the tax from the bank cannot be enforced.

Before comparing the Ohio statute with the statutes above described and classified, it is perhaps proper to state that in some states, laws making banks liable for the amount of the taxes assessed against their shareholders, have been held unconstitutional as per se discriminatory under the first restriction set forth in section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, above quoted; that is to say, in states wherein debts are permitted to be deducted from personal property or investments, such a method of collection, affording as it does no opportunity for any such deduction on the part of the individual stockholders, liable in theory for the taxes, subjects such stockholders in effect to "tax * * * at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state," as prohibited by said section 5219, Revised States of the United States.

National Bank vs. Richmond, 42 Federal, 577; National Bank vs. Fisher, 45 Kansas, 726.

In Ohio, however, such a discrimination cannot arise, because for purposes of taxation, a distinction is made by article 2, section 12, between "credits" and "investments in stock;" and the general assembly of this state has provided in section 2730, Revised Statutes, section 5327, of the General Code, that debts may be deducted only from credits for purposes of taxation. It is therefore held that holders of national bank stock may not deduct their bona fide debts from the value of such shares in listing for taxation. Chapman vs. National Bank, 56 O. S., 328.

A careful examination of the cases of Supervisors vs. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305, Mills vs. Exchange Bank, 105 U. S. 319, Whitbeck vs. Mercantile National Bank, 127 U. S. 193, will disclose that the distinction drawn by the Ohio constitution and statutes between "credits" and "investments in stock" did not exist in New York, and apparently, this point was not presented in argument in the Ohio case, so that the limitations of the supreme court with regard thereto are inapt. By the weight of authority in other cases, there is no discrimination against moneyed capital by reason of the fact that the Ohio statutes do not permit debts to be deducted from investments in stocks, and the Whitbeck case if reviewed by the supreme court in this respect, would in my judgment, be limited or reversed.

In order properly to answer your question it becomes necessary to compare the Ohio statute above quoted with the statutes of other states above discussed and classified. The scheme of taxation provided for by the Ohio statute above quoted, clearly indicates that the assessment is upon the shares of stock, and not against the bank; and as above suggested, if this were not the case the act would probably be unconstitutional. Has the general assembly then exercised the right of the state to compel collection of the tax thus assessed from the bank?

Section 5403, et seq., above quoted, provides a method of valuation of shares of incorporated banks. The duties therein created are imposed upon the officers of the bank, and measured by the decisions above quoted, these provisions are of course reasonable and valid. Indeed they add nothing with respect to national banks, to the express provision found in section 5210, Revised Statutes of the United States, which are in part as follows:

> "The president and cashier of every national banking association shall cause to be kept at all times a full and correct list of the names and residences of all the shareholders in the association, and the number of shares held by each, in the office where its business is transacted. Such list shall be subject to the inspection of all the shareholders and creditors of the association, and the officers authorized to assess taxes under state authority."

Sections 5407 et seq., however, fall short of authorizing an assessment against the bank, or of imposing any liability taxes upon the bank or the officers thereof. They simply require the bank to make return for its shareholders.

That the taxes upon bank shares are assessed upon the shares in the hands of the stockholders, and not upon the bank is clear from reading section 5672 above quoted. The taxes are described as "taxes assessed on shares of stock;" they are made "a lien on such shares." It is clearly inferred that in the first instance they are to be paid by the shareholder himself by the language "if such taxes are not paid at the time required by law by a shareholder * * * the cashier or other officer * * * shall not transfer * * * any portion of such stock." * * *

What remedy then, have the taxing authorities in case a tax assessed upon the shares of stock is not paid by the shareholders and becomes delinquent? Section 5672 provides for notice of the non-payment of such taxes to the cashier or other officer of the banking association. This notice, however, does not seem to fix upon the cashier or other officer, or upon the bank any liability either primary or secondary, for the payment of the taxes and penalties; its effect is, at the most, to prevent the transfer of the stock upon which taxes have not been paid, and the payment of dividends thereon as long as the taxes and penalties remain unpaid. No remedy is thus afforded by statute to the state or its taxing officers whereby they may enforce performance of these obligations; at any rate, the statute does not create any obligation on the part of the bank to pay from the dividends thus withheld, the amount of the tax.

It is true that section 5673 provides for the payment of the taxes assessed upon the shares of a bank by the bank itself; however, this section does not create a duty, it affords a right; the language is, "such bank or banking association may pay * * * the taxes assessed upon its shares in the hands of its shareholders * * * and deduct the amount thereof from dividends, etc." * * * The sole effect of this statute is to authorize a bank as against its shareholder to pay the taxes on their shares and to deduct the same from dividends or other funds in its possession. It confers no right upon the taxing power as against the bank.

That the foregoing is the correct interpretation of the Ohio statute is, it seems to me, clear from the plain language thereof. This interpretation, however, was adopted in Miller, Treasurer, vs. First National Bank, 46 O. S. 424. This was an action by the treasurer of Hamilton county against the bank. The petition alleged that the bank had made for five years previous what purported to be true returns of the resources and liabilities of said bank, and had stated on several of its returns that it would pay the taxes for and on behalf of its stockholders; that the returns so made were afterwards discovered to have been false, whereupon the county auditor proceeded to correct the same and to place upon the duplicate of the county as omitted taxes the differences between the aggregate values of the items of the resources of the bank as returned by it for the several years, and the true values thereof; that such assessment on the duplicate of the county was in the name of the bank; and that the bank refused to pay taxes thereon.

The allegation was further made that the bank "at all times during the years above mentioned had in its possession, and now has, money and property belonging to its stockholders more than sufficient to pay all the sums of taxes as aforesaid due from the said stockholders, but instead of applying the same or any part thereof, to the payment of said taxes, has paid over large portions of the same as dividends to the said stockholders, although the defendant has been repeatedly notified by the treasurer of said county, of the non-payment of said taxes; and notwithstanding the premises, the defendant has during all of said years been transferring and permitting to be transferred * * * the stock thereof." * * * The prayer was not for a judgment against the bank as such, for the amount of the alleged delinquent taxes, but for an accounting of the moneys and property in defendant's possession belonging to the several stockholders, for an injunction restraining the defendant from paying dividends or making transfers during the pendency of the action, and for the payment of the taxes out of the money and property of the stockholders, in possession of the defendant bank.

The court could have disposed of this case upon the ground taken by it, that the county auditor was without authority to avail himself of the statutory machinery for placing omitted taxes on the duplicate in such a case. (See page 432.)

However, the decision of the court which affirmed the judgment of the lower court, sustaining the demurrer to the petition as above drawn, was placed upon broader grounds. The following language from the opinion is pertinent:

> "* * * There is but one question in the case * * * and that is, whether the shares of stock in a national bank are to be listed for taxation in the name of the shareholders or in the name of the bank. The power of the state is to impose any tax upon such shares is conferred by the statute of the United States, section 5219, Revised Statutes. * * * The property of a national bank other than its realty cannot be subjected to taxation by a state or any of its subdivisions. The power conferred by the section just referred to, is 'to include the shares' in the valuation of the personal property of the 'owner' or 'holder' of such shares. A bank does not own the shares of its capital; it owns the capital and the shares are owned by its stockholders. * * * It is the latter that may be taxed, and not the former. * * * If all the shares of the bank were assessed for taxation in its name and payment of the tax required of it, the effect would be precisely the same as a tax upon the aggregate capital of the bank. (This does not seem to be the established weight of authority as illustrated in the cases above cited and quoted from.) * * * It seems then, that shares in a national bank must be assessed for taxation in the name of the owners of them and not in the name of the bank itself. * * *

"Nor do the statutes of the state * * * contemplate * * * that such stock should be listed in the name of the bank. They contain special provisions for the listing of the shares of the stockholders of incorporated banks. * * * This is done by the auditor of the county. * * * To facilitate the enlistment of the stock and its valuation for taxation, the bank is required to keep in the office where its business is transacted a full and complete list of the names and residences of its stockholders and the number of shares held by each. * * * And then annually, * * * the cashier is required to make out and return to the auditor a duplicate report of 'the resources and liabilities' of the bank 'together with a full statement of the names and residences of the stockholders therein with the number of shares held by each and the par value of each share.' * * * This constitutes the listing of the stock for taxation, and is necessarily intended to be done in the names of the owners of it. * * *

"Again, unless the shares are assessed for taxation in the name of the shareholders there would be no opportunity given a shareholder to have a deduction in his favor for any bona fide indebtedness on his part; and to which he would be entitled under the decisions in Whitbeck, Treasurer, vs. Mercantile National Bank, 127 U. S. 193-199, Hills vs. Exchange Bank, 105 U. S. 319, Supervisors vs. Stanley, Id. 305. (These cases are distinguished, supra.)

"But if any doubt remained upon this point, it is certainly removed by the provisions contained in section 2839, Revised Statutes, section 5672, General Code, above quoted.

"Each and every provision of this section contemplates an assessment upon the shares in the name of the shareholder. * * * The lien is fastened upon the shares, and in case of the non-payment of the tax 'by any shareholder' the consequence is visited upon him, and no one else. It is made unlawful for the cashier or any officer of the bank, on notice, to transfer or permit the transfer of his stock, or the payment of any dividends to him so long as the tax remains due and unpaid.

"This view does not interfere with any arrangement by which a bank may, under the provisions of section 2840, Revised Statutes (section 5673, General Code, above quoted), as a matter of convenience to its shareholders and the public, agree to pay the taxes levied upon the stock of its shareholders and deduct the same from dividends or other funds in its hands belonging to them. * * * An agreement by the bank in such case to pay the taxes assessed against its shareholders might be enforced as any similar agreements. * * *"

It follows from this decision that in Ohio the bank may not be held primarily or otherwise liable for the payment of taxes assessed against its shareholders unless it agrees to pay them; and in such case the remedy of the public against the bank is not by original levy and assessment, but for the enforcement of a contract.

It is also clear from this decision that in case the bank should not choose to agree to pay taxes for its shareholders—which are purely voluntary on its part—no action of any sort could be maintained against it without at least enjoining the delinquent shareholders. It is possible that the remedies provided by sections 2653 and 2655 of the General Code, which are in effect that, the treasurer may collect personal taxes by distress, and in case property cannot be distrained may attach moneys and credits due to a non-resident taxpayer by garnished process issued against the person from whom the credits are due are available to compel the cashier of the bank to pay taxes on non-resident stockholders out of unpaid dividends due to such stockholders, or out of property of such stockholders in the possession of the bank. I do not find any case in this state involving such a procedure. Be that as it may, collection of the tax by such a process would be cumbersome at best.

From all the foregoing, it follows that under the present Ohio statute, the taxes assessed against the shares of national banks are not liabilities of the corporations as such, and not enforceable against the property of the banks. They are liabilities of the shareholders and if unpaid when due, the bank can be made liable, if at all, only by garnishee process under section 2605, General Code. Under the federal law it would be competent for the general assembly to provide that the primary liability for the taxes should rest upon such banks, but it has not done so.

With respect to your second question I beg to state that the tax on national bank shares, not only may be assessed against shareholders not residents of the state of Ohio, but must be so assessed. The Ohio statute, section 5606, General Code, contemplates that the valuation of shares of capital stock of such banks shall be placed upon the proper tax list of the counties in which the banks are located, and must be construed as a compliance with section 5219, Revised Statutes of the United States, which provides that such shares of stock "owned by non-residents of any state shall be taxed in the city or town where the bank is located and not elsewhere."

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

111.

TAXES AND TAXATION—PUBLIC UTILITIES—SPECIFIC ARTICLES OF PROPERTY—VALUATION PROPORTIONATE TO ENTIRE CORPORATION VALUATION—CORPORATION ENGAGED PARTLY IN PUBLIC UTILITY AND MAINLY IN OTHER BUSINESS.

The rule of taxing public utilities in Ohio contemplates that the value of specific properties of the business shall be valued at a proportion to the entire enhanced property valuation of the corporation which the independent property value bears to the entire independent property value. Such a method of valuation distributes the enhancement to value, afforded by reason of the good will of a business, among the various taxing districts or jurisdictions having control of specific parts of the corporation property.

Under the Ohio statute, every corporation which may be classed as a public utility, must report to the tax commission all its real and personal property, all its credits and moneys and all facts required by law and the commission. The commission from the information in this manner and otherwise acquired, shall list for taxation under the head of public utility, or other specially designed class of business, only such properties as are actually used in a public utility or other specially classed style of business.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 11, 1911.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 28th, enclosing copy of letter addressed to you by the president of the Ely Realty Company, of Elyria, Ohio, who states that that company is incorporated for the principal purpose of owning and managing certain real estate; that among the real estate owned by the company are certain business blocks; that on the first floor of one of said business blocks is a power plant producing electric current; that the electric current so produced is used primarily to furnish light and other electric power to the buildings owned by the company; but that a relatively small surplus of such electric current is sold by the company to outside consumers.

It is, inferentially at least, acknowledged that such sale of surplus current constitutes the company a public utility within the meaning of the act of May 10, 1910, but the president wishes to be informed as to the real estate and the amount of the personal property, moneys, credits and receipts of the corporation which shall be reported to the tax commission for the purpose of valuing said personal property and moneys and credits for taxation under sections 72, etc., of said act.

In connection with said letter you request my opinion upon the following more general question:

> "What property is to be considered in determining the value of the property of a public utility; is it only that part devoted to the public utility business, or is it the entire property of the company, where it is an incorporated company?"

The scheme of taxation involved in this question is embodied, as you state, in sections 72, etc., of the act of May 10, 1910, 101 O. L., 399-414. I quote some of the provisions of these related sections.

Section 72:

"Between the first and fifteenth days of January * * * a statement shall be delivered to the (tax) commission * * * by each public utility, as defined in this act * * * with respect to such utility plant or plants, and all property owned or operated, or both, by it wholly or in part within this state. * * * Such statement shall contain: * * *

"6. The number of shares of the capital stock.

"7. The par value and market value of * * * of its shares of stock; * * * the amount of capital stock subscribed, and the amount actually paid in.

"8. A detailed statement of the real estate owned by the company in Ohio, where situate, and the value thereof as assessed for taxation, making separate statements of that part used in connection with the daily operations of the company, and that part used otherwise if any such there be.

"9. A full and correct inventory of the personal property, including moneys, investments and credits, owned by the company in Ohio on the first day of the month of January in which the statement is made, where situate, and the value thereof, making separate statements of that part used in connection with the daily operations of the company.

"10. The total value and general description of the real estate owned by the company and situate outside of Ohio * * * making separate statements of that part used in connection with the daily operations of the company. * * *

"11. A description or inventory and the total value of the personal property owned by the company and situate outside of Ohio * * * making separate statements of that part used in connection with the daily operations of the company. * * *

"12. The total amount of bonded indebtedness and of indebtedness not bonded; the gross receipts for the preceding calendar year from any and all sources, and the gross expenditures for the preceding calendar year, giving a detailed statement thereof under each class or head of expenditures.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"15. In addition to the facts and information herein specifically required to be given, such statement shall contain any and all other facts and information which the commission may require. * * *"

Section 73:

"* * * The commission shall ascertain and assess at its true value in money all the property in this state of each such public utility. * * * In determining the value of the property of such public utility, to be assessed and taxed within the state, the commission shall be guided by the value of the property as determined by the information contained in the sworn statements made by the public utility to the commission and such other evidence and rules as will enable it to arrive at the true value in money of the entire property of the said public utility within this state, in the proportion which the value of such property bears to the value of the entire property of the said public utility. The property of such public utilities to be so assessed by the commission, shall be all the personal property thereof, which shall include all real estate necessary in the daily operations of the public utility and the money and credits within this state."

Section 76:

"* * * The county auditor shall place the apportioned value on the tax duplicate and taxes shall be levied and collected thereon, in the same manner and as the same rate as other personal property in the taxing district in question."

Section 79:

"The commission shall apportion the value of the property of * * * public utilities assessed according to the provisions of this act, as follows:

"(a) When all the property of said utility is located within the limits of a county, the assessed value thereof shall be apportioned by the commission between the several taxing districts therein, in the proportion which the property located within the taxing district in question bears to the entire value of the property of said public utility as ascertained and valued as herein provided, so that, to each taxing district there shall be apportioned such part of the entire valuation as will fairly equalize the relative value of the property therein located to the whole value thereof * * *."

Section 121:

"The term 'public utility' as used in this act means and embraces each corporation, company, firm, individual and association, their lessees, trustees, or receivers * * * and in this act referred to as * * * electric light companies * * * and such term 'public utility' shall include any plant or property owned or operated, or both, by any such companies, corporations, firms, individuals or associations."

Section 46:

"* * * Any person or persons, firm or firms, joint stock association or corporation * * * engaged in the business of supplying electricity for light, heat or power purposes, to consumers within this state is an electric light company * * *."

The above scheme of taxation is substantially the same as that incorporated in sections 28 to 38 inclusive of the same act. These sections constitute a reenactment of sections 5446 and 5463 inclusive of the General Code, sections 2777 to 2780 inclusive of the Revised Statutes, which sections provide for the valuation and assessment for taxation of the property of express, telegraph and telephone companies, and were originally and popularly knows as the Nichols law.

I am of the opinion that the general assembly in applying to the taxation of property of other public utilities, as defined by it, the scheme of taxation which had previously been in operation with respect to express, telegraph and telephone companies, intended to apply to such public utilities the rules and principles embodied in the existing law respecting express, telegraph and telephone companies. That is to say, the purpose of the act of May 10, 1910, in this respect, may be aptly stated as being to extend the Nichols law principles and practices to the assessment of the property of all public utilities. I think it is fair, therefore, to apply to sections 72, etc., of said act any construction and principle that may have become established with reference to the meaning and application of the Nichols law.

The Nichols law embodied an idea in taxation which the state of Ohio was early to adopt and which has been adopted in many of the states of the Union. The principle of the statute has been most aptly termed "the unit rule or rule of entirety." Judson on Taxation, section 239.

This rule as illustrated in the sections of the law above quoted contemplates that the value of a business as an entirety shall be determined by the taxing authorities, and such entire value apportioned among the various principal properties of the business, so to speak, in the same proportion that the independent value of each such physical property bears to the aggregate independent values of all physical property connected with the business. It is a way of taxing as property the good will and earning power of an enterprise as a whole by considering an apportioned part of its value as an enhancement to the value of specific property used in connection with the enterprise.

The foregoing is an attempt to state the fundamental principle upon which statutes like that under consideration are based. The principle is fully and clearly discussed in the Ohio case of State ex rel. vs. Jones, Auditor, 51 O. S. 492-512. Therein the court in upholding the validity of the Nichols law uses the following language, per Dickman, J.:

> "If by reason of the good will of the concern of the skill, experience and energy with which its business is conducted, the market value of the capital stock is largely increased, whereby the value of the tangible property of the corporation, considered as an entire plant, acquires a greater market value than it otherwise would have had, it cannot properly be said not to be its true value in money within the meaning of the constitution, because good will and other elements directly entered into its value. * * *
>
> "It will, we think, be conceded that the earning capacity of real estate owned by individuals may be considered in fixing its value for taxation. Take an office building on a prominent street in one of our large cities. It will not be doubted that by care in the selection of tenants, and in the preservation of the reputation of the buildings, by superior elevator service, by vigilance in guarding and protecting the property, by the exercise of skill and knowledge in the general management of the premises, a good will of the establishment will be promoted, which will tend to an extra increase in the earning capacity and value of the building."

The clearest and most satisfactory discussion of the nature of such a scheme of valuation, however, is found in the two cases of Adams Express Company vs. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194 and 166 U. S. 183.

In the first case Mr. Chief Justice Fuller in delivering the opinion of a majority of the court used the following language:

> "As to railroad, telegraph and sleeping car companies, engaged in interstate commerce, it has often been held by this court that their property in the several states through which their lines or business extended might be valued as a unit for the purpose of taxation, taking into consideration the uses to which it was put and all the elements making up aggregate value, and that a proportion of the whole fairly and properly ascertained might be taxed by the particular state without violating any federal restriction. * * * The valuation was, thus, not confined to the wires, poles and instruments of the telegraph company; or the roadbed, ties, rails and spikes of the railroad company; or the cars of the sleeping car company; but included the proportionate part of the value resulting from the combination of the means by which the business was carried on, a value existing to an appreciable extent throughout the entire domain of operation. * * *

"No more reason is perceived for limiting the valuation of the property of express companies to horses, wagons and furniture than that of railroad, telegraph and sleeping car companies, to roadbeds, rails and ties, poles and wires or cars. The unit is a unit of use and management, and the horses, wagons, safes, pouches and furniture, the contracts for transportation facilities, the capital necessary to carry on the business—whether represented in tangible or intangible property—in Ohio, possessed a value in combination and from use in connection with the property and capital elsewhere, which could as rightfully be recognized in the assessment for taxation in the instance of these companies as the others.

"We repeat that while the unity which exists may not be a physical unity, it is something more than a mere unity of ownership. It is a unity of use, not simply for the convenience or pecuniary profit of the owner, but existing in the very necessities of the case resulting from the very nature of the business.

"The same party may own a manufacturing establishment in one state and a store in another, and may make profit by operating the two, but the work of each is separate. The value of the factory in itself is not conditioned on that of the store, or vice versa, nor is the value of the goods manufactured and sold affected thereby. The connection between the two is merely accidental, and growing out of unity of ownership. But the property of an express company distributed through different states is as an essential condition of the business united in a single specific use. It constitutes but a single plant, made so by the very character and necessities of the business."

The chief justice quotes with approval the decision in State ex rel. vs. Jones, supra, and the decision of Judge Lurton in the case of the circuit court of appeals which embodies the same reasoning. In passing the court used the following significant language:

"Special circumstances might exist * * * which would require the value of a portion of the property of an express company to be deducted from the value of its plant as expressed by the sum total of its stock and bonds before any valuation by mileage could be properly arrived at, but the difficulty in the cases at bar is that there is no showing of any such separate and distinct property which should be deducted, and its existence is not to be assumed. It is for the companies to present any special circumstances which may exist, and, failing their doing so, the presumption is that all their property is directly devoted to their business, which being so, a fair distribution of its aggregate value would be upon the mileage basis."

On rehearing of the same case reported in 166 U. S., supra, Mr. Justice

Brewer delivered the opinion of the court, and in so doing used the following language:

> "Now whenever separate articles of tangible property are joined together, not simply by a unity of ownership but in a unity of use, there is not infrequently developed a property intangible though it may be, which in value exceeds the aggregate of the value of the separate pieces of tangible property. Upon what theory of substantial right can it be adjudged that the value of this intangible property must be excluded from the tax lists, and the only property placed thereon the separate pieces of tangible property?
>
> "The first question to be considered therefore is whether there is belonging to these express companies intangible property. * * * A property created by either the combined use or the manner of use of the separate articles of tangible property, or the grant or acquisition of franchises or privileges, or all together. To say that there can be no such intangible property, that is something of no value, is to insult the common intelligence of every man. * * *
>
> "Presumably all that a corporation has is used in the transaction of its business, and if it has accumulated assets which for any reason affect the question of taxation, it should disclose them. It is called upon to make return of its property, and if its return admits that it is possessed of property of a certain value and does not disclose anything to show that any portion thereof is not subject to taxation, it cannot complain if the state treats its property as all taxable."

It is clear from the foregoing authorities that in a statute like the one under consideration, a provision requiring a taxing authority to ascertain an aggregate valuation of all the personal property of a company engaged in a certain business, including all moneys and credits used in connection with the business, and all real property used in the daily operations of the company, is to be construed as empowering such authority to value for taxation such property only as, though owned by the same person or corporation, is devoted by its owner to a common use. That is to say, valuation by the unit rule is not justified on the ground of unity of ownership alone, and, therefore, a statute will not be construed to mean that all the property owned by a corporation engaged in a certain business is to be taken into consideration for the purpose of determining the value of its property as a company engaged in such business. As the court indicates, the presumption is that a corporation is engaged in but one business, and this is particularly true of most corporations formed under the laws of Ohio which provide that corporations may be formed for any purpose for which individuals may lawfully associate themselves. However, the courts recognize the possibility of a corporation owning property which is not used in connection with that portion of its business, the value of which in the aggregate is to be determined under such laws, and it is clear that if there is such property it must not be taken or included in the property valued by the taxing authority. It neither contributes to the aggregate value of the remainder nor does it assure any enhancement of the value of the other items of tangible property owned by the corporation because of the good will of the business.

Reading all of the sections of the specific act under consideration together, I am of the opinion that section 72, above quoted, requires every corporation which has acquired the status of a public utility to report to the tax commission all of its real estate, all of its personal property, all of its moneys and credits and all of the other facts required by law and by the tax commission.

This answers the specific question presented by the Ely Realty Company, but the fact that all of the property of the company, and all of its receipts must be reported to the tax commission does not lead to the conclusion that the tax commission may take all of such property into consideration in determining the value of the property of the public utility. While the related sections do not expressly so state, yet in themselves read together, they indicate with a fair degree of certainty that the thing to be valued is what may broadly be designated as the plant of the public utility. This conclusion follows ordinarily from the principles laid down in the above quoted authorities.

The value of the entire plant is reached by considering in connection with other things the value of each parcel or article of tangible property used, operated or managed as a part of the business which constitutes the corporation a public utility.

In my opinion then, the general question which you submit must be answered as follows: If from the evidence before the tax commission the commission finds that a corporation owns property, the use of which is entirely disassociated from the business which constitutes the corporation a public utility, and that such property so independently used is devoted by the corporation to the accomplishment of a purpose which, under its corporate powers or otherwise, is paramount to the public utility business in which it is engaged or independent from it, the commission should not regard such property so owned as a part of the property to be used for taxation by it; nor should the commission in such event take the independent value of such property into consideration as an element in determining the aggregate value under the unit rule of the public utility plant owned and operated by the corporation. If, on the other hand, it appears from all the evidence at the command of the commission that a corporation has been incorporated for the principal purpose of engaging in a business which constitutes it a public utility within the meaning of the act of 1910, then the commission may fairly presume that all property, both real and personal, owned by the corporation is used by it for the purpose of furthering such principal business; that is to say, being a corporation, its capital is presumed to be vested so as to further one or more specific enterprises, and any property in which such capital is invested may, in the first instance, at least, regarded as a part of the "plant" of the company. Upon good cause appearing, however, the commission may lawfully disregard property owned by a corporation engaged principally in such a public utility business if it is satisfied that the use of such property, whether lawful or ultra vires, is entirely independent of such public utility business.

In this connection it is to be noted that section 73, above quoted, seems to imply that real property, at any rate, may be owned by an individual or corporation which has acquired the status of a public utility without being used in connection with the business which constitutes such person or corporation a public utility.

It is believed that the above rule is as definite as the nature of the case will permit. Its application to specific facts, including those submitted by the Ely Realty Company is, of course, a matter within the province of the tax commission.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

133.

TAXES AND TAXATION—NATIONAL BANK SHARES—NO DISCRIMINATION IN OHIO IN FAVOR OF OTHER MONEY CAPITALS SIMILARLY INVESTED.

As stated in a former opinion, the Whitbeck case, 127 U. S., held that under the circumstances of that case, if debts were not permitted to be deducted from investments in stocks a tax on national bank shares by a state would act as a discrimination against such investments as compared with other invested moneyed capital.

In Ohio, a different situation is presented as was stated in the former opinion and as was actually recognized in 175 U. S. 205.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 24, 1911.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In my opinion to you, under recent date, dealing with the question of the construction of our statutes relating to the taxation of shares of stock of national banks, I expressed the view that, should the decision of the supreme court of the United States, in the Whitbeck case, 127 U. S., be reviewed by that court, it would be limited. That decision in part was to the effect that if debts were not permitted to be deducted from investments in stock of national banks by the scheme of taxation embodied in the statutes under consideration in the opinion, that would amount to a discrimination against capital invested in such shares and in favor of other moneyed capital similarly invested. I cited the case of First National Bank vs. Chapman as embodying the true Ohio rule on this point, which is to the effect that, no moneyed capital is in Ohio, entitled to deduction of debts from investments in stocks, and that, therefore, there is no discrimination against moneyed capital invested in national bank shares by reason of the fact that the scheme of taxation embodied in the Ohio statutes, and which would have to be embodied therein if they were strengthened in order to meet the emergency suggested by your letter, fails to provide for such deduction. In some inexplicable manner I overlooked the fact that this very case was affirmed by the supreme court of the United States, 173 U. S. 205. The court in that case expressly limited its prior holding. It was remarked, that in the Whitbeck case this peculiarity of the Ohio statutes had not been pointed out to the court. The Chapman case was later followed by the case of Lander vs. Mercantile National Bank, 22 Supreme Court Reporter, 908.

I wish to make this addition to the former opinion in order to make my own records complete. The statements above made in no wise conflict with the former opinion, but materially strengthen the conclusions therein reached.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 181.

TAXES AND TAXATION—PROPERTY NOT LISTED IN 1910—POWER AND DUTY OF COUNTY AUDITOR.

The county auditor shall place upon the duplicate omitted property which should have been returned in 1910 for taxation. He shall collect the same in accordance with the law as it existed prior to act of May 10, 1910.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 16, 1911.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 30th, enclosing a copy of a letter addressed to the auditor of state by the auditor of Lorain county, and submitting to me for my opinion the question therein asked, viz:

> "May a county auditor add to the duplicate in the year 1911 property which should have been returned for taxation during the year 1910?"

The precise question submitted by the county auditor is as to his power to place on the duplicate property disclosed by an inventory of a decedent's estate, which said inventory is filed after January 1, 1911, but I have chosen to state the question in the broader form because I think it is apparent that the acquisition by the auditor of information through the filing of an inventory is in no sense different from his acquisition of information as to omitted property in any other manner. This will more fully appear from the statutes involved and hereinafter quoted.

The sections in question are sections 5398, 5399, 5400, 5401, 5402 of the General Code as amended by the act of May 10, 1910, 101 O. L. page 430, and sections 9 and 11 of the act itself. The material provisions of these sections are as follows:

Section 5398:

> "If a person required to list property * * * for taxation * * * in the year 1911 or in any year thereafter makes a false return or statement, or evades making a return or statement, the county auditor for each year shall ascertain * * * the true amount of * * * property * * * that such person ought to have returned or listed for the year 1911 or for any year thereafter * * * multiply the omitted sum or sums * * * by the rate of taxation belonging to said year or years, and accordingly enter the amount on the tax lists in his office, giving a certificate therefor to the county treasurer who shall collect it as other taxes."

Section 5399:

> "If any person required to list property * * * in the year nineteen hundred and eleven or in any year or years thereafter fails to make a return or statement, or if such person makes a return or statement of only a portion of his taxable property, and fails to make a return as to the remainder thereof, or if he fails to return his taxable property or part thereof, according to the true value thereof in money, > * * * the county auditor shall each year as to property omitted, and as to property not returned or taxed according to its true value in money, shall ascertain * * * the true amount of personal property * * * that such person ought to have returned or listed, and the true value at which it should have been taxed in his county for not exceeding the five years next preceding the year in which the inquiries and corrections provided for in this section and the next preceding and the next two succeeding sections are made and not in any event prior to the year nineteen hundred and eleven and multiply the omitted sum or sums by the rate of taxation belonging to said year or years, and accordingly enter the amount on the tax lists in his office, giving a certificate therefor to the county treasurer, who shall collect it as other taxes."

Section 5400:

(Applies to placing taxes omitted by virtue of a failure on the part of the officer other than the assessor or the county auditor, and has no application in this connection.)

Section 5401:

> "The county auditor, if he shall have any reason to believe, * * * that a person has in the year nineteen hundred and eleven, or in any year thereafter, given to the assessor a false statement of the personal property * * * that the assessor has not returned the full amount required to be listed in his ward or township, or has omitted or made an erroneous return of property * * * subject to taxation, shall proceed in said year nineteen hundred and eleven or in any year thereafter at any time before the final settlement with the county treasurer to correct the return of the assessor, and charge such person on the duplicate with the proper amount of taxes * * *."

Section 5402:

(Applies to the payment of costs incurred in making the inquiries provided for in the preceding sections.)

Section 9 of the act of May 10, 1910, provides that:

> "The provisions of this act shall not apply to the levy or collection of taxes for the year nineteen hundred and ten."

Section 10 of the act repeals original sections 5398, 5399 and 5401.

Section 11 of the act provides:

> "This act shall take effect and be in force from and after January 1, 1911."

It is my conclusion that the following, to-wit: "The provisions of this act shall not apply to the levy or collection of taxes for the year nineteen hundred and ten" leaves operative in all respects the old law so far as the obligation of the taxpayer to the state is concerned.

I do not think that the expression "shall not apply to the levy or collection of taxes" is used in any restricted sense, or that the levy or collection must be made within the year 1910. It suggests itself as reasonable to assume that the language of section 9 of the act of May 10, 1910, was the legal expression for what in popular language might be stated in the following way: "Nothing in this act shall interfere with the right of the state to collect taxes that should be paid for the year 1910 under the laws as they existed prior to the passage of this act." I suggest that for the purpose of safety auditors be requested to add to the duplicate in the year 1911 property which should have been returned for taxation in the year 1910 as soon as they possibly can.

Very respectfully yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

188.

TAXES AND TAXATION—POWERS AND DUTIES OF TAX COMMISSION AND COUNTY AUDITOR TO CORRECT ERRORS IN THE TAX DUPLICATE.

The original duty of correcting the tax list by striking property therefrom which is exempt from taxation, devolves upon the county auditor and the powers of the tax commission are appellate and limited to the duties of review.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1911.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted to this department certain correspondence between your commission and the auditor of Hamilton county. You call my attention to a former opinion of this department and suggest that possibly I may desire to reconsider the matter or to elaborate upon the former opinion. The question presented by the auditor is in brief as follows:

> "May the county auditor correct the duplicate by striking therefrom, property exempt from taxation and therefore improperly listed, without being directed to do so by the tax commission of Ohio?"

The former opinion was with regard to the meaning and effect of section 80 of the act of May 10, 1908, 101 O. L., 299, which vested in the tax commission powers formerly imposed upon the auditor of state with the assistance of the governor and attorney general, by section 258, General Code. The holding of the opinion was that the power of the commission therein conferred to "remit taxes and penalties thereon, found by it to have been illegally assessed" and to "correct an error in an assessment of property for taxation or in the duplicate of taxes in the county" was intended to be in a sense appellate, and that the original power to correct errors in a tax duplicate and to remit assessments for taxation is vested in the county auditor under section 2588, General Code. This was regarded as apparent not only from the language of section 2588 itself but also from that provision of section 80 which requires that "no such taxes, assessments or penalties in excess of one hundred dollars shall in any case be remitted until after at least ten days' notice of the application * * * shall have been served upon the prosecuting attorney and the county auditor of the county where such taxes or assessments were levied," * * * which clearly indicates that the power of the commission is one of review rather than original jurisdiction.

Acting upon this advice your commission, as appears from the correspondence, has refused to consider certain applications for remission of taxes which have been made to the commission without having been acted upon in any way by the county auditor. The county auditor is disposed to question the correctness of the ruling and cites section 5571 which provides that:

> "* * * he (the county auditor) shall not make any deductions from the valuation of any tract or lot of real property, except such as have been ordered either by the state board or by the county board of equalization, or upon the written order of the auditor of state * * *."

and the case of State, ex rel., vs. Commissioners, 31 O. S., 271. With respect to section 5571 I beg to call your attention to the first clause thereof omitted in the quotation of the auditor, and which is as follows:

> "The county auditor from time to time shall correct any errors which he may discover in (1) the name of the owner, (2) the valuation, (3) description, (4) quantity of any tract or lot contained in the list of real property of his county."

The limitation concerning deductions in valuations would be held, I think, applicable to the exercise of power to correct such errors as are described in the earlier part of the section. But even if this were not so, the reason of the limitation which is clear, is such as clearly to negative the construction put upon it by the county auditor. The matter of valuation is one requiring the exercise of expert judgment. The matter of exemption on the other hand is a question of law. It is not correct to argue as the auditor argues that, because the law prohibits a deduction from valuation except upon certain authorization, a fortiori the entire valuation should not be omitted without such authority; and this would be the case if the auditor should take it upon himself to determine whether or not property is exempt from taxation.

The auditor calls attention to the uniform practice of the past, of regarding his authority as limited to the correction of clerical errors rather than fundamental errors and cites the above case as establishing the principle. It is true that the case in question holds that:

> "The errors named in the statute are clerical merely, but the error complained of * * * is fundamental. The question whether specified property is or is not subject to taxation, was not, by this section of the statute submitted to the judgment of either the auditor of the county or the board of county commissioners."

This case is the beginning of the distinction drawn between clerical and fundamental errors, to which the auditor refers. Unfortunately for the auditor's contention however, the statute considered by the court in the case was not the same as present section 2588, General Code, in this, that the following language was not in the section construed by the court:

> "From time to time the county auditor shall correct all errors which he discovers in the tax list and duplicate * * * when property exempt from taxation has been charged with tax * * *."

The italicized portion of the above quoted provision was inserted after the decision in State, ex rel., vs. Commisioners, and possibly because of it. The case itself is then the best of authority against the contention of the auditor.

Upon the reconsideration which I have given the question I am of the opinion that my predecessor was correct in holding that the original duty of correcting the tax list so as to omit therefrom property exempt from taxation devolves upon the county auditor and that the power of the tax commission is intended to be so to speak, appellate.

I herewith return the correspondence submitted to me.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 205.

TAXES AND TAXATION—POWER OF AUDITOR TO CORRECT ERRORS ON DUPLICATE—FUNDAMENTAL AND CLERICAL ERRORS—ERRORS OF JUDGMENT OF BOARD OF ASSESSORS AND ERRORS OF FACT.

Under sections 2588 and 5571, General Code, a county auditor may correct clerical errors in the tax list but may not correct fundamental error.

What are fundamental and what clerical errors is a mooted question.

A clerical error under the authorities may safely be considered an error apparent upon the face of the record. Later decisions, however, extend the scope further and allow parol evidence to establish error not in its nature fundamental. But an auditor may not correct errors of judgment on the part of the officers whose duty it is to make the valuation, nor may he question their intention or method of calculation, nor their procedure.

Errors of fact, however, may be so corrected.

Under these rules, when a building has been valued by two employes of the board of assessors, resulting in a double valuation, the error is that of the board and may not be questioned by the auditor. When such error causes the duplicate to show buildings upon the land which do not exist, however, a correction may be made by the auditor.

Errors in mathematical calculation or in applying processes of the system of valuation and apportionment adopted by the board are fundamental errors of the board and may not be corrected.

Errors in areas of real estate apparent upon the auditor's records, however, are clerical.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1911.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 28th, requesting my opinion as to what corrections of valuations and returns of assessors of real property may be legally made by county auditors under the provisions of the General Code.

The specific facts with reference to which the question is submitted are as follows:

> "A city board of assessors of real property in 1910 used what is known as the Summers system. The proprietors of this system agreed to and did furnish for the use of the board, persons instructed in the operation of the system. These persons became 'expert assistants' of the board of assessors as authorized by section 5545, General Code.

"Such expert assistants, employes in a sense, both of the proprietors of the system and the board of assessors, were divided, so to speak, into two classes, those whose function it was to ascertain the area and physical description of buildings, and those whose duty it was to apply the methods of the system to the valuation of buildings of the description ascertained by the members of the other class.

"The employes who devoted themselves to what may be termed the initial appraisement of real estate, using the maps and plats furnished to the board by the county auditor divided each of said maps or plats into blocks or squares upon a principle which constituted the secret method of the system. Upon actual view certain factors, also secret and arbitrary, were applied to each tract or parcel of real estate within a given square or block and multiplied by the respective areas, thus producing a result which constituted a tentative appraisement of each parcel of land. Each step in this process was in a sense recorded upon a slip taken with him by the employe when appraising the property. This slip contained the description of the parcel as taken from the official maps and plats, a computation of the area and the multiplications of the areas or portions thereof by the factors employed, together with of course the grand total thus ascertained. These slips, however, were silent as to a reason for the adoption of a given factor or factors as applicable to a given tract or for the subdivision of the tract into arbitrary parcels for the purpose of multiplying given factors by the areas thereof, these matters being as above stated, secrets of the proprietors of the Summers system.

"In making tentative appraisements of buildings the slips used by the system and adopted by the board of assessors were required to pass through the hands of both of the classes of employes above described. He whose function it was to ascertain the description of a building upon actual view and measurement, would record upon the slip in blank spaces provided for that purpose the dimensions of the building, together with certain other facts, such as the number of windows, the material of its construction, etc. This employe would also compute the area of the floor space in the building and such other similar facts as could be ascertained by computation. So that the slips disclosed the additions and multiplications by which totals so to be ascertained were reached. To the totals so ascertained the other building assessor or expert, upon actual view or otherwise, would apply secret factors, no reason in this case appearing for the choice of a given factor or for the arbitrary choice of certain portions of a given building to certain factors. The factors themselves appear on the building slips together with the multiplications of the areas by them, resulting in the product or products the sum of which constituted the tentative valuation of the building.

"In practice it sometimes occurred that more than one appraiser or expert assistant would measure a building or would apply to measurements already ascertained the factors above described. The same possibility of duplication of appraisement existed with respect to the land itself.

"In practice also, the board of assessors adopted as their own the totals ascertained as above described and made them the valuations of the land and building respectively. Such valuations were those set forth in the returns of the board made to the county auditor under section 5569, General Code, in the form therein prescribed. With the return, however, the board of assessors turned over to the county auditor all the land and building slips above described. It now appears that a large number of mistakes have been made, of which the following are types:

"1. Duplications of slips resulting from appraisement of the same tracts or buildings by more than one employe at different times, and leading the board to affix to the land or the building an aggregate valuation equal to the sum of the appraisements affixed thereto by the respective employes.

"2. Errors in multiplication of areas by factors.

"3. Errors in subdivisions of tracts or buildings for the purpose of applying factors.

"4. Errors in additions and multiplications for the purpose of ascertaining the areas.

"5. Errors in actual measurements of buildings disclosed not by the slips themselves but by subsequent verification of the measurements.

"6. Errors in areas of real estate.

"All of the foregoing except as above indicated are apparent upon the face of the slips, but none of them, excepting the last one, appear upon the plats and other papers furnished to the assessors by the county auditor, or upon the minutes of the board of assessors as such, or upon the returns of the assessors to the county auditor.

"The board of review of the city of Cleveland, sitting as a quadrennial board of equalization regarded all of the mistakes above described as constituting errors which the county auditor upon having his attention called thereto should correct upon the tax list and duplicate, and in the returns of the board. The county auditor questions his power in the premises."

As you state then, the question succinctly stated is:

"What, if any, of the errors disclosed by the slips may be corrected by the county auditor; or may the county auditor take such slips into consideration for any purpose in ascertaining errors which may exist in the tax list?"

In passing, permit me to acknowledge your courtesy in submitting with your letter a transcript of a hearing or conference between the tax commission and the county auditor, from which as will readily appear, I have derived some of the facts above stated.

The following provisions of the General Code are applicable to the solution of questions presented:

Section 2588:

"From time to time the county auditor shall correct all errors which he discovers in the tax list and duplicate; either in the name of the person charged with taxes or assessments, the description of lands or other property or when property exempt from taxation has been charged with tax, or in the amount of such taxes or assessment."

* * *

Section 5571:

"A county auditor, from time to time, shall correct any errors which he may discover in the name of the owner, in the valuation, description, or quantity of any tract or lot contained in the list of real property in his county; but he shall not make any deductions from the valuation of any tract or lot of real property, except such as have been ordered, either by the state board or by the county board of equalization, or upon the written order of the auditor of state."

These sections were respectively sections 1038 and 2800, Revised Statutes, and as such have received judicial constructions from time to time. The following decisions are illustrative of the development of the rule of construction which has been applied to both of these sections:

McIlvaine, J., in Humphreys vs. Safe Deposit Company, 29 O. S., 608:

"It is not necessary nor would it be safe to attempt, to define cases in which the auditor is authorized by the provisions of this section (the section which has become section 2588, General Code), to correct errors; but we can safely say that his authority does not extend to subjects which the statute places under the control of boards of equalization. * * *

"It seems to us that the legislative intent was to place the correction of any errors in the judgment of assessors as to the valuation, under the sole supervision of boards of equalization, whether such erroneous judgment was induced by ignorance or mistake either of law or of fact.

"In this case the safe of defendant in error (which had escaped taxation as a fixture or betterment of certain real estate) was not the subject of a separate valuation. It could only be valued with, and as, part of the real estate. The real estate of which it was a betterment was valued by the assessor, and the valuations thus made was truly returned by him. It is true that the property was underrated by reason of the ignorance or mistake of the assessor * * * thus presenting a clear case for the board of equalization * * * but not a case for correcting the valuation by the auditor." * * *

State ex rel. vs. Commissioners, 31 O. S., 271, by the court:

"Under the section of the statute above quoted (the section which is now section 2588, General Code), the commissioners of a county are not authorized to order the auditor to draw his orders upon the treasury to refund taxes erroneously collected, unless the error be such as would require correction by the auditor himself, if discovered by him before payment of the taxes; * * * The errors named in the statute are clerical merely, but the error complained of by the relator is fundamental." * * *

McIlvaine, J., in Insurance Company vs. Capellar, 28 O. S., 560-571, holding that the auditor under what is now section 2588, General Code, might correct a personal property return by disallowing a deduction, said:

"The error to be corrected in relation to the plaintiff's taxes was the deduction of the reinsurance item from its credits. No fact is to be inquired into. Every necessary fact appears on the face of the (personal property) return. Charge the proper rate of taxes upon the amount of credits returned without any deductions on account of the reinsurance item, and the error in the amount of plaintiff's taxes will be corrected—clerical work merely." * * *

Bradbury, J., in State ex rel. vs. Raine, 47 O. S., 477-455:

"The authority of a county auditor to correct errors of omission is to be found, mainly in sections 1038, 1039 and 2800, Revised Statutes (now partly included in sections 2588 and 5571, General Code), which read as follows.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"The terms used in these sections are broad and general. No attempt is made to enumerate, specifically, the powers granted; to have undertaken to do so would have been hazardous; for if taxes should be omitted, by other errors or omissions than those enumerated, it might be successfully contended that no provision had been made for them. The object of the legislation was to provide against the escape from taxation, by error, of any property legally taxable; to accomplish this end, it wisely, and no doubt purposely, adopted general and comprehensive language with which to convey the needful authority, instead of attempting to enumerate in specific terms the powers conferred. * * *

"* * * We do not doubt that the power of the county auditor to correct errors is limited to such as are clerical.

"It was held by this court in Ohio ex rel. of the Sister Superior, etc., vs. Commissioners, Montgomery County, 31 O. S., 271-3, that, under what is now section 1038, Revised Statutes, the county auditor could not correct fundamental errors, but only such as are clerical. * * * No attempt, however, was there made to define either a fundamental, or a clerical error, or to draw a distinction between them. * * *

"In Insurance Company vs. Capellar, 38 O. S., 560, the court held that where an insurance company, in making its return for taxation, deducted from its assets, the reinsurance fund required by statute to be reserved by it, the error was clerical and could be corrected by the county auditor. * * * This case shows that the term 'clerical error' is not limited to such mistakes as occur in copying or in computations. Errors by which property escapes its lawful share of taxation must of necessity be either fundamental, and thus beyond the power of a county auditor to correct, or clerical merely, and therefore within that power. The difficulty, however, lies in the attempt to distinguish them. While we are not required in this case to lay down rules, if that were possible, by which, in all cases, the character of these errors—as being fundamental or merely clerical—may be determined, yet, certainly, those only are to be deemed fundamental that pertain to the very foundation upon which a tax rests; this of course includes defects and imperfections in the law itself, and errors of judgment committed by public boards acting within the scope of their authority. But can an error be said to be fundamental and thereby placed beyond the power of a county auditor to correct, where it has been committed by a board of equalization or by any other board or officer while acting without authority of law or in excess thereof? We think not.

> And if, when we come to examine the acts of the boards of equalization, * * * it shall appear that they acted without warrant of law or exceeded their authority, their errors, so committed, are not in any proper sense of the term fundamental, they may therefore be corrected by the county auditor." * * *

In Lewis, Auditor, vs. State ex rel., 59 O. S., 37, the facts were as follows:

A certain building was in course of construction during the decennial appraisement year. It was valued as a finished structure by the decennial appraiser who did not complete his work until long after the date at which he was directed to complete his work by law. Meanwhile the annual assessor had returned the building as an unfinished structure, and in the succeeding year returned it as a new structure, noting the amount to be added to the duplicate on account of the difference between his new valuation and that previously affixed by him. This additional amount was added to the amount returned by the decennial appraiser. (For a statement of facts more complete than that embodied in the supreme court report see opinion of Smith, J., in the circuit court, 8 C. D., 276.)

Bradbury, J., in delivering the opinion of the supreme court, at page 43, employs the following language:

> "Now it is manifest that this action by the auditor was erroneous, that is, he unwarrantably added $2,000 to the value of relator's property, unless a building or structure of that value had been placed thereon after it had been appraised by the decennial appraiser in 1890 and before the appraisal by the annual appraiser in 1891. That this was not done is a conceded fact. It is, therefore, clear that $2,000 was in the year 1891, erroneously added to the value of relator's property and still remains, and that ever since it was thus added, she has paid taxes thereon. This was not a fundamental error in any sense of that term. The addition was not made by reason of any mistaken notion that the relator was legally chargeable with the additional $2,000. It was the result of inadvertence upon the part of some one of the public officers charged with a duty in respect of bringing property on the tax list of the county for taxation. * * *
>
> "Counsel for the relator, however, without denying either the fact that the relator's property was thus overvalued, or the manner in which it was done, contend that it was not the duty of the auditor, under section 1038, Revised Statutes, to correct the error, because all the facts necessary to enable him to make the correction do not appear in the records of his office. It is true that some of the facts necessary in this case to show the error must be ascertained from other sources. This objection, however, we do not regard as conclusive. If all the data necessary to correct the error appear on the records of the auditor's office the duty of correction may of course be readily and unhesitatingly discharged, whereas, if some of the facts must be gathered from other sources the auditor might be warranted in proceeding with caution and to require convincing proof of the facts on which the alleged error may be based. The statute itself does not require the correction to be founded on facts of record in the auditor's office; and as its provisions, in so far as they authorize relief against unjust taxation, may be regarded as remedial in their nature, we perceive no sufficient reason for restricting their operation in such cases by a construction that would deny relief except on record evidence. It has always been held in making additions to the tax list that a county auditor may add upon information obtained from other sources, and we see no sufficient reason why, upon the facts thus obtained, he may not just as well afford relief against unjust taxation; nor can we find anything to militate against this conclusion in the cases of Ohio ex rel. vs. Commissioners, 31 Ohio St.; Ins. Co. vs. Capellar, 38 Ohio St., 560; or State ex rel. vs. Raine, 47 Ohio St., 477.

In Commissioners vs. Brasheers, 6 O. D. Reprint, 1027, the auditor in making up his plats and records for the use of the decennial appraiser described a certain tract of real estate as containing 2 67-100 acres, whereas it contained in point of fact 1 67-100 acres, and was so described on the original plat in the auditor's office. Johnston, J., in delivering the opinion used the following language:

"It is claimed on behalf of the county that this was an error on the part of the appraiser of a 'fundamental nature' and that the auditor or commissioners were not authorized to correct that kind of an error. * * * By the clerical error of the auditor the assessor was required to assess real estate having in fact no existence whatever, giving it a valuation which would not have occurred but for the error of the auditor. * * * We think the error was not a fundamental error, being an error wholly clerical, and error of the hand, not of judgment and discretion, and the assessor having affixed a valuation * * * to something that had no existence whatever it became the plain duty of the auditor upon the request of the property holder to certify the fact to the commissioners * * * and it became the duty of the auditor to correct the error in the valuation as well."

In Barney & Smith Mfg. Company vs. Montgomery County, 29 W. L. B., an error had been made by the clerk of the city board of equalization and was evidenced by a blotter or pad used by him for the convenience of the board. So far as the records of the board were concerned, however, no error appeared, but the action of the board seemed to be merely an increase in the valuation of a certain parcel of land. Elliot, J., in the opinion, page 368, second column, uses the following language:

"What is a 'clerical error' in such cases? It must, in the nature of things, be such an error as appears by inspection of the books and papers in the auditor's office, under his control and supervision.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Hence, if it becomes necessary for the auditor in order to discover the error and correct the same, to resort to testimony aliunde the record, while the error might be fundamental, it would not be a clerical one, and could not be corrected under section 1038. * * *

It is manifest here that if any error was made in transferring from blotter 'B' to blotter 'C' and final record 'D,' that mistake was made by Mr. Campbell while acting for the board, and such error could only be ascertained and corrected by a resort to testimony outside of the books, and to some extent independent of them, which fact would seem to be in the face of the decisions of the supreme court.

"Hence, if the auditor, in order to discover and correct a mistake, must resort to testimony outside of the record, and outside of documents in his possession, to make the discovery contemplated by the statute, his proceeding would not be under section 1038.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Supposing a mistake to have been made by the clerk of the board in copying from one book to another, and in making the final return of the board of equalization, can parole testimony, even of a member of the board at that time, be admitted to explain, vary or contradict the return so made? It would seem doubtful if the auditor would be authorized under section 1038 to go into such investigation in order to ascertain what the intent of the board was.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"We have said the return makes out a prima facie case of its accuracy. If a mistake is apparent upon the auditor's books he may correct it of his own motion. * * * But would the auditor be authorized, as before said, to go into an investigation, to call witnesses and ascertain as a matter of fact and law that a mistake had been made in an action of the board of equalization? The error which he may correct is merely clerical and must be determined by inspection of his books, or from papers in his possession."

"I think it is apparent from an examination of the foregoing authorities that a great deal of confusion still exists with regard to the proper construction of the two sections of the General Code above quoted. As stated in State vs. Raine, the supreme court has never undertaken to define or describe either of the classes of errors which it has referred to. The courts of nisi prius and to some extent the supreme court itself, have seemed to incline to the opinion that all errors not apparent upon the face of official records are fundamental errors and not subject to correction by the county auditor, under the rule which the court has in theory at least always adhered to. The difficulty arises from a consideration of the syllabus and the opinion in Lewis vs. State ex rel., the most recent decision involving these questions. There it is held that parol evidence may be relied upon by the county auditor to establish the existence of an error not fundamental. If this decision is to be taken literally, much of the exactness toward which the courts seemed to be tending prior to its rendition is destroyed and we are again left without any rule as to what errors may be corrected by the county auditor under the two sections concerned in your inquiry, excepting the dictum that fundamental errors of judgment may not be corrected.

It has seemed to me, however, that the actual facts upon which the Lewis case was decided serve to indicate the true rule—the rule which will harmonize all of the cases. The circuit court report of this case discloses that by comparison of the decennial appraiser's returns with those of the annual assessor's return for the succeeding year, it would be perfectly apparent that the annual assessor's return was erroneous unless a new structure had been erected upon the property in question, or buildings already there, and valued by the decennial appraiser, had been enhanced in value by improvements to the amount of $2,000. This fact then—the actual existence of new buildings or improvements—was the fact concerning which parol evidence was accepted by the auditor. It was not necessary to invite parol evidence for the purpose of ascertaining the intentions and methods of work of either of the valuing officers, both of them having valued buildings upon the same parcel of real estate, and included their valuations in their official returns to the county auditor, the county auditor could form either of two conclusions, and two only, namely:

That a new structure had been constructed since the decennial appraisement, or that the two officers had valued the same property. If the latter was the case the error was purely clerical, and in order to ascertain whether or not a clerical error had been committed, rather than for the purpose of ascertaining what that error was, the auditor relied upon parol evidence.

In view of the oft-repeated holding of the supreme court, to the effect that the errors mentioned in both of the sections concerned in your inquiry, are errors other than fundamental errors, whether they be called clerical errors or not, and in view also of the express adherence to that holding on the part of the court in deciding the Lewis case, I am of the opinion that the principle announced in the latter case should be strictly limited to cases similar to it. It seems, therefore, that while it is not advisable to attempt to frame an exact and comprehensive statement of the rule, the following may safely be regarded as a general statement thereof:

The errors in valuation which the county auditor may correct under the two sections above quoted, are all errors not resulting from a mistaken or erroneous exercise of judgment by the officer whose duty it is to exercise the judgment which results in a valuation; when the valuing officers have made formal return of their conclusions respecting a given parcel of real estate and the buildings thereon, all previous informal proceedings of such officers or their subordinates, tending to show the mental processes and calculations by which such final conclusions were reached, may not be regarded or considered at all; such proceedings are in a sense merged into the final valuation and it is not competent for any person or for any court to inquire as to how or why such final valuations were returned. But where the returns themselves place separate valuations upon property which has no existence in fact, such an error is not one of judgment, but one of fact—one not fundamental—and such errors may be corrected by the county auditor. With respect to the land, of course, an error of this sort could scarcely occur, except in the auditor's office where the plats are made up and furnished; but with respect to buildings it may very easily occur as it did in the Lewis case, by reduplication of the work of the assessor. In the Lewis case, however, the error was plainly indicated by the returns themselves, and I do not feel that the Lewis case warrants the opinion, that where a duplication of appraisement results in a double value being placed on a single building by a single return, parol evidence may be admitted to show what the real intention of the valuing officer was.

Coming now to the specific questions suggested by the statement of facts above set forth, my conclusions thereon are as follows:

1. Where a board of assessors returns a valuation for a single building which valuation happens to have been reached by adding together the valuations reported to it by two or more of its employes who have appraised the same building, the error is not that of the employes, but that of the board; the valuation it placed upon the property was a solemn expression of its judgment as to the value of that property and it is not competent to show that the valuation resulted from such a duplication. Where, however, a duplication in fact results in two separate returns showing on their face more buildings upon a given parcel of real estate than actually exists, this, upon the authority of Lewis vs. State, ex rel., supra, is such an error as may be corrected. The facts giving rise to the inquiry, however, must appear upon the face of the return.

2. Errors in multiplications of areas by factors may not be regarded by the county auditor. The slips which were turned over to him mean nothing to him in his official capacity; like the blotter employed by the clerk of the board of equalization in the Barney & Smith case, supra, they would constitute evidence aliunde, and would not be competent to convert what in law is an error of judgment into one of fact. Such errors may not be corrected by the county auditor either by carrying the calculations of the subordinate employes of the board of assessors to their correct conclusions or otherwise.

3. Upon the principle above announced, errors in subdividing tracts for the purpose of applying factors to the subdivisions are not such errors as may be corrected by the county auditor.

4. Errors in multiplication for the purpose of ascertaining areas of dimensions shown by a plat or otherwise of record, are not clerical errors, but constitute fundamental errors. The principle above set forth applies here as well as in the other cases already mentioned.

5. Errors in dimensions of buildings disclosed by subsequent measurements must be regarded as fundamental errors.

At the risk of repetition permit me to say that measurement of buildings, computation of errors and the like, are things which have no part in the legal scheme of valuation. If it were specifically made the duty of the real estate assessors to measure the building to be valued or to compute the area in square feet of a tract of land, or the floor space of a building, then of course, an error in calculation or in measurement would be clerical. Inasmuch, however, as these things are done by the valuing officer or under his direction, not as a part of his duty but merely for the purpose of aiding him in reaching the judgment which does constitute his official duty, an error in any of these things must be regarded as fundamental, or more properly speaking, must be disregarded entirely.

6. Errors in areas of real estate arising from erroneous dimensions must in the nature of things appear upon the face of the return, or elsewhere in the office of the auditor. By section 5569 each assessor is required to return the description of each lot, and if a part of a lot is listed, the number of feet along the principal street on which it abuts. By section 5553 the assessor is permitted to rely upon the maps furnished him by the county auditor. By section 5549, maps and plats are required to be made under the supervision of the county auditor. Mistakes in any of these matters are mistakes which appear of record and are clearly not fundamental. In the same connection it may be stated that an error in the acreage of farm property is a "clerical" error which may be corrected by the county auditor. Of course, a mistaken choice of a given factor, as above described, is clearly fundamental.

As I have indicated, it is impossible perhaps, to set forth with completeness and exactness the errors that may and may not be corrected by the county auditor. I trust, however, that the foregoing opinion will be of service to the commission, not only with respect to the particular case which gives rise to your inquiry, but in all other matters of the same sort.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

244.

TAXES AND TAXATION—REDUCTION OF VALUES BY DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY—POWERS OF AUDITOR TO DEDUCT FROM TAX LIST—POWERS OF ASSESSORS AND BOARDS OF EQUALIZATION.

When a new building or structure has been damaged or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise after the second Monday in April, and such fact is made to appear to the county auditor before the first day of October, that official under section 2591, may deduct the lost value from the tax list.

Under section 2591, General Code, such reduction may be made when a building has been depreciated in value by the act of the owner himself, between the aforesaid dates.

The codifying commission changed the language of section 5578, General Code, so as to limit the authority of the assessor and the county and city boards of equalization, to making such reductions for depreciated values, only for new structure.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 29th ult., in which you request my opinion on the following questions:

> "1. When a building or structure, other than a new structure, has been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise, after the first day of October in any year, is the county auditor or any other officer of the board, authorized to reduce the value of such building or structure or have the amount of such loss deducted from the tax list and duplicate?"

Section 2591 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October in any year it is made to appear by the oath of the owner or one of the owners of a building or structure and by the affidavit of two disinterested persons, resident of the city or township in which the building or structure is or was situated, that such building or structure has been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise, since the second Monday in April of the current year, the county auditor shall deduct from the tax list and duplicate the value of such building or structure or such part of the value thereof as shall correspond to the extent of the injury."

Section 1042, Revised Statutes, fixes the time for the delivery of the tax duplicate by the auditor to the treasurer as the first day of October in any year, and the date fixed by statute when the lien for taxes attaches is the day preceding the second Monday in April; hence, the fixing of the dates within which the value of buildings or structures that have been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise may be deducted from the tax list and duplicate was not arbitrary, the time being fixed at a period when the auditor had possession and control of the duplicate. I find no other provision of the statute authorizing the auditor or any other authority to reduce the value of buildings or structures on the tax duplicate, which have been destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise after the first day of October in any year. I therefore hold there is no authority to reduce the valuation of buildings or structures, other than new structures, that have been injured or destroyed by fire, flood, tornado or otherwise after the first day of October in any year.

> "2. When, after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October, in any year, it is made to appear to the auditor, as provided in section 2591, General Code, that a building or structure has become depreciated in value by the act of the owner, through his tearing down such building or removing therefrom fixed machinery assessed as part of the real estate, is the county auditor, or any other officer of the board, authorized to reduce the value of such building or structure, or have the amount of such loss or depreciation in value deducted from the tax list and duplicate for the current year."

The circuit court of Cuyahoga county in the case of State of Ohio ex rel. J. A. Smith, Trustee, vs. Robert Wright, Auditor of Cuyahoga County, 8 C. C. (N. S.), 366, has passed on the question involved in your second inquiry. In the case just mentioned, Smith, the relator, tore down and destroyed a building on certain premises between the second Monday in April and the first day of October. The taxes on the building destroyed amounted to $135.68. The auditor refusing to deduct the value of the building torn down and destroyed the relator brought an action in mandamus against the auditor commanding and directing him to deduct from the tax list the valuation of the building torn down and destroyed. The court in construing section 1038*a*, Revised Statutes, now section 2591, General Code, said:

> "Is this statute unreasonable? Notwithstanding it would sometimes relieve one from paying taxes on property from which he had an income during a part of the year, it is not to us so unreasonable as would justify us, in the absence of the holding of any higher court, or any court as far as we know, that the statute is either unreasonable or ambiguous. We do not find it is either. We hold that, therefore, the prayer of the petition should be granted. Judgment will be entered accordingly."

I therefore hold that when it is made to appear to the auditor after the second Monday in April and before the first day of October in any year, as provided in section 2591 of the General Code, that a building or structure has been depreciated in value by the act of the owner, through his tearing down such building or removing therefrom fixed machinery assessed as part of the real estate, the county auditor has the power and authority to deduct from the tax list and duplicate for the current year the amount of such loss or depreciation occasioned by the tearing down of the building or removing therefrom fixed machinery.

> "3. What is the effect of the change in language as it appears in section 5578 of the General Code from the language used in section 2753 of the Revised Statutes? It will be noted that the provisions of section 5578 refer to the case of the destruction by fire * * * 'of a new structure,' while section 2753 of the Revised Statutes refers to the case of the destruction by fire * * * 'of any structure of any kind.'"

Section 2753 of the Revised Statutes provides in part that:

> "* * * and in case of the destruction by fire, flood, cyclone, storm or otherwise, of any structure of any kind, or of orchards, timber, ornamental trees or groves, over one hundred dollars in value, the value of which shall have been included in any former valuation of the tract or lot on which the same stood, the assessor shall determine as near as practicable how much less valuable such tract or lot is in consequence of such destruction, and make return thereof, and in case the assessor shall fail or neglect so to do then the county or city board of equalization shall perform such duty, and the auditor shall deduct the same from the value thereof as it stands on the tax list." * * *

Section 5578 of the General Code, which is a modification of that part of section 2753, Revised Statutes quoted above, is as follows:

"In case of the destruction by fire, flood, cyclone, storm or otherwise, of a new structure, or of orchards, timber, ornamental trees or groves, over one hundred dollars in value, the value of which had been included in a former valuation of the tract on which they stood, such assessor shall determine, as near as practicable, how much less valuable such tract or lot is in consequence of such destruction and make return thereof. If the assessor fails or neglects so to do, the county or city board of equalization shall perform such duty and the auditor shall deduct the losses from the value of such property as it stands on the tax list."

The codifying commission changed the language of that part of section 2753, Revised Statutes, italicized, and it now reads in section 5578, General Code, "of a new structure." By reason of this change in the language by the codifying commission, the authority of the assessor and the county and city boards of equalization is now limited in reducing the valuation of tracts by reason of the destruction by fire, flood, cyclone, storm or otherwise of structures located thereon, to new buildings or structures. As this section was before codification the reduction could be made on a structure of any kind.

Very respectfully yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 252.

TAXES AND TAXATION—ERRORS OF CLERK OF BOARDS—ASSESSING MIND—POWER OF AUDITOR TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN THE DUPLICATE.

In law, all the work of the board of assessors including that of its clerks and employes is presumed conclusively to be the work of the board itself so that the fact that errors were made solely by clerks and employes in matters of mere mathematical processes after the work of the board as such had been completed, does not support the argument that such errors were merely clerical ones, committed after the assessing mind of the board had been made up. The auditor is therefore not permitted to correct such errors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 15, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 11th, enclosing an amended statement of facts submitted to you by the auditor of Cuyahoga county with respect to the operation of the so-called Somers unit system of assessing real estate, as used by the quadrennial city board of real estate assessors of the city of Cleveland, and with respect to which I recently rendered an opinion to you.

I am also in receipt of a brief on this subject from Hon. E. W. Doty, representing the Manufacturers' Appraisal Company, and a pamphlet courteously furnished by him describing in detail the method in question.

From all of the additional sources of information which have been submitted to me it is apparent that the statement of facts embodied in my former opinion to the commission was inaccurate in one particular. It was assumed therein that the valuations of the board of assessors were in fact affixed to areas and buildings as computed by the clerks and employes of the board. It now appears, however, that what Mr. Doty in his brief calls the "assessing mind" was called into action at the very outset of the procedure adopted by the board; that is to say, the judgment as to the value of a given tract of real estate was exercised with respect to the value of an ideal or imaginary strip of real estate of certain dimensions abutting upon certain streets. In this way the theoretical value of all the foot frontage of the city was determined by the board before any computations or measurements had been made.

In the same manner certain valuations were affixed by the board to imaginary structures of various classes and ages; and this too was done before the clerical work or work of measurement was performed.

After the board had determined the unit values of real estate in various parts of the city and the unit values of different classes of structures, and presumably the amount or rate of various factors of influence, its employes and experts proceeded to take measurements and make calculations on the basis of these theoretical valuations. It is pointed out that the board really exercised no judgment after it had fixed the unit values and determined the respective rates of certain factors of influence; that thereafter everything that was done in fact was done by the clerks. It is conceded, however, that the board's official return was made up of valuations reached by computation of unit values of factors of influence upon the areas, etc., reached by the clerks, and that the results of these computations were adopted by the board as its valuation.

It is now urged that inasmuch as the "assessing mind" exhausted its functions when it determined its theoretical or unit values everything that followed is to be regarded as clerical and not fundamental, and that errors therein may be corrected by the county auditor.

On careful consideration of the arguments that have been adduced and the facts as they now appear, I find myself unable to change the general conclusion which I expressed in the former opinion. The law makes no distinction between the various functions exercised by the valuing officers; they are all in theory and in law acts of the "assessing mind." The computations of the clerks and the measurements of the employes when adopted by the board are conclusively deemed in law to be the acts of the board, and the totals thereby ascertained are conclusively regarded in law as having been reached by the exercise of the judgment of the members of the board themselves. This, I think, is clear from the authorities cited by me in the former opinion, but it is equally clear from a consideration of all the statutes involved. In a sense it might be said that the method known as the Somers system, while undoubtedly scientific, is the exact reverse of the theoretical process which the law commands; that is to say, the law provides that an assessor of real estate shall "in all cases, from actual view * * * determine, as near as practicable, the true value of each separate tract and lot of real property, * * * etc." (Section 5554, General Code.) The assessor is supposed to view the specific property which he values and as a result of his view to arrive at the judgment which he expresses and the valuation which he affixes to that property. This is what every assessor and board of assessors is presumed to have done. The actual facts of the case may be, as in Cleveland, just the reverse; the "actual view" may be that of the clerks and employes, and the "true value" affixed by the "assessing mind" may be the value of a strip of land one foot wide and one hundred feet long on a certain street, subject to corner influences and alley influences, etc.; but in law the grand total reached by all the various multiplications and divisions and computations involved in the operation of the Somers system is the judgment of the "assessing mind" as to the "true value" of each separate tract.

It follows then, it seems to me, that all the computations and measurements made by the clerks and employes of the board must be regarded as merged into the final judgment of the board in adopting the totals so reached. That this final judgment is not in fact the exercise of the discretion of the "assessing mind" is immaterial; it is such in law.

While, therefore, I am glad to correct any misstatements I may have made in the former opinion as to the manner of operation of the Somers system and while in my personal judgment the Somers system affords a scientific and perfectly equitable method of arriving at real estate values, yet I cannot change the conclusions of law I reached in the former opinion.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 255.

TAXES AND TAXATION—CREDITS OF NON-RESIDENT CORPORATIONS—MORTGAGE NOTES—AGENT IN OHIO—"NATURAL GAS COMPANY"—"PIPE LINE COMPANY"—MANUFACTURING COMPANY AS CONSUMER.

The statutes of Ohio are to be construed to effect that credits may be taxed only against residents of this state and against non-residents who actually loan and hold moneys loaned through an agent acting in this state.

The rule, however, is narrowed with reference to corporations under section 5404, General Code, which renders credits as well as other forms of personal property taxable to all corporations at the place in this state where the credits are held regardless of corporate residence.

From this principle where a foreign corporation, having its headquarters in another state, loans money on mortgages in this state, through an agent in this state who holds the evidence of such indebtedness in Ohio, such credits may be taxed.

Whether a foreign corporation having its principal office in another state and having but one manufacturing plant, and that plant located in Ohio, must return credits for taxation in Ohio, depends on whether such credits are actually in Ohio.

A corporation engaged in the business of drilling and operating gas wells, who sells part of its gas to a manufacturing company, sells to a "consumer" for power purposes within the meaning of section 467, 101 O. L., 409, and is therefore to be deemed a "natural gas company."

As such company, however, is not engaged in the business of "transporting gas through pipes" it is not a "pipe line company."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 20, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 1st, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"(1) A foreign corporation, having headquarters in Philadelphia, Pa., loans money upon chattel mortgage and other securities in Ohio, through an agent resident in this state. Are the credits represented by such loans taxable in Ohio?

"(2) Must a foreign corporation, having its principal office in another state, and having but one manufacturing plant, and that plant located in Ohio, return its credits in Ohio for taxation?

"(3) A corporation, engaged in the business of drilling and operating gas wells, sells part of the gas from its wells directly to a manufacturing company, which latter company uses the gas in its business of manufacturing bottles; any gas in excess of that taken by the manufacturing company is sold by the producing company to a natural gas company, which transports the gas in its pipe lines and sells the same to its customers throughout the state (the only pipe lines which the company has are those which run to the plant of the manufacturing company): Is such a company a natural gas company 'engaged in the business of supplying natural gas for lighting, heating or power purposes to consumers within this state,' or a pipe line company 'engaged in the business of transporting natural gas through pipes or tubing within this state,' within the meaning of the provisions of section 46 of the act of May 10, 1910?"

Answering your first question I beg to state that section 5370, General Code, provides in part that:

> "Each person * * * shall list * * * all moneys in his possession, all moneys invested, loaned or otherwise controlled by him as agent * * * or on account of any other person or persons, company or corporation." * * *

Section 5328 provides that:

> "All real or personal property in this state * * * and all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks or otherwise of persons residing in this state shall be subject to taxation."

Section 5327, General Code, provides that:

> "The term credits * * * means the excess of the sum of all legal claims and demands whether for money or other valuable thing * * * over and above the sum of all legal bona fide debts owing by such person." * * *

On the face of these related sections there is a seeming inconsistency. If the term "credits" includes a demand for money there would seem to be a very slight distinction between such a right and the right to "moneys invested." Yet it seems clear that the intention of the statute is to tax the "credits" of residents of Ohio only, while there seems to be an intention to tax the "moneys invested" of persons not residents of Ohio if the investment is made by an agent who is a resident of Ohio.

However, these sections are of long standing in our statute law, and the supreme court has adopted a rule of construction applicable thereto in Grant vs. Jones, 39 O. S., 506, the second branch of the syllabus of which is as follows:

> "Credits owned by a non-resident of this state are not taxable here unless they are held within this state by a guardian, trustee or agent of the owner by whom they must be returned for taxation. The fact that such credits are secured by mortgage on real estate within this state does not change the rule." * * *

In the opinion of the court, per Johnson, C. J., the principle is laid down that the state has no power to tax the credits of persons not residents of it, because for the purpose of taxation the situs is that of the domicile of the owner, regardless of the fact that the debt is secured by mortgage upon property within the state. On this point Worthington vs. Sabastian, 25 O. S., 1; Railroad Co. vs. Pa., 15 Wallace, 300; Bradley vs. Bauder, 36 O. S., 28; Tappin vs. Bank, 19 Wallace, 499, and other cases to the same effect are cited.

In Myers vs. Seaberger, 45 O. S., 233, the syllabus is as follows:

> "A loan of money secured by mortgage on real estate, is a credit within the meaning of the statutes of this state providing for the taxation of property; and, where the creditor resides in another state, is not subject to taxation in this, although the securities are in the hands of an agent residing here, intrusted by the terms of his agency with the collection of the interest and principal when due, and its transmission to the creditor when collected."

The per curiam opinion in this case is instructive because of its reference to section 2734, Revised Statutes, now section 5370, General Code, above quoted. The language of the opinion in this respect is as follows:

"The rule as above stated is qualified as to 'money' by section 2734, Revised Statutes. By this doctrine every person of full age and sound mind is required to list for taxation 'all moneys invested, loaned, or otherwise, controlled by him, as agent or attorney, or on account of any other person or persons.' But the case before us does not come within this provision. The agent of the defendant had no power to loan or invest money for her in this state. His duties were confined to the collection of that which had been loaned; and transmitting it to his principal as fast as it was collected. The phrase 'or otherwise controlled by him' must be construed to mean, in a manner similar to the loaning and investing of money. For it is a settled rule of construction that, in accordance with the maxim nosoitur a sociis, the meaning of a word may be ascertained by reference to the meaning of words associated with it; and again, according to a similar rule, the coupling of words together shows that they are to be understood in the same sense. Broom's Leg. Max. *523. To loan or invest money is one thing; to collect and transmit it to the owner when collected, is another and different thing. Any other construction would require every attorney in the state engaged in making collections for non-residents, to return the same for taxation. Such could not have been the intention of the legislature, nor does the language of the statute require that such construction should be placed on it."

In other words then, a credit due from a citizen of Ohio to a resident of another state, secured by mortgage on property in Ohio, is as a general principle, not taxable in Ohio; but when the loan was made in the first instance by an agent within the state of Ohio having general authority to invest as well as to collect, the agent must, under section 5370, return the taxable value of such loan as "moneys invested, loaned or otherwise controlled by him as agent." The practical application of this somewhat technical rule is further illustrated by the case of Lee vs. Dawson, 8 C. C., 365. This case, however, does not seem to follow the rule laid down in Myers vs. Seaberger, although that case is cited as authority for the holding.

It will be seen, therefore, that the first question which you present is not free from difficulty. The corporation which you describe clearly has no situs for taxation as such within the state of Ohio. Besides being incorporated under the laws of another state, it actually has its principal office and headquarters for the transaction of business in another state. On the principles of law applicable to natural persons, the credits of this corporation would take the situs of its principal office, but if it had vested an agent in the state of Ohio with full authority to invest its moneys as well as to collect the interest and principal thereof in the state of Ohio, such agent should return the amount of such moneys so invested or rather the taxable value of the investment under section 6730, General Code.

But the case for an incorporated company is in reality weaker than that for a private individual. Section 5404, General Code, as amended April 11, 1911, provides in part that:

> "The president, secretary and principal accounting officer of every incorporated company * * * whether incorporated by a law of this state or not, shall list for taxation, verified by the oath of the person so listing all the * * * moneys and credits of such company or corporation within the state at the true value in money."

This section, which was formerly section 2744, Revised Statutes, has been construed by the supreme court in the case of Hubbard vs. Brush, 61 O. S., 253. To attach to corporate property in Ohio a situs for the purpose of taxation other than that of the corporate residence, and to render credits as well as other forms of personal property taxable to such corporation at the place in this state where they are held regardless of corporate residence. In the opinion of the court, per Bradbury, C. J., the following language is found at page 264:

> "Where foreign corporations voluntarily bring their property and business into this state to avail themselves of the advantages found here * * * they should not be heard to complain of laws which tax them as domestic corporations are taxed by the state. We hold, therefore, that the provisions of section 2744 which makes it the duty of foreign corporations to list for taxation in this state their choses in action where they are held within this state and grow out of the business they conduct herein, is a valid exercise of the taxing powers vested in the state. * * * Its choses in action * * * fall within that class of property our tax laws call 'credits.'" * * *

While the facts in this case show that the corporation therein involved did all of its business in Ohio, and maintained its principal office in fact in this state, though incorporated under the laws of a neighboring state, and while also certain language in the syllabus and in the opinion would seem to indicate that this fact was an element in the decision of the court, yet the reasoning as embodied in the above quoted excerpt from the opinion seems to be equally applicable to the case of a foreign corporation doing a relatively small proportion of its business in this state. In any event the clear intention of section 5404, General Code, is to make corporate credits taxable where held in this state, regardless of the domicile of the corporation. In spite, therefore, of the doubt which surrounds the first question which you submit, I am of the opinion that a foreign corporation having its actual headquarters in another state, which through an agent resident in this state, loans money upon chattel mortgage and other securities in Ohio, and holds in Ohio the evidences of indebtedness witnessing such loans, must return the taxable value of such loans as "credits" in this state at the office of such agent.

The answer to your second question depends upon the practice of the company. For instance, the writer has in mind a certain corporation that had a manufacturing plant a few years ago in Jackson county, Ohio; the office of the company was at Philadelphia, Pa.; the plant in Jackson county reported all sales made, and all accounts and notes to the main office at Philadelphia where the books were kept, save such books as were necessary to be kept in Jackson county on account of sales, employment of men, purchases, etc.; all collections were made from the main office whence directions came as to the collection of all accounts and notes and choses in action; in other words, the situs of the office of the company was at Philadelphia. In that case, clearly, credits should not be returned in Ohio for taxation.

The writer has further in mind a coal company with an office in Jackson county, Ohio, and another office in Chillicothe, Ohio. The president of the company resides in Chillicothe and maintains his office there, and in a general way directs the affairs of the company. However, all notes are turned into the office in Jackson county for collection; the books showing the credits are kept there; all statements and accounts of indebtedness are sent out from there; moneys are deposited in the banks in Jackson county; and it may be said that the real situs of the office of the company is in Jackson county, although there is an office maintained in Chillicothe which directs the business in a general way. The credits of this coal company should properly be returned for taxation in Jackson county, Ohio. See the case of Hubbard vs. Brush, supra.

Answering your third question I beg to state that the same seems to depend upon the meaning which must be given to the word "consumer" as used in section 46 of the act of May 10, 1910, 101 O. L., 409. This section, which is a definite one, provides that:

> "Any person or persons, firm or firms, joint stock association or corporation wherever organized or incorporated * * * when engaged in the business of supplying natural gas for lighting, heating or power purposes to consumers within this state is a natural gas company." * * *

Another section of the act, to-wit: Section 121 applies the term "public utility" to such natural gas company. It may therefore in a sense be said that within the meaning of the whole act a company is not a natural gas company which does not supply the public generally; that is to say, does not sell its product to the individual known in present day parlance as the "ultimate consumer." However, in my opinion a manufacturing company may be a consumer within the meaning of the act. Some significance must be attached to the use of the word "power" in section 46. "Power," as used in this section means a force applied in the process of production. The general public or the ultimate consumer has no need of "power." Therefore, it is clear that if the company sells natural gas to several manufacturers, it is a natural gas company within the meaning of the act. I can perceive no vital distinction between the business of selling to one manufacturer and the business of selling to two or three manufacturers.

In my opinion, therefore, the corporation described in your third question is a natural gas company. It seems to me quite clear that it cannot be regarded as a pipe line company by virtue of the mere fact that it does own and use lines of pipe for the purpose of supplying the manufacturing company with the gas sold to it. The distinction is clear. Section 46 provides in this particular that "when engaged in the business of transporting natural gas * * * through pipes or tubing * * * is a pipe line company." It is transportation as a business which constitutes a pipe line company.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

B 255.

TAXES AND TAXATION—POWER OF BOARDS OF REVISION TO REDUCE AND DECREASE VALUATION—NECESSITY FOR COMPLAINT—NOTICE TO PARTIES.

A county or city board of revision may not increase the valuation of any real property except upon complaint filed and upon proper notice to parties interested.

All reductions made by the board of revision are subject to the rule of 5601, General Code, providing that they may not reduce the aggregate valuation returned by the assessors with the additions made thereto by the auditor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 20, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 18th, in which you submit for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "May a county or city board of revision increase the valuation of any real property without a complaint having been filed with such board to the effect that such property is assessed too low, or may such board, on its own initiative and without complaint being filed, increase the valuation of any real property, first giving notice as provided by law and an opportunity to be heard by the owner thereof?"

That this question must be answered in the negative seems to me to be clear from the provisions of sections 5600 and 5601 of the General Code which provide:

Section 5600:

> "After the completion of the equalization by the board, complaints against any valuation may be filed with the auditor of the county, and, if such complaint has been filed on or before April 15th thereafter against any valuation of a quadrennial county board, or if the auditor deems it advisable he shall notify the members of the proper board of equalization * * * to meet and sit as a board of revision. * * *"

Section 5601:

> "The board of revision shall investigate all such complaints and all complaints against any valuation filed with it as a board, or made by the county auditor, and may increase or decrease any valuation complained of and no other. * * * No valuation * * * shall be increased by the board of revision, in any case, except upon reasonable notice * * * to all persons directly interested and an opportunity for a full hearing * * *."

While it is undoubtedly true that the provision for notice to interested parties is all that the general assembly need have inserted in this section in order to conform to constitutional limitations, nevertheless the legislature has chosen to use unequivocal language in the first sentence of section 5601 from which,

and from the related provisions, the conclusion inevitably follows that the board of revision has no power whatsoever to act in any way, either to reduce or to raise the valuation of a specific parcel of real estate, unless a specific complaint as to the valuation of such real estate has been filed with it as a board or with the county auditor. Such complaint, however, may be filed with the board by the county auditor himself.

It is of course true that under provisions of section 5601, that above quoted, a board of revision may not reduce the aggregate valuation returned by the assessors with the additions made thereto by the auditor.

This requirement will in many cases perhaps operate practically to preclude the board of revision from reducing upon a complaint unless the amount thereby taken from the tax list is restored with respect to the valuation of other specific property. In practice, however, this defect may easily be obviated, either by requiring the complaining owner to specify property not fully valued at the time he complains with respect to the over-valuation of his own property, or by having the county auditor complain in respect to specific undervaluations. Such complaints by the county auditor may apparently be filed at any time.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

B 256.

TAXES AND TAXATION — TAX COMMISSION POWERS AS BOARD OF EQUALIZATION—CONTROL OVER INFERIOR BOARDS—POWERS TO RECONVENE AND RECONSIDER—REASSESSMENT—FUNDAMENTAL ERRORS—CERTIFICATION TO AUDITOR OF TAXING DISTRICT.

When, under sections 107 and 108 of 101 O. L., 426, the tax commission has changed the valuation of the real property as returned by the assessors of any taxing district and has certified its correct statement to the respective auditor, the jurisdiction of the commission in the matter is determined and it cannot reconsider its action, for the purpose of changing its fundamental judgment. Clerical errors may be corrected, however, by a "nunc pro tunc" entry at any time.

Where, however, the fundamental judgment of the commission has been based upon a defective abstract furnished by the auditor of a taxing district, such fact vitiates the presumed jurisdiction of the commission which may therefore take action anew with regard to the respective district.

Such mistake is furthermore within the power of the commission to correct other than fundamental errors of judgment.

To sustain the intended scheme of taxation of the statutes, section 5542-9a giving the power to the commission, to order county or city boards of equalization to reconvene and to revalue real property, is to be construed as excluding the exercise of such powers after the commission, having itself acted as a board of equalization under section 107 and 108 aforesaid has certified its final statement to the auditor. An exception exists where after such certificate errors of fact or errors of record appear, in which case also however such action can only be taken before the commission has itself acted upon such non-fundamental errors.

Under section 81, however, the commission may at any time when it deems necessary, upon notice and hearing raise or lower the assessed value of any real or personal property. As a matter of practice, however, it would be proper to exercise this power by way of appeal to local boards of revision.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 17th, in which you submit for my opinion the following questions:

"(1) The commission having proceeded under the provisions of section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910, and having found that the real property in a certain taxing district, as reported by the county auditor to the commission, was not on the duplicate at its true value in money, and having made an increase or decrease in the valuation of the real property in such taxing district by a certain rate of per cent., and having transmitted to the county auditor a statement of the amount to be added to or deducted from the valuation of the real property in such taxing district, as provided in section 108 of said act, may the commission thereafter reconsider its action and change the rate of per cent. so fixed, to be added or deducted?

"(2) If such action of the commission was based upon an incorrect abstract transmitted to it by the county auditor, may the commission review its previous finding and correct the mistake caused by such failure of the county auditor to transmit a correct abstract?

"(3) After the commission has certified its action as to a county, city or other taxing district, may it order a county or city board of equalization to reconvene as a board of equalization, as provided in section 5542-9*a* as enacted February 28, 1911, and, if so, may such board change the aggregate as fixed by the tax commission?"

Sections 106, 107 and 108 of the act of May 10, 1910, 101 Ohio Laws, 426, provide in part as follows:

Section 106:

"Each county auditor, on or before the first Monday of November, 1910, and every fourth year thereafter, shall make and transmit to the commission an abstract of the real property of each taxing district in his county, in which he shall set forth the value thereof as returned by the assessors, with such additions as have been made thereto."

Section 107:

"The commission shall, on or before the first day of April following, determine whether the real property of the several * * * taxing districts in the state shall have been assessed at its true value in money, and if, in the opinion of the said commission, the real property which (in) any * * * taxing district * * * as reported by the said auditors * * * is not on the duplicate at its true value in money, the said commission may increase or decrease the valuation in such * * * taxing district by such rate of per cent. or by such amount as will place said property on the duplicate at its true value in money."

Section 108:

"When the commission has determined the true value of the real property in the several taxing districts the commission shall transmit to each county auditor a statement of the amount to be added or deducted from the valuation of the real property of each taxing district in his county. * * * The county auditor shall forthwith add to or deduct from each tract or lot of real property in his county, the required per cent. or amount on the valuation thereof, as it stands, after it has been equalized by the county and city boards of equalization." * * *

Answering your first question I am of the opinion that if the proposed reconsideration is for the purpose of changing the fundamental judgment of the tax commission as to the matter theretofore determined by it under section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910, such reconsideration is unauthorized and beyond the power of the commission. Singularly enough, I have found no case directly in point in such search as I have been able to make for authorities pertaining to your first question. On the one hand it is established that if a mistake, omission or other clerical error has occurred in the certificate of the action of a state or other board of equalization such an error may be corrected by the board itself or by the proper officer of the board at any time nunc pro tunc.

Sheldon vs. Township of Marion, 101 Mich., 256.
State ex rel. vs. Wray, 55 Mo. App., 646.
Cornell vs. Alsup, 107 Tenn., 257.

The tax commission of Ohio at all times has control of its own journals and records required by it to be kept and made up, and I think there can be no question as to its authority to correct errors in such records and certificates.

When the board has finally acted on any matter within its jurisdiction, however, and the certificates and records required to be executed by it are correct and conform to the actual determination of the commission, then in my judgment, in the absence of a statute expressly authorizing reconsideration of such matter, the power of the commission with respect to the same is functus officio. It is well settled as a principle of law that in the absence of any statute, a board or tribunal having administrative or judicial powers with authority to hear and determine a fact or a cause fully executes such authority and loses the same when its final action has been taken or its final determination has been made. Thus, at common law a court of general jurisdiction loses the power to reopen a cause determined by it after the expiration of the term at which its judgment was rendered, except in case of fraud or the like. Au fortiori then, the tax commission being a tribunal of limited jurisdiction, so to speak, as opposed to the general jurisdiction of a court like the court of common pleas, must be held to lose such jurisdiction with respect to a given matter when the same is once fully and completely exercised.

Under the statutes now under consideration it seems to me that the jurisdiction of the tax commission with respect to the equalization or review of the valuation of the real property of any given county is relinquished when the commission has transmitted to the county auditor a correct statement of its judgment as to the amount to be added or deducted from the valuation of the real property of each taxing district in such county. Before such a statement is transmitted to the county auditor the commission still retains jurisdiction of the subject-matter, so that, though it may have determined the same and spread upon its journal the record of such determination, nevertheless, the same may be reconsidered by the commission. It is not until the statement is transmitted to the county auditor that the commission does lose jurisdiction.

The answer to your second question, in my opinion, must be in the affirmative. As indicated in my answer to your first question, the commission at all times has power to review and correct its findings with respect to errors and mistakes other than fundamental errors of judgment. It is, in my opinion, essential to the proper exercise of jurisdiction by the commission under section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910, that the commission should have before it a correct abstract of the taxing district in a given county. A mistake of the county auditor in the exercise of his ministerial duty with respect to making up such an abstract might in a sense be said to vitiate all the proceedings of the tax commission with respect to the county. It is held that the presence of an incorrect tax roll or statement is not a jurisdictional defect which will vitiate proceedings of a board of equalization.

City of New York vs. Davenport, 92 N. Y., 601.
Dayton vs. Board of Equalization, 33 Ore., 131.

Whether or not, however, the auditor's mistake in making up his abstract is to be regarded as a defect of jurisdiction with respect to the power of the tax commission, I am satisfied that such a mistake authorizes the commission to act de nove with respect to the valuations of real property in the county, or at least with respect to valuations within the taxing districts affected by such mistakes.

Section 5542-9*a* of the General Code, as enacted February 28, 1911, and referred to in your third question, provides in part as follows:

> "The tax commission of Ohio may, whenever in its opinion the same may be necessary or advisable, order the board for the annual equalization of real and personal property, moneys and credits, provided for in section 5580 of the General Code, of any county, the quadrennial board of equalization of real property outside of cities, provided for in section 5594 of the General Code, and such board sitting as a board of revision, * * * the city board of review * * * and such board sitting as a board of equalization or as a board of revision * * * of any city * * * and the quadrennial city board of assessors of real property * * * of any city, to reconvene, notwithstanding the time provided by law for the completion of the work * * * of such board may have passed, or such board may have finally adjourned, and may direct any such board to complete any unfinished work, business or duty, or correct any errors or omissions, or authorizes it to change any improper valuations theretofore made. When so reconvened such board in the performance of such duties as the tax commission may have directed shall have and exercise all the powers and perform all the duties imposed upon it by law before its final adjournment." * * *

As enacted, this section is supplemental to section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910, which is re-enacted in the same act and given the sectional number 5542-9.

In order clearly to understand the legal facts bearing upon the solution of your third question, the exact inter-relation of the functions of the various assessing and equalizing boards which form the component parts of the assessing machinery of the state must be understood.

Without citing all the statutes concerned, suffice it to say that the scheme of assessing real estate comprised in our statutes at the present time is substantially as follows:

1. The original assessment for valuations of specific tracts and parcels of real estate is made by township, village and city boards of real estate assessors in the quadrennial years.

2. The valuations so made are returned to the county auditor, and while in his hands are subject to correction and revision for clerical errors.

3. The county auditor lays before the quadrennial board of equalization and the city board of review, sitting as a quadrennial board of equalization, the returns of the various assessors and boards of assessors. The board of equalization then proceeds to equalize the valuations, affixed to specific tracts and parcels of real estate by the assessors and boards of assessors, among the individual tracts or parcels.

4. The equalizing boards certify to the county auditor the tax lists of the various taxing districts within their respective territorial jurisdictions. The auditor while having possession of such lists possesses the continuing power of correcting clerical errors therein.

5. The county auditor makes and transmits to the tax commission an abstract of all the real property in his county with the valuations as equalized, and the additions made thereto.

What the abstract of the real property, provided for in section 106 of the act of May 10, 1910, must set forth the equalized valuations is not clear from the language of said section; however, said language is essentially similar to that of section 2817, Revised Statutes, construed by the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. vs. Morris, 63 O. S., 496, wherein it was held that the abstract to be made by the county auditor under the then existing law and transmitted to the decennial state board of equalization should set forth the equalized valuations.

6. The tax commission, acting under section 107, above quoted, and reenacted as section 5542-9, General Code, by the act of February 28, 1911, above cited, reviews, and in a sense equalizes, the valuation reported to it by the various county auditors by taxing districts or parts thereof. So far as its power under this section is concerned, the tax commission has nothing whatever to do with individual parcels or tracts of real estate.

In connection with section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910, however, section 80 of the same act must be read. This section provides in part as follows:

> "It (the tax commission) may receive complaints and carefully examine into all cases where it is alleged that property subject to taxation has not been assessed or has been fraudulently or for any reason improperly or unfairly assessed, or the law in any manner evaded or violated, and may cause to be instituted such proceedings as will remedy improper or negligent administration of the taxation laws of the state."

In the same connection a portion of section 81 of the same act is in part as follows:

> "It (the tax commission) shall order a reassessment of the real or personal property in any taxing district, when in the judgment of said commission such property has not been assessed at its true value in money. * * *
>
> "It may raise or lower the assessed value of any real or personal property, first giving notice to the owner or owners thereof fixing a time and place for hearing any person or persons interested to the end that the assessment laws of the state may be equitably administered."

Without determining the exact effect of these sections insofar as they refer to the present inquiry, suffice it to say, that I know of no reason why the extraordinary powers conferred upon the tax commission thereby may not be exercised after it has discharged its equalizing function under section 167 of the act with respect to the taxing district within which the specific property under consideration is located.

7. The commission determines the rate of per cent. or amount that must be added to or deducted from all the valuations within a given taxing district and certifies the same to the county auditor.

8. The county auditor, still having the power to make corrections for clerical errors, etc., transmits the tax lists as corrected by him pursuant to the orders of the tax commission, i. e., after the per cent. or proportionate amount has been ascertained and added to each separate valuation as equalized (State vs. Morris, supra), to the board of revision.

9. The board of revision, acting only upon complaint and only as to the specific tracts complained of, may change the valuations as previously made and equalized, if the same are found not to represent the true value in money of the specific tracts in question; so that such valuations shall represent such true value in money.

The foregoing constitutes the assessing machinery of the state with respect to real estate under existing laws.

Your question supposes that the tax commission, after having exercised its powers under section 107, having transmitted to the county auditor the certificate of the rate per cent. or amount to be added to the valuations of property in a given taxing district, ascertains upon complaint or otherwise that the work of the board of equalization having territorial jurisdiction of such taxing district was incomplete with respect to such valuations or was improperly done.

In my opinion, the tax commission, notwithstanding the broad language of section 5542-9*a*, may not order a county or city board of equalization to reconvene after it has itself acted as a state board of equalization. I am at least clear on the point that if the commission has the power to do this the whole machinery of taxation must be set in motion de novo, and the tax commission itself would have to act again as a state board of equalization with respect to the valuations within the taxing district affected by its orders. But I am persuaded that the power to make such an order is not vested in the tax commission. Section 5542-9*a* must be read in connection with all other statutes pertaining to the same subject-matter, and will not be so construed as to lead to confusion and to absurd consequences. The intent of all the related statutes is, that the logical order contemplated by the statutes and consisting of the successive steps of original assessment, equalization as among tracts, equalization as among districts and revision shall be followed; and it is repugnant to all of the sections, other than section 5542-9*a*, to hold that the law contemplates that this order may be in any respect reversed.

Furthermore, the phrase "at any time" as used in section 5542-9*a* cannot in the nature of things be given its broadest meaning. There must be a time when it is too late to equalize as among individual tracts; to hold otherwise would lead to endless confusion. It is certain, for instance, that after the board of revision has acted, and after the tax duplicate of the county has been made up and taxes are being collected it is too late to equalize among individual parcels. This, however, is not in my judgment what may be termed the locus penitentiae of the tax commission. Due deference to the scheme of taxation embodied in all of the related sections leads me to the conclusion that the power of the tax commission to order a re-equalization is lost when the next succeeding step contemplated by the general scheme has been taken; that is, when the tax commission itself has exercised the function of equalization as among taxing districts or parts thereof. In other words, so long as the tax commission has not returned to the county auditor its certificate of the rate per cent. to be added to or deducted from the valuations within a given taxing district it may order the board of equalization to reconvene as such and may direct the county auditor upon the completion of the work of the reconvened board to make an abstract of its finding and transmit to the tax commission for proper action thereon. This statement, however, must be taken in connection with my statements with respect to your second question. That is to say, if, acting under section 5542-9*a*, the tax commission finds that a county board of equalization has made errors or omissions, other than errors of judgment, and has left its work unfinished, so that the fact that its work is not finished appears of record, then of course the errors of the board of equalization would have been carried into the auditor's abstract to the tax commission and would have constituted errors in it, so that all of the work of the tax commission respecting such an abstract could be reconsidered and done over again after the correction of such errors. Therefore, if the tax commission finds that the work of a board of equalization is imperfect on grounds other than those affecting its fundamental judgment respecting valuations, it may reconsider its action, with respect to that taxing district, which may have theretofore been taken under section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910, reconvene the board of equalization for equalizing purposes and direct the county auditor to transmit to the commission a corrected abstract, so that the commission may again exercise its functions under said section 107 with respect to the real property of that and other taxing districts.

If, however, the fact that the work of the board of equalization was in a sense unfinished does not appear of record, or if the criticism or complaint respecting its work is directed at its judgment in the matter of valuations then, in my opinion, the tax commission has no power to order the board to reconvene after the commission itself has certified the rate per cent. to be added to or deducted from the valuations within the taxing district in question.

In either event, the work of reconvening a board of equalization cannot follow the work of the tax commission under section 107 of the act of May 10, 1910; it must at all events precede the exercise of the power of the commission.

I have referred to sections 80 and 81 of the act of May 10, 1910, as indicating the proper remedy. In case the action of the tax commission is invoked with respect to the correction of fundamental errors either before or after it has acted under section 107. Under section 80, as above quoted, the tax commission has power to receive complaints and examine into cases of violation of the law or unfair assessment, but it is to be noted that no power is conferred in that section to proceed in any manner to correct such errors or improper determination of local officers. Section 81 permits the tax commission to order a reassessment of the real or personal property in a taxing district. By parity of the reasoning above adopted I do not believe this order can issue after the tax commission has acted under section 107, if indeed it can be exercised after the local board of equalization has acted.

The power of the tax commission, however, to raise or lower the assessed value of any real or personal property after notice and hearing under section 81 seems to be plenary; this power may be exercised at any time when it would seem most proper to exercise it after the entire machinery above described has been carried out. As a matter of practice, if not as a matter of law, I would deem it most proper for this power of the tax commission to be exercised by way of appeal to local boards of revision.

To summarize, my conclusions as to your third question are: The tax commission, after having certified its action as to a taxing district, under section 108 of the act of May 10, 1910, may not order a local board of equalization to reconvene as such unless for the purpose of correcting clerical errors, and other errors manifest on the face of the record or tax list; and then, in order to carry out the scheme of taxation the tax commission must reconsider its actions as to the county within which such taxing district is located, and again exercise its function under section 107 with respect to the corrected abstract showing the conclusions of such local board when so reconvened.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 258.

MESSENGER COMPANIES—DELIVERY AND ERRAND BUSINESS.

An association of individuals engaged in the special delivery business, handling parcels and packages from stores and factories, furnishing guides to strangers, delivering letters and packages, etc., is a "messenger company" within the meaning of section 46 of the act of May 10, 1910.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 12th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Is an association of individuals engaged in the special delivery business—handling parcels and packages from stores and factories, furnishing guides to strangers, delivering letters and packages, and errands in connection with rent of automobiles, taxicabs and livery vehicles—'a messenger company' within the meaning of section 46 of the act of May 10, 1910?"

In my opinion if a part of the business of the association of individuals which you mention is the furnishing of persons for the purpose of carrying messages and running errands the association is a public utility within the meaning of said section 46. The pertinent provisions of that section are as follows:

> "Any person or persons, firm or firms, joint stock association or corporation wherever organized or incorporated * * * when engaged in the business of supplying messengers or of signaling or calling by electrical apparatus, or in a similar manner, for any purpose, is a messenger or signal company."

There can be no doubt that the word "or" in the foregoing provision is disjunctively used. That is to say, if a person or corporation is engaged only in the business of supplying messengers it is nevertheless a messenger or signal company; it is not necessary that it should also be engaged in the business of signaling or calling by electrical apparatus or in a similar manner. The word "messenger" has a very definite meaning. All lexicographers define it as referring to one who carries messages and runs errands.

For all of the foregoing reasons I am of the opinion that the association described by you is a messenger or signal company within the meaning of said section 46. I am aware that such a company cannot well be said to have a "plant" to be valued under the "unit rule" as required by section 72 to section 79, inclusive, of the act of May 10, 1910. This difficulty, however, is inherent in the statute. The intent of the statute to classify such messenger companies as public utilities is clear.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

C 258.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BANKS AND BANKING—SOCIETY FOR SAVINGS OF CLEVELAND—ANNUAL REPORTS TO COMMISSION AND FEE—RETURNS TO ASSESSOR.

The constitutions of Ohio and the United States guard thoroughly against the danger of exempting from taxation any particular class of corporation and the fundamental principles of law are against such exemptions.

The act of 101 O. L. 299-421 in accordance with this principle clearly manifests the intention to tax all corporations in the general scheme of taxation provided for therein and particularly by the express provision of section 82.

By reason of these premises, the statutes must, if possible, be construed to assess a tax against the Society for Savings of Cleveland and such authorization is to be found in section 90 of the aforesaid act under which that corporation should be compelled to report annually to the tax commission and must pay the fee of ten dollars therein prescribed, being taxed thereby as a mutual corporation organized for profit but having a capital stock, though it is a mutual corporation in theory rather than such in the strict sense of the word.

In view of the directory provision of article XIII, section 3 and article XIV, section 4 of the constitution providing for the taxation of all property employed in banking and all property of corporations, and in view of sections 5325, 5326, General Code, which specifically mentions societies for savings, the Society for Savings of Cleveland must make returns to the assessor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 12th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"(1) Is the Society for Savings, in the city of Cleveland, a corporation organized under the laws of this state for profit, and as such required to make annual reports to the tax commission and pay fee upon the amount of its subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock, as provided in sections 82, 83 and 84 of the act of May 10, 1910 (101 O. L. 399)? If so, what should be the amount of its fee?

"This company was chartered by a special act of the general assembly passed April 4, 1849 (47 O. L. 279). The act was amended February 15, 1877 (74 O. L. 26). (Sections 9814 and 9815, General Code.)

"(2) Is the Society for Savings of Cleveland such a bank or banking association under the laws of this state as should make report to the county auditor, and be assessed by him under the provisions of sections 5407-5414 of the General Code?"

The act of the general assembly, 47 O. L. 279, is in part as follows:

"An act to incorporate the Society for Savings of the city of Cleveland.

'Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio, That Henry W. Clark, Louis Henderson * * * and Samuel H. Mattern be and they are hereby incorporated into a society by the name, style and title of the Society for Savings, in the city of Cleveland, and they, and such others as shall be duly elected members of the said society * * * shall be and remain a body politic and corporate by the same name, style and title for thirty years.

"Section 2. That the said society shall be capable of receiving from any person or persons * * * any deposit or deposits of money, and to use and improve the same, for the purposes, and according to the directions herein * * * provided.

"Section 3. That all deposits of money received by said society, shall be used and improved to the best advantage, and in a manner not inconsistent with the laws of this state. And the income or profits thereof shall be applied and divided among the persons making the deposits, their executors or administrators, in just proportion, with such reasonable deduction as may be chargeable thereon and the principal of such deposits may be withdrawn at such time and in such manner as the said society shall direct and appoint.

"Section 4. That the said society shall * * * have power to elect by ballot any other person or persons as members of said society.

"Section 5. That the said society may have a common seal * * * and that all deeds, conveyances and grants, covenants and agreements, made by their treasurer, or any other person, by their authority and direction * * * shall be good and valid; and the said society shall * * * have power to sue, and may be sued, and may defend * * * by the name, style and title aforesaid.

"Section 6. That the said society shall hereafter meet in the city of Cleveland, sometime in the month of June, annually; * * * and all officers * * * shall be under oath to the faithful performance of the duties of their offices respectively.

"Section 7. That the said society hereby are, and forever shall be vested with the power of making by-laws; * * * provided the same are not repugnant to the laws of this state.

"Section 8. That the said society be, and hereby is authorized to hold real estate in the city of Cleveland, other than that which may be conveyed to said society for security, or in payment of debts, not exceeding in value ten thousand dollars.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Section 10. That this act or any part thereof may be altered or repealed at the pleasure of the general assembly of this state."

I think it is elementary that the above quoted provisions, when enacted and assented to by the persons therein named by appropriate action thereunder, constituted such persons at the time and for all purposes a corporation of the class sometimes referred to as "a close corporation," without capital stock or stockholders, for the period of thirty years.

Shortly prior to the time when the foregoing charter would otherwise have expired, and after the adoption of the present constitution, to-wit: on February 15, 1877, the general assembly enacted the following law:

"An act to extend the charter of societies for savings.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio, That 'societies for savings' * * * now doing business, whose charters are subject to alteration or repeal may continue their business under their respective charters after the expiration thereof, subject, however, to the repeal of any such charter, and to such amendments, alterations, rules and regulations as may be prescribed * * * by any laws of the state.

"Section 2. That before any dividend or interest on deposits shall be paid it shall be the duty of such societies to have a surplus fund equal to not less than five per centum of the whole amount of deposits; and it is made the duty of such societies to gradually increase such surplus fund to an amount equal to ten per centum of the amount of deposits. (74 O. L. 26.)"

Prior to the passage of this act, to-wit: March 31, 1866, the general assembly enacted a law authorizing societies for savings "duly incorporated by the general assembly of this state, and now doing business under their respective acts of incorporation" to invest in land for the purpose of their own business, such sum as the trustees might deem necessary, not to exceed five per cent. of the amount of the deposits held by such society for savings, and to rent such part of the building so erected as shall not be needed for their own use. (63 O. L. 62.)

So far as I am able to ascertain, no other amendment or alteration of the original charter of the Society for Savings of Cleveland has ever been passed by the general assembly. The act of 1866 became section 3813, Revised Statutes, and section 9812, General Code; the act of 1877 became sections 3814-15 and 3814-16, Revised Statutes, sections 9815 and 9814 of the General Code.

I assume from your letter that the Society for Savings of Cleveland has never adopted the general corporation act of the state, but has continued to exercise the corporate powers conferred upon it by its original act of incorporation as made perpetual and as amended in certain particulars by the subsequent acts of the general assembly above quoted and referred to.

Analysis of the charter of the Society for Savings, as amended, establishes the following facts pertinent to the discussion of the first question presented by you:

1. The society is a corporation.

2. The corporation has no capital stock, divided into shares; no authorized capital which, without legislative authority, it may not exceed; and obviously, no attribute which could be described as "subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock."

3. The corporation is organized for profit. While this fact is not explicitly stated in the charter, the power to withhold from the depositors a reasonable proportion necessarily implies the power in the members of the corporation to derive profits therefrom.

The following provisions of the act of May 10, 1910, 101 O. L. 299-421, et seq., must be applied to the facts as above outlined:

"Section 82. Each corporation organized under the laws of this state, for profit, shall make a report * * * to the commission, annually, during the month of May, * * *

"Section 83. Such report shall contain: * * *

"5. The amount of authorized capital stock and the par value of each share.

"6. The amount of capital stock subscribed, the amount of capital stock issued and outstanding, and the amount of capital stock paid up.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"Section 84. Upon the filing of the report provided in sections 82 and 83 of this act, the commission * * * shall report to the auditor of state, who shall charge and certify to the treasurer of state for collection * * * from such corporation, a fee of three-twentieths of one per cent. upon its subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock, which fee shall not be less than ten dollars in any case.

"Section 88. Each corporation organized under the laws of this state, not for profit, and having no capital stock, shall make a report in writing to the commission, annually, during the month of November. * * *

"Section 90. Upon the filing of such report, as provided in the last two preceding sections, the commission shall report to the auditor of state * * * who shall charge and certify to the treasurer of state * * * for collection, * * * a fee of ten dollars from each corporation, organized as a mutual insurance corporation, not having a capital stock, or any other mutual corporation not organized strictly for benevolent or charitable purposes, and having no capital stock. * * *

"Section 91. Upon the filing of the report, provided for in sections eighty-eight and eighty-nine of this act, the commission shall report to the auditor of state * * * who shall charge and certify to the treasurer of state * * * for collection * * * one dollar from each corporation formed for religious, benevolent or literary purposes, or of such corporations as are not organized for profit, have no capital stock, and are not mutual in their character. * * *"

Analysis of these statutes establishes the following principles:

1. The intent is manifest to impose a franchise tax upon all corporate franchises existing by virtue of the laws of Ohio. (Southern Gum Company vs. Laylin, 56 O. S. 578.)

It cannot be presumed that the general assembly intended to exempt from this franchise tax any single corporation or class of corporations. Aside from the constitutional dangers surrounding such exemption, and the presence of which would undoubtedly lead a court to construe the law in its doubtful provisions so as to avoid such dangers, there is in the law itself clear evidence of lack of any intention to exempt any, save certain kinds of corporations. Thus section 101 of the act of May 10, 1910, provides that:

"Electric light, gas, natural gas, waterworks, pipe line, street railroad, suburban or interurban railroad, steam railroad, messenger, union depot, express, freight line, sleeping car, telegraph, telephone and other public utilities required by law to file annual reports with the commission, and insurance, fraternal beneficial, building and loan, bond investment and other corporations required by law to file annual reports with the superintendent of insurance shall not be subject to the provisions of sections eighty-two to ninety-two inclusive of this act."

The scheme of franchise and excise taxation, thus disclosed, effectually negatives any intent to exempt any class of corporations or any particular corporations from the payment of one or the other of the special taxes therein provided for. All these considerations are in addition to the fundamental principle that the presumption is against exemptions from taxation.

2. Three classes of corporations subject to the franchise tax are defined in the related sections as follows: (a) corporations for profit having a capital stock; (b) corporations for profit having no capital stock, (2) corporations not for profit.

This classification is not apparent at first glance, but it becomes manifest upon close study of the related sections. Standing alone, section 82, above quoted, seems not to recognize any class of corporations for profit, and by itself seems to require all such corporations to report in the month of May; however, the report that is required from the corporations defined in section 82 must set forth the amount of the authorized capital stock, the par value of each share, the amount of the capital stock subscribed, the amount of the capital stock issued and outstanding, and the amount of the capital stock paid up, all of which is manifestly impossible in the case of a corporation having no capital stock.

It is here to be noted also that the phrase "capital stock" as used throughout this portion of the act of May 10, 1910, has a technical meaning. It does not refer to the sum total of the assets of the corporation but to several different things capable of exact definition; thus, the authorized capital stock of a corporation is the total par value of shares of stock which it may have; the subscribed capital stock is the total par value of all the shares subscribed for; and the issued and outstanding capital stock is the total par value of all the shares issued and outstanding in the names of the shareholders.

Close analysis of sections 88 and 90 as above quoted strengthens the conclusion already reached, as to the limited meaning of the phrase "each corporation organized under the laws of this state, for profit" as used in section 82. It will at once appear that the primary question of construction which is presented by all the related sections is embodied in the first sentence of section 88. This section provides that "Each corporation * * * not for profit, and having no capital stock" shall report in the month of November. This phrase incapable of two meanings, as follows:

(a) Each corporation which is not for profit and has no capital stock shall report in November. That is to say, the corporations which are required to report in November are those, and only those, having the characteristics of being organized not for profit, and of having no capital stock.

(b) Each corporation organized not for profit, and each corporation which has no capital stock, shall report in the month of November. That is to say, this interpretation of the section makes it refer to and define two classes of corporations.

I am satisfied that the second of the two interpretations of section 88 suggested is the correct one, for the following reasons: In the first place, I have already pointed out that section 82 and succeeding sections of the act of May 10, 1910, while in terms applicable to all corporations for profit, cannot in practice be applied to corporations for profit having no capital stock.

In the second place section 90, above quoted, provides for the collection of a fee of ten dollars from certain corporations therein referred to as being embraced within the definition of section 88, and which, nevertheless, are corporations organized for profit. Thus, mutual insurance companies are in a certain sense corporations for profit. Section 90 must be read in connection with section 88, and it becomes clear upon such joint reading of those two sections that section 88 and succeeding sections include within their scope such corporations for profit as have no capital stock.

Further analyzing the related sections it appears that section 90 is the only section of the entire act of May 10, 1910, under and by virtue of which, corporations organized for profit, and having no capital stock, can be taxed. Section 91 authorizes the collection of a tax of one dollar from corporations organized for religious, benevolent or literary purposes, thus excluding the purpose of profit; from "such corporations as are not organized for profit, have no capital stock and are not mutual in their character," which phrase, because of its peculiar grammatical construction, is clearly to be construed differently from the somewhat similar phrase employed in section 88; and from religious and secret societies formed not for profit.

That the above quoted phrase of section 91 is to be construed, so to speak, cumulatively rather than disjunctively, seems to me to be clear, as above suggested, from its grammatical construction. That is to say, the second class of corporations liable for a tax of one dollar, are such corporations as possess all three of the characteristics therein mentioned, namely: That of organization not for profit; that of absence of capital stock; and that of non-mutuality of character.

Returning then to section 90, it becomes immediately apparent that aside from certain insurance companies the only class of corporations taxed under said section is "mutual corporations not organized strictly for benevolent or charitable purposes, and having no capital stock."

Referring now again, to the peculiar characteristics of the Society for Savings of Cleveland, it appears that this corporation must be taxed as a "mutual corporation not organized strictly for benevolent or charitable purposes, and having no capital stock," or else as "a corporation, not organized for profit, having no capital stock, and not mutual in its character."

For reasons above suggested I am of the opinion that the intent of the law is, that corporations like the Society for Savings shall be taxed as mutual corporations organized for profit, but not having a capital stock. To be sure, the plan of business defined in the charter of this company cannot be accurately described as "mutual." In a sense, it is mutual, for in theory at least, all the depositors of the company participate in the profits accruing on account of the investments of the funds created by the deposits; on the other hand, however, such profits do not belong exclusively to the depositors, but the members of the corporation are given the right to withhold, presumably for their own use, and in addition to the surplus required to be maintained by the charter, such amounts as they may see fit as their own personal property.

In spite of the fact that the Society for Savings is not a mutual corporation in the strict sense of the word, I have been led to the conclusion that it must be taxed as such. The reasons which I have already indicated support this conclusion. It is not to be presumed that the legislature intended to exempt any single corporation or any class of corporations from taxation. Every suggestion of the actual intent which animated the general assembly in the enactment of this law tends to create the contrary presumption. The constitutions themselves, both that of the United States and that of the state of Ohio, prohibit arbitrary classification, even in matters of taxation, and laws will be construed, if possible, so as to obviate all seeming conflict with the supreme law.

Furthermore, in matters of taxation technical definitions are not to be strictly adhered to. If the phrase "mutual corporations not organized for benevolent purposes and having no capital stock" actually had a definite and ascertained meaning the question would be more difficult. So far as I know, however, the exact meaning of this phrase has never been judicially determined, if indeed it has any exact meaning. It was evidently inserted in the act for the purpose of reaching all classes of corporations organized for profit, and having no capital stock other than those specifically enumerated in section 90. To be sure, the phraseology is borrowed from section 176 of the General Code which defines the fees of the secretary of state for filing articles of incorporation; but I do not think it can be presumed, because of this fact, that the general assembly intended to confine the subjects of franchise taxation to corporations which have been organized since the adoption of the constitution of 1851.

For all of the foregoing reasons, I am of the opinion, with respect to your first question, that the Society for Savings of the city of Cleveland is a corporation organized under the laws of this state for profit, and having no capital stock, and as such is required to make annual reports to the tax commission, but not by section 82 of the act of May 10, 1910; it must report annually to the commission in the month of November under section 88 of said act, and must pay the fee of ten dollars prescribed by section 90 thereof.

The following sections of the General Code are applicable to the solution of your second question:

> "Section 5404. The president, secretary and principal accounting officer of a * * * joint stock company, except banking or other corporations, whose taxation is specifically provided for * * * shall list for taxation * * * all the personal property thereof. * * *"

This section has been amended by the act of April 11, 1911, so as to read as follows:

> "Section 5404. The president * * * of every incorporated company, except banking or other corporations whose taxation is specifically provided for, shall list for taxation * * * all of the personal property thereof * * *."

There is a distinction between a "joint stock company" and an "incorporated company," which is made manifest by the peculiar organization of the Society for Savings. Thus, if section 5404 is to be considered at all in connection with your second question it is manifest that, in its original form it did not apply to the Society for Savings, while in its amended form it might apply to this corporation.

> "Section 5407. A company, association, or person, not incorporated under a law of this state or of the United States, for banking purposes, who keeps an office or other place of business, and engages in the business of lending money, receiving money on deposit, buying and selling bullion, bills of exchange, notes, bonds, stocks or other evidences of indebtedness, with a view to profit, is a bank, or banker, within the meaning of this chapter."

It is manifest that the Society for Savings is not embraced within this definition because it is incorporated.

> "Section 5408. All the shares of the stockholders in an incorporated bank or banking association * * * and all the shares of the stockholders in an incorporated bank, * * * the capital stock of which is divided into shares held by the owners of such bank, and the capital employed, or the property representing it, in an incorporated bank the capital stock of which is not divided into shares, * * * shall be listed at the true value in money, and taxed only in the city, ward, or village where such bank is located."

Upon close analysis it is apparent I think that this section does not apply to the Society for Savings. Not having any shares of stock there is nothing which can be taxed as such; being an incorporated company it is not "an incorporated bank the capital stock of which is not divided into shares." I think it is manifest that the Society for Savings is not a bank within the meaning of the statutes above quoted.

There seems to be little doubt that the Society for Savings is a bank in the ordinary sense of the word.

In the case of Collett vs. Springfield Savings Society, 12 C. C. 131, affirmed without report, 56 O. S. 776, the question was as to the application of the then existing tax laws to the taxation of the Springfield Savings Society. This system was incorporated under the act of April 16, 1867, 64 O. L. 184. This was an act entitled "An act to incorporate savings societies." It was a general law under which a number of such societies were incorporated, different from the character of the Society for Savings, in that all depositors who might have on deposit in such society the sum of fifty dollars or upwards should be members of the society and entitled to vote; in other words, the corporation was not a close one like the Society for Savings. Furthermore, the trustees of a savings society incorporated under the act involved in the Collett case were prohibited from receiving any emolument or pay for their services, and all deposits in the society were expressly required to be held for the use and benefit of the depositors solely. All deposits were to be paid into the state treasury and there held as a fund in trust for the depositors. Without quoting any of the specific provisions of the act of 1867, suffice it to say, that the general effect thereof was to make a savings society incorporated thereunder a mere trustee or agent for its depositors, and this was the gist of the decision in Collett vs. Savings Society, supra.

It may be that the Society for Savings of Cleveland is, under its charter, in a qualified sense, a trustee for its depositors; but the trust is not absolute, and the trust or agency relation does not so clearly appear as in the case of savings societies incorporated under the act of 1867. Although the Society for Savings has been in existence for over sixty years, I am unable to find any reported decision defining the mutual rights, duties and obligations of the society on the one hand, and its depositors on the other.

The Collett case, supra, which you cite in your letter, has, as above indicated, no direct bearing whatever upon the question at hand as it related to a class of corporations formed under a law quite dissimilar to that which constitutes the charter of the Society for Savings. It does have indirect bearing, however, for the following reasons:

1. It is established by the decision in question that the moneys deposited in the savings society continued to be the property of the depositors, and that the relation of debtor and creditor did not exist as between the society and its depositors in this respect. Of course, a sharp distinction exists as between such societies and banks, and by virtue of this fact alone a society incorporated under the act of 1867 was not a bank, even in the ordinary sense of the word.

2. The controversy in this case was as to the method of making returns on a part of the savings society under the general laws of this state prior to the enactment of section 2759b, Revised Statutes. In order fully to understand the issues involved in the case, certain legislative history must be recited, and this legislative history is instructive with respect to the question at hand.

Prior to April 19, 1904, the scheme and arrangement of the sections relating to the taxation of banks, as such, was quite different from that now embodied in sections 5407 to 5415 inclusive. The sections then existing were sections 2758 to 2769 inclusive, and they were divided into two subdivisions, one entitled "Unincorporated banks and bankers" and the other entitled "Incorporated banks." (See Bates' Annotated Statutes, 4th Edition, Vol. 1, pages 1532 to 1535 inclusive.) Section 2758, Revised Statutes, was identical with section 5407, General Code; section 2759, Revised Statutes, prescribed a form of return to be made by unincorporated banks and bankers, in case the capital stock of such bank was not divided into shares; section 2759*a*, Revised Statutes, made further provision for the return to be made by such banks; and section 2759*b* was as follows:

> "The provisions of section 2759 shall apply to and govern savings banks incorporated under the act of April 16, 1867."

It was this section which was construed, in Collett vs. Springfield Savings Society. It seems to have been regarded as clear by the judge who rendered the decision (Summers, J.), that prior to the enactment of section 2759*b*, on April 16, 1890, the Springfield Savings Society was not required by law to make returns to the county auditor as a bank. In fact, this society was in a situation with respect to the bank tax laws similar to that in which the Society for Savings seems now to be, viz: It was not an unincorporated bank, nor was it an incorporated bank having shares of stock. It further appears from the report of the case, page 133, that the contention was made therein that the Springfield Savings Society had always been an unincorporated bank within the meaning of the tax laws, but, as I have heretofore stated, this contention was not upheld. It was held that, prior to the enactment of section 2759*b*, the Springfield Savings Society was not a bank at all, and that it never would have been required to make returns to the county auditor as a bank but for the enactment of that statute.

It further appears from the decision of the court that, prior to the enactment of section 2759*b*, the society had returned and paid taxes upon its furniture, real estate surplus and undivided profits, less that part of the same invested in non-taxable securities, leaving to the depositors the duty of returning and paying taxes upon their deposits. This manner of returning and paying taxes on the part of the depositors was by inference at least approved by the court.

By the act of April 19, 1904, 97 O. L. 279, heretofore referred to, the present scheme of taxation for banks was adopted. This act repealed sections 2759 and 2759*a*, Revised Statutes, but left section 2759*b* unrepealed. However, it was correctly assumed, I think, by the codifying commission of 1910, that this section was repealed by implication, inasmuch as it was dependent upon section 2759, Revised Statutes, and that section having been repealed, could have no meaning whatever. It appears, therefore, that under the present law the Springfield Savings Society would be required to make returns to the assessors and to the county auditor just as it did prior to the enactment of section 2759*b*.

I think it is apparent from all the foregoing that section 2759*b*, the section construed in Collett vs. Springfield Savings Society, does not in any way refer to or affect the Society for Savings of Cleveland. As heretofore pointed out, however, that decision is useful in connection with the present question, in that, it shows clearly the failure of the statutory definition of "banks" and "unincorporated banks," used in the tax laws of this state, to exhaust the membership of the class of institutions commonly and popularly known as "banks."

Whether or not then, the Society for Savings of Cleveland is a bank, and the creditor of its depositors, rather than their trustee as was the Springfield Savings Society, I cannot do otherwise than conclude that section 5407 and succeeding sections of the General Code do not provide a method of taxation applicable to it and that it is not required to make returns to the county auditor under said section.

I have, I think, correctly assumed that section 5407, et seq., do not apply to the Society for Savings. The next statute to which one would naturally turn is section 5404, et seq., providing for the returns of corporations generally. I have already pointed out that original section 5404 was equally inapplicable to the Society for Savings, in that, it failed to exhaust the kinds or classes of corporations, just as section 5407, et seq., fail to exhaust the possibilities with respect to banks; that is to say, original section 5404 applied only to joint stock companies, and the Society for Savings is not such a company. Now, however, the section under consideration, as amended in 1911, does apply to all corporations, the taxation of which is not otherwise specifically provided for, and the conclusion would seem to follow that since the amendment in question the Society for Savings will be obliged to make its returns to the county auditor under said section.

I assume, however, that the question might relate to the application of original section 5405. If that would be the case, then, in my opinion, the personal property of the Society for Savings should, prior to the amendment of section 5404, have been returned to the assessors like the personal property of a private individual.

Clearly, the mere fact that neither the act providing for the taxation of banks nor that providing for the returns of corporations was applicable to the Society for Savings could not exempt such society from taxation. As already indicated the presumption is against such a conclusion. In addition to this principle, the provisions of the constitution expressly prohibit such exemption.

> "Article XXI, section 3. The general assembly shall provide by law for taxing the notes and bills discounted or purchased, moneys loaned, and all other property, effects or dues of every description (without deduction) of all banks, now existing, or hereafter created, and of all bankers, so that all property employed in banking shall always bear a burden of taxation, equal to that imposed on the property of individuals.
>
> "Article XIV, section 4. The property of corporations, now existing or hereafter created, shall forever be subject to taxation, the same as the property of individuals."

So that, whether or not the Society for Savings be, in the technical sense, a bank, it could not constitutionally be exempted from taxation by virtue of one or the other of the foregoing sections. It is true that neither one of these sections is self-executing, and that in a practical sense they are directory. In a given case, however, when it is doubtful as to whether or not a certain corporation or a certain bank or class of such corporations or banks is subject to taxation under an ambiguous statute, I have no doubt that those two sections ought to be relied upon in addition to the presumption theretofore referred to so as to resolve all doubt in favor of the taxing power and against the exemption.

But the question is not even doubtful. The general assembly has expressly provided for the taxation of the Society for Savings. Section 5325, General Code, formerly part of section 2730, Revised Statutes, being a definitive taxation section, provides as follows:

> "The term 'money' or 'monies' as so used (in this title) includes any surplus or undivided profits held by societies for savings, or banks having no capital stock, gold and silver coin, bank notes of solvent banks, in actual possession, and every deposit which the person owning, holding in trust, or having the beneficial interest therein, is entitled to withdraw in money or demand."

Section 5325, General Code, provides that:

> "The term 'personal property' as so used, includes first, every tangible thing being the subject of ownership, whether animate or inanimate, other than money, and not forming part of a parcel of real property, as hereinbefore defined; second, the capital stock, undivided profits, and all other means not forming part of the capital stock of every company, whether incorporated or unincorporated, and every share, portion or interest in such stocks, profits or means, by whatsoever name designated * * *."

Section 5327 provides that:

> "The term 'credits' as so used, means the excess of the sum of all legal claims and demands, whether for money or other valuable thing * * * including deposits in banks or with persons in or out of the state other than such as are held to be money * * * over and above the sum of legal bona fide debts owing by such persons."

It will be noted that section 5326 expressly mentions "societies for savings." I know of no other such society in this state than that located in Cleveland, to which your question relates, and I am clearly of the opinion that whether or not there be any other such society the society in question is covered by this section.

Section 5320, General Code, provides that:

> "The word 'person' as used in this title, includes firms, companies, associations and corporations. * * *"

It is clear, therefore, that in the various sections of chapter 3 of the title relating to taxation, being section 5368, et seq., of the General Code, wherever the word "person" is used it may be read "corporation" if there be corporations in the state the taxation of which is not specifically provided for in chapter 4.

But even this conclusion is left to inference. Section 5370 of the General Code expressly provides that "all surplus or undivided profits held by societies for savings, or bank having no capital stock (shall be listed) by the president or principal accounting officer," therefore, the general assembly, under original section 5405 expressly recognized societies for savings as a class of banking institutions which should make returns to the assessors.

Prior then, to the amendment of section 5404, General Code, by virtue of the statutes above quoted, it was the duty of the Society for Savings, as a corporate entity, to return to the assessors for taxation its furniture and other movable property, its credits, and its surplus or undivided profits. Also, by virtue of section 5326, General Code, and not necessarily (as I have already stated) by virtue of the decision in the case of Collett vs. Springfield Savings Society, it was the duty of each depositor in the Society for Savings to return as money the amounts of his deposits in such institution, to the assessor. Also, by virtue of section 5325 it was the duty of the members or trustees of the Society for Savings, as individuals to return to the assessor his several interests as a member of said corporation at its true value in money, not as an investment in a "joint stock company" but rather as "a share or interest" in the means and profits of an incorporated company the capital stock of which is not divided into shares."

A more difficult question is presented under section 5404, General Code, as amended in 1911. I heretofore stated that it would seem that, because of the more general language of the amended section, the Society for Savings, being a "corporation the taxation of which is not specifically provided for," should now make its returns under said section. This conclusion, however, does not necessarily follow. The above quoted provisions of sections 5370, 5326, 5327 remain in the law unrepealed. It would seem that these sections do still specifically provide for the taxation of the Society for Savings. If that is the case, then, of course there is no conflict between amended section 5404 and the sections last above mentioned, and the corporations known as societies for savings would simply be regarded as one of the classes of corporations excluded from the amendment of section 5404, by the language "except * * * other corporations, whose taxation is specifically provided for."

But even if there be a conflict between amended section 5404 and those previously enacted and still retained sections specifically relating to the taxation of the Society for Savings, yet, there would be in such case no implied repeal of the earlier section. It is too well settled to require citation of authorities that the later enactment of a general statute, repugnant to an existing particular statute will not be construed as an implied repeal of such particular provisions, but the latter will be regarded as exceptions to the general rule of the former.

Upon the whole, then, I am of the opinion that even after the amendment of section 5404, above quoted, a society for savings should make returns to the assessor in the manner and form above described.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

A 263.

TAXES AND TAXATION—EXEMPTIONS—CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS —NATURAL PERSONS—TRUSTEES, GUARDIANS, PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES, ETC.

The term "individual" as used in article XII, section 3, of the constitution, compels the construction that section 5860, General Code, exempting from taxation the first one hundred dollars of personal property, applies only to natural persons and not to corporations.

Parties owning property in common, are each entitled to a deduction of one hundred dollars from the values of their respective interests.

Trustees, guardians, testamentary trustees, etc., who actually act as legal representatives of others for the purpose of paying their taxes, may deduct in their behalf the one hundred dollars exemption. Executors and administrators represent estates of deceased persons, however, and may not deduct the exemption in behalf of the estate or of separate heirs or legatees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 2, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 20th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"(1) Four brothers and sisters, owning real estate in common, also own in common the stock, farm implements, grain, feed, etc., on the farm. Are they each entitled to an exemption of $100 or are they entitled to an exemption of $100 for all, or to any exemption on account of this common property?

"(2) Is a trustee of an estate entitled to an exemption of $100 from the personal property held as such trustee?

"(3) Is an administrator or an executor of an estate entitled to an exemption of $100 from the personal property which he lists as such administrator or executor?

"(4) Is a guardian entitled to an exemption of $100 from his ward's personal property which he lists as such guardian?

"(5) Is an incorporated company or a bank entitled to an exemption of $100?"

The constitution, article XII, section 3, provides in part as follows:

"Laws shall be passed taxing by a uniform rule all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise; and also all real and personal property according to its true value in money * * * but * * * personal property to an amount not exceeding in value $200, for each individual may by general laws be exempted from taxation. All such laws shall be subject to alteration or repeal; and the value of all property so exempted shall from time to time be ascertained and returned as may be directed by law."

This constitutional provision, manifestly not self-executing, constitutes the authority for the enactment of section 3732, Revised Statutes (section 5360, General Code), which is a follows:

"A resident of this state may deduct a sum not exceeding $100 to be exempted from taxation from the aggregate listed values of his taxable personal property of any kind, except dogs, of which he is the actual owner."

The following general observations in connection with the foregoing constitutional and statutory provisions may be appropriately made.

In the first place the word "individual" as used in the constitutional provision is, it seems to me, not accidental. By an examination of related provisions of the constitution it will at once appear that the meaning of this term is technical rather than general and does not include corporations or artificial persons of any kind. Thus section 3 of article XII provides that the "general assembly shall provide, by law, for taxing * * * all property * * * of all banks * * * so that all property employed in banking, shall always bear a burden of taxation, equal to that imposed on the property of individuals."

As the term "individual" is used in this section it is quite apparent that its meaning does not include corporations. Again, article XIII, section 4, provides that "property of corporations * * * shall forever be subject to taxation the same as property of individuals."

Here again the intention is manifested to observe the distinction between individuals and artificial persons.

For these reasons, therefore, I am of the opinion that the authority of the general assembly to provide by law for a uniform exemption from taxation of not more than $200 is limited to the personal property of private natural persons. The statutory provision must, of course, be construed in the light of the constitutional provision. The general assembly's authority to pass any exemption law is measured by section 2 of article XII. Therefore, the phrase "resident of this state" as used in section 5360, General Code, must be held and deemed to mean "a natural person, resident of this state."

The foregoing comments of themselves answer your fifth question in the negative. See also Bank vs. Hines, 3 O. S. 1.

The peculiar language of section 5360, General Code, and especially the last phrase thereof, "of which he is the actual owner" would seem to indicate that only persons required to list the property of which they are actual owners may claim the exemption. This conclusion would seem to be supported by the general principle applicable to the exemption laws, which is that:

> "As taxation is the rule, and exemption the exception, the intention to make an exemption ought to be expressed in clear and unambiguous terms; it cannot be taken to have been intended when the language of the statute on which it depends is doubtful or uncertain; and the burden of establishing it is upon him who claims it."
>
> Cooley on Taxation, Vol. 1, page 356.

On the other hand, however, weight must be attached to the manifest object and purpose of such an exemption as this.

> "The exemptions * * * to the limited personal property which very poor persons may be possessed of, are to be looked upon rather as in the nature of limitations of the general rule, than as exceptions from it; the taxation being only of all that is possessed over and beyond only has been left out as absolutely needful to the owner's support."
>
> Cooley on Taxation, Vol. 1, 262.

> "Some of the customary exemptions are in themselves so reasonable that they readily receive universal assent as proper and politic. Such are exemptions of household furniture, tools of trade, etc., to a moderate amount, and of the personal property of those who by reason of age, infirmity or poverty are unable to contribute to the public burdens."
>
> Cooley on Taxation, Vol. 1, page 346.

> "The language of the constitution is comprehensive and explicit in the requirement, that all property of every description, excepting only that which falls within the specified exemptions, should be taxed. The only exception or exemption allowed in favor of individuals, is to be found in the words 'personal property to an amount not exceeding two hundred dollars in value, for each individual, may by general laws, be exempted from taxation.' It has ever been the humane policy of our laws to allow a certain amount of personal property, sufficient to include the most essential and necessary articles for the support of a family, to be exempt from execution for the payment of debts. And it is in accordance with this benevolent regard for the necessaries of life, that this limited exemption from taxation, in favor of individuals, is authorized by the constitution."
>
> Bartley, C. J., in Exchange Bank vs. Hines, 3 O. S. 14.

This being the purpose of the exemption in question, some ground at once appears for ignoring in part, at least, the general principle of strict construction as applied to exemption statutes. A further ground, however, is afforded by a careful examination of the constitutional provision which is that "personal property to an amount not exceeding in value two hundred dollars for each individual, may by general laws be exempted from taxation."

This provision together with that occurring earlier in the section, to the effect that taxation of property shall be "by a uniform rule," and read in connection with the manifest object and purpose of the exemption as defined in the authorities quoted, lend support to the following principle: Under the constitution an exemption statute applying to the property of individuals must be general and uniform; it must apply to all individuals or at least to all individuals within a class determined by the reason of the exemption. That is to say, if the exemption is deemed to be based upon the grounds of public policy above referred to, then the legislature, acting in pursuance of the authority conferred in section 2 of article XII, must extend the exemption to all persons within the reason of that policy. Indeed, it may be seriously questioned whether even in the absence of the significant language above quoted from section 2 of article XII of the constitution, the legislature could arbitrarily classify persons who should be exempted even to a limited extent from taxation. To do so would seem to violate section 1 of article XIV of the constitution of the United States, which provides in effect that no state "shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law."

American Sugar Refining Co. vs. La., 179 U. S., 89.
Bells Gap R. R. Co. vs. Pa., 134 U. S., 232.

Upon careful consideration, I am of the opinion that the reason of the exemption in question is controlling, and that inasmuch as this reason animates the constitutional provision, the statute enacted in pursuance thereof is to be construed, if doubtful, in accordance therewith; and that even in case the construction of the statute be not doubtful, but the statute is plainly violative of the constitutional provision, then the statute either fails as an entirety or is limited in its application to the true intendment of the constitution.

Therefore, in my opinion, section 5360, despite the phrase "of which he is the actual owner," cannot be construed to mean that "only persons who are required by law to make up their own tax lists are entitled to the exemption created by this section." It must, on the other hand, in my judgment, be construed to mean that every natural person is entitled to the exemption of $100 for property actually owned by him. Nor is this construction violent or excessively liberal. The emphasis in the phrase "of which he is the actual owner" is not upon the pronoun but upon the last two words. That is to say, the qualification created by this phrase is to the effect that no person shall be permitted to withhold from taxation, as exempted, property which he does not own but which is held by him under some qualified right. It is not, however, in my judgment to be construed as denying to persons whose duty it is to return for taxation the property of another the right to, on behalf of such other person, exercise that person's privilege of deducting the sum of $100 from the total valuation of his personal property.

With the foregoing general principles in mind, the answers to your first four questions are easily worked out. In my opinion the several interests of the persons who own a personal estate in common are separate for the purpose of taxation, notwithstanding the statutes which require the property itself to be listed in tabular form. The undivided interest of each such person in the common property constitutes a part of the personal property from the aggregate listed value of which each separate owner may deduct the sum of $100. A person who has such an undivided interest in a common personal estate is, nevertheless, "the actual owner" of such undivided interest within the meaning of section 5360, General Code.

Persons required to list personal property for taxation as legal representatives of living persons, such as testamentary trustees, guardians, attorneys, agents and the like may, in my opinion, exercise the right of those whom they represent under section 5360 and may deduct the sum of $100 from the aggregate value of the personal property of each such person. However, there are certain trusts which are not for the benefit of living persons or, more exactly speaking, the beneficial estate of which is not ascertained as to any particular living person. In such cases, under the principles above laid down, no exemption of $100 from the aggregate value of the personal property of the estate will be permitted. As to administrators and executors such persons, of course, are the legal representatives of their respective decedents. The estate in their hands is undistributed, and the heirs, devisees or legatees have not acquired several interests therein. Inasmuch, therefore, as such executors and administrators, and in certain cases testamentary trustees, represent a deceased person rather than a living person or persons, I am of the opinion that they may not deduct the sum of $100 from the aggregate value of the personal property of the estate in their possession when listing the same for taxation nor may they deduct a like sum from the value of an estimated share of a living person entitled ultimately to a specific legacy or a distributive share in such estate.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

E 267.

TAXES AND TAXATION — BOARDS OF REVISIONS — PROCEDURE OF EQUALIZATION UNDER AMENDED STATUTE—COMPLAINTS.

Section 5601, as amended, absolutely prohibits the board of revision from increasing or decreasing the aggregate value of the real property within its jurisdiction as fixed by the tax commission. Aggregate value must be sustained by the board, not by distributing among all other property the amount taken from a specific reduced tract but by applying amount subtracted from specific tract to other specific tracts complained of as being too low.

Where one party complains that his own property is valued too high and some one else's too low, this is in effect a double complaint and justifies the reduction of the former's value and the increase of the latter's.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1911.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In a recent opinion to your department I held that boards of review would have no authority to increase valuations not complained of. In the course of this opinion I quoted section 5601 of the General Code. Since the rendition of the opinion, or at least since the same was originally prepared, said section 5601 has been amended by the passage of House Bill No. 502, so as to read as follows:

> "Each county and city board of revision shall investigate all such complaints and all complaints against any valuation filed with it as a board, or made by the county auditor, and may increase or decrease any valuation complained of and no others. Such boards in all respects shall be governed by the laws governing the valuing of real property, and shall make no change in any valuation complained of except in accordance with such laws. A board of revision shall not increase or reduce the aggregate valuation of the real property of a county or city as fixed by the tax commission of Ohio. No valuation, as fixed by the tax commission of Ohio, shall be increased by a board of revision, in any case, except upon reasonable notice as prescribed by this chapter, to all persons directly interested and an opportunity for a full hearing. The auditor of the county shall correct the tax duplicate according to the deductions and additions ordered by the board of revision, in the manner provided by law for making corrections thereof."

I am writing you in order to correct my own and your records in the matter. It will be observed, I think, upon comparison of amended section 5601 with the former sections of the same number that, while the section has been changed in important respects and particularly in that the board of revision is now absolutely prohibited both from increasing and from reducing the aggregate of the real property within its jurisdiction as fixed by the tax commission—a radical departure from the policy of the old section—it is not changed with respect to the language relied upon in the former opinion to sustain the conclusion therein reached. That is to say, while the aggregate must in every case remain the same this fact alone does not authorize, in my opinion, the board of revision to perform the function of equalization and to distribute, for instance, among all the other tracts of property in the county or the city, the amount taken from a specific reduced valuation. Instead, the quality of aggregate valuation must be maintained by adding the amount subtracted from the aggregate in making reduction to other specific property which has been complained of.

Since the rendition of the former opinion you have informed me that some question has been raised as to the sufficiency of a complaint in a given case as a basis for an action of the board of revision in adding to a particular valuation. A typical case of the sort in point is as follows:

A complains that his property is valued too high and that the valuation of B's property is too low; C complains that the valuation of his property is too high and that of D's too low. The board of revision finds that A's property is valued too high, that the valuation of D's property is at its true value in money, that C's property is valued at its true value in money, and that D's property is valued too low. Can the valuation subtracted from the aggregate by means of reducing A's valuation be added to that of D's property?

In my opinion this may be done. When one party complains that his property is valued too high and that of another person too low, this is two complaints, not one, and the board of revision may reject one complaint and act upon the other.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

284.

BANKS—RETURNS TO AUDITOR FOR TAXATION—FIRM OR CORPORATION RECEIVING DEPOSITS AND PAYING ON CHECKS.

A firm or corporation doing a general merchandising or other business and not incorporated for banking purposes, which engages in the business of receiving money on deposit, subject to check and paying interest thereon, without also engaging in the business of loaning money and buying and selling bullion and other evidences of indebtedness, does not engage in all four pursuits enumerated in section 5407 and is therefore not a bank within the comprehension of that statute. Such firm or corporation is therefore not required to make the returns to the auditor which the law demands of banks in this chapter.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 30, 1911.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of sometime ago in which you request my opinion on the following:

> "Is a firm engaged in doing a general merchandising business, which accepts deposits of money and permits the depositors to check on the same, to be classed as an unincorporated bank, which should make return to the county auditor under the provisions of sections 5407 to 5414, inclusive, of the General Code?"

Section 5407 of the General Code provides:

> "A company, association, or person, not incorporated under a law of this state or of the United States, for banking purposes, who keeps an office or other place of business, and engages in the business of lending money, receiving money on deposit, buying and selling bullion, bills of exchange, notes, bonds, stocks or other evidences of indebtedness, with a view to profit, is a bank, or banker, within the meaning of this chapter."

The question is not free from doubt and because of the doubt attending it I have given very careful attention to it. I have at last come to the conclusion that a person, firm or corporation not incorporated for banking purposes, which engages in the business of receiving money on deposit subject to check and paying interest thereon without also engaging in the business of lending money, and buying and selling bullion and other evidences of indebtedness, is not a bank within the meaning of section 5407.

In my opinion no person, firm or corporation can be regarded as an unincorporated bank which does not engage in all of the four particular kinds of business referred to therein.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

A 293.

TAXES AND TAXATION—POWER OF COUNTY AUDITOR, BOARDS OF REVIEW, AND THE TAX COMMISSION TO SUMMON WITNESSES WITH BOOKS AND PAPERS TO DISCLOSE PROPERTIES.

County auditors, boards of equalization, boards of review and the tax commission have full power to bring witnesses before them and to compel them to bring books and documents and all things reasonable to obtain a full disclosure of all properties subject to taxation.

When published statements of banks and building and loan companies and other corporations holding money on deposit, which are obligated to publish the state of their accounts, show that the tax returns are false, erroneous or insufficient, ample inquiry may be made to ascertain the truth.

Unnecessary inquiry into private affairs, however, must be avoided.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1911.

To the Tax Commission of Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In reply to your inquiry as to the power of county auditors, boards of equalization, boards of review and your board to inquire of a witness concerning depositors and stockholders in banks and building and loan associations, the inquiry not being directed to any particular person or specific piece of property, permit me to say:

Section 14 of the Hollinger bill provides that the commission, or any commissioner, or any person employed by the commission for that purpose, shall, upon demand, have the right to inspect the books, records and memoranda of any company, firm, corporation, association, co-partnership or public utility subject to the provisions of such laws; and to examine under oath, any officer, agent or employe of such company, firm, corporation, person, association, co-partnership or public utility.

Section 15 provides that the commission may require the production of books, papers, etc., and affixes a penalty for failure or refusal to comply.

Section 5401 of the Gneral Code provides:

> "The county auditor, if he has reason to believe or is informed that a person has given to the assessor a false return of * * * personal property; * * * that the assessor has not returned the full amount required to be listed in his ward or township, or has omitted or made an erroneous return of property, moneys or credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise which are by law subject to taxation, shall proceed to correct the return and charge such persons on the duplicate with the proper amount of taxes. To enable him to do so, he may issue compulsory process and require the attendance of any persons whom he thinks have knowledge of the articles, or value of the personal property, moneys or credits, * * * and examine such person on oath in relation to such statements or returns."

Section 5584 provides that the county board of equalization may:

> "Call persons before it and examine them under oath as to their own or others' property, moneys, credits and investments to be placed on the duplicate for taxation, or the value thereof and order any property, moneys, credits or investments to be placed on the duplicate which have not been listed for taxation."

Section 5624 grants boards of review for municipalities as follows:

> "All the powers provided by law for other municipal boards of equalization or review."

That a state has power to call upon persons or corporations to submit their books, papers and the like for examination, and compel officers of corporations to appear and testify for the purpose of completing its tax lists has been decided in

> Waite vs. Dowley, 94 U. S., 527, and that national banks were not excepted is held in

> Bank of Youngstown vs. Hughes, 106 U. S., 523.

It is claimed by very many, and it seems to be the general opinion that the power of the auditor under section 5401 ends with the right to inquire as to a particular piece of property or particular individual against whom the inquiry is directed, and, while the language used by Chief Justice Waite in Bank vs. Hughes is susceptible of being more broadly construed, the case itself did not call for more than the holding that the auditor had the right to bring the cashier of a national bank before him, and inquire as "a depositor."

In 1907 Auditor of State Guilbert asked the then attorney general:

> "Can boards of review compel the attendance of the officers of banks and require them to produce the books of the banks showing the accounts of an individual depositor?"

The question was answered in the affirmative, but in the answer, which is limited by the question asked, a quotation is made from Heffner vs. Mahoney, 19 W. L. B., 369, which is as follows:

> "The board has neither right nor power to question a person generally about his business as was done by it on the 30th day of July, 1886, when it required the defendant to give the names of all the persons for whom he loaned money during the year 1886. The inquiries in any given case should be limited to some particular property or persons, the property not assessed, or the persons who own such property."

From the character of the question asked and the above quotation, the general opinion above mentioned seems to have gathered strength and support.

In the Mahoney case, supra, there were two hearings, one on July 30, 1886, above referred to, and the other on the 2d day of August following. As a result of the second hearing, Mahoney was charged individually with taxes upon $76,395.00. He did not pay and suit was brought to collect. Issue was taken and trial was had, and while the hearing of July 30th was set forth in the pleadings and mentioned in the opinion, it had no place in either, and whether correct or not, it was mere obiter and should not be construed as more than a holding that the general question as then asked, is improper, but that an inquiry as to property not assessed, or its ownership might be made.

An examination of the case, however, will show the following statements in the opinion:

"If at the time Mahoney refused to answer the question of the board, the $76,395.00 was not assessed to any person for taxation; if it was subject to taxation; if it did not belong to Mahoney; the board had the right and it was its duty to find out to whom it belonged, so that it could be assessed to the owners. The law required it, and justice to the people who returned all their property for taxation required it. And the questions propounded to Mahoney were evidently put for the purpose of discovering who the owners were; they were pertinent, plainly so; and Mahoney had no right to take refuge behind the claim that it was an inquisition into his private business as a reason for refusing to answer. This proposition is so obvious that a discussion of it would be irrelevant. Very little money would be taxed if such an excuse for refusing to answer questions about the ownership of property was defensible. A person asked by an assessor what was his property subject to taxation might say it was none of his business, because it was an inquiry into his private affairs, but it would be an inexcusable answer. A fortiori, would not such an answer to a question put by a board in respect to some other person's property be equally untenable? Taxes are necessary. Governments cannot exist without them. All citizens owe them for the protection given in return to their lives, person and property. Taxes may not be equally distributed, but the distribution would be made more unequal if persons who have information about the ownership of property not taxed should be allowed to withhold such information from officers or boards whose duty it is to inquire about such matters upon the pretext that it was an inquisition into their private business.

"There is no privilege which exempts a person from imparting such information. * * *

"That no particular person's tax return was then under investigation was not material. If the board was required to have some particular person's return under inquiry before it could question any one, take evidence from him, one purpose of the law would be defeated. If knowledge of who was the owner must precede investigation, then investigation would never be made when the owner of property not assessed was not known to the board."

Heffner vs. Mahoney, 19 W. L. B., 369-374.

The inquiry made on August 2d was for Mahoney to give the names of the persons who furnished him the money with which he effected the loans secured by recorded mortgages taken in his name and aggregating said sum of $76,395.00.

When the above language is considered in the light of the power given county auditors as above quoted in regard to his duty when he discovers an assessor has not made a full return of all the taxable property in his district; his power to compel the attendance of witnesses; his duty to correct "such returns" and the objects and purposes for which he is authorized to make inquiry, the conclusion seems inevitable that no particular person or property need be the subject of inquiry, but that when the auditor is informed or believes that the return of an assessor is not full, does not show all the taxable property of his district, he may institute proceedings to determine the truth as to whether such return is full or not, the inquiry being directed to the matter or matters coming to his knowledge or belief.

He may not go upon a fishing excursion and inquire generally as to the business of the witness or other person, as was done in the Mahoney case on July 30, 1886, but, if he is informed or has reason to believe that all the depositors of a bank residing within his county, or all the depositors or stockholders of a building and loan association residing therein have not made return of their stock or deposits, so that the returns of some of the assessors are not "full" as required by law, he may call upon the proper officer or agent of such bank or building association and compel such person to testify concerning the subject of inquiry and to produce the necessary books, papers, accounts or memoranda of his bank or association showing the facts as to who, residing within his county, are depositors and stockholders, to the end that he may correct the return of the assessor or assessors so that they may show a full and complete listing of all the taxable property of his county.

The authority granted boards of equalization and review are as broad as granted the auditor under section 5401, and whatever the auditor may do may be done by them in the event of its becoming necessary.

As to the power of the commission, little need be said. The Hollinger bill in its original form was of such character that section 162 was added, exempting building and loan associations from being made the subject of inquiry as to their stockholders and depositors. As the bill passed, it contained that provision, and that section was eliminated by Governor Harmon's veto. In the opinion of the legislature section 162 was necessary in the Hollinger bill to prevent inquiry of building and loan associations, and there can be no question of the correctness of that construction. With that section eliminated, there can be no doubt of the power of the tax commission under the sections above mentioned, and other provisions of the law not here necessary to cite, to institute such proceedings as described in the statutes, as will bring upon the tax duplicate of the several counties of the state all of the taxable property and assets found therein including credits belonging to all persons domiciled in the state.

It will be kept in mind that section 5401, as amended, supra, provides:

> "The county auditor if he shall have reason to believe, or is informed that a person has in the year nineteen hundred and eleven or in any year thereafter, given to the assessor a false statement of the personal property, moneys, or credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, etc., * * *"

This part of the section goes to the person, but this is not all. Reading section 5401 still further to gather its meaning and repeating the first part of the section so as to make proper connection it appears as follows:

> "The county auditor if he shall have reason to believe, or is informed that the assessor has not returned the full amount required to be listed in his ward or township, or has omitted or made an erroneous return of property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, which are by law subject to taxation, shall proceed in said year nineteen hundred and eleven or in any year thereafter at any time before the final settlement with the county treasurer to correct the return of the assessor and charge such persons on the duplicate with the proper amount of taxes."

The aim of this provision is not directed toward any person. The matter is comprehensive and reaches out to the return of the assessor and to all persons who have failed to return. Then the statute goes on to provide:

"To enable him (that is the auditor) to do so, he may issue compulsory process, and require the attendance of any persons whom he thinks have knowledge of the articles or value of the personal property, moneys or credits, investment in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, and examine such persons, on oath, in relation to such statement or return."

The law of taxation does not recognize hair-splitting differences. It implies equality, and the means should be adequate and I think are adequate to accomplish the purposes of equality. The county auditor has full power to bring witnesses before him, compel them to bring books and documents and to do all things reasonable to aid him in placing upon the tax duplicate all of the property of whatever kind or description within his jurisdiction, and as to just how the auditor shall proceed is a matter that is left within his own judgment, of course to be reasonably, properly and in good faith exercised.

The language of the statute must, of course, be directed to a definite purpose, and is so directed. However, it may not embrace all of the details of the action of the public officials in respect to taxation, and it is not necessary that it should. I think clearly and plainly and unmistakably it appears that the object of the statute is that the county auditor is entitled to employ the same means as a court would in order to ascertain the truth with respect to that of the property within his jurisdiction.

It might further be well said that when the published statements of banks and building and loan companies, and other corporations holding money on deposit, which are required to publish the condition of their accounts, disclose, as they frequently do, that the tax returns indicate only a mere bagatelle compared with what is the real property within their jurisdiction, and the auditors thereby have every reason to believe that the property within their jurisdiction has not been rightly returned for taxation, and an honest belief comes to such county auditor from facts of this character there exists a sufficient predicate to make ample inquiry so as to ascertain the truth. I cannot understand why those who have knowledge as to where the wealth is should wish to conceal it and impose the burden of public taxation, as has unfortunately generally been done in this state upon the man of limited means whose humble home is mortgaged, perhaps, but always taxed.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

299.

TAXES AND TAXATION—BOARDS OF REVIEW—LEGAL ADVISER—ATTORNEY GENERAL—ASSISTANCE OF PROSECUTOR.

The matter of fixing values for taxation in Ohio is an exclusive prerogative of the state.

Members of boards of review are neither county nor municipal officers but are "state agents."

