Upon the assumption that you have in mind the taxibility of the contract to A or his assigns as "personal property" as well as "a credit or investment," I have investigated this question also, without, however, any very satisfactory results. The difficulty here arises from the fact, seemingly well established by all the authorities, that an arrangement identical in written terms with that described by you is capable of producing either of two legal effects, according to the real intention of the parties participating therein. These two effects are as follows:

1. A giving of a deed and the return of a lease with option to re-purchase for a fixed sum within a certain time may witness a simple sale with limited option of re-purchase. That is to say, natural persons clearly have the right to enter into an arrangement of this sort, and they would naturally choose conveyances of the kind described by you to effect it. As stated by Chief Justice Marshall in Conway vs. Alexander, 7 Cranch, 218,

> "To deny the power of two individuals, capable of acting for themselves, to make a contract for the purchase and sale of lands defeasible by the payment of money at a future day, or, in other words, to make a sale with a reservation to the vendor of a right to repurchase the same land at a fixed price and at a specified time, would be to transfer to the courts of chancery, in a considerable degree, the guardianship of adults as well as infants. Such contracts are certainly not prohibited either by the letter or the policy of the law. But the policy of the law does prohibit the conversion of a real mortgage into a sale; * * *."

2. On the other hand, courts of chancery do not hesitate upon proper showing to give to such transactions the effect of a mortgage, particularly when in the language of our statutes the case is one of "money loaned on pledge * * * of real estate * * * as between the parties thereto it is considered as security merely."

As already pointed out, however, the form of words used by the parties in reducing the agreement to writing and embodying it into a legal conveyance is absolutely inconclusive as a test by which to determine which of the two legal effects above described will be given to such a transaction. In the language of Chief Justice Marshall found in the same case,

> "The form of the deed is not in itself conclusive either way. The want of a convenant to repay the money is not complete evidence that a conditional sale was intended, but is a circumstance of no inconsiderable importance. If the vendee must be restrained to his principal and interest, that principal and interest ought to be secure. It is, therefore, a necessary ingredient in a mortgage, that the mortgagee should have a remedy against the person of the debtor. If this remedy really exists, its not being reserved in terms will not affect the case. But it must exist in order to justify a construction which overrules the express words of the instrument. * * *"

As already stated, I have examined a number of authorities both from Ohio and other jurisdictions without completely satisfying myself as to the existence of any universal test by which all cases presenting on the surface facts like those described by you can be classified.

In Patrick vs. Littell 36 O. S. 79, it was held that the retention of an agent to secure a loan on the deed and lease plan, broadly similar to that described by you, was not void as against public policy, the purpose being to evade the revenue laws of the state, because among other things the revenue laws of the state would not have been successfully evaded thereby. The language of the syllabus on this point is as follows:

> "Where a loan of money is to be secured by a conveyance of real estate in fee to the lender with a lease back for a specified number of years, with a privilege of redemption to the lessees to pay ground rent equal to eight per cent. per annum on the money loaned, such security is in equity a mortgage and subject to taxation under the statutes."

There was an evidence in this case, however, an agreement of agency wherein the transaction was described literally as "a loan." Judge Boynton, in delivering the opinion of the court, remarked in the course thereof,

> "They were constituted agents to procure a loan, upon terms prescribed by the plaintiff and her husband * * *."

So, it was clear and undisputed in this case that if the transaction had been carried out, it would have been in pursuance of a real intention to negotiate a loan. In other words, the intention of the parties was not obscure, but was fully disclosed by evidence in the case without recourse to that which was merely circumstantial.

In Slutz and Larue vs. Desenberg, et al., 28 O. S., 371, on the other hand, it was held in the language of the syllabus that:

> "1. A deed absolute in form, if intended to secure the payment of money, and the relation of debtor and creditor exists between the grantor and the grantee at the time of its execution, will be treated as a mortgage. But where no such relation exists, and the grantor and grantee, at the time of the execution of the deed agree in writing that the grantor shall have the option of repurchase in a given time, at a certain price, the transaction is a conditional sale.
> "2. To determine whether a deed, absolute in form, is in equity a mortgage, requires that the real intention of the parties to the transaction be ascertained. A fair criterion seems to be this: If, under all the facts and circumstances, the relation of lender and borrower, or creditor and debtor, do not subsist, and the grantor is under no personal obligation that can be enforced by the grantee as creditor or mortgagee, the transaction will be treated as a sale and not as a mortgage."

In this case the facts disclose the existence of no lease. The only conveyance was an ordinary warranty deed, and it was further disclosed that the guarantee was, under the contract which accompanied the deed, to retain possession of the premises. There are other distinctions which may be made between this case and that presented by you, but I do not feel that an extended discussion of these distinctions is necessary in this connection.

In Wilson vs. Giddings, 28 O. S., 554, the following language appears in the syllabus.

"2. Where, between the vendor and vendee, the relation of debtor and creditor exists at the time a conveyance, absolute in form as a deed, is made for real estate, and the parties, as part of the transaction, enter into a written agreement, by which, among other things, it is agreed that the vendee will reconvey the real estate to the vendor, on the repayment of a stipulated sum of money in a stated time, and the circumstances attending the transaction and general course of dealing between them furnish strong presumptive evidence that the deed was intended as a mortgage security, a court of equity will hold such a deed to be a mortgage.

"3. Gross inadequacy of price, the grantor's continued possession, regular payment of taxes and assessments on the property by him, receiving the rents and profits as his own, controlling, using and improving the property as his own, by the grantor, in connection with the grantee's avowed purpose to make ten per cent. on his investments, and continued expectation that the vendor would take back the property, afforded strong presumptions that the vendor still holds the equity of redemption in the real estate.

"4. When a deed absolute in form is accompanied, as part of the transaction, by a matter of condition of defeasance, expressed in the conveyance, or contained in a separate instrument, or exists in parol, whether the condition be a pre-existing debt or present advance of money, if the relation of borrower and lender, debtor and creditor, exists between the parties, the conveyance will be regarded as a security, and treated in equity as a mortgage, and not as a sale, either absolute or conditional."

The above quotation is valuable as suggesting one of the circumstances which induces courts to hold deeds absolute in form to be mortgages in effect.

There are other cases decided by the Supreme Court of Ohio illustrating the rules and their practical operation.

In Kraay vs. Gibson, 2 N. P. n. s., 537, the taxability of a lessor's interest something like the one described by you as "personal property" under what is now Section 5325 of the General Code was directly involved; that being the only question in the case. The decision is that of the Superior Court of Cincinnati, per Hosea, J. In that case there was a deed absolute on its face and perpetual lease back to the grantor containing a privilege to repurchase at the lessor's option at the consideration stated therein. The county auditor undertook to place the lessor's interest on the duplicate as personal property, and with this end in view took certain testimony which is abstracted in the report of the case. It appears that both parties to the transaction denied that either of them had any intention of creating a relation of debtor and creditor. The grantee testified that those whom he represented were interested solely in an income-producing investment and did not care ever to have the principle invested by them returned to them. The grantor and lessee testified that he desired to raise money on his property and put it in the shape of ground rent, reserving to himself the privilege to repurchase, but being under no obligation to do so.

Upon these facts and this testimony the court held the lessor's interest not to be taxable. There are many cases cited in the reported case, but I shall not quote them. Suffice it to say that the conclusion reached by the court seems to be justified because there does not appear to be any evidence whatever of any intention to create the relation of debtor and creditor as between the parties.

Let it be pointed out, however, that Judge Hosea makes a pertinent observation respecting the meaning of Section 5325. He says, in effect, at pages 539 and 540 that whether or not a deed absolute on its face with a lease back to the grantor would, in a given instance, be held to create a mortgage by reason of the surrounding facts and circumstances is not determinative of the taxability of the lessor's interest under this statute, because the subject of the tax is not the lease as an income-producing contract, not even as a contract for a valuable consideration to be paid in the future, but the "money loaned." Therefore it must also be inquired under Section 5325 whether or not the grantee and lessor has loaned money to the grantor and lessee and what the amount thereof is.

Thus it will be seen that ultimately in a question of this sort, the form of the deed, lease, contract, or instrument or instruments involved, disappears from the case and the object of the inquiry is to ascertain the amount of the loan.

Nevertheless it is often necessary to examine into the instruments employed themselves, as well as the surrounding facts and circumstances, with a view to ascertaining the real understanding of the parties. As already stated no single or ultimate test which may be applied in such cases is available. Instead there are numerous rules by the application of which to the various phases of each case the conclusion may be reached. Practically all of these rules are suggested in the above cited authorities and in the decisions of the courts of other states which may decide it. A very full discussion of the subject is found, however, in Jones on Mortgages, Vol. 1, Chapters 7 and 8. From this work, as well as from cases examined by me, I have gathered the following rules, by the joint application of which to a given case it may be determined whether a deed and agreement to reconvey under lease or otherwise will be held to be a mortgage:

1. In order to convert what appears to be a conditional sale with agreement to reconvey, the evidence should be so clear as to leave no doubt that the real intention of the parties was to execute a mortgage. (Jones on Mortgages, Section 260).

2. A debt either pre-existing or created at the time, or contracted to be created, is an essential requisite of a mortgage. (Id. 265)

3. When there has been an application for a loan on the part of the grantor to the grantee, and it is not shown that the grantor ever abandoned his intention to borrow money on his real estate, the choice of a deed with agreement to reconvey, whether a lease is interposed or not, is immaterial, the transaction being adjudged to be a mortgage. (Id. 266).

Nevertheless it is always possible to show that though the original intention may have been to negotiate a loan the parties did not agree upon this basis.

4. On the other hand the mere exisence of a debt on the part of the grantor to the grantee coupled with a stipulation to reconvey, etc., does not conclusively establish the existence of a mortgage, if it is shown that the parties regarded the debt as discharged by the conveyance. (Id. 267-269).

5. The non-existence of any collateral written undertaking by the grantor for the payment of money or the performance of an obligation is not of itself conclusive. The parties may not have reduced their real understanding to writing, nor even to express spoken words; nevertheless other circumstances may show that the parties must have intended a loan of money secured by real estate. (Id. 272.)

6. If it can be reasonably inferred that the amount payable periodically by the grantor remaining in possession to the grantee under the form of rent, is intended merely as interest upon the money advanced by the person who takes the title, it may be safely held that the transaction is a mortgage. (Id. 273.)

7. The mere fact that the grantor remains in possession even under a form of lease is a circumstance tending to show that the agreement for repurchase in connection with the deed constitutes a mortgage rather than a sale. This test, in common with all the others, is not conclusive in itself. (Id. 274)

8. Inadequacy of the price at which the legal title to the property changes hands is a circumstance of considerable weight as tending to show that the transacion is a mortgage. Nevertheless, even this circumstance is not conclusive, and it must always be borne in mind that courts must deal with great caution with questions involving opinion as to the value of real estate. (Id. 275.)

9. Although the evidence which will be sufficient to overthrow the apparent legal effect of the form of conveyance used by the parties must be clear and convincing, yet in applying this test, having ascertained the facts, courts are inclined to hold such transactions to be mortgages rather than conditional sales. (Id. Sections 278-279).

10. This is peculiarly true where the parties deal with each other under fiduciary relations. (Id. 335.)

11. The intention of the parties at the time the transaction was consumated governs—once a mortgage always a mortgage. (Id. 340.)

12. It follows from this that in order that the transaction may be held a mortgage, it is necessary that the deed of conveyance and the instrument containing the defeasance or agreement to reconvey be contemporaneous. If they are so, some evidence is afforded thereby of the existence of a mortgage. If not, the transaction must be held to be a sale. (Id. 345.)

13. The payment of the taxes and assessments on the property by the grantor remaining in possession and the complete control and use thereof by him, together with the making of improvements, are facts tending to show the existence of a mortgage—not of themselves, but taken in connection with other facts. (Wilson vs. Giddings, supra.) But it seems that inasmuch as such a course of conduct is usual on the part of the one holding under a lease, these circumstances do not afford evidence as strong when the grantor continues in possession under a lease as when there is no lease from the grantee back to the grantor.

14. The case is stronger in favor of holding the transaction to be a mortgage and not a sale, if the right to repurchase is limited to a specified period than it is when the right is perpetual. (Kraay vs. Gibson, supra, page 549.)

(It may here be remembered that the case just cited is to be distinguished from the one stated by you on these grounds.)

Applying to the facts as stated by you, and as disclosed by the correspondence attached to your letter, the tests among those mentioned above, which are applicable thereto, the following facts appear:

1. On its face the transaction is completely reduced to writing in the form of conveyances, and the legal effect of these conveyances must be overthrown by satisfactory evidence. That is to say, presumptively, the transaction is a sale and lease with the privilege of repurchase, and nothing more, and as such creates no "personal property" in A. which may be taxed as such.

2. The fact that B. remains in possession of the property, pays the taxes, and completely and fully uses the same as his own, while directly attributable to the lease which he holds, nevertheless tends to show the existence of a mortgage. If it can be coupled with other facts tending to the same conclusion, the apparent legal effect of the transaction may be disregarded. That is to say, a court, or the county auditor, might infer from these facts, in connection with other facts, that B. owed A. a sum of money equal to the purchase price. From careful consideration I have reached the conclusion that the continued possession of B. is entitled to weight in this connection. I am aware that it might be argued that the continued possession is only attributable to the lease. Here, however, another element asserts itself, which is,

2a. The fact that the deed and lease are contemporaneous and evidently part of a single transaction. This fact not only of itself tends slightly to show the existence of a mortgage because the lease contains the agreement for repurchase as one of its covenants, but it greatly lessens the force of the possible contention that A's continued possession is only referable to the lease. In fact, it might almost be conclusively inferred from these circumstances that B. would not have deeded the property to A. without knowing that he was to secure a lease back for it and was to continue to enjoy the use of the property and to pay the taxes thereon. That being the case, it must have been for some ulterior purpose that B. parted with legal title to his property. Such a purpose could have been none other than the borrowing of money, and the transaction might, therefore, be held to constitute a loan and mortgage.

3. If (and this is not apparent from the face of the papers submitted to me) B. during his possession had made valuable improvements, thus treating the property in all respects as if it had been his own, additional evidence is thereby afforded of a real intention on the part of the parties to negotiate a loan, and to cover the same by a mortgage.

4. The fact that the privilege to repurchase is limited to the life of the lease and does not arise until a certain time after the execution of the deed and lease is one consistent with the theory that the parties had intended a loan of money secured by a mortgage. (It might be stated here that it is disclosed by the correspondence submitted that the privelege of repurchase does not arise until after the expiration of five years and continues only during the life of the lease). As pointed out in Kraay vs. Gibson, supra, these facts more strongly support the conclusion that a mortgage was intended than a perpetual lease and unlimited right of repurchase would have supported such a conclusion.

5. If it be ascertained that the consideration mentioned in the deed, being the same as that for which the grantee agreed to reconvey, does not represent the true value of the property, but is grossly inadequate as a price therefor, this fact in connection with other facts to which I have called attention may be relied upon in support of a conclusion that the transaction is a loan and mortgage.

6. On the other hand, if the conduct of the parties, aside from the express language used in the two conveyances, shows that the debt of the grantor to the grantee arising when the money was advanced to the latter was extinguished by the conveyance of land, the transaction must be held to be that which it purports to be. If, however, the amount of rent payable by the grantee to the grantor under the lease of the former represents the current rate of commercial interest at the time the transaction was consummated on the amount of money advanced by the grantee to the grantor, this fact would be almost sufficient in itself to negative the idea that the parties did not consider that the grantor continued to owe the grantee. If the amount of the rent exceed such commercial rate of interest, then it would be much clearer that it in deed and in fact constituted a rent charge.

7. In connection with the last point above mentioned I have noticed from the correspondence that the privilege of repurchase under the lease is such that the purchase price may be paid by the lessee to the lessor in annual installments. and that upon each such payment the amount of rent, so-called, shall be reduced by a sum equal to five per cent. of such payment. This fact impresses me as very significant, and as being of considerable weight in support of the conclusion that the specific transaction involved is in reality a loan and mortgage. That is to say, it tends to disclose the real intention of the parties.

All of these tests, then, applied to the specific case submitted by you, and to the typical case described by you, would of themselves lead me to the conclusion that the two transactions would be held to be mortgages in equity; so that the real nature of the transaction is that of "a loan of money on the pledge of real estate" wthin the meaning of Section 5325, supra. I would not, however, unequivocally hold this to be the case. In any such case it is possible that other facts may exist which, under the tests above laid down, may tend to neutralize the force of those upon which I have commented, and may accomplish this result to such a degree as to leave a court without sufficient evidence upon which to disregard the strictly legal effect of the two conveyances.

In conclusion I beg to state that it is my opinion that the county auditor, or any other taxing officer having power to bring property upon the personal tax duplicate, may by the application of the tests above suggested ascertain for his own satisfaction whether or not a transaction like the one described by you is in reality a loan of money upon the pledge of real estate, and hence constitutes "personal property" which may be taxed to the owner of the legal title of the real property. His judgment in this matter, however, is not conclusive, but may be reviewed by the courts in an appropriate action. (Kraay vs. Gibson, supra.)

I trust that the tests which I have furnished may prove explicit enough to enable the taxing officers to apply them conveniently to individual cases. Let it be borne always in mind that as a general rule, a least no one of these tests ought to be regarded as conclusive, but that the cumulative effect of all of them which can be applies to the particular cases must be considered.

Finally, none of these tests is necessary where the taxing officers have direct evidence to the effect that the parties themselves have regarded the transaction as a loan. The object of the application of the tests themselves is to ascertain the intention of the parties, and if this can be discovered by any other means it must be given effect.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

RAILROADS—UNIFORM RATES FOR INTRA-STATE HAULS—SHORT AND LONG HAULS.

Where a definite rate is established by a railroad between certain points, the charge of a higher rate for shorter hauls from either point to an intermediate point would be discriminatory and in violation of Section 8988, General Code, providing for uniformity in rates, for intra-state hauls.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25. 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of October 5th, in which you ask for an opinion with reference to Section 8988 of the General Code, and cite the following examples, namely:

> "Suppose, for instance, that the existing rate on coal from Fultonham, on the Z. & W. Ry., via Crooksville and the C. & M. V. to Circleville is seventy cents per ton. Would Section 8988 require the railroads, parties to the Circlevillle rate, to apply such rate as the maximum to Stoutsville, a local point on the C. & M. V. intermediate between Crooksville and Circleville?
> "There is in existence a rate of 35 cents per ton on sand and gravel, in carloads, from Akron to Kent via the Erie R. R. Would the application of Section 8988 of the General Code require the Erie R. R. to apply the 35 cents rate to Tallmadge, a point directly intermediate on the same line?"

In reply to your inquiry, I desire to say that the section of the General Code, referred to, provides as follows:

> "No company, or person owning, controlling, or operating a railroad in whole or part within this state, shall charge or receive for transportation of freight for any distance within this state a larger sum than is charged by the same company or person for the transportation in the same direction, of freight of same class or kind, for an equal or greater distance over the same road and connecting lines of road."

A railroad is a common carrier and subject to state control as to rates charged on freight shipped thereon which is intrastate.

Said Section 8988 was enacted with the intent and for the purpose of preventing undue discrimination and preference to one shipper or to shippers over another or others.

It is plain that the provisions of the section in question do not in terms embrace the case of the interstate traffic, but it is restricted in its regulation to long and short distances upon railroad lines and connecting lines within this state.

It may be contended that, so long as the rate charged for the short haul is open to all who desire to make a shipment, it is not discrimination, but I am of the opinion that any rate charged by any railroad for a short haul which would be greater than any rate for a long haul on the same and connecting lines would be a discriminatory rate and would be in contravention to said Section 8988.

The whole spirit of the statute in question would be abrogated if the railroad could charge more for a short haul on its road and connecting roads than for a longer haul thereon in the same direction. The sum charged by the railroad is based upon a rate, and any rate or rates which would give to a shipper a privilege to ship a certain commodity for a longer distance for a cheaper rate or smaller sum would, in my opinion, be discrimination.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that under said Section 8988 of the General Code a railroad cannot charge a higher rate to an intermediate point than to a farther point on the same and connecting lines in the same direction. Hence, in answer to your first example, I think the railroad, party to the Circleville rate, would have to apply such rate as the maximum to Stoutsville, a local point on the C. & M. V. Railroad intermediate between Crooksville and Circleville.

In answer to your second example, I am of the opinion that the Erie Railway Company would be required under said section of the General Code to apply the thirty-five cent rate to Tallmadge, a point directly intermediate on the same line, and the maximum rate from Akron to Kent the longer distance on the same and connecting lines.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES ACT—TELEPHONE COMPANIES—MUTUAL CORPORATION NOT FOR PROFIT DEALING WITH OTHER THAN MEMBERS—"COMMON CARRIERS."

A mutual telephone company which is incorporated as a corporation not for profit, but which furnishes services to persons outside of its membership, is a "corporation operated for profit" and then a "common carrier" and answerable as such under Section 66 of the Public Utility Act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication dated January 10, 1912, in which you ask for my opinion as to the application of Section 66 of the Public Utility Act, Section 614-63 of the General Code. (102 Ohio Laws 569) to the following example.

> "Where 'Mutual Telephone Companies' incorporated not for profit; but are actually operating for profit, that is to say, they furnish service to persons not members of the company and charge for such service. Suppose then that two Mutual Companies each incorporated 'not for profit;' but each actually operating for profit by serving others than members of their company; would not such companies be utilities under the law and entitled to the application of said Section 66 of said act?"

was duly received and in reply will say that Section three (3) of said act (102 Ohio Laws 550) reads:

> "Any person or persons, firm or firms, co-partnership or voluntary association, joint stock association, company or corporation, wherever organized or incorporated;" "When engaged in the business of transmitting to, from, through, or in this state, telephonic messages, is a telephone company, and as such is declared to be a common carrier."

Section four (4) of said act (102 O. L. 551) in defining the term "public utility" carries an exception as follows:

"Except such public utilities as operate their utilities not for profit."

From a careful reading of the said section above quoted, it, in my opinion was the plain intention of the Legislature to provide by said act for the efficient regulation of public utilities which are affected with a public interest.

It is apparent that these portions of sections three (3) and four (4) of said act above quoted, must be considered together to properly answer your inquiry, and in so considering them, it is clear to me that any mutual telephone company, incorporated not for profit, but nevertheless furnishes service to persons not members of the company and charges therefor, becomes a common carrier under the definition of said term, set forth in said section three (3) and, again, whenever such mutual company or companies do furnish service to persons not members of the companies and charge therefor, they do not come within the exception set forth in said section four (4), but "operate their utilities for profit;" and all such mutual companies would be stopped from claiming they were operated not for profit.

There must be a distinction made between a corporation incorporated not for profit, and one "operated for profit," as applied to the Public Utility Act, for the reason that as soon as any such company, as referred to in your inquiry, accepted business from others than its members and charged therefor, it is operating for profit, even though the members may not under its charter be entitled to participate in the proceeds or fund derived from such charges.

Therefore, whenever such mutual telephone companies become utilities as above described, I am of the opinion that they become answerable to said Section 66 of said act.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORPORATIONS—PUBLIC UTILITIES—JURISDICTION OF PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OVER OFFICE BUILDING CORPORATION SUPPLYING ELECTRICITY TO OTHER THAN TENANTS.

A corporation whose articles express the purpose of acquiring and holding real estate and furnish to tenants "and others," space, power, light, and other facilities, and which corporation is actually engaged, in addition to its operation of an office and power building, in the sale of surplus electric current and heat to customers other than tenants of the building, is operating a business for supplying electricity to "customers with this state" and therefore, is a "public utility" and subject to the jurisdicion of the utilities commission.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 9th, in which you enclosed certain correspondence between the officers of The Caxton Building Company of Cleveland, Ohio and your commission, and request my opinion as to whether said company, upon the facts set forth, is to be considered a public utility and subject to the jurisdiction of the commission. The facts in said matter are as follows:

> "The Caxton Building Company of Cleveland, Ohio is a duly incorporated company under the laws of Ohio and engaged, as shown by the affidavit of the secretary of said company, in the business of operating an office and power building in the City of Cleveland, Ohio. Said building contains a heating and lighting plant for its own purposes, which plant has been installed with sufficient capacity to take care of expected demand by the tenants of the building; and at present is furnishing heat and electric current, generated by its heating and lighting plant, to certain continguous buildings or customers."

The question, therefore, is:

> "Under the above statement of facts is the said corporation a public utility and subject to the jurisdiction of the public service commission of Ohio, under and by virtue of House Bill 325, 102 O. L. 549?"

I have examined the records in the office of the secretary of state and find The Caxton Building Company was incorporated for the purpose of acquiring and holding real estate and furnishing to tenants and others space, power, light and other facilities."

Under the articles of incorporation of said company it has the right to furnish to tenants and others space, power, light and other facilities, which, in its terms, is broad and not ambiguous.

Section 614-2 of the General Code, 102 O. L. 550, defining the terms as used in said act, provides as follows:

> "Any person or persons, firm or firms, co-partnership or voluntary association, joint stock company or corporation, wherever organized or incorporated:
> "When engaged in the business of supplying electricity for light, heat or power purposes to consumers within this state, is an electric light company."

Section 4 of said act, defining the term "public utility" as used in the act says that,

> "The term 'public utility' as used in this act shall mean and include every corporation, company, co-partnership, person or association, their lessees, trustees or receivers, defined in the next preceding section, except such public utilities as operate their utilities not for profit * * * *."

It is apparent from the reading of the two sections above quoted that the act was to include any corporation engaged in the business of supplying electricity for light, heat or power purposes to consumers within this state; and I have no difficulty in reaching that opinion in this specific case, on account of the broad terms of the articles of incorporation of said company. According to the affidavit of the secretary of said corporation the company is now engaged in the sale of surplus electric current and heat, generated by the plant in the building of the company, to customers other than tenants of their building, to the extent of several thousand dollars annually; and being authorized by its articles of incorporation so to do there can be no question in my mind but that said company is a public utility within the meaning of the act and is subject to the jurisdiction of your commission. Said corporation is a creature of the state, and the intent of the passage of said public utility act was the exercising by the state of the general police power in order that no person or corporation or public utility should use its property or do anything to the injury of the public in furnishing any product, such as the inquiry cited.

I might say in conclusion that every individual case will, of necessity, have to depend upon the facts relating thereto; and in view of the terms of the articles of incorporation of the said company I can not arrive at any other legal conclusion than that since said corporation is furnishing to customers power, heat and light as authorized, it has acquired the status of a public utility and become subject to said act.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION—DUTY TO FURNISH "DATA AND INFORMATION" WITHOUT CHARGE AND TO FURNISH "COPIES OF PAPERS, FILES, ETC.," UPON PAYMENT OF FEE.

The Public Service Commission is required by Section 614-77, General Code, to furnish without any charge therefor, any officer, board or commission, upon request all "data or information" with regard to any matter pending before the Commission.

Under Section 614-76, General Code, the Commission is obliged to furnish any person, upon the payment of the prescribed fee, with copy or copies of any "paper, record, testimony or writing made," taken or filed under the provisions of the Public Utilities Act.

March 21, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication dated January 26, 1912, in which you enclose a copy of letter received from Hon. Newton D. Baker, Mayor of the City of Cleveland, to your commission, under date of January 12, which letter is as follows:

> "CLEVELAND, OHIO, January 12, 1912.
> "The Public Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.
> "GENTLEMEN:—I am told that the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., of this city, has filed with your Commission an application to be permitted to enlarge its capitalization for the purpose of making various extensions and betterments to its plant and equipment in Cleveland.
> "Acting under Section No. 81 of the Public Utilities Act, I respectfully request that a copy of such application and any accompanying papers be transmitted to me for my official information.
> "(Signed) Newton D. Baker, Mayor."

You request my opinion as to whether or not there is any authority in law for charging the mayor of Cleveland for copies of documents which he requests, and in reply I desire to say that Section 614-77 of the General Code, being Section 81 of the Public Utilities Act, provides as follows:

> "The commission shall, whenever called upon by any officer, board or commission now existing or hereafter created in the state or any political subdivision thereof, furnish any data or information to such officer, board or commission and shall aid or assist any such officer, board or commission in performing the duties of his or its office, and all officers, boards or commissions now existing or hereafter, created in in the state or any political subdivision thereof, shall furnish to the commission, upon request, any data or information which will assist such commission in the discharge of the duties imposed upon it by this act."

Under said section just quoted, I am of the legal opinion that any data or information requested by any officer, board or commission as therein defined must be furnished by your commission, and that no charge shall be made therefor, but in construing said section, I am also of the opinion that under said section no such officer or commission shall be furnished any copy or copies of any paper, record, testimony or writing made, taken or filed under the provisions of the Public Utilities Act, but simply such data or information as might inform such officer of commission of facts pertaining to any matter pending before your commission.

Under Section 614-76, Section 80 of the Public Utilities Act, it is mandatory that your commission, upon application of any person and the payment of the proper fee therefor, furnish certified copies under the seal of the Commission of any order made by it, and also any copy of any paper, record, testimony or writing made, taken or filed under the provisions of this act, and further provides that the same fees for such services shall be charged by your Commission as are now charged by the Secretary of State, which fees are provided by Section 176 of the General Code, under sub-division 18 thereof. Therefore, in conclusion, while the mayor of the city of Cleveland has the right, under Section 81 of the Public Utilities Act, above quoted, to demand without payment of any fee any data or information relative to the matter referred to in his letter, your Commission must charge him for a copy of the application and any accompanying papers relative to the same on file with your Commission.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

RAILROAD COMPANIES—SWITCHING FACILITIES TO OTHER ROADS —PUBLIC UTILITIES—REMEDY OF PARTY AGGRIEVED.

When the tracks of one railroad company lie contiguous to certain industrial establishments, such railroad is obligated by Section 8998 General Code, at the request of shippers or other R. R. Companies, to switch the cars of other railroads to said establishments. When a railroad refuses to do this, the remedy to the party aggrieved is afforded by Section 9002 General Code, namely: a recovery of a sum double the amount of the overcharge caused by said refusal Further remedy may be had through an order of the Public Utilities Commission after formal complaint by the parties aggrieved.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication of November 15th, 1911, wherein you state:

> "I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. B. A. Worthington, Receiver, W. & L. E. R. R. Co., complaining, informally, that at Massillon, Martins Ferry and Bridgeport Ohio, the Pennsylvania and B. & O. refuse to accord to the W. & L. E. R. R. the same switching facilities that they accord to each other; that is to say, if a carload of freight arrives at either of these places via the W. & L. E. for a consignee having a private siding on the Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania will not switch it. While if a car were to arrive via the B. & O. consigned to the same party, they would switch it."

And you ask my opinion as to whether or not there is any action under the statutes that can be taken by the Commission in the absence of formal complaint to require a railroad company to treat all its connections on the same basis with reference to interchange switching arrangements. In reply thereto I desire to say that Section 8998 of the General Code provides that when the tracks of one company

> "* * * lie contiguous to coal mines, stone, quarries, manufacturing establishments, elevators, warehouses, navigable waters or side tracks, suitable for loading or unloading, it shall switch the cars of other companies, at the request of such companies, or the shippers, over and upon the tracks so lying by such mines, quarries, manufacturing establishments, elevators, warehouses, navigable waters or side tracks, for the purpose of unloading or loading grain or other freight into or from such elevators, warehouses, boats upon such navigable waters, or side tracks without demurrage, for forty-eight hours."

And Section 8999 provides when companies must transport cars of other companies, and Section 9000 provides the rate for switching the cars of other companies. Section 9002 provides in part as follows:

> "A company which violates or permits to be violated any provision of Sections 8997 to 9001, inclusive * * * or which demands or receives a greater sum of money for transportation * * * or for the service provided for in such Sections 8997 to 9001, inclusive, than the sum allowed by law, shall pay to the party aggrieved for *every such overcharge a sum equal to double the amount of the overcharge; and any officer, employe, or agent of any such company who violates or permits to be violated, any of such provisions, or demands or receives such sum of money, shall be subject to the like penalty to the party aggrieved. * * "

After a careful consideration of the question submitted in your inquiry, I am compelled to arrive at the legal conclusion that said sections, above referred to, provide no penalty to be assessed by the state, but the remedy is given to the party aggrieved under Section 9002 for such overcharges, etc.

The matter submitted in your inquiry being one of the cases which is covered by the statutes, not only as to the rights of the party aggrieved, but also providing a statutory remedy, I am also of the legal opinion that your Commission is without authority to remedy the wrong without a formal complaint being filed with it by the party aggrieved, which, under my construction of Section 9002 of the General Code, would be the party who has been overcharged, i. e., the shipper who must pay such overcharge for freight shipments.

I am of the opinion that a company has no right to refuse absolutely to switch the cars of another company when the tracks lie contiguous to the company's mines, stone quarries, manufacturing establishments, elevators, warehouses, navigable waters or side tracks suitable for loading or unloading, if requested by such company or shippers, and if they absolutely refuse they would have the right to file a formal complaint with your Commission and upon hearing your Commission could issue an order requiring the same to render such services as are required by law.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION—GRANT OF PERMISSION TO RAILROAD COMPANY TO SELL STOCKS AND BONDS—EFFECT OF APPLICATION OF PROCEEDS TO IMPROVEMENTS OUTSIDE OF OHIO.

When the Public Service Commission has granted an application of a Railroad to sell stocks and securities, the fact that part of the proceeds of said sale is to be used for improvements outside of Ohio does not in any way invalidate the procedure.

July 12, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication dated May 14th, received, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "What authority has the Public Service Commission of Ohio to authorize the issuance and sale of stocks and securities by railroad companies, part of the proceeds of which are to be used outside the State of Ohio?"

The section which regulates the authority of your Commission to grant authority or power to any utility or railroad to issue bonds, stocks, etc., for the purposes mentioned in your letter is Section 56 of the Public Utilities Act, or Section 614-53 of the General Code of Ohio, which reads as follows:

"A public utility or a railroad, as defined in this act, may, when authorized by order of the Commission, and not otherwise, issue stocks, bonds, notes and other evidences of indebtedness, payable at periods of more than 12 months after date thereof, when necessary for the acquisition of property, the construction, completion, extension or improvements of its facilities or for the improvement or maintenance of its service, or for the re-organization or re-adjustment of its indebtedness and capitalization, or for the discharge or lawful refunding of its obligations, or for the reimbursement of moneys actually expended from income or from any other moneys in the treasury of the public utility or railroad not secured or obtained from the issue of stocks, bonds, notes or other evidences of indebtedness of such public utility or railroad within five years next prior to the filing of an application therefor as herein provided, or for any of the aforesaid purposes except maintenance of service and except replacements in cases where the applicant shall have kept its accounts and vouchers of such expenditures in such manner as to enable the Commission to ascertain the amount of money so expended and the purposes for which said expenditure was made."

Section 614-55 of the General Code is Section 58 of the Public Utilities Act, and reads in part as follows:

"* * * No interstate railroad or public utility shall be required, however, to apply to the Commission for authority to issue stock, bonds, notes or other evidences of indebtedness for the acquisition of property, the construction, completion, extension or improvement of its facilities or the improvement or maintenance of its service outside of the state, or for the discharge or refunding of obligations issued or incurred for such purposes or for reimbursement of moneys actually expended for such purposes outside of the State."

In addition to your request, I have the information from your Commission that an application has been made by the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company, under said Section 56, above quoted, for authority to issue bonds, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used for legal purposes, but partially to be expended outside of the State of Ohio, and the question, therefore, is as to the authority of your Commission under the above quoted sections, and under the Public Utilities Act generally, to authorize the said issuing of such bonds when it is conceded that the proceeds, in part at least, are to be expended outside of this State.

There can be no question in my mind as to the legality of such a bond issue if the proceeds derived from the sale of any or all of such bonds were to be used exclusively within the State of Ohio, and for any of the purposes enumerated in Section 56 above quoted; but the serious question for consideration is whether or not your Commission has any authority to grant the issuing of bonds or other securities under said sections where the proceeds derived from the sale of such bonds and securities are to be expended, in part at least, for the purposes enumerated in said section, but outside of this State.

The fact that the Legislature in enacting that part of said Section 58 above quoted wherein "no interstate railroad or public utility shall be required to apply to the Commission for authority to issue such bonds or securities for the purposes mentioned where the expenditure is to be made outside of the State, or for the refunding or the reimbursement of moneys actually expended for such purposes outside of the State" clearly convinces me that legally the granting of an order by your Commission to any railroad company or public utility, as defined in the Public Utilities Act, to do the thing inquired of in your letter, would not invalidate any bonds or part of the issue of said bonds or securities, the proceeds from which were to be expended without the State. And, on the other hand, the order, as far as the issuing of bonds or securities the proceeds of which were to be used within the State, would be legal and proper under said Section 56 above quoted.

I am, therefore, of the legal opinion that so long as your Commission is convinced that the granting of permission to any railroad company or utility, and particularly a railroad, to issue bonds or other certificates of indebtedness for a legal purpose, any portion of which might be or is to be expended, for the purposes in the said act enumerated, within the State, although part of the proceeds of the sale of such bonds or securities is to be used for the purposes outside of the State would legalize that portion of the issue pertaining to the State of Ohio, and would at the most be simply surplusage as to all those bonds or securities the proceeds of which are to be expended for the purposes enumerated in said act outside of the State; and, therefore, I believe in the case of the application of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railway Company that there is no legal prohibition against your Commission authorizing the issuance of said bonds or securities, the consent for which was applied for to your Commission, so long as you find the same to be for the legal purposes in said act aforesaid enumerated.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION MAY NOT COMPEL GAS COMPANY TO EXTEND MAINS—POWERS OF COUNCIL.

The Public Utilities Act does not confer upon the Commission the power to compel "extensions" of the equipment or service of Public Utilities. Such power is conferred upon the council, however, by Section 53 of said Act.

When an allotment addition is made to a city, therefore the Utilities Commission may not upon its own initiative compel a Gas Company to extend its mains thereto. Council, however, may compel the provisions of a contract with such company providing for extensions, and after council has taken action thereon the Commission is empowered to review the proceedings by virtue of Section 46 and 48 of said Act.

July 11, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication of May 3rd, 1912, received. You recite therein the following facts:

> "Certain residents of what is known as 'Crestview Addition' to the city of Columbus, brought to your Commission an informal complaint against the Federal Gas and Fuel Company, alleging that that utility had refused to furnish them gas in said addition. That an informal conference was held at which appeared representatives of the Gas Company and a number of citizens of said addition, and that at said conference it developed that said addition to the city of Columbus was recently made and has so far been sparsely built up although building is going on rapidly. That subsequently your Commission 'took up the matter on its own initiative, made necessary entries, summoned the witnesses and had a formal hearing in the matter.' That at said hearing it was shown that there are now in said addition thirty-five occupied residences, fourteen of which are supplied with gas (having privately piped the same from the main lines of the company at their own expense) and twenty-one which are not supplied, and certain other facts relative to said addition."

Your Commission requests my opinion as to the legal status of said matter from the facts set forth in the case, and in reply I desire to say that the question involved in the case and the only one necessary for me to consider is:

> "Whether your Commission has jurisdiction either to entertain a complaint directly from the citizenship of said addition such as recited in your communication or take any action upon its own initiative in the subject matter."

It will be necessary to examine the act creating your Commission (Sections 501, 502 and 606 of the General Code of Ohio) in order to determine the question as to whether or not jurisdiction is given to your Commission to entertain a complaint or make an order upon its own initiative, such as referred to in your communication. In giving the matter most careful consideration on account of the importance of the issue involved, I have investigated not only the law, but all the facts which are determinative of the issue involved, and I find the facts to be as follows:

(a) The Federal Gas and Fuel Company, a corporation, was granted a franchise by the council of the city of Columbus, Ohio, many years prior to Crestview's being annexed to the said city of Columbus, whereby the said company was granted the privilege of laying pipes in the streets, alleys and public places and grounds of the said city of Columbus, and for the purpose of conveying and supplying natural gas to consumers thereof, and now and for many years have been operating under said ordinance (Ordinance No. 15564 of the city of Columbus, Ohio.)

(b) That said company has never extended its pipe lines into said Crestview Addition, and refused to do so, because its franchise does not compel it to do so under the present conditions existing as to prospective consumers of natural gas in said addition.

(c) That no action has ever been taken by the residents of the said addition to the city of Columbus, Ohio, as provided under the terms of said ordinance aforesaid, to secure the services referred to in this controversy.

The sections of the act creating your Commission and defining its powers relative to the matter of jurisdiction of the same to order extensions of mains by said company into a new addition to the city of Columbus are:

> "Section 5. The Public Service Commission of Ohio is hereby vested with the power and jurisdiction to supervise and regulate 'public utilities' and 'railroads' as herein defined and provided and to require all public utilities to furnish their products and render all services required by the Commission, or by law."
> "Section 14. Every public utility shall furnish necessary and adequate service and facilities which shall be reasonable and just, and every unjust or unreasonable charge for such service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful."

"Section 15. Every public utility shall furnish and provide with respect to its business such instrumentalities and facilities as shall be adequate and in all respects just and reasonable. All charges made or demanded for any service rendered, or to be rendered, shall be just and reasonable, and not more than allowed by law or by order of the Commission. Every unjust or unreasonable charge made or demanded for any service, or in connection therewith, or in excess of that allowed by law or by order of the Commission, is prohibited and declared to be unlawful."

"Section 23. Upon complaint in writing, against any public utility, by any person, firm or corporation, or upon the initiative or complaint of the Commission that any rate, fare, charge, toll, rental, schedule, classification or service, or any joint rate, fare, charge, toll, rental, schedule, classification or service rendered, charged, demanded, exacted or proposed to be rendered, charged, demanded, or exacted, is in any respect unjust, unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory, or unjustly preferential or in violation of law, or that any regulation, measurement, or practice affecting or relating to any service furnished by said public utility, or in connection therewith, is, or will be, in any respect unreasonable, unjust, insufficient or unjustly discriminatory or unjustly preferential, or that any service is, or will be, inadequate or cannot be obtained, the Commission shall notify the public utility complained of that complaint has been made, and of the time and place when the same will be considered and determined, which notice shall be served upon the public utility not less than fifteen days before such hearing, and shall plainly state the matters or things complained of. The Commission shall, if it appear that there are reasonable grounds for the complaint, at such time and place proceed to consider such complaint and may adjourn the hearing thereof from time to time. The parties thereto shall be entitled to be heard, represented by counsel and to have process to enforce the attendance of witnesses. A public utility may make complaint as to any matter affecting its own product or service with like effect as though made by a person, firm or corporation, in which event the Commission shall publish notice thereof for ten days prior to such hearing in a newspaper of general circulation at the situs of such public utility."

"Section 29. Whenever the Commission shall be of the opinion, after hearing had upon complaint, as in this act provided, or upon its own initiative or complaint, served as in this act provided, that the rules, regulations, measurements or practices of any public utility with respect to its public service are unjust or unreasonable, or that the equipment or service thereof is inadequate, inefficient, improper or insufficient, or cannot be obtained, it shall determine the regulations, practices and service thereafter to be installed, observed, used and rendered, and fix and prescribe the same by order to be served upon the public utility. It shall thereafter be the duty of such public utility and all of its officers, agents and official employes to obey the same and do everything necessary or proper to carry the same into effect and operation; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to give to the Commission power to make any order requiring the performance of any act or the doing of anything which is unjust or unreasonable or in violation of any law of the State or the United States."

"Section 30. Whenever the Commission shall be of the opinion, after hearing had, as in this act provided, or upon its own initiative or complaint, as in this act provided, that repairs or improvements to the plant or equipment of any public utility, should reasonably be made, or that any additions thereto should reasonably be made, in order to promote the convenience or welfare of the public, or of employes, or in order to secure adequate service or facilities, the Commission may make and serve an appropriate order with respect thereto, directing that such repairs, improvements, changes or additions be made within a reasonable time, and in a manner to be specified therein. Every such public utility, its officers, agents and official employes shall obey such order and make such repairs, improvements, changes and additions required of such public utility by such order."

"Section 53. The council of any municipality shall have the power upon filing of an application therefor by any person, firm or corporation, to require of any public utility, by ordinance or otherwise, such additions or extensions to its distributing plant within such municipality as shall be deemed reasonable and necessary in the interest of the public, and, subject to the provisions of Section 9105 of the General Code, to designate the location and nature of all such additions and extensions, the time within which they must be completed, and all conditions under which they must be constructed and operated. Such requirements and orders of the council shall be subject to review by the Commission, as provided in Sections 46 and 48 thereof. The council and Commission in determining the practicability of such additions and extensions, shall take into consideration the supply of the product furnished by such public utility available, and the returns upon the cost and expense of constructing said extension and the amount of revenue to be derived therefrom, as well as the earning power of the public utility as a whole."

An examination of Sections five (5), fourteen (14), fifteen (15), twenty-three (23), twenty-nine (29), and thirty (30), above quoted, shows that your Commission is given the following powers:

1. To determine the "practices," "regulations," and "service" thereafter to be installed, observed, used and rendered.

2. To make orders directing that "repairs," "improvements, "changes," or "additions" to the plants or equipment of public utilities be made, but nowhere in the said sections does the word "extensions" appear, the Legislature having refrained from using it, but employs it for the first time in Section fifty-three (53), above quoted, wherein the Legislature, in my opinion, intended to, and did, confer jurisdiction in the council over the matter of extensions not covered by any of the previous sections of the act above quoted.

The words "additions" and "extensions" as used in the sections of the act above quoted are not synonymous, and have distinct and different meanings, and especially in view of the fact that the Legislature was so careful to use the same in the different sections conferring powers on different bodies.

The ordinance granted to the Federal Gas and Fuel Company above referred to provided in Section nine (9), in part, as follows:

"It is further provided that when at least ten (10) neighboring householders in the same locality of four hundred feet square and on the same street file a written request with said company for gas to be used in heating their respective houses thereon, and agreeing to take gas for five years from said company for said purpose of heating their said houses, then said company shall connect the said property of said subscribers with its gas mains and supply gas to such subscribers."

This part of the ordinance above quoted provides for extensions of gas mains into new territory and the furnishing of such subscribers with gas prescribing the conditions and terms under which it becomes the duty of the company to do the things therein enumerated.

It is a well settled law in Ohio that "when a municipal corporation by ordinance, gives its consent that a natural gas company may enter the municipality, lay down its pipes therein and furnish gas to consumers upon terms and conditions imposed by the ordinance, which are accepted in writing by said company, such action by both parties constitutes a contract and the rights of the parties thereunder are to be determined by the contract itself. (The East Ohio Gas Company vs. the City of Akron, 81 O. S., 33.)

Again, for the reason that such contractual relations exist between all utilities and municipalities heretofore granted franchises under the well settled rule of law above quoted leads me to the belief that the Legislature in passing the act creating your Commission intended that Section 53 should give jurisdiction to councils in such matters as "extensions" and not to your Commission.

Therefore, after a careful examination and study of the law creating your Commission and for the reasons heretofore set forth, I am unable to find any section or language in the act which would lead to the conclusion or the slightest inference that the Legislature intended said Act to give your Commission jurisdiction to compel a utility under the circumstances existing in the case submitted to me upon its own initiative or complaint but that said power exists in the council of the municipalities of the State as provided in Section 53 of said Act, and that it must first be exercised by the council, and your Commission can only obtain jurisdiction by reviewing the requirements and orders of council as provided in Sections 46 and 48 of said Act under authority of Section 53 thereof.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TELEPHONE COMPANIES—POWER OF UTILITIES COMMISSION TO COMPEL CONNECTIONS—BUTLER AND HAMILTON COUNTIES.

It is intended by Section 614-63 G. C., that the Utilities Commission shall be empowered to compel through telephone communication between different localities, or zones of operation of different companies when:

First. Two or more telephone companies have lines which already form a continuous line of communication.

Second. When the lines of said companies could be made continuous by suitable connections or joint use of equipment.

Third. When such companies could transfer messages at a common point.

All three conditions, however, unless public necessity requires otherwise, are subject to the qualifications that such communication cannot be enforced where it is already made by one line alone or where such communication is already otherwise provided for.

Since, therefore, the Cincinnati and Suburban Bell Telephone Company already connect Hamilton and Butler counties by virtue of its own system it cannot be compelled to make connection with the Hamilton Home Telephone Company which runs parallel thereto and is universally located in only one of said counties.

July 24, 1912.

Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am transmitting you herewith opinion in regard to the law covering the issues between the Hamilton Home Telephone Company and the Cincinnati & Suburban Bell Telephone Company. With your permission I would suggest that you make such entry as that the Home Telephone Company say, if it wishes, submit the statute to the court for interpretation without any prejudice as to the facts. The effect of my holdings as to the law would leave your Commission without jurisdiction to make the order, and I think the entry should be drawn accordingly. If you were to make an order disposing of the question of the application on its merits the Home Telephone Company might be unable to submit the matter to the court without prejudice, because your decision might be based on full consideration of all the facts in the case without reference to the interpretation of the statute. The court, of course, would not interfere with your discretion. It would perhaps be well for you before making the entry to hear from counsel for the Home Telephone Company as to the form of such entry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

July 24, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication dated June 29th, 1912, received, in which you inquire following statement of facts:

> "In Butler County there are two telephone systems radiating from the city of Hamilton; one known as the Cincinnati and Suburban Bell Telephone Company, (which is a Bell interest and a part of the system having headquarters in Cincinnati); the other the Hamilton Home Telephone Company, known as an independent interest. You > are probably aware of the fact that in the city of Cincinnati the "Bell" system is supreme; that municipality never having allowed the independent interests to effect an entrance. The city of Hamilton is practically covered by both systems. This is true largely as to the county, but not entirely. Some sections of the county are reached by one system and some by the other. It is fair to say, however, that at the hearing witnesses for the Bell company testified that they were willing to extend their lines to all parts of Butler county to accommodate any prospective patron in the county, but was strenuously denied by complainants who put on witnesses to show that they had applied for Bell service and were unable to get it and in some cases the nearest Bell phone was two (2) miles distance from their residence."

and request my legal opinion as to the meaning of this sentence:

> "Between different localities which cannot be reached by the lines of either company alone."

which appears in Section 66 of the Public Utilities Act—Section 614-63 of the General Code of Ohio, the Hamilton Telephone Company having filed its complaint aginst the Cincinnati and Suburban Bell Telephone and the American Telegraph and Telephone Companies, with your Commission whereby they seek to have your Commission make an order directing the defendant companies to establish on equitable terms a direct toll service between the Hamilton Home Telephone Company's subscribers in Hamilton, Ohio, and Butler county, and the defendants' subscribers in Cincinnati and its suburbs, so that a subscriber of the complainant company, over his own instrument in his own home, office or place of business, can call up any subscriber of the defendant companies in Cincinnati or its suburbs, or be called up by subscribers of the defendant companies in Cincinnati and suburbs, for the purpose of holding telephone conversations.

You seek my opinion upon the above question upon the facts stated herein and in view of the fact that the defendant companies contend that inasmuch as Cincinnati is reached from Hamilton by the lines of their companies, that the provisions of law intended by that sentence is satisfied, and that the word "either" means either defendants' line or complainant's line, and inasmuch as the complainant's line does not reach Cincinnati that said Section 614-63 of the General Code is not complied with and that under said section it is entitled to the right of connection at Hamilton with the Bell line for the purposes above stated, viz: "In order that patrons of the Hamilton Home Telephone Company may reach Cincinnati from their own homes."

The full text of the statute, upon the construction of which these cases turn, is as follows:

> "The Commission shall have the power upon complaint, in writing, by any person, or on its own initiative, by order, to require any two or more telephone companies whose lines or wires form a continuous line of communication, or could be made to do so by the construction and maintenance of suitable connections or the joint use of equipment, or the transfer of messages at common points, between different localities WHICH CANNOT BE COMMUNICATED WITH OR REACHED BY THE LINES OF EITHER COMPANY ALONE, where such service is not already established or provided for, unless > public necessity requires additional service, to establish and maintain through lines within the state between two or more such localities. The joint rate or charges for such service shall be just and reasonable, and the Commission shall have power to establish the same, and declare the portion thereof to which each company affected thereby shall be entitled and the manner in which the same shall be secured and paid. All necessary construction, maintenance and equipment in order to establish such service shall be constructed and maintained in such manner and under such rules, with such division of expense and labor as shall or may be required by the Commission." Section 614063 G. C.; Sec. 66, Act 102 O. L. 549.

The rule for construction of any statute was laid down by our supreme court, in the case of Slingluff vs. Weaver, 66 O. S. 621, as follows:

> "The intent of the lawmakers is to be sought first of all in the language employed, and if the words be free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly, clearly and distinctly, the sense of the lawmaking body, there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation. The question is not what did the General Assembly intend to enact, but what is the meaning of that which it did enact. That body should be held to mean what it has plainly expressed, and hence no room is left for construction."

The language of the statute above cited is very plain. It says that the Commission may act, either upon complaint filed or on its own initiative, where two or more telephone companies (1) have lines which already form a continuous line of communication, or (2) could be made continuous by the construction and maintenance of suitable connection, or the joint use of equipment, or (3) where such companies could transfer message at a common point, so as to require such companies to transmit calls on such lines already in a continuous line of connection, or to make the necessary connections and then transmit such calls, or transfer messages, between different localities. But all of the foregoing is subject to this qualification, that such orders can only be made for connection between different localities which cannot be communicated with or reached by the lines of either company alone, and where such service is not already established or provided for. But in the latter case, even though some company or companies already have through services between such localities, yet if public necessity requires additional service by the connecting up of more companies whose lines are or could be made continuous, the Commission could make the order.

It, therefore, appears that, to enable the Commission to act, it must first be established that neither one of the companies has lines which communicate with or reach both of the localities. Secondly, it must be shown that the two companies have lines which either form, or can be connected so as to form, a continuous line between the two localities; that is to say, when joined end to end, neither reaching the whole of the necessary distance. The whole context of the section shows that the Legislature did not intend this provision to apply when the lines paralleled. Thirdly. If there is already communication by direct single line or joined continuous lines of some company or companies, then there must be affirmative evidence that public necessity requires the linking up of two new companies, if such there be, whose lines are continuous when joined together, and neither of which reaches both localities by its own independent line.

The word "localities," as used in the act, may be construed by the Commission according to the circumstances of each case, so that no precise and unalterable physical limitations can be placed upon it. But from the context of the statute, it would appear that the Legislature intended it to mean a whole territory, or the zone of operation of any telephone company. In the cases under consideration, the complaint being in behalf of the Hamilton Home Telephone Company, it is apparent that the whole zone covered by the operations of that company is one "locality," as a whole, while the city of Cincinnati, as a whole, is the other, and not subsidiary parts of either.

Therefore, from a full and careful consideration of the facts stated in your communication, and a most thorough reading and consideration of the law and cases cited in the briefs furnished me by counsel for both complainant and the defendants, I am compelled to reach the legal conclusion that the Legislature has not authorized your commission to act where it appears that the defendant company already, without the aid of any other company, connects both localities, in this case, viz.: its own exchanges in Hamilton and Butler counties.

Under the rule of construction, above quoted, as laid down by our supreme court, and applying it to the section involved in the controversy submitted to me, under the plain language of said section I reach the above conclusion, believing the law in its present form is not sufficiently broad to cover a case such as presented by the complainant and only the Legislature can make the necessary change to cover such cases.

Very respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES DEFINED IN ACT—PERSONS OR CORPORATION NOT SUCH MAY CONTRACT REGARDLESS OF COMMISSION.

Public utilities are defined by Sections 3 and 4 of the Utilities Act. Firms, persons or corporations which do not come within said definition are not governed by the act and may therefore sell or lease to or contract with one another or with public utilities without regard to Section 63 of the act providing for the consent of the commission when public utilities so act with one another.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 31, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication dated July 10, 1912, received in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "May a utility property be sold or leased to an individual, firm or corporation not an existing utility without the necessity of securing the consent of the commission under the provisions of Section sixty-three (63) of the utility act?"

and in reply will say that Section 614-2 of the General Code, being Section three (3) of the utility act defiining the words and phases used in the act, in all of said sub-divisions of said section, defines person or persons, firm or firms, co-partnerships or voluntary associations, joint stock associations, company or corporation, wherever organized or incorporated as being public utilities "when engaged in the respective businesses" therein specified.

Section 614-2*a* of the General Code of Ohio being Section four (4) of the utility act defines the term "public utility" as used in said act as follows:

> "Shall mean and include every corporation, company, co-partnership, person or association, their leases, trustees or receivers, defined in the next preceding section, etc."

It is plain from the proper interpretation of the above sections of the utility act that only those utilities as therein defined, when engaged in business (a public employment) are subject to the provisions of the whole act.

Section sixty-three (63) of the utility act, Section 614-60 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

> "With the consent and approval of the commission, but not otherwise:
> "(a) Any two or more public utilities furnishing a like service or product and doing business in the same municipality or locality within this state, or any two or more public utilities whose lines intersect or parallel each other within this state, may enter into contracts with each other that will enable such public utilities to operate their lines or plants in connection with each other.
> "(b) Any public utility may purchase or lease the property, plant or business of any other public utilitiy.
> "(c) Any such public utility may sell or lease its property or business to any such other public utility.
> "(d) Any such public utility may purchase the stock of any other such public utility."

As above stated any person, firm or corporation not engaged in the business as specified in Section 614-2 of the General Code is not a public utility and therefore not subject to the provisions of said act.

Under the facts stated in your communication there can be no question that such public utility may be sold or leased to any individual, firm or corporation not an existing utility without the consent of the commission as provided in Section sixty-three (63) of the act.

The intention of the said section was to give supervision to the commission over public utilities engaged in business and thereby protect the public from any injustice by two or more public utilities contracting, leasing, purchasing or owning stock of the other unless consent first had from the commission.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that your commission has no jurisdiction over any "public utility as defined in the act not actually engaged in business as above indicated and that any public utility has the legal right to do any of the things enumerated in Section sixty-three (63) of the act with any individual, firm or corpoartion not an existing public utility as heretofore defined, without the consent of your commission first had as in said section provided.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES—COMPANY SUPPLYING GAS TO OTHER COMPANY FOR DISTRIBUTION NOT SUBJECT TO PUBLIC UTILITIES ACT.

A company organized to drill gas wells on leased preperty and to furnish gas as rental to the company from whom the land is leased ,and to sell any surplus to the East Ohio Gas Companies and other similar companies for distribution, does not supply gas to the consumer and is therefore not a "public utility" within the meaning of the Public Utilities Act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 21, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 12, 1912, which is as follows:

> "The commission has been asked to indicate whether a company of the following description must apply to it for authority to issue its stock and otherwise acknowledge its jurisdiction:
> "'We are about to organize a small company to drill gas wells on leased property and to furnish gas, if obtainable, to the company from which the property is leased and to sell any surplus to the East Ohio Gas Company or other similar company for distribution. Our company will not distribute or sell to consumers. The gas furnished the owner of the property will be accepted as rental for its use and only the surplus will be sold as above indicated.'
> "The commission will be pleased to have your opinion as to whether a company organized for such purposes should be classified as a public utility subject to the provisions of the statutes regulating public utilities."

In determining whether this proposed company is a "public utility" within the meaning of the law, we must examine the act on the subject as found in the statutes of Ohio relating to the Public Service Commission, Title III, Division II, Chapter 1, being Sections 487 to 614-84 inclusive, General Code.

Section 614-2*a* General Code in defining a public utility says:

> "The term 'public utility' as used in this act, shall mean and include every corporation, company, co-partnership, person or association, their lessees, trustees or receivers, defined in the next preceding section, etc."

"The next preceding Section" 614-2, General Code, in defining what constitutes the various kinds of "public utilities," speaking on the subject of natural gas, says:

> "When engaged in the business of supplying natural gas for lighting, heating or power purposes to consumers within this state, is a natural gas company."

Clearly the company, as described in your letter, does not fall within this definition. It expressly says the company "will not distribute or sell to consumers."

The arrangement of paying its rental in gas, to the lessor, is not furnishing or supplying "consumers," within the meaning of the act. Neither can it be said that the selling of the remainder of its product in bulk to the gas company, is a sale or wurnishing to "consumers."

Both of these transactions are based upon private contracts, upon which the parties have agreed; and in neither of them has the public any interest. Your board could not control or supervise the terms of these contracts any more than in the bargain and sale of other commodities between private individuals. To constitute a natural gas company a "public utility," it must be engaged in selling or furnishing such gas to consumers generally, or doing such a business in that line as would compel it to furnish gas to such of the public as may lawfully demand service at its hands.

Of course, if this company in the future should change its course of business, and engage in selling or supplying gas to consumers, it would become a public utility, and as such, come within your jurisdiction.

Under the facts as set forth in your letter the company is not a "public utility," and therefore your board has no authority over it.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION—CORPORATION ORGANIZED TO FURNISH CARS TO RAILROAD COMPANIES FOR PURPOSE OF EXPERIMENTING WITH RAILWAY EQUIPMENT IS SUBJECT TO THE COMMISSION.

Under Section 501 General Code, the term "railroad" as employed in the chapter relating to public utilities, includes corporations or companies which "own, operate, manage or control any cars or other equipments" used on a railroad, and under Sections 614-2*a and* 614-3, General Code, the public utilities commission has power, jurisdiction and supervision over railroads operated for a profit.

A corporation, therefore, which is organized for the purpose "of acquiring, leasing, owning and furnishing cars to be used over railway lines not owned, leased or operated by it; and especially for the purpose of experimenting with and exhibiting railway equipments attached to such cars" is a railroad company operated for profits and is, therefore, subject to the supervision and control of the public utilities commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1912.

The Public Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I hereby acknowledge yours of August 15, 1912, which is as follows:

> "The commission has before it an inquiry as to whether the company described is subject to the provisions of the so-called Public Service Commission Act. I quote the following description of the purposes of the corporation:
> "'This company is organized with a capital of $1,000.00. It expects to acquire about a dozen cars to which special railroad equipment is to be attached and which cars it then expects to furnish from time to time to railroads that may be willing to use the same for the pur- pose of testing the efficiency of the equipment. The cars may be so furnished either for a monthly consideration or without any consideration, the real purpose being to exhibit and have subjected to practical use special equipment of various kinds attached to such cars.

"I understand that this would render the company subject to the provisions of your commission. The cars which will be acquired probably would represent a value of from $10,000.00 to $15,000.00, but it is not intended to issue stock beyond the amount authorized by the charter. to-wits $1,000.00.'

"The commission will greatly appreciate your early advice as to whether, in your opinion, such car company is a railroad or utility within the meaning of the statute. Inasmuch as the company desires to issue its stock, and the method by which this is to be done depends wholly upon your opinion, the commission asks your prompt consideration and determination of the matter."

I have examined the articles of incorporation of the company above referred to, as recorded in the office of the Secretary of State. The record shows the name of the corporation to be "The Cleveland Railway Equipment Company," organized August 7, 1912. The purpose for which it was formed, as shown by said record, is: "Acquiring, leasing, owning and furnishing cars to be used over railway lines not owned, leased or operated by it; and especially for the purpose of experimenting with and exhibiting railway equipments attached to such cars."

The question is whether this company is a "railroad" or "utility," must be determined from the facts in the case, together with the statutes governing public utilities, and the law on that subject generally.

Section 501, General Code, in defining the term railroad, reads in part as follows:

"The term 'railroad' as used in this chapter shall include all corporations, companies, etc., * * * which owns, operates, manages or controls a railroad or part thereof as a common carrier in this state, or which owns, operates, manages or controls any cars or other equipments used thereon * * *."

Section 502, General Code, provides that this chapter (formerly Railroad Commission. now Public Service Commission), shall apply to all railroad companies, equipment companies, etc.

Section 614-2, General Code, defines and describes various public utilities, and in the last paragraph thereof again says that the term "railroad," when used in this act, includes "equipment companies."

Section 614-2*a* says:

"The term 'public utility' as used in this act, shall mean and include every corporation, company, co-partnership, etc., * * * defined in the next preceding section, except such public utilities as operate their utilities not for profit, etc."

Section 614-3, gives your commission power, jurisdiction and supervision, with authority to regulate "railroads" and "public utilities."

The description of the purposes of this corporation, as quoted in the beginning of this opinion, was written by an officer of the company; and it is admitted, practically, by said company, that the facts as detailed therein, "would render the company subject to the provisions of the commission."

The company says it will acquire about a dozen cars, worth from $10,000.00 to $15,000.00; that it will equip them with special railroad equipment, and furnish them for consideration in some instances, to railroads. The company, then, is one for profit, although its profits and its business may at the first be small. Yet, it is apparent that the ultimate object of this company is to introduce and sell or lease, these equipments to all railroads which may desire them, at a profit. It owns its own cars and equipments, and its business is, through their use, to sell or lease to railroads generally, these inventions.

The company has properly designated itself as a "Railway Equipment Company," and it is wholly immaterial whether it does much or little business; whether it makes any profit at all; it is engaged in the equipment business, and is an equipment company, thus falling within the express language of the statutes concerning "railroads" and "utilities." It is immaterial whether many or few railroads use these cars and appliances. It is the character of the business that gives the company its status in law. I am therefore, of the opinion that this company is a railroad or utility, within the meaning of the statue, and should be classed as a public utility. It is therefore, under your jurisdiction as such, and subject to all the provisions of law governing utilities in this state.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION—TELEPHONE COMPANIES—CERTIFICATE OF PUBLIC NECESSITY AND CONVENIENCE FROM COMMISSION BEFORE ONE COMPANY MAY ENTER TERRITORY OCCUPIED BY ANOTHER—VESTED RIGHTS—CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

Section 54 of the Public Service Commission Act, (providing that no telephone company shall exercise any permit, license or right, theretofore granted but not exercised, to operate a telephone system in any municipality or locality where there is in operation a telephone company giving adequate service, unless such telephone company first secure from the commission a certificate after public hearing that the exercises of such license, permit or right is proper and necessary for the public convenience) does not interfere with vested rights and is not unconstitutional.

A company which, prior to the passage of this act, therefore has not exercised the right granted by its charter to operate a telephone in a locality where another company is giving adequate service, must be required to obtain said certificate from the commission.

Whether or not the offering of a lower rate for service by the company desiring to enter the locality is sufficient, to justify a certificate from the commission to the effect that the service is a public necessity or convenience is a question of fact depending upon accompanying conditions and circumstances.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of September 16, 1912, the important part of which is as follows:

> "I am handing you herewith briefs of complainant and defendant in the application of The Farmers Telephone Company, of Sidney, Ohio, to extend its lines under Section 54:

"The precise question that the commission desires an opinion from you upon, is whether or not Section 54 of the Utility Act applies when a telephone company was in existence and operating prior to July 1, 1911, and the extensions it proposes to make are within the territory prescribed in the articles of incorporation. It would perhaps be well to give you a brief resume of the history of the present case: The Sidney Telephone Company brought before the commission a complaint, alleging that the Farmers Telephone Company, of Sidney, Ohio, were invading territory occupied by the complainant ,and asking an order from the commission requiring defendent to cease and desist from such extension. When the case came up for hearing The Farmers Telephone Company appeared by counsel to oppose the prayer of the complainant. The commission took the ground that the relief of the complainant was to be obtained by invoking the authority of a court; that if the defendent telephone company were actually invading the territory of the complainant company or threatening to do so in violation of Section 54; that is to say, without having obtained the necessary permit in compliance with Section 54, that the proper procedure of the complainant company was to apply to a court of competent jurisdiction for a writ of injunction. The counsel of the defendent company being present, asked if the commission held that it were necessary for it, before proceeding, to secure from the commission a certificate of public necessity and convenience as contemplated by Section 54. The commission stated that such at that time was their opinion, this having been the holding of Judge Brown in the case of the Clinton Telephone Company against the New Burlington Telephone Company.

"Then and there the defendant counsel stated to the commission that they would do no more constructing until they had made application under Section 54 to the commission, and the commission had acted thereon. Application was duly made by The Farmers Telephone Company and resisted by The Sidney Telephone Company. At the hearing both sides put on evidence. The questions of fact do not, I apprehend, concern you at the present time.

"The commission asked them both to discuss fully whether or not Section 54 actually applied. in view of the fact that The Farmers Telephone Company had been incorporated and in actual operation long before the Utility Act was thought of, and had in fact extended its lines in competition with The Sidney Telephone Company over a large part of Shelby County prior to July 1, 1911. We further asked the counsel to discuss in their briefs this question:

"Assuming that a telephone utility is furnishing adequate service and at a rate that is justified by the investment and operating expenses, but that another utility offers to furnish services as good and at lower rates, and is in position to do so. Would that be considered a public necessity and convenience sufficient to justify permission to the second company to operate in the territory?

"Attached to the defendant's brief you will find a decision, (apparently recent) of Judge Broderick of the Logan Common Pleas Court in the case of the United Telephone Company vs. the Logan County Farmers Telephone Company, in which the exact question upon which you are asked to give an opinion is decided by him. It seems that the second defense of the Logan County Farmers Telephone > Company was that inasmuch as it has been in operation prior to the enactment of the Utility Law, it were not necessary for it to secure a permit from the Public Service Commission. This defense was demurred to by complainant and demurer sustained. Judge Brown in the case of the Clinton Telephone Company against the New Burlington Telephone Company enunciates practically the same doctrine. Nevertheless, the commission is not entirely satisfied that it has, under Section 54, jurisdiction as to telephone utilities actually incorporated and in operation prior to the enactment of the Utility Law."

You then ask my opinion upon the above questions. Accompanying your request and the briefs of counsel, I have before me the application of the Farmers Telephone Company to exercise franchises within the corporation of Anna, Shelby County, also in that part of the city of Sidney, Shelby County, Ohio not now occupied by it; and also in the rural districts of said Shelby County, Ohio. In that application of the Farmers Telephone Company it says:

> "Your applicant at this time has not entered the village of Anna with its telephone system, and no work in the construction thereof has been done, for the reason that the construction force has been employed elsewhere.
> "Your applicant further says that there is a vast rural territory contiguous to said village of Anna, Ohio and connected with said village for business purposes, that had no telephone communication with said village whatever. Your applicant desires to construct a central in said village of Anna with direct and free service with its central at Sidney, Ohio, and to construct a complete telephone system within the village of Anna, Ohio with lines running out upon the public roads, so as to reach the entire community that is connected with said village in a business way."

The application then sets forth the routes by which it expects to enter the village of Anna. The application also recites that its proposed extensions are necessary for the accommodation of those who are unserved in the proper manner with telephone connections. It further recites that said company desires to continue its construction in accordance with its original plan as set forth in the charter.

The complainant further alleges that it was incorporated on the 16th day of April, 1910 and that it has construed various lines of service in territory covered by its charter.

The answer of the Sidney Telephone Company sets forth that for many years prior to the first day of July 1911, it was the owner of and operating a telephone plant and system in the city of Sidney and in the village of Anna, and in other localities, all in Shelby county, and was at all times, and has been and now is ready, able and willing, to furnish full and adequate service to all applicants in said city, in said village and said localities as required by law.

It further says, "that the Farmers Telephone Company had not on the first day of July, A. D. 1911 actually exercised the right of permit to own or operate a plant for the furnishing of telephone service in the city of Sidney nor in the village of Anna, nor in the other localities mentioned in the application herein."

It further says, "that on the first day of July, A. D. 1911 it was not necessary for the public conveniences that such permit or right should be exercised, or that said Farmers Telephone Company should own or operate a plant for the furnishing of telephone service in said city, nor in said village, nor in the localities mentioned in said application; and it is not now, and never has been necessary for the public convenience, that an additional telephone plant should be constructed in said city nor in said village, nor in any of the localities mentioned in said application."

It further says, "that said applicant does not file said application on any ground of public necessity or convenience, nor does it aver in said application, that the public necessity or convenience requires the exercising by it of any permit or right to own or operate a telephone plant or system in said city, nor in said village nor in the localities mentioned in the petition."

The Sidney Telephone Company says, "that if the applicant is permitted to construct, own and operate its telephone lines and exchanges, as prayed for in its application, the same will be an invasion of its territory and cause great and irreparable damage to its rights and property, and will be contrary to the statutes of Ohio, enacted for the protection of telephone companies in operation and furnishing adequate service on and after July first A. D. 1911."

The various claims of these two companies, as to whether or not any ground of public necessity or convenience exists for the extension of the lines of the Farmers Telephone Company of Sidney, are questions of fact for you to determine, and it is not necessary to answer these questions. I will confine myself to the questions of law submitted by you, and will take them up in their order.

First: Section 54 of the Public Service act provides as follows:

> "No telephone company shall exercise any permit, right, license or franchise that may have been heretofore granted but not actually exercised or that may hereafter be granted to own or operate a plant for the furnishing of any telephone service, thereunder in any municipality or locality, where there is in operation a telephone company furnishing adequate service unless such telephone company first secures from the commission a certificate after public hearing of all parties interested that the exercising of such license, permit, right or franchise is proper and necessary for the public convenience."

I am of the opinion that Section 54 above quoted applies to all telephone companies whether incorporated before July 1st, 1911 or since, providing said telephone companies had not exercised any permit, right, license or franchise within the territory in dispute. In other words, a company organized prior to said date, which had taken up and occupied a portion of the territory covered by its charter, but had not exercised jurisdiction or control over the particular territory in dispute, comes within the provisions of Section 54, and is under the control of the Public Service Commission as to any further extensions or occupancy of disputed territory. The mere fact that the charter granted to the Farmers Telephone Company of Sidney may have covered the territory now in dispute, is not effective to give it the right to proceed with the installation of telephones in such parts of such territory as were not actually developed or occupied by it prior to July 1st, 1911. All of such unoccupied territory, on the part of the complaining company, is subject, so far as the permitting of a competing company to come into the same, to the rules of the commission, under Section 54; for the statute itself, (Section 54), says that no company shall exercise any permit, right, etc., that may have been heretofore granted but not actually exercised. The blanket charter, with a right to exercise franchise, license, etc., if not actually put into execution, will not protect the complaining company.

The important question raised by the complainant herein is, that Section 54, above quoted, is unconsitutional, in that it interferes with vested rights, and that said section undertakes to grant legislative powers to the commission. This is the important question in this case. The authorities upon this question are very few. The supreme court of Ohio has not, to my knowledge, passed upon it, neither has the supreme court of any other state directly disposed of this question; but I find two decisions of the courts of common pleas of this state, which seem to have disposed of the matter. The first is a decision by Judge Brown, unreported. The case is that of the Clinton Telephone Co. vs. The New Burlington Telephone Co., a type-written copy of which I have before me, as filed in your office.

This was a suit in the common pleas court by the first named company, against the latter. The plaintiff in that case recites that,

> "It is a corporation under the laws of Ohio for the purpose of owning and operating a telephone plant in Clinton county, its principal office being at Wilmington; that it was chartered in 1899 and has a complete telephone system in said county; that the defendant is a similar corporation and has a small plant in and near the unincorporated settlement of New Burlington. The plaintiff states that it has never extended its lines nor attempted to operate its system except in the immediate vicinity of New Burlington, but that the plaintiff has fully covered the territory over which the defendant seeks to extend its lines and is able, willing and ready to give adequate service to all persons in said localities. It states the passage by the Legislature of the Public Utilities Act of May 31, 1911, creating a Public Service Commission and numbered Section 54 of Vol. 102 O. L. p. 564.
> "It claims that the true intent of this law was to prevent a multiplicity of telephone systems, and to confine this service to one well regulated company, and that the defendant without applying to or obtaining permission from the Public Service Commission, is extending its lines and causing infringement into plaintiff's territory as alleged; that this will demonstrate the value of plaintiff's property causing irreparable injury for which it has no remedy at law.
> "The defendant in its answer admits the general averments as to both parties being telephone systems, and that it has extended its lines from time to time since 1900 and at the time of the granting of the temporary restraining order herein was extending one of its lines to Kingman and a cross line from Oakland towards Harveysburg to be operated under its plant at New Burlington; that it has demands from numerous persons in that territory for its service. It admits the enactment of the Public Utilities Act and the enactment of Section 54, but further says that its rights under its charter and its plant were established in 1909 before said act became regulative and that its proposed extensions over the New Burlington plant are not within the purview of that statute and if said Section 54 be so construed it is contrary to the Constitution of Ohio and void."

The above is all quoted from the opinion of Judge Brown. Judge Brown further says:

> "We are plowing new ground in Ohio in respect to public utilities. There are no decisions upon the subject in any state. Wisconsin is the leading authority upon these questions and its statute has been referred to and submitted by counsel. By carefully considering the purposes of these acts, we readily see that the intention of the Legislature was to avoid multiplicity of telephones as well as to give good service at reasonable rates to the people of the state. There is surely nothing in the enactment and particularly Section 54 which is unconstitutional as against the inherent rights of the defendant, nor was this in fact strongly insisted upon by defendant's counsel. The principal contention of defendant's counsel was that the plant having been established in New Burlington prior to its enactment, has full authority of law to extend its lines within the territory granted by its charter, without interference by the Public Service Commission, created by the act.

"There is no doubt in my mind that where two companies had prior to this enactment extended its lines throughout the same territory, but this could and would not be effective in compelling either company to abandon such territory.

"It is admitted by defendant's counsel that if a new plant would construct for instance in Wilmington, it would be in violation of Section 54, but that the plant having been heretofore established and in continuous operation over New Burlington, Section 54 does not apply.

"* * * The whole intention of the act and the proper interpretation of Section 54, seems without doubt in my mind, to indicate that the Public Service Commission has full authority under the statute in regulating any company which has not actually exercised its permits, rights, licenses or franchises, by actual extension into the territory authorized by its charter. I am of the opinion that the answer does not state a good defense in this respect and that the averments of the petition cover the facts which would require an investigation and authority of the Public Service Commission, and that before the defendant could exercise its franchise in territory already occupied by another telephone company, that it should comply with Section 54, by securing from the Public Service Commission a certificate that the exercise of its license, right, permit or franchise is proper and necessary for the public convenience before it extends its lines. This can readily be done and after a full hearing, if any injustice is being done, the Public Service Commission under this act can readily remedy the same. It is therefore my duty under this view of the law, which is very clear to me, to sustain the demurrer to the answer which is accordingly done."

Judge Broderick of the common pleas court of Logan county, in the case of The United Telephone Co. v. The Logan County Farmers' Telephone Co., decides the same proposition. This case is not reported in any law book but I have before me a complete typewritten copy of his decision as filed with your Commission. Judge Broderick goes fully into the proposition. This was also a decision on a demurrer filed to the second defense of the Logan County Farmers' Telephone Company which sets up substantially the same propositions as are pled in the answer to which Judge Brown in the above case sustained a demurrer.

In this latter case the defendant was incorporated prior to the enactment of the Public Utilities Act, including Section 54, supra. In this latter case the defendant company was seeking to extend its lines into territory covered by its charter, in which they had exercised no rights nor had done any construction, or established any line of telephones, said company claiming it had power to do so inasmuch as it was incorporated prior to the passage of this act, and had to a certain extent exercised jurisdiction over part of the territory. Judge Broderick decides as Judge Brown did, that as to unoccupied territory on the part of the defendant which territory was actually occupied by the plaintiff, there was no right on the part of the defendant company to make new extensions after the passage of the act, without obtaining permission from the Commission.

These two decisions being squarely in line with the questions submitted by you, ought to be respected unless authorities can be cited to the contrary. I find no decisions to the contrary. It is stated that Section 54 interferes with vested rights; but it must be remembered that public utilities, such as telephone companies, are creatures of the statute; their powers are all enumerated in the statutes and prior to the enactment of the Public Utilities Act, they were governed by the law as it then existed, but having in view the progress of other states in the control of public utilities, the statute of 1911 was enacted, including Section 54 above cited. This was for the purpose of giving the Commission power to have exclusive control of public utilities and prevent duplicate companies from invading territory already occupied, unless a public necessity existed for the same, which question is exclusively under the control and supervision of your Commission.

Your other question is whether when a telephone utility is furnishing adequate service, and at a rate that is justified by the investment and operating expenses, and another company offers to furnish service as good and at lower rates, would be considered a public necessity and convenience sufficient to justify permission to the second company to operate in the territory.

The question of the right to enter an already occupied territory because of an offer to furnish service at a lower rate is one of fact and must be considered and finally determined as to whether it is a public necessity, and whether adequate service is being rendered by the company already having jurisdiction over the territory. The matter of furnishing service at lower rates does not per se mean a public necessity, and this matter is a question of fact to be determined by you. Your Commission is not authorized to permit a competing company to occupy territory already occupied simply because it will do so at lower rates of service. If the occupying company is furnishing satisfactory service, and at satisfactory rates as found by the Commission, it may not be interfered with by a competing company simply because it offers to furnish the same service at lower rates.

Both Judges Brown and Broderick have held that Section 54 above quoted, is not unconstitutional under such circumstances as set forth in the decisions rendered by them.

I am of the opinion that the granting of a charter or franchise by the state to an incorporated company protects the company as to all acts performed under the charter, but as to all acts not performed the right still exists in the state to enact new laws regulating such companies. As an illustration, as to the lines constructed and plants or systems established by the competing company under existing laws at the time of the granting of the charter, the company is fully protected by its charter; but as to all unexecuted matters by the company at the time of the passage of the act changing or amending the laws, a new enactment covering the same companies must be governed by such later legislation.

The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Pearsall v. Great Northern R. R. Co. 161 U. S. 680 (40 L Ed. 838) in the first and second syllabi holds:

> "1. A grant of power to a corporation is to be strictly construed against it, and nothing will be presumed to pass by the grant unless it be expressed in clear and unumbiguous language.
> "2. Statutes which operate only to regulate the manner in which the franchises of a corporation are to be exercised, and which do not interfere substantially with the enjoyment of the main object of the grant made by its charter, do not impair the contract contained therein."

Mr. Justice Brown in the same case in concluding his opinion says:

> "In conclusion we hold that where by a railway charter a general power is given to consolidate with, purchase, lease, or acquire the stock of other roads, which has remained unexecuted, it is within the competency of the Legislature to declare, by subsequent acts, that this power shall not extend to the purchase, lease, or consolidation with parallel or competing lines."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that in this case, as affecting the rights of the Farmers' Telephone Company the Public Utilities Act is not retroactive in its effect, and that it does not impair the obligation of contracts and is, therefore, consitutional.

After holding as I do that the act is constitutional, including Section 54, there remains but one question for you to determine in the case submitted to you, and that is, whether the proposed extensions of the Farmers' Telephone Company lines are proper and necessary for the public convenience on account of inadequate service; and whether a public necessity for such extension exists. If none such does exist, then there is no right for the Farmers' Telephone Company to extend its lines into territory not previously occupied or taken possession of by it, prior to the enactment of the Public Utilities law, without the consent of the Commission, and the said company must proceed under Section 54 for its proposed authority to extend.

I am not undertaking to pass upon any of the questions of necessity or public requirement, or inadequate service; those are questions of fact for you to determine, when proper application is made, and are not questions of law at this time.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES—PURCHASE OF STOCK BY FOREIGN CORPORATIONS IN PUBLIC UTILITIES SO AS TO GAIN CONTROL OF LATTER NOT A TRANSFER OF FRANCHISE, PERMIT, LICENSE OR RIGHT TO OWN, MANAGE OR CONTROL.

The purchase of stock of Ohio Public Utility Corporations, from the stockholders thereof, by a foreign corporation to such extent as to enable the latter to gain control over the former, does not come within Section 76 of the Public Utilities Act, providing that no franchise, permit, license or right to own, operate or control any public utility therein enumerated shall be granted or transferred to any corporation not duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio.

December 20, 1912.

The Public Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am replying to yours of September 20, 1912, which is as follows:

> "I attach herewith a copy of letter received yesterday from John R. Frew, attorney-at-law, Coshocton, Ohio, and would ask if the statement of fact made by him with reference to the corporate relations of The Coshocton Light and Heating Company constitute a violation of Section 76 of the Utility Law?"

The copy of Mr. Frew's letter, containing the statement of facts upon which you ask an opinion, so far as it is important herein, is as follows:

> "In compliance with the request of your chairman to put in writing information leading to my belief that The United Service Company of Scranton, Pa., is violating Section 76 of the Utility Act, I take pleasure in submitting the following account of what I know in regard to the operation of The United Service Company in Ohio and other states.
> "The United Service Company is not incorporated under the laws of the State of Ohio. It seems to have been formed by eastern capital for the purpose of obtaining control of, and operating a large number of public utilities in this and other states. Its method of obtaining control seems to be to purchase directly a sufficient amount of the stock of the coveted utility to obain control of it, or to purchase such stock indirectly and become the trustee thereof, thus operating and managing the utility for the benefit of some more or less fictitious third person. The utilities controlled by The United Service Company are operated as independent concerns by a system similar to that employed by The Bell Telephone Company. A representative of the company is installed as the local manager of each utility controlled by it and district managers oversee the work of the local managers.
> "The property of The Coshocton Light and Heating Company has passed under the management and control of The United Service Company within the last year in the manner mentioned above. The property of a utility engaged in a similar business at New Philadelphia, Ohio, has fared likewise, and according to the statements of employees of The United States Service Company many other electric plants in our state have recently been bought up by it, and are now being controlled and managed by it."

In the first place, the letter is indefinite in its statements concerning the manner in which the foreign company acquired stock in, or control of the Coshocton company. No positive statement is anywhere made touching this vital question. The alleged acts complained of are stated as possibly occurring in one of two ways—the writer saying:

> "Its method of obtaining control seems to be to purchase directly a sufficient amount of the stock of the coveted utility to obtain control of it, or to purchase such stock indirectly and become the trustees thereof, thus operating and managing the utility for the benefit of some more or less fictitious third person."

These allegations are too indefinite and form no certain basis upon which to act. The writer further says, that the foreign corporation operates similarly to The Bell Telephone Company, and installs local managers of utilities controlled by it, and that the Coshocton company passed under the control of the foreign company "in the manner mentioned above." This does not make the matter any more definite, and leaves the whole situation in the dark.

The last paragraph quoted from the letter, as to statements of employes of the foreign corporation, is likewise too uncertain in its allegations.

Section 76, referred to, reads as follows:

> "No franchise, permit, license or right to own, operate, manage, or control any public utility, herein defined as an electric light company, gas company, water works company or heating and cooling company, shall be hereafter granted or transferred to any corporation not duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio."

This section is not very difficult to construe when carefully read. There is nothing in this section which directly or indirectly prevents any one who owns or holds stock in the kinds of utilities named therein, from selling, transferring or making over to any other person or corporation the whole or any part of the stock so owned and held by him. So far as this section is concerned, as it now reads, any stockholder in the Coshocton company had, and now has, the right to sell and transfer his stock to any person, firm or corporation, either domestic or foreign; and if by means of such purchase of stock, a foreign corporation acquired control of the Coshocton Company, there is no violation of this section, or any Ohio law.

The right of a stockholder to sell his stock to any one he may choose is a constitutional and legal right, the same as applies to other property. Corporations, however, may provide by-laws requiring a stockholder to first offer it to the corporation, or to the managing board; but the right to sell the stock at the best price he can obtain is inalienable to any owner thereof.

The most that can be said of the letter quoted is, that it possibly shows that the foreign corporation became directly or indirectly the owner of a controlling interest of the Coshocton company's stock. But it nowhere appears that the foreign company has acquired by transfer or otherwise the "franchise, permit, license or right to own, operate, manage or control" of the Coshocton company as a corporation. These words, and this whole section, refer to the corporation itself—the statutory creature under Ohio laws—not to stock therein held or owned by anyone.

The section cited seeks to prevent the granting to a foreign corporation of the franchise, permit, license, etc., giving corporate powers to the class of utilities therein mentioned; and to also prevent the transfer of these corporate powers and privileges in such utilities to foreign corporation by the domestic corporations to which they were originally granted. The Coshocton company is to all effects and purposes still an Ohio corporation, with all its powers, franchises, etc., intact; but the majority of the stock may be owned by outside parties and controlled by the foreign corporation.

Under this state of facts there is no violation of Section 76, and there can be no relief until the Legislature enlarges the provisions of this section to cover such cases as contemplated in the communication.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SAVINGS BANK—POWERS OF, TO LOAN ON A MORTGAGE OF A LEASEHOLD ESTATE HAVING NO CLAUSE OF RENEWAL THEREIN—"REAL ESTATE" DEFINED.

Under paragraph F. of Section 9758, General Code, as a savings bank cannot legally invest its funds in a mortgage on leasehold estate for any term of years, which does not contain a clause for the renewal thereof forever, and class such as a mortgage on real estate.

A mortgage on a leasehold estate can be taken by a savings bank, when properly assigned, as collateral security for a loan, under Par. C. of Section 9765; or if such mortgage on a leasehold estate secures bonds issued by a corporation, a savings bank may invest its capital, surplus and deposits in and buy and sell such bonds under paragraph "B" of Section 9765, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 19, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of September 6, 1911, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. Can a savings bank legally invest its funds in a mortgage on a leasehold estate which terminates it 25, 50 or 99 years, without any clause providing for a renewal thereof?

"2. If your answer to the first question is yes, then I desire to know how such an investment shall be classified by the bank; that is, is it a real estate loan, a commercial loan, or a loan on collateral?

"3. If your answer to the second question is, as a real estate loan, then I desire to know how the lessors first lien for rent should be regarded?"

Section 9765 of the General Code specifies the manner in which the funds of a savings bank shall be invested, and is as follows:

"A savings bank may invest the residue of its funds in, or loan on, discount, buy, sell or assign promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange and other evidences of debt and also invest its capital, surplus and deposits in, and buy and sell the following:

"a. The securities mentioned in Section ninety-seven hundred and fifty-eight, subject to the limitations and restrictions therein contained, except that savings banks may loan not more than seventy-five per cent. of the amount of the paid-in capital, surplus and deposits on notes secured by mortgage on real estate. But all loans made upon personal security shall be upon notes with two or more signers or one or more indorsers, payable and to be paid at a time not exceeding six months from the date thereof. In the aggregate, not exceeding thirty-five per cent. of the capital, surplus and deposits of a savings bank shall be so invested.

"b. Stocks, which have paid dividends for five consecutive years next prior to the investment, bonds and promissory notes of corporations, when this is authorized by an affirmative vote of a majority of the board of directors or by the executive committee of such savings bank. No purchase or investment shall be made in the stock of any other corporation organized or doing business under the provisions of this chapter. The superintendent of banks may order any such securities which he deems undesirable to be sold within six months.

"c. Promissory notes of individuals, firms or corporations, when secured by a sufficient pledge of collateral approved by the directors, subject to the provisions of Sections ninety-seven hundred and fifty-four and ninety-seven hundred and fifty-five."

Under paragraph "a" of said section it will be noted that the first class of securities in which said funds may be invested are those mentioned in Section 9758. This section as amended and now found in 102 O. L., 173, is as follows:

"Subject to the provisions of the preceding section commercial banks may invest their capital, surplus and deposits in, or loan them upon:

"a. Personal or collateral securities.

"b. Bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of the United States, or those for which the faith of the United States is pledged to provide payment of the interest and principal, including bonds of the District of Columbia; also in bonds or other interest-bearing obligations of any foreign government.

"c. Bonds of interest-bearing obligations of this or any other state of the United States.

"d. The legally issued bonds or interest-bearing obligations of any city, village, county, township, school district or other district, or political subdivision of this or any other state or territory of the United States and of Canada.

"e. Mortgage bonds or collateral trust bonds of any regularly incorporated company, which has paid, for at least four years, dividends at the rate of at least four per cent. on their capital stock. Such loan shall not exceed eighty per cent. of the market or actual value of such bonds, the purchase of which first has been authorized by the directors. All such securities having a fixed maturity shall be charged and entered upon the books of the bank at their cost to the bank, or at par, when a premium is paid, and the superintendent of banks shall have the power to require any security to be charged down to such sum as in his judgment represents its value. The superintendent of banks may order that any such securities which he deems undesirable be sold within six months.

"f. Notes secured by mortgage on real estate, where the amount loaned thereon inclusive of prior incumbrances does not exceed forty per cent. of the value of the real estate if unimproved, and if improved sixty per cent. of its value, including improvements, which shall be kept adequately insured. Not more than fifty per cent. of the amount of the paid in capital, surplus and deposits of such bank at any time shall be invested in such real estate securities."

The first question to be determined is whether a savings bank can loan its funds in notes secured by mortgage on a leasehold estate, and, therefore, whether a leasehold estate, say for twenty-five, fifty or ninety years, without a clause providing for the renewal thereof, can be classed as real estate, and a proper investment for savings banks under paragraph "f" of Section 9758. My opinion is that such a leasehold estate cannot be classed as real estate.

> "Real property or real estate has been defined as the interest which a man has in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, and also as such things as are permanent, fixed and immovable, and which cannot be carried out of their places, as lands and tenements * * *. As an estate or interest, real property or real estate empowers at least an estate of freehold, which is an estate of inheritance or for life, but it includes all freehold estates, whether corporeal or incorporeal, and whether in possession, reversion or remainder. It therefore includes hereditaments, whether corporeal or incorporeal, such as easements * * *. Properly speaking, real estate does not include any estate less than a freehold, such as leaseholds and estates for years, ordinarily termed 'chattels real' and classed as personal property.
> "Personal property includes chattels real as well as chattels personal. Chattels real are such as concern or savor of realty and include all estates and interests in real property less than estates of freehold, a freehold being an estate of inheritance or for life. And so * * * all lessor estate or interests, such as leaseholds and estates for years are personal property."

32 Cyc. Sec. 662 et sep.

> "At common law, a leasehold interest in lands, no matter for what term of years, was a chattel, and in the absence of statute to the contrary may be levied upon and sold as personal property."

17 Cyc., Sec. 153.

> "Leases between individuals for ninety-nine years may be sold in execution as chattels."

Leases of Bisbee vs. Hall, 3 O. 449.

In this case it was decided that a leasehold for ninety-nine years, renewable forever, was personal property and subject to levy and sale on execution.

In the case of Murdock et al. vs. Ratliff et al. 7 O. 119, it was decided that,

> "A lease of lands for ninety-nine years, renewable forever, is a chattel that, upon the owners decease, passes to his executor or administrator as any other chattel interest."

But afterwards, in the case of Loring vs. Melondy et al. 11 O. 355, it was decided by the court that permanent leasehold is not a chattel, but is realty and subject to all the laws and rules which attach to land. The court says on page 358:

> "By the act of June 20, 1821, Chase's L. 1185, it is declared that permanent leases, in cases of judgments and executions levied thereon, shall be considered as real estate, and shall be governed, in their sale, by the laws applicable to the sale of real estate then in existence, or such as may be enacted. By the act of March 5, 1839, Swan's Stat. 289, permanent leasehold estates, for the purposes of descent and distribution, and for sale on execution, are subject to the same laws that apply to estates in fee.
> "Since the passage of this last act, we may feel ourselves admonished by the uniform policy of our legislature by calling things by their real names, to harmonize our whole system of land jurisprudence. To withdraw permanent leasehold estates from their anomalous position, between chattel and realty, and by calling them what in truth they are, lands, we believe them from all doubt as to the principles and laws which shall control them, and assign to them a certain and fixed place in the law. A permanent leasehold estate is not a chattel, but is, in truth, land, carrying the fee. Such is the nature of the estate, and so it has been considered and treated in the legislation of our state. We therefore declare that permanent leasehold estates are lands subject to all the rules and laws which attach to land for all purposes, and that judgment liens attach to them as lands."

In the case of Bank vs Rosa, et al, 13 O. 335, it was held that,

"For all purposes connected with the laws regulating judgments, executions, sales, and descents, permanent leasehold estates are to be regarded as if they were freeholds and not chattels."

It is settled by these cases that permanent leasehold estates, that is, leaseholds which contain a clause providing for the renewal thereof forever, are to be treated as real estate. But your first question states that in the leaseholds to which you refer there is no such clause and, therefore, they must come under the rule which classes all leaseholds, excepting permanent leaseholds, as chattel property or chattels real. In the case of Acklin vs. Waltermier, 19 O. C. C. R. 372, this subject is fully treated, and as the case is somewhat lengthy, I shall only quote the following paragraph: After determining another question the court says:

"That does not determine the question whether this leasehold interest in this property is to be treated as land or as chattels with respect to judgments and levies. We regard this interest of the second party in this oil lease as being in the nature of a leasehold for years. It is for a term of five years, with an uncertain period to follow if oil and gas is found in paying quantities; but that uncertain period may be made certain by the effects of the venture. It is nevertheless but a term of years and does not rise to the dignity of a freehold estate and is but a chattel interest; and if it were not for the express provisions of Section 4104, Revised Statutes, on the subject, we could suppose it would be subject to leasehold mortgage."

The court then goes on to quote from Kent's Commentaries and from other authorities, and sustains the view that leaseholds, except permanent leaseholds, are to be classed as chattel property.

My opinion, therefore, is that a savings bank cannot legally invest its funds in a mortgage on a leasehold estate, for any term of years, which does not contain a clause providing for the renewal thereof forever, under paragraph "f" of Section 9758 of the General Code of Ohio.

This also disposes of your third question, as such a lien, if made, cannot be regarded as a real estate loan, and the lien of the lessor for rent would be superior to it.

In answering your second question, I desire to state that, in answering your first question, my opinion is not to be construed as holding that a savings bank can not legally invest its funds in a mortgage or a leasehold estate, in any event, but the holding is, that such an investment can not be directly made in such a mortgage, and classed as a mortgage on real estate. A mortgage upon a leasehold estate could be taken by a savings bank, when properly assigned, as collateral security for a loan, under paragraph "c" of Section 9765; or, if the mortgage upon such leasehold secures bonds issued by the corporation, then, a savings bank may invest its capital, surplus and deposits in, and buy and sell, such bonds, under paragraph "b" of Section 9765.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

STATE BANKS—OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS MAY BE PROXIES

As there is nothing in the statutes to prohibit an officer or director of an Ohio state bank or corporation from becoming a proxy, there is nothing illegal in the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 19, 1912, which is as follows.

> "Please render me an opinion as to whether an officer or director of a state bank of Ohio can vote the proxies of other stockholders. The law seems to be clear to us that proxies are permissible but the question has been raised by one of our banks as to whether or not officers and directors are not excluded from the privilege of voting such proxies."

The banking act as found in Sections 9702, et seq. of the General Code, has no reference to voting by proxies, except in Section 9711, which provides for notice to stockholders of the meeting for choosing directors, the last sentence of this section is as follows:

> "* * But if all subscribers are present in person or by proxy, such notice may be waived in writing."

Section 9712 is as follows:

> "At the time and place appointed, directors shall be chosen in the manner provided for other corporations."

Section 9714 is as follows:

> "In all other respects, such corporation shall be created, organized, governed and conducted in the manner provided by law for other corporations in so far as not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter."

Section 8636 of the General Code, being one of the general provisions relative to corporations, is as follows:

> "At the time and place appointed, directors shall be chosen by ballot, by the stockholders who attend, either in person or by lawful proxies.

> At such and all other elections of directors, each stockholder shall have the right to vote in person or by proxy the number of shares owned by him for as many persons as there are directors to be elected, or to cumulate his shares and give one candidate as many votes as the number of directors multiplied by the number of his shares of stock equals, or to distribute them on the same principle among as many candidates as he thinks fit. Such directors shall not be elected in any other manner. A majority of the number of shares shall be necessary for a choice, but no person shall vote on a share on which an installment is due and unpaid."

It will be seen from the above that voting by proxy is clearly authorized by the laws of Ohio. A careful examination of the General Code, also fails to disclose any prohibition to a stockholder giving his proxy to an officer or director of a bank, or to any officer or director of the corporation, or any prohibition against an officer or director voting proxies; therefore, in the absence of any such prohibition, and in consideration of the fact that the United States Banking Law contains an express provision that officers or directors of a bank shall not vote proxies of stockholders, it is my opinion that an officer or director of a state bank of Ohio can vote the proxies of stockholders given to him for that purpose.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—REPORTS TO SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS —POWERS OF ENFORCEMENT—PRIVATE AND CO-PARTNERSHIP BANKING BUSINESS.

Though Section 737 of the General Code requires every person or co-partnership doing a banking business to make reports to the superintendent of banks, not less than four times a year, nevertheless, the statutes do not make provisions for the enforcement of this requirement with respect to these specific kinds of banking business. Private persons and co-partnerships are not included in the statute providing for the penalty for non-compliance with the aforesaid requirements.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 31, 1911.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to your letter of July 28th, which is as follows:

> "Coincident with every call for reports of condition of the incorporated banks issued by this department, under Section 737 of the General Code, there was mailed to each of the persons or co-partnerships known to be doing a banking business in this state a proper notice or request for such report. A large proportion of such private banks, varying from 30 to 40 per cent. of the total number, has failed to render these reports. My predecessor established the precedent not requiring a strict compliance with this provision insofar as the private banks were concerned, and in no case resorted to the power granted the superintendent of banks under Section 741, which provides a penalty for failure to render reports on call.

to be rendered to this department is questioned in some quarters and in order that I may act advisedly in the matter, I will be pleased to have you render to me an opinion as to both my right and duty in the premises.

"Section 737 of the General Code specifically mentions that reports shall be rendered by every person or co-partnerships doing a banking business; but in providing a penalty for failure to report, Section 741 does not specifically mention such institutions, unless it can be construed that they would come under the head of a society or association.

"I would like to be advised especially as to whether or not it is my duty to require of the unincorporated institutions such reports of conditions, and if so, whether I have the further right to require that same be published in accordance with Section 739."

I desire to say that Section 737 of the General Code, to which you refer, is as follows:

"Not less than four times during each calendar year each banking company, savings bank, savings and trust company, safe deposit and trust company, society for savings, or savings society, chartered or incorporated under any law of this state, and every person or co-partnership doing a banking business shall make a report to the superintendent of banks. Such reports shall be made at such times as required by the superintendent on forms prescribed and furnished by him, and, so far as possible, they shall be made on the same day on which reports are required from national banking associations by the comptroller of the currency."

Section 741 of the General Code is as follows:

"Every company, corporation, society or association failing to make and transmit to the superintendent of banks any of the reports required by this chapter, or failing to publish the reports as required by law shall forthwith be notified by the superintendent, and, if such failure continues for ten days after receipt of such notice, such delinquent company, society or association shall be subject to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day after the time required for making such report. In case of delay or refusal to pay the penalty herein imposed for failure to make and transmit a report, the superintendent shall maintain an action against the delinquent company, society or association, for the recovery of such penalty, and all sums collected by such action or paid as such penalty shall be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the banking fund."

My opinion is that only banks, savings banks, savings and trust companies, safe deposits and trust companies, societies for savings, or savings societies, chartered or incorporated under any law of this state, can be compelled by you to furnish the reports specified by the said Section 739 et seq. as Section 741 makes no attempt to prescribe a penalty against unincorporated institutions.

Section 711 of the General Code is as follows:

"The superintendent of banks shall execute the laws in relation to banking companies, savings banks, savings societies, societies for savings, savings and loan associations, savings and trust companies, safe deposit companies and trust companies and every other corporation or association having the power to receive, and receiving money on deposit, chartered or incorporated under the laws of this state. Nothing in this chapter contained shall apply to building and loan associations."

You will note from this section that you are only charged with the duties of executing the laws in relation to banking corporations, chartered or incorporated under the laws of this state.

Section 9793 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Every banking company, savings bank, savings and loan association, savings and trust company, safe deposit and trust company, society for savings, savings society and every other corporation or association, except building and loan associations, empowered to receive, and receiving money on deposit, now existing and chartered or incorporated, or which hereafter becomes incorporated shall be subject to the provisions of this chapter, except that no such corporation or association having a less capital stock than the minimum amount provided in section ninety-seven hundred and four, shall be required to increase its capital stock in order to conform to the provisions of such section."

specified the corporations which are to be governed by the banking laws of this state.

All of the sections given above are portions of the banking act of 1908, O. L. 269, and this act in all its provisions relates to incorporated institutions. Undoubtedly Section 737 of the General Code, above quoted, requires that every person or co-partnership doing a banking business shall make reports to you at the time and in the manner prescribed by law. The difficulty is that you are without power to enforce compliance with this requirement. As stated above, the act, as found in 99 O. L., 269, was intended to regulate banking corporations, and it has been held that as a criminal statute it applies only to corporations and not to unincorporated banks; but I think that if persons and co-partnerships as specified in Section 737, had been specified in the same manner in 741, which provides the penalty for failure to file the reports, then you could enforce the filing of these reports, but as these words appear in Section 737, and as they do not appear in Section 741, it is my opinion that you are without authority to enforce the penalty against persons or co-partnerships who fail to file the reports required by law.

Since writing the above I have examined the case of State ex rel. Gilbert, Auditor, vs. Kilgour et al. reported in 8 Nisi Prius, N. S., 617. This was an action brought to compel the reports required to be made to the auditor of state by Sections 3817 and 3818 of Bates' Revised Statutes, and it was held that a banking partnership is not an institution within the meaning of said sections. In deciding this case the attention of the court was called to the provisions of the bank act passed May 1, 1908, 99 O. L., 269, above referred to, and the court in speaking of Section 112 of the said act, which is now Section 741 of the General Code, above quoted, said:

"By Section 112, every company, society or association failing to make or publish the reports required by the act, shall be subject to a penalty of $100 for each day they are delinquent after ten days' notice, but no penalty is imposed on the 'person' or 'co-partnership' doing a banking business who fails to make the reports. It would seem, therefore, that even new, 'persons' and 'co-partnerships' can not be proceeded against for failure to make these reports, although they are especially required so to do by Section 108 of the act, nor are they required to verify their reports so far as the act of May 1, 1908, is concerned, and if this be true under an act which specifically enjoins upon 'persons' and 'co-partnerships' the duty of making these reports, how can it be claimed that where 'persons' and 'co-partnerships' are not mentioned in the statutes, Sections 3817 and 3818, nevertheless, by implications and intendment, the word 'institutions' includes 'persons' and 'co-partnerships' and requires them to make reports through officers having no existence."

I regret this conclusion, and I think it is apparent to everyone that private banks, persons and co-partnerships transacting banking business, and unincorporated banks are the institutions from which reports should be required at all events. It seems to me that such institutions would make these reports voluntarily; however, if they do not you are without power to compel the same.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—LIQUIDATION BY SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS—INTEREST ON DEPOSITS—PRESENTATION OF CLAIMS—INTEREST — DIVIDENDS — STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS — PERSONAL LIABILITY OF SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS.

Interest can be paid on claims against a bank undergoing liquidation, only when the assets of the bank are more than sufficient to pay all the principal debts.

In the case of deposits, interest at the rate of 6 per cent, shall be paid from the date of suspension and demand is not necessary as a determination of the time interest begins to run.

Deposits however, which were made for a specified time are entitled only to the interest contracted for up to the time the depositor could have demanded his money. But from this time 6 per cent should be allowed.

Claims other than deposits bear interest from the date of proof and allowance of claim and only upon the amount allowed.

Interest cannot be allowed on any claims, however, which have not been presented to the trustees, receiver, or liquidating agent, before the lawful opportunity to present claims, expires.

Dividends made by the superintendent of banks before the expiration of one year from the first publication of notice or in any other way contrary to Section 7427 General Code to creditors are made at his own risk.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 25, 1912, requesting that I amplify my opinion rendered to you on December 13, 1911 upon the subject of the right of creditors of a bank in process of liquidation by your department to interest on their claims. That opinion simply held that in case of book accounts in favor of depositors interest would commence to accrue as against the bank from the date of its suspension.

I shall therefore, cover the question more fully in this opinion.

1. The question of interest can only be considered when the assets of the bank in process of liquidation are more than sufficient to pay all the principal debts, for it is a general rule that interest does not run in favor of one creditor at the expense of another while the law is administering the assets of an insolvent estate, when the assets of the estate are insufficient to pay the original claims in full, or sufficient only for that purpose; and in such cases where the claims are interest-bearing claims, the interest will only be calculated, at the rate contracted for, up to date of the suspension of the bank; in brief, in such cases interest, on claims which were bearing interest, ceases on the date on which the law (i. e. the receiver or assignee or other court officer) takes possession of the assets for the purpose of distribution among the creditors. The People vs. American Loan and Trust Company, 172 N. Y., 371 Bank Commissioners vs. New Hampshire Trust Company, 69 N. H., 621, and other cases.

2. When interest is paid, by receiver, or liquidating agent, the rate in this state is six per cent. In this I refer to the payment of interest which will be hereafter specified and not to payment of interest referred to in the first subdivision of this opinion, payment when made under that subdivision, as therein stated, would be at the rate contracted for. Six per cent. is the legal rate of interest in this state, and therefore all claims which are entitled to interest will bear interest at that rate, for the reason that a claim when proved and allowed occupies the same position as a judgment, and bears interest as judgments would. (See case of The National Bank of the Commonwealth vs. The Mechanics National Bank of Trenton, N. J., 94 U. S., 441.)

3. In the case of all depositors, it is my judgment that, they are to be allowed interest on their deposits from the date of the suspension of the bank. Further, that it is not necessary, in the case of deposits, whether represented by pass books, certified checks, or otherwise, to make demand. (See Ex Parte Stockman 70 S. C., 31, where it was held that deposits were entitled to interest as against the bank from the date of suspension, the suspension being treated as a waiver of demand.) (See also the case of Richmond et al. vs. Irons, et al. 121 U. S., 27) The language of the court upon this question is as follows:

> "The first question is whether interest upon the debts of the bank should be allowed as against the stockholders from the date of suspension. As the liability of a shareholder is for the contracts, debts, and engagements of the bank, we see no reason to deny to the creditors as against the shareholders the same right to recover interest, which, according to the nature of the contract or debt, would exist as against the bank itself; of course, not in excess of the maximum liability as fixed by the statutes. In the case of book accounts in favor of depositors, which is the nature of the claims in this case. interest would begin to accrue as against the bank from the date of its suspension. The act of going into liquidation dispenses with the necessity of any demand on the part of the creditors, and it follows that interest should be computed upon the amount then due as against the shareholders to the time of payment."

It seems, therefore, that interest in favor of depositors should be calculated from the date of the suspension of the bank.

In the case of Flynn vs. The American Banking and Trust Company et al. 69 Atlantic, 771 (19 L. R. A. N. S., 428), being a decision of the supreme judicial court of Maine, it was held:

> "Demand for payment of deposits from a bank which stops payment and the assets of which are sequestered by the court is not necessary to entitle them to bear interest from the time of such stoppage."

In this case the court says (at page 437 of the L. R. A. Report):

> "When the bank or corporation voted to stop payment and its assets were sequestered, all its deposits became immediately due and payable, without formal demand, except such as were on some specified time, which had not then elapsed. Whatever interest the bank had agreed to pay upon these deposits, it became liable for the legal rate of six per cent. from and after its default, unless otherwise stipulated, which does not appear to have done as to any deposit in this case."

There may be some difficulty in the case of deposits which are made for a specified time, which time has not elapsed at the time the bank suspends payment, but it seems to me the proper rule to adopt in this class of cases is, to calculate interest at the rate contracted for up to the time when the depositor could have demanded his deposit had the bank not failed, and to calculate interest at the rate of six per cent. from that time until the date of final distribution by the receiver or liquidating agent.

4. In the case of claims other than for deposits, the claims would bear interest from the date of their presentation and proof, and would be, of course, for the amount allowed.

5. In all cases claims must be presented to the trustees, receiver, or liquidating agent. By holding, as I do, that demand is not necessary in the case of deposits, I do not wish to be understood as holding that it is not necessary for each and every person having a claim against the insolvent bank, whether by way of deposit or otherwise, to present his claim to the assignee, receiver or liquidating agent. The receiver, or liquidating agent, would not be authorized in paying any claim that had not been presented to him. In the case of Richmond et al. vs. Irons et al., cited above, it was held, as the 10th paragraph of the syllabus:

> "That no creditor is entitled to recover who does not come forward to present his claim."

The receiver, or the liquidating agent, would not be authorized to make distribution when he knew there were certain depositors owning deposits in a bank whose affairs he was administering, who had not presented their claims, in distributing the entire assets in his hands to those who had presented their claims, and reserving nothing for those who might present their claims in the future. He should not make final distribution until the full period provided by law had expired, and every claimant had given all lawful opportunity to present his claim.

6. The matter of the final dividend, by the superintendent of banks, when he has taken charge of a bank for the purpose of liquidation, is governed by Section 742-7 of the General Code. This section is as follows:

> "At any time after the expiration of the date fixed for the presentation of claims, the superintendent of banks, out of the funds remaining in his hands after the payment of expenses, declare one or more dividends, and after the expiration of one year from the first publication of notice to creditors he may declare a final dividend, such dividends to be paid to such persons and in such amounts and upon such notice as may be directed by the common pleas court of the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located."

My opinion is that if you, as superintendent of banks, make a final dividend, before the expiration of one year from the first publication of notice to creditors of a bank of which you have taken charge, that you would make such dividends at your own risk. Further that the dividends must be made as directed by the said section.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—"CERTIFICATES OF STOCK"—AND "SHARES OF STOCK"—"STOCK PAID IN"—CERTIFICATES FOR 50 PER CENT. OF STOCK AND RELIANCE ON CODE LIABILITY FOR BALANCE, ILLEGAL.

A distinction is to be drawn between certificates of stock and shares of stock, the latter being substantial property and the former being a mere evidence of ownership of the latter.

As the statutes require that a savings and loan association may not commence business until 50 per cent. of the capital is paid in, and all of the capital stock subscribed for, and that stockholders may only receive certificates for "paid up stock," it would, therefore, not be legal procedure for a bank having an authorized capital stock of $25,000, 50 per cent. of which had been paid in, to issue certificates representing $12,500 fully paid and to rely upon the code liability to hold the stockholders for the balance. The fact that $12,500 was paid in, would not comply with the statute unless said $12,500 represented 50 per cent. on subscribed shares of $25,000.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have received from you the following request:

> "Please render to me an opinion concerning the issue of stock certificates by a bank under the following conditions:
> "A bank was organized under Section 3797 and relative sections R. S. (before the passage of the present banking law) with an authorized capital of $25,000.00, same being fully subscribed and 50 per cent. thereof paid in.
> "Would it be legal procedure to issue certificates representing $12,500.00 fully paid, and rely upon a provision in the code of regulations to hold a further stock liability against the subscribers thereof?
> "This department has heretofore held that banks should issue certificates representing the full number of shares authorized and unless fully paid in should endorse thereon the percent. thereof paid. The legality of this ruling of the department is questioned in some quarters, and I would be pleased therefore to have you cover the matter fully for our future guidance."

Section 3797 of the Revised Statutes, under which the bank referred to was organized as follows:

> "The secretary of state shall submit the articles of incorporation of any savings and loan association received by him to the attorney general, who shall, if the same are in conformity to law, and sufficient, certify thereto on the same, and the secretary of state shall then record the same; and no such association shall commence business with a subscribed capital of less than fifty thousand dollars, except in villages having a population at the federal census of 1880, or at any federal census to be taken thereafter, of less than twenty-five hundred, and in such villages no such associations shall commence business with a subscribed capital of less than twenty-five thousand dollars, which shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars (each), nor until at least one-half of each subscription has been fully paid up."

There being no specific direction in this or the following sections as to the issuing of certificates of stock the same would be governed by the general corporation statute upon this subject. This section is 3254 Revised Statutes and is as follows:

"Stockholders shall be entitled to receive (certificates) of their paid up stock in the company; and the president and secretary of the company shall on demand, execute and deliver to a stockholder a certificate showing the true amount of the stock held by him in the company. And it shall be the duty of the directors of such corporation, when organized, to keep a record of all stock subscribed and transferred, and of the secretary or recording officer of such corporation to register therein all subscriptions and transfers of stock. For that purpose a book shall be kept and whenever any certificate or certificates of stock are assigned and delivered by a stockholder, the assignee thereof shall be entitled on demand to have the same duly transferred upon said book by such secretary or recording officer, whose duty it shall be at the same time to enroll therein also the name of said assignee as a stockholder, and the books and records of such corporation shall at all reasonable times be open to the inspection of every stockholder."

It is apparent from the language of this section, "Stockholders shall be entitled to receive (certificates) of their paid up stock in the company," that before the stockholders are entitled to certificates their stock must be paid up, and this seems to be the general rule in regard to the issuing of certificates of stock, that is, that the stockholder is not entitled to a certificate until his stock is paid for.

"A subscriber cannot require the issuance of a share certificate until he has fulfilled his part of the contract of subscription. If payment is a condition precedent he is not entitled to his certificate, until he has paid the stipulated amount. * * * In a case where subscriptions were payable in installments, it was held that the corporation was not bound to issue the certificates before getting the installments, but that a readiness and willingness to issue them at the time when payments were to be made was all that could be required of it and hence in an action to recover an installment, and averment of its readiness and willingness to issue the certificates was necessary. * * *.

"Thompson on Corporations 2nd Ed. Vol. 4, Sec. 3511.

"Our general statute as to corporations (Revised Statutes Sec. 3254) seems to require that certificates may be issued only when the stock is fully paid up.

"State vs. Davis 85 O. S. 28. Ohio Law Vol. 9 No. 339 Jan. 1, 1912."

In this conection I wish to call attention to the language of the court in the last cited case as to the distinction between the certificates of stock and the shares of stock in a corporation. As to this the court says, page 33:

> "As we advance in the consideration of this matter it is necessary to keep in view the well marked distinction between shares in the capital stock in a corporation and the certificates issued therefor. The shares are the substance. The certificates are the evidence of things not seen. The shares are actual property of the stockholders. The certificates are the mere attestations of the stockholder's ownership of the shares. The certificates are no more actual property than a man's deed is his farm. They are no more than an admission on the part of the corporation that the person to whom they were issued has, pro tanto, performed his part of the contract in becoming a stockholder. They are not negotiable; and even a bona fide purchaser of certificates of stock acquires no title as against equities existing against the vender."

It seems to me, therefore, that the proper course would be not to issue certificates until the stock was fully paid up, and that this method of procedure is contemplated by the statue. As the shares of stock are the substance a stockholder would be protected at all times by a receipt for the amount he had paid on each share, and when the shares were fully paid up he would then be entitled to a certificate showing that he was the owner of said stock and that the same was fully paid for.

As to your specific question, "Would it be legal procedure to issue certificates representing $12,500.00, fully paid, and rely upon a provision in the code of regulations to hold a further stock liability against the subscribers thereof," if I understand your question correctly, my answer is No, as the statute provides that the capital stock must be $25,000.00 which shall be divided into shares of $100 each, and that no such association shall commence business until at least one-half of each subscription has been fully paid up; this provision, it seems to me, is plain. The whole $25,000.00 must be subscribed and at least fifty per cent. paid in and the fact that $12,500.00 was paid in would not comply with the statutes unless said $12,500.00 represented fifty per cent. on subscribed shares of $25,000.00.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING LIQUIDATION BY SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS—FUNDS RECEIVED BY LIQUIDATED BANK FOR TAX COLLECTION—TRUST FUNDS—RIGHTS OF COUNTY TREASURER AND TAX PAYERS.

When a bank, which has collected taxes from certain tax payers for a county treasury, sends a draft to said treasurer for the amount collected, upon a second bank and the first bank goes into liquidation, whereupon the second bank refuses to devote what funds it holds to the credit of the first bank, to the purpose of cashing the draft, held:

That the second bank is not obliged to cash the draft, but if any of the moneys so collected for taxes can be traced into the hands of the liquidating agents, they must be treated as trust funds held by the bank as agent for the county treasurer, and as such must be recognized as a preferred claim in behalf of that official.

If any objections are held to such claim, however, its validity may be tested in a friendly suit by the treasurer against the Superintendent of Banks or by submission to the common pleas court under Section 742-8 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March, 16, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "Please render to this department an opinion covering the question involved, based on the statement of facts set out in the enclosed communication to this office from Mr. D. J. Schurr, special deputy in charge of the liquidation of The Albany State Bank."

The statement of facts as to this matter, as given by Mr. D. J. Schurr, your special deputy in charge of the liquidation of The Albany State Bank is as follows:

> "Last December Mr. Webb as cashier of the Albany bank received from the treasurer of the county a list of the tax payers in the vicinity of Albany for the purpose of receiving tax money at the Albany bank thus save the time and expense of going to Athens. About two hundred tax payers took advantage of this custom and paid their tax money into the bank at Albany amounting to about $1,800.00. This payment of taxes continued from December 5, 1911, to January 27, 1912.
> "On January 27, 1912, Mr. Webb as cashier of the Albany bank sent the treasurer of Athens county a draft on the Second National at Parkersburg for the amount of tax money received at the bank of Albany. The treasurer accepted the same and forwarded it to the Second National at Parkersburg, but in the meantime the bank at Albany had been closed by the State Department of Banks and Banking and the Second National at Parkersburg refused payment of draft.
> "The contention is on the one hand that the bank of Albany was not a depository for tax money but was acting as a collecting agency for the treasurer and therefore the tax money should not be considered as a part of the business of the bank proper. On the other hand, the money was received at the bank and entered on the books of the bank in an account in the name of 'Tax Accounts.'

"The list of those paying their taxes was sent in to the treasurer by Mr. Webb and the treasurer sent the tax receipts of same back to Mr. Webb and quite a number had been handed out to those entitled to same when the payment was stopped. The treasurer then came down to Albany and took possession of those receipts still in the hands of the cashier. As it now stands some have their receipts as having paid their taxes and others have only a deposit slip for the amount of their taxes.

"The question is, shall the tax payers have to pay their taxes again into the treasury or shall the account be considered as a preferred account in the bank, or shall the treasurer file his claim against the bank the same as any other claimant against the bank?"

In addition to the fact as detailed by Mr. Schurr, the following facts, which are not in dispute, may be stated as to this matter:

It was customary for taxes to be paid into this bank, as was done in this instance, and for the bank to remit the amount of same to the treasurer, and for the treasurer to then send receipt for taxes which had been paid to the bank, which receipts were delivered by the bank to the taxpayers.

In the present case, on or about December 1, 1911, the cashier of the bank called the treasurer by telephone and asked if he (the treasurer) would send to the bank a list of the tax payers so that the tax payers could pay the amount of their taxes into the bank and that the bank would then remit the amount of the same to the treasurer. The treasurer said that it was immaterial how he received the money and that upon receipt of the money he would send tax receipts, and agreed and did mail to the cashier a typewritten list of the tax payers residing in the vicinity of The Albany State Bank, with the amount of taxes due from each set opposite their respective names. The bank posted a notice that it would receive moneys for taxes. Tax payers called at the bank and paid in moneys as taxes to the amount of $1,807.42. No account was opened by the bank with either the depositors or the treasurer. A memorandum entitled "Tax Account" was kept by the bank, naming the depositors and the amount paid by each. The cashier sent the amount so paid in as taxes ($1,807.42) to the treasurer in the form of a draft on the Second National Bank of Parkersburg, W. Va. On receipt of this draft, the treasurer mailed to the bank of Albany the tax receipts represented by the moneys which had been paid into the bank. The treasurer at once deposited the draft for collection. The Parkersburg bank, admitting that it had funds to the credit of The Albany State Bank sufficient in amount to pay said draft, refused to pay the same for the reason that it had been advised by the Superintendent of Banks of the failure of The Albany State Bank and ordered not to pay out any funds on deposit to the credit of said bank. The said sum of $1,807.42 had not been received by the treasurer nor paid back to the tax payers.

While it is not definitely stated, I assure that the draft sent by the cashier of The Albany State Bank to the treasurer was sent prior to the closing of the bank.

I am also in receipt of letters from Sirs Wood and Wood, Attorneys of Athens, Ohio, as to this matter, and of a most comprehensive brief prepared by them upon the questions involved.

The question involved in this case in a manner opens the whole subject as to general and special deposits in a bank, and belongs to that class of cases where there is a great confusion of authorities, namely, where money is deposited with a bank with respect to which the bank has but a single duty to perform and it was no part of the contract that this duty was to be performed with the identical coin deposited, but with an amount equal to that deposited, whether it be the same coin or not. As I have stated, cases of this character are generally difficult; many of the decisions are confusing and in many instances there is a conflict in different jurisdictions; it is easy to state the general rule, but as the facts in each case vary, the modifications and refinements of the general rule make the same difficult of application, and it becomes necessary to decide each question upon the facts peculiar to it.

Therefore, as I find in our Ohio decisions authorties in support of the view I take as to this matter, I deem it unnecessary in this opinion to go into a general discussion of this subject. Such a discussion would be profitless, because in the end it would be applicable only to this case, and when another case would arise there would be some distinguishing facts which would make this opinion not applicable.

The facts in this case seem to me to be strikingly similar to the facts in the case of Madison, Receiver, National Bank, vs. Melhorn et al. 8 C. C., 191. The facts in that case in brief are as follows:

> "On June 21, 1893, the plaintiff delivered to the Citizens Bank by mail a promissory note for collection, of which the plaintiff was the owner. The note was delivered with the following instructions: 'For Collection and Return.'
> "On July 14, 1893, the Citizens Bank collected said note and on the same day drew its draft in favor of the plaintiff on the Chase National Bank of New York, of New York City, for the amount of said collection, less a small sum due the Citizens Bank from the plaintiff.
> "On July 18, 1893, the Citizens Bank made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. Plaintiff forwarded the draft delivered to it by the Citizens Bank (on July 14th) by due course of mail, and on the 19th day of July, 1893, it was duly presented for payment to the Chase National Bank; payment was refused by the Chase National Bank for the reason that it had been notified of the assignment of the Citizens Bank; that the Citizens' Bank had at that time to its credit in the Chase National Bank funds more than sufficient to pay said draft.
> "At the time of the assignment of said Citizens Bank it had on hand, and there was passed to its assignee, a sum more than sufficient to pay said draft.
> "The evidence shows that the collection made by the Citizens Bank for the plaintiff was put in the funds of the bank and passed to the assignee.
> "Upon these facts, the plaintiff claimed the collection made by the Citizens Bank was a trust fund in its hands and as such passed to the assignees to be paid by them to the plaintiff. This was resisted by the general creditors of the Citizens Bank who claimed that plaintiff was only a general creditor of the bank and should share with other general creditors.
> "Upon this state of facts, the opinion of the court is as follows:
> "When the plaintiff transmitted to the Ada Bank the note for 'collection and remittance,' the relation of principal and agent was created. The bank, as the agent of the plaintiff, had transmitted to it, and it received as agent of the plaintiff, the note for collection. As such agent, it was its duty to collect, and remit the collection to the plaintiff. The fact that the note was changed into money did not terminate the agency. Without the consent of the principal the agency would not terminate until the agent remitted the collection. The fund or the proceeds of it, so long as it could be traced to the Ada Bank or its assignees, would be held in trust for the plaintiff, just as much as the original note would have been held by them.

"The Ada Bank undertook to trasmit the proceeds of the collection by draft on the Chase National Bank. The plaintiff was not negligent in presenting such draft for payment; payment was refused, and the draft went to protest. This gave the plaintiff no right against the Chase National Bank whatever. (Covert vs. Rhodes, 48 Ohio St. 66)

"The Ada Bank did not by its draft to the plaintiff the proceeds of collection. It did not by such act terminate the relation of principal and agent, and create that of debtor and creditor. The Ada Bank, as we have found, had still in its possession the proceeds of the collection. As the agent of plaintiff it held such in trust for its principal, and it passed to the assignees with the trust impressed upon it. It is not the case where the agent disposed of the money by the purchase of a draft. In such case the proceeds of the collection would no longer remain with the agent. In the case at bar the agent sent his own check or draft, and retained in his own possession the proceeds of the collection, which have passed to the assignees.

"We think these views are fully sustained by our Supreme Court in the case of Jones et al. vs. Kilbreth, 49 Ohio State, 401."

I can see no essential difference in the facts in the present case and the facts in the case cited above, and it seems to me, therefore, that if it can be shown that the fund paid in on this Tax Account passed into the hands of the liquidating agents in charge of the bank, then that the same are impressed with the trust with which they were deposited; that the bank became the agent for the treasurer for these collections, and the agency would not terminate until the agent remitted the collection. The fund, so long as it remained in the Albany State Bank, would be held in trust for the treasurer.

"When paper is deposited for collection, the relation between the depositor and the bank is that of principal and agent. If an agent for that special purpose collects or sells the paper of his principal he becomes a fiduciary, and will hold the proceeds in trust for the principal; if the agent fails there will be no reason why these general creditors should invade such proceeds to satisfy their claims, if the principal can trace or ascertain his property in the substituted form. Whether, in a given case, the proceeds have been sufficiently traced and identified, must rest in the judgment of the chancellor who is called upon to declare the proceeds subject to a distinct trust.

Its seems, therefore, that there can be no question but that in this case this deposit was a trust deposit, which, when made belongs to the treasurer of the county. The bank being the agent of the treasurer held the funds in trust for its principal, and if said funds passed into the hands of the special deputy in charge of the liquidation of this bank, they are now in his hands with said trust impressed upon them, and the claim of the treasurer for the payment of the amount of said funds is entitled to priority.

If there is any serious question raised by the general creditors as to the payment of this amount to the treasurer as a preferred claim, I suggest that the matter be presented to the common pleas court of the county in which the bank is situated, as provided by Section 742-8 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"Objection to any claim not rejected by the superintendent of banks may be made by any party interested by filing a copy of such objection with the superintendent of banks, who shall present the same to the common pleas court of the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located, upon written notice to the party filing the same, said notice setting forth the time and place of the presentation. The court upon return day of said notice shall hear the objections raised to said claim, or refer the determination of said objections to a referee for report, or upon demand of either the superintendent of banks or the party filing the objections direct that the issues be tried before a jury. The court may make proper provision for unproved or unclaimed deposits."

This could be done by having some one of the general creditors file objection to the allowance of the claim of the treasurer as a preferred claim.

Or, the matter could be determined by a friendly suit by your rejecting the claim of the treasurer and having him bring suit for its allowance and payment as a preferred claim. This would be under Section 742-3, which is as follows:

"The superintendent of banks shall cause notice to be given by advertisement in such newspaper as he may direct weekly for three consecutive months, calling upon all persons who may have claims against corporation, company, society or association, to present the same to the superintendent of banks, and to make legal proof thereof at a place and within a time not earlier than the last day of publication to be therein specified. The superintendent of banks shall mail a similar notice to all persons whose names appear as creditors upon the books of the corporation, company, society or association. If the superintendent of banks doubts the justice and validity of any claim, he may reject the same and serve notice of such rejection upon the claimants, either by mail or personally, and an affidavit of the service of such notice, which shall be prima facia evidence thereof, shall be filed in his office. An action upon a claim so rejected must be brought within six months after such service. Claims presented and allowed after the expiration of the time fixed in the notice to creditors, shall be entitled to be paid the amount of all prior dividends therein if there be funds sufficient therefor and share in the distribution of the remaining assets in the hands of the superintendent of banks equitably applicable thereto."

However, I do not deem a suit necessary, as I am of the opinion as above indicated, that this is clearly a trust deposit, and as such is entitled to preference.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

Section 8303 of the General Code is as follows:

> "The parties to a bond, bill, promissory note, or other instrument of writing for the forbearance or payment of money at any future time, may stipulate therein for the payment of interest upon the amount thereof at any time not exceeding eight per cent. per annum, payable annually."

It will be noted that the form of note copied above provides for the full legal rate of interest for which the parties to the same may stipulate and anything in excess would be usurious.

In the case of the State of Ohio vs. Taylor et al., 10th Ohio, 378, the question as to the validity of the stipulation to be paid, a certain percentage as collection fees, in addition to the legal interest for money loaned, was passed upon by our supreme court. In deciding this case, Judge Wood uses the following language which forcibly expresses the view taken by the court of agreements of this character:

> "It is said, however, that the five per centum in this case is by the agreement of the parties, to be added to the seven per cent., not as interest, but as costs, agreed upon as such, for collection, by the parties.
> "Now, it seems to us to be of little consequence, in this case, what this five per cent. may be called, but the inquiry is what is the thing itself? However it may be disguised, it is very clear to us it is a mere shift or device by which twelve per cent. is retained, as interest, upon this loan, and in this view of the case cannot be enforced. This court has decided that under the laws of Ohio, but six per cent. interest is recoverable, though the parties contract for more or higher rates.
> "But is it such a contract as public policy should execute? What may be supposed as the natural result to the community from the execution of this agreement? It would be the condition of future loans, at banks, that the borrower should pay the expenses of collection, and perhaps, the tax thereon. The brokers in this state would hold a general jubilee; and as their sense of morality and law usually expands with their hopes of gain, in proportion to the borrowers' necessity they would find probably additional items of cost, as the means of a legalized extortion upon their loans. In our opinion, such agreements are against the public policy of the country, and ought not to be enforced in courts of justices. They have, by this court, on the circuit, been denied to be obligatory, and further reflection confirms us in the correctness of such opinion."

In the case of Shelton vs. Gill, 11th Ohio, 417, it was held:

> "A stipulation in a warrant of attorney to pay collection fees, in addition to the principal debt and interest, is against public policy, and void."

In the case of Martin vs. Trustees, etc., 13th Ohio, 250, it is held:

> "It is error to include attorney's fees in a judgment confessed."

In this case, the court says (at page 258):

> "The case of the State of Ohio vs. Taylor, 10 Ohio, 378; of Shelton vs. Gill, 11 Ohio, 417, and Spalding vs. The Bank of Muskingum, 12 Ohio, 544, settle the principle that an agreement to pay a percentage as collection fees, in addition to the legal rate of interest, is against public policy, and void. With those decisions we are satisfied."

I might cite numerous other cases from this, as well as other, states to this same effect, but the citations above given indicate clearly the rule in Ohio, and, therefore, my opinion is that the maker of a note can not be held for attorney's fees charged in connection with the collection of the note, and that the form of note which is given above is not authorized by the law of Ohio, is void as to the stipulation for attorney's fees, and the use of the same should be discontinued by the bank.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—LIQUIDATION BY SUPERINTENDENT OF OF BANKS—"MAJORITY OF STOCK"—AUTHORIZATION OF SUPERINTENDENT OF BANK OR OF AGENT TO CONTINUE LIQUIDATION.

The presence of the words "majority of stock present and voting" in Section 742-13 making the same necessary, for the election of an agent to liquidate the affairs of a defunct bank after the superintendent of banks has cared for depositors and creditors, and the absence of these words "present and voting" in Section 742-12 providing that a "majority of the stock" shall be necessary to authorize the superintendent of banks to continue to administer the affairs of the bank, is indicative of the legislative intent that upon this latter proposition, it is necessary that a majority of all stock issued and outstanding, must be represented.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 23, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 17, 1912, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "Please render to me an opinion as to what percentage of stock is necessary to determine whether the superintendent of banks shall continue to administer affairs of a bank as provided in Section 742-11."

Sections 742-11, 742-12 and 742-13 are as follows:

> "Section 742-11. Whenever the superintendent of banks shall have paid to each depositor and creditor of such corporation, company, society or association (not including stockholders) whose claim or claims as such depositor or creditor shall have been duly proved and allowed, the full amount of such claims, and shall have made proper provision for unclaimed or unpaid deposits or dividends, and shall have paid all the expenses of the liquidation, the superintendent of banks shall call a meeting of the stockholders of such corporation, company, society or association, by giving notice for thirty days in one or more newspapers published in the county wherein the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located.
> "Section 742-12. At such meeting the stockholders shall determine whether the superintendent of banks shall continue to administer its assets and wind up the affairs of such corporation, company, society or association, or whether an agent or agents shall be elected for that purpose; and in so determining the said stockholders shall vote by ballot in person, or by proxy, each share entitling the holder to one vote and the majority of the stock shall be necessary to a determination. In case it is determined to continue the liquidation of the affairs of such corporation, company, society or association, and after paying the expenses thereof, shall distribute the proceeds among the stockholders in proportion to the several holdings of stock, in such manner and upon such notice as may be directed by the common pleas court of the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located.

"Section 742-13. In case it is determined to appoint an agent or agents to liquidate, the stockholders shall thereupon select such agent or agents by ballot,—a majority of the stock present and voting, in person or by proxy, being necessary to a choice. Such agent or agents shall file with the superintendent of banks a bond to the state of Ohio in such amount and with such sureties as shall be approved by the superintendent of banks for the faithful performance of all the duties of his or their trust, and thereupon the superintendent of banks shall transfer to such agent or agents all the undivided or uncollected or other assets of such corporation, company, society or association then remaining in his hands; and upon such transfer and delivery the said superintendent of banks shall be discharged from all further liability to such corporation, company, society or association and its creditors."

From the language used in Sections 742-12 and 742-13, I take it that there can be no doubt but that in determining whether the superintendent of banks shall continue to administer the affairs of the bank, it is necessary that a majority of all the stock, issued and outstanding, must be represented at the meeting and voted in favor of the continuance of the administration by the superintendent of banks. This is really self-evident from the term used in Section 742-12, namely "the majority of the stock;" and is made all the plainer by the provision of Section 742-13, where it is provided that an agent to liquidate the affairs of the bank may be selected by a majority of the stock present and voting, in person or by proxy; and without taking into consideration anything else but a familiar rule of statutory construction, the presence of those words, "present and voting," in Section 742-13, and their absence in Section 742-12 must be considered as conclusive of the intention of the legislature, which intention, thus expressed, is plainly that a majority of the stock issued and outstanding must be represented and voted in favor of the continuation of the administration of the affairs of the bank by the superintendent of banks, as provided in Section 742-12.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TRUST COMPANIES—POWER TO ESTABLISH GENERAL TRUST FUND WITH ALL MONEYS HELD IN TRUST AND TO INVEST SAME IN GROUND RENTS.

The statutes authorize a trust company to establish a general trust fund, wherein all moneys and properties held by it as trustee may be invested, so that each particular trust would be chargeable with its proportionate share of the expense of managing said general trust fund and also credited with its particular share of the increment, except however, that the authority naming the trustee may direct that his particular trust be invested in a particular way.

Such general trust fund by virtue of Section 9782 General Code, may be invested in ground rents when authorized by a vote of the board of directors and such investment must be kept separate and apart from other investments.

Title to the ground rent should be taken in the name of the company as trustee.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1912.

HON. F. E. BAXTER, Superintendent, Department of Banks and Banking, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of April 4, 1912, you ask my opinion as follows:

> "Please render to me an opinion as to what is meant by 'general trust fund of the corporation' as used in Section 9788 of the General Code; and in connection with the above inquiry, kindly advise me as to whether or not it would be legal for a trust company to place all of the funds which it holds as 'trustee' in a general fund and with that fund purchase a ground rent, charging each estate or account with its share of the investment; and if so, could the ground rent be taken in the name of the trust company direct, and in so doing would it be guaranteed the investment under said law."

In answering your question it is necessary to consider the following sections of the General Code:

Section 9782 General Code provides:

> "All moneys or properties received in trust by such company, unless by the terms of the trust some other mode of investment is prescribed, together with the capital and surplus of such corporation, also may be invested in ground rents, when authorized by a vote of the board of directors."

Section 9786 General Code provides:

> "All moneys or property held in trust shall constitute a deposit in the trust department, and the accounts and investments thereof shall be kept separate. Such investment or loans shall be especially appropriated to the security and payment of all such deposits, and not be subject to any other liabilities of the corporation. For the purpose of securing the observance of these requirements, it shall have a trust department in which all business pertaining to such trust property shall be kept distinct from its general business."

Section 9788 General Code provides:

"In the management of money and property held by it as trustee, under the powers conferred in the foregoing sections, such trust company may invest them in a general trust fund of the corporation. But the authority making the appointment, upon the conferring of it, may direct whether such money and property shall be held separately or invested in a general trust fund of the corporation; except that such corporation always shall follow and be governed by all directions contained in any instrument under which it acts."

Section 9789 General Code provides:

"No money, property or securities received or held by such corporation under this chapter, establishing a trust department, shall be mingled with the investments of the capital stock or other moneys or property belonging to it, or be liable for its debts or obligations."

The statute is silent as to the definition of a general trust fund of the corporation, but I take it from the above sections, especially Sections 9786 and 9788 General Code, that a trust company may establish a general trust fund. That is, a fund in which all the money and property held by it as trustee may be invested, and each particular trust would be chargeable with its proportionate share of the management of said trust fund and credited with its proportionate share of the increment earned by the same. It will be noted from Section 9788 General Code, that the authority naming the trustee may direct whether the money and property constituting the trust estate shall be held separately or invested in a general trust fund, but in the absence of such direction it would seem that money or property held by a trust company could be invested in such a fund, which fund, of course, must be managed by the statutes as to all trust funds. By virtue of Section 9782 General Code such a fund or any part of the same could be invested in ground rents when authorized by a vote of the board of directors. Investments made of trust fund whether in ground rents or in other investments authorized by Section 9761 General Code, must always constitute a trust deposit, and cannot be mingled with investments of the capital stock or other moneys or property belonging to such corporation. (See Section 9786 and 9789 General Code).

The title to a ground rent if purchased out of the general trust fund, or out of any funds constituting a part of the trust estate, should be taken in the name of the trust company as trustee and not in the name of the trust company direct.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—RIGHT OF SUPERINTENDENT TO PAY CLAIMS AGAINST LIQUIDATED BANK BEFORE TIME LIMIT—PERSONAL LIABILITY.

When a bank in the hands of the superintendent of banks for liquidation, has sufficient funds to enable payment of all claims before the expiration of the ninety days' time fixed by statute for the presentation of claim, the superintendent is not legally prevented from paying all claims before said time limit. If he does so, however, he acts at his own peril and may be personally liable for possible subsequent valid claims arising.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 28, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of May 15, 1912, in which you make the following request for my opinion:

> This department is confronted with the peculiar condition of a bank having come into its hands with every prospect of yielding to us immediately sufficient funds to pay all its debts now known to exist. The statutes provide that this department give ninety days' notice to creditors in which to file proof of claim, and insofar as I am able to ascertain no dividend on these claims can be paid until after the expiration of the ninety days.
> "However, in view of the fact of that this department could arrange immediately to pay all these claims in full, I beg to request an opinion as to whether or not there is anything in law to justify such action."

Section 742-3 of the General Code provides that the superintendent of banks upon taking possession of the property and business of such corporation shall cause notice to be given by publication for three consecutive months, calling on all persons who may have claim against such corporation to present the same to him, and to make legal proof of such claim not earlier (later) than the last date of the publication. It also provides that claims presented and allowed after the expiration of the time fixed in the notice for presenting claims, shall be entitled to be paid the amount of all prior dividends and to share in the distribution of the remaining assets, if there be sufficient funds.

Section 742-5, among other things, requires that upon the expiration of the time for the presentation of claims, the superintendent of banks shall make and file a list of the claims presented, as provided by this section.

Section 742-7 provides:

> *"At any time after the expiration of the date fixed for the presentation of claims, the superintendent of banks may, out of the funds remaining in his hands after the payment of expenses, declare one or more dividends, and after the expiration of one year from the first publication of notice to creditors, he may declare a final dividend, * * * * "

It is unnecessary to cite you to other statutes governing the liquidation of banks by you, and the course to be followed by you when all the depositors and creditors of the banking corporation have been paid, for, from the sections cited above, it is plain that the date fixed for the presentation of claims by the creditors is an important date in the performance of your duties. You can be absolutely safe in the matter of liquidating a bank by following these statutes as to the time strictly. In other words, if payment to all the creditors and depositors were made by you before the expiration of the time fixed by law for the presentation of claims, and then after such payments had been made, and before the expiration of such time, valid claims were presented, in the absence of sufficient assets of the bank to pay the same, you would probably be liable.

I do not wish to state that you are absolutely prevented from paying dividends or the final dividend before the period prescribed by law, but it is a matter in which you must act at your own peril. If you know that all the claims are in, or that there will be sufficient funds with which to pay all claims that might be presented, then you would probably be justified, and it would be best to pay all claims in full as rapidly as possible, but you should take this course only when no doubt whatever exists, and wherever there is any doubt at all, follow the statute strictly.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—INCREASE OF CAPITAL STOCK—AFTER ORGANIZATION, INCREASED STOCK NEED NOT ALL BE SUBSCRIBED.

Under Section 9725 and 8698 of the General Code a bank incorporated in Ohio prior to the passage of the present banking act may increase its stock from $100,000 to $250,000, obtain subscribers for $100,000 of the increase and retain the $50,000 balance as treasury stock.

After a bank has completed its organization there is no requirement that all of its stock be subscribed.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 17, 1912, you make the following request for my opinion:

> "A certain bank incorporated under the laws of Ohio prior to the passage of the present banking act has an authorized capital of $100,000.00 which is fully paid and issued. It now desires to increase this authorized capital to $250,000.00, obtain subscribers for $100,000.00 and retain the remaining $50,000.00 as treasury stock.
> "Please advise me as to whether or not in your opinion this action would be legal, providing the present stockholders waive their rights to this $50,000.00 increased capital."

Section 9742 of the General Code provides that after April 1, 1910, all banking corporations or associations organized prior to the passage of the present banking act must conform their business and transactions to the provisions of the present law.

Authority to increase capital stock is given to banks by Section 9725, which is as follows:

> "A corporation doing business under the provisions of this chapter, may increase its capital stock as provided for other corporations. In case of such increase, the board of directors first shall offer such additional stock pro rata to all stockholders of record, at such price, not less than par, as they deem best for the interest of the corporation. Shares remaining unsold then may be sold to any person on the same or better terms."

The provision for the increase in capital stock by a corporation, referred to in Section 9725, is Section 8698 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"After its original capital stock is fully subscribed for, and an installment of ten per cent. on each share of stock has been paid thereon, a corporation for profit, or a corporation not for profit, having a capital stock, may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which it is divided, prior to organization, by the unanimous written consent of all original subscribers. After organization the increase may be made by a vote of the holders of a majority of its stock, at a meeting called by majority of its directors, at least thirty days' notice of the time, place and object of which has been given by publication in some newspaper of general circulation, and by letter addressed to each stockholder whose place of residence is known. Or, the stock may be increased at a meeting of the stockholders at which all are present in person, or by proxy, and waive in writing such notice by publication and letter; and also agree in writing to such increase, naming the amount thereof to which they agree. A certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."*

It would seem, from the sections above quoted, that authority is given to banks to increase capital stock, and that it is not necessary that all of said increase be subscribed for.

Section 9704 provides the amount of capital stock that the different kinds of banks are required to have; and Section 9716 provides that all of the stock must be fully subscribed, and fifty per cent. of each share paid in before it may be authorized to commence business. But these sections, I take it, relate to the preliminary organization of the bank and the initial conditions that must be complied with before it can begin business. But after these conditions have been complied with, and it is actually doing business, it seems that Section 9725 clearly gives the authority to increase the capital stock, and I fail to find any restriction or limitation as to the amount of this stock that must be subscribed. Therefore, in the absence of such a limitation or restriction, it seems to me that the action spoken of in your letter would be legal.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—DEPOSITS OF TOWNSHIP FUNDS IN BANKS OUTSIDE OF COUNTY—CONDITIONS PRECEDENT.

When any of the conditions enumerated in Section 3323 of the General Code exist, the township trustees may enter into a contract with one or more banks that are conveniently located within the county or with one or more banks in an adjacent county of which the township is a part, and which offer the highest rate of interest (which in no case shall be less than two per cent.) upon the funds deposited.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On July 9, 1912, you submitted the following question for my opinion:

> "Can township funds be deposited outside the county, when an outside bank bids a higher rate of interest than those within?"

Section 3320 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The trustees of any township shall provide by resolution for the depositing of any or all moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer of the township, and the treasurer shall deposit such money in such bank, banks or depository within the county in which the township is located as the trustees may direct subject to the following provisions,"

The provision of this section that the funds shall be deposited in banks or depositories within the county in which the township is located is qualified by the following sections:

Section 3322 of the General Code provides ar follows:

> "In townships containing two or more banks, such deposits shall be made in the bank or banks situated in the township that offer, at competitive bidding the highest rate of interest upon the daily balance on such funds, which in no case shall be less than two per cent. for the full time the funds are on deposit. Such bank or banks shall give a good and sufficient bond to be approved by the township trustees, for the township trustees, for the safe custody of such funds in a sum at least equal to the amount deposited. No bank or depository shall receive a larger deposit of such funds than the amount of such bond and in no event to exceed three hundred thousand dollars. The treasurer of the township shall see that a greater sum than that contained in the bond is not deposited in such bank or banks, and such treasurer and his bondsmen shall be liable for any loss occasioned by deposits in excess of such bonds."

> "In a township in which but one bank is located, and the location thereof is convenient to the township treasurer, the funds of the township shall be deposited in such bank at a rate of interest not less than two per cent. on the average daily balance, but when the trustees have reason to believe that such bank is not a safe depository, or when the location thereof is inconvenient to the township treasurer, or when such bank refuses to pay at least two per cent. interest, or where there are two banks in a township and either one or both refuse to pay at least two per cent. interest on such deposits, or in a township in which no bank is is located, after the adoption of a resolution providing for the deposit of its funds, the trustees may enter into contract with one or more banks within the county, or in a county adjacent to the county of which the township is a part, that are conveniently located and which offer the highest rate of interest on the average daily balance, and which in no case be less than two per cent. for the full time the funds are on deposit."

The language used in Section 3323 makes the question somewhat difficult; for it would seem from it that township funds may be deposited in a bank situated in a county adjacent to the county of which the township is a part when any one of the following conditions exist:

a. When the trustees have reason to believe that the bank in the township is not a safe depository.

b. When the bank in the township is not convenient to the township treasury.

c. When the bank refuses to pay at least two per cent. interest.

The above conditions apply to a township in which only one bank is located; but according to the language of this section they seem also to apply to a township in which more than one bank is located; and in addition the following conditions are provided by the statute:

d. Where there are two banks in a township and either one or both refuse to pay at least two per cent. interest on deposits.

e. When there is no bank located in the township.

It would seem from this section that in a township in which any one of the conditions above enumerated exist, the trustees, after the adoption of a resolution providing for the deposit of its funds, may enter into a contract with one or more banks within the county, or with one or more banks in a county of which the township is a part, that are conveniently located, and which offer the highest rate of interest (which in no case, can be less than two per cent.) upon the funds deposited.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

FOREIGN CORPORATION—USE OF MISLEADING NAME ILLEGAL —"BANK" OR "TRUST COMPANY."

A foreign corporation cannot do business in Ohio under the name of a banking and trust company business when it does not intend to engage in such business for the reason that such a name would mislead the public in violation of Sections 8628 and 178 General Code.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of August 1, 1912, in which you ask whether a foreign corporation authorized to do, and doing business in Ohio, but not engaged in banking or trust company business, may use a name in which "bank" or "trust company" appears.

I do not find any definite provision of law governing this matter. It seems to me that under Section 8628 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"The secretary of state shall not file or record any articles of incorporation wherein the corporate name is likely to mislead the public as to the nature or purpose of the business its charter authorizes, nor if such name is that of an existing corporation, or so similar thereto as to be likely to mislead the public, unless the written consent of the existing corporation, signed by its president and secretary, be filed with such articles."

and Section 178 General Code,

"Before a foreign corporation for profit transacts business in this state, it shall procure from the secretary of state a certificate that it has complied with the requirements of law to authorize it to do business in this state, and that the business of such corporation to be transacted in this state, is such as may be lawfully carried on by a corporation, organized under the laws of this state for such or similar business, or if more than one kind of business, by two or more corporations so incorporated for such kinds of business exclusively. No such foreign corporation doing business in this state without such certificate shall maintain an action in this state upon a contract made by it in this state until it has procured such certificate. This section shall not apply to foreign banking, insurance, building and loan, or bond investment corporations."

a foreign corporation which wished to obtain authority in this state to do business, and which, while it had in its name the words "bank" or "trust company," intended to engage in neither the banking or trust company business in this state, should be refused such authority on the ground that the name of the corporation is likely to mislead the public.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—BANKS MAY FURNISH SURETY BONDS TO PROTECT DEPOSITORS.

The power conferred upon a bank to contract and to be contracted with is broad enough to enable it to furnish a surety bond for the protection of its depositors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 22, 1912.

Hon. F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 9, 1912, you ask whether or not a bank, under the laws of Ohio, can purchase a bond for the protection of its depositors, the same as now done by banks to secure deposits of public funds.

I find no provision of the statutes governing this subject nor bearing even remotely upon it. Section 9708 of the General Code provides for the general powers which shall be given to banks by the state. In brief these are, that the persons forming a banking corporation shall, upon compliance with the statutes, become a body corporate, with succession, and shall have power to adopt and use and alter a corporate seal; to contract and be contracted with; to sue and be sued; to adopt regulations for the government of the corporation not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the state; and, finally, to do all needful acts to carry into effect the objects for which it was created.

The power given to contract and be contracted with, and to do all needful acts to carry into effect the objects for which it was created, of course, give to a bank very broad powers and, in the absence of any provision prohibiting, even by implication, a bank from securing its depositors by a surety company bond, it seems that this power or right can well be implied.

In Morse on Banks and Banking, 4 Ed., Section 65, in speaking of the endorsement or guaranty of a note by a bank, it is stated that a bank can not be surety for another in any business in which it has no interest and can derive no profit, but > "a warranty of goods sold by the bank, or an endorsement or guaranty of a note negotiated by it, is perfectly lawful; for, besides being rendered necessary and proper by the usual habit of business and by the nature of the case, such transactions are not open to the objections above. They are not contracts upon air; the bank receives value and has a real interest; * * * and even if loss occurs it is attributable to the carelessness or misfortune of the bank in acquiring the subject matter, not in guaranteeing it, and such agreements are not dangerous to the financial health of the community, but beneficial to it."

It seems to me that, as stated by Mr. Morse, it would be decidedly beneficial to the public to have a bank purchase a bond from some substantial surety company as an additional safeguard to its depositors, and that anything that tends to make the deposits of the public in banks more secure should commended.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that under our laws a transaction of this charter would be perfectly legitimate.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT PROVIDING FOR DOUBLE LIABILITY APPLIES TO AMOUNT OF STOCK SUBSCRIBED.

*The language of Article XIII, Section 3 of the amended Constitution, providing for double liability of stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit, to-wit: "shall be held individually * * * to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, in addition to the amount invested in such shares," must be construed to require liability for double the amount subscribed and not merely for double the amount paid in.*

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1912.

Hon. F: E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On September 25th you sent me a request received by you from Mr. L. B.—asking for an opinion as to whether the constitutional amendment providing for the double liability of stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit means that the stockholders of banks having half of their capital stock paid in will be liable to pay in the unpaid portion of their subscription, and then double that, or whether in banks where only one-half of the capital stock is paid in, it will mean that the stockholders will only be called upon to pay the full amount of their subscription.

The proposal which gives rise to this inquiry is No. 34, which, by its adoption at the election held on September 3, 1912, becomes Section 3 of Article XIII of the Constitution, and is as follows:

> "Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable otherwise than for the unpaid stock owned by him or her: except that stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit shall be held individually responsible, equally, ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such corporations, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. No corporation not organized under the laws of this state, or of the United States, or person, partnership or association shall use the word 'bank,' 'banker' or 'banking,' or words of similar meaning in any foreign language, as a designation or name under which business may be conducted in this state unless such corporation, person, partnership or association shall submit to inspection, examination and regulation as may hereafter be provided by the laws of this state."

This constitutional provision, Section 3, Article XIII, of the Constitution, as it stood prior to the amendment, was as follows:

> "Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable otherwise than for the unpaid stock owned by him or her."

It will be seen that the original section is incorporated in the amendment and the single liability for all corporations, including banking corporations, is the same, but in addition stockholders of banking corporations (corporations authorized to receive money on deposit) are held liable to the extent of the amount of their stock in such corporations, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares.

I do not take it that the words "to the amount invested in such shares" means that the stockholder is only liable primarily to the amount he has paid in on the stock subscribed by him, for that would be in contradiction to the first part of the provision, which is that in all corporations stockholders are liable for the unpaid stock owned by them. In other words, that they are liable to the full extent of the stock subscribed, no matter how much may be paid in on the same. This is the primary liability and the amendment applies to the increase, and it seems to me it is plain that it means that this additional liability shall be the extent of the par value of the stock subscribed, no matter whether fifty per cent. has been paid in or not. In other words, for instance, if a person subscribes for one share of stock and pays in fifty per cent. of the value of the same, he would be liable for the fifty per cent. remaining unpaid on his subscription and to one hundred per cent. in addition.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

BANKS AND BANKING—CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT—DOUBLE LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1, 1913—PROHIBITION OF USE OF WORD "BANK" WITHOUT EXAMINATION, REGULATIONS, ETC., NOT EFFECTIVE UNTIL PASSAGE OF LAWS THEREFOR.

That part of Section 3, Article XIII, of the Constitution as amended which provides that "stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit shall be liable for all debts, contracts and obligations of such corporations to the extent of the amount of the par value of their stock therein, in addition to the amount invested in such shares," is self executing and shall be effective from the 1st day of January, 1913.

The second part of said constitutional provision which prohibits persons, partnerships, corporations or associations from using the bank in a business name without submitting to inspection, examination and regulation "as may hereafter be provided by the laws of this state," can take effect only in accordance with laws yet to be enacted providing for such inspection, regulation and examination.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1912.

Honorable F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 20th, you make the following request for my opinion:

> "Please render me an opinion as to whether or not the provisions of Proposition No. 34—Amendment to the Constitution—will automatically go into effect without subsequent action of the legislature, in the event of approval by the electors on September 3rd; and, if so, upon what date?"

This proposal, having been adopted at the election held on September 3, 1912, becomes Section 3, Article XIII, of the Constitution, and is as follows:

> "Dues from private corporations shall be secured by such means as may be prescribed by law, but in no case shall any stockholder be individually liable otherwise than for the unpaid stock owned by him or her; except that stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts and engagements of such corporations, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. No corporation not organized under the laws of this state, or of the United States, or person, partnership or association shall use the word 'bank,' 'banker' or 'banking' or words of similar meaning in any foreign language, as a designation or name under which business may be conducted in this state unless such corporation, person, partnership or association shall submit to inspection, examination and regulation as may hereafter be provided by the laws of this state."

By the schedule to the Constitutional Amendments voted for on September 3, 1912, which schedule is also adopted, the several amendments adopted at said election becomes effective on the 1st day of January, 1913, and therefore this amendment would become effective at that time. The first part of the amendment, providing for dues from private corporations and for the double liability of stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit, is self-executing and becomes effective without any action by the legislature.

The second part of the said provision, which is primarily intended to prevent persons or associations using a business name including the word "bank," "banker," or "banking" unless such person or association submits to examination by the proper state officials, is not self-executing for the reason that our present banking laws only provide for the inspection and examination of banking corporations organized under the laws of Ohio.

Section 711 of the General Code is as follows:

> "The superintendent of banks shall execute the laws in relation to to banking companies, savings banks, savings societies, societies for savings, savings and loan associations, savings and trust companies, safe deposit companies and trust companies and every other corporation or association having the power to receive, and receiving money on deposit, chartered or incorporated under the laws of this state. Nothing in this chapter shall apply to building and loan associations."

Section 724 of the General Code provides:

> "At least twice each year, and also when requested by the board of directors or trustees thereof, the superintendent of banks or an examiner appointed for that purpose shall thoroughly examine the cash, bills, collateral or securities, books of account and affairs of each bank, savings bank, safe deposit and trust company, savings and loan society or association incorporated under any law in this state. Such examination shall be made in the presence of the members of the executive committee or a majority thereof. He shall ascertain if any such corporation, company, society or association is conducting its business in the manner prescribed by law and at the place designated in its articles of incorporation."

From these sections it appears that the jurisdiction of the superintendent of banks as to their inspection and examination applies only to banks incorporated under the laws of this state, and it has been so held. Therefore, the power to examine and inspect persons, partnerships, or associations other than banking corporations not being lodged in the superintendent of banks, and not being given by law to any other state official, it will be necessary for the legislature to include the power to inspect and examine such persons, partnerships or associations in the other powers and duties cast upon the superintendent of banks, or to grant this power and designate these duties to some other official or board, and this portion of this constitutional provision cannot become effective until this is done.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN

Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—NO POWER OF STATE BANKS IN OHIO TO ISSUE BILLS OR NOTES FOR CIRCULATION.

By virtue of Section 13097, General Code, no banks in this state have the power to issue bills or notes for circulation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 27, 1912.

Honorable F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of August 1, 1912, you submit the following inquiry received by you from Honorable Henry J. Ford, Commissioner of the Department of Banking and Insurance, in the state of New Jersey, and you ask if I will give you an opinion as to the same:

> "This Department desires to ascertain the present situation in the several states with regard to the power of the state banks to issue bills or notes for circulation. It is, of course, well known that such power in state banks cannot be actually exercised because of the prohibitive tax of ten per cent. imposed by the federal government upon circulating notes other than those issued by national banks; but it is desired to learn to what extent the power still exists, although not now exercised.
> "I shall, therefore, be obliged if you will advise me whether the laws of your state permit banks to issue notes or bills for circulation, and if so, upon what conditions."

Prior to 1851 in the legislation and decisions of Ohio, the words "banking institution" or "banks" seem to have been applied almost entirely to corporations which were authorized to issue bills and notes for circulation as currency.

In 1815 (13 O. L., 152) the first act was passed which prohibited companies or individuals from issuing bank notes unless the individual was expressly authorized by law, or the company incorporated by law for that purpose. Many special laws were passed incorporating banking companies to do a banking business up to 1845, when an act was passed (43 O. L., 24) providing for the incorporation of a state bank and other banking companies. This act provided for the organization, management, privileges and liabilities of such banks and for currency to be issued by them. The duration of the franchise to be exercised under this act was limited to twenty-one years, expiring May 21, 1866.

The financial troubles through which the people of this state passed prior to 1851 were largely blamed upon the banking system as it then existed, i. e., the paper currency issued by the banks. On account of the feeling against the banks and the agitation against special privileges granted to them and the power to issue currency, the constitutional convention of 1851 adopted Section 7 of Article 13, which is as follows:

> "No act of the general assembly, authorizing associations with bank-powers, shall take effect until it shall be submitted to the people at the general election next succeeding the passage thereof, and be approved by a majority of all the directors voting at such election."

This section relates solely to banks of issue. (See Dearborn vs. The Northwestern Savings Bank, 42 O. S., 617)

The legislature of Ohio, on March 21, 1851, passed an act known as the "Free Banking Act," (49 O. L., 41). This act, though passed after the adoption of the constitution by the convention, was by virtue of Section 1 of the schedule to the Constitution (which provided that all laws in this state in force on September 1 not inconsistent with the Constitution should continue in force until amended or repealed) a valid enactment. It provided for the issue of currency by such banks, and also provided by Section 10 of the act, that the charters of the companies formed under the act should extend until the year 1872. On April 24,1879, the Ohio Legislature, by an act found in 76 O. S., 72, repealed all the sections of the Free Banking Act authorizing the issuance of currency, and also amended Section 17 of the original Free Banking Act (which section as originally enacted prohibited the issuance and circulation of currency, except as authorized by the act) to read as follows:

> "No banking company, either heretofore or hereinafter organized under this law, shall at any time issue, or have in circulation, any note, draft, bill of exchange, acceptance, certificate of deposit, or any other evidence of debt, which, from its character, form, or appearance, shall be calculated or intended to circulate as money; * * *."

This section is now found as Section 13097 of the General Code.

The Free Banking Act exists today practically as originally enacted, with the exception of the repeal of all the sections allowing such banks to issue currency. There are, I think, a few banks still in existence in this state which were incorporated under the Free Banking Act, but they do not, of course, now possess the power to issue currency.

No banks in this state have at this time the power to issue bills or notes for circulation. As shown above, this is expressly forbidden to banks by Section 17 of the act of 1879, and there has been, so far as I know, no attempt to authorize the incorporation of such an institution as provided by Section 7 of Article 13 of the constitution.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

BANKS AND BANKING—CLAIMS OF CREDITORS OF DEFUNCT BANK IN HANDS OF SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS ENTITLED TO PARTICIPATION OF FUNDS IN HAND OF SUPERINTENDENT WHEN PRESENTED AFTER DATE OF FINAL DISTRIBUTION.

The effect of Section 742-3 General Code, providing for notice to conditions of a defunct bank by the superintendent of banks, setting a definite date for the presentation of claims, is to give the claims presented within such date priority. In accordance with the latter part of said section, valid claims presented later than such date, or even later than the date of final distribution, a year after the first publication of notice to creditors, must be allowed by the superintendent so long as there are any funds in his hands applicable to the payment thereof.

Under Section 742-16, unclaimed deposits and dividends upon claims in the hands of the superintendent for six months after the declaration of the final dividends must be deposited in accordance with said section and cannot be distributed to stock holders.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 12, 1912.

Honorable F. E. Baxter, Superintendent of Banks, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of November 16, 1912, in which you make the following request for my opinion:

"Please render to this office an opinion as to whether or not claims filed by creditors of defunct banks after the expiration of one year from date of notice, should be allowed and paid by this department."

Section 742-3 of the General Code provides for notice to be given by the superintendent of banks when he has taken possession of the property and business of the banking corporation. I wish to call your attention particularly to the last sentence of this section. The section is as follows:

"The superintendent of banks shall cause notices to be given by advertisement in such newspaper as he may direct weekly for three consecutive months, calling on all persons who may have claims against such corporation, company, society, or association, to present the same to the superintendent of banks and to make legal proof thereof at a place and within a time not earlier than the last day of publication to be therein specified. The superintendent of banks shall mail a similar notice to all persons whose names appear as creditors upon the books of the corporation, company, society or association. If the superintendent of banks doubts the justice and validity of any claim, he may reject the same and serve notice of such rejection upon the claimants either by mail or personally, and an affidavit of the service of such notice, which will be prima facia evidence thereof, shall be filed in his office. An action upon a claim so rejected must be brought within six months after such service. Claims presented and allowed after the expiration of the time fixed in the notice to creditors, shall be entitled to be paid the amount of all prior dividends therein if there be funds sufficient therefor and share in the distribution of the remaining assets in the hands of the superintendent of banks equitably applicable thereto.

Section 742-7 provides as follows:

"At any time after the expiration of the date fixed for the presentation of claims, the superintendent of banks may, out of the funds remaining in his hands after the payment of expenses, declare one or more dividends, and after the expiration of one year from the first publication of notice to creditors, he may declare a final dividend,—such dividends to be paid to such persons and in such amounts and upon such notice as may be directed by the common pleas court of the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located."

"Dividends and unclaimed deposits remaining in the hands of the superintendent of banks for six months after the order for final distribution shall be by him deposited in one or more state banks of deposits, savings banks or trust companies to the credit of the superintendent of banks in his name of office, in trust for the several depositors or creditors entitled thereto. The superintendent of banks may pay over the moneys so held by him to the persons respectively entitled thereto, upon being furnished satisfactory evidence of their right to the same. In case of doubt or conflicting claims he may apply to the common pleas court of the county in which the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located for an order authorizing and directing the payment thereof. He may apply the interest earned by the money so held by him toward defraying the expenses of the payment and distribution of such unclaimed deposits or dividends to the depositors and creditors entitled to receive the same, and he shall include in his annual report to the governor a statement of the amount of interest earned by such unclaimed dividends."

Section 742-11 provides as follows:

"Whenever the superintendent of banks shall have paid to each depositor and creditor of such corporation, company, society, or association (not including stockholders) whose claim or claims as such depositor or creditor shall have been duly proved and allowed, the full amount of such claims, and shall have made proper provision for unclaimed or unpaid deposits or dividends, and shall have paid all the expenses of the liquidation, the superintendent of banks shall call a meeting of the stockholders of such corporation, company, society or association, by giving notice thereof for thirty days in one or more newspapers published in the county wherein the office of such corporation, company, society or association was located."

Briefly, the above quoted sections provide, first, for notice to be given by the superintendent of banks, upon taking possession of the property and business of the banking corporation, calling on all persons who have claims against such corporation to present same within the time mentioned in the notice, and it seems clear from the last sentence of section 742-3, and from the other sections that I have quoted, that the intent of these statutes is not to bar the holder of valid claims from participating in the distribution of the funds of the bank, if his claim is not presented in the time named in the notice, or within one year from the date of the first publication of the notice, but is to give priority to the creditors who present their claims within the time named, i. e., any claimant who fails to file his claim within the time named in the notice, or within one year from the date of the first publication of the notice to the creditors takes the risk of having the funds in the hands of the superintendent of banks entirely distributed before his claim is presented, in which event he would have no recourse; but even though the year mentioned in Section 742-7 has expired, and the superintendent of banks has paid all claims which have been filed and there still remain funds belonging to the defunct bank in his charge, the holder of the claim would surely be entitled, upon proper proof of same, to payment.

Under Section 742-16, unclaimed deposits and dividends upon claims remaining in the hands of the superintendent of banks for six months after the order for final distribution (which I take it to be the final dividend referred to in Section 742-7) must be deposited in one or more state banks of deposit, savings banks or trust companies to the credit of the superintendent of banks in trust for the several depositors or creditors entitled thereto. This section is specific and mandatory and wherever there are unclaimed deposits, or amounts due by way of dividends to creditors upon claims which have been presented, and which amounts have not been claimed, it is the duty of the superintendent of banks to deposit them as provided in said section, and he cannot include such unclaimed deposits or dividends to depositors or creditors in funds to be distributed by him, and Section 742-11 provides that such provision must be made for unclaimed or unpaid deposits or dividends before the superintendent of banks holds the stockholders' meeting to determine whether the superintendent of banks shall continue to administer the assets of the said corporation, or whether an agent shall be appointed so to do by the stockholders of said corporation.

The latter part of this opinion is not specifically asked for in your letter, but as I feel that it is connected with the question first asked by you, I have included my view on it.

In brief my opinion is that valid claims against a banking corporation, and duly proved and presented, must be allowed by the superintendent of banks so long as there are any funds in his hands applicable to the payment thereof, i. e., at any time prior to the final distribution among stockholders of the remaining assets of the bank; and second, that unclaimed deposits and dividends upon claims in the hands of the superintendent of banks for six months after the declaration of the final dividends must be deposited as provided in Section 742-16, and cannot be distributed to stockholders.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INSURANCE—BURIAL ASSOCIATIONS—INDEMNITY CONTRACTS—BUSINESS BY UNDERTAKERS OF REDUCING FUNERAL EXPENSES UPON PAYMENT OF MEMBERSHIP FEE, ILLEGAL.

A burial association which, upon the payment of a prescribed fee, issues a certificate which entitles the holder to a 50 per cent. reduction upon the funeral expenses of any member of the family, is engaged in the business of indemnity contracts and is therefore, an insurance business within the meaning of Section 665 General Code and must comply with statutory provisions with reference to that business, as a condition precedent to operation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1912.

HON. E. H. MOORE, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of March 2nd in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "Several years ago a number of burial associations were organized in this state in connection with undertaking establishments, which undertook to pay to designated undertakers, a certain amount upon the death of any member, to take care of the funeral expenses of such member.
> "While the various schemes differed in form, yet the effect was the same, and an act was passed that is now embodied in Section 666 of the General Code, inhibiting any such contracts.
> "Certain undertaking companies, in this state, have undertaken to operate in connection with their business, so-called Mortuary Associations, and issue Mortuary Certificates, by the terms of which, it is provided that upon the payment of the sum of one dollar to such association, the holder of fifty (50%) per cent. discount on funeral expenses. These contracts apparently run for a period of one year and are automatically renewable each year upon the payment of a like sum.
> "It has appeared to this department that this contract is both in the nature of insurance and is also within the purview of the section referred to.
> "Issue having been taken with the department upon this question, it is hereby referred to you for your opinion."

Section 666 of the General Code provides as follows:

"No company, corporation or association engaged in the business of providing for the payment of the funeral, burial or other expenses of deceased members, or certificate holders therein or engaged in the business of providing any other kind of insurance shall contract to pay or pay such insurance or its benefits or any part of either to any official undertaker or to any designated undertaker or undertaking company or to any particular tradesman or business man, so as to deprive the representative or family of the deceased from, or in any way to control them in, procuring and purchasing such supplies and service in the open market with the advantages of competition, unless expressly authorized by the laws of this state and all laws regulating such insurance or applicable thereto have been complied with."

I do not think that this particular plan of business would come under this section, but the vital question to be determined is, whether this association, or these persons, are engaging in the business of insurance.

Section 665 of the General Code is as follows:

"No company, corporation, or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance, or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein, or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto, have been complied with."

Mr. May, in his work on insurance, at the very beginning, defines the term (Section 1, Chapter 1, May on Insurance) as follows:

"Insurance is a contract whereby one, for a consideration, undertakes to compensate another if he shall suffer loss."

Judge Crew of the Supreme Court says, in delivering the opinion of the court in the case of State, ex rel vs. Laylin, Secretary of State, 73 O. S. 90, at page 96:

"While we have in Ohio no general statutory definition of insurance, it has been repeatedly held by this court, in numerous cases, that the contract of insurance, is a contract of indemnity."

Mr. Vance in his work on insurance (Chapter 2, page 42) in speaking of the nature of a contract of insurance says:

"The contract of insurance is characterized by the features possessed by other contracts * * *. The primary requisite essential to the existence and validity of every contract of insurance is the presence of a risk of actual loss. The insurer in all cases agrees to assume this risk, in return for a valuable consideration paid to him by the insured. Whenever such an actual risk exists, and that risk is assumed by one of the parties to the contract, whatever be the form which the contract may wear, or the name which it may bear, it is in fact a contract of insurance."

Taking the above definitions in connection with Section 665 above quoted,

I am of the opinion that the contracts entered into by this association with its certificate holders amount "substantially" if not "directly" to insurance. There is the presence of a risk of actual loss, that is, the death of one of the members of the family of the certificate holder which would necessitate the expenditure for a funeral. The association, or individuals styling themselves an association, for the consideration of $1.00 agrees to assume fifty per cent. of this loss; therefore, it seems to me that this must be classed as insurance, and therefore prohibited by Section 665 for the reason that this association or these persons are not authorized by the laws of this state to engage in insurance, and they have not complied with the laws of the state in regard to insurance.

The form of circular issued by this company and its certificates seem to give the impression that it is some sort of a corporation doing an authorized business. It is very questionable then whether, under the doctrine announced in the case of State ex rel. vs. Ackerman, 51 O. S., 163, these individuals do not constitute an association of persons acting as a corporation within this state without being legally incorporated, and would, therefore, be prohibited from engaging in this class of business. But as I have held that the contracts really amount to insurance, and are therefore unauthorized, I do not deem it necessary to go into this matter.

In one of the letters sent to me accompanying this request, the following remarkable statement is made:

> "Undertakers usually make a profit of from 80 to 85 per cent. on all caskets sold, and that the undertaker can afford to, and does, give a 50 per cent. discount on the usual selling price of caskets, and still makes a satisfactory profit."

If this statement be true, and I have no doubt that it is, it seems to me that there is something wrong with the undertaking business, and that citizents, perhaps because payment for undertaking bills is made at a time of great mental distress, are being most outrageously imposed upon. We have had investigations in late years as to the high cost of living, and in view of this statement it seems to me that it would only be proper for an investigation to be made as to the high cost of dying.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General

FOREIGN INSURANCE CORPORATIONS—COMITY—SINGLE PURPOSE—COMPANY AUTHORIZED TO DO CASUALTY BUSINESS AGAINST LOSSES FROM CAUSES OTHER THAN FIRE MAY NOT INSURE AGAINST "LOSS OF USE" OF AUTOMOBILE FROM FIRE—AETNA ACCIDENT LIABILITY COMPANY.

A foreign insurance company organized to do a casualty business other than fire may not be authorized to insure in Ohio against the "loss of the use of an automobile" or for other loss caused to said automobile by fire; for the reasons:

1st. The statutes of Ohio do not authorize such insurance and it is therefore prohibited. Comity will recognize the authorization of other states only when such authorizations extend to rights which may be permitted by Ohio laws.

2nd, Insurance against casualties resulting from other causes than fire, and also against losses caused by fire would be a violation of Sections 9510 and 9511 of the General Code, which restricts insurance to only one of said purposes.

3rd. Insurance against losses from both causes would work a nullification of said Sections 9510 and 9511 of the General Code.

HON. EDMOND H. MOORE, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You ask for my opinion as to whether or not the law of Ohio warrants you to issue licenses to The Aetna Accident and Liability Company enabling them to issue combination policies. The question you wish determined, as I understand it, is whether or not under the statutes of Ohio and the laws of Ohio The Aetna Accident and Liability Company, a foreign company organized to do casualty business other than fire, may issue a policy insuring against loss of the automobile * * * cab or other consequential loss resulting from damage to or destruction of said automobile * * * provided such damage or destruction * * is caused by fire arising from any cause whatever, including self-ignition.

Upon receiving your request Mr. J. W. Mooney, representing The Old Colony Insurance Company, of Boston, Mass., expressed the desire to be heard in argument, taking the view that the issuance of such license was contrary to law. Thereupon I requested him to file written brief stating his reasons why such license should not issue, at the same time advising Messrs. Lemuel J. Collins, C. C. Benner and Edward T. Powell, attorneys for The Aetna Accident and Liability Company, to file their brief setting forth reasons why such license should issue. These gentlemen quickly filed their briefs, copies whereof I am sending you herewith. These briefs were of great aid to me in arriving at a conclusion.

Mr. Mooney's contention is that permission to issue a policy containing the provisions of Clause One of the policy proposed to be issued by The Aetna Accident and Liability Company should be denied for the following reasons:

> "1. The statutes do not permit and therefore deny the right to insure the loss of the use of property.
> "2. For the reason that Clause One of the policy in question when issued by a casualty company squarely violates Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code.
> "3. For the reason that the effect of granting the permission to issue the proposed policy would nullify Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code."

As to Objection One counsel for The Aetna Accident and Liability Company insist that the case of the State ex rel. Sheets, Attorney General, vs. The Aetna Life Insurance Comany, 69 O. S. 317 is decisive in favor of their position.

The first reading of the syllabi in that case would seem to sustain this position, but a closer analysis of it proves the contrary.

The syllabi in said case are as follows:

> "1. A life insurance company incorporated and organized under the laws of another state and authorized by its charter to engage in the business of 'indemnifying employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accident to employes or persons other than employes,' may, upon complying with the statutory requirements regulating deposits by foreign corporations, be licensed and permitted, under favor of Section 3596, Revised Statutes, to engage in and transact such employers' liability insurance in this state.
> "2. In the absence of any statute in Ohio regulating life insurance companies from doing an employers' liability insurance in this state, and the business itself being by statute expressly authorized; a life insurance company incorporated and organized under the laws of a sister state and empowered by its charter to engage in the business of employers' liability insurance, may, by the comity that prevails between the states, be licensed and permitted to transact such business in this state, although our statute has not in express terms conferred upon domestic life insurance companies authority to engage in or transact that particular kind of insurance."

The present case does not come within the principles of either syllabus. The Sheets case was readily decided so far as the merits went under Syllabus One, coming entirely under favor of the then Section 3596 Revised Statutes. The Court, however, went beyond the requirements of that case and made, the conditions under which, in the absence of any statute prohibiting life insurance companies from doing an employers' liability insurance in this state such foreign companies might still be licensed. One of the principal conditions in said Second Syllabus is "and the business itself being by statute expressly authorized." I take it that by the very expression of comity means that the company from a foreign state may do business that is authorized by the laws of our own state. To permit a foreign company to do a kind of business no authorized to be done by any kind of domestic corporation transcends the limitations of comity.

Moreover, the provisions of Section 665 of the General Code seem quite comprehensive. They are as follows:

> "No company, corporation, or association, whether authorized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance, or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein, or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage, unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto, have been complied with."

The decision of the supreme court upon which the applicant relies is not out of harmony with Section 665, but in complete conformity thereto. That is shown from the language "unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state." The essential question is not that a particular line of insurance companies may be authorized to do a particular kind of business, but is the business that is of concern expressly authorized to be done by the laws of this state in the hands of any kind of corporation? If so, the foreign company could lawfully be licensed because the statutes do not disclose that the carrying on of such business was not contrary to public policy, but when the statute forbids any company, corporation or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere to engage in the business of insurance unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, there is no room for comity as to any matters embraced within the statutes.

Having determined this question upon the first ground of objection further investigation would seem unnecessary. However, it may not be amiss to take up the second ground of the objection, to-wit:

> "For the reason that clause one of the policy in question when issued by a casualty company squarely violates Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code."

I will not quote these two sections on account of their length. Sufficient to say, that under Section 9511 no company shall be organized to issue policies of insurance for more than one of the four purposes mentioned in Section 9510, and no company organized for either one of such purposes shall issue policies of insurance of any other.

The only question to be determined is, therefore, whether Clause One provides for insurance against loss arising from fire. It evidently does. No discussion is needed on this point. In addition to that, I have the form of the advertisement placed in my hands by counsel for The Aetna Accident and Liability Company which reads under the heading "County Fire Office."

INSURANCE EFFECTED ON THE MOST FAVOURABLE TERMS. THE BUSINESS OF THIS OFFICE IS CONFINED TO THE UNITED KINGDOM.

Full particulars upon application.

It is not a sufficient answer to the objection to say that the fire insurance is but an incident. If the fire insurance be a species that is part of the genus. Whatever forbids the genus forbids the species. The whole includes the part. The objection made on this ground is in my judgment legally taken. Furthermore, Sections 9510 and 9511 General Code apply to foreign insurance companies as well as domestic, the provisions applicable exclusively to domestic insurance companies only commencing under the head of "Domestic" with Section 9512. The opening language of Section 9510 which fixes the scope of the statutes, expressly refers to foreign insurance companies which are admitted to do business in this state as to domestic corporations, The language is:

> "A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to insure, etc."

Other reasons could be given in support of this view, but it is not considered necessary to give them.

The third objection is in my judgment well taken, to-wit:

> "For the reason that the effect of granting the permission to issue the proposed policy would nullify Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code."

This involves the same reasoning as found in the second objection.

Before having examined the statutes I was of the general impression that the license should issue in this case. Arguments proper to be addressed to the legislature are weighty in support thereof, but this department as well as the great department over which you preside are limited to the interpretation and application of the law as we find it upon the statute books and as construed by the courts.

My conclusion, therefore, is, for the foregoing reasons, that you are not warranted in law in issuing the license to the applicant.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BRIEF ON BEHALF OF OLD COLONY INSURANCE COMPANY OF BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, AGAINST APPLICATION OF THE AETNA ACCIDENT & LIABILITY COMPANY OF HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT, FOR PERMISSION TO ISSUE A CERTAIN FORM OF POLICY IN THIS STATE.

The question for determination is whether or not, under the statutes of Ohio, The Aetna Accident & Liability Company, a foreign insurance company organized to do a casualty business other than fire, may issue a policy insuring

> "against loss of the use of the automobile * * and or other consequential loss resulting from damage to or destruction of said automobile * * provided such damage or destruction * * * is caused by fire arising from any cause whatever, including self ignition."

We contend that permission to issue a policy containing the provisions of clause one of the policy proposed to be issued by The Aetna Accident & Liability Company should be denied for the following reasons:

(1) The statutes do not permit and therefore deny the right to insure the loss of the use of property.

(2) For the reason that clause one of the policy in question when issued by a casualty company squarely violates Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code.

(3) For the reason that the effect of granting the permission to issue the proposed policy would nullify Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code.

THE LAWS OF OHIO DO NOT EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZE AND THEREFORE PROHIBIT INSURANCE AGAINST THE LOSS OF THE USE OF PROPERTY

The proposition is well settled that in this state no insurance company, whether domestic or foreign, may transact insurance business of a kind not expressly authorized by the statutes of this state.

Section 665 of the Code (R. S. 289) provides:

"Section 665. No company, corporation, or association, whether organized in this state or elsewhere, shall engage either directly or indirectly in this state in the business of insurance, or enter into any contracts substantially amounting to insurance, or in any manner aid therein or engage in the business of guaranteeing against liability, loss or damage, unless it is expressly authorized by the laws of this state, and the laws regulating it and applicable thereto, have been complied with."

As to domestic insurance companies, our supreme court in the case of State vs. Pioneer Live Stock Co., 38 O. S., 347, has squarely held that the purposes for which a domestic insurance company may be incorporated are limited to those purposes which are specified in the statutory provisions as to insurance companies, and that the general corporation statutory provisions which permit incorporation for any purpose for which individuals may lawfully associate themselves, are not applicable to insurance corporations.

The syllabus is as follows:

"Section 3235, Chapter I, title 2, of Revised Statutes, which reads: 'Corporations may be formed in the manner provided in this chapter, for any purpose for which individuals may lawfully associate themselves together, except for dealing in real estate or carrying on professional business, must be construed as not authorizing the incorporations of insurance companies, as the organization of such companies is specially provided for in chapters X and XI of same title."

The holding of the above case is approved in State ex rel, vs. Taylor 55 O. S. 61, 68.

In as much, therefore, as the purposes for which a domestic insurance company may be incorporated, and the kinds of insurance it may write, are limited to those purposes and to those kinds of insurance which are expressly authorized by statute, it necessarily follows that the same limitations apply to a foreign insurance company when engaged in the business of insurance in this state, and that a foreign insurance company may engage in only such insurance business as is expressly permitted a domestic insurance company. Any other rule would involve holding that the legislative intent underlying the insurance statutes of this state was to confer upon foreign insurance companies more comprehensive powers as to the nature of the insurance business which they may transact than is conferred upon domestic insurance companies. The statutes contain no sanction for such an inference as to the legislature's intent. Every inference legitimately arising from existing insurance legislation is to the contrary.

Therefore, even apart from Code Section 665, we contend that foreign insurance corporations have no more comprehensive powers as to the kind of risks they may assume than have domestic corporations, and that like domestic insurance companies, they must look to the statutes of Ohio for express authority to do insurance business of the nature which they propose to do.

The proposition that an insurance company, domestic or foreign, is strictly limited to the insurance of such risks as are expressly authorized by statute, is further established by the history of insurance legislation in this state. Thus, in order to enable fire insurance companies to insure also against loss or damage by lightening, explosions and tornado, an express statute (R. S. 3641*a*) was enacted.

Thus again, in order to extend the power of fire insurance companies to insure also against "loss or damage by water caused by the leakage of sprinklers, pumps, tanks, water tanks and fixtures connected therewith," and further to insure against "loss by theft of automobiles and accessories and against damage thereto from this cause," a further amendment to R. S. 3641, expressly to that effect, found in 102 O. L. 359, (Code Sec. 9556) was enacted in 1911.

So too as to casualty companies. When it was desired so to enlarge the powers of casualty companies so as to enable these companies to guarantee the performance of contracts, and to execute and guarantee bonds and undertakings required in actions or proceedings or by law allowed, an express statute to that effect (90 Ohio Laws, page 157, 1893) was enacted.

Again, in order to permit the further enlargement of the powers of casualty companies by permitting these companies to guarantee the validity of titles to real property, an express statute to that effect (93 O. L., page 179) was enacted in 1898.

Again, in order to affect a further extension of the powers of casualty companies and thereby to empower those companies to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to employes, and further to indemnify persons other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations, an express statute to that effect was deemed necessary and was enacted in 1904. (97 O. L. page 408).

The fact that the Legislature deemed it necessary to enact prositive statutes in order to empower fire insurance companies and casualty insurance companies to insure these additional risks is strongly corroborative of the rule that the risks which an insurance company may insure are limited to those risks which are expressly permitted by statute and that insurance companies have no power to issue insurance of a kind not expressly authorized by statute.

In the legislation of Ohio there is no statute expressly or even impliedly authorizing insurance against the loss of the use of personal property. It necessarily follows from the absence of any such express statutory power conferred upon casualty or accident companies to insure against "loss of the use" of property, that no such power exists.

"Clause One" of the policy of The Aetna Accident & Liability Company wherein that company purports to exercise the non-existing power to insure against "loss of the use" is therefore conclusive against the right of that company to issue in this state a policy which contains a clause purporting to exercise that non-existing power.

CLAUSE ONE OF THE POLICY IN QUESTION VIOLATES SECTIONS 9510 AND 9511 OF THE CODE.

Apart from the fact that insurance against damage by "loss of the use of property" is utterly unauthorized and therefore forbidden by the laws of this state, the language of "clause one" of the policy in question shows upon its face that "clause one" of this policy is a mere subterfuge to evade the express provisions of Section 9510 and 9511 of the Code, wherein a company organized to make insurance against loss or damage resulting from accident to property from causes other than fire, is expressly prohibited from issuing policies in this state insuring against loss or damage by fire.

Code, Section 9510 so far as is material is as follows:

> "Section 9510. A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to:
> "1. Insure houses, building and all other kinds of property in and out of the state against loss or damage by fire, lightening and tornadoes, and make all kinds of insurance on goods, merchandise and other property in the course of transportation, on land, water, or on a vessel, boat or wherever it may be.

"2. Make insurance on the health of individuals and against personal injury, disablement or death, resulting from traveling or general accidents by land and water; make insurance against loss or damage resulting from accident to property, from cause other than fire or lightning: guarantee the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, who are required to, or, in their trust capacity do receive, hold, control, disburse, public or private moneys or property; guarantee the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and execute and guarantee bonds and undertakings require or permitted in all actions or proceedings, or by law allowed; make insurance to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to employes or persons other than employes and to indemnify persons and corporations other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accident to other persons or corporations. But a company of another state, territory, district or country admitted to transact the business of indemnifying employers and others, in addition to any other deposit required by other laws of this state, shall deposit with the superintendent of insurance for the benefit and security of all its policy holders, fifty thousand dollars in bonds of the United States or of the state of Ohio, or of a county, township, city or other municipality in this state, shall not be received by the superintendent at a rate above their par value. The securities so deposited may be exchanged from time to time for other securities. So long as such company continues solvent and complies with the laws of this state it shall be permitted by the superintendent to collect the interest on such deposits."

Code, Section 9511 expressly provides:

"Section 9511. No company shall be organized to issue policies of insurance for more than one of the above four mentioned purposes, and no company organized for either one of such purposes shall issue policies of insurance of any other."

It will be observed that Code, Section 9510, supra, divides insurance companies of the kinds there enumerated into four distinct classes with reference to the purpose for which they may be organized and may issue policies upon property as follows:

1. Insurance companies covering against fire, lightning, tornado and insurance companies covering upon goods in the process of transportation.
2. Insurance companies covering against casualty other than fire.
3. Live stock insurance companies, and
4. Deposit insurance companies insuring the safe keeping of books, stock, etc.

By Code Section 9511 it is expressly provided that no company shall be organized to issue policies of insurance for more than one of the above four mentioned purposes and no company organized for any one of said purposes shall issue policies of any other.

It will be observed that the above statutes apply as well to foreign insurance companies as to domestic, the provisions applicable exclusive to domestic insurance companies only commencing under the head of "Domestic" with Section 9512. Moreover, the opening language of Section 9510, which fixes the scope of the statute, expressly refers as well to foreign insurance companies which are admitted to do business in this state as to domestic insurance companies. The language is:

"A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to insure, etc."

Furthermore, subdivision two of Section 9510 contains certain requirements which apply only to foreign liability companies insuring employers, etc. It necessarily follows from the insertion of these special requirements as to foreign liability companies, that apart from these special requirements upon foreign liability companies, the provisions of 9510 and 9511 of the Code apply as well to foreign as to domestic insurance companies.

Since, therefore, the provisions of Sections 9510 and 9511 apply to The Aetna Accident & Liability Company, though that company is a foreign company, do the provisions of clause one of the policy in question violate the provisions of Sections 9510 and 9511? We contend that clause one of the policy in question clearly violates those statutes.

The agreement contained in "clause one" of the policy proposed to be issued to "indemnify against other consequential loss resulting from damage or destruction * * by fire," is clearly an express agreement to insure against loss or damage by fire, and therefore falls squarely within the first subdivision of Section 9510 of the Code.

The policy in question by "clause three" insures against "loss or damage * * if caused solely by collision * * (excluding from coverage under this clause all loss or damage by fire)," This clause of the policy therefore falls squarely within subdivision two of Section 9510 of the Code, which permits insurance to be issued "against loss or damage resulting from accident to property from cause other than fire."

The policy in question by "clause five" insures against "loss or expense arising from claims upon the insured for damages on account of bodily injuries and/or death accidentally suffered by reason of the ownership, maintenance and/or use of the automobile." This clause also clearly falls within subdivision two of Section 9510 of the Code, which permits insurance to be issued to indemnify persons other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons.

The right of The Aetna Accident & Liability Company to insure the hazards covered by clauses three and five, supra, of the policy in questions, is freely conceded. These are risks expressly permitted to a casualty company by subdivision two of Code Section 9510. But our contention is that The Aetna Accident & Liability Company, which is concededly a casualty company, and which is concededly by clauses three and five of the policy in question, issuing a casualty policy, is expressly prohibited by Code Section 9511 from insuring against loss or damage by fire as it purports to do in clause one of the policy by use of the words "against other consequential loss resulting from damage or destruction * * by fire." The presence of these words alone in clause one of the policy should therefore be conclusive against granting to this company the privilege of issuing such a policy in this state.

More subtile, but no less squarely in conflict with the provisions of Code Section 9510 and 9511, is the further language in clause one of the policy insuring against "loss of use * * resulting from damage or destruction * * by fire."

As to this language one of two alternatives must be true:

Either this language constitutes an assumption of liability for loss or damages by fire, or else it does not. If it does not constitute an assumption of liability for loss or damage by fire, then it is a device to defraud the insuring public by a pretense of assuming a liability which is not actually assumed. We feel confident that this department would not desire to be a party to such device by permitting the issuance of such a policy.

If, on the other hand, this language does constitute an assumption of liability for loss or damage by fire, then, as in the case of the other language of clause one heretofore discussed, we have a policy purporting to insure against loss or damage from accident other than fire and simultaneously by this language of clause one purporting to insure against loss or damage by fire.

The proposition that the agreement to insure against "loss of the use" of property by fire, is in fact an agreement to insure against loss or damage to the property itself by fire is conclusively established by reference to the provisions in the policy in question as to payment of the loss.

> "Provided further that all loss of use and/or other consequential loss insured under this clause of the policy shall be liquidated in full by the suitable replacement of the parts destroyed and repair of the damage sustained and payment to the assured of a daily indemnity as provided in condition thereof while repair or replacement is being effected (the company reserving the right to replace and retain the damaged automobile and/or its operating equipment or, at the option of the company and in lieu of all other indemnity under this clause of the policy, by payment to the assured of the sum provided for total liability in condition N hereof, the company retaining the salvage if any."

Clause N of the policy is as follows:

> "N. The company's total liability for loss of use and/or other consequential loss (including daily indemnity) as defined in clause one of this policy is limited to----------Dollars ($----); and, within such limit, the company's liability for daily indemnity as defined in said clause one shall be ----------Dollars ($----) per day beginning on the eighth day after mailing or delivery of notice as provided in condition F hereof."

The company under this policy therefore reserves the express right to liquidate all claims for "loss of use" and for "other consequential damage," by a suitable replacement of the parts destroyed, or at its option in lieu of all other indemnity under this clause of the policy by payment of the sum provided for total liability. In other words, the use of this language in clause one of the policy is simply a device under the guise of indemnifying for the "loss of the use by fire of the automobile, instead to place in the hands of the insured what is in fact indemnity for the value of the property, the automobile itself, and for loss and damage by fire thereto.

If, then, this language of clause one constitutes an agreement to insure against loss or damage by fire, this language therefore constitutes a square violation of Section 9510 and 9511 of the Code.

We submit that Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code squarely prohibit the issuance by any insurance company of a policy which insures against liability for personal injuries or death to other persons, and against loss or damage to property by accident other than fire, and which at the same time insures against loss or damage by fire.

THE EFFECT OF PERMITTING THE ISSUANCE OF SUCH A POLICY

The desirability of an automobile policy which would insure against loss or damage by fire and at the same time against loss or damage resulting from accident other than fire, is utterly beside the point in the determination, of the question. The desirability of such a policy may be conceded. Yet the existing legislation, with its clear prohibition against such a policy, must exclude any company from the right to issue such a policy in this state. If such a policy is desirable and for public interest, then that fact should have weight with the legislature. That fact can have no force with this department, whose only duty and whose only power is to construe and enforce the law as it finds the law.

To permit the issuance of such a policy as is here proposed would overthrow all of the statutory safe guards which the legislature has sought to throw about the insuring public. The rule of Sections 9510 and 9511 which prohibit insurance companies belonging to one subdivision under the classification of Section 9510, to issue policies insuring risks belonging to any other subdivision under that classification has for its sole purpose the increase of the security of the insuring public. Yet the right, if it were conferred by this department, to issue such a policy as is here proposed would leave not this company alone, but all companies with no restriction whatever as to the nature of risks which they may assume.

If this company, by the magic words "loss of the use" * * * by fire," may evade the statute and while insuring against accident, may at the same time insure against loss or damage by fire, then all fire insurance companies may likewise evade the statute and insure against accident by the same magic words, "against loss of the use by accident."

If this is true as to automobile insurance, it is true as to all other insurance of property against loss and damage. If this company may disregard Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code, then all companies may do so, and in a single policy we may have accident insurance, fire insurance and liability insurance. The far reaching and disastrous consequences which would follow the granting of the permission here sought can not be overestimated. The granting of such permission would, we submit, amount to nothing short of nullification, both in letter and in spirit, of Sections 9510 and 9511 of the Code.

We earnestly urge that permission to issue such a policy in this state as is here proposed by The Aetna Accident & Liability Company should be refused.

Respectfully submitted,

Attorney for the Old Colony Insurance Company, of Boston, Massachusetts.

IN THE MATTER OF THE AETNA ACCIDENT AND LIABILITY COMPANY FOR COMMISSION TO ISSUE COMBINATION POLICY.

HON. T. S. HOGAN, Attorney General, State of Ohio, State Capitol, Columbus, Ohio.

SIR:—With reference to the application of this company for authority to issue its combination automobile policy in Ohio, we understand no objection is made to the coverage furnished by this policy except that the question is raised whether, under clause one of the policy, whereby this company undertakes to insure against loss and use and other consequential loss resulting from damage to automobiles, the company is in effect undertaking to transact what is commonly known as fire insurance, or, as termed in Subsection 1 of Section 9510 General Code of Ohio, "loss or damage by fire."

We submit that loss of use insurance or, as it is called in Europe, consequential loss insurance is not fire insurance as commonly understood nor as contemplated by the section of your statutes above quoted.

In order to make clear this point, it will be necessary to recite briefly the origin of consequential loss insurance. This form of insurance originated in England some ten years ago, and since has been introduced into other European and foreign countries as a scientific but entirely distinct form of coverage from fire insurance.

Consequential loss insurance sets out to differentiate between actual material damage loss (usually called loss or damage) and the financial loss caused by the interruption of a business or industry due to the loss of use of machinery or other means of carrying on such business or industry.

In other words, the original insurers of this new form of insurance discovered that in certain lines of industry it frequently happened that the material damage loss (actual loss or damage) might be infinitesimal, while the consequential loss, due to the interruption of an entire business, might be very large indeed; and furthermore, that fire was only one of many causes of such consequential loss or loss of use.

As an illustration: The engine house of a large factory might be damaged or destroyed. The material damage loss (actual loss or damage) would be very small compared to the consequential loss due to the stoppage of the whole of the plant on account of a vital part thereof having been affected. Also, the cause of such consequential loss might be due to an explosion, collapse of building, sprinkler leakage or other cause than fire.

Thus, insurance against consequential loss sets out primarily to insure against the financial loss due to interruption or stoppage (i. e. loss of use) of a business or industry by undertaking to pay a daily, weekly or monthly indemnity for such consequential loss; but in practice the insurer minimizes the payment of such indemnity for loss of use (to the benefit of the assured) by taking in hand the repairs or replacements necessary to enable the assured to resume his business operations, and in doing so the insurer will be willing to spend much more than the regulation sums necessary to repair or replace in order to expediate the resumption of business in much less time than the normal.

A fire insurance policy insures a specific value against damage to property by fire. It pays $5 if the actual damage loss by fire is $5, or $500 if the actual damage loss by fire is $500.

A loss of use or consequential loss insurance policy pays the same daily, weekly or monthly indemnity during interruption or stoppage (loss of use) regardless of whether the actual damage loss is $5 or $5,000; and it does not limit the cause of loss to fire.

It also undertakes expeditious repairs or replacement as being part of the consequential loss sustained, and in order to put a stop to the interruption or loss of use.

In short, there are now two forms of insurance in Europe, namely:

> "(1) Consequential loss insurance, which insures against actual loss or damage by fire and which, of course, continues to be the principal form of protection used by traders and others to cover against actual loss or damage to property by fire.
> "(2) Consequential loss insurance, which is used in those cases where fire is only one of the causes of loss, and where the danger of consequential loss due to interruption or stoppage would be very serious as the result of even slight material damage to some vital part of a concern's operation.

Such loss of use insurance is particularly adaptable to automobiles, since slight damage to vital parts of the mechanism so frequently cause total loss of use of an automobile during repairs.

This company's charter specifically authorizes it to insure against consequential loss or loss of use insurance as above outlined, but it is only seeking permission under its combination automobile policy to insure against loss of use or other consequential loss resulting from damage to or destruction of automobiles from accidental and external causes, of which fire happens to be one, albeit, it is only an incident that it is one.

It is submitted that Subsection 1 of Section 9510 General Code of Ohio, in prescribing loss or damage by fire, could not and did not contemplate scientific loss of use or consequential loss insurance.

It is therefore submitted that since such form of insurance is neither specifically permitted nor prohibited by statute in Ohio, and since the company is authorized by its charter to write this special form of insurance, therefore, it should be within the discretion of the Insurance commissioner to authorize this company to issue its combination automobile policy in Ohio, inasmuch as there is nothing in such form of insurance against public policy.

As bearing upon this question, a communication received by this company from the insurance commissioner of Tennessee (copy herewith) may be of interest.

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE
STATE OF TENNESSEE

G. T. TAYLOR, Commissioner, C. M. JOSEPH, Deputy

NASHVILLE, June 10. 1912.

The Aetna Accident & Liability Co., Hartford, Conn.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of yours of the 6th inst., attaching specimen of your combination automobile policy, and have carefully examined clause one relating to the loss of use of an automobile resulting from external and accidental causes (fire included) and after this examination, together with your explanation of the policy in question, this department will have no objection to the issuance of this contract in Tennessee under your license as it now stands.

Very truly yours,
G. T. Taylor, Ins. Com.
By C. M. Joseph, Deputy.

Note the company's license does not authorize "Fire Insurance."

REPLY BRIEF

HON. T. S. HOGAN, Attorney General, Columbus, Ohio.

SIR:—In reply to brief of Attorney J. M. Mooney, filed ostensibly in behalf of the Old Colony Insurance Company, of Boston, Mass., as objecting to the petition of The Aetna Accident and Liability Company for permission to write loss of use and other consequential loss insurance on automobiles under its combination automobile policy:

The gist of said brief aims at showing a domestic insurance company in Ohio could not be organized to transact any form of insurance not specifically prescribed by statute; and that, therefore, a foreign insurance company operating in Ohio cannot be authorized to transact a form of insurance in Ohio not specifically prescribed by Ohio statute, although such company may be authorized by its charter to transact such insurance.

We believe such a contention would find no favor with you provided the form of insurance was not against public policy, and we think we need go no further in support than to cite the decision rendered by the Supreme Court of Ohio in 1904, State ex rel. Sheets Attorney General, vs. Aetna Life Insurance Company. 69 N. E. 608, from which may be quoted, 69 O. S. 317.

> "An insurance company organized under the laws of a sister state, and authorized by its charter to write * * insurance may, by the law of comity, be licensed and permitted to write such insurance in this state upon complying with the requirements of the statutes of this state as to deposits, etc., even though the right to transact that particular kind of insurance may not have been exercised by, or conferred upon domestic * * insurance companies by positive statutory grant.
> "If the business is within the charter powers of such foreign company, it is enough that such business is not prohibited in this state, is not obnoxious to the policy of our laws, and is not against the interests of our citizens.
> "The rule is that, where there is no positive statute, the presumption, under the law of comity that prevails between states of the Union is that the state permits a corporation organized in a sister state to do any act authorized by its charter or the law under which it is created, except when it is manifest that such act is obnoxious to the policy of the law of this state."

Regarding contention in objector's brief that the language of clause one of the Aetna's combination automobile policy either:

> "(a) Constitutes an assumption of liability for loss or damage by fire, or
> "(b) Is a device to defraud the insuring public by a pretense of assuring a liability which is not actually assumed."

The Aetna's brief dated June 22nd (copy wherewith) declaring with the character of loss of use and consequential loss insurance, will conclusively show that such insurance is not insurance against loss or damage by fire as generally understood or as contemplated by your statutes at the time of their enactment.

Perusal of the policy contract, as well as the generally acknowledged integrity and reputation of the Aetna, is the answer to the contention "(b)."

Permission to write the combination automobile policy is sought by the Aetna on the broad ground of furnishing the public with what they need, and should surely not meet with any opposition from fire insurance companies, who, without opposition from casualty companies, have invaded the casualty field in Ohio, as elsewhere, in their laudable desire to write insurance on automobiles so as to give the policy holders not only protection against loss or damage by fire and lightning, but also loss or damage by theft and collision.

Although fire insurance companies are now authorized by statute to write theft insurance on automobiles in Ohio, they are not, on Attorney Mooney's own showing, authorized by statute to write collision insurance, as is being done by some of them in that state.

The broad minded attitude of the state of Ohio in allowing this, is doubtless actuated by a desire to foster competition in the best interests of the people, as expressed by the Supreme Court in the decision above cited, and from which we again quote:

"It is not the policy of the state to repeal or discourage solvent, reputable foreign corporations from doing business within its borders, and the courts will not anxiously seek an excuse in the statutes to drive them out."

Respectfully submitted,
LEONARD J. COLLINS,

INSURANCE—REBATING PROHIBITION DOES NOT PREVENT EXTENSION OF CREDIT BY AGENTS TO CUSTOMERS IN PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS.

It is the intention of Section 1 of the Act of 102 (O. S.) P. 81 to prevent rebating and such section does not extend to the requirement that all payments of premiums shall be made in cash.

The practice universally indulged in by agents therefore of extending credit to customers in the payment of premiums is not illegal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 19, 1912.

HONORABLE E. H. MOORE, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On July 9, 1912, you made the following request for my opinion:

"House Bill No. 188, page 81, Vol. 102,Laws of Ohio, was designated to prevent rebating under fire insurance policies, and I wish to inquire concerning the bearing of this law upon the subject of credit given to policy holders for the payment of premiums.

"For instance, local agents—and the practice is uniform so far as most agents are concerned—are given by the companies they represent a certain period of time in which to make collection and remittance of premiums on the fire insurance policies issued by them. This period does not exceed, at its maximum, forty-five days, at which time the companies expect a remittance covering every premium due.

"It is a practice indulged in by many agents who wish to favor a customer, to often carry a particular customer for an extended term, advancing the premium when required by the company, and allowing the favored customer additional time—the account many times running for three, six, nine, and even twelve months and longer.

"At times, the agent will take his customer's note for from one to four months, bearing interest, and will let his bank carry the note— the agent, of course, endorsing the note and standing good for its payment when due. Not infrequently, when the note is due, the agent will accept a partial payment, taking a further note for the difference, and that in turn is carried for his account at his bank, thus giving the customer still further time for payment. More frequently than through the method of a note, the agent will simply advance his customer's premium and carry it for an indefinite period as an open account without interest."

I should like very much to have your opinion upon the following points:

"Is the giving of credit by an agent to his customer, beyond the time at which the premium is required by his company, say forty-five days, through the medium of a note given by the customer to the agent who in turn endorse it, such note bearing interest and being given to the agent within the forty-five days or such period of credit given the agent by his customer, the agent advancing the premium to the company and either carrying the note till it matures or turning it over to his bank and receiving credit for it from his bank—is this practice in violation of the law referred to?

"If the above practice is in your opinion legal, would it be in violation of the law to accept a note as above without interest, the agent, in order to favor his customer, either carrying the account in that shape, or, if he discounts the note at his bank, standing the discount himself.

"Or, is it legal for the agent under any circumstances to advance a premium to his company without any settlement with his customer, the account being carried by him for an indefinite term, without a note or other evidence of indebtedness being given him, and either with or without a charge for interest on the outstanding premium when it may be subsequently paid."

The act to which you refer, House Bill No. 186, passed April 13, 1911, (102 Ohio Laws, page 81) is as follows (I only quote Section 1 of said act, as that is the only section necessary to consider with reference to your request) :

"Section 1. No corporation, association or co-partnership engaged in the state of Ohio in the guaranty, bonding, surety or insurance business, other than life insurance, nor any officer, agent, solicitor, employe or representative thereof shall pay, allow or give, or offer to pay, allow or give, directly or indirectly, as inducements to insurance, and no person shall knowingly receive as an inducement to insurance any rebate of premium payable on the policy, nor any special favor or advantage in the dividends or other benefits to accrue thereon, nor any paid employment or contract for services of any kind or any special advantage in the date of the policy or date of the issue thereof, or any valuable consideration or inducement whatsoever not plainly specified in the policy or contract of insurance or agreement of indemnity, or give or receive, sell or purchase, or offer to give or receive, sell or purchase, as inducements to insurance or in connection therewith any stock, bonds, or other obligations of an insurance company or other corporation, association, partnership or individual. But the provisions of this act shall not apply, however, to prevent the payment to a duly authorized officer, agent or solicitor of such company, association or co-partnership of commissions at customary rates on policies or contracts of insurance effected through him by which he himself is insured, provided such officer, agent or solicitor holds himself out as such and has been engaged in such business in good faith for a period of six months prior to any such payment; nor shall this act prohibit a mutual fire insurance company from paying dividends to policy holders at any time after the same has been earned."

The question to be answered is, whether the giving of credit by an agent to his customer is forbidden by the provision of the above quoted section, that "no agent * * * shall pay, allow or give, or offer to pay, allow or give, directly or indirectly, as inducements to insurance, * * * any valuable consideration or inducements whatsoever not plainly specified in the policy or contract of insurance * * *," for it must be conceded that no other provision of this law could possibly cover this practice.

The question really is, can time within which to pay an insurance premium be given to a customer by an agent at all? The law does not specifically mention this practice, nor does it provide any time within which premiums shall be paid to the insurance companies. Therefore, the fact that companies extend to agents a period of forty-five days, or any other period, within which to settle for premiums collected by them, cannot enter into the consideration of this question; nor does the question depend for its solution in any way upon the fact as to notes being taken or not taken by the agent for the premium, or upon time when such notes are to become payable.

Sifting the question still further, it amounts to this, under the section above quoted, must all premiums for insurance be paid by the insured to the agent in cash? For, if credit is forbidden upon the assumption that for the agent to give credit to the insured amounts to a valuable consideration or inducement to insurance, then the extent of the credit is immaterial, and credit extended for one day would violate the requirements as well as credit extended for a longer period of time. It would be a favor granted to the insured.

Now, is it the intention of the law to prevent this? That is, to distinguish the business of insurance from all other classes of business so far as extending credit is concerned, and to provide that all payments made to insurance agents must be made in cash. It does not seem to me that this can be taken as the intention of this law. Its intention is to prevent rebates, that is, in its primary sense, payment back to the insured by the agent of some part of his premium, and the law has been so drawn as to cover such rebates in any possible form they might be made, but the practice above referred to does not amount to rebating; the full premium is paid to the company, and no concession, rebate or consideration not expressed in the policy whatever is given by the company to the insured; as between the company and the insured, the transaction is entirely closed when the company settles with the agent. To hold that the agent cannot extend credit to his customers, it seems to me, would work a great hardship, both upon the agent and upon the public, without, as I view it, any sufficient reason. It may be said that the practice of giving credit by agents to customers whose credit is good, and upon whom they may rely for payment, works a hardship upon the customer who is refused credit and compelled to pay cash. This may be true, but it is equally true of every branch of business in existence in which credit is extended, and this practically includes all business. It seems to me, therefore, that if the legislature had intended to prevent the giving of credit by agents to persons who insure with them, in other words, to require that all insurance premiums be paid in cash by the insured to the agent, it would have so provided in unequivocal terms. The practice is of such long existence, in such universal use, and so well known that I cannot conceive that, had the legislature thought it wise to prevent it, it would have done so by inference only.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that this practice cannot be included within the inhibitions of the act above quoted, and, for the reasons above stated, that the act is entirely silent upon this question, the questions propounded seriatim by you as to the giving of notes, the time of the same, etc., are all answered by the above conclusion, for the question is whether credit can be extended at all, and not as to the character or amount of the credit.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TRAVELING EXPENSES AND EXPENSES OF CONVENTIONS OF NATIONAL INSURANCE COMMISSIONERS ALLOWED.

Inasmuch as conventions of the National Insurance Commissioners are of vital interest to the proper administration of the state insurance department, and necessary to its efficient management, vouchers covering part of the expense of publishing reports of the meetings of its various committees, of stenographers and other like expenses, of yearly publication of a volume showing the value of securities to be deposited with the departments, a copy of which is furnished to each state, may be paid from the fund appropriated (102 O. L. 393) for traveling expenses of superintendent and employees on official business and at meetings of actuaries and insurance department officials.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 27, 1912.

HONORABLE E. H. MOORE, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of September 14, 1912, asking my opinion as to whether or not a certain voucher issued by your department to the secretary and treasurer of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, to cover the Ohio Insurance Department's share of the expenses of such National Convention lately held at Spokane, Washington, is legal and should be honored by the auditor of state.

You state that it is only through the conventions of the National Insurance Commissioners that the various state insurance departments keep in touch with one another and with the rulings of the various departments, and many other matters of vital interest to the proper administration of the state insurance department; that through these conventions practical uniformity in insurance legislation is being achieved; that these conventions are attended by the heads of insurance departments and other insurance officers of the states in the Union which maintain insurance departments; and that the expenses of such officials in attending such meetings are uniformly borne by the respective states.

It is also stated that a part of the expenses necessarily attendant upon such meetings are those covered by the voucher to which you refer, which include the expenses of publishing reports of the meetings and its various committees, stenographic and other like expenses, yearly publication of a volume showing the values of securities to be deposited with the various departments, a copy of which is furnished to each state, and other publications of the utmost value to your department in its workings, and that the voucher to which you refer is to pay the share of such expenses assessed to the state of Ohio.

I understand that it is considered by yourself, and was considered by your predecessors in the insurance department, that participation in these conventions was and is essential to the proper and efficient administration of the insurance department of Ohio.

I have ruled from time to time that in cases of state officers, where no specific appropriation is made, and where the statutes simply provide that such officers should be entitled to their actual and necessary expenses in the performance of their duties, that the expense of attending conventions and meetings of the heads of department could not be considered and allowed as an expense properly payable out of the appropriations for their departments, and that the only expenses that could be allowed to such officers were those actually incident to the performance of their duties.

But as I view it, the situation in regard to your department, and particularly in regard to the convention to which you refer, is different. In the general Appropriation Act (102 O. L., 393), at page 402, in the appropriations for the insurance department is found the following:

> "Traveling and other expenses of superintendent and employes on official business and at meetings of actuaries and insurance department officials----------$3,700.00"

This appropriation is in addition to the appropriation for contingent expenses, and the appropriations for furniture and carpets made to your department. As this appropriation has been made in this way for several years by the legislature, and from it is has been the custom to pay the assessment of the state of Ohio for the purpose of this convention, and no question has ever been raised as to such payment, and as from your letter and from other facts that have come to my knowledge, I coincide with your views that it is of the greatest assistance to the efficient administration of your department to participate in these conventions; it seems to me that it must be considered that this appropriaion was made by the legislature for the particular purpose of providing a fund from which you could pay the assessment of the state of Ohio on account of these conventions, and the necessary traveling expenses in attending the same.

My opinion, therefore, is that the voucher to which you refer is properly issued against this appropriation, and should be honored by the auditor of state.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INSURANCE COMPANIES—REQUIREMENT THAT ALL CAPITAL STOCK OF NON-DOMESTIC LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES BE PAID UP, APPLIES TO COMPANIES WHOSE STOCK HAS BEEN INCREASED—WISCONSIN NATIONAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Under Section 9366, General Code, non-domestic life insurance companies are not permitted to transact any business in this state unless the entire capital stock of the company is fully paid up and invested as required by the laws of its own state.

This section must be construed to require all of the capital possessed by a company at the time it sought to qualify to do business in this state, to be fully paid up and applies to increases of stock. A company, therefore, whose capital stock was originally $100,000 when it was authorized to do business in Wisconsin, but subsequently had increased its capital stock to $400,000, cannot be permitted to do business in this state until the entire $400,000 has been paid up.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 28, 1912.

HONORABLE EDMUND H. MOORE, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On August 27, 1912, you made the following request for my opinion:

> "Section 9366 with reference to the admission of non-domestic life insurance companies provides:

"'Any such company shall not take risks or transact any business of insurance in this state, unless possessed of the amount of actual capital required of similar companies organized in this state under the provisions of this chapter, nor unless the entire capital stock of the company is fully paid up and invested as required by the laws of the state where organized.'

"It has been the uniform ruling of this department under my predecessors, and I have placed the same construction on the statute, that at the time of the admission of any company making application therefor, its authorized capital stock should be fully paid up and invested, as provided in the statute.

"The Wisconsin National Life Insurance Company now makes application for admission to this state and takes issue with such ruling. Its capital stock was originally $100,000 when it was licensed to transact business in the state of Wisconsin. Subsequent to its admission, its capital stock was increased to $400,000, of which it has now issued about $318,300.

"Can this company, while the full amount of its authorized capital is not paid up and invested, as provided by the laws of its state, be admitted to transact the business of insurance within this state?"

Section 9365 of the General Code provides:

"No company organized by act of congress, or under the laws of any other state of the United States, shall transact any business of insurance defined in section ninety-three hundred and eighty-five, on the capital stock or mutual plan, in this state, until it procures from the superintendent of insurance a certificate of authority so to do; nor shall any person or corporation, directly or indirectly act as agent in this state for such a company, either in procuring applications for insurance, taking risks, or in any manner transacting the business of insurance, until such person or corporation procures from the superintendent of insurance a license so to do, in which he shall state that the company has complied with all requirements of the laws of this state applicable to it, and deposits a certified copy of such license in the office of the recorder of the county in which the office or place of business of such agent is established; for which filing the recorder may charge ten cents."

Section 9366 of the General Code provides:

"Any such company shall not take risks or transact any business in this state, unless possessed of the amount of actual capital required of similar companies organized in this state under the provisions of this chapter, nor unless the entire capital stock of the company is fully paid up and invested as required by the laws of the state where organized. But if it is a mutual company, actual cash assets of the same amount and description, invested and deposited as required by the laws of the state where it was organized, shall be accepted in lieu of capital stock."

I suppose that the contention in this matter has arisen because the original capital stock of the said company, namely $100,000, was fully paid up and was the full amount of capital stock required of a similar company in this state by Section 9343, and therefore it is claimed the words "the entire capital stock of the company is fully paid up" refer to the words "possessed of the amount of actual capital required of similar companies organized in this state," that is, that if a company has the amount of capital stock required of similar companies in this state and said capital stock is fully paid up, then, that the requirement as to the capital stock being paid up is fully complied with, and that it would not attach to a subsequent increase of stock. To this view I am unable to give my assent. I realize that quite an ingenious argument could be based upon the contention, but Section 9366 seems to be plain in its meaning and this meaning, as it appears, should be given effect.

The first requirement is that the company must be possessed of the amount of capital required of similar companies organized in this state, and, secondly, that the entire capital stock of the company must be paid up.

There is no statement that its capital stock must only be paid up to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars. The requirements are distinct, and there is nothing in the statute as it stands from which it can be inferred that the requirement that the entire capital stock of the company must be fully paid up means anything more than what it says. In fact, as I view it, the use of the word "entire" indicates clearly that the legislature intended that all of the capital possessed by a company at the time it sought to qualify to do business in the state must be fully paid up.

Very truly yours
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS—CONSTITUTIONAL RULE OF MEMBERSHIP—CONFLICT OF CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

When the constitution of a building and loan association provides that a person can only become a member of the company by subscribing for or becoming the owner of stock, a by-law of such association providing that a person desiring to make straight loans may become a member by depositing $10 is illegal and void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 17, 1912.

HON. E. H. MOORE, Inspector of Building and Loan Associations, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of June 22, 1912, you make the following request for my opinion:

> "A certain building and loan association, a copy of whose constitution and by-laws is enclosed herewith, provides in Article I of the constitution that its object shall be 'the raising of money to be loaned to its members and for such other purposes as are authorized by law' and the same provision is contained in Section 26 of the by-laws. They provide for installment and straight loans and in that same section (top of page 17) is contained the following:
> "'By depositing the sum of ten dollars persons desiring to make straight loans can become a member of this company.'
> "Will you kindly advise whether, in the absence of provisions in the constitution for the making of loans to other than members, they are authorized to make loans under the condition contained in the above-quoted clause?"

Article 1, of the constitution of the company to which you refer is as follows:

"Section 1. The name of this company shall be The———Company and its principal office shall be located in ——, in ——, in the state of Ohio, and the object and purpose of this company shall be the raising of money to be loaned to its members and for such other purposes as are authorized by law."

Article III, Section 1, defines who shall be members of this association, and is as follows:

"Section 1. Any person, upon subscription for, or in any way becoming owner of one or more shares of the capital stock of this company or the fraction of a share of said stock, shall become a member thereof, and as such shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges and subject to all the liabilities and duties of membership as prescribed by the constitution and by-laws."

It will be noted from this article of the constitution that a person can only become a member of this company upon subscribing for, or in some way becoming the owner of one or more shares of the capital stock of the company or a fraction of a share of such stock.

Coming now to the by-laws of this company, Section 26 of the same provides for a loan to members of the company. The first paragraph of this section is as follows:

"Section 26. The funds of the company may be loaned to the members thereof upon real estate, and upon such terms as the board of directors may determine. The board shall have the privilege of rejecting any and all loans, having regard for the character of the applicant as well as the security offered.

This section then goes on to provide for the security which shall be given for loans on real estate; for the application to be made for the same, and classifies such loans as installment and straight loans; installment loans being those to be repaid by weekly payment of dues, interest and premiums; straight loans are those contracted to be paid at a definite future date, with quarterly or semi-annual interest; then follows the following provision:

"By depositing the sum of ten dollars persons desiring to make straight loans can become a member of this company."

It is my opinion that under the laws of this state, and under Section 1 of Article 3 of the constitution of this company, a person can only become a member of this company by subscribing for, or becoming the owner of stock, and that the above-quoted provision of Section 26 of the by-laws of said company is void insofar as it provides that a person can become a member of the company simply by making a deposit of $10.00.

Section 9657 of the General Code is as follows:

"To make loans to members and others on such terms, conditions and securities as may be provided by the association."

Therefore, this company, in order to make loans to persons not members of it, must make proper provision therefor by amendment to its constitution and by-laws; no such provision being incorporated in its constitution as it now stands.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS—"CONTINGENT LOSS" RESERVE FUND—PAYMENT OF TAXES AND COURT COSTS IN FORECLOSING PROCEEDINGS—ATTORNEYS' FEES PAID FROM EARNINGS AS "EXPENSES."

The term "contingent losses," as employed in Section 9671 of the General Code, requiring building and loan associations to pay all such out of a reserve fund created for that purpose, must be distinguished from the term "expenses," which, in accordance with Section 9672 and 9673 of the General Code, are required to be paid out of the earnings.

Ordinarily, when an investigation is being carried upon the books of the company at a profit, the costs of foreclosure, such as taxes, court costs, attorneys' fees, etc., should be charged as expenses and paid out of the earnings.

In a foreclosure proceeding, however, when property mortgaged to the company, is sold at a loss, the term "losses" means "the difference between the amount invested by the loan association in a given case and the amount received back by the company when the investment is terminated." In such a foreclosure, therefore, the difference between the amount loaned and the amount received for the property, after the costs and taxes are paid out of the proceeds of sale, must be charged to the reserve fund authorized under Section 9659 of the General Code for the payment of "contingent losses."

Attorneys' fees in such proceedings not being paid out of the proceeds, and being entirely under the control of the company, should be paid as expenses out of the earnings of the company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 30, 1912.

HON. E. H. MOORE, Inspector of Building and Loan Associations, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 10, 1912, you request my opinion on the following:

> "Section 9659 General Code authorizes building and loan associations
> "'To accumulate from the earnings a "reserve fund" for the payment of contingent losses, and an "undivided profit fund," both of which may be loaned and invested as other funds.'
> "Will you kindly advise whether such authority to use the reserve fund for the payment of 'contingent losses' includes the right to charge against such fund amounts expended to cover taxes, court costs, attorney fees, etc., in foreclosure proceedings or only the actual loss represented by the difference between the amount due the association and the amount realized from a subsequent sale of real estate acquired by the association in the above manner, the payment of amounts due for taxes, court costs, attorney fees, etc., to be made out of earnings the same as other expenses?"

Section 9659 General Code provides as follows:

"To accumulate from the earnings a 'reserve fund' for the payment of contingent losses, and an 'undivided profit fund,' both of which may be loaned and invested as other funds of the association."

Section 9671 General Code provides:

"The amount to be set aside to the reserve fund for the payment of contingent losses shall be determined by the board of directors, but in all permanent or perpetual associations, at least five per cent. of the net earnings shall be set aside each year to such fund until it reaches at least five per cent. of the total assets. All losses shall be paid out of such fund until it is exhausted. When the amount in such fund falls below five per cent. of the assets as aforesaid, it shall be replenished by annual appropriations of at least five per cent. of the net earnings as hereinbefore provided until it again reaches such amount."

Section 9672 of the General Code provides:

"All expenses of such association shall be paid out of the earnings only, and so much of the earnings as may be necessary must be set aside each year for such purpose. But charges incident to a loan, if paid by the borrower, shall not be deemed a part of the current expenses."

Section 9673 of the General Code provides:

"After payment of expenses and interest, a portion of the earnings to be determined by the board of directors, annually or semi-annually, shall also be placed in the reserve fund for the payment of contingent losses, as hereinbefore provided, and a further portion of such earnings to be determined by the board of directors, shall be transferred as a dividend annually or semi-annually, in such proportion to the credit of all members as the corporation by its constitution and by-laws provides, to be paid to them at such time and in such manner in conformity with this chapter as the corporation by its constitution and by-laws provides. Any residue of such earnings may be held as undivided profits to be used as other earnings, except that such undivided profit fund at no time shall exceed three per cent. of the total assets of the association."

Section 9674 of the General Code provides:

"All losses shall be assessed in the same proportion and manner on all members after the amounts in the reserve fund and the undivided profit fund have been applied to the payment thereof."

It will be seen that Section 9659 General Code gives the authority for creating a "reserve fund" and an "undivided profit fund," and the other sections quoted provide for the creation and management of these funds. The statute states the "reserve fund" is for the payment of "contingent losses," and from the language used in Section 9671 General Code "all losses shall be paid out of such fund until it is exhausted, I take it that the words "contingent losses" means whatever losses may occur must be paid out of this fund. It is also seen that the words

"contingent losses" as used in these sections are used in contradistinction to the term "expenses" as used in Section 9672 and 9673 General Code, and that all "expenses" must be paid out of the earnings and not out of the reserve fund.

The question you ask arises from a foreclosure proceeding, and, though it is not so stated, I take it that the association was compelled to buy in the property, and afterwards sold the same, and that, after this sale it charged the amount expended as costs, taxes and attorney fees to the reserve fund. This question should be decided without reference to whether the property is bought in by the company or is purchased at foreclosure sale by some third person, and the procedure as to charging whatever loss occurs, and expenses connected with the foreclosure should be the same in either event. The question is one of fact whether the items named by you should be classed as "losses" or "expenses" for the statute makes it plain that all "losses" must be paid out of the reserve fund and "expenses" must not. I take it that the word "losses" as used in this connection means the difference between the amount invested by the loan association in a given case and the amount received back by the company when the investment is terminated. That is, an actual depreciation of the principal sum invested. For instance, under the statutes quoted the interest on an investment after it is made is credited to the earnings of the company. The amount paid out during the year for repairs, taxes, insurance, etc., would be classed as "expenses" paid out of the earnings under Section 9672 General Code, while the investment would be carried on the books of the company in the actual amount placed by the company in the same. An illustration is perhaps helpful in deciding a question of this character. Suppose the building and loan association has $2,000.00 loaned upon a tract of real estate, said loan being secured by mortgage; it becomes necessary to foreclose the mortgage. The real estate is brought to sale through the foreclosure proceeding; it sells to a third person for $1,500.00. The costs amount to $150.00, the taxes to $150.00 and the attorney fees to $100.00. The purchaser would pay to the sheriff the full amount of his bid, viz. $1,500.00; out of this the court would order paid the costs and taxes amounting to $300.00 and the balance of the purchase price amounting to $1,200.00 to be paid to the association. The attorney fees could not be charged as part of the costs, and, of course, would have to be taken care of by the association irrespective of the amount realized from the sale of the property. Therefore, the loss to the company would be the difference between the amount invested in this real estate, namely, $2,000.00 and the amount received from the sheriff, namely $1,200.00, and would be $800.00, which undoubtedly should be charged to the "reserve fund."

The attorney fees, it does not seem to me, should be so charged, but they should be paid as all the ordinary expenses incurred by the company during the year are paid.

"Expenses" primarily means money paid out. In this instance, the only money paid by the company is the attorney fees, for the costs and taxes are paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the real estate, and it would have to pay its attorney fees irrespective of whether the property sold for more or less than it had invested in the mortgage. Then too, the company has no control whatever over the amount of court costs or taxes, but it does to a certain extent have control of the amount of the attorney fees; that is a matter about which it can contract, and in case it has an attorney employed by the year, who is to perform all its legal services at a given compensation the amount expended by it in a given year as attorney fees would not be affected at all by the foreclosure proceedings. The costs and taxes are inseparable from the foreclosure proceedings; that is, they have a distinct bearing upon the result to the company for they must be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the real estate, and in case the real estate is bid in by the company it must pay these costs and taxes before it can obtain a deed to the property. This is not true as to attorney fees.

Referring again to the case I have stated suppose the property instead of being bought in by a third person is bought in by the company, it seems to me that the procedure would be the same. From the amount bid by the company for the property should be deducted the amount of taxes and costs which it would have to pay before receiving a deed, and the remainder should be subtracted from the amount due the company on its mortgage, and this difference should be immediately charged to the "reserve fund," and the real estate then carried on the books of the company at the amount bid for the same less said costs and taxes.

The transaction should be closed at the time the foreclosure is terminated. and whatever loss has been incurred by the company should be charged to the "reserve fund" at that time, and the property thereafter carried on the books of the company at the cost of the same to the company in the foreclosure case.

I take it from your letter that perhaps no definite rule has been heretofore announced by your department as to the method of charging these items of costs, taxes, and attorney fees in such cases, and I, therefore, suggest that if any building and loan associations have heretofore charged the amount expended by them as attorney fees in foreclosure cases to the "reserve fund" and such charge has been made in good faith and under the belief that it was properly so charged that no exceptions be taken to the same at this time, but that all companies be now advised that henceforth attorney fees incurred in foreclosure proceedings cannot be charged to the "reserve fund," but must be paid out of the earnings.

Very truly yours

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your inquiry of December 23, 1911, which is as follows:

"We most respectfully request your opinion as to the proper construction of Section 20-2 of the act entitled, 'An act to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured, and the dependents of killed employes, and to provide for the administration of such fund by a state liability board of awards,' (102 O. L. 524), as to whether the time therein mentioned, to-wit: January 1, 1912, is mandatory or directory only.

"In requesting your opinion on this matter a word of explanation is perhaps necessary. As you know, an action was brought in the supreme court on November 16th last, the effect of which was to raise the question as to the constitutionality of the act. Since the beginning of this action, no funds have been available for any of the purposes for which appropriations were made by the general assembly for the use of our board, as a consequence of which, our efforts in preparing to put the law into full operation on January 1, 1912, have been seriously handicapped. The action above referred to is still pending in the supreme court undecided, and it is our opinion that until a decision is rendered, employers and employees will not desire to adopt the plan outlined in the act in question.

"We would therefore like to have your opinion at as early a date as possible, as to whether the date mentioned in said section is mandatory, or whether, if this board defers the determination and publication of the 'premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment' required by said section until after that date, employers will nevertheless be deprived of the defenses mentioned in Section 21-1 on and after January 1, 1912."

Section 20-2 of said act is as follows:

"For the purpose of creating such state insurance fund, each employer who employes five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, and his employes in this state, having elected to accept the provisions of this act, shall pay on or before January 1, 1912, semi-annually thereafter, the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment as may be determined and published by the state liability board of awards. The said employers for themselves and their employes shall make such payments to the state treasurer of Ohio, who shall receive and place the same to the credit of such state insurance fund. The premiums provided for in this act shall be paid by the employer and employes in the following proportions, to-wit: Ninety per cent. of the premium shall be paid by the employer and ten per cent. by the employes. Each employer is authorized to deduct from the pay roll of his employes ten per cent. of the said premiums for any premium period in proportion to the pay roll of such employes; no deduction shall be made except for that portion of the premium period antedating such pay roll. Each employer shall give a receipt to each employe showing the amount which has been deducted and paid into the state insurance fund."

Section 21-1 of said act is as follows:

"All employers who employ five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment who shall not pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall be liable to their employes for damages suffered by reason of personal injuries sustained in the course of employment caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer, or any of the employer's officers, agents or employes, and also to the personal representatives of such employes where death results from such injuries and in such action the defendant shall not avail himself or itself of the following common law defenses:

"The defense of the fellow-servant rule, the defense of the assumption of risk, or the defense of contributory negligence."

In answer to your first question my opinion is that the provision in Section 20-2 as to time, under the circumstances, must be considered as directory. The general rule is, as given in Lewis' Sutherland on Statutory Construction, Section 612:

"Provisions regulating the duties of public officers and specifying the time for their performance are in that regard generally directory. Though a statute directs a thing to be done at a particular time, it does not necessarily follow that it may not be done afterwards. In other words, as the cases universally hold, a statute specifying a time within which a public officer is to perform, an official act regarding the rights and duties of others is directory, unless the nature of the act to be performed, or the phraseology of the statute, is such that the designation of time must be considered as a limitation of the power of the officer. * * *"

See also cases cited under this section.

In addition to this, the rule is further, that in deciding whether a statutory provision is directory or mandatory in each case, it is necessary to consider the particular subject matter of the legislation and the importance of the provision, and the relation of the provision to the general object to be attained by the act.

In this particluar instance it has been impossible for your board to put this law into full operation by the date named in the statute, and it seems to me that the conclusion must be that the law is to become operative on January 1, 1912, or as soon thereafter as your board is able to take all the preliminary steps necessary to the proper installment of the law.

Answering your second question, it seems clear that employers will not be deprived of their defense as provided in Section 21-1 of the act until they have been given a chance to comply with the provision of the act, this, of course, the employers cannot do until your board has made all the necessary preliminary arrangements. The employers are in no manner at fault and of course under the act itself cannot be deprived of their defenses unless they have been given an opportunity to accept the provisions of this act. Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS—CLASSIFICATION OF EMPLOYMENTS—PREMIUMS—NO POWER TO DISCRIMINATE AMONG MEMBERS OF A CLASS.

It is the duty of the state liability board of awards to classify employment according to the risk, the total pay roll and the number of men employed, and to fix the premiums of each class accordingly.

The board has no authority to classify in such a way as to afford different rates to different establishments of a determined class.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 28, 1911, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "We desire your opinion as to the extent of the powers and duties of the state liability board of awards as defined by Section 17 of the act entitled, 'An Act to Create a State Insurance Fund for the Benefit of Injured, and the Dependents of Killed Employes, and to Provide for the Administration of Such Fund by a State Liability Board of Awards,' in the following particulars, viz:
> "Under said Section 17 are the powers of the board limited to designating each specific employment as belonging to a class, and fixing a specific definite rate of premium which will apply equally to each and every employer employing workmen or operatives in that particular class of employment? Or, does the board have the further power, after having adopted a classification of employments, to take into consideration the varying conditions under which employers employing workmen or operatives in the same class of employment conduct their business, and vary the rate of premium to be charged accordingly?"

For the purpose of answering your inquiries, I herewith qoute the following sections of the act establishing the state liability board of awards, as found in 102 O. L., 524:

> "Section 17. The state liability of awards shall classify employments with respect to their degree of hazard, and determine the risks of the different classes and fix the rates of premium of the risks of the same, based upon the total pay roll and number of employes in each of said classes of employment, sufficiently large to provide an adequate fund for the compensation provided for in this act, and to create a surplus sufficiently large to guarantee a state insurance fund from year to year.
> "Section 18. The state liability board of awards shall establish a state insurance fund from premiums paid thereto by employers and employes as herein provided, according to the rates of risk in the classes established by it, as herein provided, for the benefit of employes of em-employers that have paid the premiums applicable to the classes to which they belong and for the benefit of the dependents of such employes, and shall adopt rules and regulations with respect to the collection, maintenance and disbursement of said fund.

"Section 20-2. For the purpose of creating such state insurance fund, each employer who employes five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, and his employes in this state, having elected to accept the provisions of this act, shall pay, on or before January 1, 1912, and semi-annually thereafter, the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment as may be determined and published by the state liability board of awards. The said employers for themselves and their employes shall make such payments to the state treasurer of Ohio, who shall receive and place the same to the credit of such state insurance fund. The premiums provided for in this act shall be paid by the employer and employes in the following proportions, to-wit: Ninety per cent. of the premium shall be paid by the employer and ten per cent. by the employes. Each employer is authorized to deduct from the pay roll of his employes ten per cent. of the said premiums for any premium period in proportion to the pay roll of such employes; no deduction shall be made except for that portion of the premium period antedating such pay roll. Each employer shall give a receipt to each employe showing the amount which has been deducted and paid into the state insurance fund.

"Section 21. The state liability board of awards shall disburse the state insurance fund to such employes of employers as have paid into said fund the premiums applicable to the classes to which they belong, that have been injured in the course of their employment, wheresoever such injury has occured, and which have not been purposely self inflicted, or to their dependents in case death has ensued."

In construing Section 17 in connection with the other sections quoted, it seems clear that it is the duty of your board to make a classification of the employments and then to determine the particular class to which a certain employment belongs, and to place it in that class. The rate of premium of each employment in a given class would, necessarily, be the same. If it were held that after your board had made a classification of employments, it had the further right, or it was its duty, to reclassify the different establishments in each class, then it would become necessary for your board to make an independent investigation of the manner in which each employer conducts his business; it is difficult to conceive how accurate information on a subject of this kind could be ascertained; you would either have to depend on hearsay, or to await the outcome of a period of observation. Neither method would be satisfactory or proper. On the other hand, the establishment of a classification of the various employments, by means of statistical information now in existence, can be made with a great degree of accuracy.

My opinion, therefore, is that after you have fixed a definite rate of premium for a definite class that that rate will apply to each and every employer in such class, and that your board has no authority to take into consideration the different conditions under which employers conduct their business, nor to vary the rate in a given class on account of any such consideration.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

STATE LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS—PAYMENT OF INSURANCE FUNDS—STATUTORY PROVISIONS NOT IN CONFLICT WITH SECTION 301 GENERAL CODE—DISBURSEMENT OF STATE TREASURY FUNDS—VOUCHERS SIGNED BY MEMBERS OF BOARD.

Section 19 of the act creating the state liability board of awards providing that disbursements from the insurance fund shall be made upon vouchers signed by members of the board of awards is not in conflict with but is an exception to Section 301 General Code which provides that no money shall be paid out of the state treasury except upon the warrant of the auditor of state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your inquiry of January 2nd which is as follows:

> "Section 19 of the liability law, which is as follows:
> "'The treasurer of state shall be the custodian of the state insurance fund, and all disbursements shall be paid by him, but upon vouchers signed by any two members of the state liability board of awards,' seems to be somewhat in conflict with Section 301 and the relating sections of the General Code of Ohio. Said section 301 is as follows:
> "'No money shall be paid out of the state treasury, or transferred from it to a county treasury or elsewhere, except on the warrant of the auditor of state. No money in the treasury to the credit of the sinking fund shall be paid out except on such warrant and the requisition of the sinking fund commissioners.'
> "It is desired by this department that you reconcile what seems to be a conflict in the laws.
> "This department has assumed that under Section 19 of the liability law disbursement from the state insurance fund may be made upon a warrant or check drawn by the state liability board of awards directly against said fund, and forms and systems have been devised according to this assumption; but, in conference with the state treasurer the question was raised and upon his suggestion this inquiry is addressed to you."

You state that it is desired by your department that I reconcile what seems to be a conflict in the laws. You have quoted the two laws above but to better answer your inquiry I will now quote them again:

> Section 301 of the General Code is as follows:
> "No money shall be paid out of the state treasury or transferred from it to a county treasury or elsewhere, except on the warrant of the auditor of state. No money in the treasury to the credit of the sinking fund shall be paid out except on such warrant and the requisition of the sinking fund commissioners."

Section 19 of the act creating the state liability board of awards 102 O. L., 528 is as follows:

> "The treasurer of state shall be the custodian of the state insurance fund, and all disbursements therefrom shall be paid by him, but upon vouchers signed by any two members of the state liability board of awards."

In my opinion there is no conflict whatever in these laws. The first quoted is the general provision, and in the absence of special provisions controls the payment of all moneys out of the state treasury by the treasurer of state. There is no constitutional provision governing this matter, and therefore it is properly regulated by the legislature. The second law above quoted is not in conflict with the first but is simply a special regulation as to a special fund, and as to that fund controls.

In the case of Cincinnati vs. Connor, 55 O. S. 82, the court per Williams, C. J., used the following language (page 88):

"We recognize it to be a well settled rule of statutory interpretation that: 'Where a general intention is expressed, and also a particular intention which is incompatible with the general one, the particular intention shall be considered an exception to the general one,' and hence 'if there are two acts, or two provisions in the same act, of which one is special and particular, and clearly includes the matter in controversy, whilst the other is general, and would, if standing alone, include it also; and if, reading the general provision side by side with the particular one, the inclusion of that matter in the former would produce a conflict between it and the special provision, it must be taken that the latter was designed as an exception to the general provision.' Endlich on Inter. Stat., Section 216; Sedwick on Stat. and Const. Law, Section 652. Maxwell on Inter. of Stat. p. 202, Second Ed."

In State vs. McGregor, 44 O. S. 628-631 this court held, per Marshall J., that:

"The courts presume an intention in the legislature to be consistent in the making of laws; and also to have had a purpose in each enactment and all its provisions. Special circumstances often create a necessity for appropriate special provisions different from the general rule upon the same subject; and so, where such provisions are found in a statute, different from the general provisions that would apply to the case, the courts must assume that the special provisions were made for adequate reasons, and give them effect by construing them as exceptions to the general rule in the general provisions of the statute."

See also the case of Gas Company vs. Tiffin, 59 O. S. 420-441 in which Judge Williams uses the following language:

"It is a settled rule of construction, that special statutory provisions for particular cases operate as exceptions to general provisions which may otherwise include the particular cases, and such cases are covered by the special provisions."

These citations, it seems, definitely settle this question, and it may further be said that this fund is different from any other fund in the hands of the treasurer of state. In its proper sense it is not the money of the state at all, but belongs to the employers and employes contributing to said fund, and the state simply acts as trustees for the same, and there are many reasons which may, and probably did, actuate the legislature in providing for a less cumbersome and more prompt method of making payments out of the same.

My opinion, therefore, is that this fund is to be dispensed by the treasurer of state upon voucher signed by two members of the state liability board of awards.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY LAW—"AVERAGE WEEKLY WAGE"—"IMPAIRED EARNING CAPACITY"—DISCRETION OF BOARD

The "average weekly wage" as a basis for payments to injured or killed employes, within the meaning of the employers' liability law is the amount earned weekly by such employes, except in those cases specifically provided for wherein an injured employe is of such age and experience that under natural conditions, his wages might be expected to increase. In this instance the discretion of the board must be allowed to rule upon special circumstances of each case. The same discretion must be exercised in determining the "impaired earning capacity."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following letter from you, dated December 28, 1911:

> "We desire the opinion of your department as to the proper construction of Sections 26, 27, 28 and 31 of the act entitled, 'An act to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured, and the dependents of killed employes, and to provide for the administration of such fund by a state liability board of awards,' in the following particulars, viz.:
> "1st. Section 26 provides that 'in case of temporary or partial disability' an injured employe shall receive 'sixty-six and two thirds per cent. of the impairment of his earning capacity,' etc.
> "What elemtnts are to be considered by us in determining the 'earning capacity?'
> "2nd. Section 27 provides that 'in case of permanent total disability the award shall be sixty-six and two thirds per cent. of the average weekly wage,' etc. Section 28 also makes the 'average weekly wage' the basis of payments made to dependents of killed employes, Section 31 provides: 'the average weekly wage of the injured person at the time of the injury shall be taken as the basis upon which to compute the benefits.'
> "The many questions that the language of the foregoing sections suggest are obvious, and inasmuch as this board is required by Section 17 of the act to base the rates of premium to be charged upon the total payroll (which we understand to mean the annual payroll) and the number of employes (which we understand to mean the average number for the payroll period) it is apparent that the method of ascertaining the 'average weekly wage' which forms the basis of payments from the fund, will be an important factor in determining the rates of premium to be charged, to create the fund.
> "We are now engaged in the classification of employments and the fixing of rates, and before proceeding further respectfully request your construction of the sections of the act hereinbefore enumerated."

The sections to which you refer, as they appear in 102 O. L. 524, (at page 530 et seq.) are as follows:

"Section 26. In case of temporary or partial disability, the employe shall receive sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of the impairment of his earning capacity during the continuance thereof, not to exceed a maximum of twelve dollars per week, and not less than a minimum of five dollars per week, if the employe's wages were less than five dollars per week, then he shall receive his full wages; but not to continue for more than six years from the date of the injury, nor to exceed three thousand four hundred dollars in amount from that injury.'

"Section 27. In case of permanent total disability the award shall be sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of the average weekly wage, and shall continue until the death of such person so totally disabled, but not to exceed a maximum of twelve dollars per week, and not less than a minimum of five dollars per week, if the employe's wages were less than five dollars per week, then he shall receive his full wages.

"Section 28. In case the injury causes death within the period of two years the benefits shall be in the amounts and to the persons following:

"1. If there be no dependents, the disbursements from the insurance fund shall be limited to the expense provided for in Sections 23 and 24.

"2. If there are wholly dependent persons at the time of the death, the payment shall be sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of the average weekly wage and to continue for the remainder of the period between the date of the death and six years after the date of the injury, and not to amount to more than a maximum of thirty-four hundred dollars, nor less than a minimum of one thousand five hundred dollars.

"3. If there are partly dependent persons at the time of the death, the payment shall be sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of the average weekly wage and to continue for all of such portion of the period of six years after the date of the injury, as the board in each case may determine, and not to amount to more than a maximum of thirty-four hundred dollars.

"Section 31. The average weekly wage of the injured person at the time of the injury shall be taken as the basis upon which to compute the benefits."

I also call your attention to Section 32 of this act, which section provides as follows:

"If it is established that the injured employe was of such age and experience when injured as that under natural conditions his wages would be expected to increase, the face may be considered in arriving at his average weekly wage."

My opinion is that Section 31 is a general section providing the basis upon which to compute the benefits payable on account of any injury to an employe, whether death results from such injury or not, and that by "earning capacity" is meant the "average weekly wage," except in such cases as are provided for by Section 32 of the act, where the injured employe was of such age and experience that under natural conditions his wages would be expected to increase. When this condition exists, then, and then only, is it important for your board to ascertain what the earning capacity of such employe is.

The only way by which you can arrive at the "average weekly wage" referred to in Section 32, would be to ascertain what the weekly wages of the employe were at the time of the injury, his physical condition, the nature of the work in which he was employed, his intelligence, his age, and, as there is no definite rule laid down in any of the authorities as to a case of this kind, any other particular fact that in the given instance would assist you in arriving at your conclusion as to the extent to which his wages would reasonably be expected to be increased.

In all other cases, it seems to me, by the statutes themselves, the average weekly wage of the employe is to be the basis of your computations. The earning capacity of a workman, or employe, must necessarily be the amount of his average weekly wage.

After a great deal of investigation and careful search, of the authorities, I find that it is impossible to specify a particular method by which your board can ascertain the average weekly wage. My opinion is, that this matter is left entirely to your own proper discretion, that on account of the many essential differences in the various employments, and the fact that in the multitude of employes in this country, practically no two are alike in all respects, it would be utterly impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule that would apply with equality and fairness to all employments. It seems to me that in each instance where it is necessary for your board to determine as to the average weekly wage, the application of common sense to the facts in the particular case before you will be found more satisfactory and just than the application of any fixed rule of law, that is you will have to take into consideration in each given case the facts which will enable you to arrive at a fair and just conclusion as to what the average weekly wage of the employe under consideration may be. One of the elements you must consider is that, of course, of time, i. e. the time you should take in arriving at an average, and it would be impossible to fix any definite period which would apply to all cases; in some cases the period to consider may only be a day, in other cases it may require that you consider the time for one or two or more years; what is essential is that the period taken be one which, for the purposes of ascertaining the average weekly wage, will be in all respects normal. As I have stated, it is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule in this regard, and therefore it is unnecessary to even mention the other elements you must consider, as these will in each instance depend upon the case being considered; facts which control in one case may have no application whatever in another. I, therefore, repeat that this is a matter for your own discretion.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT—"REGULARLY" DOES NOT MEAN "CONTINUOUSLY"

The word "regularly" as employed in the employers' liability act referring to employers of five or more workmen regularly does not mean "continuously."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 9, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter February 5th enclosing a letter to you from the secretary of a certain Builders' Exchange, baking inquiry as to the construction placed by your board upon the word "regularly" as used in a certain section of the act creating your board, (102 O. L. 524); you also enclose the reply of Mr. Yaple of your board to the said letter, and you request my opinion as to whether the word "regularly" as used in Sections 20-1, 20-2 and 21-1 of the act creating your board should be construed to mean "continuously" or not.

The act providing for the state liability board of awards, passed May 31, 1911 (102 O. L., 524) is now incorporated in the General Code as Sections 1465-37 to 1465-81, inclusive. The word "regularly," to which you refer, is used in the following sections, and I shall quote only so much of same as is sufficient to indicate the question to be considered:

Section 1465-57 (Section 20-1):

> "Any employer who employs five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, who shall pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall not be liable to respond in damages.* * *"

Section 1465-58 (Section 20-2):

> "For the purpose of creating such insurance fund, each employer who employs five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, and his employes in this state, having elected to accept the provisions of this act, shall pay * * *"

Section 1465-60 (Section 21-1):

> "All employers who employ five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, who shall not pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall be liable to their employe for damages * * *"

I have carefully read the reply of your board through Mr. Yaple, above referred to, and it seems to me that the view he takes of this question is absolutely correct, and I herewith incorporate in this opinion the following extract from his letter, which is directly in point:

> "I do not think that the word 'regularly,' as used in said section, should be construed as meaning continuously, because that would not be a common sense construction. An employe may be regularly employed by his employer and yet not be actually engaged at his employment more than half of the calendar year; such, for instance, is the case in the coal mining industry of the state, where the number of days which the average miner is employed is about 160 days in each year. The same is true to a certain extent in the building trades, where many contractors regularly employ certain men throughout the year when weather conditions are not unfavorable to the prosecution of their work, but in certain seasons may entirely suspend operations because of unfavorable weather conditions. Personally, I would say that if the employer regularly employs five or more employes during each portion of the year as the nature of his business permits him to operate, he would come within the provisions of this law."

As said in the above extract, to hold that the word "regularly" as used in the above sections, meant "continuously," would be opposed to common sense. It would also be opposed to the real meaning of the word "regularly." The word "regularly," I take it, is derived from the word "regula" meaning a rule, and therefore the following definitions as given by Webster should be held as expressing the proper meaning of the word as used in this act. The definition is:

"Governed by rule or rules; steady or uniform in course, practice or occurrence; not subject to unexplained or irrational variation; returning or recurring at stated or fixed times or uniform intervals; steadily pursued; usually or generally received, used, etc.; orderly; methodical; * * *"

The proper synonyms of "regular" are normal, typical; regular being the opposite of irregular; normal being the opposite of abnormal.

The word "continuous," as defined by Webster, means:

"Having contiguity of parts; without break, cessation, or interruption; without intervening space or time; uninterrupted; unbroken; constant; continued."

It is obvious, considering the above definitions, that in no sense can the word "regularly," as used in the above sections, be so construed as to mean "continuously." In fact, the word "continuously," if used in said sections and strictly construed, would make the law not applicable to the vast majority of establishments in this state, and, therefore, as the word "continuous" is not a synonym of the word "regular," in the sense as used in this act, and as there is nothing in the act which indicates, even by inference, that it was the intention of the legislature that the word "regularly" should be construed as meaning "continuously," and as common sense and the facts as they exist both required that the word be given its plain and ordinary meaning, I have no hesitancy whatever in holding that this word should not be construed to mean "continuously."

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLICATION OF PREMIUMS OF LIABILITY RISK—METHOD REQUIRED TO BE ADOPTED BY BOARD.

As there is no specific statutory direction as to the particular method of publication of the established premiums of liability risk, any means which satisfies the proper definition of the word "publication" will suffice. A form of classification and rate book or information pamphlet is recommended.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of February 14, 1912, you request my opinoin upon the following questions:

Section 20-2 of 102 O. L. 524, provides, among other things, as follows:

> "For the purpose of creating such state insurance fund, each employer who employs five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establisment, and his employes in this state, having elected to accept the provisions of this act, shall pay, on or before January 1, 1912, and semi-annually thereafter, the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment as may be determined and published by the state liability board of awards.
> "We will, in a day or two, determine 'the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment,' and we desire your opinion as to the method we should adopt in publishing the same; that is, is publication in a newspaper as legal publications are required to be made, contemplated, or will we have complied with the statute by making known through the press, or by communications mailed to the various employers of the state, or by the printing and issuing of a classification and rate book, the various classifications and rates applicable to each?"

Inasmuch as there is no general provision of the General Code as to how notices or other matters required to be published shall be published, and as the act establishing your board is entirely silent as to the method by which you shall publish the premiums of liability risk, in the classes of employment, as may be determined by you, it seems to me that any procedure on your part which would fulfil the definition of the word "published" would, in law, be sufficient. The word "publish" is defined by Webster as follows:

> "1 To make public; to make known to mankind or to people in general; to divulge, as a private transaction; to promulgate or proclaim, as a law or edict.
> "2. To make known by posting, or by reading in a church.
> "3. To send forth, as a book or other literary work; to issue; to emit.
> "4. To utter or put into circulation; as to publish counterfeit paper."

The definition given in the Standard Dictionary is practically the same as that given by Webster.

In Cyc., Volume 32, page 1258, under the head "publish," appears the following:

"To make known; to issue; to make known what before was private; to put into circulation; to proclaim; to make known generally; to send forth, as a book, newspaper, magazine, musical piece or other printed work, either for sale or for general distribution."

In the case of Plimpton vs. Malcolmson, 3 Ch. D. 531, it was held that:

"The word 'publish' means, made known to the public. In this sense the enrollment in the English Patent Office of a specification, is a publication of its contents."

It is my opinion, from the above definitions, that in the absence of statutory direction for you to make publication of the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment as determined by you, in a newspaper, in the method usually prescribed for legal publications, it is not necessary for you to make such publication in a newspaper, and that if you make known through the press that you have established the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment, and that the same may be had by application to your board; and also print a classification and rate book and send the same to the various employers of the state or notify the said employers by separate communications of the classifications and rates, that you would have fully complied with this law. In fact, it would seem that if you simply make known through the public press that you have determined the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment, and that the same will be furnished to any employer requesting the same, you would have complied with the law; but as this is an entirely new department it would seem best, if there are no serious objections thereto, that you issue a classification and rate book, or some book or pamphlet that will give all the necessary information as to the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment as determined by you, and mail the same to every employer in the state, so far as you are able to do so.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYES WHO WORK IN OWN SHOPS AND UNDER NO CONTROL OF EMPLOYER NOT WITHIN EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT.

Employes who work for an employer in their own shops over which the latter exercises no control, do not come under the terms of the Employers' Liability Act.

These piece workers themselves, if they employ more than five men regularly in or about the same establishment, are subject to the liability act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 9, 1912, enclosing a letter to you from a certain employer, which letter is as follows:

"Some of our employes work in shops which they provide for themselves and over which we exercise no control further than with reference to the sanitary condition of the shop and the quality of workmanship produced. These employes visit premises controlled by us only when calling for work or pay or when delivering work to us. All their work is paid for by the piece and they employ and pay for their own assistants as they see fit. We do not know if we should or should not list these people as employes under the new law.

"Will you please advise us as soon as possible because we desire to apply for insurance and it is obvious that we cannot figure the number of employes according to law nor can we estimate pay rolls intelligently until we hear from you.

"If these people are to be considered employes, will you please state whether we are to list their assistants as employes."

You ask my opinion upon the question submitted.

Although there are several sections of the act establishing the state liability board of awards, and providing for its duties, which apply in a way to the question asked, as you are familiar with all these sections, I shall quote only the following section, which is suffiicent for the purposes of this opinion:

"Section 1465-58, General Code (Section 20-2 of the act found in 102 O. L. 524 et seq.) For the purpose of creating such state insurance fund, each employer who employs five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, and his employes in this state, having elected to accept the provisions of this act, shall pay, on or before January 1, 1912, and semi-annually thereafter, the premiums of liability risk in the classes of employment as may be determined and published by the state liability board of awards. The said employers for themselves and their employes shall make such payments to the state treasurer of Ohio, who shall receive and place the same to the credit of such state insurance fund. The premiums provided for in this act shall be paid by the employer and employes in the following proportions, to-wit: Ninety per cent. of the premium shall be paid by the employer and ten per cent. by the employes. Each employer is authorized to deduct from the pay roll of his employes ten per cent. of the said premiums for any premium period in proportion to the pay roll of such employes; no deduction shall be made except for that portion of the premium period antedating such pay roll. Each employer shall give a receipt to each employe showing the amount which has been deducted and paid into the state insurance fund."

The question to be determined is the meaning of the words "each employer who employs five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, and his employes in this state." I take it that the obvious meaning of this language is that it designates an establishment where five or more workmen or operatives are regularly working for an employer, or a business in which five or more workmen or operatives are regularly working for an employer; and that employes working in shops or rooms which they provide for themselves, or at their homes, and not under the supervision or control, in any way, of the employer, would not come under the terms of the act or within the class specified by the language of Section 1465-58, above quoted.

While the object of the act is to provide an effective and certain method of compensating injured employes, its primary object really is to lessen the number of accidents to employes; that is, so far as possible, to make the hazard of industrialism as slight as possible; and it is obvious that the act can only apply, and the results contemplated by it be attained, when there is some direct relation between the employer and the employe as to providing the place in which the employe is to work, or the number and character of the other employes with whom the employe is to work, or the manner or kind of work which the employe is to perform under the supervision of the employer, either directly or by his agent, foreman or manager.

Except that the finished product shall be up to a certain standard, the employer, in the case referred to in your inquiry, has no control whatever over the employe; he does not provide the place where the work shall be done; he does not select the other employes with whom the employe is to work; nor does he exercise any supervision over the employe while performing the work. It is, therefore, my opinion that employes of this character cannot be considered as embraced within the provisions of this act, and cannot be considered by an employer in calculating and estimating his pay roll.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ADDENDUM

These "piece workers" themselves, if they employ more than five men regularly in their business, or in or about the same establishment, are subject to the liability act and to take out insurance.

EMPLOYER'S LIABILITY ACT—"WILFUL ACT" NOT SYNONYMOUS WITH "WILFUL NEGLIGENCE"—SCOPE OF LIABILITY OF EMPLOYER AND OF COMMON LAW AND STATUTORY RIGHTS TO COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYE—RIGHT OF LIABILITY INSURANCE COMPANIES—PUBLIC POLICY.

The term "wilful act" as used in Section 21-1 of the Employers' Liability Act providing that suit for damages at common law may be had for injuries or death resulting from "wilful acts" of employers, is not synonymous with the term "wilful negligence," as the construction of the act shows an intended distinction between "neglect" or something wrongfully omitted, and "act" or something wrongfully done.

Section 20-1 of the act aforesaid expressly relieves employers who take advantage of the act, from any liability whatever at common law or by statute, for death or injury to employers except such injuries as are specifically excepted by Section 21-2, namely: injuries wilfully inflicted, or caused by failure to comply with statute or ordinance. The employe is likewise limited to compensate under the act for all injuries except those excepted under Section 21-2 aforesaid, in which cases, he is entitled to elect either the compensation of the act or the common law remedy.

A liability insurance company being authorized in Ohio to insure only against "accidents" to employes, cannot insure against the excepted injuries resulting from the "wilful act" of employers. Furthermore, it would be clearly violative of public policy and against the manifest spirit of the statutes to permit such insurance companies to insure against injuries resulting from failure of the employe to comply with command of statutes, ordinances or lawful orders.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your inquiry of March 12, 1912, which is as follows:

"We would respectfully request your opinion on the following questions concerning the construction of certain parts of an act entitled, "An act to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured and the dependents of killed employes, and to provide for the administration of such fund by a state liability board of awards," commonly known as the workmen's compensation Law, (102 O. L., 524), and certain questions of law arising in the course of the administration thereof, viz.:

"1. Section 20-1 provides that 'any employer who employes five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, who shall pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall not be liable to respond in damages at common law or by statute, save as hereinafter provided, for injuries or death of any such employe, wherever occurring, during the period covered by such premiums,' etc., and it is 'otherwise provided' in Section 21-2 as follows:

"But where a personal injury is suffered by an employe, or when death results to an employe from personal injuries while in the employ of an employer in the course of employment, and such employer has paid into the state insurance fund the premium provided for in this act, and in case such injury has arisen from the wilful act of such employer, or any of such employer's officers or agents, or from the failure of such employer, or any of such employer's officers or agents, to comply with any municipal ordinance or lawful order of any duly authorized officer, or any statute for the protection of the life or safety of employes, then in such event, nothing in this act contained shall affect the civil liability of such employer, but such injured employe, or his legal representative in case death results from the injury, may, at his option, either claim compensation under this act or institute proceedings in the courts for his damage on account of such injury, and such employer shall not be liable for any injury to any employe, or to his legal representative in case death results, except as provided in this act.

"Every employe, or legal representative in case death results, who makes application for an award from the state liability board of awards, waives his right to exercise his option to institute proceedings in any court. Every employe or his legal representative in case death results, who exercises his option to institute proceedings in court as provided in Section 21-2, waives his right to any award, except as provided in Section 36 of this act."

"Is the expression 'wilful act,' as used in Section 21-2 of said act, synonymous with the term 'wilful negligence,' or do the words 'wilful act,' as used in said section, contemplate an overt act on the part of the employer, his officer or agent, knowingly, purposely and maliciously done with intent to injure the employe?

"2. Do the words 'and such employer shall not be liable for any injury to any employe, or his legal representative in case death results, except as provided in this act,' at the end of the first paragraph of said Section 21-2, have the effect of repealing by implication any law in existence at the passage of said act, affecting in any way the right of an employe to recover damages from his employer for injuries occasioned to him in the course of his employment, or does such language, taken in connection with the language used in Section 20-1, have the effect of absolutely denying the employe the right to maintain an action, except in the specific class of injuries defined in Section 21-2?

"3. Under the provisions of said act, and especially the provisions contained in Sections 20-1, 20-2, 21 and 21-2, the scheme of state insurance provided for in the act would seem to be substituted for the civil action based upon negligence in all cases except those designated in Section 21-2, and all cases of injury except such injuries occurring as designated in Section 21-2, must be compensated out of the state insurance fund, the employe having no right of action at all and no election or choice of remedies, but must rely for compensation solely upon the state insurance fund. As to the exceptional class of cases mentioned in Section 21-2, it also appears to us that the state insurance fund covers all such injuries, unless the injured employe elects to sue his employer for damages, in which event, he waives any right to participate in the state insurance fund, no matter what the result of his suit for damages may be. At least, that is the construction we put upon the language of Section 21-2.

"Assuming we are correct in our conclusions as to the meaning of Section 21-2, we would like to inquire whether any insurance company now authorized to do business in the state of Ohio is empowered to make contracts of insurance with employers, by which contracts, or policies, they agree to indemnify such employers from loss or damage resulting from accidents to their employes received in the course of their employment, which more fully or completely indemnify the employer against loss, than does the provisions of this act and especially Section 21-2 thereof under the plan of state insurance? In other words, may an insurance company lawfully contract to indemnify and save an employer harmness from the result of his wilful act, or his failure to observe the laws of the state of Ohio for the protection of the life or safety of employes?"

Replying to your first question, in my opinion, the expression "wilful act," as used in Section 21-1, is not synonymous with the expression "wilful neglect." "Wilful neglect" is a term well known to the law, and, as stated in Cyc., Volume 29, page 424, the term properly applies only to actions for loss of life involving punitive damages. It has been held, also, to signify a higher degree of neglect than gross neglect. The term "neglect" is so well known and so well understood that I take it there can be no doubt but that the legislature, in the language used in Section 21-2 and 21-1 of the act under consideration, used the exact language to express its intention. Had it meant, by Section 21-2, to deprive an employer of the benefits of the act when an employe was injured by his wilful neglect, I take it that it would have said so. The word "act" is the opposite from the word "negligence" or "neglect;" as defined in the Century Dictionary, it means, "the doing of a thing; a thing done," and, therefore, the term "wilful act" must necessarily mean something intentionally done, not something omitted. This is made plainer by consideration of Section 21-1, in which it is expressly provided that,

> "All employers * * * who shall not pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall be liable to their employes for damages suffered by reason of personal injuries sustained in the course of employment caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer, or any of the employers' officers, agents or employes, * * * and in such action the defendant shall not avail himself or itself of the following common law defenses: * * *" and it will be found that the words used in said Section 21-1, namely: wrongful act, neglect or default, cover all of the various degrees of neglect, slight, ordinary and gross, for which an action will lie; and that the legislature having said, expressly, that an employer who does not take advantage of the act shall be liable for injuries resulting from such neglect, has, as clearly as can be possible, said that an employer who does take advantage of the act shall not be liable in any action for neglect and, as provided in Section 21-2, shall only be liable when the injury has been caused by his wilful act, "act" being used in contradistinction to "neglect;" or when the injury has occurred from the failure of the employer to comply with an ordinance, lawful order or statute, as provided in Section 21-2.

Answering your second question, in my opinion, the provision at the end of the first paragraph of Section 21-2, namely:

> "such employer shall not be liable for any injury to an employe, or to his legal representative in case death results, except as provided in this act."

taken in connection with Section 20-1, absolutely and expressly relieves an employer, who has taken advantage of the act, from any liability whatever, at common law or by statute, for injuries or death of any employe in the employment of such employer, caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer; in other words, from any and all actions brought by an employe for negligence, no matter how slight or how gross; and covers every possible injury upon which an action for damages might be based, except injuries specifically excepted by Section 21-2, namely: injuries wilfully inflicted by the employer, or caused by the employer's failure to comply with an ordinance, lawful order or statute, as provided in said Section 21-2.

Answering your third question, you are correct in your assumption that under the provisions of this act all cases of injury, occurring to employes of employers who have taken advantage of the act, except the specific injuries provided for in Section 21-2, must be compensated out of the state insurance fund provided for by this act. The employe has no right of action at all, and no election or choice of remedies, but he must rely solely and entirely for compensation from the state insurance fund.

As to the exceptional case mentioned in Section 21-2, namely: when the injury has been caused by the wilful act of the employer, or from the failure of the employer to comply with a municipal ordinance or lawful order of any duly authorized officer, or any other statute for the protection of the life or safety of employes, the act provides expressly that even this class of injuries is also taken care of. Thus, an employe of an employer who has taken advantage of the act, and who has been injured by the wilful act of the employer or by his failure to comply with an ordinance, order or statute, as above stated, has his option to either take the compensation provided by the act or to sue at law. In case he chooses to accept the compensation provided by the act, then, by the provisions of Section 21-2, he absolutely waives the right to institute an action in court against the employer; and, conversely, every employe who exercises his option to institute proceedings in court waives his right to participate in the state insurance fund, no matter what the result of his suit for damages may be.

The last part of the third question is of great importance, and, as the question seems to be absolutely a new one, upon which there is no express authority, upon consideration of the statutes of our state, and of the existent facts which made necessary the enactment of the act under consideration, I have no difficulty whatever in reaching the conclusion that an insurance company cannot lawfully contract, in this state, to indemnify an employer from the result of injuries occasioned by his wilful act or from his failure to observe the laws of the state of Ohio for the protection of the life or safety of employes.

What is known as employers' liability insurance has been transacted in this state for several years; it is authorized by Section 9510 of the General Code, which, in part, is as follows:

> "A company may be organized or admitted under this chapter to * * * make insurance to indemnify employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to employes * * *"

I wish to call special attention to the fact that authority is given to companies to "make insurance to indemnify employers against * * * accidents to employes."

The first part of your question, therefore, would be whether an injury caused by the wilful act of an employer can be classed as an accident. "Accident" is defined (Century Dictionary) as:

> "The operation of chance; an undesigned contingency; a happening without intentional causation; chance fortune."

As above stated, in Section 21-2, in my opinion, the legislature used the term "wilful act" to express exactly what it meant; and "wilful act" is certainly the opposite, in every sense, from "accident." I take it that it is unnecessary to quote from the dictionary to express the meaning of the word "wilful," and it should be enough to state that one of the attributes of an accident is that it is unintentional; therefore, an act that is wilful could not possibly be held to be unintentional. Nor, in fact, is there any possible view of the term "wilful act" which can be taken so as to construe it as a term covering an accident.

Therefore, I am clearly of the opinion that there is no authority in the statutes of Ohio to issue an insurance indemnifying an employer or any one else against the consequences arising from an injury occasioned by his wilful act. If that were possible a person or an employer could insure himself against the consequences arising from his commission of a crime, and an act attempting to authorize such insurance would be void as against public policy.

As to the second subdivision of this portion of your question, as to the right of a company, authorized to do business in this state, to make contracts of insurance with employers, by which they agree to indemnify such employers from loss or damage resulting from accidents caused by the failure of the employer to comply with any municipal ordinance or lawful order of any duly authorized officer, or any statute for the protection of life or safety of employes, my opinion is that any insurance contract or policy, purporting to indemnify an employer for loss or damage resulting from the violation of penal statutes, is in contravention of public policy; and that the legislature, in enacting said Section 21-2, clearly recognized that principle of law.

It has been held, frequently, that a master cannot, by agreement with his servant, exempt himself from liability for injuries to the servant caused by his neglect; but it has also been held that one may, by contract, with a third person, insure himself against the consequences of his neglect to his servant. There are many cases upon this subject but I do not deem it necessary to cite them nor to try to explain the method of reasoning by which the courts arrived at the conclusion that while one could not directly, by contract, relieve himself from liability for injuries caused by his negligence, on account of public policy, yet, he could do this very thing indirectly. I take it that in consideratoin of the laws now in force in this state there can be no question but that it is against the public policy of this state to allow an employer to insure himself against the consequences of his failure to comply with the commands of the state.

> "It is not easy to give a precise definition of 'public policy.' It is perhaps correct to say that public policy is that principle of law which holds that no person can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public, or against the public good, which may be designated, as it sometimes has been, the policy of the law or public policy in relation to the administration of the law."
> Cyc. Volume 9, p. 481.

It is the policy of this state, as well as of all civilized states and governments, at the present time, to reduce as far as possible the hazards of industrialism, that is, primarily, to reduce the number of accidents to employes. As the means to this end many laws have been passed by the state, aptly described in Section 21-2 of the act under consideration as statutes for the protection of the life or safety of employes. It is unnecessary to specify these laws; many of them can be readily found in the provisions of the General Code relating to the chief inspector of workshops and factories and chief inspector of mines. These laws compel employers to take certain precautions in regard to dangerous machinery, as to places in which the employe shall work, and, in fact, so far as is possible with present knowledge, compel the employer to safeguard the employe so far as possible. These laws are criminal in their nature and penalties are provided for persons who refuse or fail or neglect to comply with the same.

Would it be reasonable, therefore, for the state, having commanded a thing to be done and imposed a penalty in case it is not done, to, at the same time, authorize a person who chooses to violate those express statutory provisions to insure himself against the consequences arising from such statutory violation? It seems to me that, considering the purpose of these laws, anything that would induce a person to violate them instead of to obey them must necessarily be contrary to public policy.

Again, the present act creating the state liability board of awards was passed in response to a great public demand; in fact the situation compelled the enactment of this law. Accidents to workmen engaged in the different industries are all but inevitable; no matter how carefully laws for the prevention of accidents may be framed, or how rigidly they may be enforced, accidents cannot be eliminated. The system in force prior to the enactment of this law, by which it was supposed that all injured employes having a right of action would be compensated, has been found to be entirely unsatisfactory. As said by the court in Borgnis, et al vs. Falk Company, supreme court of Wisconsin,

> "To speak of the common law personal injury action as a remedy for this problem is to jest with serious subjects, to give a stone to one who asks for bread. The terrible economic waste, the overwhelming temptation to the commission of perjury, and the relatively small proportion of the sums recovered which comes to the injured parties in such actions, condemn them as wholly inadequate to meet the difficulty."

To this might be added the further fact, which called loudly for the establishment of a system of compensation by the state, the system which has been so highly developed by the so-called employers' liability companies—a system by which a corporation, whose prosperity and very existence depends upon defeating the claim for compensation of an injured employe, is substituted for the employer, who is at fault for the injury, as defendant in the case brought by the injured employe, for compensation.

I do not deem it necessary to go into this subject further; the necessity for, and the validity of, the law have been passed upon by our supreme court; and the facts and arguments showing the unsoundness, if not viciousness, of the old system, of which the liability insurance companies compose such a large part, are fully set out in the briefs filed in the case of State ex rel. Yaple vs. Creamer, treasurer of state, 85 O. S. .

It was the intention of the legislature to substitute for the compensation, which could only be obtained by a civil action based upon neglect, a scheme of state insurance for the benefit of both the employer and the employe, under which, in all cases except these designated in Section 21-2, compensation would be surely and quickly made in every case of injury without resort to courts. This, the act plainly does, and we must assume that the legislature acted intelligently; that it meant to provide compensation to the employe in every case of injury resulting from accident, the risk of which could lawfully be assumed by an employers' liability company. But for the employer who wilfully injures an employe, or who fails to observe the laws enacted for the protection of the life or safety of employes, there is only a contingent protection offered by this law. There is absolute compensation to the innocent party, the injured employe; he may take his compensation under the act if he chooses, or he may sue his employer in a civil action; that is optional. It must be held that the legislature, having, by other laws compelled an employer to do certain things for the protection of the life and sefety of his employes by leaving an employer who failed to comply with those laws but of the benefits of the act, therefore, sought to impose an additional penalty to enforce compliance with the act; and it would surely be contrary to the policy of this state, as plainly expressed by its statutes, to say that notwithstanding this double prohibition and penalization, still, a corporation could lawfully invite the branch of the laws of the state by agreeing to indemnify a violator of the same against the consequences of his act.

The fact that the legislature intended the scheme of insurance as provided by this act to cover all cases of accidents that may be lawfully insured against is also made plain from the provisions of Section 21-1, by which it is provided that an employer who does not take advantage of the act shall be liable to his employe for damages suffered by reason of personal injuries caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of the employer; and that he shall not avail himself of the defenses of the fellow-servant rule, the assumption of risk, or contributory negligence. This provision, of course, was made to induce employers to accept the terms of the act. It would be entirely valueless, therefore, if the pharses "wilful act" and "failure * * * to comply with any * * * ordinance * * order * * * or statute as used in Section 21-2 meant the same or could be held to be included in the terms "wrongful act, neglect or default," used in Section 21-1. It is conclusive that they do not. Clearly, the exceptions mentioned in Section 21-2 are meant to be such acts or neglects that to insure against would be entirely contrary to the settled policy of the state.

This opinion is long; and for that reason, and for the reason that it is an opinion and not a brief, I have not burdened you with citations as to public policy, or as to decisions of courts which touch upon the questions you ask in certain ways, but none of which are directly upon the point raised; the statutes themselves speak plainly upon all of your questions, and upon these statutes I reply and base my opinion.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT—EMPLOYER HIRING INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR AND FURNISHING SHOP TOOLS AND APPLIANCES.

When an employer arranges with an independent contractor for the doing of work in connection with the employer's business, which said contractor hires his own workmen but works in a shop and with tools and appliances furnished by said employer, the latter maintains a sufficient relation to the employes of the contractor to come within the provisions of the employers' liability act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 12, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 1, 1912, which is as follows:

> "We are in receipt of your opinion given to this board under date of March 8, 1912, with reference to the statute of employes doing piece work in their own homes or shops, and away from the plant or shop of the employer, and we are pleased to note that it is in accord with our construction of the law.
> "There is a further question, however, growing out of the relation of independent contractor, upon which we would like your opinion. We find that in many instances the employer will make a contract with an independent contractor with reference to some portion of the work to be done in producing the finished product in the manufacture of which the employer is engaged, and the person with whom the employer thus contracts in turn employes and pays workmen assisting him on this particular work, the employer all the time furnishing the place in which to work and the tools, machinery, appliances with which to work. Under such a state of facts, would the rule not be different from that outlined in your opinion of March 8, 1912, above referred to? And in such case, would the employer or proprietor of the factory or plant where the work is carried on include not only those who are directly employed by him, but also such workmen as are employed by independent contractors under circumstances similar to those outlined above?"

My opinion to you dated March 8, 1912, was to the effect that there must be some relation between the employer and the employe, either as to providing the place in which the employe is to work or the number and character of the other employes with whom the employe is to work, or the manner or kind of work which the employe is to perform under the supervision of the employer, either directly or by his agent, foreman or manager, and of course was meant to include cases where the employer provided the tools or machines with which or at which the employe is to work; and that in the absence of all of these conditions, and in cases where the employer exercised no control whatever over the employe in any of the above respects, then that the employe could not be regarded as embraced within the provisions of this act.

In the case to which you refer in your inquiry above quoted, where the employer furnishes a place in which the employe is to work, or furnishes the tools, machinery or appliances with which the employe is to work, or in fact exercises a control over the employe in any respect, as detailed in my opinion of March 8th, then it is my opinion that such an employe must be classed as an employe of the proprietor or manufacturer who owns or controls the main business or factory which gives rise to the employment, whether the employe works, or is employed by an independent contractor or sub-contractor or agent of the proprietor or manager owning or controlling the plant.

This conclusion, I think, is supported by the case of Jacobs vs. Fuller, etc., Co., 67 O. S. page 70. The first paragraph of the syllabus in this case is as follows:

> "Where the defendant employed a third party to manufacture furniture for it, furnishing all the materials, tools and machinery for that purpose, in which was a machine which was safe to operate under proper instructions, and dangerous to operate without instructions as to the manner of operating it, and when it is claimed that the plaintiff was injured by reason of neglect to notify him of the dangerous character of the machine and neglect to give him instructions as to operate it, the defense that the plaintiff was an employe of an independent contractor will not avail the defendant, because it is a case in which, under the circumstances of the employment, a resulting injury might have been anticipated as a direct or probable consequence of the performance of the work contracted for, if reasonable care should be omitted in the course of its employment. Railroad Co. vs. Morey, 47 Ohio St., 207 and Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Co., vs. Steinbrock, 61 Ohio St. 215, approved and followed."

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT—"WORKMEN AND OPERATIVES" INCLUDE ALL EMPLOYES, EXCEPT TRAVELING SALESMEN—OFFICE HELP.

The term "workmen or operatives" as employed in the Workmen's Compensation Law is intended to include all "employes" as stated in the title. Such term includes all who are employed in the business or in or about the establishment to whom compensation is paid, excepting officers of the corporation, unless they are themselves employed and except also, by virtue of judicial construction, traveling salesmen. Office help are therefore governed by the act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 18, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of April 15, 1912, you make the following request for my opinion:

> "The state liability board of awards has construed the term "workmen or operatives" as used in Section 20-1 of the workmen's compensation law, to include all employes to whom compensation of any nature is paid, excepting only the officers of a corporation, as such and persons wholly engaged as traveling salesmen.

"We are frequently asked the question as to whether the law compels such construction placed upon these words used in the act, as to require the pay roll of office help, such as bookkeepers, stenographers, etc., to be included in the total pay roll upon which premiums for the state insurance fund are calculated.

"Will you kindly advise us as to your opinion on this question at an early date, and oblige."

Section 20-1 of the Ohio workmen's compensation act is as follows:

"Any employer who employs five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment who shall pay into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act, shall not be liable to respond in damages at common law or by statute, save as hereinafter provided, for injuries or death of any such employes, wherever occurring, during the period covered by such premiums, provided the injured employe has remained in his service with notice that his employer has paid into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by this act; the continuation in the service of such employer with such notice, shall be deemed a waiver by the employe of his right of action as aforesaid.

"Each employer paying the premiums provided by this act into the state insurance fund shall post in conspicuous places about his place or places of business typewritten or printed notices stating the fact that he has made such payment; and the same, when so posted, shall constitute sufficient notice to his employes of the fact that he has made such payment: and of any subsequent payments he may make after such notices have been posted."

You have submitted to me with your request a very able brief prepared by Mr. James I. Boulger, of Chillicothe, upon this question, and this brief has been of great assistance to me in the consideration of this question.

The Ohio workmen's compensation act is to be most liberally construed as to the classes of persons who are entitled to the benefits of the act. The title of the act, perhaps, expresses its purpose in the best possible manner. This title is "to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured, and the dependants of killed employes, and to provide for the administration of such fund by state liability board of awards."

Under the rules of statutory construction, the title of an act is a legitimate aid in ascertaining its meaning, and the title of this act shows that it was the intention of the legislature to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of "employes." This term, I think, is used in its broad sense, and if qualified at all, can only be qualified to the extent made necessary by the decisions of our courts. The word "employe" includes any person who is employed to perform any service, whether manual or not, in or about any business or establishment, to whom compensation of any nature is paid. I take it that it clearly would not include the officers of a corporation, as such, unless such officer is also employed as a workman or operative in some capacity in the business.

It seems to me that the words "workmen or operatives," as used in Section 20-1, are used designedly, so as to cover all employes. I would take it that such words often included traveling salesmen, were it not for the decision of our supreme court in the matter of the assignment of William M. Sloan, 60 O. S. page 472. The syllabus of this case is as follows:

"' Operative' not a traveling agent to obtain subscription, etc.—Section 6355 Revised Statutes—Insolvent debtors and preferred claims.

"One who is employed by the publisher of a 'legal directory,' as traveling agent in obtaining subscriptions and in selling the 'directory' to attorneys and other and collecting accounts, is not an 'operative' within the meaning of Section 6355 Revised Statutes."

This case appears to be direct construction of the word "operative" to the extent that such word does not include a traveling salesman, and, of course, the traveling salesman could not be classed as a "workman;" therefore, as this decision stands, I feel bound by it in the construction of this term, that is, that it does not include traveling salesmen.

My opinion, therefore, is that the words "workmen or operatives," as used in Section 20-1 of the act, include all employes employed in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, to whom compensation of any nature is paid, excepting officers of the corporation, as such, and persons wholly engaged as traveling salesmen. All others are included.

Adopting the admirable language of Mr. Boulger in this respect, "in my judgment, all of the office help, as well as those persons who are actually engaged in the dangerous work of operating machinery; those who keep books, as well as those who clerk in a department store, those who run trains, as well as those who drive mules in the mines; those who bottle the liquors in the brewery as well as those who hitch the wagons, or drive the automobiles are within the terms of the act."

Very truly yours

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY—STATE LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS MAY NOT ADOPT PLANS BY WHICH EMPLOYERS MIGHT DEPOSIT GUARANTY FUNDS TO ENABLE THEM TO REIMBURSE BOARD FOR ACTUAL PAYMENTS.

It is not within the legal powers of the state liability board of awards to adopt a plan by which instead of paying premiums to the board, employers might deposit guaranty funds and thereupon be permitted to reimburse the state treasury for payment of losses from the liability insurance fund, for the reasons, First: such power is not conferred upon the board. Second: the state treasurer is not authorized to handle such guaranty funds.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On June 10, 1912, you submitted to me a resolution, proposed to be adopted by your board, providing for an optional plan which may be accepted and followed by employes who elect to accept the provisions of the Ohio workmen's compensation act, instead of paying their entire premium into the state insurance fund at the time they elect to accept the provisions of the act; and you wish to know whether, in my opinion, your board has power to adopt said resolution and put the plan proposed thereby into operation. The resolution is somewhat lengthy and I shall, therefore, quote only the following portions of the same, upon which I base my opinion:

"Be it resolved, by the state liability board of awards, that:

"Each employer employing five or more workmen or operatives regularly in the same business, or in or about the same establishment, and his employes in this state, who elect to accept the provisions of an act entitled, 'An act to create a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured, and the dependents of killed employes, and to provide for the administration of such fund by a state liability board of awards,' (102 O. L. 524), may, instead of paying their entire premium into the state insurance fund at the time of such election, elect to operate under and subject to all the conditions and provisions of the following optional plan:

"6. That each such employer shall deposit with the treasurer of state, at the time of paying his initial payment of _____cents on each $100.00 of his pay roll, as herein provided, a guaranty fund, the amount of which shall be determined as follows, viz.: $3,600.00 for the first $100,000.00, or fraction thereof, of his estimate pay roll for the ensuing six months, and $_____ for each additional $100,000.00, or fraction thereof, of such pay roll. Such deposit may be either in cash or in United States, state, county, township or municipal bonds of political subdivisions of the state of Ohio; and in the event of such bonds being deposited, the income therefrom shall belong to the employer, except as hereinafter provided.

"Such special deposit shall be held by the treasurer of state as security for the payment of the awards made by said state liability board of awards, and the same shall be returned to such employer upon his ceasing to be a subscriber and contributor to the state insurance fund, and upon all awards for injuries to his said employes having been fully discharged and paid in the manner hereinafter provided.

"7. That all claims of injured employes of any such employer which are filed with the state liability board of awards, claiming compensation from the state insurance fund, shall be heard in the same manner and in accordance with the same rules of procedure as the claims of employes of employers not operating under such optional plan; and payments from the state insurance fund shall be made in the same manner.

"8. That on or about the 10th and 24th day of each month the state liability board of awards shall certify to such employer the total amount of the awards made by it during the preceding two weeks, giving the name of each employe, the number of his claim, the amount awarded, and the amount payable on such awards from the state insurance fund, on the date of the next regular payment day (it being understood that payments are to be made from the state insurance fund on the 1st and 15th of each month), and shall at the same time issue to such employer a pay-in-order on the treasurer of state for the full amount of such payments so to be made, and it will be the duty of such employer to thereupon pay to the treasurer of state, for credit to the state insurance fund, the total amount covered by such pay-in-order, on or before the following day, as above indicated. This provision shall apply to all claims for the payment of medical, nurse and hospital services and medicines, funeral expenses and claims for compensation for temporary or partial disability.

"9. In all cases where awards are made in favor of dependents of killed employes, a certificate similar to the certificate mentioned in the next preceding paragraph shall be forwarded to such employer, showing the award made and the persons to whom made, and the bi-monthly accounts payable to each such person, and a statement showing the total amounts to be expended from the state insurance fund on account of such award during the remainder of the six-months period, and shall at the same time forward to such employer a pay-in-order directed to the treasurer of state for the entire amount of such payments for the remainder of said six-months period, and it shall then be the duty of such employer to pay to the treasurer of state, for credit to the state insurance fund, the amount called for by said pay-in-order, within five days from the issuance of same.

"10. That the state liability board of awards shall have the right and it shall be its duty, at any time that the deposit with the treasurer of state provided for in paragraph 6 hereof, is exceeded in amount by the aggregate of the deferred payments to be paid out of the state insurance fund on account of awards made by the board, to require a further deposit to be made with the state treasurer by such employer, so that such guaranty fund may at all times be equal to the aggregate of such deferred payments; and upon such order being made by the board, such employer shall make such deposit within five days after receiving notice of the issuance of such order.

"11. The guaranty fund required to be deposited in paragraph 6 hereof, together with such additional amounts as may be deposited in accordance with the provisions of the next preceding paragraph, shall be held by the treasurer of state intact and separate from the state insurance fund and all other funds, and shall not be paid out to such employer or to any other person, except upon the order of the state liability board of awards; and upon the failure of the employer to punctually pay into the state insurance fund such amounts as may be required from time to time by the state liability board of awards, as herein provided, the board shall have the right and it shall be its duty to require the treasurer of state to convert all or any portion of the securities composing such guaranty fund into cash at the market value of such securities, and the proceeds thereof placed to the credit of the state insurance fund; but no greater amount or part of such securities shall be so converted into money and paid into the state insurance fund than is necessary to cover all outstanding claims against such fund on account of injuries to the employes of such employer.

"13. The object of the optional plan herein outlined is to enable such employers as may adopt its provisions to pay, through the agency of the state liability board of awards and the state insurance fund, all claims arising out of injuries to their employes, which may be filed, heard and awards made thereon by the state liability board of awards. The initial payment of ------ cents on each $100.00 of pay roll, which is required to be paid at the beginning of each six-months period, by employers electing to operate under the optional plan, shall become and remain a part of the state insurance fund, and it is not intended that such initial payment, or any portion thereof, be applied to or used in the liquidation of any claim or claims, or any award made by the state liability board of awards in favor of the employes of such employers, or their dependents in case of death."

I have considered the advisability or the practicability of the plan above proposed, and have simply considered the same from the legal standpoint. In the first place, after a most careful consideration of the act, I can find no authority conferred upon your board to provide for a plan such as the one proposed, nor is such power implied. Section 17 of the act is as follows:

"The state liability board of awards shall classify employments with respect to their degree of hazard, and determine the risks of the different classes and fix the rates of premium of the risks of the same, based upon the total pay roll and number of employes in each of said classes of employment sufficiently large to provide an adequate fund for the compensation provided for in this act, and to create a surplus sufficiently large to guarantee a state insurance fund from year to year."

Section 18 provides as follows:

"The state liability board of awards shall establish a state insurance fund from premiums paid thereto by employers and employes as herein provided, according to the rates of risk in the classes established by it, as herein provided, for the benefit of employes of employers that have paid the premium applicable to the classes to which they belong and for the benefit of the dependents of such employes, and shall adopt rules and regulations with respect to the collection, maintenance and disbursement of said fund."

Section 20 provides as follows:

"The treasurer of state shall give a separate and additional bond, in such amount as may be fixed by the governor, and with sureties to his approval, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as custodian of the state insurance fund herein provided for."

It is unnecessary to quote further sections of the act but it will be seen from these that the act contemplates the establishment of a "state insurance fund" from the premiums piad to it by employers of employes. Only one fund is contemplated, of which the treasurer of state shall be custodian. The plan proposed by you, as stated in Section 13 of your resolution, is one by which the particular employer pays to his employes, in case of injuries, the awards made by your board. This payment is made through the agency of your board, and out of the state insurance fund; but, nevertheless, it amounts to a payment directly by the employer to his employe, for the amount paid to the employe, out of the state insurance fund, must be paid into said fund by the employer.

Under this plan the initial payment or premium paid by the employer into the state insurance fund would, necessarily, be different from the payment or premium of an employer in the same class who is not operating under the plan; and in case all employers elected to adopt this plan, instead of having a state insurance fund, as contemplating by the act, created from the premiums paid by employers and employes according to the rates of risk in classes established by your board, you would have, what amounted in substance to, an immense guarantee fund deposited with the treasurer of state, guaranteeing that employers would pay their injured employes the amounts awarded by your board. Such an arrangement as this is certainly not contemplated by the act and cannot, as it stands, be inferred. If such a plan is advisable, and it may be that it is, it should be provided for by legislation.

In addition to the above, an insurmountable objection, as the law now stands, is that there is no authority in law for the treasurer of state to become custodian of this guarantee fund. He is, by law, Section 19 of the act, made custodian of the state insurance fund proper, and by Section 20 is required to give a separate and additional bond as such custodian. His duties are all prescribed by law and he is only empowered to act as custodian as provided by law, and, therefore, there would be no authority for him to assume control of this fund; nor would there be any authority in law for him to convert all or any portion of the securities composing such guarantee fund into cash, as provided in Section 11 of your resolution.

I deem it unnecessary at this time to go farther into this matter, for the objections detailed above seem to me such as can only be met by legislation; and I, therefore, am of opinion that your board has not authority to adopt and put into operation the plan proposed by this resolution.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TRAVELING EXPENSE—AUDITOR OF LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS —PAYMENT TO HOTEL FOR HOLDING OF ROOM DURING ABSENCE NOT ALLOWED.

An amount of $1.00 a day paid by a traveling auditor of the state liability board of awards to a hotel in Cincinnati while absent therefrom for the purpose of holding a room cannot be allowed as an actual and necessary traveling expense under Section 7 of the act establishing said board.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of July 16, 1912, in which you make the following request for my opinion:

> "One of our traveling auditors has an arrangement with a certain hotel at Cincinnati to pay $2.50 per day for room and meals while he is there and $1.00 per day for the days he is absent.
> "His chief duties are at Cincinnati but sometimes we send him out to Hamilton or Middletown for several days at a time, and in order to keep his room and get the terms named, he had to make an arrangement as above mentioned.
> "Question. Is it lawful for him to include in his expense account the $1.00 per day charged for the days he is absent from the said hotel?"

Section 7 of the act establishing the state liability board of awards is as follows:

> "The board may employ a secretary, actuary, accountants, inspectors, examiners, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants, and fix their compensation. Such employments and compensation shall be first approved by the governor, and shall he paid out of the state treasury. The members of the board, actuary, accountants, inspectors, examiners, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants that may be employed shall be entitled to receive from the state treasury their actual and necessary expenses while traveling in the business of the board. Such expenses shall be itemized and sworn to by the person who incurred the expense, and allowed by the board."

It will be noted from this section that your assistants are entitled to receive their actual and necessary expenses while traveling in the business of the board.

The question in the particular case submitted by you is one of fact. That is, whether the payment to a hotel in Cincinnati of $1.00 per day, while he is not in the city of Cnicinnati but is at some other other points in the state, can be considered an actual and necessary expense. I take it for granted that the expenses of your auditor while at Hamilton, Middletown or any other point to which the business of your board may call him, are paid; and therefore, his expense account would show that he incurred a certain amount of expense at one place and also an expense at the same time of a $1.00 per day at Cincinnati, though he is not in the city of Cincinnati at this time, and it seems to me that this payment of $1.00 per day to the hotel while he is not in the city of Cincinnati cannot be considered as an actual and necessary expense and should not be included in the expense account of your auditor.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DAMAGES FOR WRONGFUL DEATH NOT LIMITED AFTER JANUARY 1, 1913—EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT— WHEN EMPLOYE EXERCISES RIGHT TO ELECT TO SUE AT LAW, AMOUNT RECOVERABLE UNLIMITED.

By provision of proposal 5 of the constitutional amendments which will become effective January 1, 1913, as Article 1, Section 19-a, the limitation of the amount of damage recoverable for wrongful death in an action at law, by Section 10772 General Code, will no longer be effective. In case of injury by wilful act, therefore, or from failure to comply with statute ordinance or official order where the injured employe elects to sue at law, the damages recoverable will not be subject to statutory limitation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 14, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of September 27, 1912, you state that you have received from various sources inquiries relative to the operation and probable effect of Amendment No. 5 to the Constitution of Ohio (which was adopted by the vote of the electors of Ohio on September 3rd) on the employers of Ohio, and you ask my opinion as to this.

Proposal No. 5 by its adoption at the election becomes Section 19-a of Article I of the Constitution, and is as follows:

> "The amount of damages receivable by civil action in the courts for death caused by the wrongful act, neglect, or default of another, shall not be limited by law."

Before the adoption of this amendment the amount of damages recoverable in a civil action in the courts of this state for death caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of another could be limited by the legislature. The legislature had exercised this right, and by Section 10772 of the General Code (R. S. 6135) the amount of damages which might be recovered in such an action was limited to $10,000.00 in all cases except where it appeared that the action was for the benefit of a widow and one or more minor children when the limit was placed at $12,000.00.

By the adoption of the amendment above quoted the authority of the legislature to place any limit on the amount of damages which may be recovered in an action of this character is taken away, and the limitation as to the amount of such damages prescribed by Section 10772 become of no effect.

The answer to this inquiry, therefore, is that after the first day of January, 1913, when the constitutional amendment above quoted goes into effect, there will be no limit upon the amount of damages recoverable in an action in the courts of this state for damages caused by the wrongful act, neglect or default of another and this, of course, will apply to all actions brought against employers who have not availed themselves of the privileges offered by the Ohio Workmen's Compensation Act. As to employers who have availed themselves of the opportunity offered by this act and who have paid into the state insurance fund the premiums provided by law—they shall not be liable for any injury to any employe or to his legal representatives in case of death unless such injury has arisen from the wilful act of such employer, or of any such employer's officers or agents, or from the failure of such employer or of such employer's agents or officers to comply with any municipal ordinance or lawful order of any duly authorized officer or any statute of Ohio for the protection of the life and safety of employes. Briefly stated, after January 1, 1912, employers who do not avail themselves of the privileges offered by the Ohio Workmen's Compensation Act will not be liable in an action in the courts of this state for the death of an employe caused by the wrongful act neglect or default of such employer or of his officers or agents, and in such action there will be absolutely no limit upon the amount which may be awarded as damages against such employer, but the employer who avails himself of the privileges of the act will be fully protected in accordance with its terms and cannot be used for the death of an employe unless such death be caused by the wilful act of such employer or any of such employer's officers or agents or from the failure of such employer or any of such employer's officers or agents to comply with any municipal ordinance or lawful order of any duly authorized officers or any statute for the protection of the life and safety of employes. And even in the event of the death of an employe resulting from an act or omission of the employer which would give the employe's representative a right to bring an action in the courts, still such personal representatives have the same right to claim compensation or award from the state insurance fund as if the injury were caused in any other manner, and in case the option to claim an award from the state insurance fund is exercised, then no action in the court can be maintained.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY—BALANCE OF PREMIUM PAID MAY NOT BE REFUNDED WHEN FIRM GOES OUT OF BUSINESS.

The workmen's compensation act provides in Section 21 that moneys collected for the state insurance fund shall be disbursed to such employes that have been injured in the course of their employment and there is no authority for disbursement in any other manner.

When a firm, therefore, pays a premium to cover an ensuing period and goes out of business before the expiration of such period, the board cannot refund the balance of the premium for the time ensuing to the end of the period for which insurance is paid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 16, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of October 14, 1912, in which you make the following request for my opinion:

> "On August 9, 1912, a certain company paid a premium of $54.82 into the state insurance fund provided for in the workmen's compensation law. The premium paid for the protection and benefits of the workmen's compensation law for a period of six months beginning August 9, 1912, and ending January 9, 1913.
> "On or about October 1, 1912, the said company quit business and they had no need for the protection of the workmen's compensation law, no longer having workmen in their employ, and they made a request of this department to refund to them two-thirds of the amount which they had paid into the state insurance fund on August 9. They maintain that since the law required them to pay premiums in advance, they are justly entitled to a proportionate refund under the circumstances.
> "Will you kindly give us your opinion as to the right of this department to issue vouchers authorizing payment of a refund from the state insurance fund in such cases as this?"

In considering this question I wish to call your attention to the following sections of the act establishing your board, (102 O. L., 524):

> "Section 18. The state liability board of awards shall establish a state insurance fund from premiums paid thereto by employers and employes as herein provided, according to the rates of risk in the classes established by it, as herein provided, for the benefit of employes of employers that have paid the premium applicable to the classes to which they belong and for the benefit of the dependents of such employes, and shall adopt rules and regulations with respect to the collection, maintenance and disbursement of said fund.
> "Section 19. The treasurer of state shall be the custodian of the state insurance fund, and all disbursements therefrom shall be paid by him, but upon vouchers signed by any two members of the state liability board of awards.
> "Section 21. The state liability board of awards shall disburse the state insurance fund to such employes of employers as have paid into said fund the premiums applicable to the classes to which they belong, > that have been injured in the course of their employment, wheresoever such injury has occurred, and which have not been purposely self-inflicted, or to their dependents in case death has ensued."

It would appear from the last sentence of Section 18, namely that your board

> "shall adopt rules and regulations with respect to the collection, maintenance and disbursement of said fund" that possibly you might by rules and regulations provide for the return of a portion of the premium paid in by an employer when he goes out of business and the insurance ceases prior to the expiration of the period covered by the said premium; but Section 21 provides explicitly that your board

> "shall disburse the state insurance fund to such employes * * * that have been injured in the course of their employment * * *" and taking this as well as the other provisions of the act, and the entire scheme of the act, I find no authority whatever for a return to the employer of any part of the premium paid.

I take it, therefore, that as the law now stands you have no authority to make a refunder of this character. It seems to me, however, that this matter is one that should be provided for by subsequent legislation as it is only just that employers should only be required to pay for the insurance they actually receive, and when the reason for the insurance ceases, a method should be provided for making a proper proportionate refunder.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT—OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES NOT INCLUDED.

From the title of the workmen's compensation act and the general provisions thereof, occupational diseases are not within the provisions of the act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1912.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of October 1, 1912, you make the following request for my opinion:

> "A certain employer, under Claim No. 392, has applied for compensation and award out of the state insurance fund. His injury consists of acute poisoning, and in answer to the question requiring a description of the injury he states that it is a case of lead poisoning, and in the first notice of injury adds the words, 'occupational disease.'
> "Is this an injury under the statute such as entitles the applicant to compensation and award out of the state insurance fund?"

What is known as "the workmen's compensation act" passed March 28, 1911 (102 O. L., 524) was Senate Bill 127, entitled: "an act to provide a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured, and the dependents of killed, employes and to provide for the administration of such fund by a state liability board of awards." It is well settled that the title of an act can be considered in construing it, especially to arrive at the intention of the legislature. Taking the title of this act, the general scheme of the act itself, and the various sections composing it, it seems beyond all doubt that the title fully expresses the intention of the legislature, that is, it was to provide a state insurance fund for the benefit of injured, and the dependents of killed, employes, and to provide for the administration of such fund. I find nowhere in the act any intention express or implied to make its benefits extend so as to cover employes who incur a disease on account of their occupation, in other words, occupational diseases, which may be defined as diseases pertaining to or caused by certain occupations. These diseases are well-known and many of them have distinctive names. The act does not cover diseases of any kind, but refers to and provides for personal injuries, or accidents, suffered by employes in the course of their employment. This is made plain throughout the act.

Section 8 of the act is as follows:

> "The board shall adopt reasonable and proper rules to govern its procedure, regulate and provide for the kind and character of notices, and the services thereof, in cases of accident and injury to employes, the nature and extent of the proofs and evidence, and the method of taking and furnishing the same, to establish the right to benefits of compensation from the state insurance fund, hereinafter provided for, the forms of application of those claiming to be entitled to benefits or compensation therefrom, the method of making investigations, physical examinations and inspections, and prescribe the time within which adjudications and awards shall be made."

And Section 21 of the act explicitly provides that the state insurance fund shall be paid out

> "To such employes * * as have been injured in the course of their employment, wheresoever such injury has occurred, and which have not been purposely self-inflicted * *"

Not only is it clear from the act itself that it does not, and it was not intended to cover occupational diseases, but the same legislature which passed this act (the 79th General Assembly of Ohio) on May 17th, 1911, passed a joint resolution known as "Senate Joint Resolution No. 19" (102 O. L., 749) authorizing and directing the state board of health to make an investigation of occupational diseases. By this resolution it was resolved:

> "That the state board of health is hereby authorized and directed to make a thorough investigation of the effect of occupations upon the health of those engaged therein with special reference to dust and dangerous chemicals and gases, to insufficient ventilation and lighting, and to such other unhygienic conditions as in the opinion of said board may be specially injurious to health, and to report to the next General Assembly the results of such investigation, with such recommendations for legislative or other remedial measures as it may deem proper and advisable, provided that the cost of such investigation shall not exceed the sum of five thousand dollars."

My opinion, therefore, is that the specific case to which you refer is not an "injury" which entitles the applicant to compensation and award out of the state insurance fund, and that the act does not cover occupational diseases.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE LIABILITY BOARD OF AWARDS MAY ENGAGE PERMANENT ROOMS IN CITIES OTHER THAN COLUMBUS FOR HOLDING SESSIONS THEREIN AND FOR OTHER BUSINESS.

Under Section 6 of the act establishing the liability board of awards, the board is authorized to hold sessions at any place within the state and if it is necessary for the board to hold a room continuously for such purposes in cities other than Columbus, the board has authority to so do and may pay the expense of the same by authority of Section 37 of the act. If advisable to further expediency and to save expense, the board may use said room for its general business purposes.

State Liability Board of Awards, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of October 14, 1912, you make the following request for my opinion:

> "We would like your opinion as to the right of this department to maintain local offices in such cities of the state as the convenience of the patrons of the department and the convenience of the board and its employes would seem to suggest.
> "You will note that by Section 6 of the act under which we are operating, we are required to maintain an office in the city of Columbus and are authorized to hold sessions at any place within the state.
> "Our experience so far has been such that we are convinced that the opening of local offices in Cincinnati and Cleveland would enable us to conduct the business of the department in those cities much more satisfactorily, and, we believe, with less expense."

Section 6 of the act establishing the state liability board of awards, 102 O. L., 524, is as follows:

> "The board shall keep and maintain its office in the city of Columbus, and shall provide a suitable room or rooms, necessary office furniture, supplies, books, periodicals and maps. All necessary expense shall be audited and paid out of the state treasury. The board may hold sessions at any place within the state."

Section 37 of said act is as follows:

> "The board may make necessary expenditures to obtain statistical and other information to establish the classes provided for in Section 17. The salaries and compensation of the secretary, and all actuaries, accounts, inspectors, examiners, experts, clerks and other assistants, and all other expenses of the board herein authorized including the premium to be paid by the state treasurer for the bond to be furnished by him, shall be paid out of the state treasury upon vouchers, signed by two of the members of such board, presented to the auditor of state, who shall issue his warrant therefor as in other cases."

Taking Section 6 in connection with Section 37, you undoubtedly have the right to provide a room, or office, at any place within the state, where you deem it necessary to hold sessions of your board. If it is necessary to have such a room or office continuously in any cities of the state, then, under said sections you have the authority so to do. If such room or offices are maintained continuously, it seems to me it would not only be right, but it would be proper, for you to use the same for all possible business of your board, as well as for holding sessions, if by so doing you can make your work more efficient or save expense to the state.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TRAVELING EXPENSES IN HOME CITIES—DEPUTY ASSISTANTS AND INSPECTORS IN FIRE MARSHAL'S OFFICE.

The fire marshal is given a wide discretion in allowing necessary expenses for the performance of the duties of his office.

What traveling expenses are, is a question of fact governed by common sense principles, and under proper circumstances may be allowed to deputy assistants or inspectors while working in their home cities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1912.

HON. JOHN W. ZUBER, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 4, 1912, in which you inquire whether or not you are justified, under the law, in allowing a deputy assistant or inspector for his lunch or meals, when he is called upon to investigate a fire or inspect properties in remote portions of the city of his domicile, due to the fact that he should keep in close touch with the case and that it is impossible for him to leave his work at lunch or meal times and travel across the city for the purpose of securing his lunch or meal at his usual eating or boarding place. In reply thereto I desire to state:

Section 821 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The state fire marshal shall appoint a first deputy fire marshal, a second deputy fire marshal, and a chief assistant, each of whom he may remove for cause. He may employ such clerks and assistants, and incur such other expenses as are necessary in the performance of the duties of his office."

Considering the imperative and strenuous duties imposed upon the state fire marshal and his office force by the laws of Ohio, he is vested with the right to determine what constitutes "such other expenses as are necessary in the performance of the duties of his office;" and when acting in good faith, with the full facts in each case before him, he is sole judge of what expenses "are necessary." This must be so, from the very nature of the services required of his deputies and assistants, in which they are required to perform all their duties with promptness, secrecy and efficiency. The whole matter is one to be viewed from a sensible and practical standpoint. As shown by the facts in each particular case it is a question of fact rather than of technical law. Under the facts as stated by you, the deputy, inspector or assistant should be allowed his expenses for meals; and you have the right to prescribe rules for the government of subordinates along this line.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CANAL LANDS—FEE SIMPLE TITLE OF STATE BY VIRTUE OF OCCUPANCY—GRAND RESERVOIR IN MERCER AND AUGLAIZE COUNTIES—CUTTING OF TIMBER BY LAND CLAIMANT.

The fee simple title of all land with and upon which the embankment was constructed by the state at the east end of the Mercer county reservoir, is in the state for the reason that the state's actual occupancy of the same for canal purposes, ipso facto, vests said fee simple in the state.

The canal superintendent is justified in refusing to permit a party, claiming title to the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section No. 17, to cut and remove timber that stands near the border of the reservoir below the waste weir line, but within the artificial embankment constructed by the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1912.

HON. E. E. BOOTON, Engineer Canal Land Department, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 27, 1912, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Between the years 1837 and 1841, the state of Ohio constructed, as a part of its canal system, what is now known as Grand Reservoir, but formerly known as the Mercer county or St. Mary's Reservoir in Mercer and Auglaize counties.
> "The reservoir was formed by constructing immense embankments across the east and west ends of a low swampy valley, about eight miles apart.
> "But little attention was paid as to who were the owners of the different tracts embraced within the reservoir, as it was expected that applications for damages would be made by the parties interested. Many years after the reservoir was built, certain parties made applications to the general land office to purchase lands within the limits of the reservoir without disclosing that portion of the same, and in some instances all, of such tracts that had been appropriated by the state for reservior purposes.
> "Among the tracts thus acquired adversely to the state's interest was the forty acres shown by red boundaries on the enclosed plat of the reservoir. The tract books in the Auditor of State's office show that John W. Stoker purchased from the United States the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 17, town 6 south, range 4 east, Auglaize county, Ohio, September 4, 1851. The plat books also show that Stoker acquired the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter; also the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of said section 17.
> "I merely call attention to the last two entries for the reason that litigation involving them throws some light as to the title to the land under consideration.
> "In 1896, Mr. Stoker caused a bill to be introduced in the Senate, which was later enacted into a law, by which he was paid $1,400.00 for an easement to overflow the two tracts last described above, but for some reason no mention was made of the land in the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of said section, which he either owned at this time or had transferred to someone else. At any rate, no settlement was made for the tract now in controversy.

"After the settlement made under the act passed April 27, 1896, for the lands within the reservoir, Stoker set up a claim that he was the owner of the land included in the banks and borrow pits outside of the reservoir and proceeded to lease building sites on the outer slope of said embankment.

" At the request of the Canal Commission, the attorney general brought suit in the common pleas court of Auglaize county to recover in the name of the state of Ohio the land in dispute from the possession of Stoker. The decision in both the common pleas and circuit courts were adverse to the claim of the state.

"However, the decision of the circuit court was reversed by the supreme court, but unfortunately no report of the case was made. Evidently the court took the view that the state had already acquired title by appropriation.

"In order to purchase these lands it was necessary for Stoker in his application to state that no one was in possession of the property applied for, and the government patent, no doubt as is customary in such cases, was granted 'subject to any adverse interests.'

"Under the act of 1825 authorizing the construction of the canals, the canal commissioners, their engineer and agents could enter upon, take possession of and use any lands, streams or materials necessary for the improvements intended by the act.

"The owners could make a claim for damages providing the same was filed within one year, but whether damages were allowed or not, the fee simple title to the lands thus appropriated vested in the state (See O. L., 23, pp. 56-57) (See also decision of Ohio supreme court in the case of Ohio ex rel. vs. P. C. C. C. & St. L. Railway Company).

"I submit herewith a copy of the canal commission laws which contain portions of the original act, also extracts from court decisions that you will find useful for ready reference.

"The reason for requesting an opinion at this time is that Mr. Charles H. Nauts, canal superintendent for the northern division of the Ohio canal, is threatened with a suit for damages for refusing to permit parties claiming title to the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of said section 17, to cut and remove some timber that stands near the border of the reservoir but below the waste-wier line thereof and within the artificial embankment constructed by the state.

"As the party is threatened to remove the timber regardless of the notice of the canal superintendent forbidding such removal, it may be necessary to invoke the strong arm of the law to prevent the removal of same, but before taking any drastic measures, we desire your opinion as to the state's right in the matter and will govern our actions in accordance therewith."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that the act of February 4, 1825 provides for the building of canals within the state, and further provides that the canal commission or any agent or engineer employed by them could enter upon and take possession of any land or material necessary for making such improvements; and also provides that necessary land for such improvements might be appropriated by the canal commissioners and that the fee simple title of the premises so appropriated should vest in the state. Said act provides that any application for compensation for any land, waters, streams or materials so appropriated should be made within one year after taking possession of the same by the said commissioners for said canal purposes.

On May 25, 1828, the Congress of the United States passed an act entitled "To aid the state of Ohio in extending the Miami canal from Dayton to Lake Erie, and to grant a quantity of land to said state to aid in the construction of the canals authorized by law." Section 1 of this act provides as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, that there be, and is hereby, granted to the state of Ohio, for the purpose of aiding said state in extending the Miami canal from Dayton to Lake Erie, by the Maumee route, a quantity of land equal to one-half of five sections in width, on each side of said canal between Dayton and the Maumee river, at the mouth of the Auglaize, so far as the same shall be located through the public land, and reserving each alternate section of the land unsold to the United States, to be selected by the commissioner of the general land office, under the direction of the president of the United States; and which land, so reserved to the United States, shall not be sold for less than two dollars and fifty cents per acre. The said land hereby granted to the state of Ohio to be subject to the disposal of the legislature of said state for the purpose aforesaid, and no other; Provided, That said canal, when completed, shall be and forever remain a public highway, for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or other charge whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service passing through the same: And Provided Also, That the extension of the said Miami canal shall be commenced within five years and completed within twenty years, or the state shall be bound to pay to the United States the amount of any lands previously sold; and that the title to purchasers under the state shall be valid."

Section 3 of the act provides as follows:

> "And Be It Further Enacted, That the state of Ohio under the authority of the legislature thereof, after the selection shall have been so made as aforesaid, shall have powers to sell and convey the whole or any part of said land, and give a title in fee simple therefor to the purchaser thereof."

Section 5 of the act provides as follows:

> "And Be It Further Enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the state of Ohio five hundred thousand acres of the lands owned by the United States with the said state, to be selected as hereinafter directed, for the purpose of aiding the state of Ohio in the payment of the debt, or the interest thereon, which has heretofore been, or which may hereafter be, contracted by said state in the construction of the canals within the same, undertaken by the authority of the laws of said state now in force, or that may hereafter be enacted, for the extension of canals now making; which land, when selected, shall be disposed of by the legislature of Ohio for that purpose and no other. Provided, That said canals, when completed or used, shall be, and forever remain, public highways, for the use of the government of the United States, free from any toll or charge whatever, for any property of the United States, or persons in their service passing along the same. And Provided Further,

That the said canals, already commenced, shall be completed in seven years from the approval of this act; otherwise the state of Ohio shall stand bound to pay over to the United States the amount which any lands sold by her within that time may have brought; but the validity of the titles derived from the state by such sales shall not be affected by that failure."

Section 7 of the act provides as follows:

"And Be It Further Enacted, That this act shall take effect, provided the legislature of Ohio, at the first session thereof hereafter to commence, shall express the assent of the state to the several provisions and conditions thereof; and unless such expression of assent be made this act shall be wholly inoperative, except so far as to authorize the governor of Ohio to proceed in causing selections of said land to be made previous to the said next session of the legislature. Approved 24th May, 1828."

On December 22, 1828 the general assembly of the state of Ohio passed an act declaring the assent of the state of Ohio to the provisions and conditions of the aforesaid act of Congress, as follows:

"Be It Enacted By The General Assembly of The State of Ohio, That the assent of the state of Ohio be, and the same is hereby expressed and declared to be given to the several provisions and conditions of an act of the congress of the United States approved twenty-fourth May, eighteen hundred and twenty-eight, and entitled, "An act to aid the state of Ohio in extending the Miami canal from Dayton to Lake Erie, and to grant a quantity of land to said state, to aid in the construction of the canals authorized by law; and for making donations of land to certain persons in Arkansas Territory."

In accordance with the grant of land so made to the state of Ohio by the national government, the state built and constructed the Miami canal from Dayton to the Maumee river at the mouth of the Auglaize river, and in connection with the said canal the state built and constructed the Mercer county reservoir in the manner as stated in your inquiry. On numerous occasions, our state supreme court has held that the title acquired by the state by the appropriation of lands for canal purposes under section 8 of the act of February 4, 1825, was an absolute estate in fee simple.

"Under the constitution of 1803, the legislature, in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, possessed the power to appropriate to public use the fee simple title to lands, where, in its judgment, the public necessities required it; and the title acquired by the state by the appropriation of lands for canal purposes, under the eighth section of the act of February 4, 1825 (2 Chase, 1472), was an absolute estate in fee."

(Malone vs. City of Toledo, 34 O. S., 541, syllabus.

"Lands of which the state in any manner acquired possession under the acts of February 4, 1825 (2 Chase, 1472), and February 7, 1826 (24 O. L., 58), and used in the construction of its canals, became the property of the state in fee. (State ex rel. vs. The P. C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co., 34 W. L., 15.)

(State of Ohio vs. Snook et al., 53 O. S., 521.)

"By force of the provision of Section 8 of the act to provide for 'the internal improvement of the state of Ohio by navigable canals,' 23

O. L., 57 whenever the state actually occupied a parcel of land for canal purposes, a fee simple title thereto at once and by virtue, alone, of such occupancy, vested in the state."

(Ohio ex rel. vs. Railway Company, 53 O. S., 189.)

At pages 243, 244, 245 and 246 of the opinion in the last cited case, the court says:

"'Statutes of limitation do not run against the state unless the intention that they should so run is obvious.'

"That the title of the state to its canal lands is one in fee simple, is a question of law. The only fact to be ascertained is whether the lands were, in fact, a portion of the canal system. How the acquisition was made is not material. The mere seizure and appropriation of a parcel of land for canal purposes, by force of the statute under which our canals were constructed, was alone sufficient to vest in the state a fee simple title to them. Nor could any other title than one in fee simple be received by the state for lands to be devoted to a canal. A mere occupation of lands by the state for canal purposes was a seizure and appropriation of it to that purpose, and to be devoted to that purpose was to give to the state a fee simple title thereto. No conveyance was necessary; the seizure and occupation transferred to the state the entire estate in the lands so seized and occupied, leaving to the former owner simply a claim for compensation. 23 O. L., 56 (Section 8); Malone vs. Toledo 28 O. S., 643; Malone vs. Toledo, 34 O. S., 541.

"The lands, the occupation of which is the subject of controversy in this action, were a part of the canal lands of the state, to which, as before stated, the state had a fee simple title. The statute of 1863, 60 O. L., 44, did not authorize a conveyance in fee to the city of Cincinnati of a parcel of land in controversy, nor did the deed of the governor, made pursuant thereto, purport to convey such title. The statute, as well as the deed, expressly prescribes the interest conveyed. It was an 'authority and permission to the city of Cincinnati to enter upon, improve and occupy forever as a public highway and for sewerage purposes' the land in controversy. No other estate, right or interest was granted or intended to be granted than that just recited. Grants made by the state are not to be extended by construction. The grant was of a right to occupy and improve this strip of land for two specific purposes—for sewerage and for public highways—the fee remaining in the state. No power of sale passed to the city nor any power to barter this strip of land for another strip or parcel lying elsewhere, although the latter should be used for street or sewerage purposes. The limits of the rights of the city under the conveyance was to improve and use the land conveyed for sewerage and street purposes; it could use or apply it to no other purpose itself, nor could it grant to another any right whatever in these lands. The city by the ordinance of December 1, 1871, vacated Eggleston Avenue from the north line of Front street to the south line of Pearl street. That was a direct abandonment of the right which had been conveyed to this city by the state to improve and use for a street the portion thus vacated; and by the use to which it permitted the defendant to appropriate that portion of the strip which is situated south of Pearl street, it may be fairly inferred that the city has abandoned that also. The city having abandoned this right, it reverts to the state, from which the right emanated.

"The state was the absolute owner in fee of the whole estate and interest in this strip of land; it conveyed to the city a right to use it for two specified purposes only; upon the abandonment by the city of either purpose, the interest to that extent returned to the grantor. By the express terms of the deed made to the city, as well as by the terms of the statute authorizing it, the city was authorized to enter upon, improve and occupy all or any part of the strip of land which is subject of controversy, so that the fact that the city has abandoned a part of the land for street purposes does not work an abandonment of the whole. Nor is it the use to which the city has permitted the defendant to devote that part of the land which lies between Broadway and Pearl streets inconsistent which its continued use by the city for street purposes, and therefore, such use by the defendant does not work abandonment of the city's rights. But as the right granted to the city only authorized a use by the city itself, of the premises granted, the city could grant no right to the defendant to lay track thereon, and, therefore, such use of the premises by the defendant is without authority of law."

In the case of Ohio vs. Stoker et al., to which you refer in your letter and which was decided by the supreme court of Ohio, but not reported, the plaintiff in error (the state of Ohio) began an action in the court of common pleas of Auglaize county against the defendant, (Stoker et al.) to quiet the title to the land of the plaintiff described in the petition as being a portion of the east embankment of the Mercer county reservoir. The petition is in usual form. The defendants in their answer deny the title and possession of the land in question to be in the state of Ohio, and by way of cross petition allege they are seized of an estate in and are in possession of said land and that plaintiff's assertion of title therein is without right and constitutes a cloud on the title, and they pray that the title may be quieted as against the plaintiff. The allegations of the defendant's answer are denied in plaintiff's reply. In the common pleas and circuit courts decrees were entered in favor of the defendants. Motion for new trial was filed by the plaintiff, which motion was overruled and exceptions were accordingly taken by the plaintiff in error, the state. A bill of exceptions was taken embracing all the evidence and duly signed and filed and a petition in error was filed in the supreme court to reserve the judgment of the court below. The supreme court held, in substance, that fee simple title in and to said land was in the state and held the estate or interest as claimed by the defendants to be null and void, thereby reversing the judgment of the common pleas and circuit courts.

The situation about which you inquire in your letter is in all respects similar to the situation of the case of State vs. Stoker, supra, and the land in the case about which you inquire is on or within the east slope of the east bank of the Mercer county reservoir, as was also the land claimed by Stoker et al. I desire here to quote from the decision of the department of interior in the case of the application of Longnecker to which you refer in your letter, and which said case is also similar in most respects to the situation as described in your inquiry. In his opinion, the honorable secretary of the interior says:

"On August 25, 1898, one J. M. Longnecker, made application to the commissioner of the general land office to have set apart to him as a homestead entry, the south half of the southwest quarter of section three (3), township six (6) south, range three (3) east, first principal meridian, in Mercer county, state of Ohio.

"In such application, and proofs accompanying the same, it is shown that the attempted entry of Longnecker was made as the assignee of one Matilda Parker, widow of Ira Parker, deceased, a private soldier who had died April 1, 1896, and which application was based on the provision of Section 2306 and 2307 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

"On December 8, 1899, the honorable commissioner of the general land office, rendered a decision denying the application of Longnecker, and from this decision an appeal was taken pursuant to the practice which obtains in the department, to the honorable the secretary of the interior, and on July 19, 1900, an opinion was rendered by the department affirming the decision of the commissioner.

"The cause was then heard before the honorable secretary of the interior on motion for review and revocation of the foregoing decision of affirmance.

"Briefs were filed by counsel representing Longnecker and by the department of the attorney general of Ohio, representing the interests of the state of Ohio in said premises, and the decision of the interior department was rendered May 29, 1901.

"Upon the consideration of the question thus submitted the secretary of the interior refused to revoke, or set aside the opinion rendered by the department affirming the decision of the land commissioner. * * *"

"The last cited authorities (Spaulding vs. Chandler, 160 U. S., 394; and Wilcox vs. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498) show that there must be an authority of law for an appropriation of lands either to an individual or a public purpose, and without such authority no appropriation can be made. That authority existed for the land department to reserve these lands to the uses of the canal admits of no serious question. The power to make such a reservation or appropriation arises by necessary implication from the grant itself. It is a general proposition that with a grant, or franchise, go, by implication, all such powers as are necessary to the exercise of the grant. * * *"

"There can be no question of the power. It was incidental to the general purpose. A reservoir and works for storing and serving water to the canal are as essential to its maintenance and operation as are water stations and machine shops to the operation of a railroad.

"Where such reservoir and works should be located, their special character and extent, and what lands should be taken in the very nature of the case are questions that must necessarily be determined by the authority constructing the canal, into the determination of which the topography of the country, its hydrographic and other features, must enter and to some extent control. The state has that authority. Subject to approval of such appropriation by the United States, where public lands are affected, these powers were granted to the state and its officers by necessary implication as incidental to the general purposes. The fact that the reservoir was built, that it is maintained, that these lands are beneath its waters, are conclusive proof of the exercise of the power, and are notice of that fact to all the world. * * *"

"* * * In 1890 application was made by one M. D. Shaw to have section 7, township 6 south, range 4 east, advertised and sold as an isolated tract. That land is in the same situation and is now covered by similar applications of Mr. Longnecker as the land in question. The order for such sale was made by the then commissioner of the general land office, and, on the protest of the state, was December 31, 1890, revoked."

At page 9:

"It is most strenuously insisted by counsel, however, that the department is wrong in assuming that the state of Ohio has any equities to be protected. This canal was built many years ago when close business methods were not followed, when the public lands were of small value. The board of public works may have been mistaken as to their powers, or as to the fact that title to these lands had not been acquired and remained in the United States. With acquiescence of the government the status of these lands has remained unchanged for a period of sixty years."

At page 10:

"The state having been in peaceable possession of these lands for this term of years, exercising control over them and having placed an improvement on them at great cost, the department cannot but say there is equity in favor of the state as against Longnecker. 'The motion is therefore denied. The departmental decision is adhered to.'"

Therefore, I am of the undoubted opinion that the fee simple title of all the land within and upon which the artificial embankment was constructed by the state at the east end of Mercer county reservoir is in the state for the reason as held by the supreme court in the case of state of Ohio vs. Railway Company, supra,

"* * * whenever the state actually occupied a parcel of land for canal purposes, a fee simple title thereto at once and by virtue, alone, of such occupancy, vested in the state."

I am of the further opinion that the canal superintendent is properly and legally safeguarding the rights and interests of the state in refusing a permit to the party to cut and remove timber that stands near the border of the reservoir below the waste-weir line thereof but within the artificial embankment constructed by the state, even though said party claims title to the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of said section No. 17.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

POLICE OFFICERS APPOINTED BY BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS AND CHIEF ENGINEER—JURISDICTION SAME AS CONSTABLES—BUCKEYE LAKE—BOAT LICENSES—ARREST WITH AND WITHOUT WARRANT.

Under 475 General Code, police patrolmen, appointed by the board of public works and the chief engineer for service upon Buckeye Lake, have the same power and authority as constables in the discharge of their official duties.

When, therefore, boat owners operate their boats without having complied with the license provisions of Sections 479 and 481 General Code, said police officers in accordance with Section 13492 General Code, may arrest without warrant and detain until a warrant can be obtained, such persons as are found by themselves to be violating said provisions. If the violation is not committed in the presence of the officer, however, a warrant must be obtained.

Such officer is not empowered by the act to confiscate boats, but if it is necessary in making an arrest, he may, by the provisions of Section 482 General Code, take possession of and hold the same, and, when pursuing an offender, caught in the violation by himself, may go so far as to knock off the lock of a boat house to obtain the boat.

License fees may be recovered by civil suit or by the criminal prosecution aforesaid, as set out in 481 General Code.

Such police officers, like constables, may pursue defendants and arrest them in any county of the state, with or without warrant, under the conditions prescribed.

In accordance with 13496, when arrest is made or affidavit filed by such police officer, security for costs cannot be required.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 12, 1912.

HON. E. E. BOOTON, Engineer Canal Land Department, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith desire to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 1, 1912, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "The police patrolmen at Buckeye Lake are having some trouble in collecting the boat license fees under the provisions of Section 8 of an act entitled 'An act for the control and management of lakes and reservoirs and state lands dedicated to the use of the public for parks and pleasure resort purposes, as amended May 9, 1908. See O. L. pages 347 and 348, Vol. 99.
> "The question which we wish to submit grows out of the physical condition at Buckeye Lake. In the west half of section 12, town 17, range 18, Licking county, Ohio, the large artificial embankment terminates a short distance east of the dance pavilion at Buckeye Lake park. After this embankment was constructed, a large pond containing about five acres was left outside of the reservoir proper, but no connection was arranged for at that time. After the improvements were commenced at Buckeye Lake park the predecessors of the Ohio Electric Railway Company obtained permission to build a flume connecting the reservoir with what is known as Crane pond, and have enlarged and deepened the pond and have leased a large number of sites for boat houses. A number of the owners of motor boats house their boats in boat houses upon this pond, keeping the doors locked most of the time. Many of these owners live at a distance, and come to the lake and spend a day, generally coming Saturday afternoon, and leaving Sunday afternoon, and apparently take special pains to keep out of sight of the state police patrolman, Mr. Benner. He has written these parties several times, notifying them that they must take out the permits required by law, and a number of them have refused to make any reply. It has been ascertained that attorneys have advised these parties that the police patrolman does not dare pry off the locks in order to get possession of the launches. The question therefore arises as to the method of procedure in order to collect the boat license, and we will be greatly obliged if you will advise us as to the action to be taken in these cases. There is another cause for complaint, when the police patrolman observes someone violating the law upon the reservoir, but is unable to arrest the parties before they escape to the shore and beyond the limits of the state's property. In such cases the justice of the peace refuses to issue a warrant for the arrest of the party. We believe that the justices are in error as to their duty in the matter and we will greatly appreciate it if you will render an opinion advising these officials as to their duties in regard to issuing warrants under such conditions. A prompt opinion on these matters will be greatly appreciated by the park board."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that Section 7 of an act entitled, "An act for the control and management of lakes and reservoirs and state lands dedicated to the use of the public for parks and pleasure resort purposes" (Sections 479 and 480 General Code) provides for the fees to be charged for licenses to maintain and operate boats on state reservoirs as follows:

Section 479 General Code:

"On the first day of May each year through such officers as the board and engineer designate, the following fees shall be collected upon all boats and watercraft maintained and operated, canal traffic boats excepted, in or upon any of the waters of any state reservoir dedicated or set apart for the use of the public for park or pleasure resort purposes; rowboats carrying not more than five persons, one dollar; rowboats carrying more than five persons, fifty cents additional for each person in excess of five; electric, naphtha and steam launches, steam boats and watercraft used for similar purposes, one dollar for each person of one hundred and seventy pounds that may be carried thereon with safety."

Section 480 General Code.

"All moneys derived from such fees shall be credited to the funds for maintaining and policing, and upon the payment of such fees, such board and engineer shall issue a written permit, to be signed by the president of the state board of public works, authorizing such person, persons, or corporation to maintain and operate the boats, for which such fees have been paid, upon the waters of such public park or pleasure resorts, in the manner prescribed in such permit. Such permit shall be revoked by such board and engineer on proof that such boat or boats are used for illegal purposes."

Section 481 of the General Code provides that metal plates shall be issued for each boat so licensed as follows:

> "In carrying out the provisions of the preceding two sections, the board of public works and engineer thereof shall procure suitable metal plates, numbered consecutively, to be issued annually to persons using boats on the waters of such public parks, for which the fees provided for therein shall be charged. No person shall maintain or operate a boat on the waters of any such public park or pleasure resort, without first obtaining the permit provided for by such section and without displaying, at all times such metal plate, in a conspicuous manner, upon the side or end of his boat, unobscured by paint or other covering. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars, and stand committed until such fine and costs are paid. Justices of the peace shall have jurisdiction within their respective counties in all cases of violation of this section, and neither party shall be entitled to a trial by jury."

Section 475 of the General Code provides for the appointment of police patrolmen as follows:

> "Such board and engineer may appoint police potrolmen to preserve order and protect the public at any such reservoir and adjacent state land, and such police patrolmen shall have the same power and authority as constables in the discharge of their official duties, and their jurisdiction shall be co-extensive with the counties touching or including any portion of such public park or pleasure resort."

Section 482 General Code specifies the powers of such police patrolmen as follows:

> "Every police patrolman appointed by the board of public works and chief engineer of public works to preserve order and protect the public, in accordance with these provisions, may arrest on view or warrant and bring to justice a person violating any such provision, and, if in making an arrest, it is necessary for such patrolman to take possession of and hold a boat or boats or other property, he shall not be held liable for the loss of or any damage done to such boat or boats or other property taken and held by the reason of the failure of the owner or owners thereof to comply with the provisions hereof, providing ordinary care is exercised in the handling thereof, and no person shall take possession of a boat or other property which has been taken in charge by a police patrolman or other officer as herein provided, until such patrolman or officer has released it, and any person doing so shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars nor exceeding twenty-five dollars, and shall stand committed until such fine and costs are paid."

Under Section 481, as above quoted, any violation of any of the provisions contained in said act constitutes a misdemeanor, and said section provides for a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars for such violation.

It will be noted by the provision of Section 475, above quoted, that such police patrolmen have the same power and authority as constables in the discharge of their official duties.

Section 13492 General Code enumerates the officers that may make arrests as follows:

> "A sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, marshal, deputy marshal, watchman or police officer, shall arrest and detain a person found violating a law of this state, or an ordinance of a city or village, until a warrant can be obtained."

In other words, if a misdemeanor is committed in the presence of the officer, then such officer can legally make the arrest without a warrant, and if not committed in the presence of the officer he must first procure a warrant before making the arrest. (Reinhard vs. City, 49 O. S., 257 and State vs. Lewis 50 O. S., 179.)

Applying the above rule to the situation as described in your inquiry, if the patrolman finds any person maintaining or operating a motor boat or launch upon the waters of Buckeye Lake without a metal plate on such motor boat or launch, as required by Section 481 General Code, indicating that no license fee has been paid, then said patrolman may arrest such person without a warrant and detain him until a legal warrant can be obtained. Said act does not contain any provision specifically providing for the confiscation of any boats, motor boat or launch upon which no license fee has been paid. Said Section 482 merely provides that,

> "if in making an arrest, it is necessary for such patrolman to take possession of and hold a boat or boats or other property, he shall not be held liable for the loss of or any damage done to such boat or boats or other property taken, etc."

It follows that such patrolman is without legal authority to pry off the locks on any of the boathouses mentioned in your inquiry even if he had knowledge that there were boats therein which were, or had been operated contrary to law unless he were in pursuit of an operator of such boat and had arrested such operator just after he had placed such boat in one of the boat houses and had locked said boat house, then the patrolman in so arresting said operator would have the right to take possession of such boat as provided in Section 482 General Code, above quoted, even to the extent of breaking the lock on the boat house.

This disposes of the question as to whether or not, and under what circumstances, a patrolman has the right to pry off the locks on the boat houses under the circumstances stated in your inquiry.

Following this brief preface which I have gone into for the purpose of leading up to your principal question as to the method of procedure to be followed in order to collect license fees upon boats, for the operation of which no licenses have been procured and paid for, and answering the same, I am of the opinion that either of two remedies may be pursued as follows:

First. By a civil suit against any person or persons maintaining or operating such motor boats or launches upon the waters of Buckeye Lake. The state has the legal right to maintain a civil suit for the purpose of recovering license fees due it although the proper evidence to sustain such suit should be carefully procured before bringing the same. (City of Cincinnati vs. Beuhansen, 10 Dec. Reprint 652; 22 Bul. 421.)

Second. By a criminal prosecution as provided in Section 481 of the General Code and placing such person or persons under arrest by procuring a state warrant if the offense was not committed in the presence of the patrolman, for, as above stated, it would not be necessary to procure a warrant if such offense was committed in the presence of the patrolman. However, before starting such prosecution if the offense was not committed in the presence of the patrolman it would be necessary to have the name of the person or persons maintaining and operating such motor boat or launch in contravention of said act hereinbefore referred to, as well as sufficient evidence of the fact that such person or persons had so operated said boat.

As above stated, and reiterated now, there is no provision contained in said act giving patrolman authority to confiscate motor boats or launches or holding the same for the purpose of enforcing payment of the license fees provided by Section 479 of the General Code above quoted.

Coming now to your third question as to whether or not the police patrolman who observes a party violating the law upon the reservoir can arrest such person after escaping to the shore and beyond the limits of the state property, I would say, as above stated, such police patrolman has the same power and authority as constables in the discharge of their official duties by reason of Section 475 of the General Code. For reasons heretofore given, such patrolman has the legal right to arrest any person found violating the law in his presence and furthermore has the right to pursue and arrest the offender even beyond the limits of the state's property. In other words, the police patrolman can arrest such offender on sight wherever he happens to find the offender without first procuring a state warrant under the above circumstances. This is in accordance with Section 13492 General Code above quoted which expressly makes it the duty of every sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, marshal or deputy marshal or police officer to arrest and detain any person found violating any law of this state or any legal ordinance of any city or incorporated village until a legal warrant can be obtained. If, however, under the circumstances just stated, the patrolman desires a warrant or in case it is necessary to procure a warrant because the offense was not committed in the presence of the officer—he can procure such warrant by filing an affidavit for the same with a justice of the peace of the county wherein the offense was committed in accordance with Section 13496 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "When an affidavit charging a person with the commission of an offense is filed with a justice of the peace, mayor or police judge, if he has reasonable ground to believe that the offense charged has been committed, he shall issue a warrant for the arrest of the accused."

It is to be carefully noted, however, that I only mention justices of the peace for the reason that such police patrolman cannot legally file his affidavit with a mayor or police judge because Section 481 of the General Code only gives justices of the peace jurisdiction in cases of violation of any of the provisions contained in said act.

Section 13499 General Code provides when security for costs of prosecution are required and when not required as follows:

> "When the offense is a misdemeanor the magistrate, before issuing the warrant, may require the complainant, or, if he considers the complainant, irresponsible, may require that he procure a person to become liable for the costs if the complainant be dismissed, and the complainant or other person shall acknowledge himself so liable and such magistrate shall enter such acknowledgment on his docket. Such bonds shall not be required of a sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, marshal, deputy marshal, watchman or police officer when in the discharge of his official duty."

Such police patrolman having the same power and authority as a constable in the discharge of his official duties is not required to give security for costs, and it is thereupon, by filing an affidavit in accordance with Section 13496 General Code, above quoted, incumbent upon the justice of the peace to issue a state warrant. If, however, there be no reasonable grounds to believe that the offense has been committed, the justice of the peace, notwithstanding the affidavit of the complainant, may decline to issue the warrant.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCY—CHARITY ORGANIZATIONS—NECESSITY TO PRODUCE A LICENSE.

Charity organizations, like the Young Men's Christian Association and the Goodrich House of Cleveland, which charge a fee for registration or as a commission upon the salary of the party for whom employment is procured, are obliged, by Section 886 General Code, to procure a license.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1912.

HON. FRED LANGE, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have received your request for an opinion upon what constitutes a private employment agency within the meaning of the provisions of the General Code providing for the payment of a license; based upon the specific inquiries of the Young Men's Christian Association of Springfield and The Goodrich House of Cleveland as to whether or not their respective employment departments come within the purview of the statute.

The letter of the Young Men's Christian Association discloses the fact that it is there the intention to charge a fee or commission, based upon the first month's salary of the party assisted; while from the communication of the Goodrich House I gather that the intention is to charge a small registration fee; but for the purposes of your inquiry this constitutes no essential difference.

The question, then, is whether charitable organizations maintaining an employment department and charging a small fee, either by way of registration fee or commission, is obligated under Section 886 of the General Code to obtain a license.

Section 893 of the General Code declares what shall be deemed a private employment agency, as follows:

> "Except an employment agency of a charitable organization, a person, firm or corporation furnishing or agreeing to furnish employment or help, or displaying a sign or bulletin, or offering to furnish employment or help through the medium of a circular, card, or pamphlet, shall be deemed a private employment agency, and subject to the laws governing such agencies."

This section specifically exempts charitable organizations insofar as the agreeing to furnish employment and the displaying of a sign or bulletin would constitute them private employment agencies, and if there were no further provision would be decisive. But let us examine, however, Section 886 of the General Code. This section provides:

> "No person, firm or corporation shall open, operate or maintain a private employment agency for hire, or in which a fee is charged an applicant for employment or an applicant for help, without obtaining a license from the commissioner of labor statistics, and paying to him a fee according to the population of the municipality as shown by the last preceding federal census, viz.:
> | | |
> |---|---|
> | In cities of 50,000 and upward | $100.00 |
> | In cities of 16,000 to 50,000 | 75.00 |
> | In cities of less than 16,000 | 50.00 |
> | In villages | 25.00 |

> "The commissioner may refuse to issue or renew a license to an applicant if, in his judgment, such applicant has violated the law relating to private employment agencies, or is not of good moral character."

The above section unequivocally, to my mind, places charitable organizations in which a fee is charged an applicant in the category of private employment agencies requiring license.

Section 893 and 886, General Code, would then, at first blush, seem contradictory, but a little examination will disclose that they are not so in fact. Section 893 simply provides that insofar as the agreeing to furnish employment and the displaying of a sign or bulletin constitute the indicia of a private employment agency, these indicia shall be disregarded when a charitable organization is under consideration; while Section 886 is broader in its scope and covers any person, firm or corporation which operates or maintains a private employment agency for hire.

In other words, any person, firm or corporation agreeing to furnish employment and displaying an advertisement to that effect, save and except a charitable organization, is presumed by statute to be a private employment agency and subject to the license statute; and every person, firm or corporation, including a charitable organization, actually charging a fee to the applicant for employment is subject to the provisions of Section 886 and obligated to secure a license.

My conclusion, therefore, is that charitable organizations maintaining an employment department and charging a fee, either by way of registration fee or by way of a commission upon the salary of the party assisted, is a private employment agency within the meaning of the statute and is obligated to secure a license.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MATTRESSES—LABELS—SALE OF NEW AND SECOND HAND.

The label required by 102 O. L., 519 containing a statement of materials used in the manufacture of a mattress, must be placed upon the new mattress by the manufacturer and such label may not be attached by one selling a second hand mattress.

No mattress may be possessed, sold or delivered which is not properly branded or labeled.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 6, 1912.

HON. FRED LANGE, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You call our attention to certain language used in an opinion heretofore rendered by this department to you under date of October 19, 1911, relative to our interpretation of an act passed by the last legislature which act is found in the 102 Ohio Laws 519, which act is entitled "An act to provide for the branding and labeling of mattresses, and to provide against the use of insanitary or unhealthy materials in the manufacture of mattresses and to provide against the sale of mattresses containing such insanitary or unhealthy materials.

The language to which you call our attention is as follows:

> "As the law requires that the label must contain a statement of the materials used in the manufacture of mattresses, it is clear that such label is intended to be used wholly upon new mattresses as manufactured, and not upon mattresses which are sold as second hand mattresses and not as new mattresses."

You state that such language has been interpreted to mean that a second hand mattress provided it is sold as a second hand mattress need not bear any label at all, and that, therefore, second hand mattresses are not within the purview of the act in question. The interpretation so placed upon such language is quite the opposite of that intended by the use thereof.

The language so used was intended to mean that the label must be placed on the mattress when manufactured, and must state what is required by Section two of said act, and that it was not permitted for dealers in second hand mattresses to attempt themselves to place a label on such mattress in order to bring such mattress within the provisions of the law.

Section two of the act clearly shows that it is intended that the label should be placed upon the mattress when manufactured as it says that the label shall contain a statement of the materials used in the manufacture of such mattress.

Section one of said act provides:

"Whoever manufactures for sale, offers for sale, sells, delivers or has in his possession with intent to sell or deliver any mattress which is not properly branded or labeled as hereinafter provided, or which is falsely branded or labeled, * * * or whoever dealing in mattresses has a mattress in his possession for the purpose of sale or offers it for sale without a brand or label as herein required * * shall be fined * *."

There can be no doubt that after said act went into effect it was unlawful for any person to manufacture for sale, to offer for sale, to sell, to deliver or to have in his possession with intent to sell or deliver any mattress which is not properly branded or labeled as required by Section two of said act whether the same be a new mattress or one that is sold as a second hand mattress.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VETERINARY SURGERY—EXAMINATIONS—PERSONS WHO PRACTICED PRIOR TO MAY 21, 1894—CONSTITUTIONALITY—IGNORANCE OF LAW DOES NOT EXCUSE.

Section 1174-1 of the General Code, providing that veterinary surgeons, who had not within six months after the passage of the act, submitted satisfactory evidence to the state board of veterinary examiners that they had practiced prior to May 21, 1894, would not be entitled to a certificate without examination, is constitutional.

Ignorance of said law will not excuse said veterinary surgeons from compliance with its provisions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1912.

DR. LOUIS P. COOK, Secretary, Ohio State Board of Veterinary Examiners, 3116 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The sub-joined opinion was rendered me by one of special counsel in my department under date of August 10, 1911. After an examination of the statement of facts and brief prepared by Messrs. Bolin & Bolin, attorneys at law, in reference to the right of certain persons to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in the state of Ohio, the said persons having been engaged in the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery prior to May 21, 1894, but having failed within six months after the passage of the act known as Section 1174-1 passed May 10, 1910, and approved May 23, 1910, to submit satisfactory evidence to your board that he was so engaged in the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this state prior to said May 21, 1894. At the time of receiving the said opinion I was not clearly satisfied that the conclusions therein were correct. However, after careful examination thereof and of the statute cited therein I have come to the conclusion that the said opinion is correct and that in order for the parties coming within Section 1174-1 to be entitled to a certificate for the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery it was necessary that such party submit the evidence satisfactory to the board within the six months prescribed in said act, and further that the concluding clause of said section that "no person shall after six months following the passage of this act practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state without a certificate" simply suspended the operation of criminal prosecution until the termination of said six months period.

While this may work a hardship upon the parties now applying for a certificate claiming to come under Section 1174-1 General Code, yet I am clear that the board has no authority at this time to grant any certificate, the party not having submitted satisfactory evidence to the board within six months after the passage of the act that he was engaged in the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this state prior to May 21, 1894, and that the remedy must be with the legislature.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

(Copy)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 10, 1911.

HON. T. S. HOGAN, Attorney General, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted for my examination and report the statement of facts and brief of Messrs. Bolin & Bolin in reference to the right of certain persons to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in the state of Ohio.

It appears from the statement of facts that the parties in question were all practicing as veterinary surgeons at least three years prior to the passage of the act of May 21, 1894, being "an act to regulate the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery." 91 Ohio Laws 391.

Section one of said act provides:

> "That all persons who now, or shall hereafter, practice veterinary medicine and surgery in the state of Ohio, and have not been engaged in such practice for at least three years prior to the passage of this act, in the state of Ohio, shall be examined as to their qualifications by a state board of veterinary examiners, to be appointed as hereinafter provided."

This act required all persons who had not been engaged in the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in the state for at least three years prior to the passage of act should have to stand examination as to their qualifications. Subsequently, in the adoption of the General Code said provision was carried into Section 1174 of such Code in the following language:

> "Before entering upon the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this state, each person shall pass an examination as to his qualifications and fitness to engage in such practice, before the state board of veterinary examiners."

Said Section 1174 was amended and supplemented 101 O. L. 355.

Section 1174 as amended and supplemented provides in part:

> "Before entering upon the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this state each person except such as qualify as hereinafter provided, shall pass an examination as to his qualifications and fitness to engage in such practice."

Section 1174-1 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Any person who within six months after the passage of this act, submits satisfactory evidence to the state board of veterinary examiners that he was engaged in the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this state prior to May 21, 1894, and who pays a fee of $2.50 to said board, shall be entitled to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state and shall receive a certificate from the said board signed by the members thereof, which certificate shall state that the person to whom it is given is legally entitled to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state; and no person shall, after six months following the passage of this act, practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state without first having obtained from the state board of veterinary examiners a certificate entitling him to engage in such practice."

Messrs. Bolin and Bolin in their brief reply upon the proposition that the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in Ohio prior to May 21, 1894, was a vested right, and that a subsequently enacted statute will not effect to deny such practitioners their right to practice.

This contention on the part of Messrs. Bolin and Bolin, as I read their brief, is the sole contention that they make for permitting their clients to practice in this state. They do not maintain that the state in the exercise of its police power has not the authority to regulate the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery of those persons who were not in active practice at the time of the passage of the act of May 21, 1894, but they do maintain that as to those who were so in the active practice on May 21, 1894, such persons had obtained a vested right to practice their profession without being required to obtain a certificate from the state as provided in Section 1174-1. They further maintain that as a matter of fact their clients have no knowledge of the passage of the section now known as Section 1174-1 prior to the expiration of the six months therein provided within which to make application for a certificate without examination. They further maintain that the rule that ignorance of the law excuses no one is now becoming abrogated, excepting in violations involving moral turpitude or infringements of well known and plain public policies, and they cite us to an unreported case, that of state of Ohio vs. Cochran. Said case was a criminal prosecution under the provisions of the statutes and was therefore totally different from the matter under investigation. To hold that because these practitioners were unaware of the passage of Section 1174-1 and its provision they were entitled to a certificate would be to hold that they could obtain a legal right in derogation of the plain provisions of the statute. I am of the opinion that although in some cases it may be held that ignorance of the law would excuse a person from the penalties thereof, as was done in the case of State vs. Cochran mentioned above, such rule could in no case be appealed to for the purpose of acquiring a legal right.

The doctrine that a person who has been practicing medicine prior to the passage of an act regulating such practice by virtue of the police power vested in the state, vests a legal right in such person is against the great weight of authority as is shown by the following cases:

"Dent vs. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114.
"Hawker vs. New York, 170 U. S. 189.
"State, ex rel. vs. State Board of Health, 103, Mo. 27.
"State, ex rel. vs State Medical Examining Board, 32 Minn. 324.
"People, ex rel. vs. McCoy, 125 Ill. 289."

The syllabi in the case of Dent vs. West Virginia supra are as follows:

"1. A statute of a state, which requires every practitioner of medicine in it to obtain a certificate from the state board of health that he is a graduate of a reputable medical college, and which makes the practice of medicine by any person without such certificate a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, is not unconstitutional and void under the fourteenth amendment, which declares that no state shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

"2. Legislation is not open to the charge of depriving one of his rights without due process of law, if it be general in its operation upon the subjects to which it relates, and is enforceable by usual modes adapted to the nature of the case."

Justice Field in delivering the opinion of the court in the above case makes the distinction between the right of the state in the exercise of its police power to prescribe conditions for the practice of medicine that are reasonable and can be readily met, and conditions which cannot be met at all; which are not a means of ascertaining whether the person was qualified to pursue his profession and which would absolutely debar such person from being able to qualify under the statute. This case is cited with approval in the case of Gravett vs. State 65 O. S. 289, at page 309.

The second syllabus of which latter case is as follows:

> "One who has an established practice in the healing of diseases may be required to conform to such reasonable standard respecting qualification therefor as the general assembly may prescribe, having in view the public health and welfare."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that in view of the authorities above cited, the position of Messrs. Bolin and Bolin that there is a vested right in his client to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state is untenable, and that, therefore, in order to practice within this state, they having failed to comply with the provisions of Section 1174-1 General Code they must present themselves for examination.

Attached to the brief of Messrs Bolin and Bolin is a certain letter dated April 16, 1900 from the Ohio State Board of Veterinary Examiners, addressed to Dr. G. W. Wendelken, of Athens, Ohio, the contents of which is as follows:

> "At the meeting of the state board of veterinary examiners, held on Tuesday last, your case was considered. In view of the many certificates presented from citizens of your county stating that you had been in continuance veterinary practice since before May 21, 1894, in the state of Ohio, the board decided not to molest you. You may therefore, continue to practice in peace."

Prior to the enactment of Section 1174-1 of the General Code and prior to the enactment of Section 1174 on the adoption of the General Code there was no certificate of qualification required of a person who had practiced medicine three years prior to the passage of the act of May 21, 1894. Consequently, prior to the adoption of the Code Dr. Wendelken was permitted to practice in this state without a certificate as the facts show that he was a practicing veterinary three years prior to May 21, 1894, and the letter above set out simply states that the board is satisfied that the proofs offered by Dr. Wendelken were sufficient as to his length of practice. The above letter can under no circumstances be considered as a certificate, and on the adoption of Section 1174 no one was permitted to practice in this state unless he shall have first passed an examination as to his qualification and fitness. Consequently, it is my opinion that on the adoption of the Code and the passage of said Section 1174 Dr. Wendelken, as well as the other clients of Messrs. Bolin and Bolin, could not legally practice in this state without having passed an examination. On the adoption of Section 1174-1 Dr. Wendelken, as well as the others, were permitted with six months after the passage of said section, upon submitting satisfactory evidence, that he was engaged in such practice prior to May 21, 1894, and the payment of the regular fee to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state, to receive a certificate from the board signed by the members thereof.

No distinction can be made between the right to establish a practice and the right to pursue a practice within this state under the ruling of Gravett vs. State, supra, wherein the court says on page 308:

> "This objection is founded on the inhibition of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States: 'Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws;' and the provision of our own bill of rights which gives inviolability to the rights of 'enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and seeking to obtain happiness and safety.' In urging this objection it is correctly assumed that there is a property interest in a vocation or means of livelihood, but the distinction between the right to establish a practice, and the right to pursue a practice, already established seems to be inadmissible. By what process of reasoning could it be esteemed more sacred that the right to make contracts by which property might be acquired. The provision quoted from the bill of rights includes the right to acquire, and the right to possess within the same protection."

Summing up, therefore, I beg to submit that it is my opinion:

First. That the doctrine that ignorance of the law excuses no one is fully applicable to the matter under examination, and the fact that the clients of Messrs. Bolin and Bolin were not aware of the passage of Section 1174-1 will not give them the legal right at this time to demand a certificate from the board.

Second. That Section 1174-1 of the act regulating the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery is constitutional, and that the requirements imposed by said act must be met in order to entitle the person to a certificate.

Third. That the case of Dr. Wendelken stands in no better position than does the case of other clients of said Messrs. Bolin and Bolin.

It will be necessary, therefore, that the clients of Messrs. Bolin and Bolin present themselves for such examination as is required by the Ohio State Board of Veterinary Examiners.

Respectfully submitted,

Special Counsel.

STATE AID ROAD WORK ENGINEER—EXPENSES—AUTOMOBILE HIRE PAYABLE TO WIFE CANNOT BE ALLOWED—PUBLIC POLICY—DEALINGS OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS WITH PERSONALLY INTERESTED PARTIES.

A bill presented as an expense account of an engineer purporting to be for automobile hire and payable to the wife of such engineer, when the state records show an automobile listed in the name of the engineer and none listed in the name of the wife, is clearly apparent on its fact to be a subterfuge. Furthermore, the policy of the law forbids a public official to deal in such capacity with his wife or any other personally interested party. Such bill cannot be allowed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your communication of December 1, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Mr. H. M. Sharp is employed as resident engineer on state aid road work. As a resident engineer he is entitled to actual and necessary expenses. In this expense account, he includes an item of $38.00 for automobile hire covered by a receipt signed by Mrs. H. M. Sharp.
> "The records of the automobile department show an automobile registered in the name of H. M. Sharp but none in the name of Mrs. H. M. Sharp. Can this bill for automobile hire be legally paid from state aid money?"

In reply to your inquiry, Section 1215, General Code, as amended in 102 O. L., 345, being Section 42, provides for the appointment, salary and expenses of resident engineers under the state highway department. Said section reads as follows:

> "The state highway commissioner shall use a competent engineer and assistants to make the necessary surveys and plans for a proposed highway improvement. Such engineer may also be employed to superintend the work of construction of such improvement, shall be compensated for each day employed in such service, not to exceed six dollars per day, and actual expenses. All assistants shall receive not to exceed three dollars per day and actual expenses."

From the statement you make, to the effect that the records of the automobile department show an automobile registered in the name of F. M. Sharp, but none in the name of Mrs. F. M. Sharp, it is perfectly apparent that the receipt from Mrs. F. M. Sharp is a mere subterfuge; and whether a subterfuge or not it is not the policy of the law that a man may contract with his wife concerning matters that are subjects of expense in his own office.

It is the policy of the law so well understood as to need only mention, that an officer in incurring expenses should deal with those with whom he may deal at full arm's length. We have even penal statutes forbidding certain public officials from contracting with certain interested persons. These statutes disclose the public policy. Before an officer is entitled to reimbursements for claimed expenses, it must appear that such officer has actually paid out the money to a third person, that the expenditure is for a proper purpose, and that the contract is made with one not coming with the legal inhibition either by express statute or well known and well understood public policy.

The bill to which you refer cannot legally be paid from state aid money.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE AID FOR ROADS—PERSONAL INVESTIGATION OF COUNTY'S QUALIFICATIONS FOR AID BY HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—LIMITATIONS OF AID TO AMOUNT RAISED BY LEVY BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The act providing an appropriation for state aid in road building, limits the benefits of the appropriation to counties having less than two hundred miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, and for the purpose of determining whether or not a county comes within such limitations, the state highway commissioner is not concluded by the statement of facts set out in an application for state aid but may use such means as are reasonably necessary to determine such fact.

Under Section 1218, a county applying for state aid is limited to an amount equal to that which it has raised by tax levy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The recent legislature in appropriating money for "state aid in road building" attached thereto the following proviso:

> "State aid in road building----------$440,000.00. Provided, that this appropriation shall not be paid out by said state highway department or used in any other manner than in new construction in counties having less than two hundred miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, and no part of such appropriation shall be paid to any county for repairs on dirt or unimproved road; but in counties having more than two hundred miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, it may be used for new construction or improvement of said roads as the county commissioners may decide."

Since it is provided in said appropriation that the same shall not be paid out by the state highway department in any other manner than in construction in counties having less than two hundred miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, you desire to know whether or not you are concluded, as to whether or not a county has two hundred miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, by the statement to that effect contained in the application for state aid for repairs.

It is my opinion that you are not concluded thereby but that you may use such means as is reasonably necessary in order to determine whether or not a county has two hundred miles of such road; providing you have reason to believe that such statement is not in accordance with the facts. The law requires that the appropriation shall not be paid out by your department for repairs in counties having less than two hundred miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, and it is your duty to see that the county has said two hundred miles in order to be entitled to state aid for repairs.

You further state that in a certain application for state aid for repairs filed with your department December 7, 1910, the commissioners in their application stated that they had levied on the tax duplicate of said county three-tenths of a mill for the repairs of improved roads in said county amounting to $7,000.00, and that they make application to your department for the amount of state aid apportioned to their county for the year 1911. You state that the amount apportioned to their county is somewhat in excess of $7,000.00, and you desire to know whether such county would be entitled to anything in excess of $7,000.00, being the sum which they have raised by taxation for repair of improved roads.

Section 1218 General Code, being the highway act prior to the new highway act passed by the last legislature provides:

> " * * * The amount so apportioned shall be paid to the county treasurer, if the county commissioners of such county have levied or will levy a tax on the duplicate of the county sufficient to equal the amount so appropriated."

The county commissioners in their application for state aid have certified to your department that they have levied three-tenths of a mill, amounting to $7,000.00.

I am of the opinion that they are entitled only to an amount equal thereto, to wit, the sum of $7,000.00 of the amount apportioned to their respective county, and that in order to receive the balance of said sum it would have been necessary for them to have made a further application therefor prior to the enactment of the new highway law as found in 102 Ohio Laws 333.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CERTIFIED CHECK RECEIVED AS GUARANTEE WITH BID ON CONTRACT—DISPOSITION OF, WHEN CONTRACTOR FAILS TO PERFORM.

When, in accordance with a requirement of the state highway commissioner, a contractor submits with his bid, a certified check as a guarantee for the performance of the contract, and later said contractor fails to enter into a contract, the commissioner may out of the proceeds of said check, reimburse both the state and county for the loss resulting from such non-performance and must return the balance to the contractor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 27th you submitted to this department for opinion the following:

> "In preparing the letting of state aid roads, we require that the contractor submit a draft or certified check in the sum of three hundred dollars ($300.00) payable at sight to the state highway commissioner, as a guarantee that if the bid is accepted a contract will be entered into and performance thereof properly secured within five days of notice of acceptance of bid.

"In case of failure or refusal on the part of the proposer to enter into contract within the set period, what disposition shall be made of the amount deposited?"

Section 1202 General Code provides in reference to receiving bids for the construction of an improved road under the state highway act that

"The bids received for a contract shall be filed and opened at the time stated in the notice, and be protected by such other regulation as the state highway commissioner directs."

The state highway law as amended 102 Ohio Laws 333 et seq., on page 341 (Section 1202 General Code) provides that:

"The bids received for an improvement shall be filed and opened at the time stated in the notice and shall conform to such other regulations as the state highway commissioner may direct."

By virtue of the provisions above set forth I am of the opinion that the state highway commissioner has full authority to make the requirements set forth in your letter.

The question arises to what disposition in case of failure or refusal on the part of the successful bidder to enter into the contract within the specified time shall be made of the amount deposited.

The money forfeited by failure of the successful bidder to enter into the contract as provided may or may not be an amount sufficient to cover the expenses and the additional costs, including the increase in the cost of the road on a reletting thereof, incurred by reason of such failure and the necessity of a re-advertisement and a reletting of such contract.

The question arises as to whether this money so forfeited shall be considered in the nature of liquidated damages. It would appear to me that the same should be considered in the nature of a reimbursement for the expenses and additional costs incurred by reason of such failure. As the money expended in the letting of the contract comes out of the state aid money appropriated to the particular county and out of the county as well, I am of the opinion that the state highway commissioner should ascertain the expenses and additional costs incurred by the failure of the contractor to enter into the contract and apportion the same between the county and the state in proportion to the amount of money appropriated by the state and county respectively for the particular road, and pay the said sum or so much thereof as is necessary to reimburse the county and state for all losses by reason of the failure to enter into the contract into the state treasury and county treasury respectively to be credited to the general fund of each. If there is any balance after reimbursing the state and county for loss on account of failure of the contractor to enter into the contract, the balance thereof should be returned to the contractor.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—SHARE OF EXPENSE OF MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR OF STATE AID ROADS BY COUNTY, TOWNSHIP AND HIGHWAY COMMISSION—"IMPROVEMENT" AND "MAINTENANCE" AND "REPAIR."

Under Section 1225 General Code, the expense of maintaining and repairing roads improved by state aid, shall be payable 25 per cent. by the state; 50 per cent. by the county and 25 per cent. by the township, unless both the commissioners and and the trustees have failed to make application for their share of the funds, in which case the state highway commissioner could pay all of the cost.

Section 1207 General Code provides only for road improvement and cannot therefore, be applied to the maintenance or repair of roads.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of April 20th, wherein you state:

> "A road that has been built under state aid is badly in need of repair. The county commissioners have passed a resolution in which they state that they have no funds to apply to the repair of this road, and request the state highway commissioner to repair the same, taking the entire cost out of the state aid money apportioned to their county.
> "In your opinion what is the limit to the per cent. of the total cost of repair work that the highway commissioner may expend on state aid roads? Also, in your opinion, can maintenance and repair work on state aid roads be done under Section 1207, General Code?"

In reply to your first question I direct your attention to Section 1225, General Code, the first paragraph of which reads as follows:

> "Highways improved or constructed under the provision of any act providing for aid by the state shall be kept in repair and maintained by the state highway commissioner. The expense of such repair and maintenance shall be divided and payable twenty-five per cent. thereof by the state, fifty per cent, thereof by the county and twenty-five per cent. thereof by the township or townships. The state's share being payable from moneys appropriated by the general assembly for the purpose; the county and township shares from their respective road or road repair funds."

The statement in your letter that the road in question is one built under state aid brings said road clearly within the provisions of Section 1225. The requirement of said section that twenty-five per cent. of the expense of the repair of such road shall be paid by the state, fifty per cent. by the county, and twenty-five per cent. by the township or townships, is, in my opinion, mandatory and cannot be disregarded without doing violence to the plain intent and meaning of the express words of the statute. The only instance in which you would be legally justified in repairing a road and paying all the cost out of the state's apportionment to the county would be under Section 1185, when neither the county commissioners nor the township trustees had made use of the apportionment of the state aid money to said county.

It is therefore my opinion that unless the commissioners or trustees have failed to make application for the county's share of the state highway fund, you are not authorized to pay more than twenty-five per cent. of the cost of the repair of this road out of the funds allotted to said county under the state highway law.

Your second inquiry involves a construction of Section 1207 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "Whenever there are one or more improvements to be made in any county and the cost and expense thereof is equal to or is less than twice the amount apportioned by the state to a county, then the state shall pay fifty per cent. of such cost and expense.
> "Whenever there are one or more such improvements to be made in any county and the cost and expense thereof exceeds twice the amount apportioned by the state to a county, then the state shall pay the amount of the apportionment for said improvement or improvements apportioned as may be agreed upon by the state highway commissioner and the county commissioners.
> "Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, the county shall pay twenty-five per cent. of all cost and expense of improvement."

The question to be determined is whether, under said section, the state highway department can do maintenance and repair work on state aid roads. No express authority seems to be granted therein by said section for doing maintenance or repair work, and if such authority exists it must be by implication.

In this connection it becomes important to determine whether the word "improvement" includes "maintenance" and "repair." To maintain is defined by Webster's Dictionary as "to hold or keep in any particular state or condition, to support, sustain or uphold; not to suffer to fail or decline." The words "improve" and "repair," as applied to roads, are defined and distinguished in Elliott on Roads and Streets, Third Edition, Section 576, in which the following language appears:

> "An improvement may ordinarily include repair but not, as is generally true in such cases, when the two terms are used in contra-distinction. To repair seems, primarily, to mean to mend or restore to a sound or good state after decay, injury or partial destruction, while to improve seems to convey more of the idea of making better, generally by addition or change of material, nature or character."

The words "improvement," "maintenance" and "repair," being used in contra-distinction, each possesses a different meaning, separate and distinct from the others. In numerous instances the words "construction," "improvement," and "repair" occur in the same sections of the General Code in reference to the state highway law, but in Section 1207 the word "improvement" is used to the exclusion of the others, thus negativing the idea that "repair" or "maintenance" was intended.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that maintenance and repair work on state aid roads cannot be done under Section 1207, General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE AID FOR ROADS—DISPOSITION OF FUNDS FOR "IMPROVEMENTS" AND FOR "REPAIRS."

State aid funds for "improvements" are paid under Section 1206, General Code. State aid funds for "repairs," however, are paid under Section 1218, General Code, to the county treasurer, to be placed in a common fund together with the proceeds of levy made by the county commissioners, which fund is to be disbursed by said county commissioners acting as a board of turnpike directors.

Opinion to J. R. Marker, State Highway Commissioner Columbus, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 3, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter, wherein you state:

> "Enclosed in the 'application for state aid for repair' submitted by the board of commissioners of Defiance county.
> "This application was filed in the office of the state highway commissioner, November 22, 1910.
> "How and by whom should the state's apportionment be disbursed?"

The sections of the General Code which have any bearing upon your inquiry are Sections 1206 and 1218, which read as follows:

> "Section 1206. One-half of the cost and expenses of the construction of the improvement shall be paid by the treasurer of state upon the warrant of the auditor of state issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner, from a specific appropriation made to carry out the provisions of this chapter.
> "Section 1218. If permanent roads of not less than standard width have been constructed prior to the establishment of the state highway department and the materials thereof are gravel, brick, telford, macadam or material of like quality, the county commissioners may make application to the state highway commissioner on or before January first of each year, for the amount of state funds apportioned to such county. Thereupon the amount so apportioned shall be paid to the county treasurer, if the county commissioners of such county have levied or will levy a tax on the duplicate of the county sufficient to equal the amount so appropriated. Such appropriation and levy shall become a part of the pike repair fund of the townships, and be apportioned to the townships or road districts of not less than one township each in proportion to the amount of the fund collected by such levy in each such township or road district. Township trustees or other authorities having charge thereof shall apply such fund to the repair of improved roads in the same manner as other pike repair funds are applied, but the material used therefor shall be equal to the material used in the original construction of such road."

At first glance, I inclined to the view that state aid money for repair should be disbursed as provided by Section 1206, since the word "improvement," therein used, seemed to be sufficiently broad to include "repair." The context of Section 1218, however, lends a different aspect to the case. That section deals exclusively with the disbursement of state aid money for the repair of highways, whereas Section 1206 refers to new construction.

When the preliminary steps required by Section 1218 have been taken by the county commissioners it becomes the duty of the state highway commissioner to cause to be forwarded to the treasurer of such county such portion of the county's fund set apart by the state for the repair of highways; whereupon his jurisdiction over the said fund ceases. The said state aid money allotted to said county, in addition to the proceeds of the levy made, or authorized by the county commissioners, must be placed in a common fund to be disbursed by the county commissioners acting as a board of turnpike directors, as held by me in an opinion to Hon. W. J. Schwenck, prosecuting attorney of Crawford county, Ohio, a copy of which opinion is herewith enclosed.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—DAMAGE TO ROAD THROUGH FAILURE TO COMPLETE WITHIN TIME LIMIT FIXED BY CONTRACT—LIABILITY OF CONTRACTOR, STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

When, under the terms of a contract granted by the state highway commissioner, a time limit was set for completion, and when, through failure to complete in such time (neither the state highway department nor the county commissioners being responsible for the delay), damage occurred to said road by reason of its use by order of county commissioners before completion, but after date set for the same, the contractor is not excused from rebuilding said road according to plans and specifications without increase over the contract price.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 6, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 11th as follows:

"I respectfully request your opinion upon the following:

"In the matter of the Children's Home road in Darke county, Ohio.

"The contract for the construction of said road was awarded to Baker & Kniseley on the 30th day of September, 1910, said road to be completed July 30, 1911. The commissioners then in office failed and neglected to construct sewers and culverts for said road until after the 18th day of September, 1911. A portion of said road was constructed in the fall of 1911, immediately after the new board of commissioners assumed the duties of their office. The road could not be completed on account of cold weather. The portion of said road constructed was ordered thrown open by the state highway department; the contractor, in writing, protested to the commissioners of the county, and also to the state highway commissioner, against the opening of said road, and insisted that a by-way, provided for by statute, be provided for travel along said highway.

"The road so thrown open during the winter of 1911 was considerably damaged. Said road has never been accepted by the state highway department.

"Query: What right have the county commissioners, if any, to assist in repairing or reconstructing the road in question?

"Query: What right, if any, has the state highway department to assist in repairing or reconstructing the road in question?"

I am also in receipt of a letter of the same date from Mr. Ezra Baker, one of the members of the firm to whom was awarded the contract for the construction of said road which letter is as follows:

"With reference to the Children's Home road in Darke county, Ohio, I wish to state that, as contractor for said road, that prior to September 18, 1911, I requested the commissioners of Darke county, Ohio, on different occasions to construct culverts and sewers, as provided by specifications and statute, along said road.

"The commissioners failed and neglected to construct the same, thus making it impossible for me to complete the road during the time provided for by the contract.

"As soon as the new board of commissioners assumed the duties of their office, they proceeded to construct the culverts and sewers along said way, and the greater portion of said road was constructed during the fall of 1911. On account of cold weather, it was impossible to complete the road during said fall.

"The state highway department ordered said road so completed, thrown open to public travel. I protested in writing to the commissioners of the county, and also to the state highway department against the opening of said road, and requested that a by-way be built, as provided by statute, for public travel.

"During the winter of 1911, that portion of the road so constructed and thrown open to public travel was considerably damaged.

"The remainder of the road has been constructed, and, as I claimed, strictly in accordance with the plans and specifications as furnished by the highway department, and under the direction and supervision of an inspector appointed by said highway department; also to the satisfaction of the resident engineer.

"I am willing to do what is right in helping to repair this road, but do think that I should not be compelled to pay one cent, as I did my duty in the matter as near as it was possible for me so to do.

"I am willing, by way of compromise, to assist in the repair of the road, and the commissioners are willing provided the statute permits them to do their portion of the construction or repair of the road and this is the query that is submitted to you by James R. Marker, state highway commissioner.

"Trusting that we may hear from you at your earliest convenience."

The claim of the contractor for an additional allowance over and above the stipulated contract price to assist him in the reconstruction or repair of said road is based upon the alleged negligence of the county commissioners of Darke county in not constructing sewers and culverts in time to enable him to complete the road by the date specified in the contract.

The contract was awarded by your predecessor in office, Hon. James C. Wonders, to Baker & Kniseley on September 30, 1910, and was duly approved by the commissioners of Darke county. It was provided among other things that the work was to be commenced within twenty days from the date of the awarding of the contract and completed to the satisfaction of the state highway commissioner on or before ten months from the date of the contract, that is, on or before July 30, 1911, and that if, for any reason, except for the written consent of the state highway commissioner, the completion of said work should be delayed beyond the date fixed in the contract, the contractor should forfeit and pay the sum of five dollars ($5.00) for each and every day during which said work should be delayed. It was also provided that the state highway commissioner may, in his discretion, extend the period allowed for construction in which event damages for delay should not become operative until such extension expired. It does not appear that such extension was granted by you.

In addition to the facts submitted in your letter and that of Mr. Baker, I am in receipt of additional information to the effect that no effort was made by the contractor to commence work on this contract until sometime in August, 1911, after the time limited for completion had expired. The correspondence on file in your office relating to this matter shows that on July 20, 1911, you wrote to Baker and Kniseley calling their attention to the fact that construction on said road had not been commenced, and requested information as to the reason for the delay. On July 26th, Mr. Ezra Baker answered your communication and gave as the reason for the failure to complete said road, inability to procure material promptly. Nothing was mentioned at that time of the failure of the county commissioners to construct sewers and culverts, and it seems to me if the commissioners were at fault in that regard, Mr. Baker would have said so then instead of waiting nearly a year to advance the claims of alleged negligence on the part of the county commissioners as an excuse for the failure to complete the work according to contract.

There were but two sewers and culverts on that particular road and if the contractor had not waited for almost a year, before doing anything the county commissioners could have constructed said sewers and culverts in time to enable the contractor to complete his contract by July 30, 1911.

Upon consideration of the foregoing facts and the terms of the contract, I am of the opinion that neither the board of county commissioners nor the state highway commissioner is legally authorized at this time to assist in the repair or reconstruction of said Children's Home road, and it is the duty of the contractor to complete the work according to the plans and specifications for the original contract price.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—STATE AID FUNDS MAY BE EXPENDED ONLY AS DESIGNATED IN APPLICATION—BALANCE LEFT TO CREDIT OF COUNTY MUST BE REAPPLIED FOR.

Inasmuch as application for state aid funds must be made prior to May 1st, and as such application must designate specifically the roads to be improved, the county commissioners may not use a balance of such funds left over after the improvement of the designated roads, for the purpose of improving roads not designated in the improvement.

Such balance, however, remains to the credit of the county and may be expended in accordance with a proper application for state aid made prior to May 1st following.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted an oral request for an official opinion upon the following:

> "The commissioners of a certain county made application in December, 1911, for the 1912 fund for the improvement of one mile of a certain highway therein. The application was regular in form and was approved by you. In April, 1912, the county commissioners passed a final resolution agreeing to appropriate the county's share of the cost of the improvement which resolution was duly approved by this department as required by law.
> "The contract was let and work of construction is nearing completion. The cost of construction will be considerably less than the estimate, and in consequence, there will be a balance in the state aid fund allotted to that county, which, added to an equal amount that the county commissioners say they are willing to appropriate, would be sufficient to construct another mile of said road."

Upon the foregoing facts, you desire an opinion as to whether there is any way by which said money can be legally used this year in the construction of another mile of said road.

It is provided by Section 1185 of the General Code, in part as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county may make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from an appropriation by the state for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of highways. Such application shall be filed prior to May first of the year in which such appropriation may be made or become available. If the county commissioners have not made use of the apportionment to such county, in the year in which it is available, then the township trustees may make application prior to the first day of April of the succeeding year * * *."

Section 1186, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "Each application for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of highways shall be accompanied by a proper certified resolution of the county commissioners or township trustees having jurisdiction of the road to be constructed, improved, maintained or repaired, stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the highway therein described; * * *. Each application for state aid shall also contain an agreement on the part of the county commissioners or township trustees, having jurisdiction over the road, to pay one-half of the cost and expenses of surveys and other expenses preliminary to the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of said road."

County commissioners are required by Section 1185, to file application for state aid money prior to May 1st of the year in which the appropriation becomes available. Section 1186 requires the application for such money to designate specifically the road or roads to be improved. This is necessary so that the state highway commissioner may make plans and specifications and estimate the cost of construction of such road, and to enable him to determine the amount of money that a county would be required to appropriate to pay its share of the cost of such construction and whether the amount of state aid money allotted to the county would be sufficient to pay the state's share of such cost.

There is no provision in the highway law which would preclude county commissioners from filing two or more applications prior to May 1st of the year in which the appropriation by the state becomes available. Inasmuch as the commissioners of the county in question failed to apply for all of the money allotted to their county for the year 1912, before May 1, 1912, I am of the opinion that they are without power to apply for the unexpended portion thereof, at this time.

You are not authorized to expend state money in the construction of roads unless an application such as that described above, has been filed by the county commissioners. As this cannot now be legally done, I am of the opinion that no part of said balance remaining to the credit of said county can be used for a new construction work this year. However, it remains to the credit of the county and at the end of this year will be subject to application by township trustees as provided by Section 1185, supra.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—STATE AID—WHEN APPLICATION MADE PRIOR TO JANUARY 1, 1911, MISTAKES AND OMISSIONS IN APPLICATION MAY SUBSEQUENTLY BE RECTIFIED.

When applications for state aid, under Section 1218 General Code, are defective in that they fail to contain a statement of the total taxable property of the county and the number of mills levied thereon and the number of miles of improved road in such county, or by reason of a failure to state that any levy has been made or will be made to raise funds equal to the amount applied for or by reason of clerical errors:

Held:

If the application has been made prior to January 1*st, such omissions may yet be supplied and such errors be corrected so as to permit the counties to take advantage of the state aid provision.*

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 13, 1912.

HON. JAMES R. MARKER, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter wherein you state:

"Find enclosed applications for state aid for repair for the following counties; Warren, Van Wert, Crawford and Champaign.

"Each of these several applications are more or less irregular in some respects, and I therefore most respectfully request your opinion as to what course this department shall pursue in each case."

Section 1218 of the General Code provides a method of using the state aid money allotted to a county for the repair of improved highways therein, as follows:

"If permanent roads of not less than standard width have been constructed prior to the establishment of the state highway department and the materials thereof are gravel, brick, telford, macadam or material of like quality, the county commissioners may make application to the state highway commissioner on or before January first of each year for the amounts of state funds apportioned to such county. Thereupon the amount so apportioned shall be paid to the county treasurer, if the county commissioners of such county have levied or will levy a tax on the duplicate of the county sufficient to equal the amount so appropriated. Such appropriation and levy shall become a part of the pike repair fund of the townships, and be apportioned to the townships or road districts of not less than one township each in proportion to the amount of the fund collected by such levy in each such township or road district. Township trustees or other authorities having charge thereof shall apply such fund to the repair of improved roads in the same manner as other pike repair funds are applied, but the material used therefor shall be equal to the material used in the original construction of such road."

The applications in question were all made under the old highway law prior to January 1, 1911, and it is therefore, not necessary to consider the effect of the governor's veto of the section of the present highway law, repealing the old law on that subject.

State aid money could not be paid, under Section 1218, to any county for repairs, unless such county, prior to the establishment of the state highway department, had constructed permanent roads of not less than standard width, of "gravel, brick, telford, macadam or material of like quality." The county commissioners were required to make application for the county's share of state aid money, on or before January 1st of the year in which the appropriation by the state was made, or become available. Before said money could be paid to any county, the county commissioners were required, either to levy, or agree to levy a tax on the duplicate of the county, sufficient to equal the amount of state aid money apportioned to the county.

A clause in the form of application by county commissioners for state aid money for repair, required them to state the number of mills levied by them on the taxable property of the county, and to state the amount of the total taxable property of the county, so as to serve as a basis of computation in ascertaining whether the amount of money levied or agreed to be levied by the county commissioners, would be sufficient to equal the amount of state aid money apportioned to the county.

The 1911 Appropriation bill (102 O. L., 378), contains a clause limiting the expenditure of state aid money to new construction in counties having less than 200 miles of macadam, gravel or brick road, so that the commissioners of any county desiring to use the 1911 state aid money for repair, instead of for new construction, would have to show that the county had at least 200 miles of macadam, gravel or brick road.

All of the applications enclosed in your letter, with the exception of the application of the county commissioners of Van Wert county, are defective in that they fail to contain a statement of the total taxable property of the county, and the number of mills levied thereon, and the number of miles of improved road in such county. According to the application of the commissioners of Van Wert county, they levied six-tenths of one mill for the repair of improved roads on the property of said county, except upon the property of certain townships therein, in which the township trustees made a levy for said purpose upon the taxable property of their respective townships.

The total tax duplicate of the county "including the aforesaid townships," is given as $14,104,750.00. By deducting from this total, the total value of the taxable property of those townships enumerated as having made a levy, and multiplying the remainder by the rate levied by the county commissioners on the remainder of the property of the county, the total amount that will be produced by the levy made by the county commissioners may be readily ascertained. You may pay an equal amount to Van Wert county from the state appropriation. Inasmuch as the proceeds of the levy made by the commissioners of Van Wert county are already in the county treasury, I have not passed upon the general question of the legality of the act of the county commissioners in making a levy on only a part of the taxable property of the county.

The application of the commissioners of Crawford county is defective in that it fails to state that any levy has been made or will be made, and in that the total tax duplicate of the county is not stated. The applications of the commissioners of Warren and Champaign counties are defective in the same respect as that of the application of the commissioners of Crawford county. The two last named failed to set forth the number of miles of improved road in each of said counties, so as to enable you to determine whether said counties are entitled to any of the state aid money for repair.

Another defect is to be noted in the application of the commissioners of Champaign county, which is not common to any of the other applications, in that it is made to appear that the 1910 state aid fund was applied for when, in fact, the 1911 fund was intended. This is apparently a clerical error, and I see no objection to the commissioners correcting it by adopting a supplementary resolution declaring the date to be erroneous and that they intended to apply for the 1911 fund.

The essential feature is the making of the applications before January 1st, and this has been done in each case. I know of no reason why the omitted facts cannot now be supplied by the commissioners of the several counties affected.

If the commissioners have levied, or will agree to levy a tax upon the taxable property of the county equal to the amount of state aid money apportioned to the county, a supplementary resolution to that effect, including a statement of the number of miles of improved road in the county, will be sufficient to warrant you in paying the county's share of the state aid fund for 1911 to the treasurer thereof, providing such county had, at the time of making the application, at least 200 miles of improved road.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—NO POWER TO ENJOIN PERSONS PUBLISHING MISREPRESENTATIONS AS TO APPROVAL OF PLUMBING APPLIANCES BY BOARD.

When a person is publishing misrepresentations with respect to approvals made by the board of health with reference to certain plumbing appliances, invented and sold by him, the board may not proceed by injunction against said party for the reason that there is no statutory provision for the same, and also because there is an adequate remedy at law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 1, 1912.

State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication of December 28, 1911, in which you state that:

> "On the request of Mr. H. J. Luff, of Cleveland, and others, the state board of health has adopted certain interpretations of provisions of Part 4 of the Ohio State Building Code (O. L. 102, p. 586, et seq.) and on other interpretations asked for has postponed giving an answer until tests can be made to prove the efficiency of appliances proposed as substitutes for those appliances described in the Code. Under the provisions of the Code (Section 12600-277) such substitution can only be made upon approval of the state and municipal authorities charged with the enforcement of the act.
> "Mr. Luff has prepared for publication a book containing the provisions of the Code above referred to and in this book has stated that certain appliances in which he is financially interested have been approved by the state board of health and also represents as approved by this board other methods of installation which have not and could not be approved as they are contrary to good practice in plumbing."

and you request my opinion upon the following:

> "What remedy has the state board of health to prevent the author and publisher from circulating the book containing these misrepresentations as the information contained therein will work to the detriment of the state board of health and also to those who install plumbing work in the belief that the statements contained in the book are true and represent the opinion of this board?"

In reply I desire to say that after a careful investigation of the law relative to the subject referred to in your letter, I have come to the conclusion that the state board of health is without any authority to prevent either the publication or the circulation of the work prepared and placed upon the market by the said author, Mr. Luff, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Your board is a statutory board and has the power to enforce certain things under the statutes, but in the case referred to in your letter, you are without statutory authority, for the reason that the act itself provides in Section 1 thereof, (Section 12600-281) as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of the state board of health or building inspector or commissioner, or health departments of municipalities having building or health departments to enforce all the provisions in this act contained, in relation and pertaining to sanitary plumbing. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to exempt any other officer or department from the obligation of enforcing all existing laws in reference to this act."

and section 2 thereof (Section 12600-274 of the General Code) provides what shall be an unlawful act thereunder, as follows:

> "It shall be unlawful for any owner or owners, officers, board, committee or other person to construct, erect, build, equip or cause to be constructed, erected, built or equipped any opera house * * * without complying with the requirements and provisions relating thereto contained in this act."

and section 3 of the act (Section 12600-275 of the General Code) provides:

> "It shall be unlawful for any architect, builder, civil engineer, plumber, carpenter, mason, contractor, sub-contractor, foreman or employe to violate or assist in violating any of the provisions contained in this act."

It is apparent from a careful consideration of the above sections of the said act that the editing and publishing of a book containing any misrepresentations is not a violation of any of the provisions of this act, and therefore your board is without any remedy to proceed criminally against the author. I am further of the opinion that your board is without authority to maintain an injunction against the author to prevent the publication and sale of the same on the ground that it contains misrepresentations which might affect some individual belonging to the class specified in sections 2 and 3 of the act above quoted. For injunction, like other equitable remedies, was intended to meet the deficiencies of the law and with the exception of cases in which the remedy is expressly allowed by statutes, the same would not lie. The same principles and maxims are applicable to injunctions as to other equitable proceedings and that remedy of injunction does not lie in favor of one who has a complete and adequate remedy at law like they would have in case any individual of the class above enumerated had relied upon the correctness of the publication referred to in your inquiry, as the publisher would be liable in damages to the person so injured by such false representations as are included in said publication.

I might suggest, however, to your board that in view of the fact that many may be mislead by this publication and made liable to a breach of the law above quoted, that you cite the author to appear before your board and after pointing out to him the evils which might result from the sale of his book on account of the misrepresentations contained therein, then if he still insists upon continuing such publication and the sale thereof, that you as a board give notice to the public of such misrepresentations contained therein by giving notice to all the architects, builders and parties amenable to the law.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE BUILDING CODE—CESSPOOLS ON PRIVATE LOTS NOT GOVERNED BY—POWERS OF LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Ohio State Building Code applies only to the structures named in the act, and to the lands and lots appurtenant thereto, and private homes and lots are not included. Section 2 of said code, therefore, providing that cesspools on premises accessible to a sewer shall be abandoned and filled, does not apply to private lots.

Such lots are governed by the rules established by city and village boards of health and their owners subject to the penalties provided for the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1912.

State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter, of which the following is a copy, is hereby replied to, with proper suggestions:

"B5 COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 9, 1911.

"HON. TIMOTHY S. HOGAN, Attorney General, Columbus, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR:—In Title 16, Section 2, Ohio State Building Code (O. L. 102, p. 725), it is required that where cesspools now exist on premises accessible to a sewer that the cesspools shall be abandoned and filled. This provision also aplies to privy vaults. Title 18, Section 2 (O. L. 102, p. 726).

"In the administrative section of the state building code (page 586), it is made the duty of the state board of health or building department or board of health to enforce that part of the code in which the sections above mentioned are found.

"In the chapter penalties, Section 1, page 587, a penalty is provided for failure "to obey any order of * * * building inspector or commissioner in cities having a building inspection department or the state board of health in relation to the matters and things in this act contained shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $1,000 and stand committed until said fine and costs be paid or secured to be paid or until otherwise discharged by due process of law."

"In a village where sanitary sewers have been made accessible to every lot within the village, it is proposed to enforce the provisions of the code above cited by requiring each lot owner having on his premises a cesspool or privy vault to abandon the same and to make connections to the sanitary sewer.

"Will you please inform me what, if any, penalty can be invoked where the order of the board of health to make such connections is not obeyed.

Yours truly,
JAMES E. BAUMAN,
Acting Secretary."

In the first place, the building code, from which you quote, by its very title and subdivisional contents, was enacted by the legislature to cover a multitude of evils existing in the conditions of buildings where the public assembled. These conditions to be remedied, related to sanitary, fire, and other deplorable situations then apparent, in which the public was generally interested. Plumbing, ventilation, sewerage, safety, and other vital questions, are included in the progressive provisions of this lengthy act. But, like all statutes, seeking to cover a great field of improvement and advancement, this act, owing to its multifarious questions, sought to be included, is, in some instances, not free from ambiguity. Provisions not germane to the title, and really not intended to apply to other than public matters, have, possibly by inadvertence, crept into its 142 pages. I cannot see my way clearly to say that this act was ever intended to apply to the owner or occupant of a family homestead, or dwelling, or a single lot in a village, as to his sewerage, vault, or use thereof. While the sections relative thereto, cited by you, standing alone, might include the dwelling or a village town lot; yet, I think these sections must be construed in the light of the whole act, and not taken verbatim et literatim.

Moreover, the penalty quoted by you, of $1,000.00, could never have been intended to be inflicted upon a humble owner of a little village lot, who had failed to abandon his back yard vault, and at great expense, inaugurate a new connecting system of disposing of the excrementitious matter of self and family.

Such an enforcement, under the guise of a building code, or sanitary measure, backed by such an enormous fine, savors too much of a taking away of the rights of the poor occupant of the lot, to the enhancement of plumber's interests.

These penalties quoted have intelligent reference to a violation of the act as to the structures named in the act and lands and lots appurtenant thereto. Private homes and lots are nowhere mentioned in the act; but Part 2, p. 588, gives seven classes to which the code applies. Therefore, I am of the opinion that, answering your last proposition, the penalty of $1,000.00 does not apply to the owners of village lots as to cesspools or privy vaults, unless they include such structures as mentioned in this code.

Now, let us see what laws do apply to owners of village lots, who maintain cesspools or privy vaults which are a nuisance, and who fail to comply with the orders of the health officers.

Section 4404 of the General Code provides for appointment of board of health in villages. Council may, in lieu of board of health, appoint health officer, with all powers of board of health.

Section 4405. If a municipality fails to establish a board of health, or appoint a health officer, the state board of health may appoint such officer. He to have all the powers of a board of health in villages, etc.

Section 4413. The board of health may make such rules as it deems necessary for public health, etc.

Section 4421, G. C., provides:

> "The board of health may also regulate the location, construction and repair of yards, pens and stables, and the use, emptying and cleaning thereof, and of water-closets, privies, cesspools, sinks, plumbing, drains or other places where offensive or dangerous substances or liquids are or may accumulate. When a building, erection, excavation, premises, business, pursuit, matter or thing, or the sewerage, drainage, plumbing or ventilation thereof is, in the opinion of the board of health, in a condition dangerous to life or health, and when a building or structure is occupied or rented for living or business purposes and sanitary plumbing and sewerage are feasible and necessary, but neglected or refused, the board of health may declare it a public nuisance and order it to be removed, abated, suspended, altered, or otherwise improved or purified by the owner, agent or other person having control thereof, or responsible for such condition, and may prosecute them for the refusal or neglect to obey such order. The board may also, by its officers and employes, remove, abate, suspend, alter or otherwise improve or purify them and certify the costs and expense thereof to the county auditor, to be assessed against the property, and thereby made a lien upon it and collected as other taxes."

This section gives the board of health full power as to cesspools and privies. Sections 4422 and 4423 G. C. The board may arrest the party offending, or do the work and charge it as taxes.

Section 4414 G. C., providing for penalty, is as follows:

"Whoever violates any provision of this chapter, or any order or regulation of the board of health made in pursuance thereof, or obstructs or interferes with the execution of such order, or willfully or illegally omits to obey such order, shall be fined not to exceed one hundred dollars or imprisonment for not to exceed ninety days, or both, but no person shall be imprisoned under this section for the first offense, and the prosecution shall always be as and for a first offense, unless the affidavit upon which the prosecution is instituted, contains the allegation that the offense is a second or repeated offense."

So it will be seen that there is ample provision under the laws outside of the building code to cover your questions.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE BUILDING CODE—NO APPLICATION TO DWELLINGS—STATE CODE GOVERNS MUNICIPAL CODES.

The Ohio State Building Code is applicable only to the specific structures enumerated therein, and private dwellings are not included.

Where the state building code governs a subject, its provisions must govern as opposed to municipal building code. The only remedy to avoid conflict rests with legislative action.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1912.

State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I hereby acknowledge receipt of yours of January 16, 1912, which is as follows:

"I submit for your consideration the following state of affairs, which I find exists throughout the state in many cities in which plumbing ordinances were in force prior to the enaction of part 4—sanitation, Ohio state building code. Thirty cities in the state have municipal plumbing codes which cover all buildings.

"In an opinion dated September 11, 1911, to the Hon. John L. Cannon, village solicitor of Cleveland Heights, Cleveland, Ohio, you have ruled that "'Part 4. Sanitation, Ohio state building code, does not cover dwellings.'

"It was the intention of the Ohio building code commission that Part 4, Sanitation, Ohio state building code 'should cover all buildings,' and that Section 12600-281 O. L.,

"'It shall be the duty of the state board of health or building inspector, or commissioner, or health departments of municipalities having building or health departments, to enforce all the provisions in this act contained in relation to and pertaining to sanitary plumbing.'

covered the matter, and the language used affected all buildings in which plumbing would be installed.

"The matter as it now stands requires these cities to enforce two separate codes, which are in most cases in direct conflict and at variance with each other, causing considerable confusion.

"The question is:

"'What remedy or action can be taken that would be feasible toward remedying this condition of affairs, and make the state code the minimum standard in municipal corporations referred to, as was intended?'"

I beg to answer the same as follows:

The opinion referred to, of September 11, 1911, to the Hon. John L. Cannon, solicitor of Cleveland Heights, that "part 4, sanitation, Ohio state building code, does not cover dwellings," is correct, and is hereby affirmed.

You speak of the "intention" of the building code commission, that part 4, sanitation, should cover all buildings, and that Section 12600-281 applies to all buildings, as to enforcement of the penalties of the building code, in which plumbing would be installed. Whatever the intention may have been on this subject, we must look to the language of the building code itself for guidance as to the scope of its provisions. The very title of the act forbids the idea of its application to dwellings; and, while occasional sentences therein might seem broad enough to include "all buildings," as you suggest, yet, considering the act as a whole, it can not have such application. Section 12600-1 sets out 7 classes of buildings covered by the building code and dwellings are not included.

In the cities having plumbing codes, as you suggest, most of which were enacted before the building code, it is true that both codes exist, but, as to all things included in the state building code, its provisions govern; as to all things not provided for in the said code, the provisions of the municipal code, if properly enacted, must obtain. The two codes are equally effective as to the matters covered by each. The state code cannot be invoked to enforce anything it does not contain, and the same rule applies to municipal codes. The remedy or action to be taken will require amendments to the state code and the laws governing municipal codes on these subjects, clearly defining the scope and powers of each. By this means there will be no apparent clash. Thereby there will be no conflict between municipal codes and the state code, and uniformity will obtain. Until this is done, the law, as it now exists, gives to each of these codes—state and municipal—its own apparent right of way on all subjects included in the provisions of each.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SECRETARY OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH—PERSONAL LIABILITY FOR NEGLECT OF QUASI-JUDICIAL DUTY TO APPROVE EXPENSE ACCOUNTS—DILIGENCE OF ORDINARILY PRUDENT MAN IN OWN BUSINESS.

The secretary of the state board of health being bound to carry out the orders of the board and having been detailed by said board to approve expense accounts of members and employes, has been legally obligated to perform such duties and as they require the exercise of a discretion of a judicial nature, they are to be considered quasi-judicial in their charter.

For failure or neglect in performance therefore, he is liable only when he has failed to exercise the care and diligence of an ordinarily prudent man in his own business.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 11, 1912.

HON. E. F. MCCAMPBELL, Secretary, State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of July 6, 1912, received, in which you state as follows:

> "Each employe of the state board of health and each board member, when traveling, submits monthly daily expense sheets over his signature. These bills are all carefully audited as to amount, enumerated, and attached to a voucher. Under the rules of the state board of health the secretary approved the bill and sends the same to the chairman of the the finance committee who approves, based, presumably, on the secretary's approval. When the same are returned to the secretary's office, a bankable voucher is made out and sent to the president of the board with the expense sheets and expense account so approved, for the president's approval. Following the approval by the president of the board the same is sent to the individual presenting the account for indorsement and certification."

and requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "As to whether any liability may attach to the secretary of the state board of health in approving bills for personal expense accounts."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that Section 1234 of the General Code, in part, as follows:

> "The state board of health shall elect a secretary who shall perform the duties prescribed by the board and the provisions of this chapter."

Section 1235 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Each member of the state board of health shall receive five dollars for each employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary traveling and other expenses while engaged in the business of the board. The president of the board shall certify the amount of compensation and expenses due each member, and on presentation of a certificate therefor the auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the treasurer of state for the amount certified."

It is the duty of the secretary to do any act prescribed by the state board of health and law, and, therefore, as stated by you in your letter, under the rule of the board it becomes the secretary's duty to approve all bills for necessary traveling and other expenses presented to the board by members and other appointees of the board.

The duty being enjoined upon the secretary of the board as above stated, the question then arising is, as to what kind of an act said duty is, and what, if any, liability attaches to said officer in the performance thereof.

Mechem on public officers says:

> "When the law, in word or by implication, commits to an officer the duty of looking into facts, and acting upon them, not in a way which it specifically directs, but after a discretion in its nature judicial, the function is termed quasi-judicial."

and the fact that you are to approve the expense accounts above specified under the rules of the state board of health, without specifically directing how you are to determine the correctness or falsity of the same, leads me to the opinion that your acts in said matters are quasi-judicial.

Your duties, in respect to approving said expense accounts, are discretionary as to the correctness thereof, and ministerial if found correct, and, therefore, under the rules of law to be found on the subject, I am of the opinion that it is your duty to use such care and diligence in approving said expense accounts as a prudent man would use in his own business.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that in performing the duties enjoined upon you, as to the expense accounts referred to in your inquiry, that if you use such care and diligence as above stated in investigating the correctness or falsity of the same, that no liability could attach to you should any mistake be made in performing said duties.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

VILLAGE BOARD OF HEALTH AND HEALTH OFFICER—MANDATORY DUTY OF COUNCIL TO APPROPRIATE SUMS TO MEET SALARIES AND EXPENSES.

The statutes make it mandatory upon the council to appropriate sufficient funds to meet salaries of a board of health or of a health officer, serving in lieu thereof, and expenses created in the performance of the duties of said board or officer, including compensation of employes when properly certified as provided by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 22, 1912.

DR. E. F. MCCAMPBELL, Secretary State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of yours of August 15th inst., in which you say:

> "This department desires your opinion relative to the authority of a municipal council to deny to a board of health, or health officer serving in lieu of a board of health, an appropriation of money to meet the necessary expenses created in the performance of its duties and to meet the compensation of the health officer or other paid employes or too refuse to pay such necessary expenses when property certified as provided by law."

Replying thereto, it is my opinion that the establishment of a board of health is a mandatory duty on the part of the council, except that in lieu of such board, the council may appoint a health officer, whose powers and duties are the same as the board of health; and his rules, regulations and orders shall be approved by the state board of health. The salary and term of office of said officer, are to be fixed by the council. The above provisions are found in Section 4404 General Code.

Section 4405 General Code provides as follows:

"If a municipality fails or refuses to establish a board of health or appoint a health officer, the state board of health may appoint a health officer therefor and fix his salary and term of office. Such health officer shall have the same powers and duties as health officers appointed in villages in place of a board of health, and his salary as fixed by the state board of health, and all necessary expenses incurred by him in performing the duties of a board of health shall be paid by and be a valid claim against such municipality."

It is, therefore, the duty of all municipalities in Ohio, in view of the above statutes, to appoint and maintain, continuously, either a board of health or a health officer. If a board of health is appointed it must appoint a health officer. Boards of health and health officers are part of the police powers and regulations of the state. In the language of the court in the case of Board of Health vs. Columbus, 12 O. D. 553, they have "powers of a legislative, executive and quasi-judicial character; and these powers may, in some cases, be exercised in a summary manner." (Quoted in Note 5, Section 4404 G. C. Page & Adams.)

No certificate is required that the necessary funds are on hand for the salary of a health officer, or the expenses of a board of health. This is an exception to the general law governing liabilities and contracts in municipal affairs. I refer to the above matters to indicate the almost unlimited powers of health officers and boards. Wherever the word "shall" occurs in these statutes under consideration, it is not discretionary not inter-changeable with the word "may;" but it carries with it all the potentiality of the mandatory verb. Section 4405 General Code, as you will note, gives the state board power when the municipality fails or refuses to act, to appoint a health officer and fix his salary. It further provides that his salary as so fixed, and all necessary expenses incurred by him as such officer "shall be paid by and be a valid claim against such municipality." Such board, or health officer chosen in lieu thereof, may appoint a clerk, district or ward physician, sanitary police. Section 4409 General Code requires certain books and blanks to be bought and accurate records kept. Section 4412 gives the board exclusive control of its appointees, the definition of their duties and the fixing of their salaries. In the numerous sections which follow this the board is given complete control in quarantine, disinfection, destruction of infected property, funerals, closing of churches and schools and other public places, and many others—all looking to the protection of the public against the ravages of disease.

Can it be said that a board or officer vested with such power, and using the same for the protection of the whole public, can be denied the financial aid requisite to carry these wholesome measures into effect? Certainly not. Section 4451 General Code says:

> "When expenses are incurred by the board of health under the provisions of this chapter, upon application and certificate from such board, the council shall pass the necessary appropriation ordinances to pay the expenses so incurred and certified."

This is mandatory and the council cannot, under any pretext whatever, avoid this duty.

The circuit court of Stark county in a full opinion, in the case of State ex rel. Miller vs. Council of Massillon, says:

> "It is mandatory upon council to create a board of health, and it is mandatory upon the board of health to appoint a health officer and fix his salary, and the necessary appropriation to meet the expense must be made."

The court further says:

> "Nor does Section 2702 (Section 3806 G. C.) providing for the issuing of a certificate that the necessary funds are on hand before liability is incurred, apply to the salary of a health officer or to the expenses of a board of health and mandamus will lie to compel an appropriation for such salary and expenses."

Therefore the council has no right to say "that no further appropriations would be made for the expenses of the board of health for a period of one or two years." The duty to appropriate for these expenses is mandatory and cannot be ignored or avoided. Council is bound to follow the provisions of the statute and can be compelled to do so by mandamus.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS OF STATE DENTAL BOARD—PER DIEM—"DAYS EMPLOYED" AND DAYS "ACTUALLY EMPLOYED" OF SAME MEANING.

Section 1235 General Code, providing that members of the board of health shall receive five dollars for each day employed in the discharge of their official duties and Section 1317 Genereal Code, providing that members of the state dental board shall receive ten dollars for each day actually employed, in the discharge of their official duties, have the same meaning and members of neither board can receive compensation for days upon which actual official duties of the board are not performed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 28, 1912.

HON. E. F. MCCAMPBELL, Secretary of the State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of September 17, 1912, you inquire of this department as follows:

> "I note by the newspapers that you have recently rendered a decision to the state dental board relative to the per diem of members of that board.

"I shall be glad if you will inform me how this opinion affects the per diem of members of the state board of health."

The compensation of the members of the state board of health is fixed by Section 1235, General Code, which provides:

> "Each member of the state board of health shall receive five dollars for each day employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary traveling and other expenses while engaged in the business of the board. The president of the board shall certify the amount of compensation and expenses due each member, and on presentation of a certificate therefor the auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the treasurer of state for the amount certified."

The opinion to which you refer was given to Hon. E. M. Fullington, auditor of state. In that opinion, a copy of which is herewith enclosed, the provisions of Section 1317, General Code, were construed. Said section reads:

> "Each member of the state dental board shall receive ten dollars for each day actually employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary expenses incurred. The secretary shall receive an annual salary to be fixed by the board, and his necessary expense incurred in the discharge of his official duties. The compensation and expenses of the secretary and members and the expense of the board, shall be paid from moneys received under this chapter, upon the approval of the president and secretary."

The only difference in these statutes in fixing the time for which the per diem is to be paid, is that Section 1317, General Code, uses an additional word to-wit, "actually" before the word "employed."

Section 1235, General Code, provides that each member of the state board of health shall receive five dollars "for each day employed in the discharge of his official duties," and Section 1317, General Code, provides that each member of the state dental board shall receive ten dollars "for each day actually employed in the discharge of his official duties."

These provisions are to all intents and purposes the same. The use of the word "actually" does not change the meaning.

I am therefore of the opinion that the rule as to ascertaining the days for which the per diem is to be paid to a member of the state board of health is the same as that applied in the case of the per diem of the members of the state dental board, as set forth in the opinion referred to.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM—ORDINANCE RAISING FUNDS FOR COMPLIANCE WITH ORDER OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH NOT SUSPENDED.

Since, under 1259 General Code, it is made mandatory upon council to take the necessary steps to carry out the orders of the state board of health for municipal improvements under 1249-1261 General Code, an ordinance under said Section 1259 General Code, providing for the raising of funds to comply with the order is not to be deemed the exercise of a power and not within the provision of the Initiative and Referendum Act, and such ordinance is, therefore, not required to lay over sixty days.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 7, 1912.

HON. E. F. MCCAMPBELL, Secretary, State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of July 23rd you requested to be informed whether the act providing for the initiative and referendum, Section 4227-1-4227-6, General Code, affect the power or authority of a municipal council to raise funds for immediate use in compliance with an order of the state board of health for municipal improvements given under authority of Section 1249-1261 inclusive General Code.

Section 4227-2 General Code provides:

> "Any ordinance * * * of a municipal corporation, * * * involving the expenditure of money or exercising any other power delegated to such municipal corporation by the General Assembly, shall be submitted to the qualified electors for their approval or rejection in the manner herein provided * * *."

The second paragraph of said section provides that:

> "No resolution, ordinance or measure of any municipal corporation * * * involving the expenditure of money * * * shall become effective in less than sixty days after its passage."

Sections 1249-1261 inclusive, of the General Code, to which you refer in your inquiry are found under the chapter dealing with state board of health and in reference to public water supplies.

Section 1249 General Code provides that whenever the council or board of health of a municipality, commissioners of a county, or trustees of a township set forth in writing that a city, village, corporation or person is discharging sewage into a stream, water course, lake or pond and is thereby creating a public nuisance detrimental to health or comfort, or is polluting the course of any public water supply said board of health shall inquire into and investigate the conditions complained of.

Section 1250 General Code provides that if such state board of health finds the source of public water supply contaminated or rendered impure and detrimental to health or comfort it shall give notice of its findings and an opportunity to be heard.

Section 1251 General Code provides that after such hearing if the board determines that improvements or changes are necessary it shall report its findings to the governor and attorney general, and upon their approval notify the city, village, corporation or person to install works satisfactory to the board for pumping or disposing of such sewage, or to change or enlarge existing works in a manner satisfactory to the board.

Section 1252 General Code provides that whenever the board of health or health officer of a municipality or ten per cent. of the electors thereof file a complaint with the board setting forth that it is believed that the public water supply is impure and dangerous to health, the state board of health shall inquire into and investigate.

Section 1253 General Code provides that if the state board finds the public water supply impure and dangerous it shall cause notice to be served and an opportunity to be heard.

Section 1254 General Code provides that after such hearing if the state board determines that improvements or changes are necessary it shall report its finding to the governor and attorney general and upon their approval the board shall serve notice to change the source of supply or install and place in operation water purification plant satisfactory to the board.

Section 1255 General Code authorizes the state board of health to issue an order in reference to any water or sewage purification works and secure an effluent as pure as might be reasonably expected from such plant and satisfactory to the board.

Section 1256 General Code provides that upon failure so to do the state board of health shall notify the governor and attorney general and upon their approval may order a competent person to be appointed and salary paid.

Section 1257 General Code provides for an appeal from the state board of health in any of the above cases to referee engineers.

Section 1258 General Code provides as to the power of such referees.

Section 1259 General Code provides as follows:

> "Each municipal council, department or officer having jurisdiction to provide for the raising of revenues by tax levies, sale of bonds, or otherwise, shall take all steps necessary to secure the funds for any such purpose or purposes. When so secured, or the bonds thereof have been authorized by the proper municipal authority, such funds shall be considered as in the treasury and appropriated for such particular purpose or purposes, and shall not be used for any other purpose. The bonds authorized to be issued for such purposes shall not exceed five per cent. of the total value of all property in any city or village, as listed and assessed for taxation, and may be in addition to the total bonded indebtedness otherwise permitted by law. The question of the issuance of such bonds shall not be required to be submitted to a vote."

It will be seen by what has been foregoing set forth in reference to Sections 1249-1261 General Code inclusive that it is a positive duty, set forth in Section 1259, that a municipal council take all steps necessary to secure funds for the purposes set forth in the next preceding sections, and that if bonds are necessary to be issued they are not required to be submitted to a vote. In other words, it appears to be the intent of the legislature that it shall be a positive duty upon a municipal council to pass the ordinances necessary to carry out the orders of the state board of health, and that such council shall have no discretion in the matter. While the provisions of Section 4227-2 General Code which includes any ordinance involving the expenditure of money would seem, since under an ordinance passed in pursuance of Section 1259 General Code the funds raised by such ordinances are self appropriating, to embrace the ordinances passed under the provisions of Section 1259, yet I do not believe that it was the intention of the legislature to so include such ordinances. Raising the funds under Section 1259 General Code is not a power delegated to the municipal corporation, but a positive duty enjoined upon it. Section 4227-2 General Code provides that any ordinance involving the expenditure of money, or exercising any other power delegated to such municipal corporation shall be subject to referendum. It seems to me that the words "involving the expenditures of money" must refer to such ordinances involving the expenditure of money as are passed in pursuance of some power delegated to a municipal corporation. In this case as before stated I believe that an ordinance passed in pursuance of the order of the state board of health to raise funds to comply with such order is a duty devolving upon council and not a power delegated in the sense that it may or may not be used at the discretion of council. It being, therefore, a positive duty upon council and Section 1259 General Code providing further that bonds issued under said section shall not be submitted to a vote, I am of the opinion that such ordinances are not within the purview of Section 4227-2 General Code.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—SANITARY ENGINEER FOR CITY AND MEMBERS STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

In accordance with the general rule of law that an officer may not act in a quasi-judicial capacity in a matter in which he is interested, since a member of the state board of health is obliged to approve plans made for a sanitary system of a city, such member should not serve as member of such board and at the same time be employed by a city in the preparation of such plans.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 3, 1912.

HON. JOHN W. HILL, Member State Board of Health, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of October 31st in which you state that you have been asked to act professionally in a sanitary matter by a certain city in this state, where it is thought that your professional experience as a sanitary engineer is desirable, and in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Could I perform such service while acting as a member of the state board of health, provided that when the plans which I am asked to prepare are submitted to the board, I withdraw from the board and decline to vote in the matter, or would it be necessary in a case of this kind to resign from the board before such a commission could be accepted?"

In reply I desire to say that Section 1240 General Code provides that:

> "No city, village, public institution, corporation or person shall provide or install for public use, a water supply or sewerage system, or purification works for a water supply or sewerage, of a municipal corporation or public institution, or make a change in the water supply, water works intake, water purification works of a municipal corporation or public institution, until the plans therefore have been submitted to and approved by the state board of health."

The power vested in the state board of health, by virtue of the above quoted section of the general code, under the well established rules of law, being a power, the exercise of which is committed to the judgment or discretion of your board, is in the nature of a judicial power and is styled sometimes a "judicial power" and sometimes a "quasi-judicial power." Under Section 1235 of the General Code you, and each member of the state board of health are entitled to receive the sum of five dollars for each day you are employed in the discharge of official duties and necessary traveling expenses while engaged in the business of the board, therefore, it is my legal opinion that the board and its members hold positions of trust and confidence toward the state to such an extent that no member of said board should be interested directly or indirectly in any contract, the subject matter of which relates to the rights of the public in having that trust and confidence exercised without any suspicion upon his or the board's discharge of said duty, no matter how faithfully and conscientiously it may be done.

It is a rule of common law that judicial and discretionary officers are disqualified to act in any matter in which they are personally interested, and under a well established line of decisions in this country, and an exception to the general rule is made to the effect that,

> "Where a judicial officer has not so direct an interest in the cause or matter as that the result must necessarily affect him or his personal or pecuniary loss or gain, or where his personal or pecuniary interest is minute, and he has so exclusive jurisdiction of the cause or matter by constitution or by statute as that his refusal to act will prevent any proceeding in it, then he may act so far as there may not be a failure of remedy or as it is sometimes expressed a failure of justice."

Your acting in the capacity as member of the state board of health in a matter as important as the approving, in conjunction with the other members of the board, plans and specifications or any of the things enumerated in the statute above quoted, where you had prepared such plans, or acting as engineer for the said municipality, would be acting, in my judgment, in a matter wherein you had an interest. Not that I doubt but what you would exercise honesty and ability in so preparing any plans, etc., or representing such municipality as its engineer, but for the reason, as above stated, that the board should be free from any influence to such an extent that no cast of suspicion should rest upon it or any member thereof in the discharge of the major duty to the public.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that if you desire to accept employment such as you have described in your letter, and under the circumstances, it is far better for you to resign from the board before accepting the same and thereby keep yourself, and the board of which you are a member, free from any suspicion.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING CODE—POWER OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH AND PROPER MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES TO PERMIT SUBSTITUTIONS OF DEVICES, FIXTURES AND CONSTRUCTIONS.

Under Section 21600-277 General Code, the board of health, in conjunction with the state and proper municipal authorities referred to, may permit the substitution, for a device, fixture or construction specified in part four of the Ohio state building code, of some other device, fixture or construction when in their discretion, they are satisfied that the latter will answer to all intents and purposes those devices, fixtures and constructions specified in the statute.

The material, substance, manner of use, connection and general adaptability of the device, fixture or construction to be substituted must be taken into consideration.

State Board of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of recent date, in which you state:

> "The state board of health desires to know,
> "1. To what extent, if any, the board has authority to allow the substitution, for a device, fixture or construction, specified in part four of the Ohio state building code, being Sections 12600-137 to 12600-238, of some other device, fixture or construction, that test or experience has shown to be equal in efficiency to that specified.
> 2. How limited or how broad are the powers of the board in the definition of what is comprised in the words 'device,' 'fixture' and 'construction?'"

In reply to your first inquiry I desire to say that Section 12600-277 provides:

> "* * * Where the use of another fixture, device or construction is desired, at variance with what is described in this statute, plans, specifications and details shall be furnished to the proper state and municipal authorities mentioned in Section 1, for examination and approval, and if required, actual tests shall be made, to the complete satisfaction of said state and municipal authorities that the fixture, device or construction proposed answers, to all intents and purposes, the fixture, device or construction, hereafter described in this statute, instead of actual tests satisfactory evidence of such tests may be presented for approval with full particulars of the results and containing the names of witnesses of said tests."

It is a rule of construction, well known to the law, that a statute must be construed with reference to the whole system of which it forms a part. It was evidently the intent of the legislature, in enacting the section above quoted, to vest a discretionary power in the officers designated in Section 1 of the building code, whose duty it is to enforce the provision of part four of said code, namely: the state board of health inspector or commissioner, or health departments of municipalities having building or health departments, when acting in conjunction, to approve some proposed device, fixture or construction, which they may find answers to all intents and purposes the fixture, device or construction, specified in said building code, under said part four. In my opinion, said Section12600-277 is directory as to the powers of said officers, heretofore enumerated, as to the approval of the proposed substitution therein specified. The statute in itself vests a certain power or jurisdiction in the state board of health and the municipal officer to approve and grant the right to the use of some other device, fixture or construction, found by them to answer, to all intent and purposes, the fixture, device or construction specified in said code.

There can be no doubt as to the right of the legislature to vest said public officers or boards with such power, and the only remaining problem in your first question is as to what extent, if any, the board can go in exercising said power. As the act makes the power discretionary, it is my opinion that so long as the respective officers acting in conjunction upon any proposed substitution, are satisfied that the same will answer, to all intents and purposes, for those devices, fixtures and constructions specified in the statute, they may grant the permission to substitute.

I am further of the opinion that the power of said board and municipal officer, specified in Section 1, to allow a substitute, extends not only to the kind or class of fixture, device or construction, but to the substance constituting the same or the method in which it is placed. In other words, the power extends to the allowance of a substitute for any of the enumerated devices, fixtures or constructions, as to material and workmanship.

As to your second question, namely:

> "How limited or how broad are the powers of the board in the definition of that is comprised in the words device, fixture and construction?"

I desire to say as to the first, namely: the device, that it would mean not only the manner in which it is devised or formed by design, but the substance of which the same was manufactured or constructed; as to the second, namely: fixture, the power would extend to the designation of the kind of fixture that should be substituted in the place of that specified in the statute, not only as to the material but as to the method of its being attached or made a permanent appendage to the whole system of plumbing which is to be used; and as to the third, to-wit: construction, it is my opinion that the meaning to be given it is the manner of putting together the parts of the sanitary plumbing system to be installed, as provided in said code, so as to give to the whole its peculiar form.

In conclusion, it is my opinion that the powers of the board, when acting in conjunction with the municipal authorities specified in said Section 1 of said building code, are broad in their nature and must be given that liberal construction which will give the greatest effect possible to the code in general as a whole. But at the same time, the power should not be exercised, even with the discretion vested by said statute, unless said substitution meets, as to all intents and purposes, the fixture, device or construction specified in the code, and particularly that part hereinbefore specified, namely: part four, relating to the construction, installation and inspection of plumbing and drainage.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH MAY NOT AUTHORIZE MEMBER TO GO ABROAD TO INVESTIGATE METHODS OF SEWERAGE DISPOSAL.

Inasmuch as the statutes do not so authorize, the state board of health is not empowered to authorize one of its members to go abroad and inquire into the latest methods of sewerage and waste disposal for the purpose of obtaining information that would be of value to the board in directing the cities of the state in installing and operating sewerage disposal plants.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 4, 1912.

DEAR SIR:—From the tenor of your letter of October 12, 1912, requesting my opinion upon the legality of a certain course of procedure under consideration by the state board of health, it is rather difficult to determine whether that communication is to be regarded as an official request from the board, or simply an invitation for an expression of my views as an ex-officio member of that body.

As my conclusion in either event would be the same, I shall simply answer the question as asked, and leave it to you to set me right if I am mistaken in addressing this reply to you personally.

The specific question is:

> "Has the state board of health the legal power to authorize one of its members having the necessary sanitary engineering experience to fit him for such an investigation, to go abroad and inquire into the latest methods of sewerage and waste disposal; the purpose of such foreign trip and investigation being to obtain information that would be of value to the board in directing the cities of the state in installing and operating sewerage disposal plants?"

You also explain, and I mention this because it tends to strengthen the arguments in favor of my answer to your inquiry, that it was in the course of a discussion of the very serious problem of sewerage purification from one of the cities of the state, that the question suggested itself.

The question, to my mind, is more one of fact than of law. More one of logic and common sense than of statutory interpretation. I would therefore pass over the discussion of what the powers of an appointive board are in general, and treat specifically of the state board under consideration; how appointed, its powers, duties, compensation, and its relations to the subordinate boards of health.

Section 1232, General Code, provides:

> "There shall be a state board of health, consisting of eight members, seven of whom shall be appointed by the governor. Each year, the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint a member of the board, who shall serve for a term of seven years from the thirteenth day of December. The attorney general shall be ex-officio a member of the board."

From this section it is apparent that no qualifications as to experience in sanitary engineering, medical science, or other kindred subjects are required of the member. It is to be presumed as a matter of common sense that the governor in his appointment, would make a selection of members familiar to a certain extent with the laws of sanitation, but there is nothing in the statute itself which would prohibit the appointment of laymen absolutely ignorant of all such matters.

Therefore, insofar as the right to designate a particular member of this board to make an expert investigation along any particular line, there would be no more justification for the selection of a member who happened to be an engineering expert or a medical authority, any more than there would be for the selection of any business man who happened to be, perchance, a member of the board.

In other words, the fact that a member of the board happens to be an engineering expert or medical authority cannot be considered as affecting the power of the board to authorize one of its members to make a foreign trip for the purpose of gathering information for the board.

Coming now to Section 1237, General Code, the general powers and duties of the board are thus defined:

> "The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people and have supreme authority in matters of quarantine, which it may declare and enforce, when none exists, and modify, relax or abolish, when it has been established. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, for governing the receipt and conveyance of remains of deceased persons, and for such other sanitary matters as it deems best to control by a general rule. It may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board of health has neglected or refused to act with sufficient promptness or efficiency, or when such board has not been established as provided by law. In such cases the necessary expense incurred shall be paid by the city, village or township for which the services are rendered."

In the course of this section it will be seen that the board is given supervision, which pre-supposes an underlying or subordinate authority, it is given power to declare and enforce, etc., quarantine where none exists. It may make special orders for such sanitary matters as are best controlled by a general rule and, (this is to be especially noted) it may make and enforce orders in local matters when emergency exists, or when the local board fails to act or has not been created.

The purpose of the investigation proposed to be conducted by the member sent abroad by the state board of health, is to determine upon a method of sewerage disposal which may be enforced in the various cities of this state.

The original idea of the necessity of such an investigation arose from the predicament of one certain city of this state. Section 1237 in its last sentence specially prescribes that where an emergency arises, or where a local board has refused to act, or where no local board is in existence, and in consequence the state board is compelled to act, "the necessary expense incurred shall be paid by the city, village, or township for which the services are rendered."

If, in the special case which was the reason for this question, the local board has refused or neglected to act, thereby necessitating the interference of the state board, the local organization and not the state should be compelled to bear the expense.

If various cities throughout the state are confronted with problems of sewerage disposal, these problems should, in the first instance, be worked out by the local authorities, and in fact must of necessity be so worked out, because it is self-evident that no one and uniform plan of sewerage disposal could be applied to all the municipalities throughout the state, the question of sewerage disposal being primarily one in which municipalities alone are interested, it would be unfair to place the burden of taxation for the hiring of an expert or the payment of one, upon the entire state.

Coming now to the question of compensation, Section 1235 provides:

> "Each member of the state board of health shall receive five dollars for each day employed in the discharge of his official duties, and his necessary traveling and other expenses while engaged in the business of the board. The president of the board shall certify the amount of compensation and expenses due each member, and on presentation of of a certificate therefor the auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the treasurer of state for the amount certified."

How then could the remuneration of the expert engineer in the case you suggest, be fixed? Certainly not by independent contract, because the board has no power to make such contract.

> "Boards of health, being as a rule, administrative bodies, without corporate capacity and without taxing powers, it follows that they cannot take measures for the promotion of the public health which involve the acquisition of valuable property, the letting of large contracts, or the incurring of heavy expenses, unless the power to do so is clearly conferred by law. 21 Cyc. 388, and cases cited."

Certainly not at the rate fixed by law for the members of the board, because the services he would be performing would not be performed as a member of the board, or as the statute words it, "official duties."

Answering your question therefore specifically, I would say that the state board of health has no more authority to hire one of its members as an expert because of his technical knowledge, than it would have to hire an expert who did not happen to be a member of the state board of health, and that the hiring of such an expert could be done only by virtue of statutory authority and that such authority does not exist.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TRAVELING EXPENSES—LIBRARY ORGANIZER NOT ALLOWED FOR TRIP OUT OF STATE.

The library organizer is not legally entitled to traveling expenses for a trip made out of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1912.

HON. J. H. NEWMAN. Secretary Board of Library Commissioners, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 13, you wrote this office as follows:

> "The board of library commissioners most respectfully request your opinion on the regularity of the expense account of Miss Mary E. Downey of the organizing department of the Ohio state library for the month of January, where she charges for a trip to and from Chicago also for hotel while in Chicago. The trip was made without direction of the board and the board is desirous, in a friendly way, of ascertaining as to whether that portion of the bill, referred to above for the month of January, is regular."

It is well settled that traveling expenses cannot be made chargeable to the state unless they are incurred in the performance of a duty legally enjoined or authorized and their payment able to be provided for by a duly authorized warrant upon the state treasury.

Section 794, General Code, is the only relevant statute. This section is as follows:

> "The state board of library commissioners may appoint a library organizer, who shall have office room in or near the state library. The library organizer shall keep informed of the condition, scope and methods of the various public libraries of the state, visit them, as occasion may require, furnish advice and information when requested as provided in the preceding section, and, as far as practicable, assist in promoting and establishing new public libraries. At the close of each fiscal year he shall make a report to the board of the general conditions in the state relative to public libraries."

The extent of the duties enjoined by this statute is restricted to the visiting of libraries within this state only and I am unable to discern any provision whatever therein contained which could be construed to either require or permit the organizer to leave the state upon any official business whatever.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the visit to Chicago and return was unauthorized and that the expense of the trip may not be made a legal charge against the state.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

OSTEOPATHIC EXAMINATIONS—RECIPROCITY PROVISIONS—POWERS OF OSTEOPATHIC COMMITTEE, MEDICAL BOARD AND LEGISLATURE—"MAY" MEANING "SHALL."

If Section 1292 providing that upon recommendations of the osteopathic committee, the state medical board "may" issue certain certificates without examination, is to be construed as giving the committee and board power to exercise an uncontrolled discretion with respect to persons to whom it shall issue certificates, said statute would confer upon these officials a legislative or judicial power and would therefore, be unconstitutional. The word "may" therefore must be construed "shall."

Inasmuch as the statutes have failed to provide for reciprocity with other states in regard to osteopathic examinations, while they do so provide with respect to medical and other examinations, the intent to omit such provisions must be presumed and furthermore it is thereby established that the action of installing such a policy is a prerogative of the legislature.

A set of resolutions by the osteopathic committee providing for the reciprocity policy in this connection, is void.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1912.

DR. GEORGE H. MATSON, Secretary State Medical Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Some time ago you submitted to this department the following question:

> "Section 1282 of the General Code of Ohio makes certain provisions for the registration of osteopaths who have practiced in another state for five years. Quoting from this section 'the state medical board may issue a certificate without examination, etc.'
> "Acting under the provision of this section, the osteopathic examining committee of the state medical board submitting the following resolution which was, on January 5, 1909, adopted by the board:
> "'The osteopathic committee believe it would be justified in recommending for reciprocity those possessing the following qualifications:
> "'1. Those who have been in the practice not less than five years, are of good moral character and had on April 21, 1912, the qualifications that would have entitled them to certificates, had they been engaged in the practice of osteopathy in Ohio at that time.
> "'2. Those who have been in the practice not less than five years, are of good character, have graduated since April 21, 1902, possess the preliminary qualifications required by law and present a certificate to practice osteopathy, granted by a state which maintains qualifications equivalent to those required by Ohio and which grants equal rights to osteopaths of Ohio.'
> "It will be seen that the osteopathic committee of the Ohio board are in accord with the conditions by which certificates may be granted to those who have practiced in another state for five years, and it will also be seen that these conditions were based upon the requirements exacted by the law as amended April 21, 1902, and which provides that all those who were not practicing in Ohio at that time must appear before the medical board for examination.

"In an application filed with the board which may be related as follows certain questions arise:

"Mr. A. graduated in osteopathy in 1905 and has practiced in New Jersey since graduation, or for a period of six years. The New Jersey law does not provide for the registration of osteopaths and so the applicant has been practicing in that state without having been certified by the state.

"The applicant holds a certificate authorizing him to practice in New York state which was granted to him upon the basis of registration by diploma, or without examination, in 1907 (five years after the Ohio law requiring examinations was passed).

"The medical board in refusing certification to this applicant did so for the following reasons:

"First, because applicant did not present credentials from a state maintaining requirements equal to those of Ohio, and because the state was not able to accord equal privileges to those who might wish to change their location from Ohio to such state.

"Secondly, because the applicant has not met the requirements exacted by the Ohio board during the time he practiced in the state from which he comes, in that, he has not presented himself to a state board for examination, as the Ohio applicants are required to do."

Section 1292 of the General Code provides:

"Upon recommendation of the osteopathic committee and the payment by the applicant of a fee of fifty dollars, the state medical board may issue a certificate without examination to a graduate of a reputable school of osteopathy, who is of good moral character, and has been engaged in the practice of osteopathy in any other state for at least five years."

First: You inquire whether the granting of certificates under the provisions of Section 1292 supra, is discretionary.

Said section provides that the state medical board may issue a certificate without examination to a graduate of a reputable school of osteopathy if such applicant is of good moral character and has been engaged in the practice of osteopathy in any other state for at least five years. It is a well understood rule of statutory construction that the word "may" is often to be contrued "shall." This is particularly the case where the statutory clothes public officers with power to do an act which concerns the public interest and the rights of third persons. (Sutherland on Stat. Con. 1st Ed., sec. 462.)

Such is the statute under consideration now. To give the word "may" its exact meaning would be to say that the medical board may exercise uncontrolled discretion with respect to persons otherwise qualified to whom it shall issue certificates. So construed the statute would be clearly unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative power or judicial power. The legislature in prescribing the functions of executive and administrative officers must lay down a rule of action for their guidance. The constitutional requirements are satisfied if the rule is very broadly stated but it must be laid down nevertheless. This statute must be construed so as to render it constitutional. That being the case it should be paraphrased as follows:

"Graduates of reputable schools of osteopathy who are of good moral character and have been engaged in the practice of osteopathy in any other state for at least five years shall, upon recommendation of the executive committee, based upon its determination of these facts, be granted a certificate to practice osteopathy by the state medical board."

That is to say, the legislature has either meant that which I have defined or it has attempted to delegate the law-making power to the osteopathic committee or to the medical board. Such a delegation would render the section unconstitutional.

It is my opinion that the function of determining whether an individual is a graduate of a reputable school of osteopathy and is of good moral character is vested in the osteopathic committee, so that the state medical board has nothing to do except to act upon the recommendation of that committee. The osteopathic committee is limited in its discretion to the determination of these two facts, and in their determination it must act reasonably and not capriciously or arbitrarily. Any determination or rule of the committee not germane to the ascertainment of these two facts and based upon distinctions not found in the law, will be regarded as arbitrary or capricious within the meaning of this principle and set aside by a reviewing court.

All these conclusions are rendered plainer by consideration of the fact that statutes in parimateria with Section 1292 General Code, viz.; Sections 1282 and 1287 thereof, which apply to the issuance of certificates to practice medicine by the state medical board specifically provide for reciprocity—i. e., the issuance of certificates to otherwise qualified practitioners of states whose requirements are equal to those of Ohio, and the refusal thereof without examination to practitioners of such states which do not have requirements equal to these of the state of Ohio—as a legislative policy. That is to say it is recognized in these sections that the adoption of the rule of reciprocity is a matter for the legislature—a legislative power. This leads to two observations:

First, under the rule of statutory construction, known as that of enumeration and exclusion the provision for reciprocity as to medical certificates is strong evidence that failure to specifically provide therefor as to osteopathic certificates indicates that the legislature did not intend that that policy should prevail in the field of osteopathy.

Secondly, the fact that the legislature has itself provided for reciprocity, shows that such provision is a matter of legislation, and that the power to make it is a legislative power which cannot be exercised by or even delegated to an executive board or tribunal.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the resolution of the osteopathic committee, under date of January 5, 1909, is wholly void.

The second question submitted by you need not, therefore be answered.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

ANAESTHETIC—DENTISTS MAY NOT ADMINISTER OUTSIDE OF THE PRACTICE OF DENTISTRY

Regularly qualified dentists are authorized to administer anaesthetics in the exclusive practice of dentistry, but it is not lawful for them to administer anaesthetics in surgical operations not incident to the practice of dentistry.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1912.

DR. GEORGE H. MATSON, Secretary State Medical Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 26th you submit for my opinion the question of whether or not regularly qualified dentists are permitted under the laws of this state to administer anaesthetics under the direction of a registered surgeon, or for surgeons at surgical operations.

I assume from the above question that you mean operations other than are incident to the practice of dentistry.

Under date of April 14, 1911, I have given it as my opinion that administering of anaesthetics unquestionably constitutes the practice of medicine and surgery, and that, therefore, it is not lawful in this state for a person who is not a registered physician to administer anaesthetics even under the supervision of a registered physician.

While it is true that under the law relating to examination for registered dentists it is necessary that such applicants for license to practice dentistry shall pass a satisfactory examination, among other subjects, on the subject of anaesthetics, yet as I view the provisions of said section it relates solely to an examination for the administering of anaesthetics in purely dental cases.

Section 1287 General Code provides:

> "This chapter (to-wit: the chapter relating to the practice of medicine and surgery or midwifery) shall not apply to * * * regularly qualified dentist when engaged exclusively in the practice of dentistry. * * *"

As I am clearly of the opinion that the requirement that an applicant for license to practice dentistry in this state shall be examined in the subject of anaesthetics applies solely to the administering of anaesthetics exclusively in the practice of dentistry, and as I am of the opinion that the administering of anaesthetics in surgical operations is a practice of medicine and surgery, and as Section 1287 General Code specifically exempts regularly qualified dentists when engaged exclusively in the practice of dentistry, I am of the opinion that it is not lawful for regularly qualified dentists to administer anaesthetics under the direction of a registered surgeon or for surgeons at surgical operations not incident to the practice of dentistry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

REVOCATION OF PHYSICIAN'S LICENSE FOR GROSS IMMORALITY IN ADVERTISING—FALSE AND EXTRAVAGANT STATEMENTS—OBSCENE AND INDECENT DESCRIPTIONS OF DISEASES.

The provisions of Section 1275, providing for the revocation of a physician's license by the state medical board on the ground of "gross immorality," may be resorted to when a physician has been guilty in advertising.

1st: Of employing any statements which are false and made to deceive or defraud the public.

2nd: Of promising to cure incurable diseases, knowing them to be incurable.

3rd: Describing obscene and indecent symptoms of diseases.

4th: Making any statements which seek to take advantage of the fears and credulity of the public.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 16, 1912.

The Ohio State Medical Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—The matter of revoking the license of certain physicians indulging in certain classes of advertising has been referred to this department for opinion.

The substances of the causes for the revocation of said certificates is stated in a letter to said physicians dated February 22, 1912, and is as follows:

> "Proceedings looking toward the revocation of your certificates will be taken should you continue after this date to use extravagantly worded or untruthful advertisements, promising to cure incurable diseases, to restore lost manhood or suppressed menstruation, or otherwise take advantage of the fears or credulity of the public."

Counsel for respondents in his brief subdivides these grounds into the following classes:

(a) Extravagantly worded advertisements.
(b) Untruthful advertisements.
(c) Those promising to cure incurable diseases.
(d) To restore lost manhood.
(e) To restore suppressed menstruation.
(f) To take advantage of the fears or credulity of the public.

The authority of your board to revoke the certificate of a physician is found in Section 1275, General Code, which provides:

> "The state medical board may refuse to grant a certificate to a person guilty of fraud in passing the examination, or at any time guilty of felony or gross immorality, or addicted to the liquor or drug habit to such a degree as to render him unfit to practice medicine or surgery. Upon notice and hearing the board, by a vote of not less than five members may revoke a certificate for like cause or causes."

The legislature uses the term "guilty of felony or gross immorality." It is apparent, by the use of the alternative "or" that "gross immorality" is something different than is involved in the commission of a felony. It must of necessity mean a moral short coming of less degree than that of a felony.

The term "gross immorality" as used in the above section was defined and applied in the case of Rose vs. Baxter, 18 Ohio Dec. 658 (7 Misi Prius N. S. 132), the third and fourth syllabi of which case reads:

> "The term 'gross immorality' for which under Rev. Stat. 4403-c the state board of medical registration may revoke a certificate to practice medicine, represents in law as adjudicated by the courts such a wilful, flagrant and shameful quality with respect to the office involved as renders the officer unfit to hold his license and authority to act, and is akin to that of 'moral turpitude;' such term, therefore, is not so vague or indefinite that the board cannot carry out the legislative act without resorting to uncertainty and caprice.
> "Charges against a physician in his quasi-public character as such of maintaining a physician's office under one name and another office under another name, intending to perpetrate a fraud upon the public, is sufficiently definite to revoke his certificate for gross immorality."

On page 661, Dillon, J., says:

> "Gross immorality is a term which has been used and has received adjudication at the hands of a great many courts. The word 'gross' does not mean great, or big, or excessive, necessarily, but rather such a wilful, flagrant and shameful quality with respect to the office involved as renders the officer unfit to hold his license and authority to act."

The foregoing case was affirmed without report in Rose vs. Baxter, 81 Ohio St. 522.

The term "gross immorality" is construed as meaning the same as "moral turpitude" as used in the statute for the disbarment of an attorney at law.

In the matter of Lundy, 8 Cir. Dec. 111, it is held:

> "Erasing a memorandum 'dismissed, E' by an attorney, for the purpose of deceiving the court and again submitting the case, is conduct involving moral turpitude, within the meaning of the statute."

The sixth syllabus in the matter of Bickley, 16 Ohio Dec., 569, reads:

> "A specification, which charges that an attorney who is an administrator, falsely represented to creditors of the estate, that he had been ordered by the probate court appointing him to pay but three per cent. interest on a note, when in fact no such order had ever been made, as he well knew, is unprofessional conduct involving moral turpitude, for which he will be held to answer."

These three cases apply the terms "gross immorality" and "moral turpitude" to misrepresentations in professional conduct.

One of the grounds for revoking the certificate is "untruthful advertisements."

In 30 Cyc. at page 1556 the rule as to advertisments by a physician is stated as follows:

> "Mere advertising by a physician is not such unprofessional conduct as to warrant the revocation of his license; if, however, the advertisement is false and known to be false, and is a studied effort to impose upon the credulity of the public for gain, the law is otherwise."

It may be conceded without quoting any further authorities that advertising by a physician of his business does not constitute "gross immorality" and is not prohibited by the statutes of Ohio. No objection has been made to advertising. but the criticism is as to the manner of advertising.

In People vs. McCoy, 125 Ill., 289, the fourth syllabus reads:

> "If the holder of a certificate to practice medicine makes statements and promises with reference to the treatment and cure of the sick and afflicted which are calculated to deceive and defraud the public, that will be unprofessional and dishonorable conduct."

In State vs. Purl, 128 S. W. 196 (Mo.) it is held:

> "A dentist who by false advertisment as to the cost of a set of teeth, as to re-enameling teeth or making teeth without bridges or plates, curing pyerrhea, etc., intended to make the public believe that they would get something different and better than they actually received from him, and something different and better than they would receive from other dentists, and who by means thereof procured from patients various sums of money, was guilty of fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation in the practice of dentistry within Rev. St. 1899, Section 8528, as amended by acts 1905, page 215."

In case of State vs. State Board of Medical Examiners, 34 Minn. 391, it is held:

> "For a physician to publish an advertisement containing false statement as to his ability to cure diseases, knowing them to be false when he makes them and intending thereby to impose on and deceive the public, is 'unprofessional and dishonorable conduct' within the meaning of laws 1883-c, 125 Section 9."

This decision will apply to advertisements promising to cure incurable diseases.

Diseases that are incurable are known to physicians and are discussed and set forth in medical works.

In case of State Medical Board vs. McCrary, 130 S. W. 544, (Sup. Ct. of Ark.) it is held:

> "Acts of 1900, p. 637, authorizing the state board of medical examiners to revoke a license to practice medicine for publicly advertising special ability to treat or cure chronic and incurable diseases, is not invalid because of indefiniteness, for chronic and incurable diseases are specifically named and discussed in medical works, and are known to physicians possessing a sufficient knowledge of their profession to practice medicine; that word 'chronic' being the antithesis of acute, and 'chronic and incurable disease' being generally understood to be one of long standing and unyielding to treatment."

In rendering the opinion in this case the learned judge states that chronic and incurable diseases are so deep rooted and so unyielding to treatment that those afflicted with such a disease become greatly discouraged and readily grasp at promise for relief. This makes an advertisement promising to cure such disease the more objectionable. It shows the purpose of such promises in advertisments. Such promises secure patients who are very much discouraged, and who are ready to grasp at any straw that comes within their reach.

Another ground of complaint is the use of "extravagantly worded advertisements."

In support of his contention as to this class of advertisements counsel cites the case of Hewitt vs. Board of Medical Examiners 3 L. R. A. (N. S.) 896, and quotes:

> "The legislature cannot delegate to a state board the power to revoke the licensce of a physician for making 'grossly improbable statements' in an advertisement without any definition of such terms."

The court in the above case held the term "grossly improbable statements" as indefinite and the statute void for that reason. The court in discussing this term and the possibility of the advertisements says further:

> "The advertisement in connection with his medical business may be made in entirely good faith."

The statute of Ohio has been held constitutional and the term "gross immorality" has been determined to have a definite meaning. An advertisement made in good faith could not be "grossly immoral," as the court above holds might be true as to "grossly improbable statements." This case does not control "extravagantly worded" advertisements under our statutes.

The use of extravagant statements in advertisements by a physician was involved in the case of Macomber vs. State Board of Health, 28 R. I. 3. In that case, however, the state medical board failed to take any evidence to show that the advertisement was extravagant and the court was compelled for that reason to dismiss the proceedings.

The syllabus of said case reads:

> "Upon an appeal from the decision of the state board of health revoking the certificate of a physician upon the ground of 'gross unprofessional conduct' and 'conduct likely to deceive and defraud the public,' in the absence of testimony showing the falsity or extravagance of statements attributed to appellant, the court cannot take judicial notice of matters requiring expert medical knowledge."

On page 4, Parkhurst, J. says:

> "A number of advertisements from Providence papers relating to cures or alleged cures said to have been made by the use of the 'Electricure,' a device for which one David S. Frazer was agent in this state, are produced by the state board, upon a few of which appear the name of appellant as 'specialist;' or as 'physician in charge;' also certain circulars and advertisements purporting to explain the 'Electricure' and exploiting in glowing terms its powers in the cure of numerous diseases. It is evidently the intention of the state board that this court shall infer, from the language of these various advertisements that the statements therein contained are untrue, that the claims made are extravagant and therefore likely to 'deceive and defraud the public,' and that Dr. Macomber, the appellant, by allowing his name to appear upon some of them or by distributing some of them to his patients or to inquiring parties, has been guilty of conduct as above set forth.
> "Unfortunately, however, the state board has not seen fit to offer any testimony to show that any of the statements set forth is untrue in fact, or even that it is extravagant or misleading, or tending to 'deceive' or 'defraud' the public."

In Webster's International Dictionary the word 'extravagant' is defined:

"Extravagant: Exceeding due bounds; wild, excessive; unrestrained."

The purpose of using extravagant statements in advertisements is usually to deceive; to hold out false promises. Extravagant statements are those beyond due bounds; they are excessive.

Objection is made to advertisements for the cure of "lost manhood" and "suppressed menstruation."

Counsel cites the case of In re Washington, Queen's Bench Division, 23 Ontario Reports, 299, as authority for the publication of the symptoms of a disease. The symptoms published in that case was of the disease of catarrh.

The diseases which are advertised in the present cases are diseases relating to the sexual organs. There is a vast difference between publishing the symptoms of catarrh, and the publishing of symptoms of diseases of the sexual organs.

Courts and attorneys are compelled to hear the harrowing details of crime, but this does not authorize their publication in the daily papers.

In case of Czarra vs. Board of Medical Supervisors, 25 App. D. C. 443, it is held:

"The conviction of a physician of distributing obscene and indecent printed matter in this district is a sufficient ground for the revocation of his license by the board of medical supervisors, under the authority granted that board by the act of congress of June 3, 1896, 29 Stat. at L. 198, Chap. 313, regulating the practice of medicine and surgery in this district."

The court holds that the term "unprofessional or dishonorable conduct" is void for uncertainty as used in the statute. In discussing this point the court says at page 453:

"Doubtless all intelligent and fair minded persons would agree in the opinion of the board of medical supervisors that the act charged against the appellant in the case at bar amounted to conduct both unprofessional and dishonorable."

The nature of the charge is set forth in the statement of the case on page 447:

"The appellant was first brought before the board of medical supervisors in January, 1904, and his license ordered revoked upon a complaint made of unprofessional and dishonorable conduct in the distribution of obscene literature. The obscene literature consisted of a pamphlet purporting to relate to the cause, prevention and cure among other things, of venereal and secret diseases, and of certain filthy and indecent habits and practices. Upon appeal to this court the order was reversed because of the insufficiency of the complaint.

"On January 11, 1905, another complaint was made, against said Czarra, charging him with unprofessional and dishonorable conduct in that he 'did distribute, deposit, or place, or cause to be distributed, deposited or placed, in the vestibules and on the door steps of various residences in the city of Washington, and in the District of Columbia, aforesaid, a certain circular, book or pamphlet containing certain obscene lewd, and lascivious words, language, statements, and matter, copy of which it hereto attached as part hereof, etc. The attached pamphlet is identical with that referred to in the former complaint."

The obscene literature distributed in the above case pertained to disease and its cure. The report does not show whether the statements were true or false. It is apparent that all symptoms and descriptions of disease cannot be published and distributed. There are many things discussed in medical books which would be improper and indecent for the reading of an immature youth. These discussions are essential for the medical student and the physician, who understand their purpose.

The principles of the foregoing authorities will now be applied to the various objections which have been made to the advertisements.

a. Extravagantly worded statements in advertisements by a physician which are untrue and false are made to deceive or to defraud the public would constitute gross immorality and would be cause for revoking the certificate of the physician.

b. Untruthful and false advertisements by a physician for the purpose of deceiving and defrauding would constitute gross immorality and would be ground for revoking his certificate as physician.

c. Promises to cure incurable diseases made by a physician in advertisements, knowing them to be incurable, would constitute gross immorality. There are different schools of medicines, and probably one school will consider a disease incurable that another school will hold as curable. If such case exists the physician must be bound by the recognized doctrine of the school of which he is a member.

d and e. A statement in an advertisement by a physician as to disease and the symptoms thereof which are obscene or indecent would constitute gross immorality and would be cause for revoking the certificate of said physician.

f. Any advertisement by a physician which seeks to take advantage of the fears or the credulity of the public would constitute gross immorality and would constitute cause for the revocation of his certificate.

Whether or not a particular advertisement comes within either of the above classes must be determined by the facts of each particular case.

While advertising by a physician is permissible, it must be made in good faith; it must be truthful; it must not be made for the purpose of deceiving or defrauding the public; it must comply with the laws of decency.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DENTISTRY—RECIPROCITY—KENTUCKY DENTISTS MAY NOT BE ADMITTED TO PRACTICE IN OHIO WITHOUT COMPLIANCE WITH OHIO LAWS—COMITY.

Inasmuch as the laws of Kentucky do not accord to dentists from other states desiring to practice therein, rights which are equal to those accorded by the state of Ohio, to dentists from other states who desire to practice herein, dentists from Kentucky will not be permitted by provision of Section 1324 of the General Code to practice dentistry in Ohio without complete fulfillment of the requirements of Ohio's laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12, 1912.

DR. H. BARTILSON, Secretary, Ohio State Dental Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 25th, you enclosed a copy of the law regulating the practice of dentistry in Kentucky enacted March, 1912, and desire to know whether such law conforms with the provisions of Section 12 of the Ohio state dental law, and if it does conform is a man who holds a license issued prior to this act entitled to an exchange under the laws of Ohio, the requirements previous to this act not being equal to those of Ohio.

Upon an examination of the provisions of the act enacted by the commonwealth of Kentucky, March, 1912, it will be seen that Section 3 thereof requires all persons, whether they have prior to such act practiced dentistry or not in said state, to first obtain a license for such purpose from the Kentucky state board of dental examiners and register such license, except such persons as have been licensed and registered prior to the passage of such act. The applicant for such license is required to be of good moral character, at least twenty-one years of age at the time of making the application and a graduate of and the holder of a diploma from a reputable dental college: and, furthermore, the said applicant must stand an examination, which examination must be both written and clinical, and "of such a character as to thoroughly test the qualifications of the applicant to practice dentistry."

Section 15 of said act provides as follows:

> "Said board may in its discretion issue a license to practice dentistry without examination other than clinical to a legal and ethical practitioner of dentistry who removes to Kentucky from another state or territory of the United States, whose standard of requirement is equal to that of Kentucky, and in which he or she conducted a legal and ethical practice of dentistry for at least five years immediately preceding his or her removal, provided such applicant shall present a certificate from the dental board or a like board of the state or territory from which he or she removes, certifying that he or she is a legal, competent and ethical dentist, and of good moral character; and provided further, that such certificate is presented to the Kentucky state board of dental examiners within six months from the date of its issue, and that the board of such other state or territory shall permit in like manner by law the recognition of licenses issued by the Kentucky state board of dental examiners when presented to such other board by legal practitioners of dentistry from this state who may wish to remove to or practice in such other state or territory."

Coming now to the Ohio law:
Section 1321 General Code provides as follows:

> "Each person who desires to practice dentistry within this state shall file with the secretary of the state dental board a written application for a license and furnish satisfactory proof that he is at least twenty-one years of age, of good moral character, and present evidence satisfactory to the board that he is a graduate of a reputable dental college, as defined by the board. Such application must be upon the form prescribed by the board and verified by oath."

Section 1322 General Code provides as follows:

> "An applicant for a license to practice dentistry shall appear before the state dental board at its first meeting after the filing of his application, and pass a satisfactory examination, consisting of practical demonstrations and written or oral tests, or both, in the following subjects: anatomy, physiology, chemistry, materia medica, therapeutics, metallurgy, histology, pathology, bacteriology, prosthetics, operative dentistry, oral surgery, anesthetics, orthodonia and oral hygiene."

Section 1324 General Code, which is the codified number of Section 12 referred to in your inquiry, provides as follows:

> "The state dental board may issue a license without examination to an applicant who furnishes satisfactory proof that he is a graduate from a reputable dental college of a state, territory, or district of the United States, and holds a license from a similar dental board, under requirements equal to those of this state, or who, for five consecutive years next prior to filing his application, has been in the legal and reputable practice of dentistry in a state, territory or district of the United States and holds a license from a similar dental board thereof, if in either case the laws of such state, territory or district accord equal rights to a dentist of Ohio holding a license from the state dental board, who removes to, resides and desires to practice his profession in, such state, territory or district. No license shall be issued under this section unless authorized by an affirmative vote of all the members of the board present at such meeting."

The requirements that an applicant to practice dentistry must be at least twenty-one years of age, of good moral character and a graduate of a reputable dental college are similar in both laws, as will be noted from an examination of Section 3 of the Kentucky law and Section 1321 General Code of Ohio. Section 1322 General Code sets forth the subjects upon which the applicant must pass a satisfactory examination consisting of practical demonstrations and written or oral tests, or both. Section 3 of the Kentucky law requires the examination to be both written and clinical, and "of such a character as to thoroughly test the qualifications of the applicant to practice dentistry." I take it that if the state dental board of Ohio should find that the examinations given by the Kentucky state board of Dental Examiners are equal to those required by this state, the fact that the subjects upon which the applicants are examined are not identical, would not stand in the way of reciprocity between Kentucky and Ohio.

Upon an examination of Section 1324 General Code it will be noted that there are two classes of persons practicing dentistry in other states who can be admitted to Ohio without examination, provided the laws of the other state accord equal rights to a dentist of Ohio holding a license from the state dental board. These two classes are as follow:

1. A graduate from a reputable dental college who holds a license from a similar dental board under requirements equal to those of this state.

2. One who for five years prior to filing his application has been in the legal and reputable practice of dentistry in such other state and holds a license from a similar dental board thereof.

From an examination of Section 15 of the Kentucky law, above set out in full, it is to be noted that the Kentucky board is not authorized to admit a person coming from another state to the practice of dentistry in Kentucky without any examination whatever, but requires in each and every instance a clinical examination.

Second, It further requires that the person coming from another state desiring to practice dentistry in Kentucky must have continued the practice of dentistry for at least five years immediately preceding the removal into Kentucky. The Ohio law does not require that of a graduate of a reputable dental college, who holds a diploma from a dental board similar to the one in Ohio under requirements equal to those in this state. Equal rights, therefore, are not accorded to a dentist of Ohio going into Kentucky in this to-wit:

First: As to the first class set forth in Section 1324 General Code, to-wit: A graduate from a dental college who holds a license from a similar dental board under requirements equal to those of this state:

A person coming within such class may enter Ohio from another state without any examination and irrespective of the time he has practiced in such other state.

An Ohio dentist cannot enter Kentucky without passing a clinical examination and not before he has practiced in Ohio for five years next preceding his removal.

Second: As to the second class set forth in Section 1324 General Code, to-wit: An application who for five years next prior to filing his application has practiced dentistry in another state.

A person coming within such class may enter Ohio from another state without any examination whatever.

An Ohio dentist, although he has practiced for at least five years immediately preceding his removal into Kentucky, cannot enter Kentucky without passing a clinical examination.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the law as enacted by the state of Kentucky regulating the practice of dentistry therein, enacted March, 1912, does not conform to the provisions of Section 12 of the Ohio state dental law, Section 1324 General Code. Such being the case, it is not necessary to answer your question in reference to a man who holds a license issued by the state dental board of examiners of Kentucky prior to the passage of the act of March, 1912.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD MAJORITY REQUIRED TO REVOKE LICENSE —POWER TO REOPEN HEARING UPON DISCOVERY OF NEW EVIDENCE AFTER TWO VOTES CAST FOR REVOCATION.

Inasmuch as the revocation of a license by the dental board is a serious undertaking of at least a quasi-judicial character, and inasmuch as the statutes relating to the medical board require a vote of five out of seven to revoke a license, Section 1326 General Code, giving power to the state dental board to revoke a license should be construed to require at least a majority vote to accomplish such a result.

When a hearing in a certain case was had, therefore, whereat only four of the five members of the dental board were present, only two of whom voted for revocation of a license, such hearing may still be considered pending, and newly discovered evidence may be introduced and a second vote taken on the question of revocation of licenses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 6, 1912.

DR. H. C. MATLACK, President, Ohio State Dental Board, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 16th you wrote us as follows:

> "In view of the fact that there were only four members present at the last meeting of the board when we considered the M. case, and two members only voted for conviction (the president not having a vote) and in view of the fact that new and more convincing evidence has been secured by the defendant, has the president the power to order a special meeting of the board for a re-hearing of the case? The case in question is that of Dr. V. H. M. Can the case be opened at any time in the future, not having been appealed to the governor and the attorney general?"

The statutes regulating the state dental board are found in Sections 1314 to 1334 inclusive of the General Code. From an examination of said sections it appears that the state dental board consists of five persons (Section 1314 G. C.); that a majority of the members shall constitute a quorum, and that the board shall make such reasonable rules and regulations as it deems necessary (Section 1315 G. C.) Section 1325 General Code provides that the state dental board may revoke a license if the person named therein is guilty of immoral conduct. Section 1326 General Code provides for the hearing and further provides that "if upon such hearing the board finds the charges are true, it may revoke the license. Such revocation shall take from the person named in a license all rights and privileges acquired thereby."

Upon an examination of the minutes of October 30, 1912, being the meeting to which you refer in your letter, appears the following:

> "Upon motion of H. Bartilson, seconded by J. R. Owens in view of the fact that V. H. M. stated while on the stand and under oath that he had committed an immoral act in his office and with his patient Miss L. B. S. of F. that the license of the said V. H. M. be revoked and the secretary notify him of the same. Motion carried."

The action taken by such state dental board revoking a license is administrative in character and not judicial. France vs. State 57 O. S. I.

While it is true that the action of such board in revoking the license is only ministerial in character nevertheless it is in the nature quasi-judicial as I view it, and such an action as would deprive the person holding the license from continuing his life work, and is, therefore, a most severe proceeding.

Upon an examination of the statutes in relation to the powers of the state medical board it will be found that said board cannot revoke a license except by a vote of not less than five of its seven members.

In the matter in question it appears that there were but four members present at the meeting of the board at which the attempted revocation of the license of Dr. M. was acted upon, and that only two of the members present at such meeting voted in favor thereof. While it is true that as to ordinary actions of the board, a majority being present, a majority thereof could pass such act, yet in view of the seriousness of the revocation of a license, and the fact that the statute simply says that the state dental board may revoke a license, I am of the opinion that it takes the affirmative action of at least a majority of the entire membership of the board so to revoke a license.

In the present case a majority of the members having neither acted for nor against the revocation of the license and feeling as I do that it must take the action of at least a majority on such a question, I am of the opinion that the matter is still pending before your board for proper action. I would further say that I deem it eminently proper should it be called to the attention of the board that there was further evidence which should be presented, to hear such evidence before finally passing upon the case.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—PURCHASE OF, FOR MEDICINAL PURPOSES IN DRY TERRITORY—VETERINARY SURGEON NOT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE.

Inasmuch as Section 6104 General Code, providing for the sale of liquor in dry territory for medicinal purposes, prescribes that the prescription of the physician ordering the same shall contain the name of the person for whom the liquor is prescribed, the section must be restricted in its application to physician prescribing for human ills only. Therefore, a veterinary surgeon is not authorized to to purchase intoxicating liquors in such territory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 22, 1912.

HON. F. H. KING, Secretary Pro tem, State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 11, 1912, you requested me to render you an opinion on the following:

> "Whether or not a pharmacist may accept a whiskey prescription signed by a local veterinary surgeon in a municipality which has been voted 'dry' under the Beal law."

Section 6103 General Code provides:

> "No provision of this chapter or the penal laws relating thereto, shall prevent the sale of intoxicating liquor at retail by a regular druggist for exclusively known medicinal, mechanical, pharmaceutical, scientific or sacramental purposes; nor in addition thereto, shall it prevent such sale for exclusively known art purposes by a regular druggist in the limits of a township without the limits of a municipal corporation, as provided in sub-division V of this chapter."

Section 6104 General Code provides:

> "When intoxicating liquor is so sold for medicinal purposes, it shall be done only in good faith upon a written prescription issued, signed, dated in good faith by a reputable physician in active practice and in conformity with the provisions of this chapter. Such prescription shall be used but once and must contain the name and quantity of liquor prescribed, the name of the person for whom prescribed, the date on which the prescription is written and directions for the use of the liquor therein so prescribed."

Section 6105 General Code provides:

> "In each county, township, municipal corporation or residence district in which the sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage is prohibited, a book shall be kept by each retail druggist and pharmacist in which shall be entered, at the time of each sale of intoxicating liquor, the date thereof, the name of the purchaser, who shall sign his name in such book as part of such entry, the kind, quantity and price of such liquor, the purpose for which it was sold and the residence by street and number, if there be such, of such purchaser. When such sale is for medicinal purposes, such book shall also contain the name of the physician issuing the prescription. Such prescription shall be cancelled by writing on it the word 'cancelled' and the date on which it was presented and filed. Such book shall be in form substantially as follows: Date_____

Name of Purchaser _____Residence _____
Kind and Quantity _____Purpose of Use _____
Price _____Name of Physician _____
Signature of Purchaser."

It will be noticed that Section 6104 General Code provides that when intoxicating liquors are sold for medicinal purposes it shall be done only in good faith upon a written prescription of a physician in active practice.

"Physician" is defined by Century Dictionary as "one who practices the art of healing diseases and of preserving health; a prescriber of remedies for sickness and disease."

It might well be said that a veterinarian is within the description of "physician" as defined by the dictionary. However, that is the broad meaning of the term and a narrow meaning thereof is one who prescribed for human sickness and disease. The question therefore, arises as to whether the term "physician" as used in Section 6104 is so used in its broad or restricted sense. A further examination of said section will show that the prescription issued, signed and dated by said physician must contain, among other things, the name of the person for whom prescribed. Hence, as it is necessary that the prescription shall contain the name of the person for whom prescribed it is my conclusion that the term "physician" as used in said section is so used in its restricted sense.

Such being the fact, I am of the opinion that pharmacist may not accept a whiskey prescription signed by a veterinarian in a municipality which has been voted "dry" under the Beal law, and concur with an opinion of my predecessor to the Hon. J. J. Brown, city solicitor, Alliance, Ohio, under date of May 13, 1909, as the law stood prior to the adoption of the General Code.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MORPHINE—CONTRACT FOR SALE OF MORPHINE ACCEPTED IN ST. LOUIS, NOT WITHIN OHIO STATUTE.

A contract is made where completed and when an acceptance to an offer from Ohio to buy morphine is mailed at St. Louis, the contract is completed and therefore, made in St. Louis.

A contract for the sale of morphine, so made therefore, is not made in Ohio and therefore not within Section 12674 General Code prohibiting the sale of morphine except upon the written order from a prescribing physician.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 5, 1912.

HON. F. H. KING, Secretary Pro tem, State Board of Pharmacy, Delphos, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 24th you enclosed a letter from Mr. Charles W. Antony, secretary of Canton Retail Druggists' Association, asking as to the right of a St. Louis firm to sell morphine or morphine tablets to a consumer living in Ohio.

From subsequent conversation with you I learned that the question submitted is in reference to the right of the concern situated in St. Louis to sell such morphine to a consumer in Ohio, the same having been ordered by the consumer in Ohio from St. Louis firm by mail.

Section 12674 General Code provides in part as follows:

> "Whoever dispenses, sells or delivers * * * morphine or its salts, * * * * except upon the written prescription of a legally qualified physician or dentist, or refills such prescription except upon the written order of the person prescribing it, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offense."

The above law makes it unlawful to dispense, sell or deliver morphine except on written prescription.

As the criminal laws of the state of Ohio have no extra territorial application the question arises in your inquiry as to where said contract of sale is made.

It is a well established rule of law that where a person uses the mail to make an offer the postoffice becomes his agent to carry the offer, and that when so made the contract is complete when the acceptance of said offer is mailed.

9 Cyc. 294 et seq.

In the question under consideration, therefore, when the Ohio consumer writes to a firm in St. Louis for certain morphine tablets and the said firm in St. Louis accepts the order and mails the said tablets back to Ohio the contract is completed at St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, and, therefore, the Ohio law making it unlawful to dispense, sell or deliver morphine except on written prescription is not applicable. It is only applicable where said morphine is dispensed, sold or delivered in the state of Ohio, and in many instances it would be a question as to where the sale takes place, which question must always be answered upon the particular facts of the case. Whether or not there is a law in the state of Missouri covering the matter I do not undertake to decide.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DISPOSITION OF FINES COLLECTED IN PROSECUTIONS BY BOARD OF PHARMACY—FINES ASSESSED BY JUSTICE OF PEACE UNDER SECTION 12666 OF THE GENERAL CODE.

Section 12666 of the General Code is a general statute and has not any particular relation to the practice of pharmacy so as to bring it within Section 1313 of the General Code providing for the payment of fines collected under prosecutions by the board of pharmacy into the state treasury, to the credit of the pharmacy fund.

Fines assessed under Section 12666 of the General Code by a justice of the peace, therefore should be paid into the county treasury in accordance with Section 13429 of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 22, 1912.

HON. N. M. FORD, Secretary, State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 6th, Mr. F. H. King, secretary pro tem. of your board, submitted to this department a letter from Mr. Flandermeyer, of Cleveland, a member of your board, requesting to be advised as to whether or not your board is entitled to receive a fine assessed in a case brought before a justice of the peace under Section 12666 General Code.

Sction 1313 General Code provides in part as follows:

> "The secretary of the state board of pharmacy shall enforce the laws relating to the practice of pharmacy. * * * Fines assessed and collected under prosecutions commenced or caused to be commenced by the state board of pharmacy shall be paid to the treasurer thereof, and by him paid into the state treasury each month to the credit of the fund for the use of the board."

Sections 12705-12710 General Code are the sections relating to the practice of pharmacy.

Section 12666 General Code provides in part as follows:

> "Whoever, knowingly sells or delivers to any person otherwise than in the manner prescribed by law, or sells or delivers in the manner prescribed by law but without the written order of an adult, to a minor under sixteen years of age, any of the following described substances or any poisonous compounds, combinations or preparations thereof to-wit: * * * (various things set forth) * * * shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each offense."

Section 12667 General Code provides the manner in which said substances may be sold.

Section 12668 General Code provides certain exceptions thereto.

In none of these Sections, 12666-12668 General Code, are there any words limiting the operation thereof to a pharmacy exclusively, and, therefore, is not one of the sections relating to the practice of pharmacy. Furthermore, there is no provision of law requiring the state board of pharmacy to enforce the provisions of said Section 12666 General Code, or any provision that the fines collected shall be paid to such board as there is in relation to Section 12672 General Code regulating the sale of cocaine. Section 12666 General Code is found contained within what is known as "offenses against public health" under the sub-head "poison."

Section 13429 General Code provides as follows:

> "Fines collected by a justice of the peace shall be paid into the general fund of the county where the offense was committed within thirty days after collection unless otherwise provided by law."

The provisions of Section 1313 General Code, above set forth in relation to the fine assessed and collected under prosecutions commenced by the state board of pharmacy refer, as I view it, solely to violations of law relating to the practice of pharmacy.

As the provisions of Section 12666 General Code are general in their application and as there is no provision that the fines assessed and collected under Section 12666 General Code shall be paid to the treasurer of the state board of Pharmacy, I am of the opinion that said state board of pharmacy is not entitled to receive such fines, but that the same should be paid into the county treasury as provided in Section 13429.

Very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE BOARD OF PHARMACY—PAYMENT OF GENERAL OFFICE AND OTHER EXPENSES AND OF OFFICE AND OTHER EXPENSES INCURRED IN INVESTIGATION AND PROSECUTION OF ILLEGAL SALE OF COCAINE—APPROPRIATIONS.

Payment for such office help and other expenses as are required for investigating and prosecuting the illegal sale of cocaine and other narcotics, may be made from the fund of $3,500.00 appropriated for the purpose of such prosecutions and investigations.

Other offices and expenses must be paid from the fund provided for in Section 1312 General Code, which is accumulated from fees collected by the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 27, 1912.

HON. M. N. FORD, Secretary, State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of August 27th wherein you advise me that your board has an appropriation of $3,500.00 for investigating and prosecuting the illegal sale of cocaine and other narcotics. You desire to know whether any of this appropriation can be legally used for office help and expenses while conducting such investigation.

The language of the appropriation act is as follows:

> "Investigating and prosecuting the illegal sale of cocaine and other narcotics----------$3,500.00."

Section 1312 General Code provides as follows:

> "All fees required by the previous section shall be paid in advance to the treasurer of the state board of pharmacy, and by him paid into the state treasury each month, to the credit of a fund for the use of the board. The compensation and expenses of members and officers of the board and all its necessary expenses shall be paid from this fund upon a requisition signed by the president and secretary of the board, and the warrant of the auditor of state."

By reference to Section 1312 foregoing set forth it is to be noted that the compensation and expenses of members and officers of the board and all the necessary expenses of the board are to be paid from the moneys paid by the treasurer into the state treasury. It is to be noted, therefore, that it is the intention of the legislature that the ordinary office help and ordinary expenses of the board are to be met as provided in Section 1312 General Code.

The amount appropriated for investigation and prosecuting of illegal sales of cocaine and other narcotics is a fund appropriated for the specific purpose of investigating and prosecuting, and was so appropriated to take care of such expenses as were incurred in so investigating and prosecuting other than the ordinary salaries and ordinary office help necessary for the ordinary operation of the board. Any extraordinary expense which may be incurred in such investigating and prosecuting may be paid from the said $3,500.00 so appropriated, but it is only those expenses which would not have been incurred save for such investigating and prosecuting that can be so paid from said fund. Your letter does not specifically state whether the office help and expenses referred to in your inquiry means the ordinary office help and expenses or whether it means extraordinary office help and expenses attributable solely to the conducting of investigation of illegal sales of cocaine and other narcotics. If your inquiry means the ordinary help and expenses which accrued while conducting such investigation but which would have accrued whether such investigation was undertaken or not, I am of the opinion that the $3,500 so appropriated cannot be used, but that if additional help and additional expense attributable solely to the investigation of the illegal sale of cocaine are necessary the amount incurred for such office help and expenses may be paid from such fund.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PHARMACY—CARBOLIC ACID NOT A "HOUSEHOLD REMEDY"—ILLEGAL SALE BY GROCER.

Carbolic acid is a poison within the meaning of 12706 General Code. The words and "other similar preparations" as employed in Section 12707 General Code, which enumerates a number of exceptions to 12706 General Code, are construed to mean "other household remedies." As carbolic acid is of a more dangerous character than the articles so enumerated and as it cannot properly be classed as a "household remedy," it is not included within the exceptions, and a grocer selling the same contrary to Section 12666 or 12706 General Code, is liable for the penalties therein provided.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 27, 1912.

HON. M. N. FORD, Secretary, State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of August 31st you advised me that you have in possession a four ounce bottle of solution carbolic acid that you purchased from a grocery store, the dispenser thereof not being a registered pharmacist, and you wish to know whether the sale of such solution of carbolic acid is a legal one. Enclosed in your inquiry is a copy of a label on the bottle containing said solution as purchased. Said label shows that it is clearly set forth that the contents of the bottle is a solution of carbolic acid and that it is poison; also directions for the use of the same is given and it appears that it is put up by a wholesale druggist, the name of such wholesale druggist being given together with the address of such wholesale druggist. The statutes which should be considered in reference to this matter are Sections 12666, 12667, 12669, 12706 and 12707 General Code.

Section 12666 General Code provides in part as follows:

> "Whoever, knowingly sells or delivers to any person otherwise than in the manner prescribed by law, or sells or delivers in the manner prescribed by law but without the written order of an adult, to a minor under sixteen years of age, any of the following described substances or any poisonous compounds, combinations or preparations thereof, to-wit: * * * carbolic acid * * * or any of the poisonous alkaloids or alkaloidal salts or other poisonous principles derived from the foregoing, or other poisonous alkaloids or their salts or other virulent poison, * * *."

It is to be noted that among the substances mentioned in Section 12666 General Code regulating the sale of poison is carbolic acid, and the method by which the same is to be sold is set forth in Sections 12667 and 12669 General Code.

Section 12666 General Code applies generally to anybody who sells or delivers carbolic acid whether the same be sold by a registered pharmacist or not, and standing alone would not prohibit the sale of carbolic acid by a person other than a registered pharmacist. Carbolic acid, however, is a poison, and

Section 12706 General Code provides as follows:

> "Whoever, not being a legally registered pharmacist, or a legally registered assistant pharmacist employed in a pharmacy or drug store under the management or control of a legally registered pharmacist, compounds, dispenses or sells a drug, chemical, poison or pharmaceutical preparation, shall be fined not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. Each day's violation of this section shall constitute a separate offense."

Certain exception to Section 12706 is found in Section 12707, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The next two preceding sections shall not apply to a physician or prevent him from supplying his patients with such medicines as to him seem proper, the making or vending of patent or proprietary medicines by a retail dealer, the selling of copperas, borax, blue vitriol, saltpeter, sulphur, brimstone, licorice, sage, juniper berries, senna leaves, castor oil, sweet oil, spirits of turpentine, glycerine, glauber's salt, cream of tartar, bicarbonate of sodium, quinine, rochelle salts, epsom salts, alum, camphor gum, oil of cinnamon, oil of lemon, or prohibit a person from selling in the original packages, paregoric, essence of peppermint, essence of cinnamon, essence of ginger, hive syrup, syrup of ipecac, tincture of arnica, syrup of tolu, syrup of squills, spirits of camphor, number six, sweet spirits of nitre, compound cathartic pills, quinine pills and other similar preparations when compounded by a legally registered pharmacist and put up in bottles or boxes bearing the label of such pharmacist or a wholesale druggist, with the name of the article and directions for its use on each bottle or box."

It is to be noted that Section 12706 General Code requires that drugs, chemicals, preparations and pharmaceutical preparations must be sold by a legally registered pharmacist or a legally registered assistant pharmacist employed in a pharmacy or drug store under the management or control of a legally registered pharmacist. Carbolic acid is a poison, and, therefore, unless there is some exceptoin to be found in Section 12707 General Code, foregoing set forth, such carbolic acid must be sold as provided in Section 12707 General Code.

An examination of Section 12707 General Code discloses certain exceptions to Section 12707 General Code, to-wit: a physician supplying his patient with certain medicines as to him seems proper, the making and vending of patent and proprietary medicines, the selling of certain drugs and chemicals and also does not prohibit a person from selling in the original package drugs, chemicals, poisons and pharmaceutical preparations specifically set forth, and "other similar preparations" when compounded by a legally registered pharmacist and put up in boxes or bottles bearing the label of such pharmicist or wholesale druggist, the name of the article and directions for its use on each bottle or box.

The question arises, therefore, as to whether or not carbolic acid can be considered and included within the term "other similar preparations" as used in said Section 12707 General Code. I am informed that none of the preparations specifically set forth in said section have any similarity one to another, and I have heretofore construed the words "other similar preparations" to mean what is generally known as "household remedies" for the reason that the preparations as set forth are what are generally known as such household remedies. However, none of such preparations are in themselves dangerous, nor would they be necessarily fatal if taken contrary to the usual directions for the use thereof. It is well known that carbolic acid is an exceptionally dangerous poison and that it is often used with suicidal intent, being in fact one of the most usual poisons taken to accomplish self-destruction. It is also very doubtful that the same could under any circumstances be considered as a household remedy as said term is usually understood, and I am unwilling to consider it as such unless it is clearly proven so to be, or clearly shown to be within the exception contained in Section 12707 General Code.

I hold, therefore, that it is not included within the term "and other similar preparations" as used in such section, and that, consequently, a sale thereof by one who is not legally registered or legally registered assistant pharmacist employed in a pharmacy under the management and control of a legally registered pharmacist is illegal, and furthermore, even if sold by a legally registered pharmacist or assistant pharmacist as provided by said Section 12707 General Code, the provisions of Section 12667 et seq. General Code must be complied with.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

"VETERINARY"—LICENSE TO PRACTICE—VACCINATION OF SWINE.

As the act of vaccinating swine for the purpose of curing or preventing disease is a surgical or medical treatment of domestic animals and comes within the purview of the term "veterinary," such practice can be engaged in by only licensed veterinaries.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 30, 1912.

LOUIS P. COOK, D. V. S., Member Ohio State Board Veterinary Examiners, 3116 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th inst., wherein you inquire as follows:

> "The state board of veterinary examiners has received a number of letters recently asking whether any person not legally qualified to practice veterinary medicine in this state can legally engage in the work of vaccinating swine that have been exposed to the disease hog cholera, or that are already affected with such disease.
> "The reply of the secretary of the board was to the effect that only persons legally qualified to practice veterinary medicine in this state could, under the law engage in such work."

In reply thereto I beg to say Section 13382 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Whoever engages in the practice of veterinary medicine or surgery in violation of any provision of law, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars, and for each subsequent offense shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars or imprisoned in jail not more than sixty days, or both. This section shall not prohibit veterinary advice or service in cases of emergency, if rendered by a person not entitled to practice or apply to animal castration and dehorning cattle."

It is apparent from the foregoing section that only those persons can practice veterinary medicine and surgery who have received certificates to practice in accordance with the law. The question to be determined then is whether or not the vaccination of swine that are exposed to or already have hog cholera constitutes the practicing of veterinary medicine.

Webster defines "veterinary" as follows:

> "Of or pertaining to the art of healing or treating the diseases of domestic animals, as oxen, horses, sheep and the like."

The Century Dictionary defines "veterinary" as follows:

> "Pertaining to the surgical or medical treatment of domestic animals."

The vaccination of swine which already have the disease of hog cholera is, of course, for the purpose of curing the swine of the disease; and the vaccination of swine which have been exposed to the disease of hog cholera, and have not yet acquired such disease, is, of course, for the purpose of preventing and avoiding the disease. In either case such vaccination pertains to the "art of healing or treating of diseases of domestic animals," and constitutes a part of the practice of veterinary medicine.

Therefore, it is my opinion that none save licensed veterinary doctors can lawfully vaccinate swine for the purpose of either curing hog cholera or preventing the disease from developing. Any person who does so vaccinate swine is practicing veterinary medicine in violation of Section 13382 General Code, above quoted.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

Addendum:

The foregoing conclusion is, of course, subject to the cases of emergency mentioned in said Section 13382.

PERSONS VOLUNTARILY COMMITTED AND INSANE PRISONERS OF PENITENTIARY NOT LIABLE TO "PAY PATIENT" PROVISIONS WHILE CONFINED IN STATE HOSPITAL FOR INSANE.

Inasmuch as only such patients are amenable to Sections 1815-1815-10, General Code, known as the "pay patient" provisions as are committed to the state hospital for the insane, by the proper legal procedure in the county of their legal residence, and for the further reason that persons sentenced to the penitentiary are wards of the state, such persons must be supported by the state during the time of their confinement in the state hospital.

An applicant for admission to any state institution, under voluntary commitment, by provision of Section 1972-3 and 1972-4 of the General Code, is not amenable to the "pay patient" provisions, but as the power to receive such applicant is discretionary with the superintendent of the institutions, the applicant might be required to pay a reasonable compensation for his maintenance while in the institution.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary, Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication dated February 8, 1912, received, in which you say:

> "There recently were transferred from the Ohio penitentiary to the Columbus State Hospital a number of insane prisoners."

and requesting my opinion as to whether the provisions of the pay-patient law, Sections 1815 to 1815-10 of the General Code, would apply to persons committed to the hospital under such circumstances; and also requesting my opinion as to the application of this law to persons admitted to state hospitals under what is known as voluntary commitment act, Sections 1972 to 1974 of the General Code.

In answer to your first inquiry I desire to say that Section 2222 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When a convict in the penitentiary or the reformatory becomes insane, the warden of the penitentiary or the superintendent of the reformatory shall give notice to the physician thereof, who shall forthwith examine the convict. If upon examination, he is of opinion that the convict is insane, the physician shall so certify to the warden, or superintendent. If the Lima state hospital is not then open to receive such convict, the warden shall forthwith confine the convict in the insane department of the penitentiary. The superintendent shall present to the board of managers of the reformatory the certificate of such physician. In such case the board of managers may order the superintendent to remove the convict to the Columbus state hospital, and the superintendent of such hospital shall set apart a portion of the hospital wherein such convict shall be confined."

and Section 2223 G. C. provides as follows:

> "Should it be necessary after a convict is so confined in the insane department of the penitentiary, evidenced by the certificate of the superintendent of the Columbus state hospital and the physician of the pene-tentiary, the board of managers of the penitentiary may order the warden to remove such insane convict to the Columbus state hospital and the superintendent shall set apart a portion of the hospital wherein such insane shall be confined."

Under the provisions of the two above quoted sections the convicts of which you speak are properly confined or have become inmates of the Columbus state hospital for treatment as other inmates, subject, however, to be returned to the Ohio penitentiary upon being restored to their proper minds, as provided in Section 2224 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"When the physician of the penitentiary certifies to the warden thereof, that an insane convict confined in the insane department of the penitentiary, or when the superintendent of the Columbus state hospital certifies to the warden of the penitentiary or to the superintendent of the reformatory, that a convict from such institution so confined in such hospital, is so far restored to his proper mind that it is safe to put him at labor under his sentence, the warden or superintendent of the reformatory as the case may be shall remove such convict from the hospital and return him to the prison and put him at labor under his sentence."

Section 13720 of the General Code provides as follows:

"A person sentenced to the penitentiary, or Ohio state reformatory, unless the execution thereof is suspended, shall be conveyed to the penitentiary or Ohio state reformatory by the sheriff of the county in which the conviction was had, within five days after such sentence, and delivered into the custody of the warden of the penitentiary, or superintendent of the Ohio state reformatory, with a copy of such sentence there to be kept until the term of his imprisonment expires, or he is pardoned. If the execution of such sentence is suspended, and the judgment be afterward affirmed, he shall be conveyed to the penitentiary or state reformatory within five days after the court directs the execution of sentence; provided, however, that the trial judge, or any judge of said court in said subdivision may, in his discretion, and for good cause shown, extend the time of such conveyance."

And under this last above quoted section, and the transfer of said insane convicts to said state hospital, the status of each is that of imprisonment and an inmate of the hospital for temporary treatment only, for it becomes the duty of the superintendent of said hospital to set apart a portion of the same wherein such insane convicts shall be confined and upon being restored to reason shall be returned to the peniteniary as provided in Section 2224 of the General Code above quoted.

It is apparent, from the working of Sections 1815-1815-10 of the General Code, that only such inmates of the state hospital for insane as have been committed to the same by the proper legal procedure for the commitment of insane persons from the county which is their legal residence, come under the provisions thereof.

Again, a convict is supported during imprisonment by the state, and any convict becoming insane is the ward of the state, and, although transferred to the state hospital for temporary treatment, is constructively imprisoned in the penitentiary during such temporary absence therefrom, and the state must support him while in said hospital.

For the reason above stated I am of the legal opinion that said Sections 1815 to 1815-10 of the General Code do not apply to insane convicts transferred to the hospital from the Ohio penitentiary.

As to your second inquiry, viz.:

> "As to the application of pay-patient law, Sections 1815 to 1815-10, to persons admitted to state hospitals under what is known as voluntary commitment act, Sections 1972 to 1974 of the General Code."

I desire to say that Section 1815-1 provides:

> "When any person is 'committed' to a state hospital for the insane, * * * to the 'Ohio hospital of epileptics' or to the institution for feebleminded, the judge making such 'commitment' shall, at the same time, certify to the superintendent of such institution, and the superintendent shall thereupon enter upon his records the name and address of the guardian, if any appointed, and of the relative or relatives liable for such person's support under Section 1815-9."

Section 1815-9 of the General Code provides:

> "It is the intent of this act that a husband may be held liable for the support of a wife while an inmate of any of said institutions; a wife for a husband, a father or mother for a son or daughter, or both for a father or mother."

Under the provisions of the act above referred to only such inmates as are committed to such institutions are subject to the same, and unless the patients are committed thereto I am of the opinion that they would not have to pay as provided herein.

The word "committed," as used in said sections, means: "The act of committing or putting in charge of said institution under legal writ."

Under Section 1972, General Code,

> "Only such persons as are in an incipient stage of mental derangement, or epilepsy, may apply for admission to and treatment in a state hospital for insane or the Ohio hospital for epileptics, and likely to be benefited by such treatment."

This application is voluntary, and when the applicant is admitted, cannot be kept at such institution beyond such time as the patient may desire to remain and, therefore, they are not in any sense committed as other insane patients under the law, and under the provisions of Section 1972 the longest time that any such voluntary patient may be allowed to remain in such institution is sixty (60) days, thus there must of necessity be a plain distinction between committed and voluntary patients.

The law does not provide for any charge being made for any such patients so admitted to either of the state institutions under the voluntary Sections 1972-1974, and certainly a person, a charge on some one other than himself, could not create an obligation in favor of the state by availing himself of the provisions of said last above quoted sections.

I am, therefore, of the legal opinion that any patients admitted to any of the state institutions under the provisions of 1972-3 and 4 of the General Code are not amenable to the provisions of Sections 1815 to 1815-10 inclusive, but in view of the fact that the power to receive such applicant is a discretionary one vested in the superintendent of each such institution I see no reason why any such applicant, who is able to pay, should not contribute to his maintenance while in such institutions and might be required to pay a reasonable compensation for his maintenance while in the said institution.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

SALARY—INCREASE AND DECREASE OF SALARY DURING TERM OF OFFICE—PUBLICITY AGENT OF BOARD OF AGRICULTURE FOR COLUMBUS CENTENNIAL.

Inasmuch as the publicity agent employed by the board of agriculture in connection with the Columbus Centennial does not act in an independent capacity, but merely as an employe of the board, he is not a public officer, and therefore, not within the constitutional prohibition against increase or decrease of salary during term of office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 9, 1912.

HON. A. P. SANDLES, Secretary, State Department of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR MR. SANDLES:—Answering your verbal inquiry as to whether or not the state board of Agriculture, having heretofore elected Clark C. Doughty as publicity agent of the Columbus Centennial, agreeable to Senate Bill 107, enacted into law last year, at a salary fixed at twelve hundred dollars, to be paid in nine monthly installments from the amount appropriated, and in the manner as provided, in said bill, can increase said salary for the remaining time, he having served a few months as said publicity agent.

The first question that arises is whether or not the publicity agent provided for is an officer, for, if he is, then, there could be no question but that his salary could not be increased during his term. As stated by the supreme court in state vs. Halliday, 61 O. S. 171:

> "The distinguishing characteristic of a public officer is that the incumbent is in an independent capacity and is clothed with some part of the sovereignty of the state, to be exercised in the interest of the public, as required by law."

The court had previously held, in State vs. Jennings, 57 O. S. 415, that employes, subject to the control and direction of some one else would not be officers.

In State vs. Massilon, 14 O. C. D. 249, it was held:

> "One whose duties are not prescribed by statute, but who is a servant of the board appointing him, under their absolute control and direction, they fixing his salary and having power to remove him, would not seem to be an officer."

In view of the foregoing, and since, as I take it, the publicity agent was merely employed for a definite and particular purpose, I have no hesitation in arriving at the conclusion that he is not an officer as contemplated by law.

So, being a mere employe, if he is removable at the pleasure of the board and has no contract fixing the time during which he is to be employed; and if the so-called salary, is only the entire amount to be paid for the nine months, from which might be calculated the amount he was to receive for the time he actually remained in the service of the board, I am of the opinion that the board, if it so sees fit, may either discharge him at pleasure, reduce the amount that it would pay him per month, or increase said amount.

But if, on the contrary, the relation existing is contracted (and there was no contract, either express or implied, that he was to serve nine months for $1,200.00) then, it would be my opinion that the contract fixes the rights of the parties; and so long as it exists they could not vary from its terms.

It must always be kept in mind that since the compensation of the publicity agent is payable from the amount appropriated in said act, when the amount of said appropriation is exhausted the board's power to pay said agent would cease.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION—BIDS FOR ERECTION OF POWER HOUSE—CONFORMANCE WITH ESTIMATE—ALTERATION OF BID BY REASON OF MISTAKE IN ESTIMATE—CONTRACTORS.

A contractor's bid for the erection of a power house for Ohio agricultural experiment station, cannot be accepted if its amount exceeds the estimate on file with the auditor of state.

When bids have been received by the board of control and the same have been opened, the board cannot permit an alteration of the bid on account of error unless the mistake and the requisite data for correcting the same are apparent on the face of the bid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 22, 1911

HON. CHARLES E. THORNE, Director, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I desire to acknowledge receipt of your communication of October 31st, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "On October 27th, the day set by advertisement for opening bids for the erection of an addition to the power house of this station, the following bids were received:
> "Wm. L Long, Wooster, for power house.....$3,664.00
> "Wm. L. Long, Wooster, for chimney..... 1,195.00
> "C. O. Langell, of Wooster, power house..... 3,960.00
> "C. O. Langell, of Wooster, chimney..... 1,400.00
> "W. H. Levers, Wooster, power house..... 4,173.25
> "General Concrete Construction Co., of Chicago, for reinforced chimney..... 1,050.00
> "Alphons Custodis Chimney Construction Co., of Chicago, concrete block chimney..... 1,130.00
> "Our estimate of the total cost of this building, as filed in the office of the auditor of state, is $3,132.00 for the power house and $1,130.00 for chimney, total cost of $4,262.00. Of this amount four items were not included in the bids above mentioned, namely:
> "Excavation, $210; concrete floor, $225; heating $120; and tunnel to main building, $250; total, $805.00; these items being reserved to be constructed by employes of the station. Deducting $805 from $3,132.00 the balance, $2,327.00 is below any of the bids received.
> "This difference is partly due to the fact that some items were overlooked in making up the estimate and partly to failure to take into account the commission to the contractor.

"We have therefore gone over the estimates with the lowest bidder, Wm. L. Long, and he has revised his bid as follows:

"Brick work complete	$1,189.50
"Cut stone work and cement steps	52.00
"Carpentry	1,092.00
"Roofing and slating	365.00
"Two ventilators	40.00
"Steel floor beams and bearing plates	398.00
"Plastering	364.00
"Painting	55.00
"Total	$3,555.50

"Of these items the cut stone and steps, the ventilators and $115 of the plastering were not included in our estimates.

"Mr. Long agrees to erect the chimney for the amount of our estimate $1,130, provided it is included with the contract for the remainder of the building.

"Mr Long is ready to begin this work at once and it is of very great importance that it should be done this fall.

"I therefore request your advice as to whether a contract may be entered into on the basis above described. If so, the contract will be properly executed and submitted to you for your approval."

From your statement of the facts, I deduce that the total amount of Mr. Long's bid is $4,859.00 for building both the addition to the power house and the chimney. His bid for building the addition to the power house alone is $3,664.00 and does not include the following items:

Excavation	$210.00
Concrete floor	225.00
Heating	120.00
Tunnel to the main building	250.00
Total	$805.00

The estimate of the total cost as filed in the office of the secretary of state is $3,132.00 for the power house, and $1,130.00 for the chimney. Deducting from the $3,132.00 (the estimate for building the addition to the power house) the above mentioned $805.00, which is not included in the bid, leaves a balance of $2,327.00 as the estimate for building the addition to the power house, which is less than the bid submitted by Mr. Long, and it was less than the bid as revised by Mr. Long after the opening of the said bids.

Mr. Long's bid, as revised, amounts to $3,555.50 for building the addition to the power house, which is $1,228.50 more than the estimate when figuring the estimate at $2,327.00.

Section 2323 of the General Code provides:

"No contract shall be made for labor or materials at a price in excess of the entire estimate thereof. The entire contract or contracts, including estimates of expenses for architects or otherwise, shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount authorized by law for such institution, building or improvement, addition thereto or alteration thereof."

In the case of Beaver and Butt vs. The Trustees, 19 O. S., 97, the supreme court held that:

> "Where, under the act of April 3, 1868, 'prescribing the duties of directors, trustees, etc., to whom is confided the duty of devising and superintending the erection, etc., of any state institution,' etc. (S & S 637), the trustees of the institution for the blind proceed regularly in all respects in accordance with law to advertise for sealed proposals, to be filed within a day named, for the furnishing of specified labor and materials toward the erection of a state institution for the blind, it is their duty to award the contract for the furnishing of such labor and materials to such person or persons who shall so offer the same at the lowest price and give the requisite security, provided such price is not in excess of the preliminary estimate required by said act."

You state further that some of the items were overlooked in making up the estimate, to-wit:

Cut stone work and cement steps	$52.00
Two ventilators	40.00
Plastering	115.00

and that for this reason Mr. Long has revised and changed his bid.

In this connection I desire to say that after the bids have been received by the board of control and the same have been opened, the board has no authority or right to permit an amendment or alteration of the bid on account of error or mistake therein unless the facts of such mistake and the requisite data for correcting the same are apparent on the face of the proposal.

(Beaver and Butt vs. Trustees, 19 O. S. 97.)

Under the circumstances you state, it does not appear that the facts of such mistakes and the requisite data for correcting the same appear on the face of the proposal of Mr. Long.

Therefore, I am of the opinion that a contract cannot be entered into under the circumstances you state for the reason that the bid exceeds the estimate on file with the auditor of state, and for the further reason that the board of trustees is without the right or authority to permit a change or alteration in the bid after the same has been received and opened by the board of control.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION—BOARD OF CONTROL CANNOT LEASE LANDS TO OIL COMPANY.

The board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station is not authorized to enter into a lease of the lands owned by the station to an oil company for the purpose of drilling for oil on said grounds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 17, 1912.

HON. CHARLES E. THORNE, Director Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 4, 1912, you submitted for my consideration a certain proposed lease, between the board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station and the Ohio Oil Company, whereby the latter, for a consideration expressed in said proposed lease, is to obtain the privilege of locating wells and drilling for oil and gas on the lands owned by said station at Wooster. As suggested in your letter, I would not, in any event, give my approval to this lease until the same is fully executed. The reason for asking my advice at this time is to facilitate the execution of the proposed lease if my opinion should be to the effect that such lease would be legal.

The law governing the management and operation of the Ohio agricultural experiment station consists of Sections 1156 to 1170, inclusive, of the General Code.

Section 1156 provides:

> "There shall be a state agricultural experiment station for the benefit of practical and scientific agriculture and the development of the agricultural resources of the state. It shall be known as the 'Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.'"

Section 1157 provides:

> "The state agricultural experiment station shall be under the supervision and control of a board of control which shall consist of five members, who shall be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate. One member of the board shall be appointed each year who shall hold his office for a term of five years. Not more than three members shall belong to the same political party. (R. S. Section 409-2.)"

Section 1160 provides:

> "The board of control of the Ohio agricultural experiment station shall be a body corporate with power to sue and be sued, to contract and be contracted with, to make and use a seal and to alter it at its pleasure. It may receive and hold in trust for the use and benefit of the station a grant or devise of land, or a donation or bequest of money or other personal property to be applied to the general or special use of the station as directed by the donor. (R. S. Section 409-4.)"

The foregoing seem to be the only statutory provisions necessary to be considered in arriving at the solution of your question. Under Section 1156, the state agricultural experiment station is established "for the benefit of practical and scientific agriculture, and the development of the agricultural resources of the state," and Section 1157 provides for a board of control consisting of five members to manage said station. The board of control, under Section 1160, is constituted "a body corporate, with power to sue and be sued, to contract and be contracted with," etc.

The right to bind the state by contract is reserved to the legislature, and only when such power is expressly delegated by the legislature, can the same be exercised by any state officer or board. The lands of the agricultural experiment station are held in trust for the state of Ohio by the board of control for the uses and purposes set forth in Section 1156 supra. I am of the opinion that although said board of control is vested with the power of making contracts, such contracts must have for their object the "benefit of practical and scientific agriculture and the development of the agricultural resources of the state." The leasing of this land, for drilling oil and gas wells, does not come within the objects for which the experiment station was established, and accordingly the board of control may not legally enter into said lease.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

DEPARTMENT OF EXAMINERS OF STEAM ENGINEERS—DISPOSITION OF MONEYS RECEIVED—WITNESS FEES TO INSPECTORS—EXAMINERS—STATE TREASURY.

All moneys and fees including fines, received by the department of examiners of steam engineers are to be paid in accordance with Section 1058, General Code, into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund.

An inspector of such department is entitled to witness fees as provided for witnesses in general.

The duties of this department are confined to the conduct of prosecutions and do not extend to the collection or disposition of fines.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1912.

HON. C. H. WIRMEL, Chief Examiner Department of Examiners of Steam Engineers, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I desire to acknowledge the receipt of your inquiry of the 4th inst. wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Kindly advise the undersigned as to the rights of the state in the collection of fines that are assessed against offenders of the law.
> "Has this department any claim to all or a part of such fines when a conviction is made?"

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that Section 1058 of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "The chief examiner of steam engineers shall pay all moneys and fees received by him from the district examiners into the revenue fund. On or before the tenth day of such month he shall file a report with the governor of the business of his office and the amount of money received by him and paid into the state treasury."

By virtue of the last cited section I am of the undoubted opinion that all moneys and fees, including fines received by your department, are to be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund, and I am of the further opinion that your department has no claim either to all or any part of the fines which are covered in prosecutions brought by your department.

Since the date upon which your department submitted the above inquiry you have verbally requested an opinion from this department as to whether or not an inspector in your departmnt is entitled to witness fees after having testified as a witness in prosecutions brought by your department.

In answer to the last inquiry I desire to say that Section 3014 of the General Code provides that in criminal cases.

> "Each witness attending under recognizance or subpoena, issued by order of the prosecuting attorney or defendant, before the court of common pleas, or grand jury, or other court of record, * * *, shall be allowed the following fees: For each day's attandance one dollar, and five cents for each mile, the same as in civil causes, to be taxed in only one cause, when attending in more causes than one on the same days, unless otherwise directed by special order of the court. * * *."

Section 3012 provides that each witness shall receive fifty cents for each day and such mileage for attending a trial before a justice of the peace or mayor of a municipal corporation.

Section 3011 of the General Code provides as follows:

"In all cases not specified in this chapter, each person summoned as a witness shall be allowed fifty cents for each day's attendance, and the mileage herein specified. When not summoned, each person called upon to testify in a cause shall receive twenty-five cents."

Answering your question directly I am of the opinion that an inspector is entitled to witness fees whenever he testifies as a witness, and the amount of his fees as such witness is determined by the above cited sections. That is to say, if he testifies in a trial before a justice of the peace or mayor of a municipal corporation he then receives a witness fee of fifty cents per day, together with mileage. If he testifies in a court of record as a witness attending under recognizance or subpoena he then receives the sum of one dollar as such witness, together with mileage. If such inspector testifies in a trial before a justice of the peace or mayor of a municipal corporation and is not summoned he shall receive the sum of twenty-five cents as such witness, and likewise if he testifies in a court of record as a witness not under subpoena, such inspector then receives twenty-five cents, as provided in Section 3011 cited above.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

Addendum:

"I may further add that the department of examiners of steam engineers has no concern with the collection or disposition of fines collected under prosecutions for a violation of the regulations of your department. It is their sole province to conduct the prosecution."

BOILER INSPECTORS—EXAMINATION OF MEMBER OF BOARD OF BOILER RULES—FEES FOR INSPECTION AND FOR CERTIFICATES PAYABLE TO CHIEF INSPECTOR OF BOILERS—EACH BOILER TO BE INSPECTED.

Members of the board of boiler rules, may take the examination provided for boiler inspectors in Section 1058-16 of the act relating thereto, if when so taking the examination, they come before the board as any other applicant without having taken any part in the preparation of the examination and without knowledge of the questions submitted.

Fees provided under Section 1058-25 for inspection of boilers shall not be paid to an insurance inspector by express provision of Section 1058-13 and also the fee of fifty cents for certificates of inspection shall, by Section 1058-21 be paid only to the chief inspector of boilers.

The department of boiler inspectors may not forward the certificate until the fee has been paid.

Under Section 1058-21, the fee for inspecting shall be collected only from the owner or user of the boiler direct and cannot be exacted from an insurance company which has accepted the risk.

A separate certificate under Section 1059-21 shall be issued for each and every boiler operated, with all required statements.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 23, 1912.

HON. C. H. WIRMEL, Chief Inspector of Steam Boilers, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 15, 1911, in which you inquire, first, as follows:

> "Are members of the board of boiler rules eligible to the examination for certificate of competency as provided for in Section 1058-16 (Section 11)?"

In reply thereto I would say that Section 1058-16 (Section 11 of the act providing for the inspection of steam boilers) provides for the examination of applicants for certificates of steam boiler inspectors, as follows:

> "Applications for examination as an inspector of steam boilers shall be in writing, accompanied by a fee of ten dollars, upon a blank to be furnished by the chief inspector of steam boilers, stating the school education of the applicant, a list of his employers, his period of employment and the position held with each. He shall also submit a letter from one or more of his previous employers certifying to his character and experience. Applications shall be rejected which contain any wilful falsification, or untruthful statements. Such applicant, if the board of boiler rules deem his history and experience sufficient, shall be examined by the board at its next regular meeting, by written examination dealing with the construction, installation, operation, maintenance and repair of steam boilers and their appurtenances, and the applicant shall be accepted or rejected on the merits of his application and examination. A rejected applicant shall be entitled, after the expiration of ninety days, and upon payment of an examination fee of ten dollars, to another examination.

"Upon a favorable report by the board of boiler rules, of the result of an examination, to the chief inspector of steam boilers, he shall immediately issue to the successful applicant a certificate to that effect."

After careful consideration of your question I have reached the conclusion that there is no statutory provision which renders a member or the members of the board of boiler rules ineligible to take the examination as provided for in said Section 1058-16, above quoted. However, I desire to qualify this conclusion by saying that, as a matter of law, such member, when so taking the examination, must come before the board and take the examination the same as any other applicant, without having taken any part in the preparation of the examination to be submitted, and without any knowledge as to the questions to be submitted at such examination.

Heretofore, it has been the rule when a member of the board of school examiners desires to take the examination for a teacher's certificate, before the board of which he was a member, that he could do so, providing he took no part in the preparation, and had no knowledge of the questions to be submitted at such examination.

Therefore, as a direct answer to your specific question, I am of the opinion that members of the board of boiler rules are eligible to the examination for a certificate of competency, as provided for in Section 1058-16.

Your second inquiry is as follows:

"Can the fee for certificate issued by an insurance inspector be collected by the latter, or must owner be notified by the department?"

Section 1058-17 (Section 12 of said act) is as follows:

"The chief inspector of steam boilers may, with the consent of the governor, appoint from the holders of certificates provided for in Section 11, not to exceed ten general inspectors.

"Any company authorized to insure boilers against explosion in this state may designate from holders of such certificates persons to inspect the boilers covered by such company's policies, and the chief inspector of steam boilers shall issue to such persons commissions authorizing them to act as special inspectors. Such special inspectors shall be compensated by the company designating them, and the fee provided for in Section 20 shall not be collected by such special inspectors.

"The chief inspector of steam boilers shall issue to each of such appointees, a commission to the effect that the holder thereof is authorized to inspect steam boilers for the state of Ohio.

"No person shall be authorized to act for the state, either as a general inspector or a special inspector, unless he holds a certificate of having passed the examination as herein provided, and also that he holds a commission from the chief inspector of steam boilers to represent the state in that capacity."

Section 1058-25 (Section 20 of said act) provides as follows:

"The owner or user of a boiler herein required to be inspected shall pay to the inspector upon inspection five dollars for each boiler internally and externally inspected, and two dollars for each boiler inspected while in operation. The inspectors shall give receipts for the same, and when the fee is collected by a general inspector the same shall be forwarded, with his report of the inspection, to the chief inspector of steam boilers. Provided, however, that no more than eight dollars shall be collected in any one year on each such boiler, unless additional inspections are requested by the owner or user of same, or unless the boiler has been inspected and a certificate has been refused, or unless an additional inspection is required because of the change of location of a stationary boiler."

Section 1058-21 (Section 16 of said act) provides that a fee of fifty cents shall be charged and paid to the chief inspector of steam boilers, as follows, to-wit:

"The certificate of inspection shall state the name of the owner or user, the location, size and number of each boiler, the date of inspection, and the maximum pressure at which the boiler may be operated, the name of the person that made the inspection, and of the chief inspector of steam boilers, and shall also contain such quotations from the statutes as shall be deemed necessary by the board of boiler rules, and shall be so placed as to be easily read in the engine room or boiler room of the plant where the boiler is located, except that the certificate of inspection for a portable boiler shall be kept on the premises and shall be accessible at all times.

"The owner or user of a boiler herein required to be inspected shall pay to the chief inspector of steam boilers the sum of fifty cents for each certificate issued."

Said Section 1058-17, above quoted, clearly states that the fees provided for by Section 1058-25, General Code, shall not be paid to an insurance inspector, and Section 1058-21 clearly provides that the fee of fifty cents on each certificate issued shall be paid to the chief inspector of boilers, and I am of the oipnion that the fee for certificates issued by insurance inspectors cannot be collected by such insurance inspectors, but should be paid to the chief inspector of boilers direct.

Your third question is as follows:

"Has the department the right to forward certificates before fee has been forwarded?"

Inasmuch as there is no statutory provision for insuring and forwarding certificates before the fee has been received by the chief inspector of boilers. I am of the opinion that this department has no legal right to issue certificates before the fee has been received for the same. In other words, I think it is the clear intent of the act providing for the inspection of steam boilers that the certificate of inspection shall not be issued until the fee for the same has been received by the chief inspector.

Your fourth inquiry is as follows:

"Can the department exact the fee from an insurance company accepting the risk?"

In answer thereto, Section 1058-21, General Code, provides that the fee for the inspection shall be paid by the owner or user of the boiler inspected, and, therefore, I am of the opinion that such fee cannot be exacted from an insurance company which has accepted the risk of insuring such boiler against explosion.

Such fee must be exacted by your department from the owner or owners of such boilers as are required to be inspected.

Your fifth inquiry is as follows:

> "Must a separate certificate be issued for each and every boiler, or is it permissible where two or more boilers are operated and where all conditions of construction and operation are equal, to issue a single certificate covering all the boilers?"

In reply thereto, Section 1059-21, above quoted, provides in substance that a certificate of inspection shall state the name of the owner or user, the location, size and number of each boiler, and further provides that said certificate shall be so placed as to be easily read in the engine or boiler room of the plant where the boiler is located. It is my opinion that the language employed in the last cited section means that a separate certificate of inspection shall be issued for each boiler, and that said certificate shall state the name of the owner or user, the location, number and size of the respective boiler covered by said certificate.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INSPECTION OF BOILERS—BOILERS OF CLOTHES PRESSING DEVICES GENERATING LESS THAN FIFTEEN POUNDS PRESSURE EXEMPT.

Under the terms of Section 1058 of the General Code boilers which are used for clothes pressing purposes in tailoring establishments which generate steam at a pressure of fifteen pounds or more are subject to inspection.

Boilers of this class which do not carry a pressure equal to fifteen pounds and which are equipped with the safety devices ordered by the board of boiler rules are by the same statute exempt from inspection.. No fee may therefore be charged for the initial inspection of such.

HON. C. H. WIRMEL, Chairman, Ohio Board of Boiler Rules, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 13th, wherein you state:

> "The undersigned has been directed by the state board of boiler rules to ascertain your opinion in reference to the following:
> "The board has been asked to exempt from the provisions of the law small steam tanks which are used for clothes pressing purposes in tailoring establishments, and are usually operated in conspicuous places for the observation of the general public. While in operation such boilers contain about four-fifths of a cubic foot of water and are heated by a gas or oil burner and generate steam at a pressure of 60 pounds per square inch.
> "Can these boilers be exempted from the law as heating boilers if provided with the safety appliances prescribed by the board of boiler rules?"
> "Can inspectors charge a fee on exempted heating boilers for the initial examination and approval of safety devices prescribed by the board of boiler rules?"
> "An early response to the above query will be gratefully appreciated."

In answer to your first question I direct your attention to Section 2 of the Boiler inspection law, Section 1058-7, General Code, which is as follows:

> "On and after January 1, 1912, all steam boilers and their appurtenances, except boilers of railroad locomotives, portable boilers used in pumping, heating, steaming and drilling, in the open field, for water gas, and oil, and portable boilers used for agricultural purposes, and in construction of and repairs to public roads, railroad and bridges, boilers on automobiles, boilers of steam fire engines brought into the state for temporary use in times of emergency for the purpose of checking conflagrations, boilers carrying pressures of less than fifteen pounds per square inch, which are equipped with safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules, and boilers under the jurisdiction of the United States, shall be thoroughly inspected, internally and externally, and under operating conditions at intervals of not more than one year, and shall not be operated at pressures in excess of the safe working pressure stated in the certificate of inspection hereinafter mentioned. And shall be equipped with such appliances to insure safety of operation as shall be prescribed by the board of boiler rules."

You will observe that said section provides for the inspection of all steam boilers and their appurtenances on and after January 1, 1912, excepting certain classes of boilers therein enumerated; and unless it clearly appears that a particular kind of boiler comes within the exceptions of the statute it is not exempt from inspection. It is evident from a reading of the statute that boilers used in clothes pressing and tailoring establishments are not exempted by name, and the fact that they generate steam at a pressure of sixty pounds per square inch takes them out of the other excepted class, to-wit: "boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen pounds per square inch, which are equipped with safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules." It is, therefore my opinion that such boilers, regardless of whether or not they are equipped with safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules, are subject to the law.

In answer to your second question, permit me to point out that by the express provisions of the section above quoted "all boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen pounds per square inch, which are equipped with safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules" are exempt from inspection. It seems to me that an inspection, to come within the purview of this law, is more than a mere determination of the steam pressure and the existence of safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules. If, therefore, a boiler carries a pressure of less than fifteen pounds per square inch, and is equipped with safety devices, etc., it is, by the positive provisions of Section 1058-1, exempt from inspection; and, accordingly, it is my opinion that no fee can legally be charged for the initial examination and approval of safety devices prescribed by your board.

All boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen pounds per square inch should be inspected until they are equipped with the safety devices prescribed by your board, for which inspection the regular fee should be charged, as provided elsewhere in the law.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(Chief Inspector of Mines)

MINING SHAFTS—NECESSITY FOR HOISTING EMPLOYES—"VERTICAL DISTANCE"—EFFECTS OF SLOPE AT TOP AND BOTTOM OF SHAFT.

Section 929 of the General Code provides that in a mine where a perpendicular shaft is of a depth of one hundred feet, the employes shall be hoisted in and out of the mine.

When a mining company makes a change in a shaft 114 feet deep, by slopes at the first six feet of the top and the last fourteen feet of the bottom, the "vertical distance" within the meaning of the Code is still beyond one hundred feet and the statute still applies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 29, 1912.

HON. GEORGE HARRISON, Chief Inspector of Mines, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 15th received. You state:

> "The enclosed blue print represents what is known as the manway or travelingway for the employes to descend to, and descend from their work in the Imperial mine, owned by the O'Gara Coal Co., of Chicago, Ill., and located at Derwent, Guernsey county, Ohio. This opening was originally 114 feet deep from the surface to the coal, the main hoisting shaft being about the same depth.
> "The blue print also represents recent changes made at the entrance and the bottom of this opening, used for the purpose of ingress and egress by the employes of the mine. Previous to June 11, 1910, there was no specific law that regulated the depth or distance which the employes of a mine were required to travel down or up a stairway or ladder provided for that purpose in any shaft mine.
> "Section 929 of the present Code makes the provision that in a perpendicular shaft of 100 feet, or over, in depth, that the owner, lessee or agent is required to lower into, and hoist out of a mine the employes. When the vertical shaft is less than 100 feet in depth, and a stairway approved by the district inspector of mines is not provided, the owner lessee or agent shall be required to lower or hoist persons as above prescribed; but when such stairway is provided and approved, the hoisting of persons shall not be required.
> "As also shown by the blue print, the change made has reduced the perpendicular distance to less than 100 feet, and increased the distance of travel at the top of the shaft 30 feet, with a down grade of 13-13 per cent. and also increased the distance of travel at the bottom 60 feet, with a down grade of 15 per cent. in order to reach the level of the coal.
> "Being unable to decide as to the legality of this change, and the management and miners at this mine insisting on a legal opinion, we respectfully desire that you will advise us at your earliest opportunity, giving us a clearer definition of Section 929, covering the question at issue and enabling us to apply the law judiciously and impartially."

and you inquire whether, under Section 929 of the General Code, the O'Gary Coal Company can be compelled to lower their employes into the mine and hoist them out, as provided in said section.

From your statement of facts I gather that the shaft which was sunk by the O'Gara Coal Company, and which was used by the men as a means of ingress and egress, was originally 114 feet deep; that certain changes were made at the entrance to the shaft, making a 13-13 per cent. slope, and at the bottom of the shaft by shooting down at the top and filling the bottom with rock and constructing a new travelway, making a slope of 15 per cent.; that by reason of these changes the "vertical distance" from the "new bottom" to the foot of the slope at the top of the shaft is now 99 feet; and you inquire as to the duty of the O'Gara Coal Company in regard to the lowering and hoisting of their men.

It is contended on the part of the O'Gara Coal Company that Section 929 of the General Code does not apply to the situation presented at their mine for the reason that the vertical part of the travel into and from their mine is less than 100 feet; to be exact 99 feet and 6 inches. It is claimed that the remaining fourteen feet of the vertical distance is eliminated by slopes of such reasonable grade that the burden of descending and ascending into and from this mine is no greater than if the shaft was originally less than 100 feet deep.

Prior to the enactment of Section 929 General Code there was no law compelling mine owners to lower and hoist men into and from shafts. There are shafts in Ohio ranging from sixty to four hundred feet, and the distance in the deeper shafts is so great as to be a hardship on the men if they are compelled to walk into these mines and up therefrom by means of steps, hence the change in the statutes. The mining commission composed of the chief inspector of mines and a representative of employers and employes agreed that in all mines where the only means of ingress and egress was by vertical shafts, if the depth exceeded 100 feet, the mine owner should be compelled to designate one or more persons whose duty it should be to attend to the lowering and hoisting of the men into and out of such mines as provided by Section 929 General Code.

I cannot agree with the contention of the O'Gara Coal Company that Section 929 of the General Code does not apply to the situation presented at the O'Gara mines. The "vertical distance" from the surface to the coal is still beyond 100 feet. If the men travel through this vertical shaft 100 feet, if going down, they are still within eight feet of the bottom, and if going up they are six feet from the top.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that Section 929 General Code does apply, and that the means employed by this company to eliminate the excess in the "vertical distance" beyond 100 feet by constructing slopes is an evasion of the statutes; that the reasonableness of the grade adds no argument in its favor. It should hold that companies could construct slopes of 13-13 per cent. and 15 per cent. at the top and bottom of vertical shafts as was done in the case before me, other companies in order to evade lowering and hoisting men would be authorized to construct slopes of 40 and 50 per cent. grade and compel men to travel slopes of longer distances than those constructed by the O'Gara Coal Company and thereby defeat the object of Section 929 General Code.

I therefore, hold, as a matter of law, that the O'Gara Coal Company is compelled to designate one or more persons whose duty it shall be to attend to the lowering and hoisting of persons into and out of the mine as provided by said Section 929 General Code.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

Addendum:

In my judgment, all the facts contained in your communication, together with the blue print, discloses that beyond question the shaft, within contemplation of law, is a vertical shaft. The change made at the top no more takes away from this shaft the true characteristics of a vertical shaft on the whole than the facts bring the case out of the one hundred foot requirement of Section 929.

MINES—DOUBLE PASSAGE WAYS—NON-SUFFICIENCY OF SINGLE PASSAGE SEPARATED BY A CONCRETE WALL.

The statutes provide for double entries from the surface to the working part of a mine separated by natural strata and a mining company does not comply with such requirement by building a single passage way and separating the same by means of a concrete wall.

Such artificial construction is, in contemplation of the statute, but a single passage way. The company may not proceed to construct the legal double passage way beyond the limits of said concrete wall until a new passage way has been constructed leading from the surface.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1912.

HON. GEORGE HARRISON, Chief Inspector of Mines, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You state in your letter of February 6, 1912 that:

> "Section 931 of the mining code provides, that: 'The owner, lessee or agent of a mine shall provide and maintain, in safe condition for the purpose provided, two separate and distinct traveling ways from the interior workings of the mine, each of which shall be available to not less than one opening to the surface."
> "We have in Ohio an operation, to-wit, the Golden Red Mine, situated in Noble county, owned by the Guernsey Coal & Mining Company, of Newark, Ohio, where the management of the mine, who, after driving the main entries several hundred feet, double entry, came in contact with faulty coal of irregular thickness and of somewhat inferior quality, and without consulting this department, or notifying us, as required by Section 939, ceased to drive one of these entries, widening out the other one and continuing it as a single entry, using ordinary canvas cloth for dividing the space lengthwise, and as a means of conducting the air, contrary to the provisions of Section 926, which states that breakthroughs between entries shall not exceed sixty feet apart, they drove this single entry in this way over six hundred feet, without the writer ever having been notified of the fact.
> "They commenced building a concrete partition, dividing the entry into two spaces lengthwise and designating it, 'two separate and distinct traveling ways, as required by Section 931.' They have started a new development at the inner end of the single entry, with the artificial partition, and from that point have driven double entries, and working quite a number of miners and employes.
> "We desire that you advise this department, at your earliest opportunity:
> "First. Does this artificial partition in the single entry constitute two separate and distinct traveling ways, as provided for in Section 931, with breakthroughs in the natural strata between two places, as required by Section 926?

"Second. If this proceeding is contrary to the provisions of Section 931, are they justified in making this new development beyond the single entry without first providing a second and lawful traveling way?

"Enclosed find copy of the investigation of this matter by three of our district inspectors: Robert S. Wheatly, inspector 12th district, L. D. Devore, inspector 10th district and John L. McDonald, inspector 3rd district, who reported on this matter September 26, 1911, but thinking this company would provide a means of escapement we have not yet taken any definite action."

Accompanying your letter of inquiry is a copy of a report on the mine referred to in your letter made by inspectors McDonald, Wheatly and Devore, a copy of which report is as follows:

"Guernsey Coal & Mining Co., Newark, Ohio.

"Copy of report of Golden Rod Mine, made by inspectors McDonald, Wheatley and Devore, September 26, 1911.

"MR. GEO. HARRISON, Chief Inspector of Mines, Columbus, Ohio.

"Pursuant to your suggestion, we have today, in company with inspector Ellwood, of the 5th district, examined the concrete walls used to divide the single entry in the Golden Rod Mine, in Noble county, into two compartments, and in connection therewith wish to report as follows:

"Beginning at a point approximately 200 feet east of the bottom of the shaft the entry was driven for a distance of approximately 1,014 feet in a general easterly direction. Six hundred and forty-three feet of this entry was driven single and since being driven it has been separated lengthwise into two compartments by a concrete wall. This wall is reported by the mine management to be 21 inches thick at the bottom and from 9 to 10 inches thick at the top, its height varying with the height of the entry. The south compartment was found to be as small as 4 feet 10 inches wide and 5 feet high in one place, while on the north or haulage roadside, one measurement shows a height of entry 4 feet 10 inches and a width of 7 feet. This entry was driven in violation of Section 926 of the General Code in that breakthroughs were not made at the prescribed distances.

"This wall is a poor and unsatisfactory substitute for natural strata and is the only means, which, under present conditions, provides two traveling ways from the interior of the mine to the surface. In our opinion such traveling ways are inadequate as a safe and ready means of escape in a probable emergency. The wall could be readily destroyed resulting in the entombment of those employed in the mine.

"In view of this condition and in order that the safety of those employed in the mine may be properly safeguarded, we would suggest that an order be given the Guernsey Coal & Mining Co., to provide an additional traveling way from the interior of the mine to the surface.

"Respectfully yours,

"ROBERT WHEATLEY, Inspector 12th District,

"L. D. DEVORE, Inspector 10th District,

"JOHN L. MCDONALD, Inspector 3rd District."

You inquire first:

"Does this artificial partition in the single entry constitute two separate and distinct traveling ways, as provided for in Section 931, with breakthroughs in the natural strata between two places, as required by Section 926?"

Section 931 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

"The owner, lessee or agent of a mine shall provide and maintain, in safe condition for the purpose provided, two separate and distinct traveling ways from the interior workings of the mine, each of which shall be available to not less than one opening to the surface. One of such traveling ways may be designated by such owner, lessee or agent as the principal traveling way. One of such traveling ways may be designated as the escapement way. The provision of this section shall not prohibit such owner, lessee or agent from designating more than one principal traveling way, or more than one escapement way, so long as the provisions thereof are complied with."

Section 926 of the General Code provides in part as follows:

"* * * From a point where the seam is reached in the opening of a mine, to a point not exceeding a distance of four hundred feet therefrom, breakthroughs shall be made between main entries, where there are no rooms worked, not more than 100 feet apart, provided such entries are not advanced beyond the point where the breakthrough will be made until the breakthrough is complete. Breakthroughs between entries, except as hereinbefore provided, shall be made not exceeding sixty feet apart. * * *"

It appears from the statement of facts contained in your letter and from the report made by your inspectors that the coal company mentioned drove its main entries several hundred feet, double entry system, came in contact with faulty coal of irregular thickness and inferior quality, and without consulting your department ceased to drive one of these entries, widening out the other one to about twelve feet and drove it as a single entry through this fault using ordinary canvas cloth for dividing the space lengthwise as a means of conducting the air during the driving of the entry, and after it was driven six hundred feet built a concrete partition twenty-one inches thick at the bottom and nine or ten inches thick at the top, the height varying with the height of the entry. The coal company claim that they have by erecting this concrete wall in a single entry complied with Section 931 of the General Code as to providing two separate and distinct traveling ways for their employes. It further appears from your statement of facts that after they had driven through this fault and constructed the cement partition that they are continuing the doubly entry system.

Answering your first inquiry, it is my opinion, in contemplation of law, that there is from the point where the double entry ceases and where they begin at the end of the six hundred feet, which is divided into two ways by an artificial wall, but only one traveling way. The law contemplates two traveling ways separated by natural pillars and walls. Section 926, quoted above, provides that breakthroughs shall be made every sixty feet in the entry not artificial openings in an artificial wall but breakthroughs made through coal slate, etc.

It was the intention of the legislature in the enactment of the mining code to safeguard the lives of the men employed in the mines; that adequate means of escape be provided in cases of emergency. All laws passed to protect the lives of men employed in mines should be strictly construed and rigidly enforced. The dangers incident to mining coal are great enough without adding thereto by lax enforcement of the mining laws on the part of those charged with the enforcement thereof, and by a too liberal construction of the laws on the part of those whose duty it is to construe the laws in order that they may be enforced as construed.

The law contemplates two separate and distinct traveling ways for the ingress and egress of men in mines it contemplates two traveling ways separated by natural walls instead of artificial walls; walls that cannot be destroyed by the explosion of powder or other accidents common in mines, walls that in case of emergency requiring the escape of men, when one of the traveling ways is obstructed will leave the other free for the safe conduct of the men to the outside. From the report of your inspectors the cement wall constructed in this mine, even if it were permissible, is insufficient and unlawful. Your inspectors say:

> "This wall is a poor and unsatisfactory substitute for natural strata and is the only means, which under present conditions provides two traveling ways from the interior of the mine to the surface. In our opinion, such traveling ways are inadequate as a safe and ready means of escape in a probable emergency. The wall could be readily destroyed resulting in the entombment of those employed in the mine."

The artificial means adopted by this company in order to technically comply with Section 931 General Code is a justification for my position that laws enacted for the protection of the lives of men employed in mines should be strictly construed and rigidly enforced. In case of a probable emergency the wall erected by this company could be readily destroyed resulting in the entombment of those employed in the mine.

I, therefore, advise you that the artificial partition in the single entry in this mine erected to provide two separate and distinct traveling ways does not comply with Section 931 of the General Code. That in contemplation of law there is but one traveling way in that part of the entry way where the artificial wall is located.

Your second inquiry is as follows:

> "If this proceeding is contrary to the provisions of Section 931, are they justified in making this new development beyond the single entry without first providing a second and lawful traveling way?"

The answer to your first inquiry practically answers the second. Section 931 of the General Code requires two separate and distinct traveling ways from the interior workings of the mine, each of which shall be available to not less than one opening to the surface. If the only means of ingress and egress to that part of the mine beyond this single entry divided by the cement wall is through the single entry, then I hold, as a matter of law, that this company is not justified in making new developments beyond the single entry without first providing a second safe and lawful traveling way as provided by Section 931 of the General Code.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

Addendum:

In my judgment your department is not called upon to pass upon the sufficiency of artificial walls between entries however substantial when the statute contemplates natural support and natural division of entries.

OIL AND GAS WELLS—NOTICE TO CHIEF INSPECTOR OF MINES WHEN DRILLED IN COAL PRODUCING COUNTIES.

Section 973, General Code, requires persons drilling any well for oil of gas or elevator well, or test well, only in counties wherein any quantity of minable coal is produced, to give notice in writing of such drilling to the chief inspector of mines.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1912.

HON. GEORGE HARRISON, Chief Inspector of Mines, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 8th received. You ask my construction of the following portion of Section 973 General Code:

> "Any person, firm or corporation causing to be drilled any well for oil or gas or elevator well or any test well within the limits of any coal producing county of this state, must give notice, in writing, of such fact to the chief inspector of mines, stating the location of the land upon which such well is to be drilled."

You inquire further whether the smallness of the production of the coal in any county would justify annulling the law.

Section 973 prior to the last amendment provided as follows:

> "Any person, firm or corporation intending to drill an oil or gas well where same is likely to penetrate a workable seam of coal, shall give notice in writing, of such intention to the chief inspector of mines, stating the location of the land upon which such well is to be drilled, and procure from him before proceeding to drill, permission in writing.
> "Written notice from the owner, lessee or agent of the seam of coal, setting up the facts that the oil or gas well to be drilled, will, or that the well already drilled has penetrated a workable seam of coal, shall be sufficient notice to the person, firm or corporation intending to drill or having drilled such well, that such well will or has penetrated a workable seam."

Section 973 as amended 102 O. L. now provides:

> "Any person, firm or corporation causing to be drilled any well for oil or gas or elevator well or any test well within the limits of any coal producing county of this state, must give notice, in writing, of such fact to the chief inspector of mines, stating the location of the land upon which such well is to be drilled."

The law prior to the last amendment required notice in writing only when an oil or gas well was liable to penetrate a workable seam of coal. This law gave rise to many disputes and evasions of the law. Drillers were either purposely silent as to their penetrating a seam of coal or reported "no coal." This was so even in counties and in sections where coal was located; the result was that the law soon became a dead letter.

In 1911 the law was changed so as to make it the duty of all persons, firms or corporations drilling for oil or gas in any coal producing county, to give notice in writing to the chief inspector of mines stating the location of land upon which the well was to be drilled. The law as it now reads is plain. There is no room for doubt. It makes no discrimination as to the amount of coal produced necessary to bring oil and gas drillers under its provisions.

If a county produces any quantity of minable coal, all persons, firms or corporations drilling for oil or gas, elevator well or any test well, must give notice in writing of such fact to the chief inspector of mines, stating the location of the land upon which such well is to be drilled.

Whether the land to be drilled for oil or gas produces coal or whether it does not, if the land is located in a coal producing county, the statute applies.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OIL INSPECTOR—POWER TO INSPECT AND LABEL, "DANGEROUS"—SUBSTANCES NOT GASOLINE NOR PETROLEUM AND USED FOR MECHANICAL PURPOSES.

Applying to the rule of "euisdum genaris" to Section 865 General Code, the state inspector of oils or his deputies, by authority thereof, may lawfully stamp or stencil as "dangerous," a package containing any substance, which is "similar to gasoline" or petroleum, by reason of its being a volatile fluid by-product of petroleum or mineral oil, having a degree of explosiveness ascertained by the use of the flash test for illuminating oil.

By applying the rule of enumeration and exclusion, the fact that the omission of the words, "for illuminating purposes" in Sections 865 and 866 General Code which words are included in all other relative statutes, justifies the conclusion that, the above powers of inspection and labeling are extended to substances fulfilling the above definition whether they be intended to be used for illuminating purposes or not.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1912.

HON. W. L. FINLEY, State Inspector of Oils, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 15th requesting my opinion upon the following questions presented by a letter from Mr. Rober C. Paw, vice president of the Sun Oil Company, to you:

> "May the state inspector of oils or his deputies lawfully stamp or stencil as "dangerous" a package containing a substance which is neither gasoline nor petroleum-ether and which is not used for illuminating purposes but solely for mechanical purposes?
> "May the department of oil inspection lawfully inspect such substance and collect fees therefor?"

Section 865 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Gasoline, petroleum-ether or similar or like substances, under whatever name called, whether manufactured within this state or not, having a lower flash test than provided in this chapter for illuminating oils, shall be inspected by the state inspector of oils or his deputies. Upon inspection, the state inspector or a deputy shall affix by stamp or stencil to the package containing such substance a printed inscription containing its commerical name, the word 'dangerous,' date of inspection and the name and official designation of the officer making the inspection. For such inspection, the state inspector or his deputy shall receive the same fees as for the inspection of oil, which shall be paid into the state treasury as herein provided for other fees. Such fees shall be a lien on the gasoline, petroleum-ether or similar substance so inspected. For such inspections, deputy inspectors shall receive the same fees and shall make monthly report of such inspections, as provided herein for the inspection of oils. Whoever sells or offers for sale any gasoline, petroleum-ether or similar or like substance not stamped as provided in this chapter shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding twenty days, or both."

This section was a part of Section 13 of the act of May 9, 1908, 99 O. L. 518. The remainder of said Section 13 is incorporated in Section 866 General Code which is as follows:

> "So far as practicable, the provisions of this chapter relating to the inspection of oil shipped to distributing stations in tank cars, shall govern similar shipments of gasoline, petroleum-ether or similar or like substances."

In the original section the latter portion of the section was as follows:

> "The provisions of this chapter relating to the inspection of oil intended to be sold or offered for sale for illuminating purposes in this state which is shipped to distributing stations in tank cars shall be construed by the inspector of oils as governing, so far as practical, similar shipments of gasoline, petroleum-ether or similar or like substances."

Whatever may be the meaning of these two sections and of the original Section 13 it is clear that all the remainder of the chapter relates solely to illuminants. Without quoting, I refer to Sections 854, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 862, 863 and 864 without mentioning other sections, as clearly disclosing that the purposes of all tests and inspections made by the state inspector of oils other than those provided for in Section 865 relate to the safety and utility of derivatives and by-products of mineral and petroleum oils for illuminating purposes.

Section 861, which I have omitted from the catalogue of sections above set forth is of peculiar interest. It provides as follows:

> "If upon inspection oil in tank cars is rejected, the certificate, in addition to the word 'rejected,' shall set forth the car initials and number, the date of inspection and the official signature of the officer making such inspection, and shall be delivered to the owner of the oil or his agent. Whoever transfers the contents of such car to a storage or receiving tank from which illuminating oil is distributed to consumers or dealers within this state shall be fined not less than one thousand dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding twenty days or both."

This is the section referred to in Section 866. Coming now to the precise questions raised by Mr. Paw's letter, I beg to state that upon a reading of Section 865 it appears reasonably clear to me that both of these questions must necessarily be answered in the same way. Whatever substances the state inspector of oils has the power to inspect he has the power to brand as "dangerous" under this section. Both powers and duties—those of inspection and those of stamping, relate to the same things, viz., "gasoline, petroleum-ether or similar or like substances * * * having a lower flash test than provided in this chapter for illuminating oils."

I observe that the claim is made by Mr. Paw that the substance concerning which he particularly inquires, which is already described in the question as I have stated it as not being gasoline or petroleum-ether, is not similar to or like either one of these substances. This is a question of fact, of course. I have no means of knowing what substances are like gasoline or petroleum-ether. I beg to advise you, however, that in my opinion, the respect in which its likeness is to be determined is explosiveness. I do not think it necessary that a substance in gasoline or petroleum-ether should be chemically or mechanically similar to or like either one of these substances in any respect other than this one.

The general assembly in enacting this law did not use the words "similar" or "like" in any scientific or technical sense and must be regarded as having in mind as the basis of the comparison suggested by them, the fundamental idea which runs through the whole section.

It is, therefore, my opinion that a substance in order to be "similar to" or "like" gasoline or petroleum-ether must at most have the attributes of fluidity, volatility and explosiveness which characterize both of these substances, and all of which are elements which enter into the other considerations of Section 865. That is to say, it is not every fluid that is "similar to" or "like" gasoline or petroleum-ether or both of them nor every volatile substance, nor every explosive substance, but a substance which is at once fluid, volatile and explosive is like gasoline and petroleum-ether and similar thereto.

I have just advised you as a matter of law as to the scope of the words "similar to" and "like" as used in Section 865. The application of the principle which I have tried to define to a specific case is, of course, a question of fact. If the substance which Mr. Paw refers to is not volatile like gasoline and petroleum-ether and is not similarly explosive, which, of course, would be ascertained by the use of the flash test referred to in the section, then, of course, there is no question that the inspector of oils or his deputy may not lawfully inspect or label as "dangerous" any packages containing such substance.

If, however, the substance is fluid, volatile and possessed of the degree of explosiveness described in Section 865, then the further question. which I take it is the one in Mr. Paw's mind and in yours, is raised, viz.: Is Section 865 intended to apply to substances not used or intended to be used for illuminating purposes? I have already pointed out that the entire chapter exclusive of Sections 865 and 866 relates to illuminating fluids. In practically every section of the act excepting these now under consideration the words "for illuminating purposes" occur and limit the meaning of general language otherwise of broader significance. It is also true that the chapter is otherwise limited to the inspection, handling and sale of mineral oils and by-products of petroleum. This, however, is equally true of Section 865 and this fact itself furnishes another possible element for your guidance in determining what constitutes a substance "similar to" or "like" gasoline or petroleum. That is to say, a substance is not "similar to" or "like" gasoline or petroleum-ether unless it is a by-product of petroleum, I should have stated this qualification in formulating the definition above set forth, and for the sake of clearness I repeat that definition as further limited by this qualification:

A substance is "similar to" or "like" gasoline or petroleum-ether, within the meaning of Section 865 General Code which is a volatile fluid by-product of petroleum of mineral oil having a degree of explosiveness ascertained by the use of the flash test for illuminating oil.

Returning again to a discussion of the question as to whether or not Section 865 is limited in its application to illuminants, I beg to state that in my opinion it is not so limited. The related statutes here afford an exceptionally apt illustration of the application of the rule of statutory construction known as that of enumeration and exclusion. All of the sections of the chapter having been enacted at the same time and the qualifying phrase "for illuminating purposes" being found in all of the other sections of the act the omission of that phrase from Sections 865 and 866 is of itself clear evidence that the legislature did not intend the application of this section to be limited to illuminating substances. It is a matter of common knowledge that the uses of gasoline are by no means limited to illuminating purposes for indeed this substance is ever used for such purpose. So also with petroleum-ether. It seems to me that every consideration of fact and every rule of statutory construction point to the conclusion that Section 865 is intended to apply to all substances similar to or like gasoline and petroleum-ether as above defined whether they are intended to be used for illuminating purposes or not.

For all of the above reasons then I am of the opinion that a substance which is within the foregoing definition like or similar to gasoline or petroleum-ether must be inspected by the inspector of oils or his deputy, and upon inspection the label "dangerous" must be affixed to each package thereof, if found to be of lower flash test than prescribed by statute.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING CODE—CHANGE OF BUILDING FROM STOREROOM TO THEATER BUILDING BY TENANT AGAINST WILL OF LANDLORD,

A building was leased for a term of years for theater purposes and at the expiration of the lease, converted by the tenant, contrary to the will of the landlord, into a place for business purposes. A new lease was granted by landlord at the expiration of the first lease, with the intention that the building should be continued to be used as a theater, and said building was reconverted by the new tenants into a theater.

Held:

That the temporary change in construction did not change the character of the building as a theater for the purposes of the building code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 3, 1912.

HON. THOMAS P. KEARNS, Chief Inspector Workshops and Factories, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of April 20th wherein you state:

"A short time ago plans and specifications were submitted to this department for a picture show to be installed in a room owned by D. and W. H., at ----------, Ohio, which we refused to approve for the reason that the room contemplated being used did not meet the requirements of the new state building code.

"Section 2 of the administrative section of the new building code provides that all buildings erected, built or equipped for theatrical purposes or to which any alterations or repairs are made, except for maintenance without affecting the construction, sanitation, safety or other vital features must comply with the requirements and provisions relating thereto contained in the new state building code.

"Therefore the department felt that since this room had been abandoned for picture show purposes and converted into a business room that it was no longer a theater, and if the same was to be equipped for theater purposes it would have to comply with all the requirements of the state building code.

"The owners contend, however, that since the building has been used for seven years for picture show purposes and is again under lease for a term of five years to be used for such purposes, that the provisions of the new code do not apply to this building and set forth their reasons in the following statement of facts.

"That the building had been leased for seven years for the purpose of operating a moving picture show which had been operated there until the last week in March, 1912, when the lease expired. On January 8, 1912, the property was again leased to D. for the continuation of and the operation of a moving picture show business. That one of the terms or provisions of the lease of the former occupant was that the building at the expiration of the lease should be put back into its original condition which the lessee did notwithstanding that he was requested not to do so by the owners of the building as it was desired to use it again for picture show business. This, they allege, was done for the purpose of stifling competition, obtaining a monopoly of the business and to prevent the new lessee from operating a picture show therein, and for these reasons believe that they should not be made to comply with the requirements of the new building code.

"If this building had been left in the same condition it was in when being used as a picture show, of coure there could have been no objection to the parties continuing its use for that purpose, but since it has been changed back to a business room as per the terms of the lease the question arises—Could this room again be equipped and used for picture show purposes without complying with all of the provisions of the new building code, or shall it be regarded as a theater notwithstanding that it has been converted into a business room and required to comply only with such provisions of the law as would be applicable to other picture shows now in operation?

"I would be pleased to have you render an opinion in this matter and the department will be governed accordingly."

The question presented is not entirely free from difficulty, yet, in the light of the facts submitted and agreed upon, I have no hesitancy in readily reaching a conclusion. You know, of course, that I have no desire to infringe upon your domain. When it comes to the facts involved in that particular case, your department has exclusive jurisdiction, I can only give you the law as I see it and such advise in the matter as you may request.

From your inquiry I gather that for seven years the room in question has been equipped and used exclusively as a theater, and that prior to the expiration of the lease about April 1, 1912, in fact, on the 8th day of January, last, the landlord had again leased the premises for five years longer to another party for theater purposes to commence at the termination of the then lessee's term. It further appears that the landlord waived any right to have the room restored to the condition in which it was when first rented, which, under the usual provisions of a lease, he might have required. And, further, it appears that the first lessee, for some reason of his own and against the expressed request of the owner, restored the room by replacing the front, leveling the floors, and, so as to make it in form again a store room as when he first took possession of it.

You desire to know, did such restoration change the room from its character as a theater to a store room so as to bring the restored room under the regulations of the new state building code? It is conceded that if the room remained a theater it would not be affected by the new building code as the provisions thereof had no retrospective application.

The law is well settled that a landlord may waive the performance of the covenants entered into by his lessee and that any positive act of prevention by the covenantee will relieve the covenantor from performance. (Taylor's Landlord and Tenant, Section 269).

The act of the landlord in seeking to purchase the chattels of the tenant and his demand that the building be left in the same condition as it was constituted sufficient notice to the tenant that the said landlord did not want the physicial restoration of the premises to the condition in which they were before the room was changed into a theater. The further fact that the landlord three months before the expiration of the said lease leased the premises for the same business, to-wit, a moving picture show, manifests an intention of continuing the character of the room. Nor can I conclude that the mere caprice or wilful act of the tenant in changing the room back to its first and former physical conditions would militate against the express desire and intention of the landlord.

It is my opinion, therefore, under the conceded facts that the room was continuously a theater; that the act of the tenant was ineffective to change its character in the manner attempted; that being a theater room continuously from and after the time of the going into effect of the state building code it was without its provision and that the state building code commission should so regard and treat said room.

Of course you understand that the theater would be subject to and have to comply with such regulations as are applicable to similar picture shows and theaters under the existing law.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SCHOOLING CERTIFICATES FOR CHILDREN BETWEEN FOURTEEN AND SIXTEEN, NOT REQUIRED DURING SCHOOL VACATION PERIODS.

The history of the statute and its process of codification make clear that the words "as provided by law" in Section 12994, General Code, providing a penalty for employing children between fourteen and sixteen years of age without schooling certificate "provided by law," refer to Section 7765 and Section 7766, General Code, which require the certificate only for employment during the school term.

Such a construction harmonizes the statutes and is in keeping with the undoubted legislative intent to prevent child labor only in so far as it interferes with schooling.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 14, 1912.

HON. T. P. KEARNS, Chief Inspector of Workshops and Factories, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of June 13, 1912, is received in which you inquire as follows:

> "I am in receipt of a number of letters relative to the issuing of schooling certificates for minors between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years during the vacation periods, or when school is not in session.
> "The child labor laws, Section 12994, and Section 7765 of the compulsory educational laws conflict in this respect.
> "Section 7765 of the compulsory educational laws provides that children shall not be employed during the school term without the proper age and schooling certificate, while Section 12994 of the child labor laws does not make any exception as to the time of employment, and provides that they shall procure an age and schooling certificate provided by law before they can be given employment.
> "I would be pleased to have you render an opinion as to whether or not this department can compel the filing of schooling certificates with the employer during the vacation months, or the time that the schools are not in session."

Section 7765, General Code, provides:

> "No child under sixteen years of age shall be employed or be in the employment of any person, company or corporation during the school term and while the public schools are in session, unless such child presents to such person, company or corporation an age and schooling certificate herein provided for as a condition of employment, who shall keep the same on file for inspection by the truant officer or officers of the department of workshops and factories."

The schooling certificate to be furnished is set forth in Section 7766, General Code, which provides in part:

"An age and schooling certificate shall be approved only by the superintendent of schools, or by a person authorized by him, in city or other districts having such superintendent, or by the clerk of the board of education in village, special and township districts not having such a superintendent, upon satisfactory proof that such child is over fourteen years of age, and that such child has been examined and passed a satisfactory fifth grade test in the studies enumerated in Section seventy-seven hundred and sixty-two; provided, that residents of other states who work in Ohio must qualify as aforesaid with the proper school authority in the school district in which the establishment is located, as a condition of employment or service, and that the employment contemplated by the child is not prohibited by any law regulating the employment of children under sixteen years of age. Every such age and schooling certificate must be signed in the presence of the officer issuing the same, by the child in whose name it is issued."

Section 12994, General Code, provides:

"Whoever, having charge or management of such establishment as provided in the next preceding section, employs or permits a child between fourteen and sixteen years of age to work in or in connection with such establishment, or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages, without first procuring from the proper authority the age and schooling certificate provided by law, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars."

It will be observed that Section 7765, General Code, prohibits the employment of a child under the age of sixteen, during the school term and while the public schools are in session, unless such child presents an age and schooling certificate.

Section 12994, General Code, does not mention the school term or session, but specifies that a child between the ages of fourteen and sixteen must procure the age and schooling certificate "provided by law." Your question is whether this age and schooling certificate must be procured in order that a child between the ages of fourteen and sixteen, can be employed during the vacation period, or when the schools are not in session.

Sections 7765 and 7766, General Code, were originally parts of Section 4022-2, Revised Statutes. Said Section 4022-2 also contained the penalty for a violation of the provisions of said section. The penalty is now found in Section 12975, General Code, and not in Section 7765, et seq., of the General Code. Said Section 12975, General Code, provides:

"Whoever employs a minor under sixteen years of age before exacting from such minor the age and schooling certificate provided by law, or fails to keep such certificate on file, or who fails to return to the superintendent of schools or the person authorized by him such certicate within two days from such minor's withdrawal or dismissal from his services as provided in Section seventy-seven hundred and sixty or to permit a truant officer, upon request thereafter, to examine such certificate, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars."

The penalty as set forth in Section 4022-2, Revised Statutes is as follows:

"Any person, company or corporation, employing any minor contrary to the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty dollars."

The provisions of Section 12975, General Code, as to procuring the schooling certificate, are similar to those found in Section 12994, General Code, while in the original act the penalty was as to the provisions of Section 4022-2, Rev. Stat., which excepted the periods of vacation and when the public schools were not in session.

The provisions of Section 12994, General Code, were originally found in Section 6986-7, Revised Statutes. The latest amendment of this section prior to the adoption of the General Code, was in 99 Ohio Laws, page 30. Section one of said act contained the following provision:

"* * * nor shall a child between fourteen and sixteen years of age be employed, permitted or suffered to work in or in connection with any of the aforesaid establishments, nor in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages, without first procuring from the proper authority the age and schooling certificate prescribed in Section 4022-2 of the Revised Statutes."

It was this provision which was codified and carried into the General Code in Section 12994, now under consideration. This provision states that the child must procure the age and schooling certificate "prescribed" by Section 4022-2, Revised Statutes. Said Section 4022-2 contained the provisions now found in Sections 7765 and 7766, as to when such certificate should be procured and the requirements of the certificate. Did the provisions of section one of the act of 99 Ohio Laws, page 30, that such child should procure a certificate as prescribed by Section 4022-2, Revised Statutes, refer only to the age and schooling certificate as therein provided, or did it also refer to the provision that no employment should be made during the school term, or when the public schools were in session, without securing such certificate If said provision referred to both then the two sections can be harmonized.

The statutes do not absolutely prohibit the employment of children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years. But it does prohibit such employment unless certain conditions are and requirements are complied with. The statutes prohibit the employment of children under the age of fourteen years.

Section 12993, General Code, provides:

"Whoever, having charge or management of a factory, workshop, business office, telephone or telegraph office, restaurant, bakery, hotel, apartment house, mercantile or other establishment, employs or permits a child under the age of fourteen years to work in or in connection with such establishment, or in the distribution or transmission of merchandise or messages shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars."

The purpose of the provisions of the statutes as to children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years is not to prohibit absolutely their employment, but to require that they shall meet certain educational tests before they shall be employed. If they have not secured the required amount of education they are required to attend school. This is shown by Section 7767, General Code, which provides:

> "All minors over the age of fourteen and under the age of sixteen years, who have not passed a satisfactory fifth grade test in the studies enumerated in Section seventy-seven hundred and sixty-two, shall attend school as provided in Section seventy-seven hundred and sixty-three, and all provisions thereof shall apply to such minors.
> "In case the board of education of any school district establishes part time day schools for the instruction of youths over fourteen years of age who are engaged in regular employment, such board of education is authorized to require all youth who have not satisfactorily completed the eighth grade of the elementary schools, to continue their schooling until they are sixteen years of age; provided, however, that such youth if they have been granted age and schooling certificates and are regularly employed, shall be required to attend school not to exceed eight hours a week between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. during the school term. All youth between fourteen and sixteen years of age, who are not employed, shall be required to attend school the full time."

The primary intent of the statutes and of the provisions under consideration is to require compulsory education to a certain grade and age. During vacation period there is no school and if an age and school certificate was required during that time, from all children from fourteen to sixteen years of age, before they could be employed, many of these children could not meet the requirements of the law to secure a certificate. They could not be employed, neither could they attend school. The compulsory education law is inoperative during the period of vacation, for the reason that there are no sessions of the school to attend.

The codification commission changed the word "prescribed" in Section 6986-7, Revised Statutes, to the word "provided" in Section 12994, General Code. These words, as therein used, are similar in meaning.

In case of United States vs. Dimmick, 112 Fed. 350, District Judge De Haven, says at page 351:

> "The words 'prescribe,' 'direct' and 'order' are all synonyms of the word 'require.'"

In Webster's International Dictionary the following definitions are given:

> "Provide. To establish as a previous condition; to stipulate.
> "Provided. It being provided; on condition; with the stipulation.
> "Prescribe. To lay down authoritatively as a guide; direction; or rule of action; to impose as a peremptory order; to dictate; appoint; direct; ordain."

The synonyms of "require" are given as, exact, enjoin, direct, order, demand, need.

If we substitute for provide in Section 12994, General Code, the word "stipulate" it will read "without first procuring from the proper authority the age and schooling certificate stipulated by law." In this sense this provision will refer to both Sections 7765 and 7766, General Code.

If we use the word "prescribed" for "provided" and place therein "direct" as given in the definition of prescribe, said section will read as "directed by law." In this sense said provision will also refer to both Sections 7765 and 7766.

Reading the word "prescribed" as meaning "required" as in the opinion of De Haven, supra, said section will read as "required by law." In this sense also this provision will refer to both of said sections. The word "direct" is given as a synonym of "require" and also as one of the meanings of "prescribe" in Webster's dictionary.

The provisions of the statutes under consideration are upon the same subject matter and should be construed if possible so as to permit each provision to stand. If it is held that the provisions of Section 12994, General Code, apply to all periods of the year, it would in effect nullify the provisions of Section 7765, General Code, which require the certificate only during the school term or when the public school is in session. If, on the other hand, the term "provided by law" as used in Section 12994, General Code, is construed as meaning "required by law" or "stipulated by law," it would refer to the provisions of Section 7765, General Code, and would make both sections harmonious. That in my opinion is the proper construction of Sections 12994 and of 12975 of the General Code. Such a construction does not do violence to the language used in said sections and is in harmony with the purpose of the legislature in regulating the employment of children and of requiring compulsory education.

It is my opinion that an age and schooling certificate cannot be required as a condition of employment of a child between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years, during the period of time not covered by the school term, that is during vacation, nor during the time when the public schools are not in session.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CORPORATIONS—BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS—JUDGMENT IN QUO WARRANTO FOR NON-USER FOR FIVE YEARS.

The state under Section 12323, General Code, is entitled to a judgment in quo warranto against a building and loan association for non-user only after such corporation has failed to use its corporate rights, privileges, and franchises for a period of five years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 30, 1912.

HON. E. H. MOORE, Inspector of Building and Loan Associations, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 11, 1912, wherein you state:

> "A certain deposit and loan company was incorporated July 19, 1910. Pu to the present time this company has transacted no business, having advanced only so far as the consideration and adoption of constitution and by-laws.
> "Will you kindly advise whether this company can continue to hold its charter for an indefinite period without carrying on the business for which it was incorporated?"

By an action in quo warranto a corporation may be ousted and excluded from its corporate rights, privileges, and franchises, for the reason that it has not used the same, but it would seem, from Section 12323 of the General Code, which I shall hereafter quote, that such non-user must exist for a period of five years.

Section 12303 of the General Code provides for an action in quo warranto against a person, officer, or an association of persons who act as a corporation without being legally incorporated; and Section 12304 provides that a like action may be brought against a corporation for different offenses, the second ground upon which such an action against a corporation may be based, is as follows:

> "When it has forfeited its privileges and franchises by non-user."

Section 12323, provides for the judgment that shall be entered in an action brought against a corporation for non-user of its rights, privileges and franchises. This section is as follows:

> "When, in such action, it is found and adjudged that by an act done or omitted, a corporation has surrendered or forfeited its corporate rights, privileges, and franchises, or has not used them during a term of five years, judgment shall be entered that it be ousted and excluded therefrom, and that it be dissolved."

It will be seen from this last quoted section that in order for the state to be entitled to a judgment of ouster and dissolution, it must appear that the corporate rights, privileges and franchises have not been used during a term of five years; and my opinion, therefore, is that an action would be of no avail in the case to which you refer, at the present time, but that if said corporation fails for a period of five years to exercise its rights, privileges and franchises, then it should be proceeded in quo warranto.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING AND LOAN LAW—WORDS AND PHRASES—"SUBSCRIBED" —NO STOCK REQUIRED TO BE PAID IN.

In the clause of the building and loan law which states that five per cent. of the stock must be subscribed before beginning business, the word "subscribed" does not intend that that amount shall be actually paid in.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 14, 1911.

HON. E. H. MOORE, Inspector of Building and Loan Associations, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of November 10, 1911, you inquire as follows:

> "I am enclosing a letter from A. S. Mann, attorney-at-law, Cleveland, in order that we may receive from your department a formal opinion upon the question raised by Mr. Mann.
> "Please return the letter with your opinion, and oblige."

The letter of Mr. A. S. Mann, enclosed, states as follows:

> "I wish to enquire as to the meaning of the word subscribe in the clause of the building and loan law which states that five per cent. of the stock must be subscribed before beginning business.
> "Some attorneys seem to hold that this means that five per cent. must be subscribed and actually paid in before beginning business, and others hold that it means only that said five per cent. must be subscribed.
> "Wish you would kindly give me your interpretation of this clause as early as possible, and thanking you in advance for same, I remain."

Section 9645, General Code, provides the amount of stock to be subscribed before business shall be commenced by a building and loan association, in these terms:

> "The capital stock named in the articles of incorporation shall be deemed to refer to the authorized capital. The organization may be completed and business commenced when five per cent. thereof is subscribed, and the names and addresses of its officers and not less than two copies of its constitution and by-laws have been filed with the inspector of building and loan associations."

There is no provision of statute that any amount of said stock subscriptions shall be paid in.

Then general laws in reference to corporations provide that ten per cent. of the capital stock shall be subscribed and that ten per cent. of each share shall be payable at the time of making a subscription to such stock.

The last sentence in Section 9643, General Code, exempts building and loan associations from these provisions, as follows:

"* * * Associations may be organized and conducted under the general laws of Ohio relating to corporations, except as otherwise provided in this chapter."

Building and loan associations are organized under the provisions of a special act, which act prescribes that before commencing business five per cent. of the capital stock shall be subscribed.

A subscription for capital stock is merely a promise to take stock and to pay for it. The subscription is the contract; the payment for the stock is the execution of the contract.

Henley, J., on page 190, in case of Heller vs. Elwood board of trade, 18 Ind. App. 188, says:

"A subscription is a written contract by which one engages to contribute a sum of money for a designated purpose.

"To subscribe is to agree in writing to furnish a sum of money or its equivalent for a designated purpose. Anderson Law Dict. 985."

In case of Holman vs. State, 105 Ind., 569, the syllabus reads:

"Under the statutes providing for the formation of railroad corporations and requiring stock to the amount of at least fifty thousand dollars to be first subscribed, the subscriptions must be made in good faith, by persons who have a reasonable expectation of ability to pay."

On page 573, Mitchell, J., says:

"It is abundantly established by the evidence that most of the subscribers to the stock had not only neither the ability, actual or apparent, at the time they subscribed, to pay any calls, but it appears further that they had no purpose or expectation that they would be called upon to pay, or that they could pay anything if called upon."

In this case payment had not been made and no question was raised on that account. Evidently it was taken for granted that the provision that a certain amount of stock should be subscribed did not mean that such amount should be paid in.

The expression in Section 9645, General Code, that five per cent. of the capital stock shall be subscribed before business shall be commenced, excludes conditions which are not expressed.

It is my conclusion that the provision of said Section 9645, General Code, as to the subscription of stock of building and loan associations does not require that any part thereof shall be paid into the treasury of the company or association, before such association shall commence business.

Such subscriptions, however, should be made in good faith, and by persons who have the ability to pay therefor, or who have a reasonable expectation of paying therefor.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS—USURY—INTEREST, FINES. DUES AND PREMIUMS—LOANS.

In accordance with Section 8303 General Code, building and loan associations may not charge more than eight per cent. as interest on loans. It is permissible, however, for such associations, by virtue of Section 9650 General Code, to charge for premiums, fines, dues and interest, an aggregate which amounts to more than the legal rate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 12, 1912.

HON. E. H. MOORE, Bureau of Building and Loan Associations, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your inquiry of March 25th which is as follows:

> "We enclose herewith a copy of the constitution and by-laws of a certain building and loan association, of _____, and request your opinion as to the right of the association to provide, in Section 31 of the by-laws, for the making of temporary loans at 'such rate of interest, not exceeding ten per cent. per annum.' Does not the general statute, limiting the interest rate to eight per cent. apply to such loans, or, in fact, to all loans made by such associations?"

The section of the by-laws of this association to which my attention is called is as follows:

> "Should there at any time be money in the treasury, not called for by borrowing or withdrawing members, the board of directors may make temporary loans to members or any person, on such security as the board shall agree upon, such terms, and such rate of interest, not exceeeding ten per cent. per annum. Such temporary loans shall not run more than ninety days."

Section 8303 of the General Code is as follows:

> "The parties to a bond, bill, promissory note, or other instrument of writing for the forbearance of payment of money at any future time, may stipulate therein for the payment of interest upon the amount thereof at any rate not exceeding eight per cent. per annum, payable annually."

In the provisions of the General Code relating to the organization and powers of building and loan associations are incorporated the following sections:

> "Section 9657. To make loans to members and others on such terms, conditions and securities as may be provided by the association.
> "Section 9650. To assess and collect from members and others, such dues, fines, interest and premium on loans made or other assessments, as may be provided for in the constitution and by-laws. Such dues, fines, premiums or other assessments shall not be deemed usury, although in excess of the legal rate of interest."

It will be seen from the above that Section 9650 of the General Code makes an exception as to building and loan associations from the general statute regulating the rate of interest, namely Section 8303, quoted above, and this statute has been held by our supreme court to be a valid enactment; (See Cramer vs. The Southern Ohio Loan and Trust Company, 72 O. S., 395). But I think that the proper construction of the statute is that when dues, fines or premiums added to the rate of interest specified in the contract, bring the total amount above the legal rate which may be stipulated for, that the same is not to be regarded as usury. This, in fact, was the holding in the case of Cramer vs. The Southern Ohio Loan and Trust Company, above referred to, where the rate of interest as fixed at five per cent. and the premium is fixed at five per cent., which bring the total, of course, above the legal rate; but it is further my opinion that a stipulation to charge more than eight per cent. as interest only, would come within the prohibition of Section 8303, that is, if in specifying the rate of interest in its contract, the association cannot exceed eight per cent., but that it can, if so provided in its by-laws also charge premiums, dues, fines, etc., which would bring the total amount really charged as interest above the prohibited rate, and that this can be done by virtue of Section 9650.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—PROCEDURE AND PAYMENT OF EXPENSES OF PRINTING OF PROCEEDINGS.

The printing of the constitutional convention proceedings, debates, reports, etc., is not within the classes of printing under Section 754, General Code, which are to be provided for by the supervisor of public printing, nor is it such as under Section 786 General Code, is provided by law or resolution to be cared for through the department of public printing.

Therefore under the only other possible provision therefore, namely, the act providing for the constitutional convention 102 O. L. 298, by Sections 4 and 18, thereof, the convention is given entire control of the matter.

The expenses of such printing shall be paid from the General appropriation fund allowed the convention under the aforesaid act.

These proceedings are substantially similar to those followed by the last constitutional convention.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1912.

HON. E. A. CRAWFDRD, Supervisor of Public Printing, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 8th, which is as follows:

> "At the beginning of the constitutional convention in a conference with the secretary of state representing the printing commission and the supervisor of public printing, the printing for the convention was directed through the office of the supervisor. The expense of this printing to this time is in the neighborhood of two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars; there does not seem to be any specific provision of law as to how the printing expenses of this convention should be paid. It is important, therefore, that we have your opinion as to how this expense should be met, and, further expenses of printing for the convention."

Section 754 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The printing for the state shall be divided into seven classes and shall be let in separate contracts as follows:
> "First class: Bills for the two houses of the general assembly, resolutions and other matters ordered by such houses or either of them to be printed in bill form.
> "Second class: The journals of the senate and house of representatives, and reports, communications and other documents which form a part of the journals.
> "Third class: Reports, communications and other documents ordered by the general assembly or either house thereof or by the executive departments, to be printed in pamphlet form, not including the bulletins of the agricultural experiment station.
> "Fourth class: General and local laws and joint resolutions.
> "Fifth class: Blanks, circulars and other work for the use of the executive departments, not including those to be printed in pamphlet form.

"Sixth class: The bulletins of the agricultural experiment station.

"Seventh class: The report of the secretary of state, auditor of state, commissioner of common schools, superintendent of insurance, railroad commission, commissioner of labor statistics, state board of agriculture, and other reports of executive officers required by law to be bound in either cloth, or half law binding, not including the laws, joint resolutions and journals of the house and senate.

"Printing for each of the classes, except the seventh class, shall be let in one contract; the printing for the seventh class may be let in one or more contracts as the commissioners of public printing in their discretion may require."

It is evident from a consideration of the above section that the printing for the constitutional convention does not come within any of the classes enumerated therein. Therefore, if the expense of this printing is to be paid through your department, we must look elsewhere in the law for a provision authorized such payment. The only other section which can possibly be considered in this respect is Section 786 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"All printing and binding for the state not authorized by the provisions of this chapter shall be subject to the provisions thereof so far as practicable, and, whether provided for by any law or resolution, the commissioners of public printing may advertise for proposals and let contracts therefor as herein provided."

It will be seen by considering this section that any printing or binding for the state not provided for by chapter IV, division II, title III, must be provided for by law or resolution in order to be paid for by your department. Now, going carefully over the statutes I fail to find any provision by law, that is by an act of the legislature or by a resolution of the general assembly to provide that this printing shall be paid for through your department; in fact, the only provisions of law in any manner bearing upon this question are found in the act providing for the constitutional convention, 102 O. L., 298. The following two sections of the said act, therefore, are sections which must govern this matter, taken in connection with the provisions of the General Code above referred to:

"Section 4. Said convention shall have authority to determine its own rules of proceeding, and to punish its members for disorderly conduct, to elect such officers as it may deem necessary for the proper and convenient transaction of the business of the convention, and to prescribe their duties to make provisions for the publication of its proceedings, or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention, in durable form, and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state; and to fix and prescribe the time and form and manner of submitting any proposed revision, alterations or amendments of the constitution to the electors of the state; also the notice to be given of such submission.

"Section 18. The journal and proceedings of said convention shall be filed and kept in the office of secretary of state. Said secretary of state shall furnish said convention with all stationery, and shall do such other things relative to the distribution and publication of matter pertaining to the convention as it may require. He shall forthwith cause such number of copies of this act to be published and transmitted to the electors several boards in the state as will be sufficient to supply a copy thereof to each board of judges of election in their respective counties, and such election boards shall distribute the same to such boards of judges of election."

Now, considering Section 786 of the General Code, above quoted, in connection with Section 4 and Section 18, the question to be determined, it seems to me, is whether this printing for the constitutional convention is printing for the state, and whether it is authorized by law. It seems to me that as the legislature has given the convention power by Section 4 "to make provisions for the publication of its proceedings or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention in durable form, and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state;" and providing that the "secretary of state shall furnish said convention with all needed stationery and shall do such other things relative to the distribution and publication of matter pertaining to the convention as it may require;" this printing must be considered as printing for the state; but that it may be done through your department it must be authorized by law or resolution. That is, there must be an act or resolution of the legislature specifying that the printing for the constitutional convention is to be done through your department. There is no such law or resolution. Section 18, copied above, cannot be construed as authorizing the printing to be supervised by you as other state printing, and to be paid for out of your appropriation. Clearly the meaning of this section is that the legislature has given the constitutional convention full authority to provide for its necessary printing in such manner as it may deem best and to do so entirely independent of your department.

Note the language—"*Said convention shall have authority * * * to make provisions for the publication of its proceedings,* or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention, in durable form, and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state." (Section 4.)

In the absence of limitation, this gives the constitutional convention complete control over this printing, and there is no limitation upon this language, express or implied.

I do not consider that the language found in Section 18, namely, "said secretary (of state) shall furnish said convention with all needed stationery and shall do such other things relative to the distribution and publication of matters pertaining to the convention as it may require" has any bearing on your question; as, in the view I take of this provision, it does not relate at all to the printing for the convention, but rather to the distribution and making public of such matters as it may decide to make public. The secretary of state is not the supervisor of public printing and would have no authority to order the printing for the convention to be done by you. And, in my judgment, this provision is meant to apply to such matters as naturally come under the supervision and direction of the secretary of state.

My opinion that there is no authority for this printing to be done through your department necessarily carries with it the further holding that it cannot be paid out of the appropriation made to your department. This appropriation is only available to pay for state printing ordered in accordance with the provisions of chapter 4, division 2, title 3 of the General Code, Sections 754 and 786 of this chapter are quoted above and it is unnecessary to quote other sections. It seems to me that there can be no doubt that it must be paid for out of the appropriation for the constitutional convention and that the legislature so intended. This appropriation (102 O. L., 195) is as follows:

"CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF OHIO."

"Salaries and mileage of members, expenses, uses and purposes of the convention, in accordance with the provisions of S. B. 15, 79th General Assembly ----------$200,000.00."

This language is extremely broad, and as Section 24 (102 O. L. 298) is one of the provisions of Senate Bill No. 15, 79th General Assembly, referred to in the appropriation, "the expenses, uses and purposes of the convention" surely include the publication of its proceedings, etc., specified in said section.

Though I am perfectly clear in my opinion as to these questions, it may not be amiss to consider briefly the provisions of the act for the constitutional convention in 1873, and the course taken in regard to the printing for it. This act is found in Vol. 70, Ohio Laws, at pages 6 and 8. Section 4 is as follows:

"Said convention shall have authority to determine its own rules of proceedings, and to punish its members for disorderly conduct, to elect such officers as it may deem necessary for the proper and convenient transaction of the business of the convention, and to prescribe their duties; to make provisions for the publication of its own proceedings, or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention, in durable form, and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state; and to fix and prescribe the time and form and manner of submitting any proposed revision, alterations or amendments of the constitution to the electors of the state; also the notice to be given of such submission."

Section 7 of the act provides as follows:

The journal and proceedings of said convention shall be filed and kept in the office of secretary of state. Said secretary of state shall furnish said convention with all needed stationery, and shall do such other things relative to the distribution and publication of matter pertaining to the convention as it may require. He shall forthwith cause such number of copies of this act to be published and transmitted to the several clerks of the courts of common pleas in the state as will be sufficient to supply a copy thereof to each board of judges of election in their respective counties, and such clerks shall distribute the same to such boards."

It will be seen that Sections four (4) and seven (7) of this act are, as far as concerns your inquiry, identical respectively with Sections four (4) and eighteen (18) of the act providing for the present constitutional convention, quoted in the first part of this opinion. The appropriation for the Constitutional Convention of 1873, found in 70 O. L., 266, is as follows:

"CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION."

"For the mileage and per diem of members and per diem of officers and messengers of the constitutional convention, to be paid on the certificate of the presiding officer of the convention, sixty-five thousand dollars.

"For contingent expenses of constitutional convention, five hundred dollars, to be allowed and paid on the presentation of proper vouchers certified to be correct by the presiding officer of the convention.

"For the printing of the constitutional convention, to be contracted for by the convention with the lowest and most responsible bidder or bidders, six thousand dollars. All bills for printing herein provided for, shall be audited and paid as similar bills for state printing are audited and paid.

"The necessary binding for the convention shall be executed under the direction of the supervisor of the public printing and binding, at the state bindery."

It is thus seen that the Constitutional Convention of 1873 was allowed only $500 for contingent expenses, was given a specific appropriation to cover its printing and was also directed as to the manner of contracting for this printing and as to how payments for the same should be made. It was also provided that the binding should be done by the state.

In the act providing for the present constitutional convention, as above pointed out, the appropriation is general for the "expenses, uses and purposes of the convention, in accordance with the provisions of S. B. 15, 79th General Assembly," there is no specific appropriation for printing or anything else, and hence the conclusion is that the legislature appropriated this lump sum with which the convention was to pay for all the things it was authorized by the act to do, including its printing. The records show that the printing for the Contsitutional Convention of 1873 was contracted for by the convention. There was no authority for directing any printing for the present constitutional convention through your department, unless the constitutional convention itself so requested; and, as pointed out in this opinion, no part of this printing can be paid for out of your appropriation, it must be paid for out of the appropriation for the constitutional cenvention. The constitutional convention has exclusive authority to provide for all of its printing and the same must be paid for out of the appropriation made for said convention.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—PUBLICATION OF RESULTS FOR ELECTORS—CONTROL OF CONVENTION—PRINTING.

Under Sections 4 and 18 of the act providing for a constitutional convention, the convention may take such means as it deems fit to publish the result of its proceedings for the purpose of enabling the electors to form an opinion thereon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 19, 1912.

HON. E. A. CRAWFORD, Supervisor of Public Printing, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your inquiry of January 23rd, which is as follows:

"Numerous inquiries have reached this department relative to the matter of the publication of the result of the present constitutional convention should it adopt a new constitution.

"I have been unable to learn, either, by precedent or law, what publication is given to the production of such a constitutional body. Will you be kind enough to give me your opinion as to what publication will be necessary in this regard?"

I take it that your inquiry refers to the publication necessary to bring the draft of a new constitution, or the amendments, adopted by the constitutional convention, before the electors of this state, for ratification or rejection. As to the proceedings of the convention itself, the printing of its debates, journals, etc., I have already held that this is to be provided for by the constitutional convention and to be paid for out of its appropriation.

Section 4 of the act providing for the present constitutional convention, 102 O. L. 298, is as follows:

> "Said convention shall have authority to determine its own rules of proceeding, and to punish its members for disorderly conduct, to elect such officers as it may deem necessary for the proper and convenient transaction of the business of the convention, and to prescribe their duties; to make provisions for the publication of its proceedings, or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention, in durable form, and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state; and to fix and prescribe the time and form and manner of submitting any proposed revision, alterations or amendments of the constitution to the electors of the state; also the notice to be given of such submission."

and I take it that the last sentence of this section, taken in connection with the underlined portion of Section 18, which is as follows:

> "The journal and proceedings of said convention shall be filed and kept in the office of secretary of state. Said secretary of state shall furnish said convention with all needed stationery, and shall do such other things relative to the distribution and publication of matter pertaining to the convention as it may require. He shall forthwith cause such number of copies of this act to be published and transmitted to the electors several boards in the state as will be sufficient to supply a copy thereof to each board of judges of election in their respective counties, and such election boards shall distribute the same to such boards of judges of election."

really answers your inquiry, as for, under these provisions, the constitutional convention is to fix and prescribe the time and form and manner of submitting any proposed revision, alterations or amendments of the constitution to the electors; and, also, is to provide for the notice to be given of such submission; and all of this can properly be done through the secretary of state.

The necessity of submitting the matter to the electors of the state is governed by Section 3 of Article XVI of the present constitution, which is as follows:

> "At the general election, to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in each twentieth year thereafter, the question: 'Shall there be a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution,' shall be submitted to the electors of the state; and, in case a majority of all the electors, voting at such election, shall decide in favor of a convention, the general assembly, at its next session, shall provide by law for the election of delegates, and the assembling of such convention, as is provided in the preceding section; but no amendment of this constitution, agreed upon by any convention assembled in pursuance of this article, shall take effect, until the same shall have been submitted to the electors of the state, and adopted by a majority of those voting thereon."

In my opinion to you, dated February 16, 1912, I called attention to the fact that Section 4 of the act providing for the constitutional convention of 1873, 70 O. L. pp. 6 and 8, is practically identical with Section 4 of the act providing for the present constitutional convention, 102 O. L. 298, above quoted; and the convention of 1873, in the schedule of the constitution, adopted by said convention (which was rejected upon its submission to the electors of the state) provided as follows:

> "Section 10. This constitution shall be submitted to the electors of the state on Tuesday, the 18th day of August, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four; and at the same time there shall be separately submitted to said electors the following propositions * * *:
> Section 11. At said election the ballots shall be in the following form * * *:
> "Section 12. The secretary of state * * * on or before the 1st day of July next, shall cause this constitution to be printed in one English and one German weekly newspaper of each political party, printed in each county * * *.
> "Section 13. Said election shall be held and conducted in the places, by the officers and in the manner now by law provided for the election of members of the house of representatives, as far as practicable; * * *"

It will be seen from the above that the convention of 1873 provided, entirely, for the submission of the constitution to the electors of the state; and also directed the publication necessary to bring the matter properly before the electors, through the secretary of state. In my opinion, this is the plain meaning of Sections 4 and 18 of the present act; and this matter is left entirely with the constitutional convention and will be provided for by it.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SUPERVISOR OF PUBLIC PRINTING—POWER TO CONTROL STATE BOOK BINDING ESTABLISHMENT AND DUTY TO CARRY OUT ORDERS OF STATE INSPECTOR OF WORKSHOPS AND FACTORIES—ALLOWANCE BY STATE EMERGENCY BOARD.

The supervision, control and management of the book binding establishment is lodged, by virtue of Section 750 General Code, in the supervisor of public printing and when the building used as a state bindery has been condemned by the state inspector of workshops and factories, it is the duty of the said supervisor of public printing to reconstruct, repair and fit out said building in accordance with the order of the said inspector.

If the funds appropriated for the purposes are insufficient, the situation presents an amply grounded "emergency" to justify the required allowance by the emergency board of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1912.

HON. E. A. CRAWFORD, State Supervisor of Public Printing, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication of February 12, 1912, is received in which you enclose an attached copy of a finding of the state inspector of workshops and factories and an order issued to you by him, being order No. 3484 relating to the building now used by your department for the state bindery located on the grounds of the state school for the deaf, which finding is to the effect that the said building now being used for the state bindery is in such a condition as to become dangerous to employes therein employed, and said finding also being to the effect that on account of the crowded conditions the machines therein are so close together that the operation thereof becomes dangerous to employes, and also that the sanitary conditions of the whole building are such as to be injurious to the health of the employes and that you were ordered to abandon the same at once, and requesting of me an opinion as to what action should be taken by you, and how it should be taken relative to said order, and whether the emergency board should be called upon to supply the necessary funds for rental and removal of the machinery for this institution, or whether other means should be adopted to secure the same.

In reply I desire to say that under the provisions of Section 996 to 1,000 of the General Code, defining the powers and duties of the chief inspector of workshops and factories, upon investigation if the chief inspector or any deputy finds the conditions such as the report of the inspector of the state bindery shows, it is his duty to make an order such as he has in the above one referred to, and as the report of the chief inspector shows such a dangerous and unhealthy condition of the construction and the location of the machinery therein and the sanitary condition, and makes an order recommending that the same be abandoned for its present use, I am, therefore of the legal opinion that it is your legal duty, and the duty of the state, to immediately abandon the use of the present building for a state bindery, and at once proceed, through you, to obtain proper quarters in a suitable building or buildings necessary to carry on the work and duties of that department of the state department of public printing.

Section 750 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The supervisor of public printing shall have charge of the bookbinding establishment at the state school for the deaf, he shall provide the necessary materials, implements, machinery and fixtures therefor, he shall have supervision and control thereof and exclusive management of its practical operation."

Under the above quoted section you are given ample power to perform all the things necessary to carry into effect the order of the state inspector of workshops and factories which should be done for the safety of the employes of the state bindery, and there remains but one question for me to answer, viz:, shall the emergency board of the state be called upon to supply the necessary funds for rental and removal of the machinery of this institution or whether other means should be adopted to secure the same?

As to that question I desire to say that if the appropriations for your department available for the year 1912 are insufficient to meet the carrying into effect of the order above referred to, I am clearly of the opinion that the said things necessary to be performed constitute an emergency "requiring the expenditure of a greater sum than the amount appropriated by the general assembly for that department of the state," and under Section 2313 of the General Code the emergency board of the state is and would be warranted in authorizing the expenditure of the amount necessary to meet said emergency, and therefore, in conclusion I advise you to at once proceed to carry out the order issued to you aforesaid and secure information as to the amount necessary to enable you to so do that you may present the same to the state emergency board without further delay.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

PRINTING—LEGISLATIVE MANUAL—PAYMENT FROM APPROPRIATION FOR PUBLIC PRINTING.

Under Section 786 General Code, the legislative manual provided for by resolution, may be printed and the cost thereof paid from the appropriation for public printing.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 11, 1912.

HON. E. A. CRAWFORD, Supervisor of Public Printing, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You will recall that on August 31, 1911, this department rendered an opinion holding that the cost of printing the legislative manual provided for by senate joint resolution No. 24, 102 O. L. 753 could not legally be paid from your appropriation for state printing.

Since the promulgation of said opinion additional facts have been furnished which were not before me at that time, whereby I am prompted to re-consider the legal questions involved.

The subject of public printing is covered by chapter 4, of division 2 of the General Code of Ohio, being Sections 745 to 787 inclusive. The following sections thereof are pertinent:

Section 754.

"The printing for the state shall be divided into seven classes and shall be let in separate contracts as follows:

"First class: Bills for the two houses of the general assembly, resolutions and other matters ordered by such houses or either of them to be printed in bill form.

"Second class: The journals of the senate and house of representatives, and reports, communications and other documents which form a part of the journals.

"Third class: Reports, communications and other documents ordered by the general assembly or either house thereof or by the executive departments, to be printed in pamphlet form, not including the bulletins of the agricultural experiment station.

"Fourth class: General and local laws and joint resolutions.

"Fifth class: Blanks, circulars and other work for the use of the executive departments, not including those to be printed in pamphlet form.

"Sixth class: The bulletin of the agricultural experiment station.

"Seventh class: The report of the secretary of state, auditor of state, commissioner of common schools, superintendent of insurance, railroad commissioner, commissioner of labor statistics, state board of agriculture, and other reports of executive officers required by law to be bound in either cloth or half law binding, not including the laws, joint resolutions and journals of the house and senate.

"The printing for each of the classes except the seventh class shall be let in one contract; the printing for the seventh class may be let in one or more contracts as the commissioners of public printing in their discretion may require."

"All printing and binding for the state not authorized by the provisions of this chapter shall be subject to the provisions thereof so far as practicable, and, whether provided for by law or resolution, the commissioners of public printing may advertise for proposals and let contracts therefor as herein provided."

Section 754 defines specifically the classes of printing for the state, the first four sub-divisions whereof govern the printing for the legislative department. The resolution providing for the printing of this manual reads as follows:

"Be is resolved by the General Assembly of the state of Ohio:

"That the assistant clerk of the senate and the assistant clerk of the house of representatives be and they are hereby authorized and directed to prepare and have printed in book form, bound in cloth, five thousand copies of a legislative manual, fifteen hundred copies for the use of the senate and thirty-five hundred copies for the use of the house of representatives. To defray the expense connected with the preparation and revision of such manual the assistant clerk of the senate and the assistant clerk of the house of representatives shall receive five hundred dollars each, payable from the contingent funds of the senate and house upon vouchers signed by the speaker of the house and the president of the senate, and such officers are hereby authorized and directed to sign vouchers for said amounts upon completion of such manual. The manual shall contain the joint rules of the 79th general assembly, the rules of the senate and the house of representatives, together with a list of the members and the standing committees of each house; section of statutes, state and federal relating in any way to the powers and duties of the general assembly, and such other matter as those charged with the preparation of this book may deem appropriate."

It is apparent from a comparison of the language of the resolution with that of Section 754 that said manual cannot be printed by virtue of any authority granted by said section for the palpable reason that no provision is made therein for the printing for the legislative department of the state government of any document in "book form, bound in cloth" as the resolution prescribed.

In my judgment it was the legislative intent, in the enactment of Section 786 to provide for printing not expressly authorized by Section 754 to the end that no state department may be unduly hampered by the limited provisions of Section 754.

The provisions of Section 786 recognized as legal, printing ordered pursuant to resolution, as well as that ordered pursuant to law, considered in connection with the fact that a resolution was duly passed by the general assembly calling for the printing of the aforesaid manual, clothe you with ample authority to cause the cost thereof to be paid from appropriation for public printing.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

LONGVIEW HOSPITAL—APPROPRIATION FOR FORMER ALLOWANCE—LEGISLATIVE INTENT SHOWN BY CHAIRMAN OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY FINANCE COMMITTEES—APPROPRIATION FROM "MAINTENANCE" FUND.

It being clearly shown by the statements of the chairman of the finance committees of both the senate and the house, that the legislature intends to allow the same amount to Longview hospital as has been heretofore appropriated for that institution, the board of administration may apportion such amount to that institution but only from the general appropriation fund classed under the head of "maintenance."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 2, 1912.

State Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication, dated January 9, 1912, in which you state as follows:

> "This board is in receipt of your opinion under date of December 12, 1911, in reply to our communication dated November 20, 1911, in which we asked you to advise us as to the relationship existing between the Ohio board of administration and Longview hospital.
> "Certain facts have presented themselves since this opinion has been rendered: among them, that it was evidently the intention of the finance committees of the senate and the house of representatives that Longview hospital should be entitled to the same proportion of the total amount appropriated for the year beginning February 16, 1912, both for maintenance and ordinary repairs and improvements, as it had received in prior years.
> "This board begs to submit a supplementary request, which is accompanied by a statement from the chairman, respectively, of the senate finance committee and the finance committee of the house of representatives of the state of Ohio, and ask that you render a supplemental opinion, taking into consideration the facts as set forth in the statement enclosed herewith."

In the opinion rendered your board, December 12th, in which I endeavored to define the relations existing between your board and the Longview hospital, I cited Section 33 of said act, which provides as follows:

> "The state shall continue to provide for the the maintenance of Longview hospital, and the board in making estimates for the maintenance of the institutions under their control shall include a suitable amount therefor. Out of the moneys appropriated for the maintenance of state institutions, the board shall apportion a proper allowance for said hospital * * *."

In the same opinion I cited your board to Section 2033, General Code of Ohio, which provides how the apportionment out of the proper allowance or appropriation made by the legislature for the state institutions is to be made, or how your board would be guided in making the same, as provided therein.

In my opinion to your board under date of August 31, 1911, relative to the merging of the appropriations made by the last general assembly for the use of the state institutions under your charge. I fully defined what I thought should be the three classes of appropriations under Section 31 of the act creating your board; and the legislature, in making the appropriations for the year beginning February 16, 1912, followed, strictly, the provisions of said Section 31, in classifying said appropriations, as provided in said section.

But, according to your letter requesting this supplemental opinion, and as shown by the letter accompanying the same, which is signed by the chairman of the senate finance committee and the chairman of the finance committee of the house of representatives, it was evidently the intent and understanding of the general assembly in passing said appropriation bill, that Longview hospital should participate in the total amounts appropriated for "maintenance" and "ordinary repairs and improvements," the same as it had in prior years; the same being evidenced by the fact that the memorandum of the records of estimates guiding the respective committees in arriving at said total amounts, so appropriated under the two headings of "maintenance" and "ordinary repairs and improvements," now on file with the chairman of said committees, is plain; and were it not for the fact that Section 33 of the act creating your board, 102 O. L. 221, provides that "out of the moneys appropriated for the maintenance of state institutions the board shall apportion a proper allowance for said hospital (meaning Longview hospital)," I would advise your board, in apportioning the proper amounts out of the respective totals appropriated for the state institutions for the year beginning February 16, 1912, to allow Longview hospital the proper apportionment from both the "maintenance" and "ordinary repairs and improvements" appropriations; but said Section 33 provides that out of the moneys appropriated for the maintenance of state institutions, your board shall apportion a proper allowance for said hospital, and does not refer to the class known as "ordinary repairs and improvements."

It is a rule of construction well known to the law that the intent of the legislature should be taken into consideration in construing one of its acts, if possible so to do. In view of the fact that it was evidently the intent of the legislature that the said Longview hospital should participate in and be apportioned certain amounts, according to former appropriations, I am of the opinion that that construction should be given to the statute, insofar as possible, as will give that effect to the act. In view of the further fact, that the legislature itself, by said Section 33 of said act, limited the participation of the Longview hospital in the appropriations to that class known as "maintenance;" and in view also of the fact that by Section 31 of said act, all appropriations for state institutions should be of three classes, namely: maintenance, ordinary repairs and improvements, and specific purposes, I am compelled to advise your board that said Longview hospital cannot be allowed or apportioned any of the appropriation made for state institutions for "ordinary repairs and improvements," for the year beginning February 16, 1912.

Under the appropriation of $3,339,330 for state institutions, under the head of "maintenance for the year beginning February 16, 1912," 102 O. L. 407, believing that it was clearly the intent of the legislature in making said total appropriation, as shown by the estimate above referred to, that said institution should be apportioned such amount as had theretofore been apportioned to it; and from the further fact that Section 1 of the act creating your board provided that the intent and purpose of the act is "to provide humane and scientific treatment and care and the highest attainable degree of individual development for the dependent wards of the state, etc.," I am of the opinon that your board may apportion, out of said general appropriation for maintenance, that proportion thereof as the legislature intended that said institutions should have for that purpose.

In conclusion I might say that the latter part of Section 41 of said act provides that all parts of sections of the code, inconsistent with the provisions of this act shall be repealed insofar as such inconsistencies exist; thereby repealing so much of Section 2033, General Code, as is inconsistent with said sections of the act creating your board, above referred to.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE—POWER OF BOARD TO PAROLE—EFFECT OF COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE.

When a prisoner sentenced for murder in the second degree has his sentence commuted to twenty years, such commutation merely affects a change in the penalty and does not, have any effect upon Section 2169, General Code, which makes it impossible for the board of administration to parole murderers in the first or second degree before a fulfillment of twenty-five years of their sentence.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 15, 1912.

State Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of February 5, 1912, in which you state that there is now confined in the Ohio penitentiary, a prisoner who was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder in the second degree, whose sentence was commuted to twenty years; and that said prisoner has made application to your board for a parole from said institution; and request my opinion as to the eligibilty of said prisoner for a parole, or the power of your board to grant said prisoner a parole.

In reply I desire to say that Section 2169, General Code, is the authority for your board to grant paroles, and reads as follows:

> "The board of managers shall establish rules and regulations by which a prisoner under sentence other than for murder in the first or second degree, having served the minimum term provided by law for the crime of which he was convicted and not previously convicted of felony or not having served a term in a penal institution, or a prisoner under sentence for murder in the first or second degree having served under such sentence twenty-five full years, may be allowed to go upon parole outside the buildings and enclosures of the penitentiary. Full power to enforce such rules and regulations is hereby conferred upon the board, but the concurrence of every member shall be necessary for the parole of a prisoner."

It will be observed that there is a restriction placed upon your board, in the statute, as to what prisoners may be paroled by it, where it provides:

> "The board of managers (now the board of administration) shall establish rules and regulations by which a prisoner under sentence other than for murder in the first or second degree, etc."

It was, evidently, the plain intention of the law-making power (the legislature), in granting the power to your board to parole prisoners, under said above quoted section, to prevent the granting of a parole to any prisoner sentenced to imprisonment for murder in the first or second degree, except such prisoner shall have first served twenty-five full years under his sentence for murder.

Your inquiry could be easily solved and answered under the statement of facts, were it not for the fact that "after the prisoner had been sentenced to life imprisonment for murder in the second degree" his sentence was commuted to the term of twenty years, and, therefore, the serious question for consideration and determination by me is:

> "Does the fact of a commutation of a sentence from life imprisonment to a term of twenty years change the prisoner's legal status in relation to the parole statute, above quoted?"

In order to fully advise your board upon the question asked in your inquiry it is necessary to define what a commutation is and to what it relates.

In the case of Rice vs. Chamberlain, 107 Michigan, 381-383, the supreme court of that state defined a commutation as a:

> "Substitution of a less for a greater penalty or punishment."

Bouvier's Law Dictionary defines a commutation as:

> "The change of a punishment to which a person has been condemned into a less severe one."

The International Dictionary defines a commutation as:

> "A passing from one state to another; alteration; change."

In the case of "in the matter of Sarah M. Victor," 31 O. S. 206, Welch, Chief Justice speaking for the supreme court of Ohio defined a commutation as follows:

> "In its legal acceptation, it is a change of punishment from a higher to a lower degree, in the scale of crimes and penalties fixed by law."

Under the decisions and definitions, above quoted, I have no difficulty whatever in concluding that a commutation of sentence is simply the substitution of a less for a greater penalty for the crime for which a prisoner is sentenced.

The statutes empowering your board to parole certain prisoners restricts your power by denying the right thereto to parole any prisoner under sentence for murder in the first or second degree unless such prisoner has served under such sentence, twenty-five full years; and as the restriction relates to any prisoner under sentence for the crime of murder in the first or second degree, except as provided, it seems to me, clear that the crime for which the prisoner seeking parole was sentenced must be the guiding matter, by which your board is governed in determining the eligibility of said applicant to be paroled.

The fact that executive clemency is extended to a prisoner by commuting his sentence from life imprisonment to that of twenty years does not, in any legal sense, change the crime for which the prisoner was sentenced, but simply substitutes the lesser for the greater penalty for the same crime, and the prisoner is still confined in the penitentiary for the crime of murder in the second degree.

To make the matter plainer, suppose the sentence of the prisoner applying to your board had been commuted to the term of twenty-five years, it could not in any manner place the prisoner in the class eligible to parole, for it cannot be sucessfully claimed that the governor, in commuting the sentence, could not have fixed the period of imprisonment at twenty-five years; because the statute places no restrictions upon his power under Section 99 of the General Code, as to time.

For the foregoing reasons, and under the circumstances set forth in your communication, your board is without legal authority to grant a parole to the prisoner making application therefor, or to any other prisoner who may, in the future, apply for a parole, under sentence for murder in the first or second degree, unless such prisoner shall have first served twenty-five full years under such sentence.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PAROLE—POWERS OF BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—"MINIMUM SENTENCE"—PRISONER CONVICTED OF RAPE ON DAUGHTER NOT ELIGIBLE—EFFECT OF COMMUTATION OF SENTENCE.

Inasmuch as Section 2169 General Code restricts regulations of the board of administration with reference to applications for parole to such prisoners as have served the "minimum sentence" prescribed by law for the crime for which they were convicted, and as the minimum sentence provided for rape upon a daughter is life imprisonment, a prisoner sentenced for such crime cannot become eligible for parole.

The fact that such prisoner's sentence has been commuted does not change the nature of the crime and therefore in no wise affects his eligibility for parole.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1912.

State Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication dated February 13, 1912 was duly received. You state therein as follows:

> "A prisoner in the Ohio penitentiary has made application for parole, who was convicted of rape upon his daughter and sentenced to life imprisonment, and the board of pardons later recommended that the prisoner's sentence be commuted to twenty years, which was done. Is said prisoner eligible to parole?

In reply I desire to say that in my opinion to your board dated February 15th, relative to a prisoner who was serving a life sentence for murder in the first or second degree, and whose sentence had been commuted, I held that a commutation of a sentence did not in any legal sense change the crime for which the prisoner was sentenced, but simply substitutes the lesser for the greater penalty, for the same crime; and I so hold as to the prisoner referred to in your communication; the crime for which he is still serving (although sentence was commuted) is rape upon his daughter.

Section 12413 of the General Code provides:

> "Whoever has carnal knowledge of his daughter * * * forcibly and against her will, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary during life."

The section just quoted provides but one penalty, viz.: life imprisonment; and does not provide for any minimum term to be served for the crime of which he was convicted.

The General Code, Section 2169, delegating to your "board" the power to parole prisoners, provides in part as follows:

> "The board of managers (board of administration) shall establish rules and regulations by which a prisoner under sentence for other than murder in the first and second degree, having served the minimum term provided by law for the crime of which he was convicted, etc."

It seems to me that it was clearly, the spirit of the parole law, to limit the granting of a parole to any prisoner who had been convicted of such heinous crimes as murder in the first and second degree, unless the prisoner had served at least twenty-five (25) full years under said sentence; and it is just as clear that the legislature, in providing in the said Section 2169, that no prisoner should be paroled until be had served the minimum term provided by law for the crime he had committed, intended that said parole power should not be extended to any prisoner serving a sentence for a crime for which there is no minimum penalty prescribed, such as rape upon his daughter.

The legislature, in prescribing the penalty for the commission of the crime of rape upon a daughter, placed any prisoner, sentenced for such crime, ineligible to parole by not providing a minimum penalty for such crime.

The prisoner referred to in your communication is; for the reasons above stated, ineligible to parole, under the laws of Ohio.

Very respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PAROLE OFFICERS OF BOYS' INDUSTRIAL HOME—EXPENSES OF RETURNING FROM OTHER STATES, BOYS WHO HAVE VIOLATED THEIR PAROLE.

Under provision of Section 2215 General Code, parole officers of the boys' industrial home may be allowed their expenses incurred in pursuing and bringing back from other states to the institution, boys who have violated their parole.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, 1912.

State Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication, dated March 21, 1912, in which you enclose a letter addressed to your board by Hon. F. C. Gerlach, superintendent and secretary of the boys' industrial school of Lancaster, Ohio, in which he states as follows:

> "This institution has two parole officers employed whose salary and expenses for themselves and the return of boys to this institution who have violated their parole is paid by the auditor out of the state fund appropriated for the prosecution and transportation of convicts. (Section 2215, Code of Ohio.)" and submits the following question:

> "As to whether the expense is a proper one when it is necessary for the parole officer of said institution to go to other states for a boy who has violated his parole."

In reply I desire to say that Section 2091 of the General Code provides that:

> "The trustees (now the board of administration) may establish rules and regulations under which inmates may be allowed to go upon parole, in legal custody, and under the control of the trustees (board of administration) and subject at any time to be taken to the school. * * *"

Section 2092, General Code, provides:

> "The trustees (board of administration) may enforce such rules and regulations, and retake any inmate so upon parole. Their written order certified by the superintendent shall be sufficient warrant for any officer named therein to arrest and return such inmate to the school. An officer named in the order shall be under duty to arrest and return to the school any paroled inmate named therein."

Under the above last quoted section authority is vested in the board of administration to retake any inmate under parole, who has broken the conditions of his parole, and recommit him to the boys' industrial school, through its proper officer, which in this case would be the parole officer of said institution.

Section 2215 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Upon presentation of itemized vouchers properly approved by the board of managers (now the board of administration), the auditor of state shall issue his warrant upon the state treasurer to pay the salaries and necessary expenses of field officers from the appropriation for conviction and transportation of convicts. In like manner shall be paid the salaries and expenses of the parole officers of the boys' industrial school and the girls' industrial home."

and the legislature having, by the last clause of said section provided how the salaries and expenses of parole officers should be paid from the state treasury, and from which fund, I am of the opinion that the expense of returning a paroled inmate of the boys' industrial school who has violated his parole, to said institution is a proper expense to be paid as in said section provided, whenever it is necessary for the parole officer to go to any other state for such purpose.

There is a discretionary power vested in the board of administration to formulate such rules as it may deem proper, regulating the granting of paroles, and, therefore, should any inmate of the boys' industrial school violate a parole granted to him under the rules and regulations so adopted by said board, it may rearrest such inmate at any time or at any place that it deems best so to do.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

JUVENILE COURT—JURISDICTION OVER DEPENDENT AND DELINQUENT INMATES OF INCORPORATED, NON-INCORPORATED AND STATE INSTITUTIONS—POWERS OF REMOVAL AND RECOMMITMENT.

The jurisdiction of the juvenile court extends to delinquent and dependent children who are inmates of all institutions except state institutions and incorporated institutions.

Jurisdiction of the juvenile court, when once acquired, continues until said child reaches its majority, unless said court commits it to a state institution, in which case control of the child is transferred to the respective state authorities.

When a child inmate which has been committed to an institution other than those above excepted, becomes incorrigible or delinquent, the juvenile court has power in renewed proceedings or probably in the exercise of its continuing jurisdiction, to commit said child to another institution, state or otherwise.

If, in the judgment of the court, the care bestowed upon an inmate by any institution other than a state institution is deficient or detrimental to the child, said court may recommit said child to another institution.

In accordance with the above principles, the court, after having committed a dependent child to a city house of refuge, may, when such child develops incorrigibility, commit him to the boys' industrial home.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 11, 1912.

State Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 30th requesting my opinion upon the following question submitted by the superintendent of the boys' industrial school:

> "May a juvenile court after having committed a boy to a local institution such as a house of refuge, either as a delinquent or as a dependent child, re-commit the same boy to the boys' industrial school on the ground that as an inmate of the local institution he is incorrigible and therefore delinquent?"

I have taken the liberty to re-phase the question as submitted by Major Gerlach and if I have not correctly apprehended the point involved in his letter I should be pleased to reconsider the matter upon further advice from your board.

The question is one of the power of the juvenile court and is to be determined, in my opinion, solely by consideration of the statutes under which that court operates.

Section 1642 General Code is in part as follows:

> "Such courts of common pleas, probate courts, insolvency courts and superior courts within the provisions of this chapter shall have jurisdiction over and with respect to delinquent, neglected and dependent minors, under the age of seventeen years, not inmates of a state institution, or any institution incorporated under the laws of the state for the care and correction of delinquent, neglected and dependent children * * *.

Section 1643 General Code provides as follows:

"When a child under the age of seventeen years comes into the custody of the court under the provisions of this chapter, such child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, a ward of the court, until he or she attains the age of twenty-one years. The power of the court over such child shall continue until the child attains such age."

Section 1644 provides in part as follows:

"For the purpose of this chapter, the words 'delinquent child' includes any child under seventeen years of age who violates a law of this state or a city or village ordinance, or who is incorrigible; * * *."

Section 1652 General Code provides in part as follows:

"In case of a delinquent child the judge may * * * commit such child, if a boy, to a training school for boys, or, if a girl, to an industrial school for girls, or commit the child to any institution within the county that may care for delinquent children, or be provided by a city or county suitable for the care of such children, or to the boys' industrial school * * *; or to any state institution which may be established for the care of delinquent boys, * * *. A child committed to such institution shall be subjected to the control of the trustees thereof, who shall have power to parole such child * * * and, on the recommendation of the trustees, the superintendent shall have power to discharge such child from custody; * * *"

Section 1683 General Code provides in part as follows:

"This chapter shall be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child, in order that it may be educated and cared for, as far as practicable in such manner as best subserves its moral and physical welfare, * * *."

There are certain ambiguities apparent upon the face of these related sections. At the out-set it is provided in Section 1642 that the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts shall not extend to delinquent minors, inmates of an institution of the state or of an institution incorporated under the laws of the state for the care and correction of delinquent or dependent children. On the other hand, it is provided in Section 1643 that any child who comes into the custody of the court shall remain within the power of the court until he attains the age of twenty-one years.

By Section 1644 any child who violates the law or is incorrigible is a "delinquent child," and there seems to be no reason, except the language of Section 1642 insofar as it applies, why an inmate of a municipal house of refuge or other local institution might not become, while such inmate, a "delinquent child" though committed to such institution as a "dependent child."

Again, in seeming contradiction to Section 1643 it is provided in Section 1652 that a child committed to "such institution" (and the antecedent of the word "such" is extremely obscure) shall be subject to the control of the trustees and not of the court.

Section 1683 requires that the provisions of the chapter shall be liberally construed for the purposes therein mentioned, and I confess I do not know what construction would be a "liberal" one with respect to the question which is now submitted.

Without attempting to reconcile the seeming inconsistencies above referred to let it be inquired as to what is "an institution incorporated under the laws of this state for the care and correction of delinquent, neglected and dependent children" within the meaning of Section 1642 General Code. At the out-set permit me to state that I am of the opinion that this phrase is to be limited to its exact primary meaning because it does not appear that to give it any unusual construction would be to accord to it the "liberal construction" enjoined by Section 1683. That is to say, in my judgment, the jurisdiction of the juvenile court ought, under Section 1683 be extended to all persons within the natural intendment of the chapter, the presumption being against a restriction of that jurisdiction. Therefore, unless a local institution is an incorporated one I am of the opinion that its inmates are subject to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Applying this test to the house of refuge of Cincinnati, which is the institution directly concerned in Major Gerlach's inquiry, it at once appears that that institution is one of those, the inmates of which are not excluded from the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. It is an institution of the city under the direction of the director of public safety. (Section 4097, etc., General Code.) It is not "incorporated under the laws of the state," therefore its inmates are subject to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Again, it is apparent that whatever may be the meaning of the phrase "such institution" in Section 1652 above quoted it cannot refer to municipal institutions under the care of the director of public safety, but only to institutions controlled by trustees and presided over by a superintendent. In fact there is strong internal evidence here to the effect that the antecedent of the phrase "such institution" is "the boys industrial school * * * the Ohio state reformatory * * * any state institution which may be established for the care of delinquent boys or * * * the girls' industrial home or * * * any state institution which may be established for the care of delinquent girls."

Such, I believe to be the true construction of Section 1652. If this be the case then as to institutions other than state institutions Section 1643 controls and the commitment of a delinquent or dependent child to an institution other than a state institution does not end the power and jurisdiction of the court over the individual.

For the reasons above suggested, I am of the opinion that the following propositions are true:

1. The original continuing jurisdiction of the juvenile court extends to delinquent and dependent children, inmates of a city institution for the care of such children or to any other institution excepting a state institution and an incorporated institution.

2. When the juvenile court once acquires jurisdiction of a delinquent or dependent child, its jurisdiction of such child continues until majority unless it commits him to a state institution, in which case the care and custody of the child is imposed upon the trustees and superintendent of such institution, or more properly upon the board of administration and the superintendent of such institution.

3. If an inmate of a city institution or of any other institution, excepting a state institution and an incorporated institution, whether committed to such institution by proceedings under the juvenile act or otherwise, is or becomes while therein confined incorrigible or commits a crime or in other respects becomes delinquent, the juvenile court has full power, at least upon proceedings de novo and perhaps in the exercise of its continuing jurisdiction to commit the child to another institution and specifically to a state institution.

4. I think it is true, although this question is not directly raised by Major Gerlach's inquiry, that if a delinquent or dependent child is committed by the juvenile court to an incorporated institution for the care of delinquent and dependent children, such court may, in the exercise of its continuing jurisdiction recommit such child to another institution if, in the judgment of the court, the care and treatment of the child at such incorporated institution is improper or leads to delinquency. Such would not be the case, however, as to those committed to a state institution.

As I have already intimated Major Gerlach's specific question is as to whether or not the juvenile court of Hamilton county may lawfully commit an inmate of the house of refuge to the boys' industrial school as a delinquent child. He submits with his letter a statement of a certain case from which it appears that the boy in question was originally committed to the house of refuge as a dependent child, and while at the house of refuge developed incorrigibility and upon complaint, presumably of the authorities of the house of refuge, this boy was adjudged a delinquent child and committed to the boys' industrial school. The proceeding in which this last adjudication was made seems to be a new and independent one.

For the reasons above suggested I am of the opinion that the commitment to the boys' industrial school, under the circumstances above stated, is legal.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

LONGVIEW HOSPITAL—APPROPRIATION—AMOUNT ENTITLED TO FOR YEAR 1912—"MAINTENANCE."

In view of the statement of their intention made by the chairmen of the senate and house finance committees, and of the obligation to keep up Longview hospital as a public institution, the appropriation act with reference to that institution may be broadly construed so as to fully justify the conclusion that said hospital is entitled to the same proportion of the total amount appropriated for the year beginning February 6, 1912, as it received in former years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1912.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have given further consideration to your letter of January 9, 1912, as to whether Longview hospital should be entitled to the same proportion of the total amount appropriated for the year beginning February 16, 1912, both for maintenance and ordinary repairs and improvements, as it had received in prior years; also to my opinions to you upon this matter, dated December 12, 1911 and January 9, 1912; and I have devoted particular attention to the statement of the respective chairmen of the senate and house finance committees, addressed to me on January 8, 1912, which is as follows:

> "We, the undersigned chairmen, respectively, of the senate finance committee and the finance committee of the house of representatives of the state of Ohio, hereby represent to you that the respective finance committees of both houses of the general assembly, in arriving at the total amount of $3,399,330 appropriated for maintenance of the state in> stitutions of the state of Ohio, for the year beginning February 16, 1912, made up said amount with the understanding and belief that the Longview hospital would be entitled to the proportion of said total amount for said year beginning February 16, 1912, as it had received in prior years, and it was also the understanding and intent of the respective finance committee aforesaid, and the belief when the bill was recommended to the general assembly for passage, that the Longview hospital was to participate in the general appropriation of $337,800 made for the respective state institutions for ordinary repairs and improvements, as it had in prior years. And the memorandum of the records of estimates guiding the said respective committees in arriving at said total amounts shows that that was the intention of the respective committees, and in recommending the passage of said appropriation bills the recommendations were made to the general assembly upon such belief."

and also to Section 33 of the act establishing your board, 102 O. L. at page 221, as follows:

> "The state shall continue to provide for the maintenance of Longview hospital, and the board in making estimates for the maintenance of the institutions under their control shall include a suitable amount therefor. Out of the moneys appropriated for the maintenance of state institutions, the board shall apportion a proper allowance for said hospital. In all matters relating to the expenditure thereof, the board shall have the same powers as in other like institutions. In all other matters the board of directors of said hospital shall continue to have and exercise the same power and duties now provided by law."

It seems to me that the first sentence of said section namely: "The state shall continue to provide for the maintenance of Longview hospital * * *," can only mean that the state is to continue to provide for Longview hospital in the manner as formerly, and that the word "maintenance," as used here, in Section 33, has its broadest meaning and is not used in the same sense as in Section 31, where it is provided that the appropriations for the institutions shall be of three classes: (1) maintenance, (2) ordinary repairs and improvements, (3) special purposes.

Longview hospital is an institution recognized by the state, and the management of which is provided for by the laws of the state; it is essentially a public institution, and though it has been held that it is not really a state institution within the meaning of the constitution, still, the public, in this case, must necessarily mean the public of the state of Ohio and, therefore, unless the legislature plainly expresses its intention to deprive this hospital of part of the assistance heretofore rendered it by the state, it seems to me it should be held, in view of Section 33, that this assistance is to be given to the same extent as formerly; in other words, that this institution is not to be deprived of this assistance by implication, but that if any implication is necessary it must be favorable to the institution. The word "maintenance," in its broad sense, means (Century Dictionary):

> "To hold in an existing state or condition; preserve from lapse, decline, failure or cessation; keep up; to furnish means for the subsistence or existence of; sustain or assist with the means of livelihood; provide for; support."

and I take it that this is the meaning of the word "maintenance" as used in Section 33.

Before the passage of this act, appropriations for this institution were not divided into the three classes of maintenance, ordinary repairs and special purposes; nor were appropriations made for said separate purposes. This classification, it must be remembered, is made by the act which provides for your board, and which contains Section 33, above quoted; and, therefore, the appropriation formerly made for this institution may well be considered in arriving at the intention of the legislature towards this institution. I do not deem it necessary to go through all the appropriation acts, but I find that the appropriation made for Longview hospital in 1910, 191 O. L. 29, is as follows:

Longview Hospital

"Salaries of officers and trustees' expenses	$4,000 00
"Ordinary repairs and improvements	5,000 00
"Current expenses	65,000 00"

and again, at page 186, the appropriation is as follows:

Longview Hospital

"Current expenses	$135,000 00
"Salaries of officers and trustees' expenses	4,300 00
"Ordinary repairs and improvements	10,000 00
"Furniture and carpets	2,500 00"

It is readily seen that all the items mentioned in these appropriations can properly be classed under the head of "maintenance," though, in fact, none of them were made under that head; but they were, undoubtedly, made for the purpose of maintaining the hospital, under the definition above given; and, in my view, it was the intention of the legislature that that maintenance should be provided for as in former years. In think that this conclusion, bearing in mind the fact that this is a public institution, favored and fostered by the state, can reasonably and justly be deduced from the language used by the legislature; by taking into consideration the statement given by the chairman of the finance committees of the house and senate, which I have quoted above, all doubt as to its correctness is removed.

It is, therefore, my opinion that Longview hospital is entitled to the same proportion of the total amount appropriated for the year beginning February 6, 1912, both for maintenance and ordinary repairs and improvements, as said terms are used in Section 31 of the act referred to, as it has received in prior years.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CLEVELAND STATE HOSPITAL—LEGISLATIVE ACT PRESCRIBING SALE OF LAND TO CITY OF CLEVELAND BEFORE SEPTEMBER 1, 1911, IS DIRECTORY AND NOT MANDATORY.

The legislative act providing for the sale of land to the Cleveland state hospital, is directory and not mandatory in its provision that the city was to pay for said property before September 1, 1911, and when the city has acted in good faith and is unable to complete the necessary legislation within the time specified, the power of the board of administration to execute the proper deed is not affected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 20, 1912.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter dated April 17th, which is as follows:

> "The last general assembly authorized the board of trustees of the Cleveland state hospital and their successors to sell to the city of Cleveland, for $18,000.00, at private sale, certain property described in said act. (102 O. L., 384-5) and in said authority specified that the city of Cleveland was to purchase and pay for said property before September 1, 1911.
> "For the reason specified in the correspondence herewith transmitted to you for your consideration, the city of Cleveland was unable to pass the necessary legislation to enable the city to pay for and take over said property as provided for in said act before said date, September 1, 1911, but has now passed the necessary legislation and tendered said board of administration, as successors of the board of trustees of the Cleveland state hospital, the purchase price and now ask this board to execute a deed for said property described in said act.
> "In view of the fact that the act provided same should be done before September 1, 1911, we would ask your opinion as to whether or not this board now has authority to execute a deed for said premises to the city of Cleveland, as provided by said act, the time having elapsed within which the city of Cleveland had a right to purchase same from the state."

In reply I desire to say that I have carefully examined the act referred to authorizing your board to sell and execute a proper deed to the city of Cleveland, Ohio for the land described in the said act, and also find that on August 19, 1911, the director of public service of the city of Cleveland, the proper official in charge of such matters, notified the board of trustees of the Cleveland state hospital that the council of the city of Cleveland was not in session and that the city solicitor of said city had been instructed to draw the necessary legislation which would permit the issuing of bonds to the extent of $18,000.00 in order that the city might acquire the land specified in the said act for park purposes, and stated therein that it would be impossible to have the necessary legislation enacted so that this property could be purchased prior to September 1st. In view of all the facts the said director of public service requested the said board to delay action on the sale of this property to other than the city until such time as the city would be able to pass the necessary legislation, issue the bonds, and pay for the said property.

I am of the legal opinion that this act of the legislature authorizing the board of trustees of the Cleveland state hospital or its successors in office to sell and execute the proper deed to the city of Cleveland, although it specified a duty devolved upon a public board and specified therein the time for the performance, must, nevertheless, be regarded as directory and not mandatory. It is a fundamental rule recognized in law that there is a consequential distinction between directory and mandatory statutes in that:

> "The consequential distinction between directory and mandatory statutes is that the violation of the former is attended with no consequences, while a failure to comply with the requirements of the latter is productive of serious results. The distinction grows out of a fundamental difference in the nature, importance and relation to the legislative purpose of the statutes so classified. The statutory provisions which may thus be departed from with impunity without affecting the validity of statutory proceedings are usually those which relate to the mode or time of doing that which is essential to effect the aim and purpose of the legislature or some incident of the essential act."

Again,

> "Where a statute is affirmative it does not necessarily imply that the mode or time mentioned in it is exclusive, and that the act provided for, if done at a different time or in a different manner, will have no effect."

And it is a general rule in the construction of statutes to give to the intention of the legislature, and also that the legislature intended what is reasonable and especially that the act shall have effect and that its purpose shall not be thwarted by any trivial omission or a departure from it in some formal, incidental or comparatively unimportant particular.

Under the rules above stated, I am thoroughly of the opinion that it was the intention of the legislature that the city of Cleveland, which is a political subdivision of the state, should have the first right and privilege of purchasing the real estate described in the said act for park purposes, which is a power vested in the municipality to maintain, and that being the case, it was necessary to specify some time within which the same should be done, and in fixing the time—namely, September 1, 1911—did not make it, in my opinion, a mandatory duty for the board of trustees to its successors in office to refuse to sell and execute the proper deed to the said city of Cleveland, and especially is that true in view of the fact that the said act was not approved until June 14, 1911, and the further fact of the inability of the city of Cleveland to enact the proper legislation necessary to provide for the necessary funds to pay for the said land, and, therefore, I am of the further opinion that the purpose and intent of the legislature should not be thwarted by this trivial omission as to the time of purchasing and execution of the deed because the city of Cleveland had acted in good faith and through its director of public service it had notified the board of trustees of the said hospital of its inability to purchase and take over the said property by the time specified in the act itself but notified them of its intention and took initiative steps in the premises to carry out the things specified in the act.

There is another general rule of construction recognized almost universally by the courts which is:

> "Provisions regulating the duties of public officers and specifying the time for their performance are in that regard generally directory. Though a statute directs a thing to be done at a particular time, it does not necessarily follow that it may not be done afterwards."

For the foregoing reasons I am of the legal opinion that your board has authority to sell and execute a proper deed to the city of Cleveland for the said land described in the said act, believing that a great injustice would be done to the city of Cleveland were your board to take any other action than carrying into effect the intention of the legislature as shown by said act.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONVICT LABOR—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER MAY CONTRACT FOR, WITHOUT ADVERTISING FOR BIDS—COST OF MAINTAINING LABORERS DEVOLVES ON BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—STATE NOT WITHIN STATUTE UNLESS SPECIFIED.

Sections 14 and 24 of the act of 102 O. L. 215, empowers the board of administration to fix the price of labor supplied by the board, from institutions under its control.

When such labor is contracted for by the state highway commissioner, with the board of administration, under the rule that the state is not subject to a statute unless expressly contained within its terms, the requirement of advertisement and bids is not applicable, and the highway commissioner may advertise for bids with the labor item omitted.

The cost of the maintenance of the laborers must be borne by the board of administration and cannot be borne by the department hiring the same from the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 26, 1912.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of June 24th, wherein you state that the state highway department has entered into certain contracts for road improvements under its jurisdiction, less the common labor in connection therewith, which the board of administration is expected to furnish from the penitentiary. You state, also, that the board of administration is ready to furnish the labor, but is not desirous of paying the additional expenses for the maintenance of the men to be engaged therein. You request my opinion as to the propriety of charging the expense of maintaining the prisoners and the entire expense of building and keeping up the camps which would have to be constructed from the state aid fund, and suggest that each county ought to bear this expense.

Your question invites a consideration of the following provisions of law; Section 14 of the act creating the state board of administration (102 O. L., 215) provides that:

> "The board shall fix the prices at which all labor performed and all articles manufactured in said institutions shall be furnished to the state or to the political subdivisions and public institutions thereof, as is or may be provided by law, which shall be uniform to all and not higher than the usual market prices for like labor and articles."

Section 24 of the act provides:

> "The board may detail temporarily from a correctional or penal institution, with the consent of the managing officer thereof, any inmates under its control, to perform specified labor."

My examination of the act from which these sections are quoted leads me to the conclusion that Section 24 is controlled by Section 14, so that laborers temporarily detailed from a correctional or penal institution are to be regarded as performing the labor "in the institutions" within the meaning of Section 14. It thus follows that it is the duty of the board of administration to fix the prices at which labor will be performed by laborers temporarily detailed from correctional or penal institutions in accordance with Section 14.

The following sections of the state highway law (102 O. L., 333 et seq.) governs the matter of letting contracts for improvements thereunder.

> "Section 27. * * * the state highway commissioner shall advertise for bids for two consecutive weeks * * *. Such notice shall state that plans and specifications * * * are on file, * * * and the time in which bids therefor will be received. Subject to the approval of the county commissioners the state highway commissioner shall award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder."

Section 28 provides for the award and making of the contract, and expressly authorizes the highway commissioner to contract separately for the grading and surfacing respectively, but not separately for the labor and materials.

Sections 29, 30 and 31 provide detailed regulations which are not necessarily involved here.

Section 32, and succeeding sections, deal with the apportionment of the cost of making an improvement, as follows:

> "Section 32. Upon the completion of the improvement the state highway commissioner shall immediately ascertained the cost and expense thereof and apportion the same to the state, county, township or townships and abutting property. He shall certify the total cost and expense of the improvement and a statement of the apportionment to the county commissioners and trustees of the township or townships.
> "Section 33. The state's proportion of the cost and expense of the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of any highway under the provisions of this chapter shall be paid by the treasurer of state upon the warrant of the auditor of state issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner from an appropriation made to carry out its provisions. The county's, township's and property owner's proportion of the cost and expense of such construction, improvement, maintenance and repairs, shall be paid by the treasurer of the county, in which the highway is located upon the warrant of the county auditor issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner from any funds in the county treasury for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of roads.
> "Section 35. Except as otherwise provided, one-fourth of the cost and expense of such improvement shall be apportioned to the township or townships in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned three-fifths shall be a charge upon the whole township or townships, and two fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the owners of the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of land so located. * * *

"Section 39. Payment of the cost of construction of such improvement shall be made as the work of construction progresses, upon estimates made by the engineer in charge of the work when approved by the state highway commissioner. No payment made by the state or county on a contract for such work before its completion shall be in excess of ninety per cent. of the value of the work performed. Ten per cent. of the value of the work performed shall be held until the completion of the contract in accordance with the plans and specifications."

There are other provisions of the highway law describing in detail the procedure of paying for an improvement made thereunder, but none of them are material to the question which you submit.

It is clear there is no specific authority for the use of convict labor upon the highways of the state. That question, however, is not submitted to me, and I shall assume the right of the highway commissioner to use convict labor. If he has this right, he has the right, I think, to contract separately for such labor and to include the cost therof in the total cost of the improvement which is to be divided as provided in the sections above quoted.

On the other hand, the board of administration is without authority to make a charge against any state department or subdivision for housing or maintaining any of the state's wards or charges. It is the duty of the state and of the board of administration, as the agent of the state, to house and maintain all the inmates of all the state institutions whether in buildings provided at such institutions, or elsewhere. The board of administration, however, has the power to fix the price of the labor of convicts, and, as I interpret the statutes, it is its duty so to do; so that the board is without authority to permit the highway department or any other state department or subdivision to have the benefit of convict labor without paying for it.

It seems to me, therefore with the foreging considerations, the answer to your question at once suggests itself. The cost of maintaining prisoners furnished for labor on the public highways under the supervision of the state highway commissioner is not a proper subject of contract by the commissioner, nor a proper charge upon any fund of the state or county. The cost of labor, however, is a matter with respect to which the board of administration and the highway commissioner may contract (assuming the right of the highway commissioner to use convict labor at all); and the board having fixed the price of such labor, and the highway commissioner having entered into a contract with the board for the use of such labor in a specific capacity, the amount due the board of administration then becomes an item of the total cost of the construction of the improved road or roads to be apportioned in accordance with the provisions of the highway department laws.

In addition to the legal obstacles at which I have already hinted, another one exists which I think I ought to mention. It is the duty of the state highway commissioner to advertise for bids preparatory to entering into any contract in connection with the construction of roads, so that, assuming that it is proper for the commissioner to separate the common labor from the other items of service to be performed by the principal contractor, it would seem still to be his duty to advertise for bids for furnishing such common labor. I am inclined to the opinion, however, that in the absence of a statute expressly forbidding the highway commissioner from contracting directly with the state to the exclusion of competitors in this particular, and in the face of the express provision of the act creating the board of administration, to which I have already called attention, that both the right of the commissioner to let contracts less the common labor involved, and his further right to contract with the board of administration for the common labor without inviting competitive bids, rest upon a common foundation; namely, the doctrine of statutory interpretation by virtue of which the state is not deemed bound by its own statutes unless specifically so provided therein. That is to say, it not being provided that in furnishing labor to a state department required to advertise for bids in the doing of work committed to its administration, the state board of administration, the state's agency, shall compete with private contractors, nor that such state departments in inviting bids shall notify or otherwise solicit their participation in the competitive bidding of the board of administration, it follows that the two state departments are free to contract with each other regardless of the provisions for competitive bidding, and regardless, also, of the failure of the act creating the department using the labor specifically to authorize either the use of such convict labor or an agreement to pay for it entered into without competitive bidding. The case is one of implied exceptions to an otherwise express provision of the highway law, and the exception is no greater in the case of the requirement that competitive bids shall be invited than it is in the case of the requirement that the contract for construction shall be let as a whole.

The conclusion which I have reached will enable the board of administration to protect the state against payment of more than its proper share of the expense of the highway improvement, and will otherwise meet the situation which you desire to guard against, excepting in one particular—that it will necessarily diminish the maintenance appropriation for the Ohio penitentiary. This, however, is unavoidable as the prisoners of the Ohio penitentiary at all events must be maintained by the state.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

DISPOSITION OF ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN OF INMATES OF HOSPITALS FOR INSANE AND GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL HOME—DUTIES OF CHILDREN'S HOMES, COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION AND FATHER OF CHILD—CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

Illegitimate children born of girls who are inmates of the girls' industrial home or of unmarried girl inmates of hospitals for the insane, should be placed in the children's home of the county or district of the residence of the mother before her confinement in the institution. Or, if such county has no children's home the county commissioners should be notified to provide for them. The father of the child should be required to pay for its keeping.

The officers of the institution, or of the county, township or municipality that is maintaining such child may enter into an agreement with the acknowledged father for the payment of its keep and require security from said father to save the public the expense of keeping such child.

The children of married women should be turned over to the father if he is the husband of the mother and is able to provide properly for such child.

Facts suggesting criminal liability should be presented by the board of administration to the prosecuting attorney of the county wherein the offense was committed.

The Ohio Board of Administration, HON. A. W. THURMAN, President, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your favor of June 5, 1912, is received in which you inquire as follows:

> "First: What is the lawful disposition to be made of the illegitimate children born of girls who are inmates of the girls' industrial home?
> "Second: Can we legally enter into any arrangement with the men who acknowledge the parentage of such children, for the support of the same?
> "Third: These girls being wards of the state, is it the duty of this board, or the managing officer of the institution, to report to the proper authorities, (you designating such authorities), such cases as above mentioned?
> "Fourth: What disposition should be made of children born of unmarried or married women who are inmates of the hospitals for the insane?
> "Fifth: Is it our duty or the duty of anyone to bring criminal proceedings against men who are known to be guilty of having sexual intercourse with said wards?"

There is no specific provision of statute regulating the disposition of children born of inmates of the girls' industrial home, or of inmates of the hospitals for the insane. Those mothers who are insane are not competent to properly care for their offispring, even though they were not confined in a hospital for the insane. The inmates of the girls' industrial home cannot properly take care of their children in such institution.

The parent is the natural custodian and support of his child. This control will not be interfered with by the state unless the interests of the child or of society require it.

The foregoing principle is enunciated by Sullivan, J., at page 377, in the case of Travis vs. State, 12 Cir. Court, N. S., 374, where he says:

> "But when the custody, education and moral training of the child is claimed by contending parents, the courts, in determining the question, keep in view solely the interest of the child; and when the interests of the child require it, commits its custody to strangers in face of parental appeal. If the interests of society and good government require the removal of children up to a certain age from evil influences, the state in doing so is in the exercise of its police power.
> "The right to the custody and society of children in the parent is a natural one and one which the state claims no right to take away except when the interests of society require it.
> "Two interests require such intervention on the part of the state—that of the child, and that of society."

A parent who has been committed to some penal institution has forfeited its right to the control and custody of its child during the time such parent is confined in such institution.

The statute requires the father of a child, legitimate or illegitimate, or the mother if charged by law with the maintenance thereof, to provide a child under the age of sixteen years with necessary or proper home, care, food and clothing, if such parent is able to do so.

Section 13008, General Code, provides:

> "Whoever, being the father, or when charged by law with the maintenance thereof, the mother, of a legitimate or illegitimate child under sixteen years of age, or the husband of a pregnant woman, living in this state, being able by reason of property, or by labor or earnings, to provide such child or such woman with necessary or proper home, care, food and clothing, neglects or refuses so to do, shall be imprisoned in jail or workhouse at hard labor not less than six months nor more than one year, or in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years."

Such parents are required to pay the reasonable cost of the keeping of their child, when such child is in a county or district home, by virtue of Section 13012, General Code, which provides:

> "Whoever, being the father, or when charged by law with the maintenance thereof, the mother, of a legitimate or illegitimate child under sixteen years of age, being legally an inmate of a county or district children's home in this state, neglects or refuses to pay to the trustees of such home, the reasonable cost of keeping such child in such home when able so to do by reason of property, or by labor or earnings, shall be imprisoned in a jail or workhouse at hard labor not less than six months nor more than one year, or in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years."

The first obligation to support a child is upon the father, and if he is able so to do by reason of property, or by labor or earnings, and neglects or refuses to so support his child under sixteen years of age, he may be punished criminally for such neglect and refusal. The mother, if she is charged by law with the maintenance thereof, is also required to support the child if she is able. These statutes apply to both legitimate and illegitimate children.

If neither parent is able to support or provide for the child, and such child is not otherwise provided for, it becomes a public charge.

The statutes provide for the establishing and maintaining of childrens' homes by the county and for admission thereto of abandoned, neglected, or dependent children.

Children's homes may be established by a county by virtue of Section 3077, et seq., General Code.

Section 3089, General Code, provides for admission thereto as follows:

> "The home shall be an asylum for children under the age of sixteen years, of sound mind and free from infectious or contagious diseases, who have resided in the county not less than one year, and for such other children under such age from other counties in the state where there is no home, as the trustees of such home and the persons or authority having the custody and control of such children, by contract agree upon, who are, in the opinion of the trustees, suitable children for admission by reason of orphanage, abandonment or neglect by parents, or inability of parents to provide for them."

A child to be admitted to such home must be under sixteen years of age. There is no minimum age fixed. There is a requirement that the child must have resided in the county one year. This provision is made to establish the county which is liable for the keeping of the child in the home, and does not limit the right of admission to children over one year of age. The domicile of the child is that of the parent. If the parent has had a legal residence of one year in the county, a child under one year of age, would be entitled to admission to the children's home of that county. In the case of the persons who are to become mothers in the institutions mentioned, the legal residence of the child is that which its mother had before her confinement in the institution.

Sections 3090 and 3091, General Code, provide how children may be admitted to such homes.

Section 3090, General Code, provides:

> "They shall be admitted by the superintendent on the order of a majority of such trustees, accompanied by a statement of facts signed by them, setting forth the name, age, birthplace, and present condition of the child named in such order, which statement of facts contained in the order, together with any additional facts connected with the history and condition of such children shall be, by the superintendent, recorded in a record provided for that purpose, which shall be confidential and only open for inspection at the discretion of the trustees."

Section 3091, General Code, provides:

> "When a child maintained in the infirmary of any county becomes eligible to the children's home of such county or district, such fact shall be certified to the trustees thereof by the infirmary directors. All children found by township trustees to be proper subjects for the care of the county, and eligible to such children's home, shall be certified to the trustees of the home by the trustees of the township of which they are residents, and shall be conveyed to such home by the township trustees, and the expenses thereof paid from the township poor fund. The superintendent of the home may provide and care for temporarily until the proper officers are notified, any child found abandoned and destitute, and which is eligible to the children's home."

The provisions of Section 3092, General Code, govern where a county has not provided a children's home. Said section provides:

"Except such as are imbeciles, idiots or insane, no child or children entitled to admission into a children's home shall be kept or maintained in any county infirmary in this state. In any county where such home has not already been provided, the board of commissioners shall make temporary provisions for such children by transferring them to the nearest children's home where they can be received and kept at the expense of the county, or by leasing suitable premises for that purpose, which shall be furnished, provided and managed in all respects as provided by law for the support and management of children's homes, but the commissioners may provide for the care and support of such children within their respective counties, in the manner deemed best for the interest of such children, and they shall levy an additional tax, which shall be used for that purpose only."

By virtue of this latter section the commissioners of a county not having a children's home, are required to make provision for such children, either in the nearest children's home, or within the county.

Two or more counties may join to form and establish a district children's home by virtue of Section 3109, et seq., General Code.

Section 3109, General Code, provides:

"In accordance with the purposes, provisions, and regulations relating to county children's homes, when in their opinion the public good so demands, the commissioners of two or more adjoining counties, not to exceed four, may form themselves into a joint board, and proceed to organize a district for the establishment and support of a children's home, and provide for the purchase of a site, and the erection of necessary buildings thereon."

Section 3122, General Code, provides for admission to a district children's home as follows:

"Children under the custody of parents, guardian or next friend, who, by reason of neglect, abuse or from the moral depravity, habitual drunkenness, incapacity or unwillingness of such legal custodian to exercise proper care or discipline over them, are being brought up to lead idle, vagrant, or criminal lives, shall be committed to the guardianship of the trustees of a county or district children's home, if the trustees of the township in which they have a legal settlement, or the infirmary directors of the county, after a careful and impartial investigation of the condition and facts, as they exist, deem it manifestly requisite for the future welfare of such children, and for the benefit and protection of society."

Section 3121, General Code, provides:

> "The commissioners and trustees of townships in counties in which no children's home or other similar institution is located, and adjoining a county or district in which there is such a home, may send to it children for whom they have to provide, if the trustees of the home can receive them without detriment to children of their own county or district. The cost of maintaining these children in the home shall be no greater than the per capita cost of suitably providing for and educating the children of the county or district in the home to which they are so sent."

The foregoing provisions of the statutes are sufficient to authorize your board to provide for the disposition of the children of the inmates of the institutions you mention.

The father should be looked to first for the care and custody of the child. If the father is the husband of the mother, such child should be placed in his charge if he is a proper person to take care of it, and is able to provide for it. The reputed father of an illegitimate child should be required to support such child. His liability can be fixed in the manner hereinafter set forth.

In their present condition the mothers are not able, by labor and earnings, to keep the child. If they are able by reason of having property, they are liable for the support of their children.

If such child becomes a public charge, by reason of the inability of the parents to provide for it, then application should be made to the superintendent of the county or district children's home of the county of its mother's legal residence for admission of the child to such home. If such county has no county or district children's home, then application should be made to the county commissioners for the relief of the child.

Section 2542, General Code, provides:

> "Unless the approval of the probate court is first obtained, no child under the age of one year shall be separated from its mother, if such mother is an inmate of a county infirmary."

This section applies to persons in the county infirmary and does not apply to inmates of a state institution.

You ask further as to an agreement for the support of a bastard child by the acknowledged father.

Section 12110, General Code, provides:

> "When an unmarried woman, who has been delivered of or is pregnant with a bastard child, makes a complaint in writing, under oath, before a justice of the peace, charging a person with being the father of such child, he thereupon shall issue his warrant, directed to any sheriff or constable of the state, commanding him to pursue and arrest such accused person in any county therein, and bring him forthwith before such justice to answer such complaint."

Section 12114, General Code, provides:

> "If, during the examination before the justice, or before judgment in the court of common pleas, the accused pays or secures to be paid, to the complainant, such amount of money or property as she agrees to receive in full satisfaction, and gives bond to the state with sufficient surety, to be approved by the justice, court or judge in vacation, conditioned to save any county, township, or municipal corporation within the state free from all charges for the maintenance of such bastard child, such justice, court or judge, shall discharge him from custody, on his paying the costs of prosecution. Such agreement must be made or acknowledged by both parties, in the presence of the justice, court or judge, who thereupon shall enter a memorandum thereof on his docket, or cause it to be made upon the journal."

Section 12134, General Code, provides:

"When a woman has a bastard child, and neglects to bring a suit for its maintenance, or commences one and fails to prosecute it to final judgment, the trustees of a township, or treasurer of a municipal corporation, interested in the support of such child, or the directors of a county infirmary in which she becomes a charge, when sufficient security is not offered to save such county, township, or municipal corporation from expense, may make complaint in behalf thereof, against him who is accused of begetting such child, or take up and prosecute a complaint begun by the mother of such child."

Section 12135, General Code, provides:

"The directors of a county infirmary, trustees of a township, or treasurer of a municipal corporation, in which a bastard child becomes a charge, may sue and recover upon any bond given to the state in a proceeding against such child's reputed father. The provisions of this chapter, and all the remedies herein allowed, apply to all cases in which the infirmary directors, trustees of townships, or treasurers of municipal corporations, are authorized to commence or prosecute a complaint against the reputed father of an illegitimate child."

In order for an agreement between the mother and father of a bastard child for full satisfaction to the mother to be binding it must be signed and acknowledged before a justice of the peace, court or judge, in a proceeding in bastardy.

If the mother refuses to bring such action, or fails to prosecute an action of bastardy and the child becomes a public charge the officers of the political division that is interested in the support of the child may maintain the action.

There is no provision authorizing such officers to enter into an agreement with the father for the support of the child. Section 12134, General Code, contains this clause:

"* * * when sufficient security is not offered to save such county, township or municipal corporation from expense, may make complaint in behalf thereof, * * *"

The right of such officers to maintain such action for bastardy depends upon whether sufficient security is offered to save the public from the expense of keeping such child. This contemplates that the officers may take security for the support of the child without bringing a bastardy proceeding. The father is legally bound to support his illegitimate child, and if he enters into an agreement with a person or public institution to keep said child and he binds himself to pay for such keeping, such a contract would be legal and binding upon the father.

The officers of the county, township, or municipality who are put to expense in keeping a bastard child may enter into an agreement with the father to pay for such expense and may take a bond or other security from him that such child will not be of expense to the public. Such an agreement may be entered into without the bringing of a proceeding in bastardy.

Your questions will be answered in the order in which asked:

First: The illegitimate children born of girls who are inmates of the girls' industrial home, should be placed in the children's home of the county or district of the residence of the mother before her confinement in the institution. If such county has no children's home, then the county commissioners of such county should be notified to provide for them. The father of the child should be required to pay for the keeping of the child.

Second: The officers of the institution, or of the county, township, or municipality, that is supporting and keeping such child may enter into an agreement with the acknowledged father for the payment of the expense of keeping such child.

Third: Your board through its officers, or through the managing officer of the institution should notify the superintendent of the children's home, or the county commissioners to provide for such dependent children.

Fourth: The children of married women should be turned over to the father, if he is the husband of the mother, and is able to provide for such child. In the case of unmarried women in the hospitals for the insane, the child should be disposed of as in case of children of the inmates of the girls' industrial home.

Fifth: If your board or the managing officer of an institution, have knowledge, or have reason to believe that the criminal laws of the state have been violated in connection with the wards of the state, the facts should be laid before the prosecuting attorney of the county wherein the offense was committed, so that the same may be investigated and prosecutions brought by him as he deems best.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PAROLE OF PRISONERS—CONTROL OF BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION AND CONTROL OF COURT—PROCEDURE FOR RELEASE OF PAROLE—SUSPENSION OF SENTENCE TO PENITENTIARY OR REFORMATORY AND TO OTHER INSTITUTIONS.

Under the act of 99 O. L. 339, the jurisdiction of the board of administration over persons sentenced to the penitentiary or the reformatory, is exclusive and when the sentence to these institutions is suspended and the defendant placed upon probation, the court has no further control.

When such defendants are placed on probation, triplicate copies of the judgment shall be made; one for the board, and one for the warden of the penitentiary or for the superintendent of the reformatory to which defendant was sentenced.

Until these copies have been made, and forwarded by the clerk, and the board has sent back to the clerk, the order for parole, and until the requirements of the board have been complied with, the defendant cannot lawfully be released.

The board has no control over persons sentenced to institutions other than the penitentiary or reformatory. The defendant so sentenced and paroled is under the supervision of the court through the probation officer appointed by it.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 1, 1912.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have requested my opinion as to the construction of the sections of the General Code of Ohio governing the parole of persons who have pleaded or been found guilty of felonies or misdemeanors, and sentence suspended by the court. Your request is particularly as to the jurisdiction of your board over such persons and the method to be followed in granting paroles.

I shall quote the sections of the General Code covering this matter, following, however, the sequence in which the said sections appeared as originally enacted in 99 Ohio Laws, 339, as an act entitled, "An Act to Provide for Probation of Persons Convicted of Felonies and Misdemeanors," passed May 9, 1908.

I call attention to the title of the act as it discloses the purpose of the legislature to provide for the probation of two classes of persons, 1st, those convicted of felonies; 2nd, those convicted of misdemeanors.

The sections, in the order indicated, are:

Section 13706 (Section 1 of the act, first part).

> "In prosecutions for crime, except as hereinafter provided, where the defendant has pleaded or been found guilty, and the court or magistrate has power to sentence such defendant to be confined in or committed to the penitentiary, the reformatory, a jail, workhouse, or correctional institution, and the defendant has never before been imprisoned for crime, either in this state or elsewhere, and it appears to the satisfaction of the court or magistrate that the character of the defendant and circumstances of the case are such that he is not likely again to engage in an offensive course of conduct, and that the public good does not demand or require that he shall suffer the penalty imposed by law, such court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and place the defendant on probation in the manner provided by law."

Section 13707 (Section 1 of the act, second part).

"This subdivision of this chapter shall not affect the laws providing the method of dealing with juvenile delinquents nor shall detention in an institution for such juvenile delinquents be considered as imprisonment."

Section 13708 (Section 2 of the act).

"No person convicted of murder, arson, burglary of an inhabited dwelling house, incest, sodomy, rape without consent, assault with intent to rape, or administering poison shall have the benefit of probation."

Section 2210, (Section 3 of the act).

"Whenever a sentence to the penitentiary or to the Ohio state reformatory has been imposed, but the execution thereof has been suspended and the defendant placed on probation, the effect of such order of probation shall be to place said defendant under the control and management of the board of managers of the institution to which he would have been committed, and he shall be subject to the same rules and regulations as apply to persons paroled from said institutions after a period of imprisonment therein."

Section 2211, (Section 4 of the act).

"It shall be the duty of the board of managers of the penitentiary and the board of managers of the state reformatory to furnish the clerk of courts of each county with blank forms setting forth the requirements and conditions used by them in the parole of prisoners of their institutions, but amended so as to be applicable to cases of probation."

Section 13709, (Section 5 of the act, first part).

"When it is the judgment of the court that the defendant be placed upon probation and under the supervision of the penitentiary or the reformatory, the clerk of such court shall forthwith make a full copy of the judgment of the court, with the order for the suspension of the execution of sentence thereunder and the reasons therefor, and certify them to the warden of the penitentiary as to the superintendent of the reformatory, to which the court should have committed the defendant but for the suspension of sentence."

Section 13710, (Section 5 of the act, second part).

"Upon entry in the records of the court of the order for the probation provided for in the next preceding section, the defendant shall be released form custody of the court as soon as the requirements and conditions required by the board of managers have been properly and fully met."

Section 2212, (Section 6 of the act).

"The board of managers of the penitentiary and the board of managers of the Ohio state reformatory shall appoint and employ one or more officers, to be known as field officers, for their respective institutions, who shall carefully look after the welfare of all persons whose sentences have been suspended, and those who have been paroled from said institutions after a period of imprisonment therein."

Section 2213, (Section 7 of the act).

"Whenever a person placed upon probation, as aforesaid, does not conduct himself in accordance with the rules and regulations of the institution in whose charge he has been placed, a field offier thereof may, without warrant or other process, arrest said person and convey him to said institution, and the board of managers may, after a full investigation and a personal hearing, because of such conduct, forthwith terminate the probation and cause said person to suffer the penalty of the sentence previously suspended. Any person under probation who has violated the conditions of his probation shall, upon order of the board of managers, be subject to arrest in the same manner as in the case of an escaped convict. In all cases of such termination of probation, the original sentence shall be considered as beginning upon the first day of imprisonment in the institution."

Section 2214, (Section 8 of the act).

"Whenever it is the judgment of the board of managers that a person on probation has satisfactorily met the conditions of his probation, they shall cause to be issued to said person a final discharge from further supervision; provided that the length of such period of probation shall not be less than the minimum or more than the maximum term for which he might have been imprisoned."

Section 2215, (Section 9 of the act).

"The auditor of state shall issue his warrant upon the state treasurer to pay from the appropriation for conviction and transportation of convicts, the salaries and necessary expenses of the field officers, upon presentation of itemized vouchers properly approved by the board of managers. In the same manner shall be paid the salaries and expenses of the parole officers of the boys' industrial school and the girls' industrial home."

Section 13711, (Section 10 of the act).

"When the sentence of the court or magistrate is that the defendant be imprisoned in a workhouse, jail or other institution, except the penitentiary or the reformatory, or that the defendant be fined and committed until such fine be paid, the court or magistrate may suspend the execution of said sentence and place the defendant on probation, and in charge of a probation officer named in such order, in the following manner:

"1. In case of sentence to a workhouse, jail or other correctional institution, the court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and direct that such suspension continue for such time, not exceeding two years, and upon such terms and conditions as it shall determine;

"2. In case of a judgment of imprisonment until a fine is paid, the court may direct that the execution of the sentence be suspended on such terms as it may determine and shall place the defendant on probation to the end that defendant may be given the opportunity to pay such fine within a reasonable time, provided that upon payment of such fine, judgment shall be satisfied and the probation cease."

Section 13712, (Section 11 of the act, 1st sentence).

"In case of probation provided for in the next preceding section, no order for probation shall be issued, unless the court or magistrate designate some suitable person to act as probation officer in such case, who shall make written reports, at designated periods not less than once each month, concerning the conduct of a probationer in his charge."

Section 13713, (Section 11of the act, 2nd sentence).

"A probation officer shall be entitled to necessary expenses in the performance of his duty, and, for cause hereafter named, without warrant or other process, at any time until the final disposition of the case, may re-arrest a person so placed in his care, and bring him before the court; or the court or magistrate, may issue a warrant for the re-arrest of such person and thereupon revoke and terminate such probation, if the interest of justice requires, and if the court or magistrate has reason to believe from the report of a probation officer or otherwise than the probationer is violating the conditions of his probation, engaging in a criminal practice, or has become abandoned to improper associates or a vicious life."

Section 13714, (Section 11 of the act, 3rd sentence).

"Upon such revocation and termination, the court or magistrate may pronounce judgment at any time after such suspension within the longest period for which the defendant might have been sentenced, whereupon the judgment shall be in full force and effect, and the person shall be delivered over to the proper officer to serve his sentence."

Section 13715, (Section 11, 4th sentence).

"The court or magistrate, at any time during the term of probation, may revoke or modify its order of execution of sentence, and, at any time, when the ends of justice will be subserved thereby and the good conduct and reform of the person so held in probation shall warrant it, may terminate the period of probation and discharge the person so held. If the court or magistrate has not revoked the order of probation, the defendant, at the end of the term of probation, shall be discharged."

The entire act, as quoted above, plainly falls in these provisions:

First. Sections 13707, 13707 and 13708 (Sections 1 and 2 of the act) which specify the cases in which probation may be granted and the exceptions.

Second. Sections 2210, 2211, 13709, 13710, 2212, 2213, 2214 and 2215, (being Sections 3 to 9, inclusive, of the original act) which relate solely to the parole of persons who have been sentenced to the penitentiary or Ohio state reformatory, and the execution of such sentence suspended. I take it that these sections are so clear as to the jurisdiction of your board over this class of persons as to require no explanation. As the statute expresses it (Section 2210, Section 3 of the act):

> "Whenever a sentence to the penitentiary or to the Ohio state reformatory has been imposed, but the execution thereof has been suspended and the defendant placed on probation, the effect of such order of probation shall be to place said defendant under the control and management of the board of managers of the institution to which he would have been committed, and he shall be subject to the same rules and regulations as apply to persons paroled from said institutions after a period of imprisonment therein."

after a person has been sentenced to the penitentiary or reformatory and has had his sentence suspended and been paroled, he comes completely under the control and jurisdiction of your board, and the officials of the county where he was convicted have no further control over him in any contingency. If he violates his parole, or disregards the conditions under which the same was granted, or fails to observe the rules and regulations of your board, then your board deals with him, not the court which imposed sentence.

Third. Sections 13711, 13712, 13713, 13714 and 13715 (being sections 10 and 11 of the act). These sections relate solely to defendants who have been sentenced to a workhouse, jail or other institution, except the penitentiary or Ohio state reformatory, or who have been fined and ordered committed until payment of the fine. With this class of persons your board has no concern. There is no provision for any control being exercised by your board, nor is your board required to take any action whatever in regard to these cases. They never reach you. The defendants paroled under these statutes are under the supervision of the court imposing the sentence, through the probation officer appointed by it (Section 13712). The duties of such probation officer, and his compensation, are provided by Section 13713. Both Sections 13712 and 13713 were included in Sections 11 of the original act. Such probation officer is, of course, a distinct official from your "field officer" provided by Sections 2212 et seq.; this probation officer would have no authority over persons under your control under Sections 2210 et seq., nor would your board have any authority over such officer, just as your field officers would have no authority whatever over persons paroled under Sections 13711 et seq.

BRIEFLY—The jurisdiction of your board over persons sentenced to the penitentiary or reformatory is exclusive; with the parole of persons sentenced to other institutions you have no concern.

Now, as to the method to be followed in the parole of persons who have pleaded or been found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary or reformatory and sentence suspended, the last clause of the last sentence of Section 13706 is—"such court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and place the defendant on probation in the manner provided by law." The provisions of law in this regard are Sections 13709 and 13710 above quoted. By Section 13709 the clerk of courts > "* * * shall forwith make a full copy of the judgment of the court, with the order for the suspension of the execution of sentence thereunder, and the reasons therefor, and certify them to the warden of the penitentiary or to the superintendent of the reformatory, to which the court would have committed the defendant but for the suspension of sentence."

Since the establishment of your board it is now necessary for the clerk to make these copies in triplicate; one copy to be certified to your board and one to the warden of the penitentiary or to the superintendent of the reformatory, as the case may be. This should be insisted upon in all cases that the records may at all times be complete.

But the parole is not complete, and the defendant is not entitled to be released sumply upon the making of the entry of the order for probation provided by Section 13709, for Section 13710 provides:

> "Upon entry in the records of the court of the order for the probation provided for in the next preceding section, the defendant shall be released from custody of the court as soon as the requirements and conditions required by the board of managers have been properly and fully met."

And it will be noted that the defendant cannot lawfully be released until all the requirements of this section have been met, that is, until the proper certified copies, provided by Section 13709 have ben forwarded by the clerk, as above indicated, and until the board of administration has sent back to the clerk of the court the order for the parole and the defendant has complied with the conditions fixed by said board. This is necessary in all cases, and, until the clerk has received from said board the order of parole of the defendant and had the requirements and conditions of the same properly and fully met and complied with, the defendant cannot lawfully be released.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INSTITUTION FOR FEEBLE MINDED YOUTH—RULES FOR ADMISSION AND DISCHARGE OF INMATES—BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION.

The admission of inmates to the institution for feeble minded youth is governed by Sections 1891-1904 of the General Code. All must be admitted under rules prescribed by the board of administration.

The manner of discharge or releases of inmates is covered by statute and the rules for the same must therefore be formulated by the board of administration by virtue of Sections 1838 and 1841 of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 18, 1912.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge yours of July 16, 1912, in which you ask "won't you please be kind enough to give the board of administration an opinion as to its powers concerning the admission and discharge of inmates at the institution for "feeble minded youth?"

The question of admission is a simple one; and only requires that the statutes contained in Chapter 3, Title V, Division 11, of the General Code be followed. Sections 1891 to 1904, inclusive, of the General Code fix every step as to admission and maintenance.

Some can be admitted under contract—Section 1900; some as public charges; some who are non-residents of the state—Section 1893; adults are admitted the same as insane to the state hospitals (Section 1902).

All must be admitted under rules prescribed by the trustees formerly (now your board), and blanks must be filled in as prepared by your board, or approved by it. The probate judge is required to endorse said applications (Section 1901).

DISCHARGE. The statutes are silent as to the manner of discharging the inmates. It would be almost impossible for the legislature to enact laws regulating the release of persons in such an institution.

Owing to the various grades, ages, mental and physical condition of these wards of the state, the question of their release must be left absolutely to the governing powers in charge thereof.

Your board, on August 15, 1911, assumed the duties and powers of the former trustees, and have "full power to manage and govern" this institution. Section 1835 of the General Code.

Section 1838 of the General Code says:

> "The board, in addition to the powers expressly conferred, shall have all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive, administrative and fiscal supervision over all said institutions."

Section 1841 of the General Code says:

> "The board shall have power to regulate the admission and discharge of the pupils and inmates in said several institutions, etc."

I, therefore conclude that you must, as a board, establish rules for the discharge of pupils from this institution. They should be sensible, practical rules, containing plain language. They should be reasonable and in line of the objects for which the institution was established. If such rules are promulgated by you, the courts will not interfere in their enforcement.

In the case of Gustavus Doren, et al., vs. Joseph Fleming, 6 C. C. n. s. 81 the circuit court of Franklin county said:

> "Courts will not assume authority to prescribe rules for the government of state institutions. Such authority arises only when it is shown that a rule or rules in force are unreasonable and subversive of the purpose for which such institutions are established."

This case, as you know, pertained to this very institution.

There being no statute regulating discharges, you and your chief officer or superintendent must formulate rules.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PRISONER—VIOLATION OF PAROLE OR CONDITIONAL RELEASE—REINCARCERATION FOR BALANCE OF TERM AFTER DATE OF DELINQUENCY.

Under Section 2174 of the General Code, a prisoner who violates the conditions of his parole or conditional release, must be required to serve the entire maximum term of his imprisonment, deducting therefrom only the time from the date of his first commitment to the date of his declared delinquency.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 8, 1912.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication dated August 6, 1912, in which you request my interpretation of Section 2174 of the General Code of Ohio, was duly received.

Said Section 2174, which you desire interpreted, reads as follows:

> "A prisoner violating the conditions of his parole or conditional release, having been entered in the proceedings of the board of managers and declared to be delinquent, shall thereafter be treated as an escaped prisoner owing service to the state, and when arrested, shall serve the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment. The time from the date of his declared delinquency to the date of his arrest shall not be counted as a part of time served."

After a very careful consideration of the above quoted section which your board desires interpreted, I arrived at the following legal opinion: Any prisoner having been paroled by your board or conditionally released from the institution, and violating the conditions thereof, and said violator having been by your board declared to be delinquent, from the date of such proceedings of the board whereby the said paroled prisoner was declared to be delinquent and such proceedings entered by your board, shall thereafter be treated as "an escaped prisoner owing service to the state," which means that he shall again be arrested, or caused to be arrested, and again committed to the institution from which he was paroled, and when so arrested shall serve the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment, and the time from the date of his declared delinquency to the date of his arrest shall not be counted as a part of the time served.

My interpretation of the following part of said section, viz., "shall serve the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment," means that said prisoner, upon his re-arrest and re-imprisonment, shall serve such time in said penal institution, commencing with the date on which he was declared to be a delinquent under said section, as would constitute the difference between the maximum period of his sentence of imprisonment, deducting therefrom the time the prisoner had actually served after having first been received at the institution, plus the time said prisoner had been out of the institution after his release on parole until the date he was declared a delinquent. For example, if a prisoner was received at the Ohio penitentiary January 1, 1910, to serve a term of five years, and was on January 1, 1911, paroled by your board and released from said institution under said parole, and remained a paroled prisoner until January 1, 1912, at which time he was by your board declared to be a delinquent, upon his arrest and return to the institution he would be required to serve a term of three full years from the date of his arrest; the three years being, as I interpret the law, the unexpired period of the maximum term of said prisoner's imprisonment.

In other words, said section means that after a prisoner has been paroled and been declared a delinquent as provided in said section, he is compelled to serve all the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment, no difference how long after said prisoner has been declared a delinquent until he is re-arrested, he being entitled only to have credit on said maximum term of his imprisonment for the time actually served from the date of his original imprisonment to the date of his being declared a delinquent as provided therein, the latter part of the section depriving him of the time from the date of his declared delinquency to the date of his arrest as part of time served.

In other words, I am of the opinion that the legislature intended that a prisoner, or prisoners, paroled from your institution should be credited with the time they are actually out of the institution under their parole during good behavior or until your board has declared them delinquent, and that from the time of the re-arrest they shall not have credit for any good time but serve the full unexpired period of the maximum term of their imprisonment, and by said section they are made subject and to be treated as an escaped prisoner owing service to the state and may be re-imprisoned whether the term for which he was sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary has or has not expired after the date of the declaring of said prisoner to be a delinquent and the time of his arrest.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

FISCAL YEAR OF OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION FOR ANNUAL REPORT TO GOVERNOR ENDS NOVEMBER 15th.

Under Sections 1870 and 260 of the General Code, the fiscal year, with respect to the annual report to the governor, closes on the fifteenth day of November each year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 29, 1912.

HON. E. F. BROWN, Fiscal Supervisor of The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication dated August 26, 1912, in which you request an opinion from me to your board as to whether the fiscal year referred to in Section 1870 of the General Code means the fiscal year of the state, November 15th, or August 15th, which is the end of the twelve-month period covering the administration of your board, is duly received, and in reply I desire to say that under the provisions of Section 1870 of the General Code:

> "The board shall annually report to the governor its acts, proceedings and conclusions for the fiscal year, giving a complete financial statement of the various institutions under its control. * * *"

Section 260 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In all the departments, institutions, public works and buildings of the state, the fiscal year shall close on the fifteenth day of November of each year, and all annual reports from such departments and institutions shall be made with reference to that date. On the fifteenth day of February of each year, the auditor of state shall ascertain from the books in his office the balances of all appropriations made for the departments and institutions, and the balances of all other funds remaining in the state treasury on that day, and immediately thereafter report them to the general assembly if in session."

It is clear, from a reading of the last above quoted section, that all departments and institutions which would include all the state institutions over which your board has jurisdiction, so far as the fiscal year is concerned, would be amenable to the said section, and that your board would be governed by the provisions thereof, and, taken in conjunction with Section 1870, above quoted, it is my opinion that the fiscal year referred to in said section means the fiscal year of the state, November 15th, and not August 15th, the time specified in Section 1835, of the General Code referring to the management and control of the state institutions.

The legislature in fixing the fiscal year for all departments and state institutions did so with a view of the appropriations for the maintenance of the same, that same might be properly and justly made, and the fact that your board assumed its duties on August 15, 1911, has no reference to the fiscal year as fixed by said Section 260 of the General Code.

I am, therefore, of the legal opinion that in making your annual report it is your duty to have the same cover the fiscal year ending November 15th of each and every year during its legal existence without regard to the time of the commencement of the powers and duties of the said board.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PRISONER—MAJORITY VOTE OF BOARD OF MANAGERS OF PENITENTIARY SUFFICIENT TO REVOKE PAROLE AND REINCARCERATE A PRISONER.

In the absence of a contrary rule of law, a majority of a board acting in a public concern, is sufficient to consummate a decision.

Under 2174 General Code, the vote of three members of the board of managers of the penitentiary is sufficient to revoke a parole and reincarcerate a prisoner.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 3, 1912.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 17, 1912, which is as follows:

"A prisoner was paroled. Afterwards he was returned to the penitentiary for the violation of parole. Upon hearing, three votes of the board were cast to revoke said parole and one vote against. Does the parole stand revoked?"

It is a general rule of law that all acts of public boards are made effective and valid by a majority vote of the various members thereof on any given proposition. This rule obtains and prevails, unless the statute prescribes a different rule and fixes a different number of votes in particular instances. Then the statutory provisions govern and the general rule must yield thereto.

Is there anything in the statutes on return of paroled prisoners which fixes the number of votes of the board required to revoke a parole? I find no provisions on the subject. If the legislature had intended to require all the members of the board to concur in such action, it would have said so. The last clause of Section 2169 does provide that in granting paroles, all the members shall concur. But this provision applies solely to the granting of paroles; and was intended as a check against releasing prisoners and turning them loose on society, unless each member concurred in the release.

Section 2170 of the General Code, on the subject of paroles, says:

> "All prisoners on parole shall remain in the legal custody and under control of the board of managers and subject to be taken back within the enclosure of the penitentiary. Such board may make and enforce rules and regulations with respect to the taking and re-imprisonment of convicts under parole. Its written order certified by its secretary shall be sufficient warrant for all officers named therein to return to actual custody a conditionally released or paroled prisoner; and such officers shall execute such orders as in cases of ordinary criminal process."

The prisoner, under this section, is, as a matter of law, still in prison bounds, subject to any rules and regulations as to his retaking and retention, which the board may make. It only requires an order from the board to reincarcerate him.

Section 2174 of the General Code provides:

> "A prisoner violating the conditions of his parole or conditional release, having been entered in the proceedings of the board of managers and declared to be delinquent, shall thereafter be treated as an escaped prisoner owing service to the state, and, when arrested, shall serve the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment. The time from the date of his declared delinquency to the date of his arrest shall not be counted as a part of time served."

This section, in connection with the one above quoted, gives this board of four members the power to declare a convict delinquent, treat him as an escaped prisoner, and order him retaken to complete sentence. Such procedure is often necessary to be enforced almost summarily, in the interests of society and the law, and could easily be blocked if it required unanimous action of the board. No such intention could be logically imputed to the legislature, or it would have said so on such an important matter.

In the case of State ex rel. vs. Wilkesville Township, in 20 O. S., 288, at page 293 the court says:

> "By the rule of the common law, where power or authority is delegated to two or more persons to transact business of a private nature, all interested in the power must concur in its due execution. But in matters of public concern, though it is necessary for all to be present, yet the majority will conclude the minority."

In 29 Cyc., 1434, it is stated:

"Where official authority is conferred upon a board or commission, composed of three or more persons, such authority may be exercised by a majority of the members of such board."

"Where a tribunal or board composed of three or more persons is empowered by the statutes to do any public act, it is necessary upon common law principles that all be present and then the act of the majority is the act of all."

(Slicer vs. Elder 2 West. Law Month., 90.)

"Where a body or board of officers is constituted by law to perform a trust for the public or to execute a power or perform a duty prescribed by law, it is not necessary that all should concur in the act done; the act of the majority is the act of the body."

(19 Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law., 465.)

"The law is well settled that where authority is conferred by law upon three or more persons to execute a public trust or agency, and in the execution thereof all are assembled, or had notice and opportunity to be present, the act of a majority is binding, unless the statute expressly requires the concurrent action of all."

OPINION. In my opinion, then, the provisions of Section 2169 of the General Code requiring the concurrence of each member of the board in the granting of a parole has nothing to do with the action of the board in revoking the parole and reincarcerating the prisoner. To hold that it requires the concurrent vote of the full board to declare a convict paroled delinquent would, in my opinion, be too far reaching, and would enable a single member of the board to prevent the return of a recalcitrant. The statutes must be strictly construed, and in the absence of any provision, the ordinary rules of law must prevail and govern. I, therefore, give it as my opinion that a majority of this board of four, or three members thereof, can revoke a parole and order the reincarceration of a prisoner.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INSTITUTION FOR FEEBLE MINDED—APPROPRIATION FOR NEW LEVEE—EXCEPTION FROM REQUIREMENT OF ADVERTISEMENT AND BIDS.

The appropriation bill, providing a sum for the construction of a new levee for the institution for feeble minded youth, incorporates the exception specified in Section 2314 General Code, with reference to the penitentiary, whereby said institution may construct improvements without advertisements and bids. Said levee may, therefore, be built without such advertisement and bids.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 12, 1912.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of November 2, 1912, in which you give the following statement of facts, namely: That the last legislature made an appropriation of $7,929.80 to be expended for a new levee on the bottom lands, the same to be found under the appropriations made for the institution for feeble minded youth, 102 O. L., 388, and you request my opinion as to whether or not your board can proceed and construct said levee and pay for same out of said appropriation without advertising for bids for the construction of same as provided in Section 2314 of the General Code of Ohio.

In reply thereto I desire to say that I have carefully investigated the appropriation bill containing the partial appropriation for the last three-quarters of the fiscal year ending November 15, 1911, and the first quarter of the fiscal year ending February 15, 1912, found on pages 14 et. seq., of 102 Ohio Laws; and the appropriation bill containing the appropriation referred to in your letter; and also the general appropriation bill found in 102 O. L., 393 et seq., which contains the general appropriations for the institution for feeble minded youth for the purpose of paying liabilities incurred on and after February 16, 1912; and I find under said appropriations for the institution referred to in your letter this clause (on page 408 of 102 O. L.)

> "Provided, that the exceptions to the Ohio penitentiary, Section 2314 of the General Code of Ohio, shall be extended to the institution for feeble minded."

And, also, on page 26, under the appropriation for said institution, is found the same proviso.

Section 2314 of the General Code, referred to in your letter, provides as follows:

> "Before entering into contract for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary, or for the supply of materials therefor, the aggregate cost of which exceeds three thousand dollars, each officer, board or other authority by law charged with the supervision thereof, shall make or cause to be made the following: full and accurate plans, showing all necessary details of the work, with working plans suitable for the use of mechanics and other builders in such construction, so drawn and represented as to be plain and easily understood; accurate bills showing the exact amount of different kinds of material necessary to the construction to accompany such plans; full and complete specifications of the work to be performed, showing the manner and style required with such directions as will enable a competent mechanic or other builder to carry them out and afford bidders all needful information; a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and of the aggregate cost thereof."

From a close inspection of the appropriation bills above referred to, it is plainly to be seen that the legislature in making said appropriations for the said institution had in mind that where the appropriation is to be used for a specific purpose, the said section referred to in the General Code relating to contracts for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution, or buildings or additions thereto, or for supplies and materials, therefor, the aggregate cost of which would exceed $3,000.00, should be advertised, and the things required therein be followed so that it would afford bidders all needful information, should not apply.

I am further of the legal opinion that, as stated in your letter, the improvement of the sort referred to in your letter when specifically provided for by the legislature, and furthermore specifically provided that the same exceptions would apply to the appropriation therein specified as applies to the penitentiary were enacted with the specific intent in view that your board should construct, or expend the appropriation for the specific purposes therein named without advertising as provided in Section 2314; and particularly so in the case referred to in your letter, because of the fact that the improvement of the land by the construction of a levee could not be considered as a general improvement in an institution either in the form of general buildings or some particular buildings by additions, etc.

I, therefore, advise you that in view of the proviso made as above referred to in relation to the appropriations for the specific purposes named by the last legislature in the appropriation bills above referred to, that your board has ample authority under private contract, without advertising, to proceed to construct said levee and pay for the same out of the appropriations made for the said purpose.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT MAKING WOMEN ELIGIBLE TO APPOINTIVE OFFICES—ELIGIBILITY OF ALL LEGAL RESIDENTS.

The suggested amendment to the constitution making all legal residents of legal age, eligible to appointive offices, is competent to effect its purpose of making women eligible to such offices.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1912.

MISS BLANCH VIGNOS, President, State Board of Visitors for State Benevolent and Correctional Institutions, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR MADAM:—In reply to your letter of January 24, 1912, which is as follows:

> "I would like to have your opinion on the following substitute for Article XV, Section IV, to be submitted to the constitutional convention.
> "'No person shall be eligible to an elective office in the state unless possessed of the qualifications of an elector, but any legal resident of the United States, of legal age shall be eligible to an appointive office.'
> "What we wish is to place women on an equality with the men on all boards, and also make it constitutional for them to serve as superintendents of institutions for women and girls. We have used the United States so that we need not be confined to the state to select good women as the heads of our institutions. Will this change provide for all these things without any other change of the constitution? We will be glad for any suggestions, and an early reply will be appreciated."

I wish to state that in my opinion the substitute proposed by you for Article XV, Section IV, of the present constitution would effectually accomplish your purpose without any further amendments to the constitution.

Section IV of Article XV of the present constitution is as follows:

> "No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this state unless he possesses the qualifications of an elector."

and your amendment would undoubtedly so alter this provision as, in case it should be adopted, to entirely take away the inhibition against women of legal age, and residents of the United States, being appointed as superintendents of state institutions.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DUTIES OF STATE BOARD OF CANAL ARBITRATION IN FIXING VALUATION OF PART OF MIAMI AND ERIE CANAL LEASED TO CINCINNATI—NO DEDUCTION FOR CONDUIT TO BE BUILT BY CITY—NO CONSIDERATION OF INTENDED USES—ACTUAL VALUE.

In performing the duty of fixing the value of that part of the Miami and Erie canal to be leased to Cincinnati under 102 O. L. 108, the board of canal arbitration are not permitted to deduct the cost of constructing a conduit for the purpose of taking care of existing water leases.

Were there any ambiguity in the act as to this question, the princple that a deed is to be construed most strongly against the grantor and that in particular a deed from the state must be construed in favor of the state in the light of the facts existing, would decide the question.

There is no ambiguity, however. The lease of the canal to the city is upon the solicitation of and entirely for the benefit of the city, and the construction of the conduit was made a condition to the granting of the lease to the city of Cincinnati.

The lease is subject to no easement in behalf of the lessees of water rights and the state might abandon their contracts at any time, and therefore no value may be deducted for such an easement. Furthermore, the water rights are a source of definite income and in reality a value to be considered in themselves.

The board shall in accordance with the act, fix the actual value of the property as it exists at the time, without regard to the purposes for which the property is intended to be used.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1912.

HONORABLES C. V. HARD, FELIX A. JACOBS, OSCAR W. NEWMAN, State Board Canal Arbitration, Cincinnati, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Through Mr. John A. Deasy, my special counsel at Cincinnati, I am informed that certain questions have arisen in the performance of your duties in ascertaining and fixing the values of that part of the Miami and Erie Canal to be leased to Cincinnati under the provisions of the act passed May 15, 1911, 102 O. L., 168, and my opinion is asked upon the following questions:

> "First, as the canal bill provides for the construction of a conduit by the city of Cincinnati for the purpose of taking care of the water leases, etc., now in existence and which the state of Ohio is bound to provide for, the question arises as to whether the cost of constructing such conduit is to be deducted from the valuation placed upon the canal property by the board of arbitration.
> "Second, the real estate appraisers employed by the city appraised the canal property simply as a building proposition. In other words, as if a real estate man was to take the whole strip and divide it up into lots suitable for whatever purposes the surrounding property at different points is used for. From this valuation they wish to have deducted anywhere from 25 to 40 per cent. of the appraised value, on account of the expense a real estate investor, under the above conditions, would be under for the purpose of putting the property on the market; that is to say, they wish to deduct the cost of advertising, filling in streets, making crossings, etc. * * *"

The act found in 102 O. L., 168 is as follows:

"Permission shall be given to the city of Cincinnati, in the manner hereinafter provided, to enter upon, improve and occupy forever, as a public or boulevard, and for sewerage, conduit and if desired for subway purposes, all of that part of the Miami and Erie canal which extends from a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue to the east side of Broadway in said city, including the width thereof, as owned or held by the state, but such permission shall be granted subject to all outstanding rights or claims, if any, with which it may conflict, and upon the further terms and conditions of this act.

"Section 2. Such permission shall be granted upon the further condition that said city, in the uses aforesaid of all or any portion herein mentioned of such canal, shall construct or cause to be constructed suitable and sufficient works for a convenient outlet for the discharge of the water of said canal, at a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue, so as not to obstruct the flow of water through the remaining part of such canal, nor destroy nor injure the present supply of water for mechanical or commercial purposes. Such outlet shall be constructed in accordance with plans and specifications to be drawn or approved by the state engineer, and the city of Cincinnati shall give bond in such sum as shall be prescribed by the state board of public works, to be approved by the attorney general for the faithful performance of the work.

"And such permission shall be granted upon the further condition that said city adopt and construct appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water along that portion of the canal to be abandoned, in order to and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations now resting upon it by virtue of certain contracts now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the terms of said contracts, in the same quantity and under the same conditions and at the same rate of rental provided for in said contracts, and provided further that during the period of construction of a street or subway or of appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water, as herein provided said city of Cincinnati shall cause no cessation or diminution of the supply of water to the said lessee water users to which they are entitled under their respective contracts or leases with the state of Ohio except insofar as such cessation or diminution of such supply of water may be absolutely necessary.

"Section 3. Upon the passage of this act the governor shall appoint three (3) arbitrators, none of whom shall be residents of Hamilton county, who shall, whenever the council of said city decided that such canal be used for all the purposes mentioned in Section one (1) hereof, proceed to act as provided in Section four (4) of this act.

"Section 4. The arbitrators thus selected shall constitute a board of arbitration whose duty it shall be, without reasonable delay, to ascertain and fix the actual value of the property of the state specified in Section one hereof. The annual rental to be paid by the city of Cincinnati to the state for the use of such property shall be a sum equal to four (4) per cent. of such valuation so ascertained and fixed. Such board of arbitrators shall report the valuation as above provided for in writing to the governor and the council of such city respectively. And such board of arbitration shall have authority to hear the testimony of witnesses as to the fair value of such canal so to be taken by said city, to employ such assistants as it may deem necessary, and to fix their compensation, and to incur the expenses incident to its work. Each arbitrator shall receive for his services not exceeding twenty-five dollars a day for the period of time actually employed in the work of acting as arbitrator on such board; and all such expenses and such compensation shall be paid by said city, one-half of the amount so paid to be a credit upon the first installment of rent payable under the lease that may be entered into pursuant to this act. In case of any vacancy occurring in such board from any cause, such vacancy shall be filled in the same manner in which the appointment so becoming vacant was made. Provided that all rentals accruing to the state under this act, shall be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund.

"Section 5. Upon approval by resolution of the council of said city of the amount of such valuation as fixed by such board of arbitration or a majority of them, and upon the governor being satisfied that the interests of the state are fully protected and that the valuation placed upon such property is adequate, which fact shall be endorsed upon such lease by the governor, he shall execute and deliver to the city of Cincinnati a lease for ninety-nine years, renewable forever, which lease shall not be assignable, of such canal so to be taken by the said city of Cincinnati for the uses and purposes before mentioned, and upon the terms and conditions specified in this act; and such lease shall contain covenants on the part of said city for payment of said rental to the state in equal semi-annual payments during such term of such lease, and for compliance with this act, and on the part of the state for quiet enjoyment by said city of Cincinnati of the demised premises, and the attorney general shall prepare such lease, and such lease shall contain the further provision that if said city of Cincinnati fails, neglects or refuses to perform all or any of the terms and conditions of said lease or fails, neglects or refuses to comply with each and every of the terms and provisions of this act, the said lease shall become null and void and said city and the users and occupiers of said property shall forfeit all rights in said lease and in the property located upon the land therein described and such other covenants and provisions as, in the judgment of the attorney general, will protect the interests of the state.

"In case the state of Ohio shall at any time build a canal of not less than nine-foot gauge from Lake Erie to the Ohio river at Cincinnati, the city of Cincinnati shall reimburse the state for the amount of its expenditure in procuring right of way either by purchase or condemnation, or both, for said canal, from a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue, through the Mill creek valley, to the Ohio river."

The sections quoted above are the only sections of the act that need be considered in answering your inquiries, and as, in my opinion, your questions are definitely answered by the act itself, it seemed best for me to copy the same sections in toto.

Answering your first question it will be noted that the primary object of this act is to grant to the city of Cincinnati that portion of the Miami and Erie canal which extends from a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue to the east side of Broadway in the city of Cincinnati, for the purposes mentioned in the act. This grant is to be made upon certain definite conditions to be performed by the city, and the act provides that if the city fails or neglects to perform each and all said conditions the grant (or lease) shall become null and void. See Section 5 of the act:

> "if said city of Cincinnati fails, neglects or refuses to comply with each and every of the terms and conditions of said lease or fails, neglects or refuses to comply with each and every of the terms and provisions of this act, the said lease shall become null and void * * *"

It therefore becomes important to ascertain the nature of the conditions of the act and its terms and provisions with which the city of Cincinnati is to comply. These are, in their order:

(1) The grant is "subject to all outstanding rights or claims, if any, with which it may conflict" (Section 1). This provision was necessary on account of an outstanding lease to the Miami & Erie Canal Transportation Company, which lease is claimed by the state to be void, but has not as yet been so decided by the courts.

(2) "Said city, in the uses aforesaid of all or any portion herein mentioned of such canal, shall construct or cause to be constructed suitable and sufficient works for a convenient outlet for the discharge of the water of said canal, at a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue, so as not to obstruct the flow of water through the remaining part of such canal, nor destroy or injure the present supply of water for mechanical or commercial purposes. Such outlet shall be constructed in accordance with plans and specifications to be drawn or approved by the state engineer, and the city of Cincinnati shall give bond in such sum as shall be prescribed by the state board of public works, to be approved by the attorney general for the faithful performance of the work." (Section 2.)

(3) "Said city shall adopt and construct appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water along that portion of the canal to be abandoned, in order to and for the purpose of enabling the state fully to carry out and discharge the obligations now resting upon it by virtue of certain contracts now subsisting and in force between it and said lessee water users, during the remainder of the terms of said contracts, in the same quantity and under the same conditions and at the same rate of rental provided in said contracts, and provided further that during the period of construction of a street or subway or of appropriate works for the purpose of supplying water to the lessee users of said water, as herein provided, said city of Cincinnati shall cause no cessation or diminution of the supply of water to the said lessee water users to which they are entitled under their respective contracts or leases with the state of Ohio except insofar as such cessation or diminution of such supply of water may be absolutely necessary." (Section 2.)

(4) "All annual rental to be paid by the city of Cincinnati to the state for the use of such property shall be a sum equal to four (4) per cent. of such valuation so ascertained and fixed." (Section 4.)

(5) "All such expenses (i. e. the expenses of the arbitration) and such compensation (i. e. the compensation of the arbitration) shall be paid by said city, one-half of the amount so paid to be a credit upon the first installment of rent payable under the lease * * *." (Section 4.)

(6) "All rental accruing to the state under this act, shall be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund." (Section 4.)

(7) "In case the state of Ohio shall at any time build a canal of not less than nine-foot gauge from Lake Erie to the Ohio river at Cincinnati, the city of Cincinnati shall reimburse the state for the amount of its expenditures in procuring right of way either by purchase or condemnation, or both, for said canal, from a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue, through the Mill creek valley, to the Ohio river." (Section 5.)

In answering the first question it may be helpful to consider the situation of this property at the time this grant was made. The state was the owner in fee simple of the portion of the Miami and Erie canal, in Cincinnati, described in this act. The property was and is very valuable. The city desires to have the state grant this property to it, to be used, presumably for street or boulevard, sewerage and subway purposes. The experience of the state in making grants of this character had been very unfortunate, to say the least. As, see the cases of State vs. Railway Company, 53 O. S. 189, and State vs. Cleveland Terminal and Valley Railroad Company et al., 85 O. S.—and other cases. I refer to these two cases for in each grant of canal land was made by the state presumably to be used only for public purposes. In one instance, the grant was to the city of Cincinnati; in the other, to the city of Cleveland.

In each instance the property, in some manner, passed with remarkable celerity into possession of railroad companies and was used for railroad purposes. On account of this diversion, by indirect means, of valuable state property to private corporations, without any consideration being paid to the state for the same, the state has become very jealous of all such grants, and the question has been raised as to the right of the legislature to give away the valuable property of the state either directly or indirectly. Therefore, the proposition to have the legislature grant this property to the city of Cincinnati did not meet with approval when first presented to the legislature. The board of public works was opposed to it, as the state had for years been selling surplus water of this part of the canal to persons and corporations in Cincinnati by contracts in the form of leases; the rentals accruing on these leases went into the state treasury and the property in that way has been a continuous source of revenue to the state. All of these water users, naturally, were desirous of having their leases continue, and, therefore, opposed the grant to Cincinnati, which would destroy their means of water supply.

Aside from the fact that the city of Cincinnati wanted this property and that it could be made into a boulevard which would be a benefit to the city, there was no reason for the state to part with the property, on the contrary, the interest of the state was to hold on to it as it was of great present value, a distinct source of revenue to the state, and, perhaps, essential to the state for future use. There was also the matter of good faith on the part of the state not to terminate its contracts with the water users, unless the interest of the public required it to do so. Therefore, the first act introduced in the legislature providing for this grant to Cincinnati was defeated. This act, I am informed, contained no provision for the city to build the necessary works to supply the water necessary to carry out the state's contracts. Afterwards the present bill was introduced and it was passed with the understanding that the state should be put to no expense whatever as to this property, that the city should pay a fair rental for the same, and was to provide the necessary means for supplying the water to fulfill the contracts of the state so long as they lasted. This act is to be construed as a contract by which the state owning valuable income-producing property, and having no reason to part with the same, agreed at the urgent solicitation of the city of Cincinnati which desired the state to grant the same to the city, and, at the express request of the city, the grant is made, not as an outright purchase where value is paid for what is received, but in the form of a perpetual lease—without any cash consideration—divesting the state of the title as effectually as a grant in fee simple, and simply upon the condition that the city shall pay a fair rental upon the actual value of the property and upon the other conditions enumerated above.

Coming now to construe this act, in the light of what has been said, it is difficult to conceive how the construction that the cost of the conduit, which the act provides must be built by the city, is to be deducted from the valuation placed upon the canal property by your board, can be read into this act, or deduced from its terms. Certainly there is no language to that effect in the act itself, nor can it reasonably be implied. In fact, the implication is directly opposite. If A. owns property which he is using for certain purposes and B. desires that property, and A. grants it to B. upon certain conditions to be performed by B., it is presumed that B. will perform the conditions at his own cost; in other words, that A. will not give the property to B. upon certain conditions to be performed by B. and then perform the conditions himself.

In case of grants by the state the rule is that such grants are to be strictly construed against the grantee. Any ambiguity of the terms must operate in favor of the state.

> "The words of a private grant are taken most strongly against the grantor, though if the meaning cannot be discovered the instrument is void. But this rule is reversed in cases of public grants. They are construed strictly in favor of the government on grounds of public policy. If the meaning of the words be doubtful in a grant designed to be of general benefit to the public, they will be taken most strongly against the grantee and for the government, and therefore should not be expended by implication in favor of the former beyond the natural and obvious meaning of the words employed. In Central Transporting Co. vs. Pullman's Palace Car Co., the supreme court of the United States says:
> "'By a familiar rule, every public grant of property, or of privileges or franchises, if ambiguous, is to be construed against the grantee and in favor of the public; because an intention, on the part of the government, to grant to private persons or to a particular corporation, property or rights in which the whole public is interested, cannot be presumed, unless unequivocally expressed or necessarily to be implied in the terms of the grant; and because the grant is supposed to be made at the solocitation of the grantee, and to be drawn up by him or by his agents, and therefore the words used are to be treated as those of the grantee; and this rule of construction is a wholesome safeguard of the interests of the public agent any attempt of the grantee, by the insertion of ambiguous language, to take what could not be obtained in clear and express terms.'
> "Any ambiguity in the terms must operate in favor of the government. Whatever is not unequivocally granted is taken to be withheld. Whether the grant be of property, franchises or privileges, it is conconstrued strictly in favor of the public; nothing passes but what is granted in clear and explicit terms; but it will be construed reasonably for the purpose the act contemplates. The object and aim of all governments is to promote the happiness and prosperity of the people by which it is established; and it cannot be assumed that the government intended to diminish its power of accomplishing the end for which it was created. It is therefore never implied that it has surrendered, in whole or in part, any of its soverign power of legislation for the general welfare of police, of taxation, or of eminent domain. In its grants of land there is implied no covenant to do or not to do any further act in relation thereto."

(Lewis Sutherland" Statutory Construction, Vol. 2, Sec. 548.)

(See also, Coosaw Mining Co.vs. So. Carolina, 144 U. S., 555; Water Company vs. Knoxville, 200 U. S., 22; Water Company vs. Hutchinson, 207 U. S., 393. and other cases.)

Therefore. assuming for the sake of argument that an ambiguity or uncertainty exists as to whether the city can deduct from the actual value of this property to the state the cost of building the conduit, this ambiguity or uncertainty must be resolved in favor of the state.

As stated before, I can discover no ambiguity in the act, the grant is made to the city subject to certain conditions to be performed by the city, in fact, the grant absolutely depends upon the performance by the city of this condition. If it had been the intention of the legislature to grant this property to the city and to agree on the part of the state that the state would pay the expense necessary to construct the conduit (or to allow the city to deduct the cost of the same from the valuation of the property) the legislature would have so provided in unequivocal terms. In grants of this character no covenants to do or not to do certain things can be implied, and, in the absence of express language to the effect that the state is to have the actual value of its property reduced by whatever amount the city may expend in building this conduit (which it is to build as a condition precedent to this grant) no such implication can arise. This is made all the clearer by considering Section 4 of the act. It is there expressly provided:

> "All such expenses and compensation shall be paid by the said city, one-half of the amount so paid to be a credit upon the first installment of rent payable under the lease. * * *"

This is the only place in the act where the proposition is made for the credit to the city on account of any expenditures made by it in complying with the conditions of the grant. All other expenses, therefore, must be borne by the city— Expressio est unius est Exclusio Alterius— I shall not burden you with citations of this very familiar maxim.

It has been suggested that the deduction from the cost of this conduit from the actual value of the land is proper on account of the rule that where land is subject to an easement this may be shown in the reduction of its value, in appropriation proceedings. This may be a rule of law applicable to proceedings in eminent domain, but as this property is subject to no easement I do not see how it can be applicable to this case. If it has been assumed that the contracts by the state to supply persons and corporations along this part of the canal with water constitute easements against said property of the state, then such assumption is entirely without foundation. All contracts entered into by the state for supplying water from the canals to persons or corporations may be terminated by the state at anytime without becoming liable to damages thereby.

> "Every lease, grant or conveyance of water power shall contain a reservation and condition, that the state, or its authorized agents, may, at any time resume the privilege or right to the use of water, or any portion thereof, whenever it may be deemed necessary for the purpose of navigation, or whenever its use for hydraulic purposes shall be found in any manner to interfere with, and injuriously affect the navigation of either of the canals, feeders or streams from which the water shall be taken for such hydraulic purposes; and whenever such privilege shall be resumed, in whole or in part, the sum paid therefor, or the rent reserved, or such reasonable portion thereof as shall be determined upon, agreeably to the conditions and stipulations of the lease or deed of conveyance aforesaid, shall be refunded, or omitted to the purchaser or lessee, his heirs or assigns."

Section 23, of the act found in 38 O. L., 87.)

This act has been construed by the supreme court many times, and it has been held that no easement can be acquired by property owners by user or contract in the waters of the canals. One citation is sufficient as to this.

> "3. Owners of lands abutting on a canal, incidentally benefited by the water it affords, or its facilities for drainage, have no property interests in these incidental benefits, and cannot, on such ground, enjoin the abandonment of the canal, or claim compensation therefor.
> "4. Contracts made with the board of public works or other agents of the state, for the use of the water of the canal, terminate with the abandonment of the use of the canal by the state and no action will lie against the state for damages resulting from such abandonment."

(Syllabii in case of Vought vs. Railroad Company, 58 O. S. 123.)

> "What has just been said applies with equal, if not greater, reason to the claim of Shotwell. It is certainly settled by the decisions just cited, that a contract made by the state through its board of public works with an individual for the use of the water of any of its canals for a period of years, terminates with the use of the canal, and that it is under no obligation to keep up the canal for such purpose after the canal has become useless for the purpose of navigation and has been abandoned. The agents of the state have no power to make such a contract in the name of the state or to bind it thereby."

This effectually disposes of the proposition that this land, as far as the state is concerned, is subject to an easement, but again, for the sake of argument, assuming these contracts to supply water amount to easements, then, so far as the state is concerned, these easements (contrary to the usual variety of easements) are of distinct value to the serviente state, they are the source of a definite, continuous income.

Now, by what canon of construction can it be asserted that the existence of these income-producing contracts decrease the value of the property to the state? My conclusion is that there is no foundation whatever in the act itself, or in the conditions surrounding its passage, or in custom or in law, upon which to base an interpretation that the amount which the city of Cincinnati may expend in building this conduit is to be deducted from the actual value of the property of the state as fixed by your board.

My answer to your second question will be brief. Section 4 of the act provides it shall be your duty "to ascertain and fix the actual value of the property of the state specified in Section 1 hereof." This means that you are to fix the actual value of the property as it exists today. I cannot see that it would be any more proper for you to assume that this property is to be used as a building proposition than it would be for you to assume that it is to be used by some railway for an entrance to Cincinnati. If you are to assume anything as to its use, you should assume it will be used for the purposes contemplated by the act. It occurs to me that the purposes for which the property is to be used can have no influence in determining the question as to its actual present value. The question to be determined by you is simply what is the value of this property today no matter for what it may be used.

I do not take it that you wish me to attempt to lay down rules to be applied by you in fixing this valuation. The matter rests largely in your discretion and you are authorized to proceed by whatever method will be most satisfactory in assisting you to arrive at a correct conclusion at to the actual value of this property as it now exists.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CANAL LANDS—POWER OF BOARD OF PUBLIC WORK TO REVOKE PRIVILEGES OF SALE TO NEWARK, OHIO, AND SELL IN ACCORDANCE WITH LATER ACT.

The terms of the act passed March 28, 1911, to permit the city of Newark, Licking county, Ohio, to use and occupy as a street a part of the bed of the Ohio canal (102 O. L. 177) have not been complied with and the act is not yet effective.

By virtue of the express terms of said act, privileges extended thereby may be revoked and the same land be sold in accordance with "An act to abandon certain portions of the Ohio canal and to provide for the selling and leasing of the lands connected therewith;" 102 O. L. Page 293.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1912.

HON. E. E. BOOTON, Engineer Canal Land Department, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of February 27, 1912, where you inquire as follows:

> "The Seventy-Ninth General Assembly of Ohio passed an act giving the city of Newark, Licking county, 'the right to use and occupy for street purposes that part of the bed and banks of the Ohio canal in such city on what is known as Canal street, extending from the east side of Front street to the west side of Sixth street within the limits of such city.'
> "By the terms of the act the city is to fill and level the same, lay and maintain an 18 inch pipe wherever the same is filled up, and upon the further conditions 'that such city, whenever said part of such canal is desired by the state of Ohio for any use, purpose or sale, it shall give notice in writing through its board of public works or any other board having the management and control of such canal, to the city of Newark, Ohio, that the state of Ohio has revoked the privilege therein granted, which the state reserves the right to do without any consideration to such city, while the city is required to restore the canal to its condition at the time of taking over the same. Said city of Newark is to pay 4 per cent. interest upon the value of said canal property as fixed by a commission to be appointed by the governor.' (See O. L. 102 p. 177.)
> "It will be observed that the benefits to be derived by the city of Newark are of a doubtful character, since it apparently leaves the situation subject to the will of the board of public works.
> "We are fully convinced from conversation held with numerous citizens of Newark that the city will never take over the canal property on anything like a fair valuation, and this would be the case even though the law was not inconsistent.
> "You will note that the act did not even abandon the property for canal purposes.
> "In view of the facts set forth above, we are of opinion that the best interests of the state will be subserved by leasing or selling the lands in question in accordance with the act entitled 'An act to abandon certain portions of the Ohio canal, etc.,' (See O. L. 102, pages 293-294).

"Such a lease or sale should be made subject to an easement for street crossings over the canal property, which is about all that the average citizen of Newark is interested in.

"The property in question is worth probably $40,000.00, and if you find it can be legally done, the board would like to have your opinion so that it may take some action in reference to disposing of the property at its next regular meeting which will be held on April 9th."

In reply thereto I desire to say that the act passed by the Seventy-Ninth General Assembly entitled "An act to permit the city of Newark, Licking county, Ohio, to use and occupy as a street a part of the bed of the Ohio canal within the city limits of said city," 102 O. L. 177, provides as follows:

"Section 1. That there is granted to the city of Newark, Licking county, Ohio, the right to use and occupy for street purposes that part of the bed and banks of the Ohio canal in such city on what is known as Canal street, extending from the east side of Front street to the west side of Sixth street, within the limits of such city, and for that purpose to fill and level the same, but upon and subject of these conditions, viz.: That such city shall, at its expense, lay and maintain at or near the present bottom of the canal bed an iron pipe of the diameter of not less than one and one-half feet, wherever the bed of such canal is filled up, through which to conduct and flow from the canal bed at the west side of Sixth street to the east side of Front street in such city, water to supply the factories or establishments which now use, or which may hereafter apply to, use water for manufacturing purposes, and provides on demand the usual facilities for connections with such pipe; and upon the further condition that such city whenever said part of such canal is desired by the state of Ohio for any use, purpose or sale, it shall give notice in writing through its board of public works or any board having the management and control of such canal, to the city of Newark, Ohio, that the state of Ohio has revoked the privilege herein granted which it hereby reserves the right to do without any consideration to such city, then such city shall within six months after such notification restore such canal within the limits aforesaid, to its present condition and remove such pipe; and upon the further condition that such city of Newark by its council shall accept this grant and its conditions by ordinance duly passed and approved.

"The said city shall pay to the state for the use of said property an annual amount equal to four (4) per cent. of its actual value, so long as such property is so occupied by said city. Such value shall be determined by three commissioners to be appointed by the governor and the rights granted under this act shall not become effective until after the governor shall have approved such valuation.

"Such money so paid into the state shall be credited to the general revenue fund.

"Section 2. That such grant and privilege shall continue in force until the notification aforesaid is given."

The act passed by the Seventy-Ninth General Assembly, entitled "An act to abandon certain portions of the Ohio canal and to provide for the selling and leasing of the lands connected therewith," 102 O. L. page 293, provides in part as follows:

"Section 1. That the portion of the Ohio canal commencing at the junction of said canal with what is known as the Dresden Side Cut near Trinway in Muskingum county, Ohio, and extending thence southwesterly to the southerly end of the aqueduct across Raccoon creek in Newark, Licking county, Ohio, also that portion of said Ohio canal commencing at the flume that connects Buckeye lake with said Ohio canal at the west end of said reservoir in Fairfield county, Ohio, and extending thence southwesterly and southerly with the line of said Ohio canal to its junction with the Ohio river, near Portsmouth in Scioto county, Ohio, be and the same is hereby abandoned for canal purposes.

"Section 2. That the state board of public works and the chief engineer of public works, acting jointly, shall cause such surveys to be made of said canal property as in their judgment is necessary for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, together with such maps and plats of the same as will facilitate the selling or leasing of said canal lands, which plats shall be preserved as permanent records in the office of the state board of public works.

"Section 3. As soon as such surveys and plats have been completed, the state board of public works and the chief engineer of public works, acting as a joint board, shall proceed to appraise, and lease or sell, as they may deem for the best interest of the state, subject to the approval of the governor and attorney general, said canal lands, except as hereinafter noted, in strict conformity with the various provisions of the statutes of Ohio relating to the leasing and selling of state canal lands, except that the grant of such leases shall be for a term of not less than fifteen nor more than twenty-five years, and that the bed and banks of said abandoned canal property may be included in any lease of such canal lands.

"Section 8. Nothing in this act shall interfere with any leases, rights or privileges heretofore granted by the state of Ohio and in force at the date of approval of this act."

It appears that the portion of the Ohio canal described in the first quoted act as follows: "that part of the bed and banks of the Ohio canal in such city on what is known as Canal street, extending from the east side of Front street to the west side of Sixth street, within the limits of such city" is also included in the "act to abandon certain portions of the Ohio canal and to provide for the selling and leasing of the lands connected therewith."

The first quoted act became a law May 28, 1911, and the second quoted act became a law on June 7, 1911. The first act above quoted was enacted by the general assembly upon certain conditions, first, that the city of Newark by its council should accept the grant and its conditions by ordinance duly passed and approved. It follows, therefore, that if the city of Newark has not yet accepted said grant and its conditions by ordinance of its council duly passed and approved, then said act by virtue of that fact is not yet effective.

Said act contained the further provision:

"The said city shall pay to the state for the use of said property an annual amount equal to four (4) per cent. of its actual value, so long as such property is so occupied by said city. Such value shall be determined by three commissioners to be appointed by the governor and the rights granted under this act shall not become effective until after the governor shall have approved such valuation."

If such valuation has not been so determined as provided, and has not been approved by the governor, then it follows that the provisions of said act are not yet effective by reason of such non-compliance.

Said act also contains the following provisions:

> "Whenever said part of such canal is desired by the state of Ohio for any use, purpose or sale, it (the state) shall give notice in writing through its board of public works or any other board having the management and control of such canal, to the city of Newark, Ohio, that the state of Ohio has revoked the privilege herein granted, which it (the state) hereby reserves the right to do without any consideration to such city."

It, therefore, follows that even if said act has become effective by reason of compliance with all the afore-mentioned conditions nevertheless the state can revoke and set aside any interest or rights granted to the city of Newark in the manner specified in said act, to-wit, "Whenever said part of such canal is desired by the state of Ohio for any use, purpose or sale, it (the state) shall give notice in writing through its board of public works or any other board having the management and control of such canal, to the city of Newark, Ohio, that the state of Ohio has revoked the privileges herein granted, which it (the state) hereby reserves the right to do without any consideration to such city."

In conclusion, it is my opinion that the board of public works can legally revoke the privilege granted to the city of Newark in the manner above specified, and that after so doing the board of public works can legally sell or lease the said portion of the Ohio canal as described in the first above quoted act in the manner provided in said act entitled " an act to abandon certain portions of the Ohio canal and to provide for the selling and leasing of the lands connected therewith."

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Girls' Industrial Home.)

633.

INMATES OF GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL HOME—MARRIAGE DOES NOT AFFECT CONTROL OF BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION.

The statutes give the board of administration the legal control and custody of any inmate of the girls' industrial home from the time of commitment until legally discharged, or until such inmate attains the age of twenty-one, regardless of whether or not such inmate is married at the time of commitment or becomes married during the term of the board's control.

MISS CHARLOTTE DYE, Chief Matron, Girls' Industrial Home, Delaware, Ohio.

DEAR MADAM:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 13, 1912, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

> "Who is to have jurisdiction over girls from the girls' industrial home, who are married but are still under twenty-one years of age?"

In reply thereto I desire to say that Section 2112 of the General Code provides that,

> "A girl committed to the home (meaning the girls' industrial home) shall be kept there, disciplined, instructed, employed and governed under the direction of the trustees, until she is either reformed or discharged, or bound out by them according to their by-laws or has attained the age of twenty-one years, etc."

Section 2112-1 of the General Code provides:

> "That the board of trustees of the girls' industrial home shall establish rules and regulations under which inmates may be conditionally released upon parole in legal custody and under the control of the trustees, and subject at any time to be returned to the institution. * * *"

Section 2112-2 provides that,

> "The trustees may enforce such rules and regulations and return any inmate so upon parole. Their written order, certified by the superintendent, shall be sufficient warrant for any officer named therein to arrest and return such inmate to the home. An officer named therein shall be under duty to arrest and return to the girls' industrial home paroled inmate named therein."

From a reading of the above sections, it is clear, first, that any girl duly committed to your institution may be detained therein until she attains the age of twenty-one years; second, that the board of administration, as successors to the board of trustees of your institution, shall establish rules and regulations under which inmates may be conditionally released upon parole but still under the legal custody and control of said board, and subject at any time to be returned to the institution; and third, that the board may enforce such rules and regulations and return any inmate so upon parole.

Section 2116 of the General Code provides that the trustees may bind out as an apprentice or servant, any girl committed to their charge for a term not longer than until she arrives at the age of eighteen years, etc.

Section 2119 provides that the trustees shall be the guardians of each girl so bound or held to service, shall take care that the terms of the contract are faithfully fulfilled, that she is properly treated, and shall cause any grievance to be redressed.

It is plain from a reading of the above sections that the board of administration may adopt such rules and regulations as may be best for the conduct and discharge of inmates of said institution, and may discharge an inmate at any time before attaining the age of twenty-one years, if convinced that said inmate is reformed.

There can be no question but that the board of administration has the legal control and custody of any inmate of said institution from the time of the commitment thereto until legally discharged by it according to law, or until such inmate attains the age of twenty-one years. The fact, as stated in your inquiry, that a girl, an inmate of your institution, under twenty-one years of age, is married, does not change the legal status of said inmate as far as the jurisdiction of the board of administration, over her, is concerned. I apprehend from what you say in your communication that such a case would arise where an inmate of your institution had been bound out as an apprentice or servant and while so away from your institution became married; or where an escaped inmate of said home became married during the time of her absence after her escape; but in neither event, in my opinion, does the fact of such marriage change the legal status of said inmate, and she would still remain under the jurisdiction of the board of administration, and said board would have the legal right to have any such married inmate of the home returned thereto and retained until discharged according to law and the rules as above stated.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

INSANE HOSPITAL—INMATES AS WITNESSES—POWER OF COURT TO SUBPOENA BEFORE GRAND JURY OR COMPEL SUPERINTENDENT TO PERMIT APPEARANCE.

Under the present status of the law the mere fact that a person is confined as an inmate of an insane asylum does not constitute him incompetent as a witness.

If a subpoena to testify before the grand jury is issued to an inmate of an insane asylum the superintendent may or may not in his discretion permit the inmate to obey the subpoena without liability for his action.

The court has inherent discretionary right, however, to issue a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum to said superintendent, and to order him to bring in said patient for testimony before the grand jury and the superintendent is obliged to obey such writ.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 21, 1912.

DR. O. O. FORDYCE, Superintendent Athens State Hospital, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of August 9, 1912, received. You inquire:

> "First. Whether or not the prosecuting attorney has a legal right to subpoena before the grand jury of Athens county, patients confined in the Athens state hospital?
> "Second. In case the prosecuting attorney has the right, what constitutes legal service?
> "Third. In case I fail to honor the subpoena by refusing permission to patients to appear before the grand jury what penalty, if any, can be inflicted upon me?"

In order to answer your inquiry it will be first necessary to determine whether any patient confined in your institution and under your charge is a competent witness in any court proceedings, civil or criminal. If incompetent and incapable of being a witness at all, the prosecuting attorney would have no right to subpoena and you would have the right to refuse to honor the subpoena.

There was a period when lunatics were treated as incapable of being witnesses at all. However, this indiscriminate rule of exclusion has been modified. The law no longer excludes absolutely whenever some degree of derangement or imbecility exists; it asks whether the aberration is, in the instance in hand, sufficient to negative trustworthiness. (Wigmore on Evidence.)

True the General Code of Ohio, Section 11493, provides that "all persons are competent witness except those of unsound mind * * *." It may be claimed that this statute makes a person of unsound mind absolutely incompetent as a witness in Ohio, but in the case of Pittsburgh Ry. Co. vs. Thompson, 82 Fed. Rep., 720, Justice Lurton said:

> "But the question remains, who is a person of unsound mind? That the person has been found insane and is an inmate of an asylum, affords prima facie evidence that he is of unsound mind, within the meaning of the provision, and operates to throw the burden of proving competency upon the party offering him. This was the ruling of Judge Ricks, who tried this case, and, in our judgment, was a correct exposition of the law. Whether he was so unsound in mind and memory as to be totally incapable of testifying is as open a question under this statute as at the common law. The statute is but a declaration of the common law. To suppose that it was meant to disqualify every person who is of any degree of unsoundness would bring about an intolerable condition of things, and, under such circumstances, it is not to be presumed that the common law was intended to be altered or modified to any greater extent than indicated by a reasonable construction of the words of the statute. To say that a person of unsound mind is incapable of testifying is but to state the general rule of the common law. But at the common law the unsoundness must be such as that he is incapable of understanding the nature of an oath or giving a coherent statement touching the matter upon which he is examined. * * * We think the court did not err in permitting him to be heard as a witness."

True this case decided by Lurton, J., was a civil case, but his reasoning and the doctrine laid down therein is applicable to criminal cases as well.

Justice Campbell, in the case of R. vs. Hill, 2 Den. & P. C. C., 254, said:

"It has been argued that any particular delusion, commonly called monomania, makes a man inadmissible. This would be extremely inconvenient in many cases in proof either of guilt or innocence; it might also cause serious difficulties in the management of a lunatic asylum. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the judge must, in all such cases, determine the competency and the jury the credibility."

Justice Chapman, in the case of Kendall vs. May, 10 All., 64, said:

"Persons who are affected to such an extent that it is expedient to place them in insane hospitals or under guardianship often possess sufficient knowledge of events that took place in their presence to make them useful and trustworthy as witnesses."

It is everywhere accepted now that derangement, in order to disqualify, must be such as substantially negatives trustworthiness upon the subject of testimony. (Wigmore on Evidence, Vol. 1, 492.)

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the fact that a person is a patient of your hospital does not, of itself, disqualify him as a witness. He may or may not be a competent witness in a given case, under the laws of Ohio.

Having decided that patients of your institution may be competent witnesses, I come now to the question. Can they be subpoenaed before the grand jury? The form of document used for this purpose is a writ of subpoena which commands the witness to appear at a certain court on a certain day to testify what he knows in a certain case between parties in civil cases, or it commands the witness to appear before the grand jury to testify at a certain time. If the desired witness is confined in a jail or asylum a subpoena to him would be of no avail, since he cannot obey it, and his custodian would still lack authority to bring him; accordingly, a writ to the custodian is necessary.

Section 13665 of the General Code gives authority to issue a subpoena to the keeper of a penitentiary, workhouse or prison, to bring the person named in the subpoena before the court; but there is no statutory authority given to issue a subpoena to the superintendent of insane asylums. The custody and control of the superintendent of an insane asylum of the patients is just as complete and absolute as the control of the warden of the penitentiary and superintendent of workhouses and prisons over prisoners, and a subpoena issued to a patient thereof could not be obeyed by the patient unless the superintendent would consent to the bringing of the patient before the grand jury. I see no legal objections to having service upon your patients in the usual manner, and you consenting to allow the patients to go before the grand jury of your county. However, the question remains, in case for any reason you desire to not honor the subpoena and refuse to grant permission to the patient to testify, would you have a legal right so to do? Wigmore on Evidence, Vol. 4, Sec. 2199, says:

> "If the desired witness is confined in jail, a subpoena would be of no avail, since he could not obey it and his custodian would still lack authority to bring him; accordingly, a writ to the custodian is necessary, ordering the prisoner be brought to give testimony; this writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum, grantable in discretion at common law, is now usually authorized by statute as a matter of course."

The legislature has enacted a statute authorizing the bringing in of prisoners confined in penitentiaries and prisons to testify in criminal cases, but has not seen fit to grant this right, by statute, to bring patients from the insane asylums to testify in criminal proceedings or before the grand jury. However, I think the court has an inherent right, in the interest of justice, to order the superintendent of an asylum to bring before the court and the grand jury, witnesses who may be competent to testify before the court or grand jury. The supreme court of Ohio, in the case of State vs. Townley, 67 O. S., 21, held:

> "Every court has inherent power to do all things which are reasonably necessary for the administration of justice, within the scope of its jurisdiction."

It is held in the case of O'Mara vs. Lamb, 166 Fed. Rep., 71, that:

> "1. A writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum may be properly issued to obtain the testimony of a person confined in jail or in a state hospital for the criminal insane.
> "2. A writ of 'habeas corpus ad testificandum' is not the high prerogative writ of habeas corpus, but is merely the ancient common law precept to bring a prisoner into court to testify, and is the process of the court from which it issues, although it emanates from a judge in chambers."

The court in this case said:

> "The rule of the common law has always been that this writ (habeas corpus ad testificandum) is grantable in discretion."

In the case of O'Mara vs. Lamb a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum was issued to the superintendent of the Matteawan state hospital of New York, directing him to bring the body of Henry K. Thaw before the common pleas court at Pittsburgh, Pa., forthwith, and there to have him present to testify in the proceedings before said court. A hearing was had and a writ was refused because it did not clearly appear that there was immediate necessity for his testimony. It was plainly shown that his competency to testify was open to very serious question and it is not to be presumed that any court would issue a writ of habeas corpus to bring before it a person to testify, who, when brought, could not testify.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that the court of common pleas of Athens county has an inherent right to bring before the grand jury any competent witness who may be confined in your asylum, not in obedience to any subpoena that may be issued to a patient and served upon you, but in case a subpoena was issued and you did not desire to honor it and, therefore refused permission for the patient to go before the grand jury then, in that event, a petition could be filed by the prosecuting attorney, praying the court to make an order that a writ be issued to you, directing you to bring before the court the person named therein and have him present to testify as required by the court. You could resist this order by showing that the person desired as a witness was not competent, by reason of derangement of his mental facilities, or perhaps, you could show that it would be injurious upon the patient to have him called as a witness, and the court could make an order in reference thereto, and you would be bound by the ruling of the court in the premises.

However, answering your questions specifically, I hold, first, the prosecuting attorney has the legal right to subpoena before the grand jury, insane patients when confined in the Athens state hospital, and it is discretionary with you whether you permit the patient to obey the subpoena.

I further hold that in a proper case, in the interest of justice, the court of patient to appear before the grand jury and no penalty can be inflicted upon you for such refusal.

I further hold that in a proper case, in the interest of justice, the court of common pleas has an inherent right, by proper proceedings, to compel you to bring before the court and grand jury, in criminal proceedings, any competent witness who may be subpoenaed from your institution.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

PRISONERS—PENALTY FOR VIOLATION OF PAROLE OR CONDITIONAL RELEASE—MAXIMUM TERM WITHOUT DEDUCTION FOR GOOD TIME.

By Section 2174 providing for the reincarceration of prisoners who violate paroles or conditional releases, it is intended to subject such to the penalty of serving out the entire maximum term of their imprisonment without deductions for former or later "good time."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 24, 1912.

HON. T. H. B. JONES, Warden, Ohio Penitentiary, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your communication dated July 18, 1912, received, in which you request me to interpret Section 2174 of the General Code, which reads as follows:

> "A prisoner violating the conditions of his parole or conditional release, having been entered in the proceedings of the board of managers and declared to be delinquent, shall thereafter be treated as an escaped prisoner owing service to the state, and, when arrested, shall serve the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment. The time from the date of his declared delinquency to the date of his arrest shall not be counted as a part of time served."

You also state in your letter that:

> "It has been the custom under former administrations, and also the present one, to figure the time in this way: The prisoner is given credit for every day from the date of his incarceration to the date on which the parole is revoked by the board. The 'good time' which the prisoner has earned during this period is then figured and taken from him. After he is recommitted to prison, he is permitted to gain "good time" at the rate provided by law for his term, the same as any other prisoner, and as if he had not violated his parole. For example:
> "John Smith No. 23456 comes in January 2, 1910, to serve 5 years for burglary. Under the statute a 5 year man gains 10 days 'good time' a month, or 600 days on the sentence. John Smith is paroled on January 2, 1911, and his parole is revoked on January 2, 1912, two years after his incarceration. During these two years he has gained 240 days 'good time' which are now taken from him. When he was first committed to prison his 'short time' was arrived at by adding 3 years and 4 months to the date of his arrival, which gave May 1, 1913. We now add 240 days to May 1, 1913, which makes his new 'short time' expire January 1, 1914 (240 days later). If his conduct continues good during the remainder of his imprisonment he leaves the prison 360 days before the full five years have elapsed."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that the section referred to in your communication is very plain and easy to interpret—it simply means that—

When a prisoner has been paroled or conditionally released from the Ohio penitentiary, and has broken or violated the conditions of his parole or conditional release, and the board of administration has entered in its proceedings that fact, and declared the prisoner so violating this parole or conditional release to be delinquent, such prisoner shall thereafter be treated as an escaped prisoner owing service to the state, and, when arrested, shall serve the unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment.

The custom followed by former and the present administrations, as set forth in your letter, is absolutely in violation of said section.

When a prisoner violates a parole or conditional release under the section above referred to the legislature has imposed a penalty upon him for so doing, and that penalty is that said prisoner shall be returned to the prison and be ineligible to receive any further concessions as to good time, but that he shall be kept therein for the "unexpired period of the maximum term of his imprisonment," and when the legislature specifically provided the unexpired period of the maximum term of said prisoner's imprisonment, it meant "entire period," and not any deductions for good time after his return to the prison.

I, therefore, suggest to you, as warden of the Ohio penitentiary, that in case the custom which you state has been followed by the past and present administrations has not been changed, that you at once notify the board of administration of the unlawful practice and desist from discharging any such prisoners now or hereafter confined in your institution as such violators of paroles or conditional releases, until they have served out the full unexpired term of their imprisonment for which they were sentenced.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SENTENCE TO PENITENTIARY—SENTENCES BEGINNING AT SAME DATE SERVED CONCURRENTLY UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED IN CERTIFICATE OF COMMITMENT.

When a prisoner is received at the penitentiary with two certificates of commitment, for different offenses of the same date for one year, each sentence begins with the date of entry and they run concurrently.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 2, 1912.

HON. T. H. B. JONES, Warden, Ohio State Penitentiary, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge your letter of even date wherein you request my opinion as follows:

> "John Smith is received at the Ohio penitentiary with three different certificates of sentence of one year each, two of them for burglary and larceny and the other for horse stealing. No mention is made on these certificates of any intention on the part of the court to make him serve one sentence at the expiration of the other, and the three commitments bear the same date.
> "Kindly advise me if it is my duty to discharge this prisoner after he has served a one year sentence or to hold him and oblige him to serve two other one year sentences after he has served the first. In other words, do these three sentences run concurrently?"

It is well settled that a sentence of imprisonment must be definite and certain and that it is only required to state the duration and the place of imprisonment. It is not necessary to specify the time upon which the imprisonment is to commence.

The general rule of laws, applicable to the situation presented, is stated in 12 Cyc. 967 as follows:

> "When term begins: (1) in general. The general rule is that the term of imprisonment for which the convict is sentenced begins with the first day of actual incarceration in the prison to which his sentence has consigned him."

and on page 968 of the same volume, the following appears;

> "When terms are concurrent. In the absence of a statute, if it be not stated in either of two or more sentences imposed at the same time, that the imprisonment under any of them shall take effect at the expiration of the others, the periods of time named will run concurrently and and the punishment be executed simultaneously. The fact that the terms of imprisonment are to be successive must be clearly and expressly stated."

I am unable to find any statute in Ohio which has definite bearing on this case, and therefore, conclude that these three sentences imposed at the same time, without specification of the time of their commencement, will be served concurrently. As the prisoner in this case was given three sentences on the same date, of one year each, it is your duty to discharge him after he has served one year's sentence.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CLEVELAND STATE HOSPITAL—COSTS OF HABEAS CORPUS PAYABLE BY STATE—SUPERINTENDENT NOT PERSONALLY LIABLE.

Under Section 12189 General Code, the costs of a habeas corpus proceeding for release of an inmate of the Cleveland state hospital, are chargeable to the state and the superintendent of said hospital may therefore, not be held for the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1912.

CHARLES, H. CLARK, M. D., Superintendent The Cleveland State Hospital, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 21, 1912, in which you inquire whether the costs in habeas corpus proceeding for the release of an inmate of your institution, resulting in his discharge by the court, can be assessed against you either personally or as superintendent of the institution. Replying thereto I desire to state that a proceeding in habeas corpus is a statutory one and is found in Section 12161 to Section 12189, inclusive, of the General Code. Section 12189 provides as follows:

> "The fees of officers and witnesses shall be taxed by the judge, on return of the proceedings on the writ, and collected as a part of the original costs in the case. When the prisoner is discharged, the costs shall be taxed to the state, and paid out of the county treasury, upon the warrant of the county auditor. * * *"

Therefore, the costs in the proceeding referred to by you cannot be taxed against you personally or against you as superintendent of the institution, but must be paid out of the treasury of Cuyahoga county.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE SCHOOL FOR BLIND—INCIDENTAL EXPENSES—GYMNASIUM SUITS, DENTISTRY AND OPTICIAN'S SERVICES—PERSONS LIABLE FOR SUPPORT OF CLAIMS—LIABILITY OF COUNTY.

Items of expense for gymnasium suits, filling teeth, repairing glasses, etc., are "incidental expenses" within the meaning of Sections 1815 and 1816 General Code and when such are not collectable by the authorities of the state school for blind, from the persons liable for the support of the inmates, they must be met by the county, as provided in said statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 13, 1912.

HON. EDWARD M. VAN CLEVE, Superintendent Ohio State School for the Blind, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of inquiry of the date of February 7, 1912, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Under date of February 5, 1912, Hon. F. M. Sayre, auditor of Franklin county, writes me that the bill of this school against Franklin county for clothing and incidental expenses furnished to certain pupils at the state school for the blind, whose residences are in Franklin county, is incorrect in that there are certain items which should be eliminated. For your information I enclose herewith his letter together with the bills referred to upon which you will note that he has checked the items for filling teeth, for gymnasium suits, and repairing glasses.
> "You are requested to furnish an opinion upon this question which has been raised by Mr. Sayre, and if he is correct in his contention we must take some steps that will secure the payment of such bills by the parents or eliminate such incidental expenses altogether, which latter course of procedure would be in my judgment unfortunate to say the least."

The items to which Mr. Sayre, auditor of Franklin county objects are as follows:

Franklin county, Dr. to Ohio State School for the Blind

June 6, 1911, 1 gymnasium suit	$2.10
May 27, 1911, filling teeth	3.00
March 24, 1911, repairing glasses	.25
September 22, 1910, repairing glasses	1.25
October 15, 1910, repairing glasses	1.25
June 1, 1911, gymnasium suit	2.00

Section 1815 of the General Code (formerly Sec. 631 Bates Revised Statutes) provides as follows:

> "All persons admitted into a benevolent institution, except as otherwise provided in chapters relating to particular institutions, shall be maintained at the expense of the state. They shall be neatly and comfortably clothed and their traveling and incidental expenses paid by themselves, or those having them in charge."

Section 1816 of the General Code (formerly Section 632 Bates Revised Statutes) provides as follows:

> "In case of failure to pay incidental expenses, or furnish necessary clothing, the steward or other financial officer of the institution may pay such expenses, and furnish the requisite clothing, and pay therefor from the appropriation for the current expenses of the institution, keeping and reporting a separate account thereof. The account so drawn, signed by such officer, countersigned by the superintendent, and sealed with the seal of the institution, shall be forwarded to the auditor of the county, from which the person came, who shall pay the amount of such bill from the county funds to the financial officer of the institution and charge the amount to the current expense fund. The county auditor shall then collect the account, in the name of the state, as other debts are collected."

I desire to say that if the duty of supplying patients with clothing as required by Section 1815 is not performed, the remedy in case of such failure is for the institution to furnish it under this section, and for the amount so furnished it is to be reimbursed as provided in Section 1816 of the General Code above quoted.

In support of this proposition, I herewith submit the following to-wit:

State vs. Kissewetter, 37 O. S. 546.

> "1. Under Section 700 of the Revised Statutes, prior to its amendment March 18, 1881, patients, after their admission into the asylums of the state for the insane, were clothed at the expense of the state. Since the amendment, the expense of furnishing such clothing is under Section 631, chargeable on the estates of the patients or on those who would be legally bound to furnish it, if they were not in the asylum.
> "2. If the duty of supplying patients with clothing, as required by Section 631, should not be performed, the remedy, in such case of failure, is for the institution to furnish it under Section 632; and for the amount so furnished, it is to be reimbursed as therein provided."

On page 548 of the opinion the court says:

> "In title five the benevolent institutions of the state are classified; and a chapter is devoted to prescribing rules for the government of each class. Chapter one, in which are Sections 631 and 632, applies to all the institutions without reference to the class to which they belong, except as is otherwise provided in chapters relating to particular institutions. Chapter nine relates to asylums for the insane, and Section 700, which is found in that chapter, prior to the amendment of March 18, 1881, made special provision for clothing the patients admitted into such asylums, by declaring that they should 'be maintained therein at the expense of the state.' The maintenance thus provided including clothing as well as other necessaries."

I gather from your inquiry that the auditor of Franklin county objects to said items on the ground that the same are not included within the items of "incidental expenses" or "necessary clothing." The question then to be determined is whether or not these items objected to are embraced within the terms of "incidental expenses" or "necessary clothing."

In construing said Sections 1815 and 1816 of the General Code (formerly Sections 631 and 632 Bates Revised Statutes respectively) the Hon. Wade H. Ellis, one of my predecessors held as follows:

"The statutes above referred to have been repeatedly construed by this department to mean that the state shall be at the expense of maintaining the inmates of the institution, but that the clothing used by such inmate shall be a charge against the county from which he or she may be sent, ultimately chargeable against the relatives of the inmate; that the term 'incidental expenses' does not include medical attendance, school books, postage stamps, etc.; in other words, the county may be properly charged with the expense of clothing the inmate, the actual traveling expenses and the incidental expenses incurred in taking the inmate to the institutions."

Later in an opinion rendered to the Hon. J. W. Jones, superintendent of the state school for the deaf, Mr. Ellis reversed his former opinion and held as follows:

"In answer to yours of January 6th, I beg to say that in my opinion the expense for the special work of an oculist for treatment of a pupil in the Ohio institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, is such an incidental expense as is provided for under Sections 631 and 632 of the Revised Statutes, and should be charged to the pupil or to the county from which he comes."

I am inclined to the view adopted in the last opinion of Mr. Ellis. It is certainly true that the filling of teeth is not only an "incidental expense" but a very necessary one. Likewise and for the same reason the expense of repairing glasses is also not only an "incidental expense" but a very necessary one, and furthermore such expenses are as much "incidental expenses" as the expense for the special work of an oculist for the treatment of a pupil in the state school for the deaf. The gymnasium work is necessary for the health as well as the physical training and development of the pupils of the Ohio state school for the blind, and I am of the opinion that gymnasium suits are as necessary to the physical health and welfare of the unfortunate pupils of the state school for the blind as any other items of clothing or wearing apparel.

Section 1815-9 of the General Code, which is a part of the same act as are Sections 1815 and 1816 of the General Code above quoted, provides as follows:

"It is the intent of this act that a husband may be held liable for the support of a wife while an inmate of any of said institutions, a wife for a husband, a father or mother for a son or daughter, and a son or daughter, or both, for a father or mother."

Therefore it follows that if the items of expense as above enumerated are not paid by such relatives of the pupil of the state school for the blind, then it is proper and legal for the financial officer of such institution to pay such expenses from the proper appropriation and to certify the same to the county auditor of the respective county from which such pupils came and it then becomes the duty of such auditor to issue his warrant for the payment of said items as provided in Section 1816 General Code above quoted. The auditor shall then collect the account in the name of the state, as other debts are collected, from the parties liable for the support of said pupil, provided, of course, that said parties are so fincially situated that the respective accounts are collectible.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

STATE SCHOOL FOR DEAF—"INCIDENTAL EXPENSES CHARGEABLE TO PUPIL OR COUNTY—MEDICAL, DENTAL AND OPTICIAN'S SERVICES AND CLOTHING.

Items of school supplies, special work, medical and surgical attendance, dental work and optician's services, gymnasium uniforms and shoes are such incidental expenses of the state school for the deaf as are provided for in Sections 1815 and 1816 General Code and such items should be charged to the pupil or to the county from which said pupils come.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 13, 1912.

HON. J. W. JONES, Superintendent State School for the Deaf, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 6, 1912, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Hon. F. M. Sayre, county auditor of Franklin county, has returned our bills for maintenance of pupils in this school with all such items marked off as school supplies, special work of operating the throat for the removal of adenoid tissue, gymnasium uniforms and shoes and special work of dentist and optician, claiming such items do not come under incidental expenses spoken of in Sections 631 and 632, Revised Statutes.
> "I shall be glad to have your decision as to whether or not Franklin county shall pay such bills."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that I have just prepared an opinion to Hon. E. M. Van Cleve, superintendent Ohio state school for the blind, which said opinion substantially and in nearly all respects answers your inquiry, and accordingly I am enclosing to you a copy of that opinion.

Based upon the reasoning of that opinion, I wish to say that it is my judgment and opinion that the items of school supplies, special work of operating the throat for the removal of adenoid tissue, dentistry and special optical work for the pupils in the Ohio state school for the deaf are such "incidental expenses" as are provided for in Sections 1815 and 1816 of the General Code (formerly Sections 631 and 632 Bates Revised Statutes) and such items should be charged to the pupil or the county from which said pupils came in accordance with said sections and in accordance with my opinion above referred to.

Furthermore, in my opinion, the items of expense for gymnasium suits and shoes are likewise items of expense for necessary clothing, and as such, said are provided for in Sections 1815 and 1816 of the General Code (formerly Sections 631 and 632 Bates Revised Statutes) and should be charged to the pupils or the respective counties from which said pupils came.

The copy of the opinion which I am herewith enclosing I think fully states my reasons upon which my conclusions and opinion herein are based.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SUPPLIES FOR HORSE MAINTAINED BY SUPERVISOR OF PUBLIC PRINTING AT STATE BINDERY, CANNOT BE PURCHASED BY BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION AND PAID FOR BY SUPERVISOR OF PUBLIC PRINTING.

Neither the board of administration nor the officials of the state school for the deaf, can purchase supplies in behalf of the state supervisor of public printing, to be paid for by him, and employed by him for maintaining a horse owned in connection with the state bindery.

Vouchers made by the supervisor of public printing for payment of such supplies so ordered by the board of administration, were rightly dishonored by the auditor of state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1912.

HON. J. W. JONES, Superintendent State School for the Deaf, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am pleased to take up for reply, your inquiry of April 11th, which is as follows:

> "For many years this institution has been boarding the horse belonging to the department of state printing, for which payment has been made by the supervisor of state printing out of his contingent fund at the rate of $150 per year. Until February, 1911, that money became part of our current expense fund and was used to buy supplies including feed. Since February, 1911, all such receipts are required to be turned into the state treasury. Therefore, when the state printer gave us his warrant on the state treasurer last June for $150, we were compelled to return it at once to the state treasury and therefore received, in fact no pay at all for the service we had rendered and the expense we had incurred in boarding this horse.
> "I therefore, by authority of the state board of administration, took up with the state printer, Mr. Crawford, the advisability of his department furnishing the school with feed to the amount of $150 per year instead of making cash payment. He readily agreed to this. Accordingly we purchased upon the competitive plan, feed to the amount of approximately $104 and had the bills rendered to the supervisor of state printing. He presented them to the auditor of state for payment and the same were rejected as being irregular.
> "I took this matter up this morning with the deputy auditor, Mr. Beatty and he said he would have to be advised by you before he could honor the voucher. The question resolves itself into this: If the supervisor of state printing can pay us $150 per year out of his contingent fund for feeding the horse belonging to that department, may payment be made in feed, or may he buy the feed out of the same fund and turn it into our bins in lieu of the $150 in warrant on the treasurer? The latter is the only way by which we can receive any pay at all."

As there could have been nothing inequitable in former proceedings in as much as in their culmination, the benefits were substantially equal with respect to either party, and as your inquiry is made solely with reference to the existing situation, the former practice may be ignored and the problem dealt with solely with a view to present difficulties.

Section 750 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The supervisor of public printing shall have charge of the book binding establishment at the state school for the deaf; he shall provide the necessary materials, implements, machinery and fixtures therefor; he shall have supervision and control thereof and the exclusive management of its practical operation."

By virtue of this section, the supervisor of public printing is given exclusive powers of control, management and supervision of the state bindery, which establishment, by virtue of Section 1080 General Code, must be maintained at your institution. Section 750 General Code also requires the supervisor to furnish the necessary materials for the bindery, which are to be supplied and paid for by him as directed in Section 750 General Code. Therefore, a horse maintained as an adjunct to the bindery and employed by the supervisor of public printing solely for the purpose of such conveyancing as is required in the operation of that establishment, can, by provision of Section 1880 aforesaid, be kept in the barns of the state school for the deaf and cared for by the supervisor and employes without rental or other charge therefor, and the supplies for said horse can be purchased by the supervisor under the head of materials necessary for the operation of said bindery.

The situation then, is as follows:

The supervisor drew a voucher for one hundred and fifty dollars in favor of your institution in payment for feed and supplies to be furnished by the state school for the deaf for the ensuing year. This money however had to be immediately turned into the state treasury and there it must remain. In pursuance of a substitute plan, the board then purchased feed and supplies for said horse upon competitive bidding and the supervisor drew vouchers in behalf of the dealers furnishing said supplies in the amount of one hundred and four dollars, which vouchers the auditor refused to honor. These vouchers now remain unpaid and the feed for which they were intended to pay is now in the bins of the state school for the deaf.

A careful investigation of the statutes relating to the respective officials has revealed nothing which would seem to authorize an arrangement, the result of which would be to shift the duties and obligations incidental to the office of supervisor of public printing upon other state officials, namely: the purchase of these materials necessary for the operation of the state bindery.

The voucher was therefore, rightly dishonored by the auditor and the bill should be paid by the board of administration and the feed retained for the purposes under its immediate control. The supervisor of public printing should be required to purchase the feed and supplies for the horse in question and to keep the same separate and apart to be used solely for the purpose of sustaining this animal or at least for purposes incidental to his own office.

Should the board, by reason of this purchase, have on hand more supplies than are necessary for its own purpose, the same could be disposed of to the supervisor of public printing or to any other public official, under the procedure set out in Section 1847 General Code.

As any moneys paid for the same however are required to be paid into the state treasury weekly, by virtue of Section 1864 General Code, such action would be of no avail for the purchase of reimbursing the board in any manner or form.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BOYS' INDUSTRIAL HOME—COMMITMENT OF BOYS UNDER TEN BY VIRTUE OF THE JUVENILE ACT.

Section 2084 General Code providing a minimum age of ten years for boys who may be committed to the boys' industrial home, applies only to offenses against the state and does not interfere with the powers of a judge under the juvenile act to commit delinquent, neglected or dependent minors under the age of seventeen years, to any state or county institution.

A boy of nine years of age may therefore, be committed under these provisions to the boys' industrial home.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 6, 1912.

HON. F. C. GERLACH, Superintendent Boys' Industrial School, Lancaster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 26, 1912, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Kindly give your opinion as to the legality of the commitment to this institution of Charles Ely, a resident of Steubenville, whose age is nine years. Find commitment papers herewith enclosed."

In reply to your inquiry I desire to say that Section 1642 General Code, (juvenile act) gives to the common pleas, probate, insolvency and superior courts jurisdiction over neglected and delinquent minors as follows, to-wit:

> "Such courts of common pleas, probate courts, insolvency courts, and superior courts within the provisions of this chapter shall have jurisdiction over and with respect to delinquent, neglected and dependent minors, under the age of seventeen years, not inmates of a state institution, or any institution incorporated under the laws of the state for the care and correction of delinquent, neglected and dependent children, and their parents, guardians, or any person, persons, corporation or agent of a corporation responsible for or guilty of causing, encouraging, aiding, abetting or contributing toward the delinquency, neglect or dependency of such minor."

It will be noted that said section fixes the jurisdiction of said courts as to the maximum age of such minors but is silent as to the minimum age. In connection with the section above quoted, Section 1653 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "When a minor under the age of seventeen years is found to be dependent or neglected, the judge may make an order committing such child to the care of some suitable state or county institution, or to the care of some reputable citizen of good moral character, or to the care of some training school or an industrial school, as provided by law, or to the care of some association willing to receive it, which embraces within its objects the purposes of caring for or obtaining homes for dependent, neglected or delinquent children or any of them, and which has been accredited as hereinafter provided. When the health or condition of the child shall require it, the judge may cause the child to be placed in a public hospital or institution for treatment or special cure, or in a private hospital or institution which will receive it for like purposes without charge."

Section 2084 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Male youth, not over sixteen nor under ten years of age, may be committed to the boys' industrial school by any judge of the common pleas court, probate court or police court, on conviction of an offense against the laws of the state."

Section 1680 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Nothing herein shall be construed to repeal any provision of law relating to the boys' industrial school or the girls' industrial home."

In my opinion said Section 2084 of the General Code, above quoted, insofar as the age limit fixed therein is concerned, applies only to convictions for offenses committed against the state, and does not interfere with or in any way abrogate said Section 1642 and Section 1653 of the General Code of the so-called "juvenile act," under the provisions of which the common pleas, insolvency and superior courts have undoubted jurisdiction to commit any delinquent, neglected or dependent minor under the age of seventeen years to any state or county institution including the boys' industrial school.

Therefore, in conclusion it is my opinion that the commitment of Charles Ely, a resident of Steubenville, whose age is nine years, to the boys' industrial school at Lancaster is both proper and legal.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY—AGREEMENT TO ACCEPT DORMITORIES FROM CORPORATION ORGANIZED TO ERECT AND DONATE DORMITORY BUILDINGS TO THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES, VALID.

Under the power vested in the trustees of the Ohio state university to contract, to receive donations of personal property without qualification as to method, and to control and supervise all buildings and other property belonging to the university, said trustees may enter into an agreement of acceptance with a corporation organized to erect dormitories upon the university campus and ultimately to donate the buildings to the university, when the plans of the buildings are subject to the approval of the trustees and a joint control of expenditures and the entire scholastic management of the buildings vested in the trustees pending completion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 31, 1912.

HON. F. E. POMERENE, President, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me with your letter of May 13th, plans whereby the Ohio state university alumni association proposes to secure by private subscription the erection and equipping of a system of dormitories to be located upon the campus of the university.

The proposed plans which I have carefully examined contemplate the following features:

"First. The organization of a corporation under the laws of Ohio, not for profit, with charter powers to construct, erect, operate and ultimately to donate to the trustees of the Ohio state universiy, a building or buildings to be used as a dormitory for students at the Ohio state university under the scholastic control of the trustees of the university.

"Second. The making of a contract between the trustees of the university and the corporation whereby the corporation shall be permitted to construct, equip and maintain upon the campus of the university such a system of dormitories for the use of the students and a limited number of professors.

"Third. As one of the terms of such contract an agreement of the corporation that the plans and specifications of proposed building be approved by the trustees of the university.

"Fourth. As a further stipulation of said contract the reservation in the corporation of the right to maintain and operate the dormitory, and to use the income therefrom for the payment of expenses of maintenance, insurance, repairs and the extinguishment of the indebtedness incurred as hereinafter described, subject to the right of the trustees or state at any time to pay the outstanding indebtedness on the building and acquire the title thereto.

"Fifth. An issue of bonds by the corporation, secured by a deed of trust covering the buildings but not the grounds upon which they are to be erected, the proceeds of such bond issue to be used in the construction of the necessary buildings.

"Sixth. A stipulation in the aforesaid contract to the effect that in matters of scholastic discipline the management, including the assignment of said buildings when constructed, joint supervision and authority management of the trustees of the university in precisely the same manner in which the dormitory already provided for women students is now managed. The matter of rental and other features of the management of said buildings, when constructed, joint supervision and authority to be vested in the trustees of the university, and those of the corporation until such time as the indebtedness against the buildings is paid.

"Seventh. Upon the payment of the indebtedness on the buildings, the deed of trust is to be cancelled and the property is thereupon to become that of the state of Ohio, subject to the control of the trustees of the university, and the corporation thereupon to be dissolved."

I call attention to the following provisions fo the General Code of Ohio: Section 7950 General Code provides:

"The board of trustees shall have general supervision of all lands, buildings, and other property belonging to the university, and the control of all expenses therefor, but shall not contract a debt not previously authorized by the general assembly of the state."

Section 7951 General Code provides:

"The board of trustees may receive, and hold in trust, for the use and benefit of the university, any grant or device of land, and donation or bequest of money or other personal property, to be applied to the general or special use of the university. All donations or bequests of money shall be paid to the state treasurer, and invested in like manner as the endowment fund of the university, unless otherwise directed in the donation or bequest."

Section 7952 General Code provides:

"The title for all lands for the use of the university shall be made in fee simple to the state of Ohio, with covenants of seizen and warranty, and no title shall be taken to the state for the purposes aforesaid until the attorney general is satisfied that it is free from all defects and incumbrances."

Section 7943 General Code provides:

"The trustees and their successors in office shall be styled the 'board of trustees of the Ohio state university' with the right as such of suing and being sued, of contracting and being contracted with, of making and using a common seal, and altering it at pleasure."

The following are apparent from a casual reading of these sections:.

First. The trustees of the university have the power to enter into any contract necessary or appropriate to the execution of any of the other powers and duties vested in or imposed upon them. That is to say, the grant of the power to contract and being contracted with undoubtedly carries with it the power to bind the state and their successors as trustees in any agreement which is necessary to effectuate any purposes for which the trustees as a board exist.

Second. The trustees must have supervision of all buildings belonging to the university and control of expenses therefor. The phrase "property belonging to the university" need not, in my judgment, be construed so broadly as to refer to all buildings erected upon the campus. In its natural and primary meaning, it refers to and describes those buildings only which belong to the university in the proprietary sense. To be sure, there are no buildings, the title to which is in the university as such; all the property on the campus vests in the state of Ohio. The university and its trustees, being the agents of the state, are charged with the control and maintenance thereof. This fact lends some color to the assumption that the phrase "belonging to the university" as used in Section 7950 means and refers to such property as is devoted to university purposes. In this connection, however, I am of the opinion that the complete control and management on the scholastic side, which under the proposed plans would be vested in the trustees of the university, together with a joint control of the expenditures for repairs and similar matters contemplated by the plans would be sufficient to satisfy this section under whatever construction might be put upon it.

Third. The trustees are empowered to receive and hold in trust for the use and benefit of the university grants of land, donations of money, and gifts or personal property other than money. As to the manner in which they shall take title to the land so received by them the statutes are explicit; likewise as to the disposition of the money donated for the use of university specific provision is made by statutes, and the trustees could be without power to accept a qualified title in lands granted for university purposes. On the other hand, however, no requirement is found in the statute as to the nature of the title which may be taken, or accepted by the university trustees in and to personal property other than money given to them for university purposes. I regard this feature of the statutes as highly significant in connection with the question now under consideration. There is perhaps a single qualification here, viz.: that the trustees are without power to incur indebtednesss without specific authority from the General Assembly. The plan, however, does not contemplate the contracting of any indebtedness on the part of the trustees. As I view it, the question resolves itself into a single proposition of law, namely: "Is the power to receive and hold in trust for the purpose of the university personal property other than money broad enough to permit the acceptance of a gift which does not vest in the trustees for the state immediate and unqualified legal title to the property donated, but which does give the trustees complete control of such property on the scholastic side, and joint or qualified control thereof on the fiscal or business side, and which title and control upon the happening of certain conditions are to become complete in all respects?"

The significance of the omission from the statutes of any provision as to the nature of the title to personal property other than money which may be accepted as a gift by the trustees now becomes apparent. Whatever may be the rule of construction applicable to a statute which merely grants power to receive gifts or real and personal property without further stipulation as to what title is to be taken on behalf of the state, I am convinced that under the peculiar phraseology of Sections 7951 and 7952 supra the trustees of the university have the power to accept donations of personal property other than money without requiring that the immediate and complete legal title of such property be vested in them for the state.

Now the proposed buildings in the hands of the proposed donors would already be personal property, and the donation of such buildings, especially under the offer outlined by you, would have to be treated and regarded as a donation of personal property other than money.

I think I have said enough to show that my opinion is that the trustees of Ohio state university are empowered to accept the gift of a building or buildings, the legal title of which is to remain in the donors as security for the payment of the indebtedness for which it is pledged, until such indebtedness be discharged.

The exact nature of the interest received in the building under such an arrangement need not be discussed. It is sufficient that they would have a real and vested interest thereon upon acceptance of the gift, and that the control of the property aside from the extinguishment of the debt, would be complete enough to satisfy the requirements of Section 7950 General Code.

I have the following suggestions to offer which may in a way modify some of the features of the plans that you have submitted:

After the corporation is organized it should offer to give to the university the buildings to be erected under the plans as proposed; the trustees should then accept the offer of the gift under the conditions imposed by the donors, which acceptance will complete the contract. The contract should then be reduced to writing as a contract embracing the terms of the proposed donation. The program may then proceed as above outlined, except that I suggest that the trustees of the university be given some rights in respect to making of repairs on the buildings.

I confess that I have been influenced to a considerable degree in making up my mind as aforesaid by the fact that through the plans which you have submitted to me, the state is to acquire a valuable and useful property without expense to it. I believe that the power of the trustees to accept donations was vested in them by the general assembly in order to enable the university to become the beneficiary of such generosity as is exemplified in this plan. Certainly, no taxpayer could object to a plan, which without expense to him, will produce a result so beneficial to the state, and which in reality tends to reduce the burden of taxation. Inasmuch as no taxpayer would have any standing in a court of equity to enjoin the proposed arrangement, and inasmuch further as this department, as long as I am in charge of it, will certainly not be disposed to interfere therewith, but on the contrary will do all in its power to assist in perfecting the necessary arrangements, I am at a loss to understand how any question could possibly be raised as to the legality of the proceedings.

I shall be pleased to advise the trustees more specifically as to the legal or various steps which are to be taken in carrying the program out as it is my duty so to do under Section 7953 General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SCHOOL—POWER OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY TO HOLD ON CAMPUS

The statutes confer authority upon the Ohio state university to lawfully hold an agricultural extension school upon the campus of the university, provided no other such school is held in Franklin county during the same year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 11, 1912.

DR. W. O. THOMPSON, President Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 3rd, requesting my opinion as to the following question:

> "May the Ohio state university hold an agricultural extension school on the campus of the university for the convenience of the farmers and other interested persons of Franklin county and other parts of the state?"

I am referred to Sections 7973 and 7974 General Code which provide as follows:

Section 7973:

> "The college of agriculture and domestic science of the university shall arrange for the extension of its teachings throughout the state, and hold schools in which instructions shall be given in soil fertility, stock raising, crop production, dairying, horticulture, domestic science and kindred subjects. No such school shall exceed one week in length, and not more than one be held in any county during a year."

Section 7974:

> "In addition to the holding of such schools, such colleges shall give instruction and demonstration in various lines of agriculture at agricultural fairs, institutes, granges, clubs or in connection with any other organizations, that, in its judgment, may be useful in extending agricultural knowledge. The work in agricultural extension may also include instruction by mail and the publication of bulletins designed to carry the benefits of its teachings to communities remote from the college."

These sections are in form mandatory and are broadly to be construed as imposing a duty and not as conferring a power, and that being the case they are upon fundamental principles of statutory interpretation to be given a liberal construction for the purpose of promoting the end sought to be attained by their enactment rather than a strict construction such as is accorded to statutes conferring powers upon officers and other agents of the state.

Having regard to this principle, I am of the opinion that the course suggested in your letter may lawfully be taken by the authorities of the university. No inference may properly be drawn from either Section 7973 or Section 7974 to the effect that an agricultural extension school may not be held in Franklin county. If such a school may be held in Franklin county I know of no reason why it may not be held upon the campus and in the buildings used for the ordinary instructional purposes of the university. The words "extension of its teachings throughout the state" are not to be given a restricted application here, and even if given such an application, the holding of a school such as is prescribed by the second section under consideration, though on the campus, would be of itself an extension of the teachings of the university in agriculture beyond those which the university would otherwise engage in.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the Ohio state university may lawfully hold an agricultural extension school upon the campus of the university, provided no other such school is held in Franklin county during the same year.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

ABSTRACT—OHIO UNIVERSITY—PURCHASE—ESTATE OF ELLA C. WELCH.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1911.

DR. ALSTON ELLIS, President, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—There have been submitted to me for examination and approval an abstract and deed for the following described real estate which your university propose to purchase from Ella C. Welch, to-wit:

> "Situate in the township of Athens in the county of Athens, and state of Ohio, and in the village of Athens, to-wit:
> "First Tract. Beginning at the northwest corner of out-lot No. 187 in said village; thence south along the west line of said out-lot No. 187 to a point 178 feet north of the southeast corner of in-lot No. 65 in said village; thence west on a line parallel with the south line of said in-lot No. 65, 198 feet to the east side of Vine street; thence south 99 feet; thence east on a line parallel with the south line of said in-lot No. 65 to the east line of out-lot No. 187; thence in a northwesterly direction along the northeast side of said out-lot No. 187 to the place of beginning.
> "Second Tract. 1.34 acres off of the north end of the following premises: Beginning at the southwest corner of out-lot No. 32 in said village; thence north 28 west 3.20 chains; thence north 56 links; thence east 6.50 chains to the east line of said out-lot; thence south 3.37 chains to the south line of said out-lot; thence west to the place of beginning.
> "Also the following premises:
> "Beginning 13¾ rods north of the southwest corner of out-lot No. 31; thence east across out-lot No. 31 to within 50 feet (at right angles) of the middle of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad in out-lot No. 30; thence southwesterly parallel with and 50 feet from the middle of said railroad to a point directly east of the southeast corner of the 1.34 acre tract described above; thence west to the southeast corner of said 1.34 acre tract; thence north to the place of beginning, containing 1.15 acres in out-lot No. 31, and eight hundredths (.08) of an acre in out-lot No. 30.
> "Said first and second tracts above described being all those parts of in-lot No. 65 and out-lots Nos. 30, 31, 32 and 187 in said village of Athens owned by Johnson M. Welch at the time of his death."

The abstract discloses that mortgages have been given on those premises at various times and that some of these mortgages remain uncanceled of record. Action on all of them, however, has been long since barred by the operation of the statute of limitations, and I am not inclined to attach any importance to them at this time.

It further appears (page 86) that one, Robert S. King, at the May term, 1911, of the court of common pleas of Athens county, Ohio, recovered a judgment against J. M. Welch in the sum of four thousand dollars and costs, and that said judgment was thereafter assigned to Ella C. Welch. No showing having been made of the payment of the amount of this judgment to the assignee I would suggest that Ella C. Welch formerly cancel the same of record.

In addition to the foregoing the following things remain to be done in order to perfect the title:

1. Paying the Ohio university rents, amounting to $17.26 (p. 89).
2. Obtaining a governor's deed, as provided by the act of 1883, and which will cost $68.16 (pages 12 and 89).
3. Paying the taxes amounting to $161.91 (p. 90).
4. Recording the administrator's deed to Ella C. Welch (p. 87).
5. Recording the deed of Ella C. Welch to the president and trustees of the Ohio university (p. 88).

Upon the completion of the abstract in the respects above indicated, I am of the opinion that the president and the board of trustees of Ohio university will acquire a good and sufficient title in fee simple to the premises hereinbefore described.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE OF PROPERTY OF DANIEL A. RARDIN IN ATHENS, OHIO—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 6, 1912.

HON. ALSTON ELLIS, President, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for examination and approval an abstract of title and deed from Daniel A. Rardin for the following described premises:

> "* * * situate in the city of Athens, in the county of Athens and state of Ohio, to-wit:
> "Beginning at the northwest corner of in-lot No. (183), on old Union street, in the said city of Athens; thence each along said old Union street (12) feet to the south side of the road leading around the Ohio university heating plant; thence in a southeasterly direction along the south side of said road (111) feet to the Ohio university heating plant lot; thence south 44 degrees west along the line of the said the Ohio University heating plant lot, (62.9) feet to the right of way line of The Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway Company; thence in a northwesterly direction along the said right of way line to the west line of said in-lot number (183).
> "Also the following premises situate in said city, county and state, to-wit: Beginning at the southwest corner of in-lot No. (180) in the said city of Athens; thence east to the right of way line of The Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway Company; thence in a northwesterly direction along said right of way line to the west line of said in-lot No. (180); thence south to the place of beginning."

At the outset I want to call your attention to an apparent error in the description of the first tract mentioned in the deed. The course commences at the northwest corner of lot 183 and ends in the west line of said lot. The description should be extended to the point of beginning.

The legal title, as disclosed by the abstract, dates back to 1848, when leases for a period of 99 years, renewable forever, were granted by the president and trustees of the university to various persons pursuant to authority given by several acts of the legislature, which it is unnecessary to set out here.

The title descended from the original lessees by a series of deeds until it finally became vested in Daniel A. Rardin, the present owner, by virtue of a quit claim deed from The Athens Mining Company, dated May 9, 1907, and recorded in Volume 103, page 136 of the deed records of Athens county, Ohio.

The deed from Joseph Herrold and wife to The Athens Mining Company reserves a right of way across the west end of lots 180 and 181, which does not appear to have been extinguished. A deed for same should be obtained, or it should be excepted in the deed from Rardin to the president and trustees of the university.

It further appears from the abstract, that the taxes on lots 180, 181, 182, 183 and 202 for the years 1891 and 1892 were suffered by The Athens Mining Company to become delinquent, and on January 17th, 1893, said lots were sold by the treasurer of Athens county to A. W. Ullom. The county auditor, on November 30th, 1895, executed a deed therefor to D. P. Pratt, who was the assignee of Ullom. The tax title thus acquired was transferred by Pratt to Nora F. Mansfield, and from her, through several mesne conveyances, to Daniel A. Rardin.

No deed from Pratt to Nora F. Mansfield is shown by the abstract, and her title is established by an affidavit of Johnson M. Welch, who claims to have knowledge of the facts, that on the 10th day of October, 1899, said Pratt and wife sold said premises to said Nora F. Mansfield, who immediately entered into possession thereof. It also appears that Nora F. Mansfield and husband executed mortgages on said premises to Pratt and others. In order to leave no question of the sufficiency of the title, I would suggest that a quit-claim deed be obtained from D. P. Pratt and wife.

The taxes for the year 1912 are, so far as disclosed by the abtsract, unpaid, and are a lien against said premises.

No othed liens are disclosed by the abstract.

A certificate of the clerk of the United States court, as to the pendency of suits and judgment in said court against Daniel A. Rardin, should be attached to the abstract.

An affidavit should be obtained as to whether the Joseph Herrold, second, who received a lease from the Ohio university for a part of said premises, and the Joseph Herrold, who conveys same to The Athens Mining Company, are one and the same person. If they are not, evidence should be submitted as to how the latter acquired title.

The certificate of the resolution of The Athens Mining Company, authorizing its president and secretary to execute a deed for said premises to Daniel A. Rardin, is incomplete, in that the vote by which the resolution was adopted is not set forth. Said certificate purports to be made by Ada M. Rardin, as president of the company, and signed by Charles M. Rardin, as secretary. This discrepancy should be corrected and the certificate of the resolution embodied in an affidavit. No resolution of the stockholders, authorizing the directors to make the sale, is shown.

The deed from The Athens Mining Company to Daniel A. Rardin recites that it is executed in behalf of said company by John C. Rardin, as president, and Ada M. Rardin, as secretary, but it was signed by J. Clarence Rardin, as president. The contradiction between the recital of the deed and the signature should be corrected by affidavit.

Subject to the foregoing, I am of the opinion that the title of Daniel A. Rardin to the premises above described, is clear and free from encumbrances.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CATTLE RUNNING AT LARGE—"INCLOSED LANDS" A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR IN STATUTE—REMEDIES BY SEIZURE OF CATTLE ON HIGHWAYS—FEES FOR HOLDING.

The word "inclosed" in Section 5809 General Code prohibiting the permission of cattle to run upon highways or "inclosed" lands is probably a typographical error, as this word is "uninclosed" in all former records wherein the statute appears.

In this connection, however, error may be avoided by seizing cattle upon roads and highways which are so permitted to roam at large, when the fees provided in Section 5820 General Code may be collected from the owner of said cattle.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 24, 1912.

MR. WM. A. JONES, Superintendent and Financial Officer, Combined Normal and Industrial Department, Wilberforce University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 7th you state that the grounds of your institution are not fenced, and for that reason your grounds are frequently encroached upon by the stock of your neighbors which is permitted to run at large. You, therefore, wish to know what remedy you have by reason of said stock running at large over your ground.

The law covering your inquiry is found in the General Code Section 5809 et seq., which we would suggest that you examine in this matter. We would, however, specifically call your attention to Sections 5809, 5811 and 5817 General Code.

Section 5809 General Code provides as follows:

> "A person or corporation being the owner or having the charge of horses, mules, cattle, sheep, goats, swine, dogs or geese, shall not permit them to run at large in the public road, highway, street, lane or alley, upon inclosed land or cause such animal to be herded, kept or detained for the purpose of grazing on premises other than those owned or occupied by the owner or keeper thereof, except as provided in Section fifty-eight hundred and eleven."

Section 5811 General Code provides:

> "General permission may be granted by the commissioners of a county for any animal named in Section fifty-eight hundred and nine, to run at large. In counties where such general permission has not been so granted, township trustees may grant special permits for particular animals described therein, revocable at the discretion of such trustees upon three days notice in writing to the owner of such animal. Such permission, whether general or special, shall terminate on the first Monday of March in each year."

Section 5817 General Code provides:

> "A person finding an animal, mentioned in Section fifty-eight hundred and nine, at large, contrary to law, may, and a constable of a township, road superintendent in a township or village, or marshal > or constable of a city or village, on view or information, shall take and confine it, forthwith giving notice thereof to the owner, if known, and, if not known, by posting notices describing such animal therein, in at least three public places within the township. If the owner does not appear and claim the animal and pay all charges for so taking, advertising and keeping it, within ten days from the date of such notice, the animal may be proceeded with under the laws regulating estrays."

Section 5811 General Code provides that general permission may be granted by the county commissioners for any animal named in Section 5809 to run at large. We assume for the purposes of answering your inquiry that such general permission has not been granted by the county commissioners. The section also provides that in case such general permission has not been granted the township trustees may grant such permits for particular animals described therein, revocable at the discretion of the trustees. We also assume that the township trustees in this instance have not granted any such permits to those owning the animals trespassing upon your property.

Section 5809 supra states that the owners of animals therein set forth shall not permit them to run at large in the public road, highway, street or alley, or upon inclosed land. It is to be noted that this section provides that the owner of the animals therein set forth shall not permit them to run at large upon inclosed lands. Upon an examination of Section 4202 Revised Statutes, which was codified in Section 5809 General Code, I find that the word "inclosed" reads in said section "uninclosed." I further find that to be the fact in relation to all sections which preceded such Section 4202 R. S. in point of time upon the same subject. So that it would appear that the change occurring in Section 5809 from the word "uninclosed" to "inclosed" was a typographical or other error and that it was not the intention of the legislature to change the meaning thereof. However, this matter becomes unimportant as Section 5817 G. C. supra provides that a person finding an animal mentioned in Section 5809 at large contrary to law may and a marshal or constable of a city on view or information shall take and confine such animal, forthwith giving notice thereof to the owner if known, and if not known, by posting notices describing such animal therein in at least three public places within the township. As Section 5809 provides that owner of animals therein mentioned shall not, permit them to run at large on public roads, highways, streets, lanes or alleys and as in order to trespass upon your premises we assume that such animals would necessarily have to run at large upon such public roads, etc., such animals could be taken up, and confined while on such public road, etc., and thus the question of change in language from "uninclosed" to "inclosed" would be avoided.

I know of no other remedy that you would have other than in a proceeding at law. The fees for taking up the animal are provided for in Section 5820 General Code as follows:

> "The person, road superintendent or officer taking such animal shall be entitled to charge and receive from the owner thereof the following fees in addition to those authorized by law regulating estrays, to-wit: for taking and advertising each horse or mule, one dollar; each head of meat cattle, seventy-five cents; each swine, fifty cents; each sheep, dog or goose, twenty-five cents; and a reasonable fee for keeping it. The fee for taking a single herd or flock shall not exceed five dollars, when such flock or herd belongs to one person."

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE—PROPERTY OF J. N. EASLEY LOCATED IN CITY OF BOWLING GREEN, WOOD COUNTY, OHIO, TO BE PURCHASED BY BOWLING GREEN NORMAL SCHOOL—DEFECTS AND OMISSIONS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1912.

HON. D. C. BROWN, Secretary Board of Trustees, Bowling Green Normal School, Napoleon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—We have carefully examined the title to the real estate offered to your board by Mr. J. N. Easley in the city of Bowling Green, Wood county, Ohio, for the purpose of erecting the normal school on said site. The property consists of eighty-two and five tenths (82.5) acres in said city of Bowling Green, being in Section nineteen (19), township five (5) north, range eleven (11) east, center township, Wood county, Ohio, and is described as follows:

> "A certain tract or parcel of land beginning at the point of intersection of the east line of Thurston street in the city of Bowling Green, Wood county, Ohio, with the south line of Ridge street in said city; thence south along the east line of said Thurston street from said Ridge street to a point half way from Court street to Wooster street on the south; thence directly east and parallel with Wooster street to the east line of Wayne street in said city; thence south on the east line of Wayne street to said Wooster street; thence east on the north line of Wooster street to the west line of out-lot number ninety-two (92) in said city; thence north on the west line of said out-lot number ninety-two (92) to said Ridge street; thence west on the south line of said Ridge street to the point of beginning."

which general description embraces the following:

> "In lots number three thousand one hundred and fifty-one (3151); three thousand one hundred and fifty-two (3152); three thousand one hundred and fifty-three (3153); three thousand one hundred and fifty-four (3154); three thousand one hundred and fifty-five (3155); three thousand one hundred and fifty-six (3156); three thousand one hundred and fifty-seven (3157); three thousand three hundred and twelve (3312); three thousand three hundred and thirteen (3313); three thousand three hundred and fourteen (3314); three thousand three hundred and fifteen (3315); three thousand three hundred and sixteen (3316); three thousand three hundred and seventeen (3317); three thousand one hundred and fifty-eight (3158); three thousand one hundred and fifty-nine (3159); three thousand one hundred and sixty (3160); three thousand one hundred and sixty-one (3161); three thousand one hundred and sixty two (3162); two thousand eight hundred and thirteen (2813); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-one (2821); two thousand hundred and fifteen (2815); two thousand eight hundred and sixteen (2816); two thousand eight hundred and seventeen (2817); two thousand eight hundred and eighteen (2818); two thousand eight hundred and nineteen (2819); two thousand eight hundred and twenty (2820);

two thousand eight hundred and twenty-one (2821); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-two (2822); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-three (2823); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-four (2824); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-five (2825); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-six (2826); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven (2827); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-eight (2828); two thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine (2829); two thousand eight hundred and thirty (2830); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-one (2831); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-two (2832); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-three (2833); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-four (2834); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-five (2835); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-six (2836); two thousand eight hundred and thirty-seven (2837):

"Out-lots eighty-four (84); eighty-five (85); eighty-six (86); eighty-seven (87); eighty-eight (88); eighty-nine (89); ninety (90); ninety-one (91); ninety-four (94); ninety-eight (98); the north one hundred and fifteen (115) feet of out-lot ninety-five (95); also that part of out-lot number ninety-seven (97), running thence south along the west line of said out-lot number ninety seven (97) to the northwest corner of a lot now owned by Benjamin L. Loomis; thence east along the north line of said lot of Benjamin L. Loomis to the northeast corner of said lot owned by him; thence in an easterly direction parallel to the south line of Court street to the west line of Wayne street; thence north along the west line of Wayne street to the south line of Court street; thence west along the south line of Court street to the place of beginning."

While there are many minor defects set forth in the various abstracts submitted covering said property, I do not believe that any of such defects affect the title of the property, except in relation to out-lot number ninety-one (91) being the west sixteen (16) acres of the northeast quarter (N. E. ¼) of the southeast quarter (S. E. ¼), section nineteen (19), which abstract until the title is quieted in the present owner, Mr. Jacob N. Easley, I do not consider should be approved.

The title to the rest of the property, save and except the sixteen acres before mentioned and being out-lot number ninety-one (91) as stated, is a good and sufficient title in law and equity to said property.

As soon as the title to said out-lot number ninety-one (91) is quieted I will pass upon the abstract in reference thereto. From the abstracts as submitted I find that there are no liens, and that the taxes have been paid in full for the year 1911.

I have retained the abstracts until I am informed that the title to said out-lot ninety-one (91) has been quieted by Mr. Easley. If appears from the deed submitted to this department by Mr. Easley transferring the entire property to the state of Ohio that the same has been recorded. I, therefore, herewith send said deed to you, together with my opinion as to the title. Said deed covers said out-lot number ninety-one (91) heretofore mentioned, the title to which is to be quieted.

As soon as the title to out-lot number ninety-one (91) before mentioned is quieted either in the state of Ohio or in Jacob N. Easley, I am of opinion that the title to said property is good and sufficient both in law and equity in and to the entire foregoing mentioned property as conveyed by Jacob N. Easley to the state of Ohio.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BOWLING GREEN NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDINGS—APPROPRIATIONS AVAILABLE FOR TWO YEARS FROM DATE OF PASSAGE.

In accordance with Article II, Section 22, of the Constitution, no appropriation made by the general assembly shall be available for a longer period than two years.

Since, therefore, the acts do not provide otherwise the appropriations made for the erection of suitable buildings on the Bowling Green normal school site are available for two years from the dates upon which the bills were approved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 22, 1912.

HON. D. C. BROWN, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Bowling Green Normal School, Napoleon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have telephoned to this department inquiring whether or not the appropriation of one hundred and fifty thousand ($150,000.00) dollars by the last legislature to your board for the erection of suitable buildings on the Bowling Green Normal School site would lapse unless the contract for such building was let before the meeting of the next legislature, you stating that you had been informed that there was a statute to that effect.

We find that the said one hundred and fifty thousand (150,000.00) dollars was appropriated in three different acts, each act giving an appropriation of fifty thousand ($50,000.00) dollars, as follows:

> "(a) In house bill No. 112, passed March 30, 1911, approved April 11, 1911, appropriated $50,000.00 to the credit of the trustees.
> "(b) In general appropriation bill of 1911, house bill 566, passed May 31, 1911, approved June 14, 1911, we find the following:
> "Appropriations, state normal school—'For construction at Bowling Green $50,000.00.' Section 2 of said bill states that the moneys appropriated shall be available to pay liabilities incurred on and after February 16, 1911.
> "(c) In house bill 616 for general appropriation 1912, passed May 31, 1911, approved June 14, 1911, we find the following:
> "Appropriation, state normal school—Construction at Bowling Green, $50,000.00. Section 2 of said bill states that the moneys appropriated shall be available to pay liabilities incurred on and after February 16, 1912."

It will thus be seen that the said appropriations were made at different times to-wit:

The first appropriation was approved April 11, 1911, and available immediately.

The second appropriation of $50,000.00 was approved June 14, 1911, and available immediately.

The third appropriation of $50,000.00 was approved June 14, 1911, but only became available on February 16, 1912.

Section 22, Article II of the constitution reads as follows:

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation, made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

Since there is a constitutional provision that no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years an appropriation at the end of the two year period necessarily lapses into the general fund and must be re-appropriated. It makes no difference whether or not a contract is or is not let as no money can be paid out of the state treasury after the appropriation has lapsed.

Coming now to the appropriation made to your board it is to be noted that the first fifty thousand dollars was appropriated for two years from April 11, 1911, and that the second fifty thousand dollars was appropriated for two years from June 14, 1911, and the third appropriation of fifty thousand dollars likewise for two years from June 14, 1911, although such third appropriation of fifty thousand dollars was not to be available for use of the board until on and after February 16, 1912. In other words, the first fifty thousand dollars appropriated under house bill 112 is available until April 10, 1913; the second fifty thousand dollars until June 13, 1913, and the third fifty thousand dollars likewise available until June 13, 1913. In order to pay any bills after that time the money must be re-appropriated by the general assembly.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS CENTENNIAL COMMISSION—CONTROL OF MONEYS RECEIVED BY POPULAR SUBSCRIPTION.

Money received by the Columbus centennial commission, through voluntary subscription, is within the control of the commission, under the terms of the act authorizing said commission to receive and solicit popular subscriptions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1912.

MR. LEE M. BODA, Secretary, Columbus Centennial Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 22, 1912, which is as follows:

> "A question has arisen as to the proper person or persons to have the control and expenditure of the money for the Columbus centennial celebration which has been or may be raised by voluntary subscriptions in the city of Columbus and elsewhere. This commission holds that under the appropriation act, senate bill No. 107, page 465, laws of Ohio, 1911, Section third of this act places the control of said money in the hands of this commission.
> "If, in your opinion, such is the fact, we should esteem it a favor if you will give us that opinion in writing at your earliest convenience. Furthermore, we desire your opinion as to whether the section referred to above requires that said voluntary subscriptions shall be deposited with the state treasurer, subject to this commission's voucher, as provided for, or whether the commission may select a bank as a depository, through its treasurer, under bond, and deposit said voluntary subscriptions therein subject to voucher duly signed as provided in Section three of the act above referred to."

The act making an appropriation by the state of Ohio in behalf of the Ohio-Columbus Centennial celebration, found in 102 O. L., 465 is (omitting the preamble) as follows:

> "Section 1. That there be and hereby is appropriated from the general revenue fund of the state, out of moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars for the use of the 'Columbus centennial commission,' appointed under the joint resolution adopted March 9, 1909, in preparing and carrying out plans for the celebration, in the year 1912, in the city of Columbus, of the one hundredth anniversity of the permanent location of the seat of government of the state.
> "Section 2. The sum hereby appropriated shall be paid out of the treasury upon the warrant of the auditor of state, on the treasurer, on proper vouchers signed by the president and secretary of the Columbus centennial commission, which vouchers shall contain itemized statements of accounts, properly vertified.
> "Section 3. The Columbus centennial commission is hereby authorized to solicit and receive popular subscriptions to carry out the plans and purposes of the commission and to expend the same in pursuance of such plans. An account shall be kept of all moneys so received, which shall be expended upon proper vouchers signed by the president and secretary thereof.

"Section 4. Said centennial celebration shall be held during and in conjunction with the Ohio state fair in the year 1912, and the Ohio state board of agriculture is authorized and directed to appoint a general publicity agent who shall devote his entire time to the exploitation of said celebration, and his compensation shall be fixed by the said Ohio state board of agriculture, his duties to commence within six months from and after the passage of this act. The compensation of such general publicity agent shall be paid from the amount herein appropriated and in the manner provided in Section 2 hereof."

In my opinion, Section 3 of the said act gives the commission the power to control and expend the funds raised by popular subscription. The language of this section, in fact, reads as follows:

"The Columbus centennial commission is hereby authorized to solicit and receive popular subscriptions * * * and to expend the same * * *."

The only fund over which the treasurer of the state of Ohio is custodian is the appropriation made by the state of Ohio and covered by the first two sections of this act. This is an appropriation duly made by law out of the funds of the state of Ohio in the treasury of the state, and is to be paid out only as provided in Section 2 of this act and under Section 4 of the act, the publicity agent appointed by the Ohio state board of agriculture is to be paid out of the appropriation made by the state, and the rest of the appropriation is to be used by the Columbus centennial commission in preparing and carrying out the plans for the celebration.

Unless special provisions were made for the same, the treasurer of state could not assume control of the fund raised by popular subscription as provided in Section 3 of the act, and the money raised by popular subscription could not be paid into the treasury unless there were some authority given for such payment; and I fail to find authority in this act for paying this money into the treasury, or for the treasurer to assume control of the same.

As stated above, the centennial commission is to solicit and receive these popular subscriptions and to expend the same in pursuance of its plans, keeping an account of all such moneys so received and expending the same only upon the vouchers signed by the president and secretary of the commission; and the selection of the depository for these funds should be provided for by the commission.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

PUBLICITY AGENT OF COLUMBUS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION—POWERS OF STATE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE AND OF COMMISSION—APPOINTMENT, COMPENSATION, CONTROL AND DISMISSAL.

The powers of appointment and removal, and the fixing of the compensation of the publicity agent for the Columbus centennial are vested, by the act providing for the celebration, in the state board of agriculture.

The powers of direction and control of said officer are vested, however, in the centennial commission, and his reports should be made to that commission.

The publicity agent may contract no bills and may incur no expense except upon the authorization of the centennial commission.

In the event that the proposed celebration should fail of accomplishment through lack of co-operation on the part of the city of Columbus, there would be no legal or financial responsibility on the part of the centennial commission provided the funds were expended only as provided by the act.

By the terms of the act, the legislature has shown an intent that the publicity agent should be employed, but should it be clearly established that his services would be valueless, the board of agriculture would be warranted in dispensing with his services.

If the publicity agent is derelict in his duty, the commission through the board of agriculture could procure his dismissal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 29, 1912.

HON. W. O. THOMPSON, Chairman, Columbus Centennial Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of April 27, 1912, asking my opinion upon five questions with reference to the powers, rights and duties of your commission under the act of the Ohio legislature, passed May 3, 1911, making an appropriation for the Columbus centennial celebration. This act is found in Volume 102, Ohio laws, page 465, and (omitting the preamble) is as follows:

> "Section 1. That there be and hereby is appropriated from the general revenue fund of the state, out of moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars for the use of the 'Columbus centennial commission,' appointed under the joint resolution adopted March 9, 1909, in preparing and carrying out plans for the celebration, in the year 1912, in the city of Columbus, of the one hundredth anniversity of the permanent location of the seat of government of the state.
> "Section 2. The sum hereby appropriated shall be paid out of the treasury upon the warrant of the auditor of state, on the treasurer, on proper vouchers signed by the president and secretary of the Columbus centennial commission, which vouchers shall contain itemized statements of accounts, properly verified.
> "Section 3. The Columbus centennial commission is hereby authorized to solicit and receive popular subscriptions to carry out the plans and purposes of the commission and to expend the same in pursuance of such plans. An account shall be kept of all moneys so received, which shall be expended upon proper vouchers signed by the president and secretary thereof.

"Section 4. Said centennial celebration shall be held during and in conjunction with the Ohio state fair in the year 1912, and the Ohio state board of agriculture is authorized and directed to appoint a general publicity agent who shall devote his entire time to the exploitation of said celebration, and his compensation shall be fixed by the said Ohio state board of agriculture, his duties to commence within six months from and after the passage of this act. The compensation of such general publicity agent shall be paid from the amount herein appropriated and in the manner provided in Section 2 hereof."

Your questions, in order, together with my answers are as follows:

"Question 1. The publicity agent provided for under the act of May 31, 1911, being appointed by the state board of agriculture, information is sought as to the duties of said agent; to whom shall he report; under whose direction shall he work and to whom is he responsible? What control, if any, has the centennial commission over the time and services of said publicity agent?"

Under Section 4 of the act above quoted the publicity agent is to be appointed by the Ohio state board of agriculture, and is to be paid out of the appropriation made by the state by Section 1 of the act, upon vouchers signed by the president and secretary of the Columbus centennial commission. His compensation is to be fixed by the Ohio state board of agriculture, and his duty is to devote his entire time to the exploitation of the celebration. It really amounts to this, the state of Ohio furnishes to your commission a publicity agent and pays him. Your commission has no concern with the appointment of, or determination of the compensation paid to said publicity agent. It was undoubtedly presumed by the legislature, when it provided that said centennial celebration should be held during and in conjunction with the Ohio state fair, that your commission and the Ohio state board of agriculture would work in entire harmony, and, though the centennial celebration and the Ohio state fair are separate and distinct affairs, yet, the success of one is bound to conduce to the success of the other. Therefore, as the state made the appropriation for the centennial celebration, it was probably thought only proper that the publicity agent, to be paid out of this appropriation, should be named by a state board. But, as he is to devote his entire time to the exploitation of the centennial celebration, and as the centennial celebration is distinct from the state fair, your commission having no control over the arrangements for, or management of the state fair, and the board of agriculture having no control over the arrangements for, or management of the centennial celebration, it necessarily follows that the publicity agent is to work under the direction of your commission; his duty is to exploit the centennial celebration, of which your commission is in charge; and it is the province of your commission to decide as to the manner in which you desire said duty performed. Briefly, he has been furnished to you for a certain purpose, provided by the act, namely, "the exploitation of said celebration," and it is your duty to decide in what manner you wish such exploitation made; in other words, to put this publicity agent to work in such manner as you deem will be most conducive to the success of the celebration. As your commission is to decide as to the nature of the work of this agent, his reports should be made to you. He should work under your direction. It is presumed, of course, that the publicity agent appointed by the state board of agriculture will be a proper and competent person, capable of performing the work for which he is chosen. He is responsible, primarily, to the appointing power, that is the state board of agriculture, as, in the absence of provision to the contrary the appointing power would have the power to remove; but this responsibility, in a sense, comes through your commission to the state board of agriculture; as it is under your direction and supervision that he is to work; and, if the publicity agent appointed by the state board of agriculture should prove imcompetent, or derelict in his duty, or unsuitable for, or incapable of doing the work assigned to him, then undoubtedly, upon proper representation being made by your commission to the state board of agriculture, the state board of agriculture would take such action as would be proper. Thus, in a sense, this agent is under the control of both your commission and the state board of agriculture. Your board has no concern with his appointment, or with the amount of his compensation, and the state board of agriculture has no control over, or concern with his work except through your commission.

> "Question 2. Under what terms and conditions may the said publicity agent contract bills or expenses for which the commission is liable?"

The publicity agent can contract no bills, or incur no expenses for which the centennial commission is liable, except upon express authority given him by the centennial commission.

> "Question 3. In the event the proposed celebration should fail of accomplishment through lack of co-operation upon the part of the city of Columbus would there be any legal or financial responsibility on the part of the commission for the funds expended?"

In the contingency mentioned in this question there would be no legal or financial responsibility on the part of the centennial commission, provided the funds expended were expended for the purposes provided in the act.

> "Question 4. Do the terms of the act under consideration, providing that the services of the publicity agent are to commence within six months after the passage of the act making the appropriation, render it mandatory to keep any agent under salary, if, in the judgment of the commission, such agent is not necessary or desirable for the promotion of the celebration?"

The answer to the first question probably answers this question also.

It must be presumed from the act that the legislature considered that a publicity agent would be of value in making the celebration a success, otherwise this provision would not have been found in the act, but. if the legislature was mistaken as to this, and it could be shown by your commission that a publicity agent is entirely unnecessary, and could render no services of any value whatever, in short, that such an agent is entirely useless, then probably the Ohio state board of agriculture could dispense with his services. But, as stated above, as the legislature evidently considered such an agent necessary and provided for his appointment and compensation, it must necessarily be very clear that the services of such an agent would be valueless before the state board of agriculture would be warranted in disregarding this provision of the act.

> "Question 5. In the event that the publicity agent should fail to devote his entire time to the exploitation of the said centennial celebration, as provided in the act directing his appointment, has the commission any relief?"

This question, in a manner, is answered by the first answer also.

If the publicity agent is derelict in his duty in any way, then, upon that fact being referred to the state board of agriculture by your commission, the state board of agriculture will undoubtedly take such action as may be proper.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SOLDIERS' RELIEF—CERTIFICATION OF AMOUNT NECESSARY BY SOLDIERS' RELIEF COMMISSION TO COUNTY COMMISSIONERS —AMOUNT OF LEVY DISCRETIONARY WITH COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

Under Section 2936, General Code, the amount levied by the commissioners for soldiers' relief, after the soldiers' relief committee has certified the probable amount required, is optional with the commissioners.

To hold that it was mandatory upon the commissioners to levy the amount certified by the soldiers' relief commission would confer the levying power upon the commission and thereby contravene Sections 1 and 7 of Article X of the Constitution, which vests the powers of taxation in county commissioners, township trustees, and similar boards.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 6, 1912.

HON. B. J. BROTHERTON, State Commissioner of Soldiers' Claims, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have referred to me for my opinion thereon the following question submitted to you by a certain member of a soldiers' relief commission. The question is as follows:

> "Must county commissioners levy the amounts requested by soldiers' relief commission, or is the amount of the levy to be made by the commissioners for such purpose optional with the commissioners?"

The following provisions of the General Code of Ohio must be considered in answering this question:

> "Section 2930. There shall be a commission known and designated as 'the soldiers' relief commission,' in each county, composed of three persons, residents of the county, each of whom shall serve for three years. Two of the persons so appointed shall be honorably discharged soldiers, sailors or marines of the United States. On or before the first Monday in April of each year, a judge of the court of common pleas in such county shall appoint one commissioner for such term."
> "Section 2936. * * * The commission shall meet and determine * * * the probable amount necessary for the aid and relief of such indigent persons for the ensuing year, together with an amount sufficient in the judgment of the commission, to furnish relief to any such indigent persons not named on such lists, whose rights to relief shall be established to the satisfaction of the commission. After determining the probable amount necessary for such purpose, the commission shall certify it to the county commissioners, who, at their June session shall make the levy necessary to raise the required relief, not to exceed five-tenths of a mill per dollar on the assessed value of the property of the county hereinafter authorized."

Section 2942, General Code, provides also for a levy by the county commissioners, but it will not be necessary to consider this section in answering the question submitted.

In my opinion, the amount to be levied by the county commissioners is optional with them. To be sure, this does not seem to be the primary meaning of Section 2936, as quoted above. In my judgment, however, this meaning must be given to the section or else the section and the entire act must be regarded as unconstitutional. Without citing any cases, it has become well settled in Ohio that the power to levy county taxes cannot be delegated to a non-elective officer or board of officers. This is by reason of the provisions of Sections 1 and 7, of Article X of the Constitution, which are as follows:

> "Section 1. The general assembly shall provide by law, for the election of such county and township officers as may be necessary.
> "Section 7. The commissioners of counties, the trustees of townships, and similar boards, shall have such power of local taxation, for police purposes, as may be prescribed by law."

You will observe that Section 2936 imposes the levying power in the commissioners. That is to say, the section does not provide that the soldiers' relief commission shall itself make the levy, but merely that the commissioners shall make the levy when requested. To be sure, the section vests in the soldiers' relief commission the power to determine the amount that is necessary for that purpose, and upon the county commissioners, the duty of making the levy—"necessary to raise the required relief." So that my holding really does some violence to the exact language of the section.

The members of the soldiers' relief commission, however, have many characteristics which seem to stamp them as officers. In my opinion, if the statutes should be so construed as to give to them the power to control the discretion of the county commissioners, it would have to be held unconstitutional upon the ground that I have suggested. Rather than reach such a conclusion, I have arrived at the conclusion which I have already expressed.

I might add that, in my opinion, the commissioners are obliged to make some levy when requested by the soldiers' relief commission, and would not be permitted to exercise their discretion arbitrarily. The soldiers' relief commission has rights in the premises which it may enforce, as against such arbitrary action by the commissioners.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

STATE LIBRARIAN—DISPOSITION OF PAMPHLET IRREGULARLY PRINTED BY PREDECESSOR—POWERS OF BOARD OF LIBRARY COMMISSIONERS.

The question of the regularity of the allowance of the requisition for the printing by a former state librarian of the pamphlet which is now in custody of the present state librarian entitled "Our national constitution and the constitution of Ohio," is a mooted question with which the latter official is not concerned.

The disposition of this pamphlet is within the power of the library commissioners and the librarian is advised to retain custody of said pamphlet awaiting the decision of the aforesaid body.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1912.

HON. JOHN H. NEWMAN, State Librarian, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 12, 1911, you wrote me to the effect that on April 13, 1911, the board of library commissioners elected you librarian of the Ohio state library, and that you assumed the duties of such position on July 1, 1911; that on June 30, 1911, your predecessor in office, Hon. C. B. Galbreath made requisition upon the supervisor of public printing of the state of Ohio for the printing of 2,000 pamphlet copies of a document prepared by said Galbreath entitled, "Our national constitution and the constitution of our state;" that the minutes of the meetings of the state library commissioners do not disclose that said librarian was authorized by them to have said work printed as a state document and at the state's expense; that although said document purports to have been sent to the printer on June 30, 1911, it contains matter which is dated as late as October 29, 1911. Two questions are suggested by your inquiry, viz.:

1st. Was the printing of this document regular?

2nd. What should now be done with it?

As to the regularity of the printing of this document I express no opinion at this time for the reason that it is now a moot question. I have been informed that the printer did the work and was paid for it, and anything that I might say on that subject would not now change the status of the matter.

Under the provisions of Section 788, etc., of the General Code, the board of library commissioners are charged with the management of the state library and invested with the power to make such rules for the government thereof as it deems necessary and proper. When the aforesaid pamphlets were delivered to your office they became the property of the state of Ohio, subject to such disposition as the board of library commissioners might see fit to make. I, therefore, advise that you retain the custody of said pamphlets awaiting the orders of the board concerning them.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TELEPHONES IN RESIDENCE OF FIRST DEPUTY AND FIRST ASSISTANT OF STATE FIRE MARSHAL—DISCRETION OF STATE FIRE MARSHAL AS HEAD OF DEPARTMENT.

The discretion with which the state fire marshal as head of his department is intrusted empowers him, if he deems it necessary, to install telephones in the residence of his first deputy and first assistant, and to provide for the payment of the same from the state fire marshal fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1912.

HON. JOHN W. ZUBER, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of February 2, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "So construing the above statutes (relating to the duties of the state fire marshal) and from experience as state fire marshal knowing that it is important to reach the scene of a fire as soon as possible and commence our investigation and finding that many fires which need immediate investigation are reported by telephone at night, I believe it proper, legal and right for the proper performance of my duties to provide a means whereby these night calls and reports could be received and given immediate attention.
> "I, therefore, had telephones installed in the residences of my first deputy and first assistant at Columbus and have paid the charges for such telephone service from the state fire marshal fund. I deemed this expense a necessary one for the performance of my duties and one which is legal under the discretion given me by law.
> "May I have your official opinion as to whether or not such expense is permissible under the provisions of Section 821 of the General Code and the sections of the General Code defining the duties and the nature and scope of the duties of the state fire marshal."

In reply to your inquiry I beg to say that Section 821 of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "The state fire marshal shall appoint a first deputy fire marshal, a second deputy fire marshal, and a chief assistant, each of whom he may remove for cause. He may employ such clerks and assistants, and incur such other expenses as are necessary in the performance of the duties of his office."

Section 822, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The state fire marshal shall not engage in any other business. He or one of his deputies shall at all times be in the office of the state fire marshal for the performance of the duties required of him by law."

Section 833 of the General Code, provides:

> "In the performance of the duties imposed by the provisions of this chapter, the state fire marshal and each of his subordinates, at all times of day or night may enter upon and examine any building or premises where a fire has occurred, and other buildings and premises adjoining or near thereto."

Among the statutory duties required of the state fire marshal's department are included the investigations of fires, the arrest of persons suspected of arson and the examination of buildings in which a fire has occurred, as set forth in Sections 824, 828 and 833, of the General Code, respectively.

It is apparent from the foregoing sections that the state fire marshal's department is a part of the police branch of the state goverment, subject to be called in the performance of such police duties at any hour of the day or night, under Section 822 of the General Code, above quoted.

The state fire marshal is left considerable discretion as to the necessary expense he may incur in the performance of the duties of his office. Section 822 of the General Code, above quoted, requires that the state fire marshal or one of his deputies shall be at his office at all times, ready for the performance of such duties as may be required of him or his deputies. If, in the judgment of the state fire marshal, it is for the best interests of the state, and is necessary in the performance of the duties of his office that a telephone be placed in the residences of the first deputy fire marshal and the first assistant fire marshal at Columbus; then it may be so installed, and it is my opinion that the charges for such telephone service may legally be paid from the state fire marshal's fund.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

ADDENDUM:

The facts in your question are different from those wherein I have heretofore held against payment by the state for the use of telephones in the homes of officers. The underlying principle in holding in favor of the allowance in your case is based upon the fact that the telephones in the residences of the officers you name are necessary in your judgment as distinguished from the judgment of the occupant of the residence. This also you can observe from time to time by considering the extent of the use. I have held that under ordinary circumstances the state is not to pay for the use of a telephone in a private residence, rulings to which I still strictly adhere. The exception arises where, in the judgment of the head of the department, the welfare of the state requires that he should see to the use of those means which best subserve that purpose. I am also particularly impressed with the idea that it is the duty of the officers you name to respond to your call either day or night.

POWERS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL AND DUTY TO APPEAR IN COURT —LIMITATIONS—JURISDICTION AS TO PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

As the attorney general is obliged by the statutes to appear for the state only in the supreme court and not in other courts except when required by the governor or general assembly, and as under Section 336, he is governed by the same restrictions with respect to appointment of assistants to the attorney general, he may not supersede the prosecuting attorney in prosecutions for arson or similar crimes pending in any county.

The attorney general is authorized to give legal advice to administrative officials, only with reference to their official duties, and it is not the duty of the state fire marshal to institute impeachment proceedings against a prosecuting attorney.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 23, 1912.

HON. JOHN W. ZUBER, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 29, calling my attention to your previous letter of January 5, and requesting my opinion in writing upon the following questions which I quoted from your letter of January 5:

> "Is there any authority vested in the attorney general whereby he can supersede the prosecuting attorney in prosecutions where the prosecuting attorney neglects and fails to perform his duty?
> "Can your office give to our department your services to the end that you take exclusive charge and control of prosecutions for arson and similar crimes which are now pending in the courts of a certain county?
> "May I have your opinion as to the proceedings necessary for impeachment of a prosecuting attorney where he is guilty of dereliction of duty?"

The duties of the attorney general in so far as they relate to the administration of the purely criminal law of the state are completely prescribed by Chapter 5 of the Third Division of the First Title of the General Code, consisting of Sections 331 to 351, inclusive, thereof. By examining these sections it will be observed that the only ones which bear upon the questions submitted are Sections 333 and 336, General Code, which provide in part as follows:

Section 333:

> "The attorney general shall be the chief law officer for the state and all its departments * * *. The attorney general shall appear for the state in the trial and argument of all civil and criminal causes in the supreme court in which the state may be directly or indirectly interested. When required by the governor or the general assembly, he shall appear for the state in any court or tribunal in a cause in which the state is a party, or in which the state is directly interested. Upon the written request of the governor he shall prosecute any person indicted for a crime."

Section 336.

> "If in his opinion, the interests of the state require it, the attorney general may appoint special counsel to represent the state in civil actions, criminal prosecutions or other proceedings in which the state is a party or directly interested." * * *

This department has always construed Section 336 as limited by the provisions of Section 333. That is to say—and I think it cannot be otherwise held—the attorney general is without authority to appoint special counsel to represent the state in a proceeding in which he himself as attorney general would have no standing or right whatever.

The plain provisions of Section 333 then being the only ones concerned here furnish a complete answer to your first question. The attorney general is authorized upon the written request of the governor to prosecute any person indicted for a crime or upon the request of the general assembly to appear in any case in which the state is a party, which properly includes criminal prosecutions. Only then by the direction of the governor or the general assembly may the attorney general take part in the trial of a criminal case. There is no authority inferable from this section whereby the attorney general can supersede the prosecuting attorney. In any case in which the attorney general is directed to prosecute a person indicted for a crime he may take his position at the trial table, and I should say assume charge of the case, but he cannot deprive the prosecuting attorney of his right to participate actively therein.

From what has been said it follows that I am not at liberty to offer my services or those of any of my assistants or special counsel to the state fire marshal to the end that this department take exclusive charge and control of prosecutions for arson or similar crimes which are now pending in any county.

With respect to your request as to the proceedings necessary for the impeachment of a prosecuting attorney, I beg to cite you to Section 341, General Code, a part of the same chapter in which the sections already discussed are found, which provides in part as follows:

> "The attorney general, when so requested, shall give legal advice to a state officer * * * in all matters relating to their official duties."

It is not the duty of the state fire marshal to institute impeachment proceedings against a prosecuting attorney. I might observe that the language of this section seems to have been designedly clear. That of Section 342, for example, is much broader; it directs the attorney general to "give his written opinion on questions of law to either house of the general assembly." It follows, of course, that either house of the general assembly has the right to ask any questions of law of the attorney general. Not so, however, with administrative state officers. The power of the attorney general to advise them is limited to matters relating to their official duties.

I am, by your own suggestion, limited to the strict letter of the law which prescribes my official duty. My advice to you is in accordance therewith.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—POWER TO PUBLISH PROCEEDINGS—LIMITATION OF EXPENSE—APPROPRIATION.

Section 4 of 102 O. L. 298, gives the constitutional convention full power to do all things necessary for the publication of its debates and proceedings with the limitation that the appropriation made for its expenses shall not be exceeded.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 12, 1912.

HON. GEORGE W. KNIGHT, Chairman of Special Committee, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of January 20, 1912, is received, in which you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "By direction of the special committee of the constitutional convention 'created to consider the subject of reporting and publishing the debates of this convention,' which said committee is under instruction to report to the convention not later than Tuesday, January 23, I beg to submit for your interpretation and opinion, a question rising under the act of the general assembly pursuant to which this convention is now in session, and which has an important bearing upon the subject referred to this committee.
> "The convention is assembled pursuant to 'An act for the election to and assembing of a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution of the state of Ohio.' (O. L. 102, p. 298.)
> "Section 4 of the said act provides:
>
> "'Said convention shall have power to determine its own rules of proceeding * * *; to make provisions for the publication of its proceedings or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention in durable form; and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state; * * *'"
> "The question we desire to submit for your consideration is this:
>
> "Since the act is in the nature of a special or extraordinary measure, and the phrase in the section above recited authorizes the convention to 'provide' for the publication of the debates, etc., and does not follow the usual formula of merely 'authorizing the publication' of debates and other matter, is it not contemplated that under said act the convention shall have full and plenary power, within the limits of the money at its disposal, to make any and all arrangements for the method under and by which said debates and proceedings may be published?"

Section 4 of the act referred to, 102 Ohio Laws 298, provides as follows:

> "Said convention shall have authority to determine its own rules of proceeding, and to punish it members for disorderly conduct, to elect such officers as it may deem necessary for the proper and convenient transaction of the business of the convention, and to prescribe their duties; to make provisions for the publication of its proceedings, or any part thereof, during its session; to provide for the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention, in durable form, and for the securing of a copyright thereof for the state; and to fix and prescribe the time and form and manner of submitting any proposed revision, alterations or amendments of the constitution to the electors of the state; also the notice to be given of such submission."

Section 18 of said act provides:

"The journal and proceedings of said convention shall be filed and kept in the office of secretary of state. Said secretary of state shall furnish said convention with all needed stationery, and shall do such other things relative to the distribution and publication of matter pertaining to the convention as it may require. He shall forthwith cause such number of copies of this act to be published and transmitted to the electors several boards in the state as will be sufficient to supply a copy thereof to each board of judges of election in their respective counties, and such election boards shall distribute the same to such boards of judges of election."

Your inquiry calls for a construction of the foregoing sections. The provisions of Section 18 do not limit in any way the power and authority granted to the constitutional convention by Section 4 of said act.

A construction of the provisions of Section 4 under consideration calls for a definition of the words "provide" and "provisions" as therein used.

The various definitions of the word "provide," as construed by the courts, are summarized in 32 Cyc. 740, as follows:

* * * "to procure beforehand; get, collect or make ready for future use; prepare, furnish, supply; to make ready; to prepare; to furnish or supply; to furnish and supply; to procure as suitable or necessary; to prepare; to make ready for future use; to furnish; to procure beforehand; to make ready for future use; to furnish; to supply."

The word "provision" is defined in Webster's dictionary as follows:

"The act of providing or making previous preparation."

Applying these definitions to the provisions of Section 4 under consideration, they would read: That said convention shall have authority to prepare and supply the publication of its proceedings; and to furnish, or to supply the publication of the debates and proceedings of the convention.

Said Section 4 gives to the constitutional convention full power and authority to do all things necessary for the publication of its proceedings during the convention; and for the publication of its debates and proceedings in durable form, within the limits of the appropriation made for the expenses of the convention, and not otherwise expended.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CONSTITUTIONAL ENACTMENT FOR ROAD TAX LEVY—POWER OF CONVENTION TO MAKE "SELF-EXECUTING."

A constitutional provision may be enacted for a tax levy for a road improvement so as to make the enactment "self-executing," i. e., not requiring auxiliary action by the legislature. To effect such purpose, however, the act must be complete in every detail.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1912.

HON. S. S. STILWELL, Member of the Constitutional Convention, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 16, 1912, which is as follows:

> "I want to inquire as to the probable effect that the possible action of the constitutional convention may have, if, for instance, in the good roads controversy that is now on in the convention, the convention should decide to submit to the voters of the state the proposition to make a small levy upon the state tax duplicate, could that levy be enforced without the intervention of the general assembly? If it could not be so enforced without such action by the general assembly, in your judgment, would it be possible for the convention to specifically direct the auditor of state to make such levy without such intervention by the general assembly?"

A constitutional provision can, undoubtedly, be adopted which will obviate the necessity for any legislative action in order to put the same into operation. This is what is termed "a self-executing provision." A good description of a provision of this kind is found in the opinion of Mr. Justice Brown, in the case of Davis vs. Burke, 179 U. S. 399, at page 403:

> "Where a constitutional provision is complete in itself it needs no further legislation to put it in force. When it lays down certain general principles, as to enact laws upon a certain subject, or for the incorporation of cities of certain population, or for uniform laws upon the subject of taxation, it may need more specific legislation to make it operative. In other words, it is self-executing only so far as it is susceptible of execution. But where a constitution asserts a certain right or lays down a certain principle of law or procedure, it speaks for the entire people as their supreme law and is full authority for all that is done in pursuance of its provision. In short, if complete in itself it executes itself."

It is my opinion, therefore, that a provision, such as is indicated by you, could be placed in the constitution, but it would be necessary to make the provision complete in every detail; that is, to provide for the amount of the levy; how and by whom the levy shall be made and collected; in fact, each and every step must be provided for. For it seems to be the rule, in all cases upon this subject, that if anything remains to be done to complete the object contemplated by the provision, then, the provision to that extent is inoperative, that is, is not self-executing, and requires further action by the legislature to make it entirely operative.

The subject of self-executing and non-self executing provisions is quite an extensive one, and there are a great number of cases in which the point to be decided was whether a particular provision was or was not self-executing; but I do not think it necessary to enter further into the subject, as you will see, from what I have said above, that the only safe way is to make the provision entirely complete in itself; that is, to provide for each and every step necessary to place it in full operation.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

APPROPRIATION—JOINT RESOLUTION NOT A LAW—INVESTIGATION OF OCCUPATIONAL DISEASES BY STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Inasmuch as a joint resolution cannot have the effect of a law, and furthermore as the joint resolution providing for an investigation for "occupational diseases" by the board of health does not specifically provide an appropriation, Article II, Section XXII of the Constitution has not been complied with and no appropriation has been made for this purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1912.

HON. HARRY D. THOMAS, Member of Constitutional Convention, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of March 27, 1912, requesting my opinion upon two questions, first, as to whether an employer's liability insurance company is authorized to issue policies insuring employers against the results of accidents to employes caused by the employer's wilful act or his violation of the statutes. I enclose you herewith a copy of my opinion rendered to the state liability board of awards on April 4th, which covers this same question.

Your second question is whether senate joint resolution 19, 102 O. L., 749, carried with it an appropriation to the state board of health to make the investigation referred to in the resolution. This section is as follows:

> WHEREAS, The employment of men and women in certain occupations is known to be attended with more than ordinary danger to health, giving rise to what is known as 'occupational diseases,' and
> "WHEREAS, Unnecessary sickness and shortening of life from whatever cause, is a serious loss of grave concern to the state and to all the people, and
> "WHEREAS, It is believed to be possible, by public education and by the enforcement of proper measures, to largely prevent unnecessary sickness and premature death among employes in various trades and occupations, therefore
> "Be it Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the state board of health is hereby authorized and directed to make a thorough investigation of the effect of occupations upon the health of those engaged therein with special reference to dust and dangerous chemicals and gases, to insufficient ventilation and lighting, and to such other unhygienic conditions as in the opinion of said board may be specially injurious to health, and to report to the next general assembly the results of such investigation, with such recommendations for legislative or other remedial measures as it may deem proper and advisable, provided that the cost of such investigation shall not exceed the sum of five thousand dollars."

This resolution does not attempt to make an appropriation as the only language in any way bearing upon the expenditure necessary to make the investigation is the last clause of the last sentence of the resolution, which simply attempts to limit the amount that may be expended.

Section 22 of Article II of the Constitution provides:

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation, made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

It has been held that a joint resolution is not a law and cannot have the effect of a law. The latest expression of our supreme court as to this is found in the case of The Cleveland Terminal and Valley Railroad Company et al. vs. The State of Ohio, 85 O. S., 139, where, on page 152 the court says:

> "It should not need the citation of authorities to establish the proposition that a joint resolution is not an act of legislation, and that it cannot be effective for any purpose for which an exercise of legislative power is necessary. * * *"

Therefore, as an appropriation must be made by law, the joint resolution above quoted would be ineffective, even if it expressly provided for an appropriation for the purpose of making this investigation.

I am very sorry that no appropriation for this purpose is available for I believe it is very important that an investigation such as is provided for by this resolution should be made in order that legislation appropriate to remedy conditions existing in the industries referred to may be enacted as soon as possible.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OFFICIAL REPORTER OF DEBATES OF CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION—COMPENSATION FOR INDEXING AND SUPERINTENDING PUBLICATION OF DEBATES AFTER ADJOURNMENT.

For work done, after the adjournment of the convention in indexing and superintending the publication of the debates, warrants may be issued to the official reporter of the constitutional convention by the auditor upon certificate authorized by the convention and signed by the presiding officer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 19, 1912.

MR. CLARENCE E. WALKER, Official Reporter of Debates at the Constitutional Convention, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of May 11, 1912, you state that on February 6, 1912, you were duly elected as the official reporter of the constitutional convention, and that you had been informed that there was no authority in law for any warrants to issue on the state treasurer for any work performed after the adjournment of the convention, except to the official reporter; that it will be necessary for you to index and superintend the publishing of the debates of the constitutional convention, which work must necessarily be done after the convention adjourns; that the compensation paid to you as official reporter would be exorbitant for the services required in superintending the indexing and publishing of the debates, and you ask for my construction of the act providing for the constitutional convention as to this matter.

By Section 4 of the act providing for the constitutional convention, 102 O. L., 278, the convention is given authority to provide for the publication of its debates and proceedings, in durable form, and for securing of copyright thereof for the state.

By Section 20 of the said act it is provided that no warrants shall issue on the treasurer for moneys for the uses of the convention, except on the order of the convention, and the certificate of the presiding officer thereof.

These sections do not require that the services must be performed while the convention is in session, but under Section 4, above mentioned, the convention can, in providing for the publication of its debates and proceedings, employ you to do this work at a compensation to be fixed by it. This would comply with the provisions of Section 20 as to the compensation being ordered by the convention, and a certificate upon which the warrant of the auditor of state is issued can be signed by the presiding officer of the convention after the services have been performed, or at any time; or the certificate could be signed by the said presiding officer at stated periods, if so provided by the convention.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

MILEAGE TO OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES OF CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION CANNOT BE ALLOWED.

Inasmuch as, under the act of 102 O. L. p. 298, officers and employes of the convention must receive the same compensation as is allowed similar officers of the general assembly, under Section 51, General Code, these officers and employes cannot be allowed their mileage to and from their homes for every two weeks that the convention has been in session.

Under Section 56, General Code, the compensation of pages when once fixed, cannot be changed and, therefore, having fixed their salaries, the convention may not now provide for their mileage.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 7, 1912.

HON. C. B. GALBREATH, Secretary, Constitutional Convention, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your verbal request, asking my opinion as to whether or not the following resolution submitted to the constitutional convention for adoption, would be valid if passed:

> "RESOLVED, That the employes of this convention be allowed mileage to and from their respective homes for every two weeks that the convention has been in session."

In reply thereto I beg to advise that Section 20 of the act passed May 31, 1911, to provide for the election to, and assembling of a convention to revise, alter or amend the constitution of the state of Ohio, laws of Ohio, 102, page 298 provides as follows:

> "Any elector of the state shall be eligible to membership in such convention and any disqualification now imposed by law upon persons holding any other office under the laws of the state is hereby removed insofar as the right to be a delegate to such convention is concerned. The delegates of the convention shall be entitled to the same compensation and mileage for their services as is allowed by law to members of the general assembly for one year, and the officers and employes of the convention, as far as practicable, shall be entitled to the same compensation for their services as is allowed by law for similar services to officers and employes of the general assembly; and compensation for all such services shall be paid out of the state treasury on the warrant of the auditor of the state; provided, an additional alowance may be made to the official reporters of the convention if deemed proper. And no warrant shall issue on the state treasury for such compensation, of for money for uses of the convention, except on the order of the convention and certificate of the presiding officer thereof."

Section 51 of the General Code, in relation to the per diem of officers of senate and house, provides:

> "The clerks and sergeants-at-arms of the senate and house of representatives, and their assistants, shall each be paid five dollars for each day's attendance during the session. For services rendered at the organization of the general assembly, each of the officers named in Section thirty-three, unless re-elected to his position, shall be paid five dollars for each day, for not exceeding ten days."

Section 56 of the General Code, under the head of compensation of pages and other employes, provides as follows:

"The compensation of pages and other employes of either house shall be fixed by resolution of such house and not changed during the term for which fixed."

It, therefore, appears that as to the clerks, sergeant-at-arms and their assistants, such compensation is fixed by Section 51; there being no provision therein for mileage.

As to the pages and other employes, their compensation has already been fixed by resolution of the constitutional convention, and the provisions of Section 56 apply to them, whereby the compensation fixed shall not be changed during the term.

I am, therefore, of opinion that there is no warrant in law for the adoption of the resolution proposed.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

PER DIEM OF SERGEANT-AT-ARMS OF CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION NOT CONTINUED DURING TEMPORARY ADJOURNMENT—TERM OF OFFICE CONTINUES.

Inasmuch as the constitutional convention has provided a "per diem" compensation for the sergeant-at-arms and further made specific provision for a continuation of the "per diem" for ten days after temporary adjournment, the intent that payment shall cease during the time intervening between the expiration of said ten days and the final adjournment, is manifest.

The term of office, however, is unaffected and the "per diem" is to be allowed for any further work which might be required by the body.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 25, 1912.

HON. C. B. GALBREATH, Secretary of the Constitutional Convention, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of June 17, 1912, you requested the opinion of this department as follows:

> "On January 9, 1912, the constitutional convention elected Mr. J. C. Sherlock sergeant-at-arms. His office was provided for under the following rule of the convention:
> "Rule 1. The officers of the convention shall be a president, a vice-president, a secretary and a sergeant-at-arms. These officers shall be elected by a majority vote of all the members elected to the convention. Any officer of this convention may be recalled and another elected in his place, upon a majority vote of all those elected to the convention.
> "The duties of the sergeant-at-arms are prescribed by the following rule:
> "Rule 17. The sergeant-at-arms shall have general charge of the hall, galleries and smoking room of the convention under the direction of the president and of the committee rooms under the direction of the secretary. He shall cause all such halls and rooms to be properly cleaned and ventilated. He shall enforce the rules as to admission to the hall and smoking room of the convention. He shall sign all requisitions for supplies for the use of the convention and its members. He shall perform such other duties as the president or convention shall from time to time determine upon.
> "By adoption of the report of the committee on employes the salary of the sergeant-at-arms was fixed in the following recommendation:
> "We recommend that all the above named appointees, as well as the sergeant-at-arms, shall receive as compensation the sum of five dollars ($5.00) per diem.
> "The report of the committee was adopted January 17, 1912.
> "The convention, by resolution, on June 6, 1912, adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, August 26, 1912, unless a meeting of the convention shall be called in the meantime. The written demand of any twenty-five members of the convention filed with the secretary of the convention shall constitute a call for any such meeting.

"The same resolution provided further:

"Section 3. The services of the sergeant-at-arms, J. C. Sherlock, and of the custodian, Fred Blankner, are hereby continued for the period of ten days after June 7th, and they are hereby instructed to procure boxes and all necessary material for packing and shipping documents of the delegates; they are hereby authorized to retain from the present force, the necessary help required, not to exceed five persons; they shall receive for such service the same per diem as is now being paid them by this convention; the president of the convention is hereby authorized and instructed to sign vouchers thereof and for necessary material and express charges.

"Section 4. Ten days after June 7, 1912, the sergeant-at-arms of this convention shall turn over the hall and committee rooms to the proper custodians thereof; except such rooms as may be required by the president and secretary of the work authorized by this convention, which rooms are hereby retained until August 26, 1912.

"Mr. Sherlock, it will be seen, is one of the elective officers of the convention. Does his term of office extend to the final adjournment of the convention or does it expire on June 17th 'ten days after June 7, 1912?'"

The compensation of the sergeant-at-arms is governed by the recommendation of the committee on employes which was adopted by the convention as follows:

"We recommend that all the above named employes, as well as the sergeant-at-arms shall receive as compensation the sum of five ($5.00) dollars per diem."

It is well settled that the term "per diem" when employed in fixing the compensation of an officer, restricts the payment to the time actually spent in the performance of the duties of the office. The century dictionary defines the term "per diem" as follows:

"Per diem—By the day; in each day; daily; used of the fees of officers when computed by the number of days of service."

Should the convention body have intended that the sergeant-at-arms was to receive payment for the entire period of its existence, it would have expressed that intent by fixing a compensation for longer periods or by fixing a salary. Not having done so, the conclusion follows, in view of Section 3, of the amended resolution quoted above, that that official cannot receive pay after June 17th, i. e. at the expiration of ten days after June 7, 1912, and before August 26, 1912, unless a meeting is called during that time.

In further support of this construction, attention is called to the following language is Section 3, of the amended resolution:

"They shall receive for such service the same per diem as is now being paid them by this convention."

These words refer to the added services of the sergeant-at-arms during the period of ten days after June 7th, and were it intended, in the recommendation of the committee on employes, that the compensation of the sergeant-at-arms was to continue until the end of the session, this language would have been altogether unnecessary.

While these rules govern as to compensation, I see no reason why the term of office of the sergeant-at-arms may not continue until the end of the session and should any duties be required of him upon the re-assembling of the body on August 26, 1912, or by reason of a meeting being called prior to that time, there is nothing to prevent his being compensated for these services on the five ($5.00) dollar per diem basis during the time of their performance.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OHIO STATE ARCHAEOLOGICAL AND HISTORICAL SOCIETY—APPROPRIATION FOR 1911 AND 1912—MUSEUM AND LIBRARY BUILDING—ASSESSMENTS FOR PAVING PROPERTY ABUTTING SPIEGEL GROVE STATE PARK.

The appropriation bill providing $100,000 for a museum and library building "complete" imports that this amount is to be applied to the building including its equipment.

The amount applied to these purposes may be proportioned by this society at its own discretion; but the greater part thereof should preferredly be applied to the building itself.

2. The bill imports that Spiegel grove state park may be improved by payment on the property adjoining its three triangular sides.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 2, 1912.

HON. E. O. RANDALL, Secretary, The Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of December 21, 1911, in which communication you ask my opinion upon two questions which are stated by you as follows:

> "The general appropriation bills for 1911 and 1912, (102 O. L., 375 and 396), under the appropriations for the Ohio state archaeological and historical society, contain among other items, the following:
>
> "Building for museum and library purposes to cost $100,000 complete ---------- $50,000.00
> "Our society desires to know the meaning of the word 'complete.' Under the item as expressed, does the appropriation pertain simply to the building, without equipment or furnishings? Does it mean that the entire $100,000 must be expended on the building itself, and that the society cannot reduce the cost of the building say to $85,000 and expend the remaining sum of $15,000 on equipment and furnishings?
> "Also the item:
> "For the proportion of the state of Ohio on account of improvement of abutting property of Spiegel grove state park for the street paving (1,300 ft.) on Hayes and (2,000 ft.) on Buckland avenues, state's proportion complete ---------- $10,000.00 ------ $5,000.00
> "The Spiegel grove park is practically in the shape of a triangle, one side of which faces Buckland avenue (2,000 ft.), one side on Hayes avenue (1,300 ft.) and the third side of the triangle being Wilson avenue, something like 1,000 ft. The improvement of Hayes avenue is practically completed. We find that the cost of the state for its proportion for Hayes avenue and the probable cost to the state for Buckland avenue, together, will not exceed $7,500 to $8,000, and that Wilson avenue can be improved in the same way for the remaining sum over and above the cost of improving Buckland and Hayes avenue.
> "The society desires to improve Wilson avenue in the same manner as the other two avenues. Can we use the fund in excess of that expended for Buckland and Hayes avenues, as above indicated, for similar improvements of Wilson avenue?"

In answer to your first question, my opinion is that the legislature has appropriated the sum of $100,000.00 with which your society is to construct a building, completed for museum and library purposes. The word "complete," it seems to me, was used to express the intention of the legislature, that this sum was intended to provide a building sufficiently equipped for the purposes named. The manner in which this money is to be expended rests entirely with your society, that is, the proportion to be expended for the building proper and for the equipment. You might expend $85,000.00 on the building itself and $15,000.00 upon the permanent equipment; or, $99,000.00 on the building and $1,000.00 on the equipment. In brief, the legislature has appropriated this money to provide a suitable building for your society to be used for museum and library purposes, and it is presumed you will expend the same in such manner as to erect the building best adapted to your present needs. But, as the state, by providing a permanent, safe, and beautiful home in which the most valuable collections of your society, while being safely kept, may also be seen and used, gives expression to the approval with which it regards the Ohio state archaeological and historical society and its purposes, it would seem that in making your plans more regard should be given to the future than to the present; the building will be permanent and probably of such design that future alterations cannot be made without ruining its symmetry; furniture and equipment are transitory, at the best and therefore if it becomes necessary to reduce your estimates either on the building or the equipment, would not the interests of the public require that the sacrifice be made from a temporary rather than from a permanent improvement?

As to your second question, you state that Spiegel grove state park is practically in the shape of a triangle, one side of which faces Buckland avenue, one side, Hayes avenue and the third, Wilson avenue. The obvious conclusion, from the language used in making the appropriation, is that the legislature intended to appropriate enough money to pay the state's proportion of the paving of all the streets upon which this park abuts, namely, Buckland, Hayes and Wilson avenues; you state that the amount of the appropriation is sufficient to pay the state's proportion of the paving on all of the said streets, that fact is conclusive. The words and figures:

"(1,300 ft.) on Hayes and (2,000 ft.) on Buckland avenues" can either be disregarded, as surplusage; or if these words and figures remain, then the name of Wilson avenue and the number of feet the park faces on this avenue may be inserted, as being inadvertently omitted. The controlling language is:

> "For the proportion of the state of Ohio on account of improvement of abutting property of Spiegel grove state park for the street paving * * state's proportion complete ----------$10,000.00----------$5,000.00"

My opinion is, therefore that this appropriation is to be used to pay the state's proportion of the cost of paving all three streets.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ABSTRACT OF TITLE—"SPIEGEL GROVE" IN FREMONT, SANDUSKY COUNTY.

HON. E. O. RANDALL, Secretary Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of an abstract of title to certain real estate in the city of Fremont, Sandusky county, Ohio, known as "Spiegel Grove" upon which the state is to erect and equip the Hayes commemorative library and museum building. You have requested my opinion as to the legality of the title to be derived by the state thereby.

An examination of said abstract discloses no serious defects. No patent is shown from the United States government to Moses Nichols, Randall Jerome and David Gallagher for tract 12, nor does Randall Jerome appear to have conveyed his one-third interest in said premises. Jonathan H. Jerome, whose relationship to Randall Jerome is not disclosed, conveyed a one-third interest in said tract 12 to Barzillia Inman on July 21, 1832 as shown by deed No. 13. These omissions, however, I do not regard as material at this time, inasmuch as Webb C. Hayes the last owner of this property and his immediate predecessors in title have had adverse possession for more than twenty-one years.

The records of Sandusky county should be examined for unpaid taxes and assessments against said property and a certificate of the clerk of the United States court for the northern district of Ohio as to suits and judgment against Webb C. Hayes should be attached to the abstract.

Two deeds for twenty acres of this property have been heretofore executed and delivered to the state of Ohio and are of record in Sandusky county, Ohio. The same have been approved by my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman. A deed for the remaining portion of Spiegel grove, consisting of five acres, has been executed by Webb C. Hayes to certain trustees, who are authorized to convey said premises to the state of Ohio, upon condition that the state shall provide for the erection of said building within three years from the date of said last named deed, to-wit: March 12, 1910, the deed to the state from said trustees to contain certain restrictions, as set forth in said deed of trust. The latter deed has been left with you in escrow, and I am informed by you that said building is to be erected upon the said five acre tract, notwithstanding a statement in the deed itself that said building is to be erected upon another part of Spiegel grove heretofore conveyed to the state.

The first condition in the deed of trust is that "the said the archaeological and historical society shall secure the erection upon that part of Spiegel grove, heretofore conveyed to the state of Ohio for a state park, a suitable fire-proof building on the sight reserved opposite the Jefferson street entrance, for the purpose of preserving and forever keeping in Spiegel grove all papers," etc.

In view of the foregoing provision nothing should be done toward the erection of said building on any other part of Spiegel grove than that expressly stipulated, unless the consent, in writing, of Webb C. Hayes is first obtained, nor until the title is fully vested in the state of Ohio for the use and benefit of the Ohio state archaeological and historical society.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PENSION FUNDS—VOLUNTEER FIREMEN NOT INCLUDED AMONG BENEFICIARIES.

The present statutes providing for the police and fire departments of a city and for the establishment and management of pension funds, do not extend to volunteer firemen.

Inasmuch as volunteer firemen were not under former statutes accorded the benefits of pension funds, Section 4613, General Code, providing for the preservation of the rights of all firemen formerly entitled to benefits of former funds, is of no avail.

MESSRS. ROBERT RAITZ, President, and P. H. GALLOWAY, Secretary, Veteran Volunteer Firemen's Association, Toledo, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have given most careful consideration to the question you submit through Senators Deaton and Keller and Representative Hillenkamp, as to whether there is legal authority for participation by volunteer firemen in the regular firemen's pension fund. Before arriving at a conclusion I considered very carefully the communications of these gentlemen. I also have before me the opinion of Hon. Cornell Schreiber, city solicitor of Toledo, copy of which I herewith enclose. Inasmuch as the arguments in favor of allowing participation in the pension fund are so strong, and appeal to the charitable side of one's nature, I went over the question very carefully with many attorneys in this department, so as to be doubly sure of my conclusion, they all concurring.

I quote the following provisions of the General Code of Ohio, under which municipal corporations are authorized to provide pension funds for firemen:

> "Section 4382. The director of public safety shall classify the service in the police and fire departments in conformity with the ordinance of council determining the number of persons to be employed therein, and shall make all rules for the regulation and discipline of such departments, except as otherwise provided in this subdivision.
> "Section 4383. Council may provide by general ordinance for the relief out of the police or fire funds, of members of either department temporarily or permanently disabled in the discharge of their duty. Nothing herein shall impair, restrict or repeal any provision of law authorizing the levy of taxes in municipalities to provide for firemen's police and sanitary police pension funds, and to create and perpetuate boards of trustees for the administration of such funds.
> "Section 4600. In any municipal corporation, having a fire department supported in whole or in part at public expense, the council by ordinance may declare the necessity for the establishment and maintenance of a fireman's pension fund. Thereupon a board of trustees, who shall be known as 'trustees of the firemen's pension fund' shall be created, which shall consist of the director of public safety, and in villages of the fire chief, and five other persons, members of such department. * * *"
> "Section 4601. On the second Monday of the month following the determination of such director or fire chief to create such fund, an election shall be held to choose five trustees from the department. * * * *

Between the hours of nine o'clock in the forenoon and six o'clock in the afternoon on the day designated, each person in the fire department, who by its rules, is designated a member thereof, shall send or cause to be sent by mail or otherwise, in writing the names of five persons, members of the department who are his choice.

"Section 4607. All fines imposed upon members of the fire department of the municipality by discipline or punishment by the authority having charge or control thereof, and the proceeds of all suits for penalties for the violation of a statute of the states or ordinances of such municipality with the execution of which such department is charged, and licenses or other fees payable thereunder, shall be credited to the pension fund.

"Section 4608. The trustees of the fund may take by gift, grant, devise or bequest, moneys, or real or personal property, upon such terms as to the investment or expenditure thereof as is fixed by the grantor or determined by such trustees.

"Section 4609. The trustees of the fund may also receive such uniform amounts from each person designated by the rules of the fire department, a member thereof, as he voluntarily agrees to, to be deducted from his monthly pay, and the amount so received shall be used as a fund to increase the pension which may be granted to such person or his beneficiaries.

"Section 4612. Such trustees shall make all rules and regulations for the distribution of the fund, including the qualifications of those to whom any portion of it shall be paid and the amount thereof, but no rules or regulations shall be in force until approved by the director of public safety or the fire chief of the municipality, as the case may be."

Section 4382, above quoted, is to be read in connection with the provisions of the chapter relating to civil service. From such reading—without elaborating further on the matter—it appears that only the regular or salaried members of the fire department of a municipal corporation are in the strict sense members of the department to be classified as such.

From this it follows that the power of council to provide otherwise than through the agency of the pension fund authorized in Section 4600 et sep. of the General Code, and which power exists under Section 4383, above quoted, extends only to salaried members of the department.

There is no specific mention of volunteer firemen in any of the present statutes relating to cities. Village volunteer firemen are recognized, and their status is fixed by Section 4390 of the General Code which I did not quote. Apparently, however, volunteer firemen in cities have no present status.

This distinction between village and city originated with the adoption of the municipal code of 1902. Prior to that time, as is well known, special legislation as to the several principal cities of the state was the rule; thus, Toledo being a "city of the third grade of the first class" was governed by an act found in 86 O. L., 54, designated in Bates Annotated Statutes as Sections 2476-1 to 2476-16, inclusive, which said portions establish a board of four fire commissioners, which board was to have the administration of the fire department. The act did not, however, define the personnel of the fire department, excepting that in Section 9 it was provided that, thus seeming to recognize the existence of a department other than the employes thereof.

"The board * * * shall * * * appoint such members and employes as may be necessary for the efficient management of the department."

The last section of this special act provides, in effect, that except insofar as inconsistent therewith, the provisions of the general law relating to fire departments should apply to "cities of the third grade of the first class." The effect of this provision was to adopt those of Section 2470 Rev. Stat., which was in part as follows:

> "The council of any city * * shall have power to * * * establish and maintain a fire department and to provide for the establishment and organization of fire and hose company, and to provide such by-laws and regulations for the government of such companies as may be deemed necessary and proper, provided that no active volunteer firemen * * shall be required to serve on juries. * * *"

Volunteer firemen, then, were expressly recognized as members of a fire department under the general law as it existed prior to the adoption of the municipal code of 1902.

At the same time there were several firemen's pension fund acts similar to the one quoted above (which was enacted in 1904, after the adoption of the municipal code of 1902), thus there was one applicable to Cincinnati alone (Sections 2477-1 et seq. Revises Statutes); one which applied to Cleveland (Sec. 2477-15 et seq. Rev. Stat.); one which applied to Columbus (Sec. 2477-32 et seq. Rev. Stat.); a general pension fund law (Sec. 2477-51 et seq. Rev. Stat.); and one specifically applicable to Toledo (Sec. 2477-67 et seq. Rev. Stat.). I quote from the provisions of that act found in 92 O. L., 346:

> "Section 1. Be it Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the persons who, from time to time, compose the board of fire commissioners, or such other board or committee of the city council of any city of the third grade of the second class, having control or management of the fire department of such city, and three other persons, members of the fire department therein, elected as herinafter provided, shall constitute and be the trustees for the distribution of the pension fund now existing or hereafter provided, and shall be called the board of trustees of the firemen's pension fund.
> "Section 2. The three persons to be elected as such trustees shall, together with three other persons, also members of said fire department, be nominated for such office of trustee in a convention to be composed of one delegate from each engine, chemical engine, fire boat, hook and ladder or hose company, fire alarm telegraph company and the general office belonging to the fire department of any such city and called by chief of such fire department or three members of such fire department, and convened at least two weeks prior to the election of such three trustees. * * *"

(Here follow detailed directions for the payment of benefits, for the retirement of members, etc., all which is made applicable generally to "members of the fire department" without any definition in said act itself of who should constitute such members within the meaning thereof.)

I have already pointed out that seemingly under Section 2470, supra, active volunteer firemen were regarded as members of the department. It does not necessarily follow, however, that a definition is thus afforded as to what constitutes a member of the fire department within the meaning of the pension fund laws of the city of Toledo.

Now, Section 4613 of the General Code, which I have not as yet quoted, provides as follows:

> "All persons drawing pensions or entitled to them from existing firemen's pension fund shall be and remain beneficiaries in pension funds credited under this chapter in the same municipality where they are beneficiaries in such existing funds, and shall receive such amounts and be subject to the rules and regulations adopted by the board of trustees."

The significance of this section is this: It preserves to the beneficiaries of the existing pension funds the right to participate in pension funds created and preserved under the act found in 97 O. L., 244, and which now constitutes the above quoted section of the General Code; and, if therefore, volunteer firemen in the city of Toledo were regarded as members of the fire department under the special pension fund law applicable to that city, by the adoption of the municipal code they would be entitled to continue as beneficiaries to the fund in the same manner as they were formerly entitled to participate therein. If, on the contrary, from the time of the amendment of the special law applicable to the city of Toledo until the present time voluntary firemen in that city have not been regarded as proper beneficiaries of the fund, then, I should be inclined to give great weight to this practical construction of the statutes and not at this late date to disturb it.

I assume from the very existence of the question which you submit that voluntary firemen have not heretofore been receiving the benefits of the pension fund, nor contributing to it. That being the case, it would seem that all the parties concerned do not regard the old law as applicable to such volunteer firemen. This is, of course, a mere inference and may not be warranted by the actual facts. If I am in error in assuming the facts to be such as I have stated them, then, of course, the conclusion which I have stated does not follow.

Upon this assumption, however, I would hold, in deference to the aforesaid practical construction of the old law, that voluntary firemen of the city of Toledo are not entitled as of right to participate in or contributed to the firemen's pension fund.

This brings me to the question as to the power of the trustees of the pension fund under Section 4612 above quoted to determine the qualifications of those to whom any portion of such fund shall be paid. Does this power authorize such trustees to extend the membership of the pension list beyond the regular membership of the fire department, or beyond the membership of the pension list as it existed at the time of the enactment of what is now Section 4612 of the General Code?

Upon careful consideration I am unable to reach the conclusion that the word "qualification" as herein used refers to the manner of determining the membership of the class from which membership shall be drawn, but rather to the determination of the right of one who has contributed to the fund to receive benefits therefrom—the question of membership in the department, that of the extent of injuries, or of disability, etc.—in other words, I do not find in this section authority to extend the benefits of the fund generally speaking to those who are not members of the fire department, or to those who are not beneficiaries of the pension fund existing at the time the act of which the section is a part went into effect.

The question is a very difficult one on account of the vagueness of the statutory language, and the lack of authorities upon the exact point. I have been obliged to assume certain facts of which I have no direct statement. Upon this assumption, however, as aforesaid, and upon the construction of the statutes, which seems to me to be the only possible one, I am of the opinion that under the existing laws voluntary firemen in the city of Toledo are not entitled to the benefits of the firemen's pension fund of that city. The doubt which has been in my mind arises from the provisions of Sections 4608 and 4609 of the General Code, above quoted. The one permits the trustees of the fund to take by gift, etc., moneys upon such terms, and the expenditure thereof as is fixed by the grantor, This might enable the trustees to administer in a quasi-official capacity the proceeds of any separate fund which might be entrusted to their care and management by volunteer firemen for the benefit of disabled volunteer firemen, but would not authorize them to distribute any money derived from contributions made by the regular members of the department for such purposes. That is to say, even if these statutes could be construed so as to permit the trustees of the firemen's pension fund to manage and disburse funds entrusted to them by voluntary firemen, such funds would have to be kept separate from the regular firemen's fund.

Section 4609 speaks of "persons designated by the rules of the department as members thereof." Standing by itself this might seem to authorize the director of public safety, the administrative head of the fire department, to designate such as are members of the fire department. However, this inference is dispelled by a consideration of the immediate context which provides that the amount to be received from such persons "shall be deducted from his monthly pay."

On the whole, then, I can find no authority for participation by volunteer firemen in the regular firemen's pension fund. Nor do I find any authority vested in council to create a pension fund other than that provided for in the statutes. Such authority is inconsistent with all principles of statutory construction. Having prescribed in detail the kinds of firemen's pension funds which council may provide for, it necessarily follows that the legislature did not extend authority to council to provide for some other kind of pension fund.

In conclusion permit me to suggest that the matter is one you should submit to the legislature. They have the power to make right any wrongs done your association; while I have not such power. My duty is confined to an interpretation of the statutes as I find them; and the same is true of your worthy city solicitor, Mr. Schreiber. I am quite sure that he feels about it as I do; but neither of us are permitted to do violence to the law working out its interpretation.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BUILDING CODE—FIRE DOORS REQUIRED—EXCEPTIONS OF SPECIAL PROVISIONS TO GENERAL PROVISIONS—STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

The fact that certain sections of the building code provide for specified fire doors and that a section further on states that doors of a different variety may be used, under special circumstances, designated therein, does not necessarily invalidate either the one or the other of said sections.

The general provisions of a statute may be departed from and exception made thereto by the special provisions of the same act or of another act relative to the same subject.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 16, 1912.

HON. THOMAS P. KEARNS, President Ohio State Building Code Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of January 2nd, you submit the following question:

> "Part 3, Title 3, Section 5 of the Ohio building code states that standard fire doors shall be constructed in a certain manner. Under same part, same title and Section 13, the code states that a different or special standard door may be used under certain conditions.
> "The questions at issue are these, viz., does the word may as herein used conflict with the word shall and does the use of either or both of these words invalidate either or both above sections referred to?"

Title 3 of part 3 refers to "standard fire doors," Section 1 providing the number of doors and where used; Section 2 making a provision regarding "opening in walls for standard fire doors;" Section 3 detailing the character of "door sills for standard fire doors," and Section 4 providing for "lintels over standard fire doors." Section 5 details the "construction of standard fire doors."

There is no question but that the legislature intended that the requirements as set forth in the last named section should be complied with in the construction of standard fire doors.

Section 13 provides for "special standard fire doors," and reads as follows:

> "In the finished parts of the building where standard fire doors are required and where such doors are used to enclose elevators, stairways, or to subdivide a building of one kind of occupancy into smaller floor area, special standard fire doors constructed and equipped as follows may be used in place of standard fire doors previously prescribed.
> "In the finished parts of the building where double fire doors are required or where doors are placed on both sides of the walls, a standard automatic fire door or a standard roller steel shutter shall be used on one side of the wall, and a special standard fire door may be used on the other side in place of standard fire doors previously described.
> "(Then follows in detail the manner, kind and character of construction allowed in the special standard fire doors.)"

It is readily apparent that the provisions of Sections 1 to 5, supra are the general provisions, while the provision found in Section 13 is an exception to the general provision. Under the rules of statutory construction there is no question but that the later exception, while it prevails in the particular instances, as provided in the exception, does not in any way invalidate the general rule which applies in all instances other than as provided in the exception.

It is so axiomatic that there is hardly any necessity of quoting authority that the general provisions of a statute may be varied by the special provisions of the same or another statute relative to the subject.

> "The courts presume an intention in the legislature to be consistent in the making of laws; and also to have had a purpose in each enactment and all its provisions, special circumstances often create a necessity for appropriate special provisions, differing from the general rule upon the same subject; and so, where such provisions are found in a statute, different from the general provisions that would apply to the case, the courts must assume that the special provisions were made for adequate reasons, and give them effect by construing them as exceptions to the general rule contained in the general provision of the statute. In this way, without disregarding any of its provisions, effect is given to each and all the provisions of a statute. Potter's Dwarris, 272; Sedgwick Stat. Law 423.
> "State ex rel Crawford vs. McGregor, 44 O. S. 631."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that Section 13 is the exception to the general rule provided in the other Sections, 1 to 5 of part 3, title 3 of the Ohio building code, and should be read together, each section given full effect, and that there is no conflict between the several provisions, but that the provisions of Section 13 are to be regarded as the exception.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

JUVENILE COURT—POWER TO EMPLOY REGULAR PHYSICIAN.

If, in the judgment of the judge exercising the juvenile jurisdiction, the regular employment of one or more physicians for the purpose of examining those alleged to be juvenile delinquents or indigent persons and brought into court as such, would be of less expense to the county than the calling of such physicians as witness in separate cases and the taxing of ordinary witness fees in their favor, the court may under Section 1682, General Code properly employ such physicians regularly and certify their compensation to the county treasurer as an incidental expense of the court.

In as much as no mention of such physicians is made in the juvenile act, they are not officers of court nor is their selection an "appointment."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 16, 1912.

HON. SAMUEL L. BLACK, Probate Judge, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 1, 1911, wherein you request my opinion as to the power of the judge exercising the juvenile jurisdiction to appoint physicians to examine children brought into juvenile court, as to contagious and infectious diseases.

You point out that it would be much less expensive to the county for physicians to be employed than to be called in separate cases, and their witness fees taxed as costs.

You refer to an opinion said to have been rendered by this department, in which you understand that is was held that such physicians might be regularly appointed. No such opinion has been, in point of fact, rendered. The opinion which was actually rendered was that it is proper for the juvenile court, or any court committing to the girls' industrial home or boys' industrial school, to require the testimony of medical witnesses as to the physical condition of children proposed to be committed to these institutions, but that it is not proper to pay so-called expert witness fees to such witnesses.

Section 1682, General Code, provides that,

> "Fees and costs in all such cases with such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers, and the costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge of the court."

Section 1683, General Code, provides that,

> "This chapter shall be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child * * *."

I am of the opinion that if, in the judgment of the judge exercising the juvenile jurisdiction, the regular employment of one or more physicians for the purpose of examining those alleged to be juvenile delinquents or indigent persons and brought into court as such, would be of less expense to the county, than, the calling of such physicians as witnesses in separate cases, and the taxing of ordinary witness fees in their favor in such cases, the court may properly employ such physicians regularly and certify their compensation to the county treasurer as an incidental expense of the court.

Inasmuch as no mention of such physicians is made in the juvenile act they are not to be regarded as officers of the court, nor is their selection to be regarded as in the nature of an "appointment."

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

DETENTION HOME—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO ESTABLISH—LEASE OR PURCHASE—NECESSITY FOR VOTE OF ELECTORS.

The county commissioners have authority under Section 2434, General Code to purchase land to establish a detention home without the vote of the electors within the limitations of this section and also those of Section 5638 General Code.

The commissioners may lease a building to be used as a detention home under ample authority without the vote of the electors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 24, 1912.

HON. DAVID F. GRIFFITH, Probate Judge, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 15th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "Have the county commissioners the authority to establish a detention home, either by purchase or lease, without first submitting the question to a vote of the people?"

You cite me, as bearing upon this question, the provision of Sections 1670 and 1671, General Code, which, in effect, authorize the county commissioners upon the recommendation of the judge exercising the juvenile jurisdiction, to provide by purchase or lease a detention home in connection with the juvenile court. You also cite Sections 2433 and 2434, General Code, as amended 102 O. L., 54. Section 2433 authorizes the county commissioners to purchase a site for a detention home.

Section 2434, as amended by said act, contains the following proviso:

> "Provided, that if the judge designated to transact the business arising under the jurisdiction provided for in Section 1639 of the General Code of the state of Ohio, shall advise and recommend in writing to the county commissioners of any county the purchase of land for and the erection of a place to be known as a detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home, the commissioners without first submitting the question to the vote of the county may levy a tax for either or both of such purposes in an amount not to exceed in any one year two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property on the tax duplicate of said county."

Without this proviso the acquisition of land as a site for a detention home, or the purchase of a building for such purpose, would, in my opinion, have been subject to Section 5638, General Code and the succeeding sections which provide, in effect, that the commissioners shall not appropriate any money for such purposes when the total expense thereby to be incurred exceeds fifteen thousand dollars, without submitting the question as to the policy thereof to a vote of the electors.

The related sections are, in my opinion, to be construed as follows: Land as a site for a detention home may be purchased, or a building may be purchased for that purpose if the cost of the transaction exceeds fifteen thousand dollars but does not exceed an amount equal to two-tenths of one mill of every dollar of taxable property on the tax duplicate of the county, without submitting the policy thereof to a vote of the electors. If, however, the amount to be expended in such a transaction exceeds both the fifteen thousand dollars mentioned in Section 5638, General Code, and the amount equal to two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property on the tax duplicate, then the commissioners may not establish a detention home in this manner without a vote of the people. If, however, the sum of fifteen thousand dollars is greater in amount than a sum equal to two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property on the county duplicate, then, in my opinion, the fifteen thousand dollar limit would apply, and in a county having such a duplicate, a building could be purchased or a site could be acquired by purchase at a cost greater than two-tenths of one mill for every dollar on the tax duplicate and less than fifteen thousand dollars. In other words, the purpose of the proviso of Section 2434, General Code, does not seem to create a new limitation in place of fifteen thousand dollars, but rather to remove that limitation only in cases in which it would prevent the commissioners from proceeding with respect to a detention home without a vote of the people. Stated in a word—whichever of those two limitations is the greater, governs. These conclusions follow from the fact that there is no procedure in Section 2434, General Code, or in any directly related sections, for submitting such questions to popular vote, hence this proviso must be regarded as a special case under Section 5638, General Code.

If the judge and the commissioners desire merely to lease a building to be used as a detention home, the commissioners have ample authority in the premises without a vote of the electors.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

NEWSPAPERS OF GENERAL CIRCULATION—PUBLICATION OF APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATORS AND EXECUTORS—CATHOLIC COLUMBIAN.

Although devoted primarily to the propagation of religion, the Catholic Columbian is a paper devoted to the dissemination of news of a general character and its circulation is sufficiently wide to bring it within the category of "newspapers of a general circulation." The paper is therefore, a lawful vehicle for the publication of legal advertisements of the appointments of administrators and executors, under Section 10712 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1912.

HON. SAMUEL L. BLACK, Judge of Probate Court of Franklin County, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of March 9, 1912, you advise as follows:

> "We are in receipt of a communication from James T. Carroll, manager of The Catholic Columbian, a newspaper printed in this city, soliciting legal advertisements of the appointments of administrators and executors, as required under Section 10712.
>
> "Mr. Carroll states that the Columbian has a circulation reaching fifty thousand readers, a great many of these being non-catholics. That business men, regardless of religion, are advertising in his paper, and the Catholic Columbian, from a legal point is a newspaper of 'general circulation' and entitled to publish legal notices and advertisements.
>
> "As the title of real estate would be affected if appointments were published in the Catholic Columbian, and it should afterwards be held as not a paper of 'general circulation,' we will kindly ask you to give us an opinion in the matter at your earliest convenience."

Section 10712 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Within three months after giving bond for the discharge of his trust, every executor or administrator must cause notice of his appointment to be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the county, in which the letters were issued, for three consecutive weeks."

The questions to be determined, therefore, are 1st. Is the Catholic Columbian a newspaper? 2nd. If it be a newspaper, has it "general circulation" within contemplation of law?

The supreme court of Nebraska in the case of Hanscom vs. Meyer, 48 L. R. A., 409, throws light upon what is a newspaper, the first syllabus of that case being:

> "Evidence examined, and found that the Omaha Mercury is a weekly publication, circulating among various classes of people within the county and state; that its printed matter consists principally of legal notices and information regarding the courts, and of legal matters in general, and also advertising of a miscellaneous character, literature of a general kind, and a limited amount of general news of current events.
> "Held, that such publication is a newspaper within the meaning of Section 497 of the code of civil procedure; that the fact that it also makes a speciality of some particular class of business and conveys intelligence of particular interest to those engaged in such business, will not thereby deprive it of its general classification as a newspaper, within the meaning of the statute."

The supreme court of Indiana in the case of Lynn vs. Allen, found in 33 L. R. A., 779, held:

> "A daily journal having a circulation of about 3,000 copies among judges, lawyers, bankers, collection and commercial agenices, real estate dealers, merchants, and other professional and business men, and kept on sale at public news stands, although devoted primarily to legal matters, but publishing proceedings of the board of public works and a complete record of deeds filed in the recorder's office, as well as mortgages, mechanics' and other liens, assessments and sheriffs' sales of real estate, together with the quotations of local securities, railroad timetables, and having one or more columns devoted to the general news of the day, is a 'newspaper of general circulation' within the meaning of Rev. Stat. 1894, Sections 320, 1296, relating to the publication of legal notices."

I find that the following from the case of Lynch vs. Durfee in the supreme court of Michigan, 24 L. R. A., 793, is pertinent:

"A weekly journal devoted primarily to the interests of the legal profession, but containing matters of interest to the general public, such as personal items, notices of passing events, a record of property transfers and mortgages, and general trade advertisements, and having bankers, brokers, real estate agents, merchants and business men, as well as judges and lawyers among its subscribers, is a newspaper within the Michigan statutes providing for publication of legal notices in a newspaper."

I find another opinion of interest from the supreme court of Nebraska, 17 L. R. A., 821, whereof the second syllabus is as follows:

"It is not necessary that the newspaper circulate to any considerable extent, if at all, out of the state, or that it circulate in every county of the state, but it must extend beyond the county in which it is published, and have a general circulation."

The principles of law laid down in the foregoing cases apply in my judgment, to the matter at hand. The courts referred to give ample light for answer to your inquiry as measured by the publication to which you refer. However, the courts of this state have spoken on the subject. The syllabus in the case of Bigalke vs. Bigalke, 19 O. C. C. Reports, 331, is as follows:

"'The Cleveland Daily Record'" although principally devoted to news of a legal character, is a 'newspaper' within the meaning of Section 5050, R. S., and the publication therein of legal notices, required by law to be published in a newspaper, is a compliance with the law."

And in this case, Judge Caldwell, speaking for the court, quotes Judge Wade on the "Law of Notices," Section 1066, as follows:

"What is a newspaper? In order to fulfill the terms of the law, the notice must be directed, by the court or officer, to be inserted, for the statutory time, in some paper printed and circulated for the dissemination of news; but it is not essential that, to answer the description, the paper shall be devoted to the dissemination of news of a general character. It may, with equal propriety, be published in a paper devoted exclusively to the discussion of religion, legal, commercial or scientific topics, and the diffusion of knowledge touching special matters within its limited sphere, as in a public journal, the columns of which are open to news of a general character. It may be a religious newspaper, a commercial newspaper, a legal newspaper, or a scientific newspaper, or a political newspaper."

I am personally familiar with the Catholic Columbian, having read it weekly for a quarter of a century, and I casually picked up the issue of May 17th to note somewhat definitely the character of the publication. Therein is to be found contributions from a regular correspondent, who writes on general subjects, and among them a discussion of the attorney general's opinion on the Kimble corrupt practices act; news about the state conclave of the Knights of Columbus; news from the national capital in relation to the United States army; reference to the conferring of medals by educational institutions; an article on the future of China; and an article on labor and Memorial day; and article concerning James Boyle's book on Socialism; an industrial page covering a multitude of subjects; an article concerning books; a column from Cincinnati entirely devoted to current news items; an announcement of Mr. Brumbaugh's candidacy for congress from the 12th district; likewise one from Mr. Mulby, candidate for county commissioner; one from Mr. Williams candidate for sheriff, in the form of a news item; article concerning the present campaign in reference to women's suffrage; a news column devoted exclusively to current local news items; comments and incidents in relation to the bond issue voted upon at the recent primaries; an account of a trip down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers in pioneer days; and numerous items of news scattered throughout the paper; much historical matter, much of a philosophical nature, the origin of Arbor day, and advertisements of all kinds from banks, ice cream parlors, trust companies, lumber companies, health resorts, brokers, undertaking establishments, real estate concerns, notices of meetings of stockholders of realty companies, one signed by George T. Spahr and Daniel H. Sowers, distinguished attorney of the city as attorney, advertisements from shoe stores, furniture stores, etc.

Indeed, the paper seems to be a first-class weekly advertising medium. I have given you only a few of the items contained in the paper. It is likewise the practice of the paper at stated periods, either semi-yearly or yearly, I do not know which, to give a resume of all the important events in our country, political, religious, social and industrial. It also gives news of nominations of candidates, state, national and local.

The decisions quoted disclose that a paper is no less a newspaper because it may be devoted primarily to the propagation of religion, and this appears clear from the decision of the Ohio court quoted.

I do not deem it necessary to say more on this, but I am clearly of the opinion that the paper is a newspaper.

Upon the second proposition, has it general circulation. I will say that the circulation of the paper, I am told, reaches several thousand subscribers in Franklin county, a circulation that is not limited to any class either religious or political, the same being among business men, lawyers, court officials, state officials and people in all walks of life. At this point I will quote that third syllabus of the case of State ex rel. Sentinel Company vs. Wood Co., (Comrs.) in the 6th circuit court of Ohio, found in The Ohio Law Bulletin of March 11, 1912, at page 93:

"A newspaper of 800 circulation in county of 50,000 with but sixteen in part of county containing 35,000 inhabitants is of general circulation. A newspaper having a circulation of about 800 subscribers in a country of about 50,000 inhabitants, in fifteen of the twenty townships of which it had a circulation of thirty-six subscribers out of a population of > 35,000 or more, and the remainder of its circulation being in a part of the county containing the other five townships, is a paper of general circulation within the meaning of General Code, Section 2508."

The Catholic Columbian circulates extensively in the city of Columbus, in all parts of the city, and throughout the townships and municipalities of Franklin county. In addition to this, the paper has a very wide circulation for a weekly paper in all the cities of the state, and there is perhaps not a county in the state in which the paper has not some readers, and it likewise circulates extensively in the various states of the Union. Its exchange list is also very large in the county, state and country. The subscription to the paper is $2.00 per year, payable in advance.

Without going further into detail, I have no doubt whatever about its being one of general circulation.

As to the selection of a newspaper for advertising sheriffs' sales, I will quote from the 3rd syllabus of the case of Augustus vs. Lynd et al., 7th Ohio N. P. Reports, 473, which is of interest:

> "The statute making it the duty of the sheriff to give public notice of the time and the place of sale in a newspaper; and he may select any paper he pleased, subject only to the statutory requirement that the paper so selected be one printed and of general circulation in the county."

The same principle that applies to the sheriff in reference to the selection of a newspaper would apply to the probate judge.

I might say in addition to what is heretofore stated, that the Columbian frequently carries legal advertisements inserted by careful and competent attorneys, residents of Columbus, who understand the character of the paper and the extent of its circulation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

"COSTS"—PARTY LOSING IN APPEAL TO PROBATE COURT UPON AWARD OF DAMAGES BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR ALTERATION OF ROAD—JURY FEES AND MILEAGE PAYABLE FROM COUNTY TREASURY.

The term "all costs," as employed in Section 7085 of the General Code providing for the payment of the same by a party who appeals to probate court upon an allowance of damages by the county commissioners, when such party fails to obtain a greater award upon such appeal, does not include the fees and mileage of the jury. These are to be paid from the county treasury as provided in Section 3008 of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 26, 1912.

HON. A. L. SMITH, Probate Judge, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of July 19, 1912, is received, in which you inquire:

"I have before me an appeal from the county commisioners, for the allowance of compensation and damages for alteration of county road.

"The appeal bond was given, transcript duly filed, jury drawn, etc., proceedings all regular. In a county road appeal of this kind should the jury fees and mileage be taxed as a part of the costs and adjudged against the loosing party, or should said fees and mileage be paid by the county under the general law relating to juries?"

Section 7085, General Code, provides for the taxing of costs in appeals for compensation and damages on account of the alteration of a county road, as follows:

"If by the final decision in the probate court, a claimant of compensation and damages does not obtain a greater sum than was awarded to him, by the order of the commissioners or township trustees from which he appealed, he shall pay all costs created by his appeal, so far as the court can ascertain them, and judgment shall be rendered against him therefor. In cases not hereinbefore specially provided for, the court shall give such judgment in respect to costs as is equitable, and the county commissioners may pay out of the county treasury any part, or all, of any costs that may be adjudged against defendants if in their opinion the public utility and the justice of the case justifies it."

The question to be determined is, does the term "all costs created by the appeal" include the fees and mileage of the jurors?

Section 7080, General Code, provides:

"Upon such appeal, whether joint or several, the probate court shall confine itself to the questions of compensation and damages presented by it, and, after the docketing thereof, shall forthwith cause a jury of twelve men to be selected and returned by the sheriff and clerk of the county, as provided by law. After receiving the names of such jurors, the court shall issue a venire commanding them to appear in court, on a day and hour named in the venire, which shall not be later than the twentieth day from its date, to serve as jurors upon the trial of such claims."

Section 7094, General Code, provides:

"For their services required by this chapter, the officers herein mentioned shall be entitled to the fees which they are entitled to by law for like services in other cases. The persons appointed to show premises to a jury shall receive such compensation, to be taxed in the cost bill, as the court directs."

Section 3008, General Code, provides for the fees and mileage of grand and petit jurors and that the same shall be paid by the county treasurer, as follows:

"Each grand or petit juror drawn from the jury box pursuant to law, each juror selected by the court as talesman as provided by law, and each talesman, shall receive two dollars for each day of service, and if not a talesman, five cents each mile from his place of residence to the county seat. Such compensation shall be certified by the clerk of the court and paid by the county treasurer on the warrant of the county auditor."

Section 11204, General Code, provides:

> "The fees of witnesses, jurors, sheriffs, coroners and constables, for all services rendered in the probate court, or by order of the probate judge, shall be the same as provided by law, for like services in the court of common pleas."

In case of State vs. Board of Commissioners, 7 Cir. Dec. (14 C. C. R. 26), it is held:

> "The word "costs" has long had a legal signification, and in Ohio it covers only those expenditures in a suit which by law are taxable, and to be included in the judgment therein.
> "Under the law of this state, the fees of persons summoned as jurors in criminal cases, whether used on the trial or discharged, are not taxable as costs against a party convicted of an offense.
> "This term, as used in Section 7264 Revised Statutes which provides for a change of venue in criminal trials, and for the re-imbursement of the county to which a case is thus sent, for "costs accruing" from such change, must be read as having its usual legal import. Therefore, L. being indicted in M. county for murder, the venue changed to G. county, where the case was tried, and he convicted of manslaughter; held, that the latter county is not entitled to recover from the former, fees it was compelled to pay to persons summoned as jurors in the case, notwithstanding they were necessarily and properly called for such service."

The term "costs accruing" as used in the statute under consideration therein was held not to include the fees of the jurors. The theory of the court is that the term "cost" does not include all the expenses of a proceeding.

The foregoing case is referred to by Spear, J., in case of Thurlow vs. Board of Commissioners, 81 Ohio St. 447, on page 449, where he says:

> "The matter of jury fees was involved in State ex rel. vs Board of Commissioners, 14 O. C. C. 26, and it was held by the circuit court, opinion by Sibley, J., that the costs in such case which the county where the indictment was found has to pay do not include expenses incurred for securing a jury to try the case.

The provisions of the statute under consideration in 7 Cir. Dec. 351, supra, are not substantially different from the provisions of Section 7085, General Code, now under consideration as to the payment of the costs. The statute as to the payment of costs on a change of venue in a criminal case has now been amended so as to specifically include the fees of the jury as shown by Section 13638, General Code, which reads:

> "The cost accruing from a change of venue, including the compensation of the attorneys so appointed, the reasonable expense of the prosecuting attorney incurred in consequence of the change of venue, the fees of such clerk and the sheriff, and the fees of the jury sitting in the trial of the case in the court of the county to which the venue is changed, shall be allowed and paid by the commissioners of the county in which such indictment was found."

In proceedings in the common pleas court the fees of jurors are not taxable as costs against the parties. the statutes in reference to appeals of the kind now in question do not specifically provide that the fees of the jurors shall be taxable as costs. Without such specific provision the rule will be the same as in the common pleas court.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the term "all costs" as used in Section 7085, General Code, does not include the fees and mileage of the jury. These are to be paid from the county treasury as provided in Section 3008, General Code.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CRIMINAL JURISDICTION OVER UNNATURALIZED CITIZENS—POWERS OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEY AND ATTORNEY GENERAL.

When one unnaturalized citizen who has killed another unnaturalized citizen, has been indicted in Ohio, for murder in the first degree, the prosecuting attorney has ample authority to prosecute the case and to hire assistants for that purpose.

The attorney general is not authorized to lend assistance in such case except upon the written request of the governor..

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 5, 1912.

HON. WILLIAM T. DEVOR, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, Ashland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 19, 1912, in which you say that

> "Two men indicted for murder in the first degree are now confined in our county jail and they have entered a plea of 'not guilty' to said indictments. They are charged with having killed one Martin Sxabol, a Hungarian, and the two indicted men are also Hungarians and not citizens of the United States. What I would like to know is, whether the state of Ohio is required to bear the expense of the prosecution of these men?
> "Also, would the state furnish an assistant to aid the prosecuting attorney in prosecuting said defendants without any expense to Ashland county?"

and in reply to your first inquiry I desire to say that I have given this matter careful consideration and I can see no reason why any person regularly indicted for the heinous crime of murder in any county of this state could escape trial under the said indictments on the ground that they were of foreign birth and had not become naturalized citizens of the United States, as under the law, not only federal but state prosecutions for crime are not exempt on account of said parties committing the same, or accused of committing said crime with which they are charged, being foreigners.

It is the policy of our laws that all persons accused of the crime should be tried therefor and under our constitution, the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate and justice shall be administered without denial or delay. And the law relating to the trial of those accused of the commission of a felony in this state guarantee the things above referred to to each such person, and the state has provided under Section 13618 that if the prisoner under indictment is indigent the court shall appoint counsel to defend him, and I know of no federal or state law, and I am unable to find any, which would hold any foreign government liable to the state of Ohio for re-imbursement thereto for the necessary expenses incurred in the trial of the parties you say are indicted in Ashland county for murder in the first degree.

As to your second question, I desire to say that Section 333 provides that the attorney general shall be the chief law officer for the state and all its departments, that he shall appear for the state in the trial and argument for all civil and criminal cases in the supreme court in which the state may be directly or indirectly interested; and when required by the governor or the general assembly he shall appear for the state in any court or tribunal in a cause in which the state is a party or in which the state is directly interested. Upon the written request of the governor, he shall prosecute any person indicted for crime.

The section of the General Code above referred to very clearly defines the powers and duties of the attorney general in relation to the question you ask as to the attorney general's assisting in the prosecuting the parties indicted for murder in Ashland county without any expense to said county, and only in cases where the written request of the governor has been made of the attorney general shall he prosecute any person indicted for a crime, and the governor not having requested my assistance in the matter referred to in your letter, I will have to refuse to assist the prosecutor, as our appropriations are limited and our duties are so arduous and many that it would be almost an impossibility to assist the respective prosecutors of the state in the conducting of criminal trials in the respective counties which they represent.

I would suggest to you that you have ample authority under the statutes to employ assistants for your prosecutor in such grave matters as prosecuting any person or persons charged with murder in the first degree, and think that a matter of expense to the county should not interfere with justice being honestly and speedily administered.

Regretting very much that I am unable to give you any further assistance than the suggestions above stated, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SUSPENSION OF EXECUTION OF SENTENCE—POWERS OF COURT IN MISDEMEANOR AND FELONY CASES—DUTIES OF SHERIFF AND CLERK INDIVISIBLE.

The common pleas court upon a plea or verdict of guilty in a felony case, may not sentence the defendant to the penitentiary for a term of years and in the same judgment suspend the execution thereof as to a part of the term of years.

The power of a court to suspend execution of a sentence extends only to the natural subdivisions of the same. The statutes provide separate and entire duties with respect to the sheriff and clerk in the execution of fine and costs or of imprisonment or sentence to the penitentiary. These duties are each indivisible and may not be commanded in part or restrained in part.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1912.

HON. ALBION Z. BLAIR, Judge Common Pleas Court, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 30, 1912, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "May the common pleas court upon a plea or verdict of guilty in a felony case sentence the defendant to the penitentiary for a term of years, and in the same judgment suspend the execution thereof as apart of the term of years? If not to what extent does the power to suspend execution of sentence exist?"

In the case of Webber vs. State, 58 O. S. 616 it was held in the language of the syllabus that,

> "In a criminal case the court has the power to suspend the execution of the sentence in whole or in part unless otherwise provided by statute; and has power to set aside such suspension at any time during the term of court at which sentence was passed."

The facts of this case need not be analyzed further than to state that the suspension of sentence referred to in the syllabus thereof was of the jail part of a sentence consisting of a fine, costs and imprisonment in jail for a number of days. When the court then used the language "in whole or in part" in its syllabus it is apparent that it did not necessarily have in mind the separation of a sentence for the purpose of suspension of the execution thereof excepting into its natural elements, so to speak; that is to say, the part suspension which the court had in mind was the suspension of the whole term of imprisonment as a part of the entire sentence which consisted of fine and costs in addition thereto.

This case then is not authority in support of an affirmative answer to the first branch of your question. I have sought for adjudications upon this question but without success. The consideration which I have given to the question has induced me, however, to reach a negative conclusion thereon. My reasons for such a conclusion are as follows:

Section 13720 provides in part as follows:

> "A person sentenced to the penitentiary * * * shall be conveyed to the penitentiary * * * by the sheriff * * * and delivered into the custody of the warden * * * with a copy of such sentence there to be kept until the term of his imprisonment expires or he is pardoned * * *."

Section 13722 General Code provides that:

> "Upon sentence of a person for felony * * * the clerk * * * shall make and certify * * * a complete bill of the costs * * *."

Section 13723 provides that:

> "The clerk shall forthwith issue to the sheriff * * * executions against his property for the costs of prosecution * * *."

The execution of the sentence of the court, as I understand it, consists of the two acts described and provided for in these three sections. If the execution of the imprisonment part of the sentence be suspended, the sheriff will not proceed to discharge his duty under the section, and if that of the costs be suspended the same would be true of the clerk and sheriff under the other provisions quoted. The duty of the sheriff is indivisible; that of the clerk likewise. It consists merely of the performance of a ministerial act. It may be commanded or restrained; but it cannot be commanded in part and restrained in part.

In the case of a misdemeanor there might be, of course three separate acts necessary to execute a sentence. The sheriff would be obliged under one branch of the sentence to convey the prisoner to jail, under another branch to levy upon his property or body for the fine and under still another to take similar action to secure the costs of the prosecution. The sheriff may be commanded to do or not to do any one of these acts, but he may not be ordered to collect a certain part only, say, of the costs adjudged or to levy for a portion only of the fine imposed, or to convey to the county jail and there keep the prisoner for ten or twenty days.

The foregoing reasons are sufficient to my mind for the conclusion which I have reached. I forbear to discuss the bearing upon the question of the parole statutes which seem to impose upon what is now the board of administration a function practically the same as that which would be assumed by the court if it had the power referred to in the first branch of your question. This might be an additional reason for holding that the power to order the release of a prisoner sentenced for a certain term of years before the expiration of that term under suspension of sentence as to the remainder, is not a judicial power. I mention this possible argument, and do not dwell upon it further, not because I do not believe it valid but because the reasons I have already suggested are, in my opinion, sufficient for the conclusion I have reached.

It is then my opinion that a common pleas court may not lawfully adjudge in its sentence in a felony case that the prisoner shall be confined in the penitentiary for a term of years but shall be released before the term of years expires and the sentense be considered suspended for the remainder of the term.

The discussion in which I have indulged myself has doubtless already suggested to you the answer to the second branch of your question which I believe to be correct. I content myself, therefore, with a simple statement of it.

In my opinion the common pleas court, in common with other courts of criminal jurisdiction has the power to suspend the execution of any single act required in order to carry its sentence into effect; and if the sentence is such as would require the performance of more than one separate and distinct duty by the executive officer charged with its execution, the sentence which would otherwise set such officer in motion, so to speak, in each of the respects in which he would be required under the sentence to act, may be suspended as to one or more of those acts; but the court may not direct the performance of any of the acts enjoined upon the executive officer in a manner different from that prescribed by the sentence and by the law authorizing the rendition thereof. That is to say, it is my opinion that the court may lawfully suspend the imprisonment part of a sentence consisting of imprisonment, fine and costs or of imprisonment and costs, or may suspend the imprisonment and fine, parts of a sentence consisting of imprisonment, fine and costs but may not further sub-divide its sentence for the purpose of suspension of any part thereof.

I am sure I have not misunderstand the object of your inquiry. I take it that it will be understood that I have been speaking of the suspension of the execution of the sentence in whole or in part and not of the revision, revocation or alteration of a sentence by a court of record during the term at which a sentence was pronounced. This matter, of course, is quite separate and distinct from that which I have been discussing.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WARRANT LOST OR DESTROYED—DUPLICATE MAY NOT BE ISSUED WITHOUT LEGISLATIVE ACTION.

When a warrant upon the county treasury for an officer's salary has been lost or destroyed, a duplicate may not be issued by the auditor without an express authorization of the legislature.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1912.

HON. HARVEY R. KEELER, Judge Common Pleas Court, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of June 7th, you requested the opinion of this office as follows:

> "A warrant for my salary due from the state for the month of May, 1912, was mailed to me from the office of the auditor of state at Columbus nearly two weeks ago. It has not yet reached me, and I suspect that the same has been stolen and either cashed or destroyed. Mr. Beatty, deputy auditor of state, informs me, in a letter of June 6th, that there is no law that would authorize the department to issue a duplicate without warrant from the general assembly. As you may well see, this would put me to great inconvenience, delay and some considerable expense. I do not know that you have ever heretofore had a like matter before you, but it strikes me as singular that a duplicate cannot be issued upon sufficient affidavits, etc. Should the original warrant ever reach me after its travels about the earth, and after a duplicate had been received, I would of course return the same to the state.
> "May I ask you to look into this matter and advise me, and also the department of the auditor of state, as I am greatly inconvenienced by this delay."

It has been the universal practice, when a warrant has been lost or destroyed, to require an express authorization of the legislature for the issuance of a duplicate warrant. As examples of this practice, permit me to point to the act of 102 O. L. p. 298 which follows:

> "Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the state of Ohio:
> "Section 1. That the auditor of state is hereby authorized to issue duplicate warrants on the state treasury, as follows, the originals of which have been lost or destroyed:
> "Warrant No. 20789 favor of Captain Charles E. Frye, series 1910, for $85.00.
> "Warrant No. 17355 favor of F. M. McCleary, series of 1910, for $1.90.
> "Warrant No. 16980 favor of Central District and Printing Telegraph Company, series 1910, for $26.65."

There are to be found no statutory provisions authorizing the auditor of state to issue such warrants without legislative action. There is, furthermore, a complete omission in the statutes of any authorization of duties on the part of the auditor which would be necessary as safe-guards in such proceedure by way of the requirement of affidavits and other securities against a possible re-appearance of the missing warrant.

In the absence of statutory authorization, therefore, and particularly in view of the action which the legislature has universally taken in these cases, there can be no doubt of the legislative intent to exclude from the auditor, the exercise of this important power which, without question, would be liable to abuse without statutory safe-guarding obligations.

I realize, with regret, the hardship which this holding fails to alleviate, but cannot, in the nature of things, come to a different conclusion.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ANNUAL REPORT—JUVENILE COURT MAY NOT PUBLISH.

There is no authorization in law for the publication of an annual report by the juvenile court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 2. 1912.

HON. GEORGE S. ADAMS, Judge of the Juvenile Court, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication in which you submit for my opinion the following:

> "In common with other courts throughout the state, we are desirous of publishing an annual report of the work of the juvenile court. We presented the matter to the county commissioners and they desire a ruling from you as to whether or not there is warrant in law for the expenditure of funds for the same."

In reply I desire to say that after a careful and extended review of the statutes, I am of the opinion that the county commissioners are without power to authorize the expenditure of funds for the purpose of publishing such report as referred to in your letter, and be made a charge against the state or the county. I can find no power expressly granted by the statutes authorizing any judge of the juvenile court to publish an annual report of the work of such court, and you are familiar with the rule laid down in Doan et al. vs. Biteley, 49 O. S., 588, to the effect that the powers of the court are those expressly granted and such as are necessary to carry them into effect. I cannot reach any other conclusion, therefore, as to the power of the juvenile judges to order the publishing referred to in your letter for the reason that it is not expressly conferred upon this court, and it is not of such a nature as may be deemed necessary to carry existing powers of such court into effect.

Coming to the question of the power of the county commissioners in this connection, there is presented a question of some difficulty. The problem becomes difficult in view of the principle that the statutes conferring powers upon the officers must be strictly construed to the end that no functions are permitted which are not authorized or directed by necessary implication. The only measure which seems material is Section 6252 of the General Code providing generally for the publications of the county. That section is as follows:

> "A proclamation for an election, an order fixing the time of holding court, notice of the rates of taxation, bridge and pike notices, notice to contractors and such other advertisements of general interest to the taxpayers as the auditor, treasurer, probate court or commissioners may deem proper, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics at the county seat, if there be such newspapers published thereat. In counties having cities of eight thousand inhabitants or more, not the county seat of such counties, additional publication of such notices shall be made in two newspapers of opposite politics in such city. This chapter shall not apply to the publication of notices of delinquent tax and forfeited land sales."

Under the above quoted section, all the notices, orders, etc., provided for therein have an element of notice in their intendment to get them before the public, but the report of the juvenile court referred to in your letter does not, in my opinion, come within that class specified in the said section authorizing the county commissioners and other officers to publish the same.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the authorization of Section 5252 of the General Code does not extend to the publication of the annual report of the juvenile court proceedings, and there being no legislative provision for the publishing of the annual report is indicative of the intent that none should be published.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(To the Justice of the Peace)

JUSTICE OF PEACE—TERM OF OFFICE—VACANCY—CONSTITUTIONAL LAW—DE JURE AND DE FACTO OFFICER.

By virtue of Article 17, Section 2 of the constitution, a justice of the peace may not be authorized by statute to hold office for a longer term than four years nor when a vacancy occurs in such office, can the appointee to the same be authorized by statute to hold longer than the unexpired term of the officer whose place he fills.

As regards an officer, however, at the expiration of whose term no provision is made for a successor either by election or appointment, the above rule simply means that, that said officer under an established rule of public policy, holds by sufferance, not only as a de facto officer but as a de jure officer, as against all except persons holding evidence of proper election or appointment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 19, 1912.

HON. A. A. DAPPER, Justice of the Peace, Crestline, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Some weeks ago this office was in receipt of a file of correspondence which had passed between yourself and the governor's office and I have been asked to render an opinion upon the facts disclosed thereby as follows:

> "May one appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace continue to hold beyond the expiration of the term during which he is appointed and until his successor is elected and qualified?"

From the facts disclosed by the correspondence I ascertain that the incumbent in question was appointed to fill out a term which would otherwise have expired on December 31, 1911. That being the case it appears that the term of office of his predecessor must have begun not earlier than January 1, 1908 and that the predecessor took office on January 1, 1910 and elected in the fall of however, that the reference in the letter is to the alleged term of the appointee and that the predecessor took office on January 1, 1910 and was elected in the fall of 1909. These facts are of importance as will become apparent upon further consideration.

Sections 1714 and 1715 General Code provide as follows:

> "Section 1714. If a vacancy occurs in the office of justice of the peace by death, removal, absence for six months, resignation, refusal to serve, or otherwise, the trustees within ten days from receiving notice thereof, by a majority vote, shall appoint a qualified resident of the township to fill such vacancy, who shall serve until the next regular election for justice of the peace, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The trustees shall notify the clerk of the courts of such vacancy and the date when it occurred.
> "Section 1715. At the next regular election for such office, a justice of the peace shall be elected in the manner provided by law, for the the term of four years commencing on the first day of January next following his election."

It is thus seen that it would be possible for the appointment to have been made under Section 1714 as well during the first half of the term of the prior incumbent as during the latter half, so that the "next regular election for justice of the peace" referred to in Section 1714 might have been the election of 1909 or that of 1911. No where in the correspondence do I find any statement of facts on this point.

Sections 1714 and 1715 General Code must de read in connection with Article 17, Section 2 of the constitution, known as the biennial election amendment thereto, which in part provides as follows:

> "The term of office of justice of the peace shall be such even number of, not exceeding four, as may be prescribed by the general assembly * * *.
> "All vacancies in other elective offices (than state offices) shall be filled for the unexpired term in such manner as may be prescribed by law."

In State ex rel. vs. Brewster, 44 O. S. 589, the syllabus which distinctly states the nature of the case and the holding of the court is as follows:

> "1. Where the term of an office is fixed and limited by the constitution, there is no power in the general assembly to extend the term or tenure of such office beyond the time so limited.
> "2. At the October election of 1883 Brewster was elected auditor of Hamilton county for the term of three years, commencing on the second Monday of November next after his election. At the November election of 1886, Raine was elected auditor (pursuant to an amended provision of the constitution and section of statute changing the time of election) for a term of three years, beginning on the second Monday of September next after the election. The constitution provided, both before and after such amendment, that county officers should be elected for such term, not exceeding three years, as may be provided by law. Held, 1. At the expiration of Brewster's term of office, to-wit, on the second Monday of November, 1886, there was a vacancy in such office. 2. Section 8, Revised Statutes, which provides that 'any person holding an office or public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless it is otherwise provided in the constitution or laws,' did not have the effect to continue Brewster in office beyond his term of three years."

This decision has never been over-ruled and remains the law of this state. The following propositions may be deduced from it:

1. Where a term of office is fixed by the constitution a statutory right to continue therein until a successor is elected and qualified is limited to the period fixed by the constitution.

2. Such statutes while enacted in pursuance of a well understood rule of public policy yield the plain language of constitutional provisions.

Applying these principles to the case of a justice of the peace whose tenure of office is limited by Article 17, of the Constitution above quoted, it appears that no person may hold the office of justice of the peace more than four years under one election or appointment; therefore if the predecessor of the person inquired about in your correspondence was elected in November, 1907, and began his office in January, 1908, he could not hold office beyond December 31, 1912, even though no successor to him was elected and qualified in November, 1911. So also if the appointee inquired about in your letter, and who I take it is now assuming to act as justice of the peace, may continue to hold his office beyond January 1, 1912 by virtue of his right to hold until a successor is elected and qualified under Section 1714, he may nevertheless not hold more than four years from the date of his appointment, and at the expiration of that time there would be a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace held by him to be filled by appointment by the township trustees under Section 1714.

Whether or not the person to whom your inquiries relate could continue to hold office beyond December 31, 1911 depends upon the proper construction of Section 2 of Article 17 above quoted as applied to the possible facts as above suggested. That is to say the constitution provides that all vacancies in other elective offices (which includes justices of the peace) shall be filled for the unexpired term in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

The question is here suggested as to whether or not a statute would be constitutional under which one appointed to fill a vacancy in a legislative office might be empowered to continue therein after the expiration of the term of the person whom he was appointed to succeed. If a negative answer be returned to this question then the question of fact as to whether the predecessor of the person inquired about in your letter was elected in 1907 or in 1909 would become important. If he were elected in 1907 his term would have expired on December 31, 1911, and if Article 17, Section 2 be given the construction just suggested the general assembly would be without power to authorize the appointment of a person to fill the vacancy in that office for a period extending beyond December 31, 1911. You will thus understand why I have mooted the question as to the date of the election of the person whom the present incumbent was appointed to succeed.

It is true that Article 17 as a whole must be understood as having been adopted with a view of separating state elections from local elections and with a view to insuring biennial elections in both instances. The language "for the unexpired term" was evidently inserted in Article 17 for the purpose of insuring against the enactment of statutes whereby, because of the occurrence of death or otherwise, an election for an office would be shifted from the even numbered years to the odd numbered years or vice-versa. This was possible under the constitution before it was amended in 1905. Whether or not the framers and adopters of Article 17 intended to do away with continuity in office, which is so much a rule of public policy, by providing against an appointee to fill a vacancy holding beyond the term of office of his predecessor is doubtful, yet such intention can only be ascertained by recourse to the language actually used. The mere fact that this could not have been the primary intent of the electors in the adoption of the article as a whole would not militate against its being a subsidiary intention harmonious with such primary intention.

There is no authority, of course, upon a question of this sort as I do not believe there is another similar constitutional provision in force in the United States. On careful consideration I have come to the conclusion that Article 17, Section 2 means just what it says and that the legislature is without power thereunder to provide for the filling of a vacancy in an office for a period longer than the remainder of the term interruped by the occurrence which occassioned the vacancy.

At to whether or not Sections 1714 and 1715 insofar as they authorize the election of the successor of a justice of the peace at the next regular election for that office occurring after the vacancy takes place and appointment to fill it was made and the choosing thereat of a successor who shall serve the full term of four years are constitutional under the provisions of the organic law just discussed is a question not squarely raised in your letter. Although some of the details of facts which are important in your case are left to the imagination by the correspondence it is at least clear that there has been no attempt to elect a successor before the expiration of the term of the person whose retirement from office occasioned the vacancy. Therefore I do not pass upon the exact application of Article 17, Section 2 of these sections of the General Code. My conclusion is limited to the proposition that an appointee to fill a vacancy in the office of justice of the peace or any other office may not be authorized by statute to hold office until his successor is elected and qualified.

This is quite a different thing from holding that at the expiration of the original term the appointee must give up his office and that all his attempted official acts thereafter are void. It simply means that his right to continue in office as against others holding evidence of appointment or election, is terminated and he continues to hold by sufferance and not as of right. I have already indirectly referred to the rule of public policy which presumes against and will not permit a break in the continuity of public service. This proposition will be found to be fully discussed in Meeshem of Public Officers. It leads to the conclusion that although a public officer's right to hold office may have terminated, yet if the appointing power or the electing power has failed to provide him with a successor he may continue in office as well a dejure officer as a de facto officer until such power is exercised.

The application of this general principle to the case you speak of is as follows: The justice of the peace who has been serving by virtue of the appointment may continue to serve until the township trustees appoint another justice of the peace to fill the vacancy occurring in the office by reason of his lack of right further to hold until his successor so appointed has qualified. It is now, however, the right and the duty of the trustees to make another appointment, and if they desire the present justice to continue in office they should re-appoint him. In the mean time, however, the incumbent may lawfully exercise all the powers, duties and functions of a justice of the peace.

The foregoing conclusions are based upon one of the two possible statements of fact above referred to, viz., that December 31, 1911 was the end of what would have been the term of office of the predecessor of the present incumbent. If, however, said original term would not have expired until December 31, 1913, that is to say, if the incumbent's predecessor was elected in 1909 instead of 1907 then the present incumbent has a right to continue in office under his present appointment undisturbed by the appointing power until December 31, 1913, at which time if there be no election in the fall of that year the above principles will apply to him just as they would now apply if the original term had expired on December 31st of last year.

Your letter speaks of the effect of the commission which you have received. You are advised that, in my opinion, the language in the commission has no effect whatever. The commission is evidence of appointment or election as the case may be, but the lawful tenure of the officer thereunder is fixed by law and not by anything that appears in the commission.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNCIL—MANDATORY DUTY TO PROVIDE FOR APPOINTMENT AND FIX COMPENSATION OF PROBATION OFFICER IN POLICE COURT.

By virtue of Sections 4587 and 4588 General Code, it is mandatory upon the council to provide for the appointment and to fix the compensation of at least one probation officer in the police court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 29, 1912.

HON. JAMES AUSTIN, JR., Judge of Police Court, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 16th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "May council be compelled to provide at least one probation officer for the police court, under Section 4587, General Code?"

You state that this matter has heretofore been the subject of litigation and cite to me a case in which the common pleas and circuit courts, sustaining the then city solicitor's contention, held Section 4587 to be mandatory upon the council; and the supreme court, upon other grounds, dismissed the case.

The question does not impress me as one of great difficulty. The language of Section 4587, especially taken in connection with that of Section 4588, which was a part of the same section of the law found in 99 O. L. 342, is very explicit. For the sake of brevity I quote only two sections of the General Code formerly comprising Section 12 of the original act.

> "Section 4587. In each municipality having a police court, the council, by ordinance, shall provide for the appointment of one or more persons to be konwn as probation officers. Probation officers shall devote their time to the interests of persons placed upon probation. Upon the order of the police court, they shall investigate the circumstances of any case that may come before the court for final jurisdiction.
> "Section 4588. The probation officers shall be appointed by the police court, and serve at its pleasure. They shall receive such compensation as the council by ordinance prescribes. If a member of the police department is appointed probation officer, he shall have the privilege of returning at any time to the active service in the department and to the same rank and standing as he held at the time of appointment as probation officer."

It was clearly the intention of the general assembly that there shall be probation officers attached to every police court. It is true that the word "shall" is sometimes read "may" where the context requires; however, the context in this instance confirms the propriety of the use of the word "shall." All that follows the first sentence of Section 4587, in that section and in Section 4588, is positive and not conditional. The sections concern the public interest and are to be liberally construed for the purpose of subserving that interest.

The mere fact that council is a legislative body does not inject any difficulty into the question. Such a legislative discretion as it has under this section may not be controlled; that is, it may not be compelled to fix any particular compensation or provide any particular number of probation officers. It may, however, be compelled to provide for the appointment of one probation officer and to fix some compensation for him. The whole subject of mandamus as a remedy for the enforcement of rights dependent upon the action of municipal councils is fully treated in the late edition of Dillon on Municipal Corporations, a separate chapter being devoted to that theme. It is unnecessary for me, therefore, to cite decisions in support of the doctrine I have referred to. A familiar instance of council's liability to mandamus is that which would arise if a village council should fail to make a levy for sinking fund purposes to meet a judgment obtained against the corporation. There are many other like instances, all of which point to the conclusion that I have above stated.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that council may be compelled by mandamus to act under Section 4587, General Code, although the manner of its action may not be controlled by that writ.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TERM OF OFFICE OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS—COUNCILMAN'S BOND.

Members of a board of trustees of public affairs hold their office until their successors are elected and qualified.

In the absence of a requirement made by a previous council therefor, members of council do not have to give a bond.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1912.

MR. CHARLES H. ELLIS, Secretary Board of Trustees of Public Affairs, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Answering your letter of December 30th wherein you state,

> "The members of the board of trustees of public affairs were elected two years ago and did not qualify for re-election at the municipal election November 7, 1911, the question now arises will these members hold over until the next municipal election or will the same or a new board have to be appointed by the new mayor? Also do members of the village council where there is a salary attached have to give bond?"

Section 4358 of the General Code provides:

> "When the council, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, establishes a board of trustees of public affairs, the mayor of the village shall appoint members thereof, subject to the confirmation of the council. Such appointees shall hold their respective offices until their successors have been elected according to law and such successors shall be elected at the next regular election of municipal officers held in such villages."

The preceding Section 4357 provides that in villages where certain public utilities are situated or where such public utilities have been ordered by council to be constructed, leased or purchased,

> "Council shall establish at such time a board of trustees of public affairs for the village, which shall consist of three members, residents of the village, who shall be each elected for a term of two years."

So it appears that the term of office of the members of the board of trustees of public affairs elected by your village two years ago was for two years.

Section 8 of the General Code provides:

> "A person holding an office or public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws."

In consequence of Section 8, the incumbents of the aforesaid office would hold until their successors were elected and qualified.

In State vs. Wright, 56 O. S. 53 the court uses the following language:

> "As was said by McIlvain J., in State vs. Howe, 25 Ohio St., "the incumbent continues in office, not as a mere de facto officer or locum tenens, but as its rightful possessor until such successor' is duly chosen and qualified. * * * That where an officer elected by the people is authorized to hold office for a fixed period and until his successor is qualified, a failure to elect a successor does not create a vacancy to be filled by appointment under general authority to fill vacancies."

Judge Spear in State ex rel. vs. McCracken, 51 O. S. 123-129 uses the following language:

> "The recognized policy of the state is to avoid if practicable, the creation of a vacancy in an elective office, and where the right to hold over is given in language that is not limited, and the same is not otherwise qualified, the court would hardly be justified in seeking for an unnatural construction by which a limit would be placed upon the right."

Attention is called to Section 4359 of the General Code which provides that in case "of vacancy on such board * * * it shall be filled for the unexpired term by appointment * * *." It is the unexpired term for which the appointment may be made. An appointment for a full term is not contemplated nor is any authority given by this or any other section to the mayor to make the appointment for other than an unexpired term.

Answering your first inquiry I am, therefore, of the opinion that there is no vacancy in the office spoken of, and that the mayor cannot make any appointment of members of the board of public affairs under the circumstances you enumerate, but that the present incumbents hold over until the next municipal election.

Answering your second inquiry as to whether members of the village council, where there is a salary attached, have to give a bond, I am of the opinion that in the absence of any requirement made by a previous council that bonds should be given, members of council would not have to give a bond.

Section 4219 General Code provides,

> "Council shall fix the compensation and bonds of all officers, clerks and employes in the village government except as otherwise provided by law * * *."

There is no specific provision for the giving of a bond by a member of council, and I incline to the view that it would be optional with council whether or not they would require a bond, and of course if the same had not been provided for by council, the member, even though a salary attached, would not have to give a bond.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CITY BOARDS OF REVIEW—DUTY TO APPRISE AUDITOR OF PROPERTY DISCOVERED TO HAVE BEEN OMITTED PRIOR TO CURRENT YEAR.

If a city board of review during its investigation, finds that property has been omitted for years prior to the current year, the board should lay the facts before the county auditor so that he may proceed under the provisions of Section 5398 of the General Code, et seq. and so have the property entered on the tax list.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 10, 1912.

HON. PAUL MILLER, President Board of Review, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—While it is preferable that questions arising before boards of review come before this department through the state tax commission, I beg leave to answer your communication of June 3rd, wherein you state:

> "If the said city board of review, during their investigation, find that a person failed to list all their personal property for the year 1911, can said city board of review make said addition for 1911 and add 50 per cent, penalty, or should the said city board of review turn the evidence over to the county auditor, and the said county auditor proceed under Section 5398 General Code of Ohio."

Section 5624 of the General Code provides:

> "Boards of review, within and for their respective municipalities, shall have all the powers and perform all the duties, provided by law, for all other municipal boards of equalization and revision. They may hear complaints and equalize the valuations of real and personal property, moneys and credits within their respective municipalities. Upon the appointment of a board of review in a municipality all other boards of equalization and revision therein shall be abolished. At the conclusion of the quadrennial appraisement of real property in such municipal corporation the board of review therein shall sit as a board for the equalization of the value of such real property. Boards of review, within their respective municipalities, shall sit as boards of review, when notified by the auditor of the county to meet for that purpose, and shall have the same powers and be governed by the same rules, as provided in this chapter, with respect to county boards of equalization sitting as boards of revision."

Section 5624-1 of the General Code provides:

> "Boards of review for municipal corporations sitting as boards of equalization and revision, shall have and exercise, insofar as the same may be applicable, all the powers and perform all the duties, and be governed by the same rules and limitations, conferred or imposed by law upon annual county boards of equalization of real and personal property, moneys and credits and quadrennial county boards of equalization of real property outside of cities, and such boards sitting as boards of revision; and such authority, power, rules and limitations are hereby made applicable and extended to and imposed upon such boards of review, sitting as boards of equalization or revision, when reconvened by order of the tax commission of Ohio as provided in Section 5542-9a of this act."

Section 5591 of the General Code provides:

"Such boards shall hear complaints and equalize the assessments of all personal property, moneys and credits, new entries and new structures returned for the current year by the township assessors and county auditor. It may add to, or deduct from the valuation of personal property, or moneys, or credits, of any person returned by the assessors or county auditor, or which may have been omitted by them, or add other items upon such evidence as is satisfactory to the boards whether the return is made upon oath of each person or upon the valuation of the assessor or county auditor."

A cursory examination of the above sections, which contain the powers and duties of boards of review, discloses that when such boards sit merely as the annual boards of review, they hear complaints and equalize the assessments of the personal property, moneys and credits, new entries and new structures returned for the current year by the township assessors and county auditors.

Since their duties are, in a great measure, inquisitorial, it not infrequently happens that in their investigations disclosures are made of failures to make returns and false returns for other years than the year under investigation. As taxing officials it is their duty to see that all property gets upon the duplicate, and that the taxing districts receive their just proportion of taxes.

It is my view that, when investigations disclose evidence of omitted property for years prior to the current year, that the board should lay the facts before the county auditor, so that he might proceed under the provisions of Section 5398 et seq. of the General Code, and so have entered on the tax lists the proper amount.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF REVIEW—COMPENSATION FIXED FOR YEAR BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS IN JUNE CANNOT BE CHANGED.

Upon the authority of State ex rel. vs. Edwards auditor, the salary of the members of a board of review must be fixed at the beginning of each year's session in June and such salary shall remain unchanged during the year.

When the commissioners fix the compensation at five dollars per diem, therefore, in June, they cannot in March reduce such salary to $3.50 per diem for an extended term required of the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, September 30, 1912.

HON. JAY E. SMITH, Secretary, Board of Review, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of September 16th, wherein you state:

"I am sending you the following resolutions of the county commissioners of Huron county, Ohio, and ask you to kindly give your opinion as to what per diem I shall make to the board of review of Norwalk City—whether it shall be $5.00 or $3.50 per day.

"Resolution No. 1.

"In the matter of fixing the per diem of the board of review for Norwalk City and Bellevue City. } June 3, 1912.

"It is moved by Grant and seconded by McDonald that the per diem of the boards of review for Norwalk City and Bellevue City be, and is hereby fixed at $5.00 per day.

"Voting—Grant, aye;Trimmer, no; McDonald, aye. Motion carried.

"In the matter of fixing the per diem of the members of the board of review for Norwalk City. } August 8, 1912.

"WHEREAS, the board of review for Norwalk City of Huron county has received an extension of 40 days in which to complete its work, and

"WHEREAS, this board of county commissioners has previously fixed the per diem of said members of this board of Norwalk City at $5.00 per day, it is moved by Grant and seconded by McDonald that the per diem of the said members of the board of review of Norwalk City be, and is hereby fixed at $3.50 per day from this date.

"Voting—Grant, aye;·Trimmer, aye; McDonald, aye. Motion carried."

Section 5621, General Code provides:

"The county commissioners shall fix the salary of the members of the board of review, which shall not be less than three dollars and fifty cents per day for each day the board is in session, and not to exceed two hundred and fifty dollars per month for the time such board is in session. Such salary shall be payable monthly out of the county treasury upon the order of said board and the warrant of the county auditor. The board shall meet in rooms provided by the county commissioners, and when in session, shall devote their entire time to the duties of their office. No member thereof shall be engaged in any other business or employment during the period of time covered by the session of the board."

You will notice that the statute authorizes the commissioners to fix "the salary" of the members, and that "such salary" shall be payable in the manner provided. When the commissioners have fixed the salary they have done all that the statute authorizes them to do; and when this is once done for the session of the board the power of the commissioners is functus officio.

The only case that has come to my attention, wherein the authority of the county commissioners to change the compensation of members of the board of review was involved, is an unreported case arising in the circuit court of Montgomery county, to-wit: State ex rel. vs. Edwards, auditor, etc. This was a suit in mandamus against the county auditor, to compel him to issue a warrant to a member of the board for his salary, at the old rate, the auditor refusing on the ground that the commissioners had, at a March meeting, sought to change the salary theretofore fixed. Upon a hearing of the case the circuit court held that the salary of the members of the board of review could be fixed by the county commissioners at the beginning of each year's session in June, and that that salary remain unchanged during the year.

I am constrained to follow the decision of the circuit court in this matter, and it is my opinion that under the circumstances set forth in the two resolutions, supra, the members of the board are entitled to a salary computed upon the per diem fixed in the resolution of June 3, 1912, to-wit: five dollars per day.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—VALUATION FOR TAXATION OF MORTGAGE NOTES—TRUE VALUE IN MONEY A QUESTION OF FACT.

In listing mortgage notes for taxation there is no arbitrary rule as to their value. In accordance with the words of the statute "all real and personal property shall be taxed according to its true value and money."

The question of the value of such mortgage notes is one of fact to be determined by all surrounding facts and circumstances, and the owner or trustee of such property should be obliged to report all conditions and circumstances which may throw light upon the value, to the board of review.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 20, 1912.

MR. THOMAS SHOCKNESSY, Member City Board of Review, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of the 16th as follows:

> "Enclose you letter from Geo. S. Dial regarding the listing of some mortgage notes, and we would be pleased to have your opinion at what they should be returned at as he refused to list them for more than 80 per cent. An early reply will be appreciated."

Accompanying it is a letter from Mr. George S. Dial, trustee, copy whereof is as follows:

> "Referring to our conversation of today with reference to the taxation of the mortgages held by me as trustee of Margaret J. Plattenburg, which you said you intended to refer to attorney general Hogan for his opinion, I wish to place before you the true situation, in order that the attorney general may have the facts before him upon which to decide the question.
> "I am trustee by order of court, of a fund of money, which is required to be loaned out, and the income paid to Mrs. Plattenburg. I had in my possession, on the day before the second Sunday in April, 1911, ten different mortgages, upon ten different pieces of real estate, and for various amounts, but aggregating $6,956. The oldest one of these mortgage loans is dated 1883; another is dated in 1894; two in 1899; one in 1903; two in 1907; one in 1908; one in 1909 and one in 1911. The interest upon all these mortgages has been paid each year except in one case in which one mortgage was delinquent for nearly two years' interest.

"Under the decision of the supreme court in the case of McCurdy, guardian against Prugh, 59 Ohio St., page 477, these mortgages should be returned for taxation in my judgment at 80 per cent. of their face value, taking into consideration the risk and probability of loss incident to the loaning and collection of the funds of my said ward. I assert that 80 per cent. of their face value is their true value in money, and the supreme court of Ohio, in the above entitled case has so decided.

"If I wanted to sell them, I could not get their face value. Most of them are long over due. In order to even transfer this fund to a new trustee all of these mortgages would have to be collected; titles would have to be examined; foreclosure suits brought possibly; and lawyers fees incurred. They are therefore not worth their face value, and a reduction of only 20 per cent. is reasonable.

"I am therefore willing to increase my return so that it shall be for $5,565.

"Respectfully submitted,
Geo. S. Dial, Trustee."

The question before you is one of fact and not of law. The law of the case is plain, to-wit, "all real and personal property shall be taxed according to its true value in money." You are the judges of the question of fact involved. You should list these notes at what you think they are really worth in money. Mr. Dial, you will observe, says, "under the decision of the supreme court in the case of McCurdy, guardian against Prugh, 59 Ohio St., page 477, these mortgages should be returned for taxation in my judgment at 80 per cent. of their face value, taking into consideration the risk and probability of loss incident to the loaning and collection of the funds of my said ward I assert that 80 per cent. of their face value is their true value in money, and the supreme court in the above entitled case has so decided."

I cannot concur in this statement as one by which you are to be guided. Mr. Dial is correct in pointing out that the supreme court in the case mentioned has indicated the true rule, but it has not said that a certain per cent. is to be picked out and applied to all cases. Some notes may not be worth to exceed 60% and others worth 100%. It all depends upon the probabilities of collection and what difficulties attend the collection. Neither is the age of the note material. Mr. Dial says in his letter that, "the interest upon all of these mortgages has been paid each year except in one case in which one mortgage was delinquent for nearly two years' interest." No reason is assigned why the interest has not been paid for two years. It may be a mere matter of neglect. Mr. Dial knows the facts surrounding these notes and if any reason exists why any of them or all of them are impaired in value he should state it to you. Prima facie they are supposed to be worth dollar for dollar. If he has knowledge of any fact which indicates that they are not worth that amount the duty devolves upon him to make a full disclosure to the end that you may have knowledge of the facts which constitute the impairment. Men who loan money do not do so with the expectation of having an impaired security. The presumption is that the loan is a good one or it would not be made. I have encountered many instances in the practice of law where the holder of a note would insist upon the taxing bodies that it was only worth 60 per cent. of its face value, yet the loan was made with full knowledge of all the facts and with the expectation of profit in the way of interest. Men do not ordinarily make loans for the purpose of procuring interest without any regard for the safety of the principal. From aught that appears from Mr. Dial's statement all he need to do to make collection is to insist upon payment.

If I were to loan $1,000 tomorrow to John Doe and he were to secure the loan by first mortgage on a farm in Madison county worth $10,000 I would have before me the risk and probability of loss incident to the loaning and collection of my money, and in order to sell the note the title would have to be examined and possibly there might be a foreclosure suit and lawyers' fees, yet no ordinary business man would say the loan was not worth dollar for dollar. Where the loan is secured by first mortgage lien and the property is worth substantially more than the loan the notes evidencing such loan should be listed at their face value. The real question is, what are the loans fairly and equitably worth. The matter is entirely one for you to determine. There is no arbitrary rule. You should look to all of the facts in the matter, ascertain what these notes are in good faith reasonably worth and list them accordingly.

From all the information you give me the notes would appear to be worth dollar for dollar. However, there may be facts not disclosed in your communication or that of Mr. Dial's which would impair their worth. For instance if there be a second mortgage upon the premises or a third mortgage, and the amount so high in proportion to the value of the property as that a foreclosure suit might be necessary, then the notes would not be worth their face value. On the other hand there are numerous cases where foreclosures are necessary and the property is still worth more than eighty per cent. No trustee need ordinarily pay twenty per cent. to an attorney for enforcing the collection where the security is ample.

I trust from what I have said you will be able to list this property at its true value in money in a spirit of fairness toward the public on the one hand and toward the ward on the other so that no wrong may be done either.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ORDINANCES OF COUNCIL—PUBLICATION AND SEPARATE ENACTMENTS OF RESOLUTION OF NECESSITY AND ORDINANCE TO PROCEED.

It is the intention of the statutes that a city council shall provide by separate legislative acts in their respective order for a "resolution of necessity" and an "ordinance to proceed with the improvement."

Publication of the first is expressly required by statute and as the second is an "ordinance" providing for an improvement, publication thereof is required by Section 4227 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1912.

MR. WADE J. BEYERLY, Clerk of the City Council, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 27th, in which you request my opinion upon the two following questions:

> "Can the city council combine the legislation required by Sections 3814 and 3825 of the General Code of Ohio, the 'resolution of necessity' and 'ordinance to proceed with improvement' in one legislative act?
> "Is it necessary to publish the 'ordinance to proceed with the improvement,' as required by section 3825 of the General Code of Ohio, when the 'resolution of necessity,' as required by Section 3814 has already been published?"

As Sections 3814, 3815, 3816 and 3817 are all included in Section 51 of the Municipal Code, as originally passed (97 O. L., 121), I now quote each of the said sections:

> "Section 3814. When it is deemed necessary by a municipality to make a public improvement to be paid for in whole or in part by special assessments, council shall declare the necessity thereof by resolution, three-fourths of the members elected thereto concurring, except as otherwise herein provided. Such resolution shall be published as other resolutions, but shall take effect upon its first publication.
> "Section 3815. Such resolution shall determine the general nature of the improvement, what shall be the grade of the street, alley, or other public place to be improved, the grade or elevtion of the curbs, and shall approve the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles for the proposed improvement. In such resolution council shall also determine the method of the assessment, the mode of payment and whether or not bonds shall be issued in anticipation of the collection thereof. * * *.
> "Section 3816. At the time of the passage of such resolution, council shall have on file in the office of the director of public service in cities, and the clerk in villages, plans, specifications, estimates and profiles of the proposed improvement after completion, with reference to the property abutting thereon, which plans, specifications, estimates and profiles shall be open to the inspection of all persons interested.
> "Section 3817. When bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of the assessment, the interest thereon shall be treated as part of the improvement for which assessment may be made. If such assessment or any installment thereof is not paid when due, it shall bear interest until the payment thereof at the same rate as the bonds issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, and the county auditor shall annually place upon the tax duplicate the penalty and interest as therein provided."

Sections 3825 and 3826 of the General Code are both included in Section 55 of the Municipal Code as originally passed (97 O. L., 122). These sections are as follows:

Section 3825. If the council decides to proceed with the improvement, an ordinance for the purpose shall be passed. Such ordinance shall set forth specifically the lots and lands to be assessed for the improvement, shall contain a statement of the general nature of the improvement, the character of the materials which may be bid upon therefor, the mode of payment therefor, a reference to the resolution therefore passed for such improvement with date of its passage, and a statement of the intention of council to proceed therewith in accordance with such resolution and in accordance with the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles provided for such improvement.

"Section 3826. In setting forth specifically the lots and lands abutting upon the improvement and to be assessed therefor, it shall be sufficient to describe them as all the lots and lands bounding and abutting upon such improvement between and including the termini of the improvement, and in describing those which do not so abut, it shall be sufficient to describe the lots by their appropriate lot numbers, and the lands by metes and bounds, and this rule of description shall apply in all proceedings in which lots or lands are to be charged with special assessment."

Now, considering the language of Section 3825, "a reference to the resolution therefore passed for such improvement with date of its passage," which seems to me to clearly refer to the resolution of necessity provided for by Section 3814, and the fact that a municipal corporation is not bound until it decides to proceed with an improvement by ordinance provided for by Section 3825, it seems clear that council cannot combine the resolution provided for by Section 3814 with the ordinance provided for by Section 3825 in one enactment; by the statutes themselves the ordinance provided by Section 3825 must be subsequent to the resolution provided for by Section 3814.

Answering your second question as to whether it is necessary to publish the ordinance to proceed with improvement provided for by Section 3825 when the resolution of necessity provided for by Section 3814 has already been published.

Section 4227 of the General Code (Revised Statutes, Section 1695) is as follows:

"Ordinances, resolutions and by-laws shall be authenticated by the signature of the presiding officer and clerk of the council. Ordinances of a general nature, or providing for improvements shall be published as hereinafter provided before going into operation. No ordinance shall take effect until the expiration of ten days after the first publication of such notice. As soon as a by-law, resolution or ordinance is passed and signed, it shall be recorded by the clerk in a book to be furnished by the council for the purpose."

Section 3825, which is quoted in full above, is undoubtedly an ordinance providing for an improvement. It is true that Section 3814, quoted above, also provides for an improvement and, in the case you mentioned, the improvement provided for by Section 3814 is the same as that provided for by Section 3825; and as there is a specific direction in Section 3814 that the resolution provided thereby must be published, there might be an inference that this was the only publication needed as to this improvement, and that the ordinance to proceed with the improvement, provided for by Section 3825 would therefore be unnecessary, but it is my opinion that in view of Section 4227, above quoted, which must be held as providing that all ordinances for improvements must be published, and as Section 3825, as pointed out above, provides for an improvement, the only safe and proper plan is to publish the ordinance provided for in Section 3825, even though the resolution provided for by Section 3814 has already been published.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

WARDENS AND POLICE OFFICERS—CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS INSTITUTED WITHOUT APPROVAL OF ATTORNEY GENERAL OR PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—PAYMENT OF COSTS BY COUNTY.

If the approval of the prosecuting attorney or the attorney general is not obtained by a warden or other police officer before instituting a suit, when the offense is not committed within his presence, the county auditor is in no event compelled to issue warrants on the county treasury for costs.

2. A blanket authority from the attorney general or the prosecuting attorney is not sufficient.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 3, 1912.

HON. T. J. KREMER, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your inquiry of November 14th, wherein you submit the following inquiries:

> "If the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the attorney general is not obtained before instituting a suit by a warden or other police officer, when the offense is not committed in his presence, and the defendant is discharged either on motion or upon the merits, is the county auditor compelled to issue warrants on the county treasury in payment of the costs?
>
> "Second. In the case at bar, the court having sustained said motion and necessarily held that the approval of the prosecuting attorney or attorney general was not obtained, is the auditor compelled to issue a warrant for said costs as provided in Section 1404 of the General Code?
> "Third. Can a blanket authority be given the game warden or must the authority be obtained for each particular case?"

In reply thereto I desire to quote Section 1397 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and other police officers shall enforce the laws for the protection, preservation and propagation of birds, fish and game and for this purpose they shall have the power conferred upon the wardens and receive like fees for similar services. Prosecutions by a warden or other police officer for offenses not committed in his presence shall be instituted only upon the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense is committed or upon the approval of the attorney general."

also Section 1404 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "A person authorized by law to prosecute a case under the provisions of this chapter shall not be required to advance or secure costs therein. If the defendant be acquitted or discharged from custody, or if he be convicted and committed in default of payment of fine and costs, such costs shall be certified, under oath by the justice to the county auditor who shall correct all errors therein and issue his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the person or persons entitled thereto."

You will note that said Section 1397 provides, in substance, that prosecutions, by warden or other police officer for offenses not committed in his presence, shall be instituted only upon the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the county wherein the offense was committed, or upon the approval of the attorney general.

Section 1404 provides, in substance, that any person authorized by law to prosecute a case under the provisions of this chapter shall not be required to advance or secure costs, and further provides that if the defendant be acquitted or discharged then such costs shall be certified under oath by the justice to the county auditor.

I am of the opinion that a warden or other police officer is not authorized by law to prosecute a party for a violation of the fish and game laws not committed in their presence without the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the respective county wherein the offense is committed, or the attorney general. Therefore, it follows, that if the approval of the prosecuting attorney, or the attorney general is not obtained before instituting a suit by a warden or other police officer when the offense is not committed in his presence, and the defendant is discharged, either on motion or upon the merits, then the county auditor is not compelled to issue warrants on the county treasury in payment of the costs.

For similar reasons, I am of the further opinion, in answer to your second question, that when the approval of the prosecuting attorney or attorney general is not obtained in such cases, as provided in Section 1397 of the General Code, the auditor is not required to issue a warrant for said costs as provided in Section 1404 of the General Code as above quoted.

In answer to your third question, it is my opinion that the following provision "prosecutions by warden or other police officers for offenses not committed in his presence shall be instituted only upon the approval of the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the offense is committed, or upon the approval of the attorney general" as contained in Section 1397, means that in such cases authority must be obtained in each individual case, so that either the prosecuting attorney of the county wherein the offense is committed, or the attorney general may pass upon the sufficiency or insufficiency of the evidence in each individual case of violation of the fish and game statutes not committed in the actual presence of a game warden or other police officer. Said section would utterly fail to accomplish this purpose if a blanket authority were given indiscriminately to the game warden to prosecute all such violations.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

VETERINARY SURGERY—APPLICANT TO PRACTICE WITHOUT EXAMINATION.

An applicant for license to practice veterinary surgery who had practiced prior to May 21, 1894, may be granted such license even though he had not on May 21, 1894 reached the age of majority.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 8, 1911.

HON. SHELTO M. DOUGLASS, Prosecuting Attorney, Waverly, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 22nd you wrote me as follows:

> "Section 1174-1, as amended, in Ohio Laws 101 v. 355 and 356 provides that any veterinary surgeon practicing prior to May 21, 1694, was entitled to a certificate without taking any examination. I can find no place where the law requires that an applicant for such a certificate must be of the age of 21 years.
> "I therefore desire to ask if in your opinion such as applicant must have been 21 years of age or over in 1894 before he would be entitled to such certificate."

Section 1174-1 passed May 10, 1910, approved May 23, 1910, (101 O. L. 355) provides as follows:

> "Any person who within six months after the passage of this act, submits satisfactory evidence to the state board of veterinary examiners that he was engaged in the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this state prior to May 21, 1894, and who pays a fee of $2.50 to said board, shall be entitled to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state and shall receive a certificate from the said board signed by the members thereof, which certificate shall state that the person to whom it is given is legally entitled to practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state; and no person shall, after six months following the passage of this act, practice veterinary medicine and surgery in this state, without first having obtained from the state board of veterinary examiners a certificate entitling him to engage in such practice."

It will be noted by an examination of said section that there is no provision therein which requires that the applicant for a license under said section should have been twenty-one years of age or over on May 21, 1894.

A license to practice veterinary medicine and surgery has none of the elements of a contract, but is purely a permission to a party holding such license authorizing such party to pursue such occupation thereunder. The power to regulate the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery is by virtue of the police power vested in the state. The state may exercise its police power in such manner as it sees fit, provided it is uniform and is not unreasonable. It may make such restrictions as it sees fit, and such restrictions must be met by the party applying for a license thereunder. In the statute under consideration the legislature did not see fit to make one of the conditions for the issuance of such license that the applicant should on the twenty-first day of May, 1894, have been at least twenty-one years of age.

The legislature has in reference to medicine and surgery, pharmacy and dentistry, made one of the requirements for admission that the applicant be of the age of twenty-one years, and having failed in the case of veterinary medicine and surgery so to do, I am of the opinion that it was not necessary that an applicant for a license under Section 1174-1 should have been twenty-one years of age or over on May 21, 1894.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SCHOOL BOARD—RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE QUALIFICATION OF JANITOR—CIVIL SERVICE, CLASSIFIED AND UNCLASSIFIED.

A janitor of a school building is a member of the classified service, and is, therefore subject to civil service regulations.

The board of education has power to fix reasonable rules and qualifications for its janitors but they shall not be inconsistent with the policy or the laws of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 3, 1912.

HON. RALPH A. BEARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Youngstown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of December 14, 1911, is received in which you ask an opinion upon the following:

> "There is a dispute here between the board of education and a janitor by the name of J. L. as to their rights to discharge him.
> "I have been appealed to in the matter and would like to have your opinion as to the validity of his discharge.
> "I enclose you herewith his claim in the matter, certain rules by the board of education, copy of the state law, letter concerning the school and statement from the people who placed the boiler in the school as to the capacity of it, and his license which are the originals and not copies. Mr. L. is very anxious not to lose these so be sure to return them to me with your opinion.
> "The question is this, there being no engine or boiler in the building that requires a licensed engineer under the state law, could the board of education discharge him without cause, that is, is he under the civil service law?"

The first question to be determined is whether a janitor of a school building is in the classified or unclassified service.

The merit system was extended to schools by act of April 30, 1910, as set forth in 101 Ohio Laws, 154.

Section 7690-1, General Code, of said act, provides:

> "All employes in each city school district shall be divided into two classes to be known as the classified and unclassified service. The unclassified service shall include the position of officers elected by the people or appointed to fill vacancies in such offices; persons who by law are to serve without remuneration; persons who are required by law to have a teacher's certificate; the superintendent of instruction, the director of schools and the clerk of the board of education, school physicians and nurses, secretaries, chief deputies in the offices of the director and clerk of the board of education, the chief truant officer, all unskilled labor when but temporarily employed, and such other appointees as the civil service commission may by rule determine, The classified service shall comprise all offices and positions not included in the unclassified service."

A janitor is not included in the enumerated positions which are placed in the unclassified service. As all positions other than those mentioned in the section are to comprise the classified service, it makes a janitor of a school building subject to civil service regulations.

Section 7690-5, General Code, prescribes for the removal and suspension of those in the classified service, as follows:

"No officer or employe within the classified service who shall have been appointed under the provisions of this act or who shall have been continuously in the employment of the board of education for a period of three (3) years shall be removed, reduced in rank or discharged except for some cause relating to his moral character or his suitableness and capacity to perform the duties of his position, though he may be suspended from duty without pay for a period of not exceeding thirty (30) days pending the investigation of charges against him. Such cause shall be determined by the removing authority and reported in writing with a specific statement of the reasons therefor to the commission, but shall not be made public without the consent of the person discharged. Before such removal, reduction or discharge shall become effective the removing authority shall give such person a reasonable opportunity to know the charges against him and to be heard in his own behalf, and if such charges be not sustained by the commission he shall be re-instated in his position."

It appears that the janitor in question has been continuously in the employment of the board of education for more than three years, and cannot, therefore, be removed without cause.

The board of education has passed a rule fixing a qualification for janitor or custodian of a school building, which cannot be met by the janitor in question.

The rule is as follows:

"Rule 2. The custodian of a school building in which there is a boiler shall have a second class engineer's license. In buildings where there is special machinery, such as pumps, engines, dynamos, etc., a first-class engineer's license is required."

The building over which the janitor in question had charge has a boiler of twenty horse power, and the janitor has no engineer's license and cannot secure the same, because of his lack of experience.

Section 7690-6, General Code, authorizes the board of education to fix the duties of its various employes and to make rules and regulations governing their services, as follows:

"Nothing herein contained shall prevent the board of education of each city school district from defining the duties of its various employes, and prescribing the rules and regulations under which they shall serve nor from exercising proper supervision over them. Nor. shall the board of education of such city school district be precluded from securing labor or assistance for short periods within its discretion in cases of emergency."

Section 7690, General Code, gives the board of education the management and control of public school houses, as follows:

"Each board of education shall have the management and control of all the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. It may appoint a superintendent of the public schools, truant officers, and janitors and fix their salaries. If deemed essential for the best interests of the schools of the district, under proper rules and regulations, the board may appoint a superintendent of buildings, and such other employes as it deems necessary, and fix their salaries. Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made. Teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other public calamity."

The board of education has control and management of all public schools, can appoint janitors, fix their salary and prescribe their duties. By virtue of this power they have a right to fix reasonable qualifications for its janitors.

The qualification which the board of education has fixed for a custodian in a school building having a boiler, is greater than the qualification required by the statutes of Ohio of a person who has charge of and operates a boiler.

Section 1058-1, General Code, 101 Ohio Laws, 324, provides:

"Any person who desires to operate or have charge of a stationary steam boiler of more than thirty horse power, except boilers which are in charge of a duly licensed engineer, shall make application to the district examiner of steam engineers for a license to do so, upon a blank furnished by the examiner, and shall successfully pass an examination upon the following subjects; the construction and operation of steam boilers, steam pumps and hydraulics, under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the chief examiner of steam engineers, which rules and regulations and standard of examination, shall be uniform throughout the state. If, upon such examination, the applicant is found proficient in said subjects a license shall be granted him to have charge of and operate stationary steam boilers of the horse power named in this act. Such license shall continue in force for one year from the date the same is issued, and upon application to the district examiner may be renewed annually without being required to submit to another examination. Provided, however, the district examiner may, on written charges, after notice and hearing, revoke the license of any person guilty of fraud in passing the examination, or who, for any cause has become unfit to operate or have charge of a stationary steam boiler, provided, further, that any person dissatisfied with the action of any district examiner in refusing or revoking a license or renewal thereof, may appeal to the chief examiner who shall review the proceedings of the district examiner."

Section 1058-5, General Code, 101 Ohio Laws, 324, provides:

"Section 1047 of the General Code, insofar as it has relation to the operation and having charge of stationary steam boilers shall not apply to persons holding license issued under the provisions of this act."

The janitor in question has been granted a boiler license by virtue of the above sections, to have charge of and operate stationary steam boilers for one year from November 20, 1911.

Section 1047, General Code, 101 Ohio Laws 362, referred to above provides:

> "No person shall operate a stationary steam boiler or engine of more than thirty horse power without obtaining a license to do so as provided in this chapter. A horse power as used in this section shall mean twelve square feet of boiler heating surface. No owner or user or agent of an owner or user of any such steam boiler or engine shall permit it to be operated unless it is directly in charge of a duly licensed engineer"

The janitor in question, from the statements submitted, is not eligible to secure an engineer's license, as provided in Section 1047, General Code, because of insufficient experience.

However, he has secured a boiler license under Section 1058-1, General Code, and by virtue of Section 1058-5, General Code, he is not required to secure an engineer's license in order to have charge of and operate a stationary steam boiler.

The statute does not require any license whatever of a person who has charge of and operates a boiler of thirty horse power or less. It appears that the boiler in the building in which Mr. L. was janitor, has a boiler of but twenty horse power. The janitor in question is qualified under the statutes of Ohio to have charge of the boiler in said school building.

The board of education, however, has fixed a greater qualification, which cannot be met by the janitor.

Can the board of education fix a qualification greater than that prescribed by statute?

If this rule is consistent with the statutes of Ohio, it is a nullity.

On page 440, in case of city of Canton vs. Nist 9, O. S., 419, Scott, J., lays down the rule as follows:

> "But the powers here conferred are expressly limited, in the preceding part of the same section, to such ordinances as are not 'inconsistent with the laws of this state.' And this limitation, even if not expressed, must, doubtless, be regarded as implied in all such general grants of power; for it must be presumed that the legislature would not intend to give a corporation the power of contravening and defeating state policy by ordinances inconsistent with the laws of the state. Is, then, the second section of this ordinance consistent with the policy of the state as indicated by her legislation?"

The ordinance in question in the above case prohibited business on Sunday and did not exempt therefrom persons who conscientiously observed the seventh day of the week, and was held invalid.

In State vs. Prendergast, 6 Cir. Dec. 807, the second syllabus is as follows:

> "But in view of the fact that by Section 4403, Revised Statutes, the legislature of the state has provided as to those who shall not practice medicine in any of its branches, in this state for reward, and thereby, in effect, allows all persons not excluded thereby, of by other statutes of the state, to do so; and by Section 5992, Revised Statutes, has provided that it shall be unlawful for persons to practice medicine in any of its departments, without having the qualifications therein set forth, under the penalties therein mentioned.

"Held: That while in the exercise of police power, a regulation requiring all persons practicing medicine or surgery in such city, to register as such, would probably be valid; that such a regulation as the one in question which makes the right to register depend upon sanction or approval of an officer of the board, and of his view as to the qualifications of such persons to practice, and provides that the person violating it shall be punished, is not authorized by any law of the state, and is invalid."

On page 810, of the opinion, Smith, J., says:

———"But when it is attempted, as it seems to us, is done here by this regulation, to prevent persons, who under the laws of the state are authorized to practice their profession (even if they cannot recover for their services), without liability under any of the criminal laws, from doing so in Cincinnati, unless with the sanction and approval of one or more officers of the corporation, and make them liable to fine and imprisonment if they do attempt to practice without being so registered, that this is going beyond the power conferred upon municipal corporations by the state, and that such regulations cannot stand. The general assembly itself having assumed to legislate upon the subject, and by general law made provision as to persons who are authorized to practice medicine in the state, unless specific and express power has been conferred upon the municipal corporation to impose additional restrictions upon, and deprive them of the right to do so, unless with the consent and approval of an officer of the city, to be enforced by fine and imprisonment such regulations cannot be upheld, and we think no such power has been conferred."

A case more nearly in point is that of State vs. Toker, 6 Ohio Dec., 464, the second syllabus of which reads:

"That part of Section 8 of the city ordinance of Cincinnati, passed March 22, 1897, relating to sewer connections, providing that, 'the said line of sewerage may be laid by a licensed sewer tapper, to within three feet of outside foundation of building, but no connection can be made to any part of the house drainage; all connections must be made by a properly licensed plumber, is invalid and void."

On page 466, Jelke, J., in delivering the opinion says:

"Coming to the third and fourth grounds relied on by relator, taking 92 O. L. 263-265 and 92 O. L., 408, and construing them, together with Section 2575-111, Revised Statutes, the last clause of which provides as follows: 'These catch-basin water-closets may be contructed, and the connections to sewer and house drainage may be laid by any sewer tapper licensed by the board of public affairs" (Board of Administration), I am of the opinion that in passing this part of Section 8 of this ordinance the board of legislation exceeded the powers the general assembly intended to confer upon it for the purpose of regulating this business by municipal legislation."

In the latter case the statute provided that "catch-basin water-closets may be constructed, and the connections to sewer and house drainage may be laid by" any licensed sewer tapper. The ordinance required that such connections must be made by a licensed plumber.

This case is similar to the situation which confronts us. The statute provides that a person having a stationary steam boiler license, may have charge of and operate a stationary steam boiler of more than thirty horse power. The rule of the board of education denies this right and requires that its boiler shall be in charge of and operated by a licensed engineer.

The legislature has declared the policy of the state upon this subject. The board of education having a limited jurisdiction, cannot enlarge upon this policy without express grant of power to do so. This power has not been granted. The rule which they have passed is inconsistent with the policy of the state as declared in the statutes. This rule, therefore, would not be sufficient ground for the discharge of the janitor.

Respectively,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CONTRACT WITH RETIRED MEMBER.

A board of education may enter into contract with a retired member thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 18, 1911.

HON. ARTHUR VAN EPP, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of November 27th received. You state in your letter that:

> "The Medina, Ohio, board of education are now engaged in the erection of a grade school building at that place, costing approximately $35,000, and it is proposed to heat said building by steam, either generated on the premises or carried from a distance, and to have accordingly installed in said building, the necessary pipes, apparatus, etc., for that purpose. Mr. 'A' is a member of said board of education and is also a clerk thereof, and is the owner and sole proprietor of the Medina Electric Light and Power Company, which is the only electric light plant at that place, and which plant is located a little less than two blocks from the site of the new school building.
> "The board of education is very desirous of entering into a contract with Mr. 'A' whereby the said 'A' will run a line of steam pipe from the said light plant to said school house and furnish said board sufficient steam to heat said school building for a period of ten (10) years for a compensation of $350 per year, or for $500 per year will heat the new school building and the old school building, which stands at the side of it. This new school building contains approximately ten (10) large rooms and basements and the board is informed by reputable engineers that the foregoing plan of heating said building is very desirable, and that if the board is able to enter into such an agreement, that it will be able to save from three to five hundred * * * * * * * * action the board has taken in this matter, has been with a motive looking only to the best interests of its constituency.

"Mr. A's term as member of said board expires January 1st next, and the question now arises; can the board immediately, at the expiration of his term of office, safely enter into the contract as herein set out. Section 4757 of the General Code of Ohio, insofar as the same applies to this matter reads as follows:

"'No member of the board shall have directly or indirectly any pecuniary interest in any contract of the board or be employed in any manner for compensation by the board of which he is a member, etc.' and Section 12910 of the General Code of Ohio, insofar as the same applies to the matter at issue reads as follows:

"'Whoever holding an office of trust or profit, by election or appointment, or an agent, servant or employe of such office or of a board of such office is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or public institution, with which he is connected shall be imprisoned, etc.'

"Now, to go a little farther into the matter; several months ago at the time the contract for the construction of this building was let, a certain firm which I will designate as the 'heating company' had in a bid or proposal for furnishing the the heating plant and at a special meeting of said board at which there was a quorum present; but at which all members were not present, a motion was passed accepting the bid of the heating company; but the next day, acting under advice and information furnished by its architect, as to the advisability of investigating a way of heating said building other than by heating plant therein, the board then held a meeting at which, I think all members were present, and one of the members who voted in the affirmative on the motion accepting the bid of the heating company then made a motion to rescind such acceptance, which motion was thereupon duly carried by a majority vote of all members of said board, and at that point Mr. A (the member of said board aforesaid) was requested to make the board a proposal for furnishing steam from his light for the heating of said building, which was accordingly done; but no acceptance of any bid from him was ever made by the board or any contract entered into.

"The board is somewhat apprehensive, as is also Mr. A, that possibly the action of the board and of Mr. 'A' has been such as to debar the board from entering into a contract with Mr. 'A' at the expiration of his term, for the heating of said building and if, under all the circumstances as to whether or not said Sections 4757 and 12910 would apply. Also, in your opinion, would this contract for furnishing steam for the heating of said building be such a contract for the purchase of property or supplies as to bring it within the status of said Section 12910?

"This whole matter seems to the writer to be drawn rather close to the line, and I am in doubt just what to advise the board relative thereto."

and you inquire as to whether or not the board of education, at the expiration of Mr. A's term of office, can safely enter into a contract as set forth in your letter; also whether the action of Mr. A has been such as to bar the board from entering into a contract with Mr. A at the expiration of his term, for the heating of said building; if, under all the circumstances, Section 4757 and Section 12910 would apply; also, if the contract for furnishing steam for heating said building be such a contract for the purchase of property or supplies as to bring it within the status of said Section 12910.

Section 4757, General Code, provides as follows:

"Conveyances made by a board of education shall be executed by the president and clerk thereof. No member of the board shall have directly or indirectly any pecuniary interest in any contract of the board, or be employed in any manner for compensation by the board of which he is a member except as clerk or treasurer. No contract shall be binding upon any board unless it is made or authorized at a regular or special meeting of such board."

Section 12910, General Code, provides as follows:

"Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or a public institution with which he is connected, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

Neither Section 4757, General Code, nor Section 12910, General Code, applies to the facts in your case, for the reason that you expressly state that no contract was entered into by the board, and will not be entered by it until after Mr. A's term of office has expired. I would advise, however, that Mr. A. withdraw his proposal, and if he desires at the expiration of his term to resubmit it, the board of education can then accept it without any violation of law on the part of anyone, and that will be the safest course for you to pursue. I believe that all steps in the matter of the contract referred to should be taken after all disabilities are removed.

However, the most serious question presented by your facts is whether the board of education is not bound by its acceptance of the bid or proposal of the "heating company." I am not in possession of all the facts involved in the transaction and cannot say what the rights of the "heating company" are; nor do I know whether they are claiming any rights, by reason of the action of the board, as set out in your letter. Neither does it come within my province to determine the rights as between the "heating company" and the board.

I would advise that you give that matter most careful consideration before proceeding further. Since your school board has not entered into any contract with Mr. A., and, as you state, they will not complete the contract until Mr. A's term of office has expired, Sections 4757 and 12910 of the General Code do not apply to your situation. Therefore, there is no necessity for answering your inquiry, whether the furnishing of steam for the heating of such building be such a contract for the purchase of property or supplies as to bring it within the statute of Section 12910 G. C.

Very truly yours

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—ERRONEOUS LEVY—POWERS OF COUNTY AUDITOR TO CORRECT ERRORS AND OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO LIMIT EXCESSES—REMEDIES—LIMITATION OF TAXES FOR SINGLE PURPOSES.

Though the General Code provides that the auditor may limit excesses against any individual where the tax payer has not paid for taxes and that the county commissioners may allow a refund to a tax payer who has paid under an erroneous levy, these provisions do not apply to the machinery of the Smith one per cent. tax law, when the error is attributable to the budget commission itself in its general certification of the levy to the auditor.

It is beyond the provisions of the Code to substitute the discretion of the auditor or county commissioners' discretion for that of the budget commission.

REMEDIES—First: The auditor must refuse to obey the certificate, which duty may be enforced by a citizen or tax payer.

Second: The budget commission might be enjoined from making the erroneous certificate or the auditor might be enjoined from proceedings upon it. Suct restraining order must go to the entire tax. Such certificate is illegal in toto and not void merely as to the excess.

Any remedy in the way of re-adjustment must be procured through the budget commission itself.

II. The amount raised in 1910 for a particular purpose is not a limitation upon the amount to be raised for the same purpose in 1911 or any year thereafter, except where the amount raised in 1910 for that particular purpose was the extreme amount which could have been so raised by reason of the limitation of the law at that time.

The fifteen mills limitation applies to the combined rate for all purposes including sinking fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 3, 1912.

HON. J. W. SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 28th, requesting my opinion on the following questions:

> "1. Can the auditor remit the taxes erroneously charged against any individual under said section where the taxpayer has not yet paid his taxes?
> "2. Where the taxpayer has paid his taxes, can the county commissioners allow a refunder to such tax payer for the amount erroneously levied and collected?
>
> "3. Is there anything in the new one per cent. law which prohibits the taxing authorities of any taxing district from levying more taxes for one purpose than was levied for the year 1910, providing the total taxes levied for all purposes does not exceed the amount levied in such district in the year 1910?"

Section 2589, General Code, to which you refer, provides in part as follows:

> "* * * If the auditor is satisfied that any tax or assessment * * * or any part thereof has been erroneously charged, he may give the person so charged a certificate to that effect to be presented to the treasurer, who shall deduct the amount from such tax or assessment. If at any time the auditor discovers that erroneous taxes or assessments have been charged and collected in previous years, he shall call the attention of the county commissioners thereto at a regular or special session of the board. If the commissioners find that taxes or assessments have been so erroneously charged and collected, they shall order the auditor to draw his warrant on the county treasurer in favor of the person paying them for the full amount * * * so erroneously charged and collected. The county treasurer shall pay such warrant. * * *"

This section is to be read in connection with Section 2588, General Code, of which it was formerly a part of Section 1038, R. S.

This section provides in part as follows:

"From time to time the county auditor shall correct all errors which he discovers in the tax list and duplicate, either in the name of the person, * * * the description of lands or other property or when property exempt from taxation has been charged with tax, or in the amount of such taxes or assessment."

In like manner, Section 2590, General Code, must be considered, it having been also a part of Section 1038, R. S.

This section provides in part as follows:

"At the next semi-annual settlement with the auditor of state after the refunding of such taxes, the county auditor shall deduct from the amount of taxes due the state at such settlement the amount of such taxes that have been paid into the state treasury. No taxes or assessments shall be so refunded except as have been so erroneously charged or collected in the five years next prior to the discovery thereof * * *. No assessment shall be returned, except from the fund or funds created in whole or in part by the erroneous assessments."

In the light of these related sections, and of the sections of the Smith one per cent. law so-called, your first two questions may be answered together.

Section 5649-2 of the act of June 2, 1910, 102 O. L., 268, provides in part that:

"* * * The aggregate amount of taxes that may be levied on the taxable property in any * * * taxing district, for the year 1911, * * * shall not * * * exceed in the aggregate the total amount of taxes that were levied upon the taxable property therein of such * * * taxing district, for all purposes in the year 1910. * * *"

Section 5649-3 of the same act provides in part as follows:

"If in any year the taxing authorities of any taxing district shall desire to raise a less amount of taxes for a particular purpose than was levied for such purpose in the year 1910, the amount of taxes that may be levied for another or other purposes may be correspondingly increased; the intent and purpose of this act being to provide the total amount of taxes which may be levied in the year 1911 or in any year thereafter, for all purposes, shall not exceed in the aggregate, the total amount of taxes levied in the year 1910, plus six per cent. thereof for the year 1912, etc., * * *"

Section 5649-3c provides in part as follows:

"* * * If the budget commissioners find * * * the total amount of taxes to be raised * * * to exceed such authorized amount in any * * * taxing district in the county, the budget commissioners shall adjust the various amounts to be raised so that the total amount thereof shall not exceed in any taxing district the sum authorized to be levied therein. In making such adjustment the budget commissioners may revise and change the annual estimates contained in such budgets, and may reduce any or all the items in any such budget. * * * The budget commissioners shall reduce the estimates contained in any or all such budgets by such amount or amounts as will bring the total for each * * * taxing district, within the limits provided by law.

"When the budget commissioners have completed their work they shall certify their action to the county auditor, who shall ascertain the rate of taxes necessary to be levied upon the taxable property therein of such * * * taxing district, returned on the grand duplicate, and place it on the tax list of the county."

The question being as to whether or not the certification by the budget commissioners to the county auditor of an amount to be levied for within a taxing district for the year 1911, in excess of the amount of taxes levied in such district in the year 1910, and the placing on the duplicate by the auditor, in pursuance of such certificate, of a levy sufficient to produce such amount in such district constitutes the "erroneous charging" of taxes within the meaning of Section 2589 as above quoted, it becomes necessary to analyze the machinery of the Smith law and to inquire into the joint meaning of all the sections above quoted.

It is, I think, apparent from even a casual study of the above quoted provisions that if the budget commission, in the discharge of its duties, erroneously certifies to the county auditor an amount to be levied in the taxing district in excess of the amount levied therein in the year 1910, such cannot be identified as belonging, so to speak, to a levy for any particular purpose. If the commission has certified a gross amount to be raised within a township in excess of the gross amount therein levied in the year 1910, such gross amount is made up of specific levies for general township purposes, for township road and bridge purposes, for general county purposes, or county sinking fund purposes, for county road and bridge purposes, possibly for village purposes and for local school purposes, including tuition fund buildings and sinking fund, and in all cases for state purposes. No court could change one of these levies in reducing the total levy so as to bring it within the amount in the year 1910; nor could a court substitute its discretion for that of the budget commission or order the county auditor to reduce all levies (excepting state levy) pro rata. What the court could not order the auditor to do the auditor could not himself do. The error of which Section 2589 speaks is, in my judgment, an error cognizable and remediable in a court of law or equity. The error, such as that described, would be cognizable in a court of equity but not remediable by direct process issued to the auditor.

If the budget commission has erroneously acted in the manner above stated, then its duties are not yet completed and the auditor is at liberty, and it is his duty, to refuse to receive or obey a certificate containing such an error. The tax commission of Ohio, or any citizen, might enforce this duty of the auditor. This has been recently decided by the circuit court of this circuit in the case of the tax commission vs. the Auditor of Franklin County. (Not reported.) Here, then, is one remedy. Another remedy might be a tax payer's injunction directed against the budget commission to enjoin it from making an erroneous certificate or against the auditor to enjoin him from entering the erroneous levies on the duplicate or against the treasurer enjoining him from collecting any taxes thereon. These remedies are still available, but it is to be noted that they go to the restraining of the entire tax. A court could not restrain the treasurer from collecting the excess from each tax payer and then each apportion the amount actually collected among the several funds.

In the case of the State vs. Sanzenbacher, recently decided by the supreme court, it was held, upon reconsideration and correction of the journal entry therein, that it was the duty of the budget commission to enforce the limitations of the Smith law by reducing the various estimates submitted to them, having due regard to the needs of each taxing district as evidenced by the proportionate amounts provided for in Section 5649-3a. This holding may be taken as a judicial declaration to the effect that is is the duty of the budget commissioners to respect the relative needs of the various subdivisions over the levies of which they have supervision, but in my judgment it is not to be regarded as an indication that the court will substitute its discretion for that the budget commission in any case; it is rather an indication that the court will, upon reasonable ground, set aside a determination of the budget commission for abuse of discretion.

In the case submitted by you, however, it is not an abuse of discretionary power that is manifested by the facts, but rather a failure to perform a duty. The certificate of the budget commission with respect to the taxing district in question is simply illegal in toto, not void merely as to the excess. Yet the illegality of the certificate and of the proceedings of the auditor in pursuance thereof having remained unchallenged during the period of time when it might have been challenged, I question seriously whether the auditor, having made up his duplicate in accordance therewith, may now refund or remit any part of the taxes seemingly due thereon. I am thoroughly of the opinion that he may not divide the entire levy and remit a portion of the taxes due from each tax payer, but that if he has to remit or recommend the refunder of anything it must be the entire tax.

It is, therefore, my opinion that any remedy for the correction of the erroneous certification of the budget commission as described by you must be procured through the budget commission itself. The auditor might lawfully refuse to levy any tax whatever in any taxing district; the treasurer might lawfully refuse to collect any taxes; but neither of these officers have any power to remit the excess, as it would be ratably apportioned to each tax payer. The reduction must be made by the budget commission and apportioned by it to the several taxing districts and funds thereof. Insofar as the taxes may be thus adjusted by proper action of the budget commission and correction of the duplicate by the auditor in pursuance thereof, this remedy is still available, but in my opinion no refunder or remitter on the part of the county auditor and county commissioners would be legal, at least until the budget commission, either on its own initiative or upon the order of the court, has re-adjusted the budgets applicable within the taxing district in question.

I do not desire to express an unqualified opinion as to the power of the court, being satisfied as to the abuse of discretion on the part of the budget commission, or its failure to discharge its mandatory duty, and proceeding to review the action of such commission on this ground to make itself an order such as the budget commission ought to have made in the premises. My better judgment is that the order of the court ought to be directed to the budget commission commanding it to complete its work in accordance with the provisions of law.

In either event, however, an order of the budget commission or of the court, itself, is itself necessary in order to authorize any action like that contemplated in your first and second questions, for the reason already stated, that a re-appointment or re-adjustment of the various budgets and items thereof must be made as a step in the securing of the only available remedy.

The foregoing general discussion sufficiently answers your first and second questions, neither of which can be categorically answered either in the affirmative or in the negative.

Answering your third question, I beg to state that it is clear in my opinion from the language of Section 5649-3, as above quoted, that the amount raised in 1910 for a particular purpose is not a limitation upon the amount to be raised for the same purpose in 1911, or any year thereafter. In this connection, however, permit me to point out the first paragraph of Section 5649-3, not above quoted, which provides in effect that the maximum rate of taxation for a particular purpose, if any, as fixed at the time the act became effective, shall be abolished and in its stead there shall be imposed, as a limitation upon the amount to be raised for such purpose, the amount that would have been raised in the year 1910 for such purpose under the maximum levy then available as applied to the duplicate then existing. So that if in 1910 the maximum levy for a single purpose was made, then the amount thus produced is a limitation upon the amount to be levied for such purpose in the year 1911, or any year thereafter.

In the same connection the form of your question suggests that you may be of the impression that the amount of taxes levied in a district in the year 1910 is the only all-inclusive limitation. This in my opinion is not correct. Section 5649-5b provides that the total amount levied in a taxing district shall not exceed fifteen mills, and this limitation, I believe, applies to the combined rate for all purposes, including sinking fund, in the same manner as that measured by the amount of taxes raised in the district in the year 1910 applies; so that if the amount of taxes levied in the year 1910 in a taxing district can be produced on the 1911 duplicate of such district only by a levy exceeding fifteen mills, then the fifteen mill limitation is to be substituted for the former.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—SALE BY COUNTY TREASURER—TAX LEVY —TAXES AND TAXATION—DOW-AIKEN TAX.

A county treasurer who, under provision of 6079 General Code levies upon and sells spirituous liquors is satisfaction of the tax provided for in Section 6071, is not such a dealer in intoxicating liquors that he, himself, should be thereby subjected to the statutory provisions against illegal sale, or to the provisions for a tax upon the liquor traffic.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 8, 1912.

HON. J. R. STILLINGS, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to your letter of recent date wherein you ask:

> "Does proper legal authority exist in the county treasurer of a county, which has duly voted against the sale, furnishing, or giving away of intoxicating liquors, etc., under 6108, G. C., et seq. to advertise, and offer for sale intoxicating liquors, duly levied on under the provisions of Section 6078 G. C., the tax for the sale of said liquor on the part of the dealer having been duly certified to the county treasurer by the county auditor and to him by the auditor of state."

Section 6071, General Code, provides:

"Upon the business of trafficking in spirituous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquor there shall be assessed yearly, and paid into the county treasury, as herein after provided, by each person, corporation or co-partnership, engaged therein, and for each place where such business is carried on by or such person, corporation or co-partnership, the sum of one thousand dollars."

Section 6077, General Code, provides:

"If a person, corporation or co-partnership refuses or neglects to pay the amount due under the provisions of this chapter within the time therein specified, the county treasurer shall forthwith collect such amount with the penalties thereon, and four per cent. collection fees and costs, by distress and sale, as on execution, from any goods and chattels of such person, corporation or co-partnership."

Section 6078, General Code, provides:

"The county treasurer shall forthwith call at the place of business of such person, corporation or co-partnership, and, in case of the refusal to pay such amount so due, shall levy on the goods and chattels of such person, corporation or co-partnership, wherever found in such county, or on the bar, fixtures, furniture, liquors, leasehold and other goods and chattels used in carrying on such business. Such levy shall take precedence of all liens, mortgages, conveyances or incumbrances hereafter taken or had on such goods and chattels so used in carrying on such business; and no claim of property by a third person to such goods and chattels so used in carrying on such business shall avail against such levy by the treasurer. No property, of any kind, of any person, corporation, or co-partnership liable to pay such amount, penalty, interest and costs shall be exempt from such levy."

Section 6079, General Code, provides:

"The county treasurer shall give like notices of the time and sale of the personal property to be sold under this chapter as in case of the sale of personal property on execution. All provisions of law applicable to sales of personal property on execution shall be applicable to sales under this chapter, except as herein otherwise provided; and all moneys collected by such treasurer under this chapter, after deducting his fees and costs, shall be paid into the county treasury."

By virtue of and under the authority of the above named statute the county treasurer acts, and his is the obligation of enforcing the collection of the tax when the person fails to make payment on demand, and to levy on or distrain of the intoxicating liquor, as well as other chattels used in the business, is the bounden duty under 6078 supra.

The above provisions are a part of the Aikin tax law, which was an amendment of the Dow law. The act known as the Rose law, providing for local option in counties, is found in 99 O. L., page 35. This act is carried into the General Code under the provisions of Section 6108, which is as follows:

> "When thirty-five per cent. of the qualified electors of a county petition the commissioners, or a common pleas judge thereof, for the privilege to determine by ballot whether the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage shall be prohibited within the limits of such county, such commissioners or common pleas judge shall order a special election to be held in not less than twenty days nor more than thirty days from the filing of such petition with or the presentation of such petition to such commissioners or common pleas judge. The petition shall be filed as a public document with the clerk of the common pleas court of such county and preserved for reference and inspection."

6112, General Code, provides:

> "If a majority of the votes cast at such election are in favor of prohibition the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, then from and after thirty days from the date of holding such election it shall be unlawful for any person personally or by agent, within the limits of such county to sell, furnish or give away intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, or to keep a place where such liquors are kept for sale, given away or furnished for beverage purposes."

So it is readily apparent that the provisions of 6078 that the treasurer should sell the liquors levied upon, as upon the execution and the provision of 6112 that it shall be unlawful after a certain date "for any person" to sell, furnish, or give away intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage within a county are in direct and literal conflict. These sections being found in a subdivision of the same chapter (2 and 4 of Chapter 15, entitled 2, part 2), and having been passed together by the legislature as part of the General Code, it becomes our duty to ascertain, if possible, the intent of the general assembly as determined from the language they have seen fit to use, to discover whether one section is the exception to the general rule laid down by the other, or whether it was ever contemplated to include within the provisions of the one an officer whose duties were expressly defined by the language of the other.

A study of the history of legislation in this state relating to intoxicating liquor might prove very interesting and probably would be profitable and of assistance in determining the question presented, but both space and time forbid more than calling attention to the fact that almost without exception every act dealing with the liquor question expressly states that it is to provide "against the evils resulting in the traffic in intoxicating liquors."

From the very first act, passed under the constitution of 1851, which is found in 52 O. L., 153, down to the latest enactment on the subject, successive legislatures use the same language and titles of each act relating to the taxing of intoxicating liquors or making it unlawful to sell same in certain territory, denoting that the object, aim and purpose of all the legislation is to "provide and further provide" against the evils resulting from the traffic.

The traffic is sought to be regulated, prevented and prohibited. The use as a beverage is sought to be lessened, but for other purposes intoxicating liquors are recognized as articles of commerce, the sale of which in the prohibited territory is surrounded with stringent restrictions. Now, it will not be contended that the county treasurer would become a trafficker in intoxicating liquors when he was called upon, and did proceed, to "make" the tax money by sale of the distrained liquors. It is not an unusual thing for the sheriff of a county to be called upon to sell stock of merchandise, drugs, etc., including intoxicating liquors, and it is well settled he does not by doing so become engaged in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, nor is he called upon to make payment of any tax or license fee either to the government or to the state, although the general laws would require dealers in intoxicants to so first do. As held by the Michigan supreme court, under a similar statute to our own, "a sheriff in making a sale of intoxicating liquors under an execution is not engaged in the business of selling intoxicating liquors within either the letter or spirit of the liquor laws. Wildermuth vs. Cole, 77 Michigan 483. He was not exempt by reason of any exception in the law—he was, as stated by the court, "within the letter and spirit" of the statute, and such is the law in our own state.

So with the county treasurer when in so-called "wet" territory it becomes necessary for him, by reason of failure and delinquency on the part of the Aikin tax payer, to seize upon and sell the chattels that he finds used in connection with the liquor business, including intoxicating liquors, he cannot be held to be engaged in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors. He is but complying with the statute in enforcing a collection of the tax. In "making" the money from the goods he was bound to seize and sell and no one would have the temerity to say that it would be necessary for the county treasurer to first make application for and pay an Aikin tax before he could sell the intoxicating liquors in that instance, or that, on failure to pay said tax, that the amount thereof would attach as a lien against the premises and real estate whereon the sale happened to take place. Likewise in the Rose county local option territory the treasurer, in the event it should be determined that he could sell the distrained intoxicating liquors, certainly would not be within the provisions of the Aikin tax law for he would not be engaged in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors within the purview of the law. 6112 makes it unlawful "for any person * * * within the limits of such county * * * to sell, furnish or give away intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage."

Section 3 of the original Rose county local option act (now 6103, General Code) specifically excepts sales by regular druggists for certain defined purposes when sold on prescription, and the real question to be answered is, does a county treasurer, under the circumstances as above held, make a sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage within the purview of Section 6112, General Code? I am of the opinion that the county treasurer has a perfect right to sell such liquors under the provisions of 6078; that this section is controlling and makes it the manifest duty of the treasurer so to do; that such sale although made in local option territory, is not a sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and, finally that the act of the treasurer, done in his official capacity and by virtue of express command of the law, is wholly without both the spirit and the letter of the statute making similar sales unlawful.

I am not unmindful, and have fully considered, the case of Nichols vs. Valentine, 36 Me., 322. That case can well be distinguished from the case at bar. It must be considered in the light of the technical statutes of the state of Maine. So too with the well considered case of Ingalls vs. Baker found in 13 Allen, 449, where the court held, "that intoxicating liquors are not liable to be seized on an execution under the statutes of this commonwealth." As the court says in the latter case the various amendments and changes in the statutes, the legislature at one time excepting sales of intoxicating liquors on an execution upon a prohibition, and at another time wholly omitting the exception, shows that the law was left as the court found it, "not by inadvertence but by design."

If 6112 G. C. applied to the county treasurer he certainly would be placed in a peculiar, absurd and unreasonable position. Under 6078, it would still be his duty to levy upon or distrain the intoxicating liquors with the other chattels found. He would be liable on his bond for any failure so to do. If he could not sell the intoxicating liquors what would he do with them, and whose property would it become? A reasonable construction must be given both statutes—the construction found which the legislature manifestly intended, and that construction which carries out the entire scheme, on account of which the legislation was enacted, must, if possible, be discovered. The mischief sought to be corrected in the liquor legislation is, as therein stated, the evil resulting from the trafficking in intoxicating liquors when the same is sold to be used as a beverage, so it has been sold in territory where the sale of intoxicants was prohibited without a license and that "a saloonkeeper could sell his business to another with all his stock of liquor on hand" even if he had no license at the time. Smith vs. Henniman, 24 Southern, 364; Forwood vs. State, 49 Maryland, 53; Overall vs. Bezeau, 37 Michigan, 506.

It will be observed under Section 6080, if the levy and sale, as provided in 6078 and 6079, does not provide the entire amount of the tax found due, the balance becomes a lien upon the real estate in which the traffic is carried on. A consideration of this provision but emphasizes the necessity of the treasurer exhausting all of the property of the offender, "the trafficker," would it be contended that he could stand by and negligently refuse to levy upon liquors, no matter what their value, claiming that he could not make sale thereof, and then seek to place the full amount of the tax against the real estate of the landlord, who possibly never dreamed that such traffic was carried on by his tenant? It is the duty of the officer to exhaust the property used in the business, including the stock of liquors, if any, thereby found. And this must first be done before there is any authority for the treasurer to proceed against the real estate in which the business was carried on. Another consideration suggested is that this Aikin tax is a state tax, of which three-tenths goes to the state treasurer. It is the duty of the treasurer to make collection and to distribute to the state its share of the tax, to that extent, at least, he acts on behalf of the state. Can it not be well urged that the ancient common law maxim, "the king is not bound by any statute if he is not expressly named so to be bound." (Brooms Legal Maxims, 51), which principle has been engrafted upon the laws of this country and has been adopted and applied to many states, including our own, has some application? The sovereign state which can make and unmake laws, in prescribing general laws intends to regulate the conduct of subjects only and not its own conduct. (State ex rel, vs. Parrott, 36 O. S., 409). Is there not force and weight in such a contention in view of the fact that a goodly portion of the so-called Aikin tax is collected for the state by the county treasurer? From a consideration of all the foregoing it appears that the treasurer is authorized by law to distrain the chattels used in the business of the sale of intoxicating liquors when the Aikin tax remains unpaid. "Liquors" are specifically enumerated in the list of chattels to be levied upon—the sale that he is authorized to make is to be as upon an execution—the source of his authority in so acting is the very government whose officer he is —his sale is not a sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage.

I conclude, therefore, that under the circumstances mentioned in your inquiry the county treasurer is fully authorized to sell the intoxicating liquors in question, and that he is completely without the letter as well as the spirit of the statute that makes it unlawful for any person to make sales of intoxicating liquors in prohibited territory to be used as a beverage.

It is my opinion, therefore, that your question should be answered in the affirmative.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

HANCOCK COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY—LEVY OF ONE-TENTH OF ONE MILL FOR AGRICULTURAL PURPOSES—CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES—BUDGET COMMISSION.

The duties of the budget commission with reference to levies of one-tenth of one mill for agricultural purposes are considered in the opinion rendered to J. W. Smith, prosecuting attorney, Ottawa county, October 19, 1911.

Section 9896 refers to the preceding section providing for the additional tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 11, 1911.

HON. CHAS. A. BLACKFORD, Prosecuting Attorney, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of October 20th, in which you state:

> "I wish to call your attention to Sections 9894, 9895 and 9896, General Code of Ohio. These sections were formerly 3702-B, 3703 and 3704, Revised Statutes of Ohio.
>
> "The Hancock county agricultural society has under its control land located about two and one-half miles south of the city of Findlay, and up to about four years ago had been receiving assistance from the county under Section 3702-B, Revised Statutes. A great many of the residents of this county objected to the location of the grounds, as they were so located, as it was impossible to reach them by street car or other facilities, and about four years ago, there was organized in this county what was called the Hancock county fair company. Stock was sold and grounds purchased about one mile northeast of the city, and accessible by both street cars and by boats. A private corporation organized for profit and not entitled to assistance from the county.
> "Since that time the county commissioners have given the old company no assistance. At the last session of the legislature, the old agricultural society in this county had Section 9894 amended so that the word "may" in the sixth line of the law should read 'shall on the request of the agricultural society.' Under this section, as amended, the old Hancock county agricultural society has demanded that the commissioners make a levy of one-tenth of one mill upon all taxable property of the county for agricultural purposes, and that in anticipation of such levy as demanded, the county commissioners pay to the treasurer of the agricultural society the sum of $1,500.00.
> "The budget commission of this county has been forced to cut every department in the county and every department in every municipality of the county, to bring the levy within the ten mills allowed, and under the circumstances it would be absolutely impossible for the commissioners to make a levy for agricultural purposes.
> "The agricultural society contends that the law is mandatory and that the commissioners have no option or discretion in the matter. The commissioners have asked this office for advice in the matter, which was duly given. The agricultural society is very much dissatisfied with the opinion rendered by me and are threatening to commence proceedings against the commissioners to compel them to comply with this law. However, the committee of said agricultural society has informed me that they would abide the opinion of the attorney general in the matter. Therefore, I submit the proposition to your office.

"The question is—Has the legislature the power to authorize an agricultural society to levy this tax, leaving no discretion in the matter to the county commissioners or other officials without first submitting the question to a vote of the people?"

I am enclosing herewith copy of opinion rendered to Hon. J. W. Smith, prosecuting attorney of Putnam county, which I think will answer your question: You further state:

"You will notice that Section 3704, Revised Statutes, reads 'no such additional tax,' thus referring to the section immediately preceding it which provides for an additional appropriation from the county treasury.

"In amending these sections, you will notice that the "additional" in this section has been omitted, so that Section 9896, General Code, reads 'no such tax.'

"Does Section 9896 simply refer to Section 9895, or does it also refer to Section 9894?"

Without quoting either Section 3704, Revised Statutes, or Section 9896, General Code, I am of the opinion that Section 9896, General Code, simply refers to Section 9895, General Code.

Our supreme court, in the case of Allen vs. Russell, 39 O. S. 337, has said:

"But where all the general statutes of a state, or all on a particular subject, are revised and consolidated, there is a strong presumption that the same construction which the statutes received, or, if their interpretation had been called for, would certainly have received revision and consolidation, should be applied to the enactment in its revised and consolidated form, although the language may have been changed." (Citing various Ohio cases.)

Of course, if it is clear from the words that a change in substance was intended, the statute must be enforced in accordance with its changed form. I cannot see that the omission of the word "additional" shows any intention to change the meaning of the statute and, therefore, hold, as above stated, that Section 9896 simply refers to the preceding section providing for the additional tax.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 19, 1911.

HON. J. W. SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of October 9th wherein you state:

> "The legislature at its last session passed an act providing for the levy of one-tenth of one mill for the use of agricultural societies. I wish to inquire whether or not in your opinion it is mandatory upon the county commissioners to make such a levy on the request of the county agricultural society. Of course, the levy made is subject to the limitations therein provided that the amount produced therefrom shall not exceed in any one year the sum of $15,000.00."

Section 9894 of the General Code, as amended May 10, 1911, reads as follows:

> "When a county or a county agricultural society owns or holds under lease, real estate used as a site whereon to hold fairs, and the county agricultural society therein has the control and management of such lands and buildings, for the purpose of encouraging agricultural fairs, the county commissioners shall on the request of the agricultural society annually levy taxes of not exceeding a tenth of one mill upon all taxable property of the county, but in no event to exceed the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars, which sum shall be paid by the treasurer of the county to the treasurer of the agricultural society, upon an order from the county auditor duly issued therefor. Such commissioners shall pay out of the treasury any sum from money in the general fund not otherwise appropriated, in anticipation of such levy."

Section 9894, previous to the amendment of May 10, 1911, reads as follows:

> "When a county owns real estate used as a site whereon to hold fairs, and the county agricultural society therein has the control and management of the lands and buildings of the county, for the purpose of encouraging agricultural fairs, the county commissioners may annually levy taxes of not exceeding a tenth of one mill upon all taxable property of the county, which sum shall be paid by the treasurer of the county to the treasurer of the agricultural society, upon an order from the county auditor duly issued therefor. Prior to the levy of any such tax, if they determine it to be for the best interest of the county and society, such commissioners may pay out of the treasury any sum from money in the general fund not otherwise appropriated in anticipation of such levy."

Section 9887 of the General Code provides when the county commissioners may assist the agricultural societies, providing that they may do so "if they think it for the interests of the county and society."

Section 9895 provides when the county commissioners may purchase ground and that "the commissioners may levy a tax upon all the taxable property of the county, the amount of which they shall fix.----------."

These kindred sections appertaining to the same subject are of assistance in determining your question. As stated in Lewis' Sutherland Statutory Construction, Section 640, the words "may" and "shall" are to be taken in the ordinary and usual sense, unless the sense and intent of the statute require one to be substituted for the other. (Citing 184 Ill. 59.) And again the same authority at page 1155 says:

> "The word 'shall' in its ordinary sense is imperative." And again,
> "When the word 'shall' is used in a statute, and a right or benefit to anyone depends upon giving it an imperative construction, then that word is to be regarded as peremptory." (Boyer vs. Onion, 108 Ill. App. 612.)

The amendment of Section 9884 by the last legislature grants more liberal terms to county agricultural societies that come within the act. The old sections merely permitted aid to be given to such societies: they provided the commissioners may purchase or aid in purchasing ground. The amended act states that under certain circumstances the commissioners shall levy a tax.

The sole object and purpose of county assistance to agricultural societies is for the express purpose of encouraging agriculture. Heretofore it was optional for county commissioners to grant this assistance and the only purpose of the amendment of Section 9894 was to extend the list of societies to whom assistance should be given, to limit the maximum amount of such assistance, and make it mandatory upon the commissioners to make the levy, providing the agricultural societies come within the purview of the statutes. Nor could it be that the legislature intended that the agricultural societies should fix the amount that was to be levied upon their request. The only function in the matter is to make the request and then it is within the authority of the commissioners to determine the amount of the levy that would be made to raise the fund required so long as it did not exceed the limitation the law provides. I take it that it is fairly inferable from the section that if the societies make such representations as would be deemed proper, showing the necessity for a certain amount of money, the commissioners should then determine how much, in their judgment, will be necessary, keeping within the limitation provided, and then it becomes the duty of the commissioners to raise the amount so determined. Of course, this section must be read in the light of the amended tax laws, and now instead of a direct levy, it becomes the duty of the county commissioners to take care of the amount decided to be raised for the purpose in their annual budget, as provided by Section 5649-3a.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the county commissioners, on request of the agricultural societies, determine the amount of money to be raised for the purpose expressed in Section 9894 of the General Code, always keeping within the limitations of law; that the agricultural societies have no right to determine the amount to be levied; that subject to their discretion in the matter of the amount to be named. It is mandatory on the county commissioners to provide the funds when a request for that purpose has been first made by the proper agricultural society.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.

Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—PERSONAL PROPERTY OMITTED BEFORE 1910—RIGHT OF COUNTY AUDITOR TO MAKE USE OF DISCLOSURES OF PROBATE COURT RECORDS.

By reason of the policy of the Smith one per cent. law and especially by virtue of Section 5403-1 General Code, the county auditor may not use the knowledge acquired by him through inventories of estates filed in the probate court for the purpose of placing upon the tax list any personal property omitted from taxation in year 1910 or in any preceding year with the view of collecting taxes thereon for those years. He may, however, put such property on the duplicate for taxation as of the year 1911 if the same has been omitted from that duplicate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 12, 1912.

HON. JAMES J. WEADOCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 28th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "Inventories of the estate of deceased persons filed in the probate court have directed the attention of the county auditor to the fact that such persons had failed to list their property for taxation in previous years. What power in the premises has the county auditor in view of the provisions of Section 5399, General Code, and those of 5403-1, General Code, 102 O. L., 273?"

Section 5399, General Code, was one of a series of sections providing, in effect, that whenever a county auditor might discover that any person had failed to return personal property for taxation, he might ascertain as nearly as possible the true value in money of the omitted property and place it upon the duplicate at such value, and that his power in this respect should extend to the placing of the omitted property on the duplicate for the five years preceding the year in which the inquiries and corrections were made, if the omissions had occurred during all of the said five preceding years. These sections were themselves amended in 1910, 101 O. L., 432-434, inclusive. It will not be necessary, however, to quote the provisions, either of the original sections or of the amended sections.

Section 5403-1, General Code, as enacted 102 O. L., 273, provides in part as follows:

> "From and after the passage of this act no county auditor, assessor or other officer shall place upon the tax list or duplicate for taxation as of the year nineteen hundred and ten, or as of any year preceding said year, any personal property which should have been assessed for taxation as of such year, but which was not returned for taxation therein; * * * and all acts and parts of acts insofar as they relate to the assessment and valuation of personal property for taxation for the year nineteen hundred and ten, or any preceding year, and insofar as they are inconsistent with the provisions of this section are hereby repealed."

The intention of the legislature in enacting this provision is rendered apparent by consideration of the whole act of which it forms a part. That act, popularly known as the "Smith one per cent law," seeks to impose a limitation, or rather a series of limitations, upon tax levies so as, as the title of the act has it "to secure hereafter a fair and equitable valuation of property for taxation." It is a matter of common knowledge, I think, that the theory of the whole law is that if a low rate of taxation be insured, intangible property and other property, which has heretofore been escaping taxation, will be brought upon the duplicate, the owners thereof being thus induced voluntarily to return it. This object could not have been attained so long as, by virtue of statutes like Section 5399, General Code, the owner of personal property who had been evading taxation thereon, would be penalized for making a full and fair return thereof.

With this end in view the general assembly of 1910 amended Section 5399 and the other similar sections so as to provide that the power of the county auditor thereunder should not extend to placing property upon the duplicate for taxation as of the year 1910 or any preceding year or years. Some doubt being felt as to the effect of these amendments, the broad language of Section 5403-1 was enacted as a part of the Smith law, which was itself intended as a re-enactment of the act of 1910 for the purpose of making the same effective and workable in every way.

For all of the foregoing reasons, I am of the opinion that the county auditor may not use the knowledge acquired by him in the manner described in your letter in placing any property omitted from taxation in the year 1910, or in any preceding year, upon the duplicate for that purpose as of the year 1910, or any preceding year. He may, however, put such property upon the duplicate for taxation as of the year 1911 if omitted from that duplicate.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—ROAD ROLLER—RIGHT TO PURCHASE.

Section 7164 of the General Code gives to township trustees the right to purchase a road roller for use on highways of the county. In making such purchase the trustees must conform with the statutory condition precedents.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 6, 1912.

HON. CHARLES H. DUNCAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Champaign County, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of Dec. 24, 1911, you inquired of me as follows:

> "One of the boards of township trustees of Champaign county has asked me for information as to their right and authority to purchase a road roller for use on the highways of the county. An examination of the General Code leaves me in doubt on the subject and I therefore desire an opinion from you as to the authority of a board of township trustees to make such a purchase."

Section 7164 of the General Code provides:

> "The township trustees may furnish such tools, implements and machinery, as they deem necessary, for the construction, repair and maintenance of the roads in the several road districts within their township, to be paid for out of money in the township treasury not otherwise appropriated. They shall take a receipt from each road superintendent for such implements as are delivered to him, showing the number, kind and condition thereof."

The powers granted the township trustees under the foregoing section are very broad as to the furnishing of machinery, tools and implements necessary for the use of road superintendents in the construction, repair and maintenance of roads in the several road districts within the township, and as a road roller is, undoubtedly, embraced in the term "machinery," said section, in my judgment, unquestionably, gives to the township trustees the discretionary power to purchase the same.

Before proceeding to make such purchase, however, the trustees should adopt a resolution declaring the necessity thereof and the township clerk should certify that the money required for the payment of such road roller is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed upon the duplicate and is in process of collection, and not appropriated for any other purpose, as required by Section 5660 of the General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN
Attorney General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—JUSTICE OF PEACE AND ASSESSOR OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

There are no statutory or common law objections to one person holding both the office of justice of the peace and assessor of personal property at the same time.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 9, 1912.

HON. ERNEST THOMPSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 13, 1911, you requested my opinion upon the following:

> "May an elector who has been duly elected, qualified, and is now acting as a justice of the peace and who was afterwards duly elected and gave bond to act as assessor of personal property, legally fill both offices at the same time?"

Upon an examination of the statutes, I am unable to find any provision which expressly prohibits one person from holding the office of justice of the peace and personal property assessor at the same time. The only question to be determined, then, is as to whether the duties of the respective officers are in such conflict with one another as to render the offices themselves incompatible.

In one case of State ex rel, vs. Gebart, 12 C. C., N. S. 274, it is held that "public offices are incompatible when one is subordinate to, or a check upon the other." The statutes prescribing the duties of the incumbent of these offices fail to show wherein that are in any manner subordinate to, or a check upon, one another. From a consideration of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that there is no legal objection to one person holding the offices of justice of the peace and personal property assessor at the same time.

Very truly yours
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

SCHOOL BOARD—VACANCY—TERM OF OFFICE—ELECTION OF SUCCESSOR.

In the case of vacancies in the school board filled by appointment Section 10 General Code provides that a successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first general election for such office if such vacancy occurs more than thirty days before any election.

Such appointee, however, has the same right as an elective officer to hold over until his successor is elected and qualified.

Where at an election, five positions were to be filled, two for four years and three for approximately two years and there was no designation upon the ballot to determine who were the candidates for the long term and who were the candidates for the short terms, the terms were not definitely settled and there was no valid election.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1912.

HON. JAY S. PAISLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 8, 1912, you ask an opinion upon the following:

> "In a township district in 1905 five members were elected on the board of education of that district; W. R. C., B. D. H. and C. McM. to serve four years; and T. B. D. and J. M. to serve for two years. No election has been held for that office since that time until last November. In the meantime McM's. place was filled by appointment of C. A. Y. and M's place was filled by appointment of R. A. H.
> "At the last November election all five members of the board of education together with four other candidates were on the ticket for election. The board of elections marked the ballot, as they did the other township school district ballots, "two to elect." C. A. Y. who had previously been appointed to the place made vacant by C. McM. and E. T. W. received the highest number of votes. Who comprises the board of education of said township district?"

It will be necessary to first ascertain the terms of office of members of the board of education and how many members should have been elected at the last election, and for what terms.

Section 4712, General Code, provides:

> "In township school districts, the board of education shall consist of five members elected at large at the same time township officers are elected and in the manner provided by law."

Section 4713, General Code, provides:

"At the first election in a township district, a board of education shall be elected, as herein provided, two members to serve for two years and three to serve for four years. At the township election held every second year thereafter, their successors shall be elected for a term of four years."

Section 4745, General Code, provides:

"The terms of office of members of each board of education shall begin on the first Monday in January after their election, and each such officer shall hold his office four years and until his successor is elected and qualified."

In 1905, five members were elected to compose the board of education, two to serve for two years from January, 1906, and three to serve for four years from January, 1906. At the election of 1907, two members should have been elected for a term of four years, and at the election of 1911, their successors should have been elected for a term of four years.

At the election in 1909, three members should have been elected for a term of four years and their terms would not have expired until the first Monday in January, 1914. However, no election was held for such offices until 1911. The terms of each of the members for which they were originally elected, or for which appointed have expired and each of them are holding over under the statute until their successors are elected and qualified.

In State vs. Metcalfe, 80 Ohio State, 244, the fourth syllabus is as follows:

"The capacity conferred upon an elective officer by said article to serve until a successor is elected and qualified attaches to and may be enjoyed by one appointed to succeed where the elected officer has resigned. And where, after the election of a judge of the circuit court the person so elected, prior to the time when the term is to commence, and without qualifying as judge, dies, and the judge then holding the office resigns before the expiration of his original term and another is appointed, the appointee succeeds to the entire term including the capacity to hold over enjoyed by his predecessor, and is, by force of the constitution, clothed with the power to hold the office until a successor is elected and qualified."

Section 10 of the General Code, provides:

"When an elective office becomes vacant, and is filled by appointment, such appointee shall hold the office until his successor is elected and qualified. Unless otherwise provided by law, such successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first general election for the office which is vacant that occurs more than thirty days after the vacancy shall have occurred. This section shall not be construed to postpone the time for such election beyond that at which it would have been held had no such vacancy occurred, nor to affect the official term, > or the time for the commencement thereof, of any person elected to such office before the occurrence of such vacancy."

The person who is appointed to fill a vacancy in an elective office has the same right as the elected officer to hold over until his successor is elected and qualified.

The five members of the present board of education are holding over and each stands upon an equal footing as to their rights to the office. Some, however, are filling terms, which would, if proper elections had been held, have expired the first Monday in January, 1912, and others are filling terms which will not expire until January, 1914.

Section 4713, General Code, supra, prescribes that after the first election the members of the board of education should be elected for terms of four years. It is the purpose of this statute to have only a partial change in the membership of such boards each two years. After the first election the statute definitely fixes the terms of the respective members. This purpose should be carried out by keeping the respective terms separate and distinct and to have them end at the proper expiration thereof.

In case of vacancies, filled by appointment, Section 10, General Code, supra, provides that a successor shall be elected for the unexpired term at the first general election for such office if such vacancy occurs more than thirty days before such election.

An officer who serves the term of office for which he was elected and who holds over, does not hold over for a full term, but holds his office only until his successor is elected and qualified. He holds over for an indefinite period. The electorate have the right to have the position filled by election thereto. As soon therefore as a successor is legally elected and has qualified such successor is entitled to the office for the unexpired term. Each of the members of the board are now holding their offices for an indefinite period, to be determined by the election and qualification of their successors.

At the election in November, 1911, successors should have been elected for all of the present members of the board. Two members should have been elected for full terms of four years each from the first Monday in January, 1912. Three persons should have been elected to fill the remainder of the terms which will expire the first Monday in January, 1914.

At this election there were nine candidates for these positions, including the five members of the present board. Upon the ballots appeared the words, "two to elect." And I take it that there was nothing to designate whether the candidates were running for the long or the short terms.

In the case of State vs. Schafer, 10 Cir. Dec. 36, a similar situation arose, and the first syllabus reads:

> "Where three members are to be elected to the board of education, two of them for the full term of three years and one to fill an unexpired term of one year, and the names of six candidates appear on the ballots, but with nothing to indicate which are candidates for the long term and which for the short term, there is no valid election, and the old board holds over, even though one set of candidates were regularly nominated at a party caucus as candidates for the different terms and properly certified to the board of elections."

This case is decisive of the situation which confronts us. Five positions were to be filled, two for four years and three for approximately two years.

There was no designation upon the ballot to determine who were the candidates for the long term and who were candidates for the short terms. The terms were not definitely specified and there was no valid election.

It appears, however, that the board of elections placed upon the ballots the words "two to elect" and I assume that the two receiving the highest number of votes have been declared elected. It might be urged in their behalf that these two are entitled to the offices for the two full terms of four years. I know of no principle of law which would permit of such construction. The ballots were indefinite and did not permit the electors to make their choice as to candidates for the long and short terms. There were terms to be filled of different duration and there was nothing to show which of the candidates were running for the respective terms.

There was no valid election and the old members hold over until the next general election for such offices. At that time, three persons should be elected for a term of four years and two for the unexpired terms.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—MAYOR AND COUNTY INFIRMARY DIRECTOR.

A mayor of a village may retain the office of county infirmary director.

HON. JAS. W. GALBRAITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 13th, in which you state:

> "The newly elected mayor of the village of Shelby, of this county, is one of the regularly elected, qualified and acting infirmary directors of this county.
> "Inquiry has been made of me whether one person can hold both offices. I do not find any special prohibition of the constitution or code, nor does it appear to me that the offices are incompatible and it is my opinion that one person can hold both. But as there seems to be a difference of opinion on the part of some, the county commissioners, infirmary directors and solicitor of Shelby, I wish you would give me your opinion upon this question at your earliest convenience."

In my opinion your conclusion is correct; that the offices are not incompatible, and that one person may hold both positions. An examination of the Constitution and General Code does not disclose any express prohibition; nor, as far as I can determine, is one office in any way a check upon the other; nor are the respective duties, in the case concerning which you inquire, in any manner incompatible.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BONDS—SALE BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS—DISPOSITION OF INTEREST ON DEPOSIT OF PROCEEDS.

A fund arising from the sale of bonds by the county commissioners for a public improvement under Section 6949, belongs to the county and therefore the interest accruing from the deposit of such fund should be credited to the general fund of the county in accordance with Section 2737 of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 4, 1911.

HON. J. C. WILLIAMSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of November 14th, wherein you state:

> "In 1910 upon a petition presented to the commissioners of Morrow county, said commissioners constructed a road under and by virtue of the provisions of what was then known as Revised Statutes 4670-14, and following. In accordance with the provisions of the statutes they provided that the payment for the improvement should be divided equally between the land owners owning land within one mile of said improvement and township generally. Part of the assessments upon the land within one mile of the improvement were paid in cash, the remainder of the costs of the improvement was paid by the issuing of bonds by the commissioners and on December 12, 1910, they issued bonds amounting to $23,000.00.
> "The proceeds of these bonds were paid into the county treasury and as estimates upon the road were made and approved such estimates were paid out of this fund. As the bonds became due levies are made to take care of the same. Since issuing these bonds there has been a considerable amount of this money in the hands of the treasurer which has been deposited in the county depositaries.
> "Will you kindly advise me whether the interest accumulating from the deposited funds should go into the county treasury as its interest on county funds or should the interest go to the credit of these road funds and thus relieve the tax payers who pay for this road to that extent in lessening the levy?"

In reply to your inquiry, Sections 6926 to 6966, inclusive, of the General Code provide for the improvement of stone and gravel roads of the respective counties. Section 6949 thereof provides as follows:

> "The county commissioners, if in their judgment it is desirable, may sell the bonds of any county in which such improvement is to be or has been constructed to an amount necessary to pay, of the costs and expenses of such road improvement, the respective shares of such township or townships and of the landowners whose lands therein are benefited by such road improvement. Such bonds shall state for what purpose issued, bear interest at a rate not in excess of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and mature, in not more than ten years after their issue, in such amounts and at such times as the commissioners shall determine, but not more than one-fifth of the principal of said bonds shall mature in any one year. They shall be sold according to law and for not less than par and accrued interest."

Section 2737 of the General Code, as amended, (101 O. L., 354) being part of the county depository act, provides as follows:

"* * * All interest apportioned as the county's share together with all interest arising from the deposit of funds belonging specifically to the county shall be credited to the general fund of the county by the county treasurer. * * *"

I am of the opinion that the fund credited by the sale of bonds under the authority of Section 6949 of the General Code, supra, is a fund belonging specifically to the county for the reason that such a fund is created by the sale of bonds of the county, and therefore, the fund resulting from such sale must necessarily belong to the political subdivision so selling such bonds, to-wit, the county. Inasmuch as such fund belongs specifically to the county, I am, therefore, of the opinion that the interest derived from such fund or any portion thereof should be credited to the general fund of the county by the county treasurer, as provided in Section 2737 of the General Code above cited.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ASSISTANT PROSECUTOR—COMPENSATION OF FROM COUNTY TREASURY FOR DEFENDING COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AGAINST MALICIOUS PROSECUTION—DEFENSE OF SUITS AGAINST PUBLIC OFFICIALS ARISING OUT OF OFFICIAL ACTS—PAYMENT FOR DEFENSE.

An assistant prosecutor employed by county commissioners to defend them in a suit against them for malicious prosecution, may be compensated from the county treasury if the suit arises out of a well intended attempt on the part of the commissioners to perform duties attending their official position.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1911.

HON. W. J. SCHWENCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 29, 1911, in which you request my opinion upon the following question:

"A prosecuting attorney retiring from office is employed by the county commissioners as a special assistant to his successor for the purpose of defending them in a suit brought against them as individuals for malicious prosecution.

"May the person so employed be paid out of the county treasury under a resolution approving his bill or must the individual commissioners pay him personally?"

While there is no direct statutory authority for so holding I am of the opinion that it is the duty of the legal officer of a county, a city or the state, to defend some actions brought against other executive officers of the subdivision or state, as the case may be, for damages for the alleged wrongful use of their official powers. One instance of this sort that occurs to me is that in which the action which constitutes the alleged abuse of power is taken under the advice of the legal officer himself. In general, whenever the circumstances would indicate to the prosecutor, the solicitor or the attorney general, as the case might be, that the officer against whom the action has been brought in committing the official act complained of has proceeded with due caution and in good faith and has consulted with his official legal adviser under circumstances under which he ought to consult with him, he ought to serve the officer in his official capacity. In such cases public officers ought not to be subjected to suits by private individuals at the peril of being obligated to defend themselves.

To hold otherwise would be to encourage captions or meaningless litigation and discourage the acceptance of public office on the part of those who might be apprehensive of such litigation.

The rule which I have mentioned is one which has been followed by this department within reasonable limits. It is generally advisable, in my judgment, for a public officer who is privately sued to have his own counsel; and if privately employed such counsel should, of course, be privately compensated. The facts of each case ought to determine the question as to whether a special assistant to a prosecuting attorney for example, employed for the purpose of defending such an action, should be paid out of the public treasury. For this reason I would rather not advise you categorically in this matter.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TOWNSHIP CLERK AND TOWNSHIP TREASURER MAY DECLINE TO ACT IN THEIR RESPECTIVE CAPACITIES FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION—POWERS OF BOARD TO FILL THE VACANCY AND FIX SALARIES—POWERS OF TOWNSHIP CLERK TO APPOINT A DEPUTY.

A township clerk or a township treasurer may decline to act as clerk and treasurer respectively of the township board of education, and if either does so decline to act, then the board may fill the vacancy by election, and fix the salary of said incumbent.

A township clerk cannot appoint a deputy to do the work of the clerk.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1912.

HON. F. M. STEVENS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication dated December 22, 1911, wherein you inquire as follows:

> "The law provides that the township clerk shall also be clerk of the township board of education; can such township clerk decline to act as clerk of the township board of education? If he does so do, can the board fill the vacancy, and if so, how? If for any reason a deputy was thought necessary, has the township clerk authority to appoint a deputy to do the work for the clerk?"

In answer to your first two questions I am herewith enclosing a copy of an opinion rendered by this department to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices on July 31, 1911. I believe that this opinion fully answers your first two questions. You will note that in the enclosed opinion we hold that a township clerk can decline to act as clerk of the township board of education, and if he does so decline to act, then such board of education has the right to fill the vacancy by proceeding to elect a clerk of the board of education. I am further of the opinion that such board of education has the right to fix the salary of a clerk so appointed in accordance with the provisions of Section 4781 of the General Code.

The statutory provisions in reference to township treasurers and township clerks are similar as to their respective duties in connection with their respective township school boards. If the township board of education has the right to elect a treasurer under such circumstances as existed in the case of Stolzenbacher vs. Feltz, No. 9372, decided by the supreme court of this state without report, it, therefore necessarily follows that the board of education has the legal right to appoint a clerk of the board if the regularly elected township clerk refuses to act as clerk of such township board of education.

In answer to your third question I am of the opinion that the township clerk is without authority to appoint a deputy to do the work for the clerk.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PROBATE JUDGES—NOMINATION AND ELECTION IN 1912.

The election act with regard to judicial officers applies only to elections and has nothing to do with nomination of such officials.

The candidates for the office of probate judges for the election of 1912 shall be nominated in the same manner as other county officers, by their respective party primary, if the candidate runs for the nomination as a member of his political party; or he may be nominated by nomination papers if he desires to make the race independently.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 16, 1911.

HON. F. A. SHIVELEY, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 5th wherein you ask my opinion on the following question:

"In what manner shall candidates for the office of probate judge be nominated for the coming fall election of 1912?"

The sections of the General Code providing for primary elections are found in Chapter 6, Title 14, Part 1st of the General Code.

Section 4949 provides:

"Candidates for member of congress, and for all other public elective officers, delegates provided for herein and members of the controlling committees, of all voluntary political parties or associations, which at the next preceding general election polled in the state or any district, county or subdivision thereof, or municipality, at least ten per cent. of the entire vote cast therein, shall be nominated or selected in such state, district, subdivision or municipality, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, and persons not so nominated shall not be considered candidates and their names shall not be printed on the official ballots. Delegates, and party controlling committees whose members have not been so selected shall not be recognized by any board or officers."

Section 4950 provides:

"Nothing in this chapter shall repeal the provisions of law relating to the nomination of candidates for office by nomination papers, and no elector shall be disqualified from signing a petition for such nomination of candidates for office by nomination papers, because such elector voted at a primary provided for herein to nominate candidates to be voted for at the same election or because such elector signed nomination papers for such primary."

Section 4959 provides:

"All members of county controlling committees shall be elected, and all candidates for offices of a county or subdivision thereof, or of a municipal corporation, shall be nominated, by direct vote, except as otherwise provided herein for judicial and legislative offices. Their names shall be placed upon the official ballot as hereinafter provided. The candidate or candidates, as the case may be, receiving the greatest number of votes shall be the nominee or nominees, whose name shall be printed on the official ballot at the succeeding election. The person receiving the highest number of votes for committeeman shall be the member of such committee.

"(The phrase 'except as otherwise provided herein for and legislative offices' in Section 4959, supra, refers to the provisions of Section 4965 which provides in certain counties legislative and common pleas judgeship candidates under certain circumstances may be nominated by delegate convention.)"

Section 4996 provides:

"Nominations of candidates for any county, township, municipal or ward office may be made by nomination papers signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than three hundred qualified electors of the county or fifty electors of the city or twenty-five qualified electors of the township, ward or village, respectively. In counties containing annual registration cities, such nomination papers shall be signed by petitioners not less in number than one for each fifty persons who voted at the next preceding general election in such county."

I believe that the foregoing sections are all of the provisions of the General Code that might apply to the nomination of probate judges. I note your reference to the act of February 8, 1911, approved February 17, 1911, styled "An act to provide for the election of judicial officers by separate ballot." While that act was a forward step in the attempt to remove judicial officers from the field of partisan politics, still it was only intended to, and does apply to the election of judicial candidates.

The manner of nominating persons for the various judicial offices was left as it was, and they are to be nominated either by the political parties authorized to make the nominations at a direct primary or by nomination papers signed by the requisite number of electors for the particular office.

It is my opinion, therefore, that candidates for the office of probate judge for the coming fall election of 1912 shall be nominated in the same manner as other county officers, by their respective party primary, if the candidate runs for the nomination as a member of his political party. If he desires to make the race independently then the manner of securing a place upon the official ballot would be governed by the provisions of Section 4996 providing that the nomination of 'candidates for any county * * * office may be made by nomination papers signed in the aggregate for each candidate by not less than three hundred qualified electors of the county * * *. In counties containing annual registration cities, such nomination papers shall be signed by petitioners not less in number than one for each fifty persons who voted at the next preceding election in such county."

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PROBATE COURT—EXPENSES IN JUVENILE JURISDICTION—TELEPHONE IN OFFICE RESIDENCE OF PROBATION OFFICER—RESIDENCE TELEPHONES.

In accordance with the ruling of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, residence telephones may not, as a general rule, be paid out of public funds. However, where the business of the probate judge requires frequent communication with a distant probation officer, and where the headquarters of that officer are at his residence, in view of the provision of 1682, General Code, authorizing re-imbursement for the "incidental expenses of the court and its officers" fortified by the further provision of 1683 that the chapter "shall be liberally construed" for the attainment of its purposes, the rule may be departed from and a telephone maintained in the officer's residence at the expense of the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 16, 1912.

HON. LEWIS P. METZGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Salem, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 16, 1911, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "The probate judge of Columbiana county exercises the juvenile jurisdiction therein. Many of the cases coming before the juvenile judge in this county arise in cities outside of the county seat, such as East Liverpool. In the city of East Liverpool, for the convenience of the court, a probation officer is employed, having his office in his residence. Also as a matter of convenience and of necessity, in fact, the juvenile judge communicates frequently with the officer by telephone.

The toll charges thus created are very heavy and the expense to the county would be very greatly reduced if it were possible for the probation officer to have a telephone in his residence.

"May the county lawfully pay the exchange service charges for such a telephone if installed in the residence of the probation officer?"

The juvenile law, so-called, is found in Sections 1639 to 1683, inclusive, General Code. The following provisions are of interest in connection with this question:

"Section 1662. The judge designated to exercise jurisdiction may appoint one or more discreet persons * * * to serve as probation officers * * *. One of such officers shall be known as chief probation officer * * *. Such chief probation officer and the first, second and third assistants shall receive such compensation as the judge appointing them may designate at the time of the appointment, but the compensation of the chief probation officer shall not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars per annum, that of the first assistant shall not exceed twelve hundred dollars per annum, and of the second and third shall not exceed one thousand dollars per annum * * * the entire compensation of all probation officers in any county shall not exceed the sum of forty dollars for each full thousand inhabitants of the county at the last federal census, and in no case shall the entire compensation of all probation officers in any county exceed the sum of seven thousand five hundred dollars. * * *

"Section 1682. * * * such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers, and the costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge of the court.

"Section 1683. This chapter shall be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child * * *"

The thought which first occurred to me in connection with your question was that the entire difficulty might be obviated by increasing the salary of the probation officer, upon the understanding that he was to install a telephone in his house and pay for it nominally from his own resources. The phrase "at the time of the appointment," in Section 1662, as above quoted, however, seems to prohibit changing the compensation of the probation officer after it is once fixed, at least that of the chief probation officer and the first three assistants; so, also, if the assistant is already receiving the maximum compensation provided for in the section, this salary could not, of course, be raised in any event.

Inasmuch as the entire act is to be liberally construed, and inasmuch, also, as the phrase "the incidental expenses of the court and its officers" is, on its face, very broad I am of the opinion that the installation of a telephone in the residence and headquarters of a probation officer, under the circumstances mentioned in your letter, would be an incidental expense, either of the court or of the probation officer. I should prefer to regard it as an expense of the court rather than as an expense of the officer. Inasmuch as the toll charges at present exacted are probably payable in as many cases at the county seat as at East Liverpool.

On the ground, then, that the circumstances of the case are peculiar, that the headquarters of the probation officer are at his residence, that the business of the court requires frequent telephone communications between the judge and the probation officer, at the instance of either, and that the law is to be construed liberally to effect the object for which it was intended, I am of the opinion that exchange service of a telephone installed in the home of the probation officer, as described in your letter, may lawfully be paid by the county.

In so holding, I do not wish to deviate from the general rule which the bureau of inspection has deemed it advisable to adopt, namely: that residence telephones may not be paid out of public funds. The special circumstances of the case alone justify the conclusion which I have reached.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

POOR RELIEF—INDIGENT FAMILY—COUNTY OF LEGAL SETTLEMENT—REIMBURSEMENT TO OUTSIDE COUNTY—REMOVAL TO COUNTY OF LEGAL RESIDENCE.

Where a family which had supported itself for fourteen months in Washington county, moved to Morgan county and after residing in the latter place for six months were reduced to indigent circumstances, the Morgan county infirmary board are entitled to be reimbursed by the board of Washington county or to have said family removed to the latter county under the same section upon proper notification to the latter under Section 3482 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1911.

HON. T. E. MCELHENEY, Prosecuting Attorney, McConnelsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 1st in which you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "A family consisting of husband, wife and children resided in Washington county for a period of fourteen months, then removed to Morgan county, and have been in Morgan county for about six months or a little less. The family is in indigent circumstances and became sick and heavy expenses were incurred in furnishing medical attention, nursing and provisions. The Washington county board was notified at the beginning, in writing of the condition of this family, but did not see fit to do anything in their behalf. The Morgan county infirmary board then proceeded to look after the family and made further demand upon the Washington county board when said family became in such a condition that they might be removed with safety, that they—the Washington county board—remove them to their county and continue to care for them so long as they were in circumstances justifying them in giving them public relief. This the Washington county board has also failed to do.
> "Thereupon, the Morgan county board removed this family to the Morgan county infirmary where they are now being held until it is finally determined to whom this family belongs and who should pay for the relief that has already been granted.
> "If said family received no public relief under the poor laws while they resided in said Washington county for the period of fourteen months, did they by removing from Washington county and being gone for the period above stated, lose such legal residence in Washington county that Washington county would not now be liable for any expenses created in behalf of this family? In other words, the point in controversy the two boards is where this family has, under the poor laws, a legal residence and where the liability attaches for the expenses that have been created and the expenses that may be created in the future."

The following sections of the General Code relate to the matter concerning which you inquire.

"Section 3477. Each person shall be considered to have obtained a legal settlement in any county in this state in which he or she has continuously resided and supported himself or herself for twelve consecutive months, without relief under the provisions of law for the relief of the poor, subject to the following exceptions; (not important in this connection) * * *.

"Section 3482. When it has been * * * ascertained that a person requiring relief has a legal settlement in some other county of the state, such trustees or officers shall immediately notify the infirmary directors of the county in which the person is found, who, if his health permits, shall immedately remove the person to the infirmary of the county of his legal settlement. If such person refuses to be removed, on the complaint being made by one of the infirmary directors, the probate judge of the county in which the person is found shall issue a warrant for such removal, and the county wherein the legal settlement of the person is, shall pay all expenses of such removal and the necessary charges for relief and in case of death the expense of burial if a written notice is given the infirmary directors thereof within twenty days after such legal settlement has been ascertained.

"Section 3483. Upon refusal or failure to pay such expenses, (of removal to the county of legal settlement) such infirmary directors may be compelled so to do by a civil action against them by the board of infirmary directors of the county from which such person is removed, in the court of common pleas of the county to which such removal is made. If such notice is not given within twenty days after such directors ascertain such person's residence, and within ninety days after such relief has been afforded, the directors of the infirmary where such person belongs shall not be liable for charges or expenditures accruing prior to such notice.

"Section 3480. When a person in a township or municipal corporation requires public relief, or the services of a physician or surgeon, complaint thereof shall be forthwith made by a person having knowledge of the fact to the township trustees * * *.

"Section 3481. When complaint is made to the township trustees or to the proper officers of a municipal corporation that a person therein requires public relief or support, one or more of such officers, or some other duly authorized person, shall visit the person needing relief, forthwith, to ascertain his name, age * * * and in what township and county in this state he is legally settled."

Upon the facts which you state, and under the statutes above quoted, I am clearly of the opinion that the infirmary directors of Washington county are liable to the infirmary directors of Morgan county for the relief afforded to the family described by you after the health of the members thereof became such as to permit them to be removed to Washington county. There is no question whatever but that under Section 3477, and the facts stated, the legal settlement of the family is in Washington county, and this fact is not affected at all by the residence of the family in Morgan county for a period of six months. Neither is there any question, under the facts stated, as to the compliance by the infirmary directors of Morgan county with all the provisions of law necessary to be complied with in order to fix the liability of the Washington county board. This liability extends to the payment of all expenses, as well for medical services as for other relief.

There is, to be sure, some ambiguity in Section 3482, arising by virtue of the peculiar language thereof, which states that "a person shall be removed to the infirmary of the county of his legal settlement if his health permits." I think, however, that, having regard to the manifest intent of the related sections, the word "if," as here used, should be construed as "when."

So, also, the same section provides that if the person refuses to be removed the probate judge of the county shall, upon complaint, of the infirmary directors, issue a warrant for removal etc. Having regard to the same intent, above referred to, I am of the opinion that whether or not there is any proceeding to compel removal or to pay the expenses of removal, when the indigent person is willing to be removed but the infirmary directors of the county to which he belongs are unwilling to receive him, there is at least enough in the sections to fix the liability of the county to which the person belongs for expenditures made by the infirmary directors of the county by which the relief is actually extended.

The case of Commissioners of Ashland County vs. The Directors of the Richland County Infirmary, 7 O. S. 66, decided under statutes slightly different, and therefore, holding that the liability of the county of legal settlement rested upon the county commissioners instead of upon the infirmary directors, is sufficient authority in my opinion for the above conclusion. It did not appear in that case that Ashland county had any county infirmary, and hence any infirmary directors.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE AND JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

As a township trustee is required to approve the bond of a ~~trustee~~, the offices are incompatible and may not be held by the same individual.

Several public offices may be held by the same person when there is neither a statutory prohibition nor an inherent incompatibility.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1912.

HON. JOHN G. ROMER, Prosecuting Attorney, Celina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter wherein you request an opinion upon the following:

> "I request your opinion as to whether the office of justice of peace and township trustee may be held by the same person."

In reply thereto I desire to state that the right of one person to hold two offices at the same time is governed by two well known principles, viz.: statutory prohibition and incompatibility.

Upon an examination of the statutes I am unable to find any express provision to the effect that the office of the justice of the peace and township trustee may not be held by one person at the same time.

The rule of incompatibility of public offices is laid down in the case of State ex rel. vs. Gebert, 12 C. C. (n. s.) 274, wherein it is held that public offices are incompatible when one is a check upon, or is subordinate to the other.

Recourse must, therefore, be had to the statutes defining the duties of these respective offices to determine whether or not they are in fact incompatible.

By the provisions of Section 1721 of the General Code of Ohio trustees are required to approve the bonds of justice of the peace of the township, and in this instance a township trustee might be called upon to approve his own bond as justice of the peace, thus making his position as township trustee inconsistent with that of justice of the peace.

For this reason I am of the opinion that the offices of justice of the peace and township trustee cannot legally be held by one person at the same time.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP AND COUNTY DITCHES—RIGHT OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO CONSTRUCT, ALTER OR REPAIR DITCHES—RIGHTS OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—PETITION FOR DITCHES.

The county commissioners may originally entertain jurisdiction of a petition to construct an entirely new ditch which may or may not follow the line of an existing ditch, and in this case, no rights of intervention exists on the part of the township trustees, through whose districts such ditch will run, nor need the trustees be appealed to in this connection.

When the petition, however, is for the widening, boxing, tiling or the alteration of an existing ditch, the trustees must first be appealed to and must refuse to act before the commissioners may entertain jurisdiction.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 5, 1912.

HON. JAMES F. BELL, Prosecuting Attorney, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 20th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "In case of a petition for the location, construction, cleaning, repairing, enlarging and tiling of a joint county ditch, located in two counties, and such proposed improvements begin in the upper county at the source of an old township ditch, and follows, as near as practicable, the same route of said old township ditch until it intersects an old county ditch and thence following, as near as practicable, the route of said old county ditch, through both counties, to the outlet:
> "First. Have the county commissioners of the two counties acting jointly the authority to proceed in the matter until an application is first made to the township trustees to alter or repair the township ditch and they have refused to act?

"Or, Secondly. If such proceeding and refusal to act on the part of the township trustees is not a necessary prerequisite, is it necessary for such trustees to first sign a waiver relinquishing jurisdiction over such township ditch before the commissioners can proceed in the matter?"

Section 6536 of the General Code provides as follows:

"Ditches, drains or water-courses which provide drainage, or, when constructed, will provide drainage for lands in more than one county, may be constructed, enlarged, cleaned or repaired, as provided in this chapter and the laws prescribed for constructing, enlarging, cleaning or repairing single county ditches, drains or water-courses."

By virtue of this section the provisions of the chapter relating to single county ditches apply as well to the construction of joint county ditches unless a contrary intention is evinced in some provision of the latter chapter.

I find no provision of the chapter relating to joint county ditches which in any way deals with the subject of existing township ditches, excepting Section 6554, General Code. This section, however, is not concerned in your inquiry. It relates exclusively to cases in which an existing township ditch empties directly into an adjoining county or into a ditch, drain or water-course therein.

Section 6443, General Code, which is found among the sections providing for the improvement and construction of single county ditches provides as follows:

"The board of county commissioners, at regular or called session, when necessary to drain any lots, land, public or corporate road or railroad, and it will be conductive to public health, convenience or welfare, in the manner provided in this chapter, may cause to be located and constructed, straightened, widened, altered, deepened, boxed, or tiled, a ditch, drain or water-course, or box or tile part thereof, or cause the channel of a river, creek or run, or part thereof, within such county, to be improved by straightening, widening, deepening, or changing it, or by removing from adjacent land timber, brush, trees, or other substance liable to obstruct it. * * *"

The grammatical construction of this section leads to the conclusion that it deals with a number of different and distinct proceedings. Thus the location and construction of a county ditch is a different proceeding from the straightening thereof, or the widening, the alteration, or the deepening. In a given case the nature of the improvement would be determined, in my opinion, by the prayer of the petition. Of course, it is true that petitioners might seek to use language for the purpose of concealing their real intentions; yet, in an ordinary case, I am satisfied that if the intention is, for example, originally to construct and locate a county ditch the mere fact that there is an existing township ditch the route of which will be in part utilized by the new improvement, will not change the essential nature of the proposed improvement from one of original construction to one of alteration, widening, or the like.

For this reason the case of Sollars vs. Sever, S. C. C. N. S. 364 must be distinguished. In this case, so far as is disclosed by the language of Sullivan, J., who delivered the opinion of the circuit court, the petition was for the straightening, widening, alteration, deepening, boxing and tiling of an existing township ditch. The petition was filed with the county commissioners who proceeded to entertain jurisdiction thereof without further formality. The court held their proceedings void because of the express provision of Section 6517 of the General Code, which is in part as follows:

> "The county commissioners, on application of one or more freeholders actually benefited, if the township trustees refuse to alter or repair a ditch, as provided in this title, may cause such ditch or part thereof, or part of a creek, river or run that has been straightened, widened, deepened or changed under the provisions of this chapter, to be altered, deepened, widened, enlarged, repaired, boxed or tiled. * * *"

Here, it will be observed, the petition was for the alteration of an existing ditch, not for the construction of a new improvement over the line of the existing ditch.

In Miller vs. Commissioners 3 C. C., 617, it was expressly held that:

> "An injunction will not be granted to restrain the board of county commissioners from constructing a county ditch—for the reason that a part of the line is over and along the line of an established township ditch."

Of course, in case of the construction of a new improvement over the line of an existing ditch, the owners of abutting property cannot be assessed therefore in excess of the benefit actually conferred upon their property by reason of the new improvement. This follows from the express provisions of the statute which are to the effect that the assessments shall be according to the benefits, and also from the decision of the supreme court in the cases of Blue vs. Wentz, 54 O. S., 247; and Mason vs. Commissioners, 80 O. S., 151.

Upon consideration of all the related sections, however, and of the cases decided thereunder, I am of the opinion that if an existing township or county ditch is inadequate to provide the necessary drainage for the lands within a water shed, it is competent for the county commissioners originally to entertain jurisdiction of a petition to construct an entirely new ditch which may or may not follow the line of the existing ditch, and in so doing the commissioners need not either satisfy themselves that the trustees have been appealed to to alter or repair the ditch, or procure from the trustees a waiver of their jurisdiction over the existing township ditch. The existence of the township ditch becomes a matter of importance, however, when the assessments are made.

It must be clearly understood, however, that when the petition is for the widening, boxing or tiling, or the alteration of an existing ditch, the trustees must be first appealed to, and must refuse to act before the commissioners may entertain jurisdiction.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—ESTABLISHMENT OF A DEPOSITORY—ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS—PROCEDURE WHEN TWO BANKS BID EQUALLY.

When township trustees in pursuance of Sections 3320 and 3321, General Code, providing for the establishment of a depository receive bids from three banks, two of which were highest and each bidding equally, the trustees should apportion the funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 26, 1912.

HON. W. V. WRIGHT, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 13, 1912, in which you ask my opinion as to the following situation as detailed by you:

> "The board of trustees of Goshen township, Tuscarawas county, having provided by resolution for the depositing of all moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer of the said township, and otherwise having complied with the law as set forth in Sections 3320 and 3321, General Code of Ohio, preliminary to designating a depository, received bids from three banks, two of which were the highest, both offering the same rate of interest."

Section 3322, General Code, provides as follows:

> "'In townships containing two or more banks, such deposits shall be made in the bank or banks situated in the township that offer at competitive bidding the highest rate of interest on the average daily balance on such funds, which in no case shall be less than two per cent. for the full time the funds are on deposit. * * *'
> "Assuming that there is no inherent difference between the two banks, and the legislature not having provided specifically for such a situation, should each of the banks bidding the same rate of interest on the average daily balance be given a portion of the township funds; or may the trustees designate one of such banks at their discretion?"

Section 3320 of the General Code provides for the deposit of township funds, and is as follows:

> "The trustees of any township shall provide by resolution for the depositing of any or all moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer of the township, and the treasurer shall deposit such money in such bank, banks or depository within the county in which the township is located as the trustees may direct subject to the following provisions."

Section 3322 designates where said funds shall be deposited, and is as follows:

> "In townships containing two or more banks, such deposits shall be made in the bank or banks situated in the township that offer at competitive bidding the highest rate of interest on the average daily balance on such funds, which in no case shall be less than two per cent.

for the full time the funds are on deposit. Such bank or banks shall give a good and sufficient bond to be approved by the township trustees, for the safe custody of such funds in a sum at least equal to the amount deposited. No bank or depository shall receive a larger deposit of such funds than the amount of such bond and in no event to exceed three hundred thousand dollars. The treasurer of the township shall see that a greater sum than that contained in the bond is not deposited in such bank or banks, and such treasurer and his bondsmen shall be liable for any loss occasioned by deposits in excess of such bonds."

In the act providing for county depositories—Section 2715 et seq., General Code—the following special provision is found which covers a situation in the county analagous to the one of which you speak in a township; this section is 2719, which provides as follows:

"If two or more banks offer the same highest rate of interest with proper sureties, securities, or both, the use of the money shall be awarded to either of them, or the commissioners may award a portion of such money to each of such banks or trust companies."

As there is no such qualifying section in the act relating to township depositories, it is my opinion that the language used in Section 3322, namely:

"A township containing two or more banks, such deposit shall be made in the * * * banks * * that offer * * the highest rate of interest * * *."

means that a portion of the deposits must be awarded to each of such banks. I assume, of course, that all other conditions necessary to qualify each bank as a depository are complied with.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INHERITANCE TAX ON ANY INTEREST IN PROPERTY—WILL OF MARY R. DANIELS—BEQUEST TO SISTER-IN-LAW.

A bequest of property to two sons as trustees to pay the income thereof to a sister-in-law of the testatrix for life, is subject to Sections 5331 and 5343 of the General Code providing for an inheritance tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 9, 1912.

HON. CARL W. LENZ, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of December 11, 1911, asking my opinion as to the liability of a certain fund bequeated by the will of Mary R. Daniels for the inheritance tax under Section 5331 of the General Code. You state in your letter that the facts in this case, as stated to you in a letter received by you from the attorneys representing the executors of the will of Mary R. Daniels, are as follows:

"We represent the executors of the will of Mary R. Daniels, late of Montgomery county, Ohio, under whose will the sum of $10,000 is given to her two sons, as trustees. The trustees are to pay the income therefrom to a sister of the late husband of the testatrix during her life, and at her death the fund is given to testatrix's children and daughter-in-law."

Section 5331 of the General Code provides as follows:

"All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interests therein, whether belonging to inhabitants of this state or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which pass by will or by the interstate laws of this state, or by deed, grant, sale, or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor, to a person in trust or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, brother, sister, niece, nephew, lineal descendant, adopted child, or person recognized as an adopted child and made a legal heir under the provisions of a statute of this state, or the lineal descendants thereof, or the lineal descendants of an adopted child, the wife or widow of a son, the husband or daughter of a decedent, shall be liable to a tax of five per cent. of its value above the sum of two hundred dollars. Seventy-five per cent of such tax shall be for the use of the state and twenty-five per cent. for the use of the county wherein it is collected. All administrators, executors and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance made during the grantor's life, shall be liable for all such taxes, with lawful interest as hereinafter provided, until they have been paid, as hereinafter directed. Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien upon the property, and be and remain a lien until paid."

I also call your attention to Section 5343 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"The value of such property, subject to said tax shall be its actual market value as found by the probate court. If the state, through the prosecuting attorney of the proper county, or any person interested in the succession to the property, applies to the court, it shall appoint three disinterested persons, who, being first sworn, shall view and appraise such property at its actual market value for the purpose of this tax, and make return thereof to the court. The return may be accepted by the court in a like manner as the original inventory of the estate is accepted, and if so accepted, it shall be binding upon the person by whom this tax is to be paid, and upon the state. The fees of the appraisers shall be fixed by the probate judge and paid out of the county treasury upon the warrant of the county auditor. In the case of an annuity or life estate, the value thereof shall be determined by the so-called actuaries' combined experience tables and five per cent. compound interest."

Considering these two sections, together, it seems clear that the words "any interest therein" as used in Section 5331, would cover the income bequeathed to the sister of the husband of the testatrix, above mentioned.

You will find the case of In re Estate of Henry J. F. Wolf, deceased, reported in 48 Weekly Law Bulletin, 211, exactly in point, I think; the first two paragraphs of the syllabus in this case are as follows:

"1. A bequest to a nephew of the decedent's wife or to a descendant of such nephew is not exempt from the collateral inheritance tax within the meaning of Section 2731-1 Rev. Stat.

"2. A bequest to one not a blood relative of the decedent of the income from certain securities for life, constitutes a life estate in said securities; and the amount of collateral inheritance tax due on such a bequest is determinable by the actuaries' combined experience tables and five per cent. compound interest."

Section 2731-1, Bates Statutes, as referred to in this opinion will now be found as Sections 5331 and 5332 of the General Code, Section 5331 being quoted above, and Section 2731-12, Bates Rev. Stat., referred to in the opinion, is now Section 5343 of the General Code, quoted above.

My opinion, therefore, is that the bequest made to the sister of the husband of Mrs. Daniels, by the will of Mary R. Daniels, is subject to the inheritance tax under Section 5331 of the General Code.

Yours truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION, TOWNSHIP—CENTRALIZATION OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS—EFFECT UPON PAYMENT OF INDEBTEDNESS OF ABOLITION OF SCHOOL DISTRICT.

In a township in which there is no township board of education and wherein a number of special school districts exist, there are no special statutory provisions for the centralization of schools. However, by means of the election provided for by Section 4743, General Code, a school district may be abandoned and the original township district from which the abandoned school district was taken, may be thereby recreated, and from this revived township district, the centralization may be completed as provided by statute.

When a special school district is abandoned, by vote of the electors or otherwise, such special school district continues to exist for the purpose of paying any and all indebtedness of such special school district, and any taxes levied to pay such indebtedness should be collected upon the property on the duplicate in such school district, even though such district is situated in two or more townships.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, December 11, 1911.

HON. E. H. PATCHIN, Prosecuting Attorney, Geauga County, Chardon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under favor of October 15, 1911, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

"In Huntsburg township in our county the following situation exists with reference to the public schools: The township is divided into a number of special districts, some of which special districts extend into other townships, and in some of them there have been bonds issued for various purposes. There is no township board of education; it is now desired in some manner to centralize the schools of this township. Section 7730 and 4726 General Code seem to be the Sections with reference to centralization but each of them provide that there must be a petition to the township board. There being no township board in this township we wish to know what method, if any, can be used to submit this question of centralization? Second. What would be the manner of disposing of the question of bond issue when a portion of the territory is in another township?

"I believe there must be some method of submitting this question of centralization but I am equally sure that in so doing the boards of special districts that have issued bonds in conjunction with territory in other townships would not be allowed to repudiate those bonds."

As you state, Sections 4726 and 7730, General Code, provide for centralization of township schools and require action by the township board of education.

Section 4726, General Code, provides:

"A township board of education may submit the question of centralization, and, upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such township district, must submit such question to the vote of the qualified electors of such township district. If more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it, at such election, such board of education shall proceed at once to the centralization of schools of the township, and, if necessary, purchase a site or sites and erect a suitable building or buildings thereon. If, at such election, more votes are cast against the proposition of centralization than for it, the question shall not again be submitted to the electors of such township district for a period of two years."

Section 7730, General Code, provides:

"The board of education of any township school district may suspend the schools in any or all subdistricts in the township districts. Upon such suspension the board must provide for the conveyance of the pupils residing in such subdistrict or subdistricts to a public school in the township district, or to a public school in another district, the cost thereof to be paid out of the funds of the township school district. Or, the board may abolish all the subdistricts providing conveyance is furnished to one or more central schools, the expense thereof to be paid out of the funds of the district. No subdistrict school where the average daily attendance is twelve or more, shall be so suspended or abolished, after a vote has been taken under the provisions of law therefor, when at such election a majority of the votes cast thereon were against the proposition of centralization, or when a petition has been filed thereunder and has not yet been voted upon at an election."

You will further observe that these sections provide for the centralization of schools in township school districts and no other. In the township of which you inquire there is no township school district, as the entire township is divided into special school districts. There is no provision of statute for the centralization of the schools of a special school district.

By virtue of Sections 4741 to 4744, General Code, special school districts may be abandoned and upon such abandonment the territory of such special school district will revert to the township district from which it was originally taken.

Section 4741, General Code, provides:

"When a petition is signed by not less than one-third of the electors residing within the territory constituting a special school district, praying for the abandonment or continuance of such special district, is presented to the board of education of such district, or when such board, by a majority vote of the full membership thereof, shall decide to submit the question of abandoning or continuing the special school district, the board shall fix the time of holding such election at a special or general election. The clerk of the board shall notify the deputy state supervisors of elections as herein provided in case of first election, of the date of such election and the purposes thereof, and such deputy state supervisor shall provide therefor. The clerk of the board of education shall post notices thereof in five public places within the district."

Section 4743, General Code, provides:

"The ballot shall be in the regular form but without the circle at the top, and shall have printed thereon, 'abandonment of special school district, yes;' 'abandonment of special school district, no;' 'continuance of special school district, yes,' or 'continuance of special school district, no,' as the case may be. The expense of the election shall be paid in the same manner as other school elections' expenses, and the returns thereof shall be made to the board of education of the special school district. If more votes are cast for abandonment than against it, or against continuance than for it, such board shall certify the result to the board or boards of education of the township or townships having territory in that special district, and the territory of the special district shall thereby revert to the township school district or districts from which it was originally taken, except as hereinafter provided in case of indebtedness of the special district. Otherwise such district shall continue to be and remain a legal special school district as theretofore constituted."

Section 4744, General Code, provides:

"The legal title of the property of a special school district in case of abandonment or failure to continue shall become vested in the board or boards of education of the township or townships in which such property is situated. The school funds of such special district shall be paid into the treasury of the township district, and if such special district is in two or more townships, such funds shall be divided between them in proportion to the total tax valuation of property in the several districts. The abandonment of a special school district shall not be complete until the board of education of the district has provided for the payment of any indebtedness that may exist."

The abandonment of a special school district is submitted to a vote of the electors and the returns of such election shall be made to the school board of the special school district. If such vote is favorable to the abandonment of such special school district, the board of education of the special district must certify the result to the board of education of the township. There is no time specified in which this must be done.

However it appears that there is no township board of education to which such return or certificate can be made, nor is there any territory from which to elect or appoint such board. The abandonment of a special school district in such case, would be in its results, the creation of a township district. After the result of the vote for abandonment was known the township district thus created could proceed to elect a board of education in the same manner as the first election in any township district is held. After such election and the qualification of the members of the board, the statute could be complied with and the abandonment of the special school district be completed.

The centralization of the schools of such township district may then be affected in the manner provided by statute. While this proceedure is more or less cumbersome, it is the only way in which the schools of a township composed entirely of special districts can be accomplished.

You further inquire in reference to the bonded indebtedness of a special school district, when such district is in two or more townships.

Section 4743, General Code, supra, provides that "the territory of the special district shall thereby revert to the township school district or districts from which it was originally taken, except as hereinafter provided in case of indebtedness of the special district."

This refers to the provisions of Section 4744, General Code, the last sentence of which provides: "the abandonment of a special school district shall not be complete until the board of education of the district has provided for the payment of any indebtedness that may exist."

A proper construction of these provisions will determine what is to be done with the bonded indebtedness. If the legislature had intended that no special school district could be abandoned until all indebtedness of such district was paid, it could easily have so stated. It has provided, however, that the abandonment shall not be complete until all indebtedness has been provided for.

Section 4744, General Code, further provides that the property of a special school district so abandoned shall become vested in the board of education of the township or townships in which such property is situated. There is no provision of the statute providing for the assumption of any indebtedness by the township or townships to which such territory reverts.

The syllabus in case of State ex rel. vs. Nolliday, 9 Low. Dec. 738, reads:

> Where the legislature has made no provision as to a division of the property upon creation of a special subdistrict out of portions of other districts, the subdistrict will take none of the property and will assume none of the obligations of the old district."

The court, Bigger, J. on page 740, of the opinion, quotes from several authorities in support of his conclusion.

He quotes the syllabus of the case of City of Winona vs. School District, 40 Minn., 13, as follows:

> "If a part of a territory or a municipal corporation is separated from it by annexation to another, or by its creation into a new corporation, unless some other provision is made in the act authorizing the separation, the old corporation (it not having been abolished) remains subject to all its liabilities and retains all its property, including that which, upon the change of boundaries, happens to fall within the limits of the other corporation."

Judge Bigger, also quotes from case of Hughes vs. Ewing, 93 Cal., 414, as follows:

> "When the boundaries of a school district are changed, either to form a new corporation out of the territory of the original or to transfer a portion of the territory to another corporation, in the absence of any provision on the subject, the old corporation will be entitled to all property and be solely liable for all the obligations, and the territory taken therefrom will not be entitled to any of the corporate property, or liable for any of the obligations of the old corporation."

In the above case of Hughes vs. Ewing, 93 Cal., 414, another syllabus provides:

"The legislature has the power to change the boundaries of a school district, and in the exercise of such power it may make such provision respecting the property and obligations of the corporation as it may deem equitable or proper, and its action is conclusive."

The legislature has absolute power as to the disposition of the property and liabilities of a special school district. They have specifically transferred the property of such special school district, upon abandonment of such district, to the township school district, and may have provided that the township should assume the indebtedness of such district, but have not done so.

It is apparent that is was the intent of the legislature, as expressed in the statutes, that the abandonment for the special district should be complete, except for the purpose of paying the indebtedness of such district. And it is my opinion that such special district should continue to exist for the purpose of levying a tax therein annually, until the indebtedness is paid. The only duty of the board of education in such district would be to levy such tax and apply it to the payment of the indebtedness. When such indebtedness is paid in full, the abandonment of such district will be complete in every respect.

This method is pursued in other states.

In case of People vs. Brewer, 66 Ill., 154, the syllabus, reads:

"When the trustees of schools re-district a township, and form the territory of a district into other districts, so that the old one ceases, if they fail to apportion its indebtedness, and lay it upon the new organizations, the old district will be continued in existence for the purpose of enforcing its indebtedness. In such a case, service upon those who were directors at the time of the change will be good service, as they will constitute a body corporate for the purpose of enabling creditors to enforce payment of their debts."

It may occur that where a special school district is in two or more townships, all the property of such special district, would revert to one township, and the part of such special school district which is situated in the township securing none of its property, would be required to pay taxes to meet any indebtedness, even though such indebtedness was made in the purchase of such property. This, however, would not change the rule.

In case of Board of School Commissioners vs. Center Township, 143 Ind., 391, the third syllabus reads:

"The annexation to a city of territory which contains a school house and lot belonging to the school township from which the territory is taken, gives no right of action to such township against the school corporation of the city for the value of the property, or for any part of the unpaid indebtedness of the township for the purchase of the lot, or the erection of the house, under the act of March 3, 1803, providing that the title to the school property embraced in annexed territory shall vest in, and be conveyed to the school corporation of the city without provision of payment."

In conclusion: Where a special school district is abandoned, by vote of the electors, or otherwise, such special district continues to exist for the purpose of paying any and all indebtedness of such special school district, and any taxes levied to pay such indebtedness should be collected upon the property upon the duplicate in such school district, even though such district is situated in two or more townships.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—"BURNS LAW" CERTIFICATE OF AUDITOR—"LAW VOUCHERS"—MONEYS DUE ON CONTRACT—TRANSFER OF FEE FUNDS TO COVER DEFICIT IN GENERAL FUND—OVERDRAFTS—MONEYS APPROPRIATED—FISCAL YEAR OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, OF COUNTY, AND OF SALARY FUND—SEMI-ANNUAL SETTLEMENTS OF COUNTY AUDITOR AND TREASURER—FUNDING INDEBTEDNESS—"VALID EXISTING AND MATURED INDEBTEDNESS."

The county commissioners of Franklin county, under the conditions existing, may not purchase or pay for supplies for county offices and for the expense of maintaining the court house, unless the auditor certifies 'that the money is in the treasury or in process of collection to the credit of the fund from which the expenditure is to be made and not appropriated to any other purposes.'

Under the same circumstances, "law vouchers" for liabilities fixed by law or by some authority other than the county commissioners and not in their nature contractual, may be paid by warrants without such certificate and stamped "not paid for want of funds."

The day upon which the county commissioners close and reopen their books, that is, the third Monday in September, marks the beginning and end of the "fiscal year" of the county commissioners.

Such fiscal year however, does not fix the fiscal year of the county to which the machinery of the Smith tax law applies. Neither does the fiscal year of the county officers' salary law, which is the ordinary calendar year, and which relates solely to funds raised by fees.

The Smith law deals primarily with county needs and their relation to taxation revenues and their expenditures, and in this connection the "'fiscal year" is established by the provision for the semi-annual settlements between the county auditor and county treasurer, for the reason that by these arrangements, the revenues collected for county purposes first become available. Therefore, March 1st, being the date when these sums first become available, such date must be considered the beginning of the "fiscal year" and appropriations provided for under Section 5649-3d must be made for that year.

Section 5660, known as the "Burns law," before the Smith law was enacted, by its own operation, through the certificate of the auditor effected an appropriation to a new purpose, even of moneys not yet in the treasury. The Smith law, however, requires the money to be in the treasury and already appropriated, to its specific purpose.

The effect of the Smith law upon 5660 was immediate as it applied to all funds to be levied under that law and therefore, when there are no taxation funds, the county auditor may not lawfully issue for the payment of funds depending on contract of the commissioners, a Burn's law certificate under the Smith law, unless there is some way of getting money into the treasury aside from the process of taxation, such as by transfer of fee funds under 102 O. L. 137, for the reason that the Smith law in this connection, governs only funds raised by taxation. When law voucher warrants have been legally issued and stamped "not paid for want of funds" they cannot be paid by the auditor from the February collection unless the commissioners have set out such purpose in the annual budget, nor can the commissioners, unless the purpose was so set out, appropriate any money for that purpose. Moneys raised other than by taxation may, however, before March 1*st, be devoted to the payment of such vouchers.*

Under Section 5656, General Code, the commissioners may borrow money or issue bonds to fund existing debts by extending the time but not increasing their amounts; and they may use this means to pay such outstanding warrants, legally issued and stamped "not paid for want of funds." They may not, however, "exchange" bonds for such wants.

Where a deficit exists in the treasury caused by meeting the overdraft in the general county and judicial funds from moneys belonging to bond issue funds and undivided taxes, the commissioners may not issue bonds for the purpose of funding indebtedness until a valid, existing and matured indebtedness is established. In the case of the "undivided taxes" shortage, such a "valid, existing and matured indebtedness" is not established until settlements have been made by the various taxing districts and the amount due to each definitely determined. In the case of the bond fund shortage, this condition does not exist until the amounts due on the respective contracts or improvements are payable according to the terms.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1912.

HON. EDWARD C. TURNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 25th, submitting for my opinion thereon a statement of facts existing with respect to the finances of Franklin county, and series of questions arising thereunder. The facts are as follows:

> "During the fiscal year ending September, 1911, the expenditures of Franklin county exceeded the receipts thereof by $218,000.
> "On December 1, 1911 overdrafts existed in seventeen different funds, amounting to more than $233,000, caused by the treasurer's paying warrants against exhausted funds out of the general balance in the treasury, consisting of the proceeds of bond sales and some undivided taxes. On the same date there was about $100,000 in the treasury that might, legally, be transferred to the general fund, thus reducing the total overdraft to about $123,000.
> "The county commissioners attempted to make transfers from the bond funds, above referred to, to the exhausted funds, for the purpose of wiping out the overdrafts and being able to pay warrants out of such exhausted funds. No levy had been made for the purpose of reimbursing such bond funds. Upon proceedings, brought for that purpose, the common pleas court of Franklin county enjoined the commissioners from transferring the bond funds to the exhausted funds, thus leaving about $123,000 of the overdrafts unprovided for.

"The bulk of these overdrafts are in the general county and judicial funds. At the present time vouchers, the amounts of which are fixed by law, or by some authority other than the county commissioners authorized to fix the same—generally speaking, vouchers for the payment of claims not contractual in their nature—are being honored by warrants issued against these funds, which are being stamped "not paid for want of funds," under Section 2676 of the General Code. It is estimated that on March 1, 1912, the amount of such outstanding warrants will be approximately $75,000.

"By reason of the foregoing there will, probably, be, on March 1st, an overdraft in the general county and judicial funds combined of approximately $200,000, consisting in part of outstanding interest-bearing warrants, as aforesaid, and in part of a deficit in the treasury created, as aforesaid, by using the proceeds of bond sales and undistributed taxes to pay warrants drawn against such funds.

"In the meantime there is, of course, no money in the treasury to the credit of the general county and judicial funds.

"General Code, Section 5660, popularly known as the "Burns law," provides in effect that the commissioners shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation, involving the expenditure of money, or appropriate any money, unless the county auditor shall first certify that the money required for the payment of the obligation, or the appropriation, is in the treasury, to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection, and not appropriated for any other purpose.

"Section 5661, General Code, provides that all contracts, agreements, obligations, orders and resolutions entered into or passed contrary to the provisions of Section 5660 shall be void.

"Section 5649-3*a*, General Code, as enacted 102 O. L. 270, being part of the Smith one per cent. law, so-called, provides in effect that, in making up their budget, the county commissioners shall set forth specifically the amount to be raised for each and every purpose allowed by law, for which it is desired to raise money for the incoming year; and Section 5649-3*d*, General Code, as enacted in the same act, provides in effect that at the beginning of each fiscal half year the commissioners shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, from the moneys known to be in the treasury, and that all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriations shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget, nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commission, exclusive of receipts and balances."

The following are the questions submitted:

"1. What is the fiscal year of the county under the Smith one per cent. law; i. e. what is meant by the phrase 'the incoming year,' as used therein, with reference to the county?

"2. If it be held that the fiscal year of the county begins on March 1st, how, under the facts stated, may the general expenses of the county, such as supplies for county officers, and light and heat for the court house, all of which are contractual in their nature, be provided for and met between now and March 1, 1912, in face of the above cited statutory provisions?

"3. May the amount of the December collection for the general county and judicial funds, which will be available by March 1st and which will be less than the amount of the outstanding overdrafts in these funds, and that of the warrants being issued against said funds and stamped 'not paid for want of funds,' as aforesaid, be credited by the county auditor against such overdrafts and unpaid warrants or appropriated by the commissioners for the purpose of meeting such overdrafts and unpaid warrants?

"4. May the commissioners, for the purpose of paying the warrants issued and stamped 'not paid for want of funds,' and in the event that said warrants are not to be paid first out of the proceeds of the tax collection, borrow money and issue negotiable promissory notes or bonds under Section 5656, General Code; if neither of the suggested methods for meeting these warrants is proper how may they be taken care of?

"5. As to the deficit in the treasury, caused by meeting the overdraft in the general county and judicial funds from moneys belonging to bond issue funds and undivided taxes, may the commissioners issue bonds under Section 5656 and borrow money for the purpose of reimbursing these funds against which 'Burns law' certificates have been issued, and which will be needed for the specific purposes for which it was assessed and levied, and for the meeting of obligations of the county; if money cannot be borrowed for this purpose, how may the deficit in these funds be met?"

In connection with these questions you state that you are satisfied in your own mind as to certain collateral points. Thus, you state that it is your opinion that as a general rule, under the provisions of Section 5660, General Code, the commissioners may not purchase or pay for supplies for county offices and the expense of maintaining the court house, unless the auditor certifies that the money is in the treasury or in process of collection, to the credit of the fund from which the expenditure is to be made, and not appropriated for any other purpose.

While you do not solicit my opinion upon this question, I beg to state that, in my judgment, your ruling as to this point is correct.

You also state that you have ruled that under Section 5660, General Code, what are known as "law vouchers," the amounts of which are fixed by law or by some authority other than the county commissioners and are not contractual in their nature, may be paid or honored by the issuance of warrants without a certificate of the auditor. Without going into this question, and although you do not solicit my opinion thereon, I beg to state that in my judgment your conclusion, in this respect, is correct.

You advise me that you have also held that warrants may not be issued and stamped "not paid for want of funds," upon claims invalid because of inability to comply with Section 5660, as aforesaid; but that in cases in which the certificate of the auditor, under said section, is not necessary, as in the case of salaries fixed by law, and employes of the court house, under Section 2413, General Code, such warrants may be issued at least between the present date and March 1, 1912.

Though you do not solicit my opinion upon this question I beg leave to state that the distinction you draw in reaching this conclusion is, in my judgment, correct. The effect of the enactment of the Smith law upon Section 2676, General Code, and related sections, will, however be more fully discussed in some of your specific quotations.

You have assumed the answer to the first question, which I have stated above, to be the year beginning and ending on March 1st. Not because I think you are wrong in this assumption, but because I think the question is of some difficulty and ought to be reasoned out carefully to its conclusion, I have deemed it proper to go into this question at the outset of my investigation of the other question stated by you.

Secion 2507, General Code, provides as follows:

> "On or before the third Monday in September of each year, the county commissioners shall make to the court of common pleas of the county a detailed report of their financial transactions during the year next preceding such date. Such report shall be in writing, and itemized as to amount, to whom paid, and for what purpose."

Section 2980, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "On the twentieth of each November such (county) officers shall prepare and file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies * * * and other employes of their respective offices * * * for the year beginning January first next thereafter * * *."

Section 2568, General Code, provides that:

> "The county auditor shall keep an accurate account current with the treasurer of the county * * *."

Section 2569, General Code, provides:

> "On the first business day of each month, the county auditor shall prepare in duplicate a statement of the finances of the county for the preceding month, * * * and * * * submit such statement to the commissioners * * *"

Section 2596, General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "On or before the fifteenth day of February and on or before the tenth day of August of each year, the county auditor shall attend at his office to make settlement with the treasurer of the county and ascertain the amount of taxes with which such treasurer is to stand charged. * * *"

Section 5649-3*a*, General Code, as enacted 102 O. L. 2270, and known as a part of the Smith one per cent. law, provides in part as follows:

> "On or before the first Monday in June, each year, the county commissioners of each county * * * shall submit or cause to be submitted to the county auditor an annual budget, setting forth in itemized form an estimate stating the amount of money needed for their wants for the incoming year and for each month thereof."

The language above quoted and that of Section 5649-3*d*, "at the beginning of each fiscal half year the various boards mentioned in Section 5649-3*a* of this act shall make appropriations * * *," constitute the language which, in the light of the sections preceding and the other provisions of the Smith law, is to be construed in answering your first question.

I think it is reasonably clear from the provisions of the sections first above quoted, that the fiscal year of the county commissioners begins and ends on the third Monday in September. Then is when the commissioners are required to submit a detailed report of their financial transactions for the year. In a sense, their books are closed and reopened on this date, which is to be regarded as of importance, and the provisions as to which is clearly mandatory, in the light of Section 2509, General Code, providing a penalty of five dollars per day for delay in the making and filing of the report after the third Monday in September.

The strict language of Section 5649-3*a*, in its primary grammatical construction and meaning, would seem to indicate this fiscal year. That is to say, it is provided by that section that "the county commissioners * * * shall submit * * * an annual budget, setting forth * * * the amount of money needed for their wants for the incoming year." On careful examination of the whole act known as the Smith one per cent. law, however, I think it becomes apparent that the word "their," as used in this provision, is not employed in an exact sense. Without going into detail I may say that it is my opinion, from the provisions of the whole act, that it is not the needs of the commissioners for the incoming year that the commissioners must estimate and report to the county auditor, as therein provided, but the needs of the county, from the standpoint of the levy of taxes. To reach this conclusion, as I have already indicated, the whole act must be examined, and, perhaps, some violence done to the exact language of some portions of it. No other conclusion, however, is consistent with the object and purposes of the entire act.

It is not, then, the fiscal year of the county commissioners for the satisfaction of the needs of which the machinery of the Smith law must be brought into operation; it is rather the fiscal year of the county.

I may here state that, in my judgment, the phrase "incoming year," as used in Section 5649-3*a*, above quoted, and the word "year," as it occurs in Section 5649-3*d*, are synonymous; that is to say, the wants of the county are to be estimated for the incoming year and at the beginning of that incoming year the first appropriations are to be made.

I have quoted other sections of the General Code for the purpose of disclosing provisions which might indicate what is the fiscal year of the county, other than those of the Smith law itself. Thus, it appears that under the county officers' salary law the fiscal year is the calendar year. Allowances are to be made from the fee fund by the county commissioners for the calendar year, and adjustments and settlements are to be made quarterly during the calendar year; so that in a county like Franklin County, for instance, the balances of fees in excess of salaries and clerk hire, coming into the county treasury under the county salary law, are ascertained at the end of each quarter of the calendar year. I do not, however, regard the calendar year as the fiscal year for the purposes of the Smith law. The county officers' salary law deals primarily with the fees of the various county offices affected thereby and does not directly affect the subjects of taxation and of the appropriation of revenues derived from taxation. There is, therefore, no necessary connection between the fiscal year under the county officers' salary law and the fiscal year of the county for the purposes of the expenditure of revenues raised by taxation.

A somewhat more direct connection with the matter of taxation is disclosed with respect to the semi-annual tax settlements to be made by the couny auditor and the county treasurer. While no fiscal year is mentioned in the sections providing for these settlements, yet, they must be made at regular intervals of six months and they have to do directly with moneys raised by taxation. That is to say, by virtue of these sections the money levied for county purposes upon the general county duplicate becomes available for expenditure, in the full sense of the word, on and after the date of the semi-annual settlement. The first money under a particular levy becomes so available after the February settlement, and the second half of the same levy becomes available after the August settlement.

Now, under the statutes as they existed prior to the enactment of the Smith law, these provisions respecting semi-annual settlements did not denote the existence of any fiscal year. Under Section 5660, for example, it was sufficient for the purpose of the issuance of a certificate that the money was in the treasury, that the levy for the fund had been made and was in process of collection at the time such certificate was issued. The other sections, above quoted, provided not for an annual or semi-annual balancing of accounts as between the treasurer and the auditor, but for monthly statements and balances. In reality, then, the auditor's accounts under the old law were not kept upon a yearly basis, but upon a monthly basis.

Now, Section 5649-3*d*, as I have already indicated, requires the ascertainment of a fiscal year for the county and not that for the county commissioners. Inasmuch as the county auditor keeps all the accounts of the county, draws all the warrants, and has in his office the books which show the balances to the credit of all funds of the county, it would seem appropriate to search for the fiscal year, if it had any existence prior to the enactment of the Smith law, in the provisions respecting the conduct of his office. As already pointed out, however, the statutes do not disclose the existence of any such fiscal year in the auditor's office, as applied to the accounts of the whole county.

But while there was no fiscal year of the county under the statutes as they existed prior to the enactment of the Smith one per cent. law, there were annual and semi-annual periods at which the amount of undistributed taxes with which the county was to be credited and which the treasurer credited or ascertained, namely: the semi-annual tax settlements. Now, consideration of the primary purpose of the Smith law, as evidenced by all the provisions of the act, rather than as expressed in any one clause or phrase thereof, leads to the conclusion that it deals, broadly speaking, with the production of public revenues by taxation and the expenditure thereof. So, while it deals, and necessarily deals, with the appropriation and expenditure of all the revenues of a taxing district, including those arising from sources other than taxation, yet, the primary purpose being as above stated, the appropriation periods mentioned in Section 5649-3*d* must necessarily have some relation to the periods at which the proceeds of taxation become available to the taxing district. For this reason, I had occasion to hold that, as to a municipal corporation, the fiscal year of which was positively fixed by statute that Section 5649-3*d* did not become operative until the beginning of the fiscal year for the needs of which taxes had been levied through the agency of the budget commission, as provided in other sections of the Smith law.

As suggested, the case of the county differs from that of the city, because there is no one fiscal year applicable to all the departments of the county government existing under statutes adopted prior to the Smith law. Yet, it is manifestly the intention of the Smith law that the commissioners, in preparing their budget, fix in their minds the needs of every department of the county government for some certain year, therein designated as "the incoming year." This year could not be one year for the commissioners, another for the sheriff, another for the auditor, another for the infirmary directors, and so on; but it must be one year, the same for all the offices.

Section 5649-3d provides that appropriations shall be made from moneys known to be in the treasury and that all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances. Having held in the case of the municipal corporation that this section became effective as to each taxing district, at the beginning of the year for which the first taxes received under the Smith law were levied, I am constrained, now, to hold that, as to the county, this section will become effective at least as soon as the proceeds of the December tax collection, the first under the Smith law, become available to the county, and a balance is struck on the books of the county auditor showing the amount in the several funds subject to appropriation.

This would be March 1, 1912, that being the date of the first monthly adjustment and balancing of accounts by the auditor and the treasurer succeeding the first semi-annual tax settlement under the Smith law. The year, then, for which taxes must be deemed to have been levied by the county commissioners, subject to the approval of the budget commission, is the year beginning and ending March 1st, and the semi-annual appropriation periods would be March 1st and October 1st.

It follows, therefore, that you have correctly assumed that "the incoming year" of which the Smith law speaks is the year beginning and ending on March 1st. You will pardon me, I am sure, for going into this matter so much in detail, but the question appeared doubtful to me, and of such general interest that I felt justified in giving it my attention. The difficulty upon this point arises from the fact that the Smith law is silent as to a matter of vital importance, which fact necessitates the supplying of a deficiency in legislation by a necessary implication.

Your second question relates to miscellaneous expenses of the county, for the making of which the commissioners or some other officer would have to enter into contracts, or otherwise exercise discretionary power, so as to bring the transaction within the rule of Section 5660, General Code. You ask whether or not the commissioners, or such other officers, may lawfully incur any such expenses until the appropriation is made on March 1st. Section 5660 provides in part as follows:

> "The county commissioners of a county * * * shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn or has been levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose * * *."

Section 5661 provides in effect that all contracts, agreements or obligations etc., entered into contrary to the provisions of Section 5660 shall be void.

As you state, there are numerous exceptions to the general rule of this statute, some of them expressly made in other statutes and some of them arising by implication, from consideration of the manifest intention of the statute, such as appropriations for salaries fixed by law, etc. The question arising here is as to whether the adoption of the Smith law, and especially Section 5649-3*d* thereof, has any practical effect on the above section insofar as it authorizes the certificate of which it speaks to be issued if the money required "has been levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection, and not appropriated for any other purpose."

A very little thought will convince, I think, that the Smith law does have a positive effect upon this provision. It is further provided by Section 5660 that "the sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county * * *is fully discharged from the contract * * *." In other words, the issuance of a Burns law certifificate under Section 5660, as it existed prior to the enactment of the Smith law, was itself an appropriation from a fund in the treasury, and even from a fund to come into the treasury in pursuance of a levy made on the duplicate. This is in direct conflict with the fundamental idea of Section 5649-3*d*, which is that the funds produced by taxation shall be appropriated and divided into appropriation accounts at the beginning of each half yearly period by the commissioners.

Section 5649-3*d* is, as I have already pointed out, borrowed, so to speak, from the municipal code, with some very important original features of its own. It corresponds in and supplants Section 3797, General Code, which was Section 43 of the Municipal Code, passed in 1902. There was in force at the time of the enactment of the Municipal Code a section, now Section 3806, General Code, which corresponds to Section 5660, General Code; this section was known as Section 2699, Revised Statutes, and was re-enacted as Section 45, Municipal Code. So that it will be observed that ever since 1902, cities have been operating under what may be termed this double check upon public expenditures—the requirement that the proceeds of taxation known as the "fund" be first appropriated by council to a general purpose, coupled with the further requirement that when so appropriated they may be further appropriated to a specific purpose by the issuance of the auditor's certificate.

It would seem that the question which has arisen under Sections 5660 and 5649-3*d*, as to the county, ought to have arisen under Sections 3797 and 3806, as to the city, in 1902, or at the time when the Municipal Code was adopted. Strangely enough, however, I do not find any reported decision, either of a court of Nisi Prius, or of any higher court on this question. Upon careful study, however, I have reached the conclusion that the phrase "not appropriated for any other purpose," as used both in Section 3806 and Section 5660, General Code, really means "and appropriated for the general purpose for which the expenditure is to be made." In other words, I am of the opinion that the word "appropriated," as used in Section 3806, as enacted as a part of the Municipal Code, Section 45, could not mean the same as it has heretofore meant as used in the parallel clause of Section 5660; nor could it mean the same thing as is meant by the same word as used in Section 3797 and in Section 5649-3*d*. Put in still another way, it is my opinion that the effect of the certificate of the auditor, under Section 3806, is not to appropriate from a fund but to set aside from an appropriation account.

There is this differense between Section 3806 and Section 5660; the former does not contain the language now under consideration, namely: that a certificate may be filed if the money is levied on the duplicate and in process of collection. This language was left out of Section 3806 when it was enacted as Section 45, Municipal Code, although included in statutes previously in force, such as Section 2699-1, Revised Statutes, applicable to Cleveland and Columbus, for the very obvious reason that it was incompatible with the scheme of finance embodied in Section 3797, General Code, Section 43, Municipal Code.

In short, I am satisfied that it is impossible to regard the certificate of the auditor as having the same appropriating effect as the appropriation of council, speaking with reference to the sections of the Municipal Code which seems to have served as models for Section 5649-3*d*, General Code. I have thus reached the conclusion under the latter section appropriations must first be made before any money is available for expenditure, and that as a consequence thereof the certificate of the auditor, to be issued under Section 5660, General Code, can no longer be issued until the money has been not only brought into the treasury but also appropriated by the commissioners, in the case of the county.

As tending to put the matter still more clearly I could say that in my judgment the word "fund," as used in Section 5660, General Code, is to be regarded as modified by the enactment of Section 5649-3d so as to mean "appropriation account." So that the auditor must certify not only that the money is in the treasury to the credit of the fund but that it is in the treasury to the credit of the appropriations account within the fund from which it is to be drawn.

From all the foregoing, I think it follows that so much of Section 5660 as provides that the certificate may be issued by the auditor when the money needed for the expenditure has been levied and is in process of collection is inconsistent with Section 5649-3*d*, requiring semi-annual appropriations for all the objects for which the county has to provide. This being the case, that portion of Section 5660 is, in my judgment, repealed.

Having reached this conclusion it becomes necessary further to inquire when this repeal became, or is to become, effective. I have already stated that Section 5649-3d did not in a sense become effective upon the enactment of the Smith law. Thus, as to municipal corporations, it did not govern the second semi-annual appropriation for the year 1911, although that appropriation had to be made after the Smith law took effect as a whole, but its effect was postponed until it could operate upon and with respect to an appropriation of moneys raised under the Smith law.

In discussing the first question raised by your letter, as to the identity of the fiscal year for the county, I have stated in a general way that the first duty of the county commissioners to appropriate under Section 5649-3*d* will arise on March 1, 1918. Is, then, the repealing effect of Section 5649-3*d* upon Section 5660, General Code, as above defined, postponed until that date? I think not. My reason for holding that the county commissioners need not appropriate for the first time under the Smith law until March 1, 1912, was, as above stated, that the Smith law deals with the expenditure of moneys levied in a certain way, namely; through the agency of the budget commission. This reason may be applied to the solution of the present question as well. It leads to the promulgation of the following principle, namely: all moneys raised within the maximum limitations of the Smith law by levies subject to the approval of the budget commission are to be expended as provided in that act and after appropriation by the proper authorities.

Upon this reasoning, then, the repealing or amending effect of Section 5649-3*d* upon Section 5660 was immediate. Moneys levied through the agency of the budget commission could not, therefore, for the reasons above pointed out, be anticipated while still unappropriated.

From all the foregoing it follows that the county auditor may not lawfully issue a Burns law certificate against moneys levied in 1911 and now in progress of collection, but which have not been and will not be appropriated until March 1, 1912.

Inasmuch as the auditor cannot lawfully issue this certificate it necessarily follows, from Section 5661, that no contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of moneys, can be lawfully entered into by the county commissioners or any other county officer until March 1, 1912, unless there is some way of getting money into the treasury, aside from the process of taxation. I have searched the statutes, and find that county commissioners have no power to borrow money to meet the ordinary current expenses of the county. Save and excepting certain emergencies, other than the one with which Franklin county is confronted, and certain specific improvements, the power of the commissioners in this respect is limited to the funding or refunding of existing valid indebtedness. It occurs to me, however, that on January 1, 1912 there must have been money in the various fee funds of the county, subject to transfer under authority of Section 2985, General Code, as amended 192 Ohio Laws, 137, which provides in part that,

"The county commissioners may at any time transfer from the fee fund of any office any amount thereof in excess of that necessary to pay the compensation of the deputies * * * or employes * * * in said office, to the general county fund or to any fund from which transfers have heretofore been made to any of such fee funds, provided, that when any transfer of moneys has heretofore been made from any such fee fund the fund from which such transfers have been made shall be fully re-imbursed before any transfers may be made to the general county fund. Such transfers may be made upon authority herein provided, any law to the contrary notwithstanding. * * *"

In a county of the size of Franklin county, this section should enable the commissioners to raise a considerable sum of money. I am, of course, entirely unfamiliar with the facts but it would seem to me that the sum so rendered available ought to be almost sufficient to supply the commissioners with funds to buy supplies for county officers and meet other miscellaneous expenses for a period of two months.

Such moneys are not subject to the rule above laid down, or, more properly speaking, will not be subject thereto until after March 1, 1912. This is for the reason already twice stated, that the Smith law relates primarily to the disposition of moneys raised by taxation. After March 1, 1912, such balances may not be directly expended without appropriation, because of that provision of Section 5649-3d which is to the effect that "all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof." Until such appropriations are made, however, these and any other revenues, produced otherwise than by taxation on the general 1911 duplicate, may be regarded as in the treasury for the purpose of the issuance of Burns law certificates.

There are, perhaps, other instances similar to this, of moneys coming into the treasury prior to March 1, 1912, to the credit of the general revenue fund, or to be transferred thereto from sources other than taxation on the general duplicate. All such moneys may, in my opinion, until March 1, 1912, be regarded as in the treasury subject to expenditure and the issuance of Burns law certificates therefor.

Aside from these possible expedients, I know of no way to provide for the general expenses of the county, such as those mentioned in your second question, between now and March 1, 1912. I trust that the means pointed out by me may be made available by the county commissioners, and that they will produce sufficient funds for the purposes of the county.

Your third question is as to whether or not the outstanding overdrafts and unpaid warrants must be charged by the county auditor against the December collection for the general county and judicial funds, when available after the February settlement; and further as to whether or not appropriations may be made from the general county and judicial funds by the county commissioners, on and after March 1, for the purpose of taking up such overdrafts and unpaid warrants.

This question involves the effect of the Smith law, and in particular, of the sections above quoted and discussed, upon Sections 2676 and 2677, General Code, which are as follows:

"When a warrant is presented to the county treasurer for payment, and is not paid, for want of money belonging to the particular fund on which it is drawn, the treasurer shall indorse the warrant, 'Not paid for want of funds,' with the date of its presentation, and sign his name thereto. Such warrant shall thereafter bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum. A memorandum of all such warrants shall be kept by the treasurer in a book for that purpose."

"Section 2677. As soon as sufficient funds are in the treasury of the county to redeem the warrants drawn thereon, and on which interest is accruing, the treasurer shall give notice * * * that he is ready to redeem such warrants * * *"

Much of the discussion in which I have indulged myself in dealing with your second question is applicable to the solution of this question. I have already pointed out that moneys arising from taxes levied under the Smith law are no longer available for expenditure of any kind until they have been appropriated. The question at once arises as to whether or not the issuance of a warrant by the auditor is, in itself, an "expenditure" within the meaning of Section 5649-3*d*, or as to whether, on the other hand, there is no "expenditure" until the warrant is honored. This question involves the fundamental one as to whether or not the two sections above quoted are impliedly repealed by the Smith law.

It is not necessary to answer this somewhat difficult question in connection with the precise query now under discussion. There is no question in my mind but that up to March 1, 1912, warrants may lawfully be issued by the auditor, and stamped "Not paid for want of funds" by the treasurer. In other words, whatever be the effect of the Smith law upon Section 2675, it will be postponed until that date.

As to Section 2676, however, in so far as it relates to unpaid warrants now outstanding, it cannot be regarded as impliedly repealed. So, to hold would violate the constitutional limitation as to the impairment of the obligation of contracts. Yet, Section 5649-3*d*, undoubtedly, has a modifying effect on this section; and, in my opinion, this effect may best be defined by paraphrasing Section 2677 as follows:

"As soon as sufficient funds are in the treasury of the county and appropriated to redeem the warrants drawn thereon, and on which interest is accruing, the treasurer shall give notice."

Adopting this interpretation of Sections 2676 and 2677, General Code, it is apparent that the auditor may not, as soon as he receives notice of the amount of taxes with which the treasurer is charged at the February settlement, credit any portion thereof against the outstanding interest-bearing warrants of which you speak.

Nor can the commissioners, under the facts submitted by you, lawfully appropriate for this purpose. The purpose of meeting outstanding warrants is a different one from that providing for the needs of the county for the incoming year, or rather the first half thereof. In this, the reasoning which you submit in your opinion is, in my judgment, absolutely correct. It would have been competent for the commissioners to include in their annual budget an estimate of a sum sufficient to pay outstanding warrants, and then to appropriate from the proceeds of taxes levied for that purpose an amount from which such outstanding warrants might have been redeemed. Section 5649-3*d*, however, in providing that "no appropriations shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget," prevents the commissioners from appropriating any money whatever at any time during this year for the purpose of taking up outstanding interest-bearing warrants.

I might add here, a fact which has some bearing upon your second question, as well as upon the one now under consideration. Moneys made available by transfers from the fee funds to the general county and judicial funds would be first subject to the payment of outstanding warrants; yet, before the treasurer can give the notice specified in Section 2677, there must be sufficient funds in the treasury to meet all the outstanding warrants by proper action, which might be styled "manipulation," yet, which would be perfectly legitimate and within the law; the commissioners might see to it that the amount transferred from the fee funds to the general county and judicial funds at any one time would be less than the amount of outstanding warrants; the treasurer would not, then, be bound to publish his notice and subject the warrants to redemption; and the auditor would be at liberty, as aforesaid, to issue his Burns law certificate against such moneys.

It follows from what I have said, of course, that outstanding warrants may not be taken up on March 1st, either by the county auditor or through appropriations made by the commissioners. The same is, in my judgment, true of the deficit in the treasury, caused by using the proceeds of bond issues and undivided taxes to pay warrants drawn on the general county and judicial funds. The situation here is peculiar, and I shall comment upon it more at length subsequently. However, inasmuch as the purpose of a levy under the Smith law for a certain fund is, as above pointed out, in the absence of express language in the budget to the contrary, presumed to be provision for the needs of the fund for the incoming year; inasmuch as no appropriation can be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget; and inasmuch, finally, as the moneys actually withdrawn from the treasury did not belong to the general county and judicial funds at all, but to another fund or funds, for which no provision whatever has been made in the annual budget, I am clearly of the opinion that neither is it the duty of the auditor to credit any part of the February collection for taxes against the overdraft or deficiency in the treasury; nor is it within the power of the county commissioners to appropriate any such moneys for that purpose.

Possibly, revenues from sources other than taxation, coming into the treasury, prior to March 1, 1912, ought to be first devoted to the supply of this deficiency. I shall more fully discuss this question in answering your fifth query. I point it out at this time inasmuch as I have already stated that such funds are available for expenditures for ordinary county purposes between the first of January and the first of March.

You next submit the question as to whether or not the commissioners may lawfully issue the bonds of the county for the purpose of funding the indebtedness represented by the outstanding warrants stamped, "Not paid for want of funds," and bearing interest at the rate of six per cent., and, having sold said bonds, so apply the proceeds of such sale. My attention is called, in this connection, to the case of Commissioners vs. State, 78 O. S. 287. The first branch of the syllabus of that case is as follows:

> "County commissioners are authorized by Section 2834*a*, Revised Statutes (now Section 5656, General Code), to issue new bonds and to exchange them for outstanding bonds, but they are not authorized to exchange them for the promissory notes or other evidences of the debt of the county."

The statement of the case shows that the commissioners were endeavoring to issue the bonds of the county under the section named, and to exchange them for promissory notes signed by the county commissioners. That is to say, the bonds were not to be sold at public sale, subject to the restrictions and safeguards surrounding such a proceeding, but were simply to be exchanged. It is made clear in the opinion that the vice in the transaction which the court held invalid, consisted of the exchange rather than the issue of the bonds. In this connection the court, per Summers, J., uses the following language (page 304):

> "However, it is not necessary to determine whether the statute confers power to give negotiable promissory notes, for if the word 'bonds' is used to designate a security different from a negotiable promissory note then the authority to issue new bonds and to exchange them for outstanding bonds does not include power to issue and exchange bonds for negotiable promissory notes or evidences of indebtedness other than bonds. There is a reason why such an exchange should be limited to bonds. Section 22*b*, Revised Statutes, enacted in 1883, provides that all bonds issued by boards of county commissioners shall be sold to the highest bidder after being advertised, and it may well be that in such case the legislature supposed it would be in the interest of the public to permit new bonds to be issued, bearing a less rate of interest, and to be exchanged for the outstanding bonds. Moreover, if the power to exchange is not limited to such an indebtedness, for which bonds had been advertised and sold, then the last amendment added nothing to the section, for it already conferred power to fund, refund or extend."

The statute, Section 5656, General Code, provides as follows:

> "The trustees of a township, the board of education of a school district and the commissioners of a county, for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such township, district or county is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time and at the rate of interest that said trustees, board or commissioners deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

This is not the portion of the statute which was under review in Commissioners vs. State. The portion thereof which the court construed is found in present Section 5657, General Code.

I am of the opinion that under Section 5656, General Code, as above quoted, the commissioners may borrow money or issue the bonds of the county as they see fit, and with the proceeds of the loan, thus effected, take up the outstanding warrants of which you speak. If the commissioners determine to issue bonds, however, they may not lawfully exchange them for the outstanding warrants.

In answering your fifth question I deem it advisable to restate and analyze the facts under which it has arisen.

Prior to the enactment of the Smith law, so-called, as I have already pointed out, there was really no fiscal year for the county. The various funds in the county treasury were continuous. The laws of the state applicable to the expenditure of public funds, and in particular Sections 5699, 2443, 5654, 2296, et seq., 2571, 2675, and perhaps other similar sections, required, in general, that the proceeds of a levy be used for the purpose for which the levy was made, and that without a transfer of funds, temporary or permanent, money levied for a specific purpose might not be lawfully expended from the treasury of the county for any other purpose. Yet, the apparent rigidity of these statutes was not perfectly real; thus, it was permissible for warrants to be issued on a class of claims due from the county, regardless of whether or not there was money in the fund; it was also permissible for obligations to be incurred before the money to meet them was actually in the treasury, under Section 5660, above discussed. That section permitted, as I have already pointed out, contracts to be entered into and auditors' certificates to be issued therefor, when the money to meet the obligation so created was "levied and placed on the duplicate and in process of collection, and not appropriated for any other purpose." Now, the commissioners' levies were made at their March and June sessions, under the old laws, and as soon as the levy was made, apparently under Section 5660, the money might be regarded as available for the purpose of the incurring of obligations.

Under statutes like these, therefore, but precisely in what manner I am not informed by your letter, the fiscal officers of Franklin county—and I imagine of practically all the counties in the state—had formed the custom of anticipating revenues to a considerable extent. That is to say, so long as moneys were regarded as in a "fund" available for expenditure as soon as they were levied on the duplicate and, thus, in process of collection, it was by no means a surprising thing that, through the occurrence of unexpected contingencies and otherwise, the affairs of a county could be placed upon a purely credit basis. This state of affairs, not chargeable to any one board of commissioners, county auditor or county treasurer, but rather to the law itself and to the accumulated exigencies of a number of years, presented, as a matter of course, many possibilities of error and evil; it is itself the reason for the enactment of Section 5649-3*d*, which has perhaps given rise to the difficulty with which the county is now confronted. One of the evils thus arising seems to have been that revealed under a state of facts, of which the following is a hypothetical outline:

In a given year the expenses of a county, aside from the contracts entered into by its managing board, and payable from its treasury without any allowance or approval, greatly exceed the amount of money levied for the year by its levying authorities. This might at any time, under the confused jumble of statutes under which counties formerly operated, occur without the fault of the levying authorities, and because of causes quite beyond their ability to foresee at the time of making the levy. Naturally enough, as the year approached its close the commissioners would include in the levy for the incoming year, an increased amount for the funds from which such unusual expenditures had been made. These funds would be in process of collection before the second semi-annual tax settlement; being in process of collection, the county officials would regard them as virtually in the treasury, the word "fund" being to them merely a bookkeeping term. They would then feel at liberty to anticipate the levy which had been made and to spend the money, or part of it at least, under such levy, before it was ever in the county treasury in cash. This object being impossible of direct accomplishment, it would be indirectly effected by spending moneys in the general treasury balance which would not be needed until after the next semi-annual settlement. Fiscal officers would, doubtless, feel justified in doing such things, inasmuch as, under ordinary circumstances, their acts would never be called in question, and inasmuch, further, as in this way the business of the county might go along smoothly and without interruption; all of its bills be met when due; the payment of interest might be avoided, and nobody injured thereby.

I suspect that the hypothetical case which I have assumed is virtually that of Franklin county. I am led so to believe by statements which seem to have been agreed upon between counsel in the case in which you succeeded in enjoining the transfer of funds for the purpose of relieving the overdrafts of which we are now speaking, as evidenced by the decision of the court and the briefs filed on both sides. Thus, it seems that the unexpected expenditures in Franklin county were those occasioned by the quadrennial appraisement, bills for which were payable directly out of the county treasury without allowance of the county commissioners, except in certain cases; and that in addition to these unexpected expenditures the commissioners, in pursuance of an ambitious program of road improvement, had adopted what might almost be termed a policy of anticipating revenue, entirely proper under the statutes as they then stood. It seemed that the auditor and treasurer fell into the precise practice which I have imagined in the hypothetical case above stated, of regarding the "funds" of the county, merely, as bookkeeping accounts, and of paying any and all warrants out of any money in the general balance of the treasury. Indeed, there is no evidence that in so doing these officers did not follow the established custom, which was, perhaps, one advantageous to the county under the then existing law.

Whether or not the practice of thus paying warrants out of the general treasury balances, so long as there was money in the fund, levied and in process of collection, to meet them, was legal or subjected the officers participating in it to any technical penalty, is a question not necessary to be considered in this connection. Suffice it here to say only, that the county was not pecuniarily injured thereby.

Now, in June, 1911, the Smith one per cent. law became effective. I have already defined the operation and effect of that law with respect to Section 5660, General Code, in so far as the latter section allowed expenditures to be made in anticipation of the collection of revenue. It will follow, I think, from what I said in discussing this precise question, that the tax limitation law of 1911 had precisely the same effect upon all such statutes. In other words, its essential purpose, in so far as it pertains to the expenditure of public moneys, is, broadly speaking, to do away with the practice of anticipating revenues and to place the affairs of all taxing districts upon what is aptly known as a "cash basis."

This law went into effect immediately upon its passage. There had been, it is true, a similar law enacted the year previous, but it was well understood that this law was virtually inoperative, and, furthermore, the prior law contained no provisions whatever respecting the expenditure of public money. The fiscal officers of the county were, therefore, taken, so to speak, by surprise; they were given only six months within which to adjust their methods of administration to the revolutionary change in the law, effected by the enactment of the tax limitation act. Not realizing, perhaps, that the change was as fundamental as it is, they innocently continued their former methods of expenditure, supposing that the taxes to be available in February, 1912, could be applied to the replenishment of overdrafts made during the year 1911, as in the past, until they were checked by the vigilance of the prosecuting attorney and the interposition of the power of the court.

I have thus gone into the facts under which your fifth question arises, so that if I have misunderstood them you may correct me; so that, in other words, the basis of the opinion which I am about to express will be clearly defined, it being understood, I trust, that my opinion is upon the facts just stated.

There is, then, an overdraft in certain funds, some of them improvement funds, others of them undivided tax funds; these overdrafts cannot be taken up, as I have already stated, and provided for out of the proceeds of taxation available at the February settlement; the funds in which the overdrafts exist will be needed before the proceeds of another levy can be made available; and even then it will be impossible for Franklin county, within its new limits of taxation, to provide in a single levy for the entire amount of the overdrafts; may then, the procedure of Section 5656, General Code, be followed in order to relieve the county of this menace to its credit?

Said Section 5656, General Code, provides in part:

"The * * * commissioners of a county, for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness which, from its limits of taxation such * * * county is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof so as to change but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time, and at the rate of interest that said * * * board of commissioners deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."

This section must be read in connection with Section 5658, General Code, which provides as follows:

"No indebtedness of a * * * county shall be funded * * or extended unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such county, by a formal resolution of the commissioners thereof * * *"

The following questions must be answered, in the order of their importance, under these sections, and the facts to which they are to be applied:

1. Is there now, or will there eventually be, under the conditions above described, an existing, valid and binding obligation of Franklin county?"

In my opinion there is now no "existing obligation of the county," in the full sense of the term as used in the statute. In this connection I call attention to the fact that the indebtedness must have matured before the power of the commissioners arises. Now, there is an equitable obligation on the part of the county now in existence. Such obligation arises, upon familiar principles, whenever trust funds are diverted from their lawful custody and applied to purposes other than those to which they are dedicated. The proceeds of a sale of bonds for a specific purpose constitute a trust fund, and the county treasurer's custody of the same is that of a trustee; so, in like manner, the treasurer of a county is, with respect to funds belonging to other taxing districts and forming a part of an undivided tax fund in the county treasury, a trustee for the benefit of such other taxing districts. When, therefore, the treasurer permitted these specific moneys to be used for other purposes, though with the purpose of replacing them out of moneys which he thought would be certain to come into his possession and custody in the future, and be available for that purpose, he committed a technical breach of trust. If he had converted the money to his own use he would, of course, be accountable for the fund and its accretions after such conversion. In this case, however, he used the money for the benefit of the county; hence, the trust fund can be traced into the hands, so to speak, of a taker with notice—that is to say, the money having been expended for the benefit of the county, the county may itself be held liable as a trustee under a resulting trust. The fund having been dissipated for the uses of the county, and no longer being subject to identification, the county would be liable, at law, after the equitable remedy of the beneficiaries of the fund had failed to produce the money itself.

But it appears from the decision of Judge Bigger that the money has not been withdrawn from these funds, as such, but merely from the general treasury balance; it cannot, therefore, be definitely ascertained how much has, for instance, been withdrawn from this specific bond fund and how much has been withdrawn from this particular taxing district's interest in the undivided tax fund. The treasurer rightfully maintained a general treasury balance, commingling these moneys with the moneys of the county, and as to this procedure there can be no complaint, for that is the way in which all the funds of the county are kept. Hence, it seems to me that while there may be a technical liability there is no specific and ascertained liability to any one municipal corporation or person. A county cannot be in debt to its own treasury, nor to a fund in its own treasury; it must be in debt to some outside party.

Now, when it is time for the county auditor and the county treasurer to settle with the treasurers and auditing officers of the several taxing districts to which the money in the undivided tax fund, above referred to, ultimately belongs, there will, doubtless, be some money in the treasury which can be identified as belonging to that fund This is because, as I understand it, the general treasury balance was not exhausted at the time the injunction of the court was issued. The treasurer may, then, pay over such moneys, either pro rata or upon any other basis, to such treasurers and auditing offices; the county treasurer will then be indebted to the taxing districts for the amount chargeable to him and not paid over. The exact amount due and owing to each taxing district from such fund, and unpaid, will then be ascertained. As I have stated, it would be, technically and primarily, the obligation and delict of the county treasurer; but the ultimate obligation will be that of the county, because the money for which the treasurer is chargeable, and which he does not produce at settlement time and pay over to the treasurers and auditing officers of the various taxing districts entitled to it, has been expended for the use of the county; then, and not until then, will there be, as to the undivided tax fund, an "existing obligation" of the county.

In my opinion such an obligation would be valid and binding against the county. The facts of the case are so peculiar that I have been unable to find any authority directly in point, and I know of no reason why, under circumstances of this sort, the familiar principles of equity jurisprudence should not be applied. It is perfectly clear and susceptible to proof that the county has received the benefit of these moneys, wrongfully expended from the undivided tax fund; the technical breach of trust is that of the treasurer, and perhaps of the auditor, but equity does not concern itself so much with the ascertainment of liabilities as it does with the enforcement of the trust itself. The county is, in my opinion, as aforesaid, chargeable with the trust originally charged upon the county treasurer and county auditor; and, in equity, would be held accountable for the money the benefit of which it has received.

2. Is the indebtedness matured, within the meaning of Section 5656?

The answer to this question has already been suggested; there is now no matured indebtedness, in my opinion, but there will be when the treasurer has settled with the various taxing districts.

3. Does the inability of the county to pay this indebtedness result "from its limits of taxation?"

It seems to me that the answer to this question is made clear by your statement that the county is now, by reason of the Smith law, unable to levy at any one time a sufficient amount of money to replenish this fund. This, of itself, is a sufficient reason for an affirmative answer to the question now suggested: Indeed the statement of facts, above set forth, shows that the existence of this particular overdraft, whether originally legal or illegal, and the inability of the county officers to wipe out the same, results from the enactment of the Smith law, which is itself primarily and solely a law which deals with limits of taxation. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the inability of the county to pay this indebtedness arises because of its limits of taxation.

From all the foregoing I am of the opinion that there is not now such an indebtedness of the county, which may be extended and funded under Section 5656, General Code, arising out of the overdraft in the undivided tax fund; but that, when the treasurer and auditor settle with the officers of the various taxing districts, to which the undivided taxes are due, there will be an existing, valid and binding obligation of the county, which the county is unable to pay at maturity because of its limits of taxation and which, therefore, may be extended and funded under said section.

The case of the specific improvement funds is somewhat different. The proceeds of a bond issue are by law devoted to the accomplishment of the purpose for which the issue is made; they constitute a trust fund. But the cestui que trust in this case may be all the taxpayers of the county, or, perhaps, those within a given special taxing district for the purposes of the improvement, or, another view of the case, those who have petitioned for a specific improvement. In a sense, it might be said here, as was said in discussing the case of the undivided tax fund, that the general county treasury is chargeable with a resulting trust in favor of the specific improvement fund. For reasons somewhat, although not entirely similar to those advanced in discussing the case of the latter fund, and not necessary to be detailed here, I am of the opinion however, that there is not any valid, legal and existing indebtedness of the county arising out of the expenditure, for the benefit of the county, of funds derived from the sale of bonds and devoted to a specific improvement. The county does not owe the holders of the bonds; their debt is provided for. The county still owes its taxpayers, or the petitioners for the improvement, as the case may be, the obligation of proceeding with the improvement; upon this obligation it has not yet defaulted, nor, I take it, would it ever default. So that there is no indebtedness nor matured obligation arising by virtue of the relation of the county to its taxpayers generally.

The county, having sold the bonds and pledged its credit to the accomplishment of a specific purpose, is in duty bound, through its officers, to proceed, then, with the improvement. As soon as the improvement is completed, or has proceeded to the point where payments are due to contractors and others thereunder, there will be a valid, existing and binding obligation of the county, matured in favor of the contractors or other parties. Such an obligation, which the county would be unable to pay at maturity, of course, would be one subject to be funded or extended by means of the procedure provided for in Section 5656.

The foregoing is based, in part, upon the statement in your letter, which I have not heretofore quoted or referred to, that, as to these improvement funds, Burns law certificates had been issued, and contracts let thereunder, prior to "the occurrence of the overdraft." There could, therefore, be no question as to the validity of the contract made by the county, through its officers duly authorized, with the contractor for the construction of the improvement. Such a contract would impose just such a valid and enforceable obligation as I have above referred to.

Whether or not warrants might be issued in favor of contractors and others similarly situated, against these funds, and stamped "not paid for want of funds," as provided is Section 2676, General Code, is a question upon which I do not deem it necessary to pass. If this could be done there would never be any embarrassment on account of the county's being unable, at a given time, to pay the equivalent of cash to those engaged in constructing improvements under valid contracts made with it; and such warrants, so issued and stamped, could be lawfully funded, as already held by me in discussing your fourth question.

There seems to be some doubt, however, as to this question; but I have no doubt of the ability of the commissioners and the auditor to obtain money from banks of this city in order to enable them, if necessary, to meet every obligation which will arise under these improvement contracts; and upon the principal question submitted by you I am clearly of the opinion that when the obligation of the county, under such improvement contract, matures and becomes completely enforcible against the county, the county's inability to pay the same will be due to its limits of taxation, inasmuch as the funds have been depleted under old statutes permitting, if not directly authorizing, such depletion, and for the benefit of the county; while the inability of the officers of the county to replete such funds is due entirely to the enactment of the Smith tax limitation law, and particularly to those sections defining the maximum levies for the several purposes within the county.

I wish to reiterate the statement that this expression of opinion is upon the facts as I have apprehended them from your letter. Inasmuch, however, as your letter sets forth a very clear and concise statement of the facts, leaving only a few details to my imagination, all of which are in fact supplied by the court papers with which you have furnished me, I suspect that my understanding of the facts is correct, and I trust, therefore, that the opinion which I have tried to express clearly, and to support by a statement of the reasons which have induced me to adopt it, may be of service to you in the difficulties with which you are now confronted, and to the law officers of any other counties similarly situated.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—VACANCY FILLED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—TERM OF OFFICE OF NEW APPOINTEE—"UNEXPIRED TERM"—ERRONEOUS ENTRY ON JOURNAL—"NUNC PRO TUNC" ENTRY.

When under Section 7610, General Code, the commissioners have, by reason of the failure of the board of education so to do, made an appointment to fill a vacancy in the board of education, such appointment can be made only "for the unexpired term."

When the county commissioners through a mistaken understanding of their powers, have entered upon their minutes that the appointment is "until the next general election," the fact that the appointment is in reality for the unexpired term" is not affected, and a "nunc pro tunc" entry to that effect may be made upon the commissioners' journal as notice of the statutory term.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1912.

HON. GEORGE D. KLIEN, Prosecuting Attorney, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of January 26th you state:

> "I desire your opinion on the following proposition. In 1910 the county commissioners were compelled to fill a vacancy in the board of education for the reason that the board of education could not agree. That appointment was made by the commissioners until the next general election, but by reason of information from the board of elections no man was nominated in 1911 for election.
> "The matter was then called to my attention and I advised that Section 4748 provided, that any vacancy of the school board filled either by the school board or the county commissioners should be for the unexpired term. I so advised the county commissioners and told them that they should put on a nunc pro tunc entry, that is that the appointment made in 1910, until the next general election should be an appointment for the unexpired term.

"My opinion is questioned by certain parties in this particular township, who would, of course, desire to have order of the commissioners remain as it was before I advised them to change it. Your opinion on this subject will be greatly appreciated."

Section 4745 General Code provides:

"The term of office of members of each board of education shall begin on the first Monday in January after their election, and each such officer shall hold his office four years and until his successor is elected and qualified."

Section 4748, General Code provides:

"A vacancy in any board of education may be caused by death, non-residence, resignation, removal from office, failure of a person elected or appointed to qualify within ten days after the organization of the board or of his appointment, removal from the district or absence from meetings of the board for a period of ninety days, if such absence is caused by reasons declared insufficient by a two-thirds vote of the remaining members of the board, which vote must be taken and entered upon the records of the board not less than thirty days after such absence. Any such vacancy shall be filled by the board at its next regular or special meeting, or as soon thereafter as possible, by election for the unexpired term. A majority vote of all the remaining members of the board may fill any such vacancy."

Section 7610 General Code provides:

"If the board of education in a district fails in any year * * * to fill any vacancies in the board within the period of thirty days after such vacancy occurs, the commissioners of the county to which such district belongs, upon being advised and satisfied thereof, shall perform any or all of such duties and acts, in the same manner as the board of education by this title is authorized to perform them. * * *"

It appears from the foregoing sections that the term of a member of the board of education is for four years and until his successor is elected and qualified, and that as provided in Section 4748 a vacancy shall be filled by the board "by election for the unexpired term," and that under Section 7610, for the purpose of filling a vacancy under the conditions therein stated, the commissioners of the county are authorized to fill the vacancy in the same manner as the board of education could.

In the case cited by you, the commissioners being authorized, acted and made an appointment, stating that it was until the next general election, and later, under your advice, when the matter was called to your attention, by way of nunc pro tunc entry provided that the appointment was for the unexpired term.

In the case of State ex rel. Palmer vs. Darby, 12 O. C. C. page 235, the question arose as to whether the provisions of Section 1724 Revised Statutes applied in determining whether the appointment of a councilman should be until next annual municipal election or for the unexpired term. Judge Bentley in discussing the case, at page 239 says:

> "Under Section 1673, the regular term of councilman is two years. In case of a vacancy in the council, were it not that Section 1724 makes special provision applicable only to councilmen, it might well be held that the more general provision of Section 1713, in the chapter on 'Officers of Cities and Villages,' and which is made applicable 'unless otherwise provided in this title,' would apply; but since Section 1724 being special, and containing provisions regarding the time for which vacancies in the council may be filled, wholly different from those in Section 1713 regarding vacancies in municipal offices generally, we think it clear that notwithstanding the references to Section 1713 in Section 1693, these provisions of Section 1724 must govern in determining whether the appointment shall be 'till the next annual municipal election,' or 'for the unexpired term.' The appointment, therefore, must be for the unexpired term. We think it is not competent for the mayor to fix the term of the appointment otherwise, and his appointment of a councilman, when made with the consent of the council, is for the unexpired term of the person who, after being elected and qualified, ceases to be councilman before the expiration of the term for which he was elected. And the misapprehension of the true tenure of the appointee, on the part of the mayor, the appointee, or others, cannot abridge the term fixed by law for his continuance in office."

This case was affirmed without report in the 52nd Ohio state at page 611.

I am of the opinion that it mattered not what the minutes of the commissioners' journal showed as to the term for which the appointment of a member of a board of education was made. The law fixed that as being for the unexpired term, and the appointing power could neither limit nor extend the statutory term by any entry on its records. The placing of the nunc pro tunc entry on in 1911 was ineffectual to change in any manner the term of the office, though I concur with you, that it was as well to place same on the journal as notice of the statutory term. As Judge Bentley well says the misapprehension of the true tenure of the appointee on the part of the appointing power, the appointee or others cannot abridge the term fixed by law for the continuance in office.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT—CANDIDATES FOR COMMON PLEAS AND CIRCUIT COURTS—STATE OFFICES—LIMITATION ON EXPENDITURES INCLUDE PRIMARY AND GENERAL ELECTIONS—PLEDGE OF DELEGATE ON BALLOT.

Considering the ordinary meaning of the term "state officers," and the functions of circuit and common pleas judges, and the wide sweep of their jurisdiction, and furthermore, the fact that the statutes providing for compensation and elections, class these officials under the head of state officers, candidates for these judicial offices should, under the corrupt practices act, Section 29, providing for "other elective state officers" be limited to a campaign expense of $2,500.00.

The amount covers the expenditures for both primary and general election.

As there is no provision of the election law which provides that, in a primary for election of delegates to a judicial convention, the name of the judge for whom the delegate will vote in the event of his election, shall have a place upon the ballot in connection with the name of said delegate and as such an arrangement is not in harmony with Section 4978 requiring the names of all candidates to be arranged on the ballots in alphabetical order, it would not be proper.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1912.

HON. CHARLES, KRICHBAUM, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 1st, wherein you inquire:

> "I write to ask you for your construction to Section 29 of the corrupt practices act, 102 Ohio laws, 329.
> "1st. What amount of money is a candidate for judge of common pleas court or circuit court entitled to expend under the statute, for nomination and election?
>
> "2nd. Does the amount of money specified include expenses for primary and general elections?
> "3rd. Is a candidate for judge of the common pleas court or circuit court in a political subdivision of the state including one or more counties to be classified as a state officer? The answer to this, I take it, will answer the first.
> "4th. In a judicial primary where delegates are elected to a judicial convention, is it proper or permitted to designate on the ballot the candidate for judge for which the delegate will stand in the event of his election?"

I will answer your first and third question together. Section 29 of the so-called corrupt practices act, 102 O. L., 329, provides:

> "The total amount expended by a candidate for a public office, voted for at an election, by the qualified electors of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, for any of the purposes specified in Section 26 of this act, for contributions to political committees, as that term is defined in Section 1 of this act, or for any purposes tending in any way, directly or indirectly, to promote or aid in securing his nomination or election, shall not exceed the amount specified herein. By a candi> date for governor, the sum of five thousand dollars; by a candidate for other elective state offices, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars; by a candidate for the office of representative in congress or presidential elector, the sum of two thousand dollars; by a candidate for the office of state senator, the sum of three hundred dollars in each county of his district; by a candidate for the office of state representative, the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars; by a candidate for any other public office to be voted for by the qualified electors of a county, city, town or village, or any part thereof, if the total number of votes cast therein for all candidates for the office of governor at the last preceding state election, shall be five thousand or less, the sum of three hundred dollars. * * *"

A reading of the above section discloses that there is no specific provision for candidates for judge of the common pleas or circuit courts; nor is there a provision for any candidate to be elected in a district, except as specifically enumerated. The question arises whether they may be classified as state officers. I am inclined to the view that judges of the circuit and common pleas courts are state officers. It is a familiar rule of construction requiring no citation of authorities to establish that words either of statute or organic law are to be understood in their usual and ordinary meaning and considering the function of these courts, their manner of compensation, the wide scope of their jurisdiction, etc., I am satisfied that they come well within the definition of state officers.

Dillon on Municipal Corporations, 4th edition, Section 58, discussing the importance of bearing in mind the distinction between state and municipal officers, uses these words concerning state officers;

> "Officers whose duties concern the state at large or the general public, even though exercised within defined territorial limits, are state officers."

Citing People vs. Curly, 5 Colorado, 419.

I call your attention to Title VI, of Part 1 of the General Code. This title is headed "Compensation of State Officials" Chapter 1 of this title is headed Salaries of State Officers." Section 2251, being part of Chapter 1 of Title VI, provides the annual salaries of the judges of the supreme court, circuit court, as well as the common pleas court.

Attention is also called to Section 1, Article XVII, Amendment to the Constitution as adopted November 7, 1905:

> "Election for state and county officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November in even numbered years; and all elections for other elective officers shall be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in odd numbered years."

It will be seen that officers to be elected in even numbered years are divided into two classes of state and county officers. There can be no question but that the circuit court and the common pleas court judges, not being county officers, would come under the classification of state officers.

Having concluded that judges of the common pleas and circuit courts are state officers and Section 29 of the corrupt practices act fixing the limitation for other elective state officers than the governor at the sum of $2,500, it is my opinion that said sum of $2,500 is the limitation of the amount of money a candidate for judge of the common pleas or circuit court is entitled to expend.

Answering your second question, this department has already held that the amount of money limited in Section 29 of the corrupt practices act applies to the two elections—primary and general. The language of the section is that the amount shall not be exceeded "to promote or aid in securing his nomination or election" and our construction of the statute is that the amount fixed is the limit of the amount of money that may be expended by candidates both for the nomination and the election.

Answering your fourth question, Section 4976 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Separate tickets shall be provided for each political party entitled to participate in such primary. Such tickets shall contain the names of all persons whose names have been duly presented and not withdrawn, arranged under the designation of the office in alphabetical order, according to surnames, and bear the official signatures of the members of the board of deputy state supervisors. Such tickets shall conform, as nearly as practicable, to the form of ballot provided in this title for the use of electors in the election of public officers, except that no device or circle shall be used at the head of such tickets. On the back thereof shall be printed the words, 'official ballot' and 'primary election,' and the name of the political party for which such ballot is printed."

While Section 4976 makes provision for the names of candidates for United States senator to be placed upon a primary ballot, I have been unable to find any provision of our election laws which provides that in a primary for election of delegates to the judicial convention that the names of any judges for whom the delegates in event of their election would stand should have a place upon the ballot, as the object and aim of the primary election law is to grant to every elector the right to vote for such candidate on his party ticket as to him might seem proper, and as the provision of Section 4976 seems to require that the names of any or all persons for any particular office should be arranged under the designation of the office in alphabetical order, I am constrained to hold that it not only would not be proper, but it could not be permitted to designate on the ballot the names of the particular candidates for whom the delegates in event of his own election, would vote at the judicial convention.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP CLERK—EXTRA COMPENSATION AS CLERK OF SCHOOL BOARD.

The offices of township clerk and clerk of the board of education though held by the same individual, are distinct and the board may fix its own compensation for services rendered as its clerk by the township clerk.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1912.,

HON. THEO. H. TANGEMAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of January 15th, receipt whereof is acknowledged, you ask the following question:

> "May a board of education of a township school district pay to the township clerk additional compensation for acting as clerk of the board of education?"

You cite Sections 4747, 4781 and 3308 of the General Code as bearing upon the question. The first of these sections provides for the organization of the board of education.

Section 4747, General Code, as amended 101 O. L., 138, provides that the township clerk shall be ex officio clerk of the board of education of the township school district. Section 3308 provides for the regular compensation of the township clerk. Section 4781 authorizes the board of education to "'fix the compensation of its clerk and treasurer."

In my opinion, the board of education may lawfully pay additional compensation to the township clerk for acting as clerk of the school district. The two offices are distinct.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PROBATE JUDGE—DUTIES AND FEES OF SHERIFF AND OTHER PERSONS FOR TAKING INSANE PERSON TO AND FROM ASYLUM.

As there is no provision of law for the issue of a warrant by the probate judge to any one but the sheriff and an assistant, in case of need, for taking of an insane person to an asylum, no one else may be authorized so to do. And also as there is no provision for removal of an insane person from the asylum by the sheriff while there is a provision for such removal by a suitable person, the fees, provided in Section 1981, General Code, as amended, for a person other than the sheriff, deputy sheriff or assistant applies only to the removal by such person, of an insane person from an asylum.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1912.

HON. F. A. SHIVELEY, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 23rd, you requested my opinion on the following question:

"Has the probate judge any authority to direct a warrant for the conveyance of an insane patient to an asylum or state hospital, to any person other than the sheriff?"

You call my attention to Section 1959 General Code, and likewise to Section 1981 General Code, as amended May 31, 1911, 102 Ohio laws 287.

Section 1959 General Code provides as follows:

"When advised that the patient will be received the probate judge shall forthwith issue his warrant to the sheriff, commanding him forthwith to take charge of and convey such insane person to the hospital. If the probate judge is satisfied, from proof, that an assistant is necessary, he may appoint one person as such. If the insane person is a female, he shall appoint a suitable female assistant to accompany the sheriff and such insane person to the hospital."

Section 1964 of the General Code provides as follows:

"On consent and advice of the trustees, the superintendent may discharge any patient from a state hospital for the insane, when he deems such discharge proper and necessary. No patient who in the judgment of the superintendent has homicidal or suicidal propensities shall be discharged. If, in the opinion of the superintendent, the condition of the patient at the time of the discharge justifies it, he may permit him to go to his home, or leave the institution unattended."

Section 1966 General Code provides:

"In cases requiring an escort, if neither the patient nor his friends, are financially able to bear the expense of his removal, the superintendent shall give notice to the probate judge of the county of which the patient is an inhabitant, who shall forthwith issue his warrant to a suitable person, giving the friends of patient the preference, which shall read as follows: * * *"

Section 1967 General Code provides:

"Upon receipt of the warrant, the person to whom directed shall execute and return it to the probate judge, by whom it was issued, who shall ascertain and fix the allowance to the person executing the warrant, for expenses and fees, and certify them to the county auditor, who shall draw his warrant therefor on the county treasurer."

Section 1968 General Code provides:

"When the superintendent deems it for the best interest of a patient, who has no homicidal or suicidal propensities, he may permit such patient to leave the institution on a trial visit, which shall not exceed ninety days, Such patient, if necessary, may be returned at any time within such period without further legal proceedings."

Section 1969 General Code provides as follows:

"The removal of a patient on such trial visit shall be made in the manner provided for removal in case of discharge. If neither the patient nor friends are financially able to bear the expense of a necessary return from such visit, the return shall be made on the warrant of the probate judge as herein provided in case of discharged patients in like circumstances."

Section 1981 General Code prior to the amendment found in 102 Ohio laws 287 provides in part as follows:

"The probate judge shall make a complete record of all proceedings in lunacy. The taxable costs and expenses to be paid under the provisions of this chapter shall be as follows: * * * to the sheriff, or other person other than assistant, for taking an insane person to a state hospital, or removing one therefrom upon the warrant of the probate judge, mileage at the rate of five cents per mile, going and returning, and seventy-five cents per day for support, and mileage at the rate of three cents per mile for the railway transportation of each patient to and from the hospital, * * *."

101 Ohio laws 359.

Section 1981 General Code as amended, 102 Ohio laws 287 provides in part as follows:

"The probate judge shall make a complete record of all proceedings in lunacy. The costs and expenses, other than the fees of the probate judge and sheriff to be paid under the provisions of this chapter shall be as follows: * * * to the person other than the sheriff, deputy sheriff or assistant, for taking any insane person to state hospital or removing one therefrom upon the warrant of the probate judge, mileage at the rate of five cents per mile, going and returning."

There is no provision that I can find authorizing the probate judge to issue his warrant for the conveyance of an insane person to the hospital other than to the sheriff as provided in Section 1959 supra.

Under the provisions of Sections 1964 to 1969 General Code the probate judge is authorized to issue his warrant to a suitable person for the removal of a patient from said hospital. Prior to the amendment of Section 1981 as found in 102 Ohio laws the taxable costs and expenses of the sheriff or other person other than assistant were included, within the same provisions of the section, and such costs were both for taking an insane person to a state hospital and removing one therefrom. As, however, there is no provision of law for the taking of an insane person to a hospital by any person other than the sheriff who may be accompanied by an assistant appointed by the probate court, and as there is no provision of law for the removal of a person from a state hospital by the sheriff, but the same may be removed on warrant issued to a suitable person, I am of the opinion that so much of said Section 1981, before amendment as is above set forth, applies to the sheriff for the taking of an insane person to a state hospital and to the "other person" other than assistant for the removal therefrom, and that the words "taking any insane person to the state hospital" as found in 102 Ohio laws 287 has no application whatever; such language having been inserted by inadvertence on account of the language found in the section before amendment applying both to the sheriff and to the "other person."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the probate court has not authority to direct a warrant for the conveyance of an insane person to an asylum or state hospital to any person other than the sheriff, and that the fees provided in Section 1981, as now amended, for the person other than the sheriff, deputy sheriff or assistant applies only to the removal from the state hospital of an insane person.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PAVED COUNTY ROADS WITHIN AND OUTSIDE OF MUNICIPALITIES —POWERS AND DUTIES OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO KEEP IN REPAIR—CONCURRENT JURISDICTION WITH MUNICIPALITIES.

Under Sections 7409, 7414 and 7422, General Code, which give a general jurisdiction to the county commissioners to repair all the improved county roads in the county, the commissioners are obligated to keep in repair the county roads outside of the municipalities which have been improved by paving.

The county commissioners, by the decisions of the courts of Ohio, have concurrent jurisdiction in the repair of so much of the county improved roads as lies within the corporate limits of municipalities.

As it is only made the duty of the county commissioners to keep in repair the improved roads, it is their duty to repair only the improved portion thereof, which comprises the necessary ditches for draining the part of the road which is improved. It would seem, however, that they might also contract for keeping in repair the entire width of the road if they so see fit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 30, 1912.

Attention Mr. C. P. Grant, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney.

HON. F. J. ROCKWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 23, 1911, you requested my opinion upon the following questions:

> "(1) On whom is fixed the burden of keeping in repair a county road improved by paving under Sections 6903 to 6914, inclusive, of the General Code, outside of municipalities?
> "(2) On whom is fixed the burden of keeping in repair a county road improved by paving under Sections 6903 to 6914, inclusive, of the General Code, inside of municipalities?
> "(3) In case it is held that the county commissioners shall keep in repair such improved roads, is the burden on them to keep in repair the whole road or only such part thereof as has been improved."

Section 6903, General Code, under which you state that the roads in question were paved, and I assume by the word "paved" that you mean that they have been paved with brick, applies to a county road, and, therefore, such roads would be considered as improved roads of the county.

Under the chapter entitled "Road Repairs," of the General Code, it is provided in Section 7409 that the commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township, or the board of public service of any municipality may contract with any person, firm or corporation for the repair or maintenance of any public road or street within their respective political subdivisions.

Section 7414, General Code, provides that the county commissioners may expend so much of the "state and county road improvement fund" as they deem necessary in repairing any free improved roads within their respective counties.

Section 7422, General Code, provides that the county commissioners shall cause all necessary repairs to be made for the proper maintenance of all improved roads in the county, and that for such purpose they may levy a tax upon the grand duplicate of the county in addition to all other levies authorized by law, and

Section 7423, General Code, provides that the proceeds of such levy shall be applied and used by the commissioners in the repair of paved, macadamized, stone and gravel roads, and for no other purpose.

The provisions of Section 7444, General Code, which provides:

> "The county commissioners shall keep in repair the portions of such roads within their respective counties, as are included within the corporate limits of a city or village in such counties, to points therein where the sidewalks have been curbed and guttered, and no further."

has been construed in the case of Railroad Company vs. Defiance, 52 O. S. 262, to refer solely to what is now Section 7443, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "All macadamized or graveled free roads, whether constructed under the general or local laws by taxation or assessment or both, or converted by purchase or otherwise from a toll road into a free road under any law, and all turnpike roads, or parts thereof, unfinished or abandoned by a turnpike company, and appropriated or accepted by the commissioners of the county, shall be kept in repair as provided hereafter in this chapter."

The supreme court having decided that such Section 7444, General Code, above quoted does not apply to other than macadamized or gravel free roads, and the road concerning which you inquire about being a road paved with brick such Section 7444 would not be applicable to the matter under consideration and will, therefore, not be further considered.

The right of the county commissioners to repair the roads in question is, therefore, to be determined by a consideration of Sections 7409, 7414 and 7422, above referred to. These sections, it appears to me, give a general jurisdiction to the county commissioners to repair all the improved roads in the county, and I am, therefore, of the opinion in answer to your first question that the county commissioners are charged with the duty of keeping such roads improved by paving outside of municipalities in repair.

Second. The county commissioners being charged generally with the duty of keeping the improved roads within their county in repair the question arises whether or not such general authority is limited in reference to county roads which lie within a municipality by the provisions of Section 3714, General Code, which provides in part:

> "* * * The council shall have the care, supervision and control of public highways, streets, avenues * * * within the corporation, and shall cause them to be kept open, in repair and free from nuisance."

From certain language used in the case of Railroad Company vs. Defiance, 52 O. S. 262, at page 299, it would appear that it was the opinion of the supreme court in that case that whenever highways were brought within the corporate limits of a municipality they were removed from the control of the county commissioners and became subject to the control of the municipal authorities. The supreme court says:

"The highways so brought within the corporate limits of the defendant (city) were removed from the control which the county commissioners theretofore had over them, and became subject to the control, supervision and care of the municipal authorities, like other streets and highways of the corporation."

The court in that case, however, did not refer at all to the case of Lewis vs. Laylin, 46 O. S. 633, wherein it was held:

"Third syllabus:

"County commissioners have authority under the two-mile assessment pike law to improve a state, county or township road, although the improvement embraces that part, of the highway which lies within the limits of a municipal corporation"

On page 671, the court says:

"That a state or county road is not extinguished by becoming a street of a municipal corporation is clear. It retains its character of a state or county road, even as to such portions of it as may chance to fall within the limits of a municipal corporation, that may be subsequently organized; nor is this character changed because the municipal authorities call it a street and give to it a name as such, and are invested by law with its general control. Should the municipality cease to exist, the highway would at the same time cease to be a street, but it would not cease to be the state or county road which it was originally."

In this case the question was considered as to whether the general authority of the county commissioners was in any manner limited by the provisions of Section 2640 of the Revised Statutes, which is now codified as Section 3714 of the General Code, and the discussion on page 674 may well be considered in this case. The court on page 674 of said opinion says as follows:

"In the sections of the municipal code, which bear directly on the subject of street improvement, no words excluding this power of the county commissioners are found, nor are there any direct words of exclusion in Section 2640, Revised Statutes. That section reads as follows:

"'The council shall have the care, supervision and control of all public highways, streets, avenues, alleys, sidewalks, public grounds and bridges within the corporation, and shall cause the same to be kept open and in repair, and free from nuisance.'

"But it is contended that the general power conferred on municipal corporations by this section, and the special power to improve streets given by other sections of the municipal code, are incompatible with the existence of authority in the county commissioners to improve that portion of a state or county road which may lie within the corporate limits. If this contention is true it becomes a matter for the most careful consideration to determine which authority must yield to the other; and in that view it might be important to cast up the advantages on the one hand and the evils on the other, incident to such construction, and ascertain upon which side the balance stood; upon the theory that the legislature must be taken to have intended to promote the public welfare, and, therefore, intended that to be the law which would best accomplish it. But is there any such incompatibility? That there is some danger of a conflict of authority between the county commissioners and the municipal council, where both have power to improve the same highway, cannot be denied. That is a danger that always exists where two independent officers or bodies have a concurrent authority over the same subject; yet, in many instances, there are other considerations that override this objection, and the concurrent authority is given. This is a question of public policy, to be considered and determined by the legislature alone.

"It is true that Section 2640, in very general terms gives to municipal councils the 'care, supervision and control of all public highways * * * within the corporation.' The power conferred by this section is full and ample; but it contains no words directly excluding that conferred by the statute upon the county commissioners. If it has that effect, it amounts to a repeal of the latter statute by implication. Repeals of this kind are not favored."

Applying the same ruling as was used by the court in that case it is to be noted that there are no words in Section 3714, General Code, excluding the power of the county commissioners to improve highways within municipalities other than macadamized or gravel roads provided for in Section 7443, General Code.

In the case of State vs. Lewis, 13 Ohio Decisions 188, the second syllabus is as follows:

"Section 2640, Revised Statutes, giving municipal councils the care, supervision and control, of all public highways, does not vest that power in them absolutely, and county commissioners have the right to improve those public highways, which are part of the general system of the county, notwithstanding they happen to lie partly within the limits of a municipality, in the absence of any provision to the contrary in the statute."

The circuit court follows the ruling laid down in the case of Lewis vs. Laylin, 46 Ohio State, and quotes therefrom the language above quoted, and supplements it by the following:

"If, under this case, the county commissioners would have the right to improve those public highways which are a part of the general system of the county, though they happen to lie only partly within the limits of a municipality, it would seem, and it necessarily follows, that they would have a right and authority to improve such highways although they might and do lie entirely within the limits of any municipality, unless there was in the statute conferring the right some clause of prohibition. And there is no word, as the supreme court has said, supra, excluding the authority conferred by the statute upon the county commissioners."

and does not follow the dictum quoted above from the case of Railroad Company vs. Defiance, 52 O. S. 262.

The circuit court in the case of the State of Ohio ex rel. Witt vs. Craig, et al., 22 C. C. 135, at page 138, seeks to distinguish the cases of Railroad Company vs. Defiance and Lewis vs. Laylin, supra, in the following manner:

"We are of opinion that the case of Lewis vs. Laylin, 46 Ohio St. 663, settles this contention in favor of the defendant. It is there held in the third provision of the syllabus: 'County commissioners have authority under the two-mile assessment pike law to improve a state, county or township road, although the improvement embraces that part of the highway which lies within the limits of a municipal corporation.'

"We find nothing in subsequent decisions, modifying or overruling the principle announced in this case. It is claimed, however, that the case of Lewis vs. Laylin is overruled or at least modified by the case of Railroad Company vs. Defiance, 52 Ohio St. 263; the first paragraph of the syllabus reads:

" 'Where part of a county road is taken into a municipal corporation by the annexation of contiguous territory, it is subject to the control and supervision of the municipal authorities, who may improve it by grading, or otherwise, at the expense of the corporation. Section 4906 of the Revised Statutes, does not apply to unimproved county roads.'

"No reference is made in this case (Railroad Company vs. Defiance) to Lewis vs. Laylin which sustains the jurisdiction of the commissioners in improving a state or county road within the limits of a municipality. The latter case sustains the jurisdiction of the municipal authorities to improve a state or county road within a municipal corporation as one of the streets of the municipality.

"The result of the two cases is simply to sustain the jurisdiction of the county commissioners and the municipal authorities over such highways."

I am, therefore, of the opinion in view of the decisions above referred to that the county commissioners and the municipal council have concurrent jurisdiction in the repair of so much of the county improved roads which lie within the corporate limits of a municipality.

Third. Your third inquiry is whether the county commissioners shall keep in repair the entire width of a county road or only such part thereof as has been improved.

As it is only made the duty of the county commissioners to keep in repair the improved roads it must necessarily mean that it is their duty to repair only the improved portion thereof, which would of course, include the necessary ditches for draining the part of the road which is improved. I do not believe that it is their duty to keep in repair a part which they have not improved. Under Section 7409, supra, which permits them to contract with any person, etc., for the repair or maintenance of any public road within their political subdivision, it would seem that they might also contract for keeping in repair the entire width of the road if they so see fit.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—MEMBER OF SCHOOL BOARD AND TREASURER OF BOARD—REFUSAL OF CORPORATION TREASURER TO ACT AS TREASURER OF SCHOOL BOARD.

As the members of the school board must approve the bond of the treasurer and vote upon the question of increasing or changing the same or of requiring additional sureties thereon, the office of member of the board and treasurer of the board are incompatible and may not be held by one individual.

A treasurer of a corporation may refuse to act as treasurer of the school board without thereby affecting his position as treasurer of the corporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 29, 1912.

HON. HUGH R. GILMORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 12th inst., wherein you inquire as follows:

> "Can the treasurer of a school board be a member of such board?
> "May a person qualified as treasurer of a village refuse to qualify as treasurer of the school funds, and still hold the office of treasurer of the village?"

In reply to your first question I beg to say, Section 4763 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "In each city, village and township school district, the treasurer of the city, village and township funds, respectively, shall be the treasurer of the school funds. In each special district the board of education shall choose its own treasurer, whose term of office shall be for one year beginning on the first day of September."

Section 4734 of the General Code, as amended, 101 O. L. 264 provides as follows:

> "Before entering upon the duties of his office, each school district treasurer shall execute a bond, with sufficient sureties, in a sum not less than the amount of school funds that may come into his hands, payable to the state approved by the board of education, and conditioned for the faithful disbursement according to law of all funds which come into his hands, provided that when school moneys have been deposited under the provisions of Sections 7604-7608 inclusive, the bond shall be in such amount as the board of education may require."

Section 4765 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "Thereafter such treasurer may be required to give additional sureties on his accepted bond, or to execute a new bond with sufficient sureties to the approval of the board of education when such board deems it necessary. If he fails for ten days after service of notice in writing of such requisition, to give such bond or additional sureties, as so required the office shall be declared vacant and filled as in other cases."

The question arises, whether the two offices inquired about are incompatible.

Throop on Public Offices, Section 33, says:

"In order to render two offices incompatible there must be some such relation between them as that of master and servant. That one must have 'controlment' of the other, or that one must be charged with the duty of auditing or supervising the accounts of the other, or that one must be chosen by or have the power of removal of the other."

Mecham on Public Offices and Officers, Section 522, says:

"The force of the word, in its application to this matter is, that from the nature and relation to each other, of the two places, they ought not to be held by the same person, from the contrariety and antagonism which would result in the attempt by one person to faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of one, toward the incumbent of the other."

Dillon on municipal corporations, Section 166 (note) says:

"Incompatibility in office exists where the nature and duty of the two offices are such as to render it improper, from considerations of public policy, for one incumbent to retain both."

Anderson's dictionary of law says:

"Offices are said to be incompatible and inconsistent when their being subordinate and interfering with each other induces a presumption that they cannot be both executed with impartiality and honesty."

It is apparent from the provisions contained in the above cited sections that the relation between the board of education and the treasurer of such board are such that the same person cannot be a member of the board of education and also act as its treasurer at the same time, for the reason that it would be improper from the standpoint of public policy for a member of the board of education to vote upon the approval or non-approval of his own bond as such treasurer of the board of education also when his own vote might determine the action of the board in reference to the necessity of requiring additional sureties on his own bond or in requiring a new bond as provided in Section 4765 of the General Code above quoted.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the office of member of the board of education and the office of treasurer of the board of education are incompatible and cannot be held by the same person at the same time.

In answer to your second question I have heretofore sent you copy of opinion rendered by this department on July 31, 1911, to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, which held in substance that a person who has qualified as treasurer of a village may refuse to qualify as treasurer of the school funds and still hold the office of treasurer of the village.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ADDENDUM:

You have quite clearly stated the law when you say: "What the treasurer of the school funds and a member's office would be incompatible, and that the same person could not be both. You will notice that by the terms of Section 4782 which has been advanced in argument against my present belief, the clerk is not made treasurer, but the office of treasurer is dispensed with. Judge Rockel, in his school guide, has held that the same person could not hold both offices.

Rockel's School Guide 1907 Ed. Section 257, page 285.

It has also been urged to me that because the clerk can be a member of the board there is no reason why the treasurer should not be. However, the statute specifically states that the clerk may or may not be a member of the board, and in the absence of any such statute relative to the treasurer, I fail to see how he can hold both offices."

DEPUTY COUNTY SEALERS OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO FIX AND PAY SALARIES—PAYMENT FROM GENERAL FUND.

Sections 2980 and 2615, General Code, entrust the county commissioners with the powers of fixing and paying the salaries of deputy sealers of weights and measures, and such salary is to be paid from the general fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1912.

HON. JOHN A. CLINE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Answering your communication of January 22, wherein you state:

> "Section 2622 of the General Code, as amended May 31, 1911, states:
> "'Each county sealer of weights and measures shall appoint by writing under his hand and seal, a deputy * * * who shall receive a salary fixed by the county commissioners, to be paid by the county, which salary shall be instead of all fees and charges otherwise allowed by law.'
>
> "Section 2615 of the General Code provides:
>
> "'By virtue of his office, the county auditor shall be county sealer of weights and measures.'
>
> "I have been asked for an opinion in regard to the fund out of which the salary of the deputy county sealer shall be paid. If the salary of the deputy is to be paid out of the auditor's fee fund, then it will be necessary for the auditor to make application to a judge of the common pleas court for an additional allowance, as the aggregate sum fixed by the county commissioners is now almost equal to the amount allowed by law.
> "I am informed that you have already given an opinion to the effect that the salary of the deputy shall be paid out of the general fund."

I beg to state that this department had not been called upon for an opinion in this matter previous to your request.

Section 2980 of the General Code provides that > "On the twentieth of each November such officers (referring to the officers mentioned in Section 2978, to-wit, probate judge, auditor, treasurer, clerk of the court, sheriff and recorder) shall prepare and file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks and other employes of their respective offices * * *."

Section 2980-1 fixes the limitation of the amount of such compensation and provides how an additional allowance shall be obtained.

Section 2981 provides that the officers above named may appoint and employ the necessary deputies, etc., for their respective offices and fix their compensation, etc.

Section 2615 provides that the county auditor shall be ex officio county sealer of weights and measures; and Section 2622, as amended, provides that each county sealer of weights and measures shall appoint a deputy.

"* * * who shall receive a salary fixed by the county commissioners, to be paid by the county. * * *"

It is to be observed that the position of deputy sealer of weights and measures is peculiar in that the appointment is made by the county sealer, while the salary is fixed by the county commissioners. This is the sole provision regarding the compensation of the deputy sealer, and there is no express statutory provision as to the fund from which he should be paid. Section 2987, providing that the deputies, etc., of the county officers hereinbefore named shall be paid from the fee fund, has no application to the deputy sealer since he is not such a deputy or assistant as therein referred to.

Since the law makes the county commissioners the managers of county affairs and empowers them to pass upon all claims other than those fixed by law or a duly authorized tribunal, and inasmuch as the commissioners are expressly entrusted with the duty of fixing the salary of the deputy sealer of weights and measures, to be paid by the county, I can see no reason for holding otherwise than that this salary should be paid from the general fund.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INFIRMARY DIRECTORS AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—ALTERATION AND REPAIRS OF BUILDINGS—VOTE OF ELECTORS—LIMITATION—POWER TO TRANSFER UNEXPENDED BALANCE OF POOR FUND.

Where the joint boards of infirmary and commissioners have received from an architect an estimate of approximately $14,000.00 for an additional building and certain alterations and repairs made necessary by the verdict of the inspector of workshops and factories, these boards may separate the estimate of the building from the estimate of the repairs in applying the limitations of Section 5038, General Code, governing the submission of the questions of the improvements to a vote of the electors.

An unexpended balance in the poor fund may be applied to these purposes if not needed for any other purposes. Such balance must be paid back into the poor fund however, after the next tax settlement.

The expenditure of the $6,000.00 is entirely within the control of the commissioners. The work of the infirmary directors in the matter is confined to the approval of the plans.

Any of the work in the nature of ordinary repairs may be done by the infirmary directors themselves, and they may use for the purpose the funds in their hands.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 30, 1912.

HON. JOHN G. ROMER, Prosecuting Attorney, Celina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 11th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following questions:

"The joint boards of infirmary and commissioners have engaged the services of an architect to make plans and prepare specifications for an additional building, and also certain alterations and repairs as demanded by the inspector of workshops and factories, who has for the third time inspected and ordered these needed improvements. The estimate of the architect is guaranteed to be between $13,000 and $14,000 for a new building which is to be used for hospital and dormitory that will cost about $10,000, and a heating system and waterworks the balance.

"QUERY: Can the commissioners build this new building and make necessary changes and add waterworks and heating plants making in all an expenditure of about $14,000, or not to exceed $15,000, without first submitting the same to the vote of the people, since it has become necessary for the reason that the present infirmary has been condemned by the state board of inspectors of workshops and factories; and the board of visitors has also done so on account of the health and safety of the inmates.

"QUERY: The board of infirmary directors has on hand an unexpended balance of $60,000.00 which they are willing to apply to this purpose, same not being needed for other purposes—how can they expend this amount towards this improvement? Can they expend more than $1,000 of it at one time? (Sections 2296 to 2302 and 2443.)

"It is the intention to proceed at once to build a new building, also add waterworks and sanitary closets, baths, heating system, ventilating system and such other improvements as have been requested, and if this can be done without first taking vote it will save time as well as a great expense, and by using the $6,000, surplus on hand, the commissioners would not be required to exceed the $10,000 limit. * * *"

The sections of the General Code involved in your several questions are as follows: Section 2343:

"Section 2343. When it becomes necessary for the commissioners of a county to erect or cause to be erected a public building * * * or an addition to or alteration thereof, before entering into any contract therefor or repair thereof * * * they shall cause to be made by a competent architect or civil engineer the following; full and accurate plans * * accurate bills * * *; full and complete specifications * *; a full and accurate estimate of each item of expense and of the aggregate cost thereof. * * *

"Section 2349. If the plans, drawings, representations, bills of material and specifications of work and estimates of the cost thereof relate to the buildings, additions to, alteration of an infirmary, they shall be submitted to the commissioners and infirmary directors. If approved by a majority of them, a copy thereof shall be deposited in the office of the auditor and kept for the inspection and use of parties interested."

"Section 2443. The county commissioners may transfer an unexpended balance of any fund, raised for the purpose of erecting public buildings, remaining in the treasury, to any other fund, or to any other purpose for which money is needed by the county. If there is a fund in such treasury that has been levied and collected for a special purpose, and such fund, or a part thereof, will not be needed for such purpose until after the period fixed by law for the next payment of taxes, and any of the other funds of the county are exhausted, the commissioners may transfer such special fund, or such part thereof as is needed to such exhausted fund, and reimburse such special fund from the taxes levied for such other fund, as soon as they are collected.

"Section 2529. On the first Monday of March in each year, the board of infirmary directors shall certify to the county auditor the amount of money they will need for the support of the infirmary for the ensuing year, including all needful repairs thereof. * * *

"Section 5638, General Code, as amended 102 O. L., 447:

"The county commissioners shall not levy a tax, appropriate money or issue bonds for the purpose of building county buildings, purchasing sites therefor, or for land for infirmary purposes, the expense of which will exceed $15,000, except in case of casualty, and as hereinafter provided; or for building a county bridge, the expense of which will exceed $18,000, except in case of casualty, and as hereinafter provided: or enlarge, repair, improve, or rebuild a public county building, the entire cost of which expenditure will exceed $10,000; without first submitting to the voters of the county, the question as to the policy of making such expenditure."

It appears from your letter that there are two enterprises contemplated by the joint board; viz.: the construction of a new building and the making of alterations or additions to the existing building. Perhaps I might go further and state that it is also contemplated that certain repairs shall be made in the existing building as distinguished from additions or alterations. This, however, is not entirely clear from your letter.

Inasmuch as these enterprises are quite separate, I am of the opinion that Section 5638, above quoted, is to be applied with respect to the limitations therein, not to the aggregate cost of both of the enterprises, but to the separate cost of each. That is to say, if it will cost $10,000.00 to construct a new building and $4,000.00 to install certain additions and alterations to and in the existing building, then, no limitation of the section above referred to will be violated.

In my jdgment, however, it ought to be made clear that the two proceedings are separate. The minutes of the joint board should show that two contracts are to be let and two species of work undertaken, as above defined. This would not be an attempt to accomplish by indirection a result which could not be directly achieved. If the proceedings are thus conducted I am of the opinion that the plans of the joint board may lawfully be carried out without submitting the policy thereof to a vote of the electors.

In this view of the case, of course, the fact that the improvements are rendered imperative because of the condemnation of the present infirmary by the state inspector of workshops and factories and by the board of visitors is immaterial.

The foregoing comment sufficiently answers your first query.

Your second question is as to whether or not an unexpended balance of $6,000.00 in the poor fund of the county may be made available for the purpose of making the improvements and additions described by you. I find that my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman has held in an opinion to the prosecuting attorney of Coshocton county, found on page 544 of the annual report of the attorney general for the year 1909, that a transfer to the poor fund from another county fund may not lawfully be made under the Sections of the Revised Statutes which correspond to Section 2296 et seq., General Code, but might lawfully be made by the commissioners under the authority of what is now Section 2443, General Code, above quoted. I concur in this opinion, and I am further of the opinion that the principles thereof apply to transfers from the poor fund to another fund just as well as to transfers from other funds to the poor fund. It follows, therefore, that if the balance of $6,000, of which you speak, is not needed for other purposes, it may by proper action of the commissioners be made immediately available for expenditure in connection with these improvements, but it is to be noted that it must be paid back again to the poor fund after the next tax settlement. Hence, I question whether there is any method of making the balance in the poor fund permanently available for the purpose which you mention. I may add, on the supposition that you have not seen Mr. Denman's opinion, that the reason that Sections 2296 to 2302, inclusive, General Code, cannot be made available for this purpose is that they only apply to transfers, on the petition of public officers, of funds "'under their supervision." Inasmuch as the fund to which the transfer is to be made in the case mentioned by you is not under the supervision of the same board as is the fund from which the same is to be made, these sections do not apply.

You ask whether the infirmary directors can expend the $6,000, of which you speak, when transferred. In answer to this question I beg to state that the moneys made available for the purpose of these improvements must be expended by the county commissioners. The infirmary directors have nothing to do with the matter at all excepting to approve the plans as prescribed in the section above quoted. The contracts are to be let and the money expended by the county commissioners.

You also ask whether the infirmary directors can expend more than $1,000 of their surplus at any one time. I am unable to find any statute imposing a limitation of $1,000 upon either the commissioners or the infirmary directors, unless it be Section 2444, General Code, which clearly does not apply to a case of this sort.

I may add that if any of the contemplated work is in the nature of ordinary repairs, as distinguished from additions or alterations, this work may lawfully be done by the infirmary directors themselves, and in the doing thereof the funds in the hands of the infirmary directors may lawfully be used.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TERM OF OFFICE OF MAYOR AND MARSHAL OF VILLAGE—INCUMBENCY UNTIL SUCCESSOR IS ELECTED AND QUALIFIED.

When in November, 1911, there was no election for the positions of mayor and marshal of a municipality, the incumbents of the positions hold over until their successors are elected and qualified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 20, 1912.

HON. HOLLIS C. JOHNSTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 2, 1912, wherein you request an opinion upon the following:

> "At the November election, 1909, a mayor and a marshal were elected for the village of Centerville, Gallia county, Ohio, but there were no municipal officers elected at all in said village at the November election, 1911."

You desire to know whether or not the mayor and marshal are still holding their respective offices.

Section 4255, General Code, provides:

> "The mayor shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first day of January next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified * * *"

Section 4384, General Code, provides:

> "The marshal shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first day of January next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified * * *"

These two sections of the General Code expressly continue the incumbency of the respective offices named, not only during the statutory term of two years, but until their respective successors are "elected and qualified." The mere fact that no election was held at the proper election for such officers could not, under any circumstances, terminate the terms of the incumbents. The principle is so well settled, in this state, that there is hardly any necessity for citation of authorities; but attention is called to the following:

State, ex rel., vs. Brewster, 44 O. S. 589.
State vs. Howe, 25 O. S. 588-596.
Constitution of Ohio, Article XVII, Section 2.

Borton vs. Buck, 8 Kansas 282, holds directly:

"If the people fail to elect any officers as successors, the incumbents hold over."

So, in my mind, there is no question but that the mayor and marshal, elected for the village of Centerville in 1909, as no successors have been elected since then, are still the mayor and marshal, respectively, of said village, and fully authorized to discharge the duties of their respective offices.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

COUNTY UNIMPROVED COMMON DIRT ROAD—DUTIES OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES AND OF ROAD SUPERINTENDENT—EXPENSES OF COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP—NO POWER OF TOWNSHIP TO ISSUE BONDS.

In the process of the opening of a county common dirt road under Section 6861, General Code, in pursuance of an order directed to the township trustees by the county commissioners, the expense of paying compensation and damages to property holders must be borne by the county. The cost of opening up and of construction, however, may be paid out of township funds.

The township trustees, however, may not issue bonds or contracts for the opening of such roads and all work must be done under Section 7137, General Code, et seq., by the road superintendent with the labor and materials at his command, and all expenses met out of the township road funds.

Section 3295, General Code, authorizes township trustees to issue bonds for "opening, widening or extending streets and public highways," but such power does not extend to the roads under consideration, but applies to the opening of roads where the trustees themselves take the initiative.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1912.

HON. JAY S. PAISLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 29th, in which you request my advice as follows:

"In this county a county road has been established as provided by Sections 6860 to 6881 of the General Code. Under Section 6881, the county commissioners issued their order to the trustees directing that the road be opened. It will cost about fourteen thousand ($14,000.00) dollars to open the road, making it a common dirt road.

"The trustees of the township desire to issue bonds for the improvement and I desire to ask if the authority given by the General Code, Section 3295, amended in Ohio laws, Vol. 100, page 53, Sections 4 and 23 thereof, authorizes the trustees to issue bonds for such county road, and then if they are authorized to issue bonds for opening a county road as aforesaid, under what law they would proceed to let the contract therefor. General Code, Sections 7023, et seq., seems to apply in some particulars, but I cannot convince myself that those sections apply to the opening up of a new country road."

Your statement, "it will cost about fourteen thousand ($14,000.00) dollars to open the road, making it a common dirt road," is not entirely clear to me. You do not explain whether the entire fourteen thousand dollars represents the amount of the compensation and damages to the owners of adjoining property and property taken, whether it represents the cost of opening up and constructing the road without any of the expense of compensation and damages being included therein, or whether it represents the total cost of completing the road as a common dirt road, including both the compensation and damages, and the expense of opening the road.

These distinctions are of importance. I think it is quite clear from Sections 6861, et seq., General Code, that the compensation and damages awarded to property owners in the course of a proceeding to open a county road must be paid either from the county treasury or, in part at least, by the petitioners for the road. I have so held in an opinion to Hon. Fred W. Crow, prosecuting attorney of Meigs county, a copy of which I enclose herein.

It follows from this that township trustees have no authority to pay or to borrow money for the purpose of paying the compensation and damages of property owners growing out of the opening of a county road. From the same sections, and particularly from Sections 6881 and 7137 of the General Code, I think it is apparent that the expense, if any, of the actual opening or construction of the county road as distinguished from the expense growing out of the compensation or damages to property owners must be borne by the township trustees. I have so held in an opinion to Hon. Clifford Shoemaker, deputy highway commissioner, a copy of which I enclose herewith.

So much, then, of the fourteen thousand dollars, of which you speak, as represents the cost of construction and opening up merely may lawfully be paid out of township funds. This conclusion leaves open the further question as to whether or not the trustees may issue bonds for this purpose.

As pointed out in the opinion to the deputy state highway commissioner, the township trustees are not authorized to let contracts for opening county roads. All such work must be done by the road superintendents in the manner provided in Sections 7137, et seq., General Code. This of itself is a sufficient answer to one of the questions raised in your letter.

Analysis of several related sections of the General Code will show how the road superintendent must go about it to perform the services required of him by law in connection with the opening of new county roads.

By section 3372 of the General Code, the road superintendent is given express power to enter into contracts for materials necessary for ordinary repairs and for the repairs themselves in case of floods, freshets or other emergencies. This express mention of the powers to contract in these connections but strengthens the conclusion that in the opening up of county roads the superintendent may not enter into a contract for the entire work or any part thereof.

Three things, and three only, are necessary, it seems to me, to the superintendent in the opening of a road. These are (1) tools; (2) materials; and, (3) labor. The statute provides means whereby the road superintendent is to be furnished with all of these things. By Section 7164, General Code, the trustees are directed to furnish the superintendents with the necessary tools, implements and machinery for the construction, repair and maintenance of the roads. By Sections 7137 and 7168, General Code, the road superintendent is authorized to enter upon lands nearby or adjacent to the road to be opened up and to take stone, gravel, timber and other materials which he may find therein and which may be necessary for use as materials in the construction of the road. The trustees must pay for all the materials so taken from the township road fund, but may not pay out more than twenty-five dollars for any one road district. If more than this sum is incurred by the road superintendent, the owner of the land from which the material was taken must look under Section 7170 to the county commissioners for his compensation.

As to the labor necessary to open a road, the superintendent may avail himself in the first instance of the two days' labor required to be performed upon public highways by all male persons between the ages of twenty-one and fifty-five years in his district (Sections 3375, et seq., General Code). There seems also to be an inference in Section 3373, General Code, under favor of which the superintendent may himself employ laborers if he is unable to secure a sufficient number of those willing to work out their poll tax, so to speak. There is some confusion here, for by Section 3385, General Code, the township trustees are given express authority to employ day laborers and teams. The funds from which these employments are to be made in either event are to be provided for by levies made under authority of Section 5646 and of Sections 7486 to 7488, inclusive, General Code. In addition to these sources of revenue, the superintendent has at his command the sum paid him by those liable to perform road labor in commutation of such labor under Section 3376, General Code, and the fines, forfeitures and penalties collected by him under the provisions of the chapter relating to road labor. So that, if it becomes necessary to employ laborers within the road district presided over by the superintendent, either in the original construction or opening of the county road, or in the repairs of the already-established roads, ample funds would seem to be provided by the statutes above referred to for such purpose.

No other means of providing funds for the opening of a county road are afforded by the statutes of this state unless such means be found in the laws relating to the issuance of bonds by municipal corporations and township trustees, referred to by you. Indeed, it is difficult to understand why other means should be afforded. The unimproved county road provided for by the statutes is a crude thing. It consists of little more than a strip of land with a raised portion in the middle properly graded to each side and drainage ditches running parallel thereto. It would seem that in almost every case such a road might be constructed from materials found in the right of way itself, and by the use of the road labor required by law, or the sums paid in commutation thereof. The proper grading of a road or the construction of any kind of a permanent road bed such as gravel, macadam, or the like, constitutes the road an "improved road" and the procedure for constructing such a road is an entirely different thing. For these reasons, I have been unable to believe it will cost fourteen thousand dollars to construct, or rather to open, a county road without constituting it in any way an improved road. If this estimated sum is based upon the supposition that the road, though a dirt road, will be completely graded, then I can only say that this supposition is erroneous, because there is no authority for the complete grading of a county road as a part of opening it.

Section 3295, General Code, to which you refer, authorizes township trustees and municipal councils to issue bonds for certain specified purposes, among them —"for opening, widening, and extending any street or public highway." In my opinion, this language (which is in reality found in Section 3939, G. C., as amended 102 O. L. 263, to which Section 3295 refers) is not sufficient, in the face of the provisions concerning which I have heretofore been writing, to constitute authority for the township trustees to issue bonds for the purpose of raising funds necessary to be expended in opening a county road which they have been ordered to open by the county commissioners. This section may refer to the opening of a township road by the township trustees themselves in the first instance. The duties of the trustees and the road superintendent with respect to the opening of a county road being purely ministerial in a sense, however, I am convinced that this grant of power is not intended to be made in furtherance of the discharge of such duties.

For all of the foregoing reasons, I am of the opinion that township trustees have no authority whatever to issue bonds for the purpose of providing for the expense of opening a county road, but that such expense must be provided for out of the ordinary township road fund and that the trustees may not let a contract for the purpose of opening such a road, but must assign the work to the road superintendent, who, with the aid of the road labor of which he has charge and by the use of the funds in his hands, or subject to his order in the hands of the trustees, must proceed to do the actual work of opening the road.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CONTRACTS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF COUNTY BRIDGE—NECESSITY FOR FILING OF PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS FOR PUBLIC INSPECTION—NO EXCEPTION WHEN BRIDGE DESTROYED BY FIRE.

There is no authority for permitting an exception to Section 2353, General Code, which stipulates that contracts for the construction of county bridges costing less than $1,000, shall not be let until plans or specifications have been kept on file in the commissioners' or auditor's office for a period of fifteen days for public inspection. The procedure is not dispensed with, therefore, when a county bridge has been destroyed by fire.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1912.

HON. H. R. LOOMIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 3d, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "When a county bridge is destroyed by flood, the estimated cost of which is $900, do the county commissioners have authority, by passing a resolution by a unanimous vote declaring that it is an urgent necessity that this bridge be replaced at once, to contract for the bridge at private sale without posting notice of the letting for fifteen days on a bulletin board in the office of the county commissioners' or auditor's office as required by Section 2353 of the General Code?"

I also acknowledge receipt of the memorandum prepared by you stating your views thereon.

Section 2353, General Code, provides, as you state in your question, that contracts for the construction of county bridges costing less than one thousand dollars ($1,000) shall be let only after plans or specifications shall have been kept on file in the commissioners' or auditor's office for a period of fifteen days, open to public inspection, and after notice has been posted in one of these offices for the same period of time, stating the nature of the improvement, and when and where proposals for doing the work and furnishing the material will be received.

Section 2354, General Code, provides that when the cost of such an improvement is less than two hundred dollars ($200), the contract therefor can be let privately without competitive bidding.

To the rules as thus prescribed there is no express statutory exception. That is to say, there is no other or different procedure provided for in the case of any "emergency." In fact, it would seem that the replacing of a county bridge, destroyed by some casualty, does not, in law, constitute a case of urgent necessity arising from an emergency. By Section 2427, General Code, the commissioners are authorized to select a new site for the bridge when thus destroyed, and in that event they must give twenty days' notice of consideration of the question of change of site. This provision would seem to indicate that it is the intention of the legislature, as you suggest in your letter, that the permanent interests of the traveling public and of the tax payers of the county are to be preferred to the avoidance of temporary inconvenience.

The cases cited by you, State ex rel. vs. Commissioners, 14 O. D., 228, and State ex rel. vs. Ashland County, Id. 568, while not on the exact point, are highly instructive. Particularly is this true of the first of these two cases, wherein it was held that the provisions of what are now Section 5643 and 5644, General Code, applicable to the levy of a tax for the replacement of a county bridge which has become unfit for public travel, are not to be construed as relieving the commissioners from any of the provisions which govern the letting of contracts for such work. The sections referred to are the only ones in the General Code, so far as I am able to ascertain, which provide any special procedure in the case of the existence of "an emergency" with respect to a county bridge. As suggested, they have nothing whatever to do with the letting of contracts for the construction of such bridge, but only apply to the necessity of submitting the polity of constructing such bridge by general tax to the electors.

While, therefore, the fact that the cost of the improvement is under one thousand dollars, relieves the commissioners of the duty to follow all of the statutory requirements for the letting of contracts exceeding that amount and of the duty to submit the question of the policy of building the bridge to a vote of the electors, as in the case of bridges exceeding eighteen thousand dollars in cost, I do not find that the existence of facts such as those stated in your letter would justify the commissioners in dispensing with fifteen days' notice and publication provided for in the section cited by you.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PROBATE JUDGE—FEES FOR PUBLISHING NOTICES OF APPOINTMENT AND FILING OF ACCOUNTS DO NOT INCLUDE PRINTER'S BILL—ESTATE LESS THAN $200—ACCOUNT NECESSARY—FEE OF PHYSICIANS IN INSANITY HEARINGS, WHEN PERSON NOT FOUND INSANE.

In the appointment of an administrator, executor or assignee, for which the probate judge is to charge and collect $5.50 "for all services," such fee does not include the printer's bill for the publication of notice of appointment, though it does include all services rendered by the court in arranging for said notice and having it printed.

Also under Section 1601, General Code, the fee of $4.50 allowed the probate judge for filing each account, does not include the printer's bill for the publishing of notice of the account.

The same principle applies to the limitation of the probate judge fees to ten dollars against estates of less than $200, which shall not include the printer's bill for notice of appointment.

Accounts shall be filed and notices published of the same in estates of less than $200 as in other cases.

Under Section 1981, General Code, "physicians designated by the court to make examination and certificate shall be allowed the fee of $5.00 therein provided together with witness fees, regardless of whether or not the party is adjudicated insane.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 20, 1912.

HON. JAMES J. WEADOCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 27, 1911, in which you request my opinion concerning matters contained in a letter addressed to you, under date of November 21, 1911, by the probate judge of Allen county, Ohio, which letter is as follows:

> "As the legal adviser of the offices of Allen county, Ohio, I wish your opinion on the following matters arising in my office:
> "1st. In the appointment of an administrator, executor or assignee, for which the probate judge is to charge and collect $5.50, does the $5.50 cover the charges for publishing the notice of appointment, as required by Section 10712, Laws of Ohio, Vol. 102, at page 202?
>
> "In the charges for filing an account of $4.50, does that include the printer's fee for publishing the notice of the hearing of said account?
> "In the administration of an estate of less than $200, in which the probate fees are not to exceed $10, is the probate judge required to have a notice of the appointment published and pay the printer out of the $10? And will an account be required or a statement in lieu of an account?
> "Section 1981, as found in Session Laws, Vol. 102, page 287, says: 'To each of the two physicians designated by the court to make examination and certificate, five dollars and witness fees as allowed in the court of common pleas.'
> "In case the party, against whom an affidavit is filed, is found by the court to be not insane, are the physicians, who are not required by the court to make a certificate, entitled to the same fee of $5, as if the party is found insane and the physicians ordered by the court to make a certificate?

Replying to the first question contained in said letter, Section 1601, General Code, as amended in 102 O. L. 281, provides that:

> "The fees enumerated in this section shall be charged and collected by the probate judge and shall be in full for all services rendered in the respective proceedings: For appointment of administrator, executor, guardian for minor, except guardian ad litem, assignee or trustee, five dollars and fifty cents * * * for each amount four dollars and fifty cents; * * *"
> "Provided, however, that in estates the assets of which do not exceed two hundred dollars in value the total fees of the probate judge chargeable against such estate shall not exceed ten dollars."

Section 10712, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Within one month after bond has been given by the executor or administrator, for the discharge of his trust, the probate judge shall cause notice of the appointment to be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the county, in which the letters were issued, for three consecutive weeks."

You inquire: Does the $5.50 cover the charges for publication of the notice of appointment, as required by Section 10712, of the Laws of Ohio, Vol. 102, page 202?

You will note that the fee of $5.50, under Section 1601, G. C., as amended, is in full for all services rendered in connection with the appointment of a guardian, administrator, executor, etc. Section 10712, as amended, 102 O. L. 202, requires the probate judge to cause a notice of the appointment of administrator, guardian or executor, to be published in some newspaper of general circulation in the county; and the service in preparing this notice and causing it to be published in a newspaper is covered by the fee of $5.50; but the printer's fee for publishing this notice is a charge against the estate, in addition to the fee of $5.50, and the administrator, executor or guardian is required to pay it as part of the costs, in addition to the fees allowed the probate judge under Section 1601, General Code, as it is, in no sense, a fee of the probate judge and is, therefore, not covered by the limitation in Section 1601, General Code.

Replying to your second inquiry, Section 1601, just quoted, provides that the probate judge shall receive a fee of $4.50 for filing each account. Applying the same reasoning as in answering your first inquiry I am of the opinion that the fee for the publishing of the notice of the account, in some newspaper of general circulation in the county, is not to be included in the $4.50, allowed the probate judge as fees for filing his account, but is to be charged against the estate as costs, in addition to the amount allowed the probate judge.

Replying to your third inquiry, I am of the opinion that the limitation of ten dollars, fees for the probate judge, chargeable against an estate of less than $200, does not include the printer's fee for the publication of notice of appointment, but in this case, as well as the two previous cases, the probate judge's fees and the printer's fees should be kept separate and distinct; and the limitation of amounts applies only to the probate judge, as to the fees he may charge for services rendered; and that the cost of printing notices is, in this case, as well as in the other two cases, an additional charge against the estate.

You inquire further, whether, when the assets of an estate do not exceed $200, and the fee of the probate judge is limited to $10, an account is required, or if a statement in lieu of an account is sufficient.

If an administrator, guardian or assignee collects and disburses any money, even though the amount is under two hundred dollars, he should file an account and publish notice of the filing of the same, just as is required in larger estates.

The probate judge, in his letter to you, says:

> "Section 1981, as found in Session Laws, Vol. 102, at page 287, says: 'To each of the two physicians designated by the court to make examination and certificate, five dollars and witness fees as allowed in the court of common pleas.'
> "In the case the party, against whom an affidavit is filed, is found by the court to be not insane, are the physicians who are not required by the court to make a certificate entitled to the same fee of five dollars, as if the party is found insane and the physicians ordered by the court to make a certificate?"

Section 1981, as amended, 102 O. L. 287, provides that each of the two physicians, designated by the court to make examination and certificate, shall receive five dollars and witness fees as allowed in the court of common pleas; and witnesses shall receive the same fees as are allowed in the court of common pleas.

It is my opinion that the fee of five dollars, provided for the two physicians who testify in the probate court in lunacy cases, is in the nature of a fee for an expert witness, and the amount to be paid in a given case will not depend upon the findings of the court as to the sanity or insanity of the party examined. The examination of a party, claimed to be insane, although the party is discharged, requires the same qualification of the witnesses, requires the same amount of work, to make the examination, as in the case where the judgment of the court is that he is insane. The certificate of insanity is a mere formal matter and the fee of five dollars is not paid to the physicians, testifying under Section 1981, for the certificate, but is paid to them for making the medical examination.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW APPLIED TO TOWNSHIPS—LONGWORTH ACT—SMITH LAW LIMITATIONS GENERALIZED—SINKING FUND LEVIES—LEVIES TO RETIRE BONDS AUTHORIZED BY ELECTORS.

Under the Smith one per cent. law 1st., interest and sinking fund levies, for the purpose of discharging indebtedness created after June 1, 1911, by vote of the people are not to be included within the taxes which must be limited to ten mills on the duplicate of the taxing district for all purposes as required by Section 5649-2 and 5649-3.

2nd. Such levies are not included within the limitations of five, three and two mills respectively, provided for by Section 5649-3*a.*

3rd. Such levies are to be regarded as a part of the gross or aggregate levy which may not exceed that of the year 1910 in the taxing district.

4th. Such levies are to be included within the all inclusive levy of fifteen mills, beyond which, even for interest and sinking fund, no taxing district may go.

Section 3295 known as the Longworth act, intends to refer to and adopt as to townships, the same general provisions with reference to issue of bonds as those which apply to municipal corporations in Section 3939 General Code. Therefore, where a township is obliged by reason of limits of taxation to issue bonds upon submission to and approval by vote of the people, a levy for the retirement of such bonds, would be a levy for interest and sinking fund purposes, to provide for the extinguishment of a debt created after passage of the Smith one per cent. law by vote of the electors and such levy would be within the fifteen mill limitation and also within that measured by the aggregate amount levied in the district in 1910, but outside all other limitations of the Smith law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1912.

HON. F. M. STEVENS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 24th, calling attention to a question which you intended to ask in your previous letter of December 9th, and which was not covered by the opinion to Hon. Custer Snyder, copy of which was sent to you in supposed compliance with the request of that letter.

I also acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 9th, explaining a misunderstanding that had arisen in my mind concerning the exact question which you ask.

That question is as follows:

> "What is the joint effect of the Smith one per cent. law, so-called, and the Longworth act, so-called, as applicable to townships?"

The Smith law is found in 102 O. L. 266, and its essential provisions are embodied in Sections 5649-2 and 5649-5*b*, inclusive, thereof.

The following general observation will suffice as to the nature and purpose of the Smith law, in connection with your question:

1. Interest and sinking fund levies, for the purpose of discharging indebtedness created after June 1, 1911 by a vote of the people, are not to be included within the taxes which must be limited to ten mills on the duplicate of the taxing district for all purposes, as required by Sections 5649-2 and 5649-3.

2. Such levies are not included within the limitations of five, three and two mills respectively, provided for by Section 5649-3*a* (State ex rel. vs. Sanzenbacher, supreme court, unreported).

3. Such levies are to be regarded as a part of the gross or aggregate levy which may not exceed that of the year 1910 in the taxing district. (Sections 5649-2 and 5649-3.)

4. Such levies are to be included within the all-inclusive maximum levy of fifteen mills, beyond which, even for interest and sinking fund, no taxing district may go. (Section 5649-5*b*.)

The Longworth act, so-called, insofar as it applies to townships, is embodied in the following sections:

> "Section 3295. The trustees of any township may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such periods of time and at such rate of interest, not to exceed six per cent., in such manner as is provided by law for the sale of bonds by such township, for any of the purposes authorized by law for the sale of bonds by a municipal corporation for specific purposes, when not less than two of such trustees, by an affirmative vote, by resolution deem it necessary, and the provisions of law applicable to municipal corporations in the issue and sale of bonds for specific purposes, the limitations thereon, and for the submission thereof to the voters, shall extend and apply to the trustees of townships."

Section 3939, as amended 102 O. L. 262 (this section is so lengthy that I shall not quote it in full) provides that the council of a municipal corporation may, by following a certain proceeding, issue bonds for some twenty-seven specific purposes.

The remaining sections of the act, therein designated as Sections 3940 et seq., provide certain limitations upon the amount of indebtedness that may be thus created in any one year without a vote of the electors, and the amount that may be outstanding at any time, with and without a vote of the electors.

(Section 3939, General Code, was also amended on the same day by the act found in 102 O. L. 153. Whether this act supersedes Section 1 of 102 O. L. 262, or not, is a doubtful question which it is not necessary here to determine.)

It is obvious, I think, at least it will become so upon examination of the pre-existing statutes, that the intention of the legislature is that Section 3295 shall refer to and adopt, as to townships, the general provisions of Sections 3939 et seq., as they relate to municipal corporations.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that townships now have the same powers, subject to the same limitations, as are set forth with respect to municipal corporations in Sections 3939 et seq., as amended and supplanted by the act above referred to.

Now, I think it is perfectly obvious that in case the limits of indebtedness of a township or municipality require that an issue of bonds for a specific purpose shall be submitted to a vote of the people, and such issue is so submitted and receives the approval of the electors, a levy for its retirement would be a levy for interest and sinking fund purposes to provide for the extinguishment of a debt created after the passage of the Smith law by vote of the electors.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that bonds so issued must be discharged by levies made, as aforesaid, within the fifteen mill limitation of the Smith law, and also within that measured by the gross amount of taxes levied in the district in the year 1910, but outside of the other limitations of the Smith law.

That is to say, levies under that which you appropriately call the "specific purpose statute" may not be made in excess of all of the limitations of the Smith law, but only in excess of those specifically referred to.

I trust that the foregoing sufficiently answers the question which you have in mind.

Very respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PRIMARY NOT A "REGULAR ELECTION" FOR PURPOSE OF VOTE ON QUESTION OF ESTABLISHING CHILDREN'S HOME.

The phrase "at the next regular election," in Section 3070, General Code, providing for a vote upon the establishing of children's home, cannot refer to "primary election," as such an intention would be both inconsistent with the purpose of the statute and not applicable to conditions existing when the act was passed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 27, 1912.

HON. DON J. YOUNG, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 15th is received wherein you state:

> "On behalf of the county commissioners, I request your opinion with reference to the possibility of a children's home bond election being held at the primaries. The statute provides that the election should be held at a regular election. Is the primary such a regular election, in your opinion?"

Section 3070 General Code provides how a vote shall be submitted for the establishment of a children's home and for the issuance of county bonds to provide funds therefor, stating that the question shall be submitted "at the next regular election."

"The word 'regular' means conformable to an established rule, or principle and the exact literal signification of the phrase 'next general election,' is the next election held conformable to an established rule or law." State vs Cobb, 2 Kansas, 32-34.

At the time of the enactment of this statute (the later amendments not changing it materially) when the phrase "next regular election" was used, there was no primary election day fixed by statute where-at all political parties voted for their respective candidates. True, there was a sort of a primary election law under which the political parties, fixing the date at will, and in almost every instance each party having a different election day, could vote for their respective party nominations, but there was no regular primary election day fixed by law as now.

Then again, the requirement of the present primary election law only applies to "voluntary political parties or associations, which at the next preceding general election polled in the state or any district, county or subdivision thereof, or municipality, at least ten per cent., of the entire vote cast;" (Sec. 4949 G. C.) and as the object of the legislature in providing for the submission of the question of the issuance of bonds must have been to obtain an expression of the whole of the entire electorate at the election where-at every voter of the county would be eligible to vote, it is readily perceived that this could not always be had at a primary election, limited as it is to partisan voters.

The right of the independent voters and of the Socialist or other party voters whose party may not have received the required percentage at the next preceding election to have his vote recorded for or against the bond issue must be jealously preserved.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the primary election is not such an election as is included in the phrase "regular election" contained in Section 3077 General Code.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—POWER TO BORROW MONEY AND ISSUE BONDS—RUNNING EXPENSES—SPECIAL PURPOSES.

The township trustees have no authority to issue bonds or otherwise borrow money, in anticipation of general revenues except for special purposes specified in the statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1912.

HON. F. M. STEVENS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 12th, requesting my opinion upon the following question:

> "May the township trustees make a temporary loan in anticipation of taxes to be levied and collected?"

I am unable to find statutory authority for any such loan excepting for certain specific purposes, such as the purchase of a hearse (Section 3287, General Code). That is to say, I find no general authority to issue bonds in anticipation of the general tax levy for ordinary and usual purposes. Municipal corporations have this power, but it does not exist unless specifically granted, and I do not find that it has been granted to township trustees.

You refer me to Sections 3295 and 3939 of the General Code. I have, in part, discussed the joint effect of these two sections, in an opinion to you of even date herewith. I need only add to comments therein made that the authority of township trustees, under Section 3295 and Section 3939, which is adopted by reference in Section 3295, is limited to the issuance of bonds for certain specific purposes—for the making of certain specified improvements.

The trustees have no authority, under these sections to issue bonds, or otherwise to borrow money, for the purpose of anticipating the general revenues of the township and carrying on its ordinary business.

If your question relates to borrowing money for a specific purpose, it follows, of course, that trustees do have the power so to do under the sections last above cited.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—EXPENDITURES OF CANDIDATES—LIMITATION INCLUDES BOTH NOMINATIONS AND ELECTIONS.

The remedial parts of the corrupt practice act should be liberally construed with a view to determining the intent of the legislature and to serving the purposes of the act.

Under these principles, the amount stated in Section 5175-29, General Code, to be expended by a candidate for office intends a limitation upon the sum total of his expenses, both for the purpose of the nomination and of the election.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 27, 1912.

HON. JAMES W. GALBRAITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of February 16th, wherein you state:

> "I have been requested for an opinion by candidates of this county in reference to construction of the corrupt practices act, General Code, Sections 5175, et seq., and particularly as to the limitation of the amount of expenditure allowed to candidates in subsection 29 thereof, the main question being, would a successful candidate for the nomination have to consider, as an item of the total expense authorized at election the expense incurred in securing the nomination and by that, necessarily, reduce the amount authorized to be expended in his race for election."

Your recollection is correct. The newspapers had an account of a ruling made by me on this identical question, but as it was a verbal opinion, in response to a verbal inquiry which demanded an immediate answer, I will be pleased now to give a written opinion to you in the matter.

Section 5175-29 provides:

> "The total amount expended by a candidate for a public office, voted for at an election, by the qualified electors of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, for any of the purposes specified in Section 26 of this act, for contributions to political committees, as that term is defined in Section 1 of this act, or for any purpose tending in any way, directly or indirectly, to promote or aid in securing his nomination for election, shall not exceed the amount specified herein: By a candidate for governor, the sum of five thousand dollars; by a candidate for other elective state office, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars; by a candidate for the office of representative in congress or presidential elector, the sum of two thousand dollars; by a candidate for the office of state senator, the sum of three hundred dollars in each county of his district; by a candidate for the office of state representative, the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars; by a candidate for any other public office to be voted for by the qualified electors of a county, city, town or village, or any part thereof, if the total number of votes cast therein for all candidates for the office of governor at the last preceding state election, shall be five thousand or less, the sum of three hundred dollars. If the total number of votes cast therein at such last preceding state election be in excess of five thousand, the sum of five dollars for each one hundred in excess of such number may be added to the amounts above specified. Any candidate for a public office who shall expend for the purposes above mentioned an amount in excess of the amounts herein specified, shall be guilty of corrupt practices."

As far as your inquiry is concerned, this section can be read:

"The total amount expended by a candidate * * for any purpose tending in any way, directly or indirectly, to promote or aid in securing his nomination or election shall not exceed * * *"

The corrupt practices act, of which the above is a part is in a great measure what is known as remedial legislation, having added thereto certain penal sections.

The last legislature in enacting this law merely responded to the insistent demands of the people that some remedy be provided to stop the widespread corruption that had become incident to our election and was fast destroying the honest expression of the will of the people. Delegates were regarded as mere trading stock in the hands of the political manipulators; offices in many jurisdictions went to the highest bidders.

A law made to change such conditions should receive a liberal construction in order that the legislative intent might be accomplished. That is, the remedial sections should be liberally construed even if certain other sections are penal. In Commissioners vs. Shaleen, 215 Pa. 595, Mr. Justice Stewart says:

"That part of the act we are considering calls for a liberal construction; it is not penal but beneficial and remedial and is to be construed to give effect to the legislative intent. 'There is no impropriety in putting a strict construction on a penal clause and a liberal construction on a remedial clause in the same act of Parliament.'"

What, then, was the legislative intent in the enactment of the remedial clause of this section? Was it not to fix the total amount to be expended for the candidates for office, an amount beyond which no one could go for any of the permissible purposes to obtain the office sought? If there were a fixed amount to be expended for the nomination and another fixed amount for the election, would not the legislature have expressly said so? And, again, it is a well known rule that the amount expended for an election is greater than for a primary—the occasions and necessities for expenditure are more frequent—the field is wider, for in a party primary the party is confined to the electorate of his party, whereas, in the election the appeal is to combine the vote of all parties.

If the legislature did not intend to include what would be termed the "nomination" as well as the "election" expenses in the paragraph quoted, I believe the limitation for nomination expenditures would have been much less than those for the election, yet in this act but one total amount is fixed.

It is true the paragraph reads: "In securing his nomination or election," yet, it does not need the use of the rule that "or" may be read "and" where the sense requires, to perceive that the real legislative intent was to fix the maximum expenditure for all and everything in relation to the election to the office, including expenses incurred in securing the nomination.

By reason of the foregoing, it is my opinion that the total amount limited to be expended by a candidate for office under provision of Section 29 of the corrupt practices act (General Code, 5075-29) is, as far as the successful candidate is concerned, the sum total of his expenses both in securing his nomination as well as his election.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

SHERIFF'S FEES—ALLOWANCE FROM COUNTY TREASURY FOR LOST FEES IN CRIMINAL CASES.

Under original Section 2846, General Code, and the more certainly so since the amendment thereof, the sheriff is entitled to receive personally, in addition to his salary, an allowance from the county treasury for his legal fees for services in criminal cases where the state fails to convict and in misdemeanor cases where the defendant proves insolvent. Such allowances shall not exceed three hundred dollars.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 29, 1912.

HON. EDWARD C. TURNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of January 18th received. You enclosed a copy of your opinion, addressed to Hon. Fred M. Sayre, auditor of Franklin county, construing Section 2846, General Code, and which reads as follows:

"In re quarterly allowance to sheriff for services in criminal cases."

"My attention has been called to a new law on this subject, Section 2846 of the General Code, found at page 287, 102 O. L., the part applicable reading as follows:

" 'Upon the certificate of the clerk and the allowance of the county commissioners, the sheriff shall receive from the county treasurer, in addition to his salary, his legal fees for services in criminal cases wherein the state fails to convict and in misdemeanors upon conviction where the defendant proves insolvent, but not more than three hundred dollars shall be allowed for the services rendered in any one year.'

"The sheriff in a statement to me said that he considered this to be a personal allowance to himself, but I am not of that opinion. Section 2983, being a part of the Canfield law under which Section 2846 was enacted and found at page 290 of the General Code, provides:

" 'At the end of each quarter each officer shall pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by his office during such quarter for his official services, which money shall be kept in separate funds by the county treasurer and credited to the funds from which they were received, for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which such officers are elected, and shall be held as public moneys belonging to such county and accounted for and paid over as provided in Division III, fees and salaries, Chapter 11.'

"I am of the further opinion that before the commissioners can make this allowance, the sheriff should present an itemized voucher to the clerk showing that at least the maximum allowance in fees has been earned, and the clerk would have to issue his certificate that the same was correct.

"On account of the claims of the sheriff, I have submitted this matter to the attorney general."

You request my opinion as to whether your construction of Section 2846, General Code, is right or wrong.

Section 2846, General Code, provides as follows:

"Upon the certificate of the clerk and the allowance of the county commissioners, the sheriff shall receive from the county treasurer, in addition to his salary, his legal fees for services in criminal cases wherein the state fails to convict and in misdemeanors upon conviction where the defendant proves insolvent, but not more than three hundred dollars shall be allowed for the services rendered in any one year of his term."

Section 2846, General Code, was formerly Section 1231, Revised Statutes, and prior to amendment provided as follows:

"In each county the court of common pleas shall make an allowance of not more than three hundred dollars in each year for the sheriff for services in criminal cases, where the state fails to convict, or the defendants prove insolvent, and for other services not particularly provided for. Such allowance shall be paid from the county treasury."

Section 1231, Revised Statutes, was enacted in 1876 and is found in 73 Ohio Laws, page 127.

The Canfield law was passed January 1, 1907, and is found in Volume 98, Ohio Laws, page 96, et seq. Section 6 thereof, which is now Section 2983, General Code, provided:

"Each of the officers named herein shall at the end of each quarter, pay into the county treasury on the warrant of the county auditor, all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and perquisites of whatever kind collected by his office during said quarter, for his official services, which moneys shall be kept in separate funds by the county treasurer, and credited to the office from which the same has been returned."

Section 18 of the Canfield law, Revised Statutes, Section 1296-28, provided:

"And said salary shall be in lieu of all fees, costs, penalties, percentages, allowances and all other perquisites of any kind which any of the officials herein named may now collect and receive, provided, however, that in no case shall such annual salary payable to any of the officers aforesaid exceed the sum of $6,000."

But Section 1296-33 in the Canfield law expressly excepted from the operation of said law the provisions of Section 1231, Revised Statutes of Ohio, now Section 2846, General Code. Section 1296-33, is as follows:

"That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed. Provided further that this act shall not affect the provisions of Section 1231 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio."

Section 1296-33 of the Revised Statutes, was carried into the General Code, and is now Section 2998, General Code, which section provides as follows:

"Nothing in this chapter shall affect the power of the court of common pleas in each county to make an allowance of not to exceed three hundred dollars each year to the sheriff for services in criminal cases where the state fails to convict or the defendant proves insolvent and for other services not particularly provided for by law."

It was plainly the intention of the legislature, in the enactment of the Canfield law, to except from the provisions thereof the allowance made by the court of common pleas under favor of Section 1231, General Code, which is now Section 2846, General Code; and it would have been my holding, under Sections 2846 and 2998 of the General Code, prior to the amendment of Section 2846, that the allowance made by the court of common pleas, under authority of Section 2846, General Code, should be paid to the sheriff in addition to his regular salary; but the amendment of said Section 2846, General Code, found in 102 O. L. 287, expressly authorizes the amount allowed by the commissioners for "lost costs" to be paid to the sheriff in addition to his salary. Prior to the amendment of this last named section, the court of common pleas was authorized to make an allowance of not more than three hundred dollars for services in criminal cases where the state failed to convict or the defendant proved insolvent, and for other services not particularly provided for. This allowance was made in a lump sum, generally fixed prior to the rendering of the services and not dependent upon the amount of services. There was no way provided to determine the amount to be allowed by the court, it being left to the sound discretion of the court as to the amount, within three hundred dollars, to be allowed.

The amendment of this section makes it clear that the amount to be allowed to the sheriff is to be in addition to his salary, and further fixes a method whereby the amount to be allowed is to be accurately determined, namely: the fees earned by the sheriff in the classes of cases mentioned in said Section 2846. As the law now stands, the clerk of the court of common pleas certifies the amount of fees for services of the sheriff in cases where the state fails to convict, or where the defendant proves insolvent, to the county commissioners, and if the amount thereof in any one year is under three hundred dollars the sheriff is allowed the amount earned; if it exceeds three hundred dollars he is allowed three hundred dollars, and the amount thus allowed is to be paid to the sheriff in addition to his salary and does not go into the sheriff's fee fund.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

ADDENDUM:

Since writing this opinion I have learned that my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, held that, under Section 2846, General Code, prior to the amendment, the sheriff was entitled to the amount allowed by the court of common pleas under authority of said Section 2846, in addition to his salary, in which opinion I heartily concur.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDING BEFORE JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—CRUELTY TO CHILDREN—PAYMENT OF COST OF JURY TRIAL BY COUNTY.

In criminal proceedings under Section 12970, General Code, for abuse to children, before a justice of the peace, when the defendant is acquitted after a jury trial, the justice of the peace shall certify the cost bill to the county auditor, who after examination, and correction, if necessary, shall draw his warrant for the same on the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 29, 1912.

HON. GEORGE D. KLEIN, Prosecuting Attorney, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of February 2, 1912, is received, in which you ask an opinion upon the following:

> "V. T., a minor, 13 years of age, filed an affidavit in Justice E. G. A.'s court, justice of the peace of T. township, this county, charging G. B. J. with cruelty and unlawfully punishing him, the said V. T., under Section 12970 of the G. C. A jury trial was had and the jury found G. B. J. not guilty. The jury was drawn by the clerk of the court as provided for in Section 12987. The cost bill was then certified to the county auditor for payment according to Section 12988.
> "The auditor of our county then requests me for an opinion as to whether said costs should be paid by the county. I told him that Section 12988 was very plain, and that I would not give a written opinion and assume the responsibility that he by Section 12988 must assume.
> "This case was not prosecuted by the humane society for which purpose these sections are a part of a special act for offenses against minors and when the auditor observed that I would not give him a written opinion he raised that question which put me in doubt.
> "The question in brief is this, should the county pay the cost bill in this case when it was not prosecuted by the humane society and costs were not secured."

You state that the charges filed were for the violation of Section 12970, General Code, which provides:

> "Whoever, having the control of or being the parent or guardian of a child under the age of sixteen years, wilfully abandons such child, or tortures, torments, or cruelly or unlawfully punishes it, or wilfully, unlawfully or negligently fails to furnish it necessary and proper food, clothing or shelter, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

A justice of the peace has jurisdiction to try such case by virtue of Section 13423, General Code, which provides:

> "Justices of the peace, police judges and mayors of cities and villages shall have jurisdiction, within their respective counties, in all cases of violation of any law relating to:
> "1.
>
> "2. The prevention of cruelty to animals and children;
>
> "3. The abandonment, non-support or ill-treatment of a child by its parent;
> "4. The abandonment or ill-treatment of a child under sixteen years of age by its guardian;"

You state that a jury was drawn to try the defendant by virtue of Section 12987, General Code, which provides:

> "On complaint before a mayor, justice of the peace or police judge of a second or further violation of the laws relating to the compulsory education or employment of minors, if a trial by jury is not waived, a jury shall be chosen and proceedings had therein as provided by law in cases of a violation of the law for the prevention of cruelty to animals and children."

This section does not cover the offense defined in Section 12970, General Code, for which the accused was tried.

However, a justice of the peace could proceed by virtue of the provisions of Section 13432, General Code, which provides:

> "In prosecutions before a justice, police judge or mayor, when imprisonment is a part of the punishment, if a trial by jury is not waived, the magistrate, not less than three days nor more than five days before the time fixed for trial, shall certify to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county that such prosecution is pending before him."

Section 13433, General Code, then authorizes the clerk of the court of common pleas to draw the jury.

Section 12988, General Code, provides for the payment of costs, as follows:

> "No person or officer instituting proceedings under the next fourteen preceding sections shall be required to file or give security for costs. If a defendant is acquitted or discharged, or if convicted and committed to jail in default of payment of fine and costs, the justice, mayor, police judge or probate judge before whom such case was brought shall certify such costs to the county auditor, who shall examine the amount and, if necessary, correct it and issue his warrant to the county treasurer in favor of the respective persons to whom such costs are due for the amount due to each."

By virtue of this section security for costs cannot be required upon an affidavit charging an offense against Section 12970, General Code.

The defendant in this case was acquitted. It was the duty then of the justice of the peace to certify the cost bill to the county auditor. The county auditor is then required to examine and correct the same, if necessary and issue his warrant to the county treasurer in favor of the person entitled to such costs. The statute does not require that such proceedings shall be instituted by the humane society in order to make the county liable for the costs.

It is my conclusion that the legal costs in the proceedings had should be paid from the county treasury.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—ROAD IMPROVEMENTS—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—LIMITATIONS—COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP LEVIES—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ASSESSING PROPERTY HOLDERS WITHIN ONE MILE.

Levies mentioned in Section 6956-14, General Code, to be made for the payment of the township and county's proportions, respectively, or the costs of the road improvement therein provided for, are not a special assessment, a levy for road taxes that may be worked out by tax payers, nor a levy in a special district created for road improvements within the meaning of Section 5649-3a, General Code, and are therefore to be treated as other levies for county and township purposes and subject, under the Smith law, to revision by the budget commission. Such levies are, therefore, within the ten and fifteen mill limitations and the county's portion is within the three mill limitation applicable to counties.

The levy for the township's portion while not a levy made by the township trustees and though levied by the county commissioners, is not a uniform levy for the county, but one solely for township purposes, and, therefore, such levy is to be included within the two mill limitation of Section 5649-3a for township purposes.

The fact that the owners of real estate laying and being within one mile of such improvement "may be assessed according to benefit for the same" is not an assumption by the legislature of powers beyond its constitutional authority.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1912.

HON. CHEEVER W. PETTAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Cadiz, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 8th, in which you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "First. Are the levies mentioned in said Section 6956-14, that may be made for the payment of the township's proportion and the county's proportion of the costs of the road improvement provided for in the related sections considered as a general tax, a special assessment, or a levy and assessment in a special district created for road improvement, or where is it to be classed in the ten mill tax law?

"Second. Are said levies included in the ten mill limit? If not, are they included in the fifteen mill limit?

"Third. If said levies are included in the ten mill limit, is the county's share or proportion of said costs to be included in the three mill maximum levy that may be made by the county commissioners?

"Fourth. Since the township trustees have nothing to do with the making of the levy of the township's share, is the township's proportion of the costs to be included in the two mill maximum limit that may be made by the township trustees, or is it to be included in the three mill limit that may be made for county purposes by said commissioners? See Section 5649-3*a*, G. C."

I also acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 17, stating your views on the questions thus submitted, and submitting two additional questions under the same general act, as follows:

"Fifth. May there be a special assessment according to benefits placed on all the real estate in the municipal corporation of Cadiz, within one mile of the beginning point of said road improvement?

"Sixth. If I am right in my opinion as to question five, then is said new road improvement law constitutional?"

I have already passed upon some of the questions you submit. In an opinion to Hon. Custer Snyder, solicitor of the city of Lorain, I held that neither the county nor the township levies mentioned in Section 6956-14, General Code, is a special assessment, a levy for road taxes that may be worked out by the taxpayers, or a levy in a special district created for road improvements, within the meaning of Section 5649-3*a*, 102 O. L., 271.

I reached the conclusion, therefore, in that opinion, that these levies are to be treated as other levies for county and township purposes under the Smith law. That is to say, they are required to be submitted to the budget commission along with the other needs of the county and township, and are subject to the revision of the budget commission for the purpose of enforcing the several limitations of the Smith law.

I therefore held in the opinion in question that levies under Section 6956-14, General Code, are included in the ten-mill limitation and in the fifteen-mill limitation of the act of 1911. I also held that the levy for the county's portion of the cost of an improvement under the act of which Section 6956-14 is a part is within the three-mill limitation of Section 5649-3*a* of the Smith law. I did not, however, pass upon the question as to whether the levy for the township's portion under Section 6956-14 was to be regarded as a county levy or a township levy—that is, was to be counted in ascertaining whether or not the three-mill limitation, or the two-mill limitation of Section 5649-3*a* had been reached. Upon careful consideration of this question, which is directly raised in your letter, I am of the opinion that, while the question is quite doubtful, the levy for the township's portion must be regarded as within the two-mill limitation. Strictly speaking, this levy is not accurately described by either of the phrases used in defining the limitations now under consideration. Thus, it is not a levy "by township for township purposes," because it is made by the county commissioners. On the other hand, it is not a levy "by a county for county purposes," because it is made for the purpose of meeting an obligation of the township. Having regard to the intent and purpose of the entire Smith act, I am clearly of the opinion that the levy under consideration must be regarded as within one or the other of these two limitations. It becomes necessary, therefore, in construing Section 5649-3*a*, to disregard the strict and exact meaning of some of its words, and to give weight to the controlling purpose of the legislature as evidenced by the entire act.

Yet the precise words of the section are not without some weight. Thus while the township limitation is upon "levies by a township for township purposes," yet it is to be observed that the limitation is not solely upon levies made by the township trustees. It would seem that the legislature has carefully avoided designating the exact officers authorized to make the levies referred to in the phrases and clauses of Section 5649-3a, now under discussion. Thus, the three-mill limitation is not upon the maximum amount that may be levied by the county commissioners, but upon that which may be levied by the "county," thus recognizing the fact that at the time this law was passed there were county levies other than those made by the county commissioners, as the levy for the poor fund, made by the infirmary directors. So, also, the school district limitation is not upon levies made by the board of education alone; thus is implicitly recognized the possibility of such levy being made by the county commissioners in case the board of education would fail to act.

It therefore follows: that it is not necessary, in order to constitute a particular levy, a levy "by a township for township purposes" within the meaning of Section 5649-3*a*, such levy should be made by the township trustees.

I have already pointed out that the purpose for which the levy on the duplicate of townships through which the road runs is made under Section 6956-14, is to provide for the township's proportion of the cost of the improvement. The statutes involved are as follows:

> "Section 5856-10, (101 O. L. 251). * * * the cost and expense of said improvement * * shall be apportioned by the commissioners as follows: Not less than thirty-five per cent, nor more than fifty per cent. thereof shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies upon the grand duplicate of all the taxable property of the county, or out of any fund available therefor as provided in Section 6956-14, of this act; and the balance, which shall not be less than twenty per cent. (20%) nor more than thirty per cent. (30%) thereof shall be assessed upon and collected from the owners of real estate lying and being within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement and assessed according to benefits derived from the improvement as determined by the commissioners. Such assessment shall be in addition to all other assessments authorized by law notwithstanding any limitations upon the aggregate amount of assessments on such property.
> "Section 6956-14. The said proportion of the cost and expense of said improvement to be paid by the county shall be paid out of the state and county road improvement fund or out of any road, road improvement or road repair fund of the county available therefor. If there are not sufficient funds available therefor, then for the purpose of providing by taxation funds for the payment of the county's proportion of the cost and expense of all the improvements made under the provisions of this act, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy upon all the taxable property of the county a tax or taxes not exceeding in the aggregate in any one year the sum of one mill upon each dollar of the valuation of the taxable property in the county. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies now in force. For the purpose of providing by taxation funds for the payment of said proportion of the cost and expense of all improvements made under the provisions of this act to be paid by the township or townships in which such road improvement may be situated in whole or in part, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy upon all the taxable property of any township or townships in which such road improvement is situated, in whole or in part, a tax not exceeding ten mills in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of taxable property in such township or townships. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies now in force."

It will thus be seen that the law itself makes the township, as a taxing district, responsible for such portion for the cost of the improvement as within the limits of Section 6956-10, the commissioners may allot to it. I think it follows, therefore, that the purpose of the levy made by the commissioners on the duplicate of the township is a township purpose and not a county purpose.

This conclusion is a strengthened, I think, by the fact that if this purpose be regarded as a county one, then the actual limitation upon the amount or rate which might be levied for county purposes would not be uniform throughout the county. This, I think, is violative of the essential purpose and intent embodied in Section 5649-3*a*. In other words, having regard to such intent, I am of the opinion that no levy is "a levy by a county for county purposes," which is not made by a uniform rate upon all the taxable property in the county, perhaps subject to certain exceptions. At any rate, I am convinced, that a levy, though made by the county commissioners, if restricted to certain taxing districts within the county, is not a levy "by a county for county purposes," within the meaning of Section 5649-3*a*.

For all these reasons, then, I am of the opinion that a levy for the township's portion of the cost of a road improvement under Section 6956-1 et seq., General Code, is to be included within the two-mill limitation prescribed by Section 5649-3*a*. This holding does not impose any hardship upon the township. It is not true, as you seem to suppose, that the commissioners, by making such levy, may impair the particular power of the township trustees to levy for general township purposes. The practical operation of the law in this respect would be as follows: The township trustees would submit their estimates of needs, regardless of the action of the commissioners; the commissioners would submit their estimates of needs under Section 6956-14, as applied to the township. The budget commission would then be charged with the duty of ascertaining whether or not the sum of both of these estimates would require a levy on the township duplicate in excess of two mills. If that should prove to be the case, it would be their duty then to reduce some of the estimates for township needs. The commission would be at liberty to reduce the estimate made by the commissioners. Nothing in the road improvement act under consideration requires that the levy made by the commissioners under Section 6956-14 shall be made in the exact proportion that the cost and expenses of the improvement is to be divided under 6956-10. That is to say, if the township's limit of taxation does not permit a levy sufficiently large to provide for its proportion in the same number of years as in which the counties' proportion may be provided for, then, and nevertheless, the commissioners may continue to levy under Section 6956-14, against the township duplicate, until sufficient taxes to meet its share of the improvement have been raised. And if, by the continual revisions by the budget commission, made from year to year, the fiscal arrangement made by the commissioners, and in particular those for the retirement of the bond issue under Section 6956-15, are interfered with, the commissioners have ample power to refund the bonds under Section 5656, General Code, and to adjust the counties' debts to such varying limitations of taxation.

The foregoing comments sufficiently answer each of your first four questions. Your fifth question is as to whether or not a special assessment according to the benefits may be placed upon all the real estate in a municipal corporation which is within one mile of a terminus of a road improvement under the sections already considered. At the outset it may be observed as to this question that the limitations of the Smith law are not called into question thereby at all. That act does not in any way apply to assessments especially levied upon benefited property to provide for any part of the cost of a public improvement.

By Section 6956-10, General Code, above quoted, it is provided that a part of the total cost of the improvement shall be assessed upon and collected from "the owners of real estate lying and being within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement and assessed according to benefits derived from the improvement as determined by the county commissioners." Section 6956-2, General Code, a part of the same act, provides in part, that:

> "In locating such road and road improvements within the territorial limits of any municipality, the county commissioners shall be confined to the platted streets of such municipality."

On the other hand, Section 6956-4 provides in part that,

> "In determining the majority of the petitioners necessary to give the commissioners jurisdiction * * the following persons shall not be counted, viz.: such resident land owners whose only real estate within the territorial bounds of said road, is located in a municipality. * * *"

The provision last above quoted is not sufficient, in my judgment, to indicate that the intention of the legislature was that owners of property located in a municipal corporation should not be assessed according to the benefits conferred upon such property by the construction of the improvement, if such property is within the territorial limits of the road. The legislature, on the other hand, clearly did intend that all property within such limits should be assessed according to the benefits conferred upon it by the improvement, and that such improvement might be made within the territorial limits of a municipal corporation.

It follows, therefore, I think, that owners of property located within a municipal corporation which is itself within the territorial limits of a road improved under these sections are subject to assessment according to the benefits conferred by the improvement.

Your sixth question is somewhat closely related to the one just considered. You question whether, the intention of the general assembly being as I have just held it to be, the act under consideration is constitutional. I know of no reason why it should not be considered so. The mere fact that owners of real property situated within the municipality are not to be counted in ascertaining a majority of petitioners is immaterial. No constitutional limitation commands the legislature to require that a majority of the owners of property to be benefited or assessed by an improvement shall join in petitioning for it. It would have been competent, therefore, for the legislature to provide that the commissioners should have jurisdiction to improve and assess a part of the cost of the improvement upon all within the bounds of the road upon petition of a very few of the interested owners, say, five or more, as is the case under the two-mile assessment pike law, so-called, (Section 7325, General Code) nor is the fact that owners of property situated within a municipal corporation. are subject to assessments made by authorities of the corporation themselves material. The power to lay out and improve a county road through a corporation is well established in this state, and it is held that it is in no sense incompatible with the power of the municipal authorities to assess for improvements made by the municipality. Lewis vs. Laylin, 46 O. S. 663, and cases there cited. The county commissioners while vested with some discretion in the matter, are without power to assess property within the bounds of the road beyond the amount of benefit conferred upon it by the improvement. This limitation is sufficient to preserve the consitutional rights of any owner of municipal property. The fact that such owner has already been assessed for municipal improvements and that the greater part of the benefit of the improvement will be conferred upon rural property rather than upon property within the limits of the corporation, are both facts which must be taken into consideration by the county commissioners in determining the benefits to be conferred upon such municipal property.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—LEVIES FOR SPECIFIC PURPOSES—LIMITATIONS—LIBRARY PURPOSES.

There is only one limitation in the Smith law upon levies for "specific purposes" such as one for library purposes and that is found in Section 5649-3 which provides that the rate for such purpose shall not exceed such rate as when levied upon all property of the district in 1911 would not exceed the amount which might have been levied for such purpose in 1910.

By the second paragraph of Section 5649-3 this limitation may be exceeded, if for another purpose a less amount is levied than was levied for such other purpose in 1910.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 23, 1912.

HON. T. T. COURTRIGHT, Prosecuting Attorney, Lancaster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 6th requesting my opinion upon the following facts:

> "The total tax valuation of Violet township, and the village of Pickerington, for year 1911, was over three million dollars. The total amount levied for library purposes last year was $325.00 and under the Smith one per cent. tax law it would seem that no larger amount may be levied for the year 1912.
> "Under Section 3407 G. C., one-half of one mill may be levied for library purposes such as is covered by the Carnegie letter, which would be more than would be required on the part of Violet township and Pickerington, to procure this free library.
> "The rate of taxation for the village of Pickerington for the year 1911, is ten mills, which can be reduced the coming year owing to liquidation of certain indebtedness.
> "The tax rate for Violet township, for the year 1911, is 8.5 mills and the township can levy the extra amount required to comply with the proposition of Mr. Carnegie and still be below the limit. This can be done by both village and township and it occurs to me that being able to do this and the further fact that the citizens of both are in favor of the proposal, the township and village should not lose this offer of a library building because of the fact that less than $1,000.00, was levied in 1910.

"Under Section 3403, G. C., the trustees of the township if proper steps were taken, might levy one mill for library purposes, but I am not advised at this time whether the citizens of the township have availed themselves of the provisions of that section.

"But in view of the fact that about one-third of one mill will be all that will be required on the part of the township and village, to secure the benefits of a free public library, I believe the taxing authorities should be permitted to make such levy, irrespective of the amount levied last year."

The italicized portion of your statement of facts is an incorrect statement of of the law. The amount of tax levied for a specific purpose or by a specific subdivision in the taxing district in the year 1910, for the year 1911, does not constitute a limitation upon the amount which might have been levied in the year 1911 for the year 1912 for the same purpose or by the same subdivision or taxing district or in and for any year thereafter. The limitation made by the 1910 tax is defined in Section 5649-2 of the Smith law, so-called, 102 O. L. 268 is as follows:

"* * * the aggregate amount of taxes that may be levied on the taxable property in any county, township, city, village school district or other taxing district, for the year 1911, and any year thereafter, including * * * levies for state, county, township, municipal, school and all other purposes, shall not in any year exceed in the aggregate the total amount of taxes that were levied upon the taxable property therein * * * for all purposes in the year 1910."

It is apparent, therefore, that the total amount of taxes levied for all purposes, state, county, township, village school district, etc., in Violet township and in the village of Pickerington on the 1910 duplicate limits the total amount for these combined purposes which might have been levied in the year 1911, on which, plus 6%, may be levied in the year 1912. It is not that the amount of the levy for library purposes made by either of these subdivisions is a limitation upon the amount that might have been levied in 1911 or may be levied in 1912 for that purpose. There is only one limitation in the Smith law upon levies for specific purposes and that is found in the first paragraph of Section 5649-3 which provides:

"The maximum rate of taxation in any taxing district for any purpose, as now fixed, shall be and is hereby changed so that such maximum rate, as levied on the total valuation of all taxable property in the district for the year 1911 and any year thereafter would produce no greater amount of taxes."

It will be observed that the language last above quoted constitutes, not the amount actually levied in the year 1910, but the amount that might have lawfully been levied in that year, the limitation upon the amount that might have been levied in 1911 or in any year thereafter. There the one mill limitation of Section 3403 and the one-half mill limitation of Section 3404 are no longer applicable. In their stead however appear the amount that would have been produced by a levy of one mill, for example, upon the duplicate of the township in 1910 as the measure of the power of the township to levy for these specific purposes in the year 1911 or in any year thereafter.

The same observation would apply, of course, to the provisions of Section 4019, General Code, under favor of which the council of any city (and in all probability any village) might levy and collect a tax not to exceed one mill on each dollar of taxable valuation, and pay it to a private corporation or association maintaining and furnishing a public library, etc. In short, every limitation provided by law as it existed before the Smith law was enacted upon the rate of taxation for a specific purpose has been changed so that now the limitation is upon the amount which would have been produced by multiplying that rate by the total valuation of taxing of the taxing district as shown on the 1910 duplicate.

From your letter I take it that none of the other limitations of the Smith law would be called in question in any way by the effort to conform to the requirements of the donor of the proposed library building. That is to say, the amount which it is desired to raise would not cause in all probability the aggregate levy to exceed the aggregate amount levied in the year 1910 or the rate of 10 mills or that of 15 mills prescribed by Section 5649-5*b*. I trust I have made it plain, however, that the taxing authorities may not make the levy they contemplate if it exceeds, not the amount levied last year, but the amount which might lawfully have been levied on the 1910 duplicate. It is to be observed, however, that under favor of the second paragraph of Section 5649-3, which I shall not quote, the limitation fixed in the first paragraph above defined may be exceeded if "a less amount of tax for a particular purpose (other than the purpose in question) than was levied for such purpose in the year 1910" is at the same time levied. That is to say, if in the year 1910 the sum of $500 was levied say for general township purposes, and in the year 1911 the sum of only $400 was levied for that purpose, then, providing none of the other limitations of the Smith law are involved, the trustees may, so to speak, use the $100 thus made available for library purposes. Whether or not this provision may be employed so as to exceed the old limitation in mills is a very doubtful question upon which I do not pass.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—EXPENSES, ALLOWANCE FOR—PAYMENT OF EXCESS BY PROSECUTOR CANNOT BE REIMBURSED—PAYMENT OF BILLS OF PRECEDING YEAR FROM NEXT YEAR'S ALLOWANCE.

By the amendment to Section 3004, General Code, the prosecutor is limited in his expenses to an allowance equal to one-half his salary. He cannot in any one year exceed this amount, and if he pays such excess out of his own pocket for official and warranted expenses, he cannot be reimbursed for the same.

Where legitimate bills of the past year are due at the time covered by the allowance for the next year, such bills may be paid out of the allowance for the ensuing year except when such a practice would saddle upon a successor the burden of expenses incurred by the preceding prosecuting attorney.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1912.

HON. JOHN F. MAHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 19, 1912, which is as follows:

"I would like to have your opinion interpreting the act of the legislature as found on page 74 of the 102 Ohio Laws. This law provides for an additional allowance to prosecuting attorneys in addition to that provided by Section 2914, General Code.

"Shortly after the passage of the law I gave bond as required and drew from the county treasury the proportionate amount for the balance of the year as provided by said law. During the balance of the year 1911, I was compelled to use $22.70 more than the amount of money I received. This was owing to the extraordinary and unusual condition of affairs that existed here. I also employed secret service officers during the month of December, and employed an expert to assist me in going over books, vouchers, etc. I intend to use some of the allowance for the year 1912 as provided under this act in payment of these items.

"Now the question is,

" 'Can I use the money I received under this law for the 1912 in payment of the expert and secret service officers, and the over-drawn amount from 1911?'

"I have filed my account with the county auditor showing that I had used $22.70 more than I received for 1911, and have given a new bond in an amount equal to my yearly salary, and have drawn from the county treasury the sum of $1,185. I owe for the secret service officers and expert assistance."

I am also in receipt of your letter of January 29, 1912, in which you inform me more fully as to the extraordinary condition which made it necessary for you to incur the expenses above mentioned, and from the account which you give me there can be no doubt but that it was your duty to incur these expenses, and that it was greatly to the interest of the pubilc that you did so.

Section 3004 of the General Code, as it stood prior to the last amendment, was as follows:

"In addition to his salary, each prosecuting attorney shall be allowed his reasonable and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties, or in furtherance of justice, which expense account shall be itemized and duly vertified, and if found correct, shall be allowed by the county commissioners and paid monthly from the general fund of the county."

Under this section, as it stood, undoubtedly, you could have been reimbursed for all of these expenses by the county commissioners, and under the circumstances detailed in your letter there can be no question but that the allowance would have been made; but the legislature, by the amendment to Section 3004, changed the method of providing for experts of this kind, and instead of authorizing the commissioners to allow the prosecuting attorney his reasonable and necessary expenses, incurred in the performance of his official duties, or in furtherance of justice, monthly, without any limit as to the same, placed the matter entirely in the hands of the prosecuting attorney by virtually making him an allowance equal to one-half of his salary, to be expended at his discretion for the purposes provided in the act, the prosecuting attorney to annually account for his expenditure of said sum and to pay the balance, if any remain at the end of the year, into the county treasury. This Section, 3004, as amended 102 O. L. 74, is as follows:

"There shall be allowed annually to the prosecuting attorney in addition to his salary and to the allowance provided by Section 2914, an amount equal to one-half the official salary, to provide for expenses which may be incurred by him in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for. Upon the order of the prosecuting attorney the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the prosecuting attorney or such other person as the order designates, for such amount as the order requires, not exceeding the amount provided for herein, and to be paid out of the general fund of the county.

"Provided that nothing shall be paid under this section until the prosecuting attorney shall have given bond to the state in a sum not less than his official salary to be fixed by the court of common pleas or probate court with sureties to be approved by either of said courts, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all the duties enjoined upon him, by law, and pay over, according to law, all moneys by him received in his official capacity. Such bond with the approval of such court of the amount thereof and sureties thereon and his oath of office inclosed therein shall be deposited with the county treasurer.

"The prosecuting attorney shall annually before the first Monday of January, file with the county auditor an itemized statement, duly verified by him, as to the manner in which fund has been expended during the current year, and shall if any part of such fund remains in his hands unexpended, forthwith pay the same into the county treasury. Provided, that as to the year 1911, such fund shall be proportioned to the part of the year remaining after this act shall have become a law."

Construing this section, it is my opinion that it is in the nature of a definite and fixed allowance, dependent only upon the amount of the prosecutor's salary, the allowance to equal one-half thereof. There is no provision of the statute for increasing it, and, therefore, as it is an annual allowance, which expires at the end of the year, any balance remaining to be paid into the treasury, it must be assumed that the legislature intended the prosecuting attorney not to exceed the amount of this allowance.

As to the sum of $22.70, therefore, which you expended in excess of your allowance for the year 1911, my opinion is that there is no way in which you can be reimbursed for the same, the amount allowed you being fixed and there being no way in which an increased allowance could be made. When you paid this amount after your fund was exhausted, you must be held to have assumed the liability yourself, and while it seems unjust, I am of the opinion that you cannot be reimbursed for the same.

As to the amount still due secret service officers and experts employed by you to assist in going over the books, vouchers, etc., of county officials under investigation, which amount is due for service rendered in 1911 but has not yet been paid, it is my opinion that you can legally pay the same out of the allowance made to you for the year 1912. It seems to me that the situation is the same as if, those services being of a continuing nature, the accounts had not been presented to you before the first Monday of January, 1912, at which time you were required to pay any balance remaining in your hands into the treasury. Suppose, for instance, you had had a balance remaining in your hands, more than sufficient to pay these bills, and you knew that the bills were outstanding and unpaid but had not been presented to you and you did not know the exact amount of the same; under the law, you would, nevertheless, have had to pay said balance into the county treasury, and the situation would be the same as it is now. I think, therefore, that these bills can be paid out of your allowance for 1912. But, as before indicated in this opinion, there is no way of increasing your allowance and you will have to administer your office so that the expenses for 1912, including the amounts paid for services rendered in 1911, will not exceed your total allowance.

I do not wish it understood by this opinion that one prosecutor would have the right to incur bills during the last year of his term which would be a charge upon his successor, which would have to be paid out of the allowance to the successor in the succeeding year, as, in my opinion, this could not be done. In your case, as the expenses were incurred by you as prosecutor, legitimately, and as your imperative duty and the interest of your county required that you should incur them, I think it only proper that the same should be paid out of your allowance for this year.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—BANKS AND BANKING—MUNICIPAL DEPOSITORY—PRIVATE BANK OWNED BY INDIVIDUAL—PAID IN CAPITAL STOCK.

A private bank owned by an individual has no "paid in capital stock" and therefore cannot be made a public depository of a municipality under Section 7004 General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1912.

HON. ARTHUR VAN EPP, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your favor of February 15, 1912, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Mr. J. H. Firestone, of Spencer, Ohio, for a number of years past has operated a private bank at that place, called The Farmers' Savings Bank, of which he is the sole owner and proprietor, but which does not seem to have any capital stock, at least the amount invested is unknown, and his responsibility seems to be unknown, other than that he owns generally quite a large amount of property and is engaged in a number of different kinds of business.
> "Sometime ago the board of education of Spencer township selected this bank as depository for school funds, and the question now arises, can this bank properly qualify?"

Section 7604 General Code authorizes the board of education to provide by resolution for the deposit of any or all moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer. This section is as follows:

> "The board of education of any school district by resolution shall provide for the deposit of any or all moneys coming into the hands of its treasurer. But no bank shall receive a deposit larger than the amount of its paid in capital stock, and in no event to exceed three hundred thousand dollars."

I call your special attention to the first clause of the last sentence of this section, viz., "that no bank shall receive a deposit larger than the amount of its paid in capital stock."

Under the facts as detailed in your letter I am unable to conceive how the amount of the paid in capital stock of the bank to which you refer could be ascertained; and it is my opinion that this bank being owned solely by one man, and not being incorporated cannot be considered as having any capital stock; and for this reason my opinion is that it cannot properly be designated as a depository for the school funds.

I enclose herewith a copy of an opinion rendered by me on April 29, 1911, to Hon. J. R. Stillings, prosecuting attorney, Kenton, Ohio, which refers to this subject and which goes to the extreme limit in allowing unincorporated banks to be designated as depositories. Were it not for the decision referred to in my said opinion to Mr. Stillings I would have been forced to hold that the words "paid in capital stock" must necessarily refer to an incorporated bank, and that the legislature intended that deposits of school funds should only be made in banks which were subject to the supervision and inspection of either state or federal officials.

Yours very truly,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—POWER OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO FUND INDEBTEDNESS—EXHAUSTION OF GENERAL FUND A CONDITION PRECEDENT—PAYMENT OF OVERDRAFTS FROM GENERAL FUND IN FRANKLIN COUNTY.

The power of the county commissioners to issue bonds for the purpose of funding existing indebtedness does not exist until all moneys in the general fund which may be devoted to the purposes of paying such indebtedness have become exhausted.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 12, 1912.

HON. H. S. BALLARD, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 2nd, which I quote in full:

"In your opinion of February 1st, with regard to the financial condition of Franklin county, Ohio, on page 36 with reference to the repayment of overdrafts in certain county funds, you suggest that the county commissioners and the auditor obtain money from banks of the city in order to enable them to meet the obligations arising under improvement contracts, and that bonds may then be issued by the commissioners to pay such notes. As I interpret your opinion, the test of the commissioners' power to issue bonds depends upon the maturity of the indebtedness.

"I am informed by the auditor that the total amount of overdrafts will be in the neighborhood of $100,000.00. While the payments by which these overdrafts were occasioned were made from the general balances in the treasury, there was at the time when such overdrafts were created in the treasury the sum of about $100,000.00 to the credit of the tax omission fund and delinquent personal tax fund. Both of these funds should now be distributed to the taxing districts entitled to receive same, and if it could be considered that the overdrafts above mentioned were paid entirely out of these two funds, we would have a matured indebtedness in the full amount of the overdrafts, and bonds could therefore be issued by the county commissioners to raise funds to meet such indebtedness. I should like to have your opinion upon this matter."

You have correctly interpreted that portion of my prior opinion to your department, to which you refer. Section 5656, General Code, which I quoted in that opinion, does not contain language like that found in Section 3916, the corresponding provision with respect to the power of a municipal council. That language, found in Section 3916, and omitted from Section 5656, is,

"* * * or when it appears to the council for the best interest of the corporation."

Sections like Section 5656 must be given a strict construction, and as I see it, there is no escape from the conclusion that the power of the commissioners under that section does not exist until the debt has matured.

When I first considered the question submitted in the second paragraph of your letter, I was of the opinion that the procedure outlined by you would be proper. On more mature consideration, however, I have reached the opposite conclusion. As I understand the facts, there was an actual cash balance in the treasury of the county, as of the 1st of March and prior to the semi-annual distribution in amount considerably less than $100,000.00. The amounts required to be distributed to the several taxing districts from the tax omission fund and the delinquent personal tax fund are now due and payable, and in the aggregate they exceed the sum of money in the treasury as aforesaid. I understand that your question is as to whether or not the total amount of the county's obligation to the several taxing districts can now be funded, leaving the tax balance, not needed for any other purpose, available for the payment of obligations not now due. In other words, the query is as to whether the entire overdrafts may be considered as being in the tax omission fund and the delinquent personal tax fund, notwithstanding the fact that there is now money in the treasury which could be distributed to those entitled to participate in these funds.

As I have already suggested, my ultimate conclusion has been in the negative on this question. The general treasury balance is unidentified as to funds—that is to say, it is merely money, and belongs to no specified fund excepting that it is separated into moneys received from the 1911 levy and those received prior thereto. Stated more accurately I should perhaps say that this general balance might belong to any one or more of several different funds. That being the case I am of the opinion that the treasurer and the auditor have no authority to appropriate such money to any particular fund or funds. The money lies in the depository, subject to the check of the treasurer. The treasurer must issue the check upon the warrant of the auditor, drawn on any one of these funds, so long as there is money in the depository to the credit of the checking account, in excess of the proceeds of the 1911 levy and the appropriation made or to be made as of March 1st.

As the different obligations of the county becomes due then, it is the duty of the auditor to issue his warrant thereon, and the duty of the treasurer to honor such warrants, so long as he has money for that purpose. That being the case, it follows that it is now the duty of the auditor, in the course of the distribution of these two funds already mentioned, to issue warrants against the treasury; and it is the duty of the treasurer to honor such warrants as they are issued. The duty of the auditor and that of the treasurer, of course, ceases when the general balance in the treasury in the credit of funds therein prior to March 1st or the semi-annual distribution becomes exhausted. Until that time, however, these two duties exist, irrespective of the fund on which a particular warrant is to be drawn. Stated succinctly, it is a case of "first come, first served."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is the duty of the auditor to issue distribution warrants, and of the treasurer to pay such warrants, until the moneys in the old general balance are exhausted. Then the commissioners may borrow money or issue bonds for the purpose of providing funds wherewith to complete the distribution. Then the other obligations of the county must be met in like manner as they mature.

The course suggested in my former opinion, that is, the issuance of notes of the county, and their retirement out of the proceeds of bonds duly advertised and sold, would seem to obviate any practical difficulties that might be encountered.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—BOND ISSUE FOR IMPROVEMENT OF SCHOOL BUILDING—VOTE OF ELECTORS—PROCEDURE UNDER 7629 IMPOSSIBLE AFTER PROCEDURE UNDER 7625.

The board of education submitted to the electors the question of a bond issue, the amount of which, in addition to the amount certified to the auditor, would prove sufficient to improve a certain school building in accordance with an order of the inspector of workshops and factories, but by reason of the reduction of the estimate by the budget commission, the board was unable to proceed with the improvement.

In order to supply the deficiency, the board twice submitted the issue of bonds to the electors, under Section 7625 and received a negative vote in each instance. Held:

That action once having been taken under Section 7625, General Code, recourse could not be had to Section 7629, General Code, for the same purpose, and that the board was without remedy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 29, 1912.

HON. N. CRAIG MCBRIDE, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 24th, enclosing a letter addressed to you by the president of the village board of education in your county, and requesting my opinion upon the facts therein stated. The facts which give rise to this question are as follows, as disclosed by the letter of the president:

> "Before the Smith one per cent. law went into effect the board of education certified a levy at a rate in excess of the rate authorized by that law to the county auditor; at or about the same time the said board, proceeding under Section 7625, General Code, submitted to the electors of the district the question of issuing bonds for an amount which, together with the proceeds of the local levy as made, was estimated to be sufficient to provide for the improvement of a certain school building which has been ordered improved by the inspector of workshops and factories; the proposed bond issue was approved by the electors.
> "The enactment of the Smith law had the effect of reducing the amount of money available as the fruits of taxation to the board of education; in consequence of this state of affairs the total amount at the command of the board for the purpose of making the needed improvements is quite insufficient therefor. In order to supply the deficiency, the board of education has twice submitted the issue of bonds to the electors under Section 7625 since October, 1911, when it became apparent that there would be a deficiency, but on both occasions the result of the referendum has been unfavorable."

The question thus presented is as to whether there is any way in which money can be raised to supply the deficiency thus created.

In my previous opinion of October 3rd, addressed to you I advised you that no emergency tax levy could be made for this purpose under the Smith law. Not at that time having accurate knowledge of the fact I advised recourse to Section 7629, General Code. I am of the opinion, however, that this section is not available. Section 7625, General Code provides as follows:

> "When the board of education of any school district determines that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses, to complete a partially built school house, to enlarge, repair or furnish a school house, or to do any or all of such things, that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of Sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-nine, and seventy-six hundred and thirty, are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary, the board shall make an estimate of the probable amount of money required for such purpose or purposes and at a general election or special election called for that purpose, submit to the electors of the district the question of the issuing of bonds for the amount so estimated. Notices of the election required herein shall be given in the manner provided by law for school elections."

It thus appears that the procedure under Section 7625 cannot be followed unless that authorized by Section 7629 is not productive of enough revenue to accomplish the purpose for which the bonds are to be issued. Although the question is not free from doubt I am of the opinion that after action has once been taken under Section 7625 action under Section 7629 cannot thereafter be taken for the same purpose. Putting it in another way when a board of education has sought and received the approval of the electors upon an issue of bonds for the purpose of improving or constructing school property it cannot thereafter issue other bonds without the approval of the electors for the same purpose. The case of this board of education is a hard one as it results from failure to anticipate the action of the general assembly and not from failure to comply with the law or to exercise reasonable care in administering the fiscal affairs of the district. However, I do not see that it differs from what it would have been if the electors had refused to approve a larger bond issue if originally asked for. There are, or course, instances under the existing statutes in which the orders of the chief inspector of workshops and factories cannot be enforced unless the electors of the school district consent to borrowing money sufficient to carry them out. The people have expressed their judgment as to the amount of money they desire to borrow for the purpose of making the improvement in a very decisive manner. In my judgment the officers concerned, both state and district, will have to conform their arrangments to the popular verdict.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CITY SOLICITOR—TERM OF OFFICE UNTIL SUCCESSOR "ELECTED" AND QUALIFIED—POWERS OF APPOINTMENT BY MAYOR.

As a general proposition of law, a person who, under statute, holds until his successor is elected and qualified, does not lose his office by the mere failure of a successor to qualify. Furthermore, as the statute providing for the city solicitor expressly stipulates for the holding of the office until his successor is "elected" and qualified, a vacancy will not be created in that office by the failure of an elected official to qualify and a successor "appointed," but the incumbent will hold over until an "elected" successor has qualified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1912.

HON. CHARLES F. RIBBLE, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 9th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following facts:

> "In November, 1909, 'T' was elected city solicitor of the city of Zanesville; on January 1, 1910, he assumed the duties of the office, having duly qualified therefor. In November, 1911, 'L' was elected city solicitor for the city of Zanesville for the term of two years beginning January 1, 1912. 'L' received notice, both from the auditor and from the board of state supervisors of elections, of the result of the election, but without filing bond or taking the oath of office within ten days from and after the receipt of either of these notices, died.
> "'T' claims the right to continue in office during the entire term for which 'L' was elected. It is asserted, on the other hand, that the council, under Section 4242, General Code, has power to declare the office vacant."

Upon the facts as you state them, the following questions of law arise:

1. Is there now a vacancy in the office of city solicitor of Zanesville?

2. Has council now the authority to declare a vacancy in the office of city solicitor?

3. If the death of "L" under the circumstances mentioned created a vacancy or authorized council to create a vacancy, how may that vacancy be filled?

The following sections of the General Code must be considered in answering these questions:

> "Section 7. A person elected or appointed to an office who is required by law to give bond or security previous to the performance of the duties imposed on him by his office, who refuses or neglects to give such bond or furnish such security, within the time and in the manner prescribed by law, and in all respects to qualify himself for the performance of such duties, shall be deemed to have refused to accept the office to which he was elected or appointed, and such office shall be considered vacant and be filled as provided by law.
> "Section 8. A person holding an office or public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws.
> "Section 4303. The solicitor shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first Monday of January next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be an elector of the city."
>
> "Section 4242. The council may declare vacant the office of any person elected or appointed to an office who fails to take the required official oath or to give any bond required of him, within ten days after he has been notified of his appointment or election, or obligation to give a new or additional bond, as the case may be."
> "Section 4252. In the case of death, resignation, removal or disability of any officer or director in any department of a city, unless otherwise provided by law, the mayor thereof shall fill the vacancy by appointment, and such appointment shall continue for the unexpired term and until a successor is duly appointed, or duly elected and qualified, or until such disability is removed."

Sections 7 and 8 of the General Code, above quoted, do not, in my opinion, apply to municipal officers; at least, they do not apply to the case of the city solicitor, which is specifically provided for by the other sections above quoted. Inasmuch, however, as there have been decisions under Sections 7 and 8 of the General Code, or rather under the sections of the Revised Statutes corresponding to them, and under similar sections of the law, I have deemed it best to set these sections forth in full.

My attention is called to certain decisions under statutes similar to those above quoted, and under Sections 7 and 8, General Code, and their predecessor sections of the Revised Statutes. The following are examples of such decisions:

In State vs. Hopkins, 10 O. S. 509, the action was in quo warranto, on relation of one appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of county treasurer, against the prior incumbent who insisted on holding over. The vacancy to which relator had been appointed was occasioned by the death of the person elected as the successor of the defendant, which person had died before qualifying in the manner prescribed by law. For the sake of clearness, I quote the entire opinion on page 511 of the report:

> "By the Court. The county commissioners are expressly authorized by statute to appoint a county treasurer, whenever that office shall become vacant 'by death, resignation, removal, neglect to give bond, or from any other cause.' Swan's Stat. 1017. It is further provided by statute (56 Ohio L. 105), that if the treasurer elect 'shall fail to give bond and take the oath of office, as prescribed by law, on or before the first Monday of September next his election, the office shall become vacant and shall be filled as provided by law.'

"By reason of the death of Matthias Rapp, prior to the commencement of the term for which he had been elected, there was no person on the first Monday of September, 1860, entitled to take and hold the office during the regular statutory term commencing on that day. And this want of a regular incumbent for the term occasioned by the death of a party who would otherwise have been such, constitutes, as we think, a vacancy occasioned by death, within the meaning of the statute. And were it necessary, we should hold that, under the statute last cited, the office became vacant upon the failure of Rapp to give bond and take the oath of office. True, this failure was caused by the act of God, and not by the laches of the party, but its effect upon the office is the same, whatever may have been its cause.

"This construction makes the legislative intent accord with the constitutional policy by which no person is 'eligible to the office of county treasurer for more than four years in any period of six years.' The demurrer to defendant's answer must be sustained and judgment of ouster entered against him."

I call attention to the following facts in connection with this decision: In the first place the statute under which the relator was appointed authorized the commissioners to appoint a county treasurer whenever the office should become vacant by death, etc. In that particular that case was different from that under consideration here. A mayor's power of appointment under Section 4252, General Code, seems to be restricted to vacancies arising from the death, resignation, removal, or disability of an officer. In other words, there seems to be no authority to appoint, even when a vacancy is occasioned by council's declaration of its existence, or in the case of the death of one who is merely an officer-elect. In the second place, the court in this case might have based its decision on the ground that the incumbent who was attempting to hold over had already served four consecutive years and was precluded by the constitution from continuing in office longer. The importance of this fact will become apparant on consideration of a decision in State ex rel. vs. Metcalfe, 80 O. S., 244.

In State vs. Poorman, 61 O. S., 506, the action was in mandamus to compel the county commissioners to approve the bond of one elected to the office of sheriff who had failed to file his bond within the time limited by law. No question bearing upon the issues involved in the query presented by you was considered or determined by that case.

In Davies vs. State 11 C. C., n. s., 209, the question was as to the title to office of one who had failed to qualify within the time limited by statute. No question as to the right of the prior incumbent to hold over was presented or considered by the court, which, in an elaborate opinion, discusses the effect of provisions like those of Section 7, General Code, without taking into account the various provisions like those incorporated in Section 8, General Code.

As I see it, the precise question suggested—as to the joint meaning of provisions like those incorporated in Sections 7 and 8, and in Sections 4242 and 4303, General Code—has been passed upon but once by the supreme court of Ohio, and that was in a case containing peculiar features which might distinguish it from that made by the fact upon which your question is based. I refer to the case of State ex rel. vs. Metcalfe, already cited. The second branch of the syllabus of that case lays down a proposition of law which can be made applicable to the facts that you submit. It is as follows:

> "The death of a person elected to an office before he qualified does not create a vacancy where the constitution provides that an incumbent in an office shall hold for his term and until the election and qualification of a successor."

As I see it, this proposition of law, if of universal application, is applicable to the facts which you state. That is to say, the mere fact that the provision as to holding over until the qualification of a successor, relied upon in the Metcalfe case, was a constitutional one does not make the case different from what it would have been had it been a statutory provision of the same character. A sufficient reason for so holding appears in the fact that statutes like Section 8 of the General Code are based upon well-understood principles of public policy. These principles are discussed in the opinion of State vs. Metcalfe and in Mechem on Public Officers. In other words, it is the policy of the law that there shall not be a vacancy in an office so long as there is someone to take the office, and even where statutes do not provide that officers shall continue in office until their successors are elected and qualified, it is sometimes held that they have the right to do so. For this reason, then, Section 4303 is of controlling importance, as against any statute or statutes respecting the existence of a vacancy in the office of city solicitor.

But it is not necessary to rely upon State vs. Metcalfe or upon the general principle last above referred to, in order to reach the conclusion that, on the facts you submit, there is neither a vacancy in the office of city solicitor, nor can council declare a vacancy to exist. Having regard to the exact language of the above quoted sections of the General Code, it appears that it is the solicitor's right to serve for a term of two years and "until his successor is elected and qualified." It is clearly the intention of this section that the solicitor, an elective officer, shall only, except in case of death, resignation, and the like, be displaced by a person who has himself received the vote of the electors. Such provisions are not to be regarded as merely accidental and full weight will be given to every word therein. (People vs. Lord 9th Mich., 227) cited in Mechem on Public Officers, Section 402.

I am, therefore, clearly of the opinion that so long as "T," the incumbent in the office of the city solicitor of Zanesville, continues willing and physically able to discharge the duties of that office, and remains qualified therefor, he cannot be supplanted therein, save by another person who has been elected to the office of city solicitor.

That being the case, I am of the opinion that this particular provision is sufficient to take the case out of the operation of general statutes like Section 4242. It is a well-understood rule, of course, that where a particular statute is inconsistent with a general one, it will be regarded as an exception to the latter. So I believe the law to be, that while Section 4242 prescribes a rule of action with respect to municipal officers generally, it does not apply to the case of a city solicitor, when the prior incumbent, by holding over, could make impossible the occurrence of an actual vacancy, as distinguished from the vacancy which might exist by decree of council.

Still another reason for the holding which I have suggested is found in the peculiar language of Section 4252 of the General Code, upon which I have already commented. Closely examining this section it appears that even if council might declare a vacancy in the office of city solicitor under the circumstances detailed in your question, there would be no authority for any officer to appoint to fill this vacancy. Accordingly, under Section 4303, even if that section be not construed as aforesaid, the incumbent would have the right to hold over, so as not to interrupt the public business and to offend against the rule of public policy above referred to.

In passing, I might be permitted to remark, that the case of State ex rel. vs. Hopkins is discussed and the true meaning of the decision therein pointed out on page 270 of the opinion in the case of State ex rel. vs. Metcalfe, supra. Other decisions are referred to in that opinion all of which might be examined with profit in connection with your question. I forbear, however, for the sake of brevity from quoting them or even citing them here. The plain meaning of the language used in the statutes under consideration renders more exhaustive treatment of the subject unnecessary.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TRANSFER OF FUNDS—TUITION FUND TO BUILDING FUND—POWERS OF BOARD AND COMMON PLEAS COURT.

As the tuition fund is in the nature of a trust fund, for the benefit of each individual youth in the state, transfers from said fund, in the treasury of a school district to a building fund cannot be made except under provision and conditions provided for in Section 5655 General Code for the purpose of reducing tax levy estimates at the annual meeting of the board.

The common pleas court has powers, under Sections 2296-2302, General Code, to permit transfers "when no injury will result therefrom" but in view of the peculiar nature of the tuition fund, such action would be a rare possibility.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 23, 1912.

HON. I. H. BLYTHE, Prosecuting Attorney, Carrollton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 1st, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "Under Sections 5654 and 5655, G. C., can the board of education of a township school district, at any time, transfer $842.00, or any other sum, from the tuition fund in the treasury of the school district to the building fund, and use it for building a school house in one of the sub-districts of said school district, when, if said money is transferred there will not be enough money in the tuition fund to pay the teachers for the following eight months of school year?
> "Also, could the above sum be transferred if no part of the $842.00 was a surplus of the proceeds of a special tax or the proceeds of a loan for a special purpose; but all of said money so transferred came from the usual sources from which the tuition fund is derived?"

I also acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 17th, enclosing memorandum prepared by you, setting forth your views on the questions you have submitted.

The following sections of the General Code are applicable to the solution of your questions:

> "Section 5654. When there is in the treasury of any city, village, county, township or school district, a surplus of the proceeds of a special tax, or of the proceeds of a loan for a special purpose, which is not needed for the purpose for which the tax was levied, or the loan made, it may be transferred to the general fund by an order of the proper authorities entered on their minutes."

This section, under the facts you state, cannot authorize the transfer of which you speak. The sections which I will hereinafter cite will show that the tuition fund cannot considered as the proceeds of a special tax; certainly it is not the proceeds of a loan for a special purpose:

> "Section 5655. When there is in the treasury of such civil division, as provided in the next preceding section, at the annual meeting or meetings otherwise provided by law at which the annual tax levy is to be considered and adopted, a surplus not exceeding one thousand dollars in any one established fund or division of the funds, which is not needed for the purpose for which the fund was created, the money appropriated, or the tax levied, before such annual tax levy is made, it may be considered as unappropriated and may be re-apportioned and transferred, by an order as is provided in such section, to another existing fund for which a tax is to be or would otherwise be levied. The sum which it would be necessary to raise by taxation for any purpose, if no such re-apportionment was made, shall thereupon be reduced to the extent of the transfer thus made. This section shall not authorize such re-apportionments or any transfer of funds at any other time than the meeting aforesaid to determine the tax levy nor authorize transfers at any one such meeting of over three thousand dollars in the aggregate, nor that the amount which may be lawfully raised by taxation for any purpose may be increased by such transfer."

This section, in my opinion, constitutes sufficient authority for a transfer for any surplus in the tuition fund, made at the annual meeting fixed by law at the time for consideration and determination of the annual tax rate. A transfer cannot be made at any other time, and then only when the money to be transferred positively is not needed for the purpose for which it was levied. Under your statement of facts it is perhaps unnecessary to determine whether the sections now under consideration would ever authorize a transfer of a part of a tuition fund or not; it being true, as you state, that the transfer desired to be made by the board of education you mention will result in depleting the tuition fund to a point at which it would be insufficient to pay teachers for eight months of school as required by law, this fact is alone sufficient to support the conclusion that transfers may not be made under authority of this section; also it does not appear in your letter that the proposed transfer is to be made at the annual meeting.

> "Constitution—Article VI, Section II: The general assembly shall make such provisions, by taxation, or otherwise, as, with the income arising from the school trust fund, will secure a thorough and efficient system of common schools throughout the state, * * *."

In pursuance of this section of the constitution, the following legislation has been enacted:

"Section 7575, (General Code, as amended 102 O. L., 266). For the purpose of affording the advantages of a free education to all the youth of the state, there shall be levied annually a tax of three hundred and thirty-five thousandths of one mill on the grand list of the taxable property of the state, to be collected as are the other taxes and the proceeds of which shall constitute 'the state common school fund,' * * *.

"Section 7582. The auditor of state shall apportion the state common school fund to the several counties of the state semi-annually, upon the basis of the enumeration of youth therein, as shown by the latest abstract of enumeration transmitted to him by the state commissioner of common schools. * * *

"Section 7586. Each board of education, annually, at a regular or special meeting held between the third Monday in April and the first Monday in June, shall fix the rate of taxation necessary to be levied for all school purposes, after the state funds are exhausted.

"Section 7587. Such levy shall be divided by the board of education into four funds: First, tuition fund; second, building fund; third, contingent fund; fourth, bonds, interest and sinking fund. A separate levy must be made for each fund."

"Section 7595. No person shall be employed to teach in any public school in Ohio for less than forty dollars a month. When a school district has not sufficient money to pay its teachers forty dollars per month for eight months of the year, after the board of education of such district has made the maximum legal school levy, three-fourths of which shall be for the tuition fund, then such school district may receive from the state treasurer sufficient money to make up for the deficienoy.

"Section 7600. After each annual settlement with the county treasurer, each county auditor shall immediately apportion the school funds for his county. The state common school fund must be apportioned in proportion to the enumeration of youth in each of the several school districts within the county, except if an enumeration of the youth of any district has not been taken and returned for any year, such district shall not be entitled to receive any portion of such fund. The local school tax collected from the several districts must be paid to the districts from which it was collected. Money received from the state on account of interest on the common school fund shall be apportioned to the school districts and parts of districts within the terriory designated by the auditor of state as entitled thereto, in proportion to the enumeration of youth therein. All other money in the county treasury for the support of common schools, not otherwise appropriated by law shall be apportioned annually in the same manner as the state common school fund.

"Section 7603. The certificate of apportionment furnished by the county auditor to the treasurer and clerk of each school district must exhibit the amount of money received by each district from the state, the amount received from any special tax levy made for a particular purpose, and the amount received from local taxation of a general nature. The amount received from the state common school fund and the common school fund shall be designated the 'tuition fund' and be appropriated only for the payment of superintendents and teachers.

> Funds received from special levies must be designated in accordance with the purpose for which the special levy was made and be paid out only for such purpose, except that, when a balance remains in such fund after all expenses incident to the purpose for which it was raised have been paid, such balance will become a part of the contingent fund and the board of education shall make such transfer by resolution. Funds received from the local levy for general purposes must be designated so as to correspond to the particular purpose for which the levy was made. Moneys coming from sources not enumerated herein shall be placed in the contingent fund."

The section last above quoted tends to throw some doubt on the powers to transfer from the tuition fund to the contingent fund even under Section 5655, General Code, above quoted and the conditions therein stated. However, as I have already indicated, this question is not of importance here.

> "Section 7644. Each board of education shall establish a sufficient number of elementary schools to provide for the free education of the youth of school age within the district under its control, at such places as will be most convenient for the attendance of the largest number thereof. Every elementary school so established shall continue not less than thirty-two nor more than forty weeks in each school year. All the elementary schools within the same school district shall be so continued."

The liberal quotations of statute which I have made, makes it unnecessary, I think, for me elaborately to discuss the questions submitted by you. On the face of these statutes, it is, I think, apparent that the tuition fund is in the nature of a trust fund, the purpose of which is to afford to each individual youth of school age in the state the benefits of a common school education which consists of approximately eight months of school. One of the elements of this equality of opportunity so guaranteed is that competent teachers, adequately compensated, shall be employed during the period of eight months.

There is no authority on the part of the board to transfer the tuition fund, save under Section 5655, General Code, and the condition therein enumerated. The common pleas court has authority under Sections 2296 to 2302, inclusive, General Code, to transfer funds "when no injury will result therefrom." In view of the peculiar nature of the tuition fund, I question whether the common pleas court would exercise its authority under these sections to transfer from that fund.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—POWER TO HIRE AND PAY CLERICAL ASSISTANT—FUND FOR EXPENSES IN "OFFICIAL DUTIES" AND "FURTHERANCE OF JUSTICE."

When no allowance has been made for a county detective under provision of Section 1541, General Code, and no allowance made for assistants, clerks and stenographers under Sections 2914 and 2915, General Code, a prosecuting attorney may hire and pay a man to give assistance in looking up testimony, finding witnesses, etc., and have the expense thereby incurred, paid upon his order, out of the fund provided in Section 3004, General Code, for expenses incurred by him "in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1912.

HON. PHIL B. SMYTHE, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your inquiry of March 15th, which is as follows:

> "Licking county has no county detective; the prosecuting attorney has no assistant, clerk or stenographer.
> "The county has a large criminal docket, as large as some of the larger counties of the state; it is necessary that the prosecuting attorney have some help in looking up testimony, finding witnesses, etc.
>
> "Can I, as prosecuting attorney, hire and pay a man to do this work out of the fund provided for in Section 3004, G. C. (102 O. L. p. 74)?"

Section 3004 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "There shall be allowed annually to the prosecuting attorney in addition to his salary and to the allowance provided by Section 2914, an amount equal to one-half the official salary, to provide for expenses which may be incurred by him in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for. Upon the order of the prosecuting attorney the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the prosecuting attorney or such other person as the order designates, for such amount as the order requires, not exceeding the amount provided for herein, and to be paid out of the general fund of the county.
> "Provided that nothing shall be paid under this section until the prosecuting attorney shall have given bond to the state in a sum not less than his official salary to be fixed by the court of common pleas or probate court with sureties to be approved by either of said courts, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all the duties enjoined upon him, by law, and pay over, according to law, all moneys by him, received in his official capacity. Such bond with the approval of such court of of the amount thereof and sureties thereon and his oath of office inclosed therein shall be deposited with the county treasurer.
> "The prosecuting attorney shall annually before the first Monday of January, file with the county auditor an itemized statement, duly verified by him, as to the manner in which fund has been expended during the current year, and shall if any part of such fund remains in his hands unexpended, forthwith pay the same into the county treasury. Provided, that as to the year 1911, such fund shall be proportioned to the part of the year remaining after this act shall have become a law."

This section places a sum equal in amount to one-half of his salary at the disposal of the prosecuting attorney, to be expended by him, as will be noted by the language of the section, for "expenses incurred by him in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for."

From your letter, there has been no provision made for a county detective, which could properly be made under Section 1541, General Code (97 O. L. 308), and no allowance for assistants, clerks or stenographers, which should be made under Section 2914 and Section 2915, General Code. It seems to me that whatever expenses may be necessarily incurred by you, for the payment of services necessary in the performance of your official duties or in the furtherance of justice, should be paid out of the fund provided by Section 3004. As stated before, this fund is placed entirely at your disposal and is to be paid out upon your order, and you are to account for the same on or before the first Monday of January in each year, as provided by said section.

Before anything can be paid under this section, of course, it is necessary that you give the bond provided by the section.

Yours truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TRANSFER OF FUNDS—UNEXPENDED BALANCE IN POOR FUND CONSISTING OF PROCEEDS OF TAX UPON TRAFFIC IN INTOXICATING LIQUORS MAY BE TRANSFERRED TO ANY OTHER FUND OF COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 19, 1912.

HON. JOHN G. ROMER, Prosecuting Attorney, Celina, Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—On looking over the files of opinions in this office recently rendered, I find one to you in which I expressed the opinion generally that an unexpended balance in the poor fund of the county might not be transferred to a building fund. It occurs to me that I may have inadvertently misled you in this particular. If the unexpended balance in the poor fund consists, as I presume it does consist, of the proceeds of the tax upon the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors, then such balance may, under authority of Section 5669 of the General Code, be transferred by the county commissioners to any other fund of the county.

I make this statement in the hope that it does not come too late to be of benefit to you, and for the purpose also of correcting my own records.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF HEALTH IN VILLAGE—ORDINANCE RE-ESTABLISHING BOARD NOT NECESSARY UNDER THE CODE—CONFIRMATION BY COUNCIL OF APPOINTMENT BY MAYOR, VALID.

When council passed an ordinance in 1888 establishing a board of health, under Section 187, Municipal Code, there was no necessity to re-establish said board upon the codification of the aforesaid section, and council's procedure since that date in confirming appointments made by the mayor to membership on that board in accordance with the law as it is embodied at the present time, in Section 4404, General Code, is correct and valid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1912.

HON. JOHN WOOLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 20, 1912, in which you make the following statement:

> "I am submitting to you the following facts upon which I kindly request your official opinion as soon as convenient:
> "An ordinance was passed by the council of the village of Nelsonville, Athens county, Ohio, in the year 1888, which was in conformity to a law reported in 66 Ohio Laws. No ordinance creating a board of health has been passed since said date of 1888. From 1888 until 1904, the council appointed members of the board of health. From 1904 until the present time the mayor has appointed members of the board of health, which appointments have been confirmed by the council. But no ordinance establishing a board of health either as provided for in Section 4404, General Code of Ohio, or as provided for in Section 187 of an act passed April 25, 1904, 97 O. L. 460, has been passed by council."

You desire my opinion as to whether in view of the facts as stated above it is necessary for council to now establish, or re-establish a board of health.

The portion of Section 187 of the Municipal Code to which you refer, which is pertinent to your inquiry, is as follows:

> "The council of each city and village shall establish a board of health; such board shall be composed of five members to be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the council who shall serve without compensation and a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum; provided, that whenever the council of any city shall declare by ordinance that it will be for the best interests of said city that has board of public service act as a board of health for the city, then upon the passage of said ordinance the board of public service of said city shall be the duly authorized board of health thereof and shall have all the powers and perform all the duties prescribed by law for boards of health; and the mayor shall be the president by virtue of his office. * * *"

This section of the Municipal code, 97 O. L. 460 (Sec. 1536-723 R. S.) was expressly repealed by Section 13767 of the General Code, (see page 2933, Vol. 3 of the official edition of the General Code) and was codified and re-enacted as Sections 4404 and 4405 of the General Code.

Said Section 4404 is as follows, and as far as the question raised by you is concerned, is the same as said Section 187:

> "The council of each municipality shall establish a board of health, composed of five members to be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council who shall serve without compensation and a majority of whom shall be a quorum. The mayor shall be president by virtue of his office. But in villages the council, if it deems advisable, may appoint a health officer, to be approved by the state board of health who shall act instead of a board of health, and fix his salary and term of office. Such appointee shall have the powers and perform the duties granted to or imposed upon boards of health, except that rules, regulations or orders of a general character and required to be published, made by such health officer, shall be approved by the state board of health."

From this section it appears that the board of health to which you refer, having been appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council, had been duly appointed as required by law, and the only question, therefore, is whether, after the passage of Section 4404 of the General Code it was necessary for the council of this municipality to pass an ordinance establishing a board of health. You state in your letter that an ordinance was passed by the council of said city in the year 1888 which was in conformity to the act found in 66 O. L., page 200, being Section 303, etc., of the Municipal Code passed in 1868. The first section of this act providing for the board of health (Section 303), 66 O. L. 200 is as follows.

> "Whenever the council of any city or incorporated village shall establish a board of health, such board shall be composed of the mayor, who shall be president by virtue of his office, and six members, to be appointed by the council, who shall serve without compensation, and a majority of whom shall be a quorum."

The language of this original act is very similar to the language now found in Section 4404, and from your letter the board of health has thus been established in said city as provided for by law, and having been so established, and being in existence at the time of the passage of Section 4404, it seems to me that no further ordinance was necessary. In other words, that in cities or villages where boards of health had been established in conformity to law it would be unnecessary to again establish such boards by ordinance. Really the only change in this respect was as to the manner of appointment of the members, and from your letter these appointments have been made in conformity to the law as it now stands, and as it stood when the appointments were made.

In the case cited by you, Smith vs. Lynch, Treas., 29 O. S. 261, Judge Welch in speaking of the act under which the board of health to which you refer was established, says:

> "The statute (66 Ohio L. 200) creates the office. It authorizes the council to 'establish' the board, and to fill it by appointment. True, until the council act in the premises, it is a mere potentiality in their hands, yet it is none the less an office, known to the law, and provided for by law. Where council assumed to establish the board under the law, and to appoint its members there is no good reason why an irregularity or illegality in the act of establishing the office, any more than an irregularity or illegality in the appointment of the officers, should be held as rendering the acts of the officers void, and themselves mere trespassers. The reasons—the considerations of public policy—which exist in one case exist equally in the other. It is enough that the office is one provided for by law, and that the parties have the color of appointment, assume to be and act as such officers, and that they are accepted and acknowledged by the public as such to the exclusion of all others. Such was the case here. There was both the color and the fact of office."

As stated above, the members of this board of health have undoubtedly been appointed as provided by law. The office to which they were appointed is one provided for by law, and the board of health has been established in this city since 1888 and has been in continuous existence, and the law providing for its establishment has always been in continuous existence for when one law was repealed another immediately went into effect.

It is my opinion, therefore, that the appointments are legal; that as this board is already in existence and has been since its first establishment, it is unnecessary to pass an ordinance re-establishing it.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General

BOARD OF EDUCATION—POWER TO SUSPEND PUPILS FOR HANGING TEACHERS IN EFFIGY AND TO LIFT SUSPENSION UPON SIGNING OF AN APOLOGY.

By virtue of Section 4750, General Code, the board of education may pass rules and regulations for the government of its pupils, and the right of the board to suspend pupils for violation of such rules, subject to the restrictions of Section 7685, General Code.

When, therefore, a pupil has partaken in a proceeding in which a teacher was hung in effigy, the board may suspend such pupil by a two-thirds vote, for a reasonable time not exceeding the limit of the current school year, after permitting the parent or guardian of the offender to be heard.

The board may further offer to lift said suspension upon the signing of an apology by the culprit.

The board has no control over other than pupils or employes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1912.

HON. DON J. YOUNG, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of March 13, 1912, is received, in which you state as follows:

"Mr. E. R. Stilson, who will present this letter to you, is the president of the board of education for the New London village district. I am enclosing herewith carbon copy of a letter received by me from the board of education of this district, the same having been presented to me by Mr. Stilson and the clerk of the board, Mr. Runyan.

"I am desirous of having your opinion upon it, and I desire herewith to give you, very briefly, my opinion, which I propose to send to the board."

From the letter of Mr. Stilson enclosed it appears that on or about February 28, 1912, one of the lady teachers of the high school had some difficulty with one of the pupils, whereupon the pupil was sent to the superintendent, the pupil then leaving school. On the night of February 28th, an effigy was hung from the flag staff on the high school premises, representing a woman, with a placard attached bearing the last name of the teacher in question. Some of the young men who hung the effigy admit that it was intended to refer to such teacher. The effigy was hung by pupils of the school, the pupil with whom the first difficulty was had, and some former graduates of the high school.

The board proposes as follows:

"Every member of the board is absolutely in accord with the plan to be followed, which is: that all participants, whether now pupils of the school or not, should be required to sign the apology hereto attached; that the same be read, together with the signatures, in the presence of the high school, the teachers and the board; that any who are now pupils and who refuse to do this, shall be suspended from attendance at school for a reasonable period.

"While the board has not taken action to determine the length of suspension, it is suggested that one month be the time limit and that, at the expiration of said month, such suspended pupil shall be allowed to presume his attendance, provided he has made up said month's school work to the satisfaction of the superintendent."

The board then submits the following inquiries for answer:

"First. Could any valid objection be raised against asking the participants to sign the attached apology. Would it incriminate them or render them liable in any way to an extent greater than their participation in the matter has already subjected them?"

"Second. Should there be any objection to its present form, how should it be revised?

"Third. In the event of any participating pupil refusing to comply with the board's order in this matter, as set forth above, have we a right to suspend him from school?

"Fourth. Having such a right of suspension, would we have the right to order his suspension for the entire two months' term of school (April and May term) provided it did not cover or embrace any part of any other school term?

"Fifth. Could we suspend for the entire April and May term of school, if it would thereby prevent a senior pupil from graduation?

"Sixth. What would be deemed a reasonable term of suspension?

"Seventh. If a temporary injunction were secured, restraining the board from carrying out an order of suspension until the case could be heard on its merits, and we were unable to get the case to trial until after the close of the year, could we prevent the graduation of a pupil involved? Also what would be our right against a pupil now a junior, during the next school year, after the final hearing, if we were successful in the injunction case?

"Eighth. What are our rights in the case of a participant who was not a pupil at the time the act was committed?"

Section 4750, General Code, grants to boards of education power to control the schools, teachers and pupils, as follows:

"The board of education shall make such rules and regulations as it deems necessary for its government and the government of its employes and the pupils of the schools. No meeting of a board of education, not provided for by its rules or by law, shall be legal, unless all the members thereof have been notified, as provided in the next section."

Section 7685, General Code, provides for the suspension or expulsion of pupils, as follows:

"No pupil shall be suspended from school by a superintendent or teacher except for such time as is necessary to convene the board of education, nor shall one be expelled except by a vote of two-thirds of such board, and after the parent or guardian of the offending pupil has been notified of the proposed expulsion, and permitted to be heard against it. No pupil shall be suspended or expelled from any school beyond the current term thereof."

The right of a board of education to suspend a pupil for just cause has been recognized by the courts.

The first and third syllabi in case of Brown vs. Cleveland board of education, 8 Ohio Dec. 378, read:

"The law has invested school authorities with the conduct of the schools and the making of rules and regulations for their proper government and management. In the exercise of these powers school boards are vested with wide discretion, and courts will not interfere except in case of plain abuse thereof.

"Such schools are, therefore, within the provisions of Section 4014, Rev. Stat. (7685 General Code), which provides for suspending and expelling pupils, and an expulsion is illegal unless made in the manner and for the reasons prescribed by said section."

In case of Sewell vs. Board of Education, 29 Ohio St. 89, the first and second syllabi read:

"Boards of education are authorized by law to adopt and enforce necessary rules and regulations for the government of the schools under their management and control.

"Where instruction in rhetoric was given in any grade or department of such schools, and one of the rules adopted by the board for the government of the pupils therein provided that if any pupil should fail to be prepared with a rhetorical exercise, at the time appointed therefor, he or she should, unless excused on account of sickness or other reasonable cause, be immediately suspended from such department: Held, that such rule was reasonable."

The management and control of the schools is placed in the hands of the board of education. This control will not be interfered with by the courts unless the rules adopted by it are unreasonable and are a plain abuse of the discretion placed in its hands. One of the essential features of a well regulated school, is the maintenance of proper discipline. An act of a pupil of a school, by which he participates in hanging a teacher thereof in effigy, if permitted to go unpunished, would be violative of all just rules of discipline. Even though the teacher may be in the wrong, the hanging of the teacher in effigy should not go unpunished.

The act of the pupils in question was unwarranted. If the board were to permit such acts to pass unnoticed it would tend to undermine all discipline and control of the pupils, and the usefulness of the school would probably be at an end.

The board of education has demanded that each pupil who participated in the act, shall sign an apology to be read in school, or that such pupil be suspended from school such time as the board shall determine. When one performs a wrongful act by which another is injured, it is commendable in that person to acknowledge his error and to apologize and repair as far as possible the wrong done. Such an apology is often a real test of character.

In case the pupil refuses to apologize the board may suspend such pupil from school. In making such suspension the board must act in accordance with the provisions of Section 7685, General Code, supra. Such suspension shall be so long as the board of education shall conclude from all the circumstances to be reasonable, but shall not extend beyond the current school year.

What is a reasonable suspension must be determined from all the circumstances and is left to the discretion of the board of education. Such suspension may be for a definite period, or for the balance of the school year, if the circumstances warrant such suspension. In my judgment, a suspension for the remainder of this school year would not be an unreasonable suspension in this case, especially for the leaders in the affair. This, however, is left to the discretion of the board.

On behalf of the pupils it might be contended that the suspension should not be such as to prevent graduation, or a pupil's passage into the next higher grade. This is a matter to be determined by the board, after considering all the circumstances. If a pupil is prevented from graduating or from passing to the next higher grade, by reason of his suspension, he cannot blame the board of education, but must look to himself for the cause. He should have considered this phase of the situation before he committed the act which caused his suspension.

It has been urged that the right of suspension interferes with the law requiring compulsory education. The compulsory education act does not apply to high school pupils. It applies to persons between the ages of eight and fourteen years, as provided by Section 7763, General Code, and to those between fourteen and sixteen years not engaged in any regular employment, as provided in Section 7764, General Code.

The board submits the following apology which it asks the pupils who participated in the affair, to sign:

> "We the undersigned pupils and others, hereby acknowledge our participation in the disreputable act of hanging an effigy to the flag staff of the school premises, the night of February 28, 1912. Said act was not intended by us to cast reflections upon the reputation or character of the teacher, and we hereby render our sincere apology to her.
> "We hereby agree as pupils that no further disorderly acts or infraction of discipline shall mark our connection with the schools under penalty of exclusion therefrom; or as outsiders, that we will not again trespass upon the school premises or in any manner disturb the institution under the extreme penalty of the laws of the commonwealth."

This apology is an admission that the person signing the same participated in the hanging of the effigy. It would not render the signers liable to any greater extent than their participation in the affair has already subjected them. However, the board could not compel any pupil to sign this apology. It may, however, make the signing of such apology a reason for lifting any suspension of such pupil from the schools. There can be no valid objection to the apology as written.

The board further inquires in reference to the effect of a temporary restraining order. That situation will have to be met when it presents itself. No restraining order has been granted and probably none will be applied for. The board of education has power to suspend the offenders for such time as they deem reasonable, and should so act, regardless of any attempt or threat to restrain them by order of court.

The board of education has no authority over those who are not pupils of the school.

The foregoing, I believe, covers all the questions asked.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—INHERITANCE TAX—BEQUEST TO METHODIST CHURCH WITH CARE OF BURYING GROUND A SUBORDINATE OBJECT—"INSTITUTION OF PUBLIC CHARITY"—"EXCLUSIVELY PUBLIC PURPOSES."

A bequest of $500.00 to the Methodist church, the income thereof to be devoted for ten years to keeping up a cemetery and after that time the principle to be applied to rebuilding said church is not a bequest to an "institution in this state for purpose only of public charity"so as to be exempt from the inheritance tax within the meaning of Section 5332, General Code. Such bequest may, however, be classed as one for "exclusively public purposes" within the meaning of the same statute and upon this ground is exempted from the inheritance tax provisions.

Assuming that the burying ground is public bearing in mind that burial grounds are expressly exempted by Article XII, Section XI of the Constitution, and considering the further fact that this purpose in the legacy aforesaid, is subordinate to its primary object, the clause providing for the ten year care of the cemetery should not defeat the exemption.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1912.

HON. ALLEN T. WILLIAMSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to your letter of sometime since respecting the exemption of a certain legacy from the inheritance tax I beg, in the first place, to apologize for the delay which has ensued in answering the same. To the unusual pressure of business in this office, which is responsible for much delay in answering correspondence, must be added in this case, as a cause for my tardiness, the illness of counsel to whom the question was referred.

The specific question is as to the taxability under the inheritance tax law of the following legacy:

> "I give, devise and bequeath to the _____ Methodist church, of * * *, five hundred dollars ($500.00) to be expended as follows: The interest of said $500.00 for the first ten years after my death to be applied to repair and keep in condition the cemetery at _____; at the end of said ten years the principal of said sum to be applied in rebuilding said * * church * * *, or in repairing the same as it may be then or thereafter needed for said purpose."

The following exemptions are created under the collateral inheritance tax law:

"Section 5332, General Code. The provisions of the next preceding section shall not apply to property * * * embraced in a bequest, devise, transfer or conveyance * * * to or for the use of * * * public institutions of learning, or to or for the use of an institution in this state for purpose only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes. * * *"

Analyzing this language it appears at once that the institution which is the taker of the gift or devise need not be itself an "institution of purely public charity" as the phrase is used elsewhere in the taxation laws, and in the Constitution, Article 12, Section 2. It must be, however, an institution "in this state," and this was the point decided in Humphreys vs. State, 70 O. S. 67. The institutions concerned in that case, being various missionary branches of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in America, where more clearly institutions of a charitable nature than a local church society would be because the avowed purpose of each one of the societies was the dissemination of the Christian gospel among the needy and the ignorant. It was in connection with this phase of the work of these societies that Judge Price, delivering the opinion of the court, used the following language:

"It may be admitted that theirs are works of charity in the broad sense, that the up-lifting of men, women and children to the standard of life taught in the Scriptures is indeed a work of charity, the greatest of the three christian graces."

However, in the case of Watterson vs. Halliday, 77 O. S. 150 the question was as to whether or not the Roman Catholic church is an "institution of purely public charity" within the meaning of the statutes defining the exemptions from the general property tax. The following language is used in the opinion by Price, J.:

"Like the word 'exclusively' as used in preceding clauses of said Section 2732, the word purely expresses a kindred limitation, or rather exclusion, in that it means free from mixture or combination, and, as applied in the present connection, the charity must be unalloyed with other purposes and objects. But the Catholic church to which the parsonages or priests' houses belong, is not an institution of purely public charity. It teaches and practices charity; but that is not its whole mission in the world. Its character is defined by the third and fourth findings made by the circuit court. There it is said: 'The Roman Catholic church is an institution which has for its chief and primary object and purpose the teachings and extending of its recognized form of religious belief and worship in all parts of the world, and was founded to continue the work of Christ on earth, and to teach, govern, sanctify and save all men.

"'Charity is included in its teachings, purposes and practices, as subordinate to its spiritual teaching and purpose, but is an essential part of its general scheme of church work. * * *'

"So, it seems that, instead of the church to which the residence of the priest belongs being an 'institution of purely public charity,' it is > a religious institution primarily, and its charity is subordinate to its spiritual teachings, and consequently the exemption claimed is not authorized by the sixth clause of the section."

Of course this language was used in another connection but the reasoning is clearly applicable to the statute under consideration. The word in Article 12, Section 2 and in the statutes enacted in pursuance thereof was "purely;" that in Section 5332, General Code, is "only" and the word "exclusively" is also used. I cannot discern any difference between the word "purely" on the one side and the words "only" and "exclusively" on the other.

So, again, while the statute under review in the Watterson vs. Halliday case, supra, determined the exemption by the nature of the institution to which the property belonged, and the statute in the case you present determines the exemption by the nature of the use to which the legacy is to be put, this distinction is also immaterial and the reasoning in Watterson vs. Halliday applies as well to the one case as to the other. The gist of the matter is this: A bequest to a church society for the general purposes of the society is not a bequest for charity only, because charity is but one phase of the work of the society. So it would follow that a bequest to a church for the purpose of repairing the church edifice is not one for a charitable purpose only because the edifice is not used for the distribution of public charity, but rather for the dissemination of religion—a purpose quite distinct from that of charity as clearly pointed out in Watterson vs. Halliday. Whether or not the subordinate purpose of the bequest, viz., the up-keep of a cemetery, presumably connected with the church is charitable would depend upon the manner in which the cemetery was conducted. If it were a public cemetery in which the indigent could be interred at the expense of the society maintaining it a bequest to it for general purposes would probably be a charitable one. This, however, seems to be a subordinate purpose of the specific bequest.

I am convinced, therefore that the bequest is not exempt as one "for purpose only of public charity." This raises the further question as to whether or not it is exempt as for the use of an instiution in this state for other exclusively public purposes. The peculiar language here used renders the question somewhat difficult. If, for example, the act had provided exemption for all institutions exempt under the general property tax law, as the laws of some of the other states provide, the answer would be easy. (See reference to New York and Connecticut statutes in Dos Passos on Inheritance Tax. Section 635, page 95.)

Unfortunately, however, the inheritance tax law in this particular uses an undefined term, namely, "exclusively public purposes." If a liberal construction could be given to this phrase, its lack of definition would not of itself afford special difficulties. Unfortunately again, however, all exceptions from taxation are looked upon with disfavor by the law, and the rule of strict construction is applied to them.

The exact question has not been adjudicated in Ohio, and the statutes of this state are so essentially different from those of other states, as already pointed out, that decisions from other jurisdictions are of no value. Upon careful consideration, however, I have arrived at the conclusion that the legacy mentioned in your letter is exempt from the inheritance tax. While a church building is not property belonging to an institution of purely public charity, it is a building used for a public purpose—namely, the public worship of God. I know of no Christian church which does not admit the public generally to its religious services, and I am advised that the church referred to in your letter does admit the public to its services. This being the case, the place where such services are held is a place maintained for a public purpose. Not being an institution conducted for profit to its members—that is for pecuniary profit, its purposes must be regarded as exclusively public. It follows, upon this reasoning, that insofar as the bequest is one for the repair of the church building, it is one for "an exclusively public purpose."

As I have already stated, the public nature of the burying ground, referred to in the legacy, is perhaps a question of fact. It might be that the cemetery in question is wholly private, but if it is connected with a church, I should be inclined to suspect that this is not the case. Now, "burying grounds" are specifically exempted from general taxation under authority of Article XII, Section II of the Constitution, and the statutes passed thereunder. It seems that the framers of the Constitution of 1851 had regarded burying grounds as public institutions. While the matter is not clear in my mind, I am of the opinion for reasons just suggested, as well as because the purpose now under discussion seems to be subordinate to the principal purpose of the legacy, that the fact that the interest on the principal sum of the legacy is to be used for a time in the up-keep of the cemetery, would not defeat the exemption.

You will observe that I have discussed the question upon the theory that the word "purpose" as used in Section 5332 does not refer to the purpose for which the taking institution is formed, but to the purpose for which the bequest is made. If the other view be taken of this question, however, the conclusion above reached would be even more easily arrived at.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—EXEMPTION OF SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CLUB BUILDING OF "ALL SAINTS PARISH"—"PUBLIC WORSHIP."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1912.

HON. HORACE L. SMALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letters with reference to the exemption from taxation of certain real estate belonging to "All Saints Parish" is at hand. The statement of the vestry is:

> "We intend to hold Sunday school regularly in the building, and the club which will have its quarters there is a parish organization for the uplifting of the young men of this community in the way of physical culture, classes of different kinds and general improvement of mind and body."

In your letter you state:

> "It is my conclusion therefore that since this property is used for Sunday school purposes and for a place of meeting for the various auxiliary bodies of the church, that the use of the property is primarily for public worship and that this property, therefore, comes within the exemption of Section 5349 by just the same process of reasoning as that of any other church property which maintains club rooms, entertainment rooms in the basement of the church or elsewhere about the premises."

Your conclusion is justified, as I think, by the camp meeting case in 57 O. S., 257. That decision impresses me as it did the supreme court when it says:

> "The facts of that case, as reported by the court, are somewhat extended, while the opinion of the court is brief, as is usual in a per curiam. We think that the court in that case traveled toward the extreme liberal statutory construction, and we cannot apply its logic to the facts of the case in hand."

(Watterson vs. Halliday, 77 O. S., 181.)

The conclusion to hold this property exempt is reached with doubt as to its correctness, and with grave doubt as to what the supreme court might do if the case were presented, but in belief that the present conclusion is in full harmony with the 57th Ohio case.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

TOWN HALL—ERECTION BY PRECINCT AND VILLAGE NOT AUTHORIZED.

There is no statutory authorization for the building of a town hall by the joint operation of a precinct and a village situated therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 26, 1912.

HON. HUGH R. GILMORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 4, 1912, you ask an opinion of this department upon the following:

> "Section 3260, G. C., provides that a precinct may vote on and the trustees of township may erect in a precinct a town hall.
> "Section 3399, G. C., provides that a township and village may jointly erect a town hall, or public building.
> "May a precinct in which a village is situated and such village jointly erect such a building?"

Section 3260, General Code, provides:

> "The trustees shall fix the place of holding elections within their township, or of any election precinct thereof. For such purpose they may purchase or lease a house and suitable grounds, or by permanent lease or otherwise acquire a site, and erect thereon a house. If a majority of the electors of the township or a precinct thereof, voting at any general election, vote in favor thereof, the trustees may purchase a site and erect thereon a town hall for such township or precinct and levy a tax on the taxable property within such township or precinct to pay the cost thereof, which shall not exceed two thousand dollars. At least thirty days notice shall be given in at least five of the most public places in the township or precinct, that at such election a vote will be taken for or against a tax for such purchase."

This section governs the erection of a town hall by a township or by a precinct thereof. It has no reference to a town hall or public building to be erected jointly by a township and village, or by a precinct and a village thereof.

Sections 3399, et seq., General Code, authorizes a township and a village situated in such township to jointly erect a public building.

Section 3399, General Code, provides:

"The electors of a township in which a village is situated, and the electors of such village may if both so determine, as hereinafter provided, unite in the enlargement, improvement or erection of a public building."

Section 3400, General Code, provides:

"For such purpose an application shall be made to and filed with the trustees of the township, signed by not less than twenty-five resident free-holders of such township, who are not residents of the village, and application shall also be made to and filed with the mayor of the village, signed by not less than twenty-five resident free-holders of the village."

Section 3401, General Code, provides:

"At the next general township and municipal election after such applications have been so filed, the question as to whether or not a tax shall be levied upon all the property subject to taxation in such township and village for the enlargement, improvement or erection of a public building, shall be submitted to the electors of such township and of such village. Ten days' notice that the question will be submitted to the electors, shall be given by the trustees of the township and the mayor of the village, in a newspaper of general circulation in such township and village, which notice shall state the maximum amount of money proposed to be used for such purpose, and the rate of tax proposed to be levied."

Section 3402, General Code, provides:

"If at such election two-thirds of the electors of the township and of the village voting, vote in favor of such improvement, the trustees of such township and the council of the village shall jointly take such action as is necessary to carry out such improvement."

It will be observed that to authorize a township or a precinct to erect a town hall under Section 3260, General Code, only a majority vote is required, while to authorize the township and village to jointly erect a public building a two-thirds vote of each subdivision is required.

A township as well as a village has only limited power. Each must act within the limits of its powers as prescribed by statute. The provisions of the statute herein considered cannot be made to apply to a precinct and village therein and authorize them to jointly erect a public building.

The statute, Section 3401, General Code, prescribes the question to be voted upon. That question is whether taxes shall be levied upon "all" the property subject to taxation in such village and township, for the erection of a public building. This provision precludes the idea that a part of the township may act with the village. There is no statutory provision authorizing a precinct and a village to jointly erect a town hall or public building.

A precinct and a village situated in such precinct cannot jointly erect a town hall or public building.

Respectfully,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—NIGHT WATCHMAN AND MARSHAL.

The duties of a night watchman are not incompatible with those of marshal and the mayor may legally appoint a marshal to the position of night watchman subject to the confirmation of council and the appointee may receive a compensation in both capacities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 26, 1912.

HON. CHARLES KRICHBAUM, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 16th, wherein you inquire:

> "In Stark county there are a great many small incorporated towns, four or five averaging fifteen hundred to two thousand inhabitants. In these municipalities they have a marshal, regularly elected under the Code, whose salary is very meager and whose duties as marshal require a very small part of his time. They are in the habit in these municipalities of making this marshal a night policeman as well, and pay for those services in addition to the salary he received for services as marshal.
> "QUERY: Is there anything illegal in the payment of the marshal for his services as marshal and also as night watchman or night policeman under the circumstances or is there such a conflict in the two offices as that one person cannot hold and receive salary for both? * * *"

Section 4384 of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "The marshal shall be elected for a term of two years, commencing on the first day of January next after his election, and shall serve until his successor is elected and qualified. He shall be an elector of the corporation. When provided for by council, and subject to its confirmation, the mayor shall appoint all deputy marshals, policemen, night watchmen and special policemen, and may remove them for cause, which shall be stated in writing to council."

Section 4210 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"Council shall fix the compensation and bonds of all officers, clerks and employes in the village government, except as otherwise provided by law. All bonds shall be made with sureties subject to the approval of the mayor. The compensation so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which any officer, clerk or employe may have been elected or appointed. Members of council may receive as compensation the sum of two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year."

It is my opinion that the duties of night watchman are in no way incompatible with the duties of marshal in the incorporated towns which you describe in your inquiry, and, therefore, under the circumstances, I am of the further opinion that under the provisions of Section 4384 of the General Code, above quoted, the mayor can legally appoint the marshal to the position of night watchman subject to the confirmation of council, and that there is no illegality in the payment to such marshal for his services as marshal and also as night watchman such salary as may be provided by the respective village councils as authorized by the provisions of Section 4219 of the General Code, above quoted.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—CANDIDATE'S OFFER AT PRIMARIES, TO PAY OWN DEPUTY HIRE, IS BRIBERY.

A candidate for office of county recorder at the primaries who makes a public announcement that he will pay his own deputy hire, is guilty of bribery within the meaning of Section 13312, General Code, and would suffer a forfeiture of the position if elected.

He may purge himself by retracting the statement with the same publicity with which it was made, and by totally obviating the effects of said publication, upon the minds of the voters.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1912.

HON. D. H. ARMSTRONG, Prosecuting Attorney, Jackson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of March 23rd, wherein you state:

"I am enclosing clipping from one of the local newspapers, and which clipping contains the political announcement of one of the candidates at the coming primary election.

"(To the Republicans of Jackson county!)

"(I will be a candidate for the office of county recorder at the coming May primaries. If elected I pledge myself to give honest service to the county and a square deal to all, also to pay my own deputy hire. Your support is solicited.—George W. Brooks.)"

"I am requested to ask your opinion as to whether the part of such announcement which states that the candidate if nominated and elected will pay his deputy hire, is a violation of law such as would avoid his nomination and election, if he were to be successful.

"If in your opinion such statement is a violation of law, can the candidate overcome the fault, by withdrawing such announcement, or by making a different one?"

Section 13312 of the General Code, provides:

"Whoever * * * promises to give * * * money or other valuable consideration to or for an elector or other person, to induce such elector to * * * vote or refrain from voting at an election for a particular person * * * shall be fined * * * and shall forfeit the office to which he was elected at the election with reference to which such offense was committed."

Section 13324 of the General Code, provides:

"All provisions and requirements of law to preserve and protect the purity of elections, and all penalties for the violation of such laws shall apply and be enforced as to all primary elections."

Mechem on public officers, paragraph 372 lays down the proposition that:

"A contract by which the officer agrees, in consideration of his appointment or election, to surrender to the public the fees or salary of the office in whole or in part, or to receive something else in compensation than that which the law provides, is void."

Many authorities are cited by Mechem sustaining this doctrine on the ground that whether the question is viewed in a moral, political or legal aspect such practice is inconsistent with public policy, tends to corruption and diverts the attention of the voters from the merits of the candidate to the price to be paid.

Mechem at paragraph 373, announces the proposition that such a contract as is spoken of above amounts in legal effect to bribery in its largest sense and invalidates the officer's election, if procured thereby and that the officer may be removed upon quo warranto.

In the case of People ex rel. vs. Thornton 25 Hun. (N. Y.) 456, in which it was sought to oust a candidate for county judge upon the ground that prior to his election he had publicly promised the electors of the county that if he were elected he would perform the duties of his office for thirteen hundred dollars less than the amount of his salary as fixed by the statute, Judge Bockes at page 466 says:

"In view of the numerous cases both in England and in this country in which the subject of sale of office and of the bidding for office has been under discussion, we must hold such promises and pledges as were made by the defendant to the electors of the county in this case to be reprehensible in the extreme, being against public policy and in fact criminal, being no less than a form of an intended bribe to the electors to whom they were made."

Citing numerous cases.

In State ex rel. vs. Collins, 72 Mo. 13 the court says:

"A public offer by a candidate for public office to the electors to perform the duties of the office for less than the legal salary or fees invalidates his election."

The supreme court of Mass., in 20 Pick. 428, Alvord vs. Collins says:

"We cannot discover a difference in principle between a sale of an office for a valuable consideration and the disposing of it to a person who will perform the duties for the lowest compensation. The same objection lies against both."

Bonham, C. J., in State vs. Church, 5 Oregon 374 uses the following language:

"In order to constitute the rewarding or the bribing of a voter by a candidate for office, we do not think it essential that the candidate should pay the price agreed upon for such vote directly into the hands of the voter in question; but the same results would follow the payment of the purchase price to a third person, or to an association or community of persons, if so made by the direction of the voter, and for his use and benefits. A payment, under such circumstances, would be made to the agent of the voter and in contemplation of law would be a payment to him."

Mr. Jusice Lyon in the case of the State of Wis. vs Purdy, 36 Wis. 213 says:

"Promises made to the people by candidates for public office, that, if elected, they will practice a rigid economy in the expenditures of their several departments, are unobjectionable; and if the successful candidate fulfills his pledges in that behalf, he is entitled to conmendation. * * * But should such candidate propose to the voters and tax payers of the state, that if they will elect him to the office of governor he will serve the state therein gratuitously or for one-half of the salary allowed by the constitution, and pay the rent of an executive office and the expenses of fuel, stationery and other incidentals pertaining thereto, out of his own pocket, his proposition has an entirely different aspect. In one case the candidate promises that if he is elected he will regard his official oath and faithfully and honestly discharge his official duty; while in the other case he proposes to buy the office with promises to pay therefor in personal services or money, or both. * * *

"When our elections to fill public offices cease to express the free, intelligent and unbiased judgment and choice of the electors; when they shall be controlled or materially influenced by pecuniary offers made by the candidates, whether to the electors, or to the municipality (which is but the aggregation of the electors) a most vital condition of free government will be disregarded."

In view of the authorities above cited and of the further fact that the statute allows and provides for the payment of deputy hire of a county recorder out of county funds, it is my opinion that the offer published in the clipping enclosed is contrary to law and would constitute bribery under Section 13312 and in consequence work a forfeiture of the officer to which the party might be elected. As the evil to be guarded against is the corrupt influencing of the voter, in order to now overcome the mischief done it is my opinion that the candidate should withdraw such announcement, giving to this publication the same publicity as has been given by the announcement that he would pay his own deputy hire. He should attempt in every way to obviate any chance that it might be shown against him that he received his vote by reason of such illegal inducements and promises as are contained in the printed matter. I am inclined to believe that in that way he might purge himself, although the question may always remain as to whether or not any voter was corruptly influenced by reading the first announcement and failing to have his attention called to the correction.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN.
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—CANDIDATES AT PRIMARIES AND CONVENTIONS—DELEGATES AND ALTERNATES—NOMINATING PETITIONS—EXPENSES OF TRAVELING COMPANION OF CANDIDATE AND PROCURING OF DELEGATES TO RUN AT CONVENTION—"COMMITTEES" AND "ORGANIZATIONS" OF FRIENDS—AGENTS AND MANAGERS.

Section 4969, General Code, requires only candidates to be nominated at the direct primaries to file a nominating petition signed by two per cent. of the voters. District nominations made by a district delegate convention are not included, and candidates for such need not file said petitions.

Though Section 4969, General Code, does not specifically mention alternates, yet elsewhere, throughout the statutes, reference is made to such in connection with delegates and the statutes may be construed to permit the election of alternates, though they do not make such election necessary.

If two or more friends of a candidate act together as a body in promoting his candidacy, they constitute a "committee" or "organization," within the meaning of the corrupt practice act. Any expenditures made by them however, either acting individually or as a body, must be included and filed in an itemized statement.

The acts of committees or organizations, in promoting the candidacy of a candidate for nomination at a convention, come within the provisions of the corrupt practice act. Such candidates themselves, however, are not required by express provision to file the statement of expenditures for the promotion of his own candidacy.

The provision requiring every payment under ten dollars to be accounted for by a receipt bill applies only to payment to single persons at single times and does not relate to aggregate expenses for related purposes.

An expense by a candidate at a convention, of procuring persons to run at the primaries as delegates to such convention, is not within the permissible list of expenditures. Such candidate however, is not prohibited from paying expenses and services of persons who will be candidates for delegates at such convention in preparing, circulating and filing petitions for nominations of such delegates.

As such candidate may legally incur the expense of an agent, he may include as a part of his necessary personal expenses, sums paid for the traveling expenses of a friend or friends who accompany him while on a canvas.

Under the provisions permitting such district candidates to hire agents, he is permitted furthermore, to hire and pay a person in each county of his district, as manager therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1912.

HON. CHARLES KRICHBAUM, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of February 12th and 14th, wherein you state:

> "Question 1. Need a candidate to be nominated at a district convention, whether judicial or senatorial, file a petition signed by two per cent. of the party voters of the district, or is it only necessary for candidates for delegates to such a convention to file petitions signed by two per cent. of the party voters in the delegate's ward or precinct? The practice in this county and district has been for a candidate to be nominated at a district convention, not to file such petition for himself.

"Question 2. Is it necessary to nominate delegates and alternates to a district judicial convention or delegates only? The law does not seem to provide for alternates to such a convention?

"Question 3. Does the term 'committee or organization' Section 1, corrupt practice act, apply to a conference of two or more friends of a candidate to aid or promote his election, when no organization is formed, or does this section only apply to such combination of persons as form a committee or organization for such purpose?

"Question 4. Do the provisions of the corrupt practice act apply to a candidate before a district convention? (See Sec. 2.)

"Question 5. Suppose a candidate buys postage stamps from time to time during the campaign, in amounts not exceeding $10.00 at any one time but aggregating more than $10.00, must he file a receipt for each of said purchases with his affidavit of expenditures, and if his railroad and hotel bills aggregate more than $10.00, but there is no single expenditure of that amount made to one person or company at any one time, must he file with his affidavit of expenditures such receipt for each item thereof?

"Question 6. May a candidate before a district convention have one or more persons in a county to procure persons to run at the primaries as delegates to the convention, and may he pay such parties for their services the reasonable and fair value thereof?

"Question 7. May such a candidate pay the expenses and services of persons who will be candidates for delegates to such convention, in preparing, circulating and filing petitions for nomination of such delegates?

"Question 8. May a candidate, as a part of his necessary personal expenses, pay for the transportation and hotel bills of a friend or friends who accompany him while making a canvas?

"Question 9. Does Section 26 of the corrupt practice act mean that a candidate may expend the amount allowed therein for his nomination and then expend the same amount for his election, or does the amount specified therein cover the expenditures of the candidate for both his nomination and election? For example: May a candidate for governor spend the sum of $5,000 for his nomination and an additional $5,000 for his election, or is he limited to the expenditure of the sum of $5,000 for both his nomination and election?

"Question 10. May a candidate before a district convention hire a person in each county thereof to perfect his organization and conduct his campaign, and pay such person or persons therefor?"

Section 4949 provides that:

"Candidates for member of congress and all other public elective offices, delegates provided for herein, and members of the controlling committees, of all voluntary political parties * * shall be nominated * * in accordance with the provisions of this chapter * *."

The chapter referred to is chapter 6, title 14.

Section 4952 provides that candidates for district offices, where the district contains more than one county, shall be nominated by delegate conventions.

Section 4965 provides for the nomination of certain members of the general assembly and the common pleas judges in certain counties.

Section 4969 provides as follows:

> "Nominations for places on the primary ballot shall be by nomination papers which shall be filed with the board of deputy state supervisors at least twenty days before the day for holding the primary election. Such nomination papers shall be signed by two per cent. of the party voters in the county, municipality, precinct, ward, or other political subdivision for which such nomination is to be made. The basis of percentage in each case shall be by vote of the party in such county, municipality, precinct, ward or other political subdivision, for governor at the last preceding election for state officers."

This section applies to all nominations at the primaries and to such alone. In view of the above sections and the fact that Section 4969 applies solely to such officers as are nominated at the direct primaries, there can be no question but that district nominations made by a district delegate convention are not included and such district candidate need not file a petition. It is only necessary for the delegates to the convention to have such nomination papers signed by the required two per cent. of the voters. We have only need to recall that frequently delegate conventions are driven to the nomination of a "dark horse" who, not being an avowed candidate, would have had no opportunity of securing a nomination petition. It is my opinion that the practice in vogue in your county district is the proper one.

QUESTION 2.

Section 4949, supra, provides, inter alia, for the nomination of "delegates provided herein," and as you state, there is no specific provision for alternates. Notwithstanding this fact, other provisions of Chapter 6 uses the term "alternate" as well as "delegate." Section 4954 speaks of when delegates and alternates are to be selected by a county convention, and also provides that the delegates and alternates shall be apportioned in a certain manner.

Section 4953 provides that the state committee shall apportion the state delegates and alternates.

Section 4956 only specifically speaks of "delegates" but the reference is to the "delegates and alternates" provided for in Section 4956. I am inclined to the view that while Section 4952 does not specifically mention the term "alternate;" it is included in the word "delegate" and the legislature by the manner it speaks of state and county delegates and alternates indicates it contemplated such alternate should be elected. Then, too, it has been the custom so long established as to practically make it a rule that alternates be chosen at the same time and place and in the same manner as delegates. The state supervisor of elections (see note in 1911 compilation of election laws, page 79), as an annotation to Section 4952, says:

> "If the call of the county committee so provides, but one set of delegates to a county convention may be elected with power to elect delegates and alternates to each of the senatorial, circuit judicial and common pleas judicial convention."

This was the interpretation of the election officer, even though the provision of Section 4952 was speaking of a delegate convention the "delegate" to which had been chosen at the primary election.

I am not unmindful of the provisions of Section 4989, but I think this section only applies when no alternate is selected; when an alternate is elected there is no vacancy for the committee to fill and the alternate would have all the power and functions of his delegate in the latter's absence.

So, my answer to your second question is that while it is not absolutely necessary to elect alternates to a district judicial convention, it is not only permissible, but right and legal.

QUESTION 3.

Section 5175-1 defines "committee" or "organization." If the two or more friends of the candidate spoken of in your letter act together and as a body, even though not formally organized, they would constitute a "committee" or "organization" under the definition of the corrupt practice act; if they acted as individuals, each man making the expenditures himself, they, of course, would not constitute a committee.

But, in either event, under Section 5175-2, if they contributed, promised, received or expended any money or thing of value in connection with the election either general or primary for and on behalf of their friend they would either as a committee or as individuals be compelled to file an itemized expense account, unless as individuals they made their contribution to parties who under the law must render an account. It is their acting together or co-operating to the common end that makes the two or more persons a committee and not any formal organization.

QUESTION 4.

Under Section 5175-1 if the candidate, even before a district convention, works through a committee or organization, such committee or organization comes within the provisions of the corrupt practices act, since every committee or combination of two or more persons co-operating

> "To aid or take part in the election or defeat of any candidate for nomination at a primary election or convention." is expressly included.

Section 2 of the act (5175-2 of the General Code) does not to my mind seem to contemplate a candidate before a district convention under the term "candidate" as used in that section. That section requires "every candidate who is voted for at any election or primary election" to file the required statement of expenditures.

The limitation to a candidate who is voted for at an election seems to me to exclude a candidate who might be voted for at a convention. It may be that a candidate before a district convention comes within the spirit of the corrupt practices act, but I do not see how in the face of the plain language used and in view of the fact that the failure to file such itemized statement when required is made a criminal offense that such a candidate could be included.

It must be borne in mind, however, that this holding would not excuse one who happened to be a candidate and who made contributions or expenditures on behalf of a person who was to be voted for at a primary election, such as a delegate to a district convention at which such contributor might be a candidate, from being compelled to file his statement of expenditures as required by Section 5175-2; and likewise the mere fact that he was a candidate before a district convention would not place him without the provisions of Section 26 of the act (Section 5175-26 of the General Code), which section makes "any person" guilty of a corrupt practice act by reason of offending against the section.

QUESTION 5.

Section 11 of the corrupt practice act (Section 5175-11 of the General Code) provides that "every payment required to be accounted for shall, unless the total expense payable to any person be not in excess of ten dollars, be vouched for by a receipted bill stating the particulars of expense, etc." I am of the opinion that the legislature intended in the enactment of this section to only require receipts when the expenditure at any one time to the same person amounted to over $10.00. The mere fact that the sum total of the various items, each one of which was less than ten dollars, aggregated more than $10.00 would not necessitate a receipt. Of course it would make no difference whether the expenditure spoken of was for postage stamps, railroad fare, hotel bills or any other permissible election expense.

QUESTION 6.

The only question involved in your sixth inquiry is whether or not the candidate spoken of is, under Section 26 of the corrupt practice act, a person who pays or contributes money or other valuable consideration in connection with or in respect of any election. The object of the corrupt practice act was a purification of matters pertaining to all elections, to provide against the use of money or other valuable consideration in corruptly influencing the voter in favor of or against a candidate for public office.

The expenditure of the candidate spoken of to a person or persons to procure persons to run at the primaries as delegate, to my mind, would be an expenditure in connection with and in respect of the primary election. I have already held that the enumeration under Section 26 is exhaustive of the permissible things which can be paid for as therein provided. I do not find that matter spoken of in your sixth question in the list of permissible expenditures, and it is my opinion, therefore, that such an expenditure would be a corrupt practice.

QUESTION 7.

The expense of preparing, circulating and filing petitions for nomination is specifically mentioned as a permissible expense in the enumeration contained in Section 26 of the corrupt practice act. As the section applies to "any person," allowing "any person" to make certain expenditures, I am inclined to the view that the fact that the person making the expenditure happens to be a candidate before a district convention would make no difference. There is no limitation of the person who pays the expense of preparing, circulating and filing the petition; it need not necessarily be the candidate whose name is on the petition, and it is my view that a district candidate would be allowed to pay such expense as far as the corrupt practice act is concerned.

QUESTION 8.

I do not believe that it was the intention of the act to prevent a person who happened to be a candidate from extending hospitalities to a personal friend or to friends who might accompany the candidate on his canvas. The section would allow the candidate to pay the expenses of such friend if he were an agent of the candidate, managing the necessary and reasonable business of the election (see Section 26), and since this would be permissible, I can see no reason for prohibiting a candidate from including as a part of his necessary personal expenses such sums as out of the goodness of his heart he felt inclined to pay for the transportation and hotel bills of a friend or friends who journeyed with him for the purpose of cheering him up when the clouds of defeat seem to threaten, or who joined with him in the smiles attended upon apparent or real success.

QUESTION 9.

In our communication to you of February 8th, we answered your 9th question, holding that the total amount expended by a candidate for public office under the provisions of Section 5175-29 of the General Code included the amount expended for all purposes at both the primary and general election.

QUESTION 10.

While Section 26 states that the services of the "agent" as shall be required to manage the necessary and reasonable business of the election" may be paid for at the reasonable, bona fide and customary value, further along in the section is found the provision that "the reasonable traveling expenses of * * agents * *" might be paid. Since there seems to be a recognition that a candidate is allowed to hire and pay a manager of his campaign, I can see no reason for holding that this only applies to a general manager, but I am inclined to the view that a district candidate may hire and pay a person in each county of his district "to manage the necessary and reasonable business of the election, "and pay therefor at the reasonable and bona fide value.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—CONTRIBUTIONS BY CANDIDATES TO CLUBS AND COMMITTEES—LIMITATIONS.

A candidate for public office may pay assessments or make contributions to political committees, providing he keeps within the maximum amount allowed to be expended. If the contribution is specific, it cannot be for other than the purposes permitted by the corrupt practice act; if it is general, the committee must observe the same restrictions with regard to the purposes for which the money may be expended.

Within the same limitations, a candidate may contribute to a club or committee for the purpose of paying rent for halls, compensation of speakers, music and fireworks for public meetings and expenses of advertising same, and the usual incidental expenses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1912.

HON. CHARLES KRICKBAUM, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 3rd inst. The matters contained in your second, fourth and fifth inquiries are fully covered in the opinion of this date sent you today and in consequence I will only take up your first and third inquiries.

First. You state that it is your conclusion that "said act, Section 29, expressly permits candidates for public office to pay assessments or make contributions to political committees, provided all expenditures of such candidate permitted by the act, do not exceed the aggregate specified in said section."

I concur in your conclusion. Section 5175-2, General Code, providing for the filing of a statement of expenditures by a candidate and by persons, committees or associations, applies as well to those who contribute money or things of value in connection with such election as to those who promise, receive or expend such money or thing of value. There is a recognition of a contribution.

Section 5175-12 provides as follows:

> "No person shall, directly or indirectly, himself or through another person, make a payment or promise of payment to any committee, association or organization, in any name except its own, nor shall such committee or person knowingly receive a payment or promise of payment, or enter or cause the same to be entered in the accounts or records of such committee, in any other name than that of the person by whom it is made."

Section 5175-29, General Code, provides inter alia that the total amount expended by a candidate, first, for any of the purposes specified in Section 26, second, for contributions to political committees, and, third, for any purpose tending in any way to promote or aid in securing his nomination or election, shall not exceed the amount specified herein.

Section 5175-26, it will be noted, also speaks of one who "contributes or offers to contribute."

In view of the above sections of the corrupt practices act, I am of the opinion that a candidate for public office may pay assessments or make contributions to political committees, always, of course, keeping them within the limitations of the maximum amount allowed to be expended, and by so doing he will not violate the provisions of the corrupt practices act. It must be borne in mind, however, that the candidate may make his contribution either generally or specifically. If his contribution is general, then his duty in the matter is ended, and it is the part of the committee to see to it that they do not make any expenditure other than for the permissible purposes enumerated in said Section 5175-26. If his contribution is specific, then it must be for one of the permissible matters in Section 5175-26 above mentioned.

Second. In your third inquiry you state that your conclusion is that "the corrupt practices act permits any candidate for office to contribute to a club or committee for the purpose of paying rent for halls, compensation of speakers, music and fireworks for public meetings and expenses of advertising the same, together with the usual expenses incident to the holding of such public meetings."

I likewise concur in your opinion on this question. The same sections of the General Code spoken of in the previous inquiry apply to this question. To my mind the candidate in contributing to the club or committee for the specific purpose makes said club or committee his agent to expend the money for the specific purpose for which he gives it, and so long as the specific purpose is one of the permissible things enumerated in Section 5175-26, that he is within the law. As said section expressly states if he "directly or indirectly by himself or through any person" contributes or pays, etc., any money or other valuable consideration for any other purpose than the matters and services therein enumerated at their reasonable bona fide and customary value, such contribution, payment, etc., is declared to be corrupt practice and invalid at the election of any person guilty thereof.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—CIGARS AND TREATING IN SALOONS—CANDIDATE.

The giving away of cigars and treating in saloons or other places by or for a candidate for nomination at a primary election, if done for the purpose of promoting the candidacy, would be a violation of the corrupt practice act.

The question whether such acts are performed for the purpose of promoting the candidacy or out of a personal habit of friendship is a question of fact with the presumption, however in favor of the former purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 18, 1912.

HON. THEO. H. TANGEMAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of February 12, 1912, is received in which you inquire as follows:

> "A number of persons who, subject to the May primary election, are candidates for office have requested an opinion from me as to whether they would violate Section 26 of the corrupt practice act by giving away cigars and treating in saloons and other places, while they are electioneering."

You then state your conclusions and some of the reasons offered by candidates opposed to your views.

The provisions of the corrupt practice act apply to primary elections as well as to other elections.

Section 5175-2, General Code, (Section 2 corrupt practice act, 102 Ohio laws, 321), provides:

> "Every candidate who is voted for at any election or primary election held within this state, and every person, committee or association of persons incorporated or unincorporated, who may have contributed, promised, received or expended directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value in connection with such election, shall within ten days after such election file, as hereinafter provided, an itemized statement showing in detail all the moneys or things of value, so contributed, promised, received or expended, and all liabilities directly or indirectly incurred in connection with such election; but individuals other than candidates making only contributions, the receipts of which must be accounted for by others, need not file such statement under this section."

This section requiring itemized statements of expenses applies to all elections, including a primary election.

Section 5175-26, General Code, (Section 26 of corrupt practice act, 102 Ohio laws 327), provides:

> "Any person is guilty of a corrupt practice if he, directly or indirectly, by himself or through any other person, in connection with, or in respect of any election, pays, lends or contributes, or offers or promises to pay, lend or contribute any money or other valuable consideration, for any other purpose than the following matters and services, at their reasonable, bona fide and customary value:

"Rents of halls and compensation of speakers, music and fireworks for public meetings, and expenses of advertising the same, together with the usual expenses incident thereto.

"The preparation, printing and publication of posters, lithographs, banners, notices and literary material, the compensation of agents to supervise and prepare articles and advertisements in the newspapers, to examine questions of public interest bearing on the election, and the report on the same; the pay of newspapers for advertisements, pictures, reading matter and additional circulation, the preparation and circulation of letters, pamphlets and literature bearing on the election.

"Rent of offices and club rooms, compensation of such clerks and agent shall be required to manage the necessary and reasonable business of the election and of attorneys at law for actual legal services rendered in connection with the election; the preparation of lists of voters and payment of necessary personal expenses by a candidate; the reasonable traveling expenses of the committeemen, agents, clerks and speakers; postage, express, telegrams and telephones; the expenses of preparing, circulating and filing petitions for nomination. No party organization or candidate shall compensate or hire in any one election precinct more than one person to prepare lists of voters. Each political party may designate one party representative in each precinct upon each registration day, and such committee may designate not more than three (3) such representatives and each candidate one representative in each voting precinct upon each election day, whose names shall be certified to by the chairman and secretary of the controlling committee of such party to the board of deputy state supervisor of elections, at least two (2) days before such registration or election day, and who may be paid for their services by such committee or candidate not in excess of five ($5.00) dollars per day each.

"Any payment, contribution or expenditure or agreement or offer to pay, contribute or expend any money or thing of value for any purpose whatsoever except as herein provided is hereby declared to be corrupt practice and invalidates the election of any person guilty thereof."

The foregoing section does not authorize an expenditure for cigars, or for treating in saloons or otherwise while a person is electioneering as a candidate for office.

This section prohibits the paying, lending or contributing of anything of value, in connection with, or in respect of any election, except for the purposes therein enumerated. The giving of a cigar or of a "drink" would be contributing something of value. If it were permissible to give one cigar, two cigars could be even, yea, a box of cigars could be given. There would be no limit, except as to the total amount that may be expended for all purposes.

The corrupt practice is the giving or contributing of something of value in connection with, or in respect of any election. A giving of cigars or treating while electioneering for office would certainly be done in respect to an election. It would be a part of the electioneering scheme.

It is urged that a person who has been in the habit of treating his friends, should not be prevented from so doing when he becomes a candidate for office. It is not the purpose of the act that a person should be compelled to change his personal habits when he becomes a candidate for office. But whether a candidate for office treats to cigars or drinks from personal habits or because he is a candidate for office would have to be determined from the facts of each particular case. However, the two would be so connected that it would be very difficult to determine whether the treating is done from personal habit or because such person is a candidate for office. The common presumption would be that he treats because of the fact that he is a candidate, although he may habitually treat his friends. If this were held as a reason for a violation of the law, all candidates might get the habit of treating.

In order to comply not only with the letter but also with the spirit of the law, it would be well for a candidate to change his personal habit and cease treating so long as he is a candidate. When one is a candidate for office it is commonly accepted that where he treats his friends it is done for the purpose of securing their good will toward his candidacy.

It is my conclusion that the giving away of cigars and treating in saloons, or other places, by or on behalf of a candidate, for nomination at a primary election, would be a violation of the corrupt practice act.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS—INTEREST IN PUBLIC CONTRACTS—"PUBLIC OFFICE"—INSURANCE CONTRACTS WITH CONTRACTS WITH COUNTY, BY DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISOR OF ELECTIONS, ATTACHE OF SECRETARY OF STATE AND MEMBER OF COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A deputy state supervisor of elections is appointed by the secretary of state and is, therefore, a state officer and not connected with the county, within the meaning of Section 12910, General Code, prohibiting contracts of public officials with political subdivisions, with which they are connected. Such official is a public officer, however, and comes within the prohibition of Section 12911, General Code, providing against the interest in public contracts of an amount over $50.00 unless under advertisement and bid.

An attache of the secretary of state being an employe of a public officer, also comes within the prohibition of Section 12911, General Code.

A county agricultural society being purely a voluntary association which exercises no governmental control, its members are not holders of an office or trust within the meaning of Section 12911, General Code.

If the premium on a fire insurance policy amounts to more than $50.00, advertisement and bids are required.

Each policy must be let on separate contract, and should be authorized by separate resolution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1912.

HON. T. T. COURTRIGHT, Prosecuting Attorney, Lancaster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 28th you submitted the following for opinion of this office:

"Will you please advise me on Section 12910-12911 of the General Code of Ohio on the following questions:

"Can a deputy supervisor of elections who is also an insurance agent sell to the county commissioners on county property when the same is written in several policies, the premium on no policy exceeding fifty ($50.00) dollars. The aggregate, however, of the several policies exceeding fifty ($50.00) dollars?

"Would your finding equally apply to an attache of the secretary of state's office, who sells insurance to the county under the same condition, and to a secretary of the county agricultural society?"

For a general discussion of Sections 12910 and 12911, General Code, I herewith hand you copy of an opinion heretofore rendered by me to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices under date March 31, 1911.

By the provisions of Section 4804 the state supervisor of elections, which is the secretary of state by virtue of his office, appoints the deputy state supervisors of elections and I am of the opinion that the said deputy state supervisors of elections can in no sense be considered a county officer and would, therefore, not come within the provisions of Section 12910, General Code. He would, however, come within the provisions of Section 12911, General Code, in that he is a public officer of the state. I am also of the opinion that the attache of the secretary of state's office would likewise come within the provisions of Section 12911, in that he is the employe of the secretary of state, who is, of course, a public officer.

As the county agricultural society is purely a voluntary organization although declared by statute to be a body corporate and politic, yet I do not think that they exercise any governmental control, and therefore, that the members thereof would not in any sense be considered as holding an office of trust or profit under the meaning of Section 12911, and therefore, the secretary thereof would not be within the purview of said section.

In the opinion which I have herewith enclosed, I have construed the question of fire insurance in reference to the amount of such contract to relate to the premium, that is, the interest of the company and not of the agent, and that, therefore, if the premium on a policy exceeds the sum of fifty ($50.00) dollars, the contract must be let on bids duly advertised as provided by law. While I am clearly of the opinion that each insurance policy is to be considered as a separate and distinct contract between the county and the insurance company, yet as it has been decided in the case of Bellaire Goblet Company vs. The City of Findlay et al., 5 C. C., 418, that the penalty prescribed in what is now Section 12911 is equivalent to a prohibition of the act, and that, therefore, the insurance policy would be void, it would be well to have the county commissioners designate on their journal, the various insurance companies with which they desire to place the policies, in order that no question might be raised that the contract with the agent in its entirety was not severable, and, therefore, that each and every policy was void. It would further appear to me to be the better practice to have the commissioners let such contract in each particular instance by separate resolution, and if possible on separate days, so that there could be no queestion raised as to the validity of the various policies because of uniting them in one resolution or all on one day.

In suggesting the foregoing I, of course, refer to the policies which are given to the insurance agent who is a deputy state supervisor of elections and to those which are given to the attache of the secretary of state's office. It is necessary to be extremely careful in placing insurance with one who is a public officer or an employe of a public officer, to be careful that each and every contract will appear to be separate and distinct, for the reason that if they are not so separate and distinct, the defense will be made that the amount of the contract exceeds the sum of fifty ($50.00) dollars, and therefore, as such contract was not let on bids duly advertised as provided by law, the policies are void.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

(Enclosure)

ADDENDUM.

In the foregoing opinion I have not overlooked the case of The State of Ohio ex rel. Edmund G. Vail vs. W. E. Craig, as auditor of Cuyahoga county, and the Board of County Commissioners of Cuyahoga County, found in 8 N. P., 148, the syllabus of which is as follows:

> "The deputy state supervisors of elections are not officers within the legal definition of that term, and, though their jurisdiction may be coterminous with that of the county, they are not county officers, and therefore, Sec. 2866-3, R. S., does not violate Sec. 10 of the constitution."

Without undertaking to decide in this opinion the question whether a member of the board of deputy supervisors of elections is an officer or not, I deem it my duty to advise prosecuting attorneys and city solicitors in questions like the one at hand to assume that he is such officer. Notwithstanding the nisi prius opinion, I incline to the view personally that he is an officer within the contemplation of Section 12911. At any rate there is no reason why the public should take the risk when the validity of an insurance policy covering public property is drawn in question. Public officers in questions of doubt should take no risks and place policies where their validity would be without doubt.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—LIMITATION ON CANDIDATE'S AMOUNT OF EXPENDITURES AND POWER TO HIRE REPRESENTATIVE TO WORK AT POLLS APPLIES TO BOTH PRIMARY AND GENERAL ELECTIONS.

The maximum sum named in the corrupt practice act, which is permitted to be expended by a candidate, includes expenditures made at both primary and general elections.

Each candidate may designate one representative to work in each voting precinct upon each primary election day as well as on each general election day.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1912.

HON. GEORGE D. KLEIN, Prosecuting Attorney, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 1st wherein you request my opinion upon the following questions, with regard to the corrupt practice act:

> 1. Is the $300.00 the maximum sum, as in our county, permitted in the primary elections, and also in the general elections, or is it the maximum for both elections?

2. Is each candidate permitted to hire one representative to work at the polls on primary election day?

Answering your first question, I beg to state that in an opinion under date of February 8, 1912, to Charles Krichbaum, prosecuting attorney, Canton, Ohio, this department held that the limitation under the provisions of Section 26 of the corrupt practices act (Section 5175-26, General Code) as to the maximum sum to be expended by a candidate included the total amount expended at both the primary and general election. A candidate may expend up to the maximum amount at either election, at his option, but the sum total expended for both the primary and general election must not exceed the maximum amount fixed by the act.

2. A reference to paragraph two of the act spoken of (Section 5175-2, General Code) discloses that it is expressly provided, amongst other things, that each candidate voted for at "any election or primary election" must file an itemized statement, as therein required; likewise, paragraph twenty-six of the act (Section 5175-26, General Code) provides the permissible purposes for which expenditures may be made "in connection with or respect of any election;" and further provides that each candidate may designate one representative "in each voting precinct upon each election day."

From the foregoing it is my opinion that both primary election day and general election day were contemplated.

Then, too, Section 4967, General Code, provides that all the statutory provisions relating to general elections, including the requirement that part of such election day shall be a legal holiday, shall, so far as applicable, apply to and govern primary elections.

It is my holding, therefore, that each candidate may designate one representative to work in each voting precinct upon each primary election day as well as on each general election day.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

ASSESSOR—ELECTION, APPOINTMENT, AND APPROVAL OF BOND—MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS AND TOWNSHIPS—VACANCIES—DIVISION OF PRECINCTS—DUTIES OF AUDITOR, TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Assessors are not municipal officers and their compensation can in no event be fixed, nor can they be appointed to fill vacancies by the mayor or any officer of a municipality.

When such village is divided into three precincts, if these precincts were created by the board of deputy state supervisors of elections by a subdivision of an original precinct, assessors should be elected from the original precinct unless the said board has declared at the time of the subdivision that an assessor shall be elected for each precinct so subdivided in accordance with Section 4850, General Code.

It is the duty of the auditor to appoint and fix the bond of assessors to fill vacancies which occur only in wards or precincts of municipal corporations having no township organizations as provided in Section 3352, General Code.

If in the township containing a municipal corporation, the commissioners, under Section 3351, General Code, have not constituted the territory outside of said corporation a separate district, but one assessor may be elected for the township.

A township assessor is a township officer and his bond must be approved, except as aforesaid, with regard to the auditor, by the township trustees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1912.

HON. J. B. TEMPLETON, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 25th is received in which you state:

"Clinton township, of Fulton County, Ohio, is a civil township and is composed in part of the village of Wauseon, and which village is located wholly in said township.

"At the last election two assessors were elected, one by the township outside of Wauseon, and one by the electors of the village of Wauseon, the village being divided into three precincts, and all of the voters of the three precincts voted for the one assessor.

"The assessor elected in the village failed to qualify, and the Mayor, with the approval of the council, appointed an assessor for the whole village and approved his bond.

"We desire to ask you:

"(1) Is this appointee entitled to act?

"(2) Was there a vacancy in the office of a single assessor, or was there a vacancy in the office of three assessors, one for each of the precincts in the village?

"(3) Is it the duty of the auditor to appoint to the vacancy or vacancies?

"(4) Who approves the bonds of the appointee or appointees?"

The following sections of the General Code apply:

Section 3349:

"One assessor of personal property for the township shall be elected, biennially, in each township, who shall hold his office for a term of two years commencing on the first day of January next following his election. If the township is divided into two or more election precincts, one such assessor shall be so elected for each precinct in which such election is held."

Section 3350:

"Before entering upon the discharge of his duties such assessor shall give bond, payable to the state, with two or more freehold sureties approved by the trustees, in such sum as they determine, not less than one thousand dollars, and conditioned for the faithful and impartial discharge of his duties. Such bond, with his oath of office endorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the township clerk. If an assessor is appointed by the county auditor the amount of his bond, not less than one thousand dollars, may be fixed and the sureties thereon approved by the auditor, or by the trustees."

Section 3351:

"In municipal corporations, divided into wards, an assessor shall be elected in each ward. In a township composed in part of a municipal corporation, the county commissioners, by order entered on their journal, may constitute the territory outside such municipal corporation one or more assessor districts. In each ward and assessor district an assessor shall be elected, biennially, in accordance with law, and shall take the same oath, give the same bond and perform the same duties as township assessors. Nothing herein shall interfere with the duties devolving upon deputy state supervisors of elections."

Section 3352:

"If a person elected assessor in any ward or precinct of a municipal corporation not having a township organization, fails to give bond and take the oath of office for one week after his election, or in the event of removal from the ward or precinct after his election, the office shall be deemed vacant, or should there be at any time a vacancy in such office from any other cause, the county auditor shall fill such vacancy by appointing an elector of such ward or precinct to the office of assessor."

Section 3261:

"If by reason of non-acceptance, death, or removal of a person chosen to an office in any township, except trustees, at the regular election, or upon the removal of the assessor from the precinct or township for which he was elected or there is a vacancy from any other cause, the trustees shall appoint a person having the qualifications of an elector to fill such vacancy for the unexpired term."

Section 4850:

"Nothing in the preceding. sections shall affect the powers or duties of boards of deputy state supervisors in reference to the division of election precincts within registration cities. The division of any election precinct within registration cities. The division of any election precinct into two or more sub-divisions, as hereinbefore provided, shall not require the election of an assessor in each such sub-division, but in all such election precinct sub-divisions there shall be elected one assessor for each original precinct unless such supervisors at the time of the division shall order that an assessor be elected in each precinct."

There seems to be some misunderstanding as to whether or not an assessor is a township officer, but I find no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that the assessors spoken of in your inquiries are township officers.

The sections of the Code dealing with assessors are found in "Division 2, Civil Townships, Chapter 6, Assessors," and it will be noted that no mention of assessors is found in the sections of the Code designating the executive officers of cities and villages.

In the case of State ex rel, vs. Coeller, 3rd Bulletin, 853, it is held that,

"The duties of an assessor are appropriate to the township as forming a part of the state organzation, and the officer is in that sense an officer of the township."

In the case of Lorillard vs. The town of Monroe, 11 N. Y., 392, the court said:

"It is a convenient arrangement to have the assessors chosen by the electors of the towns within which they are to perform their duties * * * * *. When chosen they are public officers, as truly as the highest official functionaries in the state. Their duties in no respect concern the strictly corporate interests of the towns, such as their common lands and their corporate personal property, or the contracts which as corporations they are permitted to make, nor are their duties limited to their effects on the towns as political bodies. The description and valuation of property for purposes of taxation, which they are required to make, for the basis upon which the state and county taxes are imposed; and although money is raised by the same arrangement to be expended within the towns, the purposes for which it is to be employed are as much public as are those for which the state and county taxes are expended."

So I conclude that assessors are not municipal officers, nor can their compensation be fixed or a vacancy be filled by the officers of a municipality, and since the mayor has attempted to appoint to fill the vacancy, he has exceeded his authority and the appointee is not legally entitled to act.

The answer to your second question depends upon the manner in which the precincts of your township were formed.

Section 3349, above quoted, provides that if the township is divided into two or more election precincts one such assessor shall be elected for each precinct.

In Chase's Statutes, page 1800, it will be found that in the long ago there was but one assessor for the county, and the county constituted the assessor district. Afterwards (39 O. L. 22) the county assessor was abolished and provision was made for one township assessor in each township. Along in 1859 (56 O. L., 188) a statute was enacted authorizing the commissioners to divide the county as well as cities therein into assessor districts not less in number than the number of townships.

An examination of Section 1448 of the Revised Statutes of 1880 shows that there was a provision that,

"One assessor for the township, or if the township is divided into two or more election precincts, then for each precinct in which the election is held."

Said Section 1448 was amended March 31, 1906 (98 O. L., 172), omitting the office of assessor from the list of township officers, and there was no statutory provision for the election of such an officer as township assessor, although there was for the appointment of assessors in case of vacancies for any cause. This omission of any statutory provision requiring the election of an assessor continued from that time until the enactment of the Code. True, Section 2966-15, Revised Statutes, carried into the Code as Section 4850 supra, which is found in 88 O. L., 449, provided as it does now, that, in all election precincts provided by the deputy state supervisors there shall be elected one assessor for each original precinct, unless the supervisors shall order that an assessor shall be elected in each precinct.

While the reference herein is to original election precincts and not to townships as such, and while the section is rather declaratory of the power of the election board to order the election of an assessor in each part of the precinct so divided by said board, or in the absence of such order, that one assessor should be elected, yet in my opinion the section should be so construed as to be read in harmony with Section 3943, General Code, and it is my view of the provision of Section 3943 so read that in each precinct of a township where the precincts are the product of a subdivision made by a board of deputy state supervisors under Section 4850, General Code, that an assessor for each such precinct is only required when so ordered by the board, and that if in a given township there are two or more precincts, the product of a subdivision made by some authority other than by the board of elections, then under Section 3943 an assessor should be elected for each of such precincts. Applying this reasoning to your case, if the three precincts of the village of Wauseon and the one of that portion of the townships outside of the municipality were subdivisions of the township or parts thereof made by some authority other than the board of election, then under Section 3943 at your last election four assessors should have been elected, one for each precinct, and since as you say but one assessor was elected for the municipality and one for the outside territory, it is my view that the one elected for the outside territory was the only legal election and that there resulted a vacancy in each of the three precincts in the municipality. Of course if these three precincts of Wauseon were set off from the rest of the township by the deputy state supervisors of election, said board at the time of the subdivision failing to order the election of an assessor for each of said precincts so divided, and if further the commissioners had not under Section 3351 constituted the outside territory a separate district, then there would be but one assessor for the entire township including the municipality.

Coming now to your third question, it is my opinion that the county auditor has no duty to perform in the matter you speak of. Under the provisions of Section 3352, General Code, it is only in municipalities having no township organization, i. e., where the corporate limits of the municipality coincide with the township limits like Cincinnati, Toledo, Columbus, etc., and in consequence no township officers, as such are elected, and there being no township trustees in such case that the county auditor is, in the event of a vacancy in the office of assessor, authorized to appoint. In the case of any vacancies existing in the office of assessor in the village of Wauseon, it is the duty of your township trustees to fill same.

Answering your fourth question it is my opinion that the township assessor, being a township officer, his bond must be approved by the township trustees as directed by Section 3350. The auditor only approves assessors' bonds when under Section 3352 he makes the appointment of such assessor.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MANDATORY TO DEPOSIT IN BANK MAKING BEST BID—INTEREST OF MEMBERS OF BOARD IN BEST BIDDING BANK NOT CRIMINAL.

Inasmuch as it is mandatory upon the board of education to place the deposits in the bank offering the highest rate of interest for the same, members of the board who are stockholders in, or officers of the bank making the best bid, are not criminally liable for making such bank the depository,

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1912.

HON. JOHN J. WOOLLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Athens, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 16th, you set forth the following state of facts:

> "The board of education of city of A. passed a resolution providing for the letting of their funds to a depository which would pay the highest rate of interest on the daily balance of the funds. Notice of the passage of this resolution was served on all of the banks of the city and request was made of these banks to bid for the funds. This request made by order of the board of education and notice of it was served by the clerk. Of the four banks served with this notice and request, but two put in bids and the highest and best bid was made by The A. National Bank which bid to pay 2.1 per cent. It now develops that L. G. W., the president of the board and C. M. C., the clerk, are both stockholders and Mr. W. is a director of said bank.
> "No question has been raised of any bad faith in the transaction in any way."

You desire opinion upon the above state of facts as to whether there is any criminal liability on the part of Mr. W. or Mr. C. and whether the contract made by the board with the bank is under such circumstances a valid contract.

Section 4757, General Code, provides that no member of the board (of education) shall have directly or indirectly any pecuniary interest in any contract of the board.

Section 12910, General Code, provides as follows:

> "Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or a public institution with which he is connected, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

Section 12932, General Code, provides in part as follows:

"Whoever, being a * * * member of the board of education * * * acts in a matter in which he or she is pecuniarily interested shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than six months, or both."

Section 7604, General Code, as found in 101 O. L. 290, provides:

"The board of education of any school district by resolution shall provide for the deposit of any or all moneys coming into the hands of its treasurer. But no bank shall receive a deposit larger than the amount of its paid in capital stock, and in no event to exceed three hundred thousand dollars."

Section 7605, General Code, as found in 101 O. L. 290, provides in part:

"In school districts containing two or more banks such deposit shall be made in the bank or banks, situated therein, that at competitive bidding offer the highest rate of interest which must be at least two per cent. for the full time funds or any part thereof are on deposit. * * * The treasurer of the school district must see that a greater sum than that contained in the bond is not deposited in such bank or banks * * *."

I am of the opinion that Section 12910, General Code, is not involved in this inquiry for the reason that the prohibition there is against an officer who is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance. I do not consider that the designation of a depositary is in any sense within the provisions of said section. The question then arises as to whether or not the provisions of Section 12932 and 4757, General Code, as above set out are applicable. Prior to the amendment of Section 7604, General Code, as found in 101 O. L. 290, it was discretionary with a board of education as to whether or not it would designate a depository for the school funds, but said amendment made it mandatory upon the board to establish a depositary.

Section 7606, General Code, provides that the board shall determine by resolution provided for in Section 7605 the method by which the bids shall be received and the authority which is to receive them, but as the designation of the depositary is mandatory, and under the provisions of Section 7605, General Code, the deposits shall be made in the bank that at competitive bidding offers the highest rate of interest, it is not left to the board to determine after the bids are in which bank it will accept.

In the language of Woodmansee, J., in the case of Richardson vs. The Board of Trustees of Sycamore Township, 6 N. P. n. s. 505, at top of page 508 the board of education under the depositary act do not enter into a contract with any bank. They simply put the machinery in motion to get the highest bid, and after the bidder enters into a proper bond then the treasurer is the one who deals with the bank so selected as a depositary.

While in a sense the offer of the bank to accept the deposits and pay a certain rate of interest, and the acceptance of the bid thereof could be considered as a contract, yet as it is mandatory upon the board of education to accept the highest bid, and as it is the policy of the depositary law to have as full and extensive competitive bidding as is possible, I do not think that the provisions of either Section 12932 or Section 4757 of the General Code are applicable to the case in question.

I, therefore, hold:

First. That there is no criminal liability on the part of Mr. W. or Mr. C. because of the fact that they were members of the board of education and likewise stockholders in the bank presenting the highest bid for the deposit, and Second. That the awarding of the deposits by the board to the bank, being the highest bidder is a valid contract.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—EXEMPTIONS—INSTITUTION OF PUBLIC CHARITY—LIMA BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB

The business women's club of Lima is an institution of public charity only and the real estate of said club is exempt from taxation. The mere fact that a small fee is exacted for active membership is immaterial.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 1, 1912.

HON. JAMES J. WEADOCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 27th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "The business women's club of Lima, Ohio, is a corporation organized under the laws of this state, not for profit, for the following purpose:
>
> "To promote the spiritual, mental, moral and physical welfare of the women of Lima, Ohio, and to accomplish the above purposes may acquire, own and hold by lease, purchase or gift all necessary real estate and personal property."
> "The club maintains a club house in the city of Lima in which are a gymnasium, rest room, a library, etc., for the use of members of the club. The club is designed for the use and uplift of the working girls of the city of Lima. The full active membership of the club is accorded to any woman over fourteen years of age of good moral character. Such active membership, however, does not accord class privileges which have to do with the educational and physical work of the club. An additional fee, small in amount, is charged for membership with class privileges. There are other memberships which may be obtained by the payment of different small fees.
> "The membership of the club is not restricted further than above noted. The proceeds of the membership fees are used for the maintenance of the club house and in the educational, physical and religious activities thereof.
> "Is the real estate of this club exempt from taxation?"

I need not cite the statute which exempts from taxation property belonging to institutions of public charity only, nor the constitutional provision under authority of which this statute has been enacted. In my opinion the Lima business women's club is "an institution of public charity only" within the meaning of these provisions. The mere fact that a small fee is exacted as a condition precedent to active membership is immaterial in this connection. (Library Association vs. Pelton, 36 O. S., 253.) The declared object and purpose of the organization is certainly a charitable one, and the manner in which that object is being carried out under the by-laws of the club, a copy of which you have furnished me, is entirely consistent with the charitable nature of the object itself.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the real estate belonging to the business women's club of Lima is exempt from taxation.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—PREMIUM AND ACCRUED INTEREST ON BOND ISSUES—SINKING FUND—CHANGE OF PLANS AND SPECIFICATIONS AFTER BIDS RECEIVED — CERTIFICATE OF MONEYS IN TREASURY BY CLERK BEFORE EXPENDITURE BY BOARD.

Inasmuch as the statutes do not prescribe otherwise, when a board of education sells bonds, the premium and accrued interest must, in accordance with the general rule that all accretions follow a trust fund, be credited to the fund for the purpose of which the bonds were sold.

It is the object of the statutes to maintain a fair competition in the letting of bids, and when a board of education has received bids for the construction of a building, alterations may not be made in the plans and specifications, and the bids let, accommodated, by deductions or increases, to the changes made in the plans and specifications.

The board of education may not expend any moneys derived by it from an issue of bonds, unless the clerk shall first certify that the money is in the treasury and not appropriated to any other purpose. Said board may, therefore, not enter into a contract for the construction of a building, the money for which is furnished by additional bonds, before the funds arising from such issue are in the treasury of the district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 9, 1912.

HON. D. W. MURPHY, Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 28th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. When a board of education sells its bonds, what disposition as between the sinking fund and the improvement fund should be made of the premium and accrued interest?

"2. After the board of education has advertised for and received bids for the construction of a building, may changes be made in the plans and specifications and the contract let for the doing of the work under the altered plans and specifications with appropriate deductions or additions or both in the items of the bids submitted?

"3. May a contract be entered into by a board of education for the construction of a building, the money for which is furnished by additional bonds, before the funds arising from such issue are in the treasury of the district?"

In connection with your inquiries, I have given careful consideration to the statement of your opinion thereon as set forth in your letter and to the two opinions of Messrs. Hosea & Knight, attorneys at law, Cincinnati, Ohio, who represent architects interested in the specific case which gives rise to these questions.

You point out, in discussing the first question which you submit, that the municipal code, Section 3932 specifically provides that the premiums and accrued interest arising from an issue of bonds by a municipal corporation must be credited to the sinking fund, and that Sections 7625, etc., General Code, which provide for the sale of bonds by a board of education, contain no such provision. You reason correctly, I think, that such a comparison of similar statutes affords ground for the conclusion that premiums and accrued interest arising from the sale of bonds by a board of education are not to be credited to the sinking fund. Other considerations point to the same conclusion. Thus the provisions relating to the establishment of a sinking fund by a school district and the creation of a board of commissioners of the sinking fund are equally silent as to the disposition of premiums and accrued interest arising from the sale of bonds. Again, it is a general principle that the accretions of a trust fund follow and belong to the fund itself. Upon this principle the premiums and accrued interest arising from the sale of bonds issued by a board of education would, in the absence of statutes to the contrary, follow the principal, of the fund and be subject to the same uses and purposes. But both yourself and the other counsel who have examined this question have overlooked an express provision of statute relating in part at least to this very matter. I refer to Section 2295, which is a general provision governing the sale of bonds by county commissioners, boards of education and commissioners of free turnpikes. It provides in part as follows:

"All moneys from both principal and premiums on the sale of such bonds, shall be credited to the fund on account of which the bonds are issued and sold."

This provision is, of course, decisive of your first question so far as it relates to the disposition of the premium, and strongly supports the conclusion which you have correctly reached as to the disposition of the accrued interest.

Your second question involves primarily a consideration of Section 7623, General Code. That section, which is of great length, prescribes in considerable detail the procedure which shall be followed by a board of education in entering into a contract for the making of any improvement or repair under its supervision. I quote only a portion of it:

"4. Each bid must contain the name of every person interested therein, and shall be accompanied by a sufficient guarantee of some disinterested person, that if the bid be accepted, a contract will be entered into, and the performance of it properly secured.

"5. When both labor and materials are embraced in the work bid for, each must be separately stated in the bid, with the price thereof.

"6. None but the lowest responsible bid shall be accepted. The board in its discretion may reject all the bills, or accept any bid for both labor and material for such improvement or repair, which is the lowest in the aggregate.

"7. Any part of a bid which is lower than the same part of any other bid, shall be accepted, whether the residue of the bid is higher or not; and if it is higher, such residue must be rejected.

"8. The contract must be between the board of education and the bidders. The board shall pay the contract price for the work, when it is completed, in cash, and may pay monthly estimates as the work progresses.

"9. When two or more bids are equal, in the whole, or in any part thereof, and are lower than any others, either may be accepted, but in no case shall the work be divided between such bidders."

None of these sections authorize the acceptance of any bid or part of a bid which is not submitted with respect to the plans and specifications offered to other bidders and subject to competition.

Sections 2362 and 2364, inclusive, General Code, which are applicable only to buildings to be constructed at a cost of less than $10,000, are of interest in this connection, and provide in part as follows:

Section 2362.

"An officer, board or other authority of * * a * * * school * * * district * * * required by law to advertise and receive proposals for furnishing of materials and doing the work necessary for the erection thereof, shall require separate and distinct proposals to be made for furnishing such materials or doing such work or both, in their discretion, for each separate and distinct trade or kind of mechanical labor, employment or business entering into the improvement."

Section 2363.

"When more than one trade or kind of mechanical labor, employment or business is required no contract for the entire job, or for a greater portion thereof than is embraced in one such trade or kind of mechanical labor shall be awarded, unless the separate bids do not cover all the work and materials required of the bids for the whole or for two or more kinds of work or materials are lower than the separate bids therefor in the aggregate."

Section 2364.

"The contract for doing the work belonging to each separate trade or kind of mechanical labor, employment or business or for the furnishing of materials therefor, or both, shall be awarded by such officer, board or other authority in its discretion, to the lowest and best separate bidder therefor, and shall be made directly with him or them in the manner and upon the terms, conditions and limitations as to giving bond with security and otherwise as prescribed by law, unless it is let as a whole, or to bidders for more than one kind of work or materials. * *"

It is scarcely necessary for me to comment upon the obvious purpose of statutes like those above quoted. Competition in bidding is the thing aimed at and the interests of the taxpayers are intended to be safeguarded thereby. In order that competition may be secured, it is necessary, of course, that all who bid upon the entire job or any portion thereof shall base their bids upon the same plans and specifications. Especially would this be true in the case of a lump bid for the entire work. One general contractor may be in a position to do a certain part of the work much more cheaply to himself than any other bidder, and that particular item may be relatively of greater consequence in his bid than in that of one of his competitors. It would not, therefore, be fair to other bidders nor to the tax-paying public of the district to permit a bidder to amend his bid by omitting certain items as other bidders, if invited to bid upon the entire work with these items omitted might have submitted aggregate bids much less than that of the favored bidder.

For these reasons it has been held by courts of nisi prius under these very sections that it is unlawful for a board of education to award a contract for the building of a school house to a bidder who has been permitted to change his bid by the omission of various items. (McAlexander vs. School District, 7 N. P. n. s., 590); and that an item may not be added to the work by a change of plans and specifications for any reason whatever (McGreevey vs. Board of Education, 20 C. C., 114; Mueller vs. Board of Education, 11 N. P. n. s., 113). In the case last cited it is held that the addition of items of the work resulting in what are commonly called "extras" necessitates inviting new bids if the amount of the additional charge exceeds the limitations prescribed in the first part of Section 7623, and at least the making of a separate and distinct contract for such "extras."

With the reasoning of these decisions I heartily agree, and advise you accordingly that in my opinion it is not lawful for a board of education to permit a bidder, though he be the lowest responsible bidder on the entire work, to change his bid in any way after its submission, nor to change the plans and specifications after opening bids so as to eliminate some features of the work or add new ones. In case the plans and specifications are changed so as to eliminate a part of the work, no bid can be accepted, but new bids must be invited; in case of additions to the plans and specifications, the bid which has been made may be accepted, but the additions must be made under separate contract which, if the expense thereof exceeds fifteen hundred dollars in city districts or five hundred dollars in other districts, must be let at competitive bidding.

To say that contracts, such as those with which we are now dealing, are "unlawful," is not, of course, to hold that if no one objects and the work is done and paid for, the money can be recovered from the contractor for the use of the district. The payment of money to a contractor under such circumstances, however, or the letting of a contract in the first instance could, in my opinion, be successfully enjoined by any taxpayer of the district. Competing bidders would probably not have the right to invoke the powers of a court of equity in their behalf.

The thing sought to be done by the board of education, and which I have held to be unlawful, is specifically authorized as to the director of public service of a municipal corporation. This, however, but makes it clear that without such specific provision of law the authority to enter into supplemental contracts because of alterations in the principal contract made subsequent to the letting thereof does not exist. In a case like that which you submit to me, however, a director of public service would have no authority to enter into a contract in the manner which you describe, as I understand you to say that the proposed alterations are to be made before the contract is let for the purpose of bringing the entire contract price within the amount of the funds available for the construction of the building.

Answering your third question, I beg to state that Sections 5660 and 5661, General Code, provide as follows:

Section 5660.

> "The commissioners of a county, the trustees of a township and the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation of expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education, is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

Section 5661.

"All contracts, agreements or obligations, and orders or resolutions entered into or passed contrary to the provisions of the next preceding section, shall be void, but such section shall not apply to the contracts authorized to be made by other provisions of law for the employment of teachers, officers, and other school employes of boards of education."

The above cited case of McAlexander vs. School District affords an instance of a judicial construction of these sections. It is there held that these sections apply to the expenditure of the proceeds of a bond issue made by the board of education as in reason and logic they seem to apply. There is a line of decisions under the corresponding sections of the municipal code to the general effect that the requirement that the certificate that the money is in the treasury and not appropriated for any other purpose be made before the contract is entered into does not apply to contracts not to be discharged out of moneys raised by taxation. These decisions were rendered in cases involving the expenditure of moneys raised by issue of bonds to be met by special assessment, water rentals and the like. In the case now under consideration, however, the bonds which have been issued and sold must be paid out of the proceeds of levies on the general duplicate of the school district. The reasoning in the cases referred to, which for brevity I shall not cite or comment on further, is therefore not applicable here.

I am of the opinion then, that the board of education may not expend any moneys derived by it from an issue of bonds nor enter into any contract involving the expenditure of such money for specific improvements unless the clerk of the district shall first certify that the money is in the treasury of the district and not appropriated for any other purpose.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

INFIRMARY BUILDING—POWERS OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WHEN CONDEMNED BY INSPECTOR OF WORKSHOPS AND FACTORIES—SPECIAL ELECTION FOR ERECTION OF COUNTY BUILDING MAY BE HELD AT PRIMARIES.

When the infirmary directors are required, by reason of an order of the chief inspector of workshops and factories, to discontinue the use of the infirmary building, the county commissioners, under authorization of Sections 2434 and 2419, General Code, may provide by lease of buildings, for the care of inmates pending the repair or rebuilding of the present infirmary building.

The question of the construction of a county building must be submitted at a special election. Such election may, however, be held on the same date as the primaries by observing caution with respect to the different hours for which the polls must be kept open upon each of these elections.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 11, 1912.

HON. B. F. ENOS, Prosecuting Attorney, Cambridge, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 4th, requesting my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. The infirmary directors of Guernsey county have been notified by the chief inspector of workshops and factories to discontinue the use of the infirmary buildings after the first day of May on account of the unsafe and unsanitary condition thereof. Pending the construction of a new infirmary building or of temporary infirmary buildings as provided in Section 2437, General Code, or the making of repairs on the infirmary buildings in order to comply with the order of the inspector of workshops and factories, what arrangement may be made for the care of the inmates of the infirmary and by whom should it be effected?
> "2. May the question as to the policy of building a county building be submitted to the electors at an election held on the day of the partisan primaries and at the same polling places?"

Answering your first question I beg to state that there are certain statutes which provide for the care of the poor in counties in which there is no county infirmary. These sections, which I do not quote, do not, in my opinion, apply here.

Under the circumstances stated by you, Guernsey county would not be a county which does not provide a county infirmary, but merely one in which the infirmary provided is unfit for use, so long as the commissioners of the county intend to replace the existing infirmary building with others which may be used or to improve or repair these existing in such manner as to make them available for use.

Without quoting any of the sections of the chapter of the General Code relating to the powers and duties of the infirmary directors suffice it to say that none of them authorize those officers to take any action whatever looking to providing a place for the infirmary. Their sole duty is to manage and conduct the infirmary when provided for them by the commissioners. In my opinion ample authority is found in Section 2434, as amended in 102 O. L. 55, for the accomplishment of the objects stated in your first question. That section provides in part as follows:

> "* * * for the purpose of erecting or acquiring a building in memory of Ohio soldiers, or for a court house * * * county infirmary * * * or other necessary buildings * * * the commissioners may borrow * * * money * * *."

While there is no direct grant of power here, I am of the opinion that this section, together with the broad authority conferred upon the commissioners under Section 2419, General Code, is sufficient to empower the commissioners to proceed in the manner stated in Section 3424 to obtain the temporary use of any buildings available for the purpose of housing the inmates of the infirmary, pending the rebuilding or repair of the present infirmary. Said Section 2419 provides in part as follows:

> "A court house * * * and an infirmary shall be provided by the commissioners when in their judgment they or any of them are needed * * *."

The power of the commissioners is not limited to the purchase of a building or to the construction thereof, and these statutes ought to be liberally construed so as to provide for emergencies such as that with which the commissioners of Guernsey county are now confronted.

It is my opinion, therefore, that under the circumstances mentioned by you the county commissioners may lawfully provide by lease of any buildings in the county a place for the county infirmary pending the repair or rebuilding of the present infirmary or the construction of a temporary building.

Answering your second question I beg to state that Section 5639-1, General Code, as enacted 102 O. L. 447, provides that the election upon the policy of rebuilding a public county building "shall be held at the regular place for voting in such county, and shall be conducted, canvassed and certified in the same manner, except as otherwise provided by law as for the election of county officers."

It is further provided in said section that the date of said election shall be fixed by the county commissioners and certified to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections. There seems to be no question, therefore, that the election is a special one and not governed by Section 4840, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Unless a statute providing for the submission of a question to the voters of a county, township, city or village provides for the calling of a special election for that purpose, no special election shall be called. The question so to be voted upon shall be submitted at a regular election in such county, township, city or village, and notice that such question is to be voted upon shall be embodied in the proclamation of such election."

I find that my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, rendered an opinion to the effect that a special election upon the subject of issuing bonds for the construction of a school building might lawfully be submitted at the date of the primaries, although many inconveniences of such a proceeding were pointed out by him. In his reasoning I concur in spite of the additional point which you suggest in your letter, and which does not appear to have been considered by Mr. Denman. That point is as follows:

Section 5056 provides in effect that the polls at a general election shall be open from 5:30 in the morning until 6 in the afternoon, while Section 4967 provides that in primary elections the polls shall be open from 5:30 in the morning until 5:30 in the afternoon. Inasmuch as the laws pertaining to the election of county officers apply, insofar as they are appropriate, to the election at which the question of the policy of rebuilding a county building is submitted, the polls at such election must be kept open until six o'clock.

This point furnishes practical difficulty but does not in my opinion impair the power of the county to fix the date for holding the primaries as the date of the special election. It may be obviated by closing the ballot boxes of the primary election at 5:30 and holding the polls open for an additional half hour for the purpose of receiving ballots cast upon the question submitted. If care is exercised the legality of neither election need be impaired by holding both at the same time and in the same polling place with the services of the same election officials.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—STATE AID—FUNDING INDEBTEDNESS—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW INTEREST AND SINKING FUND LEVIES—GROVER HILL SCHOOL DISTRICT.

The financial difficulties of the Grover Hill school district board of education may be assisted by the powers to fund indebtedness and the state aid provisions with reference to the common school fund.

Interest and sinking fund levies for the purpose of providing for bonded indebtedness created prior to the Smith law are not within the five mill limitation of that law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 18, 1912.

HON. W. F. CORBETT, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 4th enclosing a letter addressed to you by the clerk of the board of education of Grover Hill school district. The facts on which my opinion is invited, as disclosed by the letter of the clerk of the board of education, are as follows:

> "The total duplicate of the school district is $542,890.00. The maximum school levy for local purposes prescribed by Section 5649-3*a* being five mills the amount of revenue available for such purpose on this duplicate is $2,714.00. The tuition fund of the district is subject to fixed charges of $265.00 a month and if school is kept open for eight months as required by law the total obligations chargeable against this fund amount to $2,120.00.
> "There is outstanding a bonded indebtedness created by vote of the people under which the district is obliged to pay interest in the amount of $975.00 per annum. There is also outstanding an obligation $500.00, the exact nature of which is not disclosed, but it appears to be a charge upon the contingent fund of the district.
> "The amount of money in the various funds on February 17, 1912, with the school year approximately half over, is as follows: Tuition fund $255.00; contingent fund $80.23; building fund $26.27. $600.00 of the tuition fund has been drawn in advance of the tax settlement.

Query. How can the financial affairs of the district be managed during the present fiscal year?"

I am not informed as to how the total levy of $2,714.00 is for tuition fund, but assuming that three-fourths thereof was for that purpose that being the proportion in which the district is required to levy in order to qualify for state aid, I ascertain by computation that the proceeds of the tuition fund levy at the semi-annual settlement are in excess of one thousand dollars leaving a balance of $400.00 still payable to this fund for the purpose of operating the schools until the first of March; and a like amount of $1,000.00 approximately would be available at the August settlement for the purpose of operating the schools during the latter half of the present school year. I realize that it is inconvenient that the proceeds of taxation are not paid over until that portion of the year for which they are intended has elapsed. That results, however, from the fact that the school commences on September 1st, while the first tax collection for that year does not take place until the following December. The only way to correct this difficulty would be to amend the law which establishes the school year so as to permit funds to be levied and appropriated under the Smith law for and as of the year beginning March 1st. As it is, however, the districts will have to do like Grover Hill has done, viz., collect advancements from the undivided tax fund in order to continue to operate; yet it must always be recognized that at the end of the fiscal year enough money will have been produced by taxation to meet every charge in this fund.

I suspect, however, that I have been unwarranted in supposing that three-fourths of the total levy was made for tuition fund purposes. The needs of the district for this fund are not sufficiently great to require such a levy. The above figures do not take into account the proceeds of the distribution of the state common school fund, and I am not advised as to the amount which this district will receive from that distribution, but would suppose it to be sufficient to enable the board to levy less than three-fourths of the maximum for tuition fund purposes. This would be the case if the amount received from the state considerably exceeded $120.00.

In discussing the tuition fund I am at a disadvantage and my advice to you is really of not much value because I have not sufficient facts upon which to base a conclusion. In order to advise you fully I should have to know how much of the total levy of $2,714.00 was for tuition fund purposes.

As to the payment of the interest on the bonds I beg to advise that the supreme court in State ex rel. vs. Sanzenbacher, 84 O. S. (unreported) had before it the exact question here presented. It was decided in that case that interest and sinking fund levies for the purpose of providing for bonded indebtedness created prior to the passage of the Smith law are not within the internal limitation of five mills prescribed by Section 5649-3a although such levies are within the limitation measured by the 1910 tax and that of fifteen mills prescribed by Section 5649-5*d* of the Smith law. These limitations, however, are applicable to all taxing authorities levying within the sale territory, so that the burden thereof, so to speak, must be shared by the village, the township and the county as well as borne by the school district itself. However, the total levy of five mills need not include such interest and sinking fund levies and the $975.00 may in future years be taken care of outside of the five mill levy if needs of the other taxing districts permit.

So far as the current year is concerned if the school district is unable to meet its interest charges as they become due because of the action of the budget commission then, in my opinion, the board of education has ample power under Section 5656,

General Code, to fund such indebtedness by the issuance of funding bonds or by the issuance of mere certificates of indebtedness so as to distribute the burden thereof over a greater number of years and make the limitation of the Smith law less onerous in a single year.

The foregoing procedure might also be adopted as to the $500.00 of indebtedness against the contingent fund spoken of in the clerk's letter. That is to say, while this indebtedness must be discharged out of the five mill levy and is not exempt therefrom like the interest levy above referred to unless created prior to June 2, 1911, yet if it was properly created and constitutes a valid indebtedness of the district it may be funded under Section 5656 above cited. However, I suspect that this indebtedness of $500.00 may not be a proper charge, as I do not understand that the board of education has power to incur indebtedness of a contractual nature under Section 5660, General Code, unless there is money in the treasury to pay the same when due. If the indebtedness is not a proper one and does not constitute a valid outstanding obligation of the district then it cannot be funded under Section 5656, and if the board of education in good morals desires to discharge such indebtedness it must do so out of its current revenues.

The figures given by the clerk as above set forth do not mean anything to me for the reason that he writes before the semi-annual settlement. In order to be able to intelligently appreciate the exact situation of this district it would be necessary for me to have before me the amount of money in the several funds on March 1st, the amount of obligations outstanding at that time and the nature of each such obligation. Upon such information as I have, however, I am unable to see that Crover Hill school district is in great financial difficulty, taking into account the fact that the distribution of the state common school fund ought to increase the tuition fund, and the further fact that if the levy for that fund is as large as I suppose it to be it ought itself meet practically all of the obligations against it for the current year, although such obligations will accrue before the money to meet them is available. Furthermore, permit me to call attention to the fact that if the levy of this school district has been properly made, the district is qualified for state aid in case there is a deficiency in the tuition fund; also to the fact that the salaries of teachers and other employes of boards of education are not subject to the limitations of Section 5660, General Code, and accordingly, even if the money is not available in a given year to pay the salaries of teachers and other employes such salaries constitute the valid, legal indebtedness of the district which may be funded under Section 5656 and distributed over a period of time sufficiently great to permit these obligations being taken up without seriously depleting the current revenue in any given year.

As I have heretofore remarked in this opinion, I am unable to reach any specific conclusion for the reason that I have not sufficient facts before me, but rather than to delay matters by writing for further facts, however, I have made the foregoing suggestions in the hope that by the use of them you may be able to advise the district fully in the matter.

Yours very truly,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SMITH ONE PER CENT. LAW—TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL—THREE MILL LIMITATIONS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS LIMITED TO ISSUE IN ANTICIPATION OF SINGLE LEVY.

Inasmuch as the purchase or construction of a tuberculosis hospital is excepted from the provisions requiring a vote of electors, levies made under Section 3141, General Code, for the purpose of discharging an indebtedness, created after June 1, 1911, for the purpose of such a hospital, are within the three mill limitation of the Smith Law.

The commissioners are limited to such an issue under Section 3141, General Code, as may be made in anticipation of a single levy.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 1, 1912.

HON. HORACE L. SMALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 9th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Would a levy made by the county commissioners to pay the interest and principal of bonds issued for the purpose of constructing a county tuberculosis hospital be subject to the limitation of three mills prescribed by Section 5649-3*a*, General Code, a part of the so-called 'Smith One Per Cent. Tax Law?"

The limitations of Section 5649-3a, as construed by the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. vs. Senzenbacher, unreported, are exclusive of the same sinking fund levies as are, by Section 5649-2 and Section 5649-3 of the same act, excluded from the operation of the ten mill limitation and that measured by the amount of taxes raised in the taxing district in the year 1910. Such excepted levies, in so far as you are interested therein, are those for interest and sinking fund purposes made necessary by indebtedness created prior to the passage of the act, or thereafter, by a vote of the people.

By Section 3140, the policy of building a county tuberculosis hospital need not be submitted to the electors for approval regardless of the cost of the building. This constitutes an exception to the rule applicable to the construction of other county buildings, and the acquisition of sites therefor.

By Section 3141 of the General Code, the county commissioners are given authority to issue bonds in anticipation of a single levy of taxes. I might here remark that this authority is to be distinguished from that to borrow money generally, and to provide for the payment of the same by creating a sinking fund, etc. I have heretofore held, in an opinion to the prosecuting attorney of Montgomery county, that all that may be anticipated under Section 3141 is a single levy. Even if this view be not correct, however, the authority to issue bonds under Section 3141, General Code, is not one which is dependent upon the vote of the electors.

I think that it is very clear, therefore, that levies under Section 3141, General Code, for the purpose of discharging indebtedness created after June 2, 1911, by the purchase or construction of a tuberculosis hospital must be made within the three-mill limitation of Section 5649-3a. I feel called upon to advise you in addition that the commissioners have no authority to issue bonds and to provide a sinking fund for the retirement thereof under Section 3141, but are limited to such an issue as may be made in anticipation of a single levy.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

INTEREST OF PUBLIC OFFICIAL IN PUBLIC EXPENDITURES—PUBLIC SAFETY DIRECTOR AS MEMBER OF FIRM OF ATTORNEYS RETAINED BY PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS IN CITY.

There is no statutory prohibition and no legal objection against permitting an attorney who is retained by large railroad and other corporations of the city to hold the office of safety director of that city, so long as said official, or the firm of attorneys to which he belongs, is not actively engaged in prosecuting or defending a claim in behalf of said corporations against the city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 2, 1912.

HON. EMETT C. SAYLES, Prosecuting Attorney, Fremont, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 25th, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "The safety director in the city of _____ is a member of a firm of attorneys who represent one railroad passing through that city, one large corporation known as The _____ Company, which has vast manufacturing interests in that city, and which firm also represents, as attorneys at law, The _____ Railroad Company.
> "Certain tax payers desire me to inquire of you whether or not the safety director of said city is eligible to hold that office while representing the interests herein named."

I know of no provision of statute or principal of common law which would prevent the person to whom your letter refers from holding the position of director of public safety while retaining his connection with the public service and other corporations described by you. It is unlawful for an officer of the city to have any interest, direct or indirect, in the expenditure of any city money or in any of the contracts of the city; to this effect several statutes might be cited, all of which are based upon well established common law principles; none of them are applicable here, however, because the mere permanent retaining of a firm of attorneys does not vest the firm, or any of its members, with any pecuniary or other interest, either direct or indirect, in the affairs of its client, at least within the meaning of such statute. Of course, it would not be proper or legal for the person in question to continue his membership in the firm if the firm should actively represent one of its clients in prosecuting a claim against the city, or resisting one prosecuted against it by the city. This is not by virtue of any statute but because of the common law principles above referred to. However, I do not understand from your letter that any such matters, are pending at the present time, in which the firm in question has been retained as active counsel.

I am unable to refer you to any authorities in support of the conclusion I have reached but desire to point out that no text writer on the subject of public or municipal officers regards such facts as you have set forth as a disqualification for office; nor is there any reported decision, of which I am aware, to such an effect. In the absence of statute, therefore, and, as already pointed out, none of the statutes of this state are applicable, there is nothing to prevent a member of a firm of attorneys which represents large corporate interests in a city from serving as the director of public safety of that city.

The foregoing, you will understand, is my legal opinion and is not intended as an expression of my views as to the propriety of a lawyer undertaking to serve the city under circumstances like those detailed by you.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BLIND COMMISSION—ALLOWANCE OF SUPPLIES BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MANDAMUS.

Claims in behalf of the blind commission for office furniture and filing cases, cannot be paid from county funds except upon the allowance of the county commissioners.

Should the commissioners refuse to make any allowance at all, however, they may be compelled to exercise a fair discretion in the authorization of such expenditures.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 29, 1912.

HON. HARRY P. BLACK, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 16th, submitting for my opinion thereon the following question:

> "Is the blind commission entitled to be supplied by the county commissioners with office furniture and filing cases?"

The only section of the General Code under authority of which the commissioners furnish the supplies for county offices is Section 2419, General Code, which provides in part as follows:

> "A court house, jail, offices for county officers, and an infirmary, shall be provided by the commissioners when, in their judgment, they, any of them, are needed. * * *"

Furniture is indirectly referred to in Section 2415, General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The board may authorize the county auditor to contract for the making of such repairs or improvements on the public buildings, public grounds, or furniture, as it deems proper, but in no instance at an expense exceeding fifty dollars."

As a matter of fact the county commissioners are the board of general powers. and in a sense are the county itself. For this reason statutes have been liberally construed and it has been the uniform, and, I think, proper ruling that county commissioners are authorized to furnish county officers with all things necessary for the performance of their duties, on the theory that such furnishings are claims against the county. (State ex rel. vs. McConnell, 28 O. S. 589.)

Section 2460, General Code, which prescribes the manner of payment of claims against the county, is as follows:

> "No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim. * * *"

It is my opinion that the consent of the county commissioners is necessary in order to authorize the creation of a claim against the county, and if a county officer should undertake to incur such an indebtedness it would be his own personal obligation unless the commissioners should allow it. This would be true of any county officer, including the auditor and the treasurer, as well as of the blind commission.

It follows, therefore, that the blind commission may not require the county commissioners to furnish any specific supplies or furniture to it, although, in my judgment, it might, in case the commissioners would refuse to act at all upon a claim for furniture bought by it, or to authorize the purchase of such furniture, by mandamus compel the commissioners fairly to exercise their discretion in the matter.

I do not understand that the blind commission is on a different footing from the regular officers of the county in this respect. To be sure, there is some doubt as to whether the members of this commission are county officers; if they are county officers, then, the law under which they are operating is unconstitutional because it does not provide for their election by the people. If they are not county officers, however, they are, nevertheless, such agents of the county for the accomplishment of a county purpose, as to entitle them to the same degree of support from the commissioners as the officers of the county are entitled to, subject always to the judgment of the commissioners themselves.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

POLICE OFFICER—REIMBURSEMENT BY CITY FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES AND OTHER EXPENSES IN DEFENSE OF FALSE IMPRISONMENT SUIT—DEFENSE BY CITY SOLICITOR.

Inasmuch as the ordinance has not been passed by council accompanied by a certification of the clerk to the effect that moneys were in the treasury, there rests no express obligation upon the council to reimburse a police officer for expenses incurred including attorney's fees in the defense of a suit for false imprisonment brought by reason of an arrest properly made in his official capacity.

As the city itself is not involved in the litigation, there is no implied obligation to reimburse said officer, and, furthermore, when the city solicitor himself defends such suits, it would be inconsistent to further allow him compensation from said officer in addition to his salary, and nevertheless make a reimbursement from the city treasury to said police officer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 13, 1912.

HON. D. W. MURPHY, Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The delay in answering your request, relative to the legality of the village of Milford meeting the expenses incident to the defending of damage suits filed against one George Randall, a policeman of that village, was due to the fact that the letter containing your original request indicated that our views on the subject coincided, and that the conclusion to which we had come was the only one possible under the circumstances.

However, that you may be able to place the matter properly before the village council, I still explain in detail the reasons for my conclusion.

The question presented is:

> "Can a village council, in the state of Ohio, indemnify a police officer for expenses, including attorney fees, incurred by such officer in defending a damage suit for false imprisonment; such suit arising out of an arrest made by such officer in his official capacity, under the direction of the mayor of the municipality?"

If the village is to indemnify an officer under the above circumstances, then, this duty so to indemnify must depend upon some obligation of the village, either express or implied.

There is not, under the facts stated, and in law could not be, any express obligation.

Section 4224 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "The action of council shall be by ordinance or resolution, and on the passage of such ordinance or resolution the vote shall be taken by 'yeas' and 'nays' and entered upon the journal, but this shall not apply to the ordering of an election, or direction by council to any board or officer to furnish council with information as to the affairs of any department or office. No by-law, ordinance or resolution of a general or permanent nature, or granting a franchise, or creating a right, or involving the expenditure of money, or the levying of a tax, or for the purchase, lease, sale, or transfer of property, shall be passed, unless it has been fully and distinctly read on three different days, and with respect to any such by-law, ordinance or resolution, there shall be no authority to dispense with this rule, except by a three-fourths vote of all members elected thereto, taken by yeas and nays, on each by-law, resolution or ordinance and entered on the journal. No ordinance shall be passed by council without the concurrence of a majority of all members elected thereto."

Section 3806, General Code, provides:

> "No contract, agreement or other obligation involving the expenditure of money shall be entered into, nor shall any ordinance, resolution or order for the expenditure of money, be passed by the council or by any board or officer of a municipal corporation, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, first certifies to council that the money required for such contract, agreement or other obligation, or to pay such appropriation or expenditure, is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, and not appropriated for any other purpose, which certificate shall be filed and immediately recorded. The sum so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the corporation is discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or so long as the ordinance, resolution or order is in force."

Under these sections the village council could only have acted, in providing for the assuming of the expenses of these damage suits, by an ordinance or resolution, which was not done; and further, provision could have been made for the meeting of the expenses only when the clerk had certified to the council that the money required to meet such contract, agreement or obligation, was in the treasury and unappropriated.

The question then arises as to an implied obligation, and in this connection I may state that there is no such obligation, either in law or by statute.

First, there is no obligation in law. While some of the decisions would seem to indicate that an implied obligation to indemnify a village police officer might arise in a case of this kind, an examination of these decisions will disclose the fact that almost invariably the cases in which such indemnity was made are cases in which the municipality itself would have been subject to suit.

> "Where, however, the disbursement was made (to wit: expenses incurred by an officer of a municipal corporation) in the rendition of a service in which the officer or individual alone is directly and beneficially interested, and which cannot be considered as a duty resting upon the corporation to perform, the right or power of reimbursement does not exist, for this would be equivalent to the appropriation or use of public money for private purposes."
> Abbott Municipal Corporations, Volume 2, Section 697, page 1652.

> "Where a municipal corporation has no interest in the event of a suit, or in the question involved in the case, and the judgment therein can in no way affect the corporate rights or corporate property, it cannot assume the defense of the suit, or appropriate its money to pay the judgment therein; and warrants or orders for the payment of money, based upon such a consideration are void.
> Dillon on Municipal Corporations, fifth edition, Vol. 1, Section 307, and cases cited in note.

> "The general doctrine of the law, touching personal liability for torts, applies to a policeman, and the municipality may not indemnify him of fines derived from violations of an ordinance, for damages recovered against him for enforcing it."
> 28 Cyc., page 102, Section 3.

There is no obligation by statute; on the contrary, there is, by implication, an express inhibition by statute against the reimbursing of a village officer for expenses incurred in a suit of this kind.

Section 4220 of the General Code provides:

> "When it deems it necessary, the village council may provide legal counsel for the village, or any department or official thereof, for a period not to exceed two years, and provide compensation therefor."

This section provides for the employment of a village solicitor in any case in which the necessity arises for the services of an attorney in any department of the village.

Under Section 3809 the requisites of Section 3806, as to the filing of the certificate of the village clerk as to the necessary money being in the treasury to meet any obligation or contract, incurred by the village, are expressly made not to apply to the contract made or obligation assumed by the village in providing for such village solicitor; but as to any other attorney Section 3806 applies. State ex rel. vs. Noble, 9 N. P. n. s., 618; Eaton vs. Hyde Park, 6 O. N. P., 257.

"If the scheme of municipal government provides a corporation counsel or city attorney or other legal officer for the municipality, whose duty it is to appear on behalf of the municipality in all suits by or against the corporation, and to conduct all the law business of the corporation, the municipality is deprived of its power to employ another attorney to take the place of and perform the duties which naturally belong to its law officer."

Dillon on Municipal Corporations, fifth edition, volume 2, page 1244.

Summarizing, I may state that there is no question of any express assuming of the expense of defending the damage suits against the police officer in this case, and there could be none implied; first, because the village was in no way involved; second, because, from your letter, it is apparent that there was no necessity for the employment of private counsel, for the reason that you yourself appeared as village solicitor in defending these damage suits, and third, because a village solicitor had been provided by the village council for the purpose of conducting whatever litigation might arise, involving the village itself, or any of its departments.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—BOXWELL GRADUATES—LIABILITY OF RESIDENCE BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR TUITION OF PUPILS ATTENDING HIGH SCHOOLS IN ADJOINING TOWNSHIP—NECESSITY FOR WRITTEN NOTICE TO BOARD.

When Boxwell graduates, resident in a special school district which has no high school, attend a high school in an adjoining township, the board of education of the district in which said pupils reside is not liable for the tuition of said pupils to the board of education maintaining the high school, unless the former board received five days' notice from said pupils of their intention to attend said high school as provided in Section 7750, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1912.

HON. JOSEPH C. RILEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 25th, you submit the following facts:

"Two pupils graduated under the Boxwell law in Rome township, Lawrence county, Ohio, prior to the beginning of the school year of 1910 and 1911, and their parents moved with said pupils to Delta special school district in the fall of 1910, which school district has no high school. Said Boxwell graduates attended a high school having a course of two years in the village of Coal Grove, Ohio, in an adjoining township for six months in 1910-1911 school year and have been and are now still attending said village high school. The clerk of the board of the Coal Grove high school has presented a bill to the board of education of the Delta special school district for six months tuition for 1910-1911, and for eight months 1911-1912.

"The board of education of Delta special school district have no high school or contract with any high school for tuition of Boxwell graduates. Said Boxwell graduates gave no notice in writing or otherwise to the board of education of Delta special school district of their intention to attend the Coal Grove high school as required by Section 7750 of the General Code of Ohio. The question of residence of the Boxwell graduates is in Delta special school district without question."

You then ask:

"Can the Coal Grove board of education compel the Delta board of education to pay the tuition for the two Boxwell graduates attending the Coal Grove village high school?"

Section 7747 of the General Code provides:

"The tuition of pupils holding diplomas and residing in township or special districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the mouth. An attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month; but a board of education maintaining a high school shall not charge more tuition than it charges for other non-resident pupils."

Section 7750 of the General Code provides:

"A board of education not having a high school may enter into an agreement with one or more boards of education maintaining such school for the schooling of all its high school pupils. When such agreement is made the board making it shall be exempt from the payment of tuition at other high schools of pupils living within three miles of of the school designated in the agreement, if the school or schools selected by the board are located in the same civil township, as that of the board making it, or some adjoining township. In case no such agreement is entered into, the school to be attended can be selected by the pupil holding a diploma, if due notice in writing is given to the clerk of the board of education of the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin, such notice to be filed not less than five days previous to the beginning of attendance."

You state in your inquiry that the board of education of Delta special school district has no high school, nor has it contracted with any board of education for the schooling of its Boxwell graduates. You further state that the legal school residence of the two pupils in question is in the Delta special school district.

Under the provisions of Section 7747, General Code, supra, said school district is charged with the payment of the tuition of its Boxwell-Patterson graduates.

Section 7750, General Code, supra, however, provides that if the board of education not having a high school does not provide a high school for its Boxwell-Patterson graduates a school which said graduates may attend can be selected by the pupils holding diplomas provided due notice in writing is given to the clerk of the board of the name of the school to be attended and the date the attendance is to begin, such notice to be filed not less than five days previous to the beginning of the attendance.

As the pupils in the case in question failed to give due notice in writing of the school they would attend as provided in Section 7750, General Code, I am of the opinion that the board of education of such special school district is not required to pay the tuition of such pupils, it being a condition precedent to a liability being fixed on the board for their tuition that such due notice be given in accordance with said Section 7750, General Code.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—PERSON FILING NO NOMINATION PAPERS WHOSE NAME IS FILLED IN AT PRIMARY IS A "CANDIDATE" AND MUST FILE STATEMENT AS CONDITION PRECEDENT TO RECEIVING CERTIFICATE OF ELECTION.

When, in a primary, petitions for nominations to certain county offices are not filed and the voters are permitted to fill in the name of their candidate on a blank ballot, the parties whose names are thus filled in are candidates within the intention of the corrupt practice act and as such, they are required to file statements, under Section 5175-2, General Code, whether they have made expenditures with respect to the election or not.

Unless such statements are filed, a certificate of election may not be issued to such a candidate if elected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 23, 1912.

HON. J. B. TEMPLETON, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of April 4th, you state, in substance, that it has been the practice in your country, for many years, for the minority party not to file petitions of nomination for candidates for several county offices, permitting the voters of such party to make selection of their candidate by writing in the name of some person for the place. You term the person so voted for "an involuntary candidate" and ask, first whether such person, who does not file a petition for nomination but is voted for by the electors of any party, is compelled to file a statement of expenditures, whether he has expended anything or not; and, second, you state that the board of elections desires to know whether, if such person so voted for receives the nomination of his party for the office must file his expense account before his name may be printed upon the ballot.

By the "ballot" I take it you mean the official ballot at the next general election.

Section 5175-2, General Code, provides:

> "Every candidate who is voted for at any election or primary election, held within this state, and every person * * * who may have * * * expended * * * any money or thing of value in connection with such election, shall within ten days after such election file, etc."

The Century dictionary defines "candidate" as,

> "A person who seeks or is put forward by others for an office or honor."

Webster defines "candidate" as,

> "One who seeks or aspires to some office or privilege or who offers himself for the same, or one who is selected or thought of for an office or for preferment by those who have power to elect or appoint."

If the person is a candidate, it makes no difference whether his name is printed on the ballot or not—he aspires to or seeks or is put forward for the office. It matters not whether he actively engages in a campaign on his own behalf or has others do the work incident thereto, or whether he acquiesces in the labors of his friends on his behalf; being a candidate voted for, he would come within the provisions of Section 2 of the corrupt practices act, and if he made an expenditure there would be no question but that he would have to file an itemized statement, as required by law. And too, if he were a candidate, as above defined, and did not contribute, promise or expend anything in connection with the election, I am still inclined to the belief that he would be compelled to file a statement showing that fact.

This is apparent from a proper reading of Section 2 of the corrupt practices act, keeping in mind the purposes for which the act was enacted. "Every candidate who is voted for at any election" is brought within the purview of the statute; and while, if Section 2 were read by itself, it might be contended that only such candidates as had incurred expense were meant, read in connection with other sections, I have concluded that all candidates must file a statement, showing either their itemized expenditures or the fact that they had spent nothing.

Section 5175-8 provides that a certificate of election shall not issue until "any person required by this act to file a statement" has done so. The election board would be without anything at all upon which to base a judgment as to whether a required statement had been filed, unless all of the candidates who were entitled to certificate should file statements showing either that they had spent nothing or an itemized statement of such amounts as they had expended.

If the legislature had intended that all candidates not expending anything should be excused from filing a statement it could have very easily and plainly have said so. As I interpret the corrupt practices act, the candidate is called upon for some affirmative act, and if he has spent nothing he must so certify, providing he comes within the definition of a candidate as hereinbefore set forth.

Section 22 of the corrupt practices act reads as follows:

> "Failure to file a statement or filing a materially false or incomplete statement shall be prima facie evidence of wilfull intent to defeat the statute."

While it is true that this is merely a rule of evidence it is indicative of the extreme desire, on the part of the legislature, to provide in every manner against the evils that were sought to be remedied. The corrupt practices act should receive a liberal construction, to the end that it may accomplish the purpose for which it was enacted. The candidate who spends nothing for his election certainly should not hesitate to file a statement to that effect; I do not believe that he will be the one to make complaint; the slight inconvenience of preparing and filing a statement will prove a trivial mater, while his contribution to good citizenship, in complying with the spirit of the law, will be ample recompense.

It should be borne in mind also that even if the person voted for did not come within the definition of a candidate, still, if he should contribute, expend or promise anything of value in connection with the election he would have to file an itemized expense account under Section 5175-2, as "any person" so expending, etc., is included therein, as well as a candidate.

Answering your second question, Section 5175-8 provides that,

> "No board, officer or officers authorized by law to issue commissions or certificates of election shall issue a commission or certificate of election to any person required by this act to file a statement or statements until such statement or statements have been so made, verified and filed by such persons as provided by this act. * * *"

It is readily apparent that the board cannot take into consideration the fact as to whether or not one has filed an expense account, in determining what name shall be printed upon the official ballot. This section does not go so far, nor do I know of any provision of law that does. It is only when that time comes when the board is called upon to issue a commission or certificate of election, either after the primary or the general election, that they are called upon to determine whether the law has been complied with by the filing of an expense account.

Trusting that this fully answers your inquiries, I am

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

PUBLICATIONS "WEEKLY"—SEMI-WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

When the law requires publications to be made "weekly" it is not necessary that said publication be made on the same day of each week. It is sufficient that said publication be made on any day within the period from Sunday to Saturday, which period constitutes the ordinary meaning of the term "week" as intended by these statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 22, 1912.

HON. JAMES F. BELL, Prosecuting Attorney, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 7th you stated that in your county you have newspapers published semi-weekly; that is to say, on Tuesday and Friday of each week. You wish to know whether advertisement in such semi-weekly newspaper should be published each time on the same day of the week in instances where the law requires legal advertisements to be published "weekly" for a certain time as in Sections 2294 and 2353 of the General Code.

Section 2294, General Code, provides that all bonds issued by the board of county commissioners * * * shall be sold to the highest bidder after being advertised three times, weekly, in a newspaper having general circulation in the county where the bonds are issued.

Section 2353, General Code, in relation to the giving of the notice of the time and place where sealed proposals will be received for performing labor and furnishing material in the erection of buildings, bridges, etc., by the county commissioners provides that "the notice shall be published weekly for four consecutive weeks."

The question to be determined is as to the meaning of the term "week."

Judge McLean in the case of Ronkendorff vs. Taylor's Lessee 4, Peters 345, at page 361 says:

> "The words of the law are 'once a week.' Does this limit the publication to a particular day of the week? If the notice be published on Monday, is it fatal to omit the publication until the Tuesday week succeeding? The object of the notice is as well answered by such a publication as if it had been made on the following Monday.
> "A week is a definite period of time, commencing on Sunday and ending on Saturday. By this construction the notice in this case must be held sufficient. It was published Monday, January the 6th, and omitted until Saturday, January the 18th, leaving an interval of eleven days; still the publication on Saturday was within the week succeeding the notice of the sixth.
>
> "It would be a most rigid construction of the act of congress, justified neither by its spirit nor its language, to say that this notice must be published on any particular day of the week. If published once a week for three months, the law is complied with and its object effectuated."

In the case of Steinle vs. Bell, 12, Abbott's Practice (N. Y. n. s.) 171, part of the syllabus is as follows:

> "A week is a definite period of time, commencing on Sunday and ending on Saturday; and under the rule requiring service by publication to be made, by publication 'not less than once a week for six weeks,' the notice need not be published on the same day in each week, but may be on any day in each week during the six weeks. Seven days' interval between publications is not essential"

In the case of Currens vs. Blocher, appellant, 21 Pennsylvania superior court 30, the first paragraph of the syllabus is as follows:

> "Under the provisions of the 63d section of the act of June 16, 1836, P. L. 772, as amended by the act of July 2, 1895, P. L. 420, requiring that notice of a sheriff's sale of real estate shall be given by advertisement in two newspapers, 'once a week during three successive weeks previous to the sale,' a 'week' is a common calendar week extending from Sunday to Saturday, inclusive, and is not a mere period of seven days regardless of the day of beginning."

See Medland vs. Linton, 60 Neb., 249.
Bentley vs. Shingler, 111 Ga., 780.

While the exact question has not been passed upon in the state of Ohio, yet from the rulings made by the supreme court it would appear that such court followed the definition of "week" as laid down in 4 Peters supra.

The court in the case of Wilson et ux vs. Scott et al., 29 O. S. 636 on page 641, referring to legal advertisement of time and place of sale on execution, states the following:

"Although weekly newspapers are usually published on the same day of the week, there is no law requiring that it must be so. Hence, where the advertisement is made in a weekly paper, it is not essential that it appears in numbers published on the same day of each week. It is sufficient if it be published in each number for five consecutive weeks, provided the first number be published for at least thirty days before the day of sale."

In the case of Lemert vs. Clarke, 1 O. C. C., 569, the second syllabus is as follows:

"Where an advertisement of a judicial sale is published in a semi-weekly newspaper, it is not necessary that each insertion should be on the same day of the week."

On page 571 the court says:

"There seems to be nothing in Section 5393, or in any other which we can find, requiring the advertisement to be made on the same day of the week in the semi-weekly edition of any paper; but without deciding, for it is not necessary to do so in this case, we might say that probably such a publication would fall within the rule laid down in Hagerman vs. Loan Association, 25 O. S. 186, and Wilson vs. Scott, 29 O. S. 636, if the first publication was 30 days prior to the sale, it would be sufficient."

By reason of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that the local advertisement provided for in Sections 2294 and 2353 of the General Code supra, is not required to appear each time on the same day of the week, and in the question submitted by you it is sufficient if the advertisement is published in the newspaper in question alternately on Tuesday of some weeks and Friday of the other weeks.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—NO LIMITATION TO AMOUNT OF EXPENDITURES OF A FRIEND OF A CANDIDATE—LIMITED NUMBER OF REPRESENTATIVES IN VOTING PRECINCTS.

Provided he spends only for the purposes specified in Section 5175-26, General Code, there is no limit to the amount which may be expended by a friend of a candidate.

As purposes enumerated in the corrupt practice act for which expenditures may be made are exclusive, a friend of a candidate may not employ and pay for more representatives at the voting precincts than are permitted in Section 5175-26, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 24, 1912.

HON. LEWIS P. METZGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Salem, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of April 19th, you submit for an opinion the following question:

"First—Is there any limit to the amount that can be expended by a friend of a candidate provided he expends the same for the purposes in Sections 5175-26, Section 26?

"Second—Would it be permissible for a friend of a candidate to employ and pay for one or more persons either in the voting precinct or outside of the precincts to look after the interests of a candidate without violating the corrupt practice act?"

The corrupt practice act was primarily intended to render the conduct of elections purer and less corrupt. The persons most interested in the election, to wit, the candidates were often the fountain-heads of the corruption owing to the lavish and widespread use of money to secure their election. The act pays most attention to and provides against certain acts done by the candidates. Section 2 requires every candidate, as also a person or committee, to file an itemized expense account, but there is an express exception as to the individuals other than the candidates making money contributions, the receipt of which would be accounted for by the others. Section 4 allows an individual other than a candidate, who expends money on behalf of his candidate for the permitted purpose to make an accounting to his candidate, who must then include it in the candidate's expense account. So the greater portion of the act is taken up with making certain things corrupt practices, but particularly applying to candidates.

There is no limitation of the amount allowed to be expended in connection with or in respect of any election, except the limitation found in Section 29 of the act (5175-29, General Code), which section provides:

"The total amount expended by a candidate for a public office voted for at an election * * * shall not exceed the amount specified herein. * * *"

There is no limitation found for either individuals, committee or associations of persons—their limitation is in the character of the expenditure as provided by Section 26 of the act and not any limitation on the amount.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that there is no limitation on the amount that can be expended by a friend of a candidate in connection with any election, but that such friend must keep within the restricted enumeration of the matters and things for which money or other things of value may be expended in connection with the election, and must file an itemized statement of his expenditures either with the proper legal authorities, or under Section 4 of the act, with the candidate himself, who shall include it in his itemized statement.

Answering your second question, I will say that Section 26 is not limited in its application to the candidate voted for. The section enumerates a list of matters and services for which compensation may be made at the reasonable, bona fide and customary value, and provides that "Any person is guilty of a corrupt practice" if he pays, lends or contributes or offers or promises to pay, lend or contribute any money or other value consideration for any other purpose than those enumerated. This department has already held that the enumeration contained in Section 5175-26 is exclusive and exhaustive, that expenditures cannot be made legally for any other matters or things than therein expressly provided or by fair implication contained therein. There is no express provision for a friend of a candidate to employ or pay for one or more persons either in the voting precinct or outside of the precinct to look after the interests of the candidate.

True, in Section 5175-26 there appears the following:

"Each political party may designate one party representative in each precinct upon each registration day, and such committee may designate not more than three (3) such representatives and each candidate one representative in each voting precinct upon each election day * * * who may be paid for their services by such committee or candidate. * * *"

This permission to the committee and to the candidate is the only one mentioned and under familiar rules of construction, such expression would exclude all others. It is only the candidate himself, or the committee, who can employ representatives as provided in the law. If one friend would be permitted to employ and pay a representative, then a dozen or a hundred could do the same thing and the entire electorate of a district might be debauched as of old under the guise of being paid for acting as representatives for the candidate.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that under the corrupt practice act a friend of the candidate could not employ and pay one or more persons to look after the candidate's interest at the various voting precincts.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—LIABILITY FOR TUITION OF PUPILS ATTENDING OUTSIDE DISTRICT—EFFECT OF NOTICE TO RESIDENT BOARD.

As no contract is necessary to charge one board of education with the tuition of its resident pupils for attendance at school in another district, the notice provided for in Section 7735, General Code, is intended, not to establish a right, but to fix the time from which said liability for tuition shall accrue.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 22, 1912.

HON. R. H. SUTPHEN, Prosecuting Attorney, Defiance, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 8th, you state that you would like my opinion relative to the interpretation of Section 7735, General Code, as to whether or not the tuition that can be recovered from a township or municipality wherein the pupil resides dates from the date of notice provided for in Section 7735 or does the tuition date from the time the pupil commences to attend school but not payable until after notice is given.

Section 7735, General Code, provides:

"When pupils live more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned in the district where they reside, they may attend a nearer high school in the same district, or if there be none nearer therein, then the nearest school in another school district, in all grades below the high school. In such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement to that effect. But a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside. Nothing herein shall require the consent of the board of education of the district where the pupils reside, to such attendance."

You will note that under the provisions of said section the board of education of the district in which the pupil resides must pay the tuition of such pupil without any agreement. In other words, that no contract is necessary, but that a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district wherein the pupils reside.

While it is true that the statute says "shall not collect tuition for such attendance" yet from a reading of the entire section and the fact that it does not require any agreement or consent from the board of education of the district in which the pupil resides, I am of the opinion that the liability to pay for such attendance will not attach until the notice provided for in the section has been given. I do not believe that the section means that the notice merely establishes a right to collect for tuition of pupils who have attended prior to the giving of such notice as it would seem to me that the object of the notice, since no contract is necessary, is to fix the time when the obligation for the tuition commences.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—POWER OF CANDIDATE TO DESIGNATE REPRESENTATIVES IN VOTING PRECINCTS IN PRIMARIES.

Under the corrupt practice act, a candidate at the May primary may designate one representative in each voting precinct whose name shall be certified and who shall be compensated as provided in Section 5175-26, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1912.

HON. CHARLES, H. DUNCAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of April 24th, asking for construction upon a part of Section 26 of the corrupt practices act, passed by the last legislature. The part referred to is in the fourth paragraph of Section 5175-26, General Code, and provides:

> "Any person is guilty of a corrupt practice if he, directly or indirectly, by himself or through any other person, in connection with, or in respect of any election, pays, lends or contributes, or offers or promises to pay, lend or contribute any money or other valuable consideration, for any other purpose than the following matters and services, at their reasonable, bona fide and customary value:
> "* * * Each political party may designate one party representative in each precinct upon each registration day, and such committee may designate not more than three (3) such representatives and each candidate one representative in each voting precinct upon each election day, whose names shall be certified to by the chairman and secretary of the controlling committee of such party to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections, at least two (2) days before such registration or election day, and who may be paid for their services by such committee or candidate not in excess of five ($5.00) dollars per day each."

You desire to know whether or not the above provision authorizes a candidate for nomination at the primary election to have one paid representative in each voting precinct upon the day of the primary election, and compensate him as therein provided.

While the so-called corrupt practices act is somewhat loosely drawn, and in some places may seem ambiguous, still, if the act is viewed from its four corners, so to speak, and the mischiefs sought to be remedied are kept in mind, it is not difficult to arrive at a correct construction.

Section 5175-1 of the General Code, defining "committee," uses the following significant language:

> "The term 'committee' * * * as hereinafter used, shall include every committee or combination of two or more persons co-operating * * * to aid or take part in the election or defeat of any candidate for nomination at a primary election or convention, including all proceedings prior to such primary election, or of any candidate for any office, whether public or not, to be voted for at a primary election * * *."

Section 5175-2, General Code, provides that every candidate who is voted for at any election or primary election and who expends, directly or indirectly, any money or things of value in connection with such election, shall file an itemized statement showing in detail such expenditures.

It is evident, therefore, that committees, as well as candidates, taking part in the primary election, were intended to be within the provisions of the act.

In Section 5175-26, supra, "any election" must be read in its usual and popular sense. The legislature certainly had in mind that primary, special, regular and general elections might be holden; and their use of the words "any election" must be understood to comprehend all kinds of elections, at least all kinds in vogue at the time of the enactment. It is like the use of the term "any person" in said section; other sections specify committees, candidates, associations and persons, but when it came to defining what should constitute the guilt of a corrupt practice under the act, so far as the use of money or other valuable consideration was concerned, use was made of the all comprehensive words "any person," a general term, including all persons whosoever would do the things specified.

Conceding, then, that the corrupt practices act applies to primary elections—and this must be done in view of the language of the various sections, and the object and purpose of the law—let us consider the wording of that part of Section 5175-26, referring to the designating by candidates and committees of representatives at the polling places. The political committee and the candidate are allowed to designate representatives at each polling place "upon each election day." The statutes pertaining to elections speak of special, regular, primary and general elections, and their various meanings are all well understood; certainly the legislature knew this fact and had they so desired they could have limited the right of candidates and committees, in appointing representatives, to any of these various election days, but they employed them upon "each" election day to designate these persons. To my mind it could not be made broader that the power applies as well to each and every election day, as above mentioned, as it does to the November election. The permitted expenditure is to allow a representative at the polling place—it is a recognition that to that extent the meeting of the expense incident thereto would not constitute a corruption of the voters. The limitation to one representative was evidently to avoid the consequent corruption attendant upon the laying down of the bars and the general permission to designate as many representatives as the candidate or committee might desire.

The legislative intent was to purify all elections. One set of drastic rules was laid down, applicable to nominations as well as to elections, and it was expressly defined what expenditures would be permitted "in connection with or in respect of any election."

I therefore conclude that your inquiry can be answered in but one way, to-wit: that under the corrupt practices act a candidate at the May primary may designate one representative in each voting precinct, whose name shall be certified and who shall be compensated as provided in Section 5175-26.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

323.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—TIME WHEN PERSON BECOMES A "CANDIDATE"—NO RIGHT OF VOTERS TO AFFILIATE OR VOTE WITH OTHER PARTY—RIGHT TO SUPPORT CANDIDATE OF OTHER PARTY.

It is the intention of the corrupt practice act to have every item of expenditure made in connection with the candidacy, be filed, and for this purpose, the term of a party's candidacy commences as soon as the intent to be a candidate is evidenced, directly or indirectly by any overt act or contribution, receipt or expenditure of money or anything of value in connection with such election.

Under penalty of criminal action, a voter at the primary may not vote any ticket other than that of the party with which he is affiliated, nor participate in the nomination of a candidate of a party other than that to which he belongs.

This, however, will not prohibit one party from endorsing or supporting a person who is also voted for upon another party's ticket. Such a person, however, runs individually on each party ticket and his vote on one ticket may not be counted in connection with his vote on another ticket.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1912.

HON. JOHN G. ROMER, Prosecuting Attorney, Celina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of April 11th, in which you inquire concerning certain election matters, as follows, to wit:

> "1. When does a person become a candidate under the corrupt practices act; at the time he announces his candidacy or at the time he files his petition?
> "2. Can a voter at the primary vote any ticket other than that of the party with which he is affiliated, or participate in the nomination of any candidate other than that of the party to which he belongs?"

Your first inquiry raises a novel and interesting question, and though, at first blush, it seems difficult of solution because, pursued in its various ramifications, different times and dates would mark the actual candidacy of almost every individual candidate, still, I believe a rule can be evolved by which each case can be readily worked out and a correct conclusion easily reached.

Section 2 of the corrupt practices act, Section 5175-2, General Code, provides:

"Every candidate who is voted for at any election or primary election held within this state * * * who may have contributed, promised, received or expended, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value, in connection with such election, shall * * * file * * * an itemized statement * * *."

Candidates who are voted for at an election, as we all well know, are of various kinds and degrees; we have the active and the inactive candidates, the man who is always in the hands of his friends, the standing candidate, whose lightning rod is ever up and ready for business; we have the receptive candidate, the man who thinks he is a candidate, as well as the one whom every one, other than himself, knows to be a candidate. In this great state of Ohio it probably is a far more difficult question to answer as to when a man is not a candidate than as to when he is.

Webster defines a candidate as,

"1. One who seeks or aspires to some office or privilege, or who offers himself for the same.

"2. One who is selected or thought of for an office or for preferment by those who have the power to elect or appoint."

The Century Dictionary defines a candidate as,

"A person who seeks or is put forward by others for an office or honor."

The word "candidate" derived from the Latin term "candidatus," literally means "white-robed," because, in ancient Rome, a person who sought office arrayed himself in a glittering white robe. I sadly fear, in these later and progressive days, when "mud slinging" seems so popular and plays so important a part in our campaigns, such a robe would not long retain its pristine spotlessness.

As used in Section 2 of the corrupt practices act, the word "candidate" is to be understood in its ordinary popular meaning, and the legislature evidently intended, in this enactment, to include any one who sought or offered himself, or was put forward for some office or privilege and was voted for at any election.

A man need not be nominated, to be a candidate, for, even under the preciseness of the new primary act, the voter may cast his vote for one not regularly nominated and whose name does not appear on the printed ballot; and such a person may be actively a candidate for the place, or honestly put forward by his friend with his consent. So it would not do to say that a man is not a candidate until he is nominated. Again, under our primary system, a man may seek and aspire to or be put forward for an office long before his petition is filed; an active canvass is often necessary to obtain the necessary signature to a nomination paper, and expenditures are not unusual in such case. So it cannot be held that a person is not a candidate while he is doing the preliminary work leading up to his nomination, for he certainly might come well within the definition of seeking or offering himself for the place.

In nearly every case the real act of becoming a candidate, in the very first instance, is one of intention, the conclusion of the mental process of the person concerned; one aspires to the office and as yet there may be no outward manifestation of this act of the mind; a man may be a candidate none the less, and yet, not have issued in stentorian tones a pronuncia mento that his "hat is is the ring." But as to others than himself it does take some outward expression, some overt act, to make known the fact of the candidacy.

A candidate, to come within the corrupt practices act, of course, must be one who is voted for at an election, and then he is required, within the statutory time, to file a statement that he has not contributed, promised, received or expended any money or thing of value in connection with the election at which he is voted for (and in that event it would matter not, so far as the corrupt practices act was concerned, when he actually became a candidate, for he would not be called upon to render an itemized statement, but would only have to state the fact that he had made no contribution, promise, expenditure, etc.) or, on the other hand, if he had contributed, promised, received or expended any money or other thing of value in connection with such election, he would be compelled to file an itemized statement of such contribution, etc., as provided in Section 2 of the act. In the latter event it would become necessary for him to determine just when he became a candidate, so as to include every item of contribution, etc., that the law comprehended.

It is my opinion that as soon as the intent of his candidacy is evidenced, directly or indirectly, by some overt act of contribution, promise, receipt or expenditure of money or other thing of value, in connection with such election, account must be taken and kept; and it matters not how long previous to the election such expenditure, etc., occurred, so long as it was in connection with such election.

That this must have been the intent of the law maker is made apparent when we consider that under our law one may be a candidate to be voted for at the primary, when a petition must be filed at least thirty days prior to the primary, or one may be a candidate by a nomination petition, which must be filed, generally, thirty days before the general election; if the filing of the petition for the primary or the filing of the nomination paper would fix the time, then, two persons running, say, for "judge," would have quite a different period of time to cover in their itemized statements; the one time would be fixed by the filing of a petition thirty days before the primary, while the other would be determined by the filing thirty days before the regular election. Thus, the plain intent of the statute would be violated, namely, to have an account of every item of expenditure and receipt in connection with the candidacy, for the expenditures, receipts, etc., might all be made long before the time for filing. And further, one person seeking to get his name on the ballot by nomination paper would not be required to include in his statement of expenditures any items made and incurred between the date of the filing of the other party's petition for nomination and the date of the filing of his own nomination paper, although the expenses might be identical in character and amount.

Answering your second inquiry, as to whether the voters of one party can vote in the primary of any other party than that with which they are affiliated, Section 4980 provides:

> "At such election only legally qualified electors or such as will be legally qualified electors at the next ensuing general election may vote and all such electors may vote only in the election precinct where they reside, and it shall be the duty of the challengers and of the judges, and the right of any elector, whenever there is reason to doubt the legality of any vote that may be offered, to interpose a challenge. The cause of a challenge shall be: That the person challenged has received or been promised some valuable reward or consideration for his vote; that he has not previously affiliated with the party whose ticket he now desires to vote. Affiliation shall be determined by the vote of the elector making application to vote, at the last general election held in even numbered years."

Section 4981 provides that any challenged person shall make oath before one of the judges, inter alia, as to his party allegiance.

Section 4982 authorizes the judges, under the circumstances stated therein, to reject his vote.

Section 13326 provides:

> "Whoever casts a ballot at a primary election after objection has been made and sustained to his vote, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned not less than ten days nor more than sixty days or both."

Section 13327 provides:

> "Whoever votes at a primary election, not having voted at the last general election, held in an even numbered year, with the political party with which he desires, or offers, to vote at such primary election, unless he is a first voter, or did not vote at such general election, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than three hundred dollars or imprisoned in the penitentiary for one year, or both."

Consideration of the above statutes manifestly shows that only persons qualified, as therein provided, can vote at their respective party primaries; and, as far as party qualification is concerned, that is determined as provided in Section 4980, supra, by the "vote of the elector making application to vote at the last general election held in even numbered years." If a person presents himself and falsely claims to be of a different party than that to which he really belongs, and votes, then he is amenable to the penalties prescribed in the above sections; they are the penal provisions which prohibit the voters of one party from voting or participating in the primaries of another party than the one with which they are affiliated, and the provisions of these sections should be vigorously enforced. It is never permissible for the voters of one party to vote in the primary of the other, to the end that they might dictate and control the nominees of a party with which they have no affiliation, as determined by law.

I do not, however, desire to be understood as holding that a voter of one party, voting at his own primary, may not write in and thus vote for a person who is either a member of or a candidate of another political party.

Section 4993, General Code, provides:

> "* * * when the nomination of a candidate of one party is endorsed by another it shall be done at the time and in the manner provided for original nominations."

The state supervisor of elections has held that in primary elections "the voter may write in a blank space or substitute for any name on his party ballot the name of another person." Section 4995, supra, authorizes a candidate to run on more than one ticket for a particular office, providing he is nominated therefor "at the time and in the manner provided for original nominations." Therefore, if the party voters of a political party so see fit they may write in the name of a candidate of another party as a candidate on their own ticket for a particular office, and if he receives the highest number of votes cast by the electors on that ticket for that office he is the nominee of their own party for the particular office, and the fact that he is also a candidate on another ticket would make no difference.

Of course, this vote on the party ticket of which he is not a party member, can in no way interfere with or be counted in connection with the candidate's vote on his own party ticket; it is just as if he were another and different individual.

This must be permitted under the law; otherwise, a candidate of one party could not be endorsed by another party as is now allowed by the terms of Section 4995.

I trust this fully answers the inquiries contained in your letter.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

STATE AID FOR HIGHWAYS—APPORTIONMENT OF FUND BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, TO TOWNSHIPS AND ROAD DISTRICTS—CONTROL OF FUNDS BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ACTING AS TURNPIKE DIRECTORS.

The state funds to be paid to the counties as provided in Section 1218, General Code, should be apportioned to the townships and road districts by the county commissioners as therein provided. After said apportionment is made, the amounts should be expended by the county commissioners acting as a board of turnpike directors, under Section 7445, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 1, 1912.

HON. W. J. SCHWENCK, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 27, 1912, you request me to re-consider a question involved in the opinion of my predecessor to the effect that money apportioned to counties under the state highway law as provided by Section 1218 of the General Code, should be spent by county commissioners acting as a board of turnpike directors under Section 7445 of the General Code.

Pursuant to this request have investigated the opinion to which you refer, and from a consideration of the statutes applicable to the subject of road repair it is my conclusion that the opinion of my predecessor was correct.

The statutes governing the repair of improved roads are found in chapter 11 of title 4, being Sections 7407 to 7463, inclusive, of the General Code.

Section 7422 provides:

> "The county commissioners shall cause all necessary repairs to be made for the proper maintenance of all improved roads in the county. For such purpose they may levy a tax upon the grand duplicate of the county, not exceeding three-tenths of one mill in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of taxable property in such county. Such levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies now in force. (99 vs. 360 4919-1.)"

Section 7445 provides:

> "In each county, the county commissioners are constituted a board of turnpike directors, in which the management and control of all such roads therein shall be exclusively vested. (R. S. Sec. 4896.)"

Original Section 31 of the state highway law, quoted by you, became Section 1218 of the General Code. The same reads as follows:

> "If permanent roads of not less than standard width have been constructed prior to the establishment of the state highway department and the materials thereof are gravel, brick, telford, macadam or material of like quality, the county commissioners may make application to the state highway commissioners on or before January first of each year, for the amount of state funds apportioned to such county. Thereupon the amount so apportioned shall be paid to the county treasurer, if the county commissioners of such county have levied or will levy a tax on the duplicate of the county sufficient to equal the amount so appropriated. Such appropriation and levy shall become a part of the pike repair fund of the townships, and be apportioned to the townships or road districts of not less than one township each in proportion to the amount of the fund collected by such levy in each township or road district. Township trustees or other authorities having charge thereof shall apply such funds to the repair of improved roads in the same manner as other pike repair funds are applied, but the material used therefor shall be equal to the material used in the original construction of such road. (99 vs. 318 31.)"

It will be noted that the foregoing section specifically states that "township trustees or other authorities having charge thereof," shall apply such fund to the repair of improved roads in the same manner as other pike repair funds are applied. The phrase "having charge thereof" must refer to the board vested with the legal authority of repairing improved roads. I am unable to find that township trustees are vested with such authority.

Section 7422 expressly provides that, "the county commissioners shall cause all necessary repairs to be made for the proper maintenance of all improved roads in the county." This provision, it seems to me, is so specific as to exclude the holding that township trustees have jurisdiction over the repair of improved roads. The apparent grant of such jurisdiction in Section 1218 is inconsistent with the general scheme of legislation on the subject of road repairs, and must be held to be mere surplusage, since it is negative by the positive provisions of Sections 7422 and 7445, supra.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the county commissioners should apportion the funds referred to in Section 1218 to the townships and road districts in the manner therein provided, and that said funds, after the apportionment is made, should be expended by the county commissioners acting as a board of turnpike directors, under Section 7445, supra.

Your communication of January 30th, discloses that the fund sought to be distributed accumulated prior to January 1, 1911, and it is therefore unnecessary to enter into a discussion of the effect of the changes made in the highway law by the last General Assembly.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CREATION OF VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT BY ATTAINMENT OF $100,000 TAX VALUATION—ORGANIZATION OF VILLAGE DISTRICT BOARD— DUTIES OF OLD TOWNSHIP BOARD—DIVISION OF FUNDS AND DISPOSITION OF SCHOOL BUILDING—EFFECT OF TOWNSHIP ELECTION.

By vitrue of Section 4681, General Code, when a village attains a tax valuation of one hundred thousand dollars, it constitutes a village school district. When such village attains that valuation in 1911 it must, however, remain a part of the township school district under the jurisdiction of the township board of education until the members of the village district elected in November 1913 can be properly organized.

When, therefore, in 1912 said township board engineered an election for the issuance of $20,000 worth of bonds for the erection of a high school building within the village, in which election, the electors of the entire township voted; held: that the situation has so changed that the board would be justified in declining to act upon the bond issue regardless of the results of the election.

Under Section 4696, General Code, the funds and indebtedness of the township school district should be equitably apportioned between the township and village district as therein provided.

The statutes do not provide specifically for the disposition of the school building situated in the village but the decisions endorse the reasonability of permitting the newly created district to take title to school property within its limits and which was designed for its use, and such is to be deemed the policy of the law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1912.

HON. JAMES F. BELL, Prosecuting Attorney, London, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of March 13, 1912, is received, in which you make the following inquiries:

> "At the time Section 3888 of the R S. of Ohio was amended on April 2, 1906, 98 O. L., page 217 (now Sections 4681 and 4682 of the G. C.), the village of South Solon, in Madison county, Ohio, was, and had been for a long time before, to wit, since about the year 1870, an incorporated village. But the tax duplicate of said village at the time of the passage of said act (April 2, 1906) was less than $100,000, and there was no territory attached to said village for school purposes; that is, the village was located in and regarded as part of, one of the sub-districts of the township school district of Stokes township, no election or proceeding ever being had to organize it as a village school district, and it has never been treated or recognized at any time as a village school district neither before nor since said amendment.
> "Under the new appraisement, as appears on the tax duplicate of 1911, the tax valuation of the property in said village was increased so that it now exceeds $100,000 (to wit, $149,010).
> "In the year 1880, a school building was built by the township school district in the sub-district in which the village of South Solon was situated but just outside the corporate limits of said village, and sometime afterward, to wit, about the year 1900, the corporation boundary of said village was extended so that it included said school building. Said school building has ever since, and still is, being used as such in said sub-district, and this building and the school building in each of the other sub-districts of the township, were all built by the township from funds raised by taxation on the whole township including the village. The board of education of said township is now composed of one member who resides within said village and four members who reside in the township outside of the village.

"According to proceedings had by said board of education an election was held on February 28, 1912, on the question of issuing bonds in the sum of $20,000 for the purpose of erecting and equipping a new township high school building to be located within said village. The voters of the whole township and village participated in said election, and in the village precinct a majority of the voters were in favor of the bond issue, while in the township precinct outside the village a majority of the votes were against the bond issue; and of the whole vote of both village and township together, a majority were in favor of the bond issue.

Questions:

"1. When the tax valuation of said village of South Solon was increased on the tax duplicate in 1911, so as to exceed $100,000, did the village, by such increase in tax valuation and by force of the statute, then and thereby, become a village school district?

"2. Did the bond issue fail or carry?

"3. To whom does the old school building situated in the village belong? To the village district, or the township district, or both?

"4. Has the village any title, right or property interest in the other school buildings in the township outside the village?

"5. Should the township board of education as it is now constituted go on with the schools as they have been until a village school board can be organized and make a levy and raise the money to carry on a school therein?

"6. Or should the member residing in the village be considered disqualified and his place declared vacant and filled by other members appointing some one residing in the township outside the village?

"7. What will the people residing within the village do about sending their children to school until the village board is organized and the village school instituted?

"8. If a special election is held under Section 4710 of the G. C., must it be postponed until the day of the state election next November, or until the municipal election in November of 1913? Or if it can be held at any time, who has the authority to call such an election and require the board of deputy state supervisors to prepare ballots, etc., for same?

"9. Said township board of education has a considerable sum of money in its building fund, which was to have been applied on said proposed new building, and also has money in the other school funds for current school purposes. What share, if any, of these funds now in said township board would the village board be entitled to receive?"

Your first question involves a construction of Section 4681, General Code, which provides:

> "Each village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, and having in the district thus formed a total tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars, shall constitute a village school district"

This statute was construed in case of Buckman vs. State, 81 Ohio St., 171, wherein it is held:

> "By force of the provisions of Section 3888, Revised Statutes, as amended April 2, 1906, and in effect April 16, 1906 (98 O. L., 217), each incorporated village then existing—April 16, 1906—or since created, 'together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, and having in the district thus formed a total tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars,' constitutes and is a village school district, no vote of the electors of such village being necessary to the creation or establishment of such district."

On page 178, Crew, C. J., says:

> "It doubtless being within the contemplation of the law-making body that an incorporated village with a tax duplicate of not less than one hundred thousand dollars, could well provide for the proper support and maintenance of its schools, and should therefore, in every instance constitute and be a village school district, ————————."

This decision leaves no alternative. When an incorporated village has a tax duplicate of not less than one hundred thousand dollars it shall constitute a village school district.

The village of South Solon, by the tax duplicate of 1911, had a tax valuation in excess of one hundred thousand dollars, and thereupon became a village school district by virtue of Section 4681, General Code. The village had such tax valuation on the day preceding the second Monday in April, although the amount of the tax duplicate was not known for some time later.

The statutes do not provide when the actual transfer from the township school district to the village school district shall take place. Nor does the decision in 81 Ohio St., 171, supra, cover this point.

Shall it be on the second Monday in April when the tax duplicate has reached the required amount, or shall it be when the tax valuation is actually ascertained; or shall it be postponed until the new village school district has been legally organized by the election of a board of education?

The statutes are silent upon this question. There is here presented a transition of certain territory from a township school district to a separate and new school district to be known as a village school district. The two districts have the same general purpose, to wit, to provide for public education, although carried on under separate organizations.

When a city becomes a village or vice versa, by reason of change in population, the statute, Section 4686, General Code, provides that such school district shall thereby be changed from a city to a village school district or from a village to a city school district, but authorizes the old organization to continue to act for the new district, until the new officers can be elected at the next annual election for school board members. The same provision is made for the government of a city which becomes a village, or vice versa.

There is no provision of statute which authorizes the holding of a special election, for the election of the members of a board of education for a village school district, when such village school district comes into existence by reason of its increase in tax valuation which requires it under Section 4681, General Code, to become a village school district. In the absence of such provision no special election could be held for such purpose, even at the general election in the even numbered years. Such members can only be elected in the odd numbered years.

Section 4710, General Code, to which you refer, does not apply to the present situation. This section provides:

> "In villages hereafter created, a board of education shall be elected as provided in the preceding section. If such election is a special election, the members elected shall serve for the term indicated in such section from the first Monday in January after the last preceding election for members of the board of education, and the board shall organize on the second Monday after the special election.

This section applies to newly created villages and not to a village which has been organized for some time, but which is created into a village school district by operation of the statute.

It is therefore impossible for the village school district to organize and carry on its work of education until it can elect the members of the board of education in November, 1913.

If it is held that the village became a village school district the instant it reached the proper tax valuation, or at the time such valuation was ascertained, and that thereupon the township board of education had no further jurisdiction over such village, then this situation is presented. The village of South Solon would be without educational facilities at least until January 1, 1914, when it could properly organize its board of education.

This village, as well as other villages similarly situated, would be denied rights and privileges enjoyed by the remainder of the state. Did the legislature intend such a result by its enactment? There is no specific provision in the statute which says that at the instant a village shall reach the required tax valuation, it shall, ipso facto, become a village school district, regardless of the fact that it is not, and could not, be prepared to take care of the public education of its children.

Article VI, Section 2, of the constitution of Ohio, provides:

> "The general assembly shall make such provisions, by taxation, or otherwise, as, with the income arising from the school trust fund, will secure a thorough and efficient system of common schools throughout the state; but no religious or other sect, or sects, shall ever have any exclusive right to, or control of, any part of the school funds of this state."

This provision imposes upon the legislature the duty to "secure a thorough and efficient system of common schools throughout the state." It is not to be presumed that the legislature has failed in this duty.

Section 4679, General Code, provides:

> "The school districts of the state shall be styled, respectively, city school districts, village school districts, township school districts and special school districts."

Section 4683, General Code, provides:

"Each civil township, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its established limits detached for school purposes, shall constitute a township school district."

Section 4684, General Code, provides:

"Any school district, other than a city, village or township school district, and any school district organized under the provisions of chapter five of this title, shall constitute a special school district."

These provisions, in connection with the provisions concerning village and city school districts, were intended to cover and do cover all the territory of the state. The legislature has expressed the intention that all parts of the state shall be under one or the other of these school districts and has provided for the organization of the several districts.

Formerly the establishment of a village school district was based upon its population and not upon its tax duplicate. These provisions were passed upon in case of Cist vs. State, 21 Ohio St., 339, in which it is held:

"In considering questions arising under the school legislation of the state, such construction should be placed upon its various enactments, and the several provisions thereof, as will give harmony to our educational system, and secure, as far as practicable, its equal benefits, and the reasonable facilities for their enjoyment, to every locality.

"Every portion of territory within the state, not included in any of the separate school districts specified in the sixty-seventh section of "an act to provide for the reorganization, supervision and maintenance of common schools," passed March 14, 1853, is a constituent part of some sub-school district, and subject to the jurisdiction of the proper township board of education, as established by the first section of said act, unless it shall have been legally withdrawn therefrom; and no portion thereof will be deemed to have been so withdrawn, until it shall become included within the limits of some separate school district organized by the actual election or appointment of a separate board of education.

"When an incorporated village is formed within, or to include a material part of a sub-school district, no portion thereof is, by reason of such incorporation, withdrawn from the school jurisdiction of the township, but the whole continues to be a sub-school district, until the actual election or appointment of a separate school board; and the portion of the sub-school district not included within the limits of such incorporated village is 'territory annexed thereto for school purposes,' within the meaning of the statute of March 14, 1853, 'to provide for the reorganization, supervision and maintenance of common schools.'"

On page 348, West, J., says:

"The thirty-second section would seem to be peremptory, and withdraw from the jurisdiction of the township every incorporated village with the territory annexed, upon the instant it attained three hundred inhabitants, without regard to whether it takes steps to affect a separate organization or not. But this cannot have been intended, for section one excludes from the school jurisdiction of township boards not every incorporated village with the territory annexed, nor every such village upon its acquiring three hundred inhabitants, but every such village shall 'elect or appoint a board of education.'"

This case can be distinguished from the statute now under consideration on account of the exception contained in the statute therein considered, which stated:

"That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to give to the township boards of education, or to the local directors of sub-districts, jurisdiction over any territory in the township included within any city or incorporated village, with the territory thereto annexed for school purposes, which shall elect or appoint a board of education, as hereinafter provided."

The court, however, gives certain reasons for its opinion which are applicable to the question now to be answered.

On page 348, the court further says:

"But would its attainment of three hundred inhabitants, on the day or week following the time for electing a board, withdraw it instantly from the school privileges and jurisdiction of the township? It could not effect an organization until the next year. It would, therefore, be left without, and powerless to avail itself of, school benefits for an entire year. This could not have been intended. The first section plainly implies the contrary, and that it shall continue under township jurisdiction until a separate organization be effected, notwithstanding it shall have sooner acquired three hundred inhabitants.

In order to hold that the village became a village school district the instant it had the required tax valuation, and was thereupon withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the township school district, the intent of the legislature to that effect must be clearly and specifically expressed. No such intent appears.

It is my conclusion that the village became a village school district at the time it reached the required tax valuation, but that it remains a part of the township school district and is under the jurisdiction of the township board of education until the village school district can be properly organized after the election in November, 1913.

Your next inquiry is as to the bond issue. In my opinion it is not necessary to decide whether this bond issue carried or not. The course to pursue in either event would be the same. If the bond issue did not pass, nothing could be done with the bonds, and if it carried nothing should be done with them.

In order to carry out the purpose for which the bonds were to be issued, it is necessary for the board of education to perform certain acts. A site must be purchased; a contract for the erection of the building must be entered into; the bonds must be executed and sold, etc. None of these things have been done.

The conditions have so changed since the bond issue was voted upon, that it is reasonable to presume that it would not have passed if the true situation had been known. The school building was to be erected for the township district and to be located in the village, which is soon to be detached from the township district.

While elected officials should carry out the expressed will of the voters, yet the conditions in this case have so changed that they would be justified in declining to act upon the bond issue, and take no steps to carry it into effect. They could hardly proceed without doing one or the other of the districts an injustice.

Your next inquiry involves the division of the school property and of the funds in the hands of the township board of education.

Section 4690, General Code, provides:

> "When territory is annexed to a city or village, such territory thereby becomes a part of the city or village school district, and the legal title to school property in such territory for school purposes shall remain vested in the board of education of the school district from which such territory was detached, until such time as may be agreed upon by the several boards of education when such property may be transferred by warranty deed. In case of disagreement between such boards of education, like proceedings shall be had by application to the probate court as are provided by law in case of the transfer of property from one school district to another.

Section 4696, General Code, provides:

> "When territory is so transferred from one school district to another, the equitable division of funds or indebtedness shall be determined upon at the time of the transfer. When territory is transferred from one district to another by proceedings in the probate court or by the annexation of territory to a city or village, the proper division of funds in the treasury, or in process of collection, of the board of education of school district from which the territory is detached, shall, upon application to the probate court of the county in which such territory is situated by either board of education interested, be determined and ordered by such court. If such board of education is indebted, such indebtedness, together with the proper amount of money to be paid to such board by the board of education of the school district to which the territory is transferred, annexed, or of the district created, shall be in like manner determined and ordered by the court."

Section 4690, General Code, applies to territory which is annexed to a city or village. In the present situation there is no annexation of territory. It is the creation, by operation of law, of a new school district and a detaching of territory from another school district.

Section 4696, General Code, provides that when territory is so transferred the equitable division of funds or indebtedness shall be determined upon at the time of the transfer. The section further on refers to "the district created." This section is found in the same chapter as Section 4681, General Code, which makes this village a village school district. Section 4692, General Code, provides for the transfer of territory by mutual consent of the boards of education, and Section 4693, General Code, provides for transfer upon petition.

The words "so transferred" as used in Section 4696, General Code, are not, in my opinion, confined to the transfers of territory provided for in Sections 4692 and 4693, but apply as well to the transfer of territory by operation of Section 4681, when a new village school district is created. The use of the words in Section 4696, "or the district created," confirm me in this view of the statute. In the present situation the territory in South Solon is transferred, by operation of law, from the township school district to the village school district. It is my conclusion that Section 4696, General Code, governs in such a case, and that the funds and indebtedness of the township school district should be equitably apportioned between the township and village districts as therein provided. This division should be made when the separation actually takes place.

There is no provision of statute covering the school building. The question arises if the word "funds" as used in Section 4696, supra, is broad enough to include the school buildings.

In case of Bierce vs. Bierce, 41 Ohio St., Granger, C. J., defines "fund" at page 254:

> "The word 'fund' savors of personalty; it means something that can be invested and reinvested."

It is my conclusion that the word "funds" as used in Section 4696, General Code, does not include real property.

The second syllabus in case of Board of Education vs. Board of Education, 46 Ohio St., 595, reads:

> "Public school property, real or personal, that has been appropriated and set apart by a township board of education for the purpose of a public school of a higher grade than primary, for the benefit of the youth of the whole township, does not pass to or vest in the board of education of a separate school district that may be afterwards organized out of the territory within which the property happens to be situated, although the property falls within the letter of Section 3972, Rev. Stats., which is the section of the school law relating to the subject."

Section 3972, Rev. Stat., under consideration in this case, provided, as set forth on page 597:

> "All property, real or personal, which has heretofore vested in and is now held by any board of education, or the council of any municipal corporation, for the use of public or common schools in any district, is hereby vested in the board of education provided for in this title, having under this title jursidiction and control of the schools in such district."

This section was amended in 97 Ohio Laws 354, and the amended section was not carried into the General Code, but the section was specifically repealed. I do not find any similar provisions in the General Code.

On page 599, of 46 Ohio St., 595, supra, Bradbury, J., says:

> "This result could be brought about if the general language of Section 3972 cannot be restrained by construction. That they should take with them and hold in their new and independent state, all the public school property which was in their territory and had before been used by them alone, is entirely reasonable. The other portions of sub-districts of the township had no practical interest in or beneficial use of it before the separation. Each remaining sub-district had similar property in its limits, subject to its particular use, and therefore suffered no injury by the transfer of the title and control to the same persons, though differently organized, who had before enjoyed its sole use."

In case of State ex rel. vs. Holliday, 9 Low. Dec., 738, it is held:

> "Where the legislature has made no provision as to a division of the property upon creation of a special sub-district out of portions of other districts, the sub-district will take none of the property and will assume none of the obligations of the old district."

The court, Bigger, J., on page 740, of the opinion, quotes from several authorities in support of his conclusion. In this case the question arose as to the right to tax land, which had been detached from a school district, for the payment of a bonded indebtedness created before the detachment became effective or was voted upon. There was no question as to the title of any property.

The court quotes from City of Winona vs. School District No. 8, Winona township, 40 Minn., 13, in which it is held that the old district retains all its property, including that which falls within the new district; and also Hughes vs. Ewing, which holds that the old district retains all its property.

He also quotes from Board of Education vs. Board of Education, 30 W. Va., 424, in which it was held:

> "Upon the division of an old public corporation and the creation of a new one out of a part of its inhabitants and territory, the legislature may provide for an equitable apportionment or division of the corporate property and impose upon the new corporation, or upon the people and territory thus disannexed, the obligations to pay an equitable portion of the corporate debts.
> "Where the legislature does not prescribe any regulation for the apportionment of the property or that the new corporation shall pay any portion of the debt of the old, the old corporation will hold all the corporate property within its new limits and be entitled to all the debts due the old corporation and be responsible for all the debts of the corporation existing before and at the time of the division. And the new corporation will hold all the corporate property falling within its boundaries, to which the old corporation will have no claim.

Niblack, J., on pages 67 and 68 of Towle, trustee, vs. Brown, 110 Ind., states the rule:

> "In the absence of express legislation, or some constitutional provisions on the subject, the general rule is, that on the division of a township or other municipal corporation, into two separate townships, or corporations, each is entitled to hold in severalty the public property which falls within its territorial limits. 1 Dillon Munic. Corp., Sec. 188 3d Ed.; North Hemstead, 2 Wend. 109; School Township of Allen vs. School Town. of Macy, 109 Ind., 559.
> "But as to money, choses in action, or other kindred property, in existence at the time of the division, the rule is not so well defined. In the absence of an express provision as to that class of property, the respective claims of the two corporations become a matter of equity jurisdiction, and must be adjusted upon equitable principles."

At pages 850 and 851 of 35th Cyc., it is said:

> "In applying this general rule some cases have gone to the extent of holding that school houses and other property, even though beyond the limits of the old district after its alteration, are still the property of such district; but this has been denied in a number of cases and the prevailing doctrine seems to be otherwise."

Where the statute does not provide for the division of property upon the creation of a new school district, the courts do not agree as to which district shall be entitled to the property.

As stated in 46 Ohio St., 595, supra, it is entirely reasonable that a sub-district which is formed into a special or separate district should take the title to school property within its limits and which was designed for its use. While the statute therein construed and upon which this reasoning is based, has been repealed by the legislature in adopting the General Code, there is sufficient ground for believing that this is the policy of the state of Ohio, and that it should be applied to the case at bar.

The school property situated in South Solon was designed for the use of the village. The other sub-districts are also provided with school houses. All of these have been secured by taxation upon the whole township. It would be equitable and reasonable that when one of such sub-districts is formed into a separate school district, it should take title to a school house within its territory and which was built for the use of such sub-district, and that it should relinquish all right to the school houses in the other sub-districts which were designed for the use of such sub-districts. This would especially apply to a district which is created by operation of law as in the present situation.

It is my conclusion that the title to the school house in South Solon will vest in the new village school district, and that it will have no title or right to other school houses.

The several questions which you have submitted may be answered as follows:

First—A village becomes a village school district, by operation of law, when it has a tax valuation of not less than one hundred thousand dollars.

Second—No action should be taken to issue or sell the bonds or to do anything in connection therewith.

Third—The old school building situated in the new village district will belong to the village school district.

Fourth—The village school district will have no title or right in or to the school buildings in the township outside the village.

Fifth—The township board of education should continue to exercise jurisdiction over the village and provide for its schools until such time as the new village school district can be organized, which will be January 1, 1914.

Sixth—The member of the board of education residing in the village is not disqualified to hold his position, and can hold it until the new district is organized.

Seventh—The people of the village will continue to send their children to the schools provided by the township board of education.

Eighth—Section 4710, General Code, does not authorize a special election in the present case.

Ninth—The funds on hand, or to be collected, at the time the new village school district is legally organized should be equitably distributed as provided in Section 4696, General Code. If the two boards of education cannot agree upon such distribution, the probate court has jurisdiction. All the circumstances and facts must be taken into consideration in making the apportionment.

Respectfully,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—COUNTY INFIRMARY DIRECTOR AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE.

The duties of the offices of county infirmary director and those of township trustee are sufficiently in conflict to come within the common law rule of incompatibility and therefore, these offices may not be held by the same individual.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1912.

HON. J. GUY O'DONNELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have at hand your communication in which you recently submitted for the attention of this department an inquiry with reference to the ability in law of an individual to hold contemporaneously the offices of county infirmary director and civil township trustee.

As there is no express statutory direction or inhibition, the common law rule of compatibility of public offices must apply.

Section 2544, General Code, provides as follows:

> "In any county having an infirmary, when the trustees of a township, after making the inquiry provided by law, are of the opinion that the person complained of is entitled to admission to the county infirmary, they shall forthwith transmit a statement of the facts to the infirmary directors, and if it appears that such person is legally settled in the township or has no legal settlement in this state, or that such settlement is unknown, and the directors are satisfied that he should become a county charge, they shall forthwith receive and provide for him in such institution or otherwise, and thereupon the liability of the township shall cease. The infirmary directors shall not be liable for any relief furnished, or expenses incurred by the township trustees."

In an opinion rendered by this department to Holland C. Webster, under date of March 31, 1911, it was held on page 5 thereof, as follows:

> "It is my opinion that the infirmary director have some discretion in determining whether the person seeking relief is a 'county charge' as distinguished from a 'township or municipal charge,' that is, whether temporary relief which must be furnished by the trustees or directors of public safety will be sufficient, or the person will require more than temporary relief. In the event the infirmary directors are satisfied that he should become a county charge, and the relief should be of a permanent nature, then they shall provide for him in the county infirmary or otherwise."

And on page 4, of the same opinion, it was held:

> "The township trustees and the director of public safety are required under Section 3476 to furnish all temporary outside relief, and the infirmary directors are not authorized to expend money for such purposes."

It being the case, therefore, that the infirmary directors are the final judges in the cases to which this section applies, of the question whether the parties shall receive the obligatory temporary relief at the hands of the township trustees or whether they shall receive the permanent relief at the hands of the infirmary directors, I am of the legal opinion that in this respect, at least, the infirmary directors exercise a degree of superiority over the township trustees, and their duties in this respect are sufficiently in conflict with those of the township trustees to justify the deduction that the holding of both positions by a single individual would contravene public policy and therefore, come within the common law rule of incompatibility.

Section 3492, General Code, makes provision for contracts by mutual agreement between the infirmary directors and the township trustees for medical relief and medicine for persons coming under their respective charge. As the interests of each board in this relation are necessarily at variance, and furthermore, as an individual acting as a member of both of these boards would in this connection, be placed in a situation requiring him to agree or contract with himself, this statute presents a second instance of the incompatibility of the two offices.

I believe that these considerations sufficiently answer your inquiry, and I am therefore, of the opinion that the two offices of township trustee and county infirmary director may not be held at one and the same time by a single individual.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

"IMPROVED ROADS"—ROAD AND HIGHWAYS—FUND FOR MAINTENANCE OF.

The phrase, "improved roads" as employed in Section 7422, General Code, providing for the raising and disposal of a fund for the purpose of maintaining such roads, refers to the "paved, macadamized, stone and gravel roads" mentioned in Section 7423, General Code, and to such roads as are mentioned in Section 7443, General Code, as well as to all roads constructed from any material recognized by the laws of Ohio as proper for road building.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1912.

HON. WILLIAM VINCENT CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 26, 1911, propounds the following question:

> " I have been requested to ask you for a definition of the phrase 'improved roads,' as used in Section 7422, of the General Code."

Section 7422 of the General Code is as follows:

> "The county commissioners shall cause all necessary repairs to be made for the proper maintenance of all improved roads in the county. For such purpose they may levy a tax upon the grand duplicate of the county, not exceeding three-tenths of one mill in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of taxable property in such county. Such levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of such levies not in force. (99 vs. 360 4919-1.)"

The phrase "improved roads" has not been defined by any statute or decision in this state, so far as a careful research has disclosed.

Your attention is directed to Section 7423 of the Code in which the following language is used:

"The proceeds of such levy shall be applied and used by the commissioners in the repair of paved, macadamized, stone and gravel roads, and for no other purpose. (99 vs. 360 4919-1.)"

Section 7443 provides:

"All macadamized or graveled free roads, whether constructed under the general or local laws by taxation or assessment or both, or converted by purchase or otherwise from a toll road into a free road under any law, and all turnpike roads, or parts thereof, unfinished or abandoned by a turnpike company, and appropriated or accepted by the commissioners of the county, shall be kept in repair as provided hereafter in this chapter. (R. S. Sec. 4876.)"

It is my opinion, therefore, that the words "improved roads," as used in Section 7422, refer to the roads mentioned in Section 7443 and such roads as were originally constructed from the various classes of materials prescribed by Section 7423 or any other materials recognized by the laws of Ohio as proper for road building.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

FEES AND COSTS—CLERK OF COURTS MAY NOT TAX WHEN DEFENDANT IN DIVORCE CASE PAYS ALIMONY DIRECT TO PLAINTIFF INSTEAD OF TO CLERK IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE JOURNAL ENTRY.

Where, in a judgment for divorce and alimony, the journal entry called for the payment of the alimony to the clerk of courts in behalf of the plaintiff, and the amount is paid contrary to the entry, directly to the plaintiff; the proper action would be a motion to modify the entry or to retax costs; and the clerk of courts, from the language of Section 2901, General Code, not having actually disbursed the money, would not be permitted to tax costs for the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 1, 1912.

HON. HENRY HART, Prosecuting Attorney, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 7th, you request my opinion upon the following statement of facts as given by you:

"In a suit for divorce and alimony, the wife obtained a divorce from her husband and the court awarded her $1,300.00 in alimony, '$1,000.00 of which is to be paid to the clerk of the court within twenty days from the date of the decree for the use and benefit of the wife, the plaintiff in the action; the balance, $300.00, is to be paid to the clerk of the court for the use and benefit of the wife, plaintiff in said action, within one year from date of decree.' The journal entry was drawn and O. K.'ed by the attorneys on both sides and placed upon the journal of the clerk's records. Within the twenty days from the date of the decree the parties and the attorneys in the action got together and instead of the defendant paying the money to the clerk of the court, he paid it directly to the attorney for the plaintiff, and a receipt was given by the plaintiff to the defendant for the amount paid, 1,000.00. In the journal entry it is provided that the defendant pay the costs of the action, and the clerk of the court is now insisting that the attorney for the plaintiff receipt upon the cash-book in his office for the sum of $1,000.00, and that he be allowed his commission as provided in the statute, to-wit, the sum of one per cent. of $1,000.00, making $10.00.

"Upon the above stated facts, under Section 2091 of the General Code as amended May 31, 1911, under this clause, 'for receiving and disbursing money other than costs and fees paid to such clerks in pursuance of an order of court, or on judgments, and which has not been collected by sheriff or other proper officer on order or execution to be taxed against the party charged with the payment of such money, the commission of one per centum on all exceeding one thousand dollars.' Is the clerk entitled to his per centum or not?"

As this matter has arisen in a case pending in your court, it seems to me that it should be settled by a motion to re-tax costs, or to modify the judgment entered in the case, and is really not a proper question upon which I should be asked to render an opinion. For this reason I have been somewhat reluctant about answering the same.

The provision of the Code which must govern your question is found in a part of Section 2901, as amended in 102 O. L., 277, specifying that fees shall be charged and collected by the clerk. That particular provision is as follows:

"For receiving and dispursing moneys, other than costs and fees, paid to such clerks in pursuance of an order of court, or on judgments, and which have not been collected by the sheriff or other proper officer on order of execution, to be taxed against the party charged with the payment of such money, a commission of one per centum on the first one thousand dollars and one-fourth of one per centum on all exceeding one thousand dollars?"

It would seem, from the language used by the legislature, that in order to entitle the clerk to the per centum named, the money must be received and disbursed by the clerk, and therefore until the money is actually paid to the clerk he would not be entitled to a fee receiving and disbursing the same.

It occurs to me that under the facts detailed by you, and in view of the order named by the court, the only proper way in which this judgment could be satisfied of record would be by having the money paid and accounted for in accordance with the order made by the court, but, as stated in the first part of my opinion, it seems to me that this matter should be settled by the court itself either on a motion to re-tax the costs or to modify the entry.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—FILLING IN OF CANDIDATE'S NAME ON BALLOT AT PRIMARY—ENDORSEMENT OF OPPOSITE PARTY AND COUNTING OF VOTES—SEPARATE CANDIDATES.

Section 4995, General Code, provides that a candidate of one party may be endorsed by another providing it is done at the time and in the manner fixed for original nominations, and as the original nominations are now made at the primaries, it is permissible to so endorse a candidate of an opposite party by merely filling in his name on the ballot.

When a candidate is so entered, however, upon the ticket of both parties, he runs as a separate candidate upon either ticket and the votes from each party must be counted separately as for separate candidacies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 3, 1912.

HON. JOSEPH C. RILEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 1st inst., in which you state:

> "I wish your official opinion at the earliest date possible as to whether or not it is proper and legal for the members of the precinct election boards to consider and count the votes written on the ticket, where there is no candidate for a political party that has filed his petition, a name and vote of the candidate who is of opposite politics, and running as a candidate on an opposite ticket.
> "For example: John Jones is a candidate for prosecuting attorney by petition on the Republican ticket of Lawrence county, Ohio, for nomination, the Democrats of Lawrence county have no candidate for prosecuting attorney, a person who votes and calls for a Democratic ticket writes the name of a Republican candidate on the Democratic ballot in the Republican primaries. Can and is it legal for the members of the separate election boards to count and consider this vote for John Jones in considering his majority or votes on the Republican tally sheet and poll books?"

Attention is called to the following sections of the General Code, which have application to the matter concerning which you inquire:

> "Section 5025. * * * If upon a ticket there is no candidate or candidates for a designated office a blank space equal to the space that would be occupied by such name or names, if they were printed thereon, with the blank spaces herein provided for, shall be left."

Section 5071 provides:

"If there was no nomination for a particular office by a political party, or if by inadvertence, or otherwise, the name of a candidate regularly nominated by such party is omitted from the ballot, and the electors desires to vote for some one to fill such office, he may do so by writing the name of the person for whom he desires to vote in the space underneath the heading or designation of such office, and make a cross mark in the circle at the head of the ticket, in which case the ballot shall be counted for the entire ticket, as though the name substituted had been originally printed thereon."

Section 4967 provides:

"* * * All statutory provisions relating to general elections * * * shall, so far as applicable, apply to and govern primary elections."

Section 4995 provides:

"When no nominations were made originally for a particular office, it shall be unlawful for any committee appointed for the purpose of filling vacancies to name a candidate of another political party for such office or to so name a candidate nominated by petition. When the nomination of a candidate of one party is endorsed by another, it shall be done at the time and in the manner provided for original nominations."

The state supervisor of elections has held that in primary elections "the voter may write in a blank space or substitute for any name on his party ballot the name of another person." (Compilation of Election Laws, 1912, page 87, note under Section 4976.)

From consideration of the above statutes and the ruling of the state supervisor of elections, there can be no question but that it is the duty of the board of elections, in the event a political party fails to nominate for a particular office, to leave a blank space on the party ballot for that office, with the heading or designation of the particular office above said space. It is also evident, from a consideration of Section 4995, that the legislature contemplated that one political party might endorse and have printed on their party ballot the name of a candidate of the other political party, so long as this was done at the same time and in the same manner provided for original nominations. As the original nominations are now by primary election, it is permissible to do this at the primary; and it is my opinion that a person who calls for a Democratic ticket and finds that his party has not nominated any candidate for prosecuting attorney may write in the name of the Republican candidate on his ticket, and thus vote for the Republican candidate on the Democrat ticket; but the votes of the Republican candidate on the Democrat ticket, for the particular office, must not be added to or counted with his votes on his party ticket. He is running, when so voted for, on the Democrat ticket as the Democratic candidate, and if the canvassing board finds that he has received the most votes, for the particular office, on the Democrat ticket, then, he would be declared the nominee of the Democrat primary. It is as if he were another and a different individual, being voted for on the two tickets, and his votes on the one ticket cannot be considered in any way with his votes on the other. It could be possible, of course, since, as far as his being a candidate on the Republican ticket is concerned, only those votes cast for him on the Republican primary ballot could be counted, to be defeated as the Republican candidate, and, if he receives the most votes on the Democratic ticket, be successful as the Democratic candidate.

So, answering your question, the candidate, John Jones, should be credited as the candidate on the Republican ticket for prosecuting attorney with all of the votes received upon the Republican primary ballot, and then, if it is found that he has been voted for on the Democratic ticket, he should be credited as the Democratic candidate for prosecuting attorney with all the votes that he received upon the Democratic primary ballot; but his votes received on the Democratic primary ballot cannot be considered or counted with his votes on the Republican primary ballot.

I trust that this fully answers your inquiry.

Very truly yours,
TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—FILLING IN OF CANDIDATE'S NAME AT PRIMARIES—FILLING OF VACANCY.

When a political party has failed to file nomination papers for an office, the board of elections, in accordance with Section 5025, General Code, should leave blank spaces in the primary ballots, wherein voters of the party may fill in the names of any person and said person may be nominated in this manner.

Section 5010, General Code, provides for the filling of a vacancy when a nominee dies, withdraws, declines to run or when the certificate of nomination is insufficient or imperfect. Such a vacancy however, would have to be filled within the time prescribed for original nominations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 3, 1912.

HON. JOHN F. MAHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 27th, wherein you state:

> "A political party in this county filed no nomination papers for either of the offices of recorder, sheriff and treasurer of the county, and filed nomination papers for but two of the three candidates for county commissioners. What would be the effect if some elector, or several electors of the political party so failing to file nomination papers, should write the name of an elector of that party, for the said office of recorder, sheriff, treasurer and 3rd commissioner?
> "Would the party voted for be entitled to have his name printed on the ballot as a candidate for said office at the November election? In other words, can the vacancy be filled that way?
>
> "I refer you to Section 5010 of the General Code, and as amended in 102*d* Ohio Laws at page 417."

Section 5025, General Code, provides:

"* * * If upon a ticket there is no candidate or candidates for a designated office, a blank space, equal to the space that would be occupied by such name or names if they were printed thereon with the blank spaces herein provided for, shall be left."

Section 5071 of the General Code provides:

"If there was no nomination for a particular office by a political party, or if by inadvertence, or otherwise, the name of a candidate regularly nominated by such party is omitted from the ballot, and the elector desires to vote for someone to fill such office, he may do so by writing the name of the person for whom he desires to vote in the space underneath the heading or designation of such office, and make a cross mark in the circle at the head of the ticket, in which case the ballot shall be counted for the entire ticket, as though the name substituted had been originally printed thereon."

These sections are not parts of the primary act but, as you know, Section 4967 provides:

"* * * All statutory provisions relating to general elections * * * shall, so far as applicable, apply to and govern primary elections."

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the deputy state supervisor of elections, in preparing the primary ballot, should leave the blank spaces provided for under Section 5025, and that the voter is authorized to write in the name of any person for whom he desires to vote, in the space so left, and under the heading or designation of the office for which the political party has made no nomination; and that the board of elections, when it canvasses the result of the primaries and finds that a certain person, whose name has been written in and voted for, has received the highest number of votes for the particular office, is authorized to place the name of the person, so found nominated, upon the official ballot as the candidate of the political party thus nominating him. This is not the filling of a vacancy; it is original nomination.

I note you refer to Section 5010, General Code, as amended in 102 O. L. 417. The amendment merely changed the time when the certificate should be filed, and the section only provides for a vacancy where a person has been regularly nominated as provided by law and should "die, withdraw or decline the nomination, or if a certificate of nomination is insufficient or imperfect." Without quoting the entire section, I would call your attention to the fact that in that event there would be a real vacancy, and even that vacancy would have to be filled within the time prescribed for original nominations.

Trusting that this fully answers your inquiry I am,

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—CONTRIBUTIONS BY CANDIDATES TO CHURCHES AND CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS—SALE OF TICKETS AND SOLICITATION OF PICTURES AND BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

Contributions of any sums made to a solicitor for a church or religious association, by a candidate in connection with or with respect to an election, are not within the permitted expenditure of the corrupt practice act.

The practice also of sending tickets to candidates and to office holders seeking re-election, with the extended option to either buy or return the same, and the practice of soliciting pictures, biographical sketches, and names of candidates for their insertion in pamphlets and publications, issued by such charitable or other organizations when such solicitations are made with a view to the candidacy, are all violations of the corrupt practices act.

HON. J. GUY O'DONNELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of April 29th, you ask my opinion upon the following matter, relating to what is known as the corrupt practices act, to-wit:

> "Would a contribution of any sum made to a solicitor for a church by a person who is now a candidate for nomination at the coming primary election be a violation of said act?"

You, of course, are familiar with the provisions of the act in question, and especially with Section 2 (Sec. 5175-2, General Code), which provides that,

> "Every candidate who is voted for at any election or primary election held within this state * * * who may have contributed, promised, received or expended, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value in connection with such election, shall within ten days after such election file, as hereinafter provided, an itemized statement, showing in detail all the moneys or things of value, so contributed, etc."

You are also aware that Section 26 of the act (Sec. 5175-26, General Code) provides what the guilt of a corrupt practice shall be and enumerates the matters and things for which, at their reasonable bona fide and customary value, a person, in connection with or in respect of any election may pay, lend or contribute or offer or promise to pay, lend or contribute any money or other thing of valuable consideration.

Your question cannot be categorically answered, each particular case must be judged by the facts surrounding it. Section 26 of the act enumerates, as aforesaid, the matters and things for which, at the reasonable, bona fide and customary value, a person in connection with or in respect of any election may pay, lend or contribute or offer to pay, lend or contribute.

No contribution may lawfully be made to a solicitor for any church by a person who is now a candidate for nomination at the coming primary election, or at any election, provided that the contribution is made directly or indirectly in connection with or in respect of the election. In other words, is there a connection between the contribution and the candidacy? If there is, the contributor is guilty of a corrupt practice and is subject to all of its consequences; if there is not, he is not so subject.

While your question does not call upon me to answer at further length because such answer involves the application of facts, yet I deem it not without the scope of my authority, in view of the great practical importance of the matter, to further discuss the subject.

It is well known that churches, organizations of various kinds and collective bodies through their representatives have been and are accustomed to solicit candidates for office for contributions in one form or another. A pernicious practice has become established of writing to men in public office who are known to be candidates and asking for contributions. Generally no reference is made to the election, but the request comes from organizations in locations where the candidate in many instances has not even an acquaintance, and, too, where there is no community of interests between the candidate and the organization making the request in respect for which the solicitation is made. It suggests itself quickly to the ordinary mind that this is a solicitation in respect of and in connection with the election.

Another practice that has become quite generally known (and one aside from the matter of election), and one that is very reprehensible is that of sending tickets to the offices of public officials with the request that the price of the tickets be forwarded to the solicitor, or return the tickets. True, such solicitors usually advise that the ticktes may be returned without any fear of incurring displeasure. These tickets often, yes, I may say usually come from places and quarters that would not think of asking for a contribution from the public officers were they not candidates. The purposes of the solicitors are usually good, and the contributions for noble objects, but none the less, the practice is a direct violation of the Kimble corrupt practices act. Such solicitors are in the direct category of soliciting a bribe from a candidate the price of the bribe being the good will that brings about a vote or votes. This practice does not fall short of the reprehensible, but effective, title of "hold up," and the solicitor would deserve to be placed in the category of one seeking to seduce a public official if it were not that he may be entitled to the charitable term of "thoughtless."

Aside from the fact that contributing under such circumstances is a violation of the law, the time of the public official is taken up with a consideration of the communication in reference thereto and the return of the tickets.

Again, many organizations seek subscriptions from public officials who are known to be candidates, and from candidates who are not public officials, and in return insert their names and pictures and biographical sketches in a publication made in connection with some exercise, the candidate not making the contribution as an advertisement or newspaper article in connection with his candidacy, but purely to avoid incurring the displeasure of the solicitor. This, too, is inhibited because the contribution is not made with reference to Section 26 of the Kimble corrupt practices act. It is not the purpose of the law to prohibit any man, whether a candidate, public official or otherwise, from making contributions to religious, charitable and other purposes, but the surrounding facts will usually determine whether such contributions are so made. Contributions for all these purposes along such lines as on the face of them denote they are not referable to candidacies or elections constitute no violation of the law. The law is not in the road of organizations or collective bodies or assemblages or of churches, and these latter should be extremely careful not to get into the road of the law.

The test to be applied as to whether the corrupt practices act is violated is this, does the solicitor know that the candidate is a candidate, or does the candidate give with the knowledge that the solicitor knows that he is a candidate; and is he giving because such contribution may affect his election either in the way of bringing him votes or preventing the loss of votes. If the contribution is with such knowledge on the part of the donor and donee, the act is violated; if the contribution is solicited only for proper purposes and was given bona fide because of these purposes, and without reference to the election, there is no violation of the act, even thought votes may be influenced one way or the other.

I appreciate the extreme delicacy of this subject, and I do not mean to leave the impression that any great per cent. of the subjects herein referred to indulge in it, but I do not hesitate to say that the small percentage who do are doing more than their share to violate our election laws. Ordinarily the bribe giver is the mover and hunts the bribe taker; his wrongdoing originates with himself, but organizations that reach out of their usual territory or solicit a candidate whom under other circumstances they would not approach, are by their solicitations tempting the candidate to violate the law, and in many instances to make contributions needed by his family.

When any candidate for public office makes a contribution for any purpose other than those stated in Section 26 of the act, there is no presumption that it is not a violation of the act, and the facts may be such as to raise the presumption that it is a violation of the act.

No hard and fast rules can be laid down on the subject. The facts in each case will usually indicate on their face whether or not the contribution is made in connection with or in respect of the election, and it will not do to say that because contribution is to be used for a religious, charitable or fraternal purpose that therefore it is without the letter and spirit of the Kimble corrupt practices act. In fact, the very delicacy of the subject, and that the contribution is to be used for the charitable and religious purpose makes the offense, if the contribution is solicited, referable to the election, all the more grievous.

I am of the opinion that when organizations and societies realize that these practices are contrary to the law, they will readily and cheerfully discontinue them.

Very respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

BURIAL OF POOR—EFFECT OF NOTICE OF DEATH BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES TO INFIRMARY DIRECTORS.

Under Section 3495, General Code, the township trustees may notify and thereby cause the infirmary directors to take charge of the burial of persons coming under these sections.

The trustees may not themselves bury said person however, and then cause the infirmary directors to pay for the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 30, 1912.

HON. HUGH R. GILMORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 4th, wherein you inquire as follows, concerning Section 3495 General Code:

> "The local township trustees, after the death of a person coming under this section, contracted with an undertaker for the burial of such dead person. Before such burial they secured the bill from the undertaker and presented it to the infirmary directors for payment. Is this such a compliance with the section as would require payment by the infirmary directors?

"My construction of the section would be that all the trustees could do would be to notify the infirmary directors, permitting them to make all arrangements with undertaker, as to price, etc. And if the trustees would go ahead and act to the extent of employing an undertaker and contracting with him, the infirmary directors could not be held, even though notified before the actual burial. Not being sure of this construction, I write for your opinion."

In reply thereto I desire to say that Section 3495 of the General Code provides as follows:

"When information is given to the trustees of a township or proper officer of a municipal corporation, that the dead body of a person, having a legal settlement in the county, or whose legal settlement is not in the state or is unknown, and not the inmate of a penal, reformatory, benevolent or charitable institution, has been found in such township or corporation and is not claimed by any person for private interment at his own expense or delivered for the purpose of medical or surgical study or dissection in accordance with law, they shall cause it to be buried at the expense of the township or corporation, but, if such trustees or officers notify the infirmary directors, such directors shall cause the body to be buried at the expense of the county."

It is my opinion that the said section means the burial of such shall be by the trustees of the township unless the trustees of such township notify the infirmary directors when it becomes the duty of said infirmary directors to bury such dead at the expense of the county. In other words, if the township trustees desire such burial to be made at the expense of the county, it is their duty to notify the county infirmary directors to take charge of such burial as provided in said Section 3495 of the General Code, as above quoted. Therefore, in accordance with the foregoing and answering your question specifically if the trustees contract with an undertaker for the burial of such dead as are mentioned in said Section 3495 of the General Code, above quoted and then present the undertaker's bill to the infirmary directors for payment, it is my conclusion that this is not such compliance with said section as would warrant payment by the county infirmary directors or the county trustees.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

EXPENSES OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS—ONLY BILLS "NOT OTHERWISE PROVIDED FOR," PAYABLE FROM FUND FOR EXPENSES INCURRED IN OFFICIAL DUTIES AND IN FURTHERANCE OF JUSTICE—EXTRADITION OF CRIMINALS.

Under Section 3004, General Code, only such bills incurred by the prosecuting attorney in the furtherance of justice, or in the performance of his official duties, may be paid upon the order of the prosecution, as are "not otherwise provided for." Bills incurred therefore in the extradition of criminals which are provided for under Sections 2491 and 3015, General Code, may not be paid under Section 3004, General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 1, 1912.

HON. JOSEPH C. RILEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 9, 1912, you request my opinion as follows:

"I wish your opinion on the construction of Section 3004, General Code, as amended in 102 O. L., page 74, as to whether or not the expenses of the office of prosecutor, such as stationery, telephone rent and tolls, extradition of criminals, etc., should be paid under this section direct by order of the prosecuting attorney, after having given bond as required by the above section."

Section 2914 of the General Code is as follows:

"On or before the first Monday in January, of each year in each county, the judge of the court of common pleas, or if there be more than one judge, the judges of such court, in joint session, may fix an aggregate sum to be expended for the incoming year, for the compensation of assistants, clerks and stenographers of the prosecuting attorney's office."

Section 3004 of the General Code is as follows:

"There shall be allowed annually to the prosecuting attorney in addition to his salary and to the allowance provided by Section 2914, an amount equal to one-half the official salary, to provide for expenses which may be incurred by him in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for. Upon the order of the prosecuting attorney the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the prosecuting attorney or such other person as the order designates, for such amount as the order requires not exceeding the amount provided for herein, and to be paid out of the general fund of the county.

"Provided that nothing shall be paid under this section until the prosecuting attorney shall have given bond to the state in a sum not less than his official salary to be fixed by the court of common pleas or probate court with sureties to be approved by either of said courts, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all the duties enjoined upon him, by law, and pay over, according to law, all moneys by him, received in his official capacity. Such bond with the approval of such court of the amount thereof and sureties thereon and his oath of office inclosed therein shall be deposited with the county treasurer.

"The prosecuting attorney shall annually before the first Monday of January, file with the county auditor an itemized statement, duly verified by him, as to the manner in which fund has been expended during the current year, and shall if any part of such fund remains in his hands unexpended, forthwith pay the same into the county treasury. Provided, that as to the year 1911, such fund shall be proportioned to the part of the year remaining after this act shall have become a law."

The language of Section 3004 specified that the allowance made under its authority is in addition to that provided by Section 2914, and that it is for the purpose of providing for the expenses which may be incurred by the prosecuting attorney in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for. Therefore the test as to the purpose for which this allowance can be expended is, first whether the expenditure is necessary in the performance of the official duties of the prosecutor and in the furtherance of justice; and, second, whether it is otherwise provided for. If there is any other provision made by law for the payment of the expense, then, I take it that it cannot be paid out of this fund, and that this fund can only be used to pay for expenses incurred by the prosecutor in the performance of his official duties and in furtherance of justice for which no provision is made, for instance, it seems to me that the expenses incurred in the extradition of criminals could not be paid from this allowance for the reason that this expense is provided for by Section 2491 and Section 3015 of the General Code; but if in the extradition of criminals it was necessary for the prosecutor to incur some expense that is not covered by either Section 2491 or Section 3015 of the General Code, then that portion of the expense could be paid from the allowance made by Section 3004. That section itself provides that the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the prosecuting attorney or such other person as that order designates, upon the order of the prosecuting attorney and for the amount specified in the order. This provision, of course, obviates the necessity of an allowance by the county commissioners for payments made from this fund.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,
Attorney General.

MILEAGE—JURORS ENTITLED TO MILEAGE ONLY FOR DAY OF SUMMONS.

Under Section 3008, General Code, and by authority of the construction of that statute in the case of Burton vs. Wagoner et al., in the circuit court of Hamilton county, jurors, both grand and petit are entitled to mileage from their place of residence to the county seat, only for the day of summons.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1912.

HON. LYMAN R. CRITCHFIELD, JR., Prosecuting Attorney, Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of April 15th, received. You inquire:

> "Is a juror, both grand and petit, entitled to mileage from his place of residence to the county seat each day of his service, or is he entitled to but the first day?"

You state in your letter that this question was decided by the court of common pleas of Summit county in an action brought in madamus against the clerk of court to compel him to allow mileage to each juror each day of his service, Judge Doyle deciding that they were entitled to mileage for each day of service.

This same question was before the circuit court of Hamilton county, Ohio, in the case of state of Ohio, on relation of George Burton vs. Charles Wagoner, clerk of the courts, Charles Roth, county treasurer, and Charles C. Richards, county auditor. This was an action in mandamus and it was held that the relator was not entitled to a writ of mandamus and not entitled to mileage except for the first day's attendance.

I am informed by the state bureau of accounting that the Hamilton county ruling is being generally followed, over the state.

Your question involves the construction of Section 3008 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Each grand or petit juror drawn from the jury box pursuant to law, each juror selected by the court as talesman as provided by law, and each talesman, shall receive two dollars for each day of service, and if not a talesman, five cents each mile from his place of residence to the county seat. Such compensation shall be certified by the clerk of the court and paid by the county treasurer on the warrant of the county auditor."

It is evidently contemplated by this section that jurors, when once summoned, shall remain continuously in attendance upon the court, the statute plainly authorizing but one payment of mileage. If it had been intended that jurors should be allowed mileage for each day of service the statute would have expressly said so.

On the authority of the case of Burton vs. Wagoner, et al., I hold that jurors, both grand and petit, are entitled to mileage from their places of residence to the county seat on the day they are summoned and are not entitled to mileage for each day of service.

Very truly yours,

TIMOTHY S. HOGAN,

Attorney General.

COST BILL—NO PAYMENT BY STATE WHEN SENTENCE OF PERSON CONVICTED FOR FELONY IS SUSPENDED, AND SAID PERSON IS RETAINED UNDER JUDGE INSTEAD OF COMPLYING WITH PROBATION LAWS—CERTIFICATION OF COST BILL BY WARDEN OF PENITENTIARY.

When a judge suspends the sentence of a person convicted and sentenced to a term in the penitentiary or reformatory and retains such person under the jurisdiction of the court instead of placing him under the jurisdiction of the penitentiary or reformatory, such judge is acting contrary to the provisions of the so-called probation laws set out in Sections 13706—13715, General Code.

Such a person is not therefore, properly under the supervision of the state of Ohio as was intended by Section 13726, General Code, providing for the payment of the cost bill by the state upon certification of the warden of the penitentiary when the sheriff has returned the execution "no goods, etc., formed whereon to levy." The cost bills in such cases therefore cannot be paid by the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1912.

HON. JOHN A. CLINE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 11, 1912, enclosing a communication received by you from the clerk of courts of your county, which reads in part as follows:

> "* * * it has been the custom of some of our judges, after conviction of a criminal in this court, to suspend execution of sentence and retain the prisoner under the jurisdiction of the judge rather than place him under the jurisdiction of the penitentiary or reformatory. We find many cases where this has been done and the costs have not been paid. J. A. Leonard, superintendent of the Ohio State Reformatory, holds that he cannot certify as to the costs for the prisoner is never under the jurisdiction of his institution. The same thing is true as to the warden of the penitentiary."

and requesting my opinion as to whether or not Cuyahoga county is entitled to be paid the costs in criminal cases out of the state treasury where the facts are as stated in the letter from your county clerk to you.

In reply I desire to say that Sections 13723, 13724, 13725, 13726 and 13727 of the General Code cover the proposition of costs in criminal cases under sentences for felony, and I direct your attention especially to Section 13726, which provides:

> "When the clerk certifies on the cost bill that execution was issued according to the provisions of this chapter, and returned by the sheriff 'No goods, chattels, lands or tenements, found whereon to levy,' the warden of the penitentiary shall allow so much of the cost bill and charges for transportation as is correct, and certify such allowance, which shall be paid by the state."

Under the above quoted section the state, beyond any doubt, must reimburse the respective counties of the state for costs in criminal cases where the criminal has been convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for a felony, when the cost bill is properly certified to as required by said section. But the question raised for determination by the clerk of courts in his letter to you is as to whether or not the state must pay the costs in criminal cases where the sentence has been suspended by the judge imposing it without placing the criminal under the jurisdiction of the penitentiary or state reformatory.

There can be no question as to the authority of a court, in a criminal case, to suspend the execution of the sentence, in whole or in part, for any crime of which the criminal has been convicted or to which he has plead guilty, unless otherwise provided by statute; that having been decided in the case of Webber vs. State, 58 O. S., 616. But I take it, from the clerk's letter to you, that the judges of the criminal court in your county have been suspending execution of sentence and retaining the prisoner under the jurisdiction of the judge, rather than placing him under the jurisdiction of the penitentiary or reformatory, under the provisions of what is known as the probation laws, Sections 13706 to 13715, inclusive, General Code. Section 13706 of the General Code provides:

> "In prosecutions for crime, except as hereinafter provided, where the defendant has pleaded or been found guilty, and the court or magistrate has power to sentence such defendant to be confined in or committed to the penitentiary, the reformatory, * * * and the defendant has never before been imprisoned for crime, either in this state or elsewhere, and it appears to the satisfaction of the court or magistrate that the character of the defendant and circumstances of the case are such that he is not likely again to engage in an offensive course of conduct, and that the public good does not demand or require that he shall suffer the penalty imposed by law, such court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and place the defendant on probation in the manner provided by law."

Section 13709 provides:

> "When it is the judgment of the court that the defendant be placed upon probation and under the supervision of the penitentiary or the reformatory, the clerk of such court shall forthwith make a full copy of the judgment of the court, with the order for the suspension of the execution of sentence thereunder and the reasons therefor, and certify them to the warden of the penitentiary or to the superintendent of the reformatory, to which the court would have committed the defendant but for the suspension of sentence."

Section 13710 provides:

> "Upon entry in the records of the court of the order for the probation provided for in the next preceding section, the defendant shall be released from custody of the court as soon as the requirements and conditions required by the board of managers have been properly and fully met."

It will be seen from a reading of the sections last above quoted that the court has certain duties to perform, also the clerk of courts, and, as provided by Section 13710, that the defendant shall be released from custody of the court as soon as the requirements and conditions required by the board of managers (now the board of administration, successor to the respective boards) have been properly and fully met.

The Ohio Board of Administration has adopted probation rules under the provisions of said law, to be complied with as therein provided, and I am of the opinion that no criminal is properly released on probation unless there has been a strict compliance with the rules adopted by the board and the sections above quoted, and unless the prisoner has been properly certified to the warden of the penitentiary or the superintendent of the Ohio state reformatory, as provided by said laws.
