STATE MEDICAL BOARD—AUTHORITY TO INVESTIGATE PROFITEERING OF PHYSICIANS FOR SERVICES DURING INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC.

In re—Question of authority of the State Medical Board to investigate alleged profiteering practice of physicians for services during the influenza epidemic, construing sections 1262 et seq., of the General Code.

HELD: That the State Medical Board has no authority in law to conduct an investigation of such charges.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1919.

The State Medical Board, DR. H. M. PLATTER, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You request my opinion as follows:

> "The State Medical Board, at its meeting on January 7, in response to a request from the Cleveland Academy of Medicine, voted to hold a special meeting in the city of Cleveland to investigate the question of profiteering practice—overcharge of physicians for services during the epidemic of influenza, meeting to be held January 21.
> "It was the intention of the State Medical Board to conduct the investigation and submit a report.
> "Is the State Medical Board under present statutes empowered to make such investigation?"

Consideration of the present State Medical Board act, former simliar acts and decisions thereunder, convinces me that the original legislative purpose did not include regulation of physicians and surgeons after they were granted certificates to practice.

The act of 1858 was entitled an act "to protect the citizens of Ohio from empiricism," etc., (65 O. L., 146).

The later enactments, significantly entitled acts "to regulate the practice of medicine," etc., have enlarged the scope and powers of the State Medical Board, although at present no specific enumeration of its powers are made.

However, the Supreme Court of Ohio has defined its purpose and duties generally as follows:

> "To prevent those from engaging in the practice of that profession who, from lack of proper knowledge or want of moral rectitude, are unfit to be entrusted with its important and responsible duties."
> "The powers of the board bear a close analogy to those of boards of school examiners, who are authorized to grant certificates to teach in the public schools to applicants who are found, on examination, to possess the necessary qualifications and furnish satisfactory evidence of good moral character; and to revoke any certificate granted, for intemperance, immoral conduct, or other good cause."
> France vs. State, 57 O. S., p. 19.

Section 1275 of the General Code gives the State Medical Board ample power to refuse licenses to persons guilty of such misconduct as therein defined, and also provides for revocation of licenses previously granted, for like causes.

Section 1275-1, General Code, provides for investigation of such matters "which the board has authority to investigate" without specifically defining those matters. and outlines the procedure therefor; provides for taking depositions, appeal, etc.

Considering the purpose of the act, as gathered from its present provisions, its antecedent legislation and the construction which the courts have placed on it, I am of the opinion that the investigation referred to in section 1275, General Code, relates to matters of individual cases, either on applications for admission or on charges of misconduct after admission to practice, and do not warrant or authorize other and more general investigations.

I have also considered the suggestion made by you in personal conference, viz.: that such profiteering may be construed as "grossly unprofessional or dishonest conduct." This position is untenable, as the statute itself defines the above quoted term in such manner as to plainly exclude the alleged profiteering.

This opinion is given with the understanding that your inquiry contemplates a general investigation and that you are not referring to or inquiring about hearings on specific charges filed against individual physicians or surgeons.

Answering your question specifically, I am, therefore, of the opinion that the State Medical Board is without authority in law to conduct the examination referred to in your inquiry.

Very truly yours,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—WHEN TAXPAYER NOT SUBJECT TO PENALTY—COUNTY TREASURER NOT FURNISHED WITH DUPLICATE.

A taxpayer may not be subjected to the payment of a penalty, where the treasurer can not accept taxes because he has not been furnished with the duplicate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1919.

HON. ROGER D. HAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Defiance Ohio.

MY DEAR SIR:—You have submitted the question as to whether or not, when a county treasurer has not been furnished the tax duplicate and can not accept taxes for that reason, property owners may be subjected to a penalty for failing to pay their taxes at the time fixed by law. I answer this question in the negative.

The proposition has been well established that before any taxpayer can be held to be delinquent and subjected to a penalty, he must have had an opportunity to have paid his taxes.

See Wheeling & Lake Erie Co., vs. Stewart, 13 O. C. C. 359.
Cooley on Taxation, p. 901.

Very truly yours,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—DUTIES IN REGARD TO ENFORCEMENT OF GAME LAWS—NO ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION.

It is the duty of prosecuting attorneys, upon proper request made and under the direction of the Attorney-General, to institute and prosecute, in justice court and elsewhere, all necessary actions for the enforcement of the game laws of Ohio; and for discharging such duties a prosecuting attorney is not entitled to demand or receive any compensation in addition to the salary fixed by law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1919.

HON. R. A. KERR, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 10, in which you say, in part:

> "On several occasions request has come that I should care for cases brought before justices of the peace to enforce the provisions of the game laws. I find no provision of the statute imposing that duty on the prosecuting attorneys, but a few days since communicated with the department of agriculture, asking if an allowance could be made."

In particular, you call attention to section 1460 G. C. (107 O. L. 490), which reads in part as follows:

> "Sec. 1460. All fines, penalties and forfeitures arising from prosecutions, convictions, confiscations, or otherwise under this act, unless otherwise directed by the secretary of agriculture shall be paid by the officer by whom the fine is collected to the secretary of agriculture and by him paid into the state treasury to the credit of a fund which shall be appropriated biennially for the use of the secretary of agriculture. * * *."

You raise the question whether, under the authority of said section, the board of agriculture could cause an allowance to be made prosecuting attorneys for services performed by the latter in connection with prosecutions before justices of the peace under the game laws, said allowance to be paid out of fines, penalties and forfeitures resulting from such prosecutions and to be received and retained by said prosecuting attorneys in addition to their regular salaries fixed by law. By "game laws" is meant, of course, laws pertaining to the protection, preservation and propagation of song and insectivorous birds, game birds, game animals and fish within the state and in and upon the waters thereof.

Section 2916 G. C. directs the prosecuting attorney to prosecute on behalf of the state all complaints, suits and controversies in which the state is a party, and such other suits, matters and controversies as he is directed by law to prosecute within or without the county, in the probate court, common pleas court and court of appeals. That he is under no legal duty to appear for the state in criminal cases tried before other and inferior tribunals was held in Gilliam vs. State, 7 O. N. P. (N. S.) 484. See also Railroad Co. vs. Lee, 37 O. S. 479, 480.

However, since section 2916 G. C. was passed and since the cases above cited were decided, the legislature has made great changes in the game laws. I call your attention particularly to two sections, to-wit, sections 1106 and 1390 G. C., which read as follows:

> "Sec. 1106. (107 O. L. 465). Upon the request of the secretary of agriculture, the attorney-general, or under his direction, the prosecuting attorney of any county, shall aid in any investigation, hearing or trial had under the laws which the board of agriculture or the secretary is required to administer, and shall institute and prosecute all necessary actions or proceedings for the enforcement of such laws, and for the punishment of all violations thereof, arising within the county in which he was elected."

"Sec. 1390. (107 O. L. 486). The secretary of agriculture shall have authority and control in all matters pertaining to the protection, preservation and propagation of song and insectivorous birds, game birds, game animals and fish within the state and in and upon the waters thereof. He shall enforce by proper legal action or proceeding the laws of the state for the protection, preservation and propagation of such birds, animals and fish; shall establish fish hatcheries and propagate fish therein or in any other manner for the waters of the state, and, so far as funds are provided therefor, shall adopt and carry into effect such measures as he deems necessary in the performance of his duties."

From the foregoing statutes it clearly appears that, upon proper request made, it is the duty of the attorney-general, and under his direction likewise the duty of the prosecuting attorney of any county, to aid in the investigation, hearing or trial of prosecutions based on the game laws of Ohio; and to institute all necessary actions or proceedings for the enforcement of such laws.

It is true that section 1106, supra, does not specifically mention the court of the justice of peace, nor any other court, as the tribunal in which the attorney-general or prosecuting attorney shall appear to enforce the laws therein mentioned. In view of the fact, however, that section 1464 G. C. gives a justice of the peace, mayor or police judge, final jurisdiction within his county in a prosecution for a violation of any provision of the laws relating to the protection, preservation or propagation of birds, fish and game, it would seem that those tribunals would naturally be the place where the attorney-general and prosecuting attorney could best perform the duties which said section 1106 G. C. requires them to perform. I am therefore of the opinion that it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney, when so directed by the attorney-general, to conduct, in the court of a justice of peace, and elsewhere, all necessary actions or proceedings to enforce the laws hereinabove mentioned.

It being established that it is the duty of prosecuting attorneys to aid in the enforcement of the game laws, as above stated, the next question is whether there is any authority in law for the payment to prosecuting attorneys of special compensation for such services. By "special compensation" is meant compensation in addition to the regular salary of the prosecuting attorney fixed by law.

Section 3003 G. C. prescribes the annual salary of the prosecuting attorney. The last sentence of that section provides:

"Such salary shall be paid in equal monthly installments, from the general fund, and shall be in full payment for all services required by law to be rendered in an official capacity on behalf of the county or its officers, whether in criminal or civil matters."

This section, it will be observed, is silent upon the question of the prosecuting attorney's right to demand and receive compensation for services performed by him on behalf of state departments or state officers. Is such silence to be taken as a recognition by the legislature of such a right? I think not.

The rule is now well settled that where the salary of a county officer is fixed by law, no additional compensation can be paid for the performance by him of official duties, unless the intention of the legislature to authorize such additional compensation is clearly evident. Mere silence does not argue such intention.

In the case of State ex rel. Enos vs. Stone, et al., 92 O. S. 63, 65, Wanamaker, J., referring to what is now section 2977 G. C., said:

> "This section, as well as the sections following, clearly indicates the settled purpose and fixed policy of the state to pay county officials a fixed lump sum, no matter what additional duties may be imposed on them from time to time, unless there is a clear purpose to add further compensation for such further duties."

See also Chapter XX of Throop on public officers, particularly section 478, where it is said:

> "* * * that where a compensation is thus given, whether by salary, or by fees, or by commissions or otherwise, it is in full of all his official services; and he is not entitled to demand or receive any additional compensation from the public or from an individual, for any service within the line of his official duty; although his duties have been increased, or entirely new duties have been added since he assumed office * * *."

Specifically answering your question, I am of the opinion that it is the duty of prosecuting attorneys, upon proper request made and under the direction of the attorney-general, to institute and prosecute, in justice court and elsewhere, all necessary actions or proceedings for the enforcement of the laws of the state pertaining to the protection, preservation and propagation of song and insectivorous birds, game birds, game animals and fish within the state and in and upon the waters thereof; and further that for discharging such duties a prosecuting attorney is not legally entitled to demand or receive any compensation in addition to the salary fixed by law.

Very truly yours,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

STATE TREASURY—TRANSFER OF MONEY FROM SPECIAL FUND TO ANOTHER SPECIAL FUND OR GENERAL REVENUE FUND UNAUTHORIZED BY JOINT RESOLUTION OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY—TRANSFER BY A LAW.

Authority to transfer money from a special fund provided by law in the state treasury to another special fund or to the general revenue fund cannot be conferred by joint resolution.

Such transfer may be authorized by a law, excepting possibly in the case of proceeds of a special tax, as to which Query.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1919.

HON. W. T. DONALDSON, Budget Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested my opinion upon the following question:

> "Can money be transferred from a special fund provided by law in the state treasury to another special fund or to the general revenue fund by a joint resolution of the two houses of the General Assembly, or must such transfer be authorized in an act?"

The special funds in the state treasury owe their existence to laws. Such laws either specify the purposes to which only the moneys in the special fund shall be applied, or authorize designated state officers or departments to apply them to such particular objects as such officer or department may select, within the scope of some general activity. Typical statutes of these kinds are sections 1094, 1221 and 1261-61 of the General Code. There are, of course, several other sections besides those mentioned.

To take money from one fund and place it in another would be to violate such statute pro tanto. Therefore such a result could only be accomplished through the medium of a legislative act of sufficient dignity to repeal or suspend the operation of such statutes to the extent necessarily involved. Inasmuch as a joint resolution is not a law, since it is not subject to the approval of the governor nor to the exercise of the reserved power of the people to order a referendum, it is manifest that such a joint resolution cannot be efficacious to authorize such a transfer.

In connection with your request I feel bound to refer to Article XII, section 5 of the constitution, which provides, in part, that—

"Every law imposing a tax, shall state, distinctly, the object of the same, to which only, it shall be applied."

If the special fund from which the transfer inquired about in your letter is to be made is one created by taxation, this section would seem to preclude its use for any other special purpose, so long at least as the purpose for which it was created remains as one of the enterprises of the state government. I do not desire, however, to pass finally upon this point, inasmuch as I am not advised as to whether or not it is desired to transfer any of the proceeds of taxation.

My conclusion is that the transfer about which you inquire can be authorized, if at all, only by law.

Very truly yours,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

STATE MEDICAL BOARD—REMOVAL OF TONSILS BY USE OF KNIFE OR SURGICAL INSTRUMENT—WHAT CONSTITUTES MAJOR SURGERY.

1. Removal of tonsils by use of knife or other surgical instrument for their amputation constitutes major surgery as defined in section 1288 G. C. (107 O. L., 152).

2. The granting of a license to practice medicine to a physician, under which he established a practice, prior to the enactment of new regulatory statutes, imposing reasonable additional conditions upon the right to practice medicine, conferred no vested right on such licensee which will exempt him from the operation of such later statutes.

(State vs. Gravett, 65 O. S., 289).

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25, 1919.

DR. H. M. PLATTER, Secretary State Medical Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You request my opinion as follows:

"I am directed by the State Medical Board to submit to you for an opinion the following case:

"N. A. U., of ————, Ohio, received a certificate from the State Medical Board to practice osteopathy under date of July 5, 1916. Some time since, complaint was received at this office to the effect that Mr. U. was engaged in the practice of major surgery, in that he was operating for the removal of tonsils.

"Mr. U. appeared before the State Medical Board at its meeting on January 7, 1919, and claimed that his certificate issued to him prior to the definition of major surgery in the amendment to the osteopathic act passed on March 21, 1917, entitled him to such practice for the reason that prior to such definition, tonsillectomy was regarded, as shown by medical text books, as a minor surgical operation.

"The State Medical Board desires your opinion—

"First—Is the removal of tonsils major surgery as defined by the osteopathic amendment?

"Second—Does the fact that Mr. U. obtained his certificate before the date of this amendment, entitle him to perform such operations?"

Considering your questions in the order in which they are stated:

From the language used in your letter, and from personal conferences with you, for the purposes of this opinion, I am considering the removal of tonsils by use of a knife or other surgical instrument for the amputation of tonsils, and any other operative procedure is not here considered.

"Major surgery" since March 21, 1917, has been defined as

"All operative procedures requiring the use of the knife or other surgical instruments for the opening of any natural cavity of the body or the amputation of any member or part of the body."

(107 O. L., 152).

From this comprehensive definition, I am of the opinion that the removal of tonsils in the manner above referred to now constitutes major surgery.

The second question challenges the general power of the state to regulate the practice of medicine and involves its power to change its regulations relative thereto, and thereby impose new conditions on previously licensed and established practitioners. The facts stated are:

1. Mr. U. was duly licensed to practice osteopathy July 5, 1916.
2. A license to practice osteopathy confers no privilege to perform major surgical operations.
3. At the time Mr. U.'s license was granted and until March 21, 1917, the removal of tonsils did not constitute major surgery. (For the purpose of this opinion, as suggested by you in personal conference, it is conceded that prior to the amendment of March 21, 1917, the medical text books did not regard tonsillectomy as major surgery, as claimed by Mr. U.)

4. On March 31, 1917, the legislature so defined major surgery as to include the removal of tonsils by the use of a knife or other surgical instruments in their amputation.

5. Under the limitations of the osteopathic license and the statutory definition enacted in 1917, an osteopath is not now privileged to remove the tonsils in the manner above stated.

From these facts, and the pertinent provisions of law relating thereto, it is clear that Mr. U. would have no privilege to practice tonsillectomy unless it be by reason of his having received his certificate at a time when such certificate carried with it the privilege of practicing tonsillectomy.

In other words, his present claim to the rights to practice tonsillectomy may be said to depend on the proposition that the granting to him of a license, at a time when such practice of tonsillectomy was permitted, conferred upon him a vested right which the legislature may not afterwards take from him.

An examination of the authorities bearing upon the powers of the state in such matters, and the so-called right to practice medicine, shows:

"From remote times the practice of medicine has been regulated by law, to a greater or less extent."

Culbertson, Medical Jurisprudence, p. 18.
Citing: Rose vs. College of Physicians, 3 Salk., 17; 6 Mod., 44.

"The state has a right to determine under what conditions and under what circumstances its citizens shall be entitled to practice medicine."

American Digest, Century edition, volume 39, p. 918.

People vs. Fulda, 52 Hun., 65; 45 N. Y. Supp., 945.

"* * * and fully sustains the power of the states, under the national constitution, to make and enforce, for the protection of their people, all reasonable regulations and conditions calculated to insure proper qualifications of those who would engage in the practice of medicine," etc.

France vs. State, 57 O. S., 24.

From these and other authorities it is quite clear that the state has ample power to regulate the practice of medicine.

The right to practice medicine, considered as a right, has also received the attention of many courts.

While the practice of medicine is often spoken of as a right, it is not, strictly speaking, a right, but a mere privilege upon the exercise of which the state may impose conditions such as it deems advisable."

State vs. Edmunds, 127 Ia. (4th branch of syllabus) 333; 101 N. W., 431.

As to the right or power of the state to impose new conditions:

"The same reasons which control in imposing conditions, upon compliance with which the physician is allowed to practice in the first instance, may call for further conditions as new modes of treating disease are discovered or a more thorough acquaintance is obtained of the remedial properties of vegetable and mineral substances, or a more accurate knowledge is acquired of the human system and of the agencies by which it is affected."

Dent vs. State of West Virginia, 129 U. S., 626.

This has been regarded as one of the leading cases on this subject and has been followed and approved in a later case also decided by the United States Supreme Court in Hawker vs. People, of New York, 107 U. S., 1002.

It is also stated as a general proposition that the state may take into account the advance of medical science, new and changing conditions and impose new conditions upon the practice of medicine. 30 Cyc., 1548.

The Supreme Court of Ohio has also held:

"One who has an established practice in the healing of diseases may be required to conform to such reasonable standard respecting qualification therefor as the General Assembly may prescribe, having in view the public health and welfare."

State vs. Gravett, 65 O. S., 289 (2d branch of syllabus).

Also:

"In the enactment of legislation of this character, the General Assembly may take account of the advance of learning and provide for the public health and safety by such reasonable and proper measures as increased knowledge may suggest; and to make such legislation effective, one having an established practice, and one contemplating practicing, may be required to conform to the same standard of qualification. This conclusion seems to be justified by the considerations involved, as it is by the authority of the State vs. Gardner, supra, and Dent vs. West Virginia, 129 U. S., 114."

State vs. Gravett, 65 O. S., 309 (of opinion).

These and other authorities which I have examined lead me to the conclusion that the fact that Mr. U. obtained his certificate before the date of this amendment (107 O. L., 152) does not entitle him to perform such operations.

Respectfully

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

SLAUGHTERED ANIMALS—NO AUTHORITY TO PAY INTEREST ON SAID CLAIMS—HOW INTEREST MAY BE AUTHORIZED.

1. The payment of interest on claims for animals slaughtered under section 1114 G. C., is not authorized under sections 1115 et seq. G. C.

2. The legislature, by a two-thirds vote thereof, may authorize payment of such interest, under section 29, Article II, of the Constitution of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 26, 1919.

HON. C. W. KING, Chairman Finance Committee, Columbus, Ohio.

In re: House bill, interest on damages, destruction of animals.

Your letter to me dated January 15, 1919, is as follows:

> "Please find enclosed copy of bill which was introduced in the 82d General Assembly, and which was not allowed on account of being introduced with the sundries bill. In this bill is the contention of the finance committee as to whether they would be allowed to pay interest on same. Please give us your opinion at as early a date as possible."

While the exact question on which you desire my opinion does not seem to be clearly indicated in your letter, I learn from personal conference with you and another member of the committee that the question on which you desire my opinion is whether allowance may be made of interest on the schedule of claims referred to in your letter, the claims referred to being claims for the value of animals slaughtered under authority of section 1114 G. C. As I understand you, the only question which you raise in this matter is, whether interest may be included in allowing the claims as stated in the schedule referred to.

Section 1114 G. C. provides for the killing, disposition and appraisement of animals having an infectious malady.

Section 1115 G. C. establishes the basis of appraisement of and compensation for animals killed under authority of section 1114 G. C.

Section 1116 G. C., more particularly referring to the manner of payment of claims for such compensation, is as follows:

> "All claims of owners of animals killed under the provisions of this act, as fixed by the appraisers or as fixed upon review by the board of agriculture as herein provided shall be paid immediately from funds appropriated by the General Assembly for that purpose."

The purpose of the act, as stated in the first part of section 1114 G. C., is to prevent > "the spread of any dangerously contagious or infectious disease among the live stock of the state."

It has also been held in similar legislation that the expenditure of the public funds for the payment of private claims or expenses incidental thereto, must be expressly authorized before the same may be done legally.

It would appear to be the legislative intention that as soon as claims of animals killed under this act are finally ascertained the same should be paid immediately.

I note in your letter the statement that the claims were not allowed by the 82d General Assembly on account of being included in the sundries bill. However, that does not change the fact that the claim, under authority of section 1114, and when duly certified, was an obligation against the state at that time.

It might be claimed that the individuals listed on the schedule which you enclose having presented and had their claims duly allowed, were entitled to interest upon equitable considerations or under the general statute providing that all creditors shall be entitled to receive interest on all money after the same shall become due, etc. This statute, however, in a claim against the state for interest, was before our Supreme Court in Ohio ex rel vs. Board of Public Works, 36 O. S., 409, where the court held:

> "In the absence of a statute requiring it, or a promise to pay it, interest cannot be adjudged against the state for delay in the payment of money."
> (4th branch of syllabus)
> "It is also insisted by the defendants, that the claim of relators, being one against the state, interest thereon cannot be allowed.
> "On the other hand, it is claimed that the relators are within the terms and meaning of the statute which provides 'That all creditors shall be entitled to receive interest on all money after the same shall become due, either on bond, bill, promisory note, or other instrument of writing, or contract for money or property.' That the words of this statute are broad enough to embrace the claim of relators is not disputed; but it is contended that the state is not embraced within the general words of a statute, and can be held to be within the purview of a statute only when so declared expressly or by necessary implication.
> "The doctrine seems to be, that a sovereign state, which can make and unmake laws, in prescribing general laws intends thereby to regulate the conduct of subjects only, and not its own conduct."
> "In view of these principles, we must hold that the state, as a debtor, is not within the purview of the statute above quoted, and cannot be adjudged to pay interest upon any claim against her in the absence of a promise, expressed or implied, to do so; and it is not claimed that any such promise has been made to relators. Attorney General vs. Cape Fear Navigation Co., 2 Ired, Eq. 444; Auditorial Board vs. Arles, 15 Texas, 72; State vs. Thompson, 5 English, (Ark.) 61; 9 Opinions of Attorney General, 57."

Section 29 of Article II of the Constitution of Ohio is pertinent:

> "No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into; nor shall any money be paid, on any claim, the subject matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing law, unless such compensation, or claim, be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the General Assembly."

The Supreme Court in Fordyce vs. Godman, auditor of state, 20 O. S., p. 14, in construing this constitutional provision, and a statute similar in principle to that contemplated here, says: which we have quoted seems to be plain and explicit; leaving little room for interpretation or construction. It clearly prohibits the payment of any money 'on any claim, the subject matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing law, unless,' etc. We see no reason for interpreting this language in any other sense than that which lies upon the surface, and which the terms used naturally import. In such a sense we may assume that it was understood by the body of the people, through whose votes it became a part of the constitution."

Considered, then, as a claim, the subject matter of which has been provided for by pre-existing law, viz., section 1114 G. C., and the payment of which may be legally provided for by an appropriating statute similar to the act of 1915 (106 O. L., 466), my opinion is that the payment of these claims for interest is not authorized by said section and cannot now be acknowledged as an obligation against the state upon that theory, and that is the theory of the proposed legislation as explained to me in the personal conferences above referred to.

However, by appropriate legislation concurred in by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members of each branch of the General Assembly, these claims may be legally acknowledged as valid obligations against the state and the constitutional requirement may thus be fulfilled.

My opinion, therefore, is that upon this theory, and in this manner, the General Assembly may legally provide for the payments of interest on these claims.

Respectfully
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

INSURANCE—DISAPPROVAL OF ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF HOBART INSURANCE COMPANY—A MUTUAL PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

1. The articles of incorporation of a mutual protective association organized under authority of section 9593 et seq. General Code, must disclose that all of the incorporators possess the qualifications prescribed by those sections, viz.: that they are "persons of lawful age," and are "residents of this state, or an adjoining state and owning insurable property in this state."

2. The articles of incorporation of a mutual protective association organized under authority of sections 9593 et seq. General Code, must specify the kinds of property proposed to be insured with a reasonable degree of certainty and definiteness. A statement in the articles that the property to be insured shall be "property not classed as extra hazardous,' is too general and indefinite in meaning.

3. The articles of incorporation of a mutual protective association organized under authority of sections 9593 et seq. General Code must, by appropriate language, limit or confine the property to be insured to insurable property "in this state."

4. When the incorporation of a company and the contents of its articles of incorporation, such as a mutual protective association, are specially provided for by law, a statement in the articles that the company is formed under the general corporation laws of the state, is erroneous and misleading. The reference if any should be to the special provisions which authorize the incorporation.

5. The names of the incorporators of a corporation organized under the laws of Ohio, should appear in the notarial certificate of acknowledgment as they are subscribed to the articles of incorporation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 27, 1919.

HON. WILLIAM D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 13, 1919, with which you enclosed the proposed articles of incorporation of Hobart Insurance Company for approval by me, was duly received.

Omitting the signatures of the incorporators and the notarial acknowledgments and clerks' certificates, the proposed articles read as follows:

"THESE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF HOBART INSURANCE COMPANY

Witnesseth, That we, the undersigned, all of whom are citizens of the State of Ohio, desiring to form a corporation, not for profit, under the general corporation laws of said state, do hereby certify:

First. The name of said corporation shall be HOBART INSURANCE COMPANY.

Second. Said corporation is to be located at Fremont, in Sandusky county, Ohio, and its principal business there transacted.

Third. Said corporation is formed for the purpose of enabling its members to insure each other against loss or damage by fire or lightning, cyclones, tornadoes or wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas, and to enforce any contract, not inconsistent with the insurance laws of Ohio, which may be by them entered into, by which those entering therein shall agree to be specifically assessed for incidental purposes, and for the payment of losses, which may occur to its members. Its territory for insurance shall be the State of Ohio, and the property that may be insured by this company shall be property not classed as extra hazardous.

In Witness Whereof, We have hereunto set our hands, this 26th of December, 1918."

The proposed articles disclose the intention of the incorporators to organize a mutual protective association under sections 9593 et seq. G. C.

Section 9593 G. C. (107 O. L. 696) provides, among other things, that "Any number of persons of lawful age, not less than ten in number, residents of this state, or an adjoining state and owning insurable property in this state, may associate themselves together for the purpose of insuring each other against loss by fire and lightning, cyclones, tornadoes or wind storms, hail storms and explosions from gas, on property in this state, * * *. Such associations may only insure farm buildings, detached dwellings, schoolhouses, churches, township buildings, grange buildings, farm implements, farm products, live stock, household goods, furniture, pleasure and utility vehicles, motor vehicles; steam, gas, gasoline and oil engines; motor trucks, tractors, electric motors, electric appliances, lighting systems and other property not classed as extra hazardous and such property may be located within or without the limits of any municipality; provided that an association whose membership is restricted to persons engaged in any particular trade or occupation and its insurance confined in any particular kind or description of property may insure property classed as extra hazardous and located in any county or counties in this state; * * *."

Section 9594 G. C. provides that

"Such persons shall make and subscribe a certificate setting forth therein:

1. The name by which the association is to be known.
2. The place which shall be regarded as its center or business office.
3. The object of the association, which shall only be one or more of the objects set forth in the preceding section (9593), and to enforce any contract by them entered into whereby the parties thereto agree to be assessed specifically for incidental purposes and for the payment of losses which occur to its members. The kinds of property proposed to be insured and the casualties specified in such preceding section proposed to be insured against, also must be specified in such certificate."

I am unable to approve the proposed articles of incorporation for the following reasons:

1. The incorporation of mutual protective associations is specially provided for by sections 9593 et seq. G. C., and not by what is commonly known and referred to as the general corporation laws of the state. (Sections 8623-8743 G. C.) By section 8737 G. C., one of the general corporation statutes, it is in substance provided that the general statutes do not apply when special provision is made in subsequent chapters, but that the special provision shall govern, unless it clearly appears that the provision is cumulative. And in State vs. Live Stock Co., 38 Ohio St., 348, it was held that the general corporation laws do not apply to the organization of insurance companies, which are specially provided for in other statutes. The incorporation of mutual protective associations being especially provided for by sections 9593 et seq. G. C. as I have already stated, it necessarily follows that persons desiring to organize themselves into such an association must comply with the statutes governing the incorporation of such companies, both in form and substance.

The recitals in any proposed articles should be such as to clearly disclose that the subscribers possess the qualifications required by section 9593, namely, that they are of lawful age, residents of this state, or an adjoining state and owning insurable property in this state. 3 Op. Atty. Gen. 530; in re Mulholland Benevolent society, 10 Phila. 19; in re Enterprise Mutual Beneficial association, 10 Phila. 380; in re St. Ladislaus association 128 N. Y. S. 561. See also, Baltzel vs. Church, 110 Md. 244, 261; Boatsmen's Bank vs. Gillespie, 209 Mo. 217.

There is also judicial expression to the effect that when the statute confers authority to incorporate upon persons possessing certain qualifications, such as citizenship or residence, it is the duty of the secretary of state to inquire into the question, and that when the duty is imposed upon an officer to pass upon the sufficiency of an application for articles of incorporation, such officer should require strict compliance with these conditions as to residence, etc. of the incorporators. See 1 Thompson, Corporations, section 177.

I also suggest in this connection that if reference is desired to be made in the articles to the Ohio law or statutes under which the subscribers are associating together, the misleading or erroneous statement that they are forming a corporation "under the general corporation laws of said state," should not be used, but instead, a statement to the effect that they are associating themselves together as a mutual protective association under authority of sections 9593 et seq. G. C., should be employed.

2. The contents of the articles of incorporation of a mutual protective association, other than the introductory part, are specifically set forth in section 9594 G. C. supra. Tested by this section, the proposed articles are defective, in that paragraph "third" of the articles does not specify the "kinds of property" proposed to be insured, or confine the property to be insured to insurable property "in this state." It was perhaps intended to meet these statutory requirements by the last sentence in the paragraph referred to, reading as follows:

> "Its territory for insurance shall be the State of Ohio, and the property that may be insured by this company, shall be property not classed as extra hazardous."

It is my opinion, however, that the provision just quoted does not meet the statutory requirement that the "kinds of property * * * must be specified" in the articles. The only attempt at specification is found in the expression, "property not classed as extra hazardous," which are too general and indefinite in meaning, and are not specific. To specify, means "to mention specifically or explicitly, to state in full and explicit terms, or explicitly and in detail, name, expressly, distinctly and particularly."

See 4 Words and Phrases (2nd series) p. 656. "To point out, to particularize, or to designate by words one thing from another." See Words and Phrases, p. 6607.

My conclusion on this point also finds support in section 9593 General Code which enumerates certain insurable property, and also in a former opinion of the Attorney-General. See Op. Atty. Genl. 1910-11, p. 245.

3. As I have already indicated, the proposed articles do not clearly limit or confine the property to be insured to insurable property "in this state." It was perhaps intended to impose this limitation or restriction by the words, "Its territory for insurance shall be the State of Ohio," but in my opinion the language used is open to the possible interpretation that property outside of Ohio might be insured if the contract for insurance is made in the state. The legislature, in enacting section 9593 G. C. which confers corporate power on mutual protective associations, emphasized the limitation "in this state," by using the expression at least three times, and this section, being a grant of corporate power, must be strictly construed in favor of the state.

The proposed articles should clearly and expressly limit or confine the property to be insured to insurable property "in this state." See 1915 Op. Atty. Genl., Vol. 2, p. 1783.

4. I also direct your attention to the signature of Harcene Hobart and to the notarial certificate of C. R. Gording. While it is probable that the first name in the fifth line of the certificate is intended for "Marcene," the names do not exactly correspond, and the conflict should be corrected by the notary.

I return to you herewith the proposed articles of incorporation without my approval, for the reasons above stated.

Respectfully
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—UNION CEMETERY—HOW EXPENSE OF APPROPRIATING ADDITIONAL LAND MUST BE PAID.

When two or more municipalities unite for the purpose of establishing a union cemetery under favor of sections 4183 et seq., the municipality making the appropriation of the land therefor has no authority to provide for and pay the entire expense of the proceeding and damages awarded, and thereafter collect from the other its proportionate share. Each municipality must directly provide and pay its own proper portion of such expense and damages.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 21, 1919, requesting my opinion upon the questions embodied in the following statement of facts, was duly received.

> "Statement of Facts.
> "The villages of Northfield and Macedonia, Ohio, operate a joint cemetery constituted under the laws of this state. It becoming necessary to secure additional ground bordering upon the present cemetery, a contract has been entered into, or rather consummated by condemnation proceedings in court, for additional ground. These condemnation proceedings were finished about October of 1918.
> In the regular semi-annual appropriation ordinance of the village of Northfield, which is the larger village of the two, for the first half of the year 1919 an amount of money was appropriated by the village council from the public service fund with which to pay for the newly acquired property. It was the intention of the village to pay this amount in full from the public service fund, as stated, of the village of Northfield, and then said village was to bill the village of Macedonia its proportionate share of the cost, and upon the collection of said claim, the amount collected would reimburse and replenish the public service fund of the village of Northfield.
> The question was, is such appropriation from the public service fund legal and regular?
> Question 2. Is it proper that the village of Northfield pay the entire amount and then collect the Macedonia portion, or should each village directly pay its proper portion?"

The establishment and management of union cemeteries by two or more municipal corporations is specially provided for by sections 4183 et seq. G. C.

By virtue of section 4183 G. C.;

"The councils of two or more municipal corporations, or of such corporation or corporations, and the trustees of a township or townships, when conveniently located for that purpose, may unite in the establishment and management of a cemetery, by the purchase or appropriation of land therefor, not exceeding in extent one hundred acres, to be paid for as hereinafter provided."

It is then provided that when an appropriation of land for such purpose becomes necessary, it must be made by the municipality having the largest number of inhabitants at the last federal census; and that "in making the appropriation" it acts for itself and the other municipality uniting with it.

The expense of the appropriation and the damages awarded are provided for by section 4188 G. C. which reads as follows:

"The expense of the purchase, or of the proceedings in the case of appropriation, and the damages awarded, or both, shall be borne by the corporations and townships in proportion to the property of each on the duplicate, for taxation. The amount of bonds issued by each in any case, for such cemetery purposes, shall be in the same proportion, and the percentage of taxation for all such cemetery purposes shall be the same in the corporations and townships, but moneys in the hands of the trustees of the cemetery, derived from any source, not needed to keep in order or embellish the grounds, by resolution of the council and trustees of the municipalities and townships interested, may be applied to the expenses of purchase, or appropriation and damages awarded, or both, in securing additional lands for the cemetery."

It is then provided in 4189 G. C. that the cemetery so owned in common shall be under the control and management of the municipal councils, and that the authority over it and their duties in relation thereto shall be the same as where the cemetery is the exclusive property of a single corporation, and authority is conferred by section 4190 G. C. to pass and enforce all ordinances necessary to carry into effect the provisions contained in the statutes relating to such cemeteries.

Provision is then made for joint meetings and the purpose thereof by sections 4192 and 4193 G. C., as follows:

"Sec. 4192. In case of a union for cemetery purposes between a municipal corporation and a township, the council of the corporation and the trustees of the township shall have a joint meeting at the council chamber of the corporation, on the day of the first regular meeting of the council in the month of May of each year, for the purpose of determining the rate of tax to be levied upon the taxable property of the corporation and the township for the purposes herein required. Upon the passage of a joint resolution by a majority of the members of the council and the trustees, fixing the rate of taxation, the clerk of the corporation shall certify such rate to the auditor of the county for assessment and collection. If there is more than one municipal corporation or township united for such purposes, the councils and trustees of the townships shall become such joint body with the same powers as if there had been one such corporation and township, and the clerk of the corporation containing the greatest number of inhabitants shall certify to the auditor as above provided, the rate of taxation."

or councils of such municipal corporation or corporations may at any time call a joint meeting of the council or councils and the trustees of the township or townships, on a reasonable notice given by either, for the purpose of making joint rules and regulations for the government of the cemetery, or changing them, and making such orders as may be found necessary for the application of moneys arising from the sale of lots, taxes, or otherwise."

At any such joint meeting provided for by sections 4192 and 4193 G. C., and under the express authority of section 4193-1 G. C., a board of cemetery trustees consisting of three members may be elected, of which one or more must be members of each of the municipal councils represented at the meeting. The board of trustees so elected is clothed with all powers and must perform all the duties exercised and performed by directors of public service of municipalities under sections 4161 to 4168 inclusive of the General Code.

The only section of the group of statutes specially applicable to union cemeteries which expressly, and in terms, makes provision for the payment of the expenses of appropriation proceedings and the damages awarded, is section 4186 G. C. quoted above.

The provisions of that section that the expense of the appropriation and the damages awarded shall be borne by the municipalities "in proportion to the property of each" on the duplicate for taxation, that the amount of bonds issued "by each" municipality shall be in the "same proportion," and that the "percentage of taxation for all such cemetery purposes shall be the same in the corporation," in my opinion, clearly indicate and impose the duty upon each municipality to raise its own proper share of the total amount. There is certainly no authority in this or any other statute specially applicable to such cemeteries empowering one of the municipalities to raise the whole amount, and then render an account to and collect from the other municipality its proportionate share, and I can find no general statute or court decision authorizing any such transaction. I am of opinion, therefore, that the village of Northfield has no authority to pay the entire amount of the expenses of the appropriation proceedings and the damages awarded, and then collect from Macedonia its proportionate share, but, on the contrary, that each village must directly provide and pay its own portion of the total amount. Northfield was only authorized to act for Macedonia in "making the appropriation" of the land, and not in providing for and paying the expenses and damages referred to. Nothing herein contained is intended to deny the right to apply money in the hands of cemetery trustees to the payment of expenses and damages in acquiring additional lands, as provided in section 4188 G. C.

Respectfully
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN INJUNCTION WILL LIE TO PREVENT USE OF EXPLOSIVES IN EXCAVATING.

Injunction will lie to prevent the use of high-power explosives in making excavations of rock and earth, where the result of such use will be to throw dirt and stone upon the premises of another, thereby greatly endangering the lives of persons there residing and inflicting substantial damages to buildings thereon situate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 3, 1919.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 16, in which you say:

> "The board is in receipt of the following letter from General W. R. Burnett, commandant of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, Sandusky, Ohio:
> 'The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.
> Gentlemen: I respectfully call your attention to the following conditions at Wagner's stone quarries. They are now stripping the soil from the rock, and preparing to blast very close to the home hospital and power plant. If they are allowed to proceed it will greatly endanger the lives of the members while walking around the home grounds, also disturb the peace and happiness of the old men in the hospital, and will no doubt do great damage to the water tower and buildings of the home. If there is any law to prevent them from blasting so near to the home buildings, it should be attended to at once. Respectfully yours,
> The Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home,
> (Signed) W. R. BURNETT, Commandant.'
> Will you kindly advise as soon as possible whether any steps can be taken to prevent blasting so near the home buildings?"

Speaking of the use of high-power explosives for blasting purposes, the Supreme Court of Ohio, in the case of Louden vs. City of Cincinnati, et al., 94 O. S. 144 said (syllabus):

> "The use of high-power explosives in making excavations of rock and earth is a lawful method of accomplishing that purpose, but where dirt and stone are thrown by the force of the blast upon the property of another, or where the work of blasting is done in such proximity to adjoining property that regardless of the care used the natural, necessary or probable result of the force of the explosion will be to break the surface of the ground, destroy the buildings, and produce a concussion of the atmosphere, the force of which will invade the adjoining premises, injuring the buildings thereon and making them unfit and unsafe for habitation, the person or corporation making use of such explosives will be liable for the damage proximately and naturally resulting therefrom, irrespective of the question of negligence or want of skill in the blasting operations. * * *."

The case just mentioned was in the nature of an action for damages, but authorities are also numerous on the proposition that, for the prevention of injuries of the character described in the above quoted syllabus, injunction will lie.

Assuming that the facts relative to the situation in question are precisely as stated in the commandant's letter of inquiry hereinabove set forth, I am of the opinion that recourse to the remedy of injunction would be a proper step to prevent the consequences anticipated in said letter.

Very respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

STATE MEDICAL BOARD—NO PROVISION FOR REHEARING OR NEW TRIAL FOR PHYSICIAN WHOSE CERTIFICATE HAS BEEN REVOKED.

There is no legal provision for a new trial or rehearing by the State Medical Board of Ohio of a charge against a physician under section 1275 et seq. G. C., after said board has finally decided said charge.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1919.

The State Medical Board, DR. H. M. PLATTER, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 15, 1919, as follows:

> "The state medical board, at its meeting on January 7, after notice and hearing, revoked the certificate to practice medicine and surgery in Ohio of L. W. H., of ————, for grossly unprofessional and dishonest conduct, the specific charge being the circulation of advertising matter containing extravagantly worded statements intended or having a tendency to deceive and defraud the public.
> In answer to my notification of the revocation of his certificate, his attorney, Myer Geleerd, has submitted a motion for re-hearing and new trial. This is at variance with former procedure, and I beg to inquire whether there is any provision in the statutes for the consideration of such motion."

The state medical board of Ohio derives its power and exercises its authority by virtue of a delegation of some of the police powers inherent in the state. As said by the Supreme Court in France vs. The State, 57 O. S., 19:

> "The power to pass upon the qualifications required must necessarily be committed to some board or body other than the legislature, and may be, not inaptly, characterized as administrative rather than judicial within the meaning of the constitution."

While the Supreme Court has thus said that its powers may, not inaptly, be termed administrative rather than judicial, in the same case, on page 17, Judge Williams, in the opinion, says:

> "Undoubtedly, the authority conferred by the provisions referred to includes the power to examine into and decide questions requiring the exercise of judgment, such as might, not inappropriately, be conferred on a court."

Therefore, although its powers and duties were held to be non-judicial, in the sense that the act empowering the state medical board did not offend the Constitution by conferring judicial power on the state medical board, yet they are quasi judicial in effect, and may well be likened to such agencies as the board of county commissioners, in passing on compensation and damages in road cases, or, as stated in 57 O. S., 19, to the board of school examiners, and are subject to the same limitations as these boards and commissions, and in the respect that their powers are limited have some of the attributes of courts of limited and special jurisdiction as distinguished from courts of general jurisdiction.

By analogy, the decision of the courts, as to the powers of courts of special and limited jurisdiction, are applicable. In one of these cases, Davis vs. Davis, 11 O. S., 392 (of the opinion) the court say:

> "His (probate court) duties under the statute terminate with that entry and no further action on his part is contemplated. When the entry (of judgment) is once made, in conformity with the statute, his authority in regard to it is at an end."

This was a will election case, in which the probate judge, after the final decision therein, attempted to set aside and vacate the judgment, the power to do which was denied because the probate court was held to be a court of limited and special jurisdiction and, as such, had only such authority as was expressly conferred or necessarily implied in such cases.

Again, in considering the same principle of law in Sapp vs. Sapp, 14 C. C. (n. s.) 270, in holding that the common pleas court was without authority to reopen a case (divorce) which it had finally heard and determined, the court said:

> "The judgment of the court, when so rendered, is not subject to change or modification as in other cases, there being no time fixed for filing a motion for a new trial, nor providing for otherwise contesting said judgment and decree," etc.

The act of the legislature, delegating to municipal corporations, commissions or officers, the police power of the state, is the source of the authority of the corporation or person to whom the police power is delegated to exercise the same.

As said by Judge Cooley, in Cooley, Constitutional Limitations, pp. 227 and 228:

> "The charter, or the general law, under which they exercise their powers, is their constitution, in which they must be able to show authority for the acts they assume to perform. They have no inherent jurisdiction to make laws or adopt regulations of government; they are governments of enumerated powers, acting by a delegated authority", and "can exercise those only which are expressly or impliedly conferred, and subject to such regulations or restrictions as are annexed to the grant."

Concerning powers which are implied, as necessary to the exercise of those powers expressly conferred, the same author, on page 78, says:

> "The implication under this rule, however, must be a necessary, not a conjectural or argumentative one."

Therefore, unless the laws under which the state medical board exercises its power, either expressly or by necessary implication, provide for a new trial, the state medical board is not authorized to re-open and re-hear a case it has once finally determined.

Section 1275-1 G. C. defines the manner of procedure in its hearings, the issuing of process, taking of depositions, etc.

Section 1276 G. C. provides for appeal. In none of these statutes relating to the state medical board are there any provisions for a new trial. An appeal to the common pleas court, with a right to prosecute error to the court of appeals, is provided for in section 1276 G. C.

With these ample provisions for appeal and review of the state medical board's decision by the courts, it cannot be said that the power to rehear its decisions is necessarily implied from the express power to hear and decide in the first instance.

Answering your question specifically, there is no provision in the statutes for the consideration of the motion referred to in your letter.

Respectfully
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—HOW APPOINTMENT OF AN ATTORNEY TO ASSIST SAID OFFICER IN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL CASES CAN BE MADE—FORMER PROSECUTOR NOT DISQUALIFIED.

The Common Pleas Court and the Court of Appeals are authorized to appoint an attorney to assist the prosecutor in the trial of criminal cases pending in such courts, respectively, when in the opinion of the court the public interest requires it. Section 13562 G. C.

The predecessor of the incumbent is not disqualified for such appointment by the fact of his prior incumbency in the office.

Section 2412 G. C. empowers the county commissioners, upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, and if it deems it for the best interest of the county, to employ legal counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney in the prosecution or defense of a civil action to which the county commissioners or other county officers or boards is a party.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1919.

HON. F. M. CUNNINGHAM, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 16, 1919, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "I desire to inquire whether or not there is any legal objection to the appointment by the court of my predecessor in office to assist in the trial of criminal cases where the crime was committed during his incumbency in the office, and could the fact that indictment had been returned in such a case during my predecessor's term of office disqualify him from accepting such appointment.
> I would also like to inquire whether or not the county commissioners can legally employ my predecessor to assist in the trial of civil cases where the cause of action or where the suit was brought during his term of office.
> I fully appreciate the desirabilty of saving as much expense in the employment of counsel as possible, but there are one or two cases in which I have felt it might be for the best interests of the county to request the appointment of assistant counsel or employment of such counsel. And in view of the fact that my predecessor already has in mind the facts in one or two of these cases, I had thought it not improbable that he might be selected."

Authority for the appointment, by the court, of an attorney to assist the prosecuting attorney in the trial of cases pending is found in section 13562 G. C. which provides:

> "The common pleas court and the court of appeals, whenever it is of the opinion that the public interest requires it, may appoint an attorney to assist the prosecuting attorney in the trial of a case pending in such court, and the county commissioners shall pay such assistant such compensation for his services as such court approves and to them seems just and proper."

This action makes appropriate provision for appointment by the court of an attorney to assist in the prosecution of criminal actions pending in such court, when in the opinion of the court the public interest requires such appointment, and also governs the method of providing for the compensation of an attorney so appointed.

I know of no provision of law that would disqualify your predecessor for the appointment to assist in the prosecution of such cases in which the offense may have been committed or the indictment returned during his incumbency.

Your further inquiry as to the authority of the county commissioners to employ your predecessor to assist in the trial of civil cases invokes a consideration of section 2412 G. C. which provides:

> "If it deems it for the best interest of the county, upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, the board of county commissioners may employ legal counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney in the prosecution or defense of any suit or action brought by or against the county commissioners or other county officers and boards in their official capacity."

From this section it appears that upon the written request of the prosecuting attorney, the board of county commissioners are authorized to employ legal counsel to assist in the prosecution or defense of suits brought by or against the county commissioners or other county officers and boards in their official capacity when it is deemed by the board of commissioners to be for the best interests of the county.

A previous enactment providing for appointment by the county commissioners of legal counsel with the functions of a public officer was held unconstitutional, but there appears to be no constitutional objection to this statute in its present form.

I therefore advise that the common pleas court and the court of appeals are authorized to appoint an attorney to assist the prosecutor in the trial of criminal cases pending before such courts respectively, in accordance with the provisions of the statute above cited, and that your predecessor would not be disqualified from accepting such appointment from the fact of his previous incumbency in the office, and further, that upon your written request, the county commissioners would be empowered, if they deem it for the best interests of the county, to employ an attorney to assist in the prosecution or defense of cases pending against them or other county officer or board, and that your predecessor would be qualified to act in that capacity under proper employment.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF NEW CONCORD VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT IN THE SUM OF $10,000.00.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

Re: Bonds of New Concord village school district in the sum of $10,000.00, for the purpose of repairing and furnishing a school house in said district.

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith return to you, with my disapproval, the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of New Concord village school district, relative to the above bond issue.

This issuance of bonds was disapproved by my predecessor in office in Opinion No. 1287, dated June 17, 1918, for the reason that the resolution authorizing the issuance of said bonds provided that no installment of interest should fall due until March 5, 1920.

On January 25, 1919, the transcript of said proceedings was resubmitted for the Attorney General's approval, with the following statement of the clerk of the board of education of said district:

"As we understand it, lapse of time has automatically corrected this defect."

I am in accord with the opinion of my predecessor in office, that this bond issue was invalid, for the reason set forth in his opinion. I am also of the opinion that lapse of time has not, and can not, cure this defect. If the resolution authorizing the issuance of these bonds was invalid when passed, any lapse of time will certainly not cure this defect.

I am of the opinion further that said bond issue should not be approved because the notice required by law was not given for the holding of the election on August 17, 1917, under authority of which said bonds were issued.

For the reasons above given, I advise that you decline to accept said bonds.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES WITHOUT AUTHORITY FOR COMPLETING ROAD IMPROVEMENT BY ASSESSMENT AGAINST ABUTTING PROPERTY WHERE PROCEEDINGS WERE INITIATED IN DIFFERENT MANNER.

Where township trustees, by virtue of then-existing sections 7033 to 7052, which made no provision for raising by assessment any part of the necessary funds, initiate and bring to completion proceedings for a township road improvement, including the raising of funds by a bond issue authorized by vote of the township electors and redeemable through a general tax levied on taxable property of the township—after the completion of which proceedings said sections were repealed; such trustees upon discovering that the funds so raised are insufficient for the doing of the improvement work, are without authority to raise additional funds by proceedings under subsequently-effective sections 3298-5 to 3298-13 providing that the cost of a township road improvement may be paid in whole or in part—as determined by the trustees in their resolution declaring the necessity of the improvement—by assessment against real estate abutting upon or contiguous to the road to be improved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1919.

HON. H. J. THRASHER, Prosecuting Attorney, Chardon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to your communication of December 27, 1918, directed to my predecessor, submitting for opinion the following:

> "In June, 1915, the trustees of Montville township, said county, by resolution, created said township of Montville into a road district, to be known as, 'The Montville Road District'. Following this, by resolution, said trustees made provision for the improvement of a certain public road within the limits of said township road district, describing said road and further provided said improvement to be by grading, draining, curbing, culverting, bridging and paving the same with brick, cement or concrete; further a resolution by said trustees was passed, providing for the submitting to the qualified electors of said township, the question of said road improvement and the issuing and selling bonds therefor in the sum of $30,000.00 and a special election was held on the 15th day of July, 1915, regularly to determine said question of improvement and bond issue, and said proposal was carried in said election by vote of eighty-seven (87) yeas to twenty-four (24) nays in favor of such proposition.
> The bonds were issued and sold.
> By reason of the high cost of material and labor, said sum of $30,000.00, together with the $6,000.00 to be furnished by the commissioners of said county, was found inadequate, and what we are desirous to know now, is by virtue of section 3298-5 to section 3298-13 of the General Code, as enacted under the White-Mulcahy act in June, 1917, will it be possible for trustees of said township by unanimous vote, to provide for the additional cost of said road above the $36,000.00, by placing a special assessment against the abutting property or properties situated one-half (½) mile or one (1) mile on either side of said road."

Your statement shows that the proceedings heretofore had were begun in June, 1915, and completed in July of 1915; hence, I take it that such proceedings were had under favor of sections 7033 to 7052 General Code. All of these sections were repealed as of the first Monday in September, 1915 (105-106 O. L. 574).

Said section 7033 as it was in force in June and July of 1915 read as follows (103 O. L. 475):

> "The board of trustees of a township, when in their opinion, it is expedient and necessary, and for the public convenience and welfare, to improve the public ways of the township, in whole or in part, by grading, macadamizing or graveling, paving with brick, cement or other suitable material, curbing, draining, culverting, and bridging, by resolution, may create the township into a road district for the purpose of improving the public ways therein, or any number of them. If, in the township, there is a municipal corporation or corporations, such trustees, by resolution, may erect the portion or portions of the township not included within the corporate limits of a municipal corporation, into such road district. In like manner the trustees may erect an election precinct, or part thereof, in the township, into such road district."

The sections following section 7033 up to and including section 7052 as in force in June and July, 1915, provided in general for the improvement of roads in the districts created under the terms of section 7033 by the issuing of bonds therefor after the question had been submitted to the electors; the employment of an engineer; the letting of the improvement work upon competitive bids; the sale of the bonds, and the levy of a general tax upon the taxable property of the road district for the payment of the cost and expense of the improvement. Nothing whatever is provided in the sections in question as to assessment against the real estate of abutting or contiguous owners.

Turning to sections 3298-5 General Code and following (107 O. L. 75), which in their original form became effective as of the first Monday in September, 1915 (105-106 O. L. 574), we find a plan whereby township trustees may, without the presentation of a petition, improve a public road and arrange for the payment of the cost and expense thereof by any of the methods provided in section 3298-13 General Code. Said section 3298-5 reads as follows:

> "The township trustees may, without the presentation of a petition, take the necessary steps to construct, reconstruct, resurface, or improve a public road, or part thereof, as hereinbefore provided, upon the passage of a resolution by unanimous vote declaring the necessity therefor. The cost and expense thereof may be paid in any one of the methods provided in section 3298-13 of the General Code, as may be determined by the township trustees in said resolution."

Said section 3298-13 reads as follows:

> "The compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement shall be apportioned and paid in any one of the following methods, as set forth in the petition: All or any part thereof shall be assessed against the real estate abutting upon said improvement, or against the real estate situated within one-half mile of either side thereof, or against the real estate situated within one mile of either side thereof, according to the benefits accruing to such real estate; and the balance thereof, if any, shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes upon the grand duplicate of all the taxable property in the township, or from any funds in the township treasury available therefor; when the board of township trustees acts by unanimous vote and without the filing of a petition, the trustees shall set forth in their resolution declaring the necessity for the improvement, the method of apportioning and paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement, which may be any one of the methods above provided."

Your inquiry is whether by virtue of said sections 3298-5 to 3298-13, the township trustees may, now that they find insufficient for the doing of the contemplated work, the funds originally raised by bond issue and augmented by contribution from the county treasury, proceed through the medium of special assessments against abutting and contiguous real estate, to raise additional funds required for the work.

It seems to me that the principle involved in your question has been settled adversely to your suggested action by our Supreme Court in the case of Cincinnati vs. Seasongood, 46 O. S. 296, whereof the syllabus reads:

"A municipal corporation having through its proper boards and officers passed a resolution and ordinance to improve a street, in its assessment of the cost and expense of the improvement upon the abutting property, it should be governed by the law in force at the time of the passage of its improvement ordinance, with respect to the manner of assessment and the rights and liabilities of the owners of abutting property."

Of similar import is the case of Toledo vs. Marlow, 8 O. C .C. (n. s.) 121; 18 O. C. D. 298, in which the syllabi are as follows:

"1. The several statutory steps required for the improvement of a street by pavement or sewer, constitute a 'proceeding' within the meaning of section 79, Revised Statutes.

2. The rate or amount of lawful assessment by a municipality for a street improvement, such as a pavement or sewer, upon benefited or abutting property, is governed by the statute in force at the beginning of the proceeding.

3. The adoption of the preliminary resolution declaring the necessity of a street improvement, such as a pavement or sewer is, in the absence of a petition by property owners for the improvement, the beginning of a proceeding, which is thereafter 'pending' within the meaning of section 79, Revised Statutes, and unaffected, in respect to limitation of rate of assessment, by an amendatory act not expressly retroactive."

See also Ehni vs. Columbus, 3 O. C. C. 493; 2 O. C. D. 283.

True, the cases cited relate to assessments made greater in amount under purported authority of statutes passed subsequent to the inception of improvement proceedings than was authorized by statute in force at the inception of such proceedings, whereas in the situation submitted by you no assessment whatever was provided for by statute at the inception of the proceedings, but has subsequently been authorized; and true, in the situation you submit, we have side by side the fact that there are funds in the township treasury available for the improvement and the terms of section 3298-13 providing in substance that if part of the cost of the improvement be assessed against abutting or contiguous real estate, the balance shall be paid "from any funds in the township treasury available therefor"; yet any contention based on these premises is effectively disposed of by reference to the last clause of section 3298-13:

"* * * when the board of township trustees acts by unanimous vote and without the filing of a petition, the trustees shall set forth in their resolution declaring the necessity for the improvement, the method of apportioning and paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement, which may be any one of the methods above provided."

When it is borne in mind that the clause quoted relates to action by the trustees in the absence of the filing of a petition, it seems to me that the provision that "the trustees shall set forth in their resolution declaring the necessity for the improvement, the method of apportioning and paying the compensation," etc., must be construed as mandatory, and that unless an assessment is provided for in such original resolution, it is entirely without legality. The language of Judge Williams at page 91 of the opinion in the case of Cincinnati vs. Connor, 55 O. S. 82, that "the rule generally prevails that, independent of any legislative requirement on the subject, statutes imposing taxes and public burdens of that nature are to be strictly construed; and where there is ambiguity which raises a doubt as to the legislative intent, the doubt must be resolved in favor of the subject or citizen on whom the burden is sought to be imposed" is pertinent. And pertinent also is the legislative policy with reference to assessments, as found in section 3911 General Code relating to assessments in municipal corporations, which section reads as follows:

"Proceedings with respect to improvements shall be liberally construed by the councils and courts, to secure a speedy completion of the work, at reasonable cost, and the speedy collection of the assessment after the time has elapsed for its payment, and merely formal objections shall be disregarded, but the proceedings shall be strictly construed in favor of the owner of the property assessed or injured, as to the limitations on assessment of private property, and compensation for damages sustained."

The proceeding contemplated in your inquiry, to-wit: the laying of an assessment by resolution of the trustees, unanimously adopted, certainly may not, for the sole purpose of giving it legal vitality as being in conformity with the last clause of section 3298-13, be treated as an original proceeding, independent of and having nothing to do with the proceedings already had; because the fact is that the improvement itself and the method of raising funds therefor have already been determined upon in conformity with a series of statutes fully covering the matter.

While perhaps unnecessary to a discussion of your inquiry, I call attention to certain "saving provisions" appearing in Chapter XIV of the Highway Act, 105-106 O. L. 574, which act, as above mentioned, repealed as of a date subsequent to the completion of the proceedings you refer to, the said sections 7033 to 7052. These saving provisions, among other things, preserve for specified and limited purposes, certain organizations, and permit the continuance of certain proceedings, authorized by the sections that were being repealed; but there is nothing to indicate an intention that the powers conferred by the new act might be used as supplementary to those conferred by and preserved from the statutes that were being repealed.

I am therefore of opinion that the trustees are without authority to take the action suggested in your inquiry.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE FIRESIDE MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION COMPANY OF CINCINNATI APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1919.

HON. WILLIAM D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is hereby acknowledged of the proposed articles of incorporation of The Fireside Mutual Aid Association Company, of Cincinnati, which you submitted to this department for examination and approval.

While there is some doubt as to whether or not section 9512 G. C., which requires articles of incorporation of insurance companies, other than life, to be submitted to the Attorney-General for approval, because that section appears to apply only to companies organized under the provisions of Chapter I, and not to companies such as The Fireside Mutual Aid Association Company, whose organization is governed by Chapter III, of title 9, division 3, sub-division 1 of the General Code, (see 1916 Op. of Atty. Gen. Vol. 1, p. 65), nevertheless, to make sure of compliance with the requirements of section 9512 G. C., if it does apply, I have examined the proposed articles referred to.

The proposed articles, omitting the signatures of the incorporators, the notarial certificate of acknowledgment and the clerk's certificate of notarial authority, read as follows:

"THESE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION
The Fireside Mutual Aid Association Company

Witnesseth, That we, the undersigned, all of whom are citizens of the State of Ohio, desiring to form a corporation, not for profit, under the general corporation laws of said state, do hereby certify;

First. The name of said corporation shall be The Fireside Mutual Aid Association Company.

Second. Said corporation is to be located at Cincinnati, in Hamilton county, Ohio, and its principal business there transacted.

Third. Said corporation is formed for the purpose of insuring against accidental personal injury and loss of life, sustained while traveling by railroad, steamboat or other mode of conveyance, and against accidental loss of life and personal injury sustained by accident of any description whatever, and against expenses and loss of time occasioned by injury or sickness and on such terms and conditions and for such periods of time, and confined to such countries and localities and to such persons as may at any time be provided in the by-laws of the association under sections 9445 to 9451 both inclusive of the Genral Code of Ohio and doing all things necessary and incident thereto.

In Witness Whereof, We have hereunto set our hands, this 25th day of January, A. D. 1919."

The organization of companies for the special purpose set forth in paragraph "third" of the above articles of incorporation, is expressly authorized and provided for by sections 9445 to 9451 G. C. both inclusive. The only objection to the proposed articles is with respect to the statement therein that the company is formed "under the general corporation laws of said state." As stated in my former opinion No. 14, in re: Articles of incorporation of Hobart Insurance company, dated January 27, 1919, if it is desired to refer in the articles to the law under which the company is organized, the reference should be to the statutes specially applicable to such companies. However, inasmuch as paragraph "third" of the articles in question clearly discloses that the company is being organized under the special provisions of sections 9445 to 9451 G. C., both inclusive, and the articles are unobjectionable in other respects, I do not regard the reference to the general corporation laws of such a serious or prejudicial character as to require my disapproval.

I therefore return the articles of incorporation to you with my certificate of approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

NET WEIGHT OF INSECTICIDE MUST BE STATED ON LABEL IN POUNDS.

The exact net weight of each package of solid insecticide must be stated on the label thereon in terms of pounds, under section 1177-29 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1919.

The Department of Agriculture, N. E. SHAW, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated January 16, 1919, as follows:

> "We enclose inquiry from Allaire Woodward & Co., Peoria, Ill., as to the necessity of stating net weight on their product 'El Vampiro' sold in the State of Ohio.
> The law unquestionably requires statement of net pounds. Would statement of net ounces also be necessary on a legally labeled package?"

From personal conference with Mr. James A. Smith, of your department, I am informed that the product "El Vampiro" is an insecticide, and from your inquiry as to weight, and from facts stated in the letter of Allaire, Woodward & Co., attached to your letter, I assume that their product is not manufactured and put up in liquid form, but is a solid, as defined in section 1177-29 G. C., hereinafter referred to.

Your letter correctly states that the law unquestionably requires a statement of net pounds, and the question upon which you request my opinion is, as I understand your letter, whether a package containing less than a pound must be labeled so as to show the exact or net weight in ounces.

Sections 1177-29, 1177-30, 1177-32, 1177-34 and 1177-40 G. C. are pertinent. These sections are found in the act "to regulate the manufacture and sale of insecticides and fungicides in Ohio" in 103 O. L., page 161, and amended in 107 O. L., 480.

Omitting those parts of said sections which do not apply to insecticides, and which do not affect the question of the necessity of labeling and certifying the weight, they are as follows:

Section 1177-29—"Each person, firm or corporation who manufactures, sells or offers for sale, in this state, * * * any insecticide * * * used for the control of insects or fungus diseases within the state, shall affix to each package in a conspicuous place on the outside therof, a plainly printed or written certificate which shall state, in the case of solids, the number of net pounds * * *. The certificate on each package shall be considered as constituting a guarantee to the purchaser of the contents therein."

Section 1177-30—"Before selling or offering for sale * * * any insecticide * * * used for the control of insects or fungus diseases within the state, each person, firm or corporation shall file with the secretary of agriculture certified copies of the certificate required in the preceding section."

Section 1177-32—"It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to manufacture, sell or offer for sale in the state * * * any insecticide * * * used for the control of insects and fungus diseases within the state, which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act."

Section 1177-34—"The term misbranded as used herein shall apply to any other insecticide * * * used for the control of insects or fungus diseases or any other purpose within the state, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design or device regarding such article * * * which shall be false or misleading in any particular. * * *

For the purpose of this act an article shall be deemed to be misbranded: In case of insecticides * * *. First * * *; second, if it be labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser * * *; third, if in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package.

* * * * * * *"

Section 1177-40 G. C. makes it a misdemeanor for any person or corporation to sell any insecticide within the state without complying with the provisions of this chapter, and fixes a penalty for the punishment thereof.

It will be noted that the two things at which this legislation is directed are adulterating and misbranding.

The first quoted section (1177-29) requires, in the case of solids, the number of net pounds and provides that the certificate on each package shall be considered as constituting a guarantee to the purchaser of the contents therein. In other words it compels the correct labeling of such products and specifically provides that such labels constitute a guarantee to the purchaser that such products are exactly as they are labeled to be, and this, in case of solids, includes the representation and guarantee as to net weight.

In construing the language used in these statutes, we are obliged to give it, as held in Allen vs. Little, 5 Ohio, 65, "the ordinary and natural import of words, consistent with common sense of the community."

In Bouvier's Law Dictionary, page 2332, the words "net" and "net weight" are defined as follows:

"Net. Clear of all charges and deductions; that which remains after the deduction of all charges or outlay, as net profit. St. John vs. R. Co., 22 Wall. (U. S.) 148, 22 L Ed., 743.

The exact weight of an article, without the bag, box, keg, or other thing in which it may be enveloped."

Considering the purpose of the act and the language therein used, I am of the opinion that packages of insecticide, referred to in your inquiry, must state the net weight in terms of pounds.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

GOVERNOR SHALL EXECUTE RELEASES OF MORTGAGES CONVEYED TO STATE TO SECURE PAYMENT OF MONEY.

The Governor, and not the treasurer of state, is the proper officer to execute and deliver releases of mortgages and deeds of release covering lands or tenements mortgaged or conveyed to the state to secure the payment of money. See sections 8530 to 8531 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1919.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 24, 1919, with which you enclosed a communication from Mr. W. P. Ainsworth of Medina, Ohio, a copy of a mortgage given by Asa H. Baird to the state of Ohio on May 4, 1837, and a blank form of release of the mortgage to be signed by the treasurer of state, was duly received.

The execution and delivery of releases of mortgages and of deeds of release, covering lands or tenements mortgaged or conveyed to the state to secure the payment of money are governed by sections 8530 and 8531 G. C., as follows:

> "Sec. 8530.—When lands or tenements are mortgaged to the state to secure the payment of money due to it, and the money so secured, together with the legal interest due thereon, if any, is paid to the treasurer of state, or other officer or agent duly authorized to receive it, the governor shall make, execute, and deliver to the mortgagor, his heirs or assigns, a deed of release of the real estate so mortgaged."
> "Sec. 8531.—When a conveyance of lands or tenements made to the state for any purpose, contains a condition that the real estate so conveyed shall revert to the grantor on the payment of a certain sum of money, or on the performance of other conditions, and the money, with legal interest thereon, from the time it was due or payable, is paid to the treasurer of state, or other officer or agent duly authorized to receive it, or the other conditions stated in such deed are performed according to the stipulations contained therein, on receiving a certificate from the proper officer of such payment or other performance, the governor shall execute and deliver to the grantor, his heirs, or assigns, a deed of release for the property so conveyed."

The legislature having conferred the power of executing and delivering releases of mortgages and deeds of release upon the governor only, I therefore advise that you are without authority to execute and deliver the release sent you by Mr. Ainsworth.

You will observe that under section 8530 G. C., the governor is only authorized to execute and deliver a release of mortgaged property, when the money secured thereby and interest due thereon has been paid to the treasurer of the state; and that before the governor can execute and deliver a deed of release under section 8531 G. C., he must have received a certificate of payment or performance from the treasurer of state or other officer or agent duly authorized to receive the money secured by the conveyance.

I return herewith Mr. Ainsworth's letter and the copy of the Baird mortgage and form of release above referred to.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

OHIO REFORMATORY FOR WOMEN—CAPACITY TAXED—COURTS NOT JUSTIFIED IN DISREGARDING SECTIONS 2148-5 AND 2148-7 G. C.

The fact that the Ohio Reformatory for women does not have the capacity at this time to care for additional prisoners, will not justify the courts in disregarding the provisions of sections 2148-5 and 2148-7 G. C., which require that female offenders, except in certain cases therein specifically provided for, be sentenced to that institution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 6, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 29, requesting my opinion upon the following statement of facts, was duly received:

"STATEMENT OF FACTS.

We are calling your attention to section 2148-7 of the General Code, O. L., 105-106, page 131, and would say that the Marysville reformatory is refusing to accept any more women sentenced thereto for the reason that they are full and can not take care of any more. We have advised an examiner that, in view of this condition, the various judges can only sentence women to jail, or workhouses, as they did before section 2148-7 G. C., became a law, until such time as the Marysville reformatory will be in shape to receive such persons again.

Question: Are we correct in this view?"

The statutes involved in determining your question are sections 2148-1, 2148-5, 2148-6 and 2148-7 G. C. as follows:

"Section 2148-1.—The Ohio reformatory for women shall be used for the detention of all females over sixteen years of age, convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or delinquency as hereinafter provided, and for the detention of such female prisoners as shall be transferred thereto from the Ohio penitentiary and the girls' industrial school as hereinafter provided."

"Section 2148-5.—As soon as the governor shall be satisfied that suitable buildings have been erected and are ready for use and for the reception of women convicted of felony he shall issue a proclamation to that effect, attested by the secretary of state, and the secretary of state shall furnish printed copies of such proclamation to the county clerks of courts and from the date of said proclamation all portions of this act except those relating to the commitment of misdemeanants and delinquents shall be in full force and effect. Whenever additional buildings have been completed so as to care for misdemeanants and delinquents a proclamation shall be issued and published in the same manner and copies furnished to county clerks of courts and to all judges and magistrates having authority to sentence misdemeanants and delinquents and from and after the date of this proclamation all portions of this act relating to the commitment of persons to said reformatory shall be in full force and effect.

All female persons convicted of felony, except murder in the first degree without the benefit of recommendation of mercy, shall be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women in the same manner as male persons are now sentenced to the Ohio state reformatory. And in so far as applicable, the laws relating to the management of the Ohio state reformatory and the control and management thereof, shall apply to the Ohio reformatory for women."

"Section 2148-6.—Female persons over sixteen years of age found guilty of a misdemeanor by any court of this state shall be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women and be subject to the control of the Ohio board of administration, but all such persons shall be eligible to parole under the provisions of this act."

"Section 2148-7. After the issuance of the first proclamation hereinbefore referred to, it shall be unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a felony to be confined in either the Ohio penitentiary or a jail, workhouse, house of correction or other correctional or penal institution, and after the issuance of the second proclamation it shall be unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a misdemeanor or delinquency to be confined in any such place except in both cases the reformatory herein provided for, the girls' industrial school or other institution for juvenile delinquency, unless such person is over sixteen years of age and has been sentenced for less than thirty days, or is remanded to jail in default of payment of either fine or costs or both, which will cause imprisonment for less than thirty days, provided that this section shall not apply to imprisonment for contempt of court."

The proclamations referred to in section 2148-5 G. C. have been issued by the governor as therein provided, and by reason thereof section 2148-5 and 2148-7 G. C. are in full force and effect.

By the express mandate of section 2148-5 G. C. all female persons convicted of felony, except murder in the first degree without benefit of recommendation of mercy, must be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women; and under section 2148-7 G. C. it is unlawful to sentence any female convicted of a felony to be confined in either the Ohio penitentiary or a jail, workhouse, house of correction or other correctional or penal institution, or to sentence any female convicted of a misdemeanor or delinquency to be confined in any of the places of confinement mentioned, excepting only (1) those sentenced for less than thirty days, (2) those remanded to jail in default of payment of fines or costs, or both, which will cause imprisonment for less than thirty days, (3) those guilty of contempt of court, and (4) those eligible to commitment to the girls' industrial school or other institutions for juvenile delinquency.

Female offenders who are not within any of the classes specifically excepted must be sentenced to the Ohio reformatory for women, and not to the other institutions named in section 2148-8 G. C. The fact that the reformatory does not have the capacity at this time to care for additional prisoners, will not justify the courts in disregarding the provisions of the statutes above referred to, nor can it have the effect of conferring authority upon the courts to sentence offenders to the prohibited institutions.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF LISBON VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT IN THE SUM OF $16,500.00.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO INVEST PROCEEDS OF SINKING FUND LEVIES IN INTEREST-BEARING SECURITIES FOR PURPOSE OF ACCUMULATING SINKING FUND.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1919.

HON. A. HARMON HOLDERNESS, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 21 requesting my opinion as follows:

"Our county commissioners would like to have the following legal questions answered from your office:

Can county commissioners as county commissioners buy their own county bonds?

Can county commissioners buy the county bonds with funds of sinking fund?

Do county commissioners have to issue serial bonds?

You understand their idea for wanting to use sinking fund is that they only get 1 per cent interest on sinking fund and if they could buy their own bonds it would be a saving of 4 per cent as they would have to pay 5 per cent interest on bonds.

The purpose of the coming bond issue is for indebtedness of children's home, judicial election, and general county indebtedness."

On June 10, 1918, my predecessor in office in opinion No. 1262, addressed to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, passed upon the several questions presented by you. This opinion was rendered in answer to a question raised by the auditor of your county, which doubtless was occasioned by the same situation referred to in your letter.

I agree with the conclusion expressed by my predecessor and herewith enclose a copy of his opinion, which fully answers the three questions submitted by you.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TEACHERS ENTITLED TO PAY FOR TIME LOST OWING TO EPIDEMIC.

A board of education may not avoid the effect of section 7690 G. C., by declaring a special vacation. Teachers are entitled to pay for time lost owing to epidemic, but such time is not presumed to be on holidays when schools are ordinarily closed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of your request of January 16, followed by your further supplemental statement of January 20, for the opinion of the Attorney-General on the following statements of facts, submitted by the clerk of the board of education of the city of Cambridge, Ohio, to your office in regular form through the city solicitor of said city. Such communications are as follows:

"January 7, 1919.

William H. Brown, Esq., City Solicitor, Cambridge, Ohio.

Dear Sir:—

Re: Teacher's salary—Quarantine—Vacation.

By the order of the school board of the city of Cambridge, I am directed to submit to you and through you to the Attorney-General of Ohio, the questions arising out of the action of our local board in declaring a vacation of the public schools for this city on November 29 to December 30, 1918, while the city was under a quarantine prohibiting public meetings including sessions of the schools.

Sometime prior to November 29 the board of health of the city had declared the quarantine and after this situation had been running for six weeks or more, and not knowing how long the quarantine would continue, the board of education met November 29, 1918, and declared the holiday vacation to commence at that date and to end Monday morning December 30, 1918. Notice of this action was given in the newspapers and a great many of the teachers secured employment, others left the city and went to their homes. It has been the custom here for years to have one or two weeks vacation for the holidays and this without pay to the teachers.

The minutes showing the employment of teachers are in the following form, to-wit:

'June 17, 1918.

Motion by Rigby, seconded by Stewart, following appointments heretofore made and approved, the following teachers were employed for the high school at the salaries set opposite their names, to-wit:

W. E. Arter	$250.00 month	$2,250.00 year
D. R. Frasher	172.22 month	1,550.00 year
J. O. Eagleson	161.11 month	1,450.00 year

(Here continue names of balance).'

Schools were opened for the school term on September 2, 1918, and on account of the epidemic of influenza, we only had six or seven weeks of school in the three months and one week ending November 29, and for all of which time the teachers were fully paid their salaries. We had increased the salaries of teachers around $10,000.00 over that of the last year and our appropriation by the budget commission for tuition is short more than $10,000.00. We paid out salaries for six weeks the sum of $9,500 covering the time there was no school on account of the ban on public gatherings.

With this condition confronting the school board, to-wit, shortage of funds and loss of time, a situation was created which would mean the failure of many of the pupils to be promoted and thereby lose the year's work. We therfore declared this vacation to help the situation and intending thereby to have school continue until June 20, 1919, instead of having it close on May 23, as it would have done if no vacation had been declared.

The teachers, or a great number of them, are dissatisfied with the action of the school board and are claiming and demanding their pay for at least the first three weeks of December, apparently willing to concede the regular holiday week as a proper vacation. The action of the board in declaring the vacation was not unanimous and at present it seems to be the desire of a majority of the board to reconsider and vacate or set aside its act in declaring the vacation and to allow the salaries for the first three weeks in December if that action can legally be taken now and not become liable personally for a misappropriation of the public funds.

It resolves itself to the question of the legality of the act of the board in declaring the vacation. If that was legally done and the time having expired or elapsed, the board certainly could not now set it aside and pay the salaries during that time. If it was an illegal act, it would not need to be rescinded or set aside.

We have been unable to find an exact precedent reported anywhere in the courts. The question of closing schools on account of an epidemic, the destruction of school buildings, attempt to shorten the term, act of God, and many other similar situations have been before the courts. In most of these cases, however, and especially in epidemic closings, the court comments on the closing being temporary and the teacher being required to hold himself in readiness to resume his work at any day.

It was not the intent of the board to keep the teachers from getting their full nine months salary. It simply meant that they were to have one month vacation in December, 1918, and the remaining two months vacation in July and August, 1919. The school year commences September 1 and ends August 31 of the following year. The employment was not for any certain nine months. In the management and control of the schools authorized by the statute, the board always fixes the time for opening school and the Xmas holiday period, one or two weeks, and sometimes a week of holidays in April, and this has always been done without consulting the teachers. In this instance the board could not consult the teachers because such a public meeting of 80 or more teachers was prohibited.

A majority of the board want to rescind its action and pay the teachers for the three weeks to prevent any further feeling and to secure the better co-operation of the teachers if it can be legally done.

We would appreciate a prompt opinion in this matter and will furnish further facts that may be requested or required.

Some citations are handed herewith on a separate sheet.

Respectfully submitted,
Board of Education of Cambridge, O.
By GEO. D. DUGAN, Clerk."

"January 9, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—I am submitting herewith a communication from the board of education of the Cambridge City school district, relative to their recent action in declaring a vacation of the schools because of quarantine order of the board of health, teachers to be without salary during such vacation.

The board are very anxious for an early opinion as to this matter and I am asking that you submit the question to the Attorney-General's office at your earliest opportunity, that I may be able to transmit an authoritative opinion without delay.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) WILLIAM H. BROWN,
City Solicitor, Cambridge, Ohio."

"January 20, 1919.

Hon. John G. Price, Attorney-General, Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Sir:—Relative to the question submitted to you by this department originating from Mr. Wm. H. Brown, the city solicitor of Cambridge, Ohio, we would say that we have a later communication from which the following is a quotation:

'In our case, the board of education declared a vacation on the 29th day of November, commencing at that date and ending December 20, 1918. If the quarantine had been declared off on the next day after the vacation was declared, we think there could be no question but that the vacation would have continued in effect. During this time and on account of the vacation having been declared, the teachers were not required 'to hold themselves in readiness to commence again whenever ordered' as seems to be a very controlling factor in the reasoning for paying for time lost on account or owing to an epidemic. I do not know that any person has raised the question as to whether the Spanish influenza was an epidemic. We take it that goes without question that it was.

We believe that our original letter makes a complete and fair statement of the facts upon which we desire an opinion. It might be put in the form of the following questions:

1. Did the board have the legal right to declare the vacation?
2. If they did not, can they now legally rescind that action and pay the teachers for that month?
3. Would the board as individuals be liable at the suit of any taxpayer for the repayment of that month's salary?
4. Suits being threatened, both by the teachers to collect and by taxpayers if the board does voluntarily pay, would it be possible to have the city solicitor or prosecutor, or both, enjoin the board temporarily, and have the matter finally determined by a court in a proper action brought for that purpose?

Yours very truly,
BUREAU OF INSPECTION AND SUPERVISION OF PUBLIC OFFICES."

The question here is, whether the board of education performed a legal act in declaring a vacation of the schools, without pay to teachers, because of quarantine order of the board of health, such vacation running during the time of such quarantine.

Attention is invited to section 4448 G. C., which reads:

"Semi-annually, and oftener if in its judgment necessary, the board of health shall inspect the sanitary condition of all schools and school buildings within its jurisdiction, and may disinfect any school building. During an epidemic or threatened epidemic, or when a dangerous communicable disease is unusually prevalent, the board may close any school and prohibit public gatherings for such time as it deems necessary."

From the above language of the statute it will be noted that the board of health may close any school and prohibit public gatherings for such time as it deems necessary, when a dangerous communicable disease is unusually prevalent, as was the condition existing in Ohio in the latter part of the year 1918, when a contagious disease known as Spanish influenza made its appearance.

The statement of facts indicates that a number of weeks prior to November 29, 1918, the board of health of the city of Cambridge had declared a quarantine on account of the epidemic of influenza; that the board of education recognizing this official quarantine prior to their meeting of November 29, in that but six or seven weeks school was held in the three months prior thereto; that at the time of such board meeting such quarantine was in force, on account of such prevalent disease in such community and the board had full official knowledge thereof; that the board of education at such meeting, on November 29, declared a vacation of the public schools, teachers to be without salary during such vacation, the apparent reason for such vacation (starting so far ahead of the customary holiday vacation) being the epidemic of influenza.

It seems that all teachers were legally employed under the resolution of the board of education, passed June 17, 1918, such resolution of employment stipulating a certain sum per month, and there was no other contract, and that all such teachers were paid each month for time lost on account of the epidemic prior to November 29, when such vacation was declared, the board thereby recognizing and obeying voluntarily section 7690 G. C., which reads as follows:

"Each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character in the district * * *. Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made. Teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other public calamity."

It will be noted that the language of the above statute regarding teacher's pay is mandatory and not discretionary with any board, that payment must be made "for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic," and such time accrues at the end of each school month and not at a later period.

Further, the resolution of employment, dated June 17, 1918, mentions specifically so much salary per month as well as the gross total for nine months; seemingly, if the intent was not to pay at the end of the school month, then such insertion in the employing resolution is unnecessary and only the total would be carried.

It would seem, therefore, that the action of the board of education of Cambridge on November 29, in declaring a vacation during the period in which the board of health of such city had established a legal quarantine on account of an epidemic, and which the board of education recognized was an action unwarranted and unnecessary in the premises, and the withholding of the salaries of teachers "when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic," is in contravention of section 7690 G. C.

It is unfortunate that the youth of the state have lost so much time in school work during the prevalence of the epidemic in question, but it was a matter in which man had little control and the situation must be met in each community as best possible; boards of education are to be commended in their desire to conserve the finances given to their care, but they cannot violate state law in their disbursing of such funds, and failure to pay teachers in time of epidemic, established by boards of health, is such violation and the calling of such period of quarantine a vacation is a subterfuge not to be encouraged. It is unquestionably true that the public will suffer in a general way, but in the case of Salt Co. vs. Guthrie, 35 O. S., 672, the Supreme Court says:

"Courts will not inquire as to the degree of injury inflicted on the public. It is enough to know that the inevitable tendency of such contracts is injurious to the public."

Growing out of this question, attention is invited also to the opinion of the Attorney-General, 1911-1912, page 1322, in which he held that a "contract to make up for legal holidays and for time lost in the event of epidemic, would be void because against the statute and public policy of the State of Ohio."

This opinion further quoted says:

"The board cannot compel teachers to sign up a written contract to make up for legal holidays and for time lost in the event of epidemic, for the reason that an agreement which is in contravention to statutory provisions, whose waiver would violate public policy expressed therein, or the rights of the public, which the statute was intended to protect, are involved, would to that extent be illegal and void."

It is apparent, therefore, that the time lost accrues at the end of each school month and not at a later date when such time (lost on account of epidemic) might be made up, for section 7690 G. C. specifically takes care of teachers' salaries during epidemics.

From your statement of facts it is noted that the Cambridge schools have a regular holiday week vacation, when your schools are not in session even in years when there is no epidemic, indicating that such vacation is a custom and regularly declared by the board of education each year, the question of epidemic not entering into such customary vacation. Such being the case, your schools would be closed during the regular holiday vacation, notwithstanding the prevalence of an epidemic, and time covered by a holiday vacation that is a customary annual occurrence would not fall within the scope and intent of section 7690 G. C., which provides that such time lost must have been "owing to an epidemic."

It is therefore believed, and the opinion of the Attorney-General is, that a resolution passed during an epidemic by a board of education, declaring a vacation of the public schools, teachers to be without salary while the schools in which such teachers are employed are closed owing to an epidemic and legal quarantine by the board of health, is illegal and void, being in contravention of section 7690 G. C.

Such resolution being superfluous, illegal and void, it never was legally in effect and a rescission of an illegal and void action is not necessary and the teachers are entitled, by state law, to their pay for the school days lost on account of such epidemic, but not for days in a customary recognized holiday vacation that occurs annually, regardless of epidemic.

Board of education members would not be liable personally for doing what section 7690 G. C. mandatorily says they must do as a board, that is, pay the teachers for all time lost when their schools are closed owing to an epidemic.

It is the policy of the Attorney-General not to encourage groundless litigation and it is hardly probable that the board of education could be enjoined from doing what section 7690 G. C. says, by mandate, they must do, it being generally conceded that an epidemic was prevalent and the schools in question were closed outside the holidays primarily by reason thereof.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN PERSON CHARGED WITH SALE OF UNWHOLESOME AND ADULTERATED FOOD ENTITLED TO TRIAL BY JURY—SECTION 12760 G. C. CONSTRUED.

In a criminal case before a justice of the peace, wherein the charge is the sale of unwholesome and adulterated food, contrary to section 12760 G. C., the defendant is entitled to a trial by jury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1919.

HON. TOM A. JENKINS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:——Your letter of January 31, 1919, relative to the case of State of Ohio vs. Durstein, is at hand. The question contained therein may be put thus:

In a criminal case before a justice of the peace, wherein the charge is the sale of unwholesome and adulterated food, contrary to the provisions of section 12760 G. C., is the defendant entitled to a trial by jury?

Section 12760 G. C. says:

> "Whoever sells, offers for sale, or has in possession with intent to sell, diseased, corrupted, adulterated or unwholesome provisions without making the condition thereof known to the buyer, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars or imprisoned twenty days, or both."

It will be noted that the penalty prescribed by this section may be that of imprisonment.

Under this circumstance, the right of the defendant to a trial by jury is assured by both constitutional and statutory provisions.

Sections 5 and 10 of Article I of the Constitution of Ohio say:

> "Section 5.—The right of trial by jury shall be inviolate, except that, in civil cases, laws may be passed to authorize the rendering of a verdict by the concurrence of not less than three-fourths of the jury."
> "Section 10.—Except in cases of impeachment, cases arising in the army and navy, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger, and cases involving offenses for which the penalty provided is less than imprisonment in the penitentiary, no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on presentment or indictment of a grand jury; and the number of persons necessary to constitute such grand jury and the number thereof necessary to concur in finding such indictment shall be determined by law. In any trial, in any court, the party accused shall be allowed to appear and defend in person and with counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, and to have a copy thereof; to meet the witness face to face, and to have compulsory process to procure the attendance of witnesses in his behalf, and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county in which the offense is alleged to have been committed; but provision may be made by law for the taking of the deposition by the accused or by the state, to be used for or against the accused, of any witness whose attendance can not be had at the trial, always securing to the accused means and the opportunity to be present in person and with counsel at the taking of such deposition, and to examine the witness face to face as fully and in the same manner as if in court. No person shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; but his failure to testify may be considered by the court and jury and may be made the subject of comment by counsel. No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense."

That sections 5 and 10, supra, were intended to guarantee the right of trial by jury as it existed under the constitution of 1802 and at common law, is the interpretation many times given by our courts.

> Work vs. State, 2 O. S. 296.
> Inwood vs. State, 42 O. S. 186.
> Ames vs. State, 11 O. N. P. (n. s.) 385.
> Terry vs. State, 3 O. C. C. (n. s.) 593.

Accordingly, statutes which authorize a penalty by fine only, upon a summary conviction under a police regulation, are not in conflict with either of said constitutional provisions, even though imprisonment, as a means of enforcing the payment of the fine, is authorized.

Inwood vs. State, cited supra.

Section 13432 G. C. says:

> "In prosecutions before a justice, police judge or mayor, when imprisonment is a part of the punishment, if a trial by jury is not waived, the magistrate, not less than three days nor more than five days before the time fixed for trial, shall certify to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county that such prosecution is pending before him."

In the case of Simmons vs. State, 75 O. S. 346, the court, construing section 13432 G. C., held that the waiver of a jury under said section must clearly and affirmatively appear upon the record, and such waiver can not be assumed or implied, by a reviewing court, from the silence of the defendant or from his mere failure to demand a jury.

You are therefore advised that in a criminal case before a justice of the peace, wherein the state charges a sale of unwholesome and adulterated food contrary to section 12760 G. C., the defendant is entitled, as of right, to a trial by jury.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

WITHDRAWAL OF SECURITIES DEPOSITED WITH TREASURER OF STATE UNDER SECTION 9778 G. C. DISCUSSED—THE TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS AND SECURITIES INSURANCE CORPORATION, LONDON, ENGLAND.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1919.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 1 requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Under section 9778, the Trustees, Executors and Securities Insurance Corporation, Ltd., a trust company of Winchester House, Old Broad street, London, England, deposited under date of April 18, 1916, $100,000 as a deposit, in accordance with the laws governing trust companies.
> This company has changed its name to The Trustees Corporation, Ltd. There is on deposit in this department, to the credit of the Trustees, Executors and Securities Insurance Corporation $100,000 in U. S. Third Liberty loan bonds. This company now desires, in the change of name, to withdraw this deposit. There is nothing in the law that would permit the treasurer of state to surrender this deposit, and in order that the treasurer may have full protection in the matter, we are asking you for your opinion in the premises.
> We herewith beg to enclose all papers submitted through the law firm of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey of Cleveland, Ohio."

The papers referred to in your letter and which I refer to by number are as follows:

(1) Certificate showing change of name from the "Trustees Executors and Securities Insurance Corporation, Limited," to the "Trustees Corporation, Limited."

(2) Indenture between the Trustees Corporation, Limited, and The Guardian Savings and Trust Company.

(3) Assignment of deposited bonds by the Trustees Corporation, Limited, to The Otis Steel Company.

(4) Affidavit of the secretary of the Trustees Corporation, Limited.

(5) Resolution of The Guardian Savings and Trust Company assuming liability of the Trustees Corporation, Limited, under the trust deed of The Otis Steel Company.

(6) Certificate that the Trustees Corporation, Limited, has retired from business in Ohio.

(7) Copy of trust mortgage from The Otis Steel Company to The Guardian Savings and Trust Company and the Trustees Executors and Securities Insurance Corporation, Limited, as trustees.

Section 9778 G. C., under authority of which the Trustees Executors and Securities Insurance Corporation, Limited, deposited $100,000.00 with the treasurer of state, is as follows:

"No such corporation either foreign or domestic shall accept trusts which may be vested in, transferred or committed to it by an individual, or court, until its paid in capital is at least one hundred thousand dollars, and until such corporation has deposited with the treasurer of state in cash fifty thousand dollars if its capital is two hundred thousand dollars or less, and one hundred thousand dollars if its capital is more than two hundred thousand dollars, except that, the full amount of such deposit by such corporation may be in bonds of the United States, or of this state, or any municipality or county therein, or in any other state, or in the first mortgage bonds of any railroad corporation that for five years last past paid dividends of at least three per cent on its common stock."

I find no provision in the General Code of Ohio which authorizes the withdrawal of a deposit made under authority of the section just quoted. The legislature apparently did not anticipate that occasion would ever arise when the withdrawal of such deposit would be requested.

From the affidavits and certificates enclosed in your letter and above referred to it appears that the Trustees Corporation, Limited, has never at any time undertaken or engaged in any trust capacity except the single instance in connection with The Otis Steel Company, in which The Guardian Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland acted as joint trustee. If these affidavits and certificates are as a matter of fact true, and if upon investigation you are satisfied that the Trustees Corporation, Limited, has no present or possible future liabilities, I believe you would be justified in permitting the company to withdraw this deposit. This, however, is purely a question of fact for you to decide and for the correctness of which decision you must be responsible. As Attorney-General I am authorized to advise you only in respect to the existing laws governing the situation, and, as stated above, I find no provision of law covering the situation presented by you.

I might suggest further the advisability of securing the passage of a legislative act amending or supplementing section 9778 G. C. to care for similar situations which may arise in the future.

The papers submitted with your letter are herewith returned.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COURT COSTS CHARGEABLE UNDER MOTHERS' PENSION ACT.

The only court costs chargeable under the mothers' pension act are those incident to the hearing of the motion provided for under section 1683-8 G. C. Opinion of former Attorney-General on this subject approved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1919.

HON. D. W. YOUNKER, Probate Judge, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The receipt of your letter of December 14, 1918, addressed to my predecessor in office, Hon. Joseph McGhee, and by him turned over to me for reply, is acknowledged.

Your letter reads as follows:

> "The General Code, sections 1683-2 et al., providing for mothers' pensions, makes no provision for the payment of any costs in regard to these matters.
> Is it right and proper to assess the costs for performing the clerical work under the general statute, applicable to the assessment of costs in the court of common pleas? That is, so much for filing each paper and so much for issuing each writ or order. Or is the clerk expected to perform all of these duties without making any charge whatever?"

The question of what costs are chargeable under the so-called mothers' pension act (sections 1683-2 to 1683-9, inc., G. C.) has already been the subject of opinion by the Attorney-General.

In Opinion No. 1063, directed to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, Columbus, Ohio, and under date of July 20, 1914, the Attorney-General said:

> "* * * I am of the opinion that no fees or costs of any character whatever are to be charged or collected from any source on account of 'proceedings' under the mothers' pension act prior to the filing of a motion to set aside or vacate or modify the judgment of allowance."
> 1914 Atty. Gen. Rep., Vol. I, p. 1012.

Said opinion further held (p. 1013):

> "In my opinion, fees are chargeable for filing the motion provided for in section 1683-8, for issuing and serving processes, for compelling the attendance of witnesses, to witnesses for attending under subpoena and for making the 'new order' of which section 1683-8 speaks; and as already indicated, the precise fees chargeable in the given instance are to be determined by reference to the statutes regulating fee bills, in the court which happens, at the time, to be exercising juvenile jurisdiction."

With the conclusions just above quoted, I find myself in agreement. With some of the reasons adduced in said opinion in support of those conclusions, I am not, however, entirely satisfied. In particular, I am not inclined to attach as much weight as the opinion does to the contention that fees are not chargeable if and when they relate to services rendered for the public and not for private individuals. Now that all the fees and costs, collected or received by a probate judge and the other public officers mentioned in section 2977 G. C., are received and collected as public moneys for the sole use of the treasury of the county in which said officers are elected, the distinction recognized in said opinion, between fees paid by the person for whom a private service is to be rendered and fees paid out of the public treasury, is not, in my judgment, of much help in answering the question under discussion. The sole inquiry, in a case of this kind, is this: Is there a statute which authorizes the court to tax costs?

See Farrier vs. Cairns, 5 Ohio 45, 48.

Except as noted in the opinion above referred to, I find no statute bearing on this question.

With the slight difference above noted, I am in full accord with the opinion of the former Attorney-General, hereinbefore cited.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BLIND RELIEF—HOW TO DETERMINE RESIDENTIAL QUALIFICATIONS—REMOVAL FROM ONE COUNTY TO ANOTHER.

In order to acquire the residential qualifications essential to an award of blind relief, the applicant must have resided and supported himself within the county for twelve consecutive months without relief under the laws providing for relief of the poor.

A person removing from one county to another, but continuing to receive blind relief from the county of her former abode, does not acquire the residential qualifications entitling him to receive blind relief from the latter county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1919.

HON. WALTER S. RUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 24, 1919, you requested my opinion upon the following statement of facts and inquiry:

"A totally blind person moved from Cleveland, Cuyahoga county, to Canton, Stark county, over a year ago. Prior to the time of her removal from Cleveland to Canton she was granted relief by the county commissioners of Cuyahoga county and for a period for one year after her removal from Cuyahoga county she was receiving relief from Cuyahoga county. At the expiration of one year she applied to the county commissioners of Stark county for relief.

The county commissioners have asked me for an opinion as to whether in such a case they were justified in granting her relief. I have been unable to find any opinion from your office upon this question and have been informed that in some counties they do not grant relief to blind persons who have been receiving aid from other counties. The county commissioners feel that a person receiving blind relief is in the same class as a pauper and should not be permitted to move from one county to another.

I would be very glad to have your opinion upon this question."

The operative law governing blind relief is found in sections 2962 to 2970 G. C. inclusive, as amended in 103 O. L. 60.

The original legislation on this subject, as enacted April 25, 1904, was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in the case of Auditor of Lucas county vs. State, 75 O. S. 114, for the reason that it authorized the expenditure, for private purposes, of public funds raised by taxation. In 1913 the legislature amended and supplemented the provisions of the original act of 1904, effectually restricting the provisions for relief to such persons, as by reason of loss of eyesight, would become a charge upon the public, or upon those not required by law to support them, unless granted the relief provided by the act.

The curative provisions of this amendment of 1913 as found in 103 O. L. 60, were held by the Supreme Court to remove the objectionable features of the original act, and the legislation as thus amended was held constitutional. See State ex rel. vs. Edmondson, 89 O. S. 351.

In the opinion in this case, after noting the extent and character of the modification introduced by the amendment, the court says:

"It will, therefore, be seen that the statute seems to have been drawn for the purpose of carefully avoiding the defects in the statute of 1904 pointed out by the court in Lucas county vs. State, supra. The relief provided for in the latter statute is limited to those who are, or will become, charges upon the public, or upon those not required by law to support them, and is the only public relief that may be given to them."

It might be noted in this connection that an enactment of 1913 relating to the subject of blind relief, and found at page 833 of Vol. 103 O. L. was held in 89 O. S. 351, supra, to be unconstitutional and inoperative by reason of the same infirmities, among others, as were fatal to the original enactment of 1904.

Your inquiry, therefore, relative to residential qualifications for receiving blind relief invites consideration of section 2966 G. C. taken in connection with the provisions of the amendatory act in 103 O. L. 60, relating to the administration of such relief. Section 2966 G. C. provides:

"In order to receive relief under these provisions, a needy blind person must become blind while a resident of this state, and shall be a resident of the county for one year."

Section 2967 G. C. (103 O. L. 60) provides:

"At least ten days prior to action on any claim for relief hereunder, the person claiming shall file with the board of county commissioners a duly verified statement of the facts bringing him within these provisions. The list of claims shall be filed in a book kept for that purpose in the order of filing, which record shall be open to the public. No certificate of qualification of drawing money hereunder shall be granted until the board of county commissioners shall be satisfied from the evidence of at least two reputable residents of the county, one of whom shall be a registered physician, that they knew the applicant to be blind and that he has the residential qualifications to entitle him to the relief asked. Such evidence shall be in writing, subscribed to by such witnesses, and shall be subject to the right of cross-examination by the board of county commissioners or other person. If the board of county commissioners be satisfied upon such testimony that the applicant is entitled to relief hereunder, said board shall issue an order therefor in such sum as said board finds needed, not to exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per annum, to be paid quarterly from the funds herein provided on the warrant of the county auditor, and such relief shall be in place of all other relief of a public nature."

The phrase "shall be a resident of the county for one year" in section 2966 G. C. supra, in my opinion, has the same significance as the term "legal settlement" in the statutes relating to the general administration of poor relief.

The relief provided for the needy blind was considered by the court in 89 O. S. 351, supra, as in the nature of poor relief, and at page 357 of the opinion the court said:

"The express object, and the practical provision, of the enactment is to furnish relief to the blind who are poor and needy, and to avoid the public burden.

It is not questioned that the relief of the poor is a proper public purpose."

At page 358 the court said:

"Outdoor relief of the poor, as distinct from relief in institutions, was fixed as part of the policy and practice of Ohio one hundred years ago."

In the chapter of the code providing for public relief for the poor, section 3477 G. C. provides in part:

"Each person shall be considered to have obtained a legal settlement in any county in this state in which he or she has continuously resided and supported himself or herself for twelve consecutive months, without relief under the provisions of law for the relief of poor."

In addition to the wholesome public purpose to provide for the well being of the poor, the law evidences the further proper solicitude for placing the burden of such support upon the proper county. The provisions of the statute make the residential qualifications jurisdictional, and this must be established from the evidence of at least two reputable residents of the county before any discretion as to awarding relief may be exercised by the commissioners.

Since in order to gain a legal settlement in any county of the state, a person must have resided therein continuously and supported himself or herself for twelve consecutive months without relief under the provisions of law for the relief of the poor, it therefore becomes apparent that under the facts stated in your inquiry, no legal settlement was acquired, inasmuch as the person in question has been receiving relief from Cuyahoga county during all or a portion of the year preceding her application for relief from Stark county, and I therefore hold that such person would not have the residential qualifications to entitle her to receive blind relief upon her application to the commissioners of Stark county.

I find that my predecessor has considered a similar question in an opinion found at page 1432 of Vol. 2, Reports of Attorney-General for the year 1915, and the following is quoted from said opinion:

> "It seems quite clear that the legislature in providing a different qualification as to residence for a needy blind person than that required for other needy persons, did not intend to change the existing laws as to the county which should bear the burden of the support. This conclusion follows from the provisions of the blind relief law itself, and the decision of the court in the case of State ex rel. Grant vs. Sayre, Auditor, supra, showing as they do the close relation existing between blind relief and poor relief. It follows, therefore, if this applicant is not and could not become a public charge upon Lucas county, then Lucas county, under the provisions of section 2966, supra, would have no authority to grant him blind relief. On the other hand, to be entitled to blind relief he must be a pauper, and therefore a charge upon the county in which he has a legal settlement, which said county must discharge its duty to support him by granting him blind relief. His living in Lucas county does not relieve Crawford county of the duty to support him, and that county should continue to furnish him the relief even if he may now live in another county. If Crawford county fails to furnish the relief and he thereby becomes a public charge, Lucas county can only follow the provisions of section 3482, supra, and send him back to Crawford county."

I am in accord with the conclusions of my predecessor that the change of place of abode from one county to another by a person who continues to receive blind relief from the county of his former abode, will not accomplish a change of residence within the purview of section 2966 G. C. prescribing the residential qualifications for receiving blind relief.

Answering your question specifically, therefore, it is my opinion that the person moving from Cuyahoga county to Stark county as mentioned in your inquiry, is not entitled to receive blind relief from Stark county, if during the twelve months preceding her application she has been receiving blind relief from the county of her former residence.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN A COUNTY HOSPITAL IS EXEMPT FROM TAXATION.

A county hospital constructed and maintained under sections 3127 et seq. of the General Code is exempt from general property taxation as an "institution of public charity only."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1919.

HON. V. W. FELIATRAULT, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt of your letter of January 24 requesting my opinion upon the question therein stated is acknowledged. The question is as follows:

"Under authority conferred by sections 3127 to 3138-2 inclusive, Portage county purchased a hospital, elected * * * trustees * * * and are now operating it as a county institution. Bonds were issued to pay the original purchase price and additional ones have been issued to defray expenses.

Patients who are able to do so, are required to pay for services in the hospital, and those who are unable to pay, are also taken care of.

Question: Should the above institution be exempt from taxation?"

The following quotations from the statutes referred to by you are sufficient to disclose the character of the institution described in your letter:

"Section 3127.—When two hundred or more taxpayers of a county petition the county commissioners for the privilege of having submitted to a vote of the electors of such county the issue of county bonds * * * for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a county hospital * * *, and the support therof, such commissioners shall order a special election * * *."

"Section 3131.—At the next election of county officers * * * trustees shall be elected * * *."

"Section 3132.—Such trustees shall have charge of the purchase of the site, erection of buildings thereon for such hospital and its management and control of all its property. * * * Such trustees may receive and hold in trust for the use of the hospital any grant or devise of land, or any gift or bequest of money or other personal property that may be given for the erection or support of the hospital."

"Section 3137.—The hospital trustees may determine whether or not patients presented at the hospital for treatment either medical or surgical, are subjects for charity, and shall fix such price for compensation from patients other than those unable to assist themselves, as they deem proper. The receipts therefrom shall be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the hospital fund, and used toward the maintenance of the hospital."

"Section 3138.—On the first Monday in April of each year, * * * the trustees shall certify the amount necessary to maintain and improve the hospital for the ensuing year."

It is very clear that what is created by action under these sections is a charitable institution open to all on the same terms, one of which terms is that those unable to pay for medical or surgical service and nursing shall not be required to do so; and that the institution is owned by the county and managed and controlled by it, being supported, in so far as its operating revenues are insufficient for its maintenance, by general tax levies.

The constitution, Article XII, section 2, authorizes the general assembly by general laws to exempt "institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes" and "public property used exclusively for any public purpose." These constitutional provisions are not self-executing, being on their face merely grants of authority to the legislature to pass laws. Here we are remitted to the provisions of the General Code for the final answer to the general question, which is as to whether or not property of the kind which the foregoing discussion has disclosed the county hospital to be is exempt from taxation.

So far as county property is concerned the following provisions of the General Code may be considered:

"Section 5352.—Buildings belonging to counties and used for holding courts, and for jails or county offices, with the ground, not exceeding ten acres in any county, on which such buildings are erected, shall be exempt from taxation."

"Section 5353.—Lands, houses and other buildings belonging to a county, township, city or village, used exclusively for the accommodation or support of the poor, or leased to the state or any political subdivision thereof for public purposes, and property belonging to institutions of public charity only, shall be exempt from taxation."

I think it is obvious that the fact of county ownership is not enough under these statutes (and there are no others applicable) to entitle the property in question to exemption. It does not consist of "buildings * * * used for holding courts, and for jails or county offices," and the lands, houses and other buildings of which it does consist are not "used exclusively for the accommodation or support of the poor."

However, it is very clear that if the hospital were not owned by the county, but was conducted by a private corporation not for profit in precisely the same manner in which the county is required by law to conduct it, such a hospital so operated would constitute "an institution of public charity only" within the meaning of section 5353 G. C. The question therefore arises as to whether or not the fact of county ownership is enough to destroy the institutional idea required by the latter portion of that section; or, in other words, whether a county may own and conduct "an institution of public charity only" or in a sense and with respect to some such activity actually be " an institution of public charity only."

On this point I find the following judicial opinions:

"The term 'institution' is sometimes used as descriptive of the establishment or place * * *; at other times it is used to designate the organized body. It is used in both senses in the third section of the tax law * * *. In the sixth clause of the section it is used in the latter sense, and the property referred to is described as belonging to the institutions named."

(White, J., in Gerke vs. Purcell, 25 O. S. 229).

"The word 'institutions', in the sixth clause of section 3 of the tax law, is used to designate the corporation or other organized body instituted to administer the charity, and the real estate described as belonging to such institutions has reference to property owned by them; and to entitle such institutions to hold the property exempt from taxation, they must not only own it, but it must be so used as to fulfill the requirements of the statute."

"It seems clear to us that the word 'institutions' in this clause is used to designate the corporation or other organized body instituted to administer the charity, and that the real estate described as belonging to such institutions has reference to property owned by the institutions; and that to entitle them to hold the property exempt from taxation, they must not only own it, but it must be so used as to fulfill the requirements of the statute. * * *."

"The word 'belonging' is used in the same sense throughout the clause, and, as there used, means ownership.

We do not say that the legal title must be vested in the institution. If the legal title were held in trust for the sole use and benefit of the institution, the property, in such case, would be regarded as belonging to the institution."

(Id. pp. 206-207, per White, J.)

The passage last quoted was repeated with approval in the opinion of Nichols, C. J., in Rose Institute vs. Myers, 92 O. S. 252, 270, where it was characterized as expressing the settled policy of the state.

This department held in an opinion under date of June 17, 1918 (No. 1279), in which the question was as to the exemption from taxation of real estate the fee of which was in the county, but which was held by the county for the benefit of an agricultural society conducting county fairs, etc., in compliance with the statute, that the following propositions are to be taken as true:

"In order that real estate may be exempt from taxation under section 5353 General Code, two things must concur, viz.:

(1) Ownership in an institution, i. e., organization of some kind as distinguished from an individual.

(2) Exclusive use for a purpose charitable in the sense that it aims to alleviate human suffering or meet great public needs, such as the advancement of science or useful arts, and is carried on without gain to the members of the organization; and public in the sense that its benefits are available to all without distinction and upon the same reasonable terms.

But in connection with the first of these propositions it is to be observed that the place where the legal title is found is immaterial. The ownership that is requisite is the equitable or beneficial use, and not the legal title."

In the opinion just cited the Attorney-General was not confronted by precisely the same question as that which is now raised, for there he was dealing with property the beneficial use of which was in a private corporation not for profit, though such corporation was so far public as to be the recipient of subsidies from the public treasury. Here we have to deal with property the legal title of which is in the county and the beneficial use of which is in an enterprise conducted for the public by public officers. True, they are organized into a board which has the sole and exclusive management of the enterprise so that there is a form of organization; but it is to be doubted that the trustees of the hospital are even so much as a quasi corporation. Rather, it would appear that they are merely a board of public officers charged with the performance of certain public functions. On the other hand, it is true that they have the control of a fund or funds arising from the operation of the enterprise or from the making of donations (section 3132, supra), so that they conduct their activities in substantially the same manner as would the trustees of a corporation not for profit.

The question would not be so difficult were it not for the fundamental principle that exemptions from general taxation are to be strictly construed. Here it is to be observed that the general assembly has expressly designated certain classes of property belonging to counties as exempt from taxation; while if this particular class of property belonging to counties is to be held exempt it must be brought within the scope of a more general provision applicable primarily at least to charitable enterprises conducted under private auspices, though public in character. In the same connection I should refer to section 5353-1 G. C., which provides as follows:

"Property, real, personal, and mixed, the net income of which is used solely for the support of institutions used exclusively for children's homes for poor children, the real estate on which said institutions are located, and the buildings connected therewith, shall be exempt from taxation."

It might be argued that by making this express provision as to children's homes, which is certainly broad enough to include county and district children's homes, the legislature had evinced an intention to exclude from the more general exemption other types of public institutions conducted by the county and not elsewhere specifically enumerated.

On the whole, however, the opinion of this department is that property belonging to a county and used for county hospital purposes is exempt from taxation. This conclusion is reached because of the decision in Gerke vs. Purcell, supra. In that case the question passed upon by the court was as to the exemption of parochial schools belonging to and conducted under the auspices of the Roman Catholic church by the duly appointed officers or agents of that church. The legal ownership of the property in question in that case was in the archbishop of the appropriate diocese. It did not appear that any separate organization whatsoever was maintained for the conduct of the schools. In other words, unless the church itself could be regarded as an "institution of purely public charity" there was no separately organized body of persons which could be pointed out as the "corporation or other organized body instituted to administer the charity" to use the language of Humphries vs. Little Sisters of the Poor, supra.

In the subsequent case of Watterson vs. Halliday, 77 O. S. 150, it was held without in any way modifying or overruling Gerke vs. Purcell and Humphries vs. Little Sisters of the Poor, that the Rocan Catholic church was, as such, not an "institution of purely public charity."

So that we have it that parochial schools are "institutions of purely public charity" (or, as the statutory language now is, "institutions of public charity only"), though the legal title of the property used in the conduct of such schools is in some archbishop, and though the organization which he represents and which actually conducts the schools is not in its broader aspects at least an "institution of purely public charity." In other words, as pointed out by the Attorney-General who rendered the opinion which has been cited, the effect of these cases taken together compels the conclusion that "property the legal title of which is in the bishop or archbishop is to be regarded as vested in substantially different beneficial ownerships when it is managed and conducted for purely church purposes, on the one hand, and when it is managed and conducted for the purposes of schools open to the public, on the other hand."

Applying the distinctions drawn from these cases to the question now under discussion it seems rather clear that if the beneficial use to which property the legal title of which happens to be in the county is put is a publicly charitable one, and such use is conducted under organized forms, the fact that we are unable to identify the organization which is the owner of the property and by which the use is conducted as "an institution of public charity only" in its broader aspects only, does not prevent the conclusion that the particular enterprise constitutes "an institution of purely public charity." In other words, though the county is itself not an "institution of public charity only," just as the Roman Catholic church was held in Watterson vs. Halliday not to be such an institution; yet the hospital conducted by the trustees for the county is as much a separate institution of public charity only as are the parochial schools, as held in Gerke vs. Purcell, supra. In this connection I quote the following from the syllabus in Gerke vs. Purcell:

"Schools established by private donations, and which are carried on for the benefit of the public, and not with a view to profit, are 'institutions of purely public charity' within the meaning of the provisions of the constitution, * * *.

The constitution, in directing the levying of taxes and in authorizing exemptions from taxation, has reference to property, and the uses to which it is applied; and where property is appropriated to the support of a charity which is purely public, the legislature may exempt it from taxation, without reference to the manner in which the title is held, and without regard to the form or character of the organization adopted to administer the charity.

In the description of the property exempted from taxation in section 3 of the tax law, * * * the word 'public' as therein applied to school houses, * * * and other institutions of learning, is descriptive of the uses to which the property is devoted. The schools and instruction which the property is used to support must be for the benefit of the public; and when private property is thus appropriated without any view to profit, it constitutes a 'purely public charity' within the meaning of the constitutional provision."

These statements are reinforced by the following from the opinion in Myers vs. Rose Institute, 92 O. S. 238, per Johnson, J. (p. 242):

"It has been constantly recognized and held by this court that the phrase 'institutions of purely public charity' is a broad one, and that the term may be applied by the legislature to the organization which administers the charity or to the establishment where its operations are carried on."

Again, in Rose Institute vs. Myers, 92 O. S. 252, the court, per Mr. Chief Justice Nichols, used the following vigorous language (p. 266):

"We gather from * * * the several Ohio cases, these two general and controlling rules of interpretation:

1. It is the use of the property which renders it exempt or non-exempt, not the use of the income derived from it.

2. The exemption is not a release in personam, but a release in rem, and the res to which the release applies must be found and identified by the officer or no exemption can be recognized.

Both of these opinions cite Gerke vs. Purcell with approval.

The conclusion is therefore reached that a county hospital is "an institution of public charity only" and that the lands, buildings and personal property the title of which is in the county, but the beneficial use of which belongs in the sense above developed to the hospital, are exempt from taxation.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SECTION 12672-1 G. C., PROVIDING POSSESSION OF CERTAIN DRUGS, IS IN EFFECT, REGARDLESS OF LATER AMENDMENT TO SECTION 12672 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1919.

The Department of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated January 27, 1919, as follows:

> "Was section 12672-1 Ohio law, which made it a misdemeanor to have in one's possession any narcotic, unless a registered physician, dentist or veterinary surgeon or pharmacist of this state, repealed or amended with section 12672 Ohio law, or is it still operative?
> "In this state persons are found who have large quantities of narcotics bought from peddlers, whom, if this section is not in operation, I cannot prosecute."

Section 12672-1 G. C., first referred to in your letter, was enacted April 17, 1913 (103 O. L., 506), as a supplemental section to section 12672.

Prior to this supplemental section, section 12672 did not make it a penal offense to have such drugs or narcotics in one's possession, but limited the operation and effect of said section to the selling, bartering, furnishing or giving away of such drugs.

At the same time that section 12672-1 was enacted, section 12672 was amended to include and make criminal the possession of such drugs, and as amended in 103 O. L., supra, contained these provisions:

> "Whoever sells, barters, furnishes or gives away, directly or indirectly, or has in his possession for the purpose of selling, bartering, furnishing or giving away, directly or indirectly, any quantity of cocaine, alpha or beta eucaine or alypin, morphine, acetyl-morphine, diacetyl-morphine, di-acetyl-ester-morphine, ethyl morphine, heroin, chloral hydrate, opium, or any of their alkaloids, salts, derivatives or compounds, or any synthetic equivalent thereof either as to the physical properties or physiological action, * *."

Section 12672-1 G. C. provided that:

> "The finding in the possession of a person who is not a wholesale dealer in drugs, a registered pharmacist, physician, dentist or veterinary surgeon," of any quantity of such drugs as those mentioned or described in sections 12672 and 12672-1 G. C., should be prima facie evidence of the violation of said section 12672.

It is to be noted that an earlier amendment of section 12672 at the same session of the legislature (103 O. L., p. 340), did not make it a penal offense to have possession of such drugs. It is also to be noted that there are certain exceptions to said sections, such as sales upon the original written prescription of licensed physicians, etc., and that the section does not extend to sales at wholesale to registered pharmacists, etc., nor does it apply to liquid preparations sold in good faith as medicines, containing a certain minimum amount of opium, morphine, heroin, etc.

Section 12672 G. C., as amended on March 21, 1917, in 107 O. L., p. 493, and in its present form, is as follows:

"Whoever sells, barters, furnishes or gives away, directly or indirectly, or has in his possession for the purpose of selling, bartering, furnishing or giving away, directly or indirectly, any quantity of cocaine, alpha or beta eucaine or alypin, morphine, acetyl-morphien, diacetyl-morphine, diacetyl-estermorphine, thyl morphine, heroin, chloral hydrate, opium, or any of their alkaloids, salts, derivatives or compounds, or any synthetic equivalent therof either as to the physical properties or physiological action, except upon the original written prescription of a physician, dentist, or veterinary surgeon, duly licensed under the laws of this state, when prescribing for their patients for actual and necessary purposes in the proper practice of their respective professions, which prescription shall contain the name of the physician, dentist, or veterinary surgeon, issuing it, the date of issue and the name of the person for whom it is issued; or fails to keep such prescription on file for at least two years, in such manner that it is accessible at all reasonable times to the inspection of the proper officer or officers of the law and the secretary of agriculture, or fills said prescription more than once, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days or more than six months, or both offense shall be imprisoned not less than one year or more than five years in at the discretion of the court, for the first offense, and for each subsequent the penitentiary. If it be made to apear to the court that the person so convicted is addicted to the use of any of the above mentioned drugs or substances, the court, with the consent of such person may commit such person to a hospital or other institution for the treatment of such person. This section does not extend to sales at wholesale of any quantity of the above mentioned drugs to duly registered pharmacists, physicians, dentists or veterinary surgeons; and shall not apply to liquid preparations sold in good faith as medicines containing not more than two grains of opium, or not more than one-fourth grains of morphine, or not more than one-fourth grain of heroin, or not more than one-eighth grain of alpha or beta eucaine, or not more than ten grains of chloral hydrate in one fluid ounce, or if a solid preparation, in one avoirdupois ounce."

Section 12672-1 G. C. is unaffected by the amendment in 1917, and the law governing such sale and possession is governed by section 12672, as last amended, and by section 12672-1, as enacted in 103 O. L., p. 506.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF CERTIFICATE OF AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE GUARDIAN CASUALTY COMPANY, OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1919.

HON. WILLIAM D. FULTON, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 10, 1919, with which you enclosed proposed certificate of amendment to the articles of incorporation of The Guardian Casualty Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, for examination and approval by me, was duly received.

The effect of the proposed amendment will be to eliminate from the original articles of incorporation of the company that portion of the purpose clause reading as follows:

> "Guaranteeing the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, who are required to, or, in their trust capacity to receive, hold, control, disburse public or private moneys or property; guaranteeing the performance of contracts other than insurance policies, and executing and guaranteeing bonds and undertakings required or permitted in all actions or proceedings, or by law allowed," and to add thereto the following provision:

> "and indemnifying persons and corporations other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations."

The company was organized under paragraph 2 of section 9510 G. C., and under that section the company could have inserted in the original articles of incorporation the provision for "indemnifying persons and corporations other than employers against loss or damage for personal injury or death resulting from accidents to other persons or corporations," and it would also have been permissible for the company to have omitted from the articles the provisions now sought to be eliminated by the proposed amendment, and quoted above.

Both the proposed elimination from and the addition to the articles of incorporation sought to be accomplished by the proposed amendment are authorized by section 8719 G. C., (107 O. L., 415, 416) which provides, among other things, that a corporation may amend its articles of incorporation "so as to modify, enlarge or diminish the objects or purposes for which it was formed;" and so as "to add to the articles anything omitted from, or which lawfully might have been provided for originally, or to take out of the articles any unnecessary provisions or provisions which might lawfully have been omitted from them originally." See Annual Report of the Attorney-General, 1911-1912, Vol. 1, p. 98.

I return herewith the proposed certificate of amendment with my certificate of approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

> Statement of Facts.
> "A resolution of the board of control, advertised in the city record of the city of Cleveland, adopted and passed in March, 1918, increased the compensation of various employes and provided that such increased compensation shall become operative January 1, 1918, and the increased compensation covering the period from January 1 on has been paid to such employes.
> Question 1. Is such legislation legal and has such increased compensation been regularly paid?
> We are also enclosing marked copies of the city record for illustrations."

Pertinent parts of sections 82 and 189 of the charter of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, to which you call attention in your letter, are as follows:

> Section 82.—"The mayor and the directors of the several departments shall constitute the board of control. The mayor shall be ex officio president of the board. * * * A meeting of the board shall be public, a record of its proceedings shall be kept, and an abstract of its proceedings shall be printed in the city records."
> Section 189.—"The council shall fix, by ordinance, the salary or compensation of directors of departments, its own members and employes, of the members of the divisions of police and fire, under the immediate control of the chiefs thereof, and of members of boards or commissioners in the unclassified service of the city. The board of control shall fix the number and the salaries or compensation of all other officers and employes. * * *

> The salary of any officer, employe, member of a board or commission in the unclassified service of the city shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected or appointed and all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury."

The marked copy of the city record, referred to in your letter, purports to be a part of the abstract of the proceedings of the board of control, which, as provided in the above quoted sections of the Cleveland charter, has the power to fix the number and salary or compensation of certain employes of the city.

From supplemental information obtained by personal conferences with your department, I am informed that the specific question upon which you desire my opinion is, whether the board of control may legally make the increased compensation retroactive so that the increased salary, provided for in their meeting of March 15, 1918, could become operative on January 1, 1918, as provided in the last clause of the several resolutions in the marked paragraphs heretofore referred to, and further, if such increased compensation for the period prior to the passage of the resolution of the board of control, March 8, 1918, has been legally paid.

The facts stated in your letter, supplemented by those stated in personal conference, also raise the question of whether the prospective operation of the resolution under consideration is subject to the referendum.

Sections 28 and 29 of Article II of the Constitution of Ohio are applicable.

> Section 28.—"The general assembly shall have no power to pass retractive laws * * *."
> Section 29.—"No extra compensation shall be made to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after services shall have been rendered or the contract entered into; * * *"

Section 3 of Article XVIII, adopted September 3, 1912, of the Ohio Constitution, must also be considered. It provides:

> "Municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self-government and to adopt and enforce within their limits such police, sanitary and other similar regulations as are not in conflict with general laws."

In the construction of ordinances and by-laws of municipal corporations, we must consider the question as to what extent municipal corporations are bound by constitutional inhibitions limiting the legislative power of the state, which, under the constitutional limitations, is the source of the power of the municipality.

Judge Cooley, in Constitutional Limitations, page 2388, says:

> "The power of municipal corporations to make by-laws is limited in various ways.
> "It is controlled by the constitution of the United States and of the state. The restrictions imposed by those instruments which directly limit the legislative power of the state, rest equally upon all the instruments of government created by the state. If a state cannot pass an ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, neither can any agency do so which acts under the state with delegated authority. * * * and whatever the people by the state constitution have prohibited the state government from doing, it cannot do indirectly through the local governments."

True, Judge Cooley wrote the foregoing before the adoption of section 3, Aritcle XVIII of the state constitution and before the city of Cleveland obtained its charter. However, this principle, as announced by him, has been re-affirmed by the Supreme Court of Ohio.

In Fitzgerald et al vs. City of Cleveland, 88 O. S., p. 338, in the first branch of the syllabus it was held:

> "The provisions of section 7, Article XVIII of the constitution, as amended in September, 1912, authorizes any city or village to frame and adopt or amend a charter for its government and may prescribe therein the form of government and define the powers and duties of the different departments, provided they do not exceed the powers granted in Article III, section 18, nor disregard the limitations imposed in that article or other provisions of the constitution."

And again, in the same court, in the decision of the Cleveland telephone case, which was decided in June, 1918, 98 O. S., 375, the court say:

> "A charter is merely a vehicle for the exercise of municipal power and cannot confer authority upon a municipality in excess of the power conferred by the constitution itself."

We have to consider, then, whether the resolution involved herein is within the inhibition of the constitution of Ohio. And this must be answered in the affirmative if it is retroactive or if it seeks to make "compensation" to any officer, public agent or contractor, after the services shall have been rendered.

Retroactive law, as defined by Justice Story, as quoted in Rariden vs. Holden, 15 O. S., 207, has been held to be:

> "Upon principle, every statute which takes away or impairs vested rights, acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, imposes a new duty or exercises a new disability in respect to transactions or considerations already passed, must be deemed retrospective."

A statute which proposed to authorize the issuance of a refunding order to a township board of education treasurer, to cover an alleged error in his settlement with his successor in office, was held to create a new obligation in that the money so refunded was to be raised by special levy against the township. This was the holding in Commissioners vs. Roche Bros., 50 O. S., 103, and was followed in Board of Education vs. State, 51 O. S., 531.

A similar statute was before the court and held unconstitutional on the same ground in State vs. Brown, 8 O. C. C., 103.

So it would appear that the increased compensation proposed to be paid to employes embraced in these resolutions, would be retroactive and within the inhibition of said section 28.

Section 29 of the constitution is mandatory, that no extra compensation shall be made "to any officer, public agent or contractor after the service shall have been rendered or the contract entered into," and it only remains to inquire, first, if the service in the matter under consideration has been rendered. Assuredly it has. Second, are the employes affected by these resolutions to be included in the terms "public agent."

That the employes affected by this resolution are "public agents," as provided in said section 29, there can be no doubt.

In construing this section in State of Ohio ex rel Field, et al vs. Williams, Auditor of State, 34 O. S., 219, Judge Gilmore says:

> "The first clause of the section quoted inhibits the allowance of extra compensation to any officer, public agent, or contractor, after the services shall have been rendered or the contract entered into.
> This language is very broad, and was intended to embrace all persons who may have rendered services for the public in any capacity whatever, in pursuance of law, and in which the compensation for the services rendered is fixed by law, as well as persons who have performed or agreed to perform services in which the public is interested, in pursuance of contracts that may have been entered into in pursuance of law, and in which the price or consideration to be received by the contractor for the thing done, or to be done, is fixed by the terms of the contract.
> "In the first, compensation, in addition to that fixed by law at the time the services were rendered, and, in the second, the allowance of compensation in addition to that stipulated in the contract, is inhibited by the first clause of the section."

So it appears very clear that the services from January 1 to March 5, 1918, had been rendered at the time of the passage of the resolution by the board of control and it just as clearly appears that they are public agents in the sense used in section 29 of the constitution. It is my opinion, therefore, that in so far as the resolution of the board of control was intended to operate retrospectively, and pay for services rendered prior to its passage and adoption by the board of control, it offends that section of the constitution last quoted and is therefore ineffective and invalid.

Your inquiry also involves the question of whether the resolution referred to may become operative from and after its passage, without the delay of thirty days during which it might have been subjected to a referendum.

Sections 4227-1, et seq., G. C., and sections 49 et seq. of the Cleveland city charter, are pertinent. Section 4227-1 G. C. provides:

> "Ordinances and other measures providing for the exercise of any and all powers of government granted by the constitution * * * may be proposed by initiative petition * * *."

This section provides for initiative action and it is to be noted contains the broad provision "other measures providing for the exercise of any and all powers," etc.

Section 4227-2 G. C. provides:

> "Any ordinance or other measure passed by the council of any municipal corporation, shall be subject to the referendum, except as hereinafter provided. No ordinance or other measure shall go into effect until thirty days after it shall have been filed with the mayor of the city, or passed by the council in a village, except as hereinafter provided. * * *"

The pertinent part of the charter referendum sections is as follows:

> Section 49.—"No ordinance passed by the council, except as otherwise provided by this charter, shall go into effect until thirty days after its final passage by the council. * * *"

Sections 49 to 56, both inclusive, cover the referendum provisions in the Cleveland charter and in none of them—this is also true of the provisions of section 4227-2 G. C.—is there any provisions for a referendum on measures, except those enacted by the city council.

I am therefore of the opinion that the resolution of the board of control, referred to in your inquiry, is not subject to the referendum.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS—REQUIRED TO REPORT VENEREAL DISEASES TO OHIO STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH BY REASON OF DEPARTMENT'S REGULATION—NOT A "WILFUL BETRAYAL OF PROFESSIONAL SECRET"—PHYSICIAN NOT LIABLE IN DAMAGES.

1. Section 11494 G. C. will not excuse a physician from compliance with the regulation of the Ohio state department of health adopted May 2, 1917, requiring physicians to report venereal diseases.

2. Such a report does not constitute "the wilful betrayal of a professional secret" as defined in section 1275 G. C.

3. Compliance with such regulation will not thereby render a physician reporting such venereal disease liable in damages to his patient for divulgence of professional secrets.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 13, 1919.

The State Department of Health, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of January 29, 1919, as follows:

> "Under date of May 2, 1918, the Public Health Council of the state department of health adopted rules and regulations for the prevention of venereal diseases. These rules were filed with the secretary of state June 20, 1918, have been sent to all the health officers and boards of health in the state, and to all the physicians whose names appear in the American Medical Association directory.
> "In connection with the operation of the rules quite a number of questions have been raised, especially in regard to the duty of physicians to make reports to the state commissioner of health as provided in the regulations, and if there is a personal liability on a physician if reports are made. I should be glad, therfore, to have your opinion on the following points:
> 1. Is there any provision in the laws of the state of Ohio that would be a defense for a physician who failed to report to the state commissioner of health a case of gonorrhea, syphilis or chancroid where the person afflicted came to the physician as a patient, either for diagnosis or treatment?
> 2. Would a physician reporting a venereal disease under the provisions of these regulations be protected in the case of a personal damage suit for alleged 'divulging professional secrets?'
> For your information I enclose a copy of the regulations above referred to."

The pertinent parts of sections 1237 and 1243 G. C., which sections are applicable to the facts stated in your letter, are as follows:

> Section 1237.—"The state board of health shall have supervision of all matters relating to the preservation of the life and health of the people * * *. It may make special or standing orders or regulations for preventing the spread of contagious or infectious diseases, * * *."
> Section 1243.—"Boards of health, * * * and physicians * * * shall report to the state board of health promptly upon the discovery thereof, the existence of any one of the following diseases: Asiatic cholera, * * * and such other contagious and infectious diseases as the state board specifies."

As to the making and promulgation of orders of the department of health, the amendment of section 1236 (107 O. L., 523) provides that the regulations of the public health council shall be signed by the secretary thereof, filed in the office of the secretary of state, and that copies thereof shall be sent to the local board of health, health officers, etc., and shall be published in such manner as the public health council may, from time to time, determine.

The constitutionality of this legislation, vesting such ample powers in the department of health, or board of health, as it has been variously styled in the different acts, has been repeatedly challenged and considered, and passed upon in the Supreme Court of Ohio; and, as said by Judge Donahue, in Board of Health vs. Greenville, 86 O. S., 21:

> "It is now the settled law that the legislature of the state possesses plenary power to deal with these subjects so long as it does not contravene the constitution of the United States or infringe upon any right granted or secured thereby, or is not in direct conflict with any of the provisions of the constitution of this state, and is not exercised in such an arbitrary and oppressive manner as to justify the interference of the courts to prevent wrong and oppression."

Or, as was held in the first branch of the syllabus in Toledo Disposal Co. vs. State of Ohio, 89 O. S. 230:

> "In the exercise of the police power, the state and municipal authorities may make all such provisions as are reasonable, necessary and appropriate for the protection of the public health and comfort, and when any such provision has a real and substantial relation to that object and does not interfere with the enjoyment of private rights beyond the necessities of the situation, every intendment is to be made in favor of its lawfulness."

As stated by Judge Johnson, in the opinion of the above case, at page 235:

> "Nothing is more firmly established than that the state and municipal authorities, in the exercise of the police power, may make all such provisions as may be reasonable, necessary and appropriate for the protection of the public health and comfort."

In the case of State of Ohio vs. Boone, 84 O. S., 346, a former statute requiring physicians to report birth statistics was held unconstitutional because it was unreasonable in that it required the physicians to report not only the matters which came within their observation professionally, but other facts with which their professional connection with the case did not acquaint them. That the court in that case had no doubt that the state could require a physician to report professional facts in such cases, is evidenced by the language of Judge Davis, on page 352 of the opinion, where he says:

> "We need not inquire whether the state may not require a physician or midwife to report to the proper authority, for registration, the fact of a birth which has come under his or her observation, first, because it is conceded that it may do so, and, second, because it obviously has some relation to the public welfare and it can not be very burdensome to comply with such regulation."

It is also noted that a question is raised as to the liability of a physician in making such reports for damages for alleged divulgence of professional secrets. That section in law which makes certain communications privileged communications is section 11494 G. C., pertinent provisions of which are:

> "The following persons shall not testify in certain respects: * * *

or a physician, concerning a communication made to him by his patient in that relation or his advice to his patient," etc.

It is to be noted that the limitation here is that the physician shall not testify in the respect set forth.

It has been held in the case of Keck vs. Boda, 13 O. C. D., 413, that this section is merely declaratory of the common law, with reference to privileged communications, and it is founded on public policy for the benefit of the patient and physician.

In consideration of private rights and privileges, we are reminded by Justice Harlan, in California Reduction Co. vs. San Francisco Reduction Co., 199 U. S., 306, that they are "subject to such reasonable conditions as may be deemed by the governing authority of the country essential to the safety, health, peace, good order and morals of the community."

That the legislature may, and in fact did, qualify some of the provisions of section 11494, supra, is evidenced by section 13659 G. C., which provides that the communications between husband and wife (which are also made privileged communications in section 11494 G. C.) may be testified to in certain kinds of criminal cases.

Sections 1237, 1243 and 1236 G. C., supra, were enacted after section 11496 G. C., and in view of the broad powers thereby vested in the health commission, said commission by a reasonable and necessary order, properly promulgated under section 1236, may require physicians to make the reports referred to in your letter, and a physician complying with such regulation of the health commission is not liable in an action for damages for divulging professional secrets, as stated in your letter.

I am not unmindful of the provisions of section 1275 G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 178, defining gross unprofessional or dishonest conduct to be "the wilful betrayal of a professional secret." This section, however, must be construed as a part of an act to regulate the conduct of the practice of medicine, and a later valid regulation of the state health commission must be construed with this section and meaning given to both, if they are not manifestly inconsistent and repugnant.

Considering the power and authority of the state health commission to make and promulgate such regulation, and the purpose of section 1275 G. C., I am of the opinion that the compulsory compliance with the regulation of the health commission on the part of a physician would not constitute a "wilful betrayal of a professional secret," and in any event section 1275 G. C. only applies to the physician's right to practice and is not concerned with the declaration of any right or ground upon which a private action in damages could be predicated against the physician.

In this opinion it is to be borne in mind that compliance with rule 9, of the attached regulations, providing for the secrecy of such reports and the records thereof, is assumed and violations of its provisions are not herein considered.

I am therefore of the opinion, (1) that there is no provision in the laws of the state of Ohio which would be a defense for a physician failing to make the report referred to in your letter, on tht ground that he may be liable to a damage suit for alleged divulgence of professional secrets; and, (2), that a physician reporting such diseases referred to in your letter, in compliance with these regulations, would not be liable in such a damage suit.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TREASURERS—DISTINCTION AS TO FEES OR SALARIES WHERE CITY IS LOCATED WITHIN TOWNSHIP AND WHERE IT IS NOT—FEES EARNED PRIOR TO JULY 2, 1917, DISCUSSED.

The treasurer, in townships wherein no city is located, is entitled to receive, for the year 1917, as his fees for receiving, safe-keeping and paying out township moneys, the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars. The treasurer, in townships wherein a city is located, is entitled, as to said year, to receive two hundred and fifty dollars. Said treasurer, is, however, entitled to all fees earned before July 2, 1917, even though they should exceed the said limitation. Opinion of former Attorney-General on this point approved (1917 A. G. R. Vol. II. p. 1614).

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 13, 1919.

HON. WALTER S. RUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of February 3, 1918, in which you say:

> "In 1917 a law was passed by the legislature in regard to the salary of township treasurers which fixed their compensation at a maximum of one hundred fifty dollars in townships where there are no cities. There has been a great deal of controversy in this county in regard to the treasurers overdrawing their salary.
> The law which I refer to became effective July 2, 1917. It seems the state examiner held that treasurers could not receive more than one hundred fifty dollars for the year 1917. Some of the treasurers contend that they have legal opinions to the effect that they would be entitled to two per cent of the amount of money handled to July 2, 1917, and from July 2, 1917, to January 1, 1918, salary at the rate of one hundred fifty dollars per year.
> I would appreciate it if you would give me your opinion on this matter at the earliest date possible."

Section 3318 G. C., which became a law July 2, 1917, says (107 O. L. 652):

> "The treasurer shall be allowed and may retain as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, two per cent of all moneys paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees, but in no one year shall he be entitled to receive from the township treasury more than one hundred and fifty dollars, except that in a township wherein a city is located and such city is a part of such township, a township treasurer shall be entitled to receive from the township treasury not more than three hundred dollars in one year."

The question of how much the township treasurer may be paid for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, in the year 1917, has already received the attention of the Attorney-General.

In opinion No. 565, rendered by the Attorney-General on August 27, 1917, to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, O. (1917 A. G. R., Vol. II, p. 1614), it was held that (Syll.):

"1. The sections of the statute modifying the compensation of township clerks, treasurers and trustees became effective on the same day that the acts of which they are a part became operative. Section 20 of Article II of the constitution does not apply because said officers draw compensation and not salaries.

2. Trustees will be entitled to receive not to exceed $250 for the present year; the clerk, $250; the treasurer in townships where there is no city, $150; and wherein there is a city, $250; excepting that the treasurer is entitled to all the fees earned before July 2, 1917, even though they should exceed the said limitation."

The opinion referred to goes in detail into the matter you ask about. Being satisfied with both its conclusions and its reasoning, in so far as the question raised by your letter is concerned, I approve said opinion. For your consideration a copy of same is enclosed herewith.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TREASURER—FEES WHERE ONLY PART OF CITY IS LOCATED IN TOWNSHIP.

The township treasurer of a township, wherein only a part of a city is located, is not entitled, under the provisions of section 3318 G. C. (107 O. L. 652), to retain, as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, more than one hundred and fifty dollars in any one year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 13, 1919.

HON. CALVIN D. SPITLER, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The receipt is hereby acknowledged of your letter of February 3, reading as follows:

"A part of the city of Tiffin is located in Hopewell township, Seneca county, Ohio, there being approximately five hundred inhabitants in said city in said township.

The township trustees of Hopewell township and myself are of the opinion that the treasurer of said township, under the provisions of section 3318 of the General Code, is entitled to receive compensation under the exception contained in said section, namely, that in a township wherein a city is located and such city is a part of such township, a township treasurer shall be entitled to receive from the township treasury not more than three hundred dollars in any one year.

However, the clerk of said township declines to issue a voucher to the treasurer under that part of said section, although two per cent, of all moneys paid out by him on the order of the township trustees amounts approximately to $300.00, and the township trustees have issued their order accordingly to the treasurer.

I would like your opinion as to whether the treasurer of that township can draw more that the $150.00 by reason of a part of the city of Tiffin being in said Hopewell township."

The matter of the fees of the township treasurer, for receiving, safe keeping and paying out township moneys, is covered by section 3318 G. C. (107 O. L. 652). which says:

> "The treasurer shall be allowed and may retain as his fees for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, two per cent of all moneys paid out by him upon the order of the township trustees, but in no one year shall he be entitled to receive from the township treasury more than one hundred and fifty dollars, except that in a township wherein a city is located and such city is a part of such township, a township treasurer shall be entitled to receive from the township treasury not more than three hundred dollars in one year."

Under the above section, it is necessary, in order to authorize the township treasurer to receive and retain as his fees more than one hundred and fifty dollars in any one year, that he come within the exception contained in said section. That is to say, his township must be one of which two things may be said: (1) That a city is located therein, and (2) that such city is a part of such township. Both conditions must obtain in order to satisfy the exception.

Under the facts stated by your letter, neither of the things above stated can be said of Hopewell township. First, said township is not one "wherein a city is located," but is one wherein only a part of a city is located. It would not be proper to assume that the legislature intended the section to read "wherein a city or a part thereof is located," for there is no evidence of any such intent. Secondly, said city of Tiffin is not "a part of such township." A part of the city of Tiffin is, indeed, a part of Hopewell township, but the statutory exception, above cited, does not include that situation.

For the reasons above given, you are advised that the treasurer of Hopewell township is not, under the facts stated in your letter, entitled to receive and retain as his fees, for receiving, safe keeping and paying out moneys belonging to the township treasury, more than one hundred and fifty dollars in any one year.

Opinion No. 1415, rendered by the Attorney-General on August 21, 1918, to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio, reaches a similar conclusion on this question, which opinion is hereby approved.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACTS OF TITLE COVERING LOTS 33, 41 AND 46, WOOD BROWN PLACE ADDITION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 17, 1919.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You recently submitted to this department abstracts of title covering the following described premises, to-wit:

"Being lots Nos. thirty-three (33), forty-one (41) and forty-six (46) of the Wood-Brown Place addition, as the same are numbered and delineated on the recorded plat of said addition in plat book No. 5, pages 196, 197, Franklin county, Ohio."

I have carefully examined said abstracts, dated January 25, 1919, January 27, 1919, and February 13, 1919, respectively, and find that the title to said lots was in Alfred Anderson, Elias Harris and Joseph L. Gibson, respectively, at the dates of the several abstracts aforesaid.

I find from the abstract for lot No. 33 that the title is clear and free of encumbrances, except taxes for the last half of the year 1918, amounting to $5.72, which are unpaid and constitute a lien upon said premises.

I find from the abstract for lot No. 41 that the title is clear of incumbrances, except as follows:

A mortgage in the sum of $100.00, dated January 17, 1918, is not shown to have been satisfied and therefore constitutes a cloud upon the title; a mortgage in the sum of $125.00, dated January 2, 1915, is not shown to have been satisfied and therefore constitutes a cloud upon the title; also I call attention to what appears to be a typographical error, in that the abstract shows a mortgage executed by Elias Harris and wife, dated December 13, 1913, and in the amount of $65.00, while a notation of a release of mortgage given by the same parties and shown to be recorded as stipulated in the case of the aforesaid mortgage, but which release is set forth to be of a mortgage in the amount of $6,500.00, which obviously is erroneous and may be accepted as evidencing a release of the $65.00 mortgage, inasmuch as the volume and page of the record of the two are identical.

It appears that the taxes for the year 1918 have been paid in full, but there is a special assessment for road improvement accrued as a lien upon said premises, amounting to 30 cents, with a current installment of 10 cents to fall due in December, 1919.

I find from the abstract for lot No. 46 that the title is clear of encumbrances, except as follows:

A mortgage in the sum of $140.00, dated November 5, 1914, is not shown to have been satisfied and therefore constitutes a cloud upon the title.

Also, the taxes for the year 1918, which amount to the sum of $10.34, are unpaid and constitute a lien upon said premises.

I further call attention to the fact that a mortgage recorded in said abstract as executed by Edward R. James to Charles G. Lakin, dated October 24, 1898, and in the amount of $100.00, not canceled of record, is released by an instrument of release executed by Clara L. Rei, Frank Rei, and Charles W. Rei as heirs of Charles G. Lakin, which instrument has been submitted in connection with the abstracts.

As to the heirs executing said release, the same is effective as a cancellation of said mortgage and is absolute, if those executing same comprise all the heirs of said Charles G. Lakin.

No deeds of conveyance to the state have been submitted for my consideration, and therefore I advise that, subject to the qualifications herein pointed out, the persons above named as owners of said premises are vested with good title thereto and upon the execution of proper deeds to the state and their acceptance the same would convey good title, subject to the aforesaid liens.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

EXPENSES OF SHERIFF FOR MAINTAINING HORSES IN DISCHARGE OF HIS DUTIES—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY ALLOW SAID EXPENSES ALTHO NOT INCLUDED IN QUARTERLY REPORT OF SHERIFF.

The mere fact that a sheriff fails to include in quarterly reports rendered by him during his term of office, actual and necessary expenses of maintaining horses necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office, does not legally prevent the county commissioners from allowing such expenses when a bill for same in proper form is filed by said sheriff after the conclusion of his term of office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 20, 1919.

HON. CHARLES R. SARGENT, Prosecuting Attorney, Jefferson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is hereby acknowledged of your letter of January 30, 1919, in which you say:

> "After the conclusion of his term, the sheriff of Ashtabula county, Ohio, who retired from office on the 6th day of January, presented a bill to the commissioners of Ashtabula county, for the years 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918, commencing on February 1, 1915, and concluding on October 28, 1918, consisting of divers items for oats, straw, and hay, presumably for maintaining a horse or horses owned by the sheriff and used by him during that period in assisting him to perform his duties as such sheriff. During his term of office, in none of his quarterly reports were any such items included and no claim previously made for maintenance of any horse or horses."

You state your question thus:

"Assuming that the expense account is correct as to the amount and that the amount was actually expended in the maintenance of horse or horses necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office, can such a bill be allowed at this time by the county commissioners?"

You call special attention to sections 2997 and 2999 G. C., which read as follows:

"Section 2997.—In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowance quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferrring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble-minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

"Section 2999.—Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to make a county, or an officer thereof, liable to any of the officers named herein or his deputies, assistants, clerks, bookkeepers, or other employes, for the payment of compensation in excess of the amount herein authorized, or except in the manner herein provided."

Both of these sections were a part of the same act, namely, the County Officers' Salary Act, passed in 1906 and found in 98 Ohio Laws, 89. They should therefore be construed together and both read in the light of the other unrepealed sections of the same act.

Whether section 2999 G. C. prevents your county commissioners from making the allowance in question, depends upon the construction to be given to the phrase "for the payment of compensation," contained in said section. If that phrase means something different from, and does not include, the allowance for expenses of horse maintenance authorized by section 2997, then section 2999 is not applicable, and if it is not applicable, there would be no occasion for considering the other and subsequent phrase therein contained and which your letter cites, namely, the phrase "except in the manner herein provided." This last cited phrase refers grammatically to the phrase "for the payment of compensation."

I am of the opinion that the phrase "for the payment of compensation" means something different from, and does not include, the allowance for expenses of horse maintenance authorized by section 2997 G. C. To hold otherwise would do violence to the plain, ordinary meaning of the first nine words which occur at the outset of that section and which read thus:

"In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, * *."

With section 2999 G. C. disposed of, the next question for consideration is whether the proposed allowance by your county commissioners to the retiring sheriff is prohibited by reason of anything contained in section 2997 G. C. itself. Said section provides that an expense of the kind mentioned shall be allowed by the county commissioners quarterly; and further that—

> "Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

It may be plausibly argued it was the intention of the legislature that the sheriff should be paid the expenses mentioned in section 2997 G. C. at regular intervals, to-wit, quarterly, and that each report by the sheriff should list all of the expenses incurred during the quarter reported upon. Such is the general practice over the state, and wisely so since it enables the county commissioners to pass upon, and, if necessary, to investigate, such expense account, while the facts pertaining thereto are easily ascertainable.

The practice just referred to seems very commendable, but it is quite another thing to say that section 2997 G. C. makes it indispensable.

> "Provisions regulating the duties of public officers and specifying the time for their performance are in that regard generally directory. Though a statute directs a thing to be done at a particular time, it does not necessarily follow that it may not be done afterwards."

Sutherland on Stat. Const., section 448.

It is not even clear in this case that the statute directs the thing to be done "at a particular time." The language is:

> "Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, * * *."

It is apparent from the foregoing that the sheriff's expenses must be filed with the quarterly report, but there is no requirement that those expenses relate in point of time to any particular interval. In other words, there is nothing to prevent expenses incurred during the first quarter of the year from being filed with the report for the second or any subsequent quarter. The result of holding otherwise would be to penalize a sheriff for a mere slip of memory, and deny him the right to be made whole for moneys actually and necessarily expended by him in administering his official duties. Said section evinces no such intent.

While section 2997 G. C. does not expressly provide for the filing by the sheriff of an expense report at the end of his term of office (but only quarterly), it seems to me that it would be proper for him to do so, in view of the fact that the amount of said expenses are due and payable to him personally.

Assuming that the expense account referred to in your letter is a full, accurate and itemized account, filed under oath, and exhibits actual and necessary expenses for maintaining horses necessary to the proper administration of the sheriff's office,

I am of the opinion that such account can legally be allowed at this time by your county commissioners.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SAFETY HAS AUTHORITY TO MAKE RULES FOR DAYS OFF OF POLICEMEN—COUNCIL HAS SAME AUTHORITY FOR FIREMEN.

Under the laws of Ohio now in force, the power to make rules regarding the days off to be allowed members of the police department is vested in the director of public safety; and the power to make similar rules governing members of the fire department is vested in the council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 24, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 23, 1919, requesting my opinion upon questions submitted to you by the director of public safety of the city of Coshocton, was duly received.

The letter from the director of public safety referred to, is quoted in your letter as follows:

> "Members of our police force are asking for one day off duty in seven days and members of our fire department are asking for every third day off. Will you kindly inform me whether the safety director has full discretion to decide this matter or whether it is necessary to have council take action by the passage of an ordinance, in case it should be deemed advisable to grant either of the above requests.

We will appreciate it very much if you will give us some light upon this question."

And the questions which you have propounded to me are as follows:

"Question 1. Has council any power relative to the rules and regulations of the fire and police departments in regard to days off in addition to the power to fix compensation in general?

Question 2. Has the director of public safety the exclusive power to fix the rules and regulations of the police and fire departments relative to days to be allowed off?"

By virtue of section 4368 G. C. the director of public service, under the direction of the mayor, is made the executive head of police and fire departments, and has all the powers and duties connected with and incident to the appointment, regulation and government of these departments "except as otherwise provided by law."

Section 4374 G. C. confers upon council the power to determine by ordinance or resolution the number of patrolmen, and section 4377 G. C. also confers upon council the power to determine in the same manner the number of firemen.

Sections 4374 and 4377 G. C. read as follows:

"Section 4374.—The police department of each city shall be composed of a chief of police and such inspectors, captains, lieutenants, sergeants, corporals, detectives, patrolmen, and other police court officers, station house keepers, drivers, and substitutes, as are provided by ordinance or resolution of council."

"Section 4377.—The fire department of each city shall be composed of a chief of the fire department and such marshals, assistant marshals, firemen, telephone and telegraph operators as are provided by resolution or ordinance of council. The director of public safety shall have the exclusive management and control of such other officers, surgeons, secretaries, clerks, and employes as are provided by ordinance or resolution of council."

After the number of patrolmen and firemen has been determined by council, as above provided, the director of public safety, under authority of section 4382 G. C., is required to classify the service in both departments in conformity with the ordinance, and to make all rules for the regulation and discipline of said departments, except as otherwise provided in the subdivision in which that section is found.

Section 4382 G. C. reads as follows:

"Section 4382.—The director of public safety shall classify the service in the police and fire department in conformity with the ordinance of council determining the number of persons to be employed therein, and shall make all rules for the regulation and discipline of such departments, except as otherwise provided."

It will thus be seen that the director of public safety has the power under both sections 4368 and 4382 G. C., to prescribe the rules for both the police and fire departments, except as otherwise provided by law. The question therefore becomes pertinent whether or not the power conferred upon the director of public safety has been taken away and placed in other hands.

No statute has been found taking away from the director of public safety the power conferred upon him by sections 4368 and 4382 G. C. to make rules regarding the police department; but section 4393 G. C. has provided, with respect to the fire department, that council may "establish the hours of labor of the members of its fire department," and that after January 1, 1911, "council shall not require any firemen to be on duty continuously more than six days in every seven." See 1912 Op. Atty Gen., Vol. 2, p. 1726. The latter section also confers upon council the power to provide such by-laws and regulations for the government of firemen as is deemed necessary and proper.

Section 4393 G. C. reads as follows:

> "The council may establish all necessary regulations to guard against the occurrence of fires, protect the property and lives of the citizens against damages and accidents resulting therefrom and for such purpose may establish and maintain a fire department, provide for the establishment and organization of fire engine and hose companies, establish the hours of labor of the members of its fire department, but after the first day of January, nineteen hundred and eleven, council shall not require any fireman to be on duty continuously more than six days in every seven, and provide such by-laws and regulations for their government as is deemed necessary and proper."

It would seem, therefore, that it is within the power of the director of public safety to make the rules regarding the police department, and that the power to make the rules regarding the fire department is conferred upon the city council.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—WHEN BOARD OF EDUCATION IS LIABLE FOR TUITION—ATTENDANCE ONE DAY IN MONTH CREATES LIABILITY.

1. Liability for tuition rests upon attendance. A board of education cannot collect tuition from a foreign board of education for time in which no school sessions were held.
2. But attendance on one day creates a liability for the whole school month.
3. Tuition due grows out of attendance and without an agreement under section 7735 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 24, 1919.

HON. PAUL M. ASHBAUGH, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your inquiry of January 14, 1919, reading as follows:

> "The Mt. Vernon, Ohio, public schools were shut down for a period of three months on account of the Spanish influenza. Can the board of education of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, collect tuition from foreign pupils for the period of time during which there was no school?"

In your further statement of fact, under date of January 28, 1919, you say:

"1. The tuition in question is sought to be collected by the board of education of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, from the township school board.

"2. The Mt. Vernon board of education has never entered into a written contract with a township board of education for tuition for township pupils. The practice has been for the pupils to notify the clerk of the township board upon entry into the Mt. Vernon schools. A statement is then furnished by the Mt. Vernon board of education to the township board, and upon presentation of the statement the bills would then be paid."

Attention is invited to section 7689 G. C., which provides as follows:

"The school year shall begin on the first day of September of each year, and close on the thirty-first day of August of the succeeding year. A school week shall consist of five days and a school month of four school weeks."

Section 7747 G. C. further provides:

"The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in village or rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of the month shall create a liability for the entire month. No more shall be charged per capita than the amount ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended, which may include charges not exceeding five per cent per annum and depreciation charges not exceeding five per cent per annum, based upon the actual value of all property used in conducting said high school by the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district. The district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary school work, and are eligible for admission to high school. The county superintendent shall thereupon issue to each pupil so certified a certificate of promotion which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school. Such certificates shall be furnished by the superintendent of public instruction."

It will be noted that section 7689 G. C. clearly states what shall constitute a school month, that is, four school weeks of five days each, and the first school month of the school year, for purposes of computation, would be complete with the end of the fourth school week following the opening of the school term.

It is assumed that the attendance of foreign pupils, as indicated in your inquiry, is that of high school pupils under section 7747 G. C., above quoted. In the matter of liability for tuition, this section provides "such amount to be computed by the month," and it must be inferred that the school month, as established by law, is the month that is meant, that is, four school weeks, properly computed from the date of the beginning of the school term. Your statement of facts does not make clear as to whether the "period of three months" indicated by you was continuous or intermittent, making an aggregate of three months lost in school work, which might have been the case where schools were closed for a time, then started and then closed again, thus running the liability into the fourth school month.

Section 7747 G. C., quoted again, in part says:

"An attendance any part of a month will create a liability for the whole month," hence attendance of a pupil for but one day in a designated school month of your term would create liability for the whole month in the case of that pupil. The language of the quoted sentence of section 7747 G. C. carries with it the clear idea that liability rests upon attendance, else such language would be superfluous; in other words, liability would not lie if there were no attendance. So, if a public school, receiving the pupils of another district under contract for tuition, was not in operation for the whole of a particular school month of your term, then no liability would lie for that particular school month, there having been no attendance within the meaning of section 7747 G. C.

But, if such school receiving pupils under contract for tuition from another district was closed temporarily after an established school month had begun, and during such month, and there had been attendance by a foreign pupil during such part of the month in question, then would accrue liability for tuition of that pupil for the whole school month, though such pupil had attended but one school day.

Further, while your statement of facts does not say whether such foreign pupils were elementary or high school pupils, the tuition of each being treated under separate sections of the statutes, it is pointed out that the language in section 7747 G. C., covering tuition of high school pupils, is practically the same as section 7736 G. C., covering elementary pupils, which reads as follows:

"Such tuition shall be paid from either the tuition or the contingent funds and the amount per capita must be ascertained by dividing the total expense of conducting the elementary schools of the district attended, which shall include interest charges not to exceed five per cent per annum and depreciation charges not to exceed five per cent per annum, based upon the actual value of all property used in conducting said elementary school, by the total enrollment in the elementary schools of the district, such amount to be computed by the month. An attendance any part of a month shall create a liability for a whole month."

So the rule would be the same for either kind of pupils, though treated in separate sections of the statutes.

Answering the question, then, "Can the board of education of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, collect tuition from foreign pupils for the period of time during which there was no school?" the Attorney-General is of the opinion that liability for tuition rests upon attendance in the light of sections 7736 and 7747 G. C., and if there was no school during a particular school month, there could be no attendance; but if there was school during part of a particular school month, and there was attendance during any part of such month on the part of a foreign pupil, even for a day, there becomes due the tuition of that pupil for that entire school month, and such tuition actually due under sections 7736 and 7747 G. C. can be collected by the board of education of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, for the school months in which attendance of foreign pupils took place, bearing in mind the provisions of section 7735 G. C., that "in such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement" when same is legally due, and "a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside."

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—WHERE CONTRACT MAKES NO PROVISION FOR ADDITION TO OR OMISSION FROM STIPULATED WORK—BY AGREEMENT OR OTHERWISE PART OF WORK OMITTED—COST OF OMITTED WORK DEDUCTED FROM CONTRACT PRICE.

Where, under a construction contract providing for the payment of a given sum for the doing as a whole of stipulated work and making no provision for the contingency of addition to or omission from such stipulated work, a definite parcel of such work is omitted either by express agreement of parties or upon the owner's request to which the contractor takes no exception at the time or afterwards, the owner has the right to deduct from the contract price a sum equal to what it would have cost to perform the omitted work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 24, 1919.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 18, 1919, submitting to me for opinion the following:

> "On the 28th day of April, 1916, the state of Ohio, through this department, entered into contract with the firm of Smith, Krabill & Siffert for the improvement of Section 'I' of I. C. H. No. 66, Stark county.
> The work under this contract proceeded in an unsatisfactory manner until some time in September, 1917.
> Due to the fact that the work under this contract was not satisfactory and that the contractors became financially involved, the contract of Smith, Krabill & Siffert was forfeited on October 5, 1917, and on the 16th day of October, 1917, an agreement was entered into between the state of Ohio and the New Amsterdam Casualty Company of New York, surety for Smith, Krabill & Siffert, for the completion of the remainder of the improvement in accordance with the original contract and the plans and specifications accompanying same.
> The New Amsterdam Casualty Company proceeded with the work and same was finally accepted by this department with a deduction for non-performance in amount of $395.55 covering some pipe culverts which it was found were unnecessary in the improvement of the road and were therefore not placed by either the original contractors, Smith, Krabill & Siffert, nor the New Amsterdam Casualty Company.
> The New Amsterdam Casualty Company is now disputing our right to deduct the above amount on account of non-performance of the contract in this particular and are asking for payment to them of the entire amount of the contract price over and above that paid to Smith, Krabill & Siffert prior to forfeiture.
> I am respectfully asking for your opinion as to whether we have a legal right to make payment to the New Amsterdam Casualty Company of the full amount of the contract price less the amount paid Smith, Krabill & Siffert under the above stated facts."

It further appears, in response to the inquiry made verbally of Mr. Bruning, chief engineer, that the pipe culverts mentioned were omitted either because an express understanding was had to that effect between the original contractor and the engineer in charge, or upon request of the engineer to which no exception was taken by the contractor at the time or afterwards—the engineer having found the insertion of the culverts, as called for in the plans, unnecessary for, though not inconsistent with, a proper execution of the work.

It further appears from an examination made at your office of the contract in question that it is a so-called "lump sum" contract calling for the payment of a certain sum in full of the improvement work as a whole—as distinguished from the so-called "unit basis" contract, and that it contains no express provision for adjustment of price in case of addition to or omission from the work provided for; nor, so far as I can discern, does it contain any implied provision for such a contingency, unless the language of the contract hereinafter quoted is broad enough to include such an implication. Assuming, then, for the moment, that there is nothing in the contract relating, directly or indirectly, to addition to or omission from the stipulated work, what is the result in the light of your inquiry?

To begin with, it may be stated both upon reason and authority that neither party is at liberty without the consent of the other to add to or take from the amount of work stipulated. In the case of Griffith vs. The Sanitary District of Chicago, 174 Ill. App. 100, the court holds as set forth in the fourth branch of the syllabus:

> "Where a contract is made for a gross sum for the construction of a piece of work and changes are afterwards made in the material used, as to size or quality, the contractor may refuse to make the changes unless by the contract he is in terms required to do so, and may acquiesce in the forfeiture of the contract and recover upon a quantum meruit for the material furnished and his labor."

And to like effect is the case of Fontano vs. Robbins, 22 Appeal Cases Dist. of Columbia, 253, wherein the court say at page 266 of the opinion:

> "But, apart from an agreement to that effect, an architect is not the general agent of the owner, and has no power to change plans of the work, and especially not to the detriment of the contractor. He cannot change the terms of the contract, and either omit or insert provisions that the parties have not agreed to, unless expressly authorized by the parties."

And again, the case of Roettinger, Adm. vs. United States, 26 Court of Claims Reports, 391, from which it appears by the ninth section of the syllabus:

> "Where a contractor's bids are unbalanced, so that his profits come from one kind of work and not from another, the defendants can not deprive him of his profits by increasing the latter work and abandoning the former, if there be a departure from the plans upon which he made his bids."

Hence, upon the assumption that in the contract now being considered, there is no provision for addition to or omission from the stipulated work, the contractor was in nowise legally bound to honor the engineer's request that part of the work be omitted, nor to enter into an agreement providing for such omission. But, the contractor having assented to the omission, either by express agreement, or by voluntary and unprotecting compliance with the request of the engineer, what follows?

> "A builder, under a contract to erect a house in accordance with plans and specifications for a certain sum, to be paid on the completion of the building, can recover the contract price, although there are certain immaterial omissions or deviations from the contract, if the building has been substantially completed; but the defendant will be entitled to such a deduction from the contract price as will enable him to complete the work in exact accordance with the contract."

Emden on building contracts, etc. (4th ed. London, 1907) p. 126.

And that the text just quoted from Judge Emden states the law as applicable in Ohio, see the case of Goldsmith vs. Hand Assignee, 26 O. S. 101, in which the syllabus reads:

"Where a contractor, under a written agreement between them, constructed a house for and on the lands of the owner, substantially in accordance with the terms of the contract, as verbally changed in some respects as to size, form, and material of some parts of the work, by consent of parties during the progress of the work, and leaving little only to be done to complete it; and the owner, during the progress of the work, had without objection made payments in pursuance of his agreement, as designated portions of the work were done, and had taken possession and was using the house for the purpose intended; in an action brought to recover a balance due on the contract: Held, first, that the plaintiff might recover without proving that the contractor had strictly performed the contract. Second, that as to unfinished work, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the balance due at the contract price, less such sum as it would require to construct or complete the unfinished parts. Third, that as to those parts, which by consent of both parties, during the progress of the work, had been constructed of materials and of size and form different from that required by the agreement, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the balance due at the contract price, less the difference in the value of those parts as constructed, and their value as the contract required them to be constructed."

Other authorities may be mentioned, such as:

White vs. Oliver, 36 Maine, 92. Hayward vs. Leonard, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 181. Smith vs. The Proprietors, etc., 8 Pick. (Mass.) 178.

I am not losing sight of the fact that the opinions I have referred to grew out of adversary proceedings wherein the owner was disclaiming any liability under the contract upon the ground of the alleged non-performance thereof by the builder; whereas with the contract under consideration you are, by accepting the work, admitting substantial performance. But, certainly, technical contentions along these lines are not admissible to make inapplicable the principles of the authorities cited. Indeed, as it seems to me, these principles are so much the more in point when the builder is in the position of assenting to the withdrawal of certain minor requirements of the contract, thus making manifest the fairness and equity of a corresponding reduction in contract price.

In view of the foregoing, it is not necessary to inquire whether under the terms of the contract itself, the state highway commissioner is vested with authority to decrease the contract price if part of the work be omitted by agreement of parties, since, as we have seen, the owner may under the law make the reduction even though no authority therefor is provided in the contract. It is, however, material to determine whether the contract, expressly or by implication, forbids the making of such reduction.

The following which I quote from pages 7 and 8 of the contract, appearing in the section entitled "General Provisions" are seemingly the only portions of the instrument which have a bearing on the question:

> "Plans and Specifications and Interpretations.
> The specifications and accompanying plans are intended to describe and provide for the complete work. They are to be co-operative and what is called for by either is as binding as if called for by both. The work herein provided for is to be complete in every detail, notwithstanding that every item necessarily involved is not particularly mentioned.
> The right is reserved to the commissioner to correct any errors or omissions in said plans or specifications whenever such correction is necessary for the proper fulfillment of the intentions of the plans or specifications.
> Should any misunderstanding arise as to the intent or meaning of said plans or specifications, or any discrepancy appear in either, the decision of the commissioner in such case shall be final and conclusive.
> Estimated Quantities
> The estimated quantities of the work herein contemplated are only approximate, although the result of calculations, and the bidder must be responsible for his own data on which to base his bid. He shall not be entitled to any claim for damages in case the quantities actually obtained in the work be greater or less than said estimated quantities."

It might be contended that these provisions evince an intention of making the contract self-sufficient, final and unchangeable as to scope of improvement to be accomplished and price to be paid, leaving open only the matters of correction of errors, supplying of omissions and harmonizing of discrepancies, each party, so to speak, "taking his chance" on an increase or decrease in quantity as developed in the workmanlike execution of the improvement as compared with advance plans and estimates; and that in these circumstances the sentence "He shall not be entitled to any claim for damage in case the quantities actually obtained in the work be greater or less than said estimated quantities" implies the converse proposition that he (the contractor) shall not be subject to reduction of contract price if the quantities obtained in the work be less than the estimated quantities. However, is there not a broad distinction to be observed between a change in quantity obtained in accomplishing the precise result called for in the plans as compared with advance estimates based on such plans, and a like change accruing because of the agreed addition or omission of a definite parcel of work to or from that called for in the plans? To illustrate: The approximate estimate of roadway excavation in connection with contract in question is 55,500 cubic yards; approximate length of proposed highway improvement, 30,523 feet. If in the doing of the work to the approximate length of 30,523 feet, there were obtained a substantial increase or decrease in the 55,500 cubic yards, neither party would be in position to complain; but if, by agreement of parties 10,000 feet or other definite amount, whether large or small, were added to or deducted from the length of the improvement, there would be ground for a re-adjustment of price consequent upon the greater or less amount of excavation required.

So evident, so much in accord with simple justice and so vital to a proper understanding of the contract does this distinction seem to me, that I can only conclude that it negatives completely any claim that the contract inherently prohibits a reduction of price if a parcel of the improvement work be omitted by agreement.

Assuming, then, that the deduction of $395.55 accurately measures what it would cost to do the omitted work, I give it as my opinion that you are without right to pay the amount to or on account of the contractors or their successor.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—DRIVER OF VEHICLE ENGAGED IN TRANSPORTATION OF PUPILS—CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT PROVIDING FOR PAY OF DRIVER—CANNOT RECOVER FOR DAYS NO SERVICE PERFORMED.

A driver of a vehicle engaged in the transportation of pupils, under contract to perform such transportation on each "school day," said contract providing for payment of a stipulated amount per school month, can not recover for days on which no service was performed, there being no school on account of a recognized epidemic and such schools being closed under authority of law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

HON. FRANK CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your request for an opinion of the Attorney-General you say:

> "The boards of education throughout Huron county for the present school year have entered into contracts with various persons who have agreed to haul children to school.
> A copy of the form used by the school boards is enclosed herewith. During the recent epidemic, several of the school boards have been at a loss to know whether or not the driver should be paid for the time when he was not on duty, because of the school being closed by an order of the board of health.
> In Wakeman rural school district the school began on the second day of September, 1918, and continued until about the tenth of October, and from the tenth day of October to the tenth day of November school was closed by an order of the board of health. The question now arises as to whether or not the drivers in this school district were entitled to pay while school was closed, the form used being of the same kind as the one enclosed herewith with the exception that the blanks were filled out."

The contract is in the form following:

> "CONTRACT FOR THE TRANSPORTATION OF SCHOOL CHILDREN
> (1) This agreement made and entered into at ---------- by and between ---------- of the township of ----------, county of Huron and state of Ohio, who will hereinafter be designated as driver, and the board of education of ---------- township, Huron county, Ohio, which will hereinafter be called the board, Witnesseth:
> (2) That said driver in consideration of the promises and agreements hereinafter contained, upon the part of the said board to be performed hereby promises and agrees to furnish the necessary horses, harness and all other necessary equipment, except wagon and lap robes or other lap covering, and to perform all necessary labor and services in transporting all the children of school age, residing along the following route:

(3) located _____, each morning, and from said school building to their respective homes or residences along said route at the close of each school day, for a period of not less than nine school months.

(4) Said driver agrees to transport said children over said route as specified above and to do and perform all work, labor and services necessary in connection therewith, in a proper, safe and careful manner; to at all times refrain from the use of tobacco and (or) intoxicating liquors while transporting said children to or from said school and if he shall be found guilty by the board of wilfuly having intoxicating liquors on his person or wagon or under its influence, this contract shall be null and void and his bondsmen held for the completion of this contract; to keep his wagon in a clean and sanitary condition; to preserve order therein; not to permit, commit, palliate or allow any immoral conduct or the use of vile or profane language in or about his wagon; to stop his wagon at convenient places for the children to enter the same, and on the side of the road on which the residence of any such child or children entitled to be so transported shall be located, and for sufficient time, not to exceed three minutes for such child or children to enter or leave said wagon and not to allow, permit or suffer any person who is not acceptable to said board to drive said wagon; not to unload or leave any child or children at any place along said route, without first providing them with comfortable quarters, and then only in case of accident or other extreme necessity. Said driver agrees not to sub-let the work herein provided without the consent of the board first obtained in writing; to make all trips over said route as expeditiously as possible, taking into consideration the distance to be traveled and the condition of the roads, and not to arrive at said school earlier than _____ o'clock a. m., Standard time, and not later than _____ a. m. Said driver agrees to use the wagon furnished by said board for no other purpose than that specified above, and to keep said wagon housed at all times when not in actual use, and at the end of the school year to carefully store said wagon in the shed provided for same by said board. Said driver agrees to begin the return trip from said school house with said children not later than _____ o'clock p. m. Said driver will transport any teachers living on his route and the teacher shall pay the said driver $____ per month for said service. Drivers shall take wagons to repair shop and return them to the school sheds free of charge.

(5) In consideration of the performance of all and singular of the aforementioned covenants, promises and agreements on the part of said driver, to be performed and kept, the said board agrees to provide said driver with a suitable wagon for the transportation of said children to and from said school, and to make good all repairs for same unless it shall be shown that said wagon was broken or damaged through the fault, neglect or carelessness of said driver, and to pay said driver the sum of $75.00 per school month, during the continuance of this contract. It is mutually agreed between the parties hereto that the work under and in pursuance of this contract shall begin on September 2, 1918, and that the route specified above may be altered or changed by said board as circumstances may require without in any way affecting, changing, altering or impairing any other provision hereof or in any way changing the legal status of this instrument.

(6) In witness whereof the said driver and said board have hereunto set their respective hands and seals, this _____ day of _____ A. D. 19____.

Signed in the presence of _____ _____ Driver."

The question here is the construction of the contract made between the board of education and the driver in question, and in construing the same, the law will recognize the manifest intent of the parties to the contract, if it is possible to ascertain such intent.

The contract in question here, while containing a number of detail provisions regarding equipment, rules and regulations, contains the leading point as to whether under such contract a driver, transporting children to and from school for the board of education, is entitled to pay for those days on which the school was not in session, being closed under order of the board of health on account of a prevalent epidemic of influenza, such disease being pronounced an epidemic in Ohio by Opinion No. 1549, rendered by the Attorney-General on November 13, 1918.

It seems, therefore, that no question is raised as to the right to close the public schools during the time in question and that such closing was made by the board of health under authority of law; that such closing was ordered by a governmental authority over whom neither the board of education nor the driver had control and under such circumstances there is no fault in either party, for the board of education could not hold school on the days in question, had it desired, while the driver, in assembling children of school age in van or vehicle, would in a sense be violating the intent of the board of health, that there should be no assembling of school children, and it must follow that the gathering of children in a vehicle covering a route in time of epidemic is equally as dangerous in communicating disease as the session in the building.

With the inaugurating of the transporting of pupils to school, such transportation becomes a part of the school system and its proper administration; that transportation of pupils on days when there is no school session is not to be presumed and such would seem to be the intent of both parties to a contract, where they had neglected to so stipulate in direct terms.

Coming, therefore, to a closer analysis of the contract here given, it is found in paragraph (3) that the language reads:

"* * * and from said school building to their respective homes or residences along said route at the close of each school day * * *", and it follows that if such payment was due for "each day," then the qualifying and descriptive words, "each school day," would not have been used; and the contract in question, using the qualifying words, "each school day," might fall within the view of the recent opinion of the attorney-general, No. 1642, rendered December 26, 1918, wherein it is held that, in a contract wherein the words, "school day" occurs, "that the drivers should be paid for only those days upon which the services were actually rendered and for only each school day that the schools were in session."

Supporting in further degree the manifest intent of the parties to the contract attention is invited to the further language:

"Said driver will transport any teachers living on his route and the teacher shall pay the said driver $____ per month for said service."

Clearly no one can say that the transporting of the teacher herein intended, was to any other place than the school, and the only occasion for the teacher to be at the school was on the days when school was held. The above clause is a part of the contract; the driver is to transport; the teacher is to pay so much "per month for said service," that is, the transporting. If there was no transporting of the teacher then there was no service in the language of this part of the contract, for the words go together.

Having discussed the manifest intent of the parties to the contract, that service should precede pay, and that pay rests on service to be rendered, it is appropriate, however, to examine contracts of this kind further, and in the wider view as to whether a contract runs during the time that schools are closed by process of law on account of epidemic.

A school month is provided by section 7689 G. C. to be "four school weeks" and a school week "shall consist of five days." The driver entered into the performance of his services and, while he was in the act of performing same, the schools were closed by the act of a governmental authority known as the board of health. The general rule is, that where performance becomes impossible subsequent to the making of the contract, the promisor is not therefore discharged, because it was within his power at the time of entering into the contract to provide against any such contingency and if he does not do so, the law will not do it for him. Performance, however, will be excused where, without fault of the promisor, the law prevents such performance.

It is said in an old case, Paradine vs. Jane, Aleyn 26, that:

> "Where the law creates a duty or charge and the party is disabled to perform it without fault in him, there the law will excuse him. * * * The act of God will excuse the not doing of a thing where the law had created the duty, but never where it is created by the positive and absolute contract of the party. The reason for this distinction is obvious. The law never creates or imposes upon any one a duty to perform which God forbids or what He renders impossible of performance. * * * It is further said that the books declare that where the condition of a bond becomes impossible by the act of God, or is prohibited by the law, the condition becomes void and the bond is absolute. * * * If one covenants to serve another for seven years and he dies before the expiration of the seven years, the covenant is discharged because the act of God defeats the possibility of performance."

In our case it was not especially the act of God, although an epidemic is in many cases so considered in relation to the construction of contracts, but it was the act of a department of government over which neither the driver nor the board of education had any control. If the driver had refused to perform his conditions because in his judgment the welfare of the community would better be served by the pupils not being transported during the time the epidemic lasted, then and in that case the driver could not recover. So, likewise, if the board of education had closed the school because in its judgment the welfare of the community would require the schools to be closed, in such case the driver could recover, because the police powers to close schools during epidemics are not lodged by our laws in boards of education, but in boards of health, and so, when the board of health ordered the schools closed on account of the epidemic, the same was done, not through any act of the board of education or of the driver, but by due process of law, and the driver would thereby be relieved from the transportation and the board of education would be relieved from paying, for that time.

There are no Ohio cases directly in point, but the case of Board of Education vs. Townsend, 63 O. S. 514, may be considered as throwing some light upon what will excuse the performance of a contract. In that case Townsend contracted to remove a school building and while he was in the act of removing the same, the building was destroyed by a storm. The court held that the contractor was not excused in that particular case because the contract did not require the same to be removed as a whole and the contractor could be compelled to remove the same even after it had been blown down. On page 524 the court say:

> "The act of God, so-called, which excuses the performance of a contract because that has become impossible, does not necessarily discharge the party from the obligations arising from the contract, except, it may be, when the contract is wholly executory on both sides. If an artist contracts to paint a picture for ten thousand dollars received from his patron, and thereafter becomes incapacitated from blindness to fulfill his promise, by what right is he justified in claiming the money? We are not aware of any principle, and have not been referred to any adjudicated case, that would give absolution from the obligations of a contract to a party who has received from the other full consideration for a promise which the former has become unable to fulfill, and at the same time protect him in the enjoyment of the consideration paid. The act of God may properly lift from his shoulders the burden of performance, but has not yet been extended so as to enable him to keep the other man's property for nothing."

It is held in Jamieson vs. Indiana Natural Gas and Oil Co., 12 L. R. A., 652, that:

> "A contract is invalidated by the subsequent enactment of police regulations which render its performance illegal as to one of the parties."

The action of the board of health in the closing of the schools was in the nature of a police regulation, and while the same would not discharge the contract entirely, it would have the effect of suspending the same during the continuance of the order of the board of health.

In Hadley vs. Clarke, 8 T. R., 259, and Baylies vs. Fettyplace, 7 Mass., 324, it was held that an embargo for an indefinite time will not dissolve but only suspend the contract.

In University of Pennsylvania Law Review, 1917, page 28, is reviewed many cases of the American and English courts upon the question of an intervening subsequent event upon a contract. I quote the conclusion as follows:

> "The result of the decision in both America and England is that unless a contrary intention clearly appears from the contract of the parties, the court will employ an exception to the contract to govern an intervening subsequent event, which makes the performance of the contract impossible in effect and excuses the contracting parties from liability for non-performance, and this is in accord with the dictates of sound business and sound sense."

In Parker vs. Macomber, 16 L. R. A., 858, the general rule of law seems to be set forth. The first branch of the syllabus reads:

> "1. A person prevented from continuing his contract by the arbitrary act of the other party, may disregard it and recover the value of his services rendered in partial performance of it."

While the last above quotation does not apply in our case, it would apply if the board of education had closed the school or if the driver had refused to act. The third and fourth branches of the syllabus in the last mentioned case read:

> "3. The prevention by the act of God of full performance of an entire contract will permit a recovery upon an implied assumpsit for personal services already rendered in part performance of the contract."
> "4. A count in quantum meruit is not necessary to permit a recovery for personal services in part performance of a contract which it has become impossible to complete where the declaration contains the common count in indebitatus for work and labor."

It is entirely within the province of the contracting parties to arrange the details growing out of contingencies such as where a school is closed by process of law on account of epidemic, but where such stipulations have been neglected in the agreement, it becomes necessary to construe the contract in question, and this from more than one angle, for the rights of the driver in the premises must not be overlooked. It will be said he was ready to perform and that his failure to do so was no fault of his, and this is true, but on the other hand it was no fault of the board of education that he could not perform. Briefly stated, the driver agrees to furnish horses, etc., and transport the children of school age to the schools of the district, "each school day," for a period of not less than nine school months, and the board in consideration of such services agrees to pay the driver the sum of $75.00 per school month during the continuance of the contract. From this language it will be seen that the contract is for nine months and that is the continuance of the contract as meant in such language and both the board and the driver are bound for that entire time in their respective obligations; seemingly, only two leading things could occur that would operate against all the school days running in the nine months, and one or both were prevalent in this case; neither party can restrain the act of God or the act of governmental authority by process of law, the health officials not being subservient to either of the parties in question, but above the board of education and the driver in questions of epidemic and the physical well-being of a community where their power is absolute in these matters.

The board of health is a legal governmental authority and their acts in closing schools during the recent epidemic of influenza was an act of officials under the law. The authorities seem to be agreed that this relieves parties from the obligations of contracts, the subject being fully discussed by a recent law text-writer:

Elliott on Contracts, section 1901.

This section is headed "Impossibility Caused by Subsequent Law." An examination of it, however, and of authorities cited, shows that impossibility created by law includes administrative acts of officers in pursuance of law.

Among the cases on the subject is one by the Supreme Court of New Hampshire.

Theobald vs. Burleigh, 66 N. H., 574.

The syllabus is:

> "Where the plaintiff's failure completely to perform his contract is due to the fault of the defendant, or to the act of the law without fault of either party, he can recover what his services were reasonably worth, and the defandant is not entitled to damages for the plaintiff's non-performance."

It was a contract to move a building, and after part performance, completion was prevented by an injunction on behalf of a city restraining the location of the building on the lot to which it was moving until permission received as required by an ordinance.

Out of many similar cases, one more will be selected by the Court of Appeals of New York, Heine vs. Meyer, 61 N. Y., 171-176.

In this case the contract was for the alteration of a building. After it had begun, completion was prevented by an order of the superintendent of buildings, under authority given him by law. The chief justice in the opinion quotes from another opinion in a former case of the same court, as follows:

> "Judge Gardiner, giving the opinion of the court, after stating that the plaintiffs were prevented, by the authority of the state, from completing their contract, said they were entitled to recover for the work performed by them at the contract price; that the performance of the required condition, entitling them to payment under the contract, 'became impossible by the act of the law, and of course the plaintiffs were entitled to recover without showing a compliance with the agreement in this particular.' That decision was in accordance with a well recognized exception to the general rule or principle of law that a contracting party who absolutely engages to do an act must perform it notwithstanding any accident or other contingency not foreseen by him or within his control, yet if the performance is rendered impossible by the act of the law, then he is excused."

These cases both hold that the contractor in such circumstances may recover at the contract price, or at least recover the value of service done by him under the contract. This is equivalent to limiting his pay to that amount, and is in strict accordance with the principle that where the carrying out of a contract is prevented by authority of law, both parties are absolved from its obligations.

It follows therefore that this driver cannot recover for the days that school was not held because of the order of the board of health closing the same.

The rule seems to be unanimous that unless there is some statutory provision to the contrary, recovery may be had on a quantum meruit basis for services performed where part performance is excused on account of sickness or otherwise. So that in this case the board of education was compelled to close the schools by the order of the board of health. The driver was prevented from performing his services by the order of the board of health and neither is at fault. The driver is excused from performing and the board is excused from paying. It was within the power of the driver to contract in relation to this emergency. As far as teachers are concerned, the law makes the contract for them by declaring that "teachers shall be paid during the time the schools are closed on account of an epidemic." No such provision is contained in our laws in relation to drivers.

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that under this contract, the driver is entitled to the full nine months except for such days as school was prevented from opening by the order of the health authorities.

This opinion is confined to the contract submitted, and is not intended to apply to any other case, except in so far as the principles above announced have proper application thereto.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—WHEN PUPIL WHO IS RESIDENT OF RURAL DISTRICT, IS ELIGIBLE TO HAVE HIGH SCHOOL TUITION PAID BY RURAL DISTRICT.

1. A pupil, resident in a rural district, completing the elementary school work in a city or village district, is eligible to have his high school tuition paid by the rural district where he holds school residence, such school district not maintaining a high school.

2. Such resident pupil is entitled to the certification by the county superintendent, indicated in section 7747 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

HON. GEORGE F. CRAWFORD, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts is duly acknowledged. Such statement reads:

> "A pupil residing in a rural school district adjoining the city of Greenville has been attending the city schools here and has heretofore completed the work in the grades and has been promoted by the city schools to the high school.
> The question has arisen as to whether or not the board of education of the rural school district in which the pupil resides is required to pay the tuition of this pupil in the high school by reason of his not having been promoted from the rural school to the high school."

You further say that the board of education of the rural school district, in which the pupil resides, does not maintain a high school, thus coming within the view of section 7747 G. C., which reads:

> "The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in village or rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. * * * The district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary school work, and are eligible for admission to high school. The county superintendent shall thereupon issue to each pupil so certified a certificate of promotion which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school. Such certificates shall be furnished by the superintendent of public instruction."

From the above language it will be seen that the law contemplates the providing of means for a high school education to all pupils who are eligible for it. Primarily, and in practical use, this means the completion of the eight grades of common school work as the first requisite. In the case in question you say that the pupil residing in the rural school district has completed the grades in the Greenville city schools and has been promoted by the city schools as being eligible for the high school. The pupil received such statement of completion of the elementary school work in the city schools of Greenville and the board of education of the rural school district in which the pupil resides can hardly say that the pupil is not one of those "who have completed the elementary school work, and are eligible for admission to high school," this being the language of the statute.

A further reading of the statute, above quoted, shows that "the district superintendent shall certify to the county superintendent each year the names of all pupils in his supervision district who have completed the elementary work and are eligible to the high school." This does not say in his "supervision," but in his "supervision district," and the law contemplates that he shall have knowledge of just where every pupil of school age in his district is going to school, or whether they are going at all, and if not, to act in conjunction with the truant officer and see that they do. It is good school administration that one district should recognize the school work and promotions of another district and this seems to be the general rule and district superintendents should certify to the county superintendent "the names of all pupils in his district who have completed the elementary school work," if he is satisfied they have completed it, and thereupon "the county superintendent shall issue to each pupil so certified a certificate of promotion which shall entitle the holder to admission to any high school." This language clearly carries with it the idea that every district in the state must recognize such certificate of promotion to high school, and boards of education cannot pass against the eligibility of one holding such certificate, and in the case in question it would seem that the pupil has "completed the elementary school work" in the eye of the law, and is entitled to such certifying of his name by the superintendent of the supervision district in which such pupil lives.

Here the pupil seems to have been a resident of the rural district for some time and not one who removed from the city district to the rural district upon completing the elementary school work in the city. The law has wisely taken care of the rights of even the pupils who are newcomers in the district, for section 7748 G. C. says:

> "* * * A pupil living in a village or city district who has completed the elementary school course and whose legal residence has been transferred to a rural district in this state before he begins or completes a high school course, shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of a resident pupil of such district."

The statute clearly says that if this pupil had lived in the city district while completing the elementary school work, and then moved to the rural district, and desired to either enter or complete high school work, he would be "entitled to all the rights and privileges of a resident pupil of such district" and these rights and privileges are those named in section 7747 G. C., first quoted, viz.:

(1) Certification by the district superintendent.
(2) Certificate by county superintendent.
(3) The payment of his high school tuition by the board of education where the pupil resides.

So if these rights indicated accrue to a pupil who has just moved into a rural district from a city or village district, and having completed the elementary school work outside the rural district, it must follow that a pupil whose residence has been in the district has lost none of these rights.

Based upon the statement of facts furnished, and after the analysis of the law here given, it is the opinion of the Attorney-General that the pupil residing in a rural school district, who has satisfactorily completed the elementary school course in a village or city school, is entitled to all the rights and privileges of the other resident pupils of the rural district and the high school tuition of such pupil must be paid by the board of education of the district in which the pupil lives, there being no high school maintained in such district.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER NOT AUTHORIZED TO APPOINT POLICEMEN TO ARREST HIGHWAY LAW OFFENDERS—SECTION 6309 G. C. CONSTRUED.

Section 6309, General Code, does not authorize the appointment by the State Highway Commissioner of policemen with power to arrest offenders against the highway laws.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The receipt is acknowledged of your communication of January 22, 1919, wherein you call attention to the growing tendency to abuse the highways by hauling excessive loads thereon and quote certain correspondence between Mr. W. A. Stinchcomb, county engineer, Cuyahoga county, and yourself, on the subject. You refer to section 6309 G. C. and in conclusion say:

> "I would, therefore, ask you to furnish me with an opinion as to whether or not I have the power to appoint a man with power to arrest and assist in the prosecution of such offenders."

The only provision of the statutes which it may be claimed confers such authority as your inquiry relates to, is found in said section 6309 G. C., reading as follows:

> "The revenues derived by registration fees provided for in this chapter shall be paid by the secretary of state weekly into the state treasury. Any surplus of such revenues which may remain after the payment of the expenses incident to carrying out and enforcing the provisions of this chapter shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling (patrolling) of the public roads and highways of this state, under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department."

In the act of the General Assembly passed March 21, 1917, "To make general appropriations," there is included an appropriation for the fiscal year July 1, 1917, June 30, 1918, "To police, patrol and maintain highways as provided in section 6309 of the General Code" (107 O. L. 187; 217); and a like appropriation for the fiscal year July 1, 1918-June 30, 1919 (107 O. L. 187; 293).

Two views as to the scope and effect of section 6309 naturally suggest themselves: The broad view that the general terms used in the statute, taken in connection with the appropriation by the legislature of funds as above noted, import the conferring of power on the highway department to use the funds for the purposes designated in the statute; and the narrower view that the statute is designed primarily to declare the object of raising revenue from the registration of motor vehicles and hence is not to be taken as granting power to expend such revenue.

In determining which of these views is the better supported, three considerations arise:

First, the statute is found, not among those relating to the highway department, but in the chapter relating to motor vehicles and the fixing of fees for the registration thereof. The importance of considering the context and subject matter in ascertaining the meaning of a statute is recognized by our courts. In the case of Aultman vs. Seiberling, 31 O. S. 201, the Supreme Court says in the course of the opinion (p. 204):

> "The language of the statute authorizing appeals from the probate court is very general and comprehensive; but it must be construed with reference to the nature of the remedy and the subject-matter. Courts, in order to effect the intention of the statute, often restrain, qualify, or enlarge the meaning of the words employed."

And again, in Brigel vs. Starbuck, 34 O. S. 280, the court said, at p. 285:

> "There can be no doubt that general words in a statute will sometimes be limited in their application."

And see also, Goodall vs. Gerke Brewing Co., 56 O. S. 257, 260, where the court say, referring to a statute whose meaning was being sought:

> "The general language is restrained to the sense in which it was used by the legislature in adopting the law."

An interesting application of this rule of statutory construction is referred to in an opinion (No. 590) found at page 1587, Report of Attorney-General for 1913. After referring to certain decisions of the Supreme Court, bearing on the question whether the auditor's certificate under section 3806 G. C. was necessary to the expenditure of funds arising otherwise than by taxation, my predecessor used this language:

> "The doctrine of these decisions, and others like them, is that despite the general language of section 3806, which was originally section 45 of the municipal code, and had its prototype in old section 2702, revised statutes, because these sections have always been found among the sections relating to the exercise by a municipality of the delegated power of taxation, and the expenditure of the proceeds of taxation, their operation should be by interpretation limited to cases in which the expenditure involved is that of moneys raised by taxation."

Second, it is by no means clear that section 6309, even when considered alone and apart from the context and subject matter, imports any authority in the highway department for expending funds. Of course such authority is imported, if the last clause of the section, "under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department," be taken as referring to expenditure of funds. But in view of the fact that if said last clause be so taken the result would be to confer power on the highway department to expend the funds on any public roads of the state, whether a district, township, county or state road, is it not the more reasonable construction that said last clause was intended to refer to the class of roads on which the funds are to be expended—namely, those under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department—especially when reference is had to subsequently enacted section 1221 G. C., hereinafter referred to?

Third. Said section 6309 in its present form was enacted February 2, 1914 (104 O. L. 6). Subsequently, on March 20, 1917, the legislature enacted section 1221, the third branch of which is in point here. Said section 1221 reads as follows (107 O. L. 131):

> "The state highway improvement fund produced by the levy hereinafter provided for, shall be applied to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the inter-county and main market road systems as follows:
> 1. Seventy-five per cent of all the money paid into the treasury by reason of the levy for the state highway improvement fund shall be used for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the inter-county highways as the same have been heretofore designated or as they may hereafter be established or located by the state highway commissioner in the manner provided by law, and for the maintenance of the state highway department, including the state's portion of the salaries of the county surveyors. Money appropriated or available for inter-county highways shall be equally divided among the counties of the state.
> 2. Twenty-five per cent of all the money paid into the treasury of the state by reason of the levy for the state highway improvement fund shall be used for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of the main market roads of the state as the same have been heretofore designated or as they may hereafter be established by the state highway commissioner in the manner provided by law. The money to the credit of the state highway improvement fund for use on the main market roads of the state as herein provided shall be so expended as to distribute equitably, as far as practicable, the benefits from such expenditure to the different sections and counties of the state.
> 3. The funds derived from the registration of automobiles shall be used for the maintenance and repair of the inter-county highways and main market roads of the state. The state highway commissioner may use part of said funds as may be necessary in establishing a system of patrol or gang maintenance on the inter-county highways and main market roads, and for that purpose may employ such patrolmen, laborers and other persons and teams and purchase or lease such oilers, trucks, machinery, tools, material and other equipment and supplies as may be necessary."

It would seem that in enacting section 1221, the legislature has itself interpreted section 6309 as not conferring power on the highway department to appoint and compensate policemen with power of arrest. So far as section 6309 is concerned, the words "policing" and "patrolling" are both used, and, as above indicated, the expression, "under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department," appears; and yet the legislature has subsequently seen fit, in definite terms, to confine the expenditures to inter-county highways and main market roads, and to authorize the employment of patrolmen, thus indicating that the expression, "under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department," as used in section 6309, refers to the class of roads on which the funds should be expended, rather than to the conferring of power on the department to expend such funds and further, by implication, finding that section 6309 does not authorize the appointment of patrolmen. And if section 6309 does not give authority to appoint patrolmen, it necessarily does not confer power to appoint policemen with power of arrest; nor does section 1221 confer such power.

While it is the general rule that the courts are not concluded by a legislative interpretation, the authorities make plain that such interpretation is entitled to great weight.

In Erie Railroad Co. vs. Steinberg, 94 O. S. 189, the following appears at p. 203 of the opinion:

> "In construing a statute it is the duty of the court to give effect to the legislative intent. True, the intent of the legislature is to be determined from the language employed, and when that language clearly expresses the intent of the law-making body, it should be given its plain, ordinary meaning, for it is not a question what the law-making body intended to enact, but rather the meaning of that which it did enact. Where, however, the meaning is doubtful, the history of legislation on the subject may be considered in connection with the object, purpose and language of the law, in order to arrive at its true meaning. Slingluff et al. vs. Weaver et al., 66 Ohio St., 621.
> The passage by congress of the Cummins amendment immediately following the decision in the case of the Boston & Maine Rd. vs. Hooker, supra, would seem to indicate the meaning and intent of congress when it passed the Carmack amendment, and this Cummins amendment was made necessary by the fact that the language employed in the Carmack amendment, as construed by the court, did not clearly express the intent of the law-making body."

And see also:

Industrial Com. vs. Brown, 92 O. S. 309, wherein the court say at p. 313 of the opinion:

> "As against all this the court feels impelled to follow both the executive and legislative construction of the word 'injury' as employed in this act and to limit recovery of compensation to such as may have suffered injury otherwise than through disease, thereby giving to the legislative and executive construction the added force of judicial construction."

See further:

> Salen vs. State ex rel., 18 C. C. (n. s.) 538. McArthur vs. Kelley, 5 Ohio 139.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of United States vs. Freeman, 3 Howard 556 (11 Law. Ed. 724), holds as follows, as shown by first and second paragraphs of the syllabus:

> "Statutes in pari materia should be taken into consideration in construing a law. If a thing contained in a subsequent statute be within the reason of a former statute, it shall be taken to be within the meaning of that statute.
> And if it can be gathered from a subsequent statute in pari materia what meaning the legislature attached to the words of a former statute, this will amount to a legislative declaration of its meaning, and will govern the construction of the first statute."

In the course of the opinion in Swigert vs. Baker, 229 U. S. 187 (57 Law. Ed. 1143), the Supreme Court of the United States uses this language at p. 197:

"If there could be any doubt as to the meaning of the statute, it disappears in the light of congressional construction which may properly be examined as an aid in its interpretation."

In the New York case of The People vs. Cricuoli, 157 App. Div. 201; 141 N. Y. S. 855, the court quotes with approval the following from Endlich on Interpretation of Statutes (sec. 366):

"Earlier Cognate Acts.—Where it is gathered from a later act, that the legislature attached a certain meaning to an earlier cognate one, this would be taken as a legislative declaration of its meaning there."

In Crohn, Adm. vs. Kansas City Home Telephone Co., 131 No. App. Rep. 313 (109 S. W. 1068), the first syllabus reads:

"While a legislative interpretation of a statute is not conclusive upon the courts, it should be given weight in ascertaining the intention of the legislature and the application of amendments to existing statutes."

In State vs. Clausen, 63 Wash. 535 (116 Pac. 7), the third paragraph of the syllabus reads:

"The courts will not speculate upon legislative intent when that body has subsequently put its own construction on prior enactments."

In the case of State vs. Board of Commissioners, 83 Kans. 199 (110 Pac. 92), the Supreme Court say in the course of the opinion, at p. 203:

"It is a fundamental principle of constitutional law that the legislature has power to indicate by a later act what its intention was in passing an earlier one. In such event, whatever lawyer and layman may have understood or courts may have decided, the legislature's interpretation is binding in all cases after it has been made manifest."

From the foregoing, the conclusion results that you are without authority to appoint policemen with power of arresting offenders against the highway laws.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—BOARD OF HEALTH HAS AUTHORITY TO MAKE PER DIEM ALLOWANCE TO HEALTH OFFICER FOR QUARANTINE WORK IN ADDITION TO ANNUAL COMPENSATION—HEALTH OFFICER NOT AUTHORIZED TO COLLECT FROM PERSON QUARANTINED—COMPENSATION FOR VACCINATIONS.

1. Under section 4411-1 G. C., a municipal board of health may make a per diem allowance to a health officer for quarantine work in addition to his annual compensation previously fixed by the board of health.

2. A health officer is not authorized to collect, in quarantine cases, for usual and ordinary services performed strictly for the protection of the public, from the person quarantined.

3. A health officer is entitled to such compensation for vaccinations under section 4449 G. C. as may be fixed and allowed by the board of health under section 4411-1 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 4, 1919, as follows:

> "We are referring you to an opinion of the Attorney-General under date of June 10, 1915, recorded in the Annual Reports for 1915, page 981, and respectfully request your written opinion upon the following matter:
> Statement of Facts
> The board of health of a municipality has fixed the compensation of the health officer at $1,020.00 per annum. The board has also passed a resolution allowing him $8.00 per day for work in quarantine cases.
> 1. Is such compensation in both instances legal?
> 2. Should the health officer not charge for his services in quarantine cases according to the services rendered, and should he not first attempt to collect from the persons quarantined, and then attempt to collect from the city, if such persons were unable to pay?
> 3. Is the fixing of an arbitrary per diem for such services in quarantine cases legally payable in addition to his regular compensation?
> 4. Can such health officer legally charge the city seventy-five cents for each vaccination?"

From your statement of facts it is observed that the municipal board of health has fixed an annual compensation for its health officer and in addition thereto has passed a resolution allowing him $8.00 per day for work in quarantine cases, and your first question is whether or not such compensation is legal.

Sections 4408, 4411-1 and 4431 G. C. are applicable. In part section 4408 is as follows:

> "The board of health shall appoint a health officer who shall be the executive officer. He shall furnish his name and address, and other information required by the state board of health."

Section 4411-1, as amended in 103 O. L., p. 436, is as follows:

> "The board shall determine the duties and fix the salaries of its employees; but no member of the board of health shall be appointed as health officer or ward physician."

Section 4431 G. C., applicable to quarantine cases, in part is as follows:

> "The board of health may employ as many persons as it deems necessary to execute its orders and properly guard any house or place containing any person or persons affected with any of the diseases named herein."

In considering these provisions as to the salary and duties of the health officer, it must be borne in mind that he is not affected by Article II, section 20 of the Constitution of Ohio, prohibiting the increase of an officer's salary during his term, nor by section 4213 G. C., which provides:

"The salary of any officer, clerk or employe shall not be increased during the term for which he is elected or appointed."

It has been held in State vs. Massillon, 2 O. C. C. (n. s.) 169, and in other cases, that the health officer is not an "officer" nor has he any "term" as these words are used and understood in the constitutional and legislative provisions above mentioned. As stated in the case above cited,

"he is the servant of the board of health that makes the appointment. He is under their absolute control and direction; and in addition to that, they fix his salary. His salary is at the will of the board of health. His term of office is at their will. They may terminate it at their pleasure. * * * Now, that being the nature of the employment, perhaps it is a misnomer to call him an officer at all. He is more like an employe or servant of the board of health."

Section 4411-1 G. C., supra, vests the power of fixing the salary of its employes in the board of health, and in view of the terms of this statute as construed by the courts, the health officer is an employe in the sense that the board has full authority to determine his duties and fix his compensation. It will also be noted that section 4412 G. C., prior to 1913, contained a provision similar to what is now section 4411-1, giving the board exclusive control of its employes both as to their duties and as to their salaries. It also provided for the suspension or removal of the health officer and for the certification of such suspension or removal to the civil service commission, etc.

In 1915 (Vol. 103 O. L., 698), in the civil service act, this statute was repealed, and with the obvious intention of vesting this particular power and discretion in the same board wherein it was lodged before the repeal of said section 4412, at the same session section 4411-1, supra, was enacted as a supplement to section 4411, the intention being to place said health officer and other employes of the board within the operation of the civil service act so far as their suspension or removal was concerned, but to revest the power of defining the duties and fixing the salaries of said employes in the board of health; and, in the exercise of their authority they may provide an annual salary, and in addition thereto they may fix his compensation per diem for such unusual and irregular services in cases of contagious diseases as they may deem proper, and my answer to your first question is, therefore, in the affirmative.

Your second question relates to services performed by the health officer in quarantine cases, and you inquire (a) should not the health officer charge for such services according to the service rendered, and (b) should he not first attempt to collect from the persons quarantined and then attempt to collect from the city, if such persons were unable to pay?

Section 4436 G. C. is pertinent and is as follows:

"When a house or other place is quarantined on account of contagious diseases, the board of health having jurisdiction shall provide for all persons confined in such house or place, food, fuel, and all other necessaries of life, including medical attendance, medicine and nurses, when necessary. The expenses so incurred, except those for disinfection, quarantine, or other measures strictly for the protection of the public, when properly certified by the president and clerk of the board of health, or health officer where there is no board of health, shall be paid by the person or persons quarantined, when able to make such payment, and when not by the municipality in which quarantined."

You inquire if the health officer should not charge according to the service rendered. The manner and amount of the health officer's charge in quarantine cases would be regulated and limited by the action of the board of health appointing him, and if the resolution provides for per diem allowance, his charge should be made in accordance therewith.

You also inquire in question 2 of your letter if he should not first attempt to collect from the persons quarantined and then from the city, if the persons for whom the services were rendered were unable to pay. It is to be remembered that the pehsons quarantined, even though able financially, are not obliged to pay all of the quarantine expenses.

The first part of section 4436 G. C. provides that when a house is quarantined, "the board of health having jurisdiction shall provide for all persons confined in such house or place * * * and all other necessaries of life, including medical attendance, medicine and nurses when necessary." It is to be noted that the board of health shall make the provisions above indicated.

The latter part of the section goes on to define what and in what manner the things furnished or provided by the board of health shall be paid for. It is to be noted that not all of the expense so incurred shall be paid by the person quarantined, the statute providing:

> "The expenses so incurred, except those for disinfection, quarantine and other measures strictly for the protection of the public, when properly certified by the president and clerk of the board of health, * * * shall be paid by the person or persons quarantined, when able * * *, and when not by the municipality in which quarantined."

What services does the health officer render in such cases of quarantine? Your statement of facts throws no light on these facts and in the absence of any statement to the contrary, it may be fairly assumed that the health officer discharges the duties with which he is charged by law, and it is also clear that the services which he performs and furnishes are not included in the things which the board of health shall provide, viz., food, fuel, other necessities of life, etc.

In the conclusion herein reached, it is considered that the $8.00 per diem does not include compensation for services rendered to the person quarantined for services as a physician or nurse, but only covers those services which are rendered strictly for the protection of the public, as stated in the statute. Where, in case of quarantine, the health officer acted as a physician or nurse by virtue of a special or general order from the board of health, his services would be properly chargeable against the person quarantined and, to the extent that such person is able financially to pay, are collectible from said person quarantined, and the amount thereof, so far as the quarantined person may be concerned, would be fixed by agreement or would be for their reasonable value.

But, if his services were of such a character as to be concerned only with the protection of the public, as stated in the exceptions to section 4436 G. C., then it is evident that such services should not be charged to the person quarantined.

From the language used in this section, it would appear that unless directed by the board of health to do so, and acting as its agent in such matter, the health officer would have nothing to do with the collection of the account for things or services provided for a person quarantined, as the section provides that the president and clerk of the board of health shall certify an account to the person quarantined.

Answering question 2 more specifically, I am of the opinion (a) that the health officer is not required to charge for his services in quarantine case, except as provided in the resolution of the board of health in such quarantine cases, and (b) that for his services generally, and unless employed or instructed to perform special duties, such as those of a physician or nurse, he is not expected or obliged to collect for his services from the person quarantined.

It appears that the answer to question 1 disposes of and answers question 3 of your letter, and it follows that question 3 may also be answered in the affirmative.

Your fourth question inquires whether the health officer may legally charge the city seventy-five cents for each vaccination. Vaccination is the subject of a special section, 4449 G. C., which is as follows:

> "The board of health may take measures and supply agents and afford inducements and facilities for gratuitous vaccination."

Under this section and under section 4411-1, I can answer your question generally by saying the board of health has ample authority to allow the health officer this fee for each vaccination.

What has been said in the consideration of your first question is applicable here so far as it is stated that the matter of defining the duties and fixing the salaries is exclusively in the discretion of the board of health.

If in fixing the annual compensation the board of health provided that said compensation should include the vaccination services, then no additional compensation would be allowed. Your statement of facts is indefinite as to this, but for the purposes of your inquiry an answer in this manner may be responsive to your needs.

It is to be borne in mind that the legislature here did not definitely outline what measures the board of health should take, nor indicate what agents it would supply, but it is clear that it did not state or enumerate any additional duties for the health officer.

My predecessor (in 1913, Vol. 1, p. 294, Attorney-General's Reports), rendered an opinion wherein, on a similar question, he held that making vaccinations was not a part of the duty of the health officer and that a health officer of a city could be appointed as special agent for vaccination and proper compensation paid therefor. So I can answer your question in this manner. That unless the matter of services in vaccinations is provided for in the act of the board fixing the annual compensation of the health officer, he would be entitled to receive such amount as the board of health would deem proper to allow him.

The opinion of the Attorney-General dated June 10, 1915, and recorded in Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, page 981, referred to in your letter, as well as the opinion of the Attorney-General heretofore cited, have been noted and, in so far as they are applicable to the questions herein involved, are approved.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY PURCHASE MACHINERY, TOOLS AND EQUIPMENT WITHOUT COMPETITIVE BIDDING—NO AUTHORITY FOR BOND ISSUE FOR THE ABOVE PURPOSE—SECTIONS 7200 AND 7214 G. C. CONSTRUED.

1. County commissioners may, under authority of section 7200 G. C. (107 O. L. 115), purchase machinery, tools or equipment for the purposes specified in said section, without resorting to advertising or competitive bidding.

2. No authority exists for the issuing of bonds for the purpose of purchasing machinery, tools or equipment for the purposes named in said section 7200.

3. County commissioners may, under authority of section 7214 G. C. (106 O. L. 645), purchase materials for the purposes specified in said sections, without resorting to advertising or competitive bidding.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

HON. G. B. FINDLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This department has had under consideration your letter of January 27, 1919, wherein you submit for opinion the following three inquiries:

> "1. Can the county commissioners go into the market and purchase such equipment as they feel suitable to their needs without advertising?
> 2. Can bonds be issued to raise funds to pay for such equipment?
> 3. After equipment is purchased have the county commissioners authority to purchase material such as slag, asphalt, etc., in the open market without advertising?"

In connection with the first of these inquiries, reference is had to section 7200 G. C., which in its original form as enacted May 17, 1915 (105-106 O. L. 617) read as follows:

> "Sec. 7200.—The county commissioners may purchase such machinery or other equipment for construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highways, bridges and culverts under their jurisdiction, as they may deem necessary, which shall be paid for out of any taxes levied and collected for construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads, as provided in this chapter. All road machinery, tools or other equipment owned by the township when this chapter takes effect may be taken over by the county at a price to be agreed upon between the county commissioners and the township trustees. All such machinery, tools and equipment belonging to the county shall be under the care and custody of the county highway superintendent at the expense of the county. The county highway superintendent shall annually on the fifteenth day of November make or cause to be made a written inventory of all such machinery, tools and equipment indicating each article and stating the value thereof and the estimated cost of all necessary repairs thereto, and deliver the same to the county commissioners who shall cause the same to be placed on file. At the same time, he shall file with the county commissioners his written recommendations as to what machinery, tools and equipment should be purchased for the use of the county and townships during the ensuing year, and the probable cost therof. The county commissioners shall provide suitable places for housing and storing machinery, tools and equipment owned by the county.

Nothing herein shall prevent any township or two or more townships from purchasing for the exclusive use of the township or townships such machinery, tools and equipment as may be deemed necessary by the trustees thereof, but before such purchase the suggestions of the county highway superintendent shall be considered. Such machinery, tools and equipment shall be paid for by the trustees of the township or by the trustees of two or more townships, if for the joint use of two or more townships, out of any funds available for road maintenance and repair. Such township or townships may join with an incorporated village for the purchase of machinery, tools and equipment for their joint use. All machinery, tools and implements, whether owned by the county or township, shall be plainly marked, in such way as to indicate the ownership of such property."

As it thus read, said section was the subject of an opinion from this department under date March 21, 1916, Opinions of Attorney-General, 1916, Vol. I, p. 523, from which the following is quoted:

"I, therefore, advise you that there is no statutory provision which requires county commissioners or township trustees, in purchasing culvert pipe and road machinery, to let the contracts for the same by competitive bidding. While there is no legal requirement as to letting contracts for material and machinery by competitive bidding, it is my view that under ordinary circumstances the interests of the public will be best served by inviting bids and awarding the contracts to the lowest responsible bidder, in making the purchases referred to by you in your communication."

The same view was expressed in a further opinion of this department, Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1916, Vol. I, pp. 882, 886, which last mentioned opinion was referred to with approval by my immediate predecessor in an opinion found at p. 2332, Vol. III, Opinions, 1917.

Said section 7200 G. C., as amended March 20, 1917 (107 O. L. 115) reads as folllows:

"Sec. 7200.—The county commissioners may purchase such machinery, tools or other equipment for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highway, bridges and culverts under their jurisdiction as they may deem necessary, which shall be paid for out of the road funds of the county. The county commissioners may also at their discretion purchase, hire or lease automobiles, motorcycles or other conveyances and maintain the same for the use of the county surveyor and his assistants when on official business. All such machinery, tools, equipment and conveyances belonging to the county shall be under the care and custody of the county surveyor. All such machinery, tools, equipment and conveyances owned by the county shall be plainly and conspicuously marked as the property of the county. The county surveyor shall annually on the fifteenth day of November make, or cause to be made, a written inventory of all such machinery, tools, equipment and conveyances indicating each article and stating the value thereof and the estimated cost of all necessary repairs thereto and deliver the same to the county commissioners, who shall cause the same to be placed on file. At the same time he shall file with the county commissioners his written recommendations as to what machinery, tools, equipment and conveyances should be purchased for the use of the county during the ensuing year and the probable cost thereof.

> The county commissioners shall provide suitable places for housing and storing machinery, tools, equipment and conveyances owned by the county."

Inasmuch as the statute in its present form is not substantially different, so far as concerns the purchase of equipment, from its form as enacted 105-106 O. L. 617, and passed upon by this department, the opinions above quoted are now in point and no reason is perceived why they should not be adhered to.

Coming to your second inquiry, whether bonds may be issued to pay for such equipment: Section 7200 itself provides that the equipment "shall be paid for out of the road funds of the county." This language imports the idea of payment from tax funds, especially when consideration is given to the provisions of section 6956-1, making it the duty of the board of county commissioners to provide annually a fund for the repair and maintenance of bridges and county highways. This last named section is found in 105-106 O. L. 647, in the chapter entitled "General Provisions," and is here quoted in full, as follows:

> "Sec. 6956-1.—After the annual estimate for the county has been filed with the county commissioners by the county highway superintendent, and the county commissioners have made such changes and modifications in said estimate, as they deem proper, they shall then make their levy, for the purposes set forth in said estimate, upon all the taxable property of the county not exceeding in the aggregate two mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of said county. The board of county commissioners shall provide annually a fund for the repair and maintenance of bridges and county highways. The repair and maintenance fund so provided shall not be less than twenty dollars for each mile of county highways in said county. Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for said purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The provisions of this section shall not, however, prevent the commissioners from using any surplus in the general funds of the county for the purposes set forth in said estimate, or in the repair or maintenance of roads."

Furthermore, no statute has been found providing for the issuing of bonds for the purpose of purchasing road machinery or equipment. It is therefore to be concluded that the view expressed by yourself is correct, namely, that the county commissioners have no authority to issue bonds for the purpose of making purchase of road machinery, tools and equipment.

Your third inquiry is as to whether the commissioners may, after purchasing equipment, go into the open market and, without advertising, purchase such materials as slag, asphalt, etc., for use in road repairs, and may be answered to a great extent along the same lines as your first inquiry.

Section 7214 G. C. (106 O. L. 645) reads as follows:

> "The county commissioners or township trustees may contract for and purchase such material as is necessary for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing any highways, bridges or culverts within the county, and also appropriate additional land necessary for cuts and fills together with a right of way to or from the same for the removal of material. If the county commissioners or township trustees, and the owner of such material or land, cannot agree on the price therefor, the county commissioners or township trustees may apply to the probate court or common pleas court of the county in which the same is located, and on receipt of such application, the court shall proceed to assess the value of the material or right to be appropriated in the manner hereinafter provided."

In the three opinions which have been above referred to in giving answer to your first inquiry, it is held that the county commissioners may, under authority of section 7214, without advertising or competitive bidding, purchase material for road construction, improvement and repairs. Insofar as they relate to your third inquiry, these opinions are adhered to.

No doubt you are keeping in mind certain restrictions imposed on county commissioners in the matter of expenditures, such as contained in section 2414 G. C., providing in substance that only by unanimous consent of all members present, etc., may a proposition involving an expenditure of one thousand dollars or more be agreed to, unless twenty days have elapsed since the introduction of the proposition; and as contained in section 5660 G. C., providing in substance that auditor's certificate of funds required must first be made as a condition precedent to the validity of a proposed expenditure, or proposed contract involving expenditures. Furthermore, it is well that there should be borne in mind the suggestion of my predecessor as set forth in the quotation above from his opinion, that, under ordinary circumstances, the interests of the public will be best served by making purchases under the competitive bidding plan. Expressing this thought in another way, the rule should be that whenever practicable the competitive bidding plan should be used.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY SURVEYOR—CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTE REQUIRING FILING OF STATEMENT WITH COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AS TO ASSISTANTS, COMPENSATION, ETC.—DIRECTORY AS TO TIME—WHEN JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS COURT IS AUTHORIZED TO FIX SALARIES OF COUNTY SURVEYOR'S ASSISTANTS.

1. The provision in section 2787 G. C. (107 O. L. 70) to the effect that the county surveyor shall file with the county commissioners "on or before the first Monday of June of each year" a statement as to necessary assistants, deputies, etc., and their aggregate compensation, is, as to the time of the filing of said statement, directory only and not mandatory; and such statement may be subsequently filed and the allowance made by the county commissioners at such later time.

2. The right of a judge of the Common Pleas Court to make an allowance to pay the salaries of the county surveyor's assistants, deputies, etc., arises only after the county commissioners have had an opportunity to "fix the aggregate compensation" provided for by section 2787 G. C. (107 O. L. 70).

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

HON. MELL G. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, New Lexington, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of February 5, 1919, reading as follows:

"I desire your opinion upon the following proposition: Section 2787 of the General Code of Ohio provides in part, that on or before the first Monday of June of each year the county surveyor shall file with the commissioners of such county a statement of the number of all necessary assistants, deputies, draftsmen, inspectors, clerks or employees in his office for the year beginning on the first Monday of September next preceding and their aggregate compensation.

Section 2768.—That the county surveyor shall appoint such deputies, draftsmen, inspectors, clerks or employees as he deems necessary for the proper performance of the duties of his office and fix their compensation.

Section 7188-1 and section 7188-2 of the General Code of Ohio stipulate certain duties incumbent upon the county surveyor of each county to be performed under the direction and supervision of the state highway commissioner in reference to the numbering of all public roads of the county other than inter-county highways and main market roads, the bridges and culverts or such roads and the making of a map which shall show and identify by number, location and length each such road and section thereof and all bridges and culverts.

Provision is also made that the duties under these sections shall be fully complied with in all the counties and townships of the state not later than the first day of January, 1919.

The surveyor of this county did not file with the commissioners under the provisions of section 2787 of the General Code a statement as required, of the number of all assistants, deputies, etc., for the year beginning on the first Monday of September next succeeding and their aggregate compensation. No specifications were furnished in reference to the performance of the duties by the county surveyor under the provisions of sections 7188-1 and 7188-2 of the General Code until after January 1, 1919.

Since no statement was filed as required by section 2787, the surveyor at that time being able to do all the work himself, and since he is now ordered by the state highway commissioner to make a new road map of the county and will need the assistance of a draftsman in order to carry out the provisions of section 7188-1 and 7188-2 of the General Code, would it be legal for the Common Pleas Court to make an allowance in order to employ the necessary assistants for the performance of said duty?

If not, is there any way by which the county surveyor could employ such assistants with the consent of the county commissioners and at the end of each month submit his bills to the county commissioners for payment?

If your answer to the last question should be in the negative, is there any way by which the county surveyor can employ the necessary help, it being necessary for him, as stated, to have additional help at this time?"

Section 2787 G. C., as amended in 107 O. L., 70, says:

"On or before the first Monday of June of each year, the county surveyor shall file with the commissioners of such county a statement of the number of all necessary assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes in his office for the year beginning on the first Monday of September next succeeding and their aggregate compensation. The county commissioners shall examine such statement and, after making such alterations therein as are just and reasonable, fix an aggregate compensation to be expended therefor for such year. Provided, however, that if at any time any county surveyor requires an additional allowance in order to carry on the business of his office, such county surveyor may make application to a judge of the court of common pleas of the county wherein such county surveyor was elected; and thereupon such judge shall hear said application, and if upon hearing the same said judge shall find that such necessity exists he may allow such a sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salaries of such assistants, deputies, draughtsman, inspectors, clerks or other employes as may be required. Notice in writing of such application and the time fixed by such judge for the hearing thereof shall be served by the county surveyor five days before said hearing upon the board of county commissioners of such county; and said board shall have the right to appear at such hearing and be heard upon said application and evidence may be offered both by the county surveyor and the county commissioners."

Section 2788 G. C., as amended in 107 O. L., 70, says:

"The county surveyor shall appoint such assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes as he deems necessary for the proper performance of the duties of his office, and fix their compensation, but compensation shall not exceed in the aggregate the amount fixed therefor by the county commissioners or allowed by a judge of the court of common pleas of the county. After being so fixed such compensation shall be paid to such persons in monthly installments from the general fund of the county upon the warrant of the county auditor. The county surveyor may require such of his assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes as he deems proper to give bond to the state in an amount to be fixed by the county surveyor with sureties approved by him, conditioned for the faithful performance of their official duties. Such bond with the approval of the county surveyor, indorsed thereon, shall be deposited with the county treasurer and kept in his office."

"The county surveyor of each county, under the direction and supervision of the state highway commissioner, shall name and number all the public roads of his county, other than inter-county highways and main market roads, and shall number all the bridges and culverts on such roads. All such roads shall be divided into sections where they are of sufficient length to warrant the same. Such sections shall not exceed three miles in length and shall be numbered consecutively. The provisions of this section shall extend to all roads on the north and east lines of each county. A map of such roads shall be made by the surveyor which shall show and identify by number, location and length each such road and section thereof and all bridges and culverts. Such map shall show the location of municipal corporations, school houses, churches, lakes and rivers and shall be made into township units. As rapidly as the roads, bridges and culverts of each township are thus located and numbered, the county surveyor shall enter in a book in his office to be kept for that purpose, a description or identification thereof. A copy of such map shall be submitted to the state highway commissioner, together with a report showing plainly and definitely the exact location of such numbered roads, and sections thereof and such bridges and culverts, and such other and further information as the state highway commissioner may require. All the duties required by this section shall be performed in accordance with the instructions of the state highway commissioner, who shall prescribe such forms and issue such instructions as he deems proper. Upon the approval by the state highway commissioner of each map and report, copies of the same shall be filed by the county surveyor in his office and in the office of the county commissioners, and a copy of the map of each township shall be filed with the township trustees of such township; and thereafter the road names, numbers and section designations and the bridge and culvert numbers shall be the official terms by which all such roads, and sections thereof and such bridges and culverts shall be known. When a new road is established it shall be assigned by the county surveyor a name and number and if necessary divided into sections, or it may be added to an existing road, and it shall be the duty of the county surveyor to note such new road together with its official designation on the copy of the map on file in his office and to report the same to the state highway commissioner and county commissioners."

Section 7188-2 G. C., as amended in 107 O. L., 113, says:

"It shall be the duty of the county auditor before he issues his warrant for any moneys expended by the county on any highways, other than inter-county highways or main market roads, or on any bridges or culverts on such highways, to require of the county surveyor the assignment of such expense to the road and section thereof, or bridge or culvert in connection with which such expense was incurred. The county auditor shall keep such records as are necessary to show clearly at the close of each year the amount of money expended from the county treasury on each section of road, other than inter-county highways or main market roads, and on each bridge and culvert on such roads.

It shall be the duty of the township clerk before he issues any warrant on the township treasurer for any money expended upon any road within the township, other than an inter-county highway or main market road, or on bridges or culverts on such roads, to require of the county surveyor or township trustees the assignment of such expense to the road and section thereof, or bridge or culvert in connection with which the expense was incurred. The township clerk shall keep such records as are necessary to show clearly at the close of each year the amount of money expended from the township funds on each section of road, other than inter-county highways or main market roads, within the township and on each bridge and culvert thereon.

When general equipment for use in the entire county or township is purchased, the expense thereof need not be assigned to any section or sections of road or to any bridge or culvert, but so far as practicable all items of expense shall be assigned to the specific section of road or to the particular bridge or culvert in connection with which they were incurred. The provisions of this and the preceding section shall be fully complied with in all the counties and townships of the state not later than the first day of January, 1919. For the purpose of securing a uniform system of accounting and a uniform preservation of cost data throughout the state, the state highway commissioner is hereby authorized to prescribe all necessary and proper forms for maps and reports, and the auditor of state is hereby authorized to prescribe all necessary and proper forms for the keeping of the cost records by county surveyors, township trustees, county auditors and township clerks. All county auditors and township clerks may at any time be required by the state highway commissioner to transmit to him in such form as he may prescribe the cost records pertaining to roads, bridges and culverts within their counties or townships."

If the provision contained in section 2787 G. C. relative to the time when the county surveyor shall file his statement as to the number of necessary assistants, etc., and their aggregate compensation, is mandatory, then the county surveyor not having filed such statement "on or before the first Monday in June," could not legally file the same at this time.

> "Mandatory statutes are imperative; they must be strictly pursued; otherwise the proceeding which is taken ostensibly by virtue thereof will be void."
> Suth. on Stat. Construction, p. 586.

If, however, said provision is directory merely, then the statement may be filed and the allowance may be made by the county commissioners at the present time.

In opinion number 370, 1913 Attorney-General's Report, Vol. II, p. 1322, the Attorney-General regarded as mandatory the provision in section 2980 G. C. which says that:

> "* * * Not later than five days after the filing of such statement, the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for such period for the compensation of such deputies * * *."

One of the reasons assigned for such holding was that "the direction of the statute as to the time within which the commissioners are to make the allowance is stated in negative terms."

Without either approving or disapproving the holding of that opinion, this much may properly be said here, that under the test suggested by said opinion, the time provision which your letter refers to, would appear to be directory, not being stated negatively. The manner of statement, whether negative or affirmative is, however, only a subsidiary rule of construction. Whether a particular statute is mandatory or directory depends not so much upon any form of expression, but upon the intention of the legislature, as ascertained from a consideration of the whole act, its object, and the consequences that would result from construing it one way or the other. See opinion of Kinkead, J., in the recent case of In re Bostwick, reported in the Ohio Law Reporter for February 10, 1919, holding that the above quoted provision in section 2980 G. C. is directory only.

There are no doubt many good reasons why a county surveyor should comply strictly with section 2787 G. C. in the matter of filing the statement at the time therein provided. For instance, the information contained in such statement, if filed at the time provided, might be available to the county commissioners when the latter submit to the county auditor the annual budget of estimated moneys needed for county purposes for the incoming year, which budget the commissioners are directed by section 5649-3a G. C. to file on or before the first Monday in June.

However, regard should be had here to the undoubted principle that > "Provisions regulating the duties of public officers and specifying the time for their performance are in that regard generally directory. Though a statute directs a thing to be done at a particular time, it does not necessarily follow that it may not be done afterwards."

> Suth. on Stat. Construction, 575.

I see no evidence of a legislative intention that the designation of time contained in section 2787 G. C., viz., "on or before the first Monday in June," is in the nature of a limitation of the power of the surveyor to file said statement at a later time. Neither am I able to see why such statement, when so filed, cannot be acted upon at this time by the county commissioners and an aggregate compensation be fixed by them for the year beginning on the first Monday of September, 1918.

In reaching the conclusion above dated, I have not overlooked the provision contained in section 7188-2 G. C., above set forth, to the effect that > "The provisions of this and the preceding section shall be fully complied with in all the counties and townships of the state not later than the first day of January, 1919."

Must this sentence be taken to mean that if the road map work is not undertaken and completed by January 1, 1919, payments thereafter made for such purpose would be illegal? Or is such sentence a mere direction, showing the legislature's desire for prompt discharge of the duties imposed by said section and the section immediately preceding? The latter seems to me to be the proper view.

In your letter you ask whether it would be legal for the judge of the Common Pleas Court to make the allowance in question. Such question must be answered in the negative. This for the reason that the phrase "additional allowance" contained in section 2787 G. C. clearly presupposes an allowance already to have been made by the county commissioners, and while no opinion is herein expressed as to the proper procedure where the county commissioners refuse to make any allowance whatever after the surveyor's statement is filed, I do hold that the right of the judge of the court of common pleas to hear an application under section 2787 G. C. arises only after the county commissioners have had an opportunity to "fix the aggregate compensation" provided by said section.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—VALIDITY OF PROPOSED SECTION 7621-1 OF HOUSE BILL NUMBER 5—SAID SECTION WILL MAKE LAW MORE EFFECTIVE.

Section 7621-1 of H. B. No. 5, conferring special duties upon county superintendent of schools and prosecuting attorney to enforce the provisions of section 7621 of said bill, is not violative of the constitution of Ohio or within any of its inhibitions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1919.

HON. W. R. COMINGS, Chairman, Schools Committee, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 19, 1919, as follows:

> "Will you kindly render an opinion as to the constitutionality of section 7621-1, as provided in the proposed amended H. B. No. 5. If this bill is enacted into law, will section 7621-1, in your opinion, cause the same to be more effective?"

It is noted that you request my opinion, first, as to the constitutionality of section 7621-1 in the proposed amended House Bill No. 5, and second, whether the enactment of said section 7621-1 will cause said bill to be more effective.

Section 7621-1 G. C., above referred to, is as follows:

"It shall be the special duty of the county superintendent of schools to see that the provisions of section 7621 of the General Code are enforced, and he shall promptly report all violations thereof to the prosecuting attorney of the county, whose duty it shall be to institute prosecutions against all persons violating the provisions of such section."

It is noted that the effect of this section is to confer additional special duties upon the county superintendents of schools and the prosecuting attorneys of the state. It is noted that no extra or additional compensation is provided for the performance of the additional duties defined in said section.

The General Assembly has authority to fix the duties of county officers and in addition to those already provided for, may enlarge their duties and unless the legislature expressly provides for additional compensation, none may be paid.

As stated in State vs. Groom, 91 O. S., page 2, in the fourth branch of the syllabus:

"The General Assembly has the authority to create new duties and require such duties to be performed by the incumbents of an existing office."

Evidently what was intended is that the prosecuting attorney should prosecute all violations occurring within the county for which he is elected as prosecuting attorney, and to eliminate any confusion or question on this point, it is suggested that this meaning be more clearly expressed.

Except as above noted, I am of the opinion that said section 7621-1 is not violative of the constitution, nor within any of its inhibitions.

As to the second question contained in your letter, I am of the opinion that the provisions of section 7621-1, supra, will add to the efficacy of the bill. While it does not attempt to provide that such manner of enforcement shall be exclusive in that a prosecution for the violation of section 7621 may not be instituted by other persons as other violations of law generally, yet by making it the special duty of the county superintendent of schools and of the prosecuting attorney to secure its enforcement, cumulative provision is thus made to insure its enforcement and for that purpose, as above indicated, I am of the opinion said section would cause said bill to be more effective.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY ORDER CHANGES IN GRANTING PETITION FOR PROPOSED CHANGES—HOW LIMITED—IT IS DUTY OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEY TO REPRESENT TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION IN MANDAMUS PROCEEDINGS AGAINS STATE AUDITOR FOR DISTRIBUTION OF SCHOOL FUNDS.

1. Section 6867 G. C. (105-106 O. L. 576) does not contemplate that county commissioners, in granting a petition for a proposed road, are to confine themselves to ordering minor changes only, in the proposed road as described in the petition, nor does it contemplate that the commissioners, as a condition to ordering changes other than minor changes, shall first secure the approval of the road petitioners. The test is, what changes, if any, are in the judgment of the commissioners, made necessary by the public convenience and welfare and a consideration of the expense involved?

2. Under sections 2917, 2918 and 4761 G. C., the prosecuting attorney is charged with the duty of representing a township board of education in mandamus proceedings against the state auditor for distribution of a school fund provided by the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1919.

HON. JOHN E. BLAKE, Prosecuting Attorney, McArthur, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date January 27, 1919, you submit for the opinion of this department two inquiries, of which the first is as follows:

> "Will you kindly advise as to the construction of section 6867 of the road law of 1917? Do the changes referred to—to be made by county commissioners—have reference to minor changes only in route, location, etc.; or does the statute mean that the county commissioners, without the approval of the road petitioners, may make radical changes in the route and direction of the proposed road? How far does the expression 'with such modification and changes as in their judgment the public convenience and welfare may require' go?"

Said section 6867 G. C. reads as follows:

> "The county commissioners acting in the manner aforesaid, may grant the improvement prayed for in the petition, or may grant said improvement with such modification and changes as in their judgment the public convenience and welfare may require, and in making such modification or changes the commissioners may consider the expense which will result to individuals as well as the public."

The section in its present form was enacted (106 O. L. 574, 576), as part of Chapter I of the so-called Cass highway law. This chapter is headed:

> "Locating, establishing, altering, widening, straightening, vacating or changing the direction of the road", and the first section of the chapter reads (section 6860 G. C.):

> "The county commissioners shall have power to locate, establish, alter, widen, straighten, vacate or change the direction of roads as hereinafter provided. This power extends to all roads within the county, except the inter-county and main market roads."

Section 6861 provides for width of roads; and section 6862, as amended (107 O. L. 71) reads:

> "Sec. 6862.—Applications to locate, establish, alter, widen, straighten, vacate or change the direction of a public road shall be made by petition to the county commissioners signed by at least twelve freeholders of the county residing in the vicinity of the proposed improvement, which petition shall set forth the route and termini of the road, or part thereof, to be located, established, or vacated, or the particular manner in which such road is to be altered, widened, straightened, or the direction thereof changed. When such road or proposed road lies wholly within any school district and is necessary for the convenience and welfare of the pupils in such district, the board of education of such district may, by resolution, petition for such road. The word 'improvement' used in sections 6862 to 6878 inclusive of the General Code signifies any location, establishment, alteration, widening, straightening, vacation or change in the direction of a public road, or part thereof, as requested in a petition filed under the authority of such sections, or determined upon by a board of county commissioners or joint board by resolution adopted by unanimous vote."

Section 6863 provides in substance that the commissioners shall fix a date for view of "proposed improvement" and a date for final hearing; also that they shall require bond of the petitioners, conditioned for payment of costs and expenses in case the prayer of the petition be not granted.

Section 6864 provides for notice of view and of final hearing, through insertion in newspaper published and having general circulation in the county where the "proposed improvement" is located (or, if there be no such newspaper published, then in a newspaper having general circulation in such county).

Section 6865 provides for survey and plat to be made by county surveyor in case he is so instructed by the commissioners after the view, and contains this clause in relation to surveyor's report:

"The report shall also recommend any changes in the improvement petitioned for, which in the judgment of the surveyor should be made."

Section 6866, as amended (107 O. L. 71), reads as follows:

"The commissioners shall at the date of the final hearing on said improvement as hereinbefore fixed cause the report of the surveyor to be read, and they shall hear any testimony bearing upon the public utility of the improvement and offered either by the petitioners or by any interested persons opposing the granting of the improvement. If the commissioners find said improvement will serve the public convenience and welfare, they shall grant said improvement, if not, they shall refuse the improvement and dismiss the petition."

Then follow sections 6867 (first above quoted), and 6868 which reads as follows (106 O. L. 576):

"Sec. 6868.—If in the opinion of the county commissioners the improvement is of sufficient importance to the public to cause the compensation and damages on account thereof to be paid to the person or persons entitled thereto out of the county treasury they may so order. If in the opinion of the commissioners the improvement is not of sufficient importance to cause the compensation and damages to be paid from the county treasury, they may order the compensation and damages or such part thereof as they may deem reasonable and just to be paid by the petitioners and the balance, if any, to be paid out of the county treasury. When a portion of the compensation and damages is ordered paid by the petitioners, in case of failure to pay the same by the time fixed by the county commissioners, such petitioners shall be liable for all the costs of said proceedings and the commissioners may, at their option, abandon said improvement on failure of such petitioners to pay such compensation and damages as may be adjudged against them by the time fixed therefor. In case of failure by the petitioners to pay the costs adjudged against them, the same may be recovered in an action against them, by the prosecuting attorney of the county."

Giving consideration for the moment to the terms of section 6867 alone, the conclusion certainly is not to be drawn that a distinction is sought to be made therein between "minor changes" and "radical changes" If the word "modification" only had been used, there might be ground for saying that "minor changes" were meant; but the statute reads "with such modification and changes as in their judgment the public convenience and welfare may require." Furthermore, the last clause in the statute is "and in making such modifications or changes the commissioners may consider the expense which will result to individuals as well as the public." Assuredly, if the public welfare is to be the guiding star of the commissioners, and if they may take into account the expense which will result to individuals and the public, they are not to be limited in the exercise of their judgment by considerations of "minor changes" and "radical changes."

What has just been stated as to section 6867 is emphasized by reference to the other sections noted. By the terms of section 6866, the commissioners may either allow the petition or dismiss it, in accordance with their findings as to whether the improvement will serve the public convenience and welfare, or not; and by the terms of section 6868 they may order the expense of the proposed improvement to be paid wholly out of the county treasury, or wholly by the petitioners, or partly out of the county treasury and partly by the petitioners, as in their opinion the public importance of the proposed improvement justifies. Again, section 6865 enjoins upon the county surveyor the duty of recommending any changes in the improvement petitioned for, which in his judgment should be made. And finally, in the series of statutes now under consideration, the words "proposed improvement" are used, to the practical exclusion of the words "proposed road," the plain implication being that the proceedings are provided for by the legislature from the comprehensive standpoint of public utility rather than as a means of serving limited private convenience. In fact, the several statutory provisions noted all go to the point that the commissioners are vested with a wide discretion to the end of doing justice to the interests of all concerned.

The conclusion therefore follows that by the terms of section 6867 the commissioners have authority, in granting the improvement, to order changes in the route and direction of the proposed road, to such extent as in their judgment the public convenience and welfare, and the expense involved, may require, and this without reference to the approval of the petitioners.

Your second inquiry reads:

"Is the prosecuting attorney supposed to represent the township in a mandamus proceeding against the state auditor for distribution of a certain school fund by statute?"

Since you mention school funds, it is assumed that your inquiry relates to the duty of the prosecuting attorney relative to representing the township board of education. Attention is therefore called to sections 2917, 2918 and 4761, which read as follows:

"Sec. 2917.—The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party, and no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve. He shall be the legal adviser for all township officers, and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees duly entered upon their journal, in which the compensation to be paid for such legal services shall be fixed. Such compensation shall be paid from the township fund."

"Sec. 2918.——Nothing in the preceding two sections shall prevent a school board from employing counsel to represent it, but such counsel, when so employed, shall be paid by such school board from the school fund. Nothing in such sections shall prevent the appointment and employment of assistants, clerks and stenographers to the prosecuting attorney as provided in this chapter, or the appointment by the court of common pleas or circuit court of an attorney to assist the prosecuting attorney in the trial of a criminal cause pending in such court, or the county commissioners paying for such services as provided by law."

"Sec. 4761.—Except in city school districts, the prosecuting attorney of the county shall be the legal adviser of all boards of education of the county in which he is serving. He shall prosecute all actions against a member or officer of a board of education for malfeasance or misfeasance in office, and he shall be the legal counsel of such boards or the officers thereof in all civil actions brought by or against them and shall conduct such actions in his official capacity. When such civil action is between two or more boards of education in the same county, the prosecuting attorney shall not be required to act for either of them. In city school districts, the city solicitor shall be the legal adviser and attorney for the board of education thereof, and shall perform the same services for such board as herein required of the prosecuting attorney for other boards of education of the county."

It will be noted that the provisions of section 4761 are very specific in casting upon the prosecuting attorney the duty of acting as attorney to boards of education other than those in city school districts; for not only does the statute use the term "legal adviser," but goes on and states that the prosecuting attorney shall be the legal counsel in all civil actions and shall conduct such actions in his official capacity. No exception is made of suits against state officers.

Section 2917, while it does not go into such detail as section 4761, provides in terms that the prosecuting attorney "shall be the legal adviser for all township officers." And coming to section 2918, whatever may be said of the authority granted therein to township boards of education to employ counsel to represent them, said section is not to be taken as in the least weakening the mandatory terms of section 4761, making it the duty of the prosecuting attorney to represent such boards in civil actions.

Hence, it is concluded that the duties of the prosecuting attorney embrace that of representing a township school board in a mandamus proceeding against the state auditor for distribution of a school fund provided by statute.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—EXPENSES OF MAILING TAX LISTING BLANKS ARE PAYABLE AS CLAIMS AGAINST COUNTY—CANNOT EMPLOY OUTSIDE AGENCY TO PERFORM SUCH WORK.

The proper expenses of the county auditor incurred in the mailing of tax listing blanks are payable as claims against the county.

The auditor may not lawfully let out the work of mailing such blanks to an outside agency, and treat such services as an expense of his office to be allowed as a claim against the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1919.

HON. T. F. HUDSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of February 7, 1919, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Section 5366 G. C. provides that the county auditor shall mail the tax blanks before the second Monday in April to the persons required to list such property, but this section makes no provision for the costs of mailing the blanks. I therefore desire your opinion on the following question:
> Would it be legal for the county auditor to employ a multigraph letter-addressing company to address the envelopes, fold and insert the tax blanks and affix the postage thereto, the bill for the entire expense of this work to be paid upon allowance by the county commissioners out of the general fund of the county?"

I refer you to section 5585 G. C. (107 O. L. 40), which provides, in part, as follows:

> "* * * The contingent expenses of the county auditor * * * including postage, and express charges, * * * shall be allowed and paid as other claims against the county."

Section 5366, referred to by you, provides that the blanks for listing personal property shall be supplied by the auditor "at his office for use of persons required to list such property of any character." The section goes on to provide that:

> "The county auditor may mail such blanks prior to the second Monday in April to the persons required to list such property, or may place listing blanks at convenient places in each taxing subdivision, and give notice thereof in one newspaper of general circulation in the county."

It is probably true that as a general proposition the term "contingent expenses" includes only such expenses as are irregular or may be said to be unforeseen, so that they cannot be provided for in advance. This is the meaning of the phrase as used in section 5585, excepting that by the inclusion therein of "postage" the term is enlarged so as to embrace that item of expense, which perhaps otherwise it would not embrace. In this instance you inquire whether the expenses incident to mailing the blanks are to be incurred by the county auditor and treated as claims against the county. In my opinion they are. The postage itself—i. e., the stamps required—is an item which is treated as a contingent expense, and I can see no reason for drawing the line between the purchase of stamps themselves and the necessary expense, as by purchase of envelopes, etc., incident to the mailing.

However, the more important question is as to whether or not the work of addressing, sealing and stamping the envelopes, which is of a clerical character, can be done in the manner described by you. Ordinarily, such work would be performed by the auditor through his deputies and clerks. It is proposed now to let it out to a mailing service—in short, to convert into a supply, as it were, something that heretofore has been treated as a clerical service and performed by the office force of the auditor. It is obvious that the line must be drawn somewhere. The auditor could not, for example, let out to a firm of certified public accountants his work in keeping the fiscal books of the county; and the county commissioners would have no authority to allow a bill so incurred as a claim against the county.

On the whole, I am of the opinion that the thing inquired about cannot lawfully be done. The work performed by an addressing and mailing concern is essentially clerical service. All clerical work to be done by the county auditor must be performed by his assistants, whose compensation is to be fixed by him and payable from the allowances properly made. These allowances come primarily from the fee fund; so that the effect of permitting the auditor to have the work described by you done in the manner referred to and paid for as a claim against the county would be to make the general county fund bear an expense which the law clearly requires to be a charge upon the fee fund, so long as that fund is sufficient. (See sections 2980 et seq. G. C.).

It is the opinion of this department, therefore, that the proper expenses for supplies and postage, etc., incurred by the auditor in the mailing of tax listing blanks are payable as claims against the county by virtue of section 5585 G. C., above quoted, but that the auditor is without authority to have this work done by an addressing agency or concern, because it is essentially work of a clerical character which must be done in his office.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—AN ESTATE TO A NEPHEW BY DEED MADE IN CONSIDERATION OF ONE DOLLAR AND "LOVE AND AFFECTION" WITH LIFE ESTATE RESERVED TO GRANTOR AND POSSESSION AND ENJOYMENT POSTPONED UNTIL GRANTOR'S DEATH SUBJECT TO TAX.

An estate passing to a nephew under a deed made in consideration of one dollar and "love and affection," with a life estate reserved to the grantor and possession and enjoyment postponed until his death, is subject to the collateral inheritance tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1919.

HON. B. O. BISTLINE, Probate Judge, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of February 7, 1919, requesting my opinion, as follows:

> "Will you kindly give us an opinion on the following:
> J. K. M. made a deed of his farm to his nephew, the consideration being $100 and "Love and Affection," the grantor, however, reserving a life estate in the farm. J. K. M. is now deceased and the nephew desires to know as to whether he must pay a collateral inheritance tax."

Section 5331 G. C. imposes the collateral inheritance tax, inter alia, upon "all property * * * and any interests therein--* * * which pass * * * by deed, grant, sale or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor" to persons beyond certain degrees of relationship to the grantor.

I presume that the possession and enjoyment of the estate described in your letter remained in J. K. M. until his decease. Quite evidently the conveyance was a "deed, grant or sale" within the meaning of the statute, whether it was a "gift" or not. I do not know of any more effectual way in which the possession and enjoyment of an estate might be postponed until the death of the donor than the one chosen in the case described by you.

The statute which has been quoted has never been interpreted in this state. In other states, however, under laws containing the same or substantially identical language, devices like the one which you describe have been held to give rise to the imposition of the inheritance tax.

See Blakemore & Bancroft on Inheritance Taxes, section 119; citing New York and Illinois cases.

For the foregoing reasons, the opinion of this department is that the collateral inheritance tax is payable under the circumstances stated by you.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—MERGING OF DEPARTMENTS OF PUBLIC SERVICE AND PUBLIC SAFETY IN CITIES UNDER FIFTY THOUSAND—SECTION 4250 G. C.—ADDITIONAL LAWS ONLY SUBMITTED TO ELECTORS.

1. Additional laws only, and not general laws, for the government of municipalities are required to be submitted to the municipal electors for adoption under section 2 of Article XVIII of the Ohio Constitution.

2. It is only the adoption of additional laws as enacted by the General Assembly, and not the manner of their execution after adoption, that is submitted to the municipal electors under section 2 of Article XVIII of the Ohio Constitution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1919.

HON. H. ROSS AKE, Member, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 11, 1919, with which you submitted H. B. No. 17, entitled "A bill to amend section 4250 of the General Code permitting the merging of the departments of public service and public safety in cities under fifty thousand," and inquiring whether the merger of the two officers referred to should be made by the action of the city council or by a vote of the municipal electors, was duly received.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

> "Sec. 4250.—The mayor shall be the chief conservator of peace within the corporation. He shall have power to appoint, and have power to remove, the director of public service, the director of public safety, and the heads of the sub-departments of public service and public safety, and shall have such other powers and shall perform such other duties as are conferred and required by law. In cities having a population of less than * * * fifty thousand, the council may by a majority vote merge the office of director of public safety with that of public service, one director to be appointed for the merged department."

Section 2 of Article XVIII of the Ohio Constitution, adopted September 3, 1912, provides that:

> "General laws shall be passed to provide for the incorporation and government of cities and villages; and additional laws may also be passed for the government of municipalities adopting the same; but no such additional law shall become operative in any municipality until it shall have been submitted to the electors thereof, and affirmed by a majority of those voting thereon, under regulations to be established by law."

You will observe that general laws for the government of cities are not required to be submitted to the municipal electors for adoption, but that such requirement applies only to "additional laws," which latter are described in State vs. Lynch, 88 Ohio St., 71, at pp. 93, 94, to be "laws additional to the general laws which the legislature is required to pass."

It is only the adoption of additional laws, and not the manner of their execution after adoption, that must be submitted to the municipal electors. Hence, if an additional law be submitted to the municipal electors and adopted by a majority of those voting thereon, it becomes operative in the municipality so adopting it. After such adoption the agency through which it is to be executed or carried into effect will be the agency provided by law, which in this case is the city council. In other words, municipal electors have nothing to do with the execution of an "additional law" after its adoption by them.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO END TERMS OF OFFICE OF PRESENT MEMBERS—HOW SUCCESSOR ELECTED.

The General Assembly may end the terms of office of the present members of county boards of education at any time, and provide for the election of their successors.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1919.

HON. W. R. COMINGS, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter as to the right of the General Assembly to end the terms of office of the present members of county boards of education, and to provide for the election of their successors, was duly received.

Your letter, insofar as it is pertinent to the inquiry, reads as follows:

> "The application is to the elimination of members of the county school board by providing for an election of members by a vote by the people instead of by the presidents of the township boards."

The power of the legislature, except when restricted by the constitution, to abolish a public office, even during the term for which an existing incumbent may have been elected, was established at an early day. Whoever accepts a public office does so with this principle of law in view. Tenure of office does not rest on contract, and it is not controlled by constitutional provisions prohibiting the impairment of contracts. Accordingly, it is a well settled principle of American law that an office of legislative creation may be abolished by the power which created it. See Ruling Case Law, 579, 580.

While it is conceded by all courts that the legislature may at any time abolish a legislative office, there is a conflict of opinion as to the right to abolish the officer and leave the office standing. The leading case denying such right is Malone vs. Williams, 118 Tenn. 390; 121 Am. St. 1002, wherein it was held:

> "An office is a species of property, and the legislature cannot constitutionally legislate an officer out of that property while leaving the office with its duties unimpaired, for this would be taking property without due process of law.
> "The legislature can abolish an office and thereby abrogate the rights and duties of the officer, but it cannot leave the office standing and abolish the officer."

But that case and others to the same effect are based either upon the old common law doctrine which regarded an office as a hereditament or property, or upon the promise that an officer has a vested right in his office, or that tenure of office rests upon contract, all of which are opposed to the view taken by our own and other American courts in cases holding that a statutory office is within the absolute control of the legislature. 22 Ruling Case Law, 582.

In State vs. Hawkins, 44 O. S., 98, 113, the court, speaking with respect to cases kindred to Malone vs. Williams, supra, said:

> "But these decisions have, as a rule, proceeded upon the ground, that an incumbent has a property in his office, and that he can not be deprived of his right without the judgment of a court. This view finds support in the doctrines of the common law, which regarded an office as a hereditament, but has no foundation whatever in a representative government like our own. The doctrine is opposed to the view taken by other courts of equal learning and ability."

It may be of interest, however, to know that the doctrine of vested right in public office crept into one of our early decisions (State vs. McCollister, 11 O., 46), but it was repudiated by the Supreme Court at the first opportunity in Knoop vs. Bank, 1 O. S., 603, 616, as follows:

> "It is true that in The State vs. McCollister, 11 Ohio Rep. 50, Judge Hitchcock said, that an officer has 'a vested right' in his office, but that dictum is opposed to many and well considered authorities."

The dictum in State vs. McCollister, supra, is also opposed to the decision in Mason vs. McCoy, 58 O. S., 30; State vs. Egry, 79 O. S., 391, 413; and Taylor vs. Beckham, 178 U. S., 548.

In Crenshaw vs. United States, 134 U. S., 99, 103, Mr. Justice Lamar stated the primary question in the case to be "whether an officer appointed for a definite time or during good behavior had any vested interest or contract right in his office of which Congress could not deprive him." And he said, speaking for the court: "The question is not novel. There seems to be but little difficulty in deciding that there was no such interest or right."

In Attorney-General vs. Jochim, 99 Mich., 358, the court, at page 367, said:

> "A public office cannot be called 'property,' within the meaning of these constitutional provisions. If it could be, it would follow that every public officer, no matter how insignificant the office, would have a vested right to hold his office until the expiration of the term. Public offices are created for the purposes of government. They are delegations of portions of the sovereign power for the welfare of the public. They are not the subjects of contract, but they are agencies for the state, revocable at pleasure by the authority creating them, unless such authority be limited by the power which conferred it. * * *
> The legislature may remove officers, not only by abolishing the office, but by an act declaring it vacant. * * * And, while it cannot remove incumbents of constitutional offices, it is not because of an inherent difference in the qualities of the office, but because the power to remove is limited to the power that creates."

That the General Assembly has the power to legislate an officer out of a statutory office before the expiration of his term, in the absence of constitutional restraint, was expressly held in the following well considered cases:

Taft vs. Adams, 3 Gray (Mass.) 126:

> "The legislature has the power to shorten the term of an officer, the tenure of whose office is not fixed by the constitution."

State vs. Douglas, 26 Wis., 428:

> "An office created by act of the legislature may be abolished in like manner, or the term of the officer otherwise shortened by general legislation after his election, in the absence of any special provision of the constitution forbidding it."

Alexander vs. McKenzie, 2 S. C., 81:

> "In the absence of any constitutional inhibition, political offices are subject to the entire control of the legislative power of the state, which may, at its mere will and pleasure, abolish the offices themselves, or change the tenure by which they are held, or remove the officers and put others in their place, with or without election. A political officer does not hold by contract, in the sense of the constitution, nor has he any vested right of property, in a constitutional sense, in the office, or in the salary thereof, before he has earned it."

People vs. Banvard, 27 Cal., 470:

> "The incumbent of an administrative office created by the legislature may be legislated out of office pending the term for which he was elected."

State vs. Hyde, 127 Ind., 296:

"The term of the incumbent of a statutory office may be ended by the legislature at any time, and provision made for the selection of his successor."

In the opinion at page 302, the court say:

"Offices are neither grants nor contracts, nor obligations which can not be changed or impaired. They are subject to the legislative will at all times, except so far as the constitution may protect them from interference. Offices created by the legislature may be abolished by the legislature. The power that creates can destroy. The creator is greater than the creature. The term of an office may be shortened, the duties of the office increased, and the compensation lessened, by the legislative will.

* * * * * * * * *

The effect of the act we are now considering was to put an end to the appellant's term of office, and to provide a new mode of selecting some one to discharge, at least some, if not all, of the duties theretofore discharged by the appellant, and that whether the office of state supervisor of oil inspection is to be regarded as a new office or an old office under a new name, the intention to produce this result is plain, both from the title of the act and from its provisions. In order to end the appellant's term of office we do not think it was necessary to abolish the office held by him. As it is a statutory office, it was within the power of the legislature to end the term of the incumbent at any time, and make provision for the selection of a successor."

See also, Bryan vs. Cattell, 15 Iowa, 538, 553; People vs. Haskell, 5 Cal., 357; and Perkins vs. Cook County, 271 Ill., 449.

The question for determination is not one of expediency or propriety, but of legislative power, and the legislature is the sole judge of the exigency which demands its interference in such matters. As was well said in Newton vs. Commissioners, 100 U. S. 548, which involved Ohio laws:

"The legislative power of a state, except so far as restrained by its own constitution, is at all times absolute with respect to all offices within its reach. It may at pleasure create or abolish them, or modify their duties. It may also shorten or lengthen the term of service, and it may increase or diminish the salary or change the mode of compensation."

In State vs. Bailey, 37 O. S., 898, the court ousted the members of the board of police commissioners of Toledo who had been elected under section 1984 et seq. R. S. (65 O. L. 152), and inducted into office a new board appointed by the governor under the subsequent act of April 8, 1881 (78 O. L. 117). The members of the old board had been elected for terms of two years, but before their terms had expired the act of April 8, 1881, was enacted conferring authority upon the governor to fill the offices by appointment.

In Butler vs. Pennsylvania, 10 How., 402, it appears that in 1836 the state enacted a law directing the governor to appoint annually canal commissioners for a term of office to commence on the first of February of every year. In April, 1843, certain persons then being in office as such commissioners, the legislature passed another law providing that in the following October the commissioners should be elected by the people. The court, in holding the law constitutional, said:

> "In every perfect or competent government, there must exist a general power to enact and to repeal laws; and to create, and change or discontinue, the agents designated for the execution of those laws. Such a power is indispensable for the preservation of the body politic, and for the safety of the individuals of the community. It is true, that this power, or the extent of its exercise, may be controlled by the higher organic law or constitution of the state, as is the case in some instances in the state constitutions, and is exemplified in the provision of the federal constitution relied on in this case by the plaintiffs in error, and in some other clauses of the same instrument; but where no such restriction is imposed, the power must rest in the discretion of the government alone."

The office of member of the county board of education is statutory, and in view of the foregoing decisions and the absence of constitutional restraint, I am of the opinion that the General Assembly may end the terms of office of the present members, and provide for the election of their successors.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION—CONTRACT FOR ERECTION OF GREENHOUSES—PROVISION FOR LIQUIDATED DAMAGES CONSTRUED AS PENALTY FOR NON-PERFORMANCE—DELAY NOT CAUSED BY CONTRACTOR—TIME ALLOWED FOR COMPLETION OF CONTRACT.

1. Where a stipulation in a contract providing for liquidated damages for delay in the performance thereof, construed with the entire contract, does not clearly evince an intention to contract as to such damages, which were the result of deliberate calculation and adjustment, such stipulations shall be construed as providing for a penalty for such non-performance and not as a provision for liquidated damages.

2. Where the delay in the completion of work so agreed upon was occasioned by the act or delay of the contracting owners and was without default of the contractor, the time of performance as agreed upon in the contract shall be extended for a period equal to the time of such delay.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 26, 1919.

The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 13, 1919, with which you enclose a contract with the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Company, referred to in your former letter of February 6, 1919, which was as follows:

> "On June 28 the board of control of this station signed a contract with the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., of Pana, Illinois, for the erection of greenhouses at their bid of $8,500, the next higher bid being $11,323. The signed contract was submitted to the Attorney-General's office for approval, the same day as signed.

The signed contract was approved and returned to us on October 14, 1918.

As soon as the contractors received the signed contract they began ordering their materials, and completed their work on January 25, 1919, in a very satisfactory and workmanlike manner.

Article 6 of the contract reads as follows:

'Art. 6. The contractor is to complete all work contemplated under this contract by November 15, 1918.'

'Upon failure to have all work fully completed by the date above mentioned, the contractor shall forfeit and pay or cause to be paid to the owner, the sum of fifteen dollars ($15) per day for each and every day therafter the said work remains in an unfinished condition, for and as liquidated damages, and to be deducted from any payments due or to become due to said contractor.'

Your opinion is respectfully requested as to whether the delay in approving the signed contract will have any bearing on the date of completion of the work, or will be required to collect the $15 per day from November 15, 1918, to January 25, 1919.

I might say that the delay in completing the work has not caused the station any serious inconvenience."

By an examination of the specifications on file in the state auditor's office, I learn that there were three of these greenhouses constructed under the contract you enclosed, which referred to them merely as greenhouses. In personal conference with Mr. Kramer I learn also that in the matter of construction, workmanship and materials used, the contract was faithfully performed on the part of the contractor and that the only question of non-performance is in the delay of final completion of the work.

It is also noted that the contract was signed by the board of control of the station and the contractor, on June 28, and was submitted to the Attorney-General for approval on the same day, but was not approved and returned until October 14, 1918, or approximately three and a half months after such submission.

As stated in our personal conference and also indicated in your letter, it is to be observed that the station did not suffer any serious inconvenience or damage by reason of such delayed completion, and your question is, whether you will be required by law to collect the $15.00 per day between the day fixed in the contract for the completion of the contract and January 25, 1919, the day of actual completion.

Articles 5, 6 and 7 of the contract are pertinent. It may be added that those parts of the contract not quoted are not inconsistent with said Articles 5, 6 and 7, which are as follows:

"Art. 5.—Should the contractor at any time refuse or neglect to supply a sufficiency of skilled workmen, or of materials of the proper quality, or fail in any respect to prosecute the work with promptness and diligence, or fail in the performance of any of the agreements herein contained, the owner shall be at liberty after five days written notice to the contractor, to provide any such labor or material, and to deduct the cost thereof from any money then due or thereafter to become due the contractor under this contract; and if the architect shall certify that such refusal, neglect or failure is sufficient grounds for such action, the owner shall be at liberty to terminate the employment of the contractor for said work, and to enter upon the premises and take possession, for the purpose of completing the work comprehended under this contract, of all tools, materials and appliances thereon, and to employ any other person or persons to finish the work, and to provide the material therefor.

And in case of such discontinuance of the employment of the contractor, he shall not be entitled to receive any further payment under this contract until the said work shall be wholly completed, at which time if the unpaid balance of the amount to be paid under this contract shall exceed the expense incurred by the owner in finishing the work, such excess shall be paid to the contractor by the owner, but if such expense shall exceed the unpaid balance, the contractor shall pay the difference to the owner. The expense incurred by the owner as herein provided, either for furnishing materials or for finishing the work, and any damage incurred through such default, shall be audited and certified by the architect, whose certificate thereof shall be conclusive upon the parties."

"Art. 6.—The contractor is to complete all work contemplated under this contract by November 15, 1918.

Upon failure to have all work fully conpleted by the date above mentioned, the contractor shall forfeit and pay or cause to be paid to the owner, the sum of fifteen dollars ($15) per day for each and every day thereafter the said work remains in an unfinished condition, for and as liquidated damages, and to be deducted from any payments due or to become due to said contractor."

"Art. 7.—Should the contractor be obstructed or delayed in the prosecution or completion of his work by any act, neglect, delay or default of the owner or the architect, or of any other contractor employed by the owner upon the work, or by any damage which may happen by fire, lightning, earthquake or cyclone, or the abandonment of the work by the employees through no fault of the contractor, then the time herein fixed for the completion of the work shall be extended for a period of time equal to the time lost by reason of any or all of the causes aforesaid, but no set allowance shall be made unless a claim therefor is presented in writing to the architect within twenty-four hours of the occurrence of such delay. The duration of such extension shall be certified by the architect."

It is to be noted that Article 6 fixes the time for completion of "all work contemplated under this contract by November 15, 1918," and "upon failure to have all work fully completed by the day above mentioned, the contractor shall forfeit and pay, or cause to be paid, to the owner, the sum of $15.00 per day for each and every day thereafter the said work remains in an unfinished condition, for and as liquidated damages." While the contract uses the terms "for and as liquidated damages," yet it has been held that such names or terms are not conclusive in the construction of such contracts to determine whether it was the intention of the contracting parties to provide a penalty to secure the performance or whether the term "liquidated damages" was used to designate an actual agreement and intention of the parties which was the result of actual and fair calculation and adjustment in advance of uncertain damages which might result in the delay and performance of the agreement.

A general rule of construction in such cases is found in 13 Cyc., page 90, as follows:

"There are two excellent rules given for inferring that the parties intended the sum as liquidated damages: (1) when the damages are uncertain and not capable of being ascertained by any satisfactory and known rule, whether the uncertainty lies in the nature of the subject itself or in the peculiar circumstances of the case; or, (2) whether from the nature of the case and the tenor of the agreement, it is apparent that the damages have already been the subject of actual and fair calculation and adjustment between the parties."

The rule in Ohio is as announced in Doan vs. Rogan, 79 O. S., 372, the second branch of the syllabus of which reads as follows:

"Whether a stipulation providing for liquidated damages for the breach of a contract is to be construed as liquidated damages or as a penalty depends upon the intention of the parties to be gathered from the entire instrument. While courts will not construe contracts in a way authorizing recovery for liquidated damages simply because the parties have used that term in the agreement, yet where parties to a contract otherwise valid have in terms provided that the damages of the injured party by a breach on the part of the other of some particular stipulation, or for a total breach, shall be a certain sum specified as liquidated damages, and it is apparent that damages from such breach would be uncertain as to amount and difficult of proof, and the contract taken as a whole is not so manifestly unreasonable and disproportionate as to justify the conclusion that it does not truly express the intention of the parties, but is consistent with the conclusion that it was their intention that damages in the amount stated should follow such breach, courts should give effect to the will of the parties as so expressed and enforce that part of the agreement the same as any other."

It is to be observed, as stated by the court in the last cited case, that the courts will not be bound to construe such provisions as liquidated damages, "simply because the parties have used that term in the agreement," but after all the main question to be determined, considering the whole agreement, the subject matter and the circumstances in the case, is, what was the intention of the contracting parties in their expressions as found in the contract, And, as said in Cleveland vs. Connelly, 14 O. C. C. (n. s.) 433, the test is:

"1. Is the subject-matter of the contract of such a nature that the actual damages in case of breach will be entirely uncertain and indeterminate? 2. Were damages evidently the subject of calculation and adjustment between the parties at the time the contract was made? 3. Is the stipulation reasonable? 4. What was the intent of the parties? 5. What was the language employed?"

It is to be borne in mind, also, that the Attorney-General, to whom the contract was submitted, and whose retention thereof for nearly three and a half months is stated to have materially delayed the performance of this contract, was the legal adviser of the board of control, and in the consideration of said contract did not represent and was in no way under the control of the contractor.

Tested by the rules laid down by the courts of this state, let us consider: (1) when this contract was entered into, was it the intention of the parties hereto to fix by actual and fair calculation and agreement in advance the damages which might result from the delay in performance of the contract; and (2) was the delay occasioned by any "act, neglect, delay or default of the owner or the architect," as provided for in Article 7, supra, of the contract.

It is to be noted that Article 5, above quoted, provides, in case the contractor neglect to employ and supply sufficient skilled workmen and materials, or fails in any respect to prosecute the work with promptness, that the owner may assume charge of and prosecute the work to its completion. Attention is called to these provisions as an indication that the party described as the owner was not relying entirely upon the provisions of Article 6 of the contract and as a further indication that the parties had not by actual and fair calculation adjusted said liquidated damages in advance.

Some light is thrown on this question by the case of Cleveland vs. Connelly, supra. The facts in that case in many respects are similar to the facts herein. In that case the contractor had agreed to furnish a certain number of fire engines to the city of Cleveland, which were to be delivered in installments at the respective dates stated in the agreement. In his written proposal attached to the contract with the city, the contractor had agreed to pay to the city, as liquidated damages, the sum of $25.00 for each day of the delay in the performance of said agreement.

In this and other cases a reluctance to enforce such contractual provisions, unless the intention of the parties is clearly evinced from the terms of the agreement, is very manifest.

In the Cleveland case the fact that the provision, as to liquidated damages, was in the written proposal attached to the contract, was taken as an indication that that particular matter was not prominently in the minds of the contracting parties. This as said by the court, at page 436,

> "is itself an indication that the parties did not have the subject of damages so prominently before their minds when they made their agreement as to make it a matter of deliberate calculation and adjustment."

In that case the fact that a number of engines were to be delivered at different dates was also considered and the court held, as stated on the same page, that the liquidated damages provision did not "apply with precision to the plan of installment deliveries which was written into the blank when Connelly presented his bid." Then the court indicated that if it applied to each engine, it would be manifestly exorbitant, and being uncertain, it would not appear that the parties had clearly expressed an intention to provide for liquidated damages and that the provisions then under consideration would be construed as a penalty, and in the absence of actual damages, the contractor was entitled to recover that part of the purchase price then remaining unpaid.

What the court stated in the Cleveland case is applicable to the facts herein. To illustrate: There were three greenhouses to be constructed. Was it the intention of the contracting party to fix the liquidated damages that would result at $15.00 a day for the delayed construction of all three of the greenhouses, or did they estimate and in advance agree that the damage and loss would amount to $5.00 for each greenhouse and thereby reach the total of $15.00 a day? Obviously if two of the greenhouses were completed on or before November 15, 1918, the result in damages would be less than if all three remained unfinished at that time. So does it not appear that the amount therein fixed and named as liquidated damages was provided and agreed upon more in the nature of a penalty than as liquidated damages?

In this respect the contract submitted is similar to the Cleveland contract in the case above referred to, wherein a similar provision was construed as a penalty and not as liquidated damages.

At this time and in this connection we may inquire what the contracting parties had in mind as to the time for beginning the performance of the work agreed upon. Was it presumed that the board of control would retain the contract which it was obliged to submit to the Attorney-General for three and one-half months and if such an intention is presumed, may we not take that fact into consideration in deciding whether the contracting parties had deliberately agreed upon the liquidated damages? It is my conclusion that if we indulge in this presumption and hold that a delay in the time of performance of three and a half months was contemplated by the parties, that the matter of the probable damages resulting in a delay of the performance was not, as said in the Cleveland case, "prominently before their minds when they made their agreement as to make it a matter of deliberate calculation and adjustment." On the other hand, if we are to say that it was not presumed or intended by the contracting parties that a delay of three and a half months would be occasioned in securing the approval of the Attorney-General to this agreement, then and in that event it is a fair question to inquire if the contractor was not delayed in the prosecution of his work by the delay of the owner, as provided in Article 7, which delay, through no fault of the contractor, it further provided, would extend the time fixed in said contract for the completion of the work to a period equal to the time lost by reason of such delay. And it must be borne in mind that in approving or disapproving the contract, the Attorney-General, under section 333 G. C., was acting for the owner.

If this latter presumption is to be indulged in, then it may be stated that the delay was occasioned without fault of the contractor and by the owner, and would result in an extention of the time. So that consideration of all of the facts, as stated in your letter and in personal conference, and from consideration of the contract enclosed and the judicial interpretation of such or similar contracts, my conclusion is that you will not be required to collect the $15.00 per day from November 15, 1918, to January 25, 1919, referred to in your letter.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF CONTRACT FOR ERECTION OF BUILDINGS FOR BUREAU OF JUVENILE RESEARCH.

Approval of contract and bond relative to completion of buildings for the Bureau of Juvenile Research.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1919.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 21, 1919, submitting to me for approval, as per section 2319 G. C. (107 O. L. 455), a contract between your board and Charles W. Schneider & Son, relative to the completion of an administration building and two dormitories for The Bureau of Juvenile Research, to be located on the grounds of The Columbus State Hospital. You have also submitted the bond covering said contract.

I have before me the minutes of your board, wherein it appears that Charles W. Schneider & Son of Columbus, Ohio, was the lowest bidder for the entire work, the bid of said Charles W. Schneider & Son being in the sum of $38,657.00.

It appears that your board has let the contract to the above named party at their said bid.

I have examined the published notice calling for bids in this matter. The minutes of the state building commission show an unqualified approval of said notice and the manner in which same was published.

Subsequent to the receipt of your said letter, you also furnished me the certificate of The Industrial Commission of Ohio to the effect that the said Charles W. Schneider & Son of Columbus, Ohio, was the lowest bidder for the entire the Workmen's Compensation Law, in the matter of premium payment.

I have before me the certificate of the auditor of state, that there are funds in the appropriation heretofore made for the purpose set forth in said contract, sufficient to cover the amounts payable under said contract.

A careful examination of said contract and bond satisfies me that the same are in all respects according to law, and I am this day certifying my approval thereon.

I have this day filed with the auditor of state the contract, bond and proposal relative to the improvement above stated, and am returning, herewith enclosed, all other papers submitted to me.

CORPORATIONS FOR PROFIT—WHEN PROVISION MAY BE MADE FOR PREFERRED STOCKHOLDERS TO HAVE EXCLUSIVE RIGHT TO VOTE FOR ELECTION OF DIRECTORS.

Corporations for profit incorporated under the general corporation laws of this state, may provide in their articles of incorporation and amendments thereto that the preferred stockholders shall have the exclusive right to vote for the election of directors during such time as the company shall be in arrears in its payments into the sinking fund provided for the redemption of the preferred stock, or in the payment of any dividend upon the preferred stock, or in the payment of any installment of rental.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1919.

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—A letter from your predecessor, Hon. William D. Fulton, dated February 14, 1919, and hereinafter quoted, requesting my opinion as to whether the proposed amendment to the articles of incorporation of The Dixie Terminal Company should be accepted and filed in your office, was duly received. The letter referred to reads as follows:

> "Mr. Carl M. Jacobs Jr. of the law firm of Frost & Jacobs, Cincinnati, Ohio, has presented to this department a draft of a proposed amendment to the articles of incorporation of The Dixie Terminal Company, an Ohio corporation, containing the following provision:
> 'The preferred stock aforesaid shall have no voting power except in the matter hereinbefore mentioned unless any payment due hereunder to said sinking fund for the redemption of said preferred stock, or any dividend upon said preferred stock or any installment of rental, shall be in arrears, and unpaid for more than six (6) months. Should either such default occur, then until all arrears to said sinking fund and all accumulated dividends upon said preferred stock and all unpaid rentals shall have been fully paid, and the payment of said dividends at the regular time shall have been resumed, the holders of the preferred stock shall have the exclusive right to vote for and elect the directors of the company, and the holders of the common stock shall have the right to vote on all other matters provided for by law. The right to vote vested in the holders of the preferred stock upon the happening or continuance of default as herein provided shall not deprive them of the exercise of any right they may have in law, in equity or by statute to enforce any of the provisions herein contained with respect to said preferred stock.'

We desire your opinion as to whether we should accept and file an amendment containing the above provision, and particularly that portion of it which gives the holders of the preferred stock the right to elect all of the directors of the company to the exclusion of the holders of the common stock upon the happening of the contingencies set forth in the above provision."

In the absence of a constitutional or statutory provision to the contrary, the common and preferred stockholders have equal voting power and may agree among themselves as to its exercise. It may therefore be said that unless common or preferred stockholders are by constitutional or statutory law prohibited from surrendering their voting power, either class may waive it in favor of the other. The question has generally arisen in connection with the right to take from the preferred stockholders the right to vote, and to confine it exclusively to the common stockholders, and only occasionally has the question of the right to confine the voting power to the preferred stockholders been presented to the courts.

It would seem, however, that if we start, as we must do, with the general rule that both classes have equal voting power unless taken away or abridged by some constitutional or statutory provision, and if it is competent, as it has been held time and again by the courts, to give the common stockholders the exclusive voting power, it would be equally valid to confer such exclusive right upon the holders of the preferred stock. The authorities sustaining provisions restricting the voting power of the preferred stockholders are to the effect that such arrangements are generally matters of private concern to the stockholders only and proper subjects of agreement between themselves. By so contracting, the stockholders do not violate any rule of common law, and if either class, common or preferred, voluntarily agrees to such limitations upon their common right, such agreement can not be said to violate any settled rule of public policy.

1 Machen, Corporations, section 570:

"The right of shareholders to vote is, however, like the right to dividends or to participation equally in a division of capital in liquidation, regarded as a private matter for each shareholder which he may waive if he choose. Consequently, a provision that shareholders of a certain class shall have no right to vote is, if assented to by them, quite valid. Such a provision might theoretically be made as to either the preferred or the deferred shares, but is much more common with respect to the preferred shares so as to compensate the other shareholders for the preference of the preferred shareholders as to dividends. A provision in an incorporation paper, whereby the preferred shareholders shall have no right to vote is, therefore, valid even though a statute provides that every stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for every share held by him."

3 Clark & Marshall, Corporations, p. 1996:

"A stockholder has no right to vote at corporate meetings, whether the stock is common or preferred, if it is so stipulated when the stock is issued, for the stipulation is then a term of his contract. And even after persons have become stockholders, they may surrender or restrict their power to vote by agreement, by consenting to by law or otherwise, provided the agreement does not violate any charter or statutory provision, and is not contrary to public policy," etc.

In 7 Ruling Case Law, p. 345, the law is stated as follows:

"A provision in articles of incorporation that the voting power shall be vested exclusively in the common stock and that preferred stockholders shall have no right to vote has been held not to be violative of any rule of the common law or of public policy. * * * Preferred stockholders may also be given the sole right to vote, to the exclusion of the holders of the common stock."

2 Clark & Marshall, Corporations, p. 1320:

"In the absence of charter or statutory provision or valid stipulation to the contrary, holders of preferred stock have the same right as holders of common stock to vote at stockholders' meetings. And their contract may even give them the right to vote to the exclusion, for a time, of the holders of common stock, so as to place the management of the corporation entirely in their hands for the time specified."

1 Thompson, Corporations, section 859:

"The rule that a right to vote follows the ownership of stock means that in the absence of any common restriction upon all stock, or upon a class of stock, this right prevails. That is, the right of a stockholder to vote cannot be arbitrarily abridged and is not subject to unreasonable restriction. But the rule is equally emphatic, if not so general, that restrictions may be placed upon the right to vote; or, as sometimes stated, the right to vote may be separated from the ownership of stock. It must be remembered, in this connection, that stockholders can make any agreement respecting their stock, or the voting of it, that they may see fit or deem wise, except agreements that are void as against public policy. * * It is simply a contract relation between the two classes of stockholders, in which the public has no concern."

4 Thompson, Corporations, section 3605:

"The whole matter is one of contract or of statutory regulation, and it would not be improper, where there is no statutory or charter prohibition, to confer the sole right to vote upon the preferred stockholders to the exclusion of the holders of the common stock."

In Miller vs. Ratterman, 47 O. S., 141, 157, the court, speaking with reference to a provision in stock certificates, that holders thereof shall not have or exercise the right to vote at stockholders' meetings, said:

"The provision is not unusual. It is sometimes found in the statute itself. * * * It is true that one characteristic of stock generally is that it can be voted upon. But this is not essential. Indeed, instances may arise where it is good policy to prohibit the voting upon stock. And the point here is, not whether any question of public policy intervenes to make it improper for the preferred stockholders to possess a right to vote, but whether any such question intervenes to make it imperative that they shall have that right."

What express provision of our constitution or statutory law is violated by the proposed amendment? All statutes in pari materia must be considered together, and in the light of the general common law rules of equality of right of stockholders to vote and to contract with each other in respect thereto. One may prescribe the general rule, while another on examination may be found to provide an exception to such rule, and thereby become the statute applicable to the subject with which it deals. Keeping these rules in mind, what constitutional or statutory provisions have we that are opposed to the stipulations contained in the proposed amendment, for it must be conceded, in the light of the authorities hereinbefore referred to, that such voting agreements are valid unless prohibited by law.

Under section 8667 G. C., the capital stock of corporations for profit may consist of common and preferred, and by authority of section 8668 G. C. it may be provided in the articles that the preferred stock shall be entitled to dividends in preference to all other stockholders, and that such dividends may be made cumulative.

Those two sections are then followed by section 8669 G. C., whose terms are equally applicable to both classes of stock (excepting only the single provision authorizing the redemption of the preferred), as follows:

"A corporation issuing both common and preferred stock may create designations, preferences, and voting powers, or restrictions or qualifications thereof, in the certificate of incorporation, and if desired, preferred stock may be made subject to redemption at not less than par, at a fixed time and price, to be expressed in the stock certificates thereof."

The only statute that can be claimed to place a limitation upon the right of the stockholders to impose limitations or restrictions upon the voting power is section 8636 G. C., which was enacted prior to the other statutes above referred to (see 93 O. L. 230), and reading as follows:

"At the time and place appointed, directors shall be chosen by ballot, by the stockholders who attend, either in person or by lawful proxies. At such and all other elections of directors, each stockholder shall have the right to vote in person or by proxy the number of shares owned by him for as many persons as there are directors to be elected, or to cumulate his shares and give one candidate as many votes as the number of directors multiplied by the number of his shares of stock equals, or to distribute them on the same principle among as many candidates as he thinks fit. Such directors shall not be elected in any other manner. A majority of the number of shares shall be necessary for a choice, but no person shall vote on a share on which an installment is due and unpaid."

But that section, when read in connection with the other statutes in pari materia, particularly section 8669 G. C., does not, in my opinion, in any way affect the right of corporations to create preferences on voting powers or restrictions or qualifications therof under the express authority of section 8669 G. C., which is the later statute on the subject.

What is proposed to be done in the proposed amendment to the articles of incorporation of The Dixie Terminal Company is not to destroy absolutely, and for all time, the voting power of the common stock, but only to restrict or qualify temporarily the power during such time as the company makes certain defaults, and then not generally but only as to the election of directors.

It is true that section 8636 G. C. provides that each stockholder shall have the right to vote at elections of directors, but when read in connection with the later statute (section 8669 G. C.,) which clearly and expressly authorizes corporations to create preferences and voting powers, or restrictions or qualifications thereof, the conclusion cannot be escaped that the earlier statute prescribes the general rule only, and that the later statute was intended to authorize exceptions to govern in all cases where the corporation takes advantage of its provisions. And, again, it must not be overlooked that the prohibition in section 8636 G. C., relates exclusively to the manner of electing directors as therein provided for, namely, by ballot, in person, or by proxy, and by cumulative voting. In other words, in determining what stockholders are entitled to vote, the two statutes above referred to (section 8636 G. C. prescribing the general rule, and section 8669 G. C. expressly providing for exceptions) must be considered and construed together; and in determining the manner in which the election must be had, recourse must be had to section 8636 G. C. because it is the only statute on the subject applicable to corporations generally.

Support for my conclusion is also found in section 8698 G. C. (107 O. L. 414), which expressly refers to restrictions or limitations on the voting power of "any of the authorized capital stock," thus furnishing legislative recognition of the right to restrict or limit the voting power of any of the capital stock, either common or preferred or both. See also, Mackintosh vs. Railroad, 32 Fed. 350; and State vs. Swanger, 190 Mo. 561.

If it be contended that the provision in section 8636 G. C. that "such directors shall not be elected in any other manner," has the effect of prohibiting corporations from restricting or limiting the voting power of the common stockholders, then the same line of reasoning would compel us to conclude that neither can the preferred stockholders be restricted or limited in their voting power. Such a construction would render ineffectual the provision of section 8669 G. C., which expressly authorizes any corporation issuing both common and preferred stock to create and incorporate into its charter designations, preferences and voting powers, or restrictions or qualifications thereof.

For the reasons above given, it is my opinion that the provisions of the proposed amendment to the articles of incorporation of The Dixie Terminal Company are not in violation of law, and that the amendment should be accepted and filed in your office.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—CHARTERED AND NON-CHARTERED CITIES—EXPENSES OF MAYORS AND CITY SOLICITORS FOR DRAFTING LEGISLATION FOR RELIEF OF CITIES UNAUTHORIZED TO BE PAID FROM PUBLIC FUNDS.

The public funds of a non-charter city cannot be used for the purpose of paying the expenses of municipal officers in attending a meeting of mayors and city solicitors held for the purpose of considering and drafting legislation for the relief of municipalities; nor can the funds of a charter city be used for such purpose in the absence of a valid provision in its charter warranting such payment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of February 4, 1919, requesting my opinion on certain questions based upon the statement of facts therein set forth, was duly received.

The statement of facts and questions referred to are as follows:

"Statement of Facts

Council of a Home Rule city which has adopted a charter passed a resolution directing certain officers to attend a meeting of the mayors and solicitors of the cities of the state of Ohio called for the specific purpose of drafting legislation for the relief of cities in general and the city of Cincinnati in particular. The said officers attended said meeting and presented their expense accounts to the city auditor for payment.

Question 1. May the city auditor honor said warrants and pay same from public funds as per the resolution of the council of the city of Cincinnati?

Question 2. In case a chartered city did not pass a resolution prior to attendance at said meeting, may the council of said chartered city pass an ordinance ratifying the action of its officers in attending said meeting and ordering the auditor to pay the expenses necessarily incurred in attending the meeting for the specific purpose of obtaining relief for said city?

Question 3. May the council of a municipality that has not adopted a charter pass a resolution or ordinance authorizing and directing said officers to attend a meeting of the mayors and solicitors of the state of Ohio for the specific purpose of drafting legislation for the relief of said non-chartered municipality?

Question 4. In case said non-chartered municipality has the power to pass said ordinance, may said council of said non-chartered city pass an ordinance ratifying the action of said officers and directing the city auditor to pay the warrant for expenses necessarily incurred in attending said meeting for the specified purpose of obtaining relief for said municipality?"

1. It has long been the settled policy of this state that public officers are not entitled to extra compensation unless clearly authorized by law, and it would seem that, on principle, the same rule is equally applicable to claims for expenses.

In Clark vs. Commissioners, 58 O. S., 107, the court at page 109 say:

"It is well settled that a public officer is not entitled to receive pay for services out of the public treasury, unless there is some statute authorizing the same. Services performed for the public, where no provision is made by statute for payment, are regarded as a gratuity, or as being compensated by the fees, privileges and emoluments accruing to such officer in the matters pertaining to his office. Jones vs. Commissioners, 57 Ohio St. 189. To warrant payment out of the public treasury, it must appear that such payment is authorized by statute. Section 5, Article X of the constitution. Diebolt vs. Trustees, 7 Ohio St., 237; Anderson vs. Commissioners, 25 Ohio St., 13; Strawn vs. Commissioners, 47 Ohio St., 404."

The principle was reaffirmed and applied in Sage vs. Commissioners, 82 O. S. 186. At p. 188 the court say:

"The claim for compensation is made, notwithstanding the rule long established in this state, and recognized in the brief of counsel for the plaintiff, and in the several opinions of the judges of the circuit court who have reached different conclusions upon the question presented, that if a statute imposes a duty upon a public officer it is presumed to be performed by him in consideration of the general emoluments of his office unless the legislature has clearly indicated the intention that compensation shall be paid for the performance of the duty so imposed."

In the recent case of State vs. Maharry, 97 O. S. 272, the court had occasion to define the status of public funds, and the purpose for which they could be disbursed, and did so as follows:

"All public property and public moneys, whether in the custody of public officers or otherwise, constitute a public trust fund, and all persons, public or private, are charged by law with the knowledge of that fact. Said trust fund can be disbursed only by clear authority of law."

An examination of the Ohio cases will disclose that in every case where the claim of a public officer to extra compensation, or for expenses incurred in the discharge of his official duties, was allowed, the decision was based upon the ground that the payment was authorized by statute, and that in every case where the claim was denied the decision was reached because there was no statute authorizing its allowance.

Some of the decisions denying claims for extra compensation and expenses incurred in the performance of official duties, because payment was not clearly authorized by statute, are:

Sage vs. Commissioners, 82 O. S. 186;
Thorniley vs. State, 81 O. S. 108;
Richardson vs. State, 66 O. S. 108;
Higgins vs. Commissioners, 62 O. S. 621;
Clark vs. Commissioners, 58 O. S. 107;
Ward vs. Russell, 57 O. S. 144;
State vs. Wright, 17 C. C. n. s. 396;
State vs. Ganz, 14 C .C. n. s. 381;
State vs. Brown, 20 C. C. 57;
Millard vs. Conrade, 16 Cir. Dec. 445; and Swartz vs. Wayne County, 12 Cir. Dec. 590.

And decisions allowing such claims, because payment was clearly authorized by statute, are:

Clark vs. Commissioners, 58 O. S. 107;
State vs. Commissioners, 26 O. S. 364;
Kloeb vs. Mercer County, 4 C. C. n. s. 565;
State vs. Hirstins, 15 N. P. n. s. 505; and State vs. Coeghlan, 6 N. P. 101.

The policy of the state against the allowance of claims of public officers for expenses incurred in the discharge of official duties, except in cases where the incurring and payment of such expenses are clearly authorized by statute, is most forcibly shown by the fact that the legislature has from time to time, and in a great number of cases, expressly provided for the payment of the traveling and other expenses of certain officers, therby negativing, in my opinion, the right to the payment of such expenses except in cases clearly and specifically provided for.

The following statutes selected at random, enacted at various times, are cited and referred to for the purpose of showing the legislative policy on this subject over a long period of time.

Sec. 50.—Member of the General Assembly allowed "mileage" to and from Columbus.

Sec. 275.—"Necessary traveling and hotel expenses" of deputy inspectors and supervisors of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

Sec. 373.—"Necessary traveling expenses" of state dairy and food commissioner. (Repealed).

Sec. 374.—"Necessary traveling expenses" of assistant dairy and food commissioners. (Repealed).

Sec. 499.—"Actual and necessary traveling and other expenses" of public utilities commissioners.

Sec. 614-81.—"Actual and necessary expenses while traveling" of public service commissioners and assistants. (Repealed).

Sec. 714.—"Actual and necessary traveling expenses" of superintendent of banks, deputies, etc.

Sec. 905.—"Necessary and legitimate expenses" incurred by chief inspector of mines, etc.

Sec. 982.—"Necessary traveling expenses" of assistant chief inspectors of workshops and factories.

Sec. 1171-1.—"Necessary expenses" of members of the board of control of agricultural experiment station.

Sec. 1181.—"Actual traveling expenses" of deputy highway commissioners.

Sec. 1294.—"Necessary expenses" of members and officers of the state medical board.

Sec. 1394.—"Necessary expenses" of fish and game wardens.

Sec. 1465-8.—"Actual and necessary expenses while traveling" of members of the tax commission.

Sec. 1465-24.—"Actual and necessary traveling expenses" of certain tax officers.

Sec. 1830.—"Necessary expenses" of members of women's visiting committee. (Repealed).

Sec. 1836.—"Actual traveling expenses" of members and fiscal supervisor-secretary of board of administration.

Sec. 1869.—"Traveling expenses" of members of board of administration, etc., attending interstate and national conventions.

Sec. 1981.—"Mileage" in conveying insane persons to hospitals.

Sec. 2786.—"Reasonable and necessary expenses" of county surveyor.

Sec. 2997.—"Actual and necessary expenses" of sheriff incurred in pursuing persons accused of crimes, etc.

Sec. 3002.—"Actual traveling expenses" of infirmary directors.

Sec. 3004.—"Expenses" of prosecuting attorneys.

Sec. 3087.—"Expenses" of superintendent and trustees of children's homes, as delegates to state and national conferences.

Sec. 3151.—"Necessary expenses" of trustees of tuberculosis hospitals.

The rule applicable to claims of public officers for payment of expenses incurred in the performance of official duties, is tersely stated in Richardson vs. State, 66 O. S. 108, at p. 11, as follows:

> "To make such expenses an additional burden on the public funds would require a plain and unequivocal provision of the statute. An intention to do so will not be implied."

The General Assembly has also legislated on the subject of meetings and conventions, and the statutes enacted on that subject disclose, in my opinion, the legislative intent to deny the right of public officers to attend meetings and conventions at public expense, except when clearly authorized. Some of the statutes on the subject are as follows:

Sec. 500.—Authorizing the publics service commission to attend conventions with railroad commissioners of other states, and with the interstate commerce commission.

Sec. 1245.—Authorizing the state board of health to provide for annual conferences of health officers and representatives of local boards of health, and providing that each city, village or township shall pay the necessary expenses of delegates etc.

Sec. 1465-11.—Authorizing the tax commission to meet with officers of other states and officers of the United States on matters pertaining to official duties.

Sec. 1869.—Providing that : "No expenditure for traveling expenses to other states, or for attending an interstate or national convention or association shall be made by any member or employee of the board of administration or by any officer of an institution under its control unless authority is granted at a meeting of the board by resolution stating the purpose and reason therefor; but such resolution shall not be effective without the written approval of the governor."

Sec. 2313-3.—Providing that: "No executive, legislative or judicial officer, board, commission or employe of the state shall attend at state expense any association, conference or convention outside the state unless authorized by the emergency board. Before such allowance may be made, the head of the department shall make application in writing to the emergency board showing necessity for such attendance and the probable cost to the state. If a majority of the members of the emergency board approve the application, such expense shall be paid from the emergency fund."

Sec. 3087.—Providing that trustees and superintendent of children's homes shall be allowed their necessary expenses as duly accredited delegates to state and national conferences devoted to child-saving, and other charitable and correctional work.

Sec. 3151.—Authorizing the trustees, medical superintendent, or nurses of district tuberculosis hospitals to attend conferences where pulmonary tuberculosis is a subject for consideration.

No statute has been found imposing a duty upon or authorizing municipal officers generally, or mayors and city solicitors, to attend meetings or conventions held for the purpose of discussing and drafting legislation for the relief of municipalities, or making the expenses of such attendance a burden on the public funds. As was well said in Richardson vs. State, supra, "An intention to do so will not be implied." If it had been intended to permit the expenditure of public funds for such purposes, it is reasonable to presume that the legislature would have spoken on the subject, as it has done in the numerous instances hereinbefore referred to.

There is also judicial authority and official opinion expressly holding that public officers have no legal claim against their respective municipalities for expenses incurred in attending meetings and conventions.

It State vs. Wright, 17 C. C. (n. s.) 396, the building inspector of Cleveland commenced a proceeding in mandamus to compel the payment of traveling expenses incurred by him on a trip to Columbus for the purpose of attending a convention of the building inspectors of the various municipalities. He made the trip and attended the convention by direction of his superior officer, the director of public safety. The court held that municipalities are not liable for the traveling expenses of their officials incurred in attending a convention of municipal officers, and dismissed the petition at the cost of the relator.

In an opinion of the Attorney-General, reported in Annual Report of Attorney-General, 1910-1911, page 354, it was held that the expenses of the city solicitor and other officers and employes of the city government, incurred in appearing at Columbus before a legislative committee for the purpose of securing legislation deemed advantageous to the city, cannot be lawfully paid from the city treasury.

In that opinion it was said:

> "I do not believe that a city government as such may incur expenses for the purpose of procuring legislation deemed advantageous to the community. No such power is conferred by the municipal code, or by any of the provisions of the constitution and laws of this state upon municipal corporations as such. No such power flows by implication from any of the powers expressly conferred by law upon municipal corporations. If there is any rule of public policy at all applicable to the question, such a rule would, in my judgment, be against a public corporation engaging for any reason in the enterprise of influencing legislation.
> The city as such then had no right to appear before any legislative committee. The citizens of the city might lawfully undertake this service for their common good. The city solicitor has no powers broader than those of the city itself, his client. However praise-worthy it may have been for him to appear before a legislative committee in behalf of the general good of the citizens of the city he could not be reimbursed for expenses so incurred by the city."

2. In State vs. Cooper , 97 O. S. 86, the court held that taxation is a sovereign function, and, being such, Home Rule cities do not possess the absolute and unrestricted power of levying taxes for local purposes. It was also held that the taxing power of all municipalities may be limited and restricted by general laws, and that such limitations and restrictions are warranted by sec. 6, Art. XIII of the Ohio Constitution of 1851 and by sec. 13, Art. XVIII of the amendment adopted September 3, 1912.

A claim that the state has yielded to a Home Rule city any of its sovereign functions cannot be sustained unless, as held in the Cooper case, supra, it appear that the people have parted therewith by the adoption of a constitutional provision that is clear and unambiguous, and, as was further held, the Home Rule provisions in the Ohio constitution do not go to that extent.

The statement of facts in your letter does not disclose that any of the Home Rule cities referred to have any provision in their charters authorizing the payment of such expenses from public funds. If it be competent for Home Rule cities to incorporate such a provision into their charters (and I express no opinion on the question), it would seem reasonable to conclude that if the officers of a non-charter city are not entitled to be paid such expenses unless clearly authorized by statute, the officers of Home Rule cities have no such right unless their charters contain a provision warranting such payment.

In view of the settled public policy of Ohio, as announced by the decisions and disclosed in the statutes hereinbefore referred to, I am of the opinion that public funds cannot be used for the purpose of paying the expenses of municipal officers of non-charter cities in attending meetings of mayors and city solicitors held for the purpose of discussing and drafting legislation for the relief of cities, nor of the officers of charter cities whose charters contain no valid provision warranting such payment.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME—NOT AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE AUTOMOBILE FOR USE OF SUPERINTENDENT.

Sections 3077 to 3108 G. C., providing for the establishment and maintenance of children's homes by counties, do not authorize the board of trustees of the home to purchase an automobile for the use of the superintendent thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1919.

HON. T. R. ROBISON, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your communication of February 8, 1919, you submit for opinion the following inquiry:

> "Would the board of trustees of the children's home have authority to purchase an automobile for the use of the superintendent in visiting children indentured out?"

Children's homes as part of the plan of county government are provided for by sections 3077 to 3108 G. C., and of this series of statutes, the particular sections providing for the appointment and compensation and prescribing the duties of a superintendent of the home are sections 3084 and 3085, reading as follows:

> "The board of trustees shall designate a suitable person to act as superintendent of the home, who shall also be clerk of said board, and who shall receive for his services such compensation as the board of trustees designates at the time of his appointment. He shall perform such duties, and give security for their faithful performance, as the trustees require.

Subject to such rules and regulations as the trustees prescribe, the superintendent shall have entire charge and control of such home and the inmates therein. Upon the approval of the trustees the superintendent may appoint a matron, assistant matrons, and other necessary employes whose duties shall be the care of the inmates of the home, and to direct their employment, giving suitable physical, mental and moral training to them. Under the direction of the superintendent, the matron shall have the control, general management and supervision of the household duties of the home, and the matron, assistant matrons, and other employes shall perform such other duties and receive for their services such compensation as the trustees may by by-laws from time to time direct. They may be removed by the superintendent or at the pleasure of a majority of the trustees."

Section 3087 G. C. reads:

"The trustees shall not receive any compensation for their services, but they and the superintendent shall be allowed their necessary expenses while on duty, including expenses as duly accredited delegates to state and national conferences devoted to child-saving, and other charitable and correctional work, and such expenses shall be paid in the same manner as other current expenses of children's homes, and shall not exceed four hundred dollars in any year for any county."

Unless the three sections quoted confer authority on the board of trustees to purchase an automobile for the use of the superintendent, the board is without such authority, since none of the remaining sections in the series above noted has relation, directly or indirectly, to the matter of such authority.

Statutes of the character of those quoted are construed strictly in Ohio. In the case of State ex rel. vs. Commissioners, 10 C. C. (n. s.) 398, the court at page 399 of the opinion says:

"If the legislature intended to have county commissioners supply sheriffs with horses, vehicles and harness, or to allow them the expense necessarily incurred in their purchase, it would certainly have so provided in unambiguous terms."

And see, also,

Sage vs. Commissioners, 82 O. S., 186;
Commissioners vs. R. R. Co., 45 O. S. 401, 403;
State ex rel. vs. Yeatman, 22 O. S. 546, 551;
Commissioners vs. Leighty, 1 C. C. (n. s.) 431.

Two opinions of this department are also in point: Opinions of Attorney-General, 1913, Vol. 2, p. 1360, holding that the county commissioners might not purchase an automobile for the use of the county surveyor in the absence of express legislative enactment or on necessary implication from the terms used; Opinions of Attorney-General, 1914, p. 520, holding that the words "other equipment necessary for the proper discharge of their duties" did not give authority to the county commissioners to purchase automobiles for the use of district assessors in the performance of their official duties. See, also, Opinions Attorney-General, 1917, p. 1917.

In the light of the principles thus announced, the provision in section 3084 G. C. that the superintendent shall "receive for his services such compensation as the board of trustees designates at the time of his appointment" does not imply that the board, under the guise of fixing compensation, may purchase an automobile for the use of the superintendent; nor is there any implication of such authority to be found in section 3087, providing for payment of necessary expenses of the superintendent while on duty or engaged in other charitable and correctional work. Section 3085 does not from any standpoint import such authority.

While the foregoing observations make it clear enough that your inquiry should be answered in the negative, another and even more potent consideration leads to the same end. You inquire if there is authority to make the purchase "for the use of the superintendent in visiting children indentured out." The matter of a visiting agent is specifically provided for by section 3099 G. C. (103 O. L. 892), which reads as follows:

> "Unless a children's home places its wards through the agency of the board of state charities, the trustees shall appoint a competent person as visiting agent, who shall seek homes for the children in private families, where they will be properly cared for, trained and educated. When practicable, the agent shall visit each child so placed not less than once in each year, and report from time to time to the trustees its condition, any brutal or ill treatment of it, or failure to provide suitable food, clothing or school facilities therefor in such family. The agent shall perform his or her duties under the direction of the trustees and superintendent of the children's home for which he or she is appointed, and may be assigned other duties not inconsistent with his or her regular employment as the trustees prescribe. His or her appointment shall be for one year, or until his or her successor is appointed, and he shall receive such reasonable compensation for his or her services as the trustees provide."

Said section 3099 was the subject of an opinion of this department, under date March 5, 1914, Reports of Attorney-General, 1914, Vol. 1, p. 272, wherein it was held:

> "The positions of superintendent of a children's home and visiting agent of a children's home are entirely inconsistent, and such superintendent may not serve in the capacity of visiting agent for the home over which he is superintendent. The matron of a county children's home may act as such visiting agent."

If a superintendent may not legally act as visiting agent, it follows of course that an automobile may not be purchased for use by the superintendent while purporting to act as such agent.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—DISCUSSION OF TIME ADDED TO SCHOOL DAY—HOW TUITION COMPUTED—ATTENDANCE ON ONE DAY IN SCHOOL MONTH CREATES LIABILITY FOR ENTIRE MONTH.

Time added to a regular school session is still a part of that school day for attendance purposes in computing tuition due and cannot be computed into another day; that liability for tuition rests on attendance and an attendance on one day in a school month creates a liability for the whole month.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1919.

HON. ROBERT B. MCMULLEN, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your inquiry requesting the opinion of the Attorney-General on the following questions:

> "1. Where a high school has been closed for several weeks on account of the influenza, can a board of education collect tuition for non-resident pupils attending such school, for the period the school was closed?
> 2. If, after the school is reconvened, a part of the time lost is made up by adding an extra period of forty minutes each day, would the board of education be required to pay the tuition of non-resident pupils for the time school was dismissed on account of the influenza?"

The answer to your first question is found in the recent opinion, No. 66, issued by the Attorney-General, wherein it was held that liability for tuition rests upon attendance; that if there were no school sessions there could be no attendance and hence no liability on the part of a foreign board or pupils, but attendance on one day of any particular school month makes a liability for that pupil for the whole month.

Relative to your second question, wherein you indicate that after such schools were closed an attempt is being made to make up a part of such lost time by adding an extra period of forty minutes each day, the same answer would seemingly apply, for the reason that the law does not contemplate either minutes or hours as the unit of computation on tuition, but uses the language which means days and months as follows:

> "Section 7736.—* * * An attendance any part of a month will create a liability for the whole month," and the same sentence occurs in section 7747 G. C., referring to high school pupils, the rule being the same for either elementary or high school attendance.

So if a pupil came but an hour on a certain day, it makes him present on that day, and if he were present forty minutes beyond the customary schedule, it would still be part of that day, which is "any part of a month," the language of the statute. Thus the school time consumed on a day still makes it but a day of attendance in the view of the second section quoted, and the law does not contemplate that the minutes shall be figured up to make another day.

The law may seem unduly harsh in indicating that liability for tuition rests on attendance, and there was no school to attend, because of elements beyond the control of the maintaining board of education, whose expense went on during epidemic, but on the other hand it will be found that if a school was in session but one day in a particular school month, then would accrue the tuition for the whole of that month for each of the pupils showing attendance on that particular part of the month, in which event the entire tuition for all the school months since the term began might be due, though a large number of school days may have been without school sessions following intermittent dismissals and reopenings. In other words, there might be a reopening in each school month, and if there was attendance, then was tuition due for the whole month, but the case of one pupil as regards attendance might not be that of another pupil, and the excess of time beyond the customary closing time cannot be computed into other days for tuition purposes, for the school day is the least unit the law has in mind for attendance computation.

The action of school officials and teachers, in attempting to cover lost time in studies, is a commendable one, and yet since attendance for a day makes a liability for that school month on the part of the paying boards, and a number of days will have to be paid for on which there was no school, it is entirely proper that such services in return should be given.

The opinion of the Attorney-General is that time added to a regular school session is still a part of that school day for attendance purposes in computing tuition due and cannot be computed into another day; that liability for tuition rests on attendance and an attendance on one day in a school month creates a liability for the whole month.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—SECTION 1114 G. C. REQUIRED APPRAISEMENT OF ALL ANIMALS SLAUGHTERED TO PREVENT SPREAD OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Appraisement of all animals slaughtered to prevent the spread of contagious diseases, is necessary before the value thereof may be allowed under section 1114 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1919.

HON. HENRY W. DAVIS, Chairman Senate Finance Committee, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This is to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of February 7, 1919, as follows:

> "Enclosed please find letter dated March 21 from the department of agriculture, regarding some cattle killed in Hanover township, Columbiana county.
> You will observe that it is suggested in this letter that we have your opinion on the validity of this claim and the purpose of this letter is to ask you for such opinion. The facts, I presume, are available from the budget commissioner, Mr. Donaldson.
> Kindly let me have this opinion at your reasonable convenience."

In the enclosure of March 21, 1917, referred to in your letter, it appears that the live stock committee of the board of agriculture recommended the payment of fifty per cent of the aggregate amount of these claims, viz., $842.50, subject, however, to the Attorney-General's approval of the claim, or, as stated in their recommendation, "provided that the attorney finds that this claim is within the provisions of the law."

All of the facts necessary to the consideration of the validity of this claim are not stated in your letter, or in the attached enclosure.

From my personal conference with Mr. Shaw, secretary of agriculture, and Dr. Burnett, state veterinarian, and with Mr. Donaldson, budget commissioner, I learn that the cattle referred to were found to be tubercular or exposed to tuberculosis.

It appears also that these cattle were not appraised before being slaughtered or at any other time. From such personal conferences I also learn that the particular question upon which my opinion is desired is whether the payment for these slaughtered cattle is authorized by sections 1114, et seq., G. C., which provide compensation for the slaughter of animals to prevent the spread of contagious and infectious diseases, and this is the only question herein considered.

To the facts as we have them, sections 1114 and 1115 G .C. are pertinent: They are in part as follows:

> Section 1114.—"If, in order to prevent the spread of any dangerously contagious or infectious disease among the live stock of the state the secretary of agriculture deems it necessary to destroy animals affected * * * he shall determine what animals shall be killed and cause them to be appraised by three disinterested citizens, one to be selected by owners of the animals * * *. After being so appraised, the secretary shall cause such animals to be killed * * *."
> Section 1115.—"If an animal is killed under the provisions herein, the compensation to be paid for such animal shall be computed by said appraisers on the basis of the actual value of such animals * * *. No compensation, however, shall be made to a person who has brought into this state animals infected with such contagious or infectious disease * * or who may by wilful neglect or purposely has contributed to the spread of such contagion. * * *"

It will be noted that section 1114 G. C. provides for an appraisement of the cattle before they are killed. It should also be noted that no finding or statement of facts appear showing that the owners of these animals did not come within the inhibitions of the latter part of section 1115, supra, but it does appear from statements of Mr. Shaw and Dr. Burnett that the animals, when examined, or at least when attention of the board of agriculture was called to them, were in what is known as a herd for dispersal sale, under which circumstances the board of agriculture has not in the past recommended compensation.

This consideration, however, may be disregarded in view of the fact that there was no appraisement of these cattle, as provided by law, and in the absence of compliance with this mandatory provision of section 1114, it is my opinion that the claim under consideration is not valid as a claim the payment of which is authorized by section 1114, et seq., G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF PHARMACY—WHEN REJECTION OF APPLICATION IS BAR TO SUBSEQUENT APPLICATION FOR RENEWAL—PROVISIONS FOR APPEAL DISCUSSED.

1. A final order of rejection of an application for renewal, under section 1308 G. C., by the state board of pharmacy, on the ground that the applicant has been guilty of a felony, immoral conduct or fraud in obtaining his certificate, is a bar to a subsequent application for such renewal.

2. The provisions for appeal from the state board of pharmacy, in force and effect at the time the application is rejected, control and the appeal must be perfected under such provisions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1919.

The State Board of Pharmacy, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter dated February 11, 1919, as follows:

> "A person has been legally registered as a pharmacist in this state and upon the expiration of his pharmacist certificate he makes application for a renewal certificate, within a specified time of sixty days after the expiration of said certificate.
> The Ohio state board of pharmacy, in session with all members present, by official action, decided that this person was not entitled to a renewal certificate. The applicant for the renewal certificate, as well as his attorney, was notified of the action of the board and, about fourteen months later the applicant for the renewal certificate appealed to the court of common pleas from the action of the board. The result was that the case was dismissed at plaintiff's cost.
> Now this same person, who has been denied a renewal certificate, through his attorney, makes application to this board again for a renewal certificate, under section 1308 G. C., and filing with his application the fee of two dollars ($2.00) as prescribed in section 1311 G. C.
> The question is this: If the renewal certificate is denied the applicant the second time, has he the legal right to appeal to the governor and attorney-general or the court of common pleas? My reason for including the governor and attorney-general is that this renewal certificate was denied the applicant prior to the time the present statute, section 1307 G. C., was amended, providing for the appeal to go to the court of common pleas."

From personal conference with you I learn that the grounds of rejection in the case of the person referred to in your letter was that he was guilty of a felony, having been convicted and sentenced to and confined in the penitentiary, and from such conference it is also noted that you desire to know if, after the application of a registered pharmacist for a renewal certificate, properly filed within sixty days, has been rejected by the state board of pharmacy, the pharmacist can make a subsequent application for such renewal. It is noted that in the facts stated in your letter an appeal was taken from the order of rejection to the common pleas court, where the order of rejection was affirmed. In other words, is an order or judgment of the state board of pharmacy, hereinafter referred to as the board, rejecting an application for renewal, a bar to subsequent applications, or, as verbally stated by you, may such phamacist continue to make such application indefinitely, notwithstanding former rejection and appeal to the common pleas court.

Let us consider this question first:

Section 1307 G. C. (107 O. L., 541), section 1308 and section 1309 G. C. are pertinent. In part section 1307 reads:

> "Each certificate and each renewal certificate issued by the state board of pharmacy shall entitle the person to whom it is granted to practice the profession of pharmacist for three years. The board may refuse to grant a certificate to a person guilty of a felony or gross immorality, or addicted to the liquor or drug habit to such a degree as to render him unfit to practice pharmacy, and, after notice and hearing, may suspend or revoke a certificate for like cause or for fraud in procuring it. Within thirty days an appeal may be taken from the action of the state board of pharmacy refusing to grant or suspending or revoking a certificate to the common pleas court of Franklin county or to the common pleas court of the county in which the person who has been refused a certificate or whose certificate has been suspended or revoked resides."

Section 1308 G. C., is as follows:

> "Each person registered as a pharmacist or assistant pharmacist as provided herein, shall be entitled to practice his profession until the expiration of his certificate of registration. If a registered pharmacist or assistant pharmacist desires to continue the practice of his profession he shall file with the state board of pharmacy an application for a renewal of his certificate within thirty days next preceding its expiration; and if the board finds that the applicant has been duly registered in this state and is entitled thereto, it shall issue him a renewal certificate signed by its president and secretary. The right to obtain such a certificate shall not be denied a person within three years after the expiration of his certificate of registration. If a registered person fails to make application for such renewal within sirty days after the expiration of his certificate, he shall pay the treasurer of the board ten dollars in addition to the fee prescribed for the renewal of a certificate."

Section 1309 G. C., in part is as follows:

> "If a registered pharmacist or assistant pharmacist fails to make application to the board for a renewal certificate within a period of three years from the expiration of his certificate, he must pass an examination for registration."

So far as I am able to ascertain, the courts of this state have not been called upon to construe these sections in the light of the present inquiry and in determining the extent of the board's power of duties and the reciprocal rights of applicants for registration, we must look for guidance in the general purpose of this act and its meaning as gathered from its terms.

Nor, must we lose sight of the fact that the regulation of the practice of pharmacy is an exercise of the police power of the state. For expediency this particular part of the police power has been delegated to the board. It is a well established principle of law that political subdivisions, boards or commissions, to whom this power is delegated, are limited in the exercise thereof to such powers as are expressly or by clear implication conferred upon it, and have not the broad inherent powers of re-trial or re-hearings that are conferred on courts of general jurisdiction.

So that in the last analysis the answer to your inquiry may properly be said to depend upon the construction which we must give to the sections above quoted, particularly section 1308 G. C., supra. It is to be noted that it provides:

> "If a registered pharmacist desires to continue the practice * * * he shall file * * * an application for a renewal of his certificate within thirty days next preceding its expiration."

If the board finds the applicant entitled to it, a certificate will be issued to him. This part of the statute requiring the application to be made thirty days before the expiration of the certificate to be renewed, contemplates continued practice on the part of the pharmacist. Then follows a provision that if the registered person does not make his application for renewal in sixty days after the expiration of his certificate, he shall be required to pay an extra fee.

Another provision in this section must not be overlooked. It is:

> "The right to obtain such certificate shall not be denied a person within three years after the expiration of his certificate of registration."

It is to be noted that this section provides for an application for renewal prior to the expiration of the original certificate and it provides for an additional fee if the application be not filed within sixty days from its expiration, and provides against the denial to a person of the right to obtain such certificate within three years.

What is the meanng of this last provision, so far as it affects your first question herein?

In view of the provision of section 1307 G. C., supra, fixing the term for which said original certificate is effective as three years, it would appear to have been the legislative intent to fix a time within which an application for renewal could be filed, viz., giving the registrant a right at any time within the three years and thirty days above indicated to invoke the action of the state board in passing on his application. The sixty days provision, in my judgment, is merely a regulation as to an extra fee and has nothing to do with limiting the rights of the registrant in point of time, and the construction to be placed on that part of section 1308, which provides that the right to obtain such renewal certificate shall not be denied within three years, in effect is to say that a pharmacist once having been found to be proficient in pharmacy and granted a certificate for the practice thereof, so far as those matters upon which he was originally required to take examination, is presumed to be still qualified therein at any time within three years and therefore entitled to have a certificate of renewal granted to him unless he has disqualified himself under section 1307 G. C. To hold that the three year provision is to be construed as conferring an unqualified and absolute right to such certificate at any time within three years, is to render section 1307 worse than meaningless, as its provisions that the board may refuse to grant such certificate to a person guilty of felony, etc., would be rendered impotent. On the other hand, considering that three years is the term for which such certificates are effective, and considering that in the forepart of said section 1307 provision has been made for filing thirty days before expiration and a provsion for additional fee if the application were made sixty days thereafter, does it not appear clear that to avoid confusion in fixing the limit within which such application should be made, the legislature used the language "the right to obtain" such certificate in the same sense as if they had said that such application for renewal may be filed within three years after the expiration of the original certificate? This is the only construction which it can be given consistent with section 1307 and with the other provisions of section 1308, and it may be suggested that this construction would seem to be in accord with the regulatory provisions of the act as a whole.

In the light of this construction on the three-year limit clause in said section, upon final rejection of an application for renewal, which rejection was based on the ground that the applicant was guilty of a felony, may such applicant again file an application for renewal with such board and, as a matter of right, compel the board to entertain and pass upon said application?

Recalling the rule that a board, acting under a delegation of the police power of the state, is limited in the exercise thereof to such powers as are expressly or impliedly conferred upon it, it seems to me that your question may be answered by the answer to this question—Is such duty or power expressed or clearly implied in section 1308, or other statutes in this act? It is not. Provision is made that the registered pharmacists may file an application within a certain time; provision is made for the duties of the state board and the matters within their discretion are outlined in acting upon the application, from which decision an appeal is provided to the common pleas court.

Nowhere in said sections is there any implication that more than one application is contemplated, and on the theory that no provision is made therefor, I am of the opinion that the registered pharmacist is not, as a matter of right, entitled to file a second application on the facts as stated in your letter.

I have discussed this question at some length, but because its solution is not free from difficulty and this recent amendment, so far as I can ascertain, not having been judicially construed, it is deemed advisable to state the reasons for the conclusion reached.

Your other question, stated in the last paragraph of your letter, requires consideration of the effect of amendments changing the manner of appeal on orders or judgments rendered prior to such amendments.

Section 26 G. C. is pertinent, and is as follows:

> "Whenever a statute is repealed or amended such repeal or amendment shall in no manner affect pending actions, prosecutions or proceedings, civil or criminal, and when the repeal or amendment relates to the remedy, it shall not affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, unless so expressed, nor shall any repeal or amendment affect causes of such action, prosecution, or proceeding, existing at the time of such amendment or repeal, unless otherwise expressly provided in the amending or repealing act."

This was held in Bode vs. Welch, 29 O. S., 19, to amount to a saving clause in favor of judgments already rendered in a case involving an amendment which took away the right to appeal in certain cases without specifically providing that such amendment would affect judgments previously rendered.

In the amendment of 1917 (107 O. L., 542) there is no reference to orders or judgments previously rendered and nothing to indicate an intention that it should act retroactively.

You are therefore advised that the provisions for appeal in force at the time of the rendition of the order or judgment on the application, control and if the application referred to in your letter is now denied, the applicant's appeal is to the common pleas court, as provided in the amendment last referred to.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—WHEN MUNICIPALITY OWNED ELECTRIC LIGHTING PLANT CAN FURNISH SERVICE OUTSIDE OF CORPORATE LIMITS.

A municipal corporation, which owns an electric lighting plant, has legal authority to furnish service to a person residing outside of the corporate limits of said municipality, provided, however, such service shall not exceed fifty per centum of the total service supplied within the municipality.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1919.

HON. LEWIS G. CHRISTMAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter dated February 17, 1919, as follows:

> "Has a municipal corporation, that owns its own electric lighting system, a legal right to furnish service to a resident outside of the corporation limits?"

Section 3, 4 and 6 of Article XVIII of the constitution of Ohio, adopted in September, 1912, and section 3618 G. C. are pertinent to your inquiry.

Section 3 is as follows:

> "Municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self-government and to adopt and enforce within their limits such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations, as are not in conflict with general laws."

Section 4 reads:

> "Any municipality may acquire, construct, own, lease and operate within or without its corporate limits, any public utility the product or service of which is or is to be supplied to the municipality or its inhabitants, and may contract with others for any such product or service. The acquisition of any public utility may be by condemnation or otherwise, and a municipality may acquire thereby the use of, or full title to, the property and franchise of any company or person supplying to the municipality or its inhabitants the service or product of any such utility."

Section 6 provides:

> "Any municipality, owning or operating a public utility, for the purpose of supplying the service or product thereof to the municipality or its inhabitants, may also sell and deliver to others any transportation service of such utility, and the surplus product of any other utility in an amount not exceeding in either case fifty per centum of the total service or product supplied by such utility within the municipality."

Section 3618 G. C. reads:

> "To establish, maintain and operate municipal lighting, power and heating plants, and to furnish the municipality and the inhabitants thereof with light, power and heat, and to procure everything necessary therefor and to acquire by purchase, lease or otherwise, the necessary lands for such purposes, within and without the municipality."

From the construction of statutes granting power to municipalities, the general principle of law that municipalities may exercise only such powers as are expressly or by necessary implication granted to them by law, must be borne in mind.

As stated in the first branch of the syllabus in Ravenna vs. Pennsylvania company, 45 O. S., p. 118:

"Municipal corporations, in their public capacity, possess such powers and such only as are expressly granted by statute, and such as may be implied as essential to carry into effect those which are expressly granted."

With such modifications as may be made to apply to charter cities and the constitutional amendments adopted in 1912, the rule as above stated is the law in Ohio.

Prior to the adoption of sections 4 and 6, supra, sections 3618-G. C., as above quoted, would not have authorized the furnishing of public utility service outside of the corporate limits, and in construing section 4 and 6, we must bear in mind the construction which the courts have placed on the law as it was at the time of the constitutional amendment and we must presume that the electors of the state knew the law as it stood at the time of the adoption of the amendments. One of these general rules as to the limitations of power of municipal corporations, is stated in 28 Cyc., p. 266, as follows:

"As a general rule a municipal corporation's powers cease at municipal boundaries and cannot, without plain manifestation of legislative intention, be exercised beyond its limits. The legislature, however, may authorize the exercise of powers beyond municipal limits, and has frequently done so, particularly in matters within the police power."

I am not now aware of any decision in Ohio directly bearing on this question which had been decided at the time of the adoption of the constitutional amendment, but in Firewell vs. City of Seattle, 43 Wash. 141, 86 Pacific, 217, a statute very similar to section 3618 G. C., giving authority to municipalities to furnish water to the inhabitants thereof, and another statute giving such power to furnish water to the "inhabitants thereof and other persons," were construed with the sole question of the extra-territorial power of municipal corporations under such statutes. And, it was held in the Firewell case, supra, that such statutes did not confer power upon municipalities to exercise their corporate powers beyond the municipal limits, and the general rule announced was:

"It is a general principle that a municipal corporation cannot usually exercise its powers beyond its own limits, and if in any case it has authority to do so, it must be derived from some statute which expressly or impliedly permits it."

So at the time the electors of the state adopted the amendments above referred to, they are presumed to have known that at that time municipalities had no power to sell their utility service outside the corporate limits.

With this in mind let us turn our attention especially to section 6, supra. It is to be observed that section 4, preceding section 6, authorized the acquisition, construction, ownership and operation within or without the corporate limits of a municipality of any public utility, the product or service of which is to be supplied to the municipality or its inhabitants. Section 6 further provides that any municipality so owning or operating a public utility "for the purpose of supplying the service or product thereof to the municipality or its inhabitants," may also sell and deliver to others any transportation service of such utility and the surplus product of any other utility in an amount not exceeding in either case fifty per centum of the total service or product supplied by such utility within the municipality.

It should be noted that these constitutional amendments are self- executing and need no intermediary acts of the legislature to enforce them.

It is quite obvious that section 6 was not necessary to confer power upon a municipality to sell the public utility service or product to the inhabitants of the municipality as that power is specifically granted in section 4 and in section 3618. It is apparent, however, that it was intended to cover additional sales, as the granting part thereof, after the descriptive recitals, begins with the words "may also sell and deliver to others such service or product." That this additional power to sell and deliver contemplates the sale or delivery of product or service outside of the corporate limits, is further evinced by the exception that such additional sale and delivery of product or service in either case shall not exceed fifty per centum of the total service or product supplied by such utility "within the municipality."

From the considerations above indicated, it is to be concluded, therefore, that a municipality owning its own electric lighting system has a legal right to furnish service to a resident outside of the corporate limits thereof, provided the aggregate amount of service furnished outside of said corporate limits do not exceed fifty per centum of the total service supplied within the municipality.

Very respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT —RESIDENT OF CITY MAY HOLD POSITION OF TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT WHEN CITY SITUATED IN TOWNSHIP.

A resident of a city may legally hold the position of township highway superintendent of a township within which said city is situated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1919.

HON. HOMER HARPER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Attention has been given to your communication of February 22, 1919, wherein you submit for opinion the following:

> "Painesville township comprises one road district; and the city of Painesville is in said township. May a resident of the city legally hold the position of township highway superintendent?"

The appointment of a township highway superintendent is provided for by section 3370 G. C., which section, so far as now in point, reads as follows:

"The township trustees shall have control of the township roads of their township and shall keep the same in good repair. The township trustees may, with the approval of the county commissioners or state highway commissioner, as the case may be, maintain or repair a county road or intercounty highway or main market road within the limits of their township. In the maintenance and repair of roads the township trustees may proceed in any one of the following methods as they may deem for the best interest of the public, to-wit:

* * * * * * * * *

3. They may appoint some competent person, not a member of the board of trustees, to have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within the township which person shall be known as township highway superintendent, and shall serve at the pleasure of the township trustees. The method to be followed in each township shall be determined by the township trustees by resolution duly entered on their records."

Even if it be assumed that under this statute one of the qualifications necessary to appointment of a person as township highway superintendent is that he be a resident of the township, a person residing in the city of Painesville, possesses that qualification so far as Painesville township is concerned, since, as you state, the city of Painesville is within Painesville township, and said township comprises one road district.

Therefore, answering your question specifically, a resident of the city of Painesville may legally hold the position of township highway superintendent of Painesville township.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY INFIRMARY—UPON REQUEST OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS IT IS DUTY OF PROSECUTING ATTORNEY TO REPRESENT SUPERINTENDENT OF ABOVE INSTITUTION—WHEN TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES ARE ADVERSE PARTIES IN LEGAL ACTION, PROSECUTING ATTORNEY'S DUTY.

1. Upon request of the county commissioners, it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney to represent the county infirmary superintendent in an action to which the latter is a party, where the subject matter of the action concerns the official duties of said county commissioners relative to the county infirmary.

2. The appearance of the prosecuting attorney in such a case is not inconsistent with his duty under section 2917 G. C. as legal adviser of township trustees, even though the latter are adverse parties in the action.

3. The township trustees have not the right to require the official services of the prosecuting attorney in a case brought by them against the county infirmary superintendent, if the case is one that concerns the official duties of the county infirmary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1919.

HON. JOSEPH W. BAGLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Georgetown, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 20, 1919, receipt of which is acknowledged, reads as follows:

"A petition has been filed in the court of common pleas, Brown county, by the township trustees of Union township, said county, in their official capacity as relators, praying for a writ of madamus against J. R. B. as superintendent of the county infirmary of said county in his official capacity, in which relators seek to compel the superintendent to receive into the infirmary one J. H. who, it is alleged, is a proper subject to be, and should be, admitted into the infirmary by the superintendent.

Mr. B. has requested me as prosecuting attorney of said county to represent him, file his answer, and conduct his defense in said case.

(1) Is it my duty as such prosecuting attorney to represent respondent in the case, or does the fact that, in my official capacity I am the legal adviser of township trustees under General Code, section 2917, render my appearance in the case for the superintendent inconsistent with my duty as such adviser to the relators?

(2) Have the relators the right to require my official services to represent them in the case, upon proper request?"

The duty of prosecuting attorneys, relative to appearing in suits and actions to which county commissioners and certain other public officers are parties, is prescribed by section 2917 G. C., which says:

"The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matters connected with their official duties. He shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party, and no such county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve. He shall be the legal adviser for all township officers, and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees duly entered upon their journal, in which the compensation to be paid for such legal services shall be fixed. Such compensation shall be paid from the township fund."

Said section does not expressly say that the prosecuting attorney shall prosecute and defend all suits to which township officers are parties, but only that "he shall be the legal adviser for all township officers * * ." The remainder of the sentence just above referred to says, however, " * * and no such officer may employ other counsel or attorney except on the order of the township trustees," etc.

Sensible construction compels the conclusion that it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney not only to give legal advice to township officers, but, if so requested, to prosecute and defend suits to which such officers are parties, and this is the usual practice.

It might be said that in a technical sense, unless the county infirmary superintendent can be regarded as a "county officer," the prosecuting attorney is not required by section 2917 G. C. to appear for him in any suit or action to which said superintendent is a party.

That the county infirmary superintendent is not a county officer is suggested by two considerations: First, that his position rests upon appointment and not by election, as required by section 1 of Article X of the constitution of Ohio. Secondly, that our Supreme Court, in Palmer vs. Zeigler. 76 O. S. 210, held that the superintendent of a county infirmary is not the holder of a public office within the meaning of section 12303 G. C., the quo warranto statute.

At the time the Palmer case, supra, was decided, the infirmary superintendent was appointed by the county board of infirmary directors. Subsequently (102 O. L. 433), the legislature transferred to the county commissioners the power theretofore exercised by said directors, but no substantial change was made in the nature of the infirmary superintendent's position or in the extent of his powers. He is still, as Price, J., said in the Palmer case (p. 224):

> "* * * a mere employe or contractor under oath and bond, limited on all sides in his authority and not authorized by law to contract for the supplies except in a limited degree."

That the relation between the commissioners and the infirmary superintendent is virtually that of principal and agent, is particularly apparent from section 2523 G. C., which says:

> "The county commissioners shall appoint a superintendent, who shall reside in some apartment of the infirmary or other building contiguous thereto, and shall receive such compensation for his services as they determine. The superintendent shall perform such duties as the commissioners impose upon him, and be governed in all respects by their rules and regulations. He shall not be removed by them except for good and sufficient cause. The commissioners shall not appoint one of their own number superintendent, nor shall any commissioner be eligible to any other office in the infirmary or receive any compensation as physician, or otherwise, directly or indirectly wherein the appointing power is vested in such board."

It appears from your letter, as well as from a copy which I have seen of the petition in the case your letter refers to, that the county commissioners of your county have not been made parties to the action, the county infirmary superintendent being the only respondent named therein.

As a matter of law, however, the county commissioners have an interest in the outcome of cases of this nature. Section 2522 G. C. charges them with the duty of making all contracts and purchases necessary for the county infirmary; also the duty of promoting sobriety, morality and industry among the inmates.

Section 2528 G. C. requires the commissioners to appropriate from time to time, from the county poor fund, moneys necessary for current supplies and expenses of the infirmary, which moneys are expended by the infirmary superintendent.

Section 2532 G. C. requires the county commissioners to examine each month the condition of the infirmary and the inmates.

Section 5627 G. C. authorizes the county commissioners to determine the amount of money to be raised for the support of the poor, which amount is set forth by them in the annual budget submitted by them under section 5649-3a G. C.

Other sections might be cited to show the close relationship which the county commissioners sustain to the management of the county infirmary and to indicate the interest which they, as representatives of the public, are expected to show in the conduct of that institution.

In other words, any action or suit the result of which may be to increase the number of inmates in the county infirmary, is one that concerns the official duties of the county commissioners, and justifies them in requesting the prosecuting attorney to take whatever steps he deems advisable to protect their interest, and where the suit in fact affects, or may affect, their official interests, their right to the prosecuting attorney's advice and assistance is not changed by the mere circumstance that they have not been made parties by the pleadings.

This conclusion is in harmony with the view set forth in a former opinion of this department (1915 A. G. R., Vol. I, p. 394), holding that road commissioners under sections 7232, et seq. G. C. (now repealed), while not county officers under the constitution, are agents of the county commissioners and entitled to the services of the prosecuting attorney in the prosecution or defense of any suit or action.

The desire on the part of the principal (that is to say, the county commissioners) for the appearance in the suit of the prosecuting attorney to represent the agent (meaning the infirmary superintendent) must of course be manifest before the prosecuting attorney is under any obligation to render his services. Whether, as to the case presented by you, the commissioners have requested you to represent the infirmary superintendent, does not appear from your letter.

I am therefore of the opinion that it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney, if and when requested by the county commissioners, to represent the county infirmary superintendent in any action or suit to which the county infirmary superintendent is a party, where it appears that said action or suit concerns the administration of the affairs of the county infirmary.

Thus far nothing has been said as to that part of your first question which reads:

> "* * * does the fact that in my official capacity I am the legal adviser of the township trustees under General Code, section 2917, render my appearance in the case for the superintendent inconsistent with my duty as such adviser to the relators?"

I am of the opinion that your appearance in the case for the county infirmary superintendent is not inconsistent with your duty as adviser to the township trustees.

As explained above, if you appear for the county infirmary superintendent, you will do so on the theory that the suit is one that affects the official duties of the county commissioners. In other words, your real client is the county commissioners. Now when county commissioners and township trustees are adverse parties to an action, it would seem that the former have been given a prior right, so to speak, to the prosecuting attorney's official services, this for the reason that under section 2917 G. C. the county commissioners are not at liberty (except as provided in section 2412 G. C.) to employ other counsel, while such right is expressly given by section 2917 G. C. to township trustees. It would hardly be proper, then, to characterize as inconsistent the doing by the prosecuting attorney of the very thing which section 2917 G. C. requires, to-wit, that > "he shall prosecute and defend all suits and actions which any such officer or board may direct or to which it is a party."

Your second question is: "Have the relators the right to require my official services to represent them in the case, upon proper request?" In my opinion, and for reasons just above stated, your question should be answered in the negative. The case being one that concerns the official duties of the county commissioners, whose right to the services of the prosecuting attorney respecting the conduct of litigation is superior to that of the township trustees, you should assume no relation to the case antagonistic to the county commissioners.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATIONS—COVINGTON AND CINCINNATI BRIDGE COMPANY—WHEN AN "OHIO CORPORATION"—SECTION 192 G. C. CONSIDERED.

Corporations should be treated as "Ohio corporations" for the purposes of section 192 G. C. and their stock held exempt from taxation only if they are treated as "domestic corporations" for all purposes under the franchise tax law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 4, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—The receipt of your letter of February 5 requesting the opinion of this office as to the action which should be taken respecting the pending case of Hinkle, Executor, vs. Cooper, Common Pleas Court of Hamilton county, is acknowledged.

It seems from your letter that the case which is being defended by the prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county involves the question as to the taxability of certain shares of the Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Company. The prosecuting attorney joins in your request for the advice of this department as to whether or not the action should be further defended.

The question thus presented may be stated as a legal problem as follows:

> Are the shares of stock of a corporation which owes its existence to the concurrent special legislation of Ohio and another state taxable in Ohio?

The facts necessary to be considered in connection with this request are suggested by the form of the question as above phrased. The Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Company was organized prior to the adoption in Ohio of the constitution of 1851 (47 Ohio Laws, 269). On February 17, 1846, the general assembly of Kentucky passed an act authorizing certain named persons to organize as a corporation in Kentucky for the purpose of constructing a bridge across the Ohio river between Covington and Cincinnati when the state of Ohio should by appropriate legislation confirm the charter. The Kentucky act went on to state the powers of the corporation, the terms upon which its stock should be subscribed, and the amount thereof, and otherwise to provide for the constituent acts of the company.

On March 9, 1849, the Ohio law above referred to was passed. After reciting the Kentucky statute in full, it provided that:

> "The Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Company, thereby created, shall be, and the same is hereby made, a body corporate and politic of this state, with the same franchises, rights and privileges, and subject to the same duties and liabilities as are specified in the above recited act, in manner and form as though the said act were fully and at large set forth, section for section, word for word, except"
> (Here follow seven certain conditions annexed to the grant of corporate power on the part of Ohio).

In spite of these exceptions, which seem to have been tacitly agreed to by Kentucky, the corporation, the organization of which proceeded, appears to have been legally incorporated; at least that question is not now material. That is to say, the fact that the Ohio act was not a perfect acceptance, so to speak, of what might be termed the offer embodied in the Kentucky act did not prevent the former from being a valid law of Ohio, and the corporation, whether properly organized or not, is at least a de facto corporation in Kentucky and in Ohio both and possibly is a de jure corporation in Ohio; but whether existing de facto or de jure its status for the purposes of the present question is that of an existing corporation, the only problem being to determine whether or not it is such a corporation as is contemplated in section 192 G. C., which provides that:

> "No person shall be required to list for taxation a share of the capital stock of an Ohio corporation;"

If the company is an "Ohio corporation" within the meaning of this statute, and the statute is valid, its stock is not taxable in this state, though its right to exist might be subject to direct attack.

However, the Supreme Court of this state seems to have treated the corporation as if there were no question as to its lawful existence and to have intimated that the corporation is for purposes of taxation to be treated as an Ohio company. I quote the following from the opinion of Welch, J., in Bridge Co. vs. Mayer, 31 O. S. 317, 325:

> "We are satisfied * * * that this corporation, having been chartered and organized under the laws of both states, might lawfully hold its meetings and transact its corporate business in either state; and that, therefore, the stock in question was issued under authority of Ohio law. * * * The truth is, that this is a single corporation, clothed with the powers of two corporations. It acts under two charters, which in all respects are identical, except as to the source from which they emanate.

What is authorized by one of these charters is authorized by both. What may lawfully be done under one may lawfully be done under both. * *"

The same proposition is carried into the syllabus of the case.

The proposition that a two-state corporation, in the sense in which this company may be so called, is a domestic corporation in each state is supported by Beale in his work on foreign corporations, sections 773 and 775.

In view of these authorities it is very clear that, for all ordinary purposes at least, the Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Company, is an "Ohio corporation." The exact question, however, is as to whether it is such a corporation within the meaning of section 192 G. C. That entire section has not yet been quoted. For convenience it is now set forth in full:

> "No person shall be required to list for taxation a share of the capital stock of an Ohio corporation; or a share of the capital stock of a foreign corporation, the property of which is taxed in Ohio in the name of such corporation; or a share of the capital stock of any other foreign corporation, if the holder thereof furnishes satisfactory proof to the taxing authorities that at least two-thirds of the property of such corporation is taxed in Ohio and the remainder is taxed in another state or states, provided such corporation, as a fee for the privilege of exercising its franchise in Ohio, pays annually the same percentage upon its entire authorized capital stock that is required by law to be paid by a domestic corporation on its subscribed or issued capital stock."

This statute was passed as an amendment to section 148c R. S. in 1902 (95 Ohio Laws, 539); it became a part of the law of this state at the time of the imposition of what is familiarly known as the "Willis tax" on the franchise of being a corporation (95 Ohio Laws, 124; see present sections 5495 et seq. G. C.). I think it is not going too far to say that section 192 G. C. is to be interpreted in connection with the law referred to, especially in view of the fact that the exemption of shares of stock in a foreign corporation under certain circumstances is conditioned by section 192 upon payment of certain franchise taxes. This being the case, it would seem reasonable to hold that an "Ohio corporation" within the meaning of section 192 is one that is treated as such for the purpose of the franchise tax. In other words, the classification which section 192 makes as between "Ohio corporations" and "foreign corporations" must be that classification which was in the minds of the members of the general assembly which enacted section 192, growing out of their consideration of the general subject of the taxation of corporations in connection with the franchise tax.

It happens that the question as to the proper classification of the Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Company for franchise tax purposes has been adjudicated in this state. The case is unreported; but the Circuit and Supreme Courts have held that the corporation is not to be treated as a domestic corporation for the purpose of the franchise tax. It is true that the opinions which were filed in this unreported case do not make it clear that the corporation is to be treated as a foreign corporation for that purpose. It is, however, at least clear from the judgment that the company is not required to pay franchise taxes upon its entire issued and outstanding capital stock as is an ordinary "Ohio corporation."

The decisions which have been cited cannot be easily reconciled with the unreported decision just mentioned. The whole question is therefore thrown into some doubt. Nevertheless, in view of the adjudicated status of the company for franchise tax purposes, and in view of the evident propriety of interpreting and applying section 192 G. C. in the light of the franchise tax, it is the conclusion of this department that the question made by the pending case should be settled by the courts. It is certainly not fair that the Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Company should be treated as something other than an "Ohio corporation" for franchise tax purposes, and then treated as an "Ohio corporation" as regards the question of the exemption of its shares from general property taxation, when it is so evidently the policy of section 192 that corporations which are treated as "domestic" or "foreign," as the case may be, for franchise tax purposes shall be similarly treated for the purposes of that section.

In the same connection I cannot forbear to mention the apparent unconstitutionality of section 192 G. C. under Article XII, section 2, though I do not know that it is the desire of the commission to raise this question in this case.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF AMENDED SENATE BILL NO. 14—CREATING HOTEL DEPARTMENT UNDER STATE FIRE MARSHAL.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 5, 1919.

HON. HENRY W. DAVIS, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 24, 1919, requesting my opinion on certain questions relating to proposed amendments to Senate Bill No. 14, was duly received.

Your letter reads as follows:

> "I desire your opinion on Senate Bill No. 14. I understand you are advised of the amendments proposed thereto and that a copy of said amendments are now in your possession. The question is, first, will it be legal to put this hotel department in the department of the state fire marshal. Second, will it be legal to collect excess fees from hotels and restaurants and place it in the general fund of the state? And can we properly exempt from the operation of this law villages under certain given size or population. An early answer to this proposition will be very agreeable."

I will take up these questions in the order in which they are stated in your letter.

(1) It is entirely within the discretion of the general assembly to increase or diminish the duties of a statutory office at pleasure. See, Mecham, Public Offices, section 595; Throop, Public Officers, section 19. There is, therefore, no legal objection to the legislature creating in the office of state fire marshal a division to be known as the hotel division, and imposing the duties of the office upon the state fire marshal and his deputies.

(2) The power of the legislature to regulate occupations, and to require each person engaged therein to secure a license and pay a fee therefor, is well settled in this state.

In Marmet vs. State, 45 O. S., 63, the court held:

"The general assembly has power * * * to regulate occupations by license, and to compel, by imposition of a fine, payment of a reasonable fee, where a special benefit is conferred by the public upon those who follow an occupation, or where the occupation imposes special burdens on the public, or where it is injurious to or dangerous to the public."

In that case the court held that the act of April 16, 1883 (80 O. L. 12), requiring owners or keepers of livery stables, dealers in second-hand articles, keepers of junk shops and owners of vehicles to obtain a license and to pay certain license fees therefor, was not in conflict with any provision of the constitution. The case of Cincinnati vs. Buckingham, 10 O., 257; Cincinnati vs. Bryson, 15 O., 625; and Baker vs. Cincinnati, 11 O. S., 534, were cited, approved and followed. See generally, 2 Cooley, Taxation, 1094 et seq.

The obvious purpose of Senate Bill No. 14 is to protect and preserve the public health and comfort of that great number of people who through necessity or otherwise patronize hotels and restaurants, and the bill therefore falls directly within the police power of the state. In Board of Health vs. Greenville, 86 O. S., 1, 21, 23, the court described police power as including anything which is reasonable and necessary to secure the peace, health, morals and best intersts of the public. It was also said that the legislature possesses plenary power to deal with these subjects, as long as it does not contravene any constitutional provisions or infringe upon any right granted or secured thereby, and it is not exercised in an arbitary and oppressive manner, and that such power may be exercised by the general assembly according to its judgment and discretion in any manner not inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions of the state or federal constitutions.

While the power of the general assembly to exercise the police power in the manner referred to is beyond question, it has, nevertheless, been judicially determined in this state that license fees cannot be imposed for the main purpose of raising general revenue.

In Graves vs. Janes, 18 C. C. (n. s.) 488, the court, in holding unconstitutional provisions of the act passed April 28, 1913 (103 O. L. 763), which imposed license fees upon owners of motor vehicles, because their principal effect was to raise general revenue, said:

"This brings us to a consideration of the amount and legality of the license charge. This feature is the most difficult of solution. The identification and registry of motor vehicles has a legitimate purpose, but it is clear that the charge provided for in the act under consideration goes far beyond this purpose. * * * When, therefore, the legislature clearly exceeds the limit of reasonable taxation for the privilege conferred or the burden resulting, or when the charge imposed is clearly founded upon an improper basis for an unwarranted purpose, it is the duty of the court to declare the acts invalid. * * *

"The act provides that one-third of the revenue paid into the state treasury 'shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patrolling of the public roads and highways of this state under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department.' No special provision having been made for the other two-thirds of this revenue, it remains in the general revenue fund. * * * The act therefore, to that extent, a general revenue measure. * * *

"We are therefore forced to the conclusion that the act under consideration so far as it applies to the owners and users of motor vehicles is in large part a general revenue measure, and to that extent, is unconstitutional and void. The unconstitutional or revenue features of the act not being separate, vitiates the entire provisions of the act to owners and users."

But it would seem from the opinion in the foregoing case, that the mere fact that a small portion of the license fund may be devoted to general revenue purposes, will not justify the courts in holding license laws invalid. On this point the court, at page 493, 494, said:

"It is true that the general revenue fund is subject to special appropriation for any lawful purpose. But we cannot escape the conclusion that the manifest purpose of the general assembly in appropriating expressly for highway purposes, including both maintenance and policing, but one-third of such revenue and leaving the other two-thirds in the general revenue fund of the state, clearly discloses an intention upon the part of the general assembly to raise the larger portion of this fund for general revenue purposes. The act is therefore to that extent a general revenue measure. * * *

"Increased litigation in the criminal and civil courts would probably support an allotment of some share to the general revenue fund. But that consideration would not of itself justify the large portion of this tax devoted to general revenue. Nor can we conceive of any other reason justifying it."

The extent to which the general assembly may go in fixing the amount of license fees was disposed of by the court as follows:

"The imposition of a reasonable charge * * * in view of the special uses contemplated by the act, is warranted by the general grant of legislative power. This is not a property tax, but a privilege tax. The reasonableness of a privilege tax is confided largely to the discretion of the general assembly, but for the abuse of such legislative power a final review is in the courts. * * *

In view of the finding as to the unconstitutionality of the act we do not feel justified in expressing an opinion as to whether the schedule of fees therein provided is so clearly excessive as to warrant a court in declaring the same invalid, if the legislature had expressly declared it necessary to raise such entire fund for the purpose of maintenance, repairing and policing the public highways and had appropriated the entire amount so raised, less the cost of maintaining the department to such uses."

In Southern Gum Co., vs. Laylin, 66 O. S., 578, while the subject matter of the case was the imposition of a tax on corporate privileges and franchises, one of the general principles of law announced in the case would seem equally applicable to the question as to the amount the legislature may exact from occupations and business by way of license fees. In that case the court held that:

"A tax on privileges and franchises cannot exceed the reasonable value of the privilege or franchise originally conferred, or its continued annual value thereafter."

The question is pertinent in every case as to who is to determine the reasonableness of license fees. In Southern Gum Co. vs. Laylin, supra, it was held that the determination of values for corporate franchise purposes rests largely in the general assembly, but finally in the courts. And in Graves vs. Janes, supra, it was said that:

> "The reasonableness of a privilege tax is confided largely to the discretion of the general assembly, but for the abuse of such legislative power, a final review is in the court."

(4) The question as to the proposed exemption of certain villages from the operation of Senate Bill No. 14, presents the most difficulty. The bill, if enacted, would be a law of a general nature, and therefore, subject to section 26 of Article II of the state constitution, requiring all laws of a general nature to have uniform operation throughout the state. The power of the general assembly to classify cities according to population for purposes of legislation, appears to be sanctioned by the Supreme Court, when the classification is not a false, evasive or unnecessary one.

In State vs. Evans, 90 O. S., 243, the court in sustaining the constitutionality of the Jung school board act classifying city school districts into three classes according to population, said:

> "Our courts have repeatedly held that the matter of classification based on population is a proper standard, so long as such classification is not a false, unnecessary, arbitrary and evasive one.
> Now, can it be fairly said that these lines and limitations of fifty thousand, of one hundred and fifty thousand and those in excess of one hundred and fifty thousand are arbitrary, unreasonable and evasive?
> All the courts of all the states, including the federal courts as well, have laid down the sound rule that a legislative enactment is presumed in law and in fact to be constitutional; that such acts should not be declared unconstitutional by a court unless they be 'clearly' so. Some of the courts have used the words 'unless it be unconstitutional beyond a reasonable doubt.' Inasmuch as the Jung act operates uniformly upon all school districts in excess of one hundred and fifty thousand population, to-wit: Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo, how can it be said that it is 'clearly unconstitutional' upon that ground?"

In Board of Health vs. Greenville, 86 O. S., 1, which was cited in the Jung case to sustain the classification based on population then under consideration, the court, at page 37 et seq. said:

> "The question then presented is whether the general assembly of Ohio has attempted a classification or an exception which is a false, unnecessary and arbitrary one, or whether it be reasonable, just and necessary. This court has repeatedly held that classification is often proper and sometimes necessary in legislation in order to define the objects on which the general law is to take effect, but has taken equally as firm a stand against any arbitrary, vicious or faulty classification used to evade this constitutional limitation. * * *
> It has been repeatedly held by this court that where a law is available in every part of the state as to all persons and things in the same condition or category, it is of uniform operation throughout the state. * *
> It would seem that it would not require a Solomon to determine that this is not an unjust or unfair discrimination, or false or faulty classification, and that notwithstanding this exception the law does operate uniformly as to all persons and things in the same condition or category. Classification is not only proper, but sometimes absolutely necessary in legislation. It is only when there is no substantial reason for the classification, when it clearly appears that there is no real difference existing, and that classification has been resorted to by the general assembly merely for the purpose of avoiding and escaping the constitutional limitation that a court will declare a statute unconstitutional for this reason."

In Phillips vs. State, 77 O. S., 214, the court at page 217, said:

"The general power of the legislature to determine what is necessary for the protection of the public interests being clear, judicial inquiry is necessarily limited to determining whether a particular regulation is reasonable, impartial and within the limitations of the constitution. The legislature is the judge of the mischief and the remedy, and of what shall be state policy, subject to the restrictions just mentioned."

In Renner Brewing Co. vs. Rolland, 96 O. S., 432, the court at page 436 said:

"It is the settled law of this state that the general assembly in the exercise of the police power of the state has the right to make a classification based upon a sound, substantial reason, and before a court will interfere with this power and prerogative of the general assembly it must clearly appear that there is no valid reason for such classification. * * * These statutes are by no means an isolated example of legislative recognition of the fact that certain character of property and certain kinds of business demand legislation peculiar to the needs of such business or property."

A few of the cases sustaining both the validity and invalidity of classification will be now referred to. General language may be found in some of them which could be used either for or against the validity of any particular law that might be enacted.

In McGill vs. State, 34 O. S., 228, it was held that where it was apparent that a rule differing from that generally in use is necessary to meet the special wants of a particular county, it is competent to enact a law applicable to such county.

In Marmet vs. State, supra, an act requiring proprietors of theatres, livery stables, etc., to procure licenses and pay fees was sustained although applicable only to Cincinnati, because it was considered that a special need for such legislation appeared to exist in that city. In other words, the act was sustained because it was based upon local necessity and the special wants of the particular locality affected.

While the foregoing cases, as well as State vs. Evans and Board of Health vs. Greenville, supra, are typical of the line of cases sustaining classification, the line of cases such as Cincinnati vs. Steinkamp, 54 O. S. 284, holding certain classification to be invalid must not be overlooked.

In the Steinkamp case an act to regulate the construction of buildings within a city of the first class and first grade was held violative of section 26 of Article II of the state constitution, because being a law of a general nature, it was operative only in Cincinnati. The line of reasoning of the court in that case might not be inapplicable to the proposed amendment to senate bill No. 14. At page 296 the court say;

"Protection of life and limb, it would seem, is not a local matter, but is a matter of general public interest, in which every person in the state coming within the category of people exposed to the dangers intended to be guarded against, is equally interested with every other such person, and it would appear to be as much the duty of owners of buildings answering to the description as to construction and occupancy of those named in the statute to observe the humane directions of this act whether located in one part of the state or in another, for buildings (other than private dwellings) of three or more stories in height are found in every locality throughout the state. Doubtless more frequent instances of dangers of the nature referred to may occur in thickly populated cities than in the smaller municipalities or the rural districts, but how can it be said that there is any appreciable difference between the hazards incident to the occupancy of such a building in a city of the first class and those to be encountered in other portions of the state wherever they are found?"

In Commissioner vs. Rosche, 50 O. S., 103, an act providing for the refunding of taxes erroneously paid was held to be of general interest to all inhabitants of the state, and in conflict with section 26, Article II of the state constitution because applicable only to Hamilton county.

In State vs. Bargus, 53 O. S., 94, an act exempting counties from the operation of the general poor laws on account of "trivial differences" in population, was held invalid because it was not of uniform operation throughout the state.

Recurring again to the cases sustaining classification, and considering them in connection with the cases in which classification was condemned, it is pertinent to inquire just what is meant by "uniform operation," in an effort to determine whether any particular law is open to attack on the ground that it is not of uniform operation.

A somewhat analogous phrase, "existing in every county throughout the state," was defined in Cincinnati vs. Steinkamp, supra, at page 295 as follows:

"'Existing in every county throughout the state' means, we suppose, only in every county where the conditions of the statute exist, for in order to be general and uniform in operation it is not necessary that the law should operate upon every person in the state, nor in every locality; it is sufficient, the authorities coincide, in holding, if it operates upon every person brought within the relation and circumstances provided for, and in every locality where the conditions exist. But, upon the other hand, it seems equally well settled, a law is not of uniform operation if it exempts a portion of those coming within its terms; that is, if it confers privileges, or imposes burdens, upon some of a class answering the description which are not conferred or imposed upon all others belonging to the same category. And it would seem to follow from this that the constitutional requirement of uniform operation throughout the state is not answered by showing that the law is of uniform operation within one city of the state only, however populous, and even though described as a city of the first grade of the first class, if it appears that the act does not confer power, corporate or administrative, and that the conditions undertaken to be legislated upon are common to other sections of the state generally."

The language of Mr. Justice Hughes in Mills vs. Wilson, 236 U. S. 373, is also relevant to the inquiry:

"The legislature is not debarred from classifying according to general considerations and with regard to prevailing conditions; otherwise, there could be no legislative power to classify. For it is always possible by analysis to discover inequalities as to some persons or things embraced within any specified class. A classification based simply on a general description of work would almost certainly bring within the class a host of individual instances exhibiting very wide differences; it is impossible to deny to the legislature the authority to take account of these differences, and to do this according to practical groupings in which, while certain individual distinctions may still exist, the group selected will, as a whole, fairly present a class in itself. Frequently such groupings may be made with respect to the general nature of the business in which the work is performed; and, where a distinction based on the nature of the business is not an unreasonable one, considered in its general application, the classification is not to be condemned."

In Steele, etc., Co. vs. Miller, 92 O. S., 115, the court at page 127 said:

"The authorities agree that a statute in general and uniform if it operates equally upon every person and locality within the circumstances covered by the act, and when a classification has a reasonable basis it is not invalid merely because not made with exactness or because in practice it may result in some inequality."

It could be contended with much plausibility that conditions in city and village hotels and restaurants are as a general rule the same, yet there are some considerations that might warrant the general assembly in regulating those in the larger municipalities only without being subject to the criticism that such legislation is arbitrary or unreasonable. It is common knowledge that the bulk of travel is to the large municipalities, and also that the local patronage of hotels and restaurants is greater in such localities. It is also well known that keepers of hotels and restaurants in the larger municipalities do not have the same means or opportunity of knowing the character and condition of their guests as do those in smaller localities. It would seem from these and other considerations that the general assembly, in providing safeguards for the patrons of hotels and restaurants in larger localities (who otherwise might not recive such protection because of the impracticability if not the impossibility of their keepers discovering and adequately guarding against certain evils, which, although possibly common to both localities, are more prevalent in the larger places), would not be subject to criticism on the ground that in so doing it had acted arbitrarily.

Just where the dividing line between reasonable and arbitrary classification should be drawn, is not always of easy solution, and it is probable that it was for that reason that the Supreme Court has laid down the rule that classification in order to be invalid must be false, arbitrary and evasive. The mere fact, however, that occasionally there may be found a hotel or restaurant, which, on account of its peculiar location or local surroundings would not be embraced within the scope and operation of a general law providing for the inspection and regulation of hotels and restaurants, would not, in my opinion, sustain an objection that the act as a whole has created a false, arbitrary and evasive classification in violation of section 26, Article II of the state constitution. But, as has already been indicated, questions of the character under consideration are not free from doubt. Different conclusions might be reached by different minds, and each opinion find some support in the decisions. The final test in all cases is whether or not the classification is false, arbitrary and evasive.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

OHIO AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION—EXPENSES OF EMPLOYES CANNOT BE PAID FOR ATTENDING MEETING AT BALTIMORE, MD.

The expenses of employes of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station in attending a meeting of the Association of Economic Entomologists of America held at Baltimore, Maryland, cannot be paid from the moneys appropriated to the state under authority of the Acts of Congress approved March 2, 1887 and March 16, 1906, commonly called the Hatch and Adams acts.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of February 8, 1919, requesting my opinion as to your authority to honor two vouchers drawn by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station for the payment of traveling expenses of two of its employes in attending a meeting of the Association of Economic Entomologists of America held at Baltimore, Maryland, in December, 1918, was duly received.

Your letter reads as follows:

> "We are herewith handing you two vouchers drawn by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station for the payment of traveling expenses of two of its employes in attending a meeting of the Association of Economic Entomologists of America held in Baltimore, Md., in December, 1918; said vouchers authorizing payment of said amount from the Adams and Hatch fund in the state treasury.
> These expenses were incurred without the authorization required by section 2313-3 of the General Code. Upon presentation of said vouchers this department requested Hon. W. H. Kramer, bursar of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, to advise under what authority it was claimed that said expenses could be incurred, without complying with the provisions of section 2313-3, foregoing mentioned, and under date of January 23, 1919, we received a letter from Mr. Kramer which we herewith enclose showing that the authority claimed is under a joint resolution of the general assembly adopted February 10, 1888. It appears that the Act of Congress referred to in said letter purported to authorize the states "to apply such benefits to experiments at stations so established by such states." We are doubtful as to whether the payment of expenses shown by the enclosed vouchers for the purpose specified could be considered as pertaining to 'experiments.'"

In a subsequent letter from Mr. W. H. Kramer, bursar, dated February 20, 1919, it is stated that the primary purpose of the meeting was to bring together entomologists from all the states for conference relative to entomological work, and that authority to attend the meeting was given by the board of control of the station.

1. The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station was established under an act of the general assembly passed April 17, 1882, entitled "An Act for the establishment of an agricultural experiment station," (79 O. L. 113), separate from the college established in this state under the Act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and of the acts supplementary thereto, and by reason thereof the state, upon giving the assent hereinafter referred to, became entitled to the benefits conferred by the Act of Congress approved March 2, 1887 (24 U. S. Stat. at Large, 440-442; sections 8878 et seq. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1918).

The Act of Congress approved March 2, 1887, referred to, was entitled "An Act to establish agricultural experiment stations in connection with the colleges established in the several states under the provisions of an act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and of the acts supplementary thereto," and, among other things, authorized the conducting of researches and investigations bearing directly on the agricultural industry of the United States, having due regard to the varying conditions and needs of the respective states.

The act imposed the duty upon each station, annually, to make to the governor a full and detailed report of its operations, including a statement of its receipts and disbursements, and to send a copy thereof to the commissioner of agriculture, the secretary of the treasury and to other stations.

Section 5 of the act authorized the appropriation out of certain public land funds of the sum of $15,000 per annum to each state, to be specially provided for by Congress in its appropriations from year to year for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses of conducting investigations and experiments and printing and distributing the results.

By section 8 of the act, which is the section specially applicable to the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, as will appear from the joint resolution hereinafter referred to, it was provided:

> "That in states having * * * agricultural experiment stations established by law separate from said colleges, such states shall be authorized to apply such benefits to experiments at stations so established by such states."

The grants of money authorized by the act having been made subject to the legislative assent of the several states and territories to the purposes of the grants (See sec. 9 of the act), the general assembly on February 10, 1888 (85 O. L. 575, 576) adopted the following joint resolution:

JOINT RESOLUTION

Relative to the control and expenditure of funds appropriated by Congress for agricultural experiment station in Ohio.

Whereas, The Congress of the United States of America has passed an act, approved March 2, 1887, to establish agricultural experiment stations in connection with the colleges established in the several states under the provisions of an act approved July 2, 1862, and of the acts supplementary thereto; and,

Whereas, Said act of Congress, approved March 2, 1887, provides that in states having colleges entitled to the benefits of this act, and having also agricultural experiment stations established by law, separate from said colleges, such states shall be authorized to apply such benefits to experiments at stations so established by such states; and

Whereas, The state of Ohio, by an act passed April 17, 1882, and by acts supplementary thereto, has established an agricultural experiment station separate from the college established in this state under the provisions of said act of Congress, approved July 2, 1862, and of the acts supplementary thereto; therefore,

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the annual appropriations provided for by said act of Congress, approved March 2, 1887, be and are hereby applied to the use of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, and shall be controlled and expended by the board of control of said station.

It will thus be seen that the purposes to which the annual Congressional appropriations authorized by the Act of Congress of March 2, 1887, may be applied by states having a station established separate from its colleges, are confined by section 8 of the act "to experiments at stations so established."

2. After the enactment of the act of March 2, 1887, and the adoption of the joint resolution by the general assembly of Ohio on February 10, 1888, above referred to, Congress, by an act approved March 16, 1906 (34 Stat. at Large 63; sections 8891 et seq. U. S. Compiled Statutes, 1918), authorized and provided for annual appropriations of $30,000 to each state and territory

"to be applied only to paying the necessary expenses of conducting original researches or experiments bearing directly on the agricultural industry of the United States."

The act of March 16, 1906 did not expressly repeal the act of March 2, 1887 on the same subject, but it is probable that it was intended to, and actually does, supersede the earlier act, and that the congressional fund now in the state treasury was appropriated and paid to the state under authority of the latter act.

The act of March 16, 1906 requires (sec. 2) that the officer appointed by the governing board to receive the money appropriated, report annually to the secretary of agriculture a detailed statement of the amount received and of its disbursement, and it expressly provides that the grants of money authorized by the act are made subject to the legislative assent of the several states to the purpose of the grants.

Section 3 of the act provides that if any portion of the moneys received by any state shall by any action or contingency be diminished, lost or misapplied, no subsequent appropriation shall be appropriated or paid to such state until it shall have been replaced. Each station is also required to make annually to the governor a full and detailed report of its operations, including a statement of receipts and expenditures, a copy of which report must be sent to each station, to the secretary of agriculture and to the secretary of the treasury of the United States.

The secretary of agriculture is required by section 4 of the act to ascertain and certify annually to the secretary of the treasury as to each state, whether it is complying with the provisions of the act and entitled to receive its share of the annual appropriation, etc. If the secretary of agriculture withholds such certificate, the state's appropriation is withheld, and unless Congress on the state's appeal directs that it be paid, the amount is covered into the treasury.

It is also made the duty of the secretary of agriculture, by section 5 of the act, to make an annual report to Congress on the receipts, expenditures and work of the experiment stations, and also as to whether the appropriation of any state has been withheld, and if so, the reason therefor.

On April 8, 1908, the general assembly (99 O. L. 634) assented to the purpose of the grants of money authorized by the act of March 16, 1906, as required and provided for by section 2 of the act, by adopting the following joint resolution:

JOINT RESOLUTION

Assenting to the purpose of Congress for increased appropriations for agricultural experiment stations and providing for the control and expenditure of such appropriations.

Whereas, The Congress of the United States of America has passed an act, approved March sixteenth, nineteen hundred and six, to provide for an increased annual appropriation for the agricultural experiment stations established under the provisions of an act of Congress, approved March second, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven; therefore,

Be it resolved by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:

That assent is hereby given to the purposes of said act of congress, approved March sixteenth, nineteen hundred and six, and that the moneys thereby appropriated to the state of Ohio be expended and controlled by the board of control of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, in conformity with the regulations prescribed by said act of Congress."

3. It will thus be seen that the annual appropriations made to Ohio under the acts of March 2, 1887 and March 16, 1906, were made by Congress and accepted by the state to be applied to the purposes authorized by the grants, namely, under the first act "to experiments at stations," and under the latter act to paying necessary expenses of "conducting original researches or experiments." The conference of entomologists at Baltimore, Maryland, relative to entomological work, does not come within either class.

Money received by the state under both acts are trust funds, and their application to purposes other than those therein expressly authorized would be a misapplication and a breach of trust, which, under the act of March 16, 1906, would subject the state to the loss of future appropriations. The state was expressly required by congress to give its assent to the purposes for which the grants of money were made, as a condition precedent to its rights to receive the same, and, having done so, it has thereby entered into a solemn compact with Congress to apply the fund in the manner authorized by the acts of Congress, and to no others.

4. I have also received a letter under date of February 18, 1919, from Mr. Charles E. Thorne, director of the experiment station, in which he refers to section 1171-3 G. C. as authorizing the board of control to apply the congressional appropriations to the general or special use of the station, etc. It is obvious that this statute can not have the effect of warranting the board of control in using the congressional appropriations for purposes unauthorized by the acts hereinbefore referred to, because, as has already been stated, Congress has specified the purposes to which the funds must be applied, and the state was required to and did assent thereto as a condition precedent to its right to receive the money.

It is also pertinent to remark that by the express provision of the section relied upon by Mr. Thorne (sec. 1171-3), grants and donations of money to the station can only be used and applied "as directed by the donor." The donor in this case is Congress, and not Ohio or the board of control. Congress, being a voluntary donor, can make its appropriation to the states on such terms and conditions it may see fit to impose, and having specified the purposes to which agricultural experiment station funds appropriated by it can be applied, and having required and received the assent of the state thereto, it is not within the power of the state to authorize the board of control to apply the fund to any other purpose.

Mr. Thorne also contends that the secretary of agriculture has authority over the disbursement of the fund, and that so long as that officer is satisfied, the state must be. But, for reasons already pointed out, such contention can not be sustained. The secretary of agriculture may inquire into the purposes for which the fund is being applied by the state, but he has no authority to authorize its misapplication.

5. Section 2313-3 G. C., referred to in your letter, relates exclusively to expenditures from the state emergency fund and therefore has no application to the appropriations made by Congress for the benefit of agricultural experiment stations.

For the reasons above stated, I am of the opinion that the two vouchers referred to in your letter of February 8, 1919, covering the traveling expenses of two employes of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, in attending a meeting of the Association of Economic Entomologists held at Baltimore, Maryland, in December, 1918, can not be paid from the funds appropriated by Congress for the benefit of the experiment station.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—AUTHORIZED TO PROVIDE LICENSES FOR USE OF STREETS BY VEHICLES KEPT FOR HIRE AND BUSINESS PURPOSES—FEE COMMENSURATE TO BURDEN.

Municipal corporations are empowered by virtue of section 3632 G. C. to provide for a license for the use of streets by vehicles kept for hire and business purposes and to impose a reasonable license fee commensurate to the burden imposed by such use of the streets.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have yours of February 5, 1919, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We are respectfully calling your attention to section 3632 of the General Code and are citing decision in the case of Crane vs. Middletown, 4 Ohio Appellate Reports, page 130.
> Question: Can a municipality license automobiles which are used for hire and business purposes?"

Section 3632 G. C., to which you refer, is a part of the general grant of powers of municipalities and is to be read in connection with section 3616 G. C. which provides:

> "All municipal corporations shall have the general powers mentioned in this chapter, and council may provide by ordinance or resolution for the exercise and enforcement of them."

Section 3632 G. C. provides:

> "To regulate the use of carts, drays, wagons, hackney coaches, omnibuses, automobiles, and every description of carriages kept for hire or livery stable purposes; to license and regulate the use of the streets by persons who use vehicles, or solicit or transact business thereon; to prevent and punish fast driving or riding of animals, or fast driving or propelling of vehicles through the public highways; to regulate the transportation of articles through such highways and to prevent injury to such highways from overloaded vehicles, and to regulate the speed of interurban, traction and street railway cars within the corporation."

In Crane et al. vs.City of Middletown et al., 4 O. App. Rep., 130, also referred to in your inquiry, the syllabus is as follows:

> "No power has been delegated to municipalities by the general assembly which authorizes the enactment of an ordinance requiring the owner of an automobile to pay a license fee to the city, in addition to the license paid to the state as fixed by statute, as a condition precedent to his use of a car on the streets for pleasure riding, and an ordinance imposing such a license fee is invalid."

The case involved the validity of an ordinance of the city of Middletown to license and regulate the use of the streets by persons who used vehicles thereon.

The city claimed the power to require such a license and the fee prescribed by the ordinance under authority of section 3632 G. C., above quoted. The court observed that the strongest objection to the validity of the ordinance was that it failed to impose any regulations whatever in regard to the use of the streets except the provision that as a prerequisite to their use the license fee must be paid, and at page 134 of the opinion the court said:

> "It is clear on its face that the ordinance was passed purely as a revenue measure. Its purpose evidently was to levy a special tax on those who use the streets of the city. Such a tax, under whatever name it may be called, can not be upheld, because it expressly violates section 2, Article XII of the constitution.'

The court referred with approval to the case of Pegg vs. City of Columbus, 80 O. S., 367, where the holding was that such a license could not be imposed by a municipal corporation upon non-residents of the city who used vehicles on its streets for the purpose of pleasure or their own private business and not for hire.

The court also referred with approval to the holding in Frisbie vs. City of Columbus, 80 O. S., 686, where an ordinance of the city of Columbus providing a license fee for the privilege of using vehicles upon the streets was held to be inoperative because in conflict with sections 6290 to 6310 of the General Code which had withdrawn certain powers of municipal corporations in reference to regulations affecting motor vehicles.

The court said, however, at page 133, that while municipal corporations did not have general power to impose regulations on the use of motor vehicles upon the streets yet

> "this clearly would not be the case in regard to a proper municipal ordinance under section 3632, General Code, requiring a license for the use of automobiles kept for hire or livery purposes."

The ordinance in the Middletown case was one of general application and the court said

> "for the reasons given this ordinance of the city of Middletown must be held to be illegal and invalid."

In the case of Pegg et al. vs. City of Columbus, supra, the court considered the validity of an ordinance of the city of Columbus which required payment of a fee and the procuring of a license for the operation of vehicles upon the streets. in its application to farmers and gardeners driving upon the streets of the city for the purpose of marketing their own products, and in the syllabus the court said that an ordinance

> "which provides, 'that no vehicle shall be used upon the streets of the city of Columbus, Ohio, unless a license to use such vehicle upon said streets has been obtained in accordance with the provisions of this ordinance by the owner, user or person having control of said vehicles'—is unreasonable as to owners, users or controllers of such vehicles who are non-residents of said city, and who bring the same onto its streets for purposes of pleasure, or on their own private business, but not for hire, and the ordinance as to such persons is invalid and cannot be enforced."

This conclusion was reached by a consideration of the fact that the license fees provided would yield returns largely in excess of the expense incident to the regulations involved, which excess was to be applied, under the ordinance, to the repair of streets. After pointing out that the residents of the city owning vehicles have the free use of the country roads and that certain users of vehicles in the city impose much greater burdens upon the streets than those imposed by the non-residents who only occasionally use the streets, the court said:

> "The ordinance therefore lacks the spirit of reciprocity and imposes a burden upon the farmer, in addition to the one he must bear alone.",

also

> "While it may be within the law for a municipal corporation to require its resident citizens to pay a license fee for their use of the streets, (but we do not so decide), we are not ready to hold that it can bar from its streets non-residents and that it may fine one who has the temerity to disregard the exaction of the fee."

It will thus be observed that neither the Middletown case, 4 O. App. Rep., 130, to which you call attention, nor the authorities therein reviewed and followed, are determinative of the question of power to license vehicles used for hire, involved in your inquiry

Regulations of the character under consideration involve the exercise of the police power which extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property within the state.

It is said in Marmet vs. State, 45 O. S., 63:

> "According to the maxim, sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas, which is of universal application, it must, of course, be within the range of legislative action to define the mode and manner in which every one may so use his own as not to injure others."

An early authority upon the power to license vehicles used for hire, and which has frequently been quoted in later decisions, is City of Cincinnati vs. Bryson, 15 Ohio, 625, wherein the first paragraph of the syllabus is as follows:

> "The city council of Cincinnati has power to license and regulate draymen; and may require a reasonable sum, by way of excise, on the special employment."

In the opinion the court approved the early case of Boston vs. Schaffer, 9 Pick. 419, as follows:

> "The court in that case held, that it was proper that towns, when put to expense by the exercise of particular employments, should be compensated. So in this case, the employment of drays, hacks, omnibuses, and other heavy vehicles, upon their pavements, cause no inconsiderable amount of expenditure to the city in the way of repairing the streets and alleys. It is manifest to every one, that, in a large city, vehicles of this description cause great destruction to the public ways—far greater than the usual ordinary travel of citizens otherwise employed. There is therefore no injustice in exacting a reasonable portion of the expenses which such special occupation cause to the community; and those who enjoy the special privilege, can refuse to bear a reasonable portion of the burden but with an ill grace."

In upholding the ordinance under consideration the court said:

> "The employment gives the drayman or hackman special privileges, which he enjoys to the prejudice of the city, in the injury necessarily done to her streets and pavements, to an amount far greater than any benefit to be derived from the price of the license, excluding the necessary burden of supervision."

The case of Marmet vs. State, 45 O. S. 63, is perhaps the leading case in Ohio upon the question which you have presented. The second branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "The provisions of sections 1, 2, 22, 26 and 35 of the act of April 16, 1883 (80 Ohio L. 129), and section 29 as amended March 25, 1884 (81 Ohio L. 78), which require that in cities of the first grade of the first class each proprietor or lessee of a theater, etc., and all keepers or owners of livery, sale or boarding stables, every dealer in second-hand articles and keepers of junk shops, and the owners of all vehicles used upon the streets of the city, shall pay license as therein provided; that no person shall engage in any such business until a license therefor shall have been obtained, and that any person who shall violate any of the provisions of the act shall be punished by fine, are not in conflict with the constitution. Cincinnati vs. Buckingham, 10 Ohio, 257; Cincinnati vs. Bryson, 15 Ohio, 625; and Baker vs. Cincinnati, 11 Ohio St. 534, approved and followed."

This court quoted with approval from the case of City of Cincinnati vs. Bryson, supra, and in upholding the ordinance imposing a license fee and certain other regulations for the use of certain vehicles upon the streets, in the course of its opinion said:

"Nor is the exercise of power as to vehicles generally an unreasonable exercise of it. The ownership of the streets is in the city, and the duty is imposed to keep them open, in repair and free from nuisance. This involves, in many ways, the expenditure of large amounts of money. It calls for constant vigilance as to all the streets, and for extensive pavements upon the more important ones. These, ordinarily, are laid at the expense of the owners of the abutting property. If neglected they soon wear out, and then, in most cases, another burden is imposed on the same property for repaving. It matters not that a particular property owner has not kept a vehicle, and has not had direct agency in the destruction of the street. If enough pressure is brought to procure the city's order for a new pavement, he must, nolens volens, pay the assessment, and meantime pay the general tax upon his property for the making of repairs to such of the streets as the authorities see fit to repair. Expense of early renewal of the pavement is to be avoided only by careful and constant repairs, made necessary by constant use on the part of those who run vehicles upon the street, and the better the pavement and the more carefully it is kept in repair, the more useful and convenient it becomes for those who use it. They thus receive a special, direct benefit by the original outlay and by the repairs from time to time, and by such use impose burdens upon the property owners and the public at large. * * * Why should not these favored ones pay a small sum toward making good that which they wear out? * * * Then, too, there is force in the point made by counsel that special police regulation is needed upon the streets of large cities to prevent accidents, to protect pedestrians at crossings, to prevent fast and reckless driving, and to prevent blockades."

And by way of conclusion the court said:

"We think it may safely be affirmed, upon both principle and authority, that power to regulate by license, and to compel payment of a reasonable fee, may be maintained where a special benefit is conferred at the expense of the general public, or the business imposes a special burden on the public, or where the business is injurious to, or involves danger to the public."

In Tea Co. vs. Tippecanoe, 85 O. S. 120, Shauck, J. in considering a kindred question approved the holding in Marmet vs. State, supra, in the following language:

"It is not necessary to enlarge upon the subject since the first proposition of the syllabus in Marmet vs. The State, 45 O. S., 63, is an authoritative and exclusive definition of the subjects upon which a license fee may be imposed."

The case of Marmet vs. State has received further approval in the case of Graves vs. Janes, 2 Ohio App. 383, where the court said:

"The constitutionality of laws enacted for the purpose indicated was challenged and the power of the legislature to enact such laws was sustained in the leading case of Marmet vs State, 45 O. S., 63."

As indicative of the modern trend of judicial decisions on the subject, the following is quoted from the case last above cited:

"In recent years new problems of road building and repair have arisen by the prevalent use of motor vehicles and this problem has been increased by the skill of the inventor and the manufacturer in building practical cars of high power and speed. The city is, therfore, confronted with the necessity or expediency of building better roads for the accommodation of this new method of travel, of providing for the increased expense of repairs upon highways by reason of this new use, to preserve the highways in repair for all kinds of travel and of establishing proper police regulation."

At page 389 the court further said:

"It is apparent from the entire act that in addition to identification and registry the privilege of the use of the roads by motor vehicles and of police regulation thereof is contemplated. The imposition of a reasonable charge for reimbursement for road maintenance and repair and for policing the road, in view of the special uses contemplated by the act, is warranted by the general grant of legislative power. This is not a property tax but a privilege tax. * * *

The right of the use of the public ways of the state is in a measure inherent in every citizen, but clearly that right may be regulated to subserve the interests of the public welfare."

While the act under consideration in the foregoing case was held to be unconstitutional as being primarily and essentially a general revenue producing measure, yet the language of the court clearly indicates the recognition of authority to impose proper regulations in the exercise of the police power.

It will thus be concluded from the foregoing authorities that regulations, including a license fee imposed against those using the public ways for hire, when reasonable, are not objectionable and are not in contravention of the constitution.

Your inquiry pertains particularly to the authority of a municipality to exercise the power in question and under the authority delegated to municipalities in section 3632 G. C., hereinabove quoted, it is apparent that the licensing of vehicles used for hire and business purposes may be made the subject of proper municipal action.

In the case of Tea Co. vs. Tippecanoe, 85 O. S., 120 the court, after approving the doctrine in the case of Marmet vs. State, supra, said:

"It is true that the court was there considering a statute to exact the fee by the direct act of the general assembly, but the point is wholly unimportant since it could not confer upon municipalities a power which it does not itself possess."

The fair inference from the foregoing observation of the court as well as the general principle involved leads to the conclusion that within the scope of the legislative authority of the municipality, such action by a municipality is valid for the same reasons as those pointed out in the foregoing cases in support of similar action by the legislature.

In the case of Fremont vs. Keating, 96 O. S., 468, the court considered the validity of an ordinance of the city of Fremont which imposed speed regulations applicable to the streets of the city.

The regulations with respect to the maximum speed limitations provided were not in conflict with the provisions of section 12604 G. C. and the power of the municipality to legislate on the subject, notwithstanding the existence of similar regulations of the state, was upheld as a valid exercise of the constitutional power of the city pursuant to section 3 of Article XVIII. The court said with respect to the ordinance:

> "This section of the ordinance is not in conflict with the provisions of section 12604, General Code, and was passed by the council in the exercise of its constitutional authority, and is therefore a valid and subsisting ordinance of the city of Fremont, Ohio.
> This statute (12604 G. C.) is a police regulation, and, under the section of the constitution above referred to, the municipality has the right to adopt and enforce within its limits police regulations in regard to the same subject-matter, not in conflict with this statute."

In this case section 6307 G. C., purporting to withdraw from municipalities the power to regulate the speed of motor vehicles, was held to be unconstitutional and void.

The foregoing decision is authority for the proposition that cities, either charter or non-charter, may enact local police regulations of the character involved in your inquiry, providing the same are not in conflict with general laws of the same character.

Answering your question specifically I therefore advise that municipalities may license automobiles which are used for hire and business purposes by reasonable and appropriate provisions therefor.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—TEACHER ALLOWED TO TEACH WITHOUT CERTIFICATE —WHO LIABLE.

Where a teacher is allowed to teach without the certificate demanded by statute, with and under full knowledge of the board of education, as well as the clerk of the board, the members of the board of education participating in such illegal act, the clerk of such board and the person receiving misappropriated funds under such illegal employment, are liable for any compensation paid from school funds to such person without certificate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "If in a certain school district of the state of Ohio, with and under full knowledge of the board of education as well as the clerk of the board, a teacher is allowed to teach without the certificate demanded by statutes:
> QUESTION: Is the board of education or clerk, or both, financially liable for compensation paid such teacher?"

Attention is invited to section 7830 G. C., which reads:

> "No person shall be employed or enter upon the performance of his duties as a teacher in any elementary school supported wholly or in part by the state in any village, or rural school district who has not obtained from a board of school examiners having legal jurisdiction a certificate of good moral character; that he or she is qualified to teach orthography, reading, writing, arithmetic, English grammar and composition, geography, history of the United States, physiology, including narcotics, literature and elementary agriculture, and that he or she possess an adequate knowledge of the theory and practice of teaching."

From the language of this section it will be noted that no person shall either be employed or enter upon the performance of the duties of a teacher in the public schools without first having obtained a certificate covering such qualifications. So under such statute both the employer and the person performing the work of teaching are at fault, for the language says—no person "shall enter upon the performance" until proper certificate has been obtained, and where a person has entered on such duties of teaching, and a board of education has employed and compensated such person, the entire transaction is contrary to section 7830 G. C., above quoted.

Your statement of facts says that in this particular case the person is allowed to teach without a certificate, such teaching being done "with and under full knowledge of the board of education as well as the clerk of the board" and that compensation has been paid such person in question as a teacher, though no certificate has been filed as demanded in the statutes to make such employment valid.

The law has wisely provided that certificates are necessary to teach school in order to establish competency to do that particular thing, and since section 7826 G. C. provides for the issuing of temporary certificates by county boards of school examiners, to be valid till opportunity comes for regular examination, there is little excuse for a competent person of good moral character to lack the certificate necessary to valid school employment, even in emergency.

Attention is invited to section 4752 G. C., which provides as follows:

> "A majority of the members of a board of education shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Upon a motion to adopt a resolution authorizing the purchase or sale of real or personal property or to employ a superintendent or teacher, janitor or other employe or to elect or appoint an officer or to pay any debt or claim or to adopt any text book, the clerk of the board shall publicly call the roll of the members composing the board and enter on the records the names of those voting 'aye' and the names of those voting 'no'. If a majority of all of the members of the board vote aye, the president shall declare the motion carried. Upon any motion or resolution, a member of the board may demand the yeas and nays, and thereupon the clerk shall call the roll and record the names of those voting 'aye' and those voting 'no'. Each board may provide for the payment of superintendents, teachers and other employes by payroll, if it deems advisable, but in all cases such roll call and record shall be complied with; provided, the board of education of township school districts may provide for the payment of teachers monthly if deemed advisable upon the presentation, to the clerk, of a certificate from the director of the sub district in which the teacher is employed, stating that the services have been rendered and that the salary is due; the adoption of a resolution authorizing the clerk to issue warrants for the payment of the teacher's salary on presentation of such certificates shall be held as compliance with the above requirements, provided, however, that whenever a board of education of a city school district by a majority vote of its members has adopted an annual appropriation resolution, as hereinafter provided, then such board may, by general resolution, dispense with the adoption of resolutions authorizing the purchase or sale of property, except real estate, the employment, appointment or confirmation of appointment of janitors, truant officers, superintendents of buildings or other employes, except teachers, the payment of debts or claims, the salaries of superintendents, teachers or other employes, if provision therefor is made in such annual appropriation resolution, or approving warrants for the payment of any claim from the school fund, if the expenditures for which such warrant is issued is provided for in such annual appropriation resolution."

The above section is quoted to show the manner and method of properly employing teachers legally and the parts in such transaction performed by both the board and the clerk, and clearly provides that the board shall do the employing and may provide for the payment of employes by payroll or a resolution authorizing the clerk to issue warrants for the payment of teacher's salaries. It is apparent, then, that only the board can employ teachers and the clerk, as such officer, has no authority to do so and the board makes the provision for teachers' salaries and the manner in which the clerk shall pay such teachers from the funds so provided by the board, but every payment by the clerk shall be by authorization of the board itself. It might be said the clerk merely performed a ministerial act for the board when he paid out the funds of the board, but the clerk is more than a ministerial officer in the paying of teachers because of section 7786 G. C., which reads:

> "No clerk of a board shall draw an order on the treasurer for the payment of a teacher for services until the teacher files with him such reports as are required by the superintendent of public instruction and the board of education, a legal certificate of qualification, or a true copy thereof, covering the entire time of the service, and a statement of the branches taught. But orders may be drawn for the payment of special teachers of drawing, painting, penmanship, music, gymnastics, or a foreign language, on presentation of a certificate to the clerk, signed by a majority of the examiners, and the filing with him of a true copy thereof, covering the time for which the special teacher has been employed, and the specialty taught."

Under this section the clerk is not permitted to draw any warrant for the payment of a teacher for services until a legal certificate of qualification is filed with him by the teacher, and such reports as are required.

In an opinion of the Attorney-General, 1913, Vol. II, page 1097, holding that the positions of teacher and clerk of a board of education were incompatible because as clerk such teacher would pass upon his own reports, the Attorney-General said:

> "The clerk is the sole judge of the performance of such duty," referring to the filing of monthly reports by teachers.

Thus the clerk has first knowledge whether the required certificate is on file with him, as required by law; he knows the law on this subject; he has compelled other teachers on his payroll to file proper certificate; it is for him to advise the board who has certificates and who has not, the same being filed with the clerk. The board of education members know this law and that it is mandatory. Section 7786 G. C. clearly says that no clerk shall draw an order for payment of a teacher unless such certificate is on file with him, and the law contemplates that the clerk shall not draw such order even though directed by the board; so if he draws such order, knowing that the person in whose favor the order is drawn has no certificate on file, he violates section 7786 G. C. and becomes a party to the transaction, and if the person has never had a certificate, the case is more flagrant than where a certificate had expired.

Attention is invited to section 7690 G. C., which says:

> "Each board of education shall have the management and control of all the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. * * * Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers. * * *"

Thus whatever salary or compensation paid the person in question acting as a teacher, must have been fixed by the board, as you say that both the board and the clerk have "full knowledge" of her being so engaged as a teacher. You further say that both the board and the clerk have "full knowledge" that the person in question has no certificate and that said person is allowed to teach and was being compensated therefor in the same manner as though a certificate was properly filed. Such being the case, it would indicate that both had a joint knowledge of such dereliction and misfeasance and one is knowingly permitting the other to violate statutes which both know in their official capacity to exist. The board members are the employers and the clerk is the sole judge as to whether the duties demanded in section 7786 G. C., on the part of the teacher, have been complied with before warrant will issue. Neither of the parties seem to have cared to take cognizance of the law which permits granting of temporary certificates, though having knowledge of it. The clerk pays the teacher, knowing there is no certificate on file with him. An employment under these circumstances is a nullity and violation of the law, is not a full official act of the board of education in such official capacity, but is the voluntary act of those in charge of school management and funds.

The liability of members of a board of education for misappropriation of funds has been treated in an opinion of the Attorney-General, 1911-1912, page 272, and the second branch of the sylabus is here quoted.

> "2. The members of the board of education who voted for the move, are guilty of a misfeasance and are subject, under the terms of 286 G. C., to civil action by the proper legal officer for a recovery."

This was a case where a board had paid a newspaper for publishing an annual financial statement, such publication not warranted by law; the third branch of the syllabus exonerates the clerk as a "ministerial officer" and does not apply here, for in this case the clerk has violated the additional section 7786 G. C., which specifically provides that he must not pay out funds until proper certificate of competency is filed with him personally.

And so, while you do not ask for the liability of the person who actually received the misappropriated funds, it is well to consider that angle also, though the bureau is possibly familiar with the decision of the Ohio Supreme Court, which affirmed the constitutionality of sections 274, 284 and 286 et seq. G. C. creating the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, defining its powers, and providing for a short form of pleading. This was the case of The State ex rel Smith, Pros. Atty, vs. Maharry, which came up on error to the court of appeals of Muskingum county and was decided March 5, 1918, reported in 97 O. S. at page 272. The facts in this case were that one Maharry, a contractor, had constructed a bridge for the county and had received $18.30 in excess of the amount due him. For the recovery of this sum the prosecuting attorney of Muskingum county brought an action before a justice of the peace of the county and in the later appeal to the Supreme Court the plaintiff suing for a recovery was assisted by the Attorney-General and special counsel from his office. In this late decision Judge Wanamaker, speaking for the court, says:

> "In the hearing before the court of appeals the court held the statute to be constitutional, but that it did not contemplate or include actions against others than public officers; in short, that no action under this statute (286 G. C.) could be brought against contractors or other private persons or corporations."

And it may be said that such was a general view prior to the time of the decision in 97 O. S. 272, here quoted. Coming to the important feature of the liability of parties who actually receive the misappropriated funds, the court further say:

> "The statute is a most efficient policeman in safeguarding public property and public funds. * * *
> The more serious question arises as to the scope of the statute. It clearly applies to public officers. Does it likewise afford a remedy against the public generally? This is a remedial statute, that is, it furnishes a remedy, and remedial statutes are to be liberally construed in order to effect their manifest purpose.

What is the paramount purpose of these statutes? It is to protect and safeguard public property and public moneys. Finally we have come to regard all public property and all public moneys as a public trust. The public officers in temporary custody of such public trusts are the trustees for the public, and all persons undertaking to deal with and participate in such public trust do so at their peril, that is, the rights of the public, as beneficiaries, are paramount to those of any private person or corporation.

Courts have unanimously held that any person who knows, or ought to know, that he is dealing with a trustee of a private trust, deals at his peril, and is put upon inquiry to ascertain if the action of the trustee is proper and legal. If this is the doctrine as to private trusts, with greater force of reason it should be the prevailing doctrine as to public trusts.

The pertinent part of section 286 is as follows: 'If the report sets forth that any public money has been illegaly expended or that any public money collected has not been accounted for, or that any public property has been converted or misappropriated, within ninety days after the receipt of such certified copy of such report the Attorney-General or such prosecuting attorney * * * shall cause to be instituted, and each of said officers is hereby authorized and required so to do, civil actions in the proper court.'

It should be noted that the statute covers 'any public money * * * illegally expended * * * or any public property * * * converted or misappropriated.'

When either of these two facts appear, that is (a) illegal expenditure of public money or (b) any public property converted or misappropriated, then there is warrant and authority in law for bringing the action under these statutes.

But it is claimed that such actions can only be brought when the 'public money' has been unlawfully paid to some officer, or when the 'public property' has been unlawfully misappropriated by some public officer.

These statutes do not place any such limitation upon actions brought under them. They are manifestly in the interest of conserving 'public money' and 'public property,' and he who wrongfully takes such 'public money' or 'public property' may be, and should be, sued under these statutes.

Private persons may undertake, and it is common knowledge very often do undertake, to dissipate or misappropriate public money and public property, and these statutes impose upon officers of the law the duty to bring suits to recover the same. But how can such actions be made effective unless suit is brought against the person or persons who wrongfully hold the 'public property' or who have wrongfully taken the 'public money?'

Manifestly the wrongful acts contemplated by this statute, that is, the wrongful taking of public money or public property, if limited only to public officers, would emasculate and destroy 95 per cent of the virtue of the statute.

This court does not feel warranted in giving the statute such a narrow and technical construction as would paralyze this important safeguard to the protection of the public trust in more than nine-tenths of the cases arising thereunder.

* * * Public authorities have their option as to which sections they will utilize in protecting public money and public property."

The above quotation at length is here given as showing the view of the Supreme Court on cases of this kind, and such view is now Ohio law as regards a recovery against the person who actually received the misappropriated funds. But it may be said that the cases are not parallel in that the contractor seemingly rendered no service for the funds received, while here the teacher did render service; service that was satisfactory at least to her employers, the school authorities; and possibly to the patrons of the school and so only the court can say as to what the measure of damages in such a case might be. On the other hand however, is the presumption of the law that a person without a certificate to teach is incompetent to do so, for the certificate is the legal measure of competency. The certificate is a license to teach granted on ability shown; until the person can show a certificate, either temporary or otherwise, that person cannot be considered a teacher in the eye of the law, any more than a person studying medicine can be called a doctor before he has complied with the requirements of his profession; or a law student can appear in the Supreme Court without an admission to the bar, showing competency. The law demands a teacher's certificate before pay, yes, even before entry on service that might bring pay, for section 7830 G. C. says:

"No person shall * * * enter upon the performance of his duties as a teacher * * * who has not obtained from a board of examiners having legal jurisdiction, a certificate * * * that he or she possesses an adequate knowledge of the theory and practice of teaching."

Here the person entered "upon the performance" in direct violation of section 7830 G. C. and must have had knowledge of the existence of the same; again, it is a rule of law that persons dealing with public officials are charged with having knowledge of the powers of such officials; all concerned still had the avenue of the temporary certificate provided for in section 7826 G. C. for emergency purposes, but seemingly failed to take advantage of such curative regulation.

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that where a teacher is allowed to teach without the certificate demanded by statute, with and under full knowledge of the board of education as well as the clerk of the board, both the members of the board of education participating in such illegal act and the clerk of such board are liable for any compensation paid from school funds to such person without certificate; and the person receiving funds misappropriated can be sued under section 286 G. C.; that all three of the parties concerned in the illegal act have violated separate sections of the statutes.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT—DUTIES—SALARY PAYABLE IN TWELVE INSTALLMENTS.

A district school superintendent is appointed for the school year and his duties run throughout such school year; salary should be paid in twelve installments rather than nine.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

HON. CALVIN D. SPITLER, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of February 4, 1919, requesting the opinion of the Attorney-General on the following statement of facts:

> "The question has arisen as to whether the district superintendent mentioned in section 7706 of the General Code can draw his pay in nine equal installments annually instead of twelve equal installments. The district superintendent contends that he should be permitted to draw his pay in nine equal installments annually because his work is completed within the nine months.
> I have rendered an opinion to the effect that the services of the said superintendent shall be paid for dependent on the time, and not on the amount of the services rendered; and inasmuch as said superintendent is employed in this county for a year at a time, I have advised that his pay shall be made in twelve equal installments instead of nine."

In a later letter dated February 24, 1919, you say that the employing resolution "simply stated that the superintendent was to be hired for a period of two years at a fixed salary per annum. * * * you are to assume that the compensation is based upon an annual wage hire."

Attention is invited to section 7706 G. C., covering the duties of a district superintendent, which says:

> "* * * He shall report to the county superintendent annually, and oftener if required as to all matters under his supervision. He shall be the chief executive officer of all boards of education within his district and shall attend any and all meetings. He may take part in their deliberations, but shall not vote. Such time as is not spent in actual supervision shall be used for organization and administrative purposes and in the instruction of teachers. At the request of the county board of education he shall teach in teachers' training courses which may be organized in the county school district."

Section 7706-3 G. C. says:

> "The county superintendent shall hold monthly meetings with the district superintendents and advise them on matters of school efficiency. * *"

Section 4741 G. C. says:

> "The first election of any district superintendent shall be for a term not longer than one year, thereafter he may be re-elected in the same district for a period not to exceed three years. Whenever for any cause in any district a superintendent has not been apointed by September first, the county board of education shall appoint such superintendent for a term of one year."

Section 4743 G. C. says:

"The compensation of the district superintendent shall be fixed at the same time that the appointment is made and by the same authority which appoints him; * * *. The salary of any district superintendent shall in no case be less than one thousand dollars per annum. * * *."

Section 7689 G. C. says:

"The school year shall begin on the first day of September of each year, and close on the thirty-first day of August of the succeeding year. * * *."

From the analysis of the above quoted sections, it is apparent that the district superintendent is elected for the school year which ends with the thirty-first day of August of each calendar year and his compensation would not be all due until the end of his term for which elected, that is to say, the end of August of each year. It must be remembered that a portion of the annual salary of district superintendents is paid by the state, and a board of education is but a trustee for that portion furnished by the state; so in reality, if they feel that the salary had been fully earned at the end of nine months and paid the same out in full with three months of the school year yet to run, they would be paying out state funds, aside from their own, in advance of the rendering of service.

But a closer examination of the sections above quoted clearly shows that the district superintendent, as well as the county superintendent, is elected for the year, for he shall be paid so much "per annum," in the language of section 4743 G. C. His duties in his jurisdiction are largely the same as the city or village superintendent in the latter's territory, and no one can well say that a school superintendent has no duties to perform in the period from the last day of school to the thirty-first day of August. And it is idle to say that it is good policy to advance the pay of a public servant before the duties and work are completed, but such would be the case of an annual employe who received an annual pay in nine installments ending three months before the close of the year for which appointed, especially if duties are to be performed in those three months.

Under section 7706 G. C. he is to report to the county superintendent as often "as required," and reports might be wanted during the three months in question. If the district superintendent had received his full pay and it was the expiration of his contract, his whereabouts might not be known and he would not be in readiness for any reports. In the absence of additional compensation he might fail to do any of the things expected of him, in that three months, having been paid in full at the end of nine months.

He is further required to attend "any and all meetings" of boards of education in his district, for he "shall be the chief executive officer of all boards of education in his district" and no one can say that there might not be one or more board meetings in his district in those three months.

The section further provides that the time not spent in "actual supervision"—that is, the session of school—shall be used for "organization and administrative purposes," it being the intent of the law that some steps on organization be taken before the opening of school in September, where the same is possible.

The section further says: "* * * he shall teach in teachers' training courses which may be organized in the county school district."

Thus it is contemplated that he must be in readiness to do this particular thing and this might occur, and does occur, frequently in the period prior to August thirty-first.

Again, the purpose of section 7706-3 G. C. would be defeated if the district superintendent was considered as entirely through with his work at the end of nine months, for the section says: "The county superintendent shall hold monthly meetings with the district superintendents and advise them * * *." Nothing herein indicates that the county superintendent can not hold such meetings in June, July or August; and if such meetings are called at the times indicated, it is the duty of the district superintendents to attend.

As to the question of compensation of district superintendents, section 4743 G. C. says that the same "shall be fixed * * * by the same authority which appoints him." That is to say, the boards of education doing the employing, and the fixing of compensation usually carries with it the times when such compensation is due, and it is not due until service is rendered, and it is for the board to say when services are rendered, for section 7690 G. C. gives boards of education the management and control of public schools and the power "to fix salaries."

The district superintendent is more than a teacher, for while a teacher might have his work completed with the last month of school and is free to go, the same is not true of the district superintendent, for he must take up the threads of detail which are left undone, such as certifying the names of those eligible to high schools, and this can not be done until the term of active school work is ended. Aside from mere supervision during the school session, it must be held that his position was created for the purpose, in part, of having the organization ready for the reopening after September first, and the law did not contemplate a period of three months in which there would be no superintendency, and the "school year" is what is in mind in the employment of a school superintendent and the school year ends on August thirty-first of each calendar year.

From the sections quoted, it seems the clear intent of the law, and the opinion of the Attorney-General is, that a district superintendent is an annual employe, appointed for the school year, ending August thirty-first, and his whole compensation is not earned until that time and hence is not due, and if such annual compensation was paid in monthly installments, there would be twelve payments.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—TRANSFERRED SCHOOL PROPERTY—BECOMES VESTED IN BOARD OF EDUCATION TO WHICH TERRITORY TRANSFERRED.

Legal title to school property located in territory transferred by a county board of education to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district, becomes vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

HON. JOHN P. PHILLIPS, JR., Prosecuting Attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts given by you:

"Under authority and by virtue of section 4696 of the General Code of Ohio, a county board of education transferred a part of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district situate in an adjoining county. All proceedings have been regular and the transfer is now in effect.

Does the legal title to the real estate of the board of education in the district, so transferred, remain in the board of education of the former district or pass to the board of education of the new district?"

It is noted that you say all proceedings in the transfer in question have been regular and made under section 4696 G. C., the section which governs the transfer of territory from one county school district to another county school district or to an exempted village school district. On your statement of facts it is apparent that the village school district to which the territory was transferred is both an exempted village district and is situate in another county. The question is, when does legal title to such territory or property pass, if it passes at all?

The legal title to school property in such territory for school purposes passes at the time that the transfer is regularly made under section 4696 G. C., and showing the intent of the legislature in the matter of legal title to school property transferred, the following language occurs in section 4692 G. C.:

"* * * The legal title to the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred * * *."

It is true that the above section referring to transfers in same county does not refer to a transfer such as you have in mind, but section 4692 G. C. and section 4696 G. C. were enacted at the same time and such necessary language may have been omitted in section 4696 G. C. because the prior section shows the intent as regards legal title to transferred school property.

Bearing directly upon section 4696 G. C., as regards the legal title to school property situate in territory transferred, a former Attoney-General has said in opinion found in Vol. II of Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1912, page 1282:

"Under section 4696 G. C. the funds and indebtedness of the township school district should be equitably apportioned between the township and village district as therein provided.

The statutes do not provide specifically for the disposition of the school building situated in the village but the decisions endorse the reasonability of permitting the newly created district to take title to school property within its limits and which was designed for its use, and such is to be deemed the policy of the law."

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that legal title to school property located in territory transferred by a county board of education to an adjoining exempted village school district, or a city school district, or to another county school district, becomes vested at the time of transfer properly made under section 4696 G. C. and when a map is filed with the auditors in the counties affected by such transfer.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES PROCEED WITH ROAD IMPROVEMENT UNDER SECTIONS 3298-1 TO 3298-15n G. C.—WHEN WHOLE COST OF IMPROVEMENT CAN BE PAID OUT OF ROAD LEVIES—ORDER REQUIRES UNANIMOUS VOTE.

If township trustees, acting by virtue of sections 3298-1 to 3298-15n G. C. (107 O. L. 73), begin proceedings for road improvement by unanimous vote in the absence of the filing of a petition as provided in section 3298-5, such trustees have authority, under section 3298-15, to order that the whole cost of the improvement be paid out of the road levies mentioned in said section 3298-15, provided that such order be made by unanimous vote and be set forth in the resolution declaring the necessity of the improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

HON. CALVIN D. SPITLER, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In a communication dated February 24, 1919, you submit, for the opinion of this department, the following:

> "One of the townships in this county is proceeding to pike a certain road and it will be necessary to issue bonds in order to pay for the improvement. The trustees are piking this road by resolution unanimously agreed upon, and it is their desire that the township pay all the costs and expenses instead of assessing any part thereof against the land owners, inasmuch as all other roads in the township have been piked at the expense of the taxpayers and no one has been assessed on any road improvement.
> I would like your opinion as to whether section 3298-15 will permit them to order the expenses of said improvement to be paid out of the proceeds of any levies for road purposes including the proceeds of the bonds to be issued."

It is assumed that the township trustees are undertaking the proposed improvement by virtue of sections 3298-1 to 3298-15n, G. C., found in 107 O. L., beginning at p. 73. This series of statutes begins with the statement in section 3298-1:

> "The board of trustees of any township shall have power, as hereinafter provided, to construct, reconstruct, resurface or improve any public road or roads, or part thereof, under their jurisdiction," and sets forth a general plan whereby the township trustees may make road improvements. Sections 3298-2 to 3298-4 G. C. have reference to action by the trustees when there is presented to them a petition for the improvement signed by at least fifty-one per cent of land or lot owners, etc.; while section 3298-5 provides that the trustees may by unanimous vote take the necessary steps for the improvement, even though no petition may have been presented. Provision is made that the cost and expense of the improvement may be paid in any one of the methods set forth in section 3298-13, whether the improvement proceedings be initiated by petition or by unanimous vote of the trustees (sections 3298-2 and 3298-5 G. C.)

Said section 3298-13 provides:

> "The compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvements shall be apportioned and paid in any one of the following methods, as set forth in the petition: All or any part thereof shall be assessed against the real estate abutting upon said improvement, or against the real estate situated within one-half mile of either side thereof, or against the real estate situated within one mile of either side thereof, according to the benefits accruing to such real estate; and the balance thereof, if any, shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes upon the grand duplicate of all the taxable property in the township, or from any funds in the township treasury available therefor; when the board of township trustees acts by unanimous vote and without the filing of a petition, the trustees shall set forth in their resolution declaring the necessity for the improvement, the method of apportioning and paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement, which may be any one of the methods above provided."

The next section in point is that which gives rise to your inquiry, section 3298-15, reading as follows:

"The township trustees upon a unanimous vote, may without a petition thereof, order that all the compensation, damages, costs, and expenses of constructing any improvement be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes on the grand duplicate of the township, or out of any road improvement fund available thereof."

Since sections 3298-13 and 3298-15 have a subject-matter in common, namely, payment of the "compensation, damages, costs and expenses" of the improvement, and are parts of one enactment, they must of course be construed together. Section 3298-13 in turn relates back to and provides for the two distinct situations contemplated in sections 3298-2 and 3298-5, respectively: First, an improvement initiated by petition, as to which the cost and expense shall be paid in accordance with such of the methods named in section 3298-13 as shall have been designated in the petition; and second, an improvement initiated upon unanimous vote of the trustees, as to which the cost and expense shall be paid in accordance with such of the methods named in section 3298-13 as shall have been designated by the trustees in their resolution declaring the necessity of the improvement. It is thus seen that, in any event, the first step in the improvement proceedings must embrace a statement of the plan according to which the improvement is to be paid for.

With these considerations in mind, it becomes clear that where the township trustees, acting by virtue of the series of statutes first above noted, initiate the improvement proceedings by unanimous vote, such trustees have authority, by section 3298-15, to order that the whole cost of the improvement be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies on the grand duplicate of the township, or out of any available road improvement fund of the township; provided, however, that such order be made by unanimous vote and be set forth in the resolution declaring the necessity of the improvement.

The foregoing constitute sufficient answer to your inquiry, if your only purpose is to ascertain whether the improvement may be made without assessing part of the cost against abutting or contiguous real estate. However, inasmuch as in the course of your communication you use the expression "whether section 3298-15 will permit them" (the township trustees) "to order the expenses of said improvement paid out of the proceeds of any levies for road purposes including the proceeds of the bonds to be issued," some further observations may not be out of place.

Section 3298-15 provides, in terms, that the trustees upon unanimous vote may "order that all the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of constructing any improvement be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes on the grand duplicate of the township, or out of any road improvement fund available thereof."

Section 3298-15d G. C. provides for a levy on all the taxable property of the township for the purpose, among others, of "improving roads under the provisions of section 3298-1 to 3298-15n inclusive of the General Code"; and section 3298-15e provides that bonds may be issued in anticipation of the collection of such taxes, "in any amount not greater than the aggregate sum necessary to pay the estimated compensation, damages, costs and expenses of such improvement."

While the provisions of section 3298-15 G. C. are very broad in authorizing the trustees to order the cost of the improvement paid out of the proceeds of any levies for road purposes on the grand duplicate of the township, yet in making actual use of the funds which have accrued and which are to accrue from such levies, certain other matters must be borne in mind. For instance, if funds in the treasury or funds coming in to the same through current levies have already been appropriated, or if such funds have been anticipated by bond issues, such funds to the extent thus appropriated or anticipated may not be used for the proposed improvement work (See section 5660, G. C. and Art. XII, section 11, Constitution of Ohio). Furthermore, the provisions of said section 5660 G. C., relative to filing of clerk's certificate of funds on hand before contract may be entered into by the trustees, must not be overlooked.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF FINAL RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS IN MONTGOMERY AND WAYNE COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1919.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of March 6, 1919, enclosing, for my approval, final resolutions on the following improvements:

Cincinnati-Dayton road, I. C. H. No. 19, sec. O-1, Montgomery county.
Cincinnati-Dayton road, I. C. H. No. 19, sec. O-2, Montgomery county.
Cleveland-Wooster road, I. C. H. No. 25, sec. E, Wayne county, type A, B and C.

The certificate of your department accompanying the two resolutions first named, Montgomery county, shows that the appropriations have been made from main market road fund, while the final resolutions themselves do not indicate that the roads to be improved are main market roads. As under section 1221 G. C. the main market road funds may be used only on main market roads, the resolutions are not in proper form unless they show the roads in question are main market roads, if such be the fact.

As to the final resolution covering I. C. H. No. 25, section E, Wayne county, type A, B and C, it is noted that the resolution relating to type C is signed by one of the county commissioners only.

For the reasons indicated, the resolutions are returned without my approval.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF AB TRACT OF TITLE TO LOTS No. 47, 48, 49, 50 AND 51 OF WOOD-BROWN PLACE ADDITION—OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 10, 1919.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You recently submitted for examination abstract of title covering the following premises:

> "Being lots Nos. 47, 48, 49, 50 and 51 of Wood-Brown Place Addition as the same are numbered and delineated upon the recorded plat thereof, of record in plat book 5, page 196, recorder's office, Franklin county, Ohio."

I have carefully examined the abstract which is dated February 18, 1919, and find that it properly evidences title to the premises described, in the name of Annie Warden on said date, and that there are no liens or assessments against said title.

Since the submission of said abstract, certain unsigned deeds for the conveyance of said premises to the state of Ohio were submitted to me and examined and found to be in proper form, and therefore finding the title to said premises to be in said Annie Warden, and finding the proposed deeds in proper form for vesting title in the state when duly executed and delivered, I hereby approve said title as exhibited by said abstract.

Respectfully,

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—SEIZED FOR USE OF VIOLATION OF LIQUOR LAWS—PROPERTY OF OWNER—NOT APPLICABLE TO DRY TERRITORY.

Intoxicating liquors seized for use as evidence of violation of liquor laws remain the property of the owner at the time of seizure and should be released to him upon the final disposition of the case, in the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, such as is now applicable to liquor seized in dry territory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 10, 1919.

HON. CHESTER A. MECK, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your recent communication regarding the disposition of intoxicating liquors seized by inspectors of the state liquor licensing department in the course of an investigation, and now held in the possession of the sheriff, and requesting my written opinion as to the proper disposition of such liquors upon the following statement of facts and inquiry:

> "A raid was made on a building occupied by R. after he was found to be selling intoxicating liquor, without a license, and in this raid, several hundred dollars worth of intoxicating liquor was seized. We filed a charge against R. under section 1261-63 of the General Code in the mayor's court. He pleaded guilty and was fined $300.00 and costs, which he paid. He now claims the intoxicating liquor which was seized, and which is now in the possession of the sheriff, and which the sheriff is holding, under my orders, until the matter can be determined.
> Section 6181 of the General Code provides that a judgment of conviction shall be a bar to suits for the recovery of liquors seized or their value. But this seems to apply to dry territory only. I was of the opinion that the liquor still belongs to R. because of the fact that this is wet territory.
> I would like to have your opinion as to the present ownership of this liquor, and what disposition is to be made of it."

Section 6181 G. C., to which you call attention, is as follows:

> "Liquors seized, as hereinbefore provided, and the vessels containing them, shall not be taken from the custody of the officer by writ of replevin or other process while the proceedings herein provided are pending. Final judgment of conviction is such proceedings is in all cases a bar to all suits for the recovery of liquors seized or their value, or for damages alleged to arise by seizure and detention thereof."

The subdivision of the General Code, of which section 6181 is a part, by its terms is applicable to proceedings arising under local option laws and is not of general application. I am not aware of any similar statute of general application.

It is presumed from your statement that the liquors in question were obtained by inspectors of the liquor licensing department in the course of their inspections to be used as evidence of violation of the liquor laws. You further state that the liquors were obtained in wet territory and therefore I am of the opinion that section 6181 G. C. supra, would not be applicable in the case under consideration.

In Englehardt, Admr. vs. Kumming, 10 O. N. P. (n. s.) 609, the question of disposition of gambling devices was considered and the following is quoted from the syllabus:

1. Where the record of a magistrate shows that at a trial held before him he finds from the evidence that certain slot machines are gambling devices, his action in ordering them destroyed is lawful.

3. The law does not recognize any property rights as existing in gambling devices."

In the opinion the court said:

"The law does not throw its protecting arm about gambling devices and gambling instruments, nor does the law recognize any property rights existing in gambling devices, for the use of such devices and instruments are subversive and destructive of the best interests of society."

Obviously, a different result must be reached with respect to the disposition of intoxicating liquors held as evidence, inasmuch as the property right therein is expressly recognized by our laws and an owner, by bringing himself within the requirements of the law, may make legitimate disposition of such property.

In an opinion of my predecessor, under date of November 20, 1917, and reported in Vol. III of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for that year at page 2113, the disposition of moneys in connection with a raid upon a gambling place was considered and the conclusion reached was as follows:

"In the absence of any statute authorizing the forfeiture of money recovered in a gambling raid, there would be no authority to transfer such money to the police relief fund or to the treasurer of a municipality. Such money may be applied to the payment of the costs and fines assessed against the owner thereof. If any remains after fine and costs are paid, it should be returned to the owner as provided in section 4400 General Code, or to the party from whom taken as provided in section 4399 G. C."

It is my opinion that in the absence of statutory authority therefor, and so long as property rights are recognized in intoxicating liquors, such liquors as may be held for evidence in cases of law violations should be released to the owner when they have served their purpose as evidence, and that such liquors remain the property of the owner at the time of their seizure.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE FOR TRACT OF LAND KNOWN AS "RESERVE" OF WOOD-BROWN PLACE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 12, 1919.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of the abstract of title for the following described real estate situate in the county of Franklin, state of Ohio, and in the township of Clinton:

> "Being a tract of land known as the 'RESERVE' of Wood-Brown Place, more particularly described as follows: Beginning at a point where the western line of the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo right of way intersects the north line of Jerry O. Lisle's land; thence west along said Lisle's north line to a corner; thence north 1,153 feet to a corner; thence east 33.50 feet to said western line of the right of way of the railway aforesaid, thence along said line to the place of beginning, containing 5.029 acres more or less."

I have carefully examined said abstract and find no defects in the title to said real estate as disclosed thereby. No liens or encumbrances are shown against said real estate excepting the taxes for the last half of the year 1918 amounting to $3.03 which are unpaid and constitute a lien; no special assessments are reported as against the premises.

Subject only to the payment of said taxes, I am of the opinion that the abstract discloses a good and sufficient title in fee simple in Ludwig and Joseph Bernhard, on the date of said abstract, February 21, 1919.

The abstract is therefore returned with my approval of the title.

Since my examination of the abstract hereinbefore referred to, there has been submitted to me certain unsigned deeds for the conveyance of said premises to the state of Ohio which upon examination I find to be in proper form, and when duly executed, sufficient for vesting title in fee simple in the state.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TREASURER OF STATE—REGISTERED UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BONDS—WHEN ACCEPTABLE AS COLLATERAL SECURITY FOR STATE DEPOSITS.

Registered United States bonds are acceptable as collateral security for state deposits, if assigned to and registered in the name of the state board of deposit and held in trust for the purpose of securing the deposit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 13, 1919.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have asked me to advise you whether registered United States Government bonds are acceptable under the law as security for the deposit of state funds.

Section 330-3 of the General Code provides, in part, that—

> "The treasurer of state before making such deposits shall require that each and every approved bank or trust company to deposit with him United States Government bonds * * * or municipal bonds of this state at not less than their par value, in an amount equal to the amount of money to be deposited * * *."

In this connection section 330-6 G. C. expresses what is lacking in section 330-3 when it provides that—

"If, on demand or order of the treasurer of state, a state depository fails or refuses to pay over the deposit, or any part thereof made therein as provided by law, the treasurer of state shall sell at public sale any or all of the bonds deposited with him as collateral security for such deposits. * * *" and section 330-7 provides that—

"When a sale of bonds has been made by the treasurer of state, and upon payment to him of the purchase money, the chairman and secretary of the board of deposit shall transfer such bonds whereupon the absolute ownership of the bonds shall pass to the purchasers thereof. * * *"

The general provisions of the statutes of the United States, R. S sections 3704 and 3706; U. S. Compiled Statutes, sections 6819-6821, respectively, are as follows:

"Whenever it is proved to the secretary of the treasury by clear and satisfactory evidence, that any duly registered bond of the United States * * * has been lost or destroyed, so that the same is not held by any person as his own property, the secretary shall issue a duplicate of such registered bond. * * *

The secretary of the treasury is hereby authorized to issue, upon such terms and under such regulations as he may from time to time prescribe, registered bonds in exchange and in lieu of any coupon bonds. * * *"

There is also the provision of section 3705 R. S., section 6820 U. S. Compiled Statutes, to the effect that the owner of a missing registered bond must give bond to indemnify the United States from any claim because of the lost or destroyed bond.

These provisions seem to assume at least that registered bonds issued by the secretary of the treasury are negotiable. However, it is clear that they are not negotiable. I have examined a registered bond of the issue known as the "Third Liberty Loan." By it the United States promises to pay a named person or his registered assignee the amount therein named. Assignment can be made only in the manner specified by the regulations of the treasury department and set forth on the back of the bond. Briefly stated, the requirement is that the assignment must be endorsed on the bond in writing and attested before certain designated officers. When such attested assignment is made the named assignee is entitled to have the bond transferred on the books of the treasury department, and thereafter to receive the installments of interest, and ultimately, if he remains the owner thereof so long, the principal sum.

It is clear that such an instrument is not negotiable. See—

Scollins vs. Rollins, 173 Mass. 275;
Savings Institute vs. National Exchange Bank, 170 N. Y., 58;
Benwell vs. Newark, 55 N. J. Eq., 260.

Not being negotiable, such bond is not an obligation the absolute ownership of which can be transferred to a vendee in the sense in which the absolute ownership of a negotiable instrument would be transferred by delivery or endorsement and delivery. It is not an obligation the mere deposit of which would afford any security of the kind contemplated by section 330-3 G. C.; for such naked deposit would not vest in the treasurer of state or the state board of deposit any special legal property in the obligation represented by the paper writing which might be so deposited. In other words, the mere deposit of a registered bond with the treasurer of state would be worthless as security.

For this reason, and because neither the treasurer of state nor the board of deposit could make to the vendee of such bonds which might be sold under section 330-6, supra, such a title as would amount to "absolute ownership" within the meaning of section 330-7, it might be technically argued that the statute does not contemplate the use of such registered bonds as collateral security for state deposits. But though it is true that such use is not within the precise letter of the statute, it may be deemed to be within its spirit; for by the employment of adequate devices such registered bonds may be so employed as to afford in truth a higher form of real security for the performance of the obligation of the depository than coupon bonds might afford. Section 330-3 does not discriminate among the different kinds of United States bonds which may be "deposited," but on its face makes all such government bonds acceptable as security for state deposits. By giving to this section and to the other sections which have been quoted a liberal interpretation to effectuate the main purpose for which they were enacted, it is possible to say that they contemplate such steps as may enable the use of any kind of United States bonds as security for the purposes therein mentioned. Such steps in the case of registered bonds would be as follows:

Inasmuch as the state board of deposit must make title to possible purchasers (section 330-7), registered bonds intended to be used for the purpose named should be assigned to and registered in the name of the state board of deposit of the state of Ohio. This is all that can appear on the back of the registered bond. There should, however, be executed in duplicate a trust agreement reciting the assignment and transfer o the bonds to the state board of deposit and their custody by the treasurer of state, and declaring that such assignment and transfer of possession is upon trust to secure the faithful performance of the obligation of the assignor (the depository) to the state of Ohio under the state depository law; and that the state board and the treasurer of state are faithfully to account, for all interest received on bonds, to the depository so long as it is not in default, and to execute such proper re-assignment as may enable the depository to secure again the legal title of the bonds upon the complete discharge of its obligations under the depository contract. The trust agreement should also provide that in the event of default the trustee (the board of deposit and the treasurer of state) should have such power of sale as is provided for by section 330-6 G. C., and power to transfer the legal title of the bonds by assignment, in the manner provided by the regulations of the United States treasury department, to the purchasers at such sales in the manner provided by section 330-7 G. C., accounting, however, to the depository for any surplus in the fund realized from the sale of the bonds and the interest collected and unpaid over the amount due the state and the expenses of the sale.

In the event of default under such deposit the proceedings would be such as are indicated by the form of the above outlined trust agreement.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY CHARGE—EXECUTION OF DEFECTIVE DEED BY SAID PARTY —PROCEDURE FOR COUNTY TO FOLLOW TO OBTAIN SAID REAL ESTATE.

On or about December 21, 1918, V. L., a resident of M. county, for an alleged consideration of $1.00, which was not paid, executed and delivered to B. M. G. and others, a deed for real estate of which said V. L. was then the owner. Said deed was attested by but one witness. A few days after the execution and delivery of such defective deed, through the efforts of said B. M. C., said V. L. was placed in the county infirmary of M. county and became a charge therein.

1. The county commissioners of M. county may take possession of said land and sell it under favor of section 2548 G. C.

2. The grantees of said defective deed are proper parties defendant in the proceedings to sell said real estate under sections 2548 and 11255.

3. In such action to sell, in said grantees answer, setting up and relying upon the deed to them, the commissioners may reply alleging fraud, failure of consideration and invalidity of said deed under section 11325 and on the authority of Judy v. Lauderman, 48 O. S., 562.

4. Such reply would not constitute a departure from the cause of action stated in a petition upon section 2548 G. C.

5. In such an action it would not be necessary to have a guardian appointed for said V. L., unless she is under such disabilities defined in sections 10989, 10915 and 11011 G. C., nor would a guardian for V. L. be the proper party plaintiff in said action to sell, as said commissioners under sections 2548 and 11244 G. C. would be proper parties plaintiff therein.

6. The brothers and sisters of said V. L., or their legal representatives, said V. L. never having married, are the necessary parties defendant under section 10947, providing that such persons entitled to the next estate of inheritance shall be parties defendant.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 14, 1919.

HON. WALTER B. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgement is made of the receipt of your letter of February 28, 1919, relative to matters stated in your letter of January 24, 1919, which was as follows:

> "On or before December 21, 1918, V. L., a resident of Monroe county, was the owner of about 26 acres of land in said county. She was living alone at that time on this real estate.
> One of her nieces, B. M. C., and her husband, J. C. C., came here and about the above date procured from V. L. a deed for this land.
> The deed does not bear any date but was acknowledged December 21, 1918. The signature of grantor is attested by only one witness. The consideration for the deed was $1.00 which was not paid, and there was no other consideration moving between the parties.
> V. L. also had a certificate of deposit which the above named persons had endorsed and which was cashed and turned over to an innocent holder at the same time.
> A few days after these transactions, through the efforts of B. M. C., V. L. was placed in the county infirmary of this county, and I would like to have your opinion on the following questions:

1. Can the county commissioners sell this property under section 2548, General Code, as amended in Vol. 102, Ohio Laws, at page 437?

2.(a) Can the county commissioners bring an action under section 2548, General Code, as amended in Vol. 102, Ohio Laws, at page 437, for the sale of the real estate of V. L., and make the grantees in the deed, referred to above, parties and allege that they claim some estate or interest in the land adverse to plaintiff's rights, and bring in the said grantees and if they set up their deed, can the commissioners reply alleging fraud, failure of consideration, and also the invalidity of the deed?

(b) If the commissioners would make the above claim in their reply, do you think the same would be a departure in pleading?

3. Would it be necessary to have a guardian appointed for V. L. and for this guardian to bring the action to set aside the instrument under which B. M. C. and J. C. C. claim the property?

"V. L. never married but had some sisters who have married and since deceased, leaving heirs.

4. If the commissioners can bring the action direct to sell this property, would the heirs of the deceased sisters be necessary parties?

"B. M. C. and J. C. C. are non-residents of this state."

Section 2548 G. C., referred to in your letter, is as follows:

"When a person becomes a county charge, and is possessed, or owner of property, real or personal, or has an interest in remainder, or is in any other manner legally entitled to a gift, legacy, or bequest, whatever, the county commissioners or board of administration or directors of a corporation infirmary shall take possession of all such property or other interests, or as soon thereafter as they deem proper, sell or dispose of it, the real estate to be sold as hereinafter provided. The net proceeds thereof shall be applied in whole or in part, under the special direction of the county commissioners or board of administration as they think best to the maintenance of such person, so long as he remains in the infirmary."

Section 8510 G. C., relative to legal requirements for the execution of deeds, is as follows:

"A deed, mortgage, or lease of any estate or interest in real property, must be signed by the grantor, mortgagor, or lessor in the presence of two witnesses, who shall attest the signing and subscribe their names to the attestation. Such signing also must be acknowledged by the grantor, mortgagor, or lessor before a judge of a court of record in this state, or a clerk thereof, a county auditor, county surveyor, notary public, mayor or justice of the peace, who shall certify the acknowledgement on the same sheet on which the instrument is written or printed, and subscribe his name thereto."

It is noted in the facts stated in the above letter that the deed is attested by but one witness. Preliminary to the consideration of your first question, it is necessary to consider what effect and operation in law is given to the obviously defective deed from V. L. to the grantees.

Section 8510 G. C., supra, requires that the signature to a deed for real estate in Ohio be attested by two witnesses.

In Courcier v. Graham, 1 Ohio 330, in the syllabus, it is held:

"A deed attested by one witness does not convey title."

In that case Judge Hitchcock, in the opinion at page 351, says

> "This deed was defective, inasmuch as it was attested but by one witness. The law was not complied with. It could convey at most only an equitable interest. The plaintiffs were to receive a legal estate, free from incumbrance the title to which should be indisputable. This deed did not convey such an estate."

In Lessee of Patterson vs. Pease et al., 5 Ohio, 191, the same question was raised and decided as follows:

> "Can a deed executed in 1811, attested by one witness, pass the legal title to lands? It is conceded that such a deed is evidence of a contract, that, under proper circumstances, may be enforced in equity; but the legal estate must pass by it, to defeat, in this case, the plaintiff's recovery. The statute requires that the transfer of title to land must be attended with certain forms, among which is the attestation of witnesses. No deed is complete without such attestation nor can such deed, executed since 1808, pass the legal title by its direct operation."

So it appears that the legal title to the land involved herein remained in the alleged grantor.

This being so, upon V. L. becoming a county charge, what are the commissioners rights and duties under said section 2548 with respect to the possession and disposition of the real estate?

It is to be noted that said section embraces all kinds of property, real and personal * * * whatever and provides that said commissioners shall take possession of all such property "or other interests" and is sufficiently comprehensive in its terms to cover all kinds of property, and your first question is, therefore, answered affirmatively.

It also follows that the commissioners may bring an action under section 2548 G. C., as stated in that part of your letter described as 2-a, and you inquire (a) if they may "bring in the grantees and if they set up their deed, can the commissioners reply alleging fraud, failure of consideration," and (b) if a reply setting up such want of consideration would constitute a departure.

The first question stated as "a" involves the consideration of necessary parties and proper parties.

We must turn to section 10946 et seq. G. C. for guidance as to necessary parties in such sale, as section 2552 G. C. provides that for the purpose of such sale the commissioners shall file a proceeding in the common pleas or probate court in the county in which the property is situated, and "the proceedings therefor, sale and confirmation of sale, and execution by such commissioners * * * shall in all respects be conducted as for the sale of real estate by guardians." Sections 10946 et seq. G. C. are the statutes governing such sale of real estate by guardians. Section 10947 G. C. in part reads as follows:

> "Upon such petition being filed (to sell real estate) * * * the court shall order the petitioner to give notice to his ward, to the husband or wife of such ward, and to all persons entitled to the next estate of inheritance in such real estate, who also shall be defendants to the petition, * * *."

Under this section the brothers and sisters, or their legal representatives of said grantor, would be necessary parties. It may be said that the grantees of the deed would be proper parties because a distinction is drawn between necessary and proper parties defendant. As stated in Pates Pleading & Practice, Vol. 1, 96,

> "parties are generally divided into those who are necessary and those who are proper but not necessary."

It would seem that said section 10947 G. C. provides that those persons named therein are necessary parties in such a proceeding to sell. However, sections 11255 and 11262 G. C., of a more general nature, must also be considered as to the matter of proper parties defendant.

Section 11255 is:

> "Any person may be made a defendant who has or claims an interest in the controversy adverse to the plaintiff, or who is necessary party to a complete determination or settlement of a question invested therein."

Section 11262 further provides

> "The court may determine any controversy between parties before it, when it can be done without prejudice to the rights of others, or by saving their rights. When such determination can not be had without the presence of other parties, the court may order them to be brought in, or dismiss the action without prejudice."

The conclusion to which I have come, therefore, is that under section 10947 said brothers and sisters are necessary parties and under sections 11255 and 11262, supra, said grantees are proper parties to the commissioners' action to sell, and on the question of whether the commissioners may plead lack of consideration in their reply, section 11326 G. C. is pertinent.

It is therein provided that the plaintiff "may allege in ordinary and concise language, new matter not inconsistent with the petition, constituting an answer to such new matter."

A similar provision in section 11315 G. C., applicable to the answer of the defendant, was considered in Judy vs. Lauderman, 48 O. S., 562, and results in the conclusion that the want of consideration may be properly pleaded.

The matter of departure, stated in paragraph b, may be tested by the rule announced in Fanning vs. Insurance Company, 37 O. S., 344, the first branch of the syllabus of which is:

> "The plaintiff may, in reply to new matter, set out in the answer by way of defense, allege any new matter not inconsistent with the petition, which in law constitutes an answer to the new matter relied on by the defendant."

In the contemplated action to sell the commissioners rely on the rights conferred upon them by operation of law, as contained in section 2548 et seq. G. C., and their cause of action is not based, in the first instance, on the lack of consideration, but the matter of consideration would be brought into the case by the grantees, setting up their deed, and it seems quite clear to me that the allegation of want or failure of consideration would not be inconsistent with the petition and such a reply would be conformable to the rule state in Fanning vs. Insurance Company, supra. It is suggested however, that as the commissioners would most probably file a cross petition in the case, the further pleading on the part of the commissioners would be in the form of an answer to their cross petition rather than in the form of a reply. Inasmuch as there may be a question of the probate court's jurisdiction to quiet title or entertain the cause of action, which presumably would be stated in the defendant's answer and cross petition, it is suggested that the petition be filed in the court of common pleas.

In paragraph 3 the question of the necessity of appointment of a guardian for the grantor, and the necessity of such guardian bringing an action to set aside the alleged deed, is raised.

Consideration of section 2548 G. C. leads me to conclude that the appointment of a guardian is not contemplated in that section.

In the case of Kissell v. Gram, 4 O. N. P., 333, 7 O. D., 232, it was held that section 2548 did not prevent the appointment of a guardian for an embicile, inmate of the infirmary, and the inference to be drawn from such decision is that such appointment is not necessary if the inmate is not under mental disability.

It might be argued that the provisions of section 2552, making the proceedings in cases of the sale of real estate by guardian, applicable to the action in the present case, would also require the appointment of a guardian, but it must be borne in mind that that which is adopted from section 10947 et seq. G. C., is the proceedings for the sale, etc., and that the appointment of a guardian must necessarily have preceded an action by a guardian to sell his ward's real estate. In section 2552 G. C. it is only the proceedings to sell which are adopted by reference to cases like the one under consideration, and to hold that by such reference a guardian must be appointed, is to read into section 2552 an additional provision. To reach such result it would have to be construed as though it read "all the proceedings prior to the proceedings for sale," etc., would be applicable.

The conclusion that the appointment of a guardian for said grantor is unnecessary in the contemplated case, is based on the assumption that she is not a minor or under mental disability. And if she is not a minor and not under any such disability, the probate judge would have no authority in law to appoint a guardian for her.

Attention is directed to sections 10915, 10989 and 11011 G. C., which sections authorize the appointment of a guardian for minors, idiots, imbiciles, lunatics and drunkards, and it is suggested that the probate judge can make no appointment of a guardian unless such appointment is authorized by law.

It is, therefore, concluded that in the absence of mental disability, the appointment of a guardian would be unnecessary. That the commissioners are the proper parties is borne out by the provision that they "shall file a petition" to sell such real estate.

Section 11244 G. C. in part provides:

> "Officers may sue and be sued in such name as is authorized by law," and it is concluded that the commissioners are the proper parties plaintiff.

It occurs to me that the provisions of section 10947 G. C. answer the question stated in the fourth question of your letter in the affirmative, as said section provides that those having the next estate of inheritance are necessary parties defendant.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

A COOPERATIVE TRADE ASSOCIATION CANNOT BE INCORPORATED FOR PROFIT—ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE CECIL EQUITY EXCHANGE COMPANY DISAPPROVED.

1. A cooperative trade association cannot be incorporated for profit under sections 10185 and 10186 G. C.

2. The "profits" of a cooperative trade association contemplated by section 10186 G. C., are such as arise incidentally from sales, on account of the impracticability if not the impossibility of determining in advance the exact cost and expense of purchasing, holding and distribution, or such as may arise from the sale of surplus stock remaining after the stockholders and customers embraced in the association's plan of distribution have been supplied.

3. Distribution of such profits among the association's stockholders must be in proportion to the "several amounts of their respective purchases."

4. The articles of incorporation of a cooperative trade association should, by appropriate language, confine the authorized purchases to those authorized by sections 10185 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Mar. 14, 1919.

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 6, 1919, with which you transmitted proposed articles of incorporation of The Cecil Equity Exchange Company for my approval, was duly received.

The articles indicate the intention of the incorporators to organize a cooperative trade association. Such associations are governed by sections 10185 and 10186 G. C, which read as follows:

> "Section 10185. An association incorporated for the purpose of purchasing, in quantity, grain, goods, groceries, fruits, vegetables, provisions, or any other articles of merchandise, and distributing them to consumers at the actual cost and expense of purchasing, holding, and distribution, may employ its capital and means in the purchase of such articles of merchandise as it deems best for itself, and in the purchase or lease of such real and personal estate, subject always to the control of the stockholders, as are necessary or convenient for purposes connected with and pertaining to its business.
> "Section 10186. Such association may adopt such plan of distribution of its purchases among the stockholders and others as is most convenient, and best adapted to secure the ends proposed by the organization. Profits arising from the business may be divided among the stockholders from time to time, as it deems expedient, in proportion to the several amounts of their respective purchases."

I am unable to approve the proposed articles under the foregoing sections for the following reasons:

(1) The statutes referred to do not authorize the incorporation of such associations for profit. Under section 10185 G. C. the distribution of the association's authorized purchases must be made "at the actual cost and expense of purchasing, holding and distribution." While it is true that section 10186 G. C. provides that "profits arising from the business" may be divided among the stockholders in proportion to the several amounts of their respective purchases, the "profits" referred to are, in my opinion, such as may arise incidentally from sales, on account of the impracticability if not the impossibility of determining in advance the exact cost and expense of purchasing, holding and distribution, or such also as may arise from the sale of surplus stock remaining after the wants of stockholders and customers, who are embraced in the association's plan of distribution, have been supplied. A contrary interpretation of section 10186 G. C. would render ineffectual the provisions of section 10185 G. C., which contemplates distribution to consumers at actual cost, etc.

(2) The words in the purpose clause of the articles, "farm produce," might include farm products other than grain, fruit and vegetables, or any other articles of merchandise, and if so, the purpose clause is broader than the statute. The proper course will be for the articles to follow the words of the statute in specifying what the company proposes to purchase and distribute.

(3) The words in the purpose clause, "all merchandise such as said company may deem necessary in their operations," while perhaps not subject to serious objection, might, to some minds, be considered broader in scope than the general words of the statute, "or any other articles of merchandise," which follow a specific enumeration of authorized purchases. In redrafting the articles, it will be better to follow the words of the statute in this regard.

(4) The provision in the purpose clause with respect to profits is unauthorized. In providing for the division of profits among the stockholders, the articles should provide for a division in proportion to the "several amounts of their respective purchases."

For the reasons above stated, I am unable to approve the proposed articles of incorporation.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General

CRIMINAL LAW—STATUTES DO NOT AUTHORIZE STATE TO PROSECUTE ERROR TO JUDGMENT OF JUSTICE OF PEACE ACQUITTING DEFENDANT.

The statutes do not authorize the state of Ohio to prosecute error to the judgment of a justice of peace acquitting the defendant in a criminal case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1919.

HON. VICTOR L. MANSFIELD, Prosecuting Attorney, Defiance, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is hereby acknowledged of your letter of March 3, 1919.

In said letter, referring to the case of the State of Ohio v. John Keller, you ask to be advised whether or not the State should carry this case up in the event that the court upon the trial renders a judgment acquitting the defendant.

The case you refer to is a prosecution before a justice of peace for a violation of section 1415 G. C. Such violations, under section 1445 G. C., are punishable by fine only.

Stated generally, the question for consideration is this: Do the statutes of Ohio authorize the state to prosecute error to the judgment of a justice of peace acquitting the defendant in a criminal case? For there can be no appeal or proceedings in error from one judical tribunal to another unless the right thereto is given by statute. In re Januszewski, 196 Fed. 123; 10 O. L. R. 151.

The following are the only sections of the statutes which seem applicable to our inquiry:

"Section 10359. In all cases before a justice of the peace, mayor or police judge, whether tried by jury or the justice, mayor or police judge, either party shall have the right to except to the decisions of the justice, mayor or police judge, upon any matters of law arising in the case.

Section 10360. The party objecting to the decision must except at the time it is made and shall have ten days from the date of overruling the motion for a new trial, if such motion be made, or from the date on which the decision, judgment or sentence of the justice, mayor or police judge is entered to reduce his exceptions to writing and present them to the said court.

Section 13426. In all cases of summary conviction before a justice of the peace of an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment, the defendant shall have the right to except and to have a bill, containing the exceptions, signed by such justice and made part of the record. Such convictions may be reviewed by the common pleas court on proceedings in error and reversed or affirmed.

Section 13751. In a criminal case, including a conviction for a violation of an ordinance of a municipal corporation, the judgment or final order of a court or officer inferior to the common pleas court may be reviewed in the common pleas court; a judgment or final order of a court or officer inferior to the court of appeals may be reviewed in the court of appeals; and a judgment or final order of the court of appeals in convictions of a felony or the common pleas court in conviction of a felony or misdemeanor, and a judgment of the court of appeals involving the constitutionality of a statute; or a judgment in a case of public or great general interest may be reviewed by the supreme court. The supreme court in a criminal cause or proceeding, except when its jurisdiction is original, shall not be required to determine as to the weight of the evidence.

Section 13752. On application, by or on behalf of the accused, to an officer required to make a record or docket entries in such case, and upon tender of the proper fee, such officer shall make and deliver to such accused or his counsel a complete certified transcript of the record, omitting, if so requested, a bill of exceptions therefrom. If the prosecution was before a court or tribunal in which a complete record is not made, such officer shall so make and deliver a certified transcript of the judgment and all entries in the case, and on receipt of a copy of a summons as hereinafter mentioned, shall forward, to the clerk of the court, the original papers in the case.

Section 13764. Whenever a court, superior to the trial court, renders judgment adverse to the state in a criminal case or proceeding, error may be prosecuted to reverse such judgment in the next higher court by either the prosecuting attorney or attorney-general. If such conviction has been for a violation of a municipal ordinance, such proceedings in error may be brought by the solicitor of the municipality. Like proceedings shall be had in such higher court at the hearing of the petition in error as in the review of other criminal cases. The clerk of the court, rendering the judgment sought to be reversed, on application of the prosecuting attorney, attorney-general or solicitor, shall make a transcript of the docket and journal entries in such case, and transmit it with all bills of exceptions, papers and files in the case to such higher court."

Sections 10359 and 10360 G. C., first above quoted, seem on their face to give the state, as well as the defendant, the right to except upon any law point arising in the case. That these sections apply to criminal as well as civil cases, was decided in State v. Ransick, 62 O. S. 283 and in State v. Langenstroeder, 67 O. S. 7. Examination of these cases, however, discloses nothing to show that the court thought any right existed in the State to except. Both cases concerned the preparation and filing of bills of exceptions by defendants who had been convicted in justice court.

Section 13426 G. C., supra, confers upon the defendant only, the right to review a judgment of the justice of peace.

Section 13751 G. C., supra, does not expressly restrict the right of review to the defendant, but practically does so by making a conviction a condition precedent to such right of review. Notice the first words of the section:

> "In a criminal case, including a conviction for a violation of an ordinance of a municipal corporation * * *."

Section 13752 G. C., supra, gives the accused the right to receive a transcript of the record, but gives the State no such right.

Section 13764 G. C., supra, furnishes no authority for the State to prosecute error to the judgment of a justice of the peace acquitting a defendant. The right therein given to the State arises only after a court, superior to the trial court, has rendered judgment adverse to the State. For instance, if the defendant is convicted before a justice of peace and prosecutes error to the court of common pleas, and that court reverses the judgment of the justice of peace, the State, then may by virtue of section 13764 G. C., prosecute, in the court of appeals, error proceedings to reverse the judgment of the common pleas court.

Sections 13681 and 13682 G. C. give the prosecuting attorney or the attorney-general the right to except to a decision of the court and upon the basis of such exceptions to prosecute error to the supreme court, upon leave of that court first obtained. That these sections are inapplicable to the situation before us, appears from several considerations: First, that the history of these sections, as well as their present position in the General Code, demonstrates that they do not refer to exceptions taken to a decision of judgment of a justice of peace or other inferior court. Secondly, that under the Constitution of Ohio, as amended, September 3, 1912, the Supreme Court has neither original nor appellate jurisdiction in cases of misdemeanors, unless such cases involve questions arising under the Constitution of the United States or of this State, or questions of public or great general interest, or in cases the records of which are certified to the Supreme Court by the judges of the Court of Appeals under the provisions of Sec. 6 of Art. IV of the Constitution.

State v. Mansfield, 89 O. S. 20.

Furthermore, such a proceeding would be of no avail so far as subjecting to further trial the defendant mentioned in your letter, because section 13684 G. C. says:

> "Section 13684. The judgment of the court in the case in which the bill was taken shall not be reversed nor affected; but the decision of the supreme court shall determine the law to govern in a similar case."

Section 1406 G. C. (103 O. L. 408), to the effect that:

> "A petition in error to the court of common pleas, court of appeals or supreme court may be prosecuted by the officer or person filing the complaint, or by the owner or user of the property seized, to review the judgment and order of the court in forfeiting the property or in ordering its release. Such petition shall be governed by the provisions governing petitions in error in felony cases tried in the court of common pleas."

refers only to the action for the forfeiture of property seized. See section 1399 G. C.

Section 1261-70 G. C. gives to a defendant, who has been convicted in a court inferior to the common pleas court, of a second offense against the liquor laws, the right to a review of said judgment of conviction. This section is not pertinent here except that it indicates that where the legislature intends to give the right to review the judgment of a justice of peace in a criminal case, it does so expressly, and does not leave such right to a mere inference.

You are therefore advised that the statutes of Ohio do not authorize the state to prosecute error to the judgment of a justice of peace acquitting the defendant in a criminal case.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF PARK COMMISSIONERS OF CLEVELAND METROPOLITAN PARK DISTRICT—NOT COUNTY BOARD—EMPLOYES NOT SUBJECT TO JURISDICTION OF STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The board of park commissioners of the Cleveland Metropolitan Park District is not a county board within the purview of section 2917 G. C., and the prosecuting attorney of the county is not required to furnish legal advice to such board.

Employes of the aforesaid park board are not in the service of the state, nor counties, cities or city school districts thereof within the purview of the civil service laws, and are not subject to the jurisdiction of the state civil service commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1919.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of February 7, 1919, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We attach hereto copy of letter under date of February 4, 1919, just received from the Board of Park Commissioners of the Cleveland Metropolitan Park District; also copy of an opinion rendered the park board by Albert Lawrence, assistant prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county.
> Your advice and opinion is respectfully requested as follows:
> 1. Is the board of park commissioners of the Cleveland Metropolitan Park District a county board?
> 2. If so, is the prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county required to furnish legal counsel and advice to this board under the provisions of section 2917 General Code of Ohio?
> 3. Are the employes of the Cleveland Metropolitan Park board subject to the jurisdiction of the State Civil Service Commission?"

With your communication you also submitted copy of a communication from the Cleveland Metropolitan Park District and copy of an opinion of Hon. Albert Lawrence, assistant prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, with reference to the questions involved in your inquiry.

Considering your questions in the order in which they are stated, attention is invited to the provisions of the act authorizing the establishment of park districts of the character involved in the case under consideration.

The act is found in 107 O. L. page 65, and provides for the creation of park districts for the preservation of natural resources, upon application either by a majority of the resident electors of the proposed district or of the township trustees or city council or other legislative body of any township, village or city within such proposed district; the boundaries of the district are to be designated in the application and may include all or a part only of any county, but shall be so drawn as not to divide any existing township or municipality within such county, and the proposed boundaries as designated in the application are subject to amendment or change by the probate court upon the hearing of the application.

Section 5 of the act provides that upon the approval of the application by the probate judge, he shall enter an order creating the district under the name specified in the application and shall appoint three commissioners who shall constitute the board of park commissioners of the district.

Section 6 provides that the board of park commissioners shall be a body politic and corporate and shall be capable of suing and being sued, and may employ a secretary and such other employes as may be necessary in the performance of the powers conferred by the act.

Section 7 authorizes the board of park commissioners to acquire lands for the conservation of natural resources of the district and create parks, parkways and other reservations and develop and improve the same; such lands may be acquired by gift, devise, purchase or appropriation.

Other sections of the act authorize the board to assess a portion of the cost of such developments and improvements upon abutting property according to the special benefits conferred, and also to borrow money in anticipation of the collection of such special assessments; the board is also authorized to levy taxes not in excess of one-tenth of one mill upon all the taxable property in the district, and may issue notes in anticipation of the collection of such taxes.

From a consideration of the functions of the board of park commissioners, together with the territorial limits and scope of the exercise of such functions, it is to be noted that they are not such as to characterize the activity as of the class of the usual political or govermental functions of the county.

The assistant prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county, Mr. Lawrence, in the copy of his opinion attached to your communication, observes:

> "The character of a public office is determined by the nature of the public service to be performed in connection with the territorial limits of the authority to act in an official capacity. A consideration both of the nature of the public service to be performed by the park board and the territorial limits of the authority to act in an official capacity leads to the inevitable conclusion that members of this board are not county officials within the meaning of section 1 of article 10 of the constitution."

I concur in the foregoing observations of Mr. Lawrence, and in his conclusion that the board of park commissioners may not be considered as county officials.

Section 1 of article X of the Ohio constitution provides:

> "The general assembly shall provide by law for the election of such county and township officers as may be necessary."

Since the members of the board of park commissioners are not to be elected, it is clear that they cannot be held to be county officers without contravening the provisions of the constitution above quoted.

Both your first and second questions involve the inquiry as to whether the park commissioners constitute a "county board," In considering the similar question as to the status of the board of school examiners, my predecessor in an opinion found at page 983 of the 1916 Opinions of the Attorney-General, said:

"The prosecuting attorney is not only made the legal adviser of all county officers, but of all county boards as well. If, then, it be determined that the board of school examiners is a county board, the prosecuting attorney is by the terms of said section 7811 G. C., supra, unquestionably, by virtue of his office, the legal adviser of such board.

While the board in question is specifically designated a 'county board' by the terms of the statute under which the same was created, that, of itself, is not conclusive of the question whether it is a 'county board' in contemplation of section 2917 G. C., supra.

Since the incumbent of an appointive position may not be a county officer, we are confronted with the question: May there be, within the terms of section 2917 G. C., supra, a county board, the members of which are not county officers?

It was held in Opinion No. 336, under date of May 6, 1915, found at page 664, of the opinions of the attorney-general for the year 1915, and also in opinion No. 1615, addressed to Hon. J. W. Watts, prosecuting attorney, under date of May 24, 1916, that the county board of education, since its members were not elected and therefore not county officers, was not a county board within the terms of section 2917 G. C.

This rule, it would seem, must be equally and as clearly applicable to the county board of school examiners. I am, therefore, of the opinion, in answer to your inquiry, that the prosecuting attorney is not, by the provisions of section 2917 G. C., made the legal adviser of the county board of school examiners."

In opinion No. 336, found at page 664 of the Attorney-General's Opinions for the year 1915, referred to in the opinion just quoted, it was said:

"The members of the county board of education are not county officers, and the said board is not a county board within the meaning of the provisions of section 2917 G. C., as limited by the above provision of the constitution, and this section has, therefore, no application to a county board of education. * * *

The authority of the local board, in the case above referred to, to employ counsel other than the prosecuting attorney to represent it, provided it has sufficient funds in its treasury available for such purposes, is clear. * *"

In considering the authority of the board of directors of the county agricultural society to employ counsel, my predecessor in an opinion found at page 1459 of the Reports of the Attorney-General for the year 1913, said:

"Inasmuch as the directors of the county agricultural society are not county officers and said board of directors is not a county board, within the meaning of the provisions of section 2917 G. C., the prosecuting attorney is neither required nor authorized to act as the legal advisor of said directors."

No stronger reasons are perceived for holding the board of park commissioners in question to be county officers or to constitute a county board than might be suggested in the case of the Board of School Examiners, the Board of Education or the Board of Directors of the Agricultural Association of the county, and I am clearly of the opinion that the board of directors of the Cleveland Metropolitan Park District are not to be considered as a county board within the purview of the statute relating to the duties of the prosecuting attorney as adviser of the county officers and boards, which section is as follows:

"Section 2917. The prosecuting attorney shall be the legal adviser of the county commissioners and all other county officers and county boards, and any of them may require of him written opinions or instructions in matter connected with their official duties * * * and no county officer may employ other counsel or attorney at the expense of the county except as provided in section twenty-four hundred and twelve."

It therefore follows that your first and second questions must be answered in the negative.

Your third inquiry involves a consideration of the provisions of the civil service law, and in my opinion is determined by the provisions of sub-division (1) of section 486-1, which is as follows:

"The term 'civil service' includes all offices and positions in the service of the state and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof."

By the provisions of the Act under which the Cleveland Metropolitan Park District was created, the park district is constituted a disti ct sub-division of the state for the exercise of the particular governmental functions provided in the Act, and the board of commissioners of such district is a body politic and corporate with powers to levy taxes and assessments, issue bonds and exercise generally the functions for which the district may be established.

While the employes or appointees of the board of park commissioners may be said to hold positions within the state, or under the general authority of the state, yet in the sense in which the language is used in the civil service laws, such employes are not in the service of the state in the more limited sense in which it is used as in contradistinction with the counties, cities and city school districts, all of which are sub-divisions thereof.

From which observation it is concluded that the enumeration of the particular departments or divisions of the state government as set forth in the first section of the civil service law, supra, as embraced within the civil service is exclusive."

In considering the application of the provisions of the civil service law to employes of a village school district, my predecessor in an opinion found at page 1186 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for the year 1916, quoting that section of the civil service law, said:

" 'The term "civil service" includes all offices and positions of trust or employment in the service of the state and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof.'

This paragrpah specifies what offices, positions and employments are included in the civil service law of the state and it is exclusive. It will be observed that it does not include offices or positions in villages or village school districts. It follows, therefore, that the position held by the janitor named in you inquiry is not within the operation of the civil service law, and said janitor is not entitled to its protection or to hold his position under any of its provisions. * * *"

Again, considering the application of the civil service laws to the county school examiners, this department in an opinion found at page 1301 of the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for 1914, said:

"The civil service act applies only to city school districts. It does not apply to village, rural or county school districts * * *. The county school examiners are not, therefore, subject to the civil service act."

From the foregoing observations it follows that since the officers of the park district are neither county nor state officers, but constitute a distinct agency in the administration of the functions of a special sub-division of the state for particular purposes, I conclude that they are not to be considered as in the service of the state or the counties, cities or city school districts thereof, and, therefore, are not subject to the provisions of the civil service law, nor the jurisdiction of the state civil service commission.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

THE WORDS "TENTATIVE APPORTIONMENT" IN SECTION 1214 G. C. CONSTRUED.

The words "tentative apportionment" as used in section 1214 G. C. contemplate the setting forth in dollars and cents of the amount proposed to be assessed against each tract within the zone or district determined upon for assessment purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1919.

HON. LLOYD S. LEECH, Prosecuting Attorney, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Attention has been given to your letter of March 6, 1919, wherein you submit the following:

> "The question has arisen in connection with the issuing of certain road bonds for this county, as to what construction is to be placed upon that part of section 1214, as found in the Road Laws of Ohio, 1917, which reads as follows:
> 'The county commissioners or township trustees upon whose application the improvement is made, shall cause the county surveyor to make a tentative apportionment of the amount to be paid by the owners of the property specially assessed, which apportionment shall be made according to the benefits accruing to the land so located.'
> The point in question is, what construction is to be placed upon the word 'tentative.' Does it mean that the surveyor is to make his apportionment in the form of a certain per cent of the costs, or does it mean that he is to make the apportionment against each property holder in the tax zone, in dollars and cents, according to his estimate for the entire contract."

Said section 1214 G. C. reads as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, the county shall pay twenty-five per cent of all cost and expense of the improvement. Fifteen per cent of the cost and expense of such improvement, except the cost and expenses of bridges and culverts, shall be apportioned to the township or townships in which such road is located. If the improvement lies in two or more townships the amount to be paid by each shall be apportioned according to the number of lineal feet of the improvement lying in each township. Ten per cent of the cost and expense of the improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement, provided the total amount assessed against any owner of abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation. Provided, however, that the county commissioners by a resolution adopted by unanimous vote may increase the per cent of the cost and expense of the improvement to be specially assessed and may order that all or any part of the cost and expense of the improvement contributed by the county and the interested township or townships be assessed against the property abutting on the improvement; and provided further, that the county commissioners by a resolution passed by unanimous vote may make the assessment of ten per cent or more, as the case may be, of the cost and expense of improvement against the real estate within one-half mile of either side of the improvement or against the real estate within one mile of either side of the improvement. Township trustees shall have the same power to increase the per cent. to be specially assessed and to change the assessment area where the improvement is made on their application. The county commissioners or township trustees upon whose application the improvement is made shall cause the county surveyor to make a tentative apportionment of the amount to be paid by the owners of the property specially assessed which apportionment shall be made according to the benefits accruing to the land so located. The county surveyor shall file such apportionment with the county commissioners or township trustees for the inspection of the persons interested. Before adopting the estimate so made and reported the commissioners or trustees shall publish once each week for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in the county and of general circulation in the township where the improvement is located notice that such estimated assessment has been made and that the same is on file in the offices of the county commissioners or with the township trustees and the date when objection, if any, will be heard to such assessment. If any owner of property affected thereby desires to make objections he may file his objection to said assessment in writing with the county commissioners or township trustees, as the case may be, before the time for said hearing. If any objections are filed the county commissioners or township trustees shall hear the same and act as an equalizing board and they may change said assessments if in their opinion any change is necessary to make the same just and equitable, and such commissioners or trustees shall approve and confirm said assessments as reported by the surveyor or modified by them. Such assessments when so approved and confirmed shall be a lien on the land chargeable therewith."

Doubtless your inquiry arises from the fact that said section contains references both to the percentage of cost and expense of the improvement to be assessed against adjacent lands, and to the share of such percentage to be borne by each parcel of real estate within the tax zone.

However, is not a conclusive answer to your inquiry furnished in the last two sentences of said section 1214? The substance of these two sentences is that the county commissioners or township trustees, as the case may be, shall act as an equalizing board in the hearing of objections to the estimated assessment and shall make changes therein if in their opinion any change is necessary to make the assessment just and equitable, whereupon th assessment as reported by the surveyor or modified by the commissioners or trustees is to be approved and confirmed. Then, "such assessments, when so approved and confirmed, shall be a lien on the land chargeable therewith." Since the idea of a lien embraces the further idea that the amount secured by the lien shall at some stage be definitely known, and since by the last two sentences of section 1214 the amount which the lien is to secure is determined by the "tentative" apportionment or assessment made by the surveyor as finally acted on by the commissioners or trustees, it follows that the words "tentative apportionment" as used in said section mean a statement in dollars and cents of the asesessment proposed to be made against each tract in the tax zone.

If the words "tentative apportionment" are construed as above stated, section 1214 is found to contain a complete plan for making the assessment. First, attention is given to the extent of the tax zone and the percentage of the cost of the improvement to be specially assessed within such zone. These matters having been determined in accordance with said section 1214, the county surveyor on the order of the county commissioners or township trustees upon whose application the improvement was made, proceeds to apportion such percentage to the several tracts in the taxing zone, according to benefits to such tracts. This apportionment—the "tentative apportionment"—is then filed, showing in dollars and cents the amount proposed to be assessed against each tract; whereupon the newspaper notice is given showing that the list of proposed assessments is on file and that on a given date objections, if any, will be heard. Then, if objections are filed, a hearing is had, and the apportionment put into its final form, as compared with its previous "tentative" form; and when it has been approved and confirmed in its final form, the assessments which it sets forth become a lien on the several tracts which it specifies.

Therefore, specific answer to your inquiry may be made by the statement that the words "tentative apportionment" as used in section 1214 contemplate the setting forth in dollars and cents of the amount proposed to be assessed against each tract within the zone or district determined upon for assessment purposes.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SECRETARY OF STATE—AUTOMOBILES—NO AUTHORITY FOR DUPLICATE REGISTRATION CERTIFICATE OR FOR ISSUANCE DUPLICATE SET OF NUMBER PLATES.

There is no authority in section 6298 G. C., relative to registration of automobiles, for the issuance of a duplicate registration certificate or for the issuance of a duplicate set of number plates, and collection of a fee of one dollar therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1919.

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated March 5, 1919, as follows:

> "I would like an opinion from your department regarding the issuing of duplicate sets of automobile licenses to an individual owner.
> We are receiving numerous reques's for duplicate licenses on the ground that the original licenses have been lost and these owners expect us to issue duplicates for the fee of One Dollar."

Section 6298 G. C. (107 O. L., 545) is pertinent to your inquiry and in part is as follows:

> "Upon the filing of such application * * * the secretary of state shall assign to such motor vehicles a distinctive number, and, * * * issue and deliver to the owner in such manner as the secretary of state may select a certificate of registration, in such form as the secretary of state shall prescribe, and two number plates, duplicates of each other, * * *."

This section seems to have had a rather active career, having been amended in 103 O. L., p. 764, supplemented in 104 O. L., 248, and amended in 107 O. L., 545, supra. Said statute, during the course of its various amendments, and in its present form, makes no provision for the issuance of a duplicate certificate of registration.

The only provision relative to a second registration certificate (without reference to section 6301, 103 O. L., 765, referring to manufacturers' applications) that I have been able to find, wherein a fee of one dollar is provided for, is section 6294-1, 105 O. L., 197, which provides that where the owner of a registered motor vehicle has transferred the same, the original owner shall remove the number plates upon such transfer and that should he make application for the registration of another motor vehicle within thirty days after such transfer and cancellation of the original license, he may obtain a new certificate by the payment of a fee of one dollar for the unexpired period of the original registration. Obviously this provision applies only to cases of transferring ownership of a registered motor vehicle.

In view of the terms of the present laws applicable to the registration of such motor vehicles, it is concluded that there is no provision in law authorizing the issuance either of duplicate registration certificates or duplicate number plates.

It is noted that your letter refers to "automobile licenses" but it is assumed that by such terms you mean the registration certificate or number plates provided for in section 6298 G. C., supra.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—LEVY UNDER SECTION 3298-44 G. C. IS OUTSIDE OF TEN MILL LIMITATION OF SECTION 5649-2 G. C.

The levy authorized by section 3298-44 G. C. is outside of the ten mill limitation of section 5649-2 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1919.

HON. CHESTER A. MECK, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of March 5, 1919, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "Section 3298-44 of the General Code, which pertains to my question, reads as follows:
> 'For the purpose of providing by taxation a fund for the payment of the road district's proportion of the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of constructing, reconstructing, resurfacing or improving roads and under the provisions of sections 3298-25 to 3298-53, inclusive, of the General Code, the board of trustees of any township containing a road district is hereby authorized to levy annually a tax not exceeding three mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of said district. Said levy shall be subject only to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. * * *.'
> (1) Does the phrase 'subject only to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force,' refer to the 10 mill or 15 mill limitation?
> The Cass Highway Law provided in section 3298-9, to-wit, section 68 of that law, that before bonds could be issued to improve roads, the question must be submitted to a vote of the people. This seems to have been eliminated in the 1917 Road Law.
> (2) If question number one is answered that 'the 15 mill limitation is meant,' does this section mean that the 10 mill limitation can be exceeded without a vote of the people, as required by section 5649-5b of the General Code? As, for instance, the tax rate of a road district is now 9 mills, and they wish to improve roads under section 3298-44 G. C. (107 O. L.), page 89, by adding 3 mills, can this be done by a district, without a vote of the people?"

In answer to your first question you are advised that the language of section 3298-44 G. C., as quoted by you, refers to the fifteen mill limitation.

In answer to your second question you are advised that the making of the road levy provided for in section 3298-44 G. C. outside of the ten mill limit does not require a vote of the people. In this respect section 3298-44 must be regarded as an exception to the general provisions of the Smith One per cent law.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN DISCHARGE FROM DRAFT MAY BE RECORDED—SECTION 2770 G. C. CONSTRUED.

A discharge from draft under the selective service act may be recorded under section 2770 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 18, 1919.

HON. JOHN L. CABLE, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This is to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated January 31, 1919, as follows:

> "Your predecessor, Mr. McGhee, in opinion No. 1561, November 19, 1918, ruled in part that persons discharged from the draft are not entitled to have their discharge recorded under provisions of section 2770, General Code.
> In this county and no doubt other counties, we have cases where a person was inducted into service by the local draft board, went to camp, was administered the oath, passed the examination at camp, taken before an officer and accepted. After spending several days in camp was rejected on account of physical disability and was reexamined, obtained a discharge from draft and sent home.
> I am enclosing for your convenience a copy of one of these discharges.
> Kindly advise if a person under these circumstances is permitted to have such discharge from draft certificate recorded or not."

Section 2770 G. C., referred to in your letter, is in part as follows:

> "Upon request of any discharged soldier and presentation of his discharge, the county recorder shall record such discharge in a book to be furnished by the county commissioners for that purpose."

You also enclose a copy of one of the discharges to which you refer, which is considered as the basis of this opinion so far as the discharge is concerned. In part it is as follows:

> "Discharge from Draft.
> While this certificate discharges the person named herein from his present obligation to serve in the army, it does not operate as a permanent bar to his subsequent entrance into the military service. Under section 5 of the act of May 18, 1917, all registered persons remain subject to the draft unless exempt or excused as in that act provided. Therefore, this discharge does not excuse the holder from obedience to the process of exemption boards."

I find it impossible to agree with my predecessor in the view described in your letter.

Aside from the fact that our statute should receive a liberal construction to effectuate the purpose of its enactment; and also aside from the fact that, as you state, discharges of the kind above abstracted have been issued both under circumstances that might raise some doubt as to the status of the person to whom issued as a "soldier," and under circumstances leaving little doubt on that score, I am satisfied that the correct view of the status of a drafted man requires the conclusion that such discharges may be recorded.

Under what had formerly been the traditional policy of this country prior to 1917, the status of a soldier was acquired by the consensual act of enlistment; that is to say, when a man enlisted he became at once a soldier, though not immediately assigned to any organized unit of the United States Army. Of course his status as such soldier was subject at all times to be defeated as it were upon a condition subsequent, in that the law and the regulations of the United States Army have always authorized discharges for physical disability or for misconduct prior to the expiration of the enlistment period. In a sense, therefore, acceptance by a recruiting officer at the time of enlistment was never an act of finality having the effect of binding the United States to treat the enlisted man as a soldier for the entire period of enlistment, or binding him to remain in the military service for that period, if he should on subsequent examination, or from causes subsequently arising, be found to be unfitted therefor.

The selective service act of 1917 was a departure from this policy and radically changed the process by which the status of soldier was created in the case of draf ed men. It proceeded upon the great principle long declared in the statutes of the United States and of the several states, that military service is an obligation of all male citizens between certain ages. It authorized the president, as commander-in-chief of the army, to enforce that obligation, by process of selection, upon enough of such citizens to meet the military emergency.

The details and practical workings of the selective service act and the regulations thereunder are well known to all. Suffice it to state, that roughly, though accurately, speaking, the local draft board, acting thereunder, took the place, so to speak, of the recruiting officer under the system of voluntary enlistment; and that the process or ceremony of induction into the military service of the United States served the same purpose as the act of enlistment under the other system. Both functions and acts pertained to the raising of a military force which is a step which precedes its organization in appropriate units into an army.

Thus the following terminology of section 1 of the selective draft act is suggestive:

> "* * * The President * * * is hereby authorized—
> First. Immediately to raise, organize, officer and equip * * * increments of the regular army * * *.
> Third. To raise by draft as herein provided, organize and equip an additional force of five hundred thousand enlisted men."

When acting under the first paragraph, it is obvious that the raising of the increments to the national army by the President would be done through voluntary enlistment; but when the President was acting under the third and other similar paragraphs of the act, he was "raising" a military force or forces by draft.

Without pursuing the analysis further, I reiterate the statement previously made, to the effect that a man inducted into the military service by draft sustains the same relation to that service as a man who has enlisted voluntarily. Indeed, he is called by the Selective Service Act an "enlisted man," though in truth his enlistment was, legally speaking, not voluntary, though doubtless in almost every instance voluntary in truth and in fact.

The phrase "enlisted man" is synonymous with "soldier." So that it is clear that an individual who was inducted into military service through the machinery of the selective draft was just as much a "soldier" as one who entered that service by enlistment; and both were just as much "soldiers" in this sense, prior to their entrance into organized units of the United States army, and even prior to their entrance into training units, as after either of these steps might have been taken.

For these reasons it is clear, I think, that a discharge from the obligations resulting from the operation of the machinery of the selective service act is of the same legal effect as a discharge from a voluntary enlistment. The fact that a discharge of the first type did not prevent the further exercise of the power of the United States to exact military service from the same person is immaterial. The situation of the person so discharged in this respect is analogous to that of a person discharged from a voluntary enlistment with respect to his capacity for re-enlistment.

Your question is, therefore, answered by the statement that a discharge from draft of the kind partially quoted in this opinion is subject to recordation under section 2770 G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATIONS—PURPOSE CLAUSE MANUFACTURE OF NEAR BEER—MAY USE WORDS "PRODUCTS" AND "BREWING" AS PARTS OF CORPORATE NAME.

Companies incorporated for the purpose of manufacturing near beer may use the words "products" and "brewing" as parts of their corporate names.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1919.

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 20, 1919, requesting my opinion as to the right of companies incorporated for the purpose of manufacturing near beer to adopt and use the names of "The Pilsener Products Company" and "The Standard Brewing Company," was duly received.

The question as to what names corporations may or may not adopt is elaborately discussed in the following authorities:

2 Fletcher, Corporations, Sec. 722;
1 Clark & Marshall, Corporations, Sec. 53;
1 Cook, Corporations, Sec. 15;
1 Thompson, Corporations, Sec. 53;
1 Machen, Corporations, Sec. 448.

and the texts are supported by court decisions cited in the foot notes.

In 2 Fletcher, Corporations, Sec. 722, the law is stated as follows:

"Unless it is otherwise provided by statute, corporations may choose any name they see fit, however strange, uncuphonious or unrhetorical it may be, provided it is not one identical with or prejudicially similar to a name which has previously been adopted or is being used by another corporation as its corporate name, etc."

In 1 Clark & Marshall, Corporation, section 53, it is held:

"Unless it is otherwise provided in the statute under which a corporation is formed, or some other statute, the members or officers of a corporation, or proposed corporation, may select any name they may see fit."

And in 1 Cook, Corporations, section 15, the decisions are summed up as follows:

"The corporate name is usually the choice of the incorporators, and is specified in the creating instrument. * * * The statutes frequently limit the choice of the corporate name. A corporation may take the name of an individual or any other name, if the statutes do not forbid."

The only Ohio statutes on this subject applicable to corporations generally, such as companies of the class referred to in your letter, are sections 8625 and 8628 G. C., the former of which provides that corporate names shall begin with the word "The" and end with the word "Company," and the latter of which provides that:

"The secretary of state shall not file or record any articles of incorporation wherein the corporate name is likely to mislead the public as to the nature or purpose of the business its charter authorizes, nor if such name is that of an existing corporation, or so similar thereto as to be likely to mislead the public, unless the written consent of the existing corporation, signed by its president and secretary, be filed with such articles."

As I understand it, you desire my opinion as to whether or not the names above mentioned are likely to mislead the public as to the nature or purpose of the business authorized by the companies' charter, within the meaning of the first clause of section 8628 G. C.

The word "product" was judicially defined in White v. Barney, 43 Fed. Rep. 474, at page 477, as follows:

"The word 'product,' however, imports an article which is made of something, and which, when made, has characteristics which are apparent to the senses."

and in Elder v. State, 162 Ala., 41, 52, the same definition is given, with 6 Words & Phrases, p. 5653, cited in support thereof.

And the word is also defined in Webster's dictionary as follows:

"That which is produced, brought forth, effected, or generated; production; yield, result; effect; fruit; whether of growth or labor, either physical or intellectual; as the product of land; the products of the season; the product of manufacture, of commerce or of art, etc."

The word "brew" is defined by Webster as follows:

"To boil or soothe.

2. To prepare, as a liquor, from malt and hops, or from other materials, by stooping, boiling and fermentation.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

"1. To perform the business of brewing or making beer.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

"The mixture formed by brewing; that which is brewed," and the word "brewing" is also defined by the same authority, viz.:

"The act or process of preparing liquors from malt and hops, etc.
"A mixing together."

While the words "brew" and brewing" are commonly used in connection with the manufacture of intoxicating liquor, yet that is not its only application, for the definitions above quoted clearly show that the word has a broader meaning, and includes products other than intoxicating liquors.

As near beer is an article "made of something," and has "characteristics which are apparent to the senses," and, under the express terms of the companies' charters, it is to be manufactured, and as the manufacture or preparation of an article is included in the definitions of "product" and "brew," and the process of manufacturing is at least kindred to "brewing," I am of the opinion that the corporate names mentioned in your letter are not likely to mislead the public as to the nature or purpose of the business authorized by the charters.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF CLEVELAND HEIGHTS IN SUM OF $25,000.00.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

Re bonds of Cleveland Heights in the amount of $25,000.00 "for the purpose of resurfacing and repairing or improving any existing street or streets, as well as other public highways in the village of Cleveland Heights, Ohio."

GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the transcript of proceedings submitted to me in connection with the above bond issue and decline to approve the same for the reason that the resolution authorizing the issuance of said bonds does not specify the particular street or streets for the improvement or repair of which it is proposed to issue bonds. Said bonds are issued under authority of paragraph 22 of section 3939 G. C. (107 O. L. 553).

The fourth branch of the syllabus in the case of Heffner v. City, 75 O. S. 413, is as follows:

> "A city is not authorized to issue bonds to provide a fund from which to pay its part of the cost of improvements that may from time to time be made, but it may, under section 53 of the Municipal Code of 1902, section 1536-213, Revised Statutes, or under section 2835, Revised Statutes, issue bonds to pay its part of the cost of specific improvements."

Section 2835 of the Revised Statutes, above referred to, is now section 3939, General Code.

In view of the position taken by the supreme court in the above entitled case, I do not believe that a municipality is authorized, under the provisions of section 3939 G. C., to issue bonds for the purpose of improving or repairing streets generally, but that it must, either in a preliminary resolution of necessity or in the ordinance authorizing the issuance of said bonds, specify the particular streets which it intends to improve.

I therefore decline to approve the validity of said bond issue and am returning the transcript of proceedings, with a copy of this opinion, to the clerk of the village of Cleveland Heights.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF OIL AND GAS LEASE TO CARRIE W. OKEY OF TRACT OF LAND IN CITY OF MARIETTA, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your communication of March 20, 1919, addressed to Hon. James M. Cox, Governor of Ohio, and myself, requesting our approval of an oil and gas lease, as follows:

> "Lease to Carrie W. Okey, dated March 18, 1919, and covering a tract of land situate in the county of Washington, township of Marietta, city of Marietta and state of Ohio, and being described as follows:

Situated in the city of Marietta, county of Washington, state of Ohio, section 29, township 2, range 8, being parts of city lots 856 and 872 in square 55, lying north of a line marked at present by a hedge fence extending from a point in the westerly line of lot 839, said square, forty-eight (48) feet from the southeasterly corner thereof to a point in the easterly line of said lot 872, eighty-two (82) feet from the south-easterly corner thereof.

I have carefully examined said lease and the same meets with my approval. I am, therefore, returning same properly endorsed.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE OF LOT No. 83 IN WOOD BROWN PLACE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 25, 1919.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You recently submitted to this department abstract of title covering the following described premises:

"Being known as lot No. eighty-three (83) in Wood Brown Place, being a subdivision made by the manufacturers' committee of the board of trade of the city of Columbus, Ohio, as said lot is numbered and delineated on the recorded plat thereof, in plat book 5, pages 196-7 of the records of Franklin county, Ohio."

With the said abstract you also submitted proposed deeds for the conveyance of said premises to Carl E. Myers and finally to the state of Ohio, which said deeds I find to be in proper form and, when duly executed, stamped and delivered, sufficient for the conveyance of title as now held by Charles T. Anderson and wife.

Upon examination of the abstract dated March 12, 1919, I find the title to the premises described to be in Charles T. Anderson and that there are certain clouds and liens against said premises as follows:

An unsatisfied mortgage in the principal sum of $400.00, dated May 28, 1906, to the Central Ohio Building & Loan Company, and appearing as a matter of record in Vol. 351, p. 160, Mort. Rec.

Taxes for the last half of the year 1918, falling due in June, 1919, in the amount of $6.82, which, however, by the proposed deeds, are to be assumed by the grantees and therefore should be taken into consideration as against the purchase price.

The taxes payable June 20, 1906, in the amount of 39 cents, are not shown to have been paid, but it is considered only such taxes as are carried as current upon the duplicate at this time are to be regarded as constituting a lien, in the absence of any showing of a forfeiture or tax sale on account of delinquent taxes.

I advise that the matter of the $400.00 mortgage of the Central Ohio Building & Loan Company be investigated and the records cleared if same has been satisfied, and that, subject to said mortgage and the taxes falling due in June, 1919, the title to said premises was in said Charles T. Anderson at the date of said abstract, and the proposed deeds, when properly executed, would convey good title to the state of Ohio.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATION NOT FOR PROFIT—PURPOSE CLAUSE DISTRIBUTING ELECTRIC CURRENT TO ITS MEMBERS—LAWFUL—TERMINI OF IMPROVEMENT MUST BE STATED WITH REASONABLE CERTAINTY.

1. The incorporation of a company not for profit for the purpose of distributing electric current to its members, is not prohibited by the laws of Ohio.

2. When a company is incorporated for a purpose which includes the construction of an improvement not to be located at a single place, the termini of the improvement must be stated with reasonable certainty.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 25, 1919

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 12, 1919, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of The Lyms Mutual Light and Power Company, and requesting my opinion as to whether or not the company can be incorporated not for profit, and if so, the amount of the filing fee, was duly received.

1. I am unable to find any statute prohibiting the incorporation of such companies not for profit. On the contrary, the general corporation chapter of the General Code authorizes the incorporation of companies not for profit as well as for profit, subject to the restriction that companies cannot be formed for an unlawful purpose or for carrying on professional business. There is also to be found in the public utilities law legislative recognition of the right to organize electric light companies not for profit. See section 614-2 G. C. which defines an electric light company as any corporation engaged in the business of supplying electricity for light, heat or power purposes to consumers within this state; and section 614-2a G. C., which provides that the term "public utility" means and includes every company defined in section 614-2 G. C., and expressly excepts

> "Such public utilities as operate their utilities not for profit."

2. The amount of the filing fee to be charged and collected by your department for filing the proposed articles of incorporation would be $10.00.

3. The only objection I have to the proposed articles is with respect to the provision which is evidently intended to fix the termini of the proposed improvement, viz.:

> "Constructing, owning, operating and maintaining poles and wires and other equipment for the distribution of said electric current."

This provision is too indefinite. While it is true that the proposed articles confine the distribution of electric current to certain townships, and the poles and wires to be constructed are to be used for such distribution, nevertheless the language employed is broad enough to include poles and wires from power stations and points located without the townships named, and from which the company's supply of electric current may be furnished.

I suggest therefore that the articles be returned with the request that the termini of the improvement be made definite and certain in this respect, and that you ask the attention of the company's attorney to the cases of Callender v. Railroad Co., 11 O. S., 239 et seq.; Warner v. Callender, 20 O. S., 190, and State v. Railroad Co. 82 O. S., 461, 462, all of which will prove helpful in redrafting the articles.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

FEES—VILLAGE MARSHALS—GUARDING, SAFE-KEEPING OR CONDUCTING PERSONS ARRESTED BY THEM IN MAYOR'S OR POLICE COURTS.

Section 4387 G. C. fixes at twenty cents a fee which is legally payable to village marshals for guarding, safe-keeping or conducting into the mayor's or police court any person arrested by them or by their deputies or any other officer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 26, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection & Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—I have your letter of recent date reading as follows:

> "We respectfully request your written opinion upon the following matter:
> We are enclosing you herewith copy of circular No. 347 issued by this department under date of September 19, 1917, and are referring you to section 4387, G. C.
> Question:
> 1. Is the fee of 20 cents mentioned for guarding, safe-keeping or conducting into court legally payable in view of the court decision?
> 2. In view of the language used in this section is this fee fixed at 20 cents?"

Section 4387 G. C., to which you refer, relates to the powers and fees of the marshal of a village, and reads as follows:

> "In the discharge of his proper duties, he shall have like powers, be subject to like responsibilities and shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases, for services actually performed by himself or his deputies and such additional compensation as the council prescribes. In no case shall he receive any fees or compensation for services rendered by any watchman or any other officer, nor shall he receive for guarding, safekeeping or conducting into the mayor's or police court any person arrested by himself or deputies or by any other officer a greater compensation than twenty cents."

The court decision to which your letter refers and which is set out in your said circular, is that rendered in the case of Haserodt v. State, ex rel, 27 O. C. A. 225. The syllabus of the case is as follows:

> "Sections 4581 and 3016, General Code, do not fix definitely the amount of compensation that may be allowed a chief of police for services in state criminal cases in a police court, and no fees may be allowed said officer for such services under favor of these sections."

The sections construed in the Haserodt case read as follows:
Section 4581 G. C.:

> "Other fees in the police court shall be the same in state cases as are allowed in the probate court, or before justices of the peace, in like cases, and in cases for violation of ordinances such fees as the council, by ordinance, prescribes, not exceeding the fees for like services in state cases."

Section 3016 C. C.:

"In felonies, when the defendant is convicted the costs of the justice of the peace, police judge, or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police, constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury and inserted in the judgment of conviction, so that such costs may be paid to the county from the state treasury, in all cases, when recognizances are taken, forfeited and collected and no conviction is had, such costs shall be paid from the county treasury."

In the case of State ex rel. v. Kleinhoffer, 92 O. S. 163, the supreme court considered the right of a humane officer to fees for services rendered by him in cases prosecuted before a justice of the peace, construing section 10076, G. C., which reads:

"For this service and for all services rendered in carrying out the provisions of this chapter, such officers and the officers and agents of the association, shall be allowed and paid such fees as they are allowed for like services in other cases, which must be charged as costs,and reimbursed to the society by the person convicted."

The court said:

"* * * If the pronoun 'they,' as used in section 10076 could be held to refer to officers other than humane officers—for example, to a sheriff or constable—it would be impossible to determine to which it does refer. And it is important and necessary that this be known, for the fees of a sheriff and those of a constable as fixed by sections 2845 and 3347, respectively, are different."

(Italics mine.)

Of the language just quoted, the court in the Haserodt case says (p. 229):

"We think this language of the court is equivalent to a holding that if the section there under condiseration could be construed as providing that humane officers should receive the same fees as a sheriff or constable for like services, it would be inoperative because of its indefiniteness."

(Italics mine.)

Relative to the provision of section 4534, G. C. that " * * * The fees of the chief of police * * * shall be the same as those allowed sheriffs and constables in similar cases," the court, in the Haserodt case, also said (p. 230):

"While it is not contended here that any authority may be found in the provisions of section 4534 for the allowance of the fees in question, yet it is well to observe that this section is subject to the same infirmity and nothing may be claimed for a chief of police under its favor because of the indefiniteness and uncertainty of its provisions in respect to the amount that may be allowed said officer in state cases."

(Italics mine.)

Relative to the fees of the village marshal, the words of section 4387 G. C. are: "* * * and shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases." Under the decisions above cited, that part of section 4387 G. C. which has just been quoted, which undertakes to compensate the village marshal by the payment to him of the same fees as are allowed "sheriffs and constables in similar cases," would seem to be inoperative because of uncertainty.

However, the above noted uncertainty does not prevent the marshal from receiving fees, the payment of which may be authorized with sufficient definiteness by other statutory provisions. In opinion number 823, 1917 Opinions of Attorney General, p. 2207, this department construed section 13436 G. C., which reads:

> "In pursuing or arresting a defendant and in subpoenaing the witnesses in such prosecutions, the constable, chief of police, marshal or other court officer shall have like jurisdiction and power as the sheriff in criminal cases in the common pleas court, and he shall receive like fees therefor."

In said opinion it was held that (page 2210):

> "* * * this provision of the statute, allowing the constable, chief of police, marshal and other court officers, fees in the state cases enumerated in section 13423, G. C. * * * is not open to the objection found by the court in the case of Haserodt v. State, supra, since the provision of section 13436 is definite and certain in that the fees there allowed are to be the same as received by the sheriff in criminal cases in the common pleas court."

The question before us, then, is this: Is the language in section 4387 G. C., to-wit:

> "* * * nor shall he receive for guarding, safe-keeping or conducting into the mayor's or police court any person arrested by himself or deputies or by any other officer a greater compensation than twenty cents." sufficiently definite to authorize the payment to the marshal of a fee of twenty cents for the services mentioned?

The words "nor shall he receive * * * a greater compensation than twenty cents" are susceptible of two meanings. First, that for the service of guarding, safe keeping, etc., the marshal is to get a sliding or variable fee, that is, one ranging from one cent to, but not greater than, twenty cents—the precise amount being fixed by the magistrate preparing the cost bill.

One need only to state this view to demonstrate its legal invalidity. All the objections to uncertainty mentioned by the Haserodt and Kleinhoffer cases, supra, and others besides, are available to render such a view untenable.

The second meaning of which the words "nor shall he receive * * * a greater compensation than twenty cents" is susceptible is this: Section 4387 G. C. shows an intent by the legislature that the marshal shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases, but as to the service of "guarding, safe-keeping or conducting," etc., the marshal is not to have the higher fees given sheriffs and constables for such services, but, on the contrary, said marshal is to receive a compensation therefor no greater than twenty cents. That is, twenty cents and no more.

Whether there is any merit in this second meaning depends, of course, on

(a) whether sheriffs or constables receive any fees for "guarding, safe-keeping or conducting," etc., and if so,

(b) whether such fees are higher than twenty cents.

As to constables, I find no mention in section 3347 G. C. (the statute fixing the fees of constables) of any compensation for the kind of services now being considered. Nor do I know of any other statute giving a fee to the constable for said service.

As to sheriffs, I find in section 2845, G. C. no such words as "for guarding, safe-keeping or conducting * * * any person arrested * * *." I do, however, find in said section this language:

> "Section 2845. * * * jail fees for receiving, discharging or surrendering each prisoner, to be charged but once in each case, fifty cents; taking a prisoner before a judge or court per day, seventy-five cents."

In my judgment, the services just above referred to are the same as, or at least include, the services of "guarding, safe-keeping or conducting into the mayor's or police court any person arrested * * *," mentioned in section 4387, G. C.

When section 2845 G. C. and section 4387 G. C. are read together, the situation is this:

For receiving the prisoner, the sheriff is to get fifty cents; the marshal, no greater compensation than twenty cents. For conducting the prisoner into court, the sheriff is to get seventy-five cents; the marshal, no greater compensation than twenty cents.

Thus read, I see no uncertainty surrounding the payment of the twenty cents referred to in your letter, and specifically referring to your two questions I am of the opinion:

(1) That the fee of twenty cents mentioned in section 4387 G. C. for guarding, safe-keeping or conducting into court, is legally payable.

(2) That the fee mentioned in said section for said service of guarding, safe-keeping or conducting into court is fixed at twenty cents.

Respectfully yours,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BANKS AND BANKING—LIMITATION AS TO AMOUNT ON DEPOSIT BANK CAN HAVE INCLUDING STATE AND INSURANCE FUNDS—NOT MORE THAN PAID IN CAPITAL STOCK—ALSO $300,000.00 LIMITATION FOR INACTIVE DEPOSIT.

No bank may have on deposit at any one time more state funds including insurance funds than its paid in capital stock, and in no event more than $300,000.00 as an inactive deposit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 26, 1919.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You request the advice of this department upon the following question:

> "Section 12 (Section 330-1 G. C.) No bank or trust company shall have on deposit at any one time more than its paid in capital stock and in no event more than three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000) as an inactive deposit.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT.

Section 1065-7, General Code. The treasurer of State is hereby authorized to deposit any portion of the state insurance fund not needed for immediate use, in the same manner and subject to all the provisions of the law with respect to the deposit of state funds by such treasurer: and all interest earned by such portion of the state insurance fund as may be deposited by the state treasurer in pursuance of authority herein given, shall be collected by him and placed to the credit of such fund. (Ohio Laws, Vol. 103, page 76, section 10.)

Does this mean the State Treasurer can only deposit with bank successfully bidding for state and insurance funds, the amount of their capital stock of both funds combined, or can the treasurer deposit the amount of a bank's capital of both state and insurance funds? For illustration, if a bank has a capital of $125,000 and bids for $125,000 of state funds and $215,000 of state insurance funds, and both bids were high enough to class them as successful bidders, would the treasurer of state be permitted, under this law, to deposit with such bank $125,000 of state funds and $125,000 of insurance funds? In such a case it would have a combined deposit of $250,000, although its paid up capital would be put $125,000."

I find that this question has been considered by this department, and that on April 29, 1914, the then Attorney-General advised the then treasurer of state as follows:

"No bank or trust company is authorized to receive such moneys in the event that the same, either alone or in addition to other state moneys on deposit with such bank or trust company, exceeds in amount the limitations of this section. (Referring to section 330-1 G. C.)"

This statement is somewhat ambiguous, but that it was evidently intended as an answer to your question is indicated by the head notes of the opinion as published in the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for the year 1914, Vol. 1., page 594, as follows:

"No bank shall have on deposit in the aggregate more than its paid-in capital stock, and in no event more than $300,000 as an inactive deposit whether the same be made up of state funds or insurance or both."

With this holding I agree. It is specifically provided in section 1065-7 that deposits of the state insurance fund to be made thereunder shall be "subject to all the provisions of law with respect to the deposit of state funds by such treasurer." In other words, the effect of this provision is to constitute the state insurance fund a state fund though of a distinct character for the purpose of the state depository law. The limitation of section 330-1 is applicable to all state funds.

Having regard for the manifest policy embraced in this section, no other conclusion is possible than that reached by my predecessor.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF KENMORE VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT, SUMMIT COUNTY, IN SUM OF $140,000.00—TAX LIMITATION OF DISTRICT DISCUSSED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 26, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

> "Re bonds of Kenmore village school district in the sum of $140,000.00 for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting, furnishing and equipping a grade school building, as follows: 5 bonds of $20,000, 5 bonds of $5,000, and 1 bond of $15,000."

GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Kenmore village school district, Summit county, Ohio, relating to the above bond issue and find the same regular and in compliance with the provisions of the General Code. I am of the opinion that said bonds, drawn in accordance with the bond form submitted, will, upon delivery, constitute valid and binding obligations of said school district.

In approving the legality of this bond issue I deem it my duty to call your attention to the financial statement attached to the transcript which reveals a total tax duplicate in said district of $9,700,960 and a total tax rate of 15.2 mills, of which 7.1 mills is for school purposes. There is nothing in the financial statement in the transcript to indicate that there is included in this levy for school purposes of 7.1 mills any levy for interest or sinking fund for the bond issue under consideration. If a further levy must be made to take care of the interest and create a sinking fund for the payment of the bond issue under consideration, the total school levy will of necessity be considerably increased. The district has a total bonded indebtedness of $326,500, of which amount three issues aggregating $275,000 were doubtless issued by a vote of the electors.

From the showing made in the transcript, a part of which is cited above, I am unable to understand how the school district expects to take care of its bonded indebtedness and at the same time properly operate the schools already in existence. So far, however, as the strict legality of the bond issue is concerned that question is not material in view of the provisions of section 5649-1 of the General Code, which reads as follows:

> "In any taxing district, the taxing authority shall, within the limitations now prescribed by law, levy a tax sufficient to provide for sinking fund and interest purposes, for all bonds issued by any political subdivision, which tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof."

Under the provisions of this section the board of education must first provide for and pay the interest on the principal of the bond issue under consideration before any levy is made for operating expenses of its schools. Therefore, unless the tax duplicate of the district is materially increased, or the tax limitations now in existence are removed, it would seem inevitable that the district will soon be in the position of having school buildings for the accommodation of its pupils but insufficient funds for their operation and maintenance.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—SECTION 5656 G. C. CONSTRUED—WHEN CERTIFICATE OF CLERK MUST BE ON FILE THAT MONEY IS IN TREASURY OR IN PROCESS OF COLLECTION.

A board of education attempted to create an indebtedness without having on file the certificate of its clerk that the money required to discharge the obligation was in the treasury or in the process of collection, HELD

1. If such indebtedness consists of unpaid salaries of teachers, officers and other school employes bonds may be issued under section 5656 G. C. for the purpose of funding the same.

2. If such alleged indebtedness is of some other character such bonds may not be issued.

3. The fact that the rate of taxation in the school district is up to the maximum limit prescribed by law is immaterial as reflecting on the power to issue the bonds.

4. The proposition of issuing bonds under section 5656 G. C. cannot be submitted to a vote of the people.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1919.

HON. S. L. GREGORY, Prosecuting Attorney, Wilmington, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—This will acknowledge the receipt of your letter of March 4, 1919 requesting the opinion of this department as follows:

> "I wish to know whether a school board can, either with or without a vote of the people in a taxing district where the rate of taxation is 15 mills, sell bonds under sections 5656, 5658 G. C., to fund a debt of say $1,700.00 created by the board before and without the certificate of the clerk that the money is in the treasury or in process of collection to liquidate the claim."

Sections 5656, 5658, 5660 and 5661 of the General Code provide, in part, as follows:

> "Section 5656. * * * the board of education of a school district * * *, for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * district * * * is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change, but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time and at the rate of interest that said * * * board * * * deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent per annum, payable annually or semi-annually."
> Section 5658. No indebtedness of a * * * school district * * * shall be funded, refunded or extended unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such * * * school district * * * by a formal resolution of the * * * board of education * * *."
> Section 5660. * * * the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the * * * clerk thereof * * * first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived froml awfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. * * *.
> Section 5661. All contracts, agreements or obligations, and orders or resolutions entered into or passed contrary to the provisions of the next preceding section, shall be void, but such section shall not apply to the contracts authorized to be made by other provisions of law for the employment of teachers, officers, and other school employes of boards of education."

Inasmuch as your question relates to a board of education, it cannot be answered without pointing out that certain obligations incurred by a board of education are valid and binding in law without filing the certificate under section 5660 G. C. If, therefore, the obligations which you have in mind consist of unpaid salaries of teachers, officers and other school employes of the district the answer to your question is in the affirmative. Such contracts of employment were valid in the beginning, and the performance of services under them gave rise to obligations to pay such compensation which became absolute as the periods at which payments were due under the contracts were reached. Such obligations are in all respects "existing, valid and binding obligations of such * * * school district" within the meaning of section 5658 G. C., and may be funded or merged into a loan under section 5656 G. C.

On the other hand, it is equally clear that if the alleged debt which you mention was incurred, for example, in the purchase of supplies or the like, the contrary answer would have to be given. A contract for the purchase of supplies, and in fact any contract other than for the employment of teachers, etc., entered into by a board of education is, as section 5661 G. C. expressly declares, "void" unless section 5660 has been complied with. Therefore, the claim of the person who has furnished such supplies in the face of such void attempt to contract cannot be a "valid and binding obligation" of the district; so that it certainly cannot be the predicate of a borrowing under section 5656 G. C.

You mention the fact that the rate of taxation in the district is fifteen mills. This fact is immaterial. I call your attention to section 5649-1 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "In any taxing district, the taxing authority shall, within the limitations now prescribed by law, levy a tax sufficient to provide for sinking fund and interest purposes for all bonds issued by any political subdivision, which tax shall be placed before and in preference to all other items, and for the full amount thereof."

This section makes it mandatory to levy the necessary amounts for the sinking fund and interest requirements of all bonds which have been issued. The result is that when a taxing district is up to its limit in the matter of levying taxes, and then issues bonds, the sinking fund levies must be made in full at all events and the levies for current needs, such as, in the case of school districts, the tuition fund and the contingent fund, will have to suffer. Thus, neither the power to borrow money nor the power and duty to levy the taxes necessary to pay the interest and principal of the loan is in anywise impaired by the fact that at the time of the borrowing the limitations on tax levies had been reached, if bonds are issued.

It is, of course, possible to imagine a theoretical case in which the entire fifteen mills, which can be levied under the existing law, will be required to care for the interest and sinking fund needs of the subdivisions levying within a given territory. Then a different question would arise and a different answer would have to be given. But such a case so far as I am advised exists nowhere in fact, and I assume that it does not exist in the district described by you.

You also refer to a vote of the people. You are advised that the issuance of bonds under section 5656 G. C. is not in anywise conditioned upon the vote of the people. In fact there is no authority to refer the question of issuing such bonds to such a vote.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE—MAY PURCHASE RUBBER BOOTS FOR CITY EMPLOYES IN SEWER WORK—CITY PROPERTY.

The director of public service of a municipality may, within the five hundred dollar limitation, purchase rubber boots and slicker suits for use at necessary times by employes of the city in underground sewer work, and pay for the same out of the appropriation for the maintenance and repair of sewers—such suits and boots to remain the property of the municipality.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—The receipt is acknowledged of your communication of date February 20, 1919, reading as follows:

> "Under date of February 15, 1919, we received a communication from the city auditor of Lima, Ohio, as follows:
> 'At various times, it becomes necessary for sewer employees to work under ground, which practically destroys their clothing and causes much dissatisfaction.
> Query: Would it be considered a legal expenditure to purchase slicker suit from appropriation for the above use?'
> In view of an opinion of the Attorney-General, which may be found on page 2332 of the annual reports for 1917, syllabus No. 2, we respectfully request your written opinion as follows:
> Question: May rubber boots and slicker suits necessary for work in digging underground sewers, such boots and suits to remain the property of the municipality and be used only in case it is necessary, be legally purchased as equipment, and may the same be legally paid for from public funds?"

In arriving at the answer to your inquiry, several sections of the municipal code may be quoted, as follows:

> "Section 3797. At the beginning of each fiscal half year, the council shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which the corporation has to provide, or from the moneys known to be in the treasury, or estimated to come into it during the six months next ensuing from the collection of taxes and all other sources of revenue. All expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof.
> Section 4211. The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as is otherwise provided in this title. All contracts requiring the authority of council for their execution shall be entered into and conducted to performance by the board or officers having charge of the matters to which they relate, and after authority to make such contracts has been given and the necessary appropriation made, council shall take no further action thereon.
> Section 4324. The director of public service shall manage and supervise all public works and undertakings of the city, except as otherwise provided by law, and shall have all powers and perform all duties conferred upon him by law. He shall keep a record of his proceedings, a copy of which, certified by him, shall be competent evidence in all courts.

Section 4325. The director of public service shall supervise the improvement and repair of streets, avenues, alleys, lands, lanes, squares, wharves, docks, landings, market houses, bridges, viaducts, aqueducts, sidewalks, play grounds, sewers, drains. ditches, culverts, ship channels, streams and water courses, the lighting, sprinkling and cleaning of public places, the construction of public improvements and public works, except those having reference to the department of public safety, or as otherwise provided in this title.

Section 4327. The director of public service may establish such subdepartment as may be necessary and determine the number of superintendents, deputies, inspectors, engineers, harbor masters, clerks, laborers and other persons, necessary for the execution of the work and the performance of the duties of this department.

"Section 4328. The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two or more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

These sections indicate an intent to vest in the director of public service quite a broad discretion in the matter of conducting the ordinary and daily affairs of the city placed within the care of his department. He is, however, limited on the one hand by section 3797 as to the total amount he may expend, and on the other hand by section 4328 as to the amount he may expend under a given contract.

In this connection reference is made to the case of State, ex rel. v. Roebuch, City Auditor, 15 Ohio Dec. 400. The court states the facts as follows:

"On the twelfth day of August last, the relator was employed by the board of public service of the city of Bellefontaine, to perform one day's work and labor with his team in repairing south Main street, at $3.50; such work was performed and by direction of the board of public service an order issued by them therefor, upon said defendant, who refused to issue his order upon the city treasury for said sum, for the sole reason that such repair work had not been let out on contract after competitive bids, to the lowest responsible bidder, as provided for in an ordinance passed by the council of said city, July 12, in its appropriating ordinance, whereby $100 had been appropriated for the repair of said street.

From the undisputed facts in the pleadings and the agreed statement of facts filed herein by the parties, it appears that the city council appropriated $100 of the funds in the city treasury for the work and labor necessary in repairing south Main street, under the direction of the board of public service; that said ordinance further provided that such work and labor should, by said board, be let after competitive bidding to the lowest responsible bidder; that no further order, ordinance or resolution, authorizing the board of public service to make such repairs was passed by council; that the board of public service employed the relator to perform labor with his team in making such necessary repairs at the agreed price of $3.50 for one day's work, but did not make such contract after competitive bidding was had therefor."

After referring to a number of sections of the municipal code, among them those relating to the duties of the board of public service, which were along the same lines as those above quoted, the court continues at page 403 of the opinion:

> "After carefully considering all of the foregoing sections of the municipal code, I construe them in the light of and in connection with Lan. R. L. 3131 (B. 1536-679), which reads:
> 'The directors of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than ($500). When any expenditure * * * exceeds $500 such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of the council, and when so authorized and directed, the directors of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder, etc.'
> I think the council, after having made the appropriation aforesaid and having authorized the board of public service to cause the repairs to be made, that the board had the authority to employ the relator to perform the labor for which he claims pay, without first letting the contract for the same to the lowest bidder, the amount of such repairs being less than $500; that when the council authorizes repairs upon streets to be done and makes an appropriation therefor, if such repairs do not exceed $500, the council is without authority to require the board of public service to let such repairs to the lowest competitive bidder. Such board may do so, and in many cases the interests of the public will be best subserved thereby, but it is within their discretion. In all cases, however, where such repairs will exceed $500, the contract must be so let."

Recurring, then, to your inquiry, it is assumed that the city council at Lima includes in its semi-annual appropriation for the service department an amount for the maintenance and repair of sewers. If this be true, it follows that the work of maintenance and repair is intended to, and should be, done in an efficient manner. From the nature of the work, specially designed clothing is almost a necessity.

By the terms of section 4328, the director of public service may as to any work under the supervision of his department not involving more than five hundred dollars, make any contract for such work; purchase supplies or material for such work; and provide labor for such work, and by the terms of section 4325 such director is charged with the supervision of the repair of sewers, etc., from which it would seem to follow that if in supervising such repair work, the director finds that rubber boots and slicker suits may be an aid in the efficient performance of the work, he may purchase them as supplies, said articles to be purchased within the five hundred dollar limitation, out of the appropriation for maintenance and repair of sewers, and to remain the property of the city for use at times when necessary by employes of the city in underground sewer work.

The opinion thus expressed is not inconsistent with that which you refer to as having been heretofore rendered by this department. The latter opinion concerned this language:

> "The county commissioners may purchase such machinery, tools or other equipment for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highway, bridges and culverts * * * as they may deem necessary. * * *"

It was held that the words "or other equipment" were used correlatively with the words machinery and tools and hence did not authorize the purchase of rubber boots.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—STREET RAILWAY COMMISSIONER OF CITY OF YOUNGSTOWN—NOT A MUNICIPAL OFFICER—CITY SOLICITOR NOT REQUIRED TO ADVISE HIM—SAID COMMISSIONER WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY LEGAL COUNSEL.

1. The street railway commissioner of the city of Youngstown, Ohio, appointed under ordinance No. 2195, by the terms of which he is appointed by the mayor for a term of four years, and subject to removal by the mayor, and performing the supervisory duties defined in said ordinance with reference to the operation of the street railroad referred to in said ordinance, is not a municipal officer entitled to the legal counsel of the city solicitor of said city.

2. The terms of sections 8a and 15d of such ordinance, authorizing said commissioner to employ assistants, accountants, clerks and other employes as he shall deem necessary to enable him to inspect and audit receipts, disbursements and other branches of the work of said street railway company, do not confer authority upon such commissioner to employ legal counsel in the discharge of his duties as such commissioner, except as he may be directed or authorized to do so by the city council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgement is made of your letter dated February 24, 1919, in which you ask for this department's opinion upon the two questions stated in the communication received by you from the legal department of the city of Youngstown, Ohio, a copy of which communication, enclosed with your letter, is as follows:

> "I am writing you for your opinion upon the following matters which I discussed briefly with you a few days ago while in Columbus.
> "On the 16th of January of this year (1919), the Mahoning and Shenango Railway Company started to operate its street car lines under a new franchise known as the 'Service at Cost' plan. Under this franchise there is what is known as a street railway commissioner. He is appointed by the mayor for a term of four years and the appointment confirmed by council. His pay and entire expense of running his office is paid from the receipts of the city lines of the Mahoning & Shenango Railway & Light Company. His duty requires him to report to council from time to time and in so far as he takes instructions from anyone, he takes them from council.
> It is clear that from time to time he will require considerable advice of a legal nature, both as to the interpretation of the rights of the parties under the franchise and as to the legal policies to be pursued in conducting his office.
> We would like a ruling on the following questions:
> Sections 4303 to 4317, General Code, inclusive, enumerate the duties and powers of the city solicitor. Further, the salary of the city solicitor for the duties enumerated in the foregoing sections is fixed by council for the term of his election, and, of course, cannot be increased or decreased during that period. Inasmuch as the legal work of the street railway commissioner is in addition to those enumerated by the statute, the new situation has arisen since his election.

First: Is the street railway commissioner an officer of the city of Youngstown, and, as such, entitled to the services of the legal department of the city?

Second: If he is not such an officer, and therefore, is not included in the duties of the city solicitor but he desires to have the solicitor of the city represent him in his legal matters, would it be legal for the solicitor to receive compensation from the commissioner out of the funds provided by the ordinance for his expense, in addition to the regular salary of the solicitor.

Under separate cover I am sending you a copy of the ordinance granting the franchise with the sections marked which refer to the street railway commissioner, and also those sections marked which refer to specific duties of the city solicitor in connection with the franchise."

An examination of the supplement to Page and Adams code does not indicate the adoption of a charter by the city of Youngstown and it is assumed that it is a non-charter city. The question of the constitutionality of the ordinance referred to in the letter above quoted is not raised in your letter and therefore that question is not considered in this opinion.

In the order above stated, let us consider whether the street railway commissioner of said city is an officer of said city entitled to the services of its legal department.

Sections 4305 and 4309 G. C. are pertinent. Section 4305 G. C. in part is:

"* * * and shall serve the several directors and officers mentioned in this title as legal counsel and attorney."

Section 4409 G. C. is:

"When an officer of the corporation entertains doubts concerning the law in any matter before him in his official capacity, and desires the opinion of the solicitor, he shall clearly state to the solicitor, in writing, the question upon which the opinion is desired, and thereupon it shall be the duty of the solicitor, within a reasonable time, to reply orally or in writing to such inquiry. The right here conferred upon officers shall extend to the council, and to each board provided for in this title."

It may be well to note that section 4308 G. C. provides that the solicitor "shall prosecute or defend, as the case may be, for and on behalf of the corporation, all complaints, suits and controversies in which the corporation is a party, and such other suits" as he shall by resolution or ordinance be directed to prosecute or defend.

It is to be noted that section 4305, supra, may not include all officers of the corporation in defining the officers to whom the city solicitor shall act as legal counsel, but is limited to the officers mentioned in "this title."

Section 4309 G. C. supplements section 4305 by requiring the rendition of an opinion in writing in addition to the provision in section 4305 for the solicitor to act as legal counsel, and the word "officer," as used in section 4309 G. C., evidently has reference to and means the officers mentioned in section 4305 G. C., as it would appear unreasonable to say that the solicitor shall act as legal counsel and attorney for certain officers and then to provide that as to other officers he shall render written opinions on matters before them, in their official capacity, and it is therefore concluded that the word "officer," as used in the first sentence of section 4309 G. C., means an officer as defined in section 4305. That such is the meaning is confirmed by reference to the last sentence of section 4309 G. C., which extends the right to written opinions to the council and each board provided for in said title.

It may be seriously questioned if the street railway commissioner, hereinafter referred to as commissioner, is an officer of the corporation. Section 8 of Franchise Ordinance 2195, above referred to, is pertinent. In part it provides:

> "Immediately upon the taking effect of this ordinance, there shall be designated by the city a street railroad commissioner, whose appointment shall be made by the mayor of the city and shall be confirmed by the city council The city reserves the right at any time, and from time to time, to remove the commissioner so appointed, such removal to be by the mayor. * * * The city street railroad commissioner shall act as an adviser of the council of the city of Youngstown in all matters affecting the interpretation, meaning or application of any of the provisions of this ordinance, and in all action thereunder affecting the quantity or quality of service, or the cost thereof, or the rate of fare."

Section 8a is also pertinent, a part of which is as follows:

> "The commissioner shall receive a salary at a rate to be fixed from time to time by the council. * * *"

It is to be observed that said commissioner holds his position subject to the will or pleasure of the council and that his salary may be "fixed from time to time by the council."

It has been repeatedly held by the courts of this state that one of the tests in differentiating between employes and officers is that an officer is clothed with some part of the sovereign power of the state which is to be exercised in an independent capacity in the interest of the public, as required by law. It is stated in Klein v. Martin, et al, 24 C. C. (n. s.) 88, in defining a county officer,

> "one whose right, authority and duties are created and conferred by law," and in State ex rel. vs. O'Brien, 95 O. S., 172, as determinative of the question whether the county board of revision was a county office.

> "It acts in an independent capacity with authority to do and perform official acts * * *. It is clothed with some part of the sovereign power of the state * * *."

Under section 4411-1 G. C. the health officer is appointed and his salary is fixed by the board of health under provisions similar to those contained in the ordinance above quoted.

In deciding whether such person, so designated as "a health officer" was in law an officer or employe, the court, in State ex rel. Miller vs. Council of Massillon, 2 O. C. D. (n. s.) p. 169, reasoned thus:

> "It will be observed that the duties of the appointee or health officer are not prescribed by statute. He is the servant of the board of health that makes the appointment. He is under their absolute control and direction and in addition to that they fix his salary. His salary is at the will of the board of health. His term of office is at their will; they may terminate it at their pleasure."

The commissioner in the present question holds his office at the will of the city council. The term of his service and his salary are under the absolute control of the council, nor are his duties prescribed by statute, and what was decided in the case above cited, concerning the health officer, is applicable to such commissioner. It is therefore concluded that said commissioner is not a municipal officer. He is certainly not an officer mentioned in the title containing the statutes above referred to, nor is he a member of a board provided for in that title, nor within the provision of the last clause of section 4309, and it is therefore concluded that such commissioner, under section 4305 et seq. G. C., is not an officer of the city of Youngstown and as such entitled under authority of said sections to the services of the legal department of said city. It therefore follows that the answer to your first question is in the negative.

Your second question involves the authority of said commissioner to employ and pay the city solicitor for legal services.

The scope and extent of the commissioner's authority must be found in the ordinance granting his powers and prescribing his duties.

It must be borne in mind that the purpose of said ordinance, as stated in the preamble thereof, is to "secure to the public the largest powers of regulation and control in the interest of public service," and also that the avowed object was to secure "the best street railroad transportation at cost, consistent with the security of the property and the certainty of a fixed return thereof" as also stated in said preamble. The commissioner's duties are defined in section 8, above quoted, and it may be observed that his duties very largely may be described as supervisory. It is provided that he shall keep informed of all matters affecting the cost, quality or quantity, of the services furnished, receipts and disbursements, property and equipment of the company, the rate of fare and the vouchering of expenditures, and it is in the event of his disapproval of methods in such matters that he is empowered to make expenditures, all of which, with the salary of said commissioner, are paid by the company from the proceeds of its business. Sections 8a and 15d are pertinent.

Section 8a in part is that said commissioner:

"shall have the right to employ such assistants, accountants, engineers, clerks and other employes as he shall deem necessary to enable him at all times to inspect and audit all receipts, disbursements, vouchers, prices, payrolls, time cards, shop cards, papers, books, documents and property of the company, and the cost and expense of all such persons so employed by the commissioner, at salaries fixed by him, shall be paid by the Company upon the approval of the commissioner, * * * and shall be deemed a part of the operating cost, provided, further, that the sums authorized to be expended by the Commissioner, under the provisions of section 15D hereof, shall be in addition to the amount in this section authorized to be so expended."

Section 15D is entitled "supervision of extensions" and in part is:

"The commissioner shall have the right to employ such assistance as he shall deem necessary for the purpose of checking over estimates of any betterment * * * and also for the purpose of making estimates * * * of any betterment, extension or permanent improvement proposed by the city. * * * He shall have the right to employ such assistance as he shall deem necessary for the purpose of checking material, labor or other costs in the supplying of such betterments, extensions or permanent improvement, and the company shall pay all bills for such assistance and services approved by the commissioner."

It is to be noted that both in section 8a and 15D, supra, the purposes for which the commissioner shall have the right to employ is indicated to be for purposes of inspection and supervision of the management, quantity and quality, and cost of service, inspection and auditing of receipts and disbursements, and in case of proposed extensions is authorized to employ such assistance for checking over documents, making plans, specifications and checking material, labor and other costs.

In neither of these sections, nor in any other sections of said ordinance, is there express provision for employment of legal counsel and it may be said that the commissioner's power or authority to so employ legal counsel will depend upon the clear implication of such power in said ordinance.

In this connection the purpose of the ordinance is to be considered as well as the character of the powers and functions prescribed therein for the commissioner.

In view of the court's characterization of such a position in the Massillon case, it appears that said commissioner acts as a special agent or employe of the city council in his supervision and control of said street railway company. In this connection it is to be observed that said commissioner is required to report and is subject to the control of the city which, as stated in section 6 of said ordinance, "reserves to itself the entire control of the service, including the right to fix schedules and routes," etc., and that said service shall be rendered "under such rules and regulations as the city may from time to time require."

In view of the decisions of the court applicable to such employment, and in the absence of express provision in said ordinance, authorizing said commissioner to employ legal counsel, considered with the provisions of sections 4305 and 4309 G. C., supra, which amply provide for legal services to the officers of the city, including the city council to whom said commissioner reports, and subject to whose pleasure he holds his office, it is concluded that such commissioner is not in law authorized or empowered to employ legal counsel without authority or direction from the city council, and the answer to your second inquiry is, therefore, also in the negative.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CANAL LANDS—RELEASE OF CINCINNATI FROM PAYING RENT FOR USE OF SAID LANDS.

The legislature having heretofore authorized the leasing by the state of certain state canal lands to the city of Cincinnati (102 O. L. 168, 106 O. L. 293), and said leases having been entered into, providing, among other things, for a semi-annual payment of rent by the city to the state:

Held, that there is no constitutional objection to the enactment by the legislature of a bill providing that said city be released from the payment of said rents during a limited period to begin hereafter and that in all other respects said leases shall remain in force as originally executed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1919.

HON. HARRY L. FEDERMAN, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of March 11, 1919, wherein you request my written opinion as to the validity of house bill No. 178. The title to this bill reads:

> "A bill releasing the city of Cincinnati from payment of rental provided for in leases of part of the Miami and Erie canal executed under authority of the act passed May 15, 1911 (102 Ohio Laws 168), and the act passed May 17, 1915 (106 Ohio Laws 293), until such time as it commences operation of the facilities and utilities authorized to be constructed upon, in, under and above the same."

Section 1 of said bill reads:

> "That for and during the period between October 1, 1912, and the time when the city of Cincinnati shall commence the actual operation of the public facilities and utilities which it is authorized to construct in, upon, under and above that portion of the Miami and Erie canal leased by the state of Ohio to the city of Cincinnati by the lease dated August 29, 1912, executed under authority of the act passed May 15, 1911(102 Ohio Laws 168), and by the amended lease dated January 6, 1917, executed under authority of the act passed May 17, 1915 (106 Ohio Laws 293), the city of Cincinnati is hereby released from all its covenants, obligations and agreements for the payment of rent and for and during said period no rent or installment thereof shall be or become due or payable from said city to said state, all provisions in said lease and amended lease, and in said acts of May 15, 1911, and May 17, 1915, to the contrary notwithstanding."

The bill in its printed form is accompanied by a statement, which reads in part:

> "Whereas, By virtue of the act of the General Assembly of the state of Ohio, passed May 15, 1911 (102 Ohio Laws 168), the state of Ohio and the city of Cincinnati entered into an agreement of lease dated August 29, 1912, and pursuant to the act passed May 17, 1915 (106 Ohio Laws 293), said state and city entered into an amended lease dated January 6, 1917, by the terms of which said lease and amended lease, the state of Ohio granted, leased and demised to the said city of Cincinnati for the term of ninety-nine years from the first day of October, 1912, renewable forever, that part of the Miami and Erie canal in said city beginning at a point three hundred feet north of Mitchell avenue, and extending down through said city to the east side of Broadway, as in said lease and amended lease more fully described, for public street or boulevard, and for sewerage conduit, and if desired, for subway purposes, at an annual rental of thirty-two thousand dollars, payable in semi-annual installments on the first days of April and October in each and every year, the first payment of said rental to become due on October 1, 1912, less one-half of the expenses and compensation of the arbitrators incident to the fixing of the valuation of said canal property as in said acts provided; and
> Whereas, The city has regularly paid to this date the installments of rent stipulated in said lease and amended lease; and

Whereas, Said city at the dates of said lease and amended lease contemplated the early occupancy and utilization of said leased portion of said canal for the purpose authorized in said acts, but by reason of causes beyond its control has been delayed in carrying out its plans for constructing upon, in, under and above said canal property the public facilities and utilities authorized in said acts."

I am informed that the bill has been or will be amended so as to provide that the beginning of the period during which the city will be released from rental payments shall be a day hereafter, instead of October 1, 1912, as set forth in the original bill, thus making it unnecessary to consider the question whether the legislature might provide for the return to the city of the moneys already paid under the lease. The bill will therefore be considered on the basis of its having been amended as above stated.

Section 1 of Article II of the constitution, reads:

"Section 1. The legislative power of the state shall be vested in a general assembly consisting of a senate and house of representatives * * *." (The remainder of the section relates to initiative and referendum).

This broad provision vests in the legislature all legislative power except insofar as said power may be limited by other provisions of the state constitution, the federal constitution and the treaties and acts of congress adopted and enacted under it (see 12 Corpus Juris 805).

Or, as expressed by Judge Gholson in Baker vs. Cincinnati, 11 O. S., at page 542 of the opinion:

"The first section of the second article of the constitution declares that 'the legislative power of this state shall be vested in a general assembly, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives.' The same provision, in very nearly the same words, is found in the former constitution. It will be observed, that the provision is not, that the legislative power, as conferred in the constitution, shall be vested in the general assembly, but that the legislative power of this state shall be vested. That includes all legislative power which the object and purposes of the state government may require, and we must look to other provisions of the constitution to see how far, and to what extent, legislative discretion is qualified or restricted."

No provision is found in the constitution which in any wise prohibits the legislature from enacting a law releasing a person or municipality from an obligation to the state. It will hardly be claimed that in the present instance the bill comes within the prohibition of section 28 of article II forbidding the enactment of laws impairing the obligation of contracts; for the bill does not in the least affect the contract between the state and the city—it merely provides for the waiver by the state itself of a right which it has under the contract. In other words, the state remits the rents for a certain period, in all other respects the contract stands as originally entered into.

On the other hand, if we look at the matter of the leases heretofore entered into as being on a par with a similar transaction between private individuals, no reason is apparent for thinking the bill objectionable on constitutional grounds.

In the case of Railroad Co. vs. State, 85 O. S. 251, the first syllabus reads:

"In conducting transactions with respect to its lands the state acts in a proprietary, and not in a sovereign capacity, and being amenable to all the rules of justice which it prescribes for the conduct of its citizens, it will not be permitted to revoke a grant of lands made upon a valuable consideration which it retains."

In the same case, it is said in the course of the opinion at page 295:

"Unquestionably the general assembly represented the state in this matter, and in both the original act and in the subsequent act, under wheih the plaintiffs in error expended money for establishing the boundaries of the premises conveyed, its concurrence and acquiescence with the knowledge clearly imputed to it serves to bind the state, for in this respect the state was acting, not in its capacity as a sovereign, but in its proprietary capacity as the owner of lands, and when it acts in that capacity it is bound by the same rules as those which it applies to its citizens. Nothing presented casts doubt upon the correctness of the view thus comprehensively stated by Ranney, J., in State vs. Ext. of Buttles, 3 Ohio St., 309: 'We agree when she (the state) appears as a suitor in her courts to enforce her rights of property, she comes shorn of her attributes of sovereignty, and as a body politic, capable of contracting, suing, and holding property, is subject to those rules of justice and right, which in her sovereign character, she has prescribed for the government of her people.' "

Certainly the state, acting through the legislature, is as much at liberty as is one of its citizens, to waive performance of a given stipulation in a contract. In other words, if in the present instance, the legislature desires to say that the state shall forego for a given period the rents accruing under the lease, no reason is perceived why it may not legally do so.

I am. therefore, of the opinion that the bill amended as above states is not open to objection on constitutional grounds. However, I suggest that if the bill is to be enacted, provision be made therein to the effect that the general assembly may require the city at any time to resume its rental payments as in said lease provided, and that nothing contained in the act shall be construed as in any manner waiving, affecting or impairing any claim or claims which the state of Ohio has or may have against any person, firm or corporation arising out of leases heretofore executed, or otherwise, in connection with said canal lands.

The policy involved in the proposed enactment is of course solely for the legislature to pass upon; hence this opinion is confined to the constitutional features of the bill.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COMPLIANCE WITH SECTION 4556 G. C.—FEES OF MAYORS IN ORDINANCES CASE SHALL BE SAME AS FEES OF JUSTICE OF PEACE IN SIMILAR CASES—SUFFICIENT COMPLIANCE.

An ordinance of a municipal council, which provides that the fees of the mayor in ordinance cases shall be the same as the fees of a justice of the peace in similar cases, sufficiently complies with section 4556 G. C., requiring said fees to be "fixed" by ordinance, and it is unnecessary to list in said ordinance the individual fees taxable in the name of such mayor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of recent date reading as follows:

"We are respectfully requesting your written opinion upon the following matter:

We are calling attention to section 4556, G. C., as follows:

'Section 4556. The costs of the mayor and other officers, in all cases, shall be fixed by ordinance, but in no case greater than the fees for similar services before justices of the peace. In case of conviction the fees of officers, jurors, and witnesses shall be taxed against the parties convicted, and in case of acquittal of the violation of an ordinance, the costs, except the fees of the mayor and marshal, shall be taxed against the corporation.'

We are also calling your attention to a quotation from an opinion of the Attorney-General, under date of April 24, 1914, Annual Report of Attorney-General for 1914, Vol. I, p. 536, at p. 539, as follows:

'It is true that under the ruling of city of Bellefontaine vs. Haviland, 3 N. P. n. s., 99, these officials are not entitled to receive any fees in ordinance cases when council fails to fix such fees by ordinance. Whilst, therefore, the fees for such services may not be said to be fixed by law in the sense that the fees for services in state and civil cases are fixed, for the reason that under the control council has over the same they may not be fixed at all or they may be fixed at such a minimum amount as to be inconsiderable, * * *.'

QUESTION: Is an ordinance of a municipal council, which provides that the fees of the mayor in ordinance cases, shall be the same as the fees of a justice of the peace in similar cases, in compliance with section 4556, or is it necessary to list the individual fees?"

Having regard to the provisions of section 4556 G. C., the precise question for our consideration is whether an ordinance of a municipal council, which provides that the fees of the mayor in ordinance cases shall be the same as the fees of the justice of peace in similar cases, is a fixing of those fees under said statute.

The word "fix" has various shades of meaning. One is that of "settle" or "determine" or "establish," which are, I think, the connotation of the word "fixed" as used in section 4556 G. C.

Unless expressly required by constitutional or statutory provision, the council of a municipal corporation is not restricted in the form of the expression of its will. In general, if an ordinance is sufficiently certain and definite as to indicate the matter or thing to which it relates, it is valid. And it is a maxim of law that that is certain which may be made certain: Id certum est quod certum reddi potest. Co. Litt. 43.

Even a cursory reference to any volume of statutes will show that it is a universal practice to incorporate into one statute the contents of another statute by apt reference thereto. So far as I am informed, no court has ever criticised this practice as such. In many instances, unless this practice were resorted to, our statute books would be inexcusably cumbersome and prolix.

The fees of a justice of peace in criminal cases are definitely set forth by section 1746 G. C. and other sections that need not be cited here. Furthermore, the function and powers of mayors and justices of peace are, in criminal matters, sufficiently alike to make easy of application an ordinance to the effect that the fees of the mayor in ordinance cases shall be the same as the fees of a justice of the peace in similar cases.

I am therefore of the opinion that an ordinance of a municipal council, which provides that the fees of the mayor in ordinance cases shall be the same as the fees of a justice of the peace in similar cases, sufficiently complies with section 4556 G. C., requiring said fees to be "fixed" by ordinance, and that it is unnecessary to list in said ordinance the individual fees taxable in the name of such mayor.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—REPAIR OF HIGHWAY WITH MATERIAL DIFFERENT FROM THAT WITH WHICH SAME WAS ORIGINALLY CONSTRUCTED—STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER MAKES ASSESSMENT—NOT LESS THAN TEN PER CENT AGAINST ABUTTING REAL ESTATE—METHOD PROVIDED IN SECTION 1191 G. C.

1. If, in making repairs to a highway as required by section 1224 G. C., the state highway commissioner uses as the principal material a material different from that with which the highway was originally constructed, it is incumbent on the commissioner to assess a part of the cost of such repairs against abutting or contiguous real estate; and the rule as to the percentage of such cost that may be so assessed is as follows: The state highway commissioner must so assess not less than ten per cent of the cost and expense of such repairs; and may at his discretion so assess any per cent of such cost and expenses between ten and one hundred per cent, provided that the amount assessed against any particular tract of land within the assessment area shall not exceed thirty-three per cent of the value of such tract for taxation.

2. The method to be followed by the state highway commissioner in making such assessment is that set forth in section 1191 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1919.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date February 3, 1919, you wrote to this department as follows:

> "The following is a copy of a communication received by me from Mr. A. E. Hinkle, deputy highway commissioner, bureau of maintenance and repair:
> 'Under section 1224 of the General Code of Ohio, when a road is repaired by resurfacing it with some other material, no less than 10% of the cost of repair shall be assessed against the property along the highway.
> We have just completed the resurfacing of section B-1 C. H. No. 360

Hocking county, which is 0.88 miles in length. The bookkeeper's books show that there was paid for this work $22,869.41 As to just how this assessment shall be made I am not sure, since this is, so far as I know, the first case of this kind that has come up. I presume that this is a duty for the chief clerk and bookkeeping department to look after, but of course they cannot take care of it until they get a formal statement from the engineering department that this work has been completed. Hence this report to you.'

Inasmuch as this is a new departure in highway maintenance and as the entire work was conceived and carried out by the highway department I will thank you for an opinion as to whether it is possible to levy an assessment against the adjacent property holders or otherwise and if so what per cent. of the cost of this improvement may be placed upon adjacent property holders or beneficiaries within the mile limit?"

Mr. Hinkle adds in a personal interview that in making the repairs referred to, you used as the principal material a material different from that with which the road was originally constructed.

Section 1224 G. C. so far as material to a discussion of your inquiry reads:

"The state highway commissioner shall maintain and repair to the required standard all inter-county highways main market roads and bridges and culverts constructed by the state by the aid of state money or taken over by the state after being constructed. In repairing inter-county highways and main market roads the state highway commissioner shall not be limited to the use of the material with which such inter-county highways or main market roads were originally constructed but may repair such inter-county highways or main market roads by the use of any material which he deems proper. When in the repair of an inter-county highway or main market road the state highway commissioner changes the type of such road and uses as the principal material in making such repair a material different from that with which the road was originally constructed not less than ten per cent. of the cost and expense of such repair shall be assessed against the property abutting on said road or within one-half mile on either side thereof or within one mile on either side thereof in the manner hereinbefore provided in the case of the construction of a road under the supervision of the state highway department. Nothing in this chapter shall be construed so as to prohibit a county township or municipality or the federal government or any individual or corporation from contributing a portion of the cost of the construction maintenance and repair of said state highways. * * * Inter-county highways or main market roads on which no state aid money has been expended if improved with constructions equal to that specified by the state highway commissioner shall be taken over by the state and shall thenceforth be maintained as prescribed herein for inter-county highways and main market roads. * * *"

Coming then to the question of the percentage of the total cost of the repairs that may be so assessed we have the mandate of said section 1224 in these words:

"* * * not less than ten per cent. of the cost and expense of such repair shall be assessed against the property abutting on said road or within one-half mile on either side thereof or within one mile on either side thereof."

The plain import of this language is that it is mandatory upon the commissioner when he changes the type of construction and uses a material different from that originally employed to assess against lands abutting or contiguous to the road at least ten per cent. of the total cost of the repairs and discretionary with him to assess any percentage between ten and one hundred per cent. of such cost.

It may be urged that it was not the intent of the legislature to confer any such broad powers upon the commissioner; that the outstanding feature of section 1224 is that it establishes the policy that the state shall maintain and repair such parts of the highways as shall have been constructed or taken over by the state and that inasmuch as the commissioner may not make a special assessment if he uses in making repairs the same material as that originally used it would be unjust to permit the assessment of the full cost of the repairs against adjoining lands simply because of a change in materials especially that the owners of adjoining lands are given no voice in the matter of materials. However it is useless to speculate upon the possible or probable intent of the legislature as against its unambiguous language; for we find that one rule of statutory construction in Ohio has been thus stated by our supreme court in the case of Slingluff vs. Weaver 66 O. S. 621 (first two syllabi):

> "The object of judicial investigation in the construction of a statute is to ascertain and give effect to the intent of the law-making body which enacted it. And where its provisions are ambiguous, and its meaning doubtful, the history of legislation on the subject, and the consequences of a literal interpretation of the language may be considered; punctuation may be changed or disregarded; words transposed, or those necessary to a clear understanding and, as shown by the context manifestly intended, inserted.
> But the intent of the law-makers is to be sought first of all in the language employed, and if the words be free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly, clearly and distinctly, the sense of the law-making body, there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation. The question is not what did the general assembly intend to enact, but what is the meaning of that which it did enact. That body should be held to mean what it has plainly expressed, and hence no room is left for construction."

Likewise, in the case of Ives v. McNicholl, 12 O. C. C. 297, 5 O. C. D. 555, the circuit court of Hamilton county use the following language, after referring to several decisions of our supreme court:

> "The doctrine of these cases, as we understand, laid down with great force and clearness, is to the effect that it would be highly improper for a court called upon to construe a statute, which in its opinion, as it apparently stands, is inconsistent with its ideas of policy or justice, to distort the language or its evident meaning, in such a manner as to give it a construction consistent with his own ideas of justice or policy. Or, as stated by Judge Nash in announcing the decision in the Bowman case (41 Ohio St., 37): 'If the language used by the legislature in a statute is precise and unambiguous, we conceive it to be our duty to interpret the words in their natural and ordinary sense, although the result may conflict with our ideas of public policy.' "

Recurring to said section 1224, one limitation on special assessments seems to be recognized therein. Said section in making reference to the method to be followed in perfecting the assessment, reads:

> "* * * in the manner hereinbefore provided in the case of the construction of a road under the supervision of the state highway department."

As is hereinafter explained in another connection, this language no doubt refers to the method of assessment described in section 1191 G. C., although if taken literally it might refer either to section 1191 or section 1214. In both of these sections there is the limitation "shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purpose of taxation." And while it is true that the language las above quoted from section 1224 is intended to provide a method rather than to fix a limtation, it would seem that where the provisions describing that method make direct reference to a limitation, such limitation is to be accepted as belonging to the scheme of plan of assessment, especially that, as stated in Cincinnati vs. Conner, 55 O. S. 82, 91:

> "The rule generally prevails that, independent of any legislative requirement on the subject, statutes imposing taxes and public burdens of that nature are to be strictly construed; and where there is ambiguity which raises a doubt as to the legislative intent, that doubt must be resolved in favor of the subject or citizen on whom the burden is sought to be imposed."

For the foregoing reasons, the rule as to percentage of cost of repairs which may under section 1224 be assessed against abutting and contiguous real estate, where, in making the repairs there is a change of principal material as compared with that used in the original construction, may be stated as follows:

The state highway commissioner must so assess not less than ten per cent of the cost and expense of such repairs; and may at his discretion so assess any per cent of such cost and expenses between ten and one hundred per cent; provided that the amount assessed against any particular tract of land within the assessment area shall not exceed thirty-three per cent of the value of such tract for taxation.

Coming next to the method to be pursued in making the assessment, it is to be noted that section 1224 provides:

> "* * * not less than ten per cent of the cost and expense of such repair shall be assessed against the property abutting on said road, or within one-half mile on either side thereof or within one mile on either side thereof, in the manner hereinbefore provided in the case of the construction of a road under the supervision of the state highway department."

Two sections of the series of statutes relating to highways come within the description of the last clause of the language quoted—section 1191 and 1214. However, section 1214 comes within the description only when the description is taken in a very literal sense; so that section 1214 is not here quoted. It is sufficient to say that it provides for assessment under the direction of the county commissioners or township trustees, in cases where the improvement has been constructed under the supervision of the state highway department upon application of county commissioners or township trustees and with the financial aid of either or both the county and township and the adjacent property owners. The statute need only be read to show that from a practical standpoint its provisions are not available for use by the state highway commissioner in making an assessment. We are thus reverted to section 1191, which so far as now in point, reads as follows:

> "* * * When a part of the inter-county highway system or main market road system of the state is improved by the state, by contract or force account, without the co-operation with a county or some township thereof, ten per cent of the cost of said construction or improvement shall be assessed against the land abutting thereon according to the benefits, provided the total amount assessed against any abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent of the valuation of such abutting property for the purpose of taxation. The state highway commissioner shall cause to be made a tentative apportionment of the amount to be assessed and shall fix a time and place for a hearing on such apportionment. He shall give notice to said abutting property owners of the time and place of such hearing by one publication in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which said improvement is situated, which notice shall be published at least ten days before the date fixed for said hearing. The state highway commissioner shall attend such hearing in person or designate a deputy highway commismissioner or division engineer to attend the same and if any objections in writing are presented to the tentative apportionment the proof offered by the aggrieved parties shall be heard. The tentative assessment shall be confirmed by the state highway commissioner as made, or in case objections are made thereto, with such modifications, if any, as he may deem just and proper and the same shall be certified to the county auditor of the county in which such abutting property is situated to be by him placed upon the duplicate against said land and paid in such number of equal semi-annual payments as may be fixed by the state highway commissioner. Said assessments when collected by the county treasurer shall be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the state highway improvement fund to reimburse the state for the money advanced by it on account of said improvement."

It is quite plain that section 1191, taken in connection with those parts of section 1224 which provide for the assessment of either the abutting property, or that within one-half mile, or that within one mile, affords a complete and practicable scheme of perfecting the details of the assessment by the state highway commissioner and sets forth "the manner hereinbefore provided" which the legislature had in mind in enacting section 1224. Hence, in making the assessment, the method set forth in said section 1191 is to be followed by the state highway commissioner.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—MINOR UNDER AGE OF EIGHTEEN YEARS—COSTS OF JUSTICE OF PEACE AND CONSTABLE—MINOR RESIDENT OF ONE COUNTY WHO VIOLATES LAW OF STATE OF OHIO IN ANOTHER COUNTY MAY BE PROCEEDED AGAINST IN EITHER COUNTY.

1. When a minor child under the age of eighteen years is arrested and taken before a justice of the peace and the latter transfers the case to the judge of the juvenile court as provided by section 1659 G. C. costs are taxable in favor of the justice of peace and the constable and should be paid as provided in section 1682 G. C.

2. Where a minor child under the age of eighteen years is a resident of Warren county but while in Clermont county violates a law of the state of Ohio such minor may be proceeded against as a juvenile delinquent person in the juvenile court of Warren county.

COLUMBUS OHIO March 31 1919.

HON. CHARLES G. WHITE Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of recent date you request my opinion on two questions stated by you as follows:

> "(1) A minor is arrested and brought before a justice of the peace who at the time the affidavit was sworn to had no knowledge that the boy was under eighteen years of age. Upon discovering the fact he certifies the case over to the juvenile judge as is provided for in section 1659 of the General Code of Ohio. Now the question arises how is the justice and his constable to receive his costs. In other words does he and the constable lose them or should they be paid as provided in section 1682 of the General Code or should they be allowed by the county commissioners as other J. P. criminal costs?
> (2) The other matter is this: A minor commits a crime in Clermont county Ohio but is a resident of Warren county Ohio. Has the juvenile court of this or Warren county jurisdiction over the delinquent child? Of course I am using the word minor in a restricted sense meaning a child under eighteen years of age."

Section 1659 G. C. (103 O. L. 874) says:

> "When a minor under the age of eighteen years is arrested such child instead of being taken before a justice of the peace or police judge shall be taken directly before such juvenile judge; or if the child is taken before a justice of the peace or a judge of the police court it shall be the duty of such justice of the peace or such judge of the police court to transfer the case to the judge exercising the jurisdiction herein provided. The officers having such child in charge shall take it before such judge who shall proceed to hear and dispose of the case in the same manner as if the child had been brought before the judge in the first instance."

Section 1682 G. C. provides:

> "Fees and costs in all such cases with such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers and the costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers certified to by the judge of the court."

The above quoted sections were constituent parts of the original juvenile act, found in 99 O. L. 192 being sections 19 and 40 respectively of that act. The words "in all such cases" found in section 1682 G. C. clearly refer to all cases brought or conducted under authority of any of the provisions of the juvenile act.

In opinion No. 502 1915 Atty. Gen. Opinions, Vol. II p. 1022, this department; construing the above quoted sections held that a mayor has no jurisdiction to dispose of a case against a minor under eighteen years of age other than to transfer the case to the juvenile judge; and further that fees and costs made in the mayor's court in such case are to follow the case for allowance and payment under section 1682 G. C. If such a holding is proper as applied to mayors who it will be noticed are not even mentioned in section 1659 G. C. it would certainly be proper to adopt such construction with regard to justices of peace who are expressly referred to therein.

At all events, it is my opinion that when a minor under the age of eighteen years is arrested and taken before a justice of the peace and the latter transfers the case to the judge of the juvenile court as provided by section 1659 G. C., costs are taxable in favor of the justice of peace and the constable and should be paid as provided in section 1682 G. C. The latter section being a special provision is the authority for the payment of such costs and not the general sections of the code relating to allowance by the county commissioners of cost bills in state criminal cases.

Your second question presents a problem not easy of solution. A careful scrutiny of the entire juvenile act shows no provision of law that expressly makes the authority of a juvenile court of a county to determine the status of an allegedly delinquent juvenile person dependent upon the residence of such juvenile in that county. Nor do I find any provision expressly limiting the juvenile court's jurisdiction to the county in which the juvenile committed the act constituting the delinquency. That the legislature did not more definitely show its intention with respect to venue and residence is to be regretted in view of the importance which these matters sustain to any consideration of the juvenile court's jurisdiction.

It being apparent from your letter of March 12 supplementing your original letter of inquiry, that there is no pending case in the juvenile court of your county raising the question of residence I think it better at this time to consider your second question as though it had been put in the following form:

> "Where a minor child under the age of eighteen years is a resident of Warren county but while in Clermont county violates a law of the state of Ohio may said minor be proceeded against in the juvenile court of Warren county?"

My reason for thus changing the form of your question is this: It is unquestionably the intent of the juvenile court act that the interests of the child itself should be the paramount consideration in all proceedings taken under that act. "That proper guardianship may be provided for the child" is not only the express direction set forth in section 1683 G. C. but is indeed the theme of the whole measure. In most juvenile cases the main subject of investigation is the child's environment and as a general rule the juvenile court of the county of the child's residence is the court best suited to ascertain that environment.

In other words assuming that the law permits a juvenile court in a proceeding against an alleged juvenile delinquent residing in that county to predicate a finding of delinquency upon a violation of law committed by said minor while in another county, good policy in most cases suggests that the juvenile court of the county of the minor's residence be permitted to determine the minor's status.

We must now consider the validity of the assumption just made; that is whether the jurisdiction of the juvenile court to determine the status of an alleged delinquent juvenile person is defeated by the mere fact that the act of delinquency was committed by the minor not in the county wherein the juvenile court is held but in another county.

Section 1642 G. C. (103 O. L. 868) says:

> "Such courts of common pleas, probate courts, insolvency courts and superior courts within the provisions of this chapter shall have jurisdiction over and with respect to delinquent neglected and dependent minors under the age of eighteen years, not inmates of a state institution, or any institution incorporated under the laws of the state for the care and correction of delinquent neglected and dependent children, and their parents, guardians, or any person, persons, corporation or agent of a corporation, responsible for, or guilty of causing encouraging, aiding, abetting or contributing toward the delinquency, neglect or dependency of such minor, and such courts shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine any charge or prosecution against any person, persons, corporations, or their agents, for the commission of any misdemeanor involving the care, protection, education or comfort of any such minor under the age of eighteen years."

Section 1643 G. C. (103 O. L. 866) provides:

"When a child under the age of eighteen years comes into the custody of the court under the provisions of this chapter, such child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, a ward of the court, until he or she attain the age of twenty-one years. The power of the court over such child shall continue until the child attains such age."

Section 1644 G. C. (106 O. L. 458) says:

" 'DELINQUENT CHILD DEFINED.' For the purpose of this chapter, the words 'Delinquent child' includes any child under eighteen years of age who violates a law of this state, or a city or village ordinance, or who is incorrigible; or who knowingly associates with thieves, vicious or immoral persons; or who is growing up in idleness or crime; or who knowingly visits or enters a house of ill repute; or who knowingly patronizes or visits a policy shop or place where any gambling device or gambling scheme is, or shall be, operated or conducted; or who patronizes or visits a saloon or dram shop where intoxicating liquors are sold; or who patronizes or visits a public pool or billiard room or bucket shop; or who wanders about the streets in the night time; or who wanders about railroad yards or tracks, or jumps or catches on to a moving train, traction or street car, or enters a car or engine without lawful authority, or who uses vile, obscene, vulgar, profane or indecent language; or who is guilty of immoral conduct; or who uses cigarettes, cigarette wrapper or substitute for either, or cigars, or tobacco; or who visits or frequents any theater, gallery, penny arcade or moving picture show where lewd, vulgar or indecent pictures, exhibitions or performances are displayed, exhibited or given, or who is an habitual truant; or who uses any injurious or narcotic drug. A child committing any of the acts herein mentioned shall be deemed a juvenile delinquent person, and be proceeded against in the manner hereinafter provided."

Upon the passage of the juvenile act, of which the above quoted sections are a part, the courts of Ohio were quick to declare that delinquency as defined in that act was not in the nature of a crime; that the act itself, so far as the minor child was concerned, was neither a criminal nor penal one, but reformatory or corrective; and that while the commission of a crime may set the machinery of the juvenile court in motion the minor proceeded against is not tried by the court as for crime, but for incorrigibility.

In re Januszewski, 196 Fed. 123, 156.
Leonard vs. Licker, 3 Ohio App. 377, 380.
Children's Home vs. Fetter, 90 O. S. 110, 127.

In the Leonard case, above cited, the court quoted, as being particularly apropos of the commitment of what are now called delinquent children the following language used by White, J., in Prescott vs. The State, 19 O. S. 184, at 187:

> "It is neither a criminal prosecution, nor a proceeding according to course of the common law, in which the right to a trial by jury is guaranteed. The proceeding is purely statutory; and the commitment, in cases like the present, is not designed as a punishment for crime, but to place minors of the description, and for the causes specified in the statute, under the guardianship of the public authorities named, for proper care and discipline, until they are reformed, or arrive at the age of majority. The institution to which they are commited is a school, not a prison; nor is the character of their detention affected by the fact that it is also a place where juvenile convicts may be sent, who would otherwise be condemned to confinement in the common jail or the penitentiary."

The proceeding in the juvenile court against the juvenile delinquent person not being of a criminal nature, I see no justification for the application of the rule that a person charged with an offense is entitled to be tried therefor in the county in which such offense is alleged to have been committed. What section 1642 G. C., above quoted, gives the juvenile court jurisdiction over, is not offenses committed by juveniles, but jurisdiction "over and with respect to delinquent, neglected and dependent minors." The order made by the juvenile court under section 1652 G. C. is not a finding of guilt, but rather a determination of status. That is, the minor child is found to be in a certain condition which section 1644 G. C. describes as "delinquency," and the effect of the court's order is to make said minor a ward of the court for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection. See section 1643 G. C. To this determination of status, it is immaterial where the acts of delinquency were committed, whether in the county wherein the juvenile court is held, or in another county.

Section 2115 G. C. strengthens this conclusion. The language of that section is as follows:

> "When a girl between nine and eighteen years of age is brought before a court of criminal jurisdiction, charged with an offense, punishable by a fine or imprisonment other than imprisonment for life and who, if found guilty, would be a proper subject for commitment to the school, the court, by warrant or order, shall cause her forthwith to be taken before the judge of the juvenile court of the proper county, and shall transmit to him the complaint, indictment, or warrant, by virtue of which she was arrested. Such judge of the juvenile court shall proceed in the same manner as if she had been brought before him upon original complaint."

The first part of section 2115 G. C. refers to a girl who has been brought before a criminal court "charged with an offense." This, under the familiar rule of venue in criminal cases, doubtless refers to a girl who has committed an offense within the county in which said court of criminal jurisdiction is held and wherein the criminal charge is filed. That the place of the commission of the offense is not to control the disposition of such girl, is made clear, however, in the latter part of the section, which says that such girl shall forthwith be taken before the judge of the juvenile court, not of the county wherein the offense was committed, but of the "proper county." The "proper county" may or may not be the county in which the offense was committed. In other words, this section, together with section 1683 G. C., recognizes, by indirection at least, the policy hereinabove stated namely that the juvenile court of the county of which the juvenile delinquent is a resident is, ordinarily, the court best able to carry out the cardinal purpose of the juvenile act, "that proper guardianship may be provided for the child." (Section 1683 G. C.)

The view hereinabove stated agrees with the conclusion reached by the Attorney-General in Opinion No. 1280, rendered on June 17, 1918. It was held in that opinion that the juvenile court of Fayette county, in a proceeding against a minor child residing in said county had the right to predicate a finding of delinquency upon a violation of law committed by said minor while in another county to-wit, Ross county.

What has just been said answers sufficiently I think, your second question, reformed as above noted. Whether, under the second question as your letter states it, the juvenile court of Clermont county would have jurisdiction, will not be considered by this department until the necessity for an opinion on that phase of the matter more clearly appears.

Respectfully
JOHN G. PRICE
Attorney-General.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY INCORPORATED FOR PROFIT—NOT ENTITLED TO PER CAPITA TAX FROM COUNTY.

1. An agricultural society incorporated for profit is not entitled to an order on the county treasurer for the per capita tax provided by sections 9880 and 9880-1 G. C.

2. The fact that an agricultural society incorporated for profit declares by resolution that it will not distribute any profits among the stockholders but will devote all profits if any to the advancement of agriculture does not change its status from corporations for profit to those not for profit and such resolutions being repealable at the will or pleasure of the corporation will not entitle it to such per capita tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1919.

HON. ROBERT B. MCMULLEN, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated Febuary 22, 1919, as follows:

> "1. In this county we have three agricultural societies, all incorporated for profit, and each presenting to the county auditor a certificate from the state department of agriculture stating that they have complied with the laws of the state and the rules of the board of agriculture and therefore entitled to an order on the county treasurer for the per capita tax under sections 9880 and 9880-1 General Code.
> Being organized for profit, are any of them entitled to this per capita tax?
> 2. Two of these societies have passed resolutions declaring they will not distribute any profits among the stockholders, but that all profits if any shall be devoted to the advancement of agriculture.
> Does the adoption of these resolutions alter their right to this per capita tax?"

Sections 9880 9880-1 (105 O. L. 273) and section 1092 G. C. (107 O. L. 462) are pertinent. They are as follows:

> "Section 9880 G. C. When thirty or more persons, residents of a county, or of a district embracing one or more counties, organize themselves into an agricultural society, which adopts a constitution and by-laws, selects the usual and proper officers, and otherwise conducts its affairs in conformity to law, and the rules of the state board of agriculture, and when such county or district society has held an annual exhibition in accordance with the three following sections, and made proper report to the state board, then, upon presentation to the county auditor, of a certificate from the president of the state board attested by the secretary thereof, that the laws of the state and the rules of the board have been complied with, the county auditor of each county wherein such agricultural societies are organized, annually shall draw an order on the treasurer of the county in favor of the president of the county or district agricultural society for a sum equal to two cents to each inhabitant thereof, on the basis of the last previous national census. The total amount of such order shall not in any county exceed eight hundred dollars, and the treasurer of the county shall pay it.

Section 9880-1. When thirty or more persons, residents of a county or of contiguous counties not to exceed three are organized into an independent agricultural society that has held annual fairs for agricultural advancement previous to January 1, 1915, in a county wherein is located a county agricultural society, and when such independent society has held an annual exhibition in accordance with the three following sections, and made proper report to the state board, then upon presentation to the county auditor of a certificate from the president of the state board attested by the secretary thereof, that the laws of Ohio and the rules of the board have been complied with, the county auditor of the county, if the fair board be residents of one county, shall draw an order on the treasurer of the county in favor of the president of the independent agricultural society for a sum equal to the amount paid to the county fair and the treasurer shall pay said order. If the fair board of the independent agricultural society be residents of more than one county, the auditors of such counties shall draw orders on their respective treasurers for their proportionate share of an amount equal to an average amount paid to the several county fair boards to be divided according to population of the counties according to the last federal census. The treasurer or treasurers shall pay such order or orders from the county funds.

Section 1092. On the first Thursday after the second Monday of January of each year, there shall be a meeting in Columbus of the board of agriculture of Ohio together with the presidents or other authorized delegates of agricultural societies organized under the laws of the state and conducted under the rules of the board of agriculture and holding fairs as provided by law, for the purpose of deliberation and consulatation as to wants, prospects and conditions of agriculture throughout the state. The board of agriculture sha provide a uniform method for the election of the directors and officers of all agricultural societies receiving any support whatsoever out of the state or county treasuries and provide general rules and regulations under which such agricultural societies shall be conducted. At such meeting the reports from such agricultural societies shall be delivered to the board of agriculture."

Consideration of these sections and other sections of chapter 2, title 10, bearing upon agricultural societies, their history and decisions construing them, disclose a rather curious situation.

Section 9880 G. C., supra, was originally enacted February 28, 1846, 44 O. L., 70, as section 1 of an act entitled "for the encouragement of agriculture" and was in many respects similar to the section now in force. It, however, contained one requirement which was more consistent with the title than the present act, in this; that it provided that whenever thirty or more persons shall organize themselves into a society "for the improvement of agriculture within said county or district." It is to be noted in the present statute it is only required that such number of persons organize themselves into an agricultural society.

It is noted that the societies referred to in your letter are described as being "all incorporated for profit." Whether they have complied with all of the provisions of said sections first quoted is not clearly indicated in your letter, but from the fact that they have, as stated in your letter, a certificate from the state department of agriculture, "stating they have complied with the laws of the state, and the rules of the board of agriculture, and therefore entitled to an order on the county treasurer for the per capita tax," it must be assumed, for the purpose of this opinion, that their organization and proceedings have brought them within the provisions of section 9880 G. C., et seq.

The question involved by the facts stated in your letter is not free from difficulty and it may be said that its solution may depend largely upon the construction to be given to the above quoted sections.

If these sections are construed strictly or taken literally without reference to the apparent purpose of the act, it must be concluded that when thirty or more persons form themselves into an agricultural society and otherwise comply with the law, they are entitled as such society to this subsidy from the state, regardless of the fact that such an organization may be for the private benefit or profit of the organizers.

In support of this conclusion it may be said that section 9880 G. C., supra, was originally contained in the act of February 28, 1846, 44 O. L., p. 70, as section 1 of an act entitled "For the encouragement of agriculture," and that in that act the organization which was to receive the county aid was required to be a society more consistent with the title, for it required that they organize themselves into a society for the improvement of agriculture within said county or district, whereas in the present act no such requirements are necessary, and all that is required is that the thirty or more persons must be residents of the county or district and organize themselves into "an agriculture society." It might be argued that while all associations are not corporations, yet a corporation for profit or not for profit is an association, and that section 9880, providing for the granting of a subsidy to an agricultural society, organized in the manner therein provided, whenever such number of persons bring themselves within its terms, either in the form of a corporation or as a formal association, they are "agricultural societies."

This view is somewhat supported by opinion 979, Attorney-General's opinions for 1918, dated January 30, 1918, in which the question of the validity of the regulation of the state board of agriculture was considered and held invalid because it imposed a restriction which was contradictory to section 9880.

While the present question is not exactly the same question considered in that opinion, its conclusion and reasoning are pertinent. In part my predecessor held:

> "The statute in this case says that upon the performance of certain conditions they may receive funds. The conditions substantially are that the societies must comply with the law and with your (state board of agriculture) rules."

And again:

> "These rules may supplement and piece out the statutory provisions, but never set them aside. The rule of the board of agriculture that is contradictory to the statute is, of course, invalid."

So that, if we were to conclude that a corporation, either for profit or not for profit, was an agricultural society, and it otherwise complied with the requirements of law and was, as such, entitled to the county aid, we must necessarily go one step farther and conclude that any surplus or profits of their enterprise could be divided among its members.

This is exactly what was said in Dunn vs. Agricultural Society, 46 O. S., 101:

> "The income may many times exceed the expenditure, and hence, not only may a corporate fund be acquired, but it may be distributed among the members * * * at the pleasure of the society, and the corporation may thus become one of pecuniary profit with the control and management of property, real and personal;"

The question involved in that case, however, was one of the liability of such company in an action for damages for personal injury sustained by a person attending a fair, and the right of such corporation to the county aid was not involved.

On the other hand, if societies incorporated or otherwise receiving public funds under section 9880, have authority and inherent right to distribute such money, or a part thereof, among its members, then the granting of such subsidy from the public treasury would be offensive to section 6 of article 8 of the constitution, which forbids any county raising money or loaning its credit to, or aiding any joint stock company, corporation or association.

In Lawrence county Commissioners vs. Brown, 14 O. D., 241 in the first branch of the syllabus it is held:

> "County agricultural societies being formed for the promotion of agriculture and not for private profit section 3697 R. S. which provides that county agricultural societies may draw sums of money from the treasuries of their respective counties, does not violate either sections 4 or 6, Art. 8, of the constitution, the former of which prohibits the loaning or giving the credit of the state to an enterprise formed for private profit and the latter prohibiting a county, town, or township giving or lending its credit in a like manner."

In this case the constitutionality of the law was attached and sustained apparently on the ground that such incorporated agricultural societies were not for profit. As stated on page 242 of the opinion:

> "If the provision made in the statute under consideration can be said to be a loan to the corporation, or if it is in aid merely of a private enterprise carried on for the benefit of the individual members of the corporation, I should say, as would any one else, that the statute is violative of this section of the constitution. But from the history of legislation on the subject, and in view of the fact that from a very early period in the history of the state, it has been Ohio law to promote and encourage the development of agricultural resources of the state, I doubt whether this statute was intended to or does in effect aid any private enterprise."

It may be said that sections 9880-1 G. C. are unconstitutional if their effect is to loan or give the credit of the state to or provide money for a stock company, corporation or association as prohibited in the section of the constitution above referred to, and to maintain the constitutionality of said sections, it is necessary to construe them as not violating the constitutional inhibition in this respect by holding that such money is to be used, not for private profit, but for the purposes of the original act, viz., "for the encouragement of agriculture."

In view of the manifest purpose to encourage and promote agriculture in the state, and in view of the fact that such money is raised by taxation and is a trust fund, it is concluded that the society referred to in sections 9880 and 9880-1 G. C. is in contemplation of law to be for the benefit of the public for agricultural purposes and not for the private profit of such association nor its members.

This view is further strengthened by a consideration of section 1092, above quoted, wherein it is observed that the "board of agriculture shall provide a uniform method for election of the directors and officers of all agricultural societies receiving any support whatsoever out of the state or county treasuries." This is entirely inconsistent with the provision in the corporation laws of the state for the election of directors and officers of corporations for profit, and further evinces the intention of the legislature to provide such aid for such societies as organize for agricultural purposes, which must and can comply with the statutes and the rules of the state board of agriculture. Obviously enough, under the general corporation laws of the state under which such agricultural corporation for profit would be organized, their method and manner of election of directors and officers are provided for.

From the foregoing considerations, therefore, it is concluded that the societies referred to in your letter being incorporated for profit, are not entitled to the per capita tax money under sections 9880 and 9880-1 G. C.

The fact that two of these societies declare by resolution that they will not distribute any profits among the stockholders, but will devote all profits, if any, to the advancement of agriculture, does not change their status from corporations for profit to those not for profit, and such resolutions being repealable at the will or pleasure of the corporations, will not entitle them to such per capita tax.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—MOTHER, WARD OF ONE COUNTY, AND CHILD BORN IN ANOTHER COUNTY WHERE SAID CHILD BECOMES A DEPENDENT CHILD AND RESIDES THERE—CHILD IS WARD OF LATTER COUNTY.

Where a girl, 16 years of age, a ward of the juvenile court of A. county, gave birth to a child in the maternity hospital in B. county, and with said child is still residing in the latter county, and where said child became a dependent child, as defined in section 1645 G. C., upon complaint being filed according to law in the juvenile court of B. county, that court has jurisdiction over such child and the juvenile court of A. county is without jurisdiction.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 2, 1919.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary, Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter dated March 4, 1919, as follows:

> "We are interested in a case briefly described as follows:
> A girl, 16 years of age, a ward of the juvenile court of A. county, gave birth to a child in the maternity hospital in B. county, and is still residing in the latter county. The juvenile court in A. county, for particular reasons, wants to commit this baby to some agency or otherwise make it a ward of the court. Has the judge authority to assume jurisdiction over this baby, even if the mother voluntarily brings the child to the court? Or, can he order it brought to court? It has been held by some that any particular adjudication relative to the baby must be held in the county in which the mother and baby are now residing."

The questions which you raise on the facts above stated may be thus stated and numbered:

> "1. Has the probate judge of A. county the authority to assume jurisdiction over this child?
> 2. Would the act of the mother voluntarily bringing the child into the probate court of A. county be sufficient to confer such jurisdiction upon said court?
> 3. Can such judge order said child brought into court?"

Your suggestion is also noted that someone has advised that the adjudication relative to the child must be held in the county in which it and its mother are now residing.

Your letter does not state with whom the child is at present living or the circumstances surrounding it in its present location, but from the fact that some action on the part of either or both the juvenile courts of A. and B. counties is imminent, warrants the inference that conditions of dependency are believed to exist.

In the form in which it is stated, your first question is very easy of solution, as no judge has authority to assume jurisdiction in the sense that he may take to himself jurisdiction which is not legally conferred upon him or to the office which he is holding, but I am treating your inquiry as one raising the question whether such judge has jurisdiction.

So far as the mother is concerned, being a ward of the juvenile court of A. county, she is under the continuing jurisdiction of the juvenile court of said county under the provisions of section 1643 G. C. The jurisdiction over the mother does not of itself control or decide the matter of jurisdiction over the child.

It must be borne in mind, consistent with the purposes of the juvenile court acts, that dependency is not a crime, but a condition, and that the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration, an object of solicitude in the administration and corrective exercise of police power.

Attention is directed to section 1645 G. C., which defines a dependent child to mean:

> "* * * any child under eighteen years of age who is dependent upon the public for support; or who is destitute, homeless or abandoned; or who has not proper parental care or guardianship; * * * or whose environment is such as to warrant the state, in the interest of the child, in assuming its guardianship."

Facts somewhat similar to those stated in your letter were passed upon by the attorney general in 1916, in an opinion rendered to your board dated May 5, 1916, and found in Opinions of the Attorney-General, Vol. 1, 1916, page 777, in which the following conclusion is announced:

> "Nowhere in the juvenile court law is there found any provision which limits the court in the exercise of its power to extend the benefits of the law to a delinquent, neglected or dependent child. On the contrary, the juvenile court law is to be liberally construed to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child.
> 'Dependency' is a status, and when found to exist is sufficient in itself to vest jurisdiction in the court wherever such dependency may occur. The residence of the parents does not operate to deprive a juvenile court of jurisdiction over a child because such residence may perchance be in a county different from the one in which the act causing delinquency, or dependency, may have occurred. The parent would be subject to prosecution in the county in which the act was committed and no other.
> In the case under consideration, it appearing that the child in question is being cared for in C. county, where it was born, while the mother is confined in a state institution and therefore unable to support or care for the child, and there being no known person who can be charged with its support, it is my opinion that it is the duty of the juvenile court of the county in which the child is found to take jurisdiction if a complaint is filed under the provisions of section 1647 of the General Code, supra."

While some of the facts, as stated in your letter, do not appear the same as those on which the above quoted opinion was rendered, yet it is concluded that the principle announced by the attorney-general in the above opinion is applicable, and in my judgment correctly states the law; and this results in a conclusion that the juvenile court of A. county does not have jurisdiction over the child while it resides in B. county.

If the mother voluntarily took the child into A. county, the juvenile court of that county would have jurisdiction over the child, if the conditions of dependency, as defined by section 1645 G. C., existed at the time said child was taken into said court.

The matter involved in your third question is disposed of by the consideration of questions 1 and 2, and from the conclusion therein reached, especially in question 1, it may be said that the juvenile court of A. county cannot order said child to be brought from B. county into said court of A. county.

As a practical suggestion of disposing of this matter, consistent with the conclusion reached in this and the former opinion of the Attorney-General, it may be well to note that upon complaint of any person bringing the dependency of this child to the attention of the juvenile court of B. county, he would have jurisdiction to make the proper order concerning the custody and commitment of the child.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—IMPROVEMENT UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTIONS 6906 TO 6953 G. C.—ENTIRE IMPROVEMENT PROCEEDINGS SHOULD BE SEPARATE AS TO EACH ROAD.

Sections 6906 to 6953 General Code, providing for road improvements under the supervision of county commissioners, contemplate that one road, or part thereof, shall be the basis of the improvement proceedings, hence, where it is proposed to improve five different county roads at the expense of the county as provided in section 6921, funds to be obtained by the issue of bonds as provided in section 6929, the entire improvement proceedings, including the issue and sale of bonds, should be separate as to each road.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 2, 1919.

HON. A. F. ALLYN, Prosecuting Attorney, Port Clinton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Attention has been given to your communication of March 11, 1919, reading as follows:

> "The commissioners of Ottawa county, Ohio, are considering the proposition of issuing and selling the bonds of the county in the sum of $30,000.00 to provide a fund for the repair of five different county roads which were originally constructed of the same material and in the same manner. They contemplate paying for said improvements under authority of section 6921 of the General Code, and issuing and selling said bonds under authority of section 6929 of the General Code. The contemplated repairs are to be of the same nature, made in the same manner and using the same materials.
> I would like to submit to you the following questions with reference to said improvements:
> 1. Can those several road improvements be provided for in the same preliminary resolutions, and treated as one improvement; or should there be separate preliminary resolutions for each road improvement?
> 2. Can the issue and sale of all of said bonds be provided for in one resolution, with one advertisement and with one issue and sale; or should there be a separate resolution providing for a separate issue of bonds for each road improvement, with separate and independent advertisement, issue and sale of said bonds?"

Said sections 6921 and 6929 to which you make reference, form part of a series of statutes (sections 6906 to 6953) which provide for improvements of county roads under the supervision of the county commissioners. The proceedings may be initiated either by petition of land owners or upon unanimous vote of the commissioners. Section 6907 relating to the matter of the petition, provides that when such petition is filed, asking for the improvement, etc., of any public road or part thereof, the commissioners shall go upon the line of said proposed improvement and after viewing th same, determine whether the public convenience and welfare require that such im provement be made. Section 6910, relating to improvements without petition, pro vides that the commissioners may take the necessary steps to improve or repair a public road or part thereof, etc. Section 6911 begins "When the board of commissioners has determined that any road shall be constructed, reconstructed, improved or repaired," etc. Section 6912 relating to publication of notice of the proposed improvement, uses the expressions "such improvement" and "said improvement." These expressions "any road," "said improvement" and "such improvement" are found constantly recurring through the entire series of statutes above mentioned. Nowhere do we find express authority for treating the improvement of more than one road as one improvement; nor do we even find the plural of the word "road."

Quite plainly, therefore, the series of statutes in question contemplates one road as the basis for improvement proceedings. This being true, it follows that the resolution referred to in section 6910 should be separate as to each road, and that all further proceedings, including those relating to the issuing, advertising the sale of, and selling, bonds should be separate as to each road.

> "The county commissioners, in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments, or any part thereof, may whenever, in their judgment it is deemed necessary, sell the bonds of said county in any amount not greater than the aggregate sum necessary to pay the estimated compensation, damages, costs and expenses of such improvement. Such bonds shall state for what purpose they are issued and shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and in such amounts and to mature at such times as the commissioners shall determine, subject to the provisions however that said bonds shall mature in not more than ten years. Prior to the issuance of such bonds the county commissioners shall provide for the levying of a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to cover any deficiencies in the payment or collection of any special assessments or township taxes anticipated by such bonds. The sale of such bonds shall be advertised once not later than two weeks prior to the date fixed for such sale in a newspaper published and of general circulation within such county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no such paper published in said county then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county. Such bonds shall be sold to the highest bidder for not less than par and accrued interest. The proceeds of such bonds shall be used exclusively for the payment of the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement for which they are issued."

Since bonds authorized by said section 6929 are for the purpose of paying the cost of improvements resulting from proceedings initiated as provided in section 6907 (upon petition), or section 6910 (without petition), said three sections should be read together. In sections 6907 and 6910, as above noted, the expressions "any public road or part thereof" and "a public road or part thereof" are respectively employed; hence the expressions in section 6929 "to pay the estimated compensation, damages, costs and expenses of such improvement" and "for the payment of the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement for which they are issued," should be treated as referring to the improvement of "any public road or part thereof" or "a public road or part thereof."

Another matter may be mentioned as having a bearing upon your inquiry. It will be noted that the petition provided for in section 6907 is to be signed by at least fifty-one per cent. of the land or lot owners, residents of the county, who are to be specially assessed, and that the petition is to designate one of the methods of paying the costs as set forth in section 6919. Logically, if the improvement of five roads may be treated as one improvement within the contemplation of section 6906 to 6953, the improvement of all the roads in the county may be treated as a single improvement. It is hardly to be presumed that the legislature had any such result in contemplation; for with varying conditions in widely separated districts in the county, it is not likely that the same views would prevail among landowners as to the proper method of paying the cost, or that a petition which might be freely signed in one neighborhood would be equally well received in another.

Furthermore, it should be borne in mind that the policy underlying our statutes relating to the issue of bonds is to provide means for the procuring of a special fund for a specific improvement. Section 5654 (103 O. L. 521), may be quoted in this connection:

> "The proceeds of a special tax, loan or bond issue shall not be used for any other purpose than that for which the same was levied, issued or made, except as herein provided. When there is in the treasury of any city, village, county, township or school district a surplus of the proceeds of a special tax or of the proceeds of a loan or bond issue which cannot be used, or which is not needed for the purpose for which the tax was levied, or the loan made, or the bonds issued, all of such surplus shall be transferred immediately by the officer, board or council having charge of such surplus, to the sinking fund of such city, village, county, township or school district, and thereafter shall be subject to the uses of such sinking fund."

The views above expressed relate to the substance of the improvement proceedings rather than to their form. No doubt as a mere matter of form, the improvement proceedings relating to one road may be carried along with those relating to another, that is to say, that one resolution of the commissioners determining to make the improvement; one resolution to proceed with the same; one advertisement for sale of bonds, etc., may be so drawn as to include more than one road and at the same time to identify and keep separate each road and the proceedings relating thereto. If such form of proceedings is used, care should be taken to observe all statutory steps as to each road, so that when bonds are offered for sale, a prospective buyer who may be interested in the bonds relating to only one of the roads may find the proceedings complete as to that particular road. As illustrating the importance of the matter last mentioned, reference may be had to an opinion of this department dated October 22, 1917 (Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1917, p. 1960), relating to above quoted section 6929 and holding in substance as shown by headnotes:

> "Under the provisions of section 6929 General Code, as amended 107 O. L. 69 (p. 101), the county commissioners are not authorized to issue the bonds therein provided for in an amount greater than the aggregate sum necessary to pay the estimated compensation, damages, costs and expense of the improvement."

Considering the holding just quoted in connection with the situation stated in your letter, it will readily occur to you that if one road or part thereof is to be taken as the basis of improvement proceedings, it should be made plain upon the record of such proceedings that the amount of bonds relating to a particular road is not in excess of the sum necessary to pay the cost of improving that road, as distinguished from the circumstance that thirty thousand dollar bonds may not be in excess of the amount necessary for the improvement of five roads.

All things considered, the simple, practical and safe course that suggests itself as being in conformity with sections 6906-6953 and with the spirit of our bond enabling statutes generally, is to make use of separate and distinct sets of resolutions, estimates, notices, advertisements, etc., as to each road.

Respectfully,
JOHN C. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF LEASE OF CANAL LANDS AT MASSILLON, OHIO, TO WM. F. & C. W. WAGNER—"ANNUAL RENTAL OF SIX PER CENTUM PER ANNUM OF SAID VALUATION" STATUTE PROVISION.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1919.

HON. JOHN I. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Referring to your communication with which you sent me for approval proposed lease of State canal lands, as follows:

Wm. F. & C. W. Wagner, for canal lands at Massillon, Ohio---------- $3,333 33

It is noted that the rental clause set out in said proposed lease calls for an annual rental of $150.00 for the first three years; $200.00 for the fourth and fifth years, and $215.00 for the remaining ten years of the fifteen year period covered by the lease. The sum total of these rentals as provided for in the proposed lease equals the amount calculated upon the value of the land at six per cent for fifteen years.

Section 13996 with reference to the rentals of canal lands which are leased provides that said lease shall be made "at an annual rental of six per cent. per annum of said valuation to be paid semi-annually, in advance * * *." The words of the statute would seem to leave no option as to the manner in which such rentals may be paid. I realize that conditions may arise such as you have stated to me, where it is to the interest of the State to arrange the rentals so that the installments be made less in the earlier years than in the later years of the lease period,—in other words, that as a business proposition the State may sometimes procure the entering into of a lease favorable from its standpoint when it cannot do so if the rentals are fixed at the same amount each year. However, considerations of this nature cannot prevail as against the express terms of the statute and the only relief is through the legislature.

The views thus expressed are similar to those set forth in an opinion of this department under date May 1, 1915, Vol. 1, Opinions of the Attorney-General, 1915, p. 612.

For the reasons given, I am constrained to return the proposed lease without my approval.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ANNUAL SALARY PAYABLE MONTHLY OR SEMI-MONTHLY—HOW COMPUTED FOR LESS PERIOD OF TIME.

Under laws fixing the compensation of a given position at a stated annual salary payable monthly or semi-monthly, the gross annual salary is to be apportioned in equal installments in accordance with the stipulated periods of payment, and the number of days in any given month or half month constitute the unit for apportionment of the installment of compensation for services rendered for a portion of such period.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of March 14, 1919, you submitted for my opinion the following question:

> "In view of the fact that there are various methods of computing the compensation fixed on an annual basis, payable monthly or semi-monthly, and in view of the further fact that the same should be uniform, we respectfully request your written opinion upon the following matter:
> Question: If the compensation is covered by an annual salary, payable monthly or semi-monthly, and a person quits a position at some point within a certain month, should the amount of the compensation payable to this employe be based upon the number of days, taking the days in the calendar month as a basis, or taking a thirty day month as a basis, or taking a 365 day year as a basis?
> In case a 365 day year were taken as a basis would not the compensation paid for such position from and inclusive of the first day of the year require consideration in making the computation? "

Your inquiry may be summarized as follows:

Under laws fixing the compensation of a given position at a stated annual salary payable monthly or semi-monthly, what is the proper method of calculating the compensation for services for any given number of days within a particular month or half month?

Several considerations are suggested in the determination of your inquiry, among which are the following:

Shall the annual salary be apportioned equally to each of the 365 calendar days of the year; or on the basis of a 30 day month; or on the basis of the actual number of days of the calendar month; or on the basis of the number of working days of the year or calendar month?

In connection with your inquiry you call attention to two opinions of this department, one of which, found at page 221 of the Annual Reports of the Attorney-General for the year 1913 relates to compensation of members of council of municipal corporations in which the conclusion relative to apportionment of salary was as follows:

> "As I construe said section it is the intent thereof that the compensation of members of a city council shall be fixed on an annual salary basis, payable semi-monthly and that if in any half month a meeting of council is held, either regular or special and a member fails to attend such meeting the amount which would be paid to him semi-monthly would be proportionately reduced."

The other opinion to which you refer, appears at page 2123 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for the year 1915, and relates to compensation of clerks of boards of election, and the following statements were made in the course of the opinion:

> "The calculation of the portion of the monthly compensation which may be paid for a period of less than a month should be based upon the actual number of days in the calendar month in which such service is rendered.
> I am, therefore, of the opinion that * * * the compensation of all temporary clerks and assistants of either of such boards is limited to the rate if not to exceed one hundred dollars per month for the time actually employed, to be computed upon the basis of the actual number of days in the calendar month in which such services are rendered."

The provisions of the statutes under consideration in each of the foregoing opinions contained such special provisions that the conclusions reached might be said to have been influenced in large measure by the particular language under consideration, so that the rule announced would not necessarily furnish a guide in case of more general provisions of the character suggested in your inquiry.

However, I am of the opinion that a provision for payment monthly or semi-monthly characterizes the month or half month as the unit for apportionment of a gross yearly salary. In other words, the annual salary is to be due and payable in installments with reference to stated periods of service, whether monthly or semi-monthly, and when services have been rendered for a given calendar month one of the twelve installments of compensation becomes due and payable, and it is not apparent that the compensation so provided is to be calculated upon a daily basis or with reference to any other period than that stipulated for its falling due, which suggests an apportionment in equal installments in accordance with the periods provided for payment.

It therefore follows that in computing the compensation for services for a given number of days during any calendar month, less than the period provided as the unit for payment, the number of days of the month or half-month shall be taken as the unit for calculation of the apportionment of the monthly or semi-monthly installment of compensation to the period of service.

For example, the rendition of services for ten days in the month of June would determine the employe's compensation as 10-30 of the monthly installment of compensation attached to the position; likewise the rendition of services for ten days in the month of July would determine his compensation as 10-31 of the monthly installment, and similarly for any other period of service.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CATTLE AFFECTED WITH RABIES—KILLED BY ORDER OF HEALTH OFFICER IN 1915—LEGISLATURE HAS DISCRETION OF PROVIDING FUNDS FOR COMPENSATION—TWO-THIRDS VOTE OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY NECESSARY.

The provisions of the act of 1917 for compensation to owners of live stock injured or killed by dogs are not available for payment for cattle affected with rabies and killed by order of the health officer in 1915.

There is no provision of law providing funds for the payment for stock killed as aforestated, and the matter of special appropriation of funds therefor by the legislature is one addressed to the discretion of that body.

The payment of claims of the character in question not having been provided for by pre-existing law, an appropriation for that purpose requires a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1919.

HON. C. W. KING, Chairman, Finance Committee, Ohio House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 25, 1919, you requested my written opinion upon the following inquiry:

> "(1) Is there any law appropriating money to pay claims to owners of animals bitten by a dog suffering from rabies, when such animals were killed by order of the Board of Health, as stated in the accompanying papers?
> (2) Can this claim be put into the Sundries Bill?
> (3) If this claim is not legal as it now stands, how can it be made so?"

With your communication there were also submitted verified claims by a number of persons to the effect that stock belonging to them was killed under order of the health officer of Hocking County during the year 1915; also a verified report of appraisers fixing a valuation upon said live stock and certificate of the health officer to the effect that an order was issued by him for the disposition of said live stock as aforesaid.

Upon consideration of your question I find that provision is made in the act of May 30, 1917, and found in 107 O. L. 534, relating to the regulation of dogs and providing compensation for damages done thereby, which is applicable to a state of facts similar to those involved in your inquiry, and by said act provision is made for making claim to the township trustees and presenting proof of the injury done as well as the value of the live stock injured or killed; it is provided that the trustees shall make a finding on the right to compensation, which finding shall be certified to the county commissioners, and may be affirmed or modified by that board, and an allowance made in such amount as they shall find to be just.

Further provision is made for appealing from the finding of the county commissioners to the probate court for the determination of the matter before that tribunal.

This act is applicable to loss or injury to horses, sheep, cattle, swine, mules and goats occasioned by a dog not belonging to the owner or harbored upon his premises, and would cover the case presented, except for the fact that the law referred to became effective after the injury to the live stock had been done.

It is noted that the cattle were killed pursuant to the order of the health officer of Hocking county during the year 1915, while the law above noted did not become effective until 1917, and also contains a provision that claims for such injuries shall be presented within six months after the occurrence of the injury, which considerations of course render the provisions of said law ineffective as a remedy for the owners of the stock in question.

I do not find that any specific provision of law for compensation to the owners of live stock other than sheep, injured or killed by dogs was in effect at the time of the injury of the cattle ordered killed by the health officer of Hocking county.

Authority is conferred upon the state board of agriculture to destroy animals affected with or exposed to dangerously contagious or infectious diseases, for the purpose of preventing the spread of such disease, by the act of 1915 prescribing the powers and duties of the board of agriculture, and provision is made for the payment of the value of such live stock to the owners thereof, as follows:

> "Section 1116. When approved by the board of agriculture, all claims of owners of animals killed under the provisions herein relating to the board, shall be paid from the funds appropriated by the general assembly for that purpose."

While there appears to be no specific provision of law authorizing boards of health or health officers to order the killing of live stock, yet by section 1241 G. C. the board of health is authorized to maintain a chemical and bacteriological laboratory for the purpose, among other things, of diagnosing hydrophobia, and under the broad and general powers vested in the board of health, I am of the opinion that where there is a probability of prevalence or spread of rabies on account of live stock being infected therewith, that the board may take such reasonable and necessary steps as shall be found appropriate for eradicating the malady.

When such action has been taken, the general policy of the state in recognition of liability for loss of live stock under such circumstances as evidenced by the legislation above referred to, is such as to suggest an excercise of the legislative discretion in consideration of the claims of the owners of live stock destroyed as set forth in your inquiry.

In short, there appears to be no available remedy for the aforesaid owners of stock except to invoke the appropriating power of the legislature.

It was said in State v. Medbery, 7 O. S. 522, as follows:

> "By virtue of this power of appropriation, the general assembly exercise their discretion in determining, not only what claims against or debts of the state shall be paid, but the amount of expenses which may be incurred. * *
> The discretion of each general assembly for the period of two years in respect to the amount of expenditures, except in some special cases relating to salaries, is without limit and without control."

I call attention to the provisions of section 29 of article II of the constitution, which provides as follows:

> "No extra compensation shall be paid to any officer, public agent or contractor. after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into; nor shall any money be paid, on any claim, the subject matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre-existing law unless such compensation, or claim, be allowed by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly."

Claims of the character involved in your inquiry should be embodied in the sundries appropriation bill where proper attention will be given to the requirement of a two-thirds vote of all members elected to each branch of the general assembly for its allowance.

Therefore answering your inquiry specifically, I advise that there is no present provision of the law for payment of claims of the character presented in your inquiry applicable to losses incurred in the year 1915; and the legislature is invested with authority to make such appropriation for compensation of the owners of said stock as in its discretion it shall determine, which appropriation requires a two-thirds vote of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly for its passage.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF SENATE BILL No. 99—DAM FOR CITY OF AKRON.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1919.

HON. H. J. RITTER, Chairman, Public Works Committee, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested the advice of this department on the constitutionality of senate bill No. 99, Mr. Whittemore. This bill is entitled:

"A bill to prevent destructive floods and conserve and prevent waste of the waters of the streams, lakes and public waters of the state of Ohio, and to provide for the sale or lease to the public of such water for agriculture, commercial, manufacturing and other public purposes."

The bill seems to be in the form of a series of sections supplementary to section 412 G. C., which relates to the powers and duties of the superintendent of public works. It is to be said, however, that the proper enacting clause is not in the bill and if passed it should be amended to supply this defect.

The first supplementary section authorizes the superintendent of public works to construct reservoirs, dams, canals, raceways and other improvements, or make additions to or alterations of existing works of such character constituting a part of the public works of the state, for the purpose of conserving, impounding and storing the waters of a watershed stream, etc., with a view to the promotion of agriculture, commerce, manufacturing and other public purposes. In so doing he is further authorized by this section to receive by gift, purchase or take by appropriation proceedings the property rights, privileges and appurtenances which would have to be secured in order to make such improvements. Preliminary to any steps looking to this end, the section requires that he prepare plans, specifications and estimates of cost of the works he proposes to construct, submitting them to the governor for approval or rejection.

The second supplementary section is conditioned upon the approval of the governor and declares that the superintendent of public works shall in such event proceed to construct the improvements or to make alterations in those already existing, in accordance with the plans and specifications, and to provide funds therefor by issuing and selling "bonds of the state of Ohio" not in excess of the estimated cost of such improvements. These bonds are to run for not exceeding twenty-five years.

The section further provides that:

"Said bonds shall show, on their face, the purpose for which issued and shall create no liability upon, nor in any wise be considered an indebtedness of the state of Ohio, but shall be paid, both principal and interest, solely out of the proceeds arising from the sale or lease of the water impounded and conserved or the power generated by the improvements constructed, altered or enlarged * * * in accordance with the terms and provisions of this act, or from the proceeds of the sale, on foreclosure, as hereinafter provided, of the lien, securing said bonds, on such improvement or such part thereof as may be constructed from the money realized from the sale of said bonds."

The section proceeds to set up machinery for the issuance of the bonds and the custody of the funds realized from their sale, their payment when due, etc. Some slight question arises here respecting the custody of the funds, as to whether or not they would be in the state treasury and subject to appropriation. The bill seems to assume that they would be, but no question as to the constitutionality or validity of the act is here involved, and no such question would be raised until an effort were made to expend moneys in the custody of the treasurer, arising from the sale of the bonds after the expiration of two years from the passage of the act, without making an appropriation for that purpose.

Art. II, Sec. 22 of the constitution provides that:

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, except in pursuance of a specific appropriation, made by law; and no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

It is obvious that this constitutional prohibition is directed to the drawing of money from the treasury. A law that might attempt or seem to attempt to authorize the drawing o money from the treasury, without a specific appropriation, would not be invalid on that account; it would be merely ineffectual and a specific appropriation for the purposes of the law would be sufficient warrant for the drawing of the money from the treasury. Instances of this sort have been frequent in the legislative history of the state.

The next two supplementary sections provide for advertising for bids and letting contracts for the doing of the work.

Section 412-5, as set forth in the bill, authorizes the superintendent of public works to sell or lease the water or any part thereof conserved and stored by such improvement or improvements, or that will be conserved and stored by any such improvement, as shown by the plans and specifications prepared and approved, to be used for agricultural, commercial, manufacturing or other lawful purposes, for a term not exceeding twenty-five years. He is also authorized by the same section to sell and lease, for the same term, the power generated by any head of water raised or maintained by any such improvements, or the right to such head of water for generating power.

In order to avoid misunderstanding, it may be remarked here that the thing to be sold under the terms of the bill, both with respect to the water itself and with respect to the water power, is a right for a term of twenty-five years. In other words, the bill, fairly interpreted, means, not that he may sell in perpetuity or lease for any term not exceeding twenty-five years. If there is any doubt about this point, the bill should be amended so as to make it clear that the advantages accruing from the construction of the works can not be sold in perpetuity, but the whole bill makes it very clear that this is not its intention.

The next section contains a provision to the general effect that in order to ascertain whether a given project is practicable or not, the superintendent of public works may, before selling bonds and receiving bids, enter into tentative agreements for the sale or lease of such water or power, the execution or carrying out of which shall be conditioned upon his ability to sell the bonds and secure bids at the estimated cost, including compensation and damages. It may be remarked, as to this section, that contracts so made would seem to be binding if and when the conditions upon which they are made are satisfied.

Section 412-7 provides for the custody, etc., of the moneys derived from the sale or lease of the water. The remarks which I have made respecting the custody and disposition of the moneys arising from the sale of the bonds apply to this section as well.

Section 412-8 provides that if the works constructed or enlarged by the superintendent of public works shall constitute a part of the "Canal System" of the state of Ohio, no waters shall be leased or sold therefrom by the superintendent of public works, excepting the excess over and above that which may be required for navigation purposes.

Section 412-9 provides in part that:

> "The funds derived from the sale or lease of the water impounded and conserved or the power generated by said improvements are hereby expressly pledged for the purpose of maintaining and keeping in repair said improvements and for the payment of the interest and principal of said bonds, as the same fall due and mature, and in addition thereto, the owner or owners of such bonds is hereby given a lien for the payment thereof, both principal and interest, upon such * * * improvement or any part thereof * * * with the funds derived from the sale of such bonds and, if default be made in the payment of the interest on any of said bonds for three (3) or more successive years, or, if any of said bonds, aggregating in par value not less than one hundred thousand ($100,000.00) dollars be not paid at maturity, then all of said bonds, both principal and interest, shall become due and payable, and the owner or owners of any of said bonds, having any aggregate par value of not less than one hundred thousand ($100,000.00) dollars may institute proceedings against the state of Ohio in the court of common pleas of the county in which is located any of said improvements, constructed * * * out of the proceeds of the sale of such bonds, to foreclose such lien, and said court shall have jurisdiction of such action with full power to foreclose such lien, and to make an order to the sheriff of said county * * * directing him to make a sale of such improvements * * * at not less than two-thirds of the appraised value thereof and upon such terms and in manner and form as provided for in said order, and to pay the proceeds of such sale to the clerk of said court, and upon motion * * * the court shall, if the same be found to be regular * * * confirm the same and order the sheriff to execute a deed to such purchaser and his assigns, conveying to him all the right, title and interest of the holders of said bonds and each of them in and to said improvements, and all the right, title and interest of the state of Ohio, for a period of twenty-five (25) years, from the date of such conveyance, in and to the same, with full right and franchise, for said period of twenty-five (25) years, to operate said improvements and dispose of the water conserved, or the power generated thereby, with the further right, for said period of twenty-five (25) years, to * * * convey said water from said improvement or to conduct and transmit power generated thereby through, over and upon any of the lands of the state or channels or beds of any of its reservoirs, lakes, canals, races, aqueducts or water courses; provided, however, that in the exercise of such rights, such purchaser or his assigns, shall in no wise interfere with the navigation of the canals of the state nor the control and maintenance thereof, nor the sale of water by the state from its * * * improvements other than those so constructed, nor shall the state be held to incur any liability on its part by reason of such sale and rights thereunder, to continue to maintain such canals, races, channels or water courses, or to continue the use thereof, and such conveyance or grant by the sheriff * * * shall contain a clause, giving the superintendent of public works such control of waste gates and wickets, as to regulate the flow of water in state reservoirs, or canals, in such manner as to maintain the proper level of the state's reservoirs and canals and to prevent the flowing into such reservoirs and canals of such quantities of water as might impair any of the property of the state or its lessees.

Upon the foreclosure of said lien and the sale of said improvement * *, all contracts or leases for the sale or lease of water or power then outstanding shall become null and void, and the rights of both of the state of Ohio and the several lessees thereunder, shall cease and determine.

(Here follows a provision for an appraisement in connection with the sale and for certain other matters which might possibly arise during the twenty-five year period to be enjoyed by the grantee of the franchise thereunder.)

At the termination of said period of twenty-five (25) years, all of the rights, and privileges conveyed to said purchaser by the deed and grant of such sheriff * * * shall cease and determine and said improvements * * * shall revert to and become the property of the state of Ohio, free and clear of any and all claims of whatsoever kind or nature against the same."

Section 412-10 provides, by appropriate reference, for the machinery of making appropriations, which is strictly in accordance with the statutory and constitutional provisions relating to the taking of private property for public uses.

Section 412-11 is intended to, and does, safeguard the rights previously acquired by any municipality or other political subdivision of the state in any water or watershed.

A proposed amendment, submitted to me by you with the bill, authorizes the superintendent of public works, in time of severe drought or when from other causes the water supply of any municipality or other political subdivision of the state shall be so reduced or impaired as to endanger the property of the municipality or the health, safety or property of its inhabitants, to grant, under such regulations as he may prescribe, to such municipality, the right, during the continuance of the emergency, to draw or take such quantity of water as may be necessary to protect such property or such health, etc., from any improvement constructed under the provisions of the bill, in preference to the rights of lessees or grantees of the state.

Certain other amendments have also been submitted to me, none of which, however, affect in any way the broad constitutional questions submitted by the committee to me.

The following questions have been raised in my mind:

1. Would the taking of property, for the purpose of impounding water to be used for agricultural, commercial or manufacturing purposes, as well as for other public purposes, be in violation of Art. I, Sec. 19 of the constitution, which provides in part that:

"Private property shall ever be held inviolate but subservient to the public welfare. * * *."

The principle embodied in this section is of course that private property can only be taken for public use. Would a taking of property for the purpose specified be for a public use, in view of the assumed fact that long time leases or sales are to be made of the water impounded, etc., presumably to a limited number of persons? In this connection, of course, it is to be observed that any person, firm or corporation may be let in by contract as a user of the water or water power; but the point is as to whether that can be a public use which is not continually open to the public at large.

In this connection, Art. II, Sec. 36 of the constitution adopted in 1912 is entitled to some weight, as declaring the policy of the state. It provides that:

> "Laws may be passed * * * to provide for the conservation of the natural resources of the state, including streams, lakes, submerged and swamp lands and the development and regulation of water power and the formation of drainage and conservation district; * * *."

Water power is one of the things dealt with by this bill. It could not be developed by the state and made available for the use of citizens indiscriminately to any considerable advantage. In short, water power is a thing which must be used on a comparatively large scale and by a comparatively small number of members of the public. And it may be remarked that the conservation of the resources of this state, in the form of streams, etc., for any similar purpose, would be within the scope of Art. II, Sec. 36; that is to say, any reasonable, economic use that might be made of conserved waters, other than the development of power therefrom, would seem to be within the fair intendment of the section.

But the difficulty, if any, encountered here, disappears when the question is looked at from another angle. If the state could grant by statute, to a private corporation, the right of eminent domain, for the purpose of impounding water for manufacturing purposes or power purposes, or both, or for agricultural purposes, then certainly the state itself could impound water and exercise the right of eminent domain to that end for similar purposes, for the right of eminent domain, whether exercised directly by the state or delegated to private individuals, is founded upon the same notion of a taking for public purposes.

In this connection it is to be observed that the law has gone through a process of development. We may at once lay on one side the question as to the nature of the purpose when agriculture is the object to be served. Many of the western states have irrigation projects for the construction of which the exercise of eminent domain is necessary. It is now beyond question that such agricultural projects do constitute a public purpose, though it is to be noted here that the number of users of water for agricultural purposes must be necessarily limited and in fact is limited by reference to the location of the lands to be irrigated. What is really done by an irrigation project is to benefit lands within a certain area. The same may be said of drainage projects, such as the construction of county and township ditches, which have always been provided for by the laws of this state. These enterprises benefit the lands within a restricted area and yet private property may be taken for such purposes, and this is no longer an open question.

But as to the taking of property for the purpose of impounding water, with a view to its use in the development of power or directly in the processes of manufacture or the arts, the development of the law has been slower. Originally, the view seems to have been held that this was not a public purpose.

Attorney General vs. Eau Claire, 37 Wis. 400.
Kaukauna Water Power Co. vs. Canal Co., 142 U. S. 254.
Minnesota Canal & Power Co., 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 638.

The most recent cases, however, show a departure from this view and a clear recognition of the principle which, as we have seen, is almost necessarily implied in Art. II, Sec. 36 of our constitution, that such uses are public.

Thus it is held in Jacobs vs. Clearview Water Supply Co., 220 Pa. 388, that: (syllabus)

"The supply of water to the public for commercial and manufacturing purposes is a public use and the right of eminent domain may be lawfully conferred to secure property for the safe storage and transportation of water for such purposes, where all applicants have a right to service, although at the time of the taking, the principal, if not only, customer, will be a railroad company."

In the opinion the court says:

"The building of reservoirs for the storage of water and the laying of mains for the purpose of supplying and transporting water and water power for commercial and manufacturing purposes would tend to increase the industrial enterprises and promote the productive power of all citizens who desire to avail themselves of water or water power for these purposes in that community. It is conceded that the supply of water to the public for domestic purposes is a public use, but it is denied that the supply of water for commercial and manufacturing purposes is a public use. The distinction is more apparent than real. It rests on a very narrow edge. It is based on the theory that a large number of individual citizens, living in the community where the respondent company transacts its business, will not engage in commercial and manufacturing enterprises and, therefore, will not participate in the use of water and water power for such purposes. An enterprise does not lose the character of a public use because that use may be limited by circumstances to a comparatively small part of the public."

Of similar purport is the case of Hand Gold Mining Co. vs. Parker, 59 Ga. 419.

In Mt. Vernon, Woodberry Cotton Duck Co. vs. Alabama Interstate Power Co., 240 U. S. 630, a recent case, the supreme court of the United States sustained the constitutionality of a state law authorizing the appropriation of property for the purpose of generating power to sell for manufacturing purposes. The court in its opinion uses the following language:

"The principal argument presented that is open here, is that the purpose of the condemnation is not a public one. The purpose of the power company's incorporation, and that for which it seeks to condemn the property of the plaintiff in error, is to manufacture, supply and sell to the public, power produced by water as a motive force. In the organic relations of modern society it may sometimes be hard to draw the line that is supposed to limit the authority of the legislature to exercise or delegate the power of eminent domain. But to gather the streams from waste and to draw from them energy, labor without brains, and so to save mankind from toil that it can be spared, is to supply what, next to intellect, is the very foundation of all our achievements and all our welfare. If that purpose is not public, we should be at a loss to say what is."

This was a departure from the earlier decision of the court cited, in which the same question was involved; for in both cases the generation of water power was the object of the enterprise.

A significant statement is found in the opinion of Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361. This was an irrigation case, in which it was claimed that it was beyond the power of the legislature to authorize the condemnation of land for the purpose of irrigating the lands of one or two persons. Mr. Justice Peckham used the following language in his opinion:

"In some states, probably in most of them, the proposition contended for by the plaintiffs in error would be sound. But whether a statute of a state permitting condemnation by an individual for the purpose of obtaining water for his land or for mining should be held to be a condemnation for a public use, and, therefore, a valid enactment, may depend upon a number of considerations relating to the situation of the state and its possibilities for land cultivation, or the successful prosecution of its mining or other industries."

This statement must be regarded as very significant, in the light of the fact that Ohio has by direct constitutional provision recognized the tremendous importance of conserving her natural resources in the development of her industrial enterprises. Such a constitutional provision would be the best of evidence in the supreme court of the United States, as to the situation of the state and the extent of the public need to be served.

In this connection, I refer to sections 10128 and 10132 of the General Code, as further indicating the policy of this state with respect to the generation of power.

On principle, it is difficult to see how the public use, upon which this measure is predicated, can be denied. Water is indeed a natural resource. The conditions of making it available are monoplistic. The supply of it is limited as to quantity and as to location. It necessarily follows that the public has a paramount interest in it and that its conservation by the public would be a public enterprise or utility. Because it is likewise limited with respect to the number of persons who can avail themselves of the advantages of such a supply, instead of being open to practically everybody, like a railroad, it does not therefore follow that the public use is destroyed.

Without arguing the question further, it may be stated as the opinion of this department that the bill is constitutional so far as the condemnation feature of it is concerned.

2. Another question which has been considered is as to whether or not the bill violates any of the provisions of Art. VIII of the constitution. The following may be quoted:

"Section 1. The state may contract debts to supply casual deficits or failures in revenues, or to meet expenses not otherwise provided for; but the aggregate amount of such debts, direct and contingent, whether contracted by virtue of one or more acts of the general assembly, or at different periods of time, shall never exceed seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and the money, arising from the creation of such debts, shall be applied to the purpose for which it was obtained, or to repay the debts so contracted, and to no other purpose whatever.

"Section 3. Except the debts above specified in sections one and two of this article, no debt whatever shall hereafter be created by or on behalf of the state.

Section 4. The credit of the state shall not, in any manner be given or loaned to, or in aid of, any individual association or corporation whatever; nor shall the state ever hereafter become a joint owner, or stockholder, in any company or association in this state, or elsewhere, formed for any purpose whatever."

The last quoted section may, it is believed, at once be dismissed from consideration. In the first place, the state does not pledge its credit at all by this bill, but merely the proceeds of the operation of certain public works and the right to use those public works for a limited period. The ultimate title to the lands and other rights taken by the state for the purpose of constructing the works, and that of the works themselves, remains in the state, no matter what happens. The general resources of the state are not involved at all. In the second place, neither the lessees or purchasers of water power or water, nor the purchasers of the bonds, could be said to have the benefit of a loaning of the state's credit, or to be joint owners, with the state, of the enterprise. As has been said, the state is to be the sole owner and the credit of any of those who deal with the state under this bill is in nowise enhanced by that of the state.

The real question here involved arises under sections 1 and 3 of the constitution The general assembly, acting for the state, is prevented by these provisions from incurring a debt for a purpose like that involved in the bill. This is sought to be avoided by the provision that the bonds to be issued are not to constitute a general obligation of the state, but are to be regarded as promises of the state to pay from the revenues of a particular enterprise. It is clear that under the terms of the bill the state could never be liable beyond the earnings of the public works constructed under it. Every possible contingency growing out of the failure of such earnings to afford sufficient revenue to provide for the payment of the bonds seems to be guarded against in such a way that the remedy of the bondholders would be limited to the foreclosure of the lien and the sale thereunder of the franchise to operate the works for a period of twenty-five years. After such foreclosure, the contract of the bond holders would be fully discharged, as they would have expressly agreed to look solely to their rights under the bill in payment of the obligations held by them. After the expiration of the twenty-five years last named, the property would revert to the state, free and clear of all incumbrances.

The word "debt," as used in the sections quoted from Art. VIII of the constitution, is clearly limited to general obligations. The bill embodies not an attempt to do indirectly what can not be done directly, but an effort to do something which is not prohibited at all.

State vs. Medbery, 7 O. S. 522.

I do not quote from the decision cited, though the whole opinion is responsive to the point on which I have cited it. The theory of that case was, in short, that where revenue is provided, out of which alone, an obligation created by the state, is payable in other words, where no obligation is created that is not provided for by revenues available at the time, and anticipated by the obligation—no debt is incurred.

3. Another similar question, arising under the sections last above considered, together with Art. II, section 22, of the constitution, above quoted, is as to whether or not these sections of the constitution are violated by the provision for the issuance of bonds, in that the general assembly is called upon to appropriate money beyond two years from the issuance of the bonds, for the purpose of paying them.

This question is more serious. It arises from the opinion of Judge Swan in the case last cited and is not lightly to be disposed of.

While the only promise made by the state is that the revenues of the water power project shall be devoted to the payment of bonds, yet if these revenues are to pass into the state treasury, they could not be paid out of such treasury, except in pursuance of appropriations which could not last for longer than two years. State vs. Medbery decides that the concurrent effect of the sections now under discussion prohibits one legislature or one administrative officer from making a contract which will require for its discharge, on the part of the state, an appropriation beyond two years, except for the current expenses of the state.

(See State ex rel. vs. Donahey, 93 O. S. 414.)

Previously in this opinion, reference has been made to the language of the bill relating to the custody of the funds derived from the sale of water power or the lease thereof or of water. I refer now more particularly to section 412-7 and lines 197 and 198 therein, where the phrase "unless otherwise lawfully appropriated by the general assembly" is used. In my judgment this provision infers that the treasurer of state has more than mere custody of the "Water Conservation Fund" provided for in that section and would be holding such fund in the state treasury, where it would be subject to appropriation by the general assembly. If so, the bill is unconstitutional, as an attempt to create a debt in the sense of requiring appropriations by subsequent general assemblies to discharge contracts made on behalf of the state.

I think that this defect might be eliminated by striking out the language to which I have called attention and putting into the section, at some appropriate place, words indicating more clearly than those now employed seem to indicate—though their fair purport seems to be in that direction—that the moneys derived from the sale or lease of the water or the power shall, when collected, be held in a fund which shall not be in the state treasury, but may be disbursed without appropriation by the general assembly. Indeed, there is another provision in the bill, relating to the payment of the bonds, which directly so provides.

If this were done, however, and if the bill were made consistent throughout, so as to indicate clearly the scheme of custody and disbursement of the funds arising from the rentals and other receipts which has been described, one more question—which is indeed the ultimate question raised by the bill—would remain to be disposed of.

Can the general assembly provide that revenues from the use of state property shall not be placed in the state treasury and subject to appropriation? This question has never been decided by the supreme court of this state. The legislature of the state has, however, acted for years upon the assumption of an affirmative answer to this question.

Until section 24 G. C. was passed in its present form, which was quite recently, there were numerous funds belonging to the state, but held outside the treasury of the state and therefore not subject to appropriation. At the present time, by virtue of subsequent amendment of another section of the General Code, there is at least one fund which is so held. I refer to the manufacturing fund of the Ohio board of administration, consisting of receipts from the sales of articles manufactured at the institutions under the control of said board, which by virtue of section 1866 G. C.

> "shall not be turned into the state treasury, but shall be credited to said fund, to be used for the purchase of further materials, machinery and supplies for such industries, for payment of compensation to employes necessary to carry on said industries, and for payments to convicts or their families as hereinafter provided, * * *."

I may mention also the original or voluntary workmen's compensation act of 1911, under which the treasurer of state was designated as the mere custodian of the fund which was to be expended without appropriation by the general assembly.

Of course when a collector of revenue for the state receives it into his possession, he is personally chargeable with it until he has accounted for it in such manner as may be prescribed by law. Formerly, many statutes, requiring money to be paid into the state treasury, provided for quarterly or other periodical payments. Section 24 G. C., previously referred to, was amended with a view to having these payments made at shorter intervals. It is obvious, however, that under the former state of the law the moneys, when collected for the state, did not ipso facto constitute moneys in the state treasury. It took a positive provision of statute, directing that they be paid into the state treasury, to get them there.

Again, numerous statutes have existed from time to time, and some now exist, authorizing state officers or boards to receive, and hold in trust, money and property to be applied or used in accordance with the direction of the trust.

Section 24 G. C. itself contains an exception, authorizing the retention of tuitions and fees by the officers of educational institutions, in order to allow the making of refunders.

The cumulative effect of the laws to which I have referred in very weighty. It tends to establish a legislative interpretation of the constitution to the effect that money collected for a state purpose is not in the state treasury in the first instance and does not come into the state treasury save in pursuance of a statute to that effect. As a corollary to this proposition, it necessarily follows that a law segregating the proceeds of a particular enterprise and keeping them outside of the state treasury may be constitutionally enacted. Inasmuch as Art. II, section 22 of the constitution applies only to the expenditure of moneys in the state treasury, it necessarily follows, in the light of all that has been said in this opinion, that a debt would not be created by pledging such segregated revenues for a particular purpose.

From another point of view, it is clear that the state may authorize its officers to hold and administer property in trust.

I am not prepared to say that the bill at present has the form of a declaration of trust. It might easily be altered, however, so that it would take such form. In such event, the obligation of the custodian of the receipts from water rentals and sales of water and water power would be that of a trustee. He and he alone could be reached by the bondholders, for the protection of their interests. In proceeding against him, they would be enforcing the obligations of a trustee and not a personal liability in the nature of a debt.

In view of the legislative history of the state, then, and in view too of the established rule that statutes are to be held constitutional unless their invalidity is established beyond a reasonable doubt, I would be unable to reach the conclusion that the bill before me, if amended in the particular last above suggested, would be unconstitutional, though as a matter of first impression the contrary view might appeal to me.

In this connection, it is to be observed that in so far as the bill is concerned, the bondholders are an entirely different set of parties from the vendees and lessees of water and water power. It is not, therefore, as if the entire arrangement was legally for the benefit of those who may obtain such leases, etc.

4. I have also considered Art. XII, section 11 of the constitution, which provides that:

> "No bonded indebtedness of the state, * * *, shall be incurred * * * unless, in the legislation under which such indebtedness is incurred * * * provision is made for levying and collecting annually by taxation an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity."

I have already indicated that in my opinion the bonds to be issued under the bill would not constitute a "debt." The thing to which Art. XII, section 11 relates is not an issue of bonds as such, but a "bonded indebtedness." This section was never intended to have the effect of requiring all bonds to be general obligations; its purpose was to require the due amortization of all such general obligations.

5. I have also considered Art. XII, section 6 of the constitution, which provides that:

> "Except as otherwise provided in this constitution the state shall never contract any debt for purposes of internal improvement."

The previous discussion is sufficient to indicate my view of this section, which is that it has no application to the bill under consideration.

For all the foregoing reasons, I may say that if the amendment previously suggested herein should be made, together with the other amendments which have been considered, I would not feel justified in saying that the bill as submitted would be unconstitutional, though on all the points discussed, save the first one, I am conscious of considerable doubt.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF YOUNGSTOWN—CHIEF DEPUTY CLERK AND CHIEF DEPUTY BALIFF—NOT IN CLASSIFIED CIVIL SERVICE—SALARY MAY NOT BE INCREASED DURING TERM OF OFFICE—SAID OFFICERS OR EMPLOYES HAVE A FIXED TERM OF OFFICE.

Under the municipal court of Youngstown, the act, being sections 1579-127 *G. C. et seq., the chief deputy clerk and chief deputy bailiff are appointed "each respectively for a term of two years * * * who shall serve until their successor is appointed and qualified respectively."*

Section 1579-175 *of said act provides that the judges of the Youngstown municipal court "shall have full power and authority to dismiss or discharge * * * chief deputy clerk * * * chief deputy bailiff * * * for any cause, and appoint a successor, and their decision shall be final."*

Section 1579-161 G. C. also provides that such chief deputies shall be in the classified civil service of the city of Youngstown "subject to the provisions of law."

HELD—A chief deputy clerk and chief deputy bailiff of such municipal court have a definite term of office and are such officers or employes having a fixed term of office or employment that their salary may not be legally increased, under section 4213 G. C., during the term of their office or employment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 8, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Office, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgement is made of the receipt of your letter dated February 27, 1919, with which you enclose communication from the city auditor of Youngstown, Ohio, as follows:

> "The chief deputy bailiff and the deputy clerk of the municipal court of Youngstown, Ohio, have since the first day of January, 1914, held their positions as members of the classified service of said city. On the 12th day of August, 1918, city council passed an ordinance increasing the compensation of the employes of said court. All employes receiving such increase in compensation have been paid said increase except the two said chief deputies. The judges and all the employes of said court are paid salaries out of the municipal court fund, which fund was and is large enough to maintain said court and leave a balance of many thousand dollars. Has city council legally increased the compensation of said chief deputies by enacting said ordinance, a copy of which I am enclosing? If so, can the city auditor honor vouchers which have been drawn semi-monthly since September 13, 1918, for said salaries which include said increase?"

A copy of ordinance 21724 of said city, fixing the compensation and bonds of judges and employes of a municipal court of said city is attached to said communication.

It is noted that the question upon which you desire the opinion of this department is whether or not, upon the facts stated, the city council has legally increased the compensation of the chief deputy baliff and clerk of said court so as to be effective during the term which they are now serving.

Section 4213 G. C., is pertinent and in part is as follows:

> "The salary of any officer, clerk or employe shall not be increased * * during the term for which he was elected or appointed."

The municipal court of Youngstown was established by sections 1579-127 G. C., et seq., passed April 15, 1913 (103 O. L. 354). Sections 1579-161, 1579-166, 1579-168 and 1579-175 of said act pertain to the appointment, term and salary of such employes. In part section 1579-161 G. C. is as follows:

> "On the fourth Monday of November, 1913, and biennially thereafter, at one o'clock in the afternoon of said day, the respective judges of the said municipal court shall meet and select * * * Second, a clerk, a chief deputy clerk, a bailiff, and a chief deputy bailiff of said municipal court, each respectively for a term of two years * * *, who shall serve until their successor is appointed and qualified respectively. The manner and form of procedure of selecting said officers shall be determined by the said respective judges of said municipal court, and the manner and form of procedure may be modified from time to time as in the opinion of said respective judges may be desirable. * * * Additional deputies to the clerk and bailiff shall be designated as hereinafter provided for in this act. All appointive officers of the municipal court, excepting the clerk and baliff, shall be in the classified civil service of the city of Youngstown, subject to the pro- visions of law, and of any charter which may be hereafter adopted by said city, applying to and applicable to said civil service."

Section 1579-166 G. C. in part is:

"The chief deputy clerk shall receive such compensation payable out of the treasury of the city of Youngstown * * * as the council or other proper legal authority may prescribe."

Section 1579-167 G. C. in part is:

"The * * * chief deputy bailiff shall perform * * * service similar to those usually performed by the sheriff for courts of common pleas * * *. The chief deputy bailiff shall receive such compensation not less than one thousand two hundred dollars, per annum * * * as the council or other legislative authority may prescribe."

Section 1579-168 G. C. in part is:

"* * * the judges of the municipal court shall select such number of deputy clerks, or deputy bailiffs as they may deem necessary * * * who shall serve for such time or term as the judges of said court shall determine."

Section 1579-175 in part is:

"A vacancy in the office of * * * chief deputy clerk * * * chief deputy bailiff shall be filled by the judges * * * for the unexpired term. Said judges shall have full power and authority to dismiss or discharge the * * * chief deputy clerk * * * chief deputy bailiff or any other appointee or officer other than a judge, provided for in this act, for any cause, and appoint a successor, and their decision shall be final."

Sections 1579-129, 1579-132 and 1579-172 G. C. were amended March 21, 1917. (Ohio Laws 107, page 687), but the amendments of that date do not affect or change the law in the matters above quoted.

Section 486-13 of the civil service law, as amended in 106 O. L., p. 408, is pertinent and in part is:

"Appointments to all positions in the classified service * * * shall be made only from those persons whose names are certified to the appointing officer * * * and no employment, except as provided in this act, shall be otherwise given in the classified service of this state or any political subdivision thereof."

It is to be observed that the inhibition of section 4213 G. C., supra, is against changing the salary or compensation of an officer or employe "during the term for which he is elected or appointed." Consideration of the numerous decisions under this section and the analogous provision of section 20 of Article II of the Ohio constitution has resulted in the construction of this statute that there must be a term in the sense that the officer or employe holds his office or employment for a definite period.

As held in State ex rel. vs. Massillon, 2 O. C. C. (n. s.) 169, the health officer is not an "officer" as defined in section 4213 G. C., nor has he any "term" as these words are used and understood in said section.

In State ex rel vs. Painesville, 13 O. C. C. (n. s.) 577, it was held that notwithstanding their tenure of office or employment was made uncertain by being under the civil service, the policemen and firemen were "officers" within the meaning of section 4213 and had terms of office as used and understood in said section.

Later, however, in State vs. Couglan, 12 N. P. (n. s.) 419, and in State vs. Bishop, 12 N. P. (n. s.) 369, the same question was considered and the opposite conclusion reached.

These conflicting decisions were considered in an opinion rendered by the Attorney-General May 18, 1912, construing section 4213 G. C., the conclusion of which was that the reasoning of the later decisions above referred to properly states the rule of law. On page 1739, Attorneys General's Report for 1912, my predecessor held:

> "I am, therefore, of the opinion that those holding under the civil service are not appointed for a 'term' within the meaning of section 4213 G. C., and that, consequently, council has power to increase or diminish their salary after appointment."

From this conclusion I am not inclined to dissent. The question involved in the facts above stated may be stated in this manner: The salaries of such deputies may not be increased during their incumbency if they have in law a fixed term. Then it may be stated that under section 1579-161, supra, such deputies do have a fixed term of two years unless that part of said section last quoted has the effect to place such deputies in the classified civil service of the city of Youngstown and in its last analysis we may say that this question depends entirely upon the construction to be given those sections of the Youngstown municipal court act, above quoted.

It is to be noted that in the section last referred to, the statute is without ambiguity in providing "a chief deputy clerk * * * and a chief deputy bailiff * * * each respectively for a term of two years."

It is also to be observed that section 1579-175 is likewise free from uncertainty and, without qualification, it provides:

> "Said judges shall have full power and authority to dismiss or discharge * * * chief deputy clerk * * * chief deputy bailiff * * * *for any cause * * * and their decision shall be final.*"

Yet another provision of section 1579-161 G. C. provides:

> "The manner and form of procedure of selecting such officers shall be determined by the said respective judges * * * and the manner and form of procedure may be modified from time to time as in the opinion of said respective judges may be desired."

It is to be noted that the above provisions as to tenure of employment are utterly inconsistent with the theory and purpose of the civil service law, and if those parts of the sections, above quoted, were all of the act bearing on such officers, there would be little left for construction; but the latter part of section 1579-161 contains this language:

> "All appointive officers of the municipal court, excepting the clerk and bailiff, shall be in the classified civil service of the city of Youngstown."

This provision, however, is "subject to the provisions of law and of any charter which may be hereafter adopted by said city, applying to and applicable to said civil service," and with these conflicting provisions in the act it is rather difficult to say to what extent the chief deputy bailiff and chief deputy clerk would be in the classified civil service. But we may, for the purpose of determining whether such appointees have a term of office, consider which of these conflicting provisions is so clearly expressed as to show the legislative intention and the rule of construction applicable in such cases of repugnancy and inconsistency, as to give that construction which, other things being equal, will have the effect to harmonize what would otherwise amount to conflicting and repugnant provisions.

It cannot logically be said that such deputies are in the classified civil serivce and subject to all of the provisions of the civil service law and at the same time subject to removal and discharge by the judges of said court, from whose decision there would be no appeal.

In view of the definiteness with which the term of these deputies are fixed, and in view of the discretionary powers vested in the iudges of said courts, in the manner and form of their selection, and their discharge from service, it would seem that it was the intention to include within the civil service law all appointive officers in said court to whom the civil service law would apply, excepting as might be inconsistent with the other provisions of the act establishing the Youngstown municipal court. The effect of this construction would be that all such officers and employes, other than such chief deputies, without a fixed term, are included in the classified civil service, and that the construction of the last clause of section 1579-161 G. C., should be as if it had provided "that all appointive officers of the municipal court * * * shall be in the classified civil service of the city of Youngstown, except as provided in this act."

Reading and considering the whole of the Youngstown municipal court act, this, it seems, is the proper conclusion, and I am therefore of the opinion that said chief deputy clerk and chief deputy baliff have a fixed term of two years, notwithstanding the civil service clause in said act, and that their compensation cannot be increased during the term for which they are appointed. It necessarily follows that the increased compensation provided in said ordinance cannot regularly be paid to such deputies during the term for which they were appointed.

The conclusion reached on the question first stated in your letter necessarily results in a negative answer to the second question stated therein.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 8, 1919.

HON. GEORGE S. MAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Napoleon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter requesting an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "Prior to November 11, 1918, Henry county was divided into three supervision districts with a district superintendent in charge of each of said districts. On said date of November 11th, the county superintendent of this county resigned and Mr. T., formerly a district superintendent, was elected to the position of county superintendent, leaving Mr. S. and Mr. R. sole district superintendents.
> On November 19, 1918, on application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural boards of education of said county, said county was redistricted into two supervision districts. On the same date a majority of the presidents of the village and rural districts respectively selected Mr. S. and Mr. R., as district superintendents of the two districts, therefore created, for the term of three years.
> The record of the minutes do not disclose that the meeting for the purpose of electing said district superintendents was called by the president of the board in the village or rural district having the largest number of teachers on ten days' notice and it is claimed that in one instance at least the president of a rural district received no notice of such meeting.
> Having in mind the provisions of sections 4739, 4741 and 4742 of the General Code, inquiry is made as to whether the election of such district superintendents was lawfully had.
> Your opinion in the matter is desired at the earliest possible moment, so that the status of said district superintendent may be determined with reference to the drawing of their compensation under such election."

Attention is invited to section 4738 G. C., which reads in part:

> "The county board of education shall divide the county school district any year, to take effect the first day of the following September, into supervision districts, each to contain one or more village or rural districts * * * The county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts."

It will be noted in the above section that the county board of education "shall divide the county school district any year," which seems to contemplate not more than one division in any school year, for the school year starting on September first and ending on August thirty-first is what is meant; the statute does not say the county board of education shall divide the county school district any "time," and the use of the words "any year" must have been used advisedly by the legislature, having in mind that new divisions made at any time throughout the year, and at frequent or sudden intervals would disturb the school plans of the year. It will be noted, too, that the statute says that such division, when made in "any year, to take effect the first day of the following September," that is, the beginning of the next school year.

The reasons for preventing the dividing of the county school district at unusual times, is at once apparent, for aside from disturbing and upsetting plans made for the school year, beginning on September first, it must be remembered that the state itself is involved in such dividing, for part of the salaries of the district superintendents is paid by the state. In the case in question, Henry county had three supervision districts when the school year of September first, 1918, began; such arrangement for taxing and financial purposes was on file with the county auditor, and was so certified to the state authorities, who made the allotment of state aid for district superintendents' salaries for the school year, beginning on September first, 1918. The financial sheet, arranging for the expense of such supervision districts, had been made up, and properly certified to both state and county authorities prior to September first, on the basis that such school year was to be undisturbed, yet, according to the statement of facts given, within eighty days after September first, this plan is radically changed in placing certain village and rural districts in new supervision districts. If such changes can be made at will at any time after the financial arrangements for the school year have been made and certified, then it is pertinent to ask whether a county board might not again change the districts at the end of another eighty days or a lesser period, thus disturbing proper supervision as well as the financial unit of the school year, as arranged prior to September first, by officers in charge of funds, for that school year. Surely the law does not contemplate promiscuous changes at will, after September first, to be effective at once, as in this case, or it would not say that such changes shall "be effective the first day of the following September," as appears in section 4738 G. C.

It may be said that the language of section 4738 G. C., which says "the county board of education shall, upon application of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural district boards of the county, redistrict the county into supervision districts," gives power to the county board of education to "redistrict" at any time such petition is filed, to be effective at once, as was done in this case. However, this language is a part of the same section 4738 G. C., which says the dividing of the county school district may be done "any year, to take effect the first day of the following September," and the provision that three-fourths of the presidents may make application for a redistricting in any year, and the county board shall redistrict upon receipt of such application, is a mere saving clause to force a county board to act in any year upon a redistricting where such board might be out of harmony with a proposition that had the support of three-fourths of the presidents of the village and rural boards in the county, but in any event, whether such board did the redistricting voluntarily and without application, or made such new districts because of proper application, it would "take effect the first day of the following September" and not at a time during the current school year for which arrangements had been made prior to September first.

Attention is also directed to the closing language of section 4738 G. C., under discussion, which says:

"The county board of education may at their discretion require the > county superintendent to personally supervise not to exceed forty teachers of the village and rural schools of the county. This shall supersede the necessity of the district supervision of these schools."

It will thus be seen that the legislature has wisely provided for the contingency of the overseeing of a portion of the county schools where occasion might demand, through a vacancy in a district superintendency, as in this case where Mr. T, a district superintendent, leaving a vacancy in the territory over which he formerly had charge prior to November 11, 1918, as such district superintendent. It cannot be said, then, that the supervision district of Mr. T. would be without supervision, for even if a district superintendent were not elected in such district, covering the vacancy, section 4738 G. C. provides, as stated, that the county board can direct the county superintendent to supervise such territory up to forty teachers. So there were two avenues which the Henry county board of education did not use in providing supervision for the superintendent's district left vacant by the promotion and election of Mr. T. to the county superintendency on November 11, 1918. We find that eight days thereafter they eliminated the T. district entirely, November 18, 1918, and made the three districts into two, possibly increasing the compensation of the two district superintendents, as is inferred from your closing paragraph, which says that an opinion is desired because of "drawing their compensation under such election."

Coming now to the question of electing the two districts superintendents in the two new supervision districts, we find that Mr. R. and Mr. S. were elected for the term of three years at their first election as district superintendents in such newly created territory. Attention is invited to section 4741 G. C., which says:

> "The first election of any district superintendent shall be for a term not longer than one year, thereafter he may be reelected in the same district for a period not to exceed three years."

On November 11, 1918, two new districts were created in Henry county by the county board of education; districts composed of territory that before such date were the integers of three districts; the personnel of presidents of village and rural boards of education, whose duty it was to elect district superintendents, was an entirely new board as compared to any existing in such county prior to November 11, 1918. Thus these districts, newly created, were holding their "first election of any district superintendent" and the statute limits such first election of any district superintendent to "be for a term not longer than one year" and to get a three year term in such district it must come from a re-election in the same district, as provided in section 4741 G. C., for it is clear that certain presidents thrown into a new district on November 11, 1918, were voting in their first election of Mr. R. as their district superintendent, and other presidents were voting in the first election for Mr. S. as their district superintendent and an election for a three year term would be void in a newly created district.

You say further in your statement that "the minutes do not disclose that the meeting for the purpose of electing said district superintendents was called by the president of the board in the village or rural district having the largest number of teachers on ten days' notice" as is required in section 4742 G. C. in the matter of electing district superintendents. You further say that "it is claimed in one instance at least the president of a rural district received no notice of such meeting." It has been frequently held that a board of education speaks only through its minutes, and such minutes should show that "pursuant to the call" of the proper authority, such board met to transact its business. What the minutes show governs in board meetings, else any group could meet clandestinely and attempt to do business for the whole board.

Section 4742 G. C. is mandatory that the president of the board having the largest number of teachers shall issue such call for the purpose of electing a district superintendent, and at least ten days' notice shall be given. You say the two new districts were created on November 19, 1918, and on the same day a majority of the presidents in the respective two new districts selected Mr. R. and Mr. S. as the district superintendents in such new districts for the term of three years. Both actions having taken place on November 19, 1918, it is pertinent to ask how any president in the newly created district could receive the legal notice of "at least ten days" when such ten days would first expire on November 29, 1918. Surely no one knew, prior to November 19, 1918, what presidents composed each new district board or which one was the "president of the board having the most teachers," that is to say, the one to issue the call, which could not issue earlier than November 19, 1918. So it would seem that there was no legal call at all for such meeting to elect district superintendents in the two new districts, but rather a meeting of certain members by an understanding, since both redistricting by the county board and the electing by the district boards took place the same date, which the law does not contemplate since each president must have at least ten days' notice, and it could not issue before November 19, 1918.

Based upon the facts stated and the sections of the law quoted, it is the opinion, therefore, that the entire proceeding was irregular; that while the county board could re-district upon application of three-fourths of the village and rural district presidents, and did so, such re-districting is not effective till the first of the following September; that at the present time Henry county has three supervision districts as on September first, 1918, and for which provision was made prior thereto; that R. and S. are superintendents of the districts in which first legally elected and until September first, 1919; that there is a vacancy in the district formerly supervised by T., the new county superintendent, which can be filled by the presidents of such district; that the county board of education can assign supervision work to the county superintendent up to forty teachers, where supervision by district superintendent is to be superseded; that no district superintendents have been legally chosen in the two newly created districts, which become effective on September 1, 1919, because proper notice to all the presidents concerned was not given ten days in advance of such meeting to elect district superintendents; that when such district superintendent is chosen in a new district, the first election must be but for one year, and the election of R. and S. for three years in the new districts is invalid.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHEN AND HOW MEMBERS ARE TO BE CHOSEN—SUCCESSORS, HOW CHOSEN—VACANCIES—REMOVAL OF MEMBER CHOSEN IRREGULARLY BY QUO WARRANTO PROCEEDINGS.

1. The statute which confers upon the presidents of the boards of education of he various village and rural school districts of each county authority to elect a member of the county board of education each year, does not authorize the election of a member of such board for a term which does not begin until after the expiration of the terms of office of such presidents.

2. A person elected in June, 1915, as member of a county board of education for the term beginning the third Saturday in January, 1916, has no valid title to such office; like wise the election of a person in June, 1916, to succeed the member whose term expires the third Saturday in January, 1917, is invalid.

3. Members of boards of education regularly chosen, hold their office till their successors are legally elected and qualified.

4. Where a member of a board of education is holding beyond his term and until his successor is legally elected and qualified, such successor can be elected for the unexpired term at any time after such vacancy has occurred through failure to properly elect for the regular term.

5 A member of a county board of education chosen irregularly in the year prior to the third Saturday in January, when such regular term begins, can be removed through quo warranto proceedings.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 8, 1919.

HON. W. R. WHITE, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of February 28, 1919, in which you request an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "On December 19, 1917, the then Attorney-General rendered an opinion No. 877 that a member of the county board of education, who is elected to succeed a member whose term expires on the day preceding the third Saturday in January, 1918, must be elected by the presidents of the various boards of education of the county school district, who are elected on the first Saturday, 1918, or who are serving until their successors are duly elected and qualified. I desire to ask if the above opinion still holds good.
> We have two members of the county board of education, one of whom was elected in the month of June, 1915, and the other was elected in the month of June, 1916, and while both members are qualified and acting, I write to ask if in your opinion they are legally elected and if not could they be ousted from their office by proceedings in quo warranto?"

In opinion No. 877, 1917, above referred to, the Attorney-General held that:

> "A member of the county board of education who is elected to succeed the member whose term expired on the day preceding the third Saturday in January, 1918, must be elected by the presidents of the various boards of education of the county school district who are elected on the first Monday in January, 1918, or who are serving until their successors are duly elected and qualified. That is to say, it will be for the new electing body and not the old, to elect such successor."

In your statement of facts you say that one member of your county board of education was elected in the month of June, 1915, and another was elected in the month of June, 1916; that is to say, the presidents of the village and rural districts met in June, 1915, and elected a member of the county board of education whose term was to legally begin the third Saturday in January, 1916, or at a time after their own terms might expire with January first, 1916; and in similar manner the presidents of the village and rural boards of education met in June, 1916, and elected a member of the county board of education, whose term was legally to begin on the third Monday in January, 1917, or after the expiration of their own terms on January first, 1917.

Section 4729 G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 136, provides in part as follows:

> "On the second Saturday in June, 1914, the presidents of the boards of education of the various village and rural school districts in each county school district shall meet and elect the five members of the county board of education, one for one year, one for two years, one for three years, one for four years and one for five years, and until their successors are elected and qualified. The terms of office of such members shall begin on the fifteenth of July, 1914, and each year thereafter on the third Saturday of January. Each year thereafter one member of the county board of education shall be elected in the same manner for a term of five years."

Attention is invited to an opinion of the Attorney-General, (no. 1266) rendered on February 14, 1916, construing the above section and in which he says:

"While it is difficult to construe the above provisions of section 4729 G. C., in view of the patent ambiguity as to when said term (that for one year) expires, I think it was the intention of the legislature in providing for the first election of the members of the county board of education on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for the term of one, two, three, four and five years, respectively, and until their successors should be elected and qualified, and by further providing that in each year after 1914 one member of said county board of education shall be elected for a term of five years to begin on the third Saturday of January, that the member elected on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for the one year term should hold over until the third Saturday in January, 1916, and that the terms of office of the members elected for two, three, four and five years respectively, should expire on the third Saturday of January in the respective years, 1917, 1918, 1919 and 1920."

It will thus be seen that there was no vacancy to be filled in 1915 at all and hence there could have been no valid election, for the one year term incumbent held till the third Saturday in January, 1916, at which time his successor should have been chosen by the presidents of the village and rural boards who themselves took office as such presidents, beginning with January, 1916; and the presidents in office in June, 1915, were without authority to elect any member of the county board of education for no vacancy occurred during 1915, and an election so held in June, 1915, was invalid and the person holding such membership in the county board of education, dating as of an election held in June, 1915, holds office through an irregular procedure.

As you have submitted no names, for the purpose of elucidation we will refer to the members and the terms involved, as follows:

The member of the county board of education elected in June, 1914, for the one year term, will be called Mr. A; the member elected in June, 1914, for the two year term, will be called Mr. B; the person elected in June, 1915, will be called Mr. C; and the person elected in June, 1916, will be called Mr. D., as more than likely four separate persons are involved, or at least there were four elections, or presumed elections.

The former Attorney-General, in his opinion No. 1266, 1916, held there was no vacancy during 1915, and there being no vacancy there was no office to fill by the presidents of the village and rural boards in office during 1915, hence Mr. A, elected in June, 1914, for the one year term, did not retire until the third Saturday in January, 1916; the statutory time for the election of a successor to Mr. A was after January 1, 1916, and if Mr. A.'s successor was not specifically elected after January 1, 1916, then Mr. A is still a member of the county board of education because no successor has been legally elected and qualified, and under the statute (section 4729 G. C.) the members chosen in June, 1914, serve "until their successors are elected and qualified." And since his term has expired and he is merely holding over "till his successor is elected and qualified," it is for the properly elected presidents of the village and rural boards to elect his successor for the term ending the third Saturday in January, 1921, that is to say, five years from the third Saturday in January, 1916.

And so, in electing Mr. C. in June, 1915, to succeed Mr. A., whose term expired the third Saturday in January, 1916, the presidents were holding an election that was without authority, there being no vacancy during their tenure as such presidents. Mr. C. did not succeed Mr. A. legally because he was chosen at the wrong time and was elected by the wrong personnel of presidents, that is, those in office in June, 1915, and not those in office as the proper electing authority, in January, 1916, the time of the ending of the term of Mr. A. So Mr. C., chosen in June, 1915, as a member of the county board of education, was not legally elected and qualified as such for the reasons given.

Coming now to the person chosen in June, 1916, as member of the county board of education, and who has been designated as Mr. D., it must follow that the presidents elected Mr. D. as the successor of Mr. B., the member elected in June, 1914, for the two-year term, for they had already elected the successor of Mr. A. at their meeting in June, 1915. That is to say, the board presidents met again in June, 1916, and elected a successor to the two-year term member (Mr. B.), whom the former Attorney-General said held his office till the third Saturday in January' 1917, or after the expiration of the tenure of the 1916 presidents as then made up. Clearly the successor of Mr. B., elected in June, 1914, for the two year term, should have been chosen by the presidents after January 1, 1917, and not by the presidents in office in June, 1916.

Sustaining the view that a board or an officer cannot make a valid appointment to take effect at a time beginning after the tenure of such officer or board has expired, attention is invited to the following language in the case of State vs. Sullivan, 81 O. S., 79-92, that:

> "It is admittedly the well-established rule of law that an officer clothed with authority to appoint to a public office, cannot, in the absence of express statutory authority, make a valid appointment thereto for a term which is not to begin until after the expiration of the term of such appointing officer. Mechem in his work on public offices and officers, at section 133, states the general rule as follows: 'The appointing power cannot forestall the rights and prerogatives of their own successors by appointing successors to office expiring after their power to appoint has itself expired.' The author than quotes with approval the language of Buchanan, J., in Ivy vs. Lusk, 11 La., 486, where he says: 'That an appointment thus made by anticipation has no other basis than expediency and convenience, and can only derive its binding force and effect from the supposition that there will be no change of person, and consequently of will, on the part of the appointing power, between the date of the exercise of that power by anticipation, and that of the necessity for the exercise of such power by the vacancy of the office.' Throop on his treatise on public officers, section 92, says: 'But it has been held that where an office is to be filled by appointment by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, the governor and senate cannot forestall their successors, by appointing a person to an office which is then filled by another, whose term will not expire until after the expiration of the terms of the governor and senators. And that an outgoing board of freeholders of a county cannot lawfully appoint a person to an office which will not become vacant during their official terms.' The correctness and soundness of the rule and doctrine as above enumerated, so far as investigation has disclosed to us, is not opposed by any of the authorities, but is supported by many, among which are State ex rel. Bownes v. Meehan, 45 N. J. L., 189; The People ex rel. Sweet vs. Ward, 107 Cal. 236; Ivy vs. Lusk, 11 La. An., 486."

This view is further sustained in the case of State ex rel. Attorney-General vs. Thompson, 6 O. C. D., 106-110, and also in Commissioners vs. Ramek, 9 O. C. C., 301.

This view is further sustained in the quo warranto proceedings in the case of The State ex rel. Scott vs. Ryan, 95 O. S., 405, where the Ohio Supreme court held in construing section 4729 G. C. that in 1915 there was no member to be elected because there was no vacancy until 1916, and applying the same principle as announced in the Sullivan case (81 O. S., 79-92), the 1915 board could not usurp the duties and prerogatives of 1916.

Subsequent to the above decision, the court of appeals of the fourth district in Hocking county, in the case of the state of Ohio ex rel. John F. Harsh, realtor, vs. Charles White, respondent, passed upon this very same question in their opinion in that case, using the following language:

> " 'Each year thereafter' means each year after the year beginning July 15, 1914, but the statute did not require an election in 1915, as shown by Scott vs. Ryan, 95 O. S., 405."

It was held here that the only vacancy and appointment that the board could have made in 1916 was for the successor to the one year term member. In the case at bar it seems that your presidents of village and rural boards, meeting in June, 1916, elected the successor to the two-year term member, but whose term did not expire till the third Saturday in January, 1917, or when a new personnel of presidents was in office, or at a time after they themselves were out as an electing body. It is apparent, therefore, that the alleged elections held in the summers of 1915 and 1916 to cover vacancies that came up in the following years, were irregular and the persons elected in such manner, heretofore referred to as C. and D., received no valid title to the office of member of the county board of education; and A. and B., elected in June, 1914, are the members of such board, under section 4729 G. C., until their successors are chosen and qualified for the unexpired terms; that is to say, the term of A., expiring first in January, 1916, would again expire five years thereafter, or in January, 1921, and similarly that of B., elected first in June, 1914, until January, 1917, would expire the third Saturday in January, 1922, had elections been properly held by the presidents of the village and rural districts in January, 1916, and again in Januray, 1917, as contemplated in the law and later decided by the courts.

And so we now come to the question as to the electing of the successors of A. and B., whose places in the county board are irregularly held by C. and D., irregularly chosen in June, 1915, and June, 1916, respectively. This has been elaborately treated in opinion No. 1496, Vol. 1, 1916, rendered by the then Attorney-General on matters similar to the one herein discussed, the following two questions being propounded:

> "1. Inasmuch as no election (of member of county board of education), was had as required by the statutes, can this board, composed of the several presidents, be called together again, and an election held at this time?
> 2. If this can be done, and the county superintendent of schools refuses to call such meeting, can a majority of the several presidents issue a call for such meeting, notifying the remainder of such meeting in writing?"

After quoting section 4729 G. C. (heretofore quoted in this opinion) the Attorney-General quotes sections 4730 and 4731 G. C. as follows:

> "Section 4730 The county auditor of each county shall issue the call for the first meeting giving at least ten days' notice of the place where such meeting will be held. The call for all future meetings shall be issued by the county superintendent. The meeting shall organize by electing a chairman and a clerk. The vote of a majority of the members present shall be necessary to elect each member of the county board. The members of the county board so elected, may or may not be members or officers of any village or rural boar l of education. The result of the election of members of the county board of education shall be certified to the county auditor by the chairman and clerk of the meeting

Section 4731. Each member of the county board of education shall within ten days after receiving notice of his election, take an oath that he will perform faithfully the duties of his office. Such oath may be taken before any one authorized by law to administer oaths. If any person so elected shall fail to take such oath within the time prescribed, the office to which he was elected shall be considered vacant. Any vacancy on the board shall be filled in the same manner as is provided in section 4748 of the General Code."

after which he answers the questions as follows:

"The facts submitted by you being identical with those submitted by Mr. Scott, and considered in the aforesaid opinion, I have deemed it necessary to briefly set forth the holding of said opinion preliminary to the consideration of the questions submitted by you.

You first inquire whether the presidents of the boards of education of the various village and rural school districts of your county school district may meet at this time for the purpose of electing a member of the county board of education to succeed the member whose term expired January 14, 1916, but who is holding over because of the failure of said presidents to elect a successor at their meeting on said date.

"While section 4729 G. C., as above quoted, required that the first meeting of the presidents of the boards of education above referred to should be held on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for the purpose of electing the members of the county board of education as therein provided, section 4730, G. C., required the county auditor to issue the call for said meeting, as in said section provided, it will be observed that as to all subsequent meetings of said presidents for the purpose of electing a successor to the member whose term, by the above provision of section 4729 G. C., expires on the third Saturday in January of any year, no time is fixed for said meeting, and the only provision of the statute relating thereto is the provision of section 4730, G. C., that:

'The call for all future meetings shall be issued by the county superintendent.'

Section 4745 G. C. (103 O. L., 275) provided that:

'The term of office of members of each board of education shall begin on the first Monday in January after their election, and each such officer shall hold his office for four years, except as may be specifically provided in chapter 2 of this title (relating to city school districts), and until his successor is elected and qualified.'

Where, under the provision of the latter part of section 4745 G. C., as above quoted, a member of the board of education of a school district holds over because of the failure of the qualified electors of said district, at the regular election for said purpose, to elect a successor to said member, no vacancy exists within the meaning of section 4748 G. C., and said member holds over until the electors of said district at a subsequent regular election for said purpose, elect a successor to said member and until said successor qualifies in the manner provided by law. If said successor should fail to qualify within the time prescribed in section 4748 G. C., then a vacancy would be created which could be filled in the manner provided in said section.

As has already been stated, it was held in the opinion heretofore referred to that the member of the county board of education whose term expires on January 14, 1916, holds over because of the failure of the presidents of the boards of education of the village and rural school districts, above referred to, to elect a successor, and no vacancy exists within the meaning of the provision of the latter part of section 4731, G. C., which could be filled in the manner provided in said section 4748 G. C.

In view of what has been said as to the holding over of the members of the board of education by virtue of the provision of the latter part of section 4745 G. C., as above quoted, until the election of his successor at a subsequent regular election for that purpose and until said successor is duly qualified, it may be argued that a meeting of the presidents of the boards of education above referred to may not be called at this time for the purpose of electing a successor to the member of the county board of education in question, and that said member is entitled to hold over for another year, in view of the fact that said presidents are required to meet at the call of the county superintendent for the purpose of electing a successor to the member of your county board whose term will expire on the day preceding the third Saturday in January, 1917, or it may even be argued that in view of the fact that if a successor to the member in question had been elected at the meeting held on January 14, 1916, and had qualified in the manner provided by law, said successor would have held office for a term of five years from January 15, 1916, and until the election and qualification of his successor, said member is entitled to hold over for the full term of five years and until his successor is elected and qualified. It seems clear to my mind, however, that inasmuch as no time is fixed for holding said meeting in any year, there is no practical difference in the operation of the statute between the calling of a meeting of said officials for the purpose of electing a successor to said member, and the calling of a meeting of the members of the county board of education under authority of the latter part of section 4731 G. C., as above quoted to fill a vacancy in said board in the manner provided in section 4748 G. C. In fact, there is nothing in the statutes above set forth to prevent said presidents from holding a meeting at this time for the purpose of electing such successor and for the further purpose of electing a successor to the member whose term will expire on the day preceding the third Saturday in January, 1917. I am of the opinion, therefore, that your first question must be answered in the affirmative.

While, as before noted, the county superintendent is charged with the duty of issuing the call for said meeting but the above provision of section 4730 G.C.,I do not think it can be said that this authority vested in said official is exclusive and that upon his refusal to perform this duty said meeting may not be held at this or any other time during the year, with any more reason that it could be said that upon the refusal of said county superintendent to issue a call for a meeting of said presidents for the purpose of electing a successor to the member whose term will expire on the day preceding the third Saturday in January, 1917, said meeting could not be held for said purpose. Such a holding would defeat the manifest purpose of section 4729, G. C., which provides the opportunity to effect a gradual change in the personnel of the county board of education in the manner therein prescribed.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question, that if the county superintendent refuses to call said meeting, the same may be called in the manner suggested in your inquiry, provided the written notice served upon each of the several presidents above referred to sets forth the time when, the place where, and the purpose for which said meeting is to be held.

Permit me to add further that I have just been informed that the questions presented by the prosecuting attorney of Adams county, in answer to which the aforesaid opinion was rendered, were presented to the court of common pleas of said county and the holding in said opinion was sustained by that court. A copy of said opinion is enclosed."

From the foregoing discussion it will be seen that this department has held in several former opinions that a board or officer cannot elect or appoint a person to any office which began its tenure after the appointing power itself had retired and these opinions were later sustained by the courts, but the most recent decision covering the matter at bar, and very completely so, is the case of State ex rel. Moulton vs. Myers, and State ex rel. Schlott vs. Myers, 99 Ohio State, decided November 19, 1918, and reported in the Ohio Law Reporter for March 3, 1919, the opinion of the court, all judges concurring, reading as follows:

"The statute which confers upon the presidents of the boards of education of the various village and rural school districts of each county authority to elect a member of the county board of education each year, does not authorize the election of a member of such board for a term which does not begin until after the expiration of the terms of office of such presidents. The general rule of law, well established, which is recognized, and applied in the case of State ex rel. Morris vs. Sullivan, 81 O. S., 79, is applicable and precludes the election of members of the county board of education, whose terms of office do not begin until the third Saturday of January, by the presidents of village and rural school district of the county, whose own terms and power to appoint expire on the preceding first Monday in January. The election of each of the relators was, therefore, invalid. * * *"

These were cases in quo warranto where the relator, Schlott, was elected in December, 1917, as a member of the county board of education for the term beginning in January, 1918, and the realtor, Moulton, was similarly elected in December, 1916 for the term beginning the third Saturday of January, 1917, and, as indicated in the decision, "the election of each of the relators was, therefore, invalid," for the reasons given in the decision.

You ask whether opinion No. 877, holding that the member of the county board of education must be chosen by the presidents in office in January, just prior to the beginning of the member's term on the third Saturday of January, and not by those who retire as presidents on January first, still holds good, and you are advised that it does, for the decision of the supreme court, published March 3, 1919, in the Ohio Law Reporter, as quoted, sustains such opinion in full.

Following the discussion here given and the citations made, it is the opinion of the attorney-general that no member of the county board of education was to be elected in 1915, and an election in that year by the presidents of the village and rural boards of education was irregular and the person so elected has no title to the office; that the only election that could have been held in 1916 would be the successor of the one-year term member, expiring in the third Saturday in January, 1916; that the election of a successor to the two-year term member (dating from June, 1914), if made in June, 1916, was irregular for such two-year term member did not retire until the third Saturday in January, 1917, and his successor should have been chosen prior thereto, but in January, 1917, by the then existing presidents of the village and rural boards, and such person elected in June, 1916, as the successor of the two-year term member, has no title to such office, as the successor should have been chosen by the personnel of presidents existing after January 1, 1917, his term ending the third Saturday in January, 1917; that the true members of the county board of education are A. and B., elected in June, 1914, for one and two year terms, because their successors have never been legally elected and qualified; that A. and B. hold until their successors are legally elected and qualified for that part of their terms yet to run, that is to say, till the third Saturday in January, 1921, and the third Saturday in January, 1922, respectively; that under the previous opinions of the attorney-general, including the late opinion of June 6, 1918 (wherein he says "the presidents of the various village and rural district boards of education * * * may be called together at this time to elect such member whose term will end on the day preceding the third Saturday in January, 1923," basing such opinion on the case of Scott vs. Ryan, 95 O. S., 405, wherein Scott was elected on the third day of April, 1916, and seated by the court, for the term ending in January, 1921), the presidents of the rural and village boards can meet at a later time after such failure to regularly elect and proceed to elect in legal manner for the unexpired terms; that the persons so elected have remedy in quo warranto, based on the proceedings in the cases of Scott vs. Ryan, 95 O. S., 405, and State ex rel. Moulton vs. Myers, and State ex rel. Schlott vs. Myers (99 O. S.), decided by the supreme court, November 19, 1918, and the decision above quoted; and that the persons alleged to have been elected in June, 1915, and in June, 1916, as members of the county board of education are without legal title to such offices.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—HAVE AUTHORITY UNDER SECTION 2434 G. C. TO BORROW MONEY FOR SUPPORT OF POOR—LIMITATION 5649-2 G. C.

Subject to the limitations of sections 5649-2 et seq. G. C., the county commissioners have authority ,under section 2434, to borrow money for the relief or support of the poor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 8, 1919.

HON. R. A. KERR, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter of March 11, 1919, as follows:

> "At the request of the superintendent of the county infirmary I write to ask if there is any provision in law whereby the commissioners can borrow money to run the infirmary. The distribution made the first of this month for that purpose is practically exhausted by reason of the fact that the increased cost of edibles, etc., made the expense run much higher than had been contemplated.
> I have given it as my opinion that there is no provision of law whereby the commissioners can borrow money for this purpose and I am frank to confess I do not know what we will do unless money is borrowed. If it is at all possible, the commissioners would doubtless borrow money to supply said institution, but if same is not legal, are you able to suggest to the superintendent any relief from his present dilemma. I presume that this situation confronts you in the majority of the counties of the state as the same expense was necessarily incurred by them and we would certainly appreciate any enlightenment you can give."

Sections 2434, 5656 and 5649-2 G. C. are pertinent to your inquiry. In part section 2434 is:

> "For the relief or support of the poor, the commissioners may borrow such sum * * * of money as they deem necessary * * * and issue the bonds of the county to secure the payment of the principal and interest thereof."

The second paragraph of this section then follows with provision in the matter of the purchase of land for a detention home, infirmary or county children's home, upon the advice and recommendation of the judge therein referred to, without submission of the question of such purpose to a "vote of the county."

Section 5656 G. C. in part is:

> "The commissioners of a county, for the purpose of extending the time of payment of any indebtedness, which from its limits of taxation such * * * county is unable to pay at maturity, may borrow money or issue the bonds thereof, so as to change but not increase the indebtedness in the amounts, for the length of time * * * that said * * * commissioners deem proper, not to exceed the rate of six per cent. per annum."

It is to be observed that the last quoted section confers authority only to extend the time of payment of an indebtedness already incurred.

As to any indebtedness already incurred by the commissioners in the discharge of their official duties to the poor relief, this section provides for the borrowing of money subject to the limitations of what is known as the Smith one per cent. law, and sections 5649-2 G. C. et seq. may be utilized.

However, direct authority is given the county commissioners in section 2434, supra, to borrow money "for the relief or support of the poor" without the condition precedent to borrowing under section 5656 G. C., viz., that the money which may be borrowed under this latter section must be for an already existing indebtedness.

The latter part of section 2434 G. C., as above noted, which provides for levying a tax for the purchase of land for certain purposes, without the submission of the question of such purchase to a vote, and which limits such levy to two-tenths of one mill, must be construed in connection with section 5638 G. C., which provides a flat limitation on the amount which county commissioners may expend for such lands without an affirmative vote of the county.

It is concluded that the effect of this latter part of section 2434 is not to require that the question of borrowing money and issuing bonds for poor relief shall be submitted to a vote, but that in acquiring lands for the purposes referred to and upon the certificate of the judge, the commissioners in such acquisition are freed from the limitations of section 5638 G. C. It is, therefore, my opinion that, subject to the limitations of sections 5649-2 et seq., the county commissioners may borrow money for the relief or support of the poor.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—CHARTER CITIES MAY LEVY OCCUPATIONAL TAXES FOR GENERAL REVENUE PURPOSES—NON-CHARTER CITIES MAY EXERCISE AUTHORITY TO REGULATE OCCUPATIONS UNDER POLICE POWER AND EXACT ONLY LICENSE FEE.

The power to raise revenue being an essential attribute of government, it follows that charter cities exercising the powers of local self-govenment under authority of the constitution are invested with authority to levy taxes for local governmental purposes, including excise taxes on occupations, subject to such restraint as may hereafter be imposed by the general assembly pursuant to section 13 of Article XVIII of the constitution.

The adoption of a charter being the indispensable mode of exercising the constitutional powers of local self-government, a municipality which has not adopted a charter may only exercise powers delegated by the general assembly, which do not include the authority to levy occupational taxes.

All municipalities, however, are empowered to regulate occupations in the proper exercise of the police power, within the scope of the statutory enumeration of powers of municipal corporations, and in the exercise of such power may exact license fees commensurate with the expense incident to the regulation and the special benefit conferred on those following the occupation, or the special burdens occasioned thereby to the public.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 9, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of January 2, 1919, you submitted to this department the following question, requesting a written opinion thereon:

> "In view of the loss of revenue from liquor tax, a number of the municipalities of this state are considering occupational or business licenses in the way of police regulation.
> Question: Has a municipality legal authority to assess occupational licenses in the form of police regulation?"

About the time of receiving your inquiry there was pending in the supreme court an action involving the power of a municipal corporation to impose occupational taxes, and inasmuch as an early determination of the case was expected, it was deemed advisable to delay the answer to your inquiry pending the decision of the supreme court.

I have just been able to secure a copy of the supreme court's opinion in the aforesaid case, being the case of State ex rel Zielonka, City Solicitor, v. Carroll, Auditor, in which case the court considered the validity of an ordinance of the city of Cincinnati, imposing an annual tax upon all persons, firms and corporations pursuing certain occupations and professions in said city, among which were the manufacture of bottles and glassware articles and the practice of osteopathy. It is determined by the supreme court in said cause, not only that the state possesses unquestionable power to impose such occupational taxes, but also that the city of Cincinnati, under its charter, is equally invested with such power.

The court said:

> "The right to impose taxes, by a long line of decisions, both state and federal, is within the conceded powers of sovereignty.
> In our own state it has been decided in numerous cases that this grant of power is conferred upon the legislative branch of the state government by section 1, article II, of the constitution.
> It has been likewise held that this authority is full, adequate and complete, limited only, if at all, by other sections of the same instrument."

The court in its reference to section 10, article 12, of the constitution, as amended in 1912, which section provides for imposition of excise and franchise taxes, makes the observation that:

> "No express grant of power was required in order to sustain either excise or franchise taxation.
> A majority of this court are of the opinion that there is no constitutional limitation resting upon the authority of the general assembly to levy tax on property of every kind and character, except that it must be uniform and according to its true value in money. Nor is there even this limitation on its power to provide for the levy of taxation on incomes, inheritances and franchises, including the imposition of excise taxes.

We are likewise of the opinion that the power to levy taxes on these several subjects comes from the grant in section 2, article XII, and that there was no necessity for the inclusion in the constitution of new sections 7, 8 and 10, except for the purpose of providing for the graduated method of levying such taxes and for the permissive feature of exemption of the lesser inheritances and incomes."

The last aforesaid statement of the court appears to be somewhat in conflict with a previous statement of the court in the same opinion, as follows:

"Section 2 of the same article (article 12) provides for the method and manner of levying taxes, being the well known uniform rule section and has application to taxes on property only."

It is also determined by the court that a tax on occupations is an excise tax, and it is said:

"An occupational tax is in no sense a tax upon property, but is well understood to be a tax on the right to carry on trade or to transact business."

After determining the authority of the state to impose such an occupational tax, which the court says "rests with the general assembly, both by general and special grant," the court then points out that the power of a municipal corporation, in respect to imposing occupational taxes "comes in the first instance not from the general assembly but from the constitution itself. Section 3, article XVIII, provides that municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self-governmnent." The court further says:

"We find in section 3, article XVIII, as complete a grant of power as the general assembly has received in section 1, article II. There can be no doubt that the grant of authority to exercise all powers of local government includes the power of taxation, for without this power local government in cities could not exist for a day."

The authority of the city of Cincinnati to exercise the power of imposing excise taxes was specifically upheld by the language of the second branch of the syllabus, as follows:

"Under the grant of power of local self-government provided for in section 3, article XVIII of the state constitution, the city of Cincinnati, as long as the state of Ohio, through its general assembly does not lay an occupational tax on businesses, trades, vocations and professions followed in the state, may raise revenue for local purposes, through the instrumentality of occupational taxes."

This decision will furnish a complete answer to your inquiry, at least in the case of charter cities, and while the question was not directly involved in the case before the supreme court as to the power of non-charter cities, in this regard, the following language of the opinion is considered significant.:

"Whatever power the city of Cincinnati possesses in this respect comes in the first instance not from the general assembly but from the constitution itself."

If such power might be exercised by municipal corporations under any grant or delegation of power by the general assembly, it is probable that such source of authority would have received notice by the court in the foregoing case, and it is perceived that the reference to the constitutional grant imports a suggestion that it is the exclusive source of authority under the present state of the law, and in fact an examination of the statutes fails to disclose any general delegation of authority to municipalities to exercise the power here in question, except in the limited sense of licensing and regulating various enumerated occupations and vocations, which authority, in the light of judicial decisions, may be said to extend in the direction of employing the power as a revenue measure only to the extent of the special benefits conferred or special burdens imposed upon the public and the expense incidental to the regulation, and as thus limited is not to be regarded as strictly a tax or revenue measure, but more especially an exercise of the police power for regulatory purposes.

While your question specifically relates to the authority of municipalities to assess occupational licenses in the form of police regulations, yet the question is prefaced by reference to loss of revenue from liquor tax and the contemplation of municipalities of adopting occupational licenses apparently as a source of revenue, in lieu of liquor tax, and therefore the subject has been considered in both phases.

In the more limited phase as to imposing occupational licenses as police regulations, you are advised that municipalities have that authority, without reference to the fact of their having adopted a charter or the contrary, by virtue of section 3670 G. C., and upon the authority and within the limitations of the doctrine of the case of Marmet v. State, 45 O. S., 63, of which decision the first branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "The general assembly has power (except as limited by section 18 of the schedule to the constitution) to regulate occupations by license, and to compel by imposition of a fine, payment of a reasonable fee, where a special benefit is conferred by the public upon those who follow an occupation, or where the occupation imposes special burdens on the public, or where it is injurious to or dangerous to the public."

In the broader aspect of your inquiry as to the power of municipalities to adopt occupational taxation as a source of revenue, and having determined upon authority of the supreme court decision in the Cincinnati case, supra, that charter cities may exercise such power, it remains to be determined to what extent non-charter cities may exercise the same power, and from what has been said it follows that certain observations of the court in the Cincinnati case, supra, raise very grave doubt as to the existence of said power.

This doubt is further augmented by the observation of Shauck, J., in the case of State ex rel v. Lynch, 88 O. S., 71, with reference to the method by which municipal corporations may exercise the powers of local self government, as follows:

> "1. The provisions of the eighteenth article of the constitution as amended in September, 1912, continue in force the general laws for the government of cities and villages until the 15th day of November, following, and thereafter until changed in one of the three modes following: (1) by the enactment of general laws for their amendment, (2) by additional laws to be ratified by the electors of the municipality to be affected thereby, (3) by the adoption of a charter by the electors of a municipality in the mode pointed out in the article.
> 2. Whether a municipality acquires authority "to exercise all the powers of local self-government" by adopting a charter, or adopts a charter as an indispensable mode of exercising the authority, the powers to be exercised, being governmental, do not authorize taxation to establish and maintain moving picture theaters."

This observation of Shauck, J., with reference to the method for exercising the powers of local self government, was adopted by Johnson, J., in Fitzgerald vs. Cleveland 88 O. C., 338, with the further observation as follows:

"In that case it was held that no municipality was entitled to exercise the powers referred to in section 3 until it had adopted a charter."

Again, in State ex rel. vs. Edwards, 90 O. S., 305, in an opinion by the court, the same language of Shauck, J., in the Lynch case, was again adopted and approved.

From the observations of the court in the foregoing cases, the conclusion would clearly follow that the power to exercise local self government, which was considered by the supreme court in the Cincinnati case, supra. as the source of authority for imposing the occupational tax, is not effective as an authorization to cities which have not adopted a charter.

This conclusion, however, is disturbed to some degree by the holding of the supreme court in the case of Fremont vs. Keating, 96 O. S., 468, where an ordinance of the non-charter city of Fremont was upheld as a valid exercise of power conferred by section 3 of article XVIII of the constitution, and the state law purporting to restrain the city from the exercise of the particular powers was held to be unconstitutional with the following observation:

"It is sufficient to say that the general assembly of Ohio cannot deprive a municipality of its constitutional rights. This section is clearly in violation of section 3, article XVIII of the constitution of Ohio, and void."

However, the ordinance in question was in the nature of a police regulation, and in view of the repeated declarations of the supreme court in the cases above referred to, that the adoption of the charter is the essential vehicle for the exercise of all powers of local self government and the obvious necessity of reconciling said cases with the Fremont case, it is presumed that the power to adopt local police, sanitary and other similar regulations is distinguished from the general authority to exercise all powers of local self government, and that it is only the latter that is dependent upon the adoption of a charter.

Being of the opinion, therefore, that, except as provided in section 3, article XVIII of the constitution, there is no general delegation of taxing powe· to municipalities, other than to impose property taxes, for local purposes, and that an excise or occupational tax is not a property tax, and that in order to exercise the powers of local self government essential to the imposition of an excise tax, under authority of arti le XVIII, section 3, supra, the adoption of a charter is a necessary prerequisite, it follows that a non-charter city is not invested with the power to impose such occupational taxes as a revenue measure, or in any respect whatever, except as hereinbefore referred to, in regard to licensing and regulating particular occupations within the authorization found in the enumeration of powers of municipal corporations.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,

Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS—WHEN SUBJECT TO TEN PER CENT. PENALTY—COUNTY TREASURER CANNOT ACCEPT DELINQUENT INSTALLMENT WITHOUT PENALTY WHEN SO CERTIFIED—CANNOT REMIT PENALTY.

1. When special assessments are made for municipal street improvements, in anticipation of the collection of which bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness are issued, and such assessments are certified to the county auditor for collection by the county treasurer, such installments, if not paid when due, are subject to a penalty of ten per cent. thereof. Former Attorney General's opinion on this point approved.

2. The county treasurer has no authority to accept the amount of such delinquent installment and interest, when the same is unaccompanied by the amount of the penalty, nor has the county treasurer the authority to accept the amount of such installment, together with interest and penalty, and then remit the penalty.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 9, 1919.

HON. ROY R. CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Steubenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment has heretofore been made of your letter reading as follows:

> "Assessments for street improvements against various properties located in the village of Toronto, Jefferson county, Ohio, have been duly certified by the clerk of said council of said village to the auditor of our county for collection. These assessments are now delinquent.
> I have written the owners of the properties against whom these special assessments have been levied to make payment. Many of them are willing to make payment of the assessment and interest, providing the penalty could be remitted. Our county auditor and county treasurer are willing to accept the assessments and interest. without the penalty, if it would be legal.
> Therefore, I would like an opinion from you as to whether it would be legal for the treasurer to accept the assessments and interest without the penalty, or with the penalty, and then remit the penalty, making it so that the property owners would have to pay then only the assessments and the interest to date."

In response to my request for further information, you advise that the assessments in question are assessments in anticipation of the collection of which, bonds of the village of Toronto were issued, and that a ten per cent. penalty had been charged against such delinquent assessments. In a subsequent letter you also say:

> "I wish to submit one other question in this matter to you. To whom is the penalty payable? Or put the question another way. Does the county or the village get the penalty after it is paid? "

The statutes relating to the questions above stated are far from clear, and their interpretation has given considerable difficulty to this department under former administrations.

Under date of July 21, 1915, the Attorney-General, in opinion No. 632 (1915 A. G. O., Vol. 2, p. 1291) held that (a) where bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness have been issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments for street and sewer improvements, no penalty may be added or collected for default in payment of such assessments; but that (b) where bonds, notes or certificates have not been issued in anticipation of the collection of such assessments, the municipal officers have the option, in the event such assessments are unpaid and delinquent, of collecting the same by suit together with interest and a penalty of five per cent. added, as provided in section 3898 G. C., or of certifying the same to the county auditor for collection as taxes, with a penalty of ten per cent. added to cover interest and the expenses of collection, as per section 3905 G. C.

Under date of December 17, 1917, the Attorney-General in opinion No. 874 (1917 A. G. O., Vol. III, p. 2380) held that: (1st Syll.)

> "When special assessments are made for municipal street improvements, etc., and bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness are issued in anticipation of the collection thereof, the several installments of such assessments, if not paid when due, bear interest until the payment thereof at the same rate as the bonds, and when such assessments are certified to the county auditor for collection by the county treasurer on the tax duplicate, such installments, if not paid when due, are subject to a penalty of ten per cent thereof."

The gist of the reasoning for the above conclusion is stated on p. 2383 of the opinion in the following language:

> "However, section 3817 itself directs that a penalty be charged, and as there is no authority for charging any penalty other than the ten per cent penalty referred to in section 3905, and as section 3905 was expressly continued in force by the provisions of section 94 of the municipal code of 1902, I incline to the view that as a general proposition the ten per cent penalty provided in section 3905, together with interest at the rate carried by the bonds, is properly chargeable upon due and unpaid installments of assessments certified to the county auditor under section 3892 of the General Code."

The task of properly construing the various statutes is made still more difficult by the language used by the circuit court of Lucas County in the case of State ex rel vs. Sanzenbacher (1910), 13 C. C. (N. S.) 356. The opinion is in full as follows:

> "This is an action in mandamus brought in this court to require the county treasurer to accept the assessments that are due without collecting the penalty on the assessment. There is no occasion to review all the statutes that were mentioned by counsel here in argument. We have gone over the situation very thoroughly and we are satisfied there is no authority in the statutes of Ohio for affixing the fifteen per cent on the assessments the same as it is fixed upon taxes. The statute, General Code 2608 (Revised Statutes 1052), provides that such penalty must be placed upon delinquent taxes; must be audited, I should say, on delinquent taxes. We find no statute so directing as to assessments, and for that reason we think the placing of it there is not warranted, and the relief prayed for here must be granted. We do not find any authority, I should have said, for the placing of any penalties on such assessments such as are placed for taxes."

Upon consideration I favor the conclusion on this point reached by the Attorney-General's opinion second above noted, and therefore advise you that when special assessments are made for street improvements, in anticipation of the collection of which, bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness are issued, and such assessments are certified to the county auditor for collection by the county treasurer on the tax duplicate, a ten per cent penalty shall be added thereto and collected therewith.

We now come to the real question submitted by you, namely, whether the county treasurer has authority to accept the amount of such an assessment, and interest, when unaccompanied by the amount of the penalty; or, stating the question in a slightly different way, whether the county treasurer may accept the amount of such assessment, together with interest and penalty, and then remit the penalty?

Section 3905 G. C. says of the ten per cent penalty that it—

> "* * * shall be placed upon the tax-list by the county auditor, and shall, with ten per cent penalty to cover interest and cost of collection, be collected with and in the same manner as state and county taxes, and credited to the corporation. * * *."

I regard the word "shall" in this connection as mandatory, and know of no other statute that authorizes any opposite conclusion—that is, I find no statute, except as hereinafter noted, which gives any discretion to the county treasurer in the matter of waiving penalties, or of remitting same after they have been once imposed. The exception just referred to is section 5721 G. C. (107 O. L. 739), which says:

> "If the taxes and assessments charged on land or lots are regularly paid, and such land erroneously returned delinquent, and the land is listed on the delinquent tax certificate record, the auditor shall correct the duplicate issue an abatement for penalties and interest added to such land on account of such error, the same as provided for in making errors on the tax duplicate."

The very fact, however, that the legislature has made special provision for the abatement of penalties imposed through error is an indication that the penalties properly imposed are not to be abated or remitted. I am therefore of the opinion that it would not be legal for the county treasurer to accept payment of the assessments and interest referred to in your letter, without the penalty nor would it be legal for him to accept same with the penalty and then remit the penalty.

Your last question is: To whom is the penalty payable, the county or the village? The answer to this question is found in the last part of section 3905 G. C., which says that the penalty, when collected, shall be "credited to the corporation." This means, of course, the corporation whose clerk or other officer has certified the assessment to the county officers for collection.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF HENRIETTA TOWNSHIP, LORAIN COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 9, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:

> RE: Bonds of Henrietta township, Lorain county, Ohio, in the amount of $12,000.00, for the improvement of I. C. H. No. 286.

I have examined the transcript submitted to me in connection with the above bond issue, and although it is apparent from the proceedings set forth and referred to therein that only an incomplete and partial record of the proceedings relative to this improvement and bond issue has been submitted, yet I am satisfied that the township trustees are without authority to issue the bonds in question, and therefore advise your commission not to purchase the same.

The letter of the prosecuting attorney of Lorain county, which is attached to the transcript, recites that the road improvement for which said bonds are issued is receiving state aid upon application of the county commissioners and township trustees, "and is being conducted pursuant to sections 6910, 6919, 6921 and other sections of the General Code applicable thereto."

If this improvement was undertaken under the state aid road law, the provisions of sections 1191 to 1223 G. C., inclusive, are applicable and the bonds for said improvement should be issued under the provisions of section 1223 G. C. by the county commissioners, if application for state aid was made by them, or by the township trustees, if application for state aid was made by the trustees.

If the proceedings are under sections 6910 et seq. the bonds should be issued by the county commissioners under section 6929 G. C.

If the improvement is being made by the township trustees under the township road law, the bonds must be issued by them under sections 3298-15d and 3298-15e G. C.

In any event, the township trustees are attempting to issue bonds in excess of the limitations referred to and made applicable to townships by section 3295 G. C. This section by reference makes the limitations of the Longworth act (sections 3939 G. C. et seq.), applicable to bonds issued by township trustees. Section 3940 G. C. (being a part of the so-called Longworth act), limits the amount of bonds which may be issued by a municipal corporation upon the vote of council alone for purposes named in the Longworth act to one-half of one per cent. of the total tax duplicate of such municipality. Under this limitation, which, as stated above, is made applicable to township trustees by section 3295 G. C., Henrietta township can by a vote of its trustees issue bonds for only $7,253.50.

Although, as stated above, the transcript is evidently incomplete, I am convinced that the proceedings of the trustees were not authorized by the provisions of the sections of the General Code referred to in the transcript, and that the amount of the bond issue is in excess of the limitations fixed by law.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

POOL ROOM IN PUBLIC PLACE WHERE MINOR UNDER EIGHTEEN YEARS IS PERMITTED—KEEPER OF SAME AMENABLE TO SECTIONS 12962 AND 12963 G. C.

The keeper of a pool table in a pool room at a public place where no billiard tables are kept, who permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to be and remain in such pool room, is amenable to criminal prosecution under sections 12962 and 12963 of the General Code of Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1919.

HON. HARRY A. SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of March 10, 1919, in which you ask my opinion on the following question:

> "Would the keeper of a pool table in a pool room where no billiard tables are kept, who permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to be and remain in his pool room, be subject to the provisions of section 12962 of the General Code of Ohio?"

While you do not expressly so state, I am assuming that your question refers to the keeper of a pool room at a public place.

Sections 12962 and 12963 of the General Code read thus:

> "Section 12962. Whoever, being the owner or keeper of a billiard saloon, or the owner or keeper of a billiard table at any other public place, permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to play billiards or pool, or be and remain in such saloon or other public place, shall be fined twenty dollars, and for each subsequent offense shall be fined fifty dollars.
> "Section 12963. For the fine and costs in a prosecution under the next preceding section, the billiard table and fixtures shall be liable on execution without exemption."

So far as I am informed, neither of the above statutes has been the subject of judicial construction in this state. It is necessary, therefore, to determine their meaning by the application of general legal principles.

The most familiar, perhaps, of all the rules of criminal statutory construction is this: That penal statutes must be strictly construed; that is to say, strictly construed as against the state. Yet this rule of strict construction is not applied as vigorously as the mere statement of it would suggest, for, as has been frequently declared by the courts, penal provisions are to be fairly construed according to the expressed legislative intent, and mere verbal nicety or forced construction is not to be resorted to in order to exonerate persons plainly within the terms of the statute.

Barker vs. State, 69 O. S. 68.
Conrad vs. State, 75 O. S. 52.

What, then, is the legislative intent found in the above quoted statutes? Is it an intent to punish the owner or keeper of a billiard saloon, as distinguished from the owner or keeper of a pool saloon? Is it an intent to punish the owner or keeper, at a public place, of a billiard table, as distinguished from the owner or keeper, at such place, of a pool table?

At the very outset one is struck by the thought that the main purpose of this law is to protect minors from improper environment, and that one should be slow to interpret the legislature as in effect saying that the game of billiards produces a bad environment, whereas pool, a very similar game, is free from such approbrium.

The question before us can not, however, be decided by any such general consideration as that just stated. Something more than the presumption of legislative consistency is necessary to overcome the ancient rule of strict construction of penal statutes.

"Pool," as a game, is thus defined in the Century Dictionary:

"A game played on a billiard table with six pockets by two or more persons."

The same authority defines "billiards" and "billiard table" as follows:

"Billiards: A game played by two or more persons on a rectangular table of special construction (see billiard table), with ivory balls, which the players, by means of cues, cause to strike against each other. Formerly in the United States the game was played with four balls on a table having six pockets, the players scoring both for caroms and for driving the balls into the pockets. (See carom). This is nearly the present English game. Since, however, expert players could continue an inning at the game thus played almost without limit, the pockets were dispensed with and counting was made to depend entirely upon caroms. Later, professional players adopted what is known as the French game, in which only three balls are used, and this was modified to the champions' game, in which a line, called a balk-line, is drawn crossing each corner of the table diagonally, within which two counts only can be made. Experts now play also cushion-caroms, in which the cue ball must touch the cushion before hitting the second object ball, or hit the second ball again on a return from the cushion; the balking game, which is the same as the champions' game, but with balk lines 14 inches from the cushion all around the table; and the bank game, in which the cue ball must hit the cushion before touching any other ball. (The singular form, billiard, is occasionally used, and is always employed in composition.)"

"Billiard Table: A table on which the game of billiards is played. It is made of mahogany or other hard wood, of strong and heavy construction, and has a raised cushioned ledge all round, the area thus formed consisting of a bed of slate or marble covered with fine green cloth. The size varies, the smallest common size being 10 by 5 feet, and the largest 12 by 6 feet. Some tables are provided with six pockets, one at each corner and one in the middle of each of the long sides; others have four pockets; but billiard tables are now, except in England, commonly made without pockets."

According to the New Standard Dictionary, "pool" is—

"any one of various games played on a six pocket billiard table, in which the player's object is to get certain balls into and keep the cue ball out of the pockets."

A "billiard table," says the New Standard, is—

"a table on which to play billiards, having an oblong rectangular surface covered with billiard cloth over a smooth and hard foundation, and edged with rubber cushions that form a rebounding foil from which the balls may be deflected; sometimes made with a pocket at each corner, and for pool playing one additional at the middle of each side."

That the absence of "pocket" or "nets" is not an infallible sign that a table is a "billiard" table, also appears from the definition of "billiards" given in Websters' Dictionary (1874 Ed.):

"Billiards: A game played on a rectangular table, covered with a cloth, with small ivory balls, which the players aim to drive into hazardnets or pockets at the sides and corners of the tables, by impelling one ball against another, with maces or cues, according to certain rules of the game."

The same work defines "pool ball" thus:

"One of several ivory balls about two inches in diameter, used in playing a kind of billiards."

It is apparent from these definitions that the word "billiards" has two meanings—one inclusive, the other exclusive. In one sense, and in some localities, "billiards" includes "pool." In another sense, and in other localities, "pool" is a game distinct from "billiards," one of the main distinctions being that "pool" is played on a table with pockets, whereas "billiards" is played on a table without pockets.

Which of these two meanings must be given to sections 12962 and 12963 G. C.? Our answer to this question would be much easier if the legislature had seen fit to leave the section in the form in which it was originally enacted. In that form (59 O. L. 65), it read as follows:

"That if any owner or keeper of a billiard saloon, or any owner or keeper of a billiard table at any grocery or other public place, shall permit or suffer any minor under the age of eighteen years to play at the game of billiards in such grocery, saloon or public place, or upon such billiard table, or to remain or be in or upon the premises so occupied by him as such billiard saloon, or in which shall be such billiard table as aforesaid, every such person or persons shall forfeit and pay a fine of twenty dollars for the first offense, and of fifty dollars for each and every succeeding offense, to be recovered with costs of suit by indictment on information in any court having competent jurisdiction to try the same; and in default to pay such fine and costs, all billiard tables that shall be on said premises in or upon which such offense shall have been committed, shall be liable to seizure and sale on execution to satisfy the same, any exemption or other law to the contrary notwithstanding."

The statute just set forth was passed April 26, 1862. In view of the fact that it wholly omits the word "pool", and in view of the 1874 Webster definition of "billiards," which we might call an almost contemporaneous definition, I am inclined to think that such statute used the word "billiards" in the broad, inclusive sense hereinabove mentioned, and would have included within its prohibition the game known as "pool."

The case of Sikes vs. State, 67 Ala. 77, aids me to reach the conclusion just referred to. That case construed section 4213 of the Alabama Code of 1876, which read thus:

> "Any person who is the owner or keeper of a saloon * * * having a billiard table connected therewith * * *, on which the public can play, * * * who shall knowingly permit any minor to play thereon, is guilty of a misdemeanor," etc.

The court said (p. 80):

> "In interpreting statutes, we must endeavor to arrive at the meaning and intention of the legislature, to be gathered from the words they have employed. Words are but the vehicle of thought; and if, since they were employed by the legislature, they have undergone change, or, if the subject they refer to has undergone modification since their employment, we must search for and enforce the sense they bore when the statute was enacted; for such, we must presume, was the intention of the law-making power. If when this statute was enacted—March, 1875—as the testimony shows billiard table embraced both classes, those with, and those without pockets, then both classes are within its prohibition. We think the legislature intended, in the employment of the term billiard table, to include all tables on which the game of billiards was played at the time; and the language will also embrace billiard tables under any modification they may undergo. The legislature intended to regulate and restrain the demoralizing effect on the youth of the country, of having a billiard table and a drinking saloon connected together. Giving to the phrase its popular signification, it then embraced tables with or without pockets; all tables on which the game of billiards could be, and was played."

In the case of Clearwater vs. Bowman, 72 Kan. 92; 82 Pac. 526, the same holding prevailed. On p. 93 the court says:

> "The second objection to the ordinance is that the authority for the prohibition of public pool tables must be found, if at all, in section 1129 of the General Statutes of 1901, which gives the city council power to suppress billiard tables, but makes no reference to pool tables by that name. Evidence was introduced to show that the game of pool is not the same as that of billiards, and that a pool table differs from a billiard table in having pockets. The argument is made in behalf of the defendant that the ordinance is broader than the statute, that the term 'billiard table' does not include a pool table, and that, consequently, the city was without authority to restrict the use of the latter.
> This contention derives some support from Squier vs. The State, 66 Ind., 317, where a conviction under a statute forbidding the owner of a billiard table to permit a minor to play thereon was set aside because the evidence showed that the game played was pool. The present question is affected, however, by a consideration which, if applicable to the Indiana case, does not appear to have received the attention of the court. Evidence was introduced that billiard tables were formerly made with pockets. The same fact is shown by the standard dictionaries and encyclopedias. Just when the change took place may not be clear, but the testimony indicated that it was about thirty or thirty-five years ago. The statute in question was passed in 1871, but is a re-enactment of the fifth subdivision of section 29 of chapter 26, Laws of 1869. The statute must be construed in the light of the approved usage of words at the time of its enactment, notwithstanding any subsequent changes."

To the same effect is the case of State vs. Johnson, 108 Ia. 245; 79 N. W. 62, construing a statute in this form:

"No person who keeps a billiard hall * * * shall permit any minor to remain in such hall * * *."

In 1886, however, the legislature of Ohio (83 O. L. 202) changed the above-quoted statute to read as follows:

"Whoever, being the owner or keeper of a billiard saloon, or the owner or keeper of a billiard table, at a grocery or other public place, permits or suffers a minor under the age of eighteen years to play at the game of billiards, or pool, in such saloon, grocery, or other public place, or upon such billiard table or to be or remain in such saloon, grocery, or other public place, shall be fined, for the first offense, twenty dollars, and for each succeeding offense fifty dollars; and for the fine and costs adjudged in any prosecution under this section, the billiard table and fixtures shall be liable to be seized on execution, and sold, without exemption."

The codifying commission left out the word "grocery" and the statute now reads (Section 12962 G. C.):

"Whoever, being the owner or keeper of a billiard saloon, or the owner or keeper of a billiard table at any other public place, permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to play billiards or pool, or be and remain in such saloon or other public place, shall be fined twenty dollars, and for each subsequent offense shall be fined fifty dollars."

With the amendment of 1886, the word "pool" came into the statute and is now there.

I can see how it might with some plausibility be argued that the amendment of 1886, read in the light of the prior history of the statute amended, evinced an intention on the part of the legislature to take cognizance of the techinical distinction between "pool" and "billiards"; and that by the insertion of the word "pool" in the phrase:

"permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to play billiards or pool", the legislature deliberately gave the words "billiard" and "billiards" their technical, exclusive meaning throughout the entire section.

Upon reflection, however, it seems to me that such a view is not tenable. Rather would it seem that by the insertion of the word "pool" the legislature desired a less technical, rather than a more technical application of the statute. That is to say, the very thing the legislature wished to avoid was the possibility of a defense against prosecution on the mere ground that the minor was playing, at a public place, the game of "billiards" as distinguished from the game of "pool". In other words, referring to sections 12962 and 12963 G. C., it seems to me that the word "billiard", as an adjective modifying the noun "saloon", and the word "billiard", as an adjective modifying the noun "table", still retains the double meaning which it had in the statute found in 59 O. L. 65; that is, a meaning which includes therein the word "pool".

Answering your question specifically, I am of the opinion that the keeper of a pool table in a pool room at a public place where no billiard tables are kept, who permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to be and remain in such pool room, is amenable to criminal prosecution under sections 12962 and 12963 of the General Code.

As being a further means of controlling the situation disclosed by your letter, section 1644 G. C. (106 O. L. 458) and section 1654 G. C. (103 O. L. 873) are also suggestive.

Section 1644 G. C. regards as a juvenile delinquent a person or child who "patronizes or visits a public pool or billiard room".

Section 1654 says:

> "Whoever abuses a child or aids, abets, induces, causes encourages or contributes toward the dependency, neglect or delinquency, as herein defined, of a minor under the age of eighteen years, or acts in a way tending to cause delinquency in such minor, shall be fined not less than ten dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not less than ten days nor more than one year, or both. Each day of such contribution to such dependency, neglect or delinquency, shall be deemed a separate offense. If in his judgment it is for the best interest of a delinquent minor, under the age of eighteen years, the judge may impose a fine upon such delinquent not exceeding ten dollars, and he may order such person to stand committed until fine and costs are paid."

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO MAINTAIN OR SUPPORT EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

There is no authority for the county commissioners to maintain or support an employment bureau or to contribute to the maintenance and support of a municipal employment bureau.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1919.

HON. CLAUDE J. MINOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Sandusky, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated March 18, 1919, as follows:

> "The county commissioners of Erie county, Ohio, would like to assist the city of Sandusky, Ohio, in maintaining the employment bureau which has heretofore been maintained by the government and which is now to be closed soon. Do you know of any way in which the county commissioners could lawfully pay out money to help maintain an employment bureau?"

An examination of the statutes relative to the powers and duties of county commissioners does not disclose any law conferring authority upon the county commissioners to maintain or support, in whole or in part, an employment bureau of a municipality. In the absence of express or clearly implied authority, the county commissioners could not legally expend money for such purposes. As for purposes of taxation and expenditure of public funds, such commissioners are subject to the limitations of section 7, article 10 of the constitution of Ohio, which in part is:

> "The commissioners of counties, * * * shall have such power of local taxation, for police purposes, as may be prescribed by law."

Section 5 of the same article reads:

> "No money shall be drawn from any county * * * treasury, except by authority of law."

Under these limitations it has been repeatedly held that the commissioners must have authority, either express or clearly implied, for the expenditure of any money from the county treasury and there being no authority for the commissioners to expend money for the purposes stated in your letter, it follows that the same cannot be legally done.

Very respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE
Attorney-General.

AMENDMENTS TO CONSTITUTION OF OHIO—WORDS "PRESENT SESSION" IN SECTION 5123-3 G. C., APPLICABLE TO 80TH GENERAL ASSEMBLY—RATE OF PAYMENT IN SECTION 5123-4 APPLICABLE TO 1913 ELECTION.

1. The words "present session" in section 5123-3 G. C., apply only to the sessions of the 80*th General assembly.*

2. The rate of payment fixed in section 5123-4 G. C., applies only to the publication of proposed amendments to the constitution of Ohio, submitted at the November, 1913, election.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 10, 1919.

HON. W. A. EYLAR, Supervisor of Public Printing, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated March 21, 1919, in which you inquire if the "words present session in section 5123-3 apply only to the 80th General Assembly, or is the section continuous and applicable to future sessions of the General Assembly of Ohio?" Also, "is the rate of payment fixed by section 5123-4 the present rate to be paid for the publication of proposed amendments to the constitution, or does it apply only to the amendments submitted to the 80th General Assembly of Ohio?"

Sections 5123-3 and 5123-4 G. C., referred to and quoted in your letter, are parts of an act passed April 28, 1913, 103 O. L., 724, "relating to certain proposed amendments to the constitution of Ohio and the publication thereof according to the title of the act."

The key to the question submitted by you is found in section 1 of that act, which is section 5123-1 G. C., the first part of which is:

> "That at the election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November, 1913, the judges and clerks of election * * * shall * * * make return * * * of the vote cast for and against any proposed amendments to the constitution of Ohio that may be submitted * * * at such election."

The next section, 5123-2 G. C., provides for the certification of the return of the votes cast, as provided therein, "within ten days after said election."

Section 5123-3 G. C., provides for the publication of the amendments to the constitution referred to in section 5123-1 G. C., to be proposed at the then "present session" of the General Assembly.

This section is followed by sections 5123-4 and 5123-5 G. C., which fix the rate of charges for such publication and for the appropriation to cover the expense thereof.

This act is without ambiguity and clearly evinces the legislative intent to provide not for amendments generally, nor for the publication of amendments to the constitution proposed at all sessions of the General Assembly, but only for one certain election and session, viz.: in November, 1913.

In Hockett vs. State Liquor License Board, reported in 25 O. D., 117, Judge Kinkead, considering this act, came to the same conclusion, in these words:

> "It is argued that an act 'relating to certain proposed amendments to the constitution of Ohio and the publication thereof' passed April 28, 1913, 103 O. L., 724, relates only to the election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November, 1913. That is the fact, but that act was a mere temporary one for that year alone, so we are not the least concerned with it on the questions involved."

This case was decided at the December, 1914, term of court. So it may be said with certainty that the sections quoted in your letter are a part of a temporary act which was applicable only to certain conditions and events in 1913.

Although not referred to in your letter, the amendment to section 5123-1 is pertinent to your inquiry.

After the decision in the Hockett case, supra, on May 27, 1915, section 5123-1 was amended and provided for the return of votes cast for and against constitutional amendments in this more general language:

> "Whenever any amendments to the constitution are proposed to be submitted to the people, said amendments shall be submitted at the regular election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November of the same year."

So that in its present form the section last above quoted applies to all amendments proposed after it became effective.

It is to be observed, however, that sections 5123-3 and 5123-4 were not so amended and still remain in their original form. It might be said that it was the intention of the legislature, in making the amendment of 1915, to make the whole of said original act applicable to all subsequent proposed amendments, but such would require a construction on sections 5123-3 and 5123-4 as would do violence to the meaning which is clearly expressed in the term "present session" of the original act, passed in 1913,

It could be said with greater force that, by the amendment of section 5123-1. which removed the temporary character of that section and made it to provide for all subsequent proposed amendments, the legislature advisedly declined to change the character of the original act as to the publication of such amendments.

On the strength of this theory, re-enforced by the well established general principle that authority to expend money from the public treasury must be found by express or clearly implied grant in law, you are advised that section 5123-3 applies only to amendments proposed at the 1913 session of the general assembly.

The consideration and conclusion as to your first inquiry also disposes of your second question and logically results in the conclusion that the rate of payment fixed by section 5123-4 applies only to the amendments submitted to the session of 1913.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

Re bonds of Middletown, Ohio, in the amount of $10,000.00 for the purpose of resurfacing, repairing and improving existing streets of said city.

GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the transcript of proceedings of council and other officers of Middletown relating to the above bond issue and herewith decline to approve the same.

The ordinance authorizing the issuance of said bonds cites that they are for the purpose of "resurfacing, repairing and improving existing streets of said city" and nowhere in the bond ordinance or any other proceedings of the council set forth in the transcript are the names or identity of the streets given or indicated.

In the case of Heffner vs. Toledo, 75 O. S., 413, the following language is used in the fourth branch of the syllabus:

> "A city is not authorized to issue bonds to provide a fund from which to pay its part of the cost of improvements that may from time to time be made, but it may, under section 53 of the Municipal Code of 1902, section 1536-213, Revised Statutes, (now section 3821 G. C.), or under section 2835, Revised Statutes (now 3939 G. C.), issue bonds to pay its part of the cost of specific improvements."

On authority of the decision in the above entitled case I advise that you refuse to accept said bonds.

DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS AND INSPECTORS OF ELECTIONS—WHEN SAID BOARD IN MONTGOMERY COUNTY CAME INTO EXISTENCE—WHEN SECRETARY OF STATE SHALL APPOINT

2. The terms of office of the members of the Montgomery county board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections must begin on May first in the odd numbered years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 12, 1919.

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 18, 1919, requesting my opinion as to your authority to appoint a member of the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections of Montgomery county for a term beginning May 1, 1919, and ending April 30, 1923, to succeed Mr. William K. Boda, one of the present members, was duly received.

The history of the Montgomery county board is set forth in your letter, as follows:

> "In the record showing the appointment of members of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of Montgomery county, I find in the office of Secratary of State, among other things the following:
> 'Columbus, Ohio, April 29, 1911. The official census bulletin for 1910 having shown the city of Dayton, Montgomery county, Ohio, to be a city of more than 100,000 inhabitants, or 116,577, it becomes necessary under sections 4788 and 4871 of the General Code to appoint a board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections to replace the board of deputy state supervisors of elections now in office. The following board has this day been duly recommended and appointed by Charles H. Graves, state supervisor and inspector of elections—Edward J. Bundenthal, term begins May 1, 1911, ends April 30, 1915. Clarence M. Greer, term begins May 1, 1911, ends April 30, 1913. W. K. Boda, term begins May 1, 1911, ends April 30, 1915. Franklin Winch, term begins May 1, 1911, ends April 30, 1913.'
> Further, I find that William K. Boda was appointed for a term beginning May 1, 1915, such term to end April 30, 1919, and again I find William K. Boda appointed for a term beginning May 1, 1918, and ending April 30, 1922.
>
> I find upon inquiry that William K. Boda was appointed for the term beginning May 1, 1918, upon the motion of the Secretary of State and that he has been commissioned for the term beginning May 1, 1918, and ending April 30, 1922.
> The regularly organized Republican committee of Montgomery county under date of March 8, 1919, endorsed C. B. Zell for a member of said board of elections for the term beginning May 1, 1919, and ending April 30, 1923, to supplant Mr. Boda.

The contention of the committee is that the appointment of Mr. Boda to take effect May 1, 1918, was without authority of law and they claim no vacancy existed at that time and that the regular term being served by Mr. Boda expires April 30, 1919, and that under the laws of Ohio they have the authority at this time to recommend for the position to which Mr. Boda claims to have been appointed."

It thus appears that the Montgomery county board was established in 1911. The board could not have been established prior to that year, because Montgomery county was only entitled to such a board when it could be ascertained from the last Federal census that it contained a city wherein annual general registration of electors is required by law, etc., and that fact was not so ascertained until after the completion of the 1910 Federal census which disclosed that Dayton contained a population of over 100,000. See sections 4788, 4870 and 4871 G. C.

Mr. Boda was one of the board's first members, having been appointed for a four year term beginning May 1, 1911, and ending on April 30, 1915, and he was also reappointed to succeed himself for a new term of four years beginnning May 1, 1915, and ending on April 30, 1919.

It will thus be seen that your authority to appoint a member of the Montgomery county board for a term of four years beginning May 1, 1919, to succeed Mr. Boda depends upon the legality of the action of the state supervisor and inspector in appointing him for a term of four years beginning May 1, 1918. The question narrows itself down to the proper construction to be given section 4789 G. C., whose origin dates back to the Act of April 23, 1904 (97 O. L. 185, 218) creating the offices of "deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections." After creating these offices, it was further provided (p. 219) that:

"On or before the first day of May, 1904, the state supervisor and inspector of elections shall appoint four deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, in each county in the state which contains a city wherein annual general registration of electors is required by this act, who shall be qualified electors of the county for which they are appointed.

For the first appointments, two members shall be appointed for the term of two years, and two for the term of four years from the first day of May, 1904. One member so appointed for two years, and one for four years, shall be from the political party which cast the highest number of votes at the last preceding November election for governor or secretary of state. The other two members shall be appointed from the political party which cast the next highest number of votes for such officer at said November election. Thereafter, appointments shall be made biennially for two deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections for each such county, for the term of four years, which appointments shall be from the two political parties which cast the highest and the next highest number of votes at the last preceding November election for governor or secretary of state."

The act was subsequently amended by the act of April 2, 1906 (98 O. L. 288) but not with respect to the provisions above quoted. On the contrary, the provisions referred to were retained verbatim in the amendatory act, and so continued in force without change until both the original and amendatory acts were expressly repealed by the general assembly by the act entitled "An act to revise and consolidate the general statutes of Ohio," passed February 14, 1910, and now designated and known as "The General Code." (For the repealing provision just referred to, see General Code of Ohio, 1910, Vol. 3, p. 2938.)

The original and mandatory acts above referred to were revised by the codifying commission appointed under the act of April 2, 1906 (98 O. L. 221), and as revised were enacted in their new form by the general assembly by the act of February 14, 1910, supra, and the provisions involved in the present inquiry are now embodied in section 4789 G. C. which reads as follows:

> "On or before the first day of May, biennially, the state supervisor and inspector of elections shall appoint for each such county two members of the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, who shall each serve for a term of four years from such first day of May. One member so appointed shall be from the political party which cast the highest number of votes at the last preceding November election for governor, and the other member shall be appointed from the political party which cast the next highest number of votes for such officer at such election."

Section 4789 G. C. has continued in force without any change or alteration whatever, since its enactment in its present form by the general assembly on February 14, 1910.

It will thus be seen that the clauses "On or before the first day of May, 1904," and "Thereafter, appointments shall be made biennially," which appeared in the original and mandatory acts of April 23, 1904, and April 2nd, 1906, were omitted not only by the codifying commission in their revision, but also by the general assembly when it enacted section 4789 G. C. in its present form.

It may be contended that because the original and mandatory acts provided that the terms of the original appointees should commence on May 1, 1904, and that thereafter appointments should be made biennially, the terms of office of all appointees must necessarily begin on May first in even numbered years. This raises the question as to the force and effect to be given to the action of the general assembly in omitting the portions of the original and amendatory act hereinbefore referred to, from the act of February 14, 1910.

A comparison of the General Code with the provisions of the original and amendatory acts referred to discloses material omissions of language which affect the operation of the law, in this, that if the original and amendatory acts had been re-enacted by the general assembly without change, the terms of office of members of the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors would begin on May first in the even numbered years, whereas under the provisions of the General Code the language employed requires that the terms of office of members of boards whose creation is based upon the 1910 Federal census, must begin in the odd numbered years. This latter construction finds support in section 4789 G. C., which provides that members shall serve for a term of four years from the first day of May, and shall be appointed from the two political parties which cast the highest number of votes at "the last preceding November election for governor."

While the presumption is that although the phraseology of a statute has been changed in a revision or codification, it has the same meaning or application as before the revision or codification where the change is not of a substantial character, and while courts are slow to change such constructions except when required in order to conform to the manifest intention of the legislature, I am inclined to the opinion that the changes made by the general assembly in this case were substantial ones and provide a different rule for determining the year in which the terms of members shall begin in those counties which were not entitled to a board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors while the original and amendatory acts were in force, such, for instance, as Montgomery county, which first became entitled to such a board after it had been ascertained by the Federal census of 1910, that it contained a city having a population of 100,000 or more.

While, as stated above, there is a presumption (and it is only a presumption, and does not have the effect of destroying the application of other rules of statutory construction) that a statute means the same after its revision as it did before, yet when the general assembly, by an independent act complete in itself, has expressly replaced it by the enactment of a new one which omits material and substantial provisions of the old one, it is my opinion that the new statute should be considered from the viewpoint of an original or amended statute, and that the presumption in such a case is, not that it means tha same as the old statute, but rather that the general assembly, having deliberately and intentionally changed the statute itself, it also intended to change its former construction. In such cases the presumption first referred to is, in my opinion, overcome, and the decisions announcing the rule also recognize and embody therein an exception to its application when a change of construction is required in order to conform to the legislative intent. Some of these cases are:

State vs. Bushnell, 95 O. S. 203, 209;
Meyers vs. Institute, 92 O. S. 238, 247, 248;
Insurance Co. vs. McBee, 85 O. S. 161, 173, 174;
Cincinnati vs. R. R. Co., 88 O. S. 283, 291;
City vs. Wiehle, 78 O. S. 41, 44, 45;
Doll vs. State, 45 O. S. 445, 448, 449;
Collins vs. Millen, 57 O. S. 289.

In the latter case (Collins vs. Millen) the court had under consideration the effect of a general revision of the statutes by a revising commission, which introduced for the first time a clause which on its face qualified the former operation of the original law. In the opinion (page 295) the court very clearly stated that clauses and provisions brought into a statute by a codifying commission cannot, in all cases, be disregarded, and the fact that it was introduced by the commission instead of the legislature afforded but slight if any ground for ignoring it. On the contrary, the court said that:

> "Whatever the rule may be as to a mere change of phraseology thus accomplished, the mere circumstances that an entire and clearly qualifying clause has been brought into a statute in the course of a general revision of the statutes of a state, or in a revision of those upon some particular subject, affords but slight, if any ground, for treating it as surplusage. Notwithstanding that its insertion in the statute may have been the act primarily, of the commission appointed to make the revision, yet, its subsequent enactment into a law, should be regarded as the deliberate act of the general assembly. One of the objects sought through a revision of statutes, is in all instances doubtless, simplicity of language. * * * The statutes as revised by the commission appointed for that purpose, were, when reported to the general assembly, passed by that body with such amendments as it chose to make. It is quite reasonable to infer, as we have before shown that this court has done, that mere changes of phraseology made by the commission and adopted by the general assembly, do not change the meaning previously borne by old statutes, unless the difference between the language of the two statutes evinces an intent to do so. But it seems quite clear to us, that where a new clause has been added to a statute during the course of its revision, which plainly changes and qualifies its former meaning, and the clause is retained by the general assembly when it re-enacts the statute, its operation upon the construction of the statute should not be affected on this account. The whole statute, as thus qualified, should be given that meaning which the words ordinarily bear when employed in that connection and upon that subject."

That the general rule that where a statute has undergone revision the same construction will generally prevail as before revision, is not applicable where there has been a substantial change in the phraseology of the two statutes, is supported by the case of State vs. Commissioner, 36 O. S., 326, 330, which is frequently cited in support of the general rule.

While the change in the statute under consideration in Collins vs. Millen, supra, was one of addition, and not of omission, the doctrine of the case is equally applicable to changes of the latter character. That this is true is shown by the case of Hough vs. Mfg. Co., 66 O. S. 427, which presented a situation where certain words and clauses contained in the original act, were omitted from the amended act, and it was argued with much force that the words and clauses referred to were "omitted by oversight, or through some mistake, and that the legislature did not intend, when enacting the amendment to omit these words," and the court was asked to construe the statute "as if the words had been retained in the amendment." But the court overruled the contention, saying:

> "Can this court legislate * * * on the mere presumption that it was omitted by the mistake of the general assembly? A mistake in legislative judgment, or a mistake in drawing the bill constituting the amendment? The only method known to us by which such mistake could be shown would be to hear parol evidence—a thing not permissible."

That the act of February 14, 1910 (commonly called General Code), was introduced in the general assembly and enacted, approved by the governor and filed with the secretary of state as a new, original and independent act, cannot be denied, for the act itself evidences these facts. As was aptly stated in the Donnellan case, 49 Wash. 460, at page 466:

> "It was an entirely new act. The mere fact that it embraced a portion of the act of 1866 upon the same subject need not be considered now, for the new act took the place of the old, * * *. That the act of 1881 under consideration is a new and independent act complete within itself is evidenced by the section next to the last,"

which section was, in substance and effect, the same as the last paragraph of the General Code, which provides that > "all sections, parts of sections, acts and parts of acts, inconsistent with this act, and not included herein are repealed."

And when it is borne in mind that both the original and amendatory acts of April 23, 1904, and April 2, 1906, creating the offices of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, were expressly repealed by the General Code (3 General Code 1910, p. 2938), the conclusion cannot be escaped that the act known as the General Code is a new, original and independent act.

In State vs. Burgess, 101 Texas, 524, it was contended that a statute in a code of revision should receive the same construction as the repealed statute out of which it was framed, but the court answered the contention, as follows:

> "This argument is persuasive and the principle of construction there invoked should control in the interpretation of the revised statutes where, in the revision, no substantial change has been made from the pre-existing law. But it is never conclusive, for the reason that these codes were adopted by the legislature and have the force of law; and when they differ from the previous statutes, they must control."

The same doctrine has been announced and applied in other jurisdictions. For example, in State vs. Towery, 143 Ala. 48, it was said with respect to the Alabama Code that it "is not a mere compilation of laws previously existing, but is a body of laws, duly enacted, so that laws which previously existed, ceased to be laws when omitted from said code, and additions, which appear therein, become the law from the approval of the act adopting them."

Recurring again to the rule that the re-enactment of a statute in a code or revision does not necessarily change its meaning, except where the change is substantial, or unless the language in the statute as revised manifests the intent of the legislature to make a change, the inquiry becomes pertinent: What is meant by legislative intent and how is it to be ascertained?

In State vs. Roney, 82 O. S., 376, the court held that legislative intent

"must be derived from the legislation and may not be invented by the court. To supply the intention and then give the statute effect according to such intention would not be construction but legislation."

And in Slingluff vs. Weaver, 66 O. S. 621, the court held that:

"The intent of the law makers is to be sought first of all in the language employed, and if the words be free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly, clearly and distinctly, the sense of the law-making body, there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation. The question is not what did the general assembly intend to enact, but what is the meaning of that which it did enact. That body should be held to mean what it has plainly expressed, and hence no room is left for construction."

The foregoing case is also authority for the proposition that it is only in cases where a statute is ambiguous and its meaning doubtful, that courts consider the history of the legislation, and if that be true the right of the attorney-general or the courts to inquire into the history of section 4789 G. C., or of any other statute may not be warranted, unless the statute actually belongs to the ambiguous class. After stating the general rule that where the provisions of an act are ambiguous, the history of legislation on the subject and the consequences of following a literal interpretation of the language may be considered, the court, at pages 626 and 627, said:

"But is is equally the law, we suppose, that the court does not possess, and should not attempt to exercise, the power of introducing doubt or ambiguity not apparent in the language, and then resort to verbal modifications to remove such doubt and conform the act to the court's supposition with respect to the intent of the legislature, for it seems well settled, as expressed by Story, J., in Gardner vs. Collins, 2 Pet., 58: 'What the legislative intent was can be derived only from the words they have used; we cannot speculate beyond the reasonable import of those words. The spirit of the act must be extracted from the words of the act, and not from conjectures aliunde.' The principle is expressed in different form by Allen, J., in McClusky vs. Cromwell, 11 N. Y., 593: 'It is beyond question the duty of courts in construing statutes to give effect to the intent of the law-making power and seek for that intent in every legitimate way. But in the construction, both of statutes and contracts, the intent of the framers and parties is to be sought first of all in the words and language employed, and if the words are free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly clearly and distinctly the sense of the framers of the instrument, there is no occassion to resort to other means of interpretation. It is not allowable to interpret what has no need of interpretation, and when the words have a definite and precise meaning, to go elsewhere in search of conjecture in order to restrict or extend the meaning. Statutes and contracts should be read and understood according to the natural and most obvious import of the language, without resorting to subtle and forced constructions for the purpose of either limiting or extending their operation. Courts cannot correct supposed errors, omissions or defects in legislation, or vary by construction the contracts of parties. The office of interpretation is to bring sense out of the words used and not bring a sense into them."

If the contention be sustained that the terms of office of all members of all boards of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of election must begin on May first in the even numbered years, the effect will be (although this is not necessarily controlling) that all the counties which were not entitled to such a board prior to the enactment of section 4789 G. C. in its present form on February 14, 1910, (but which only became entitled to a board thereafter by reason of the Federal census of 1910 having disclosed that they contained a city or cities having a certain population), would be without a board for the period of time beginning May first in an odd numbered year and ending on April thirteenth in the succeeding even numbered year, notwithstanding the clear and express provisions of sections 4788 and 4789 G. C. that the latter counties are entitled to a board to be composed of members appointed from the two political parties casting the highest number of votes at "the last preceding November election for governor," who shall serve for a term of four years from the first day of May. The mere fact that the terms of office of members of boards in counties having boards established while the original and amendatory acts referred to were in force, may commence in the even numbered years, and in the other counties in odd numbered years, will not justify the state supervisor and inspector in either shortening or lengthening the statutory term of four years in any case for the purpose of making the beginning and ending of all terms uniform.

Mr. Boda has been holding the office continuously from May 1, 1911, and at no time has there been a vacancy. Had any vacancy occurred through resignation or otherwise, it could only have been filled by the appointment of a successor to serve for the "unexpired term" (see 4792 G. C.), and not for a new term of four years. Mr. Boda's second or new term of office began May 1, 1915, and this term will not and cannot end until April 30, 1919. Consequently, the action of the state supervisor and inspector of elections in attempting to appoint him to the office for a socalled term of four years from May 1, 1918, was, in effect, an attempt to create a new, distinct and different term from that created by the statute. The general assembly having created the term, it is not within the power of the state supervisor and inspector to disregard it and substitute another in its place, and his attempt to do so in 1918 was without authority of law. If his action is to be sustained it can only be on the theory that he is vested with the power to either declare a vacancy which does not in fact exist, or to shorten or lengthen the duration of an existing statutory term, and the effect in the present case would be either to shorten Mr. Boda's second term from four to three years, or to increase ir from four to seven years. No such power has been conferred upon the state supervisor and inspector, but on the contrary, such exercise of power would be in conflict with the clear and express provision of section 4789 G. C, that the term of office shall be four years.

It may be contended that if I am correct in my opinion that the state supervisor and inspector is without authority to shorten or lengthen the statutory term of four years, etc., then the state supervisor and inspector was in error when in 1911 he appointed two members of Montgomery county's first board for two years. And proceeding with the development of the contention, it may be urged that if the statute is to be construed without incorporation into it the words and clauses contained in the previous and repealed legislation on the subject, all four members of the first board should have been appointed at the same time and for four year terms. These contentions, however, did not present insurmountable barriers to the state supervisor and inspector in office at the time the appointments were made, or to the political executive committees which recommended the appointees, or to the appointees themselves. After all, the only appointment directly involved in the present inquiry is one which was made for a four year term.

But, notwithstanding all this, it is not for the attorney-general or the courts to depart from the obvious meaning of the statute when its language is plain, explicit and unequivocal. In 36 Cyc, IIII, the law is stated as follows;

> "It is the rule for which there is an abundance of authority that the mere fact that a certain construction of a statute will cause inconvenience or failure of justice will not affect the judicial determination of a case involving its construction."

In Gorham v. Steinau, 7 N. P. 478, the court said:

> "It is not the province of courts to relieve against the mistakes or omissions of the legislature, however unwise or unjust may be the consequences."

In Woodbury vs. Berry, 18 O. S. 456, the court held that:

> "Where the words of a statute are plain, explicit, and unequivocal, a court is not warranted in departing from their obvious meaning, although from considerations arising outside of the language of the statute, it may be convinced that the legislature intended to enact something different from what it did in fact enact."

In the opinion, at pages 462 and 463, the court said:

> "The langauge as it stands is clear, explicit, and unequivocal. It leaves no room for interpretation, for nothing in the language employed is doubtful. We are satisfied, by considerations outside of the language, that the legislature intended to enact something very different from what it did enact. But it did not carry out its intention; and we can not take the will for the deed. It is our legitimate function to interpret legislation, but not to supply its omissions. When the law is clear and explicit, and its provisions are susceptible of but one interpretation, its consequences, if evil, can only be avoided by a change of the law itself, to be effected by legislation, and not judicial action. Where the law is plain and unambiguous, whether it be expressed in general or limited terms, the legislature should be intended to mean what they have plainly expressed, and consequently no room is left for construction. Sedgwick on Statutory and Constitutional Law, 231.
> Courts must not, even in order to give effect to what they may suppose to be the intention of the legislature, put upon the provision of a statute a construction not supported by the words, even although the consequences should be to defeat the object of the act. Smith's Com. on Statutory Construction, Sec. 714."

In King vs. Association, 67 O. S. 240, the court, at page 244, said:

"We have no power to amend the legislative enactment. If the legislature made the mistake suggested, it alone can amend and correct it. The intent of the legislature is determined from what it says, and if its language is clear and unambiguous, the courts have no authority to change it."

For the reasons above stated, I am of the opinion that the action of the state supervisor and inspector of elections in attempting to appoint Mr. Boda for a term of four years from May 1, 1918, was without authority of law, and that his present term of office commenced on May 1, 1915, and ends on April 30, 1919, and that it will be your duty, as the state supervisor and inspector of elections, to appoint a successor in office for the term of four years beginning May 1, 1919. My opinion is supported by the practical construction which has been placed upon these statutes by the respective state supervisors and inspectors of election from the time of their enactment in their present form down to April, 1918. As soon as the result of the 1910 Federal census was made known, and it was ascertianed therefrom that Montgomery county contained a city wherein annual general registration of electors is required by law, the state supervisor and inspector then in office (Hon. Charles H. Graves) appointed the members of the first board, one of the appointees being Mr. Boda, who was appointed for the term beginning May 1, 1911, and ending April 30, 1915. In 1915 the state supervisor and inspector then in office (Hon. Charles Q. Hildebrant) reappointed Mr. Boda to succeed himself in office for the term beginning May 1, 1915, and this latter appointment was recognized and acquiesced in by Mr. Hildebrant's sucessor in office, Hon. W. D. Fulton, from the time he took office on January 8, 1917, until April, 1918. As I have already said, my opinion in this matter is supported by the contemporaneous and practical construction placed upon these laws by several state officers whose special duty it was to execute them, and this construction has also been acted upon by the Republican and Democratic county executive committees who were and are entitled under section 4790 G. C. to recommend persons for the appointments, and also by the appointees themselves, including Mr. Boda, and I see no cogent reason for holding the contrary.

In 36 Cyc. p. 1140, it is said that:

"The construction placed upon a statute by the officer whose duty it is to execute it is entitled to great consideration," etc.

And in 26 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, p. 635, the law is stated as follows:

"The contemporaneous and long-continued practice of officers required to execute or take special cognizance of a statute is strong evidence of its true meaning and should not be disregarded except for cogent reasons."

The practical construction placed upon these statutes by the respective state supervisors and inspectors, and others, during these years has never been disturbed by the general assembly, although seven sessions of that body have been held commencing with Janauary 1, 1911; but on the contrary, such construction was perhaps at least impliedly recognized and acquiesced in as correct, for on May 2, 1911 (102 O. L. 98), after the Montgomery county board had been appointed, the general assembly amended one of the statutes (Sec. 4788 G. C.) so as to extend its provisions to counties containing "two or more cities in which registration is required."

The conclusion at which I have arrived is also supported by State ex rel Brower vs. Graves, 89 O. S. 24, in which the supreme court issued a peremptory writ of mandamus compelling the state supervisor and inspector then in office (Hon. Charles H. Graves) to appoint the relator a member of the Montgomery county board for a term of four years from May 1, 1913.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-Geueral.

COUNTY TREASURER—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO REIMBURSE SAID OFFICER FOR POSTAGE EXPENDED IN MAILING OUT TAX BILLS.

The county commissioners are without authority to reimburse the county treasurer for postage expended by him in mailing out the tax bills to taxpayers, whether delinquent or not.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 12, 1919.

HON. SAMUEL DOERFLER, Prosecuting Attorney, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of recent date in which you request the opinion of this department relative to the power of the county commissioners to reimburse the county treasurer for the expense of postage in connection with the mailing out of tax bills.

The facts as stated by you require the consideration of two questions, as follows:

> "(1) May the county commissioners reimburse the county treasurer for the expense of postage incurred in mailing out delinquent personal tax bills?
> (2) May the county commissioners reimburse the county treasurer for the expense of postage incurred in mailing out non-delinquent tax bills, both real and personal?"

In connection with these questions you say that you have been unable to find any express statutory authority for either of these expenditures, but submit that the mailing out of tax bills works a great saving of time and conduces to the convenience of the public and of the treasurer's office and that it promotes economy, in that it tends to diminish the size of the clerical force necessary to be maintained when the taxpayers are required to call in person at the office in order to procure their tax bills. You therefore suggest the desirability, from a practical standpoint, of permitting these expenditures to be paid out of the public treasury.

Section 2749 of the General Code is a part of an act authorizing the county treasurer to open not to exceed one office in each township for the receiving of taxes. It authorizes the county treasurer to be reimbursed for certain expenses so incurred, as follows:

> "On or before the tenth day of January and the tenth day of July of each year, the county treasurer shall file with the county commissioners an itemized statement of expenses incurred in the receiving of taxes, as herein provided, as follows: Transportation to and from the place of collection, office rent, and publishing, printing and posting of notices. When allowed by the county commissioners, such expenses shall be paid from the county fund, but the total expense so paid in any year shall not exceed one hundred dollars."

The only other section expressly authorizing the incurring of expenses payable out of the public treasury in the collection of taxes of any kind is section 5696 G. C., which relates to the collection of delinquent personal taxes, and provides as follows:

"The county commissioners, at each September session, shall cause the list of persons delinquent in the payment on personal property to be publicly read. If they deem it necessary, they may authorize the treasurer to employ collectors to collect such taxes or part thereof, prescribing the compensation of such collectors which shall be paid out of the county treasury. All such allowances shall be apportioned ratably by the county auditor among all the funds entitled to share in the distribution of such taxes."

Your statement that there is no express statutory authority for the making of such allowances as are described in the two questions submitted by you, as they have been stated, is therefore correct.

The following statutes may be quoted to show the outline of the statutory machinery for the collection of taxes and the duties of the county treasurer in connection therewith:

"Section 2648. Upon receiving from the county auditor a duplicate of taxes assessed upon the property of the county, the county treasurer shall immediately cause notice thereof to be posted in three places in each township of the county, one of which shall be at the place of holding elections in such township, and also be inserted for six successive weeks in a newspaper having a general circulation in the county. Such notice shall specify particularly the amount of taxes levied on the duplicate for the support of the state government. the payment of interest and principal of the public debt, the support of state common schools, defraying county expenses, repairing of roads, keeping the poor, building of bridges, township expenses and for each other object for which taxes may be levied on each dollar valuation.

Section 2649. The office of the county treasurer shall be kept open for the collection of taxes from the time of delivery of the duplicate to the treasurer until the twenty-fifth day of January and from the first day of April until the twentieth day of July.

Section 2650. When any tax is paid, the county treasurer shall give to the person paying it a receipt therefor, specifying therein the land, lot or property on which the tax was assessed, as described on the duplicate or in other sufficient manner, which receipt shall be ruled in columns setting forth in the first a description of each item of property, in the second, the value thereof, in the third, the rate of the tax upon each item expressed in mills and fractions, if any, and in the fourth, amount of taxes on each such item.

Section 2651. Such form of receipt may be departed from when necessary as to assessments and special taxes and where the tax due on any item embraces a penalty or delinquency. As to personal property, the receipt shall be of like form. omitting the description of the property. If a penalty is added, and charged by the treasurer, it shall be included in the receipt, and the amount thereof and the fact that it is a penalty shall be fully, plainly and separately stated in writing upon the face of the receipt."

Section 2656. When one-half of the taxes charged against any entry on a tax duplicate in the hands of a county treasurer is not paid on or before the twentieth day of December next after being so charged, or when the remainder of such tax is not paid on or before the twentieth day of June next thereafter, the county treasurer shall proceed to collect it by distress or otherwise together with the penalty of five per cent on the amount of tax so delinquent, which penalty shall be paid into the treasurer's fee fund."

"Section 2658. When taxes are past due and unpaid, the county treasurer may distrain sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the person charged with such taxes, if found within the county, to pay the taxes so remaining due and the costs that have accrued. * * *.

Section 2660. If the county treasurer is unable to collect by distress taxes assessed upon a person or corporation or an executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, accounting officer, agent or factor, he shall apply to the clerk of the court of common pleas in his county at any time after his semi-annual settlement with the county auditor, and the clerk shall cause notice to be served upon such corporation, executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, accounting officer, agent or factor, requiring him forthwith to show cause why he should not pay such taxes. * * *.

Section 2664. For the collection of all taxes, penalties, and costs, mentioned in the preceding section, the county treasurers shall have the same powers given by any law for the collection of taxes. All taxes collected by any county treasurer pursuant to the provisions of such section shall be by him transmitted, in the safest and most convenient way, to the treasurer of the county to which such taxes belong. At the same time he shall forward a statement to the auditor of the county of the amount so collected and from whom. If he is unable to collect such taxes, he shall return the original statement to the auditor of the county from which it was sent, with his official certificate why they could not be collected.

Section 2665. If a person charged with a tax has not sufficient property which the treasurer can find to distrain to pay such tax, but has moneys, or credits due, or coming due him from any person within the state, known to the treasurer, or if such tax-payer has removed from the state or county, and has property, moneys, or credits due, or coming due him in the state, known to the treasurer, in every such case, the treasurer shall collect such tax, and penalty by distress, attachment, or other process of law. * * *.

Section 2667. When taxes or assessments, charged against lands or lots or parcels thereof upon the tax duplicate, authorized by law, or any part thereof, are not paid within the time prescribed by law, the county treasurer in addition to other remedies provided by law may, and when requested by the auditor of state, shall enforce the lien of such taxes and assessments, or either, and any penalty thereon, by civil action in his name as county treasurer, for the sale of such premises, in the court of common pleas of the county, without regard to the amount claimed, in the same way mortgage liens are enforced.

Section 5694. Immediately after each semi-annual settlement in August, the county auditor shall make a tax list, and duplicate thereof, of all the taxes on personal property remaining unpaid, as shown by the treasurer's books, and the delinquent record as returned by him to the auditor. Such tax list and duplicate shall contain the name, valuation, and amount of personal property taxes, with ten per cent penalty thereon, due and unpaid. He shall deliver the duplicate to the treasurer on the fifteenth day of September, annually.

Section 5695. The county treasurer shall forthwith collect the taxes and penalty on the duplicate by any of the means provided by law, and the funds so collected shall be distributed in proper proportions to the appropriate funds.

Section 5697. When personal taxes stand charged against a person, and are not paid within the time prescribed by law for the payment of such taxes, the treasurer of such county, in addition to any other remedy provided by law for the collection of personal taxes, shall enforce the collection thereof by a civil action in the name of such treasurer against such person for the recovery of such unpaid taxes. * * *."

Under these sections it will be seen that the county treasurer is to publish a notice as to the rates of taxation and then to open his office for the collection of taxes. He has various remedies which he may enforce for such collection. He is obviously under no duty, however, to inform any given taxpayer of the amount due from him. In fact, save for his own convenience, he is neither required nor authorized to make up what is called a set of "tax bills" at all. It is his duty to furnish receipts, and in point of fact the tax bill is merely a receipt drawn in advance and, of course, not valid as a receipt until signed or stamped by the treasurer or his deputy. In other words, the theory of the statute is that the taxpayer will find out for himself, at the treasurer's office or otherwise, what the taxes charged against him on his property may be.

As you suggest, this process involves considerable confusion in the large counties if it necessitates the appearance of each individual taxpayer at the office of the treasurer. Of course, the taxpayer can write in for his tax bills, furnishing return postage, and procure them without any such inconvenience, and this is very extensively done throughout the state. The policy advocated by your county treasurer, however, is to mail the unsigned receipts or "tax bills" to the taxpayer without request by him and at the expense of the county.

At this point it may be worth while to recall a bit of legislative history: Formerly the treasurer, in common with other county officers, was entitled to retain his fees for his own use. The fees were allowed him to compensate him for all services and expenses. He was entitled to no allowance for expenses except such as might be expressly authorized by law. See—

Jones vs. Commissioners, 57 O. S. 189;
Richardson vs. State, 65 O. S. 108.

In that state of the law the county treasurer might well have incurred the expenses described in your letter,but he would have had to pay them out of his own pocket.

At the present time the fees of the county treasurer are for the use of his fee fund, out of which he pays what formerly were expenses which he would have had to pay himself, viz: compensation of deputies, assistants, clerks and other employes. I need not describe in detail the operation of the county officers' salary law, as it is doubtless familiar to you. Suffice it to say that no provision is found therein for allowance of expenses other than deputy hire, etc., to the county treasurer, though other officers, such as the sheriff, are allowed certain expenses.

When the general assembly passed the county officers' salary law it had the whole subject in view. It was then putting all county officers on a straight salary basis and depriving them of the personal use of the fees of their respective offices. At the same time it undertook to relieve them of some of the expenses which they formerly would have had to pay out of their own pockets. If the general assembly had intended to allow reimbursement for expenses of the character now under discussion, it would have done so as a part of the county officers' salary law. Its omission to do so then cannot be supplied by implication now.

It would be only fair to allow the treasurer such expenses as those described by you, though to do so would involve, of course, somewhat of a change in the theory of the tax collection statutes. But if such an allowance were made it should come out of the fees allowed the treasurer on the duplicate the same as the compensation of the deputies and assistants who aid the treasurer in making the tax collections. In other words, from the viewpoint of legislative policy it would be a charge on the collections themselves. To allow it out of the county treasury would be to burden one taxing district with expense incurred for the benefit of others as well These considerations emphasize the impropriety of attempting to find implied authority for the doing of the things inquired about in your letter.

For all the foregoing reasons, I am of the opinion that the county commissioners are without authority to reimburse the county treasurer for postage expended by him in mailing out the tax bills to taxpayers, whether delinquent or not.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—EXPENSES OF OFFICERS ATTENDING LABOR CONFERENCE AT WASHINGTON D. C. NOT PAYABLE FROM PUBLIC FUNDS.

The expenses of municipal officers incurred in attending a conference of governors and mayors held at Washington D. C. in March, 1919, which conference was called by the U. S. Department of Labor for the purpose of discussing questions and subjects affecting the general industrial situation, cannot be paid from the public funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of recent date requesting my opinion as to whether or not the expenses of the mayor of Lorain incurred in attending a conference of governors and mayors held at Washington, D. C. may be paid from the public funds, was duly received.

With your letter you enclosed a communication dated February 28, 1919, from the city solicitor to your department, and also copy of a letter dated February 12, 1919, from Mr. R. W. Babson. It appears from Mr. Babson's letter that the conference was called by the United States Department of Labor "to discuss the industrial situation." It was also suggested in Mr. Babson's letter that "the question of resuming public and private construction, and the stimulation of business in general should also be fully discussed, including price tendencies, and the attitude of labor."

The attitude of the city solicitor at Lorain with respect to the payment of the mayor's expenses is set forth in his letter of February 28, 1919, as follows:

> "I have noted that the attorneys-general have heretofore ruled that cities have no legal authority to pay the expenses of city representatives to conventions and conferences throughout the country, and with this in view, it would be my opinion that the meeting in question would come within that rule, and consequently the city would be without authority to do this."

Questions kindred to the one under consideration have been before this department and the courts on several occasions, and the rule on the subject may be said to be reasonably well settled. In 1910-1911 Annual Reports of the Attorney-General, page 942, the rule was announced that the expenses of officers or employes of municipal corporations incurred in attending conventions of municipal officers cannot be paid from the public funds, except where the authority to attend such meeting is conferred either expressly or by necessary implication.

With respect to the right to attend for the purpose of acquiring general knowledge relating to official duties and the problems of employment, such as was contemplated by the Washington conference, it was said:

> "As a matter of law it cannot be said that the city would gain anything by sending any of its representatives to such a convention for no specific purpose but merely for the acquisition of general knowledge relating to the duties of officers and the problems of employments. To say that the municipality is justified in expending its money for the purpose of permitting its employes and officers to acquire information of this sort, is to say that the public money may be expended for the education of public servants. This, it seems to me, is fallaceous and the power to make such an expenditure must be denied. Putting it in another way, the possible good that might result to the department and to the municipality from the acquisition of such general information, is too remote and indefinite upon which to found a public expenditure; the real and direct benefit accrues to the officer or employe and the city is not justified in paying for this. From still another viewpoint, officers are required to qualify and to continue to be qualified, and employes, likewise, are presumed to be cognizant of the matters within the scope of their employment. It is in each case for the individual, at his own expense, to make and keep himself qualified,—not for the city."

In 1912 Annual Reports of the Attorney-General, Vol. I, page 432, it was held that municipal officers cannot be allowed expenses incurred in attending conventions for the purpose of general education, but that where such visit is the most economical and efficient method of promoting a purchase in immediate contemplation by the city, the payment of such expenses was proper. In the opinion, at page 433, it was said with respect to attending for general educational purposes, as follows:

> "In view of the well established principle that municipalites and statutory officers possess only such powers as are conferred by statute, and those which are necessary to carrying into effect the powers so conferred, I am unable to find any provision of the General Code from which, by any implication, the expenses incurred, by the officers named, of attending national conventions for the purpose of merely general instructions or information with reference to the duties of their offices, could be made a charge against the city. The acquirement of a knowledge of the general affairs and detailed working of his office is a responsibility resting upon the officer himself, not upon the city; and the possession of requisite skill and information is to be presumed.

The power to incur expense for the general education and enlightenment of its officers is not expense conferred upon municipalities by any statute nor is such a power anywhere granted to any of the officers named in your inquiry, and such a purpose is too remote as regards the powers conferred * * *, to be regarded as a power actually necessary for the carrying into effect of those functions.'

And with respect to the promotion of a purchase in immediate contemplation, it was said:

"For as regards the necessary visits to other localities for the immediate purpose of acquiring information with reference to a definite presently contemplated undertaking, such as the purchase of machinery, the decisions permit of a modified application of the above rules, holding that such visits may be regarded as of sufficient necessity to the performance of a fixed duty to justify an allowance of the cost so incurred as an expense incurred for the benefit of the municipality in the performance of a duty enjoined by law."

In State vs. Wright, 17 C. C. (n. s.) 396, the building inspector of Cleveland under direction of the director of public safety attended a convention of municipal building inspectors at Columbus. The city auditor refused to allow the expenses of the trip, and it was sought by mandamus to compel him to do so. In that case the court held:

"A municipality is not liable for the traveling expenses of one of its officials incurred in attending a convention of like officials of other municipalities."

In the opinion the court said:

"We hold that in the absence of any specific statutory provision for such cases, the test of the city's liability must be deemed to be: is the trip or journey in which the expenses were incurred necessarily implied in or reasonably and directly incident to the prescribed duties of the municipal officer who undertake such journey?

It has been pointed out in argument that a municipal officer may properly undertake a journey at the city's expense to inspect material or supplies for the purchase of which, on behalf of the city, he is authorized to negotiate, if such journey is reasonably necessary for that purpose. This is upon the ground that the object of the journey is directly related to the duties of his office.

Here, however, the purpose of the journey was to acquire such information in regard to the duties of his office as the building inspector might reasonably acquire while in attendance upon a convention of officials holding like positions, in various cities. We are unable to see how such an object relates itself either directly or with reasonable necessity to the duties of the relator's office."

In my recent opinion No. 85, dated March 1st, 1919, the power or authority of cities to pay the expenses of mayors and city solicitors in attending a meeting of municipal officers at Columbus for the purpose of drafting legislation for the financial relief of cities was denied. In that opinion the decisions and statutes of Ohio were reviewed at length for the purpose of showing the long and consistent policy of the state against the allowances of claims of public officers for expenses incurred in the discharge of official duties, except where the incurring and payment of such expenses is clearly authorized by law, and after stating that

> "No statute has been found imposing a duty upon or authorizing municipal officers generally, or mayors and city solicitors, to attend meetings or conventions held for the purpose of discussing and drafting legislation for the relief of municipalities, or making the expenses of such attendance a burden on the public funds. As was well said in Richardson vs. State, supra, 'An intention to do so will not be implied.' If it had been intended to permit the expenditure of public funds for such purposes, it is reasonable to presume that the legislature would have spoken on the subject, as it has done in the numerous instances hereinbefore referred to,' the conclusion was reached that

> "In view of the settled public policy of Ohio, as announced by the decisions and disclosed in the statutes hereinbefore referred to, I am of the opinion that public funds cannot be used for the purpose of paying the expenses of municipal officers of non-charter cities in attending meetings of mayors and city solicitors held for the purpose of discussing and drafting legislation for the relief of cities, nor of the officers of charter cities whose charters contain no valid provision warranting such payment."

The doctrines announced in the foregoing opinions and decisions are, in my opinion, applicable to the claim of the mayor of Lorain for reimbursement for expenses incurred by him in attending the Washington conference, and I am therefore of the opinion that these expenses cannot be paid from the public funds.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. IRICE,
Attorney-General.

CHILD NOT COUNTY CHARGE—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PAY CLAIM OF HOSPITAL FOR MEDICAL SERVICES.

The county commissioners are without authority to allow and pay the claim of a hospital for medical and surgical services furnished to a little child living with its parents, and who has not become a county charge.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1919.

HON. CHARLES M. CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Waverly, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letters of March 28 and April 3, 1919, requesting my opinion as to whether or not the county commissioners have the authority to pay the bill of the St. Clair Hospital Company, Columbus, Ohio, for services rendered to Hilda Miller, a resident of Pike county, was duly received.

The facts and circumstances connected with this case are set forth in your letter of March 28th, which reads as follows:

> "Some time ago the board of education of the Waverly village school district employed a specialist to treat children for trachoma, which disease had developed to an alarming extent in our public schools. The physician found cases of persons not of school age, some of whom he treated. In one case it was found advisable to take a little girl to the hospital for treatment.
>
> The inclosed bill has been filed with our county commissioners, and they have asked my opinion as to whether or not they can pay same. I am not clear that they have the authority and am therefore asking your opinion. The commissioners wish to pay the bill if they can do so legally, as they regard the doctor's work a benefit to the public, not only in curing this particular case, but in preventing further spread of the disease.
>
> The parents of the child own no property. The father is a painter and paper-hanger, dependent on his wages for the support of his family, and when the case was being considered it was thought that the child would go without treatment unless somebody besides the father acted.
> You understand, of course, that the contract of the school board was for the treatment of children attending the schools, and this case is one entirely outside of said contract."

Unless there is some statute authorizing the county commissioners to contract or pay for services of the kind referred to in your letter, the claim cannot be allowed and paid from the county funds. As was held in Jones vs. Commissioners, 57 O. S. 189:

> "The board of county commissioners represents the county, in respect to its financial affairs, only so far as authority is given to it by statute. It may pass upon and adjudicate claims against the county for services in a matter, which, under the statutes, may be the subject of a legal claim against the county. But it is without jurisdiction to entertain or adjudicate claims which in themselves are wholly illegal and of such a nature as not to form the subject of a valid claim for any amount. And an attempt by the board to allow a claim of such character will not bind the county."

In opinion No. 1192 of the Attorney-General addressed to you under date of May 6, 1918, this department had under consideration the authority of the county commissioners to assist in paying the expenses of a temporary hospital for the treatment of trachoma, etc., and had occasion to review the statutes applicable to municipalities, townships and counties on the subject of needy poor relief, and it was, among other things, said:

> "As a fundamental principle it can be stated that the furnishing of support or relief to the needy poor rests upon the townships and municipal corporations of which the needy poor are residents. Section 3476 G. C. makes such provision and reads as follows:
> 'Subject to the conditions, provisions and limitations herein, the trustees of each township or the proper officers of each municipal corporation therein, respectively, shall afford at the expense of such township or municipal corportation public support or relief to all persons therein who are in condition requiring it.'

When we note section 3480 G. C. we find that this principle applies not only to the needy poor in general, but to those who are in need of the services of a physician or a surgeon. The first sentence of this section reads:

'When a person in a township or municipal corporation requires public relief, or the services of a physician or surgeon, complaint thereof shall be forwith made by a person having knowledge of the fact to the township trustees, or proper municipal officer * * *'

The provision of this chapter in the first instance controls in the furnishing of relief to the needy poor."

The statutes relating to county infirmaries, those authorizing aid to corporations or associations organized for charitable purposes, and those applicable to municipal and township boards of health, were also referred to and discussed, none of which seem to impose any liability upon counties in cases of the kind referred to in your letter.

I am unable to find any statute which would warrant the county commissioners in paying the bill referred to, and therefore concur in your opinion that the board is without authority to allow and pay the same.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

Y. M. C. A. AT LIMA—SECTION 12962 G. C., NOT VIOLATED WHERE MINOR UNDER EIGHTEEN YEARS, WHO IS MEMBER, IS PERMITTED TO PLAY POOL AND BILLIARDS.

In permitting a minor under the age of eighteen years, who is a member of the Lima Y. M. C. A., to play pool and billiards therein, the officials of said Y. M. C. A. do not violate the provisions of section 12962 G. C. Opinion limited, however, to the precise facts of the query.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1919.

HON. JOHN L. CABLE, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of recent date you say:

"The local Young Men's Christian Association has installed billiard and pool tables. Only members of the Y. M. C. A. are permitted to play and a nominal charge will be made for each game.

Please give me your opinion as to whether, when a minor under the age of eighteen years, who is a member of the Y. M. C. A., is permitted to play pool and billiards, the officials of the Y. M. C. A. are violating the criminal laws of Ohio. I call your attention to section 12962 of the General Code."

Section 12962 G. C., to which you refer, reads thus:

"Whoever, being the owner or keeper of a billiard saloon, or the owner or keeper of a billiard table at any other public place, permits a minor under the age of eighteen years to play billiards or pool, or be and remain in such saloon or other public place, shall be fined twenty dollars, and for each subsequent offense shall be fined fifty dollars."

The real question for consideration is whether or not the Y. M. C. A. officials mentioned in your letter come within the meaning of the words "the owner or keeper of a billiard table at any other public place," contained in the section just quoted.

The words "public place" are frequently found in statutes like the one in question, and have been frequently and variously defined by the courts.

Citing a large number of decisions as authority, Cyc (Vol. 32, p. 1249), defines a "public place" as follows:

> "A place openly and notoriously public; a place of common resort; a place where all persons have a right to go and be; a place which is in point of fact public, as distinguished from private; a place that is visited by many persons, and usually accessible to the neighboring public; every place which is for the time made public by the assemblage of people."

In general, says Bishop on statutory crimes (section 298), the place, in order to be a public place, must be "one to which people are at the time privileged to resort without an invitation."

As pointed out in Shihagan vs. State, 9 Tex. 430, the term "public" may be applied to a house or place either on account of the proprietorship, as a court house, which belongs to the county, or the purposes for which it is used, as a tavern, storehouse, houses for retailing spirituous liquors, etc.

It is also to be noted that under a statute like the one under consideration, a place may be public at some times and private at others, and a private place becomes public by being put to public use. White vs. State, 39 Tex. Cr. R. 269; 45 S. W. 702.

Some of the places which the courts have held to be "public places" in the contemplation of statutes of this kind are as follows: Barber shop, court house, dram shop, hotel, restaurant, opera house, physician's office. See Century Digest, Vo. 24, p. 1704.

It appears from your letter, above quoted, and from your supplemental letter of April 7, that persons generally are not permitted to resort to the room or place in the Lima Y. M. C. A., where the pool and billiard tables are located; that only members of the Y. M. C. A. are permitted to play pool or billiards therein; and further, that said Y. M. C. A. has, and attempts in good faith strictly to enforce, a rule prohibiting non-members of any age from being or remaining in the room or place where said pool and billiard tables are located.

In the case of Koenig vs. State (Tex.), 26 S. W. 839, at p. 839, it is asid:

> "Again, reference to the statutes shows that the places and houses named, and those intended to be embraced, are all 'public.' The statute contemplates public houses and public places. Was the club room of the association either? None but members and their guests could enter there, or share its privileges. So long as this rule was enforced, it was not public, and the evidence shows that the rule was strictly observed."
> (Italics ours.)

Assuming the existence of the facts above stated, it is the opinion of this department that the room or place kept and maintained by the Lima Y. M. C. A. is not a "public place" within the meaning of section 12962 G. C., and in reply to your question you are advised that, under the assumption just made, the officials of said Lima Y. M. C. A. are not violating said section in permitting a minor under the age of eighteen years, who is a member of said Y. M. C. A., to play pool and billiards at the room or place therein, above referred to.

Since the question, what is a public place, is so largely a question of fact, the opinion herein given is expressly limited to, and based upon, the circumstances disclosed by your letter, and no attempt has been made herein to pass upon the situation obtaining in Y. M. C. A. buildings generally.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BANKS AND BANKING—CONSTITUTIONALITY OF SENATE BILL No. 52—STOCK EXCHANGE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 15, 1919.

HON. LEONARD J. GRAHAM, Chairman, Committee on Banks & Banking, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion as to the constitutionality of senate bill No. 52 entitled: "A bill to amend section 13080 of the General Code, and to define the terms 'delivery' and 'receipt' as the same are applied to commodities and securities."

The purpose of this bill as I understand it is to clarify the situation with reference to the construction of the courts in connection with transactions of stock exchanges. As claimed by those particularly interested in the bill, the real purpose is to define the words "delivery" and "receipt" as the same are applied to commodities and securities, and I am assuming that to be the true situation.

I would suggest that the purpose referred to above will have been accomplished fully by inserting a period after the word "buyer" in place of the semicolon at the end of line 8 and striking out all of lines 9, 10 and 11. Lines 9, 10 and 11 are at least surplusage, if not really objectionable, as they do not add anything to the real purpose of the measure.

It is my opinion that if senate bill No. 52 becomes a law it will not be unconstitutional.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES APPOINT TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT AND FIX COMPENSATION FOR TIME ACTUALLY EMPLOYED.

Township trustees, in appointing a township highway superintendent in accordance with sections 3370 and 3371, General Code (107 O. L. 93), are not authorized to fix the compensation on the basis of a month or longer period, but must apportion the compensation to the time for which the superintendent is actually employed in the discharge of his duties; nor are such trustees authorized to employ such superintendent for any fixed period.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1919.

HON. WALTER W. BECK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lisbon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Attention has been given your communication of date March 15, 1919, wherein you submit for opinion the following:

> "Can the township trustees under section 3373 G. C. fix the compensation of the highway superintendent by the month? Can they employ the highway superintendent for any fixed period of time?"

Your reference is to section 3373. However, the sections of the so-called Cass highway act (106 O. L. 574), relating to appointment of township highway superintendent, have been repealed, among them said original section 3373; and the law relative to township highway superintendents is now to be found in sections 3370 and 3371 (107 O. L. 93). These sections read:

> "Section 3370. The township trustees shall have control of the township roads of their township and shall keep the same in good repair. The township trustees may, with the approval of the county commissioners or state highway commissioner, as the case may be, maintain or repair a county road or intercounty highway or main market road within the limits of their township. In the maintenance and repair of roads the township trustees may proceed in any one of the following methods as they may deem for the best interest of the public, to-wit:
> 1. They may designate one of their number to have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within the township, or
> 2. They may divide the township into three road districts, in which event each trustee shall have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within one of such districts, or
> 3. They may appoint some competent person, not a member of the board of trustees, to have charge of the maintenance and repair of roads within the township which person shall be known as township highway superintendent, and shall serve at the pleasure of the township trustees. The method to be followed in each township shall be determined by the township trustees by resolution duly entered on their records."
> Section 3371. When the trustees of any township determine to proceed in the third method hereinbefore provided and appoint a township highway superintendent, such superintendent shall before entering upon the discharge of his duty give bond to the state of Ohio for the use of the township in the sum of two hundred dollars, conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duty. Such bond shall be approved by the trustees of the township and filed with the clerk thereof. The township trustees shall fix the compensation of the township highway superintendent for time actually employed in the discharge of his duties, which compensation shall be paid from the township road fund. The compensation and all proper and necessary expenses, when approved by the trustees, shall be paid by the township treasurer upon warrant of the township clerk."

The provisions of present section 3371 in so far as relating to compensation of the superintendent are a verbatim re-enactment of section 3373 as it appeared in 106 O. L. 574 (594) Cass act; and as they stood in the Cass act these provisions were the subject of an opinion of this department under date of March 4, 1916 (Opinions of Attorney-General 1916, p. 382), the purport of which opinion is indicated by the last paragraph thereof, reading as follows:

"I therefore advise you, in answer to your specific question, that township trustees are not authorized to fix the compensation of township highway superintendents at a stated sum per month or per year, but that such compensation must be fixed on a per diem or per hour basis in order to insure the carrying out of the legislative intent, to the effect that the township highway superintendent should receive compensation from the public treasury for the time actually employed in the discharge of his duties, and should not receive any compensation from the public treasury when not engaged in the performance of the duties of his position."

The conclusion just quoted is adhered to and furnishes the answer to your first inquiry.

As to your second inquiry, whether the trustees may employ a highway superintendent for a fixed period of time.

The only reference to period of employment is the expression in section 3370, "shall serve at the pleasure of the township trustees." This language would seem to preclude entirely the idea of a fixed term of employment, especially when considered in the light of the opinion above expressed in answer to your first question. No doubt, the trustees may encounter difficulty in their effort to employ a superintendent when they can give no assurance that the employment will be for a given length of time; but objections on that score would seem to be no more serious than those arising from the fact that the trustees are without power to fix the salary on a monthly or annual basis.

Under the Cass act, the appointment of road superintendents was provided for in the following language of then section 3370:

"* * * The trustees of the township shall appoint for each road district a superintendent * * * who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. * * * He may be removed by the township trustees or the county highway superintendent for incompetence or gross neglect of duty."

This language was considered in an opinion of this department of date April 4, 1916 (Opinions Attorney-General 1916, p. 606), and the conclusion reached was that while in the terms of the statute the trustees might remove the superintendent only for the causes specified in the statute, yet such trustees might at any time accomplish the removal by merely appointing a successor. The opinion last noted is of course not precisely in point here, owing to change in the language of the statute; but on the other hand the legislature in making the change has certainly not indicated an intention of broadening the authority of the trustees in the way of appointing for a definite term.

Your second question is therefore answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—LEVIES UNDER SECTION 3298-15d (107 O. L. 79) ARE UPON ALL TAXABLE PROPERTY OF TOWNSHIP INCLUDING MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

Tax levies made under authority of section 3298-15d (107 O. L. 79) are to be made upon all the taxable property of a township, including that of municipal corporations therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1919.

HON. G. B. FINDLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date April 2, 1919, you submit for the opinion of this department the following:

> "I am interested to know whether township trustees have the right under section 3298-1 G. C. (106 O. L. 589), in raising money for the improvement of roads within the township, to levy a tax both upon the property of the township and upon that of a municipal corporation situated therein."

Said section 3298-1, to wh ch you refer, is found in its present form in 107 O. L. 73. It is the opening section of a series of statutes (section 3298-1 to 3298-15n) which vests in township trustees authority to construct roads. The cost of improvements undertaken by virtue of said series of statutes, may, according to the terms of section 3298-13 (107 O. L. 77) be paid partly by assessment and partly "out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes upon the grand duplicate of all the taxable property in the township." Specific authority for the making of the tax levy is given in section 3298-15d (107 O. L. 79), which section is here quoted in full:

> "The proportion of the compensation, damages, costs and expenses of such improvement to be paid by the township shall be paid out of any road improvement fund available therefor. For the purpose of providing by taxation a fund for the payment of the township's proportion of the compensasation, damages, costs and expenses of constructing, reconstructing, resurfacing, or improving roads under the provisions of section 3298-1to 3298-15n inclusive of the General Code and for the purpose of maintaining, repairing or dragging any public road, or roads, or part thereof, under their jurisdiction in the manner provided in sections 3370 to 3376, inclusive, of the General Code, the board of trustees of any township is hereby authorized to levy annually a tax not exceeding three mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of said township. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes and subject only to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The taxes so authorized to be levied shall be placed by the county auditor upon the tax duplicate against the taxable property of the township and collected by the county treasurer as other taxes. When collected such taxes shall be paid to the treasurer of the township from which they are collected and the money so received shall be under the control of the township trustees of such township for the purposes for which such taxes were levied."

Language very similar to that of the section just quoted is found in sections 1222 (107 O. L. 132), and 6927 (107 O. L. 101), relating respectively to levies of taxes for township's share of cost of improvements under the supervision of the state highway department, and under the supervision of the county commissioners.

A reading of sections 3298-13 and 3298-15d would seem to leave little room for doubt that the legislature intended the levy to include property within a municipal corporation situate in the township; but if there can be any doubt on that score, it is certainly dispelled by reference to sections 3298-25 to 3298-53 (107 O. L. 83), which provide for the creation of "road districts" embracing the territory of a township outside of municipal corporations therein, and the levying of a tax on the taxable property of said district, the very object of this series of statutes being to guard against situations wherein an already high rate in a municipality might make inadvisable the levying of a tax on all the taxable property of the township, and to leave a way open for the raising of funds for improvements under the direction of township trustees through the levying of a tax on all the property of the township outside of municipal corporations therein. Furthermore, section 3298-18 (107 O. L. 82), which has reference, among other things, to creating a township fund for the dragging, maintenance and repair of roads, provides for a levy "upon all the taxable property of the township outside of any incorporated village or city, or part thereof therein situated."

You are, therefore, advised that a levy made by virtue of section 3298-15d is applicable to all the taxable property of the township, including that of municipal corporations therein.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PARTITION FENCES—SECTIONS 5913, 5914 AND 5915 G. C. CONSTITUTIONAL.

Sections 5913, 5914 and 5915 of the General Code (formerly known as R. S. Sec. 4243), are not unconstitutional. See Zarbaugh, Treas. vs. Ellinger, 99 O. S. 133.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1919.

HON. HAVETH E. MAU, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the letter of March 5th, addressed to this department by Hon. William K. Marshall, assistant prosecuting attorney of Montgomery county.

Said letter calls attention to the case of Beach vs. Roth, et al., 18 O. C. C. (N. S.) 579, affirmed without opinion in 80 O. S. 746, and raises the question as to the constitutionality of section 4243 R. S., now code section 5913, 5914 and 5915. Said sections read as follows:

"Section 5913. If either person fails to build the portion of fence assigned to him, the township trustees, upon the application of the aggrieved person, shall sell the contract to the lowest responsible bidder agreeing to furnish the labor and material and build such fence according to the specifications proposed by the trustees, after advertising them for ten days by posting notices thereof in three public places in the township.

Section 5914. When the work is completed in conformity with such contract and to the satisfaction of the trustees, they shall forthwith certify the costs to the township clerk, and, if not paid within thirty days, such clerk shall certify them to the auditor of the county with a statement of the amount the fence sold for, adding thereto a proportionate amount of costs and expenses of such sale, with a correct description of each piece of land upon which the costs are assessed.

Section 5915. The county auditor shall place such amounts upon the tax duplicate to be collected as other taxes, and the township trustees shall at the time certify the amount due each person for building such fence and the amount due each trustee and clerk for services rendered therein. The auditor may anticipate the collection thereof and draw orders for the payment of such amounts out of the county treasury."

The syllabus of the case just mentioned (18 O. C. C. N. S. 579), says:

"Section 4243, Revised Statutes, providing for the building of line fences and the assessment of the cost thereof upon adjoining proprietors, is unconstitutional."

Speaking of this case, the Attorney-General, in an opinion rendered on January 5, 1917 (Opin. of Atty. Gen., 1916, Vol. II, p. 1976), said (at p. 1977):

"The syllabus in the case of Beach vs. Roth, et al., trustees, 18 O. C. C., N. S., 579, is misleading, the broad statement of the syllabus being that section 4243 R. S. is unconstitutional. If sufficiently appears, however, from the opinion of the court, that the court had in mind a situation where the lands on which it was sought to lay the imposition were unenclosed and were intended by the owner so to remain and that the owner had no occasion for a line fence for the purpose of controlling his own domestic animals or for any other purpose except it might be to protect his lands from the domestic animals of his neighbor, who was seeking to compel him to share in the expense of constructing a line fence. This case was affirmed without report in 80 O. S., 746, on the authority of the Alma Coal Company vs. Cozad, treasurer, supra (79 O. S. 348)."

In McDorman vs. Ballard, et al., 94 O. S. 183, our supreme court was asked to reverse the judgment of the court below upon the ground that sections 5908 et seq., G. C. are unconstitutional. Citing the Alma Coal Co. case, above mentioned, the court said (p. 184):

"It was held that the act could not be so construed and administered as to charge an owner of lands which are, and are to remain, unenclosed, with any part of the expense of constructing and maintaining a line fence for the sole benefit of the adjoining proprietor. It does not appear in the present case that the lands of plaintiff in error are unenclosed, and therefore they do not come within the exceptions of the provisions of the statute mentioned in the case to which we have referred, and upon the authority and the holding in that case the judgment of the court of appeals is therefore affirmed."

The constitutionality of the statutes in question was again upheld in the recent case of Charles H. Zarbaugh, Treasurer, vs. John P. Ellinger, decided by the supreme court of Ohio on December 31, 1918. This case is not yet officially reported, but will appear in 99 O. S. at page 133. The facts in that case were as follows:

The trustees of the township in which the lands were situate, proceeding under section 5908 G. C. and sections following, ordered Ellinger, the defendant below, to build one-half of the fence on each side of a private right of way which passed through farm lands owned by others. This, Ellinger refused to do. The trustees then caused the fence to be built pursuant to the statute and the cost of it was certified to the county auditor. Suit was brought by the county treasurer to collect the amount so certified. The jury returned a verdict for the defendant. It was conceded that the verdict of the jury necessarily followed the charge of the trial court, which entertained the view that the statutory provisions under which the assessment was made are unconstitutional.

The constitutionality of the statutes in question was again upheld by the supreme court. The syllabus of the case reads:

> "1. Where the owner of a private right of way which passes through farm lands owned by others, uses it as a farm outlet to a public highway, he is required by the provisions of sections 5908 and 5919, General Code, to build and keep up one-half of the fence on each side of his private right of way.
> 2. The enforcement of that obligation in the manner provided by the statute is not a taking of the property of the owner of such private right of way, in violation of the constitution"

Speaking of the Alma Coal Company case, cited above, the court said:

> "It will be observed that the court did not in that case hold the amended section 4239 R. S. to be unconstitutional. But the right to invoke its application to a situation such as found in that case was denied. In the facts as they there existed, there was no possible basis for the assessment on account of benefit, for there was none."

In neither the McDorman case nor the Zarbaugh case was any reference made by the court to the Beach case, affirmed without report in 80 O. S. 746. If, however, such affirmation must be taken as a decision to the effect that the statutes in question are unconstitutional, it is evident that such decision has in effect been overruled by the later cases just cited.

I therefore advise you that sections 5913, 5914 and 5915 G. C. (formerly known as section 4243 R. S.) are not unconstitutional.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—CONSTRUCTION OF SECTIONS 5501 AND 183 G. C. AS TO "GOOD WILL" FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION.

Neither "good will" nor patent rights, separately considered, constitute "property" within the meaning of sections 5501 and 183 of the General Code, providing for the annual franchise tax and the initial fee, respectively, exacted from foreign corporations; nor is "good will' to be considered as an enhancement of the value of the tangible property of such corporations for the purpose of such statutes with a view to arriving at the value of the whole property as a unit.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 17, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have submitted to this department for opinion the following question:

> "A foreign corporation which owns and uses a part of its capital in this state and does business here reports in its annual statement that a part of its capital stock represents "good will," and that another part thereof represents patent rights.
> Should good will and patent rights, or either of them, be considered as 'property' for the purpose of determining the proportion of the authorized capital stock of such corporation represented by property and business in Ohio; and, if so, what if any part or portion of such good will or patent rights should be regarded as "in this state" for the purpose of making such computation? "

The statutes involved in the consideration of these questions, in so far as their provisions are necessary to be noted here, are as follows:

> "Section 5499. Annually, during the month of July, each foreign corporation for profit, doing business in this state, and owning or using a part or all of its capital or plant in this state, and subject to compliance with all other provisions of law, and in addition to all other statements required by law, shall make a report in writing to the commission in such form as the commission may prescribe.
> Section 5501. Such report shall contain:
>
> 1. The name of the corporation and under the laws of what state or country organized.
>
> 2. The location of its principal office.
>
> * * * * * * * * * *
> 5. The amount of authorized capital stock, and the par value of each share.
>
> * * * * * * * * * *
> 7. The natu e and kind of business in which the company is engaged and its place or places of business, both within and without the state.
>
> * * * * * * * * * *
> 9. The value of the property owned and used by the company in this state, where situated, and the value o the property owned and used outside of this state, and where situated.
>
> * * * * * * * * * *
> Section 5502. Upon the filing of the report, provided for in the last three preceding sections, the commission, from the facts thus reported and any other facts coming to its knowledge bearing upon the question, shall, on the first Monday in September, determine the proportion of the authorized capital stock of the company represented by its property and business in this state. On the first Monday of October, the commission shall certify the amount of the proportion of the authorized capital stock of each such company represented by its property and business in this state, as determined by it, to the auditor of state.

Section 5503. On or before October fifteenth, the auditor of state shall charge for collection, as herein provided, annually, from such company in addition to the initial fees otherwise provided for by law, for the privilege of exercising its franchises in this state, a fee of three-twentieths of one per cent upon the proportion of the authorized capital stock of the corporation represented by the property owned and used and business transacted in this state, which fee shall not be less than ten dollars in any case. * * *"

As has been held in previous opinions of this department with which commission is familiar, the reference in section 5499 to "all other provisions of law" carries us back to section 183 G. C., which with the related sections provides as follows:

"Section 183. Before doing business in this state, a foreign corporation organized for profit and owning or using a part or all of its capital or plant in this state shall make and file with the secretary of state in such form as he may prescribe, a statement under oath of its president, secretary, treasurer, superintendent or managing agent in this state, containing the following facts:

1. The number of shares of authorized capital stock of the corporation and the par value of each share.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

3. The value of the property owned and used by the corporation in Ohio, where situated, and the value of the property of the corporation owned and used outside of Ohio.

4. The proportion of the capital stock of the corporation represented by property owned and used and by business transacted in Ohio.

Section 184. From the facts thus reported and any other facts coming to his knowledge, the secretary of state shall determine the proportion of the capital stock of the corporation represented by its property and business in this state, and shall charge and collect from such corporation for the privilege of exercising its franchise in this state, one-tenth of one per cent upon the proportion of its authorized capital stock represented by property owned and used and business transacted in this state, but not less than ten dollars in any case. Upon the payment of such fee the secretary of state shall make and deliver to such foreign corporation a certificate that it has complied with the laws of Ohio and is authorized to do business therein, stating the amount of its authorized capital stock and the proportion of such authorized capital stock represented in this state."

As the commission has previously been advised, the two groups of statutes from which quotation has been made together constitute a single comprehensive scheme of taxation of the privilege exercised by foreign corporations in the ownership and use of property and the transaction of business in Ohio under corporate forms. Sections 183 et seq. impose a fee or tax upon the "privilege originally conferred" by the state upon such foreign corporations in permitting them to exercise their corporate franchises here (Ashley vs. Ryan, 49 O. S. 504; 153 U. S. 436); while the former impose a tax upon the continuing annual value of that privilege as enjoyed from year to year (Southern Gum Co. vs. Laylin, 66 O. S. 578). Therefore, it is fair to construe the two laws together and to resolve doubts as to the interpretation of the annual franchise tax law, which was the later in point of enactment, in the light of the provisions of the law providing for the annual fee, which was the basis of the franchise tax law.

I call attention to the following features common to both laws:

1 "Property" is not the sole factor upon which the calculation required by each of the laws is to be made; business transacted is a factor of equal weight in the computation which is required

State vs. Cabin Creek Consolidated Coal Co., 17 N. P. n. s. 60.

(2) The property which is to enter into the calculation must be that which is capable of "use" and is used in this state.

(3) The property which must be reported and considered for the purpose of determining the tax must be that which has situation in the state of Ohio and outside of the state of Ohio, respectively.

(4) That which renders a foreign corporation liable to compliance with the Ohio laws and payment of annual franchise taxes, in addition to the doing of business in this state, is the act described as "owning or using a part or all of its capital or plant in this state."

From this it might be asserted that anything in the nature of property which might be regarded as of the "capital" of the company is to be regarded as "property" for the further purposes of the section.

If that feature of the statutes which has been mentioned last be taken as the keynote of the law, then we should at once reach an answer to one part of your question, and would have to hold that all subjects of ownership which might constitute parts of the capital of a corporation would have to be considered as "property" within the meaning of that law. This would lead to the further conclusion that good will, patent rights, investments in stocks and bonds, etc., in a word all intangible interests, must be regarded as property and a location in or out of the state assigned thereto for the purpose of the law.

But it is by no means certain that the phrase "capital or plant" conclusively indicates the scope of the word "property" used in the sections under examination. On the contrary the phrase "where situated" used with respect to the property in this state in section 183 G. C. and with respect both to property in this state and that outside of this state in section 5501, at least suggests a meaning of the word "property" limited in scope to that which is capable of a situation of its own; indeed the idea which may be present in this phrase might be even limited to tangible property. Again, the employment of the word "used" not only in the sub-paragraphs of sections 183 and 5501 G. C., but also in the introductory paragraphs of these two sections in connection with the words "capital or plant," apparently negatives the thought of the application of any of these substantives to property or choses in action held as mere investments. Such indeed has been the holding of this department, which I believe has repeatedly advised the commission that tangible property, such as real estate which is not used in the business of the company, but is merely held as an investment is not to be counted in determining the basic proportion upon which the computation of the tax is founded. Of course, it is true, as said by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, in Adams Express Co. vs. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S., 194-227, that > "Presumptively all the property of the corporation or company is held and used for the purposes of its business, and the value of its capital stock and bonds is the value of only that property so held and used."

But as the opinion in that case points out, this is but a presumption which may be rebutted by a proper showing.

P. C. C. & St. L. R. R. Co. vs. Bachus, 154 U. S 421;
Fargo vs. Hart, 193 U. S. 490.

What may be termed a cursory view of the statutes involved does not, therefore, clearly indicate the precise scope of the word "property" as therein used. It may mean any of the fol owing:

(1) All things and interests, the subjects of ownership, which go to make up the "capital" of a corporation.

This is the broadest of the possible meanings of the term.

(2) Such real estate and tangible personal property as is actually used in the business of the company, as distinguished from such as may be owned and held passively as investments.

This is the narrowest possible meaning of the term.

(3) Some other meaning lying as it were between the extremes just suggested might be worked out, such as the things and interests, whether tangible or intangible, that are actually used by the company in the transaction of its business.

It may be pointed out that if stress be laid upon the word "capital" as indicating the scope of the term "property" still further ambiguity is encountered; for this word may mean at the one extreme all the property and interests of the company, and at the other so much thereof only as represents the original investment, or the par value of the subscribed shares.

See—Thompson on Corporations, sections 3404 et seq., and sections 2926 et seq., where the meaning of this word and similar phrases is discussed.

See also—Iron Railroad Co. vs. Lawrence Furnace Co., 49 O. S. 102; Bradley vs. Bauder, 36 O. S. 28.

If this point were conclusive it is believed that the broader of these meanings would have to be given to the word in the sections under consideration.

None of these points is conclusive, however, and the solution of the problem cannot be worked out without a careful examination of the fundamental character of the things known as "good will" and "patent rights" with a view to determining the probable legislative intent embodied in the sections under consideration as regards their inclusion within the scope of the meaning of the term "property."

The term "good will" grew up, so to speak, in the law of partnership.

As defined by Lord Eldon, in Cruttwell vs. Lye, 17 Ves. Jr., 335, 346, it was said to be "nothing more than the probability that the old customers will resort to the old place."

This definition, it will be observed, makes good will dependent upon place or location, and it is no doubt true that one kind of good will is of that character. This o.d definition, however, is now recognized as inadequate.

Vice Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, in Churton vs. Douglas, 5 Jur. N. S. 887, 28 L. J. Ch. 841, said:

" 'good will,' I apprehend, must mean every advantage—every positive advantage, if I may so express it, as contrasted with the negative advantage of the late partner in carrying on the business himself—that has been acquired by the old firm in carrying on its business, whether connected with the premises in which the business was previously carried on, or with the name of the late firm, or with any other matter carrying with it the benefit of the business."

(Italics mine.)

Story in his work on Partnership, section 99, describes "good will" as

"the advantage or benefit which is acquired by an establishment, beyond the mere value of the capital stock, funds, or property employed therein in consequence of the general public patronage and encouragement which it receives from constant or habitual customers on account of its local position or common celebrity or reputation for skill, affluence, punctuality, or from other accidental circumstances or necessities, or even from ancient partialities or prejudices."

It will be observed that Story distinguishes "good will" from "the capital stock, funds or property employed" in an establishment. This distinction is of some interest to us, for though good will has the attributes of property and as such may become the subject of mortgage, sale or lease in connection with the business; yet where the question is, as it is with us, whether or not the word "property" in a statute includes good will the fact that good will is not "property" for all purposes is of some significance.

Definitions might be multiplied, as many courts and writers have attempted them. What have been quoted, however, will suffice for the purposes of the present discussion. Enough has been said, it is believed, to bring out the following points concerning the nature of good will.

(1.) From the very nature of the term itself and from the definitions of it which have been given, it is at least certain that good will, however it arises, consists fundamentally of a disposition on the part of people other than the so-called "owner" of it. In its original sense the term denotes an attitude of mind, and indeed in the sense in which we are dealing with the term it must be reduced in analysis to just an attitude of mind. This attitude of mind is that which is entertained by the customers of the firm or company, and may be described as their probable disposition to continue to be customers.

(2.) Whether the favor of the people whose attitude of mind really constitutes a "good will" be bestowed upon a place, a name, a product, or anything else, it is very clear that it cannot originate save in the transaction of business. In other words, where no business has ever been conducted there is no good will of the kind now under discussion.

By carefully considering these two points we see how it is that one man may be said to own and to be able to sell an attitude of mind on the part of other men. In truth he cannot own nor can he sell their favor or patronage; what he can do is to have and dispose of the privilege of doing a particular business with them; for the business done which has created their attitude of mind is something which is subject to his control and the control of which he may yield up to another. Thus it is seen that "good will," though it be called "property" and though it be said to be vendible, cannot be separated from the business which originated it. Hence it appears to be an attribute of business.

On the whole, it is submitted that an adequate description of what is known as "good will" would be the privilege of carrying on a particular business. I use the term "privilege," not in the narrow and technical sense in which it is sometimes used to denote something which is the supposed creature of the state or of some natural monopolistic conditions, but in the sense in which it has been defined by recent writers. (See—"Some Fundamental Legal Conceptions as Applied in Judicial Reasoning" (Hohfeld), 23 Yale Law Journal, 16.) Nevertheless, in some instances the public does step in and confer the privilege upon whom it chooses. For example, let us suppose that a corporation has been granted the right to operate a street railroad system over the streets of a municipality. Of course, it will by the conduct of that enterprise in time acquire a "good will," but it cannot dispose of that good will except to one who by assignment or otherwise likewise acquires the right to use the streets for such purpose.

These considerations raise the question as to whether or not it could have been the intention of the Ohio legislature in passing the statutes which have been quoted to class "good will" as "property;" for, as previously pointed out in this opinion, the amount of the fee, both original and annual, is calculated upon two bases—property and business. If but one criterion were set up, and that were property, it would be quite proper to hold that "good will" which has many of the attributes of property should be considered in determining the amount of the tax. For after all, as has been pointed out, the real object of the law is to determine the extent to which the corporate franchise is being enjoyed in Ohio as compared with its total enjoyment. This could not be adequately done on the basis of tangible property alone.

But where business as well as property is to furnish a test for determining the extent to which a franchise is being enjoyed or exercised in this state, it would seem at least incongruous to measure business by some such criterion as volume of sales and then to introduce it again into the calculation by appraising the value of the privilege of doing the business as "property." In other words, such an interpretation of the statute would seem to give double weight to business as a factor, whereas the decision which has been cited holds that equal weight is due to business and property, respectively.

But it may be asserted that good will, though capable of being separated from other property, as such, is, so long as its ownership is joined with that of the property which is used in the conduct of the business, simply as element entering into the organic value of the whole property as an artificial unit or "going concern." Upon this basis it might be argued that inasmuch as the tax commission is afforded no machinery for making a separate appraisement of the tangible or other separate items of a company's property, and inasmuch too as the statute neither authorizes nor requires such property to be reported to the commission at its value as assessed for property taxation in this state and elsewhere, the legislature must have intended that the value of the property of the company as a whole should be taken into consideration.

The conception of the organic value of property devoted to a single business use under single ownership is thoroughly established and well understood in this state.

What was known as the "Nichols law," the essential principles of which are now embodied in sections 5415 to 5431 and 5445 to 5460, inclusive, of the General Code, provided a method of valueing the properties of public utilities, many of which extended into more than one state or more than one county, by which the whole property was to be considered as a single unit for the purpose of appraisement. Under this scheme of assessment it was held that elements that might enter into and enhance the value of the property when offered for sale as a single unit or going concern, such as good will and the like, were not to be eliminated in such an appraisement of the entire property. The following may be quoted from the decisions of the Ohio supreme court and that of the supreme court of the United States in these cases:

> "If by reason of the good will of the concern, or the skill, experience, and energy with which its business is conducted, the market value of the capital stock is largely increased, whereby the value of the tangible property of the corporation, considered as an entire plant, acquires a greater market value than it otherwise would have had, it cannot properly be said not to be its true value in money within the meaning of the constitution, because good will and other elements indirectly entered into its value. The market value of property is what it will bring when sold as such property is ordinarily sold in the community where it is situated; and the fact that it is its market value cannot be questioned because attributed somewhat to good will, franchise, skillful management of the property, or any other legitimate agency * * *.

(Dickman, J., in State ex rel vs. Jones, 51 O. S. 492.)

The unit is a unit of use and management, and the horses, wagons, safes, pouches, and furniture, the contracts for transportation facilities, the capital necessary to carry on the business—whether represented in tangible or intangible property—in Ohio, possesses a value in combination and from use in connection with the property and capital elsewhere, which could as rightfully be recognized in the assessment for taxation in the instance of these companies (express companies) as the other (railroad companies, sleeping car companies, telegraph companies, as to which similar methods had been previously sustained by the supreme court of the United States.)

We repeat that while the unity which exists may not be a physical unity, it is something more than a mere unity of ownership. It is a unity of use, not simply for the convenience or pecuniary profit of the owner, but existing in the very necessities of the case—resulting from the very nature of the business. * * *

There is here no attempt to tax property having a situs outside of the state, but only to place a just value on that within. * * *

(Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, in Adams Express Co. vs. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194-220, 227.)

The burden of the contention of the express companies is that they have within the limits of the state certain tangible property, such as horses, wagons, etc.; that that tangible property is their only property within the state; that it must be valued as other like property, and upon such valuation alone can taxes be assessed and levied against them.

But this contention practically ignores the existence of intangible property, or at least denies its liability for taxation. * * * It matters not in what this intangible property consists—whether privileges, corporate franchises, contracts, or obligations. It is enough that it is property which, though intangible, exists, which has value, produces income, and passes current in the markets of the world. * * * Now whenever separate articles of tangible property are joined together, not simply by a unity of ownership, but in a unity of use, there is not infrequently developed a property, intangible though it may be, which in value exceeds the aggregate of the value of the separate pieces of tangible property. * * *

Now, it is a cardinal rule which should never be forgotten that whatever property is worth for the purposes of income and sale it is also worth for purposes of taxation. * * * Suppose an express company is incorporated to transact business within the limits of a state and does business only within such limits, and for the purpose of transacting that business purchases and holds a few thousands of dollars worth of horses and wagons, and yet it so meets the wants of the people dwelling in that state, so uses the tangible property which it possesses, so transacts business therein, that its stock becomes in the market of the state of the actual cash value of hundreds of thousands of dollars. To the owners thereof, for the purposes of income and sale, the corporate property is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Does substance of right require that it shall pay taxes only upon the thousands of dollars of tangible property which it possesses?

(Mr. Justice Brewer, in Adams Express Co. vs. Ohio State Auditor, (Rehearing), 166 U. S., 185, 218-220.)"

If the view last above suggested be adopted, and if we treat the word "property" as used in the franchise tax laws as substantially synonymous with the phrase "the entire property of such public utility within this state, in the prportion which the value of such property bears to the value of the entire property of such public utility" (section 5424 G. C.), then, it is submitted, that it would follow from such an interpretation that the good will must attach to and inhere in the tangible property considered as a unit and be considered, in short, as an augmentation of the value of that property used as a unit. In other words, on this theory it could not be successfully argued, as it has been by counsel for one of the companies whose assessment for franchise tax purposes gives rise to the question which you have submitted, that all the good will is to be allocated to the state of origin of the corporation on the principle mobilia sequntur personam. In fact the cases cited decide exactly to the contrary by repeated declarations to that effect, one of which I quote at length:

"It is suggested that the company may have bonds, stocks, or other investments which produce a part of the value of its capital stock, and which have a special situs in other states or are exempt from taxation. If it has, let it show that the fact. * * *

But where is the situs of this intangible property? The Adams Express Company has, according to its showing, in round numbers $4,000,000 of tangible property scattered through different states, and with that tangible property thus scattered transacts its business. By the business which it transacts, by combining into a single use all these separate pieces and articles of tangible property, by the contracts, franchises, and privileges which it has acquired and possesses, it has created a corporate property of the actual value of $16,000,000. Thus, according to its figures, this intangible property, its franchises, privileges, etc. is of the value of $12,000,000 and its tangible property of only $4,000,000. Where is the situs of this intangible property? Is it simply where its home office is, where is found the central directing thought which controls the workings of the great machine, or in the state which gave it its corporate franchise; or is that intangible property distributed wherever its tangible property is located and its work is done? Clearly, as we think, the latter. Every state within which it is transacting business and where it has its property, more or less, may rightfully say that the $16,000,000 of value which it possesses springs, not merely from the original grant of corporate power by the state which incorporated it, or from the mere ownership of the tangible property, but it springs from the fact that that tangible property it has combined with contracts, franchises, and privileges into a single unit of property, and this state contributes to that aggregate value not merely the separate value of such tangible property as is within its limits, but its proportionate share of the value of the entire property. That this is true is obvious from the result that would follow if all the states other than the one which created the corporation could and should withhold from it the right to transact express business within their limits. It might continued to own all its tangible property within each of those states, but, unable to transact the express business within their limits, that $12,000,000 of value attributable to its intangible property would shrivel to a mere trifle.

Indeed it is believed to be clear that if the word "property" is to be read in the sense now under consideration, good will as an element contributing to the unit value of the whole is not to be segregated and allocated to the state of origin or the place from which the actual control of the corporate concern is exercised, but, consistent with the Ohio policy and the decisions of the courts, must be distributed pro rata where the tangible property is found.

Thus, New York had a law taxing foreign corporations upon their "capital employed * * * within this state." (Laws of 1896, section 181, Chap. 908). Under this law a number of interesting decisions have been made involving the taxation of good will, patent rights, etc. These decisions are not strictly in point because the New York law is primarily a property tax law; but upon the point of the situs of good will and other similar interests one of them, People ex rel. vs. Roberts, 159 N. Y. 70, is instructive. I quote from the minority opinion of Gray, J., and the prevailing opinion of Vann, J., in that case:

(Gray, J.):

> "The important question, which arises upon this appeal, is whether a tax could legally be assessed upon the relator which included, in the items going to make up the amount of capital employed within this state, the copyrights and the good will of the corporation. The statute provides, that the tax upon a foreign corporation 'is to be computed upon the basis of the capital employed by it within this state,' * * * and we have held that that means only such of the capital as was represented by the value of property, whether of money, goods or other tangible things. * * * It is the policy of the state, with respect to corporations which are created under the laws of another state or country and do business in this state, that a tax should be assessed upon that business. The jurisdiction to impose the tax is gained by reason of the business which they are privileged to do here under the protection of our laws. * * * So far as the franchises themselves of the foreign corporation are concerned, they are beyond the reach of our tax laws. * * * When it is sought to exercise them within this state, the condition of the right to do so is the liability to taxation and control by the legislature, so far as the capital can be seen to be employed in business here. The domicile of this relator, in legal contemplation, is in the state of West Virginia, and it is difficult to conceive of any taxation of its properties within this state, unless it be confined to such as are corporeal and tangible. The only properties of that nature, which represented the capital of the relator in this state, consisted in cyclopaedias which were printed and put upon the market and in its pecuniary assets, in bank account, or in accounts receivable. Its copyrights are Federal grants of privileges and no more power exists to include them in the valuation for assessment purposes, than would exist with respect to patent rights. It has been but recently held by us, in People ex rel. * * * vs. Assessors (156 N. Y., 417), that patent rights cannot be made the subject of taxation, and if they are not taxable, clearly, the same principle, which exempts them from the taxing power of the state, should exempt copyrights. * * *
> Nor does the power exist to assess a foreign corporation upon its good will. That is an intangible asset of the corporation, whose only conceivable situs is at its domicile. It is the reputation of the business. It may be defined as the right acquired to continue the publication and sale of the cyclopaedia under the protection of the copyrights, and that could not be regarded as capital employed within this state. * * * It appertains to the corporation as such and can exist only where the corporation exists, viz: within the territory of the government which created it.

* * * In the case of a domestic corporation, however, the field of assessment is wider and comprehends both the corporate franchise and the business. Nothing is beyond the reach of the taxing power of the state in such a case, which is not rendered exempt by Federal law. Therefore, it was that in People ex rel. * * * vs. Roberts (154 N. Y. 101), we held that in appraising the capital stock of a domestic corporation at its actual value, the element of the good will of the business * * * might be included in the appraisal: * * *."

(Vann, J.):

"Copyrights clearly stand on the same basis as patent rights, with reference to the subject of taxation by the state, and as we have held that the former are exempt the latter should be held exempt also. * * *

No other item is open to discussion except the 'good will of the corporation and the good will acquired by it,' * * *.

Good will is a modern but important growth of the law, not mentioned by some of the early writers, but given great prominence at the present time. * * *

(Judge Vann here quotes the definitions of Lord Eldon and Vice Chancellor Wood, both of which are given in this opinion, and refers to numerous other definitions of English and American courts. He also gives the definitions of text writers, among them that of Judge Story, which has been given in this opinion. One or two of these definitions will bear quotation here, in the language of Judge Vann):

In Parsons on Partnership it is defined as 'that benefit or advantage which rests only on the good will, or kind and friendly feeling of others,' and in a note it is added 'that, so far as it has a transferable value, it consists in the additional value which a business possesses when it can be sold as a going concern.'

(Italics mine.)

Mr. Lindley, in his treatise on Partnership (Vol. 2, page 439), says, '* * * it is plain that good will has no meaning except in connection with a continuing business; * * *.

Mr. Pollock says, 'That which the purchaser of the good will actually acquired as between himself and his vendor is the right to carry on the same business under the old name * * *.

(It is interesting to note that the conclusions of the learned authors quoted by Judge Vann are substantially the same as those hereinbefore reached with respect to the essential character of good will and its necessary dependence upon business.)"

Coming to the facts of the precise question in the case before him, Judge Vann says: (p. 83)

"The relator was incorporated in 1892, under the laws of the state of West Virginia, * * *. The firm of D. Appleton & Co. of the city of New York, owns substantially all the shares of stock that have been issued, and its president, secretary and treasurer are members of that firm. It never did any business, owned any property or had an office in West Virginia, and its only connection with that state is its charter, * * *. While nominally a corporation of West Virginia, for all practical purposes it is a New York corporation. * * * In its report to the comptroller, * * * it stated that its business * * * was carried on at '72 Fifth avenue, in the city of New York.' * * * All the business of the relator is done, and all its stock owned, in the state of New York The cyclopaedia is sold throughout the country through D. Appleton & Co. as selling agents, and the sales of the relator are made almost exclusively to that firm, and wholly in this state. * * *

The good will of the relator, aside from that purchased of Mr. Johnson (the author of the cyclopaedia), is the result of exercising its corporate franchises and carrying on its business in this state, and is inseparable from that business. (Italics mine.) It is the product of an investment of capital in this state, and the exercise here of the privilege for which the tax was laid. To hold that it was not capital employed in this state upon the ground that the domicile of the corporation is in West Virginia, where it never transacted any business nor earned any good will by fair dealing and efficient methods, would exalt form above substance. As the good will is the result of the employment of capital and an incident to an established business, it can exist for no practical purpose in the state where the relator * * * never invested any capital nor did any business. The good will of the relator be ongs to its old and well established business, which is conducted wholly in this state. * * * The value of the books, and the other tangible property used in their production, is augmented by the good will. (Italics mine.) The mere fact that good will is intangible does not take it out of the state, so far as the tights of taxation is concerned, because it is inseparably attached to property which is tangible, located in this state. * * * (Italics mine) It exists at the place where it has a market value, which is where the relator carried on its business and earned a reputation for super or work and honorable conduct. This reputations was not built up in West Virginia, where it did no business, but in New York, where it did all its business."

It would seem to follow logically upon the reasoning of Vann, J., that if a corporation did business with tangible property located in several states the good will of the entire business located in several states the good will of the entire business should be fairly apportioned among the several states in which it did business, in proportion ot the extent of its tangible interests therein, as in the Express Company cases heretofore quoted. It is clear from the authorities which have been abstracted that one contention made by counsel for the companies who are interested in the question submitted to this department can be answered with assurance by saying that good will cannot be allocated on the principle mobilia sequuntur personam.

But the cases which have been quoted bring us back again to the fundamental question which must be answered on the inquiry. For it will not do to dispose of the whole question, so far as it relates to good will, by saying that at the most good will must be distributed between Ohio and the rest of the world in proportion to the value of the property situated here and everywhere, respectively. If property only were the basis of the tax it would make no difference in arriving at the proportion whether we should leave out good will entirely or allocate it proportionally to the tangible and other intangible property. But, as has been pointed out, the tax is computed according to a double calculation, and if good will is to enter into that calculation on the side of property, though it is distributed in the same proportion between Ohio and the rest of the world that the property is distributed, the effect will be greatly to enhance the weight of property as a factor in the calculation, in comparison with that of business as a co-ordinate factor therein. There is, therefore, a real and practical difference between eliminating good will as "property" and including it as "property" but distributing it in proportion to the other property.

Returning, then, to the main question, a study of the decisions which have been cited tends to confirm the view previously expressed, that it would violate the underlying purpose of the law to count good will as "property" in the calculation which has to be made thereunder; or, putting it in another way, to take the value of the property as a unit or a going concern for such purpose. An additional argument in the same direction is afforded by the fact that the Ohio legislature has not seen fit to use in the franchise tax law the formula of words which it has always used when it intended to provide for an appraisement of property as a unit or a going concern. The outstanding word in sections like sections 5424 and 5452 G. C. is "entire." This word in the context in which it is found in those sections clearly expresses the idea of unity which is so forcibly brought out in the opinions of the courts which have been quoted. Nothing is clearer upon careful review of all the opinions, including that of the New York court as well as the others, than that good will can appear as an element of value only when property is appraised as a going concern. When it is separated into its component parts the good will disappears as an enhancement of value of anything.

Two reasons thus appear for rejecting "good will" as an element of the "property" which is required to be reported for the purpose of assessing the franchise tax under the sections under examination. Summarizing them, they are as follows:

> (1) Good will is the product of business; its value, if it is capable of appraisement at all, depends upon business. Therefore in a statute in which property and business are set over against each other in contradistinction 'good will' cannot be regarded as 'property'.
> (2) 'Good will' considered as an element in the value of property does not exist save when property is considered in its organic relations as a single business unit or going concern. The statutes of Ohio which are aimed at assessments of property on that basis use language which is not found in the statutes under examination. Therefore, it follows that it must not have been the intention that the word 'property' as used in the sections under examination should denote property considered as a unit or going concern.

It should have been stated in connection with the last mentioned point that not only do sections 183 and 5501 G. C. omit any such word as "entire" in connection with the word "property" therein, but they also omit any requirement to the effect that the facts shall be reported to the secretary of state or the tax commission, as the case may be, upon the basis of which alone an adequate appraisement of going value could be made. Let section 5422 G. C. be examined in this connection. It provides not only for a report of the par value of authorized capital stock, as do the sections under consideration, but also the market value of the shares of stock as of a day certain, the bonded indebtedness and indebtedenss not bonded, the gross receipts, the gross expenditures, statement of the value of real property used in operation and that not used in operation, etc. As the commission well knows, facts like these must be taken into consideration in making a real appraisement of the value of property as a unit or going concern. That sections 5501 and 183 do not require such facts to be reported is an additional argument in support of the conclusion which has been reached in this opinion, which is to the effect that no such appraisement or valuation was intended by these sections.

For all these reasons, then, it is the opinion of this department that "good will" is not "property" for the purpose of section 5501 G. C. and the related sections.

This conclusion is, moreover, most consistent with the context of those sections, in that, for reasons already stated, good will itself has no independent situs; whereas property the value of which must be reported for the purpose of assessing the franchise tax is that, the situation of which can be likewise reported.

It may be added that conversation with some of the counsel representing the companies whose reports have been given rise to the question submitted by you disclose that the "good will' reported by such companies is not such as would be arrived at by any method of appraisement of the property of the companies as a whole or as a going concern, unless the market value of the stock and the par value of the bonds of the company could be taken as an absolute index of such unit value. In other words, the amounts shown on the books of these companies as representing "good will" are placed there to balance issues of stock made in payment for property and business of competitors or predecessors on reorganization. Thus, a person, firm or company will "sell out" to a corporation, receiving in payment shares of stock in the corporation. In some instances (though perhaps this is not so with respect to the companies directly in question) the vendee corporation or the reorganized corporation will close out the business so purchased and dismantle its plant. In such cases it may be that the "good will" of the vendee corporation is thereby created or enhanced in value; but it is submitted that the "good will" of the vendor which has gone out of business is destroyed. This fact is mentioned because it has been argued, for example, that where a corporation so acquires the assets and business of an individual or corporation formerly doing business at a particular place, so much of the "good will" of the acquiring corporation as is represented by such acquisition should be allocated to the place where the old business was carried on. This cannot be so.

Of course, in such instances the item "good will" gets on the books of the purchasing company when an appraisement is made of the tangible assets purchased, and it represents the difference between such appraisement and the selling price of the stock so issued in payment therefor.

These considerations all tend to show how complicated and untrustworthy an element in a computation like that required to be made under the statutes under consideration "good will" is, if considered as property. They confirm the view previously expressed that it was never the intention of the general assembly in enacting sections 183 and 5501 G. C. to consider such elements as distinct property. As previously stated, it is also the view of this department that "good will" cannot be consisdered as an enhancement of the value of other property, for the reason that machinery is lacking for the ascertainment of such value on the unit basis.

Your inquiry also covers patent rights. As brought out by the New York case, such patent rights are not taxable as separate property by the state. Without going elaborately into the discussion of this question, it is the opinion of this department that the principles above established afford such an interpretation of section 5501 and related statutes as to exclude patent rights from the category of property for the purposes of such sections. It seems fairly clear that the general assembly in using this term could not have intended to indicate subjects of ownership that were not taxable by any state. Patent rights considered as property are not only not taxable to a foreign corporation in Ohio, but also would not be taxable to it as "property" in the state of its origin. Therefore, they should for this additional reason be eliminated from consideration entirely.

In direct answer to your question, therefore, you are advised that neither good will nor patent rights should be considered as "property" for the purpose of determining the proportion of the authorized capital stock of a foreign corporation represented by property and business in Ohio. No objection is seen to considering book or otherwise estimated value of good will or patent rights as employed in Ohio for the purpose of reflecting upon the volume of "business" done by the corporation in Ohio. As previous opinions of this department have pointed out, business may be measured by any fair criterion of volume. Both good will and patent rights are things which are employed in carrying on business; the one results from business and begets more business; the other creates business and protects it. Neither, however, can be said, fairly considered, to be "property" as used in the Ohio law.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-Geueral.

MAYORS OF CITIES ENTITLED TO FEES FOR VIOLATIONS OF STATUTES —MUNICIPAL COURTS—HOW CREATED.

1. Mayors of cities are entitled to fees collected in cases tried before them for violations of state statutes.

2. The power to establish a municipal court having the judicial powers and jurisdiction of mayors, is vested in the general assembly by article IV of the constitution and not in municipalities under article XVIII.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of February 4, 1919, requesting my opinion on the right of the municipal judge of East Cleveland to fees in state cases, was duly received.

Your letter reads as follows:

"STATEMENT OF FACTS.

The charter of the city of East Cleveland, Ohio, provides as follows:

'Section 25. There shall be a court styled "The Municipal Court of East Cleveland, Ohio," held by a municipal judge chosen by the electors having such judicial powers and jurisdiction as is now or may hereafter be conferred by the general assembly of the state of Ohio upon mayors of municipalities. He shall have been admitted for three years to the practice of law in Ohio, and practiced law in courts therein for three years and shall hold office for a term of four years. He shall receive a salary of $300 per annum until otherwise provided by ordinance of the commission, and his salary shall not be increased or decreased during his term of office.'

No ordinance of the commission having any bearing upon the matter has been passed The customary mayor's fees have been assessed in state cases and are on deposit in the depository of the city. Question: Is the judge of the municipal court entitled to such fees in state cases?"

In addition to section 25 quoted in your letter, the following sections of the city charter are also pertinent to your inquiry, viz:

"Section 26. The city manager shall detail one or more members of the police force to perform the duties of clerk and bailiff of said court, and the process of said cou rt shall be directed to the chief police officer and served by him or by any member of the police force.

Said municipal court shall have a seal with the name of the state in the center, and the style of the court in the margin.

Section 27. Error and appeal may be prosecuted as may now or hereafter be provided by the general assembly of the state of Ohio for error and appeal from courts having like jurisdiction."

1. Right of city mayors to fees in state cases.

Section 4213 G. C. provides that

"Except as otherwise provided in this title, all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury."

In Piqua vs. Cron, 2 N. P. (n. s.) 165, the Miami county common pleas court held that

"The mayor of a city in Ohio is entitled to retain his fees and costs, collected in cases tried before him for violation of the criminal statutes of the state, * * * and a provision of a city ordinance which purports to require him to pay such fees and costs into the city treasury is invalid as being in conflict with the statutes of the state."

In the opinion, at page 168, the court said:

"The new Municipal Code provides in section 1536-633 (now 4213 G. C.) that 'except as otherwise provided in this act, all fees pertaining to any office shall be paid into the city treasury.' It therefore appears that there are exceptions to the rule. But for this exception it would seem, that, whether justly or not, under the statute, the city would be entitled to appropriate any money received by the mayor officially, whether earned in conection with municipal business or not. When we come to look for the exception, it would seem to appear plainly in Revised Statutes, section 1536-774 (now 4550 G. C.), and nowhere else. That section provides that the mayor 'shall be entitled to receive the same fees that are, or may be allowed justices of the peace for similar services.' * * *

"Construing together with this section 1536-633 (now 4213 G. C.), which requires him to turn over all fees, 'except as otherwise provided,' and section 1536-774 (now 4550 G. C.) which declares him 'entitled to receive the same fees allowed a justice of the peace,' and there is no difficulty in harmonizing the three, which were passed at the same time, and are of equal authority. They evidently mean, as seems just and right, that for services judicial or otherwise, performed by the mayor, for the municipality, he must be satisfied with his salary without additonal costs, and that the city gets the benefit of the fees and costs accruing in the transaction of municipal business. But as to fees and costs earned by the mayor, while transacting, not the business of the city of Piqua, but of the state of Ohio, or of its private citizens, the law, at present at least, does not give them to the city."

And in Portsmouth vs. Milstead, 8 C. C. (n. s.) 114, affirmed by the supreme court without report (76 O. S. 597), the court, in construing section 1536-633 R. S. (now 4213 G. C.), said (page 116):

"When the legislature provided that all fees 'pertaining to any office' shall be paid into the city treasury, did it intend more than the fees pertaining to the office of the mayor, and such as arose from duties purely municipal? * * *

The state fixes and controls the amount and character of fees in state cases, and has delegated to municipal councils authority to fix the fees for violation of its municipal laws. The scheme of legislation recognizes the distinction between the jurisdiction, powers and duties of the mayor, and such as he exercises as an ex-officio justice of the peace. * * *

It would seem, therfore, that * * * 'all fees pertaining to any office,' under the rule established in Ravenna vs. Penn. Co. (45 O. S. 118) refers to municipal fees or such that may be fixed and controlled by municipal authority."

To the same effect is opinion No. 285, in 1913 Annual Report of the Attorney-General, Vol. I, page 257.

See, also, on this subject Cambridge vs. Smallwood, 6 C. C. (n. s. 230, affirmed 75 O. S. 339; and Bellefontaine vs. Haviland, 3 N. P. (n. s.) 99, holding that section 4270 G. C. applies only to mayors of villages.

Under authority of the Cron and Portsmouth cases, supra, I am of the opinion that mayors of cities are entitled to fees collected in cases tried before them for violations of state statutes.

2. Power of Home Rule charter cities to establish courts.

But what has been said does not necessarily mean that the judge of the municipal court of East Cleveland is entitled to the fees collected in state cases. It is a vital question in this case whether East Cleveland had the power to establish a municipal court, in view of section 1, article IV, of the state constitution, which provides that the judicial power of the state shall be vested in the supreme court, courts of appeal, court of common pleas, court of probate, and such "other courts" inferior to the courts of appeal as may from time to time be "established by law," and the provision of section 15, article IV, that laws may be passed to "establish other courts, whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each house shall concur therein."

The general assembly in numerous instances after the adoption of the home rule amendment, and apparently in the exercise of the authority conferred by sections 1 and 15 of article IV, has established municipal courts in charter cities, but the question whether article XVIII has conferred such power either exclusively or concurrently or at all upon home rule charter cities has not, so far as I have been able to ascertain, been authoratively decided by any court. There are, however, judicial expressions in some of the supreme court decisions, apparently concurred or acquiesced in by all the judges, to the effect that article XVIII has no application whatever to the judicial organization of the state. Thus, in State vs. Yeatman, 89 O. S., 44. in which the constitutionality of the acts enlarging the jurisdiction of the municipal courts of Cincinnati and Dayton were involved, Judge Shauck, at page 47 and 48, said: "The provisions of article XVIII as amended have no relation to the judicial organization of the state, but only to the government of municipalities." And in Hesse case, 93 O. S., 230, also involving the validity of a certain section of the act establishing the municipal court of Cincinnati, the court was characterized as a statutory court only."

Perhaps the nearest direct approach to the question under consideration was made in Ide vs. State, 95 O. S., 224, where the court eliminated its discussion with the remark that,

"It is sufficient to say * * * that this charter does not purport to establish a court."

The East Cleveland case, however, cannot be so easily disposed of, because the charter in express terms does purport to establish a court. Section 25 clearly states that there shall be a court styled "The Municipal Court of East Cleveland, Ohio." The powers and jurisdiction of the court are also provided for. It is also provided that a judge shall be chosen by the municipal electors, and that such judge must possess certain qualifications. His term of office and annual salary are also fixed. Under section 26 provision is made for a court clerk and bailiff, for the service of process, and for a seal, and in section 27 provision is made for the prosecution of appeal and error proceedings.

If the provisions of sections 25, 26 and 27 of the East Cleveland charter do not establish a court, it would be difficult to find language which would have that effect.

The courts have heretofore had occasion to determine what is meant by the expression, "to establish courts," as used in article IV.

In Mendelson vs. Miller, 11 N. P. (n s.) 586, the Cuyahoga common pleas court, in an opinion by Judge Phillips, held:

> "The general assembly establishes a court when it enacts that there shall be a court, fixes the number of judges, defines the jurisdiction and prescribes the procedure to be followed therein."

In the opinion, at page 588, the court say:

> "For the legislature to enact that there shall be a court, for it to fix the number of judges, to define the jurisdiction, and to prescribe the procedure, etc., is to establish a court."

The court also in that case clearly pointed out that courts, other than those specifically named in and created by the constitution, are established by the general assembly, and that such courts can only be established "whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each house shall concur therein."

Certain decisions of the supreme court, some of which were decided after the adoption of the home rule amendment, tend very strongly to the conclusion that the power to establish courts (other than the constitutional courts), inferior to the courts of appeals, is vested only in the general assembly.

In State vs. Bloch, 65 O. S., 370, the court, at page 391, speaking with reference to section 1, article IV, of the state constitution, said:

> "The general power is here undoubtedly granted to the general assembly to create courts other than those enumerated in the section; and the material inquiry is, what other courts may be so created? The answer is found in the language of the section, which is, 'such' other courts 'as the general assembly may from time to time establish.' That language vests in that body full power to determine what other courts it will establish, local, if deemed proper, either for separate counties or districts, and to define their jurisdiction and powers. The only limitation placed upon the exercise of that power is that the courts so established shall be inferior to the supreme court, subject, of course, to the further qualification that no legislation can alter the judicial system established by the constitution, nor interfere with the courts designated by that instrument as the recipients of the judicial power. Apparently there could have been but one purpose in making this special grant of legislative power, and that was to enable the general assembly to meet the public needs for additional courts; as they might arise in different parts of the state."

And in State vs. Ritchie, 97 O. S., 41, the court held:

> "Section 1 of article IV of the constitution confers upon the general assembly of Ohio authority to establish by law courts inferior to the courts of appeals, throughout the entire state, or in any one or more localities within the state."

In the opinion at pages 46 and 47, the court said:

"Section 1 of article IV vests in the general assembly of Ohio authority to establish by law courts inferior to courts of appeals. This provision of the constitution was adopted after the decision of this court in the case of State ex rel., vs. Bloch, 65 O. S., 370, holding that similar language in the constitution of 1851 vested in the general assembly 'full power to determine what other courts it will establish, local, if deemed proper, either for separate counties or districts, and to define their jurisdiction and powers.' When this provision was written into the amendment of 1912, and adopted by the electors of the state, it was done with the knowledge of the construction given it by this court. It must have been the intention not only of the constitutional convention, but of the electors adopting it, that the same construction would obtain; otherwise the language would have been changed to indicate a different intent and purpose."

In view of the somewhat unsettled state of the law as to the exact scope of the powers conferred upon home rule cities under article XVIII of the constitution, especially with respect to subjects which seem to be specially provided for in other sections of the constitution (for example, taxation and courts), questions such as the one under consideration are not free from doubt.

The language of Judge Jones in State vs. Cooper, 97 O. S. 86, 92, seems pertinent at this point, viz:

"The power of taxation in every form, the power of eminent domain, the power to establish courts of record or conciliation and to define their jurisdiction, these may be so employed by chartered cities as to affect only their own people, and, thus considered, seem local in character. But it does not follow that the home rule sections above named, endow municipalities with such powers, nor with the powers now claimed here. Especially is this true if consideration be given to other express provisions of the constitution."

In view of the policy that has, without apparent objection, been pursued by the general assembly in establishing municipal courts in home rule cities, such as Cleveland, Cincinnati, Dayton, and Sandusky, and the decision above referred to, it would seem reasonable to conclude that the power to establish municipal courts is found in article IV, and not in article XVIII of the constitution, and that, therefore, it is the general assembly only that has the power.

It might be contended with some plausibility that municipalities possess the power under article XVIII to establish local tribunals with jurisdiction limited to municipal offenses only, thereby excluding state cases. But, however, that may be (and I express no opinion on the matter), I am of the opinion that the power to establish courts having the judicial powers and jurisdiction of mayors, is vested in the general assembly by article IV of the constitution, and not in charter cities under article XVIII. It follows, therefore, that the municipal judge provided for in section 25 of the East Cleveland charter is not entitled to the fees referred to in your letter.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—DISBURSEMENT OF POOR RELIEF FUND—MANIPULATED SO AS TO INCREASE TRUSTEES COMPENSATION—WHEN PAYMENTS OF SAME ILLEGAL.

Where township trustees so manipulate their official transactions in disbursing the poor relief, as to unnecessarily increase their compensation under section 3294 G. C., their service to the extent augmented with such object of personal gain is not "service in the business of the township" as provided in said section and such trustees are not entitled to compensation therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1919

HON. W. R. WHITE, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated March 26, 1919, containing supplemental facts relating to your inquiry of February 28, 1919, in which you request the opinion of this department as to the legality of certain practices of the township trustees in disbursing township funds for the relief of the poor.

To state the situation and exhibit the question contained in your letters, it is deemed sufficient to quote from that part of your second letter which contains the comments of the report of the examiner, Mr. M. H. Jenkinson, as follows:

> "The compensation illegally drawn as set forth above and which is ordered paid back into the treasury of the township was not drawn for 'service in the business of the township' as required by the section quoted, but upon flimsy excuses, made in most cases without reference to the service rendered but merely for the purpose of getting the money. Four out of five days' services claimed was for giving a single order for groceries, for coal or for a note to the poor doctor. In a majority of the cases the amount of the relief given was less than the amount of the charge made by the trustee for the service. In fact in 1916, when nine-tenths of the days charged for were in connection with the disbursement of aid to the poor, the total amount disbursed by all three trustees, as shown by their statements, was $289.25, while their pay for disbursing same was $450.00.
> As evidence that the service accounts of the trustees were made with a view of getting the maximum salary allowed by law, it is only necessary to observe the accounts of the two old members—Messrs. McCormick and Snead. Each succeeded in having the poor of his district get sick or needy on different days, so that a day's service might be charged for each order given. Mr. Jones, the new member who entered upon his duties in 1916, gave many orders in one day during the first month or two of his term, but he soon fell into the ways of his elders, and arranged his orders so as to cover the maximum number of days. He retired from office September 1, 1917, to become county recorder.
> In addition to showing that most of the charges are for a single order for relief, or for the doctor, they show in several instances that two days were charged for on a single date In many instances an order was given for groceries one day and an order for coal to the same person the following day. Both needs could have been attended to in one day had the trustee made an investigation. If he made no investigation then he rendered no service that should entitle him to a day's compensation. The section quoted says that compensation was to be received for each day's service. One minute or even five minutes, required to write an order for a dollar's worth of groceries, or a note to the doctor, cannot be construed as a day's service."

From the matter above quoted, it is apparent that the legality of the action of the trustees, in so manipulating the township business as to increase the number of days for which they may charge the per diem compensation allowed by law, is involved.

Sections 3294 (as amended in 107 O. L., 698) and 13105 G. C. are pertinent and in part are:

> "Section 3294. Each trustee shall be entitled to * * * two dollars and fifty cents for each day of service in the business of the township, to be paid from the township treasury. The compensation of any trustee to be paid from the treasury shall not exceed two hundred and fifty dollars in any year, including services in connection with the poor."
> Section 13105. Whoever, knowing it to be false or fraudulent, in whole or in part, makes, presents for payment or certifies as correct to * * * the township trustees or other township officer, a claim * * * or other evidence of indebtedness for procuring its allowance * * * out of the treasury * * * of the township * * * shall be imprisoned."

Subject to the limitations of two hundred and fifty dollars, we have here authority for the payment to township trustees of two dollars and fifty cents for each day's service in transacting the business of the township.

It has been held by the courts of this state that the law does not recognize parts of days in construing provisions of this kind which make a per diem allowance, and without citing authority it may be correctly said that if, in the discharge of the duties referred to in your letter, the trustess, acting in good faith in issuing the orders for poor relief on a certain day, did not have a sufficient number of applications for poor relief to occupy a whole day, and there was no fraud or procurement on their part to induce applicant to make their application on other days, with a view of increasing the number of days which such trustess could charge for their services, then and in that event neither section 3294 nor 13105, supra, would be violated. But, where the trustees connive and conspire to time the application for poor relief and their official action thereon, in such a manner as to unnecessarily require the action of the trustees upon different days, and when in the ordinary prosecution of such township business such applications could be acted upon and such official services rendered in one day, then such acts and conditions present a totally different situation, and in such a case, in his acts whereby he makes it necessary for his own private gain, that he perform official duties upon another day and thereby increase the amount of compensation which he may collect from the township, such trustee is not engaged in the "service in the business of the township" but is acting in his own corrupt personal interest and dictates of common decency and honesty would prohibit such an officer from profiting by his own betrayal of his trust.

All of the above acts and facts being proven, there is no reason for concluding that such an official is not presenting a fraudulent claim to the township treasury when he presents a claim for such services for payment, as prohibited by section 13105 G. C.

As said in State ex rel. vs. Maharry, 97 O. S., at p. 276:

> "Finally we have come to regard all public property and all public moneys as a public trust. The public officers in temporary custody of such public trusts are trustees for the public, and all persons undertaking to deal with and participate in such public trust do so at their peril; that is, the rights of the public, as beneficiaries, are paramount to those of any private person or corporation."

It is common knowledge that a public office is a public trust and that the officers having charge of the disbursement of public funds stand in a fiduciary relation to the public and are charged with the utmost good faith in the discharge of their official duties in connection with the disbursement of public funds. The penal statutes of Ohio prohibit an officer charged in law with the making of contracts and expenditure of public money from being interested financially in any contract which he is so authorized to make. This is done on the theory that he must not be interested in any contract because his only interest therein must be in behalf of the public authority he exercises and whose funds he disburses. It has long been held that public policy prohibits such an interest on the part of an officer.

As stated by Judge Bigger in State vs. Pinney, 13 O. D., p. 211:

> "It is a doctrine of our law, as old as the principle of equity, that an agent in the execution of his agency, shall not be permitted to put himself in a position antagonistic to his principle. An agent by accepting the undertaking committed to his care, impliedly agrees that he will use his best endeavors to further the interest of his principal. This principle of law precludes him absolutely from dealing with himself either directly or indirectly."

What was said in that case about public policy precluding an officer (in that case a county commissioner) from being interested in a contract of his principal would apply with no less reason and force to an agent or officer so arranging and manipulating the business of his principal as to increase his compensation to the detriment of the interest of his principal.

As against the considerations above indicated, it might be claimed that section 3294 confers sufficient discretion and authority upon the trustees that they may arrange their business in such manner as they choose, without violating the spirit or letter of section 13015.

In answer to such a claim, it may be observed that the doctrine of law, which as stated by Judge Bigger in the Pinney case, supra, is as old as the principles of equity that an agent in entering the service of his principal agrees that he will use his best endeavors to further the interest of that principal, is underlying and read into every law creating an office or trust, or defining the duties thereof.

Section 2856 G. C., relative to the duties of the county coroner, provides that when information is given to any coroner that the body of a person, whose death is supposed to have been caused by violence, has been found within his county, he shall proceed to inquire how the deceased came to his death, and that his fees, the cost of subpoenaing witnesses, etc., shall be paid by the county.

In State ex rel. Jones vs. Bellows et al., 15 C. C., 504, the court quotes with approval the decision of the supreme court of Pennsylvania (Lancaster Co. vs. Mishler, 100 Pa. St., 627), in which it is held that the power to hold an inquest > "is not a power to be exercised capriciously and arbitrarily and against all reason * * *. If there be no reasonable ground to suspect that the death was not a natural one, it is a perversion of the whole spirit of the law to compel the county to pay him for such services."

and in the Ohio case, page 510 of the opinion, the court concludes:

> "the coroner must act in good faith—not capriciously or arbitrarily."

Because of these principles of public policy, long sanctioned by the courts of this state, it is concluded that in so far as charges are made for services so fraudulently made necessary, it is the opinion of this department that the same are illegal.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

EMBALMING DEAD HUMAN BODIES—SECTION 1344 G. C. VIOLATED —JUSTICE OF PEACE SHOULD HOLD ACCUSED TO PROPER COURT WHEN COMPLAINT FILED—EXCEPTION.

Where a complaint is filed with a justice of the peace, charging a person with a violation of the statute governing the embalming of dead human bodies, such officer should hold the accused to the proper court having jurisdiction, unless the accused, in a writing subscribed by him, waive a jury and submit to be tried by such magistrate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1919.

HON. B. G. JONES, Secretary-Treasurer, State Board of Embalming Examiners, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "On January 4, 1919, I filed an affidavit against one R. T., for embalming a dead human body, in violation of section 1344 of the General Code. This case was brought before C. A. C., a justice of the peace.
> According to a conversation I had with Mr. C. A. C., over the telephone yesterday, R. T. appeared before him and pleaded not guilty and was remanded by Mr. C. A. C. to the grand jury.
>
> This is the first time that a case of this sort has been brought before a justice of the peace and the above procedure looks to me as entirely unnecessary, if legal.
> Kindly give me your opinion on the above and suggest what course, if any, I can pursue to bring this matter to a head."

Attention is invited to section 1344 G C., as amended in 107 O. L., 659, which reads as follows:

> "No person shall embalm, either by arterial or cavity treatment or prepare for burial, cremation or transportation any dead human body unless he or she is a duly licensed embalmer within the meaning of this chapter. Any person who shall practice in this state the science of embalming, either by arterial or cavity treatment of any dead human body, or prepare for burial, cremation or transportation any dead human body, without having complied with the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in any court be fined not less than forty dollars nor more than seventy-five dollars for the first offense and for the second and each repeated offense shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned for six months or both, at the discretion of the court. All such fines shall be paid into the common school fund."

From the above section it will be noted that R. T. was accused of a misdemeanor in embalming a dead human body in violation of section 1344 G. C. and attention is therefore directed to sections 13510 and 13511 G. C., covering proceedings of this kind before a justice of the peace, and which read:

> "Section 13510. When a person charged with a misdemeanor is brought before a magistrate on complaint of the party injured and pleads guilty thereto such magistrate shall sentence him to such punishment as he may deem proper, according to law, and order the payment of costs. If the complaint is not made by the party injured, and the accused pleads guilty, the magistrate shall require the accused to enter into a recognizance to appear at the proper court as is provided when there is no plea of guilty.
> Section 13511. When the accused is brought before the magistrate and there is no plea of guilty, he shall inquire into the complaint in the presence of such accused. If it appear that an offense has been committed and that there is probable cause to believe the accused guilty, he shall order him to enter into a recognizance, with good and sufficient surety, in such amount as he deems reasonable, for his appearance at the proper time and before the proper court; otherwise he shall discharge him from custody. If the offense charged is a misdemeanor and the accused, in a writing subscribed by him and filed before or during the examination, waive a jury and submit to be tried by the magistrate, he may render final judgment."

On the case in question there was no plea of guilty, but there was "probable cause to believe the accused guilty." Hence the justice of the peace was directed by the statute to "order him to enter into a recognizance" for his appearance at the proper time and before the proper court, which seems to have been done. Again, it is requred in section 13510 G. C. that it must be on the complaint of the party injured, in order that the justice of the peace may sentence and order payment of costs.

In the case of Hanaghan vs. State, 51 O. S. 24, it was held:

> "By the 'party injured' is meant the person who suffers some particular injury from the commission of the misdemeanor, as distinguished from that which results to the public, or local community where it was committed."

Here the complaint was not made by the "party injured," but by one representing the public in an official capacity, and even if the accused had pleaded guilty, still would the magistrate be required to have the person charged enter into a recognizance to appear in the proper court the same as where there is no plea of guilty. It may be said too, that if the person charged with a misdemeanor waives a jury and submits to be tried by the magistrate, in a proper writing before or during examination, the magistrate may render final judgment, but this would be limited to the matters defined in section 13423 G. C., which reads:

> "Section 13423. Justices of the peace, police judges and mayors of cities and villages shall have jurisdiction, within their respective counties, in all cases of violation of any law relating to:
> 1. Adulteration or deception in the sale of dairy products and other food, drink, drugs and medicines.
>
> 2. The prevention of cruelty to animals and children.
>
> 3. The abandonment, non-support or ill treatment of a child by its parent.
> 4. The abandonment or ill treatment of a child under sixteen years of age by its guardian.

5. The employment of a child under fourteen years of age in public exhibitions or vocations injurious to health, life or morals, or which cause or permit it to suffer unnecessary physical or mental pain.

6. The regulation, restriction or prohibition of the employment of minors.

7. The torturing, unlawfully punishing, ill treating, or depriving anyone of necessary food, clothing or shelter.

8. The selling, giving away or furnishing of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, or keeping a place where such liquor is sold, given away or furnished, in violation of any law prohibiting such acts within the limits of a township and without the limits of a municipal corporation.

9. The shipping, selling, using, permitting the use of, branding or having unlawful quantities of illuminating oil for or in a mine.

10. The sale, shipment or adulteration of commercial feed stuffs.

11. The use of dust creating machinery in workshops and factories.

12. The conducting of a pharmacy, or retail drug or chemical store, or the dispensing or selling of drugs, chemicals, poisons or pharmaceutical preparations therein.

13. The failure to place and keep in a sanitary condition a bakery, confectionery, creamery, dairy, dairy barn, milk depot, laboratory, hotel, restaurant, eating house, packing house, slaughter house, ice cream factory or place where a food product is manufactured, packed, stored, deposited, collected, prepared, produced or sold for any purpose.

14. Offenses for violation of laws in relation to inspectionof steam boilers, and of laws licensing steam engineers and boiler operators.

15. The prevention of short weighing and measuring and all violations of the weights and measures laws."

It will be noted that nowhere in the above section is jurisdiction in cases of embalming dead human bodies conferred.

It is, therefore, the opinion of the Attorney-General that the justice of the peace, in holding the accused, charged with a violation of section 1344 G. C., to the grand jury, pursued the proper course, in view of the sections quoted.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—PUBLICATION OF REVISED AND CODIFIED ORDINANCES IN BOOK FORM—QUESTION WHETHER NEW MATTER CONTAINED IN SAID PUBLICATION.

The authorization to publish in book form in case of revision and codification of ordinances as provided in section 4230 G. C. is applicable only to the extent that the revision and codification does not effect a substantial change or departure from the original purport and scope of the ordinances.

*The provision "a new ordinance * * * which contains entirely new matter shall be published as heretofore required by law," as found in said section is construed as importing any subject which is entirely new rather than that the subject matter be new in its entirety.*

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You request my written opinion upon the correctness of your ruling to the city solicitor of Norwood, Ohio, upon the sufficiency of publication of revised ordinances in book form, your ruling and the statement of facts submitted by the city solicitor being as follows:

"Solicitor's Statement.

The city of Norwood is going to pass a building code next Monday night, fifty per cent. of the sections are entirely new, many corrections are made in the old sections retained, the city intends to publish same in book form.

Under the provisions of section 4230 General Code, does this ordinance have to be published in the newspaper?

The question which perplexes me is whether 'entirely new matter' means any new matter at all, or whether if there is any old matter at all in the ordinance it does not have to be published.

If you know of any ruling on this section please let me know, and if there has been no ruling your early advice in the matter will be appreciated."

You state your ruling as follows:

"We have your favor of February 12, 1919, and in view of section 4230 G. C., as follows:

'(When publication in book form sufficient.) When ordinances are revised, codified, rearranged and published in book form and certified as correct by the clerk of council and the mayor, such publication shall be a sufficient publication, and the ordinance or several ordinances so published in book form, under appropriate titles, chapters and sections, shall be held the same in law as though they had been published in a newspaper or newspapers. A new ordinance so published in book form, which has not been published according to law, and which contains entirely new matter shall be published as heretofore required by law. Such revision and codification may be made under appropriate titles, chapters and sections and in one ordinance containing one or more subjects.'

and in further view of the fact, that there are at the present time two bills before the general assembly of Ohio; one bill to codify the banking laws of Ohio and another bill to codify the fish and game laws of Ohio, which tends to show that codification may legally be made of certain classes of laws without codification being made of the entire laws of the state. While we have no ruling on the matter, it is our opinion that the ordinance codifying the building code of your city, since it does not contain entirely new matter, that if the ordinance be published in book form does not require and there should be no newspaper publication.

Question: Are we correct in our holding?"

The section referred to by the city solicitor and quoted supra in your ruling, section 4230 G. C. appears to be the only section of the statutes throwing any light upon the question presented, and I do not find that there has been any judicial determination of the question.

While both the terms "revised" and "codified" as employed in the statute, import primarily merely a legislative declaration of the state of the law as contradistinguished from an original enactment or even a fundamental alteration in scope or purpose of existing laws, yet, both terms are authoritatively used in the broader sense, to signify amendment, reformation and even addition to the original state of the thing revised or codified.

The Century Dictionary defines "revise" as follows:

1. To look carefully over with a view to correction; go over in order to suggest or make advisable changes and corrections.

2. To amend; bring into conformity with present needs and circumstances; reform, especially by public or official action.

The Standard Dictionary defines "revise" as follows:

1. To go or look over or examine for the correction of errors, or for the purpose of suggesting or making amendments, additions or changes;

2. Hence, to change or correct (anything) as for the better or by authority; alter or reform.

"Revision" is defined as follows:

1. The act or result of revising; examination or re-examination with correction or change;

The same authority defines "codification" as follows:

"The act or process of reducing laws to a code, it is the collection, condensation, systematizing and reconciling of what is scattered or contradictory."

The specific reference in the section requiring construction (section 4230 G. C.), to a new ordinance containing "entirely new matter" as a condition of the requirement for publication in the newspaper must determine in large measure the legislative intent and purpose as to the sense in which the terms "revise," "codify" and "rearrange" have been employed.

I construe section 4230 G. C. to authorize publication in book form, in case the codification does not embody an ordinance governing or applying to subject matter outside the scope and purview of the original enactment, and that such publication is sufficient where the new form of the enactment consists only in an assembling together and rearrangement of existing legislation on a given subject with such corrections, modifications and even amendments as do not amount to a substantial or fundamental departure from the original subject matter, scope and effect of the legislation.

However, I am of the opinion that when an enactment is made to apply to subject matter not contemplated in the previous legislation brought together in the codification, or so far departs from the original tenor and scope of the legislation as to give it new or different application, it must be said to "contain entirely new matter," requiring its publication as an original enactment. It is perceived that the purpose of the requirement for publication is to advise the members of the public of their liability to the mandate or restraint of the ordinance, and the publication of ordinances at the time of the original enactment remains sufficient in the case of the later codification into book form, so long as the revision and re-arrangement does not introduce new matter amounting to a departure from the general purport and the effect of the original.

In case an essential departure or enlargement in scope or applications is to be accomplished, the usual publication is deemed essential.

When any matter entirely outside or foreign to the scope or application of the existing legislation is embodied in the codification or it is made to have a different tenor or effect, it is considered to "contain entirely new matter" within the meaning of the statute.

In short, it is my opinion that the phrase "contain entirely new matter" contemplates any subject matter which is entirely new, rather than that the subject matter be new in its entirety.

From the statement of facts sunmitted by the city solicitor it appears that the codification of the building ordinances of the city of Norwood will embody numerous departures from the existing provisions of the old sections, and in fact it is said that fifty per cent of the sections are entirely new, which suggests that the building code will probably be made to apply to places and structures to which the old sections were not applicable, and that new and different restrictions and penalties will be provided, in which event it is held that the usual newspaper publication would be required as to such new provisions.

The facts submitted by the solicitor are not adequate to clearly disclose the character and extent of the change to be made, and without further information thereon, I will merely submit the construction of the statute foregoing.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PUBLIC UTILITY AS DEFINED IN SECTION 4000-1 G. C. NOT APPLICABLE TO WATER WORKS PLANTS—SECTIONS 4, 5 AND 12 OF ARTICLE XVIII OF OHIO CONSTITUTION ARE SELF-EXECUTING.

1. Sections 4000-1 to 4000-15 G. C. (103 O. L. 726) apply to the public utilities included within the term "public utility" as defined in section 4000-1 G. C., and not to water works plants or systems.

2. The provisions of sections 4 and 5 of article XVIII of the Ohio constitution authorizing any municipality to proceed by ordinance to acquire a public utility, and of section 12 of the same article authorizing such municipality to issue mortgage bonds therefor which impose no liability upon the municipality, and secured only upon the property and revenues of the public utility, etc., are self-executing; and the ordinance therefore is not required to be submitted to the municipal electors unless, before its effective date, a referendum be demanded as provided in section 5.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 18, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of April 7, 1919, requesting my opinion on certain questions submitted by the city solicitor of Xenia, was duly received, and reads as follows:

"We are in receipt of the following communication from the city solicitor of Xenia, Ohio:

'April 4, 1919.

Hon. Moses Blau,
Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Referring to your letter of March 25th, we are submitting the following question upon which we desire information:

Statement: The city contemplates the purchase of a privately owned water works and proposes to enlarge or extend the said plant. The purchase price is agreed upon by the city and the water company. The city proposes to issue mortgage bonds on the plant, imposing no liability on the municipality, but secured only upon the property and revenues of such water works.

Question 1. Does G. C. sections 4000-1-15 inclusive govern the proper procedure in the purchase of the water works, as above outlined?

Question 2. If General Code sections 4000-1-15 are not applicable, then, are sections 5 and 12 of article 18 of the constitution of Ohio self executing? That is to say, can the city proceed to acquire said water works by ordinance without the submission of the same to a vote of the electors unless a referendum be demanded on such ordinance?

Respectfully submitted,
J. A. Finney, City Solicitor.'

We are respectfully asking your written opinion upon questions Nos. 1 and 2."

1. Sections 4000-1 to 4000-15 G. C. (103 O. L. 726), inclusive, referred to in the above letter do not, in my opinion, include within their terms water works plants or systems. The public utilities included in those sections are those that come within the definition of the term "public utility" as defined in the first section (4000-1), as follows:

> "Wherever in this act and for the purpose of this act, the term 'public utility' shall be taken to mean and include any street railroad operated in whole or in part under the act passed April 22, 1896, commonly known as 'The Rogers Law' and entitled 'An act to amend and supplement sections 2505a and 2505b of the Revised Statutes of Ohio, enacted May 1, 1891, and amended April 18, 1892,' or any street railroad operated in connection with or upon the tracks of any such street railroad and any corporation which owns, operates or leases any such street railroads."

2. Sections 4, 5 and 12 of article XVIII of the Ohio constitution are, in my opinion, self-executing. Such also was the opinion of the former Attorney-General (see opinion No. 1607, dated December 13, 1918), in which the following language was used:

> "The above quoted provisions (sections 4, 5, 6 and 12) of the home rule amendment, are in my opinion, self-executing and apply to all municipalities."

See also opinion of the Attorney-General No. 90, dated March 3, 1919, involving sections 4 and 6, wherein it was said:

> "It should be noted that these constitutional amendments are self-executing and need no intermediary acts of the legislature to enforce them."

I am of the opinion, therefore, that Xenia may proceed by ordinance to acquire a water works plant or system, and issue mortgage bonds therefor which impose no liability upon the municipality, and secured only upon the property and revenues of the public utility, etc., as authorized by section 12, without submitting the ordinance to the municipal electors, unless before the effective date of the ordinance a petition signed by ten per centum of the municipal electors is filed with the executive authority of the municipality demanding a referendum on the ordinance.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROBATE COURT—LUNACY AFFIDAVIT FILED—PERSON WANDERS INTO ANOTHER COUNTY—SHERIFF OF ADJOINING COUNTY INCURS EXPENSES IN SAID ARREST WITHOUT HAVING WARRANT—HELD—NO LEGAL AUTHORITY TO PAY EXPENSES.

A lunacy affidavit was filed with the probate judge of O_____county against one M. P., a resident of that county. Warrant for the arrest of M. P. issued to sheriff of O_____county. M. P. having wandered away from O_____county into P_____county, the sheriff of P_____county, upon request of the sheriff of O_____county, but without warrant or other authority therefor, took the said M. P. into custody, incurring expense of transporting M. P. to the county jail and of boarding her therein.

Held: There is no legal authority for the payment to the sheriff of P_____county of the expenses mentioned.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1919.

HON. MERVIN DAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letters of recent date, setting forth certain facts which may be stated thus:

> A lunacy affidavit was filed with the probate judge of Ottawa county against one M. P., a resident of that county. Thereupon said probate judge issued his warrant to the sheriff of Ottawa county, commanding him to bring said M. P. before him.
>
> After the issuance of said warrant, the sheriff of Ottawa county, having ascertained that the said M. P. had wandered away from her home in Ottawa county and had gone over into Paulding county, requested the sheriff of Paulding county to take the said M. P. into custody. This the latter proceeded to do, holding M. P. in the county jail of Paulding county for several days. At the end of that time he turned her over to the sheriff of Ottawa county, who took her before the probate judge of Ottawa county. The latter than adjudged M. P. insane.
> The sheriff of Paulding county had no warrant or other evidence of authority for the arrest or detention of said M. P. He incurred, however, an expense of three dollars for livery hire in transporting said M. P. to the jail of Paulding county, and a further expense of two dollars and twenty-five cents for boarding her until the sheriff of Ottawa county came after her. The sheriff of Paulding county called upon the sheriff of Ottawa county to pay these expenses, or cause the same to be paid, but the latter refused to do so, on the ground that Ottawa county is not legally liable therefor.

There is nothing in your letters to indicate that the said M. P. was guilty of any breach of the public peace in Paulding county, so as to require or justify action by the sheriff under section 2833 G. C.

You state your question thus:

> "We wish to know where the sheriff of Paulding county is to get his pay for his services rendered, whether from Paulding county or from Ottawa county."

No liability could attach to Ottawa county for the payment of the expenses in question, unless the authority therefor could in some way be predicated upon section 1981 G. C., which in part says:

> "The probate judge shall make a complete record of all proceedings in lunacy. The costs and expenses, other than the fees of the probate judge and sheriff, to be paid under the provisions of this chapter, shall be as follows: * * *; to the person other than the sheriff or deputy sheriff making the arrests, the actual and necessary expense thereof and such fees as are allowed by law to sheriffs for making arrests in criminal cases: * * *."

The words "sheriff" and "deputy sheriff," in the excerpt just quoted, undoubtedly mean the sheriff and deputy sheriff of the county in which the lunacy affidavit is filed. Under such an interpretation it would be possible to regard the sheriff of another county as included in the words "the person other than the sheriff" contained in said section. This, however, is of no benefit to the sheriff of Paulding county in the case under consideration. "The person other than the sheriff or deputy sherift," who is authorized by section 1981 G. C. to receive actual and necessary expenses and fees, is the person described therein as "making the arrest"—that is, he is the person to whom the probate judge, under section 1954 G. C., issues a warrant, of arrest, commanding the bringing into court of the person alleged to be insane. Your letters show, however, that the sheriff of Paulding county acted under no warrant writ or other order. It is, therefore, not perceived how Ottawa county can be held liable for the claim in question.

Whether any authority exists for the payment of this claim by Paulding county depends upon the construction to be given to sections 2850 and 2997 G. C. Said sections read as follows:

> "Section 2850. The sheriff shall be allowed by the county commissioners not less than forty-five nor more than seventy-five cents per day for keeping and feeding prisoners in jail, but in any county in which there is no infirmary, the county commissioners, if they think it just and necessary, may allow any sum not to exceed seventy-five cents each day for keeping and feeding any idiot or lunatic. The sheriff shall furnish at the expense of the county, to all prisoners confined in jail, except those confined for debt, only fuel, soap, disinfectants, bed, clothing, washing and nursing when required, and other necessaries as the court in its rules shall designate.
> Section 2997. In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble-minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

The sections just quoted furnish no authority for an allowance by the county commissioners to the sheriff of that county for the board of any inmate of the jail except (a) persons who are "prisoners" therein, and (b) idiots or lunatics in counties having no infirmaries. The term "prisoner" as used in said sections, while not qualified, clearly means a prisoner lawfully confined in the county jail; that is, a person detained therein by virtue of some lawful proceeding, judicial, legislative or otherwise. It would be ridiculous to suppose that the legislature intended to make the county liable for the board of any person whom the sheriff might see fit to receive into the jail, regardless of the status of that person. So to hold, would be to sanction the conversion of a public institution erected and maintained by public taxation into a hostelry to which any person agreeable to the sheriff could resort with financial impunity.

Again, the authority given by section 2997 G. C. to the county commissioners to "make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for * * * his actual and necessary expenses incurred * * * in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane * * * and all institutions for the care * * * of unfortunates * * *" is not broad enough to warrant the payment of livery hire incurred by the sheriff of Paulding county in the case put by your letter. The transportation in question was not to a state hospital, or institution "for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates," within the meaning of section 2997 G. C., above quoted. Nor can it be said that the authority of the county commissioners, under said section, to "allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office" is broad enough to authorize payment by the Paulding county commissioners of the transportation expenses in question. The "duties of his office are such, and such only, as are enjoined upon him by statute. And there seems to be no statute which makes it the duty of a county sheriff to arrest and detain, without a warrant, an alleged insane person, resident of another county, upon the mere request of the sheriff of the foreign county.

In saying that the duties of the sheriff are such only as are enjoined upon him by statute, we have not lost sight of section 2834 G. C., which in part says that he shall "exercise the powers conferred and perform the duties enjoined upon him by statute and by the common law."

I am unable to find any authority for the proposition that under the common law it was the duty of the sheriff of one county to arrest and detain, without a warrant and upon the mere request of the sheriff of another county, an alleged insane person, resident of the foreign county.

Considerations of official courtesy and reciprocity suggest the propriety of the acts of service performed by the sheriff of Paulding county in the case now before us, but such considerations can not be taken as a substitute for statutory authority to pay compensation for those acts.

See Clark vs. Commissioners, 58 O. S. 107 at p. 109.

You are, therefore, advised that there is no authority in law for the payment to the sheriff of Paulding county of the expenses mentioned in your letter.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF GALLIPOLIS—SAME PERSON CANNOT PERFORM DUTIES OF JUDGE OF SAID COURT AND CITY SOLICITOR.

The powers and duties granted to and imposed upon the judge of the municipal court and city solicitor by the Gallipolis charter, cannot be exercised and performed by the same person.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter requesting my opinion upon the following questions arisig under the Gallipolis charter, was duly received:

1. Can a charter city establish a municipal court and confer upon the judge of such court the judicial powers granted to mayors by law?
2. Is not the establishing of said court contrary to the constitution of the state, Art. IV, section 1?
3. Can the solicitor, when provided by the charter, be the judicial officer of such court? and
4. What effect does section 4306 G. C. have upon the judge of the court when, as solicitor, he is made by law the prosecutor in said court?

Section 78 of the charter provides as follows:

"All general laws of the state applicable to municipal corporations, which are in effect January 1, 1918, and which are not in conflict with the provisions of this charter, or with ordinances or resolutions hereafter enacted by the city commission, shall be applicable to this city; but nothing contained in this charter shall be construed as limiting the power of the city commission to enact any ordinance or any resolution not in conflict with the constitution of the state or with the express provisions of this charter."

The charter also provides (section 20) that there shall be a city solicitor who shall be nominated and elected on a non-partisan ticket for a term of four years. The duties of the city solicitor are set forth in section 21, as follows:

"The city solicitor shall be the judge of the municipal court in said city of Gallipolis, Ohio, and shall have all judicial powers now granted mayors of cities under the general laws and constitution of the state of Ohio, and all powers that may hereafter be granted, either by statute of the state or by ordinance of the city commission. The city solicitor shall act as the legal adviser to, and attorney and counsel for the municipality and all of its officers in matters relating to their official duties. He shall prepare all resolutions, ordinances, contracts, bonds and any and all instruments in writing in which the municipality is concerned, and shall endorse on each his approval of the form and correctness thereof; and no contract with the municipality shall take effect until his approval is thus endorsed thereon. In addition to such duties, he shall perform such other duties as may be required of him by the city commission, as well as such as may be required of city solicitors by the general laws of the state applicable to municipalities in accordance with the provisions of section 78 of this charter, and not inconsistent with any other provision of this charter, or with any ordinance or resolution that may be passed by the city commission.

Upon the written request of not less than two members of the city commission, the city solicitor shall cause an investigation to be made of the affairs of any department, or the conduct of any officer or employee of the city, or of the commission itself. In making such investigations he shall have the power to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers and other evidence, and for that purpose may issue subpoenas or attachments which shall be signed by him and shall be served by an officer authorized by law to serve such process. He shall also have power to cause testimony to be given under oath to be administered by some officer authorized by law to administer oaths. And he shall also have power to punish as for contempt any person refusing to testify to any fact within his knowledge or to produce any books or papers under his control, relating to the matter under investigation.

He may appoint such assistants or special counsel as the city commission may authorize."

Section 69 of the charter provides that before any ordinance shall be submitted to the city commission, it shall first be approved as to its form by the city solicitor, whose duty it shall be to draft such proposed ordinance in the proper legal language, etc.

1. The abstract question, Can a charter city establish a municipal court having the judicial powers of city mayors under the laws and constitution of the state? would have to be answered in the negative, because of sections 1 and 15 of article IV of the constitution. See my opinion No. 215, in the East Cleveland case.

Under section 1 of article IV the judicial power of the state is vested in a supreme court, courts of appeal, courts of common pleas, courts of probate, and such other courts inferior to the courts of appeal as may from time to time "be established by law," and under the provisions of section 15 it is provided that laws may be passed to establish other courts "whenever two-thirds of the members elected to each house shall concur therein."

In State vs. Bloch, 65 O. S. 370, the court, at page 391, very clearly stated that the constitution vests in the general assembly the power to determine what courts it will establish, local, if deemed proper, and that the only limitation placed upon the exercise of that power is that the courts so established shall be inferior to the supreme court (now courts of appeal under the 1912 amendment).

In State vs. Ritchie, 97 O. S. 41, decided after the adoption of the home rule amendment, the court held that:

> "Section 1 of article IV of the constitution confers upon the general assembly of Ohio authority to establish by law courts inferior to the courts of appeals, throughout the entire state, or in any one or more localities within the state."

But does the charter of Gallipolis establish a municipal court? The only place in the charter where the expression "Municipal Court" is used, is in section 21 of the charter as follows:

"The city solicitor shall be the judge of the municipal court."

In Ide vs. State, 95 O. S. 224, the supreme court held that a provision in the municipal charter of Sandusky that the president of the city commission "shall have the judicial functions of a mayor under the laws of Ohio," is not in conflict with any provision of the Ohio constitution. At page 227 the following language, which is also pertinent to the Gallipolis charter, was used:

> "It is sufficient to say in reference to the first contention that this charter does not purport to establish a court, but, on the contrary, provides that the president of the city commission shall have the judicial functions of a mayor under the general laws of Ohio, and may use the title of mayor in any case in which the execution of legal instruments of writing, or other necessity arising from the general law of the state so requires. If, therefore, this officer has any judicial powers whatever, they are conferred upon him by the general laws of the state, and not by any provision of the charter further than that it designates him as the municipal officer who shall to this extent be mayor of the city of Sandusky."

Under authority of the case of Ide vs. State, supra, I am forced to the conclusion that the Gallipolis charter does not establish a court, but merely undertakes to impose upon the city solicitor the judicial powers of city mayors under the general laws and constitution of Ohio.

2. "Can the solicitor, when provided by the charter, be the judicial officer of such court?"

The Gallipolis charter, it will be observed, provides that the city solicitor shall have all the judicial powers now granted to mayors of cities under the general laws and constitution of Ohio, and in addition thereto, that he shall perform such other duties as may be required of city solicitors by the general laws of the state, etc.

Before referring to the duties of city solicitors and mayors of cities under the laws of Ohio, it may not be improper to refer to the law on the subject of incompatibility of offices. The subject is discussed and the decisions of the English and American courts, including both state and federal, are referred to at length in L. R. A. 1917A, p. 216, and in 22 Ruling Case Law, p. 412. The authorities therein referred to are, in substance, summed up as follows:

At common law a public officer is prohibited from holding two incompatible offices at one time. The doctrine, it is said, is imbedded in the common law, and is of great antiquity. The rule has never been questioned, and its correctness and propriety are so well established, that it has been assumed without discussion in practically every case in which the matter of incompatibility has arisen. The debatable question in all cases is, however, what is incompatibility? The question has been answered by the courts with varying language, but generally in the same sense. While the courts are agreed upon general underlying principles, none have attempted to formulate a definition of the term applicable to all cases. When it comes to stating what constitutes incompatibility, the courts invaribly evade the formulation of a general definition, but content themselves with a discussion of specific cases. This, together with the fact that two cases seldom arise involving the same offices, has made the subject one of specific cases, rather than of general rules. The closest courts have come to defining incompatibility, is to substitute the word "inconsistency" therefor. In a number of cases it has been said that incompatibility consists in an inconsistency in the functions of the two offices. In some cases the courts seem inclined to the view that the question of incompatibility is largely one of public policy. When it is considered, however, how much difficulty is involved in defining public policy, this attempted definition will be seen to have little value. In a less general way it has been said that offices are incompatible when one is subordinate to the other, or when one has supervision over the other, and from these rules it has been held that incompatibility exists between offices where one has over the other the power of visitation, punishment, etc.

If the question under consideration should turn upon an answer to the further question whether or not the offices of mayor and city solicitor are incompatible, it would be necessary to ascertain the powers of city mayors and city solicitors under the general laws of the state, for only in that way could it be determined whether or not the duties of the two offices are incompatible. Having this question in view, a brief reference to some of the general laws referred to may not be out of order.

First: Statutes conferring judicial powers on city mayors:

Sec. 4527. Mayor has final jurisdiction to hear and determine prosecutions for violations of municipal ordinances.

Sec. 4528. Mayor has jurisdiction to hear and determine prosecutions for misdemeanors.

Sec. 4531. Mayor may impanel a jury and try municipal offenses on affidavit, in the same manner and with like effect as misdemeanors are tried in the court of common pleas on indictment.

Sec. 4532. Mayor has jurisdiction to try cases prosecuted by the state.

Sec. 4533. Mayor may discharge, or recognize prisoners to common pleas court, etc.

"Sec. 4534. In felonies, and other criminal proceedings not herein provided for, such mayor shall have jurisdiction and power, throughout the county, concurrent with justices of the peace. * * *"

Second: Statutes relating to the duties of city solicitors.

"Sec. 4306. The solicitor shall also be prosecuting attorney of the * * * mayor's court.

"Sec. 4307. The prosecuting attorney of the * * * mayor's court shall prosecute all cases brought before such court and perform the same duties, as far as they are applicable thereto, as required of the prosecuting attorney of the county.

"Sec. 4308. When required so to do by resolution of the council, the solicitor shall prosecute or defend, as the case may be, for and in behalf of the corporation, all complaints, suits and controversies in which the corporation is a party, and such other suits, matters and controversies as he shall, by resolution or ordinance, be directed to prosecute, but shall not be required to prosecute any action before the mayor for the violation of an ordinance without first advising such action.

"Sec. 4311. The solicitor shall apply in the name of the corporation, to a court of competent jurisdiction for an order of injunction to restrain the misapplication of funds of the corporation, or the abuse of its corporate powers, or the execution or performance of any contract made in behalf of the corporation in contravention of the laws or ordinances governing it, or which was procured by fraud or corruption.

Sec. 4313. In case an officer or board fails to perform any duty expressly enjoined by law or ordinance, the solicitor shall apply to a court of competent jurisdiction for a writ of mandamus to compel the performance of such duty."

Under the law creating the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices

(Secs. 274 et seq. G. C.) the bureau is authorized and empowered to inspect and supervise both the offices of mayor and city solicitor, as well as other public offices. By one of these statutes (Sec. 286 G. C.) it is expressly provided that if the inspector's report sets forth that any public money has been illegally expended, or has not been accounted for, or that any public property has been converted or misappropriated the city solicitor, as well as the Attorney-General and prosecuting attorney, shall institute civil actions in the proper court for the recovery thereof, and prosecute the same to final determination. One of the "proper courts" referred to in that section is the mayor's court (See Sec. 286-1 G. C.).

It will thus be seen that if the same person is to exercise the judicial powers of city mayors and at the same time perform the duties of city solicitor, as provided for in the Gallipolis charter, he will be his own legal adviser, attorney and counselor in matters relating to the official duties of both offices, and cases might arise where, as city solicitor, he would be required to investigate and prosecute himself, and where, as mayor, he would be called upon to hear and decide his own case. The utter inconsistency of this is apparent, and, unless clearly authorized by law, should not be tolerated. To permit a man thus to be a judge in his own cause, or to be his own investigator or prosecutor, would place it within his power (if he were so disposed) to convert checks and safeguards which the law has provided against fraud and peculation into potent instruments of corruption and iniquity. It would be as though a visitor were visiting himself and inquiring into and deciding upon the propriety of his own conduct. Or, stated differently, a case might arise wherein as city solicitor he would be required to prosecute himself before himself as mayor, or to hear and determine complaints involving his own infraction of law. As aptly stated in Howard vs. Harrington, 114 Me. 442, "The duties are repugnant. He can only perform the duties of one office by neglecting to perform the duties of the other." Such a situation would also present the spectacle of a judge practicing in his own court, and it is everywhere viewed as improper for a judge to engage in the practice of his profession while holding judicial office.

In State vs. Ry. Co. 12 C. C. (n. s.) 49, Judge Allread at page 63, used the following language which is pertinent to the present inquiry:

> "It is a sound principle everywhere acknowledged that no man, even if his motive be as correct as those attributed to Sir Matthew Hale, can be a judge in his own case, or in a case in which he has a private interest; and this principle applies to all cases of public trust."

While it might be within the range of possibility for the same person to impartially perform the duties of city solicitor and mayor, yet, as was said in the case just referred to, the law looks upon the tendency and has regard to the frailties of human nature and the temptation of being controlled by self-interest.

Since Gallipolis has adopted a charter whereby the same person is expressly authorized to exercise the judicial powers of city mayors, and at the same time to perform the duties of city solicitor, it has in effect expressed its desire not to be bound by the rule of incompatibility of office with respect to those two offices. While it might be conceded that article XVIII would warrant charter cities in dispensing with the rule referred to in so far as its purely municipal affairs are concerned , on the theory that a charter provision to that effect affects only its local self-government, I cannot reach the conclusion that article XVIII was ever intended to or in fact does authorize charter cities to set aside well established rules of public policy applicable to matters affecting the general public or state government, as distinguished from matters of a strictly local nature. As Judge Jones said in State vs. Cooper, 97 O. S., 86, at page 92, powers affecting subjects of a general nature, such as the power of taxation, and the power to establish courts and to define their jurisdiction, may be so employed by charter cities as to affect only their own people, and thus considered, seem local in character. "But," added the learned judge, "it does not follow that the home rule sections above named endow municipalities with such powers."

And in Miami County vs. Dayton, 92 O. S., 215, the court held that, "The doctrine of home rule does not now, and never did, have any application to the governmental affairs of the state."

That Gallipolis has by section 21 of its charter undertaken to set aside a rule of public policy applicable to state governmental affairs, will readily appear when it is considered that the judicial powers of mayors are not confined or limited to their respective municipalities or to violations of municipal ordinances, but are also coextensive with the county in which each municipality is located, and also embrace offenses committed in violation of state laws. That this is true, is clearly shown by section 4528 G. C. which provides that "He (mayor) shall have final jurisdiction to hear and determine any prosecution for a misdemeanor * * * and his jurisdiction in such cases shall be co-extensive with the county;" by section 4534 G. C., which provides that "in felonies, and other criminal proceedings not herein provided for, such mayor shall have jurisdiction and power throughout the county, concurrent with justices of the peace;" by section 13,423 G. C., which provides that mayors of cities and villages shall have jurisdiction within their "respective counties" of a long list of offenses in violation of state statutes, including those relating to the adulteration of food, cruelty to children, child labor, intoxicating liquors, etc. See, also, sections 4536 and 4542 G. C., relating to village mayors.

And, with repsect to city solicitor, it has already been shown that the duties of their office under the general laws of the state, are not of a strictly local or municipal nature, but are also of general public interest or concern. See sections 4306 and 4307 G. C. which provide that the city solicitor shall prosecute "all cases," brought before the mayor's court, and shall perform the same duties, as far as they are applicable, "as required of the prosecuting attorney of the county." See, also, sections 4670 and 4671 G.C. requiring the city solicitor to prosecute certain offenders in the probate court.

At this point the language of Chief Justice Savage in Howard vs. Harrington, supra, seems pertinent:

> "It has been pointed out that a distinction may exist between a municipal officer whose functions relate exclusively to local concerns of the particular community, and one whom the law vests with powers and charges with duties which concern the general public. In this state the duties of a mayor are not limited to the performance of mere municipal functions and attending to the municipal business. As will be seen * * *, he is charged by the public statutes with certain duties which concern the public interest. He is required specially to enforce certain criminal statutes enacted for the general public good, and which are a part of the general machinery adopted to suppress crime and promote the public well being."

My conclusion is that the powers and duties granted to and imposed upon the judge of the municipal court and city solicitor by the Gallipolis charter, cannot be exercised and performed by the same person.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—TRANSFER OF TERRITORY FROM ONE RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT TO ANOTHER DISTRICT OF SAME COUNTY—SECTION 4692 G. C. DOES NOT AUTHORIZE TRANSFER BACK BY FILING PETITION, ETC.

The filing of a petition with the county board of education signed by seventy-five per cent. of the electors in territory desired to be transferred from one rural school district to another in the same county, is not authorized in section 4692 G. C. under which section transfers in same district are to be made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1919.

HON. LEWIS G. CHRISTMAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion of the Attorney-General on the following questions, growing out of the statement of facts given:

> "In 1917 territory was properly transferred from rural school district 'A' to rural school district 'B.' Later, 1918, school district 'B' voted to issue bonds to build a school house. Those bonds have not been sold. Part of the territory so transferred from district 'A' to district 'B' now petition, by the electors therein, to be transferred back to district 'A.' More than seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory asking to be retransferred, petition for such transfer.
> 1. Does this case fall within section 4696 General Code?
> 2. Must the county board of education act upon such petition, or is such petition unauthorized by law?
> 3. Provided such transfer can be had, would district 'A' be entitled to and responsible for their equitable share of the funds arising from the sale of bonds, if the bonds are subsequently sold?"

Attention is invited to section 4696 G. C., which reads:

> "A county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district, provided at least fifty per centum of the electors of the territory to be transferred petition for such transfer. Provided, however, that if at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer, the county board of education shall make such transfer. No such transfer shall be in effect until the county board of education and the board of education to which the territory is to be transferred each pass resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of each board and until an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness be decided upon by the boards of education acting in the transfer; also a map shall be filed with the auditor or auditors of the county or counties affected by such transfer."

It will be noted that this section governs the matter of transfer of territory from a school district of the county school district "to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district," and does not apply in the transfer of territory from one rural school district to another rural school district in the same county, as in the case you mention. Hence the answer to your first question:

> 1. Does the case fall within section 4696 General Code?"

is in the negative.

You indicate that a petition "asking to be retransferred" has been signed by more than seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory in question, such petition seemingly having been prepared under the provisions of section 4696 G. C., which, as pointed out, is not the section covering your question, and the petition is, therefore, unauthorized, in answer to your second question,

> "2. Must the county board of education act upon petition or is it unauthorized?"

The matter of transfer of territory from one rural school district to another rural school district in the same county falls within section 4692 G. C., which reads:

> "The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer. If an entire district be transferred, the board of education of such district is thereby abolished or if a member of the board of education lives in a part of a school district transferred the member becomes a non-resident of the school district from which he was transferred and ceases to be a member of such board of eduaction. The legal title of the property of the board of education shall become vested in the board of education of the school district to which such territory is transferred. The county board of education is authorized to make an equitable division of the school funds of the transferred territory either in the treasury or in the course of collection. And also an equitable division of the indebtedness of the transferred territory."

From the language of this section it will be seen that there is no provision for a petition of the electors desiring to be transferred, the sole provision being for a written remonstrance against such transfer, to be signed by a majority of the electors in the territory and to be filed with the county board of education within thirty days after the filing of the map showing the transfer. Where such written remonstrance is properly filed by a majority of the electors in the territory, and within the thirty days mentioned "such transfer shall not take effect;" and this is the only prohibition in the section which prevents the county board of education making such transfers as it may decide upon, between rural districts in the same county. So the matter of the transfer of territory in the county from one rural school district to another rural school district lies entirely with the county board of education, under section 4692 G. C., the opening sentence of which says that such board "may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school districts." The county board of education need not act on such petition as it is unauthorized by law.

Following the answers made to your questions one and two, that such transfer cannot be made under section 4696 G. C., and such petition is unauthorized, there is no occasion to answer your question three, based upon a provision that section 4696 G. C. applies, which it does not.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUDGES AND CLERKS OF ELECTIONS—COMPENSATION—TWO ELECTION DAYS FOR BOND ISSUE—PAID FOR EACH ELECTION DAY.

Judges and clerks of elections in precincts shall each receive five dollars for services rendered on any election day, regardless of the questions submitted to the voters on that day. In similar manner the compensation and mileage due judges calling for supplies and delivering the returns is based on the election day.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 19, 1919.

HON. FOSTER E. KING, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "There was held in Ridgeway, Ohio, at the last general election a special school election. The Logan county board of elections did not furnish ballots for that part of Ridgeway situated in Logan county, and the presiding judge was paid at the same rate as if the election was a valid one. Later a special school election was called, at which time it was conducted properly and in accordance with the laws governing such special elections.
> The question the Hardin county board of elections wants you to determine is on what basis will the board pay the presiding judge, also associate judges and clerks, and whether or not the full precinct board, comprised of one presiding judge, three associate judges and two clerks, are to receive the regular pay of $5.00 per day and the presiding judge to receive his additional service pay of coming after ballots and delivering his returns."

Under date of March 11, 1919, you furnished additional information upon request, in which you say there were two precincts voting in the elections upon the same question, one in Logan county and one in Hardin county; that the questions are:

> "1. Whether the election officials are to receive the regular pay of $5.00 per day?
> 2. Is the presiding judge entitled to his extra compensation for mileage and making a return of the vote cast for both the school election in November, along with the general election, and also the special election held at a subsequent date, as well as his compensation for both elections?
> 3. Must the Hardin county board of elections pay this additional cost of the special election for the failure of Logan county to furnish ballots? "

Attention is invited to section 4860 G. C., which says:

> "Such judges and clerks shall each receive as compensation for their services the sum of five dollars, which services shall be the receiving, recording, canvassing and making returns of all the votes that may be delivered to them in the voting precinct in which they preside on each election day. * * *"

It is clear from this section that each of the judges and clerks on duty is to receive five dollars for each election day and this amount for taking care in legal manner of all the votes that may be delivered to them, that is, the whole vote cast on such election day. So the fact that on the day of the last regular election there were also votes cast in a special school election does not affect the per diem pay of such judges and clerks, for they are paid five dollars each for the election day, regardless of what was voted upon, for such compensation is for receiving, recording, canvassing and making returns of all the votes delivered to them.

Relative to your second question, we quote section 5043 G. C. as follows:

> "The judge of elections called by the deputy state supervisors to receive and deliver ballots, poll books, tally sheets and other required papers, shall receive two dollars for such service, and, in addition thereto, mileage at the rate of five cents per mile to and from the county seat, if he lives one mile or more therefrom.
> The judge of elections carrying the returns to the deputy state supervisors, and the judge carrying the returns to the county or township clerk, or clerk or auditor of the municipality, shall receive like compensation. * *"

In the November general election the presiding judge called for the ballots, poll books and supplies (which ballots included the special school election ballots) for the use of the voters in Ridgeway precinct on election day. He is entitled under section 5043 G. C. to two dollars for such service as well as his mileage at five cents per mile to and from the county seat, and such two dollars and mileage is all he is entitled to for going after the ballots and supplies; the fact that there were two elections, a general and a special one, does not entitle him to any second payment of two dollars, for such ballots and supplies are the supplies for one election day. As to payments for carrying the returns to the boards of elections at the close of such election day in November, the presiding judge is entitled to two dollars for such service, along with his mileage, as the law contemplates that the returns of "all votes" (section 4860 G. C.) shall be made in one trip at the end of such election day, and there is no additional allowance for the presiding judge for the November election day, because a school question was also submitted on that day.

Due to the fact that the voters in the second precinct of the Ridgeway school district (situated in Logan county) were not supplied with ballots for the school election held on the day of the general election in November, it was necessary that a subsequent special election be held in such school district and this was done. This was an election day and pay of election officials is the same for special election days as for days of regular elections, that is to say, the judges and clerks in such subsequent special election would be entitled to five dollars each for that election day. It was no fault of such election officials in the precincts that the second election was necessary, and service was rendered on both days by direction of the board of deputy supervisors of elections. Further, the judge designated to call for the ballots and supplies for such special election would be entitled to two dollars and his mileage, and a "like compensation" for delivering such returns to the deputy state supervisors at the close of the special election.

Answering your third question, the Hardin county deputy state supervisors of elections must pay their share of the expense of the special election, for they participated in its call, prepared ballots, ordered the precinct election officials to function, and received the returns in regular manner. The special election, once called, becomes an entity by itself, and must be treated as such in the matter of expense and payment of those officials who performed service on such election day.

It is the opinion of the Attorney-General, therefore, that each judge and clerk on duty in the precincts is entitled to five dollars per day for the November election and the same amount for the subsequent special election; that the presiding judge who called for ballots and delivered them is entitled to two dollars and his mileage for the November general election and a similar amount for such services in the special election; that the judge of elections delivering the returns to the deputy supervisors is entitled to two dollars and his mileage for the November election and a similar amount for the same service performed at the close of the special election held on a later date; that the Hardin county deputy state supervisors must pay their proper share of the expense of such later special election in which they participated.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE TO EBERSBACH COAL COMPANY FOR STATE LAND IN MEIGS COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 22, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated April 7, 1919, with which was transmitted for the approval of this department a coal lease to the Ebersbach Coal Company for fractional section No. 29, township 2, range 12, Ohio company purchase, Meigs county.

After careful examination of this lease and consideration of the facts stated in your letter, in connection with section 3209-1 G. C., as amended in 105 O. L., p. 6, the opinion of this department is that the lease is authorized by said section and is in conformity therewith. It further appears that the terms of the lease are for the best interest of the beneficiary of said section 29.

The lease is therefore approved.

REISSUANCE OF LOST OR DESTROYED BOND OR DETACHED COUPON—SECTION 2295-5 G. C. INTERPRETED—PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED.

Section 2295-5 General Code authorizes the reissuance of a bond or of a coupon detached from a bond and lost or destroyed, upon compliance with the conditions therein stipulated.

Proof of loss by affidavit would be sufficient for the purposes of said section.

So far as said section is concerned, an indemnity bond executed in compliance with its provisions must be deemed a sufficient safeguard to protect the taxing district against double payment in the course of many years' time.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 23, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You request the opinion of this department on certain questions raised by a communication of the office counsel of a certain bank, as follows:

> "1. In case of loss of a coupon bond or coupons of a coupon bond has the taxing district which issued such bonds authority to pay the person who claimed to be the holder of such bond or coupons the payments thereon as they mature?
> 2. If there be such authority what proof of the loss may be considered competent proof?
> 3. Would a bond furnished by such person, claiming the loss, to protect such taxing district against the future appearance of such bond or coupons be a sufficient safeguard to protect such taxing district against double payment in the course of many years' time? "

These questions invoke consideration of section 2295-5 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "Whenever bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness, issued by a municipal corporation, school district, county, township, or other political subdivision or taxing district of this state, are lost or destroyed, said corporation, school district, county, township, subdivision or district may reissue to the holder or holders duplicates thereof in the same form and signed as the original obligations were signed, which obligation so issued shall plainly show upon its face as being a duplicate of such lost bond, note or certificate, upon proof of such loss or destruction and upon being furnished with a bond of indemnity against all loss or liability for or on account of the obligations so lost or destroyed."

The authority conferred in this section is to issue a duplicate security. By necessary implication this authority extends to the payment of the interest on and principal of the duplicate security when issued. So far as your first question relates to the coupon bond itself, therefore, it may be answered by the statement that if the provisions of section 2295-5 G. C. are complied with the taxing district which issued the lost bond has authority to issue a duplicate thereof, with the coupons thereon, to the person who was the holder of the original, and to pay the same according to the tenor of the duplicate bond and its coupons.

The question with respect to coupons separated from the bond is not so clear. The letter quoted in your communication makes it apparent that this question is one in which you are especially interested. Section 2295-5 G. C. speaks of the issuance of duplicate "bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness." It does not expressly authorize the issuance of duplicate coupons when such coupons have been lost after having been detached from the original bonds. Yet the coupon itself is a note calling for the payment of a specified sum by way of interest to the bearer. It is therefore within the letter of section 2295-5, if that section be liberally interpreted. The case of a lost or destroyed coupon separated from the original bond is certainly within the spirit of the entire section. It is the opinion of this department, therefore, that section 2295-5 G. C. does authorize the issuance of duplicate coupons in place of those detached from the original bonds and then lost or destroyed, in the same manner as the bonds themselves may be duplicated under the provisions thereof; and that payment may be made to the holder of such duplicate coupon.

Your second question may be answered by saying that any proof which is deemed sufficient by the authorities of the taxing district whose duty it is to execute bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness will be competent for the purposes of section 2295-5 which contains no specifications on this point.

The word "proof" means that the person or tribunal which must determine the facts involved is able to find the fact to be as alleged by a preponderance of competent evidence. The proceeding under section 2295-5 not being judicial, it is most natural to suppose that an affidavit is intended, and you are advised that an affidavit of a credible person setting forth the circumstances of the loss or destruction will in most cases be sufficient.

In answer to your third question you are advised that so far as the statute is concerned a bond of indemnity such as you refer to is deemed a sufficient safeguard to protect the taxing district against double payment in the course of many years' time. If it is your purpose to question the policy of the statute, permit me to observe that the peril of double payment does not last indefinitely, because the taxing district would be able to interpose the defense of the statute of limitations at the expiration of fifteen years from and after the due date of the bond or coupon. Of course, in the case of long-time bonds such a date might be quite remote, yet it would not lie indefinitely in the future. However this may be, the legislature has seen fit to authorize the reissuance of duplicate bonds under the circumstances set forth in section 2295-5 G. C It is to be pointed out, however, that the statute does not require such action on the part of the authorities of the taxing district.

Very respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—WHEN ACCOUNTS AND BILLS RECEIVABLE OF FOREIGN CORPORATION ARE CONSIDERED "PROPERTY" BY SECTION 5501 ET SEQ. G. C.—SALE OF RAW MATERIALS CONSIDERED—WHEN TAXED AND WHEN SAME ARE INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Considered as "property" for the purposes of sections 5501 et seq. General Code, the accounts and bills receivable of a foreign corporation which had its actual managerial office in Ohio, at which office all orders are received and all contracts made and all such accounts and bills receivable collected and controlled, are located in Ohio.

A sale by a foreign corporation in Ohio to an Ohio customer of products or raw materials shipped in delivery from points outside of the state constitutes interstate commerce and cannot be considered as business done in Ohio, unless it appears that the contracts of sale do not call for delivery from any place outside of the state.

Sales in Ohio by a foreign corporation of raw materials stored in Ohio to Ohio customers constitute business done in Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 23, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Receipt of your letter of March 20th submitting certain questions for the opinion of this department is acknowledged. You state the questions as follows:

> "The Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company is a foreign corporation organized under the laws of West Virginia. The report filed with this commission states that the principal office is in Michigan. The company also maintains a business office at Cleveland, Ohio, through which practically all of its business is conducted and where all orders are received and contracts made and where accounts and bills receivable are collected and controlled.
> Our special examiner has found that in the report for 1918 the company allocated to property outside of Ohio an item of $4,803,259.00, which represents accounts and bills receivable. Inasmuch as these accounts are collected and controlled at Cleveland, should not this property be allocated to Ohio?
>
> The examiner also found that the company reported as business outside of Ohio the following items: Sales of chemical products through Cleveland, Ohio, shipped from Michigan and Wisconsin plants to customers in Ohio $98,858.00. Sales of ores through the Cleveland office, shipped from Ohio docks to customers in Ohio, $3,755,208.00. Sales of ores through the Cleveland office, shipped direct from upper lake ports to customers in Ohio, $2,107,870.00.
> We request your opinion as to whether the above items should not have been reported as business in Ohio."

Assuming, without discussion, that accounts and bills receivable constitute "property" within the meaning of section 5501 of the General Code and related sections, it is the opinion of this department that the items inquired about in your first question should be allocated to Ohio. No opinion is expressed as to whether or not such accounts are "property" because your letter does not request an opinion thereon.

It may be said generally of each of the three items mentioned in your second question that they represent business done in Ohio. Whether or not, however, they are to be taken into account as such business done in Ohio for the purpose of the franchise tax law depends upon a further consideration. By several previous opinions of this department, with which I concur, the commission has been advised that business which consists of sales is not to enter into the computation by which the franchise tax of a foreign corporation is fixed, if the sales are in interstate commerce. In other words, if the complete transaction or agreement between the parties involves a promise on the part of one to make a delivery necessitating the carrying on of interstate commerce, the transaction does not constitute "business done in Ohio" within the meaning of the Ohio statute. This is upon the theory that if the entire business of a company consisted of such transactions, the state would not have power to tax it, though such business were carried on through the agency of persons who might maintain a permanent business office in the state. This being true, such taxation cannot be effected when the company also transacts some intrastate business in the state, at least under a law like that of Ohio, whatever may be the case under a law which plainly attempts to and does avoid the imposition of direct burdens upon interstate commerce.

These general observations afford a key to the solution of the three specific questions embodied in your second general question. If the chemical products sold through the Cleveland office under such circumstances as to require shipment from points in Michigan and Wisconsin to customers in Ohio are specifically products to come from the points mentioned, such sales constitute interstate commerce and should not have been reported as business done in Ohio. So also with the third item, which consists of sales of ores shipped direct from upper lake ports to customers in Ohio. It would probably be true that if the company merely made contracts for the sale of so much ore, without any specification as to the place from which it should come, such contracts and the sales thereunder would not constitute interstate commerce. If the facts show that this is the case, then the opposite answer would have to be given to these two parts of the question, but if, as I imagine may be the case, the understanding, if not the express contract of the parties in such cases, is that the products or ores shall come from outside of the state, the transactions would be interstate.

The second subdivision of your second question seems clearer. As you put it, the business described thereby would be strictly Ohio business intrastate in character. The agreement, in effect, would be to sell and ship ore which is understood to be on Ohio docks at the time of the sale to customers in Ohio. The delivery required to complete the contract would be an intrastate movement.

In this connection it will be observed that the actual shipment that takes place in the discharge of the contract is not a conclusive criterion of its interstate or intrastate character. The contract may be to sell and deliver ore without respect to where the vender gets the ore. This would not be interstate commerce; but where the contract calls for delivery of something from outside of the state the reverse is true.

Your second question may, therefore, be answered as follows:

The sales of chemical products through the Cleveland office to Ohio customers, completed by shipments from Michigan and Wisconsin points, do not constitute business done in Ohio for the purpose of the franchise tax law, unless the contracts, fairly interpreted, show that the place from which the products were to come was a matter of indifference to the vendees.

The same general observation is true of sales of ores through the Cleveland office to Ohio customers, completed by delivery from upper lake ports.

Sales of ores through the Cleveland office, completed by delivery from Ohio docks to customers in Ohio, constitute business done in Ohio.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—COMPENSATION OF DEPUTY SHERIFFS FOR DOG REGISTRATION LAW—COMMISSIONERS PROVIDE FUNDS —SECTION 2980-1 G. C. NO LIMITATION.

Section 5652-8 G. C. provides adequate authorization to the county commissioners for appropriation of the necessary funds for compensation of deputy sheriffs required in the administration of the dog registration law. Secs. 5652 et seq. G. C.

The provisions of section 2980-1 G. C. are not a limitation upon said authorization.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 23, 1919.

HON. H. W. KUNTZ, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 13, 1919, asking for a construction of the duty of the county commissioners under section 5652-8 G. C. (107 O. L. 535.)

With your communication you submit a communication from Sheriff Harvey Garrett of your county setting forth statement of facts relating to necessity for an allowance from the public funds to provide deputies for the enforcement of the statutes relating to the registration of dogs.

You call attention to three opinions of my predecessor relating to the construction of the statute involved in your inquiry, and which opinions are Nos. 861 for the year 1917, and 973 and 1612 for the year 1918.

After a general survey of the statutes bearing upon the question, you request my opinion as follows:

> "I am asking for your opinion upon this statement of facts, because of the state-wide importance which the proper consideration of this statute demands."

The section which you desire construed, section 5652-8 G. C. is a part of an enactment found at page 534 of 107 O. L. and the act relates primarily to the matter of registration of all dogs, and the collection of an annual fee for such registration, thereby providing for raising a fund to compensate for losses sustained by owners of live stock on account of injuries inflicted by dogs.

The provision for assessment and collection of the fee for registration is made in section 5652 G. C. This section is followed by a number of supplemental sections providing machinery for the enforcement and carrying out of the objects of the initial section, supra.

From among the supplemental sections I call attention to section 5652-7 G. C. which provides:

> "County sheriffs shall seize and impound all dogs more than three months of age, except dogs kept constantly confined in a registered dog kennel found not wearing valid registration tags. Upon affidavit made before a justice of the peace, that a dog more than three months of age and not kept constantly confined in a registered dog kennel is not wearing a valid registration tag and is at large, or is kept harboured in his township, such justice of the peace shall forthwith order the sheriff of the county to seize and impound such dog so complained of. Such sheriff shall forthwith give notice to the owner of such dog, if such owner be known to the sheriff, that such dog has been impounded, and that the same will be sold or destroyed if not redeemed within four days. If the owner of such dog be not known to the sheriff, he shall post a notice in the county court house describing the dog and place where seized, and advising the unknown owner that such dog will be sold or destroyed if not redeemed within four days."

This section is then followed by 5652-8, which is the one you desire construed with reference to the duty of the county commissioners in relation to providing funds for the employment of deputy sheriffs, and that section is as follows:

"County commissioners shall provide for the employment of deputy sheriffs necessary to enforce the provisions of this act, shall provide nets and other suitable devices for taking dogs in a humane manner, and, except as hereinafter provided, shall also provide a suitable place for impounding dogs, and make proper provision for feeding and caring for the same, and shall also provide humane devices and methods for destroying dogs. Provided, however, that in any county in which there is a society for the prevention of cruelty to children and animals, incorporated and organized as provided by law, and having one or more agents appointed in pursuance of law, and maintaining an animal shelter suitable for a dog pound and devices for humanely destroying dogs, county commissioners shall not be required to furnish a dog pound, but the sheriff shall deliver all dogs seized by him to such society for the prevention of cruelty to animals and children at its animal shelter, there to be dealt with in accordancewith law, and the county commissioners shall provide for the payment of reasonable compensation to such society for its services so performed out of the county general fund."

While neither this particular section last quoted, nor in fact any of the sections of the act purport to provide the method of appointment of deputy sheriffs, yet I am of the opinion that they do purport to provide the compensation for such deputy sheriffs as shall be made necessary by the duties imposed upon the sheriff's office in the performance of their functions under the act, as well as other expense incident to the performance of such functions by way of providing nets and devices for catching the dogs, suitable impounding places, etc.

A consideration of section 5652-7 readily discloses that the executive functions under the law are vested in the sheriff, which as readily suggests the probability of the requirement of additional assistance or deputies over that which would be found necessary for the regular duties of the offices exclusive of those added by the provisions of the act under consideration.

Except for the existence of other provisions of law for providing compensation for deputy sheriffs, it is probable that no question would arise as to the sufficiency of the authority found in the act under consideration providing the necessary compensation for deputies required in the administration of the laws relating to the registration of all dogs. But inasmuch as a question has now been raised, it is necessary to determine whether the fact of general provision having been made, the same is now to be considered exclusive, or as governing entirely the subject of providing compensation for deputies required for the administration of this particular law.

At the outset, the fact of special provision being here made for the expense incident to the administration of this particular matter, is considered significant: in other words, if adequate and complete provision covering the subject already had been provided, there would have been no occasion for the additional reference to the matter in this law, and the fact that special provision is here embodied, we think indicates a purpose to add something to that which had previously been provided.

The language "the county commissioners shall provide for the employment of deputy sheriffs necessary to enforce the provision of this act," is considered as furnishing a cumulative authorization for deputy sheriffs' compensation to the extent that the service is made necessary by the additional duties added to the office of sheriff under the law in question.

Of further significance is considered the fact that such fees as are to be collected on account of the sheriff's services under the act in question are to go into the county treasury to the credit of the general county fund, while for the ordinary services of the sheriff's office the fees are to be paid into the county treasury and to be kept in separate fund, which is commonly known as the fee fund. (Sec. 2983 G. C.)

The compensation for deputies under the general provision which may be allowed by the county commissioners is based on certain graduated percentages of the fees and perquisites so accumulated in the fund thereby created. Thus it becomes apparent that the old provision for compensation of deputies is not especially adapted to or commensurate with the general plan and purpose of the legislation under consideration.

Of course, it is provided by section 2980-1 that upon application the common pleas judge may make additional allowance for deputy hire, but the provision of section 5652-8 clearly indicates that the authority to provide sufficient and suitable compensation necessary to administer the provisions of the law relating to registration of dogs is vested in the county commissioners, and it should not be necessary to go beyond that and look to the common pleas court for the necessary provision for such fees. Section 5652-8 was intended to be sufficient for the purpose, and it is the duty of the county commissioners to make a sufficient and proper allowance measured only by the necessities created by the duties imposed by the law rather than the condition of the sheriff's fee fund.

It is probable that in some counties the sheriff's fee fund would not be found sufficient even for providing the deputies and assistants necessary for the regular duties of the sheriff's office, and in that event, under the contrary construction of the special provision under consideration the county commissioners would not be able to provide for making this law effective at all, as such a construction would in fact be substituting the extraordinary provision for an application to the common pleas judge for additional allowance in the place of the apparently ample and apt authorization to the county commissioners to provide the necessary funds incident to the raising of the larger revenues which constitute the major purpose of the act.

The opinions of my predecessor which were referred to in your communication have been duly considered, and I find that the first of the opinions, No. 861, found at page 2347 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for the year 1917, does not determine the question as to whether the limitations on allowances to be made by the county commissioners provided in the original section 2980-1 are applicable to the case of providing for deputy sheriffs necessary in carrying out the provisions of the dog registration law, but it was simply said "it will be time enough to meet that question when it is presented." Other observations of the opinion to which I might call attention are as follows:

> "The question arising in your mind is probably the meaning of the word 'provide,' and it is sufficient in this connection to say that 'provide' does not mean 'appoint.' * * * Therefore, the requirement that the commissioners shall provide him with deputies would necessarily mean that they should provide him with the means of employing such additional deputies as might be rendered necessary by the provisions of these new duties. The sheriff himself selects his deputies. * * * The duty imposed by this act upon the county commissioners to provide the means to carry it into effect is undoubtedly mandatory."

The second opinion, being No. 973 for the year 1918, deals more specifically with the subject, and the more pertinent observations are as follows:

"No express statement is contained in the law that the provision for deputies is to be in any other manner than that already specifically provided."

Again, after quoting the first part of section 2980-1 G. C. it is said:

"If this language were effective it might in some instances leave an insufficient amount if the maximum was fixed by law without regard to these new duties. However, if the amount turns out insufficient the statute proceeds:

'Said officer shall make application to a judge of the court of common pleas of the county wherein such officer was elected; and thereupon such judge shall hear said application and * * * he may allow such a sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salary of such deputy, deputies, * * * and thereupon the board of county commissioners shall transfer from the general county fund, to such officers' fee fund, such sum of money as may be necessary to pay said salary or salaries.'

Here is the regular place in the provisions already made for the board of county commissioners to do the thing required in the new act, viz.: provide for the employment of deputy sheriffs necessary to enforce the provisions of this act. The fact that the maximum which the commissioners may allow is not based upon any of the fees for duties under the new act would be a sufficient reason for the judge allowing an additional amount if such maximum amount was insufficient."

In the later opinion, being No. 1612 of the Opinions for 1918, the conclusion in the last considered opinion was reaffirmed, and it was said:

"In an opinion (No. 973) rendered to Hon. John V. Campbell, prosecuting attorney, on January 29, 1918, I held that the deputy sheriffs who performed the duties under the law designated above are to be paid in the same manner as are the ordinary deputies in the sheriff's office. In other words, the sheriff must make his report to the county commissioners, and said commissioners make an allowance, in accordance with the provisions of law, which will take care of the full deputy force needed by the sheriff."

I find myself unable to agree with the holding of my predecessor that the general structure of the law for converting the various county offices from a fee basis to a salary basis and providing for the compensation of deputies and assistants required in the offices from a fund accumulated from the fees and perquisites of the office and set apart as a special fund for that purpose, was intended to limit and govern the general authorization in the law now under consideration for providing for the administration of said latter law, which has for its main purpose the raising of a revenue in the exercise of police power to compensate for injuries and losses which are regularly sustained as a consequence of inadequate regulation of dogs, and under which enactment the inconsequential provision for sheriffs' fees conveys them into the general fund of the county.

I, therefore, hold that by the provision of section 5652-8 G. C. the duty is imposed upon the county commissioners and the power vested in that body to provide the funds necessary for the administration of the law for the regulation and registration of dogs, including such an amount as shall be required for compensation of deputy sheriffs made necessary in the administration of the law, and that in the exercise of said function the limitations of section 2980-1 G. C. relating to appropriation from the sheriff's fee fund are not applicable.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

GOVERNOR—CONSTRUCTION OF WORD "ADJOURNMENT" IN SECTION 16 OF ARTICLE II OF OHIO CONSTITUTION—HOW BILLS FROM GENERAL ASSEMBLY ARE TO BE DISPOSED OF.

1. The word "adjournment," as used in section 16 of article II of the state constitution, means the final adjournment of the general assembly.

2. During a temporary adjournment of both houses of the general assembly to a day beyond the time within which the governor is required to return a bill which he does not approve, the governor, in case he desires to exercise his veto power, should return the bill, with his objections in writing, to the clerk of the house in which the bill originated within ten days, Sundays excepted, after it has been presented to him for approval. A return to the clerk, during such adjournment, is a return to the house, within the meaning of section 16 of article II of the state constitution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 24, 1919.

HON. JAMES M. COX, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of April 21, 1919, requesting my opinion on certain questions concerning the construction of section 16 of article II of the state constitution was duly received and omitting the formal parts, reads as follows:

"With regard to certain bills, filed with me for consideration on the 16th day of April, I may desire to exercise the power of disapproval conferred on me by section 16, of article II of the constitution. If at all consistent with my proper course of procedure under the section referred to, I want to make certain that the right of the general assembly to review my action shall be preserved.

As you know the legislature adjourned on April 17th, and will not be in session again until the 5th day of May next.

In the meantime, I desire to have you advise me:

1. What disposition must I make of any bills filed with me as aforesaid, in the event I want to disapprove the same within the ten day limit imposed by the constitution? In other words, shall I file such bill with my objections thereto in the office of the secretary of state, or in the office of the clerk of the house in which such bill originated, although such house is not in session?

2. Does 'adjournment' as used in the last sentence but one of the section of the constitution referred to above, mean 'final adjournment,' or does it include an adjournment to a fixed day as in the present case?

If at all possible, I should like to hear from you this week, as the time for action on my part will expire on the 28th of April."

Section 16 of article II of the constitution, so far as pertinent to the present inquiry, provides that:

"Every bill passed by the general assembly shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor for his approval. If he approves, he shall sign it and thereupon it shall become a law and be filed with the secretary of state. If he does not approve it, he shall return it with his objections in writing, to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the objections at large upon its journal, and may then reconsider the vote on its passage. * * *

If a bill shall not be returned by the governor within ten days, Sundays excepted, after being presented to him, it shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the general assembly by adjournment prevents its return; in which case, it shall become a law unless, within ten days after such adjournment, it shall be filed by him, with his objections in writing, in the office of the secretary of state."

The weight of judicial authority is to the effect that the word "adjournment" as used in constitutional provisions identical with or substantially the same as section 16 of article II of the Ohio constitution, means final adjournment, and that during temporary adjournments or recesses of either or both houses of the general assembly the governor may return a bill with his objections in writing to the clerk of the house in which it originated.

In Johnson City vs. Electric Co., 182 S. W. 587, decided by the supreme court of Tennessee, one of the vital questions in the case involved the meaning of the word 'adjournment" as used in the following provision of the state constitution, viz.:

"If the governor shall fail to return any bill, with his objections within five days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall become a law without his signature, unless the general assembly, by its adjournment, prevents its return, in which case it shall not become a law."

In that case the bill in question, which originated in the house, was duly and regularly passed by both branches of the general assembly, and was signed by their respective presiding officers. The bill was presented to the governor on April 1st. On April 3rd, both houses of the general assembly by joint resolution adjourned, not sine die, but to meet again on May 3rd, on which latter date that body again assembled pursuant to adjournment. In the opinion the court said:

"Under the facts which are not in dispute the controversy between the parties is narrowed to a single question. What is meant by 'adjournment' in section 18, Art. 3, of our constitution?

At this point two rival contentions arise: First, appellant insists that, under section 18, article 3, of our constitution of 1870, the return of a bill with his objections thereto in writing, which is required to be made by the governor, if he refuse to sign it, must be made to the house in which the bill originated, at a time when there is present in that house a quorum of its members competent to a reconsideration of the bill or other transaction of legislative business. Second, appellee insists that such return may be made to some officer, agent, or employe of the house chargeable, within the meaning of the constitution, with the duty of placing before the house, for its reconsideration, the returned bill, and the objections of the governor thereto, whether a quorum of the membership of the house be present or not at the time the bill with the objections of the governor be placed in the hands of the officer, agent, or employe of the house. * * *

It is manifest from a reading of the foregoing section that if the insistence of the appellant be the true postulate from which we should proceed, that is to say, if the return must be made to the house when a quorum of its membership is present, then the meaning of the phrase in the above section, 'unless the general assembly by its adjournment prevents its return' is that any adjournment which would result in the absence of a quorum would be such an adjournment as would prevent the return of the bill, and therefore it would result that the governor could not return a bill during adjournment if the house in which it originated had adjourned for midday luncheon, or had adjourned at night until the following morning, or had adjourned for any longer period of time, or had finally adjourned.

If we should adopt the above conclusion it would necessarily result in a holding that the time during which the house in which the bill originated was temporarily adjourned could not be counted against the time limiting the governor's right or power to return the bill with his objections to 5 days from the time it was presented to him, and therefore in order that the governor might at times be advised of the amount of time within which the power was still in him to so act in respect of any particular bill, it would be necessary that he be informed of the length of each adjournment, and that he add the space of each to the 5 days' time referred to above. We think such a construction would result in many evils and abuses, and that it is not the one intended by the framers of section 18 of article 3.

The sound insistence is the one made by appellee. 'Adjournment,' as used in the phrase above quoted from the constitution, means final adjournment. * * *

Beyond question a return made by the governor of a bill with his objections thereto in writing to the committee on enrolled bills of the house of origin, or to any member thereof, would be a good return of the bill and objections within the meaning of the constitution. The committee, or any member of it virtute officii, would be under the duty of placing before the house where the bill originated, when a quorum was present therein, the bill with the objections of the governor thereto, to the end that the bill might be reconsidered by that house, and if passed by it, and passed by the other house, notwithstanding the objections of the executive, it might be dealt with by the committee as provided by section 230 of Shannon's Code. Furthermore, we think such a return might properly be made within the meaning of the constitution to the clerk of the house in which the bill originated. He would be chargeable by reason of his office or employment with the duty of informing the house, when a quorum was present, of the fact that the governor had returned the bill with his objections thereto. * * *

The house in which a bill originates is a parlimentary body, and must, so far as the manual possession of its journals, bills and enrolled bills, resolutions and the like, is concerned be represented by agents. It has custody of such things through its agents, and although a house in which a bill originated might be in open session with a quorum present, it could only gain knowledge of the fact that the bill was returned by the governor, with his objections, through the manual act of some agent for the house, or member acting in that capacity. In other words, if a bill should be returned by the governor, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, while the house was in open session, with a quorum present, and ready to reconsider the bill, the messenger from the governor, or the governor himself, if he should return the bill in person, would doubtless deliver manual possession of the bill to the clerk of the house, to the speaker of the house, or to some member of the committee on enrolled bills, and by means of the individual agency so selected, the house would gain intelligence of the fact that the bill had been returned, and of the substance and meaning of the objections of the governor returned with the bill. These considerations demonstrate that it could not have been the intent of the framers of section 18 of article 3 that the return of the bill, with the objections of the governor, could only be made while the house in which the bill originated was in open meeting with a quorum present. Nothing could be accomplished by a return of this character which would not be equally well accomplished in any one of the other modes above indicated. * * *

Only one contingency can save a bill from becoming a law, where the governor fails to return it, with his objections, to the house where it originated, within the time limited; 'the same shall become a law without his signature, unless the general assembly, by its adjournment, prevents its return, in which case it shall not become a law.' Such is the unmistakable mandate of the constitution. House Bill No. 19 was not returned during the time limited within which power was vested in the governor to return it with his objections; its return was not prevented by final adjournment of the assembly; therefore the bill became a law at the expiration of the time limited, and its subsequent return by the governor to the house, and any action on it taken by the house must be regarded as nullities. * * *

There is no warrant in the constitution for the idea that a session of the general assembly ends with each temporary adjournment by the joint action of both houses composing it, nor for the idea that a new session begins with each subsequent resumption of activity. The session is continuous, although parliamentary and legislative activity, which must be accomplished by human agencies, necessarily cannot be continuous. If the intent of the framers of the constitution had been that a mere temporary adjournment of the house in which a bill originated could prevent its return by the governor within the time limited, no reason can be imagined for their failure to express the idea in plain terms."

The foregoing decision of the supreme court of Tennessee is supported by the following authorities which are cited in the opinion, and which on examination are found to be in point:

Miller vs. Hurford, 11 Nebr., 377;
State vs. Michel, 52 La. Ann. 936;
In Re: Soldiers Voting Bill, 45 N. H. 607;
Harpending vs. Haight, 39 Calif., 189;
Corwin vs. Comptroller, 6 S. C. 390;
Hequenbourg vs. Dunkirk, 48 Hun., 550;
Opinions of the Justices, 3 Mass., 567;
Lewis' Southerland Statute Construction (2nd Edition) Vol. Sec. 62.

The constitutional provision involved in the foregoing cases was substantially the same as the provision of the Ohio constitution now under consideration.

In Miller vs. Hurford, supra, the court held that:

"The constitutional restriction applies to an adjournment sine die and not to one from time to time."

In State vs. Michel, supra, the court at page 941 said:

"'Adjournment' as here used means final adjournment at the close of the session; not adjournment for the day, or for several days during the session. * * *

If the house in which the bill, proposed to be vetoed, originated, should happen not to be in session when the governor's message arrived, delivery of the bill, with the governor's objection, to the presiding officer of the body, or to its clerk, would seem, according to the adjudicated cases, to suffice; and in case neither the presiding officer, nor the clerk, can be found, its deposit on the presiding officer's table or desk, or in the office of the clerk would, doubtless, likewise suffice."

In Re: Soldiers Voting Bill, supra, the court at page 610 said:

"The adjournment referred to in this provision of the constitution is not, we think, the ordinary recess or adjournment from time to time during the continuance of the session, but the final adjournment at the close of the session. In fact, this is the only adjournment we think which could prevent a return of the bill within the time limit."

It was also held in the foregoing case that the governor during temporary adjournments, could return bills within the constitutional time "to the speaker or to the clerk or some other proper officer."

In Harpending vs. Haight, supra, the court approved and followed the New Hampshire decision (45 N. H. 610), and distinguished between temporary and final adjournments. With respect to temporary adjournments of the general assembly the court said:

"It still has an organized existence as a legislative body, with its president, secretary and other officers, to whom, under such circumstances, a substitutional delivery of the bill and message might be made, and whose official duty it would be to place the bill and message before the senate at as early a time as might be thereafter. Such a return, as we have said, would be the only one permitted by the circumstances, and when the bill should afterwards actually reach the senate, it could then proceed to reconsider it, as required by the constitution in that respect.

But when a final adjournment of the legislature has occurred, there is an end to the organized existence of the senate. It has no longer officers to represent it for any purpose; nor could the bill, in the nature of things, ever be brought to its attention, for it would not be in session thereafter, nor be reconsidered by it, which is the purpose to be attained, for it would be itself no longer existing."

In Corwin vs. Comptroller, supra, the court, after holding that the word "adjournment," as used in a constitutional provision similar to section 16 of article II of the Ohio constitution, meant final adjournment, also held that bills might be returned to the speaker or clerk within the proper time during temporary adjournment. At page 398 the court said:

"In our judgment, too, the bill might have been returned to the speaker or clerk on any day of the three days after it was presented to the governor (Sunday excepted); and the house not being in session on Friday or Saturday, and, assuming, for the argument, that it was not in session on Monday, did not prevent his compliance with the constitutional requisition. From the commencement to the close of a session, the speaker and the clerk may, by fair inference, be supposed to be present at the seat of government, although the house may have adjourned for three days. Certainly the clerk has a known office where the papers committed to his keeping, both during the sitting and vacation of the house, are kept, and where persons having official business may confer with him."

In State vs. Joseph, 57 So., 942, while the court held that the word "adjournment" as used in a constitutional provision of the class now under consideration, contemplated a final adjournment, and not a mere recess, also held that the governor could not return a bill to any officer or aggregation of members of either house when it is not in session. This latter holding is probably based upon the further constitutional provision which does not appear in our constitution, that "when return is prevented by recess, such bill must be returned to the house in which it originated within two days after the reassembling, otherwise it shall become a law."

It may be suggested or contended that there is a conflict of authority on the questions now under investigation, but as was aptly said in Johnson City vs. Electric Co., supra, "the conflict is very slight, if it may be said to exist." The court then proceeds to examine and distinguish the so-called opposing cases of People vs. Hatch, 33 Ill., 135 and State vs. South Norwalk, 77 Conn., 257.

With respect to People vs. Hatch, supra, it was said:

"Some of the reasoning of the Illinois court is in conflict with the views we entertain and with those entertained by the other courts above cited. But it is manifest that the conclusion reached by the Illinois court must be rested upon the peculiar provision of its constitution."

With respect to State vs. South Norwalk, supra, it was pointed out that the court rested its decision on the practical construction of the Connecticut constitution made by the legislature and chief executives of the state, which had been acted upon by those two departments of the state government for a period of eighty-five years. The decision also was made without reference to any of the cases holding the opposing view.

A decision of the supreme court of New Jersey in re: An Act, etc., concerning Public Utilities, 84 Atl., 706, should also be added to the small group of opposing cases.

In accordance with the weight of judicial authority, it is my duty to advise you as follows:

(1) The word "adjournment," as used in section 16 of article II of the state constitution, means the final adjournment of the general assembly.

(2) During a temporary adjournment of both houses of the general assembly to a day beyond the time within which the governor is required to return a bill which he does not approve, the governor, in case he desires to exercise his veto power, should return the bill, with his objections in writing, to the clerk of the house in which the bill originated within ten days, Sundays excepted, after it has been presented to him for approval. A return to the clerk, during such adjournment, is a return to the house, within the meaning of section 16 of article II of the state constitution.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COSTS IN FISH AND GAME CASES—COUNTY AUDITOR'S DUTY UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 1404 G. C.

The direction to the auditor under the provisions of section 1404 to issue a warrant for costs property certified to him in prosecutions under the fish and game laws, in cases where the defendant has been acquitted or discharged from custody, or convicted and committed in default of payment of fine and costs, is mandatory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 25, 1919.

The Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Fish and Game, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of March 13, 1919, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "In several instances the attention of this department has been called to the fact that justices of the peace in certifying, under oath, to the county auditor the costs in fish and game cases, as provided under section 1404, wherein the defendant has been acquitted or discharged from custody and committed in default of payments of costs, that the auditor refuses to make the proper certification and issue his warrant on the county treasurer.
> Will you, therefore, advise me if the county auditor shall issue his warrant on the county treasurer after all errors are corrected therein?"

Seetion 1404 to which you refer, is as follows:

> "A person authorized by law to prosecute a case under the provisions of this chapter shall not be required to advance or secure costs therein. If the defendant be acquitted or discharged from custody, or if he be convicted and committed in default of payment of fine and costs, such costs shall be certified, under oath by the justice to the county auditor who shall correct all errors therein and issue his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the person or persons entitled thereto."

The language of the statute is unambiguous and mandatory, and imposes the duty upon the auditor to issue his warrant for payment of costs as therein provided.

The section is applicable to all prosecutions properly instituted for violation of the provisions of the chapter of the Code relating to fish and game in which the defendant has been acquitted or discharged by dismissal or abandonment of the prosecution, or has been convicted and committed in default of payment of fine and costs.

The same holding was made by this department in an opinion to Hon. P. A. Saylor, prosecuting attorney, Eaton, Ohio, and being opinion No. 2016, page 1750 Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916.

Being of the opinion that the auditor has no discretion in the matter, I advise that after the correction of errors, if any may appear in the cost bill, it is the mandatory duty of the auditor to issue a proper warrant for the payment of such costs.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY AND INDEPENDENT AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES DISTINGUISHED.

When one agricultural society has been formed in a county, and is operating in compliance with law as a county society, and is receiving the official recognition of the state department of agriculture as such, the statutes do not contemplate the existence of additional societies with the status of "county society," but apply to them the status of "independent societies."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1919.

HON. ROBERT M. NOLL, Prosecuting Attorney, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 10, 1919, requesting my opinion upon the following statement of facts and inquiry:

> "We have in Washington county, at Barlow, Ohio, an association under the name of The Barlow Agricultural & Mechanical Association. They hold land by lease, on which they have placed valuable improvements in the way of buildings, stalls, stands and pavilions. They have successfully and continuously held forty-seven annual fairs. The corporate name of the society as taken from their constituton, article 1, section 1:

'Name: This society shall be known as The Agricultural & Mechanical Association of Barlow and Adjoining Township.'

By-laws, article 1, is as follows:

'Competitors for premiums, except in Art Hall and Floral Pavilion, at the annual fair, must be members of the society or belong to the family of such member, and own the article exhibited.'

This society has complied with all the requirements of section 9880-1 and are under favor of this section, receiving financial aid from Washington county.

The officers of said Barlow Association desire to have interpreted in their favor section 14571 of the General Code, in order that they may receive from the county commissioners assistance to be used in the improvement of their grounds and buildings.

I will be pleased to have your opinion interpreting section 14571 as to whether the commissioners of Washington county, Ohio, may or may not render the assistance to this society under favor of this section."

On March 19, 1919, pursuant to my request, you further advised me, regarding the agricultural society in question, that said society is one organized not for profit and pursuant to the provisions of the act of February 28, 1846, which fact is also shown by certain references in its constitution and by-laws. You also advised that there is in Washington county another society known as the Washington Agricultural and Mechanical Association, which receives assistance both from the county and the state and holds fairs annually, of a general county fair character.

Section 14571 G. C., to which you refer, is as follows:

"When a county society in a county containing a city of second grade of the first class has purchased or leased for a term of not less than twenty years, real estate as a site whereon to hold fairs, or when the title to the grounds is vested in fee in the county, but the society has the control and management of the lands and buildings the county commissioners may if they think it for the interests of the county and society, pay out of the county treasury the same amount of money for the purchase or lease and improvement of such site or either of them as is paid by such agricultural society or individuals for such purpose or either of them, and such commissioners may levy a tax upon all the taxable property of the county sufficient to meet the provisions of this section."

In the case of commissioners of Lawrence County vs. Brown, Auditor, 1 N. P. (N. S.) 357, the above section was considered, and while the special application of the section to counties having a city of the second grade of the first class was held unconstitutional, the remainder of the section was considered valid and operative.

It is, then, to be noted that the operative provisions of said section 14571 G. C., as thus construed, do not differ in any essential respects from the provisions of section 9887 G. C., and in my opinion have no broader or different application.

Section 9887 G. C. reads as follows:

"When a county society has purchased, or leased real estate whereon to hold fairs for a term of not less than twenty years, or the title to the grounds is vested in fee in the county, but the society has the control and management of the lands and buildings; if they think it for the interests of the county, and society, the county commissioners may pay out of the county treasury the same amount of money for the purchase or lease and improvement of such site as is paid by such society or individuals for that purpose, and may levy a tax upon all the taxable property of the county sufficient to meet such payment."

From the information which you have furnished me, it is apparent that the agricultural society in question was not originally formed as a township society, pursuant to the provisions of section 9911 G. C., not only from the definite reference in the by-laws to the act of 1846, as the source of authority for the creation of the society, but also from the further fact that section 9911 G. C., relating to township societies, in its earliest form appears not to have been enacted at the time of the organization of the society in question.

The exact scope and effect of section 9880-1 G. C. are not altogether free from difficulty inasmuch as it seems to evidence a legislative notion that agricultural societies are clearly divisible into classes of county and independent societies, whereas an examination of the legislation creating agricultural societies does not clearly disclose such classification with respect to their powers and qualifications for the purpose of the several provisions for public assistance or aid.

It must be said that the various statutes relating to the creation and administration of agricultural societies are encumbered with a great deal of uncertainty and their proper construction and the mode and manner of distinguishing between the so-called county society and the independent society fraught with much doubt.

However, it appears to have long been determined by administrative construction that section 9880 G C., and its predecessors in the development of the legislation, as well as the several other sections providing for public aid in various forms for county societies, contemplate the existence of but one county society, and that when the field has once been occupied by the proper formation and continuation of a society, the authorization in that regard has been exhausted. Such other societies as may be formed within the county are thus relegated to the domain of independent societies.

Thus construed it is at once apparent that the one society first establishing its identity as the county society may avail itself of the several provisions for public aid to county societies, while the remainder of the species must look only to the provision of section 9880-1 G. C., as the source and extent of their authority for acquiring aid from the public treasury.

There has been no judicial determination of the correctness of the interpretation established in the administration of the law, but upon investigation I find it has been quite uniformly pursued and acquiesced in, and has received the approval of this department on a number of occasions as wellas of the state department of agriculture.

In an opinion of this department found at page 2080 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, it was said:

"While there seems to be no express provision of law regulating the mode and manner by which the status of an agricultural society may be legally fixed, as the county agricultural society, yet the administration of the law as an entirety is inconsistent with any other procedure than to recognize as the county society the society adopted by the state board under the provisions of said section 9880, supra."

In the absence of the requisite certainty in the provision of the statute to import with some definiteness a contrary intent and purpose in their enactment, I am not inclined to dissent from the interpretation which has been worked out in the administration of the law.

From what has been said it follows that the right of the Barlow Agricultural and Mechanical Association to receive the aid from the county commissioners which they are seeking, is dependent upon the fact of its having established its identity as the county agricultural society in advance of the field having been occupied by any other existing county society duly qualified as such.

Your statement indicates that there is another society in your county recognized as the county society, and receiving public aid as such, and if it has so qualified in advance of the Barlow society, I advise that the latter would not be entitled to receive the aid it is seeking.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SHERIFF—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO EMPLOY CHAUFFEUR.

No legal authority exists for the employment by the sheriff, at the expense of the county, of a chauffeur to operate an automobile purchased, under section 2412-1 G. C., by the county commissioners for the use of the sheriff.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1919.

HON. BENTON G. HAY, Prosecuting Attorney, Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of March 6th, reading as follows:

> "The sheriff has an automobile the property of the county, purchased by authority of sections 2412-1 and 2412-2 G. C., 107 O. L. 585.
>
> The sheriff's deputy does not operate an automobile and there have been occasions when a chauffeur has been employed to operate and run the automobile for the sheriff or deputy. This is done sometimes when the sheriff or deputy has a prisoner or insane patient or at times when serving writs.
> May the commissioners allow these expenditures of the sheriff?"

Sections 2412-1 and 2412-2 G. C. (107 O. L. 585) authorize county commissioners to purchase automobiles for the use of the county commissioners and the county sheriff, but furnish no authority for the employment of chauffeurs to operate such automobiles.

Section 2997 G. C. is the only section I know of which in any way seems pertinent to the present inquiry. That section reads:

> "Section 2997. In addition to the compensation and salary herein provided, the county commissioners shall make allowances quarterly to each sheriff for keeping and feeding prisoners, as provided by law, for his actual and necessary expenses incurred and expended in pursuing or transporting persons accused or convicted of crimes and offenses, in conveying and transferring persons to and from any state hospital for the insane, the institution for feeble-minded youth, Ohio hospital for epileptics, boys' industrial school, girls' industrial home, county homes for the friendless, houses of refuge, children's homes, sanitariums, convents, orphan asylums or homes, county infirmaries, and all institutions for the care, cure, correction, reformation and protection of unfortunates, and all expenses of maintaining horses and vehicles necessary to the proper administration of the duties of his office. The county commissioners shall allow the sheriff his actual railroad fare and street car fare expended in serving civil processes and subpoenaing witnesses in civil and criminal cases, and may allow his necessary livery hire for the proper administration of the duties of his office. Each sheriff shall file under oath with the quarterly report herein provided a full, accurate and itemized account of all his actual and necessary expenses, including railroad fare, street car fare and livery hire mentioned in this section before they shall be allowed by the commissioners."

In opinion rendered on March 20, 1915 (No. 154, Opin. of Atty. Gen. for 1915, Vol. I, p. 295), the Attorney General said:

"In the case of State ex rel. Sartain as sheriff of Franklin county, Ohio vs. Sayre, as auditor, etc., et al., (12 O. N. P. N. S. 61), Judge Rathmell of the court of common pleas of said county held that the word 'vehicles' as used in the above statute, includes automobiles.

The county commissioners may, therefore, make an allowance to the sheriff for the expenses of maintaining his automobile when used in the proper administration of the duties of his office. The answer to your question calls for a definition of the word 'maintaining' as above used.

In the case of State ex rel. Denormandie vs. Commissioners of Mahoning county, 10 Ohio Cir. Ct. (n. s.) page 398, the court in construing the above section defined the word 'mairtaining' as follows:

'The meaning of the word "maintaining" as used in this section, in reference to horses and vehicles, means supporting; sustaining; keeping up; supplying with the necessaries of life; and the legislature, therefore, in this provision only meant and intended that sheriffs should be allowed the necessary expense incurred in supporting, sustaining and supplying their horses with the necessaries of life and in keeping their vehicles in good condition, and not in the purchase of them.' "

From the definition just quoted, it would seem that the word "maintaining," in section 2997 G. C., refers, in the case of an automobile, to the upkeep of the vehicle itself, and is not broad enough to authorize the employment and compensation of a chauffeur to operate the same for the sheriff.

Such was the conclusion reached by the Attorney-General in an opinion rendered on October 4, 1913 (Annual Rep. of Atty. Gen. for 1913, Vol II, p. 1405), the last two paragraphs of which are:

"There is no authority conferred by the foregoing section upon a sheriff to employ a chauffeur or caretaker for his automobile at the expense of the county, even though the automobile is used in the discharge of official duties.

I am therefore of the opinion that payment out of the county treasury for such purpose would be illegal."

It is true that the automobile spoken of in the opinion just referred to was an automobile owned by the sheriff, whereas we are now considering an automobile bought and owned by the county, under section 2412 G. C., cited supra. It is not perceived, however, how the difference in the nature of the ownership produces any different result on the question raised by your letter.

You are therefore advised that there is no authority for the allowance and payment by the county commissioners of the expenditures mentioned in your letter.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SLEEPING CAR, FREIGHT LINE AND EQUIPMENT COMPANIES—BASIS OF APPORTIONMENT—TRACK MILEAGE.

Under the decision of the supreme court of the United States in Union Tank Line Co. vs. Wright, rendered March 24, 1919, the thing to be apportioned to Ohio on the basis of track mileage under sections 5463 to 5465, inclusive, of the General Code, is the value of the daily average number of cars operated in this state by a sleeping car, freight line or equipment company, and not the value of the whole number of cars owned and operated by the company.

The basis of apportionment under such sections is the track mileage, and not the car mileage.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—My attention has just been called to a very recent decision of the United States supreme court in the case of Union Tank Line Co. vs. Wright, comptroller-general of Georgia, rendered March 24, 1919. This decision is of some importance to the tax commission in connection with the administration of the statutes providing for the taxation of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies. I have therefore assumed the privilege of addressing an opinion to the commission as to the effect of the decision without a formal request therefor.

The facts before the supreme court, as stated by Mr. Justice McReynolds, who delivered the opinion in the case, were as follows:

> "Union Tank Line * * * an equipment company * * * which has never carried on business or had an office in Georgia, owns twelve thousand tank cars suitable for transporting oil over railroads and rents them to shippers at agreed rates, based on size and capacity. The roads over which they move also pay therefor stipulated compensation. Under definite contract certain of these cars were furnished to the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky and all of those which came into Georgia were being operated by the oil company under such agreement. They were not permanently within that state but passed 'in and out.'
> * * * the tank line made the following tax return to the comptroller general for 1913—
>
> * * * * * * * * *
> (The report showed the total value of the cars of the company and stated that 'Union Tank Line Company had an average of 57 tank cars in Georgia during 1913, which at a value of $830 per car equals $47,310.00' * * *.)
> Acting upon information contained in return above quoted, the comptroller general assessed the tank line's property for 1913 at $291,196.00, * * * and demanded payment. In explanation of this action he wrote to it as follows:

"* * * you have furnished the data desired, but have made an error in the application of same. After giving the mileage for the company everywhere and for Georgia, you then go ahead and assign 57 tank cars for this state and value them at $830 each, making the total for Georgia $47,310.00. This is an incorrect method. If you were to be allowed to merely assign so many cars to the state for taxation there would be no need for the mileage figures to be furnished. The valuation to be assigned to Georgia must be in the same proportion to the valuation for the entire company, as the mileage in Georgia bears to the entire mileage everywhere. * * *"

The case was submitted upon an agreed statement of facts which admitted that the comptroller had no evidence before him other than that set forth in the report. An action being brought in the courts of Georgia, it was ultimately held by the supreme court of that state that the physical property of the company had been properly assessed as required by statutes not in conflict with either state or federal constitution. (146 Ga., 489).

The statutes under which the proceedings were had and the decision of the supreme court of Georgia was made are as follows:

"Sec. 989. Each non-resident person or company whose sleeping cars are run in this state shall be taxed as follows: Ascertain the whole number of miles of railroad over which such sleeping cars are run, and ascertain the entire value of all sleeping cars of such person or company, then tax such sleeping cars at the regular tax rate imposed upon the property of this state in the same proportion to the entire value of such sleeping cars that the length of lines in this state over which such cars are run bears to the length of lines of all railroads over which such sleeping cars are run. The returns shall be made to the comptroller-general by the president, general agent, or person in control of such cars in this state. The comptroller-general shall frame such questions as will elicit the information sought, and answers thereto shall be made under oath. If the officers above referred to in the control of such sleeping cars shall fail or refuse to answer, under oath, the questions so propounded, the comptroller-general shall obtain the information from such sources as he may, and he shall assess a double tax on such sleeping cars. If the taxes herein provided for are not paid, the comptroller-general shall issue executions against the owners of such cars, which may be levied by the sheriff of any county of this state upon the sleeping cars or cars of the owner who has failed to pay the taxes.

"Sec. 990. Any person or persons, co-partnership, company or corporation wherever organized or incorporated, whose principal business is furnishing or leasing any kind of railroad cars except dining, buffet, chair, parlor, palace or sleeping cars, or in whom the legal title in any such cars is vested, but which are operated, or leased, or hired to be operated on any railroads in this state, shall be deemd an equipment company. Every such company shall be required to make returns to the comptroller-general under the same laws of force in reference to the rolling stock owned by the railroads making returns in this state, and the assessment of taxes thereon shall be levied and the taxes collected in the same manner as provided in the case of sleeping cars in section 989."

For the purpose of camparison at this point I quote section 5462 et seq. of the General Code of Ohio:

"Sec. 5462. Annually, between the first and thirty-first days of May, every sleeping car, freight line and equipment company, doing business or owning cars which are operated in this state, shall under the oath of the person constituting such company, if a person, or under the oath of the president, secretary, treasurer, superintendent or chief officer in this state of such association or corporation, if an association or corporation, make and file with the commission a statement in such form as the commission may prescribe.

Sec. 5463. Such statement shall contain:

1. The name of the company.

2. The nature of the company, whether a person or persons or association or corporaton, and under the laws of what state or country organized.

3. The location of its principal office.

4. The name and postoffice address of the president, secretary, auditor, treasurer and superintendent or general manager.

5. The name and postoffice address of the chief officer and managing agent of the company in this state.

6. The number of shares of capital stock.

7. The par and market value, or, if there is no market value, the actual value of the shares of stock on the first day of May.

8. A detailed statement of the real estate owned by the company in this state, where situated, and the value thereof as assessed for taxation.

9. The total value of the real estate owned by the company and situated outside of this state.

10. The whole length of the lines of railway over which the company runs its cars, and the length of so much of such lines as is without and is within this state.

11. The whole number and value of the cars owned or leased by the company classifying the cars according to kind, and the daily average number of cars operated in this state.

Sec. 5464. In the case of an equipment company, such statement shall also contain the whole number and value of the cars owned and leased by the company, classifiying the cars according to kind; the whole length of the lines of railway, wherever located, operated by the companies, naming them, to which cars owned by such equipment company are leased, and the length of so much of such lines as is without and within this state, giving the name and location of the lines wholly or partially within this state.

Sec. 5465. On the first Monday in July, the commission shall ascertain and determine the amount and value of the proportion of the capital stock of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies, representing capital and property of such companies owned and used in this state, and in so determining shall be guided in each case by the proportion of the capital stock of the company representing rolling stock, which the miles of railroad over which such company runs cars, or its cars are run in this state, bear to the entire number of miles in this state and elsewhere over which such company runs cars, or its cars are run, and such other rules and evidence as will enable the commission to determine, fairly and equitably, the amount and value of the capital stock of such company representing capital and property owned and used in this state."

Without at this time making the comparison in detail, let me observe that the Ohio statute is evidently framed on the very theory adopted by the general assembly of Georgia and by the comptroller-general in making the assessment.

The supreme court of the United States held this assessment to be illegal, using the following language:

"A state may not tax property belonging to a foreign corporation which has never come within its borders—to do so under any formula would violate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. In so far, however, as movables are regularly and habitually used and employed therein, they may be taxed by the state according to their fair value along with other property subject to its jurisdiction, although devoted to interstate commerce. While the valuation must be just it need not be limited to mere worth of the articles considered separately but may include as well 'the intangible value due to what we have called the organic relation of the property in the state to the whole system.' How to appraise them fairly when the tangibles constitute part of a going concern operating in many states often presents grave difficulties; and absolute accuracy is generally impossible. We have accordingly sustained methods of appraisement produ ing results approximately correct—for example, the mileage basis in case of a telegraph company (W. U. Tel. Co. vs. Massachusetts) and the average amount of property habitually brought in and carried out by a car company (American Refrigerator Transit Co. vs. Hall). But if the plan pursued is arbitrary and the consequent valuation grossly excessive it must be condemned because of conflict with the commerce clause of the Fourteenth Amendment or both. W. U. Tel. Co. vs. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530; Marye vs. B. & O. R. R., 127 U. S. 117; Pullman's Car Co. vs. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 26; Adams Express Co. vs. Ohio, 165 U. S. 194, s. c. 166 U. S. 185; American Refrigerator Transit Co. vs. Hall, 174 U. S. 70; Union Referigerator Transit Co. vs. Lynch, 177 U. S. 149; Fargo vs. Hart, 193 U. S. 490; Cudahy Packing Co. vs. Minnesota, 246 U. S. 450, 453.

In the present case the comptroller general made no effort to assess according to real value or otherwise than upon the ratio which miles of railroad in Georgia over which the cars moved bore to total mileage so traversed in all states. Real values—the essential aim— of property within a state cannot be ascertained with even approximate accuracy by such process; the rule adopted ha no necessary relation thereto. During a year two or three cars might pass over every mile of railroad in one state while hundreds constantly employed in another moved over lines of less total length. Fifty-seven was the average number of cars within Georgia during 1913 and each had a 'true' value of $830. Thus the total there subject to taxation amounted to $47,310—the challenged assessment specified $291,196.

We think plaintiff in error's property was appraised according to an arbitrary method which produced results wholly unreasonable and that to permit enforcement of the proposed tax would deprive it of property without due process of law and also unduly burden interstate commerce.

Pullman's Car Co. vs Pennsylvania, supra, relied on by defendant in error, contains the following passage which seems to uphold the Georgia rule—'The mode which the state of Pennsylvania adopted, to ascertain the proportion of the company's property upon which it should be taxed in that state, was by taking as a basis of assessment such proportion of the capital stock of the company as the number of miles over which it ran cars within the state bore to the whole number of miles, in that and other states, over which its cars were run. This was a just and equitable method of assessment; and, if it were adopted by all the states through which these cars ran, the company would be assessed upon the whole value of its capital stock, and no more.' But the point therein spoken of was unnecessary to determination of the cause; and so far as the quoted passage sanctions the specified rule for ascertaining values as generally appropriate, just, unobjectionable and productive of conclusive results it must be regarded as obiter dictum, and we cannot now approve or follow it."

Both the Ohio statute and the Georgia statute were, I feel bound to say, based upon the very passage in Pullman's Car Co. vs. Pennsylvania, which the supreme court by its latest decision has stamped as an inaccurate dictum.

The supreme court in the Georgia case did not hold the statute unconstitutional, but merely held the assessment invalid as relating to property which was outside the taxing jurisdiction of the state. I feel bound to say that the Georgia statute in terms commands the comptroller general to do exactly what he did, and under the Ohio statute the commission is commanded to take the whole "capital stock of the company representing rolling stock" and assess for taxation that proportion thereof which is indicated by the proportion which "its cars are run in this state, bear (s) to the entire number of miles in this state and elsewhere over which such company runs cars, or its cars are run."

Fortunately, however, the Ohio statute is a little more liberal than the Georgia statute, in that the Georgia statute expressly stated what should be done in making the assessment, whereas the Ohio statute (section 5465) merely declares that the commission shall be "guided in each case by" the calculation which I have mentioned and may take into consideration, in addition to the result of such calculation, "such other rules and evidence as will enable the commission to determine, fairly and equitably, the amount and value of the capital stock of such company representing capital and property owned and used in this state."

I feel certain, therefore, that the Ohio statute is constitutional. I must, however, advise the commission that it would not be lawful to apply the mileage ratio which the statute commands to the entire rolling stock of sleeping car, freight line or equipment companies in the light of the decision which the supreme court has made. Instead, the commission must have regard to what is reported under the heading designated as and the thing to be apportioned on the track mileage basis is the total value of the daily average number of cars operated in this state.

> "The whole number and value of the cars owned or leased by the company classifying the cars according to kind, and the daily average number of cars operated in this state;"

It may be that the commission has been following the proper rule. If such is not the case, however, I must strongly advise that the rule be changed to conform to that which I have just outlined.

In this connection it may be worth while to observe that the basis of apportionment under the statute is track mileage—not car mileage. In other words, it is the number of miles of railroad over which the cars are run, and not the number of miles which the cars actually run, that is to determine the ratio. This will result, of course, in a very small percentage being assigned to Ohio, and the combined effect of the observance by the commission of the two points touched upon in this opinion will very much reduce the revenues of the state from this source, if the commission has been apportioning the whole value of the rolling stock on the basis of car mileage, instead of apportioning the value of the average number of cars moving through the state on the basis of track mileage. To avoid in part such loss of revenue the statute might be amended to provide for the use of the car mileage factor instead of the track mileage rule. Ohio would probably profit by such an arrangement.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROCEDURE FOR PROBATE COURT WHEN INQUEST FOR INSANITY IS TO BE ASCERTAINED—PERSON CHARGED RESIDENT OF ANOTHER COUNTY—PROCEDURE IN SUCH CASE.

1. A probate judge has, generally speaking, no power to make an adjudication of lunacy unless the person who is the subject of the inquest is a resident of the county wherein the probate court is situate.

2. Where a probate judge ascertains, after a lunacy affidavit is filed, that the alleged insane person is not a resident of the county wherein the lunacy proceeding is instituted, but of another county of the state, there is no statutory authority for the transfer of such person to the probate court of the county of his residence.

3. In such case it would be proper for the probate judge to communicate with the probate judge of the county of such alleged person's residence, to the end that a lunacy affidavit might be filed in the latter county. A warrant then issued thereon, under section 1954 G. C., would authorize the person to whom said warrant was directed to take the alleged insane person into custody in any county of the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1919.

HON. JOHN P. COONROD, Judge of Probate Court, Fremont, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment has already been made of your letter of recent date, reading thus:

> "What is the procedure for the probate court when in an inquest of insanity he ascertains that the person so adjudged insane is not a resident of this county, but a resident of some other county of the state?
> I know of no authority that authorizes the transfer of the person so charged with being insane, to the place of his legal residence.
>
> There is a provision of law that if a person so alleged to be insane is not a resident of Ohio, and his residence is unknown, that the court shall notify the board of state charities who shall direct further procedure.
>
> The above proposition has come up several times during my administration as probate judge. If the person so alleged to be insane is committed to the asylum and he has no friends or relatives who can be charged with his care and support, the county becomes liable for his clothing, etc.
> I would be greatly obliged to you for your opinion on the above proposition."

That the probate judge has no jurisdiction to make an adjudication of lunacy unless the person who is the subject of the inquest is a resident of the county wherein the probate court is situate, was pointed out by the attorney-general in opinion No. 764, found in 1917 A. G. O., Vol. III, p. 2037. The reasons for such conclusion were not, however, stated in said opinion, the point being assumed, rather than discussed.

The soundness of the proposition is, however, apparent from various sections of the law relating to admission to hospitals for the insane, among which sections the following are especially noteworthy.

Section 1953 G. C. says:

> "For the admission of patients to a hospital for the insane, the following proceedings shall be had. A resident citizen of the proper county must file with the probate judge of such county an affidavit, substantially as follows:" (Here follows a form of affidavit.)

You will observe that among the necessary allegations of said affidavit is that the alleged insane person "has a legal settlement in ---------- township, in this county."

Section 1966 G. C. says:

> "In cases requiring an escort, if neither the patient nor his friends are financially able to bear the expense of his removal, the superintendent shall give notice to the probate judge of the county of which the patient is an inhabitant, who shall forthwith issue his warrant to a suitable person, giving the friends of patients the preference, which shall read as follows:
>
> The State of Ohio ---------- County, ss.,
> Office of the Probate Judge of said county.
> The proper authority having directed that----------, a patient from this county, in the state hospital for the insane at -------- ---------- be removed therefrom, you are commanded forthwith to remove such patient and return him to his home in this state.
> Witness my hand and official seal this ---------- day of----------, 19------ ----------A. D. ----------Probate Judge."

Notice particularly in said section the phrase "the county of which the patient is an inhabitant."

There is, I apprehend, but one exception to the rule that the probate judge has no jurisdiction to adjudge insane a nonresident of the county, and that refers to a nonresident of the state, whose admission into a state hospital has been authorized by the Ohio board of administration under section 1950 G. C. (103 O. L. 447), after the proceedings prescribed by section 1819 (103 O. L. 446) and section 1820 G. C. (103 O. L. 446) have been taken. The proceedings relating to insane convicts, authorized by sections 2216 and 2217 G. C., terminate in an "order of transfer," rather than an order of commitment.

The foregoing discussion is, I realize, not precisely responsive to your question, yet it was thought desirable in view of the first paragraph of your letter which rests your question upon the assumption that the non-resident of a county has been adjudged insane by the probate court. The point is that, as a general proposition, the probate judge has no authority to adjudge insane a non-resident of the county, and that no question as to the transfer to another county of the state of a person so adjudged could, strictly speaking, arise.

The second paragraph of your letter, however, puts the question properly; that is, it deals with a situation where a probate judge ascertains, after a lunacy affidavit is filed, that the alleged insane person is not a resident of the county wherein the lunacy proceeding is instituted, but of another county of the state. The question is, whether or not the probate judge under such circumstances is authorized by law to "transfer" such person to the place of his legal residence. By "transfer" you mean, I presume, the transportation of said alleged insane person, under proper custody and restraint, to the probate court of the county of his residence, without personal expense to the person exercising the custody and restraint.

I am unable to find any statute which authorizes such a transfer to be made, although the desirability of a law of that nature is apparent. Section 3482 G. C. provides for the removal of a pauper from a county of non-residence to the county of residence, but this section would hardly be available for the transfer of an alleged insane person, unless the misfortune of such person comprehended poverty as well as insanity.

Upon discovering that the alleged insane person is a non-resident of the county, the probate judge may communicate that fact to the probate judge of the county of such alleged insane person's residence. A lunacy affidavit could then be filed with the probate judge of the county of residence, and a warrant issued by said judge, under section 1954 G. C., to a suitable person, commanding him to bring the person alleged to be insane before him.

Construing section 1954 G. C., the attorney-general, in opinion (No. 1486) rendered on September 28, 1918, to Hon. Homer Z. Bostwick, probate judge, Columbus, O., said:

> "It will be noted that the probate judge may issue his warrant for the arrest of the person alleged to be insane to a 'suitable person.' This person may or may not be the sheriff of the county. I am of the opinion that when this warrant is issued to such suitable person, such warrant is authority for such person to take the alleged insane person into custody in any county in the state of Ohio, and the expense of arresting such insane person and bringing him before the court may be paid, if the person to whom the warrant was issued is a person other than the sheriff or deputy sheriff, under the provisions of section 1981 G. C., * * *."

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CAN RENT OR LEASE SCHOOL ROOMS—CAN NOT PURCHASE OR CONSTRUCT SCHOOL BUILDING UNLESS MONEY IN TREASURY OR IN PROCESS OF COLLECTION.

A board of education can rent or lease suitable school rooms, but cannot enter into a contract to purchase or construct a school building at some future time unless the money for the same is in the treasury to the credit of the proper fund, and so certified by the clerk of the board.

A board of education can purchase a building to be used for school purposes, but money required for the same must be in the treasury or in process of collection.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1919.

HON. CLARE CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of April 7, 1919, in which you submit the following:

> "The Warren Acreage & Investment Company of the city of Warren, has an allotment in the eastern part of the city, and while a rapidly growing section of the city, does not have a sufficient number of pupils to warrant the building and equipping of a school house, at once, by the board of education of said city.
> The said company are willing to build a school building and rent the same to the board of education of the city of Warren, Ohio, until such time as the board of education would be willing to purchase it.
> Our understanding of the law would be that the Warren Acreage &

Investment Company can build a school house and that the board of education may rent it for school purposes, but can the board of education enter into a contract to purchase the school house at some future time? Also can a board of education purchase a school building already built?"

Attention is invited to section 7620 G. C., which reads:

"The board of education of a district may build, enlarge, repair and furnish the necessary schoolhouses, purchase or lease sites therefor, or rights of way thereto, or purchase or lease real estate to be used as playgrounds for children, or rent suitable schoolrooms, provide the necessary apparatus and make all other necessary provisions for the schools under its control. It also shall provide fuel for schools, build and keep in good repair fences inclosing such school houses, when deemed desirable plant shade and ornamental trees on the school grounds and make all other provisions necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools within the subdistricts."

You are correct in your statement that the board of education "can rent suitable schoolrooms" and this applies whether the building containing such rooms is completely new or has been used for other purposes.

As to your question "Can the board of education enter into a contract to purchase the school house at some future time?", such query is answered in section 5660 G. C., which reads:

"The commissioners of a county, the trustees of a township and the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education, is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

Section 5661 G. C. provides:

"All contracts, agreements or obligations, and orders or resolutions entered into or passed contrary to the provisions of the next preceding section, shall be void, but such section shall not apply to the contracts authorized to be made by other provisions of law for the employment of teachers, officers, and other school employes of boards of education."

It is therefore clear that before the board of education can enter into any agreement of any kind relative to the building in question, and involving the expenditure of money on the part of the board it is necessary that the certificate of the clerk of the board be filed and recorded, certifying that the money is in the treasury to meet the conditions of such obligation as the same is due and payable. However, the renting of rooms, or the leasing or purchasing of the same are not the exceptions mentioned in section 5661 G. C., so the provisions of section 5660 G. C. apply to the matter in question.

In a case in which the facts were partially similar to this one, the Attorney-General, in opinion 1580, issued November 29, 1918, said by way of suggestion:

> "I might suggest, however, that your board of education could take a lease, say for one year if you have sufficient money in the treasury to pay the rental for that time, and place in said lease an option in the board of education to have the use of said property from year to year for a period of five years and, as the board of eduaction would exercise the option each year, the certificate of the clerk could be filed that the money was in the treasury to cover the obligation of said annual rental."

As to your last question, "can a board of education purchase a school building already built? ", attention is again invited to section 7620 G. C., above quoted, which says in two places in the same section:

> "The board of education may * * * make all other provisions necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools * * *."

There might be many cases in which it would be more "convenient for the board to purchase an erected building to be used for school pueposes, than to erect a new building, and such action might rebound to the "prosperity" of the schools, both financial and otherwise. And if this is the case, in the judgment of the board, then under section 7620 G. C. it can purchase a satisfactory building to be used for school purpose, for the same section says the board may "enlarge or repair", the central idea being adequate facilities for the school of which the board is the judge in its own locality. Such building when leased or purchased should conform to the building code requirements on school houses.

The opinion of the Attorney-General, therefore, is that a board of education can rent or lease suitable school rooms, but cannot enter into a contract to purchase or construct a school building at some future time unless the funds for the same are in treasury and so appropriated. Further there is nothing in the law to prevent a board of education from purchasing a proper building to be used for school purposes, provided the funds to do so are in the treasury and so certified by the clerk.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MIDDLETOWN CHARTER—LIMITATION OF BONDED INDEBTEDNESS—CHARTER AND STATUTE PROVISIONS CONSTRUED.

The limitation placed upon the amount of bonded indebtedness by section 3 of article XII of the Middletown charter cannot be exceeded by the city in taking advantage of sections 4000-16 to 4000-28, inclusive, of the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 29, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of April 17, 1919, requesting my opinion as to the authority of Middletown to issue bonds for the construction of a street railway system under sections 4000-16 to 4000-28 G. C., inclusive, in excess of the amount authorized by section 3 of article XII of the city's charter, was duly received.

With your letter you enclosed a copy of a communication from the city solicitor, dated April 8, 1919, and reading as follows:

> "The city commission of the city of Middletown are inquiring into the feasibility and possibility of establishing a street railway system by virtue of the authority of sections 4000-16 to 4000-28 inclusive.
> In the matter of financing such a proposition I find section 4000-23 G. C., reads:
> 'The aggregate amount of such bonds authorized by vote of the people or total indebtedness created under the authority of this act shall not be limited by the provisions of any act or statute of Ohio or law, except by the limitation herein set forth, and such aggregate or total indebtedness shall not exceed two per cent of the total value of all property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation.'

The city of Middletown is operating under a charter, section 3 of article 12 of which reads as follows:

'The total indebtedness of the city for any bonds issued or to be hereafter issued, shall never exceed 4% of the total value of all property within the city of Middletown, as listed and assessed for taxation, not including bonds issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments, specially assessed, against abutting property for the improvement of any street, alley or public highway.'

While the provisions of the above quoted statute of Ohio seem extremely comprehensive, it is my opinion that the charter provision above quoted is binding upon our legislative body, and that such bonds, if issued, could not be disregarded in the aggregate amount which the city is permitted to issue; in other words, that the charter provision would be binding in a home rule city.

I would very highly appreciate your opinion in this matter for prompt use if you will so favor me."

Under section 2 of article I of the charter, as set forth in volume 1 of the supplement to Page & Adams' General Code, pages 1120, 1121, it is provided that "all general laws of the state of Ohio applicable to municipal corporations, now existing or hereafter enacted, not in conflict with the provisions of this charter," shall apply to the government of the city of Middletown, etc.

Under section 2 of article XII of the charter the city may issue bonds from time to time for such purposes as are now or may hereafter be authorized by the general assembly, but subject, of course, to the limitation prescribed by section 3 of the same article.

By reason of the charter and statutory provisions above referred to, a conflict might arise with respect to the amount of bonds that Middletown could lawfully issue in the construction of a street railway system under section 4000-16 et seq. G. C. If the statutory provision is to govern as to the amount, then the four per cent. charter limitation on the city's bonded indebtedness might be exceeded, whereas if the charter provision is to control, the bonds issued under section 4000-16 et seq. G. C. must be counted in making up the city's total bonded indebtedness.

It is my opinion that the conclusion reached by the city solicitor is correct, and I therefore advise you that the limitation placed upon the amount of bonded indebtedness by section 3 of article XII of the Middletown charter cannot be exceeded by the city in taking advantage of sections 4000-16 to 4000-28, inclusive, of the General Code.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BANKS AND BANKING—SURETY ON BOND TO SECURE STATE DEPOSITS—LIABLE REASONABLE TIME AFTER EXPIRATION OF PERIOD OF DEPOSITORY'S QUALIFICATION.

The surety on a bond given to secure deposits made in a state depository is answerable for the due payment of moneys deposited in such depository during the period of its qualification and allowed to remain there for a reasonable time after the expiration of such period in the event of the failure of the depository to requalify, together with interest on daily balances accruing both before and after the expiration of such period.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 2, 1919.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The receipt of your letter of April 25th requesting the opinion of this department on the question therein submitted is acknowledged. The question is as follows:

> "The Minerva Banking Company of Minerva had on deposit $3,000.00 of state funds at a rate of four per cent. for which they bid in 1917. This deposit was secured by a surety bond of the Maryland Casualty Co. of Maryland, dated December 21, 1917, in the amount of $3,150.00. The Minerva Bank bid for state funds at the recent letting and the rate they bid was so low that it necessitated calling in their present funds and redepositing them in a bank at a higher rate. These funds were withdrawn April 22nd, and their account closed.
> Was the Maryland Casualty's bond ample security on this deposit up to and including the day their funds were withdrawn or did its liability cease on April 1st?"

Attached to your letter are letters from the general agent of the Maryland Casualty Company, in which he contends that the suretyship undertaking of his company covered under the law a period of time expiring on April 1, 1919. You also attach forms of bonds in use to secure the deposit of state funds and funds belonging to the state insurance fund, respectively.

It is familiar law that a surety is entitled to stand on the letter of his undertaking, and is not liable for any default of the principal not covered thereby; and that he is discharged by any alteration of the contract between the principal obliger and the obligee made without his consent.

The forms of bonds submitted by you do not show an express undertaking on the part of the surety company a surety limited in point of time. The following is quoted from the conditions of the several bonds as they appear:

> "The condition of this obligation is such, that whereas, the said (Bank) * * * has been duly designated and approved as a state depository for the purpose of receiving on deposit funds or moneys, of the State of Ohio, * * *.
> AND WHEREAS, The treasurer of the state of state of Ohio has * * * duly selected and designated the (bank) * * * as a state depository, and has agreed with, and to award to, the said (bank) * * * a portion of the public moneys of the state of Ohio, and * * * has required of the said (bank) * * * a bond to be executed and deposited with him, as treasurer aforesaid, with surety thereon, * * *.

NOW THEREFORE, if the said the (bank) * * * shall pay over to the treasurer of state for the use of said state of Ohio, upon demand made therefor, or upon his written order, any and all moneys which now are in the custody of said bank belonging to the state of Ohio, or which from time to time hereafter may come into the custody of such (bank) * * * under and by virtue of said acts, free from any discount or deduction of any kind therefrom, and shall further pay to the treasurer of state, for the use of the state of Ohio, interest upon the daily balances on such deposit or deposits, at the rate of _____ per centum per annum, payable at the time mentioned in said acts without demand therefor, and shall do each and every act as required of such depository by the terms of said acts, and shall save the state of Ohio free from any loss whatsoever upon such deposit or deposits made with the said (bank) * * * and if the said (surety) shall pay to and settle with the state of Ohio the amount due in full (including interest) to the state of Ohio from the said (bank) * * * within sixty (60) days after notice is given said (surety) that such (bank) * * * has failed, refused or neglected to pay to the treasurer of state of Ohio any and all moneys which may be in the custody of said (bank) * * * belonging to the state of Ohio and covered by this bond, then this obligation shall be void, otherwise it shall be and remain in full force and effect."

But one of the blank forms has been quoted, but the others are similar in tenor and effect. So far as the bonds themselves are concerned, therefore, there is no warrant for the claim made by the surety company that its undertaking is limited in anywise to any period of time.

It is assumed, however, that the contention of the general agent of the company is based upon inferences to be drawn from the law authorizing and requiring the deposit of state funds. The following provisions of that law as they appear in the General Code are quoted:

"Sec. 323. It shall be the duty of said board (of deposit) to meet on the first Monday in April 1911, and every two years thereafter, or as often as it is necessary at the call of the chairman, after this bill becomes operative, and designate such national banks within the state and banks and trust companies doing business within this state, and incorporated under the laws thereof as the board deems eligible to be made state depositories.

Sec. 324. Application of banks and trust companies to be made a state depository for the deposit of moneys of the state shall be made in writing and be filed with the chairman of the board of deposit. Such application shall contain a sworn statement showing the financial condition of the bank or trust company at the date of application. Such application shall also specify the kind of bond or bonds it will furnish as security."

Sec. 328. All awards for the deposit of state funds shall be made upon competitive bidding; bids shall be received by the treasurer of state every two years, beginning between one o'clock p. m. on the first Monday in March and closing at one o'clock p. m. on the third Monday in March, 1911, and every two years thereafter.

Sec. 329. Each bid shall state whether it is for an active or inactive deposit, amount bid for and rate of interest, and must be accompanied by an application and shall be sealed and plainly marked on the outside 'BID FOR DEPOSIT.' Beginning at one o'clock p. m. on the third Monday in March of each bidding period the bids shall be opened by the treasurer of state at his office in the presence of the public; all bids shall be preserved and be open to the public inspection at all times.

Sec. 330. After bids have been opened the treasurer of state shall on or before the first Monday in April of each bidding period award the state funds to the highest bidders. The treasurer of state shall deposit the state funds in such banks and trust companies after such applications have been approved by the board of deposit. Should additional state funds become available at any time during the two years or until the next bidding period, it shall be awarded to the highest bidders; first to the banks and trust companies from which deposits have been withdrawn to meet obligations of the state, second to those who failed to receive the full amount of their original award, and then to the next highest bidders.

Sec. 330-3. The treasurer of state before making such deposits shall require that each and every approved bank or trust company to deposit with him United States government bonds, bonds of this state, county, township, school district, road district, or municipal bonds of this state at not less than their par value, in an amount equal to the amount of money to be deposited with such banks or trust companies, or surety company bonds, which when executed shall be for an amount equal to the amount deposited plus 5 per cent., conditioned for the receipt and safe keeping and payment over to the treasurer of state or his written order of all moneys which may come into the custody of such bank, or trust company under and by virtue of this act, and the interest thereon when paid shall be turned over to the bank or trust company so long as it is not in default. And further, said bonds so given shall include a special obligation to settle with and pay to the treasurer of state for the use of the state interest upon daily balances on said deposit or deposits, at the rate bid for, but not less than 3 per cent. per annum for inactive deposits and 2 per cent. per annum for active deposits (on a 365 day basis) payable quarterly on the first Monday of February, May, August and November of each year, or any time when withdrawals are made or the account is closed.

"Section 330-6. If, on demand or order of the treasurer of state, a state depository fails or refuses to pay over the deposit, or any part thereof made therein as provided by law, the treasurer of state shall sell at public sale any or all of the bonds deposited with him as collateral security for such deposits. Thirty days notice of such sale shall be given in a newspaper published and of general circulation at the seat of government. Surety bonds shall contain a clause obligating said surety company to pay and settle with the state the amount due in full including interest within sixty days after notice is given."

Repeated reference is made in these sections to a "bidding period," which must be understood in the light of sections 323 and 330 above quoted as being a biennial period beginning and ending with the first Monday in April of the odd numbered years (not the first day of April, as seems to be assumed). But the law merely specifies that at each succeeding bidding period new awards shall be made. It fails to specify, either expressly or by inference, that on the first Monday of April of each succeeding odd numbered year banks qualifying during the preceding biennium shall immediately pay over the balances on hand, nor that they shall be discharged from the payment of interest for any period after the first Monday in April of that year. On the contrary, the express provision of the statute is that all sums deposited shall be payable on demand, and the special undertaking of the surety is to "pay and settle with the state the amount due in full including interest within sixty days after notice is given." In other words, the principal obligor does not by virtue of the award of funds to it promise to pay those funds to the state on or before the first Monday of April of the odd numbered year next ensuing after the making of the deposit. Therefore, it is not an extension of time to the depository nor otherwise an alteration of the implied contract which is entered into when a deposit is made for the treasurer of state, for his own convenience, to allow the balance of a deposit to remain with a depository beyond the end of a bidding period.

What, then, is the purpose of the bidding period? It is submitted that such purpose is to fix a period of time within which the treasurer of state is authorized to deposit and the successful bidder is authorized to receive on deposit moneys of the state in the amount indicated by the law with respect to the particular depository. In other words, after the expiration of the bidding period the depository has no right to receive under the expired award nor has the treasurer of state any right to deposit by virtue of such expired award any further sums whatever. So that if the treasurer of state, after the expiration of a bidding period, should deposit additional moneys with a depository which had failed to qualify at the new bidding, such a deposit would be unauthorized by law and would not be within the terms of the implied contract or indeed the express undertaking of the surety on the original deposit; so that the surety would not be liable for any default in respect of the amount so deposited after the expiration of the bidding period.

But for the due payment of all moneys deposited during the two-year period and remaining on deposit at the end thereof, with interest on daily balances accruing both before and after the end of the period on such deposits, the depository and its surety remain liable until the undertaking is discharged by performance.

The facts stated by you show that funds to the amount of $3,000 were on deposit with the Minerva Banking Company at the expiration of the bidding period, and remained so on deposit for a period of about three weeks thereafter, when they were withdrawn by you because the bank had not qualified as a depository for the incoming bidding period. There is no showing that any moneys were deposited in the bank by the treasurer of state after the first Monday in April, 1919. Under these circumstances, it is the opinion of this department that the Maryland Casualty Company is liable on its bond for the due payment of this amount, with interest.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SHERIFF—APPOINTMENT OF DEPUTIES—JURISDICTION OF COMMON PLEAS COURT OVER SUCH APPOINTMENTS.

Where a sheriff appoints two deputies to serve during his term of office, and such appointments are approved by the common pleas court, an allowance for deputy and clerk hire by the court upon the application of the sheriff for such allowance in addition to the maximum allowance which may be authorized by the commissioners, such allowance thereby becomes available to the sheriff, and a recital in the journal entry purporting to find a necessity for the services of one of the deputies for a period of only two months, is not effective as a limitation upon the tenure of said appointee, nor as a sequestration of the funds for the payment of particular salaries stipulated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 2, 1919.

HON. H. W. KUNTZ, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of April 2, 1919, asking for my opinion upon the state of facts set forth in a communication received by you from the sheriff of Muskingum county, and certain journal entries from the court dockets of your county accompanied by your ruling upon the question presented.

The communications are somewhat lengthy, and therefore not set forth in full herein, but such as are essential to be considered in a determination of the question involved are as follows:

The appointment of two deputy sheriffs and the approval of their appointment by the judge of the common pleas court as evidenced by entries appearing at Vol. 59, page 87 of the journal of the court, the entries being in the following form:

'IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO.

Appointment of Deputy Sheriff — JOURNAL ENTRY
February 10, 1919.

THE STATE OF OHIO, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, SS: Vol 59, page 87.

To All To Whom These Presents Shall Come, Greeting:

Know Ye, that by virtue of the authority vested in me by the constitution and laws of the state of Ohio, and reposing special trust and confidence in Wm. A. McFarland, a duly qualified elector of said county, I do appoint him to be a deputy sheriff for said county, to serve during my term of office, unless otherwise ordered.

(Signed) Harvey Garrett,
Sheriff of Muskingum County.

The above appointment approved this 6th day of January, 1919.
C. C. Lemmert,
Judge, Common Pleas Court of Muskingum County, Ohio."

The entry appointing O. E. Bradford and the approval of the court is in the same form as in the case of the appointment of Wm. A. McFarland, supra.

Your communication next discloses that the county commissioners upon application of the sheriff allowed for deputy and clerk hire for the year 1919 the sum of $1,540.00, which was the maximum authorized under the provisions of section 2980-1 G. C. and that thereafter the sheriff filed an application in the court of common pleas of Muskingum county for an additional allowance for deputy and clerk hire for said year; that the county commissioners were duly notified of the pendency of said application and filed their answer approving of the allowance prayed for; that said matter then came on for hearing to the court and was adjudicated as evidenced by the entry appearing at Vol. 59, page 115 of the journal as follows:

"IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO.

Ohio ex rel. Harvey Garrett, Sheriff, etc., Plaintiff, vs. The Board of County Commissioners, Muskingum County, Ohio, Defendant.	Case No. 18264, Vol. 59, page 115, February 28, 1919.

ENTRY.

This day this cause came on to be heard upon the application of the plaintiff and the answer of the defendant and the evidence and the court being fully advised in the premises, finds that the said defendant has had due and legal notice of the pendency and prayer of the said application and have entered their consent thereto. The court further finds that the allowance of $1,540.00 made by the said county commissioners for the compensation of deputies and clerk in the said office, is not sufficient to maintain the necessary deputies and clerk in said office, and the court finds that it is necessary in order to conduct the duties of said office, that the said sheriff have two deputies for the months of February and January on a salary of $110.00 a month; and one deputy for the balance of the year 1919 on a salary of $110.00 a month; one clerk during the entire year at a salary of $60.00 a month and one pound keeper during the entire year at a salary of $15.00 a month.

The court further finds that it is necessary that the said sheriff have at his disposal for the payment of compensation of the deputies and clerk in his said office, the sum of $2,440.00 of which the county commissioners have heretofore allowed the sum of $1,540.00.

It is therefore by the court ordered, adjudged and decreed, that the said sheriff be allowed by the county commissioners for the purpose of paying deputies and clerks of the said office during the year 1919."

It is further disclosed by your communication that both the deputy sheriffs so appointed are still acting, and neither of them have been discharged by the sheriff; and that on March 31, 1919, the sheriff certified the following payroll to the county auditor:

"Wm. A. McFarland, for services as deputy sheriff for the month of March.....$110.00

O. E. Bradford, for services as deputy sheriff for the month of March.....$110.00

Miss Rinehart, for services as clerk, for the month of March.....$60.00"

The sheriff's communication further recites:

"Said auditor gave to Wm. A. McFarland and to Miss Rinehart, their vouchers, and the same have been paid. The auditor refused and still refuses to O. E. Bradford, his voucher in the sum of $110.00 for his services as such deputy for the month of March.

What right, if any, has said auditor to refuse the said voucher to O. E. Bradford, when he has not been discharged by me as such deputy sheriff, and when there are still ample funds with which to pay him, to my credit in the sheriff's funds?"

The foregoing discloses the question to be determined as well as the way it has arisen.

I have carefully examined your opinion accompanying the papers submitted with your communication and find myself in accord with the conclusion which you have reached.

Section 2830 G. C. provides for the appointment of deputy sheriffs, and is as follows:

"The sheriff may appoint in writing one or more deputies. If such appointment is approved by a judge of the court of common pleas of the sub-division in which the county of the sheriff is situated, such approval at the time it is made, shall be indorsed on such writing by the judge. Thereupon, such writing and indorsement shall be filed by the sheriff with the clerk of his county, who shall duly enter it upon the journal of such court. The clerk's fees therefor shall be paid by the sheriff. Each deputy so appointed shall be a qualified elector of such county. No justice of the peace or mayor shall be appointed such deputy."

The copies of the entries which you have furnished me indicate a substantial compliance with the provisions of said section in the appointment of the two deputy sheriffs named in the entries, and the statement of facts recites that both of said deputies are still acting and neither has been discharged by the sheriff. The sheriff's application to the court for an allowance of deputy and clerk hire in addition to the previous allowance by the commissioners, as evidenced by the copy submitted, appears in proper form to invoke the jurisdiction of the court for that purpose, and the transcript from the record of the proceeding discloses that by the notice and the answer of the board of commissioners, the matter properly came on for hearing, and the entry of the court's action thereon discloses a finding by the court that the allowance made by the commissioners in the sum of $1,540.00 is not sufficient to maintain the necessary deputies and clerk in the office of the sheriff, and

"The court further finds that it is necessary that the said sheriff have at his disposal for the payment of compensation of the deputies and clerk in his said office the sum of $2,440.00 of which the county commissioners have heretofore allowed the sum of $1,540.00.

It is therefore by the court ordered, adjudged and decreed, that the said sheriff be allowed by the county commissioners for the purpose of paying deputies and clerks of the said office during the year, 1919."

So much of the entry indicates a finding by the court of the necessity for allowance for additional clerk and deputy hire in the sum of $900.00, and an order therefor, although a reading of the last paragraph of the entry suggests a possible typographical omission of proper language to complete the sense and purport of the paragraph, by way of stipulation of the amount found by the court. However, the effect of the language is such as to indicate the court's order allowing the sum of $900.00 in addition to that theretofore allowed by the county commissioners.

Other language of the entry requires consideration and undoubtedly has raised the doubt in the auditor's mind which led to his refusal to issue voucher to one of the deputies, and is as follows:

"and the court finds that it is necessary in order to conduct the duties of said office, that the said sheriff have two deputies for the months of February and January on a salary of $110.00 a month; and one deputy for the balance of the year, 1919, on a salary of $110.00 a month."

Thus the question is raised as to the competency of such finding by the court as a limitation upon the previous appointment by the sheriff of the two deputies during the term of the sheriff, and the general approval of the court of such appointments.

In this connection it is to be noted, of course, that the particular subject before the court in the matter of the sheriff's application for additional funds was that disclosed by the application, and that the issue was not changed by the answer of the commissioners or other procedure in the case, and to the extent that the court found a necessity for allowance of additional funds for deputy and clerk hire and so ordered, I am of the opinion that the allowance is available to the sheriff without the limitation imposed in the portion of the recitals from the entry last above set out, and imposing a direction as to tenure of service of the deputies.

The essential and governing factors are the appointment of deputies by the sheriff and the approval thereof by the court, the allowance and availibility of funds for deputy and clerk hire and the continued service by the deputies in the office of the sheriff, which seem to satisfy the requirements of the law for entitling the deputies to receive their proper vouchers, and I therefore hold in concurrence with the conclusion reached by yourself, that it is the duty of the auditor to issue a proper voucher upon available funds to the credit of the sheriff for deputy and clerk hire, pursuant to the authorization evidenced by the appointment of the deputies by the sheriff and approval thereof by the court, and that likewise it would be the duty of the treasurer to honor the voucher so to be issued.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHEN SCHOOL JANITORS CAN AND CANNOT COLLECT SALARY FOR DAYS SCHOOL CLOSED ON ACCOUNT OF EPIDEMIC * * * BONDS CAN BE ISSUED TO FUND OBLIGATIONS WHICH ARE EXISTING, VALID AND BINDING AT THE TIME THE TAX LIMITATION REACHED.

1. School janitors cannot collect salary for days on which no service was rendered, where schools have been closed by the board of health on account of epidemic.

2. Boards of education can issue bonds under 5656 G. C. to fund obligations which are existing, valid and binding at the time, though the tax limitation may have been reached.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 2, 1919.

HON. W. W. BECK, Prosecuting Attorney, Lisbon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following two questions:

> "Is the board of education liable for salary of a janitor employed by resolution for the school term at a stated salary per month, during the period the schools are closed on account of an epidemic?
> Can the board of education under 5656 G. C. when the limitation has already been reached issue bonds for payment of money for items mentioned in said section?"

Answering your first question it may be said that school janitors (while presumed to be on duty on the days when teachers are there) are not provided for in the law, as teachers are, in case of epidemic and closing of schools, for section 7690 reads:

> "Each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. It may appoint a superintendent of the public schools, truant officers, and janitors and fix their salaries. If deemed esssential for the best interest of the schools of the district, under proper rules and regulations, the board may appoint a superintendent of buildings, and such other employes as it deems necessary, and fix their salaries; provided, that if the board has adopted an annual appropriation resolution as provided by section 4752-1 of this act, then it may, by general resolution, authorize the superintendent to appoint truant officers and the director or other officer having the powers and duties of a director, to appoint janitors, superintendents of buildings and such other employes, as may be provided for in such annual appropriation resolution. Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made. Teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other public calamity."

Teachers are paid during such closing of schools because the statute makes it mandatory. As regards other employes the board has full control and management and "fixes their salaries." So the janitors come within the class of drivers of school vehicles used for transportation where such employment is by the month. In opinion No. 68 issued by this department on February 25, 1919, it was held that the drivers were entitled to the full term of the contract except for such days as school was prevented from opening by the order of the health authorities.

In arriving at such conclusion after a full discussion and citation of authorities it was held:

"* * * neither party can restrain the act of God or the act of governmental authority by process of law, the health officials not being subservient to either of the parties in question, but above the board of education and the driver in questions of epidemic and the physical well-being of a community where their authority is absolute in these matters. The board of health is a legal governmental authority and their acts in closing schools during the recent epidemic of influenza was an act of officials under the law. The authorities seem to be agreed that this relieves parties from the obligations of contracts * * *."

"The rule seems to be unanimous that unless there is some statutory provision to the contrary, recovery may be had on a quantum meruit basis for services performed where part performance is excused on account of sickness or otherwise. So that in this case the board of education was compelled to close the schools by the order of the board of health. The driver was prevented from performing his services by the order of the board of health and neither is at fault. The driver is excused from performing and the board is excused from paying. It was within the power of the driver to contract in relation to this emergency. As far as teachers are concerned, the law makes the contract for them by declaring that 'teachers shall be paid during the time the schools are closed on account of an epidemic.' No such provision is contained in our laws in relation to drivers."

The same reasons for opinion No. 68, bearing on school drivers who did not perform on certain days due to order of the board of health, would apply to school janitors, except that there might be cases in which the janitor did work at the school building though the school was closed, or if an epidemic were prevalent at a time when weather was severe and it was absolutely necessary that the building be heated to care for pipes and plumbing. In such cases the board should consider the services that might have been rendered by the janitor though schools were closed, for the board has control of employes and their compensation (section 7690 G. C.), but if no services were rendered on certain days during an epidemic, then the board is not liable for payment for those days.

As to your second question, a board of education can issue bonds under section 5656 G. C. when the tax limitation has been reached, but such bonds must be issued for an existing, valid and binding obligation, as required in section 5658 G. C. which reads:

"No indebtedness of a township, school district or county shall be funded, refunded or extended unless such indebtedness is first determined to be an existing, valid and binding obligation of such township, school district or county by a formal resolution of the trustees, board of education or commissioners thereof, respectively. Such resolution shall state the amount of the existing indebtedness to be funded, refunded or extended, the aggregate amount of bonds to be issued therefor, their number and denomination, the date of their maturity, the rate of interest they shall bear and the place of payment of principal and interest."

On the two questions submitted, then, the opinion of the Attorney-General is:

(1) School janitors cannot collect salary for days on which no service was rendered, where schools have been closed by the board of health on account of epidemic.

(2) Boards of education can issue bonds under 5656 G. C. to fund obligations which are existing, valid and binding at the time, though the tax limitation may have been reached.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-Geueral.

JUSTICE OF PEACE—MAY NOT REMIT A PENALTY—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO SUSPEND SENTENCE AFTER COMMITMENT.

A justice of the peace may not remit a penalty imposed by him and order a person sentenced to a term of imprisonment to be released after such sentence has gone into execution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 2, 1919.

HON. CHARLES R. SARGENT, Prosecuting Attorney, Jefferson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of March 6, 1919, requesting my opinion as follows:

"I would appreciate your advice on the following situation. Upon conviction in justice court of a misdemeanor, the defendant was sentenced to one hundred and eighty days in the county jail and a fine of fifty dollars and costs.

The man was committed to the county jail. After serving two months of his time, the justice of the peace on an order issued by him, purported to put the defendant on probation and suspend the execution of the sentence. The justice of the peace claimed authority to take this action under the provision of section 13711 G. C.

I have held in my advice to the sheriff that the justice of the peace had no authority to suspend sentence and place a man on probation after he had committed the defendant to the county jail to commence his sentence. That is, I held that the justice of the peace lost jurisdiction. In your opinion am I correct in so holding? I would appreciate your advice as this is a situation which will probably arise again in the near future in another matter."

Section 13711 G. C., to which you refer, is as follows:

"When the sentence of the court or magistrate is that the defendant be imprisoned in a workhouse, jail, or other institution, except the penitentiary or the reformatory, or that the defendant be fined and committed until such fine be paid, the court or magistrate may suspend the execution of said sentence and place the defendant on probation, and in charge of a probation officer named in such order, in the following manner:

1. In case of sentence to a workhouse, jail or other correctional institution, the court or magistrate may suspend the execution of the sentence and direct that such suspension continue for such time, not exceeding two years, and upon such terms and conditions as it shall determine;

2. In case of a judgment of imprisonment until a fine is paid, the court may direct that the execution of the sentence be suspended on such terms as it may determine and shall place the defendant on probation to the end that said defendant may be given the opportunity to pay such fine within a reasonable time; provided, that upon payment of such fine, judgment shall be satisfied and the probation cease."

It is held in Lee v. State, 32 O. S., 113:

"Where a court, in passing sentence for a misdemeanor, has acted under a misapprehension of the facts necessary and proper to be known in fixing the amount of the penalty, it may, in the exercise of judicial discretion and in furtherance of justice, at the same term, and before the original sentence has gone into operation or any action has been had upon it, revise and increase or diminish such sentence within the limits authorized by law."

The rule so announced in the Lee case, supra, was quoted with approval in the case of Tracy, et al. v. State, 8 O. C. C. (n. s.), 357, where the court said:

"This rule is established beyond controversy by the case of Lee v. State, 32 O. S., 113, * * *."

While upon authority of the statute above quoted as well as judicial decisions of the State, notably, Weber v. State, 58 O. S. 616, and the recent unreported case of State v. Whiting, 83 O. S. 447, the power of courts and magistrates to suspend the execution of sentences pronounced in cases properly pending before them, is well established, and further that such tribunals may modify their judgments when the jurisdiction is properly invoked in that regard, in conformity with the doctrine of the Lee case, supra, yet the authority to recall or remit a sentence after the same has been put into execution raises an entirely different question.

In an opinion of my predecessor reported at page 1979 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, it was said:

"It is well to suggest that the two words "remit" and "suspend" cannot be used synonymously, and that a justice of the peace can only remit a fine or a sentence before the same has gone into operation or any action taken thereon, and then only within the limits authorized by law. In other words, it is only before the execution of a sentence has begun that a justice may amend, revise or vacate it and render a new sentence, which must impose at least the minimum penalty provided by law in such case."

In another opinion of this department found at page 431 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, in answer to an inquiry as to the authority of mayors or justices of the peace to remit fines in cases brought for violation of the statutes, it was said:

"In reply thereto, I advise you that former Attorney-General, Hon. Wade H. Ellis, was asked the same question by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, and on October 24, 1907, gave his opinion thereon, holding that there is no authority for a mayor to remit any fines due the state of Ohio.

In concluding his opinion Mr. Ellis stated:

'In the foregoing no question is made as to the authority of a mayor to revise or modify his judgment in any such cases by proper preceedings for such purpose.'

I approve this opinion, found on page 161 of the Attorney-General's reports for the year 1907."

And again, in an opinion of this department found at page 685 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1915, my predecessor advised with reference to the power of a magistrate or mayor in the remission of a sentence:

"In no case can he remit a fine due to the state of Ohio. Neither can the magistrate, or mayor, impose or collect a fine less in amount than the minimum fine fixed by the statutes. The magistrate or mayor has no authority to disregard the express provisions of the statutes as to the amount of the fines he shall impose."

These various opinions were reviewed and again approved in the later opinion of October 3, 1917, found at page 1841 of the Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1917.

While the power of courts and magistrates to suspend the execution of sentences at the time of pronouncing the same was not questioned, but was expressly affirmed and recognized in the discussion of my predecessors in the opinions above cited, yet it was held that such power was not a continuing one to be invoked or exercised after the sentence had been put into execution.

I quote further from the opinion first above cited:

"The latter part of your first inquiry and the whole of your last are limited to the question of the right of a justice of the peace, after execution of sentence has begun and the defendant is confined in the jail or workhouse, to suspend the remainder of such sentence. The authority to so suspend a sentence under such circumstances is one of great doubt, and while supported by some courts the tendency of modern decisions is against it. It seems now to be the prevailing opinion that after a court has sentenced a prisoner, and execution of said sentence has begun, the court has lost all jurisdiction. This conclusion may be due to the fact that under our recent statutory laws ample provisions for parole and other similar measures have been made, which, to a great extent, supply the loss of such authority by the trial court.

In the case of State v. Perrill, 59 Law Bulletin, 371, it was held that after a sentence to the penitentiary or reformatory the entire jurisdiction and control of the prisoner rests with the board of management of those institutions. The opinion of the court in this case may with equal reason be applied to the case presented by your inquiry.

As before noted, county commissioners have authority to parole prisoners confined in the county jail for non-payment of fines and costs, and county auditors may discharge prisoners under like circumstances upon proof of insolvency. Workhouse directors are also authorized under their general powers to parole prisoners. In view of these considerations I incline to the opinion that justices of the peace do not have a continuing jurisdiction and therefore cannot modify, change or suspend any sentence imposed by them after the same has gone into effect and the prisoner has been committed to a county jail or workhouse and thereby placed under the control of other authority."

The doctrine that courts have control over the judgments and records during the term at which they are entered, has been applied to the matter of suspension of sentence in a criminal case by the court of appeals of Mahoning county, in the recent case of Antonio v. Milliken, Sheriff (Law Rep., Feb. 10, 1919), 29 O. C. A. 305. The syllabus is as follows:

"In misdemeanor cases the trial court has power under favor of section 13711, General Code, to suspend, in whole or in part, the execution of a sentence, at any time during the term at which sentence was passed, even though the defendant had entered upon the imprisonment ordered by the sentence."

A reading of the opinion discloses that this court considers the fact of sentence having gone into execution as not determinative of the power to modify or suspend, but rather that the power is co-extensive with the term of court.

It is pointed out in the opinion that the municipal court of Youngstown is a court having statutory terms and several cases are cited in support of the doctrine that the control over its records and judgments abides with the court during the term. The following is quoted as indicative of the court's reasoning:

"The statute provides that the municipal court of the city of Youngstown shall have four terms of court each year, beginning on the first day of January and continue for a period of three months each, so that it is clearly disclosed that the charge, sentence, commitment and the order for release were all made during the first term of said municipal court in this year A. D. 1918; therefore, there is no question but that the court sought to modify or suspend the sentence during the term at which the judgment was entered."

Again the court points out that the limitation upon said power is one arising solely from the limit of the term.

"The 'time limit' has been held to be the term at which judgment is entered and this for the chief reason that after term time a record is presumed to have been made of all orders and judgments of the preceding term; that such record is complete, and the term having been adjourned, formally or by operation of law, the record imports absolute verity and is unalterable except as specifically provided by law."

The court's conclusion is announced as follows:

"Therefore, for the reasons above given, and upon the theory that a court has control over its judgments and orders during the term at which they are made, the judge of the municipal court had a right in the case at bar to direct the release of the prisoner."

It is considered that the holding in the above case is hardly applicable to the case of a justice of the peace court, or effective to alter the rule announced in the previous opinions of this department above noted, for the reason that a justice of the peace has no "terms of court," and it could not be said that the power is to be exercised without time limitation. In fact, it has been judicially determined that inferior courts having no terms do not come within the purview of the statutes or the common law rule recognizing the authority of courts of general jurisdiction over their records during term time.

The case of In re Blake, 14 O. D. 89, involved the power of the probate court of Franklin county to vacate its former judgment of commitment of a person to the children's home, during the same term. Bigger, J., in considering the question, observed that the child had been regularly and legally committed to the custody of the superintendent of the children's home and therefore his custody is lawful unless the subsequent order of the probate court is valid, by which the court undertook to modify and suspend its judgment previously entered.

The first branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "Since the probate court is a court of limited jurisdiction, having no terms except as provided by statute, the doctrine that courts of general jurisdiction, having terms, have power to vacate or modify their judgments during the term does not apply to it, and it has no power to set aside or modify its judgments legally entered except as authorized by statute."

Again the court said:

> "The probate court having no terms, except for the purposes provided by statute, and being a court of limited jurisdiction, does not seem to be empowered to set aside or modify its judgment legally entered, except as it is authorized to do so by statute.
>
> * * * * * * * * * * * * *
> The doctrine that courts of general jurisdiction have control over their judgments during the term and may vacate and modify them, can not be made to apply to the probate court, it being open at all times and having no terms."

The determination of the case was made in the following language:

> "Where a minor child has been taken from its parents and committed to a children's home in a regular and legal manner by the probate court under section 3140a, Rev. Stat., such court can not vacate or modify its judgment regularly entered therein except on an application made and rehearing granted after the term under sections 5354 to 5365, Rev. Stat., and an order based upon the application and rehearing before the expiration of the term, as designated in section 5365, Rev. Stat., suspending the former judgment regularly entered and directing the return of the child to its parents, is void and a writ of habeas corpus to regain possession of the child under such order will be refused."

The same view was entertained by the court in Kinsella v. DeCamp, 15 O. C. C. 494. The second branch of the syllabus is as follows:

> "Where a judgment has been rendered or an order made at one term of the court, which has been correctly entered upon the journal, and no motion for a new trial has been filed, but the court, on reflection or otherwise, becomes satisfied that it should not have been made or entered, it may at the same term of the court be vacated by it, under the general power of courts of general jurisdiction to control its judgments during the term at which they were rendered. But this only applies to courts of general jurisdiction which have regular terms."

In pointing out that the power to modify its judgments could not be recognized in courts having no terms, the court said:

> "If the court had a right to do this when it did, and as it did, it would have the right to do it ten years after that time, which would be contrary to settled and acknowledged principles of law, and could not be properly done by any court of general or special jurisdiction without express authority to do it conferred by statute."

In Building & Loan Co. v. Spiegel, et al., 12 O. C. C. 761, the court said, with reference to the jurisdiction of the court of limited jurisdiction, being the probate court in that case:

> "When a matter has been controverted and the court has decided the question, and the judgment of the court has been correctly placed on the journal, it is final as to the power of the court to change, except as pointed out by the statute."

In Kingsborough v. Tousley, 56 O. S. 450, the court, in considering the statutes providing for modification or vacation of judgments (Sections 5354 to 5360 R. S.) said:

> "Neither in their terms nor in their nature are these provisions of the statutes applicable to justices courts."

From what has been said I conclude that the general power to suspend the execution of sentence, or modify judgments during the term at which they are entered, is not an attribute of the courts of limited and special jurisdiction and without terms, such as justices of the peace, and therefore I advise that in the case presented in your inquiry the justice of the peace was without authority to issue the order in question.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CLAIMS FOR LABOR, LEASING OF MACHINERY AND TOOLS AND PURCHASE OF MATERIAL—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ALLOW BILLS UPON CERTIFICATE OF COUNTY SURVEYOR—COUNTY AUDITOR WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ISSUE HIS WARRANT UNLESS ABOVE PROCEDURE COMPLIED WITH.

Claims arising under the action of the county surveyor, in the employment of labor, the leasing of machinery and tools, and the purchase of material, under the provisions of section 7198 G. C., must be allowed by the county commissioners, as provided for in section 2460 G. C., and the county auditor is not authorized in law to issue his warrant in favor of the claimants, without the county commissioners first having allowed said claims.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 3, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of April 18, 1919, which reads as follows:

> "We respectfully request your written opinion upon the following matter: When the county commissioners authorize the county surveyor to employ laborers, etc., and to purchase material in the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance or repair of roads, bridges and culverts, as provided by section 7198 G. C., as amended, 107 O. L., 115, can the auditor issue warrant for the labor and materials, etc., upon the certificate of the county surveyor, or must these bills be allowed by the county commissioners before payment?"

The section principally to be considered in answering your question is section 2460 G. C., which reads as follows:

> "No claims against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, upon the warrant of the county auditor, except in those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, or is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, in which case it shall be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the claim. No public money shall be disbursed by the county commissioners, or any of them, but shall be disbursed by the county treasurer, upon the warrant of the county auditor, specifying the name of the party entitled thereto, on what account, and upon whose allowance, if not fixed by law."

The question is as to whether claims against the county, of the nature set out in your communication, might come within the exceptions set out in section 2460 G. C. There are two exceptions to the general rule that no claim against the county shall be paid otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners, and they are (1) those cases in which the amount due is fixed by law, and (2) those claims in which the amount due is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal. If the claims can be brought within one of the other of these two exceptions, then they may be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor, upon the proper certificate of the person or tribunal allowing the same, without the necessity of having the same allowed by the county commissioners. Keeping in mind the provisions of this section, let us turn to the provisions of section 7198, 107 O. L., 115, with a view to ascertaining whether the claims which arise under and by virtue of said section might be brought within the exception, as set forth in section 2460 G. C. Section 7198 G. C. reads as follows:

> "The county surveyor may when authorized by the county commissioners employ such laborers and teams, lease such implements and tools and purchase such material as may be necessary in the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance or repair of roads, bridges and culverts by force account."

From a mere reading of this section it is quite evident that we can eliminate from our consideration the first of the exceptions above noted, for the reason that section 7198 does not at all fix the amount due on claims arising under this section. The only question, then, to be considered, is as to whether the claims arising under section 7198 G. C. might be such as could be brought within the second exception, above noted; that is, that the claims arising under section 7198 G. C. are such that the amount due for the same is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal than the county commissioners. Section 7198 gives the county surveyor, when authorized by the county commissioners so to do, power to "employ such laborers and teams, lease such implements and tools and purchase such material as may be necessary in the construction, reconstruction, improvement, maintenance or repair of roads, bridges and culverts by force account." It can be said, at least, that this section does not specifically authorize the county commissioners to confer power upon the county surveyor to fix the prices at which laborers are to be employed and material purchased. If this power may be authorized by the county commissioners, it must be inferred from the power given the county surveyor to employ laborers and to lease implements and to purchase material. In order to ascertain whether such power might be inferred from the powers granted in said section, it might be well for us to note the trend of the decisions of our courts in reference to this matter.

In State of Ohio ex rel. v. Ratterman, 3 C. C., p. 626, the court was passing upon a question somewhat similar to the one we are considering. In this case the court was placing a construction upon section 2928 R. S., which authorized the sheriff to "provide at the expense of the county, a sufficient number of ballot boxes for use in said county" and providing further that "said ballot boxes shall not cost more than $25.00 each." The sheriff purchased a number of ballot boxes and certified to the correctness of the bill for the same, which claim against the county was not presented to the county commissioners for allowance, but was directly presented to the county auditor with the request that he issue his warrant in favor of the party furnishing the ballot boxes. The court held in the syllabus as follows:

> "The auditor of Hamilton county was not authorized by law, to issue, on the certificate of the sheriff of said county, not approved by the board of county commissioners thereof, a warrant upon the treasurer for the amount of a bill claimed to be due for ballot boxes furnished by such sheriff under the provisions of section 2928, Rev. Stat. And a mandamus will not be issued against the treasurer at the instance of the holder of such warrant, requiring him to pay the same, on his refusal to do so."

In the opinion, on page 628, the court uses the following reasoning:

> "It is manifest that the amount to be paid for the ballot boxes, when procured by the sheriff under the provisions of section 2928, is not 'fixed by law.' Neither the number of them, or the price to be paid therefor, is so determined. A sufficient number is to be provided, and the price is not to exceed $25.00 each. It only remains then to determine whether under this section, the sheriff is authorized definitely to determine the number which will be sufficient, and to fix the amount to be paid for them, and to allow the claim therefor. If so, the auditor was right in drawing his warrant for the amount, and the treasurer is bound to pay it. But it is clear that the statute under consideration does not in express terms confer any such power upon the sheriff. If he has the right, it can only be implied from the authority conferred upon him to procure the necessary number, at a price not to exceed that named in the statute.

For good and sufficient reasons it is the policy of our statutes upon this subject, that the management of the official affairs of the county should be entrusted to a board elected by the people for that purpose, and that as a general rule, no claim shall be allowed against the county, unless first submitted to and approved by them, and unless their decision is appealed from or otherwise reviewed by the courts."

It occurs to me that the statute upon which the court was placing a construction in this case was more favorable to the point that a county auditor might issue his warrant in payment of a claim against the county, without the county commissioners first allowing the same, than are the provisions of section 7198 G. C.

In State of Ohio ex rel. vs. McConnell, auditor of Hardin County, 28 C. S., 569, the court was placing a construction upon the section of the statutes which reads as follows:

"The county commissioners shall furnish to the clerk of the courts of their respective counties all blank books, blanks, stationery and all other things necessary to the prompt discharge of their duties, all of which articles the clerks may themselves procure and shall be allowed and paid for upon their certificate."

Here is language very similar to the language which we have under consideration. If anything, it is also more favorable to the proposition that claims arising thereunder might be paid without first submitting them to the county commissioners for allowances, than is the language of section 7198 G. C. The clerks were authorized not only to procure the necessary supplies, but the section also provided that the bills arising thereunder should be allowed and paid for upon the certificates of the clerks, while section 7198 G. C. merely authorizes the county surveyor to employ and procure, but makes no provision whatever in reference to the claims arising under and by virtue of his acts as to whether they might be paid upon his certificate. The court in this case held, in the syllabus, as follows:

"Clerks of courts in the several counties of this state are not authorized by law to fix conclusively the amounts which shall be paid by their county for blanks, or other things necessary to the prompt discharge of their duties, which they may have procured.

Therefore, where a claim or account against a county for blanks furnished on the order of such clerk is presented to the county auditor, which account has been certified by the clerk to be correct, but has not been allowed by the county commissioners, it is not the legal duty of such auditor, on demand made, to draw his warrant on the treasurer of his county in favor of the claimant for the amount of such account."

In the opinion on page 594 the court uses the following language:

"Has the relator a right to demand payment of his account without first obtaining its allowance by the county commissioners? We think not. The statute does not in terms authorize the clerk, on behalf of the county, to fix the price to be paid from its treasury for the articles procured by him. Nor do we think the authority to procure the articles necessarily implies a power to bind the county to pay whatever price he may think proper. He may procure them on his own responsibility, or he may agree that the county shall pay for them whatever they are reasonably worth; and in either case, if they be articles necessary to the prompt discharge of his duties as clerk, he may thereby create a liability or obligation on the part of the proper county officers to allow and pay a fair and reasonable price for them. But we are not satisfied that the certificate of the clerk, in such a case, was intended to be evidence of anything more than the fact that the articles for which payment is demanded from the county were procured by him, for the purpose of being used in the discharge of his official duties. Suppose the clerk is a stationer or printer, and furnishes his own stationery or blanks. Is his certificate to be conclusive evidence to the auditor that the prices charged by him for such articles are fair and just?"

Further along in the opinion the court say:

"It is true that the statute requires that articles of a certain kind, when procured by the clerk, shall be allowed and paid for upon his certificate. But this mandatory form of expression is not inconsistent with the intention that the persons or tribunal allowing the claim should exercise such judgment and discretion, in regard to the amount proper to be paid, as an act of allowance necessarily implies."

The findings of the courts in the two cases herein noted are clearly against the idea that claims arising under the acts of the county surveyor, as provided in section 7198 G. C., might be honored by the county auditor and warrants issued in favor of the parties holding the same, without their first having been presented to the county commissioners for allowance. The court in State of Ohio ex rel. vs. McConnell, supra, held as follows:

"A power so liable to great abuse ought not to be raised by doubtful implication. To justify its recognition, the terms which confer it should be clear and unmistakable."

It can hardly be said that the language used in section 7198 G. C. is clear and unmistakable to the point that the county surveyor has authority to fix the amounts to be paid under the different provisions of said section and have the same paid upon his certificate.

There is another thing to which I desire to call attention in reference to the matter about which you inquire. The one exception in section 2460 is to the effect that if the amount due is authorized to be fixed by some other person or tribunal, then the county commissioners are not required to pass upon the claim. What body is to give the authority to fix the price at which articles may be purchased? Is the authority to come from the legislature itself or may it come from some body or tribunal other than the legislature? The power conferred upon the county surveyor, under section 7198 G. C., comes not from the legislature, but from the county commissioners. In State of Ohio ex rel. vs. McConnell the court uses language which would seem to imply that the principle enunciated in section 2460 G. C. would not apply excepting in those cases where the authority to fix prices is granted by the legislature. On page 591 of the opinion the court say:

"It can, then, only be paid on the allowance of the county commissioners, unless 'some other person or tribunal' has been authorized by law to fix the amount, and has accordingly so fixed, allowed, and duly certified the same."

If this language were given its full import and meaning, it is quite evident that the only body which could grant such authority to an officer or tribunal to fix prices would be the legislature itself. But when we consider the nature of the case which the court had before it, it is possible that such a construction should not be placed upon the language of the court. But at any rate, I am of the opinion that this principle should prevail, that inasmuch as the legislature has seen fit to delegate power to the county commissioners, to authorize the county surveyor to transact certain business which otherwise would have to be transacted by the county commissioners themselves, the power or authority granted to the county commissioners should be limited to the exact language of the statutes, and inasmuch as the statute does not delegate power to the county commissioners to authorize the county surveyor to fix the prices absolutely at which he will employ labor and lease machinery and tools and purchase material, the county commissioners could not assume this power. That is, the county commissioners could not authorize the county surveyor to do the things set out in section 7198 G. C., and also grant him power to fix the prices at which the different things might be procured, with a view to bringing it within the exception set forth in section 2460 G. C. In other words, the power delegated to the county commissioners must be limited strictly to the matters set out in section 7198 G. C.

Of course the county surveyor, in the first instance, no doubt, would be compelled to fix a price at which he would employ labor, lease machinery and tools and purchase material. But this was so in the case in which the sheriff was given the authority to purchase ballot boxes at a price not to exceed $25.00 each, and also in the case where the county clerks were given authority to procure the necessary stationery, etc., for their office. So, notwithstanding the fact that the county surveyor has, in the first instance, the right to fix the price at which the different things may be secured under section 7198 G. C., the county commissioners, nevertheless, have the final right and duty, under section 2460 G. C., to pass upon the claims so arising under the acts of the county surveyor, and the county auditor would not be authorized to issue his warrant in favor of claimants against the county, merely upon the certificate or requisition of the county surveyor.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—SEWER CONSTRUCTED IN PUBLIC STREET BENEATH TRACKS OF RAILWAY COMPANY CROSSING SUCH STREET—WHO LIABLE FOR SUPPORTS WHILE SEWER IS BEING CONSTRUCTED.

When a municipality constructs, in an ordinarily careful manner, a sewer within the limits of a public street in such municipality, and beneath the tracks of a railway company crossing such street, the duty of furnishing supports for such tracks, if necessary while the sewer is being constructed thereunder, rests with the railway company and not with the municipality.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices.

GENTLEMEN:—You have requested the opinion of this department upon the following:

> "A municipality in a sewer construction improvement runs such sewer beneath the existing tracks of a railroad company necessitating considerable work which had to be done to support the tracks of such railway company above the sewer.
> Is the city or the railroad company obligated to bear expense in connection with the work of supporting these tracks owing to the sewer?"

Inquiry of your bureau, through letters and personal interviews, has developed the fact that your question is the outgrowth of a certain expenditure made by the city of Youngstown in connection with sewer construction beneath the tracks of a railroad company, the validity of which expenditure has been questioned by one of your examiners. Because of this circumstance, your bureau desires an opinion for its future guidance in like matters.

The control of municipalities over streets is made a matter of statute in Ohio. Section 3714 G. C. reads as follows:

> "Section 3714. Municipal corporations shall have special power to regulate the use of the streets, to be exercised in the manner provided by law. The council shall have the care, supervision and control of public highways, streets, avenues, alleys, sidewalks, public grounds, bridges, aqueducts and viaducts, within the corporation, and shall cause them to be kept open, in repair, and free from nuisance."

The authority of municipal corporations to construct sewers is found in section 3647 G. C., appearing in the chapter devoted to enumeration of powers. Said section reads in part:

> "Section 3647. To open, construct and keep in repair sewage disposa works, sewers, drains and ditches, * * *."

It is well settled in Ohio that the construction of sewers in a street, in pursuance of the power thus given, is not an added use or servitude and does not require additional compensation. In the case of Cincinnati v. Penny, 21 O. S. 499, decided in 1872, the fourth branch of the syllabus reads:

> "Under the laws of this state, sewerage is one of the legitimate uses to which the public streets and alleys of the city of Cincinnati may be appropriated by its municipal authorities."

In the case of Elster v. Springfield, 49 O. S. 82, the court say in the course of the opinion (pp. 96-97):

> "The laying of sewers, like that of gas and water pipes beneath the soil, and the erection of lamps and hitching posts, etc., upon the surface, is a street use, sanctioned as such by their obvious purposes, and long continued usage, and that such is one of the legitimate uses to which a street may be devoted is distinctly held by this court in Cincinnati v. Penny, 21 Ohio St. 499. For such purpose, it would seem that the right of the municipality in the street could not be inferior to the right of a private owner over his own land. If the title comes by appropriation, all right to damages by reason of the acquisition of the land for street uses, in favor of abutting owners, must be held to have been taken into the account and compensation therefor awarded in the original taking, and, if by dedication, the same result would follow as an incident of the grant. That a city's power over its streets for legitimate street purposes is as great as that of a private individual over his own land, is recognized in Nevins v. Peoria, 41 Ill. 502; Dixon v. Baker, 85 Ill. 518; Yearney v. Smith, 86 Ill. 391, and appears to be sustained by sufficient reason. It necessarily follows that for all such public uses the right of the municipality is paramount to any property right of the abutting owner in the street. Dillon on Munic. Corp., section 656."

Again, in the case of City v. Bristor, 76 O. S. 270, the Penny case, supra, is given (at p. 277 of the opinion) as authority for the statement that "the construction of a public sewer in the streets is an authorized use of the streets."

Judge Dillon thus states the rule (Municipal Corp., 5th Ed., Sec. 1148):

> "The construction of sewers is a lawful use of the street as against an abutting proprietor, whether the fee of the street be in him, or in the city in trust for street use. Although the fee of the street may be in the abutting proprietor, the use of the street for the purposes of sewers is not the imposition of a new use or servitude entitling the owner of the fee to compensation."

The practical application of the principle that the city may make use of a public street in constructing a sewer may be shown, so far as an abutting or adjoining owner of the fee is concerned, by reference to the case of Keating v. Cincinnati, 38 O. S. 141, and by a further examination of the Penny and Elster cases, above quoted.

In the Keating case, the city, in making a street along a hillside, had so excavated the ground as to cause the land above to slide. Injury resulted to plantiff's lot, which did not abut on the street wherein the excavation was made. Injury was also caused to the buildings of plaintiff on his said lot. The supreme court, at p. 147 of the opinion, quotes the testimony of the city civil engineer, as follows:

> "The cut caused the slip, and we did nothing to stop the slip; I saw it at the time. A retaining wall would be the only way to stop a land slide, to put it in by sections as the cut progressed. We made no wall in front of Keating's lot."

The court further says that it was admitted that the city built no retaining walls opposite any of the property on the avenue at the time in cotroverersy.

Upon such state of facts, the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, and judgment was entered on this verdict. The district court reversed the judgment. The supreme court, in disapproving this action of the district court, first makes reference to earlier Ohio cases based on the rule: "So use your own property as not to injure that of another," and states that the case then under consideration is not one involving mere inconvenience to the owner, leaving the corpus of his property intact, but "is one of the invasion or injury of the property itself;" and then, in concluding its opinion, makes use of the following language at pp. 148-149:

> "The case of Gilmore vs. Driscoll (122 Mass. 199), relied upon by the defendant, fully supports the verdict in this case, and would have warranted the jury in allowing the damages to the improvements as well as to the lands, where the plaintiff is not chargeable with negligence in making them. On page 205, referring to the former case of Foley v. Wyeth, it is said, 'that the right of support from adjoining soil for land in its natural state stands on natural justice, and is essential to the protection and enjoyment of property in the soil, and is a right of property which passes with the soil without any grant for the purpose. It is a necessary consequence from this principle, that for any injury to this soil, resulting from the removal of the natural support to which it is entitled, by means of excavation of an adjoining tract, the owner has a legal remedy in an action at law against the party by whom the work has been done and the mischief thereby occasioned. This does not depend upon negligence or unskillfulness, but upon the violation of a right of property which has been invaded and disturbed. This unqualified rule is limited to injuries caused to the land itself, and does not afford relief for damages by the same means to artificial structures. For an injury to buildings, which is unavoidably incident to the depression or slide of the soil on which they stand, caused by the excavation of a pit on adjoining lands, an action can only be maintained when a want of due care or skill, or positive negligence, has contributed to produce it.'
> It is upon this principle that the City of Cincinnati v. Penny (21 Ohio St. 499) was decided. The city in that case was held exempt from liability for damages to buildings, because it was free from negligence in making the excavation. The same rule of liability from want of proper care and skill is held in City of Quincy v. Jones, 76 Ill. 232.
> The evidence in this case would have warranted the jury in finding that the city failed to exercise such care and skill in making the avenue in question; and hence the judgment of the court of common pleas ought not to have been reversed."

The syllabus in the case reads:

> "A municipal corporation in making a street along a hillside, so excavated the ground in the street as to cause the land above to slide and injure the lot of the plaintiff. Held:
>
> 1. That the fact that the plaintiff's lot did not abut immediately on the street did not exempt the corporation from liability. Its liability did not depend upon the ownership of the injured property, but upon the extent of the injury of which its removal of the lateral support of the hill was the efficient cause.
> 2. That the liability extends to damages to buildings as well as to the land in its natural state, where the owner is not chargeable with negligence in making such improvements, and such damages result from want of due skill and care in making the street."

Recurring to the Penny and Elster cases, supra, we find that in the first of these cases the plaintiff's claim was based on injuries to his dwelling alone, and did not include a claim of injuries to land. It appeared from the special verdict of the jury that plaintiff's building was injured by reason of an excavation about thirteen feet deep, made by the defendant city in constructing a sewer; that plaintiff's foundation was about four feet in the ground and that the defendant city, in making the excavation, had used all reasonable and ordinary care to avoid injury to plaintiff's property. Judgment was rendered for plaintiff in the trial court. The supreme court, in holding such judgment erroneous, say in the course of the opinion at pp. 507-508 (21 O. S.):

> "How, then, stands this case? In 1867, the defendant below constructed a sewer in Borden alley, as it had a right to do; and in doing so it took all reasonable and ordinary care to avoid injury to the plaintiff's property. By making the excavation for the sewer, the lateral support to the plaintiff's house from the street was withdrawn, so that the foundation walls gave way. These foundations walls were suitable for sustaining such a structure at the time the house was built, which was several years before. At the time the house was built, and for many years before that time, Borden alley, by the laws of this state, was in the possession and under the control of the city for the purpose of drainage; and sewerage was a legitimate mode of drainage, within the scope of its authority. Before the plaintiff below built his house, the city had not, in any manner, as far as the record shows, indicated the nature or extent of drainage by sewers or otherwise that would be required for the public use. The plaintiff, without exercising any judgment or discretion as to the reasonable and proper future use of the alley for sewerage purposes, erected his house on a foundation suitable only for sustaining such a structure at that time, and under the then existing condition of the alley. This was his own wrong, and he has no right to complain of an injury from the construction of the sewer (which was built in a proper manner), having neglected on his own part to exercise reasonable precautions against such injury."

The first branch of the syllabus reads:

> "As a general rule, a municipal corporation is not liable for injuries to buildings on lots abutting upon streets and alleys, resulting from the improvement of such streets or alleys, or from their appropriation to a public use, provided its officers and agents, in making such improvements or appropriation, act within the scope of their authority, and without negligence or malice."

In the case of Elster v. Springfield, supra, the facts are stated in detail in the syllabus. Plaintiff was claiming damages against the city because the latter, in constructing a sewer in a street, had removed from the street certain pipes which had been in place for more than twenty-one years and which plaintiff used for the purpose of conveying water from a spring to a manufactory; and further because the excavation of the sewer trench had entirely destroyed the spring. "The pipes were taken up by the city with care, after notice to the plaintiff, at the commencement of the work of excavating for the sewer."

The trial court instructed the jury to return a verdict for defendant city; and in finding this course to have been proper, both as concerned the removal of pipes and consequent interruption of flow of water, and as concerned the destruction of the spring by draining it, the court held, among other things, after stating the facts (1st branch syll.):

"Section 1692, Revised Statutes, gives to cities the power to build sewers, and Center Street being a public street, and sewerage being one of the legitimate uses to which a public street may be devoted, the construction therein of a sewer, if done in a lawful manner, was an authorized use by the city of that street."

If the principles underlying the several cases just discussed were to be applied to the situation existing at the point of the crossing of a municipal street by the tracks of a railroad company, the result would seem to be that the municipality, in constructing a sewer under the tracks, would be liable to the railroad company in damages if in doing the work it injured the right of way by removing the lateral support, and this regardless of the question whether the sewer construction work itself was negligently done; and would further be under the duty of furnishing supports for the tracks, the supreme court having held, in effect, in the Keating case, that the city was negligent in that it failed to erect retaining walls and was liable to the owner for the injury to his building arising from such failure. But, do these principles apply to the situation now being considered; or, on the other hand, are the rights and occupancy of the railway company subject to the rights of the public in the street to the extent that the municipality has a free hand in constructing its sewer and may leave to the railway company the matter of protecting its tracks while the sewer construction work is going on? The precise question does not seem to have had the attention of the courts although many reported cases may be found, relating to the mutual rights of railroads and municipalities in the matter of opening streets across railroad rights of way.

In considering our questions, we need not concern ourselves with the matter of whether the railroad tracks were put across the street, or the street across the tracks by condemnation; for in the one case the railroad company's right to cross is acquired subject to the right of the public to the continuing use of the street for ordinary street purposes (Rockport v. Railroad Co., 85 O. S. 73, 82), and in the other the railroad company is presumed to have been adjudged full compensation and damages for the burdens that may have been thrown upon it by reason of the crossing of the tracks by the street for all ordinary street purposes (Grant v. Village of Hyde Park, 67 O. S. 166; Railway v. Railway, 5 O. C. C. (N. S.) 583, 16 O. C. D. 180). For similar reasons, no importance need be attached to the matter of which of the two public uses came first in point of time—the street or the railroad tracks.

Coming to the question whether one of the limitations or burdens, imposed upon the crossing of a municipal street by the tracks of a railroad company, is a duty on the part of the company to put in supports for its tracks, if necessary to their safety, while the municipality is constructing a sewer beneath them.

In the case of Gas Light & Coke Co. v. Columbus, 50 O. S. 65, the question involved was whether a gas company, which had laid its pipes in a municipal street under authority granted it by defendant city to do so, was entitled to damages because a change in the grade of the street by the city necessitated the abandoning of such pipes and the relaying of others to conform to the new grade. The supreme court held that such a claim might not be maintained. The syllabi read as follows:

"The power to grade and improve streets is conferred upon municipal authorities for the public benefit. It is a continuing power, and is not exhausted by the first exercise of it; nor can it, in the absence of statutory authority, be ceded nor bargained away; nor can one council, by its exercise, abridge the capacity of its successors to perform their duties in that behalf as the public interest may demand.

A gas company laying its pipes in the streets of a city, under a grant from the city, in conformity with an established grade, does so subject to the right of the city to change the grade of the street whenever the necessities of the public require it, and, in the absence of wantonness or negligence on the part of the city, the company cannot maintain an action for damage occasioned by the necessity of taking up and relaying its pipes in order to accommodate them to the new grade."

In the case of Railroad Company v. Defiance (City), 52 O. S. 262, the facts were that in the year 1887 the track of the railway company crossed two municipal streets at about eighteen feet below the street grade, the streets being carried over the track by two wooden bridges. By an ordinance passed in 1887, the city council authorized the railway company to construct new bridges in the place of said wooden bridges. The railway company constructed the new bridges. Six years later, the city council passed ordinances for the improvement of said two streets and ordering the grade thereof changed so that the streets would pass over the track at the same grade as that of the track. The railway company sought to enjoin the enforcement of the terms of said ordinances upon the grounds, among others, that said bridges would be destroyed, the property rights of the railway company impaired, and an additional burden cast on the company in the maintenance of new grade crossings, all without compensation to the company. In holding that the company was not entitled to an injunction, the court stated the following propositions as shown in the fifth, sixth and seventh branches of the syllabus:

"5. The powers conferred on municipal corporations with respect to the opening, improving, and repairing of their streets and public ways, are held in trust for public purposes, and are continuing in their nature, to be exercised from time to time as the public interests may require; and they cannot be granted away, or relinquished, or their exercise suspended, or abridged, except when, and to the extent legislative authority is expressly given to do so; such authority is not given by section 3283, of the Revised Statutes.

6. Every grant in derogation of the right of the public in the free and unobstructed use of the streets, or restrictive of the control of the proper agencies of the municipal body over them, or of the legitimate exercise of their powers in the public interest, will be construed strictly against the grantee, and liberally in favor of the public, and never extended beyond its express terms when not indispensable to give effect to the grant.

7. An ordinance which in terms authorizes a railroad company to erect new bridges of a specified description over the track of its railway where it crosses designated streets, the bridges to be kept in repair by the company, does not divest the municipal authorities of their control over the streets, nor impair their power to improve the same, nor entitle the railroad company to perpetually maintain the bridges as constructed; but the ordinance and privilege granted by it are subject too a proper exercise by the municipal body, of its power to improve the streets, and make such changes in the grades as may be necessary to subserve the public interest."

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Ohio was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in an opinion found in 167 U. S. 88, of which opinion the syllabi are as follows:

"In 1887, the municipal authorities of Defiance authorized the erection of bridges over the Wabash Railroad, and about eighteen feet above its track, by the railroad company, to take the place of two existing bridges. In 1893, the common council of Defiance changed the grade of the streets crossing on said bridges to the level of the railroad, and changed the approaches to it by causing them to descend to the level of the railroad. Held, that the common council acted within its powers in changing the grade of the streets in question, and that the railroad company had no legal right to complain of its action.

The legislative power of a city may control and improve its streets, and a power to that effect, when duly exercised by ordinances, will override any license previously given, by which the control of a certain street has been surrendered.

In this case, it was purely within the discretion of the common council to determine whether the public exigencies required that the grade of the street be so changed as to cross the railroad at a level."

In the case of Village of Rockport v. Ry. Co., 85 O. S. 73, the supreme court again had occasion to consider said section 3283 R. S. (now section 8763 G. C.) and to review the Ohio authorities in the matter of the crossing of streets by railway tracks. The point at issue was whether the railway company might appropriate a municipal street for a railroad yard. The court say in the course of the opinion (at pp. 81-82):

"The right of the railroad company to make this appropriation does not depend alone upon its authority to appropriate public streets to the uses of its road, but it also depends upon the nature of the property sought to be appropriated and the uses to which the railroad company seeks to subject that property. It must also be borne in mind that the state has already appropriated this land to public purposes, and it could not without first vacating these streets appropriate the same land to any use inconsistent with or destructive of the present rights of the public therein, and if the state itself could not, without first vacating and abandoning these streets, appropriate this property to a use that would be destructive of or a substantial interference with the public easement therein, then neither could it delegate to a railroad company any such right. The property having been devoted to a public purpose, the principle obtains that the public use is the dominant interest in the street, and the village authorities could not grant any right to the railroad company under the provision of section 3283, Revised Statutes, that would be destructive of these rights or amount to a material or substantial interference with the same or have the effect of excluding the public therefrom. This proposition seems to be well settled in this state. (Cases cited here) * * *. It necessarily follows that the railway company can acquire no further rights by appropriation than the village council could grant it by ordinance or contract."

Again, in Railroad v. Cleveland (city), 15 O. C. C. (N. S.) 193; 23 O. C. D. 482 (affirmed by the supreme court without opinion, 87 O. S. 469), the matter of the rights of a municipality in its streets, as against their occupancy by a railroad company with its tracks, was involved.

After referring (at p. 204 of the opinion) to the rule in Ohio that under authority of section 3283 R. S. (section 8763 G. C.), a railroad company might acquire by agreement or appropriation only such rights as should not interfere with the use of the street as such, or "with the full control and supervision thereof by the municipal authorities," the court takes up the claim of estoppel made by the railroad companies upon the ground that they had been permitted to expend large sums of money through a long series of years under color of absolute ownership of the land for their railroad purposes. After reviewing the authorities on this point, the court thus states its conclusion at p. 206 of the opinion:

"It being once established that the premises in controversy were originally dedicated to the public for street purposes, no grant, nor prescription, nor mere non-user, nor equitable estoppel can change its status."

In the case of Railway Co. v. Railway Co., supra, the court refused an injunction against the crossing on a public street of a steam railway company's tracks by a street railway company's tracks, after the right to construct such latter tracks had been given by the municipality. The holding was that even though the steam railway company's tracks had been in place for many years and the company would be put to expense in the way of providing for the crossing, yet said railway company had no such ownership of or title to the lands in question as required the street railway company to proceed by appropriation or otherwise as a condition precedent to laying its tracks across those of the steam railway.

A case very similar to that just cited, both as to the facts and the conclusions of law, is Railway v. Railway, 21 C. C. R. 391; 12 O. C. D. 113, which case was affirmed by the supreme court without opinion (64 O. S. 550).

In view of these very broad holdings of our Ohio courts, both as to the rights of the public in a street, and to the effect that the matter of expense to a railway or other company having an easement in a street is not a factor to be taken as diminishing such rights of the public, we are led to the conclusion that the construction of a sewer is one of those ordinary uses of the street such as the railway company's occupancy is subject to. From a purely practical standpoint, the temporary burden and incidental expense involved in supporting the tracks during sewer construction, is not nearly so heavy a one as that involved in providing for a permanent crossing by a street railway.

The cases of Railway Co. v. Com'rs., 63 O. S. 23, and Railroad Co. v. Troy (city), 68 O. S. 510, are not out of line with other Ohio authorities. In the first of these cases, while the holding was that the company was entitled to compensation for supporting its tracks while a county ditch was being constructed thereunder, yet the question of a municipal street was not involved. The Troy case was an original proceeding for appropriation of a street across a railroad right of way; hence the holding that the railway company was entitled to compensation for the cost of a bridge or viaduct necessary to carry its trains over the street.

Your question may therefore be answered by the statement that if a municipality proceeds in an ordinarily careful way to construct a sewer within the limits of one of its public streets and beneath the tracks of a railway company crossing such street, it is the duty of the railway company to furnish supports, if necessary, for its tracks while the sewer is being constructed thereunder.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—AUTHORIZED TO PAY EXPENSES OF TEACHERS' MEETINGS FOR ONE CERTAIN WEEK—SECTION 7872 G. C. LIMITING AMOUNT TO BE PAID TEACHERS APPLICABLE TO CITY DISTRICTS ONLY—HOW RECOVERY OF MONEYS ILLEGALLY PAID OUT BY COUNTY BOARD CAN BE MADE.

1. County boards of education are unauthorized to pay the expenses of teachers' meetings other than the annual teachers' institute which must be held during one certain week.

2. The grant of power in Section 7872 G. C. that "the board of education of any district" may expend for instruction of teachers any sum not to exceed five hundred dollars, is limited to city districts only.

3. Moneys illegally paid out by a board of education can be recovered from the members voting for such expenditure or from the persons receiving the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

HON. A. V. BAUMANN, JR., Prosecuting Attorney, Fremont, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

"A county board of education has allowed certain bills for which no provision is made by law. Upon the warrant of the president of that board of education and its secretary, the county superintendent of schools, these bills were paid from the county treasury. Are the members of the county board of education and their clerk, the county superintendent,or either of them, liable in a suit for recovery?"

You later say in reply to a request for further information:

"Teachers' institutes were held on Saturdays during the winter months and the bills are for expenses of these institutes, rent, fees of speakers, etc. Persons against whom findings are made are spread all over the state and the amounts of the individual findings are very small so that it would be more expensive to collect them in that way than the amount the findings will warrant."

Attention is invited to section 4752 G. C., which reads in part:

"A majority of the members of a board of education shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Upon a motion * * * to pay any debt or claim * * * the clerk of the board shall publicly call the roll of the members composing the board and enter on the record the names of those voting 'aye' and those voting 'no.' If a majority of all the members of the board vote aye, the president shall declare the motion carried."

In construing the above section in opinion No. 267, vol. 1, 1911, page 272, the Attorney-General (in a case where there was no authority in law for an expenditure of school funds), said:

"By virtue of section 4752 supra, it is the duty of the board of education to pass on the payment of debts and claims, and I assume that the payment to the newspaper was made upon the motion duly adopted by the board of education. Such payment being illegal, the members who voted for it were guilty of malfeasance in authorizing the payment, and the money so paid out was misappropriated under the provisions of section 286, supra.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the members of the board of education who voted for the payment to the newspaper as set forth above should be held liable for the funds so misappropriated.

From a reading of section 4768 supra, and section 4782 supra, I am of the opinion that the duties of the president, clerk and treasurer, as therein set forth, are purely ministerial in character, and that they were not required, if acting in good faith, to inquire into the question of the legality of the motion passed by the board authorizing the payment to the newspaper, but were fully protected in signing, countersigning and paying the order issued in pursuance of said motion."

In the above opinion it was held, however, that no recovery could be made from the newspaper, that is, the third party who received the money, and such was the general view until the decision of the Ohio Supreme Court in the case of State ex rel Smith, Prosecuting Attorney vs. Maharry, 97 O. S., 272, wherein the court said:

"It should be noted that the statute covers 'any public money * * * illegally expended * * * or any public property * * * converted or misappropriated.' When either of these two facts appear, that is (a) illegal expenditure of public money or (b) any public property converted or misappropriated, then there is warrant and authority in law for bringing the action under these statutes.

But it is claimed that such actions can only be brought when the 'public money' has been unlawfully paid to some officer, or when the 'public property' has been unlawfully misappropriated by some public officer.

These statutes do not place any such limitation upon actions brought under them. They are manifestly in the interest of conserving 'public money' and 'public property,' and he who wrongfully takes such 'public money' or 'public property' may be, and should be, sued under these statutes."

* * * * * * * * * *

"Manifestly the wrongful acts contemplated by this statute, that is. the wrongful taking of public money or public property, if limited only to public officers, would emasculate and destroy 95 per cent. of the virtue of the statute.

This court does not feel warranted in giving the statute such a narrow and technical construction as would paralyze this important safeguard to the protection of the public trust in more than nine-tenths of the cases arising thereunder.

* * * Public authorities have their option as to which section they will utilize in protecting public money and public property."

From this later construction of the law it is apparent that the person receiving funds illegally appropriated is liable for recovery as well as the officers making such illegal appropriation and it is within the power of the prosecuting attorney to elect from which of the parties liable he desires to recover.

In your later statement you say that such payments in question were made "for expenses of these institutes, rent, fees of speakers, etc.," such teachers' institutes "being held on Saturdays during the winter months," and it is entirely possible that such expenditures were made by the county board of education under a misapprehension of Section 7872 G. C., which reads:

"The expense of such institute shall be paid from the city institute fund hereinbefore provided for. In addition to this fund the board of education of any district annually may expend for the instruction of the teachers thereof in an institute or in such other manner as it prescribes, a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars, to be paid from its contingent fund."

It is found that the attorney-general, on page 275, Opinions of 1911, Vol. I, held that section 7872 applied (in the expenditure of five hundred dollars "for instruction of teachers"), to any board of education in the state, the language being as follows:

"You will note the reading of the above section is this, that it provides that in addition to the regular institute fund the board of education of any district annually may expend for the instruction of the teacher thereof in an institute or in such other manner as it prescribes, a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars, etc."

This opinion was reversed by the same Attorney-General on April 29, 1913, in opinion No. 232, wherein he said relative to section 7872 G. C.:

"In answer to your second question, with reference to my opinion of November 22, 1911, I beg to say that, taking the language of that opinion strictly, it would have application only to village boards of education. The facts of that opinion, however, were very indefinitely stated, and I may well say that it should be read with reference to city boards of education in the light of the modifications stated herein."

This latter view, that section 7872 G. C. refers to city districts only, is the opinion of the present Attorney-General, and such section does not empower either county boards, rural boards or village boards of education to expend money for the instruction of teachers in such districts. The section must be read in conjunction with section 7871 G. C., which precedes it, and was part of the same act passed in 98 Ohio laws, 378, the subject being teachers' meetings in city school districts.

The provision for the improvement of teachers in their profession, where such teachers are not in city school districts, is found in section 7859 G. C., which reads:

"A teachers' institute may be organized in any county, by the association of not less than thirty practical teachers of the common school residing therein, who must declare their intention in writing to attend such institute, the purpose of which shall be the improvement of such teachers in their profession."

The above section creating an annual teachers' institute is followed by language in the succeeding sections 7860, 7865, 7868, 7868-1, 7869 and 7870, which indicate clearly that but one institute can be paid for by the county board of education under section 7860 G. C., which reads:

"The county teachers' institute, annually, shall elect * * *. The expenses of conducting such institute shall be paid out of the county board of education fund upon the order of the president of the county board of education."

Section 7868 G. C. reads:

"* * * Such boards (county) shall decide by formal resolution at any regular or special meeting held prior to February first of each year whether a county institute shall be held in the county during the current year."

Thus we find that, while teachers' meetings aside from the regular county institute are to be commended, there is no provision in law for county boards of education to pay for rent, fees of speakers, etc., of teachers' meetings held at a time other than the one institute contemplated in section 7860 G. C.

While a board of education has broad power under section 7620 G. C., which says:

"The board of education may * * * make all other provisions necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools within the subdistricts."

it cannot be said that such provisions cover the holding of teachers' institutes, the latter being treated specifically in other sections of the statutes.

It is possible that the board may have acted under supplemental section 4744-3a passed in 107 O. L., 621, which reads:

"The county board of education is authorized to pay for the printing of programs, examinations and other necessary printing supplies for the use of the county superintendent and the superintendents and teachers of the county school unit. The county board of education is authorized to pay the expenses of its educational meetings required by law."

It will be noted that the section says the "educational meetings required by law" and no others. This is a mere repetition of the language of section 7860, which provides for the payment of the expenses of the annual county teachers' institute herein discussed, that being the only "educational meeting" of teachers required by law. Educational meetings arranged by the school authorities voluntarily at various times would not come within those required by law. Attention is invited to opinion 342, issued by the Attorney General June 6, 1917 (Vol. I), the syllabus of which reads:

"The county board of education is authorized to order but one institute held in the county during any one year and such institute must be held during some one certain week. If other institutes are held the expense thereof cannot be paid from the county board of education fund."

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that there is no provision in law for a county board of education to pay expenses of teachers' meetings other than the annual teachers' institute; that money so paid out can be recovered from the members of the board who voted for the action, or from the person receiving such pay; that the president of the board and its secretary (as such officers) performed a ministerial act in drawing such warrants, if directed by aye and nay vote by the board to do so; that section 7872 G. C., which empowers certain boards of education to "expend for the instruction of the teachers thereof, in an institute or in such other manner as it prescribes a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars," refers and is applicable to city school districts only.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION—JANITORS—NOT REQUIRED TO BE PAID SEMI-MONTHLY—MAY UNDER SECTION 7690 G. C.

Under section 12946–1 G. C., boards of education are not required to pay school janitors semi-monthly, but have the privilege of doing so under section 7690 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

HON. WALTER S. RUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of April 24, in which you ask the opinion of the Attorney-General on the question:

"Does section 12946 G. C. require boards of education to pay janitors twice each month?"

Section 12946-1 G. C. reads as follows:

"That every individual, firm, company, co-partnership, association or corporation doing business in the state of Ohio, who employ five or more regular employes, shall on or before the first day of each month pay all their employes engaged in the performance of either manual or clerical labor the wages earned by them during the first half of the preceding month ending with the fifteenth day thereof, and shall on or before the fifteenth day of each month pay such employes the wages earned by them during the last half of the preceding calendar month; provided, however, that if at any time of payment an employe shall be absent from his or her regular place of labor and shall not receive his or her wages through a duly authorized representative, such person shall be entitled to said payment at any time thereafter upon demand upon the proper paymaster at the place where such wages are usually paid and where such pay is due. Provided nothing herein contained shall be construed to interfere with the daily or weekly payment of wages."

Is is found that as far as governing the act of a board of education, in the pay of its employes, is concerned, the section in question has never been passed upon by this department, but an opinion was rendered by the attorney-general in 1913 (Vol. II, Ann. Rep. of Atty. Gen., 1913, p. 1537), as to its effect upon municipalities. The then attorney-general said:

"Section 1 of said act provides that every individual, firm, co-partnership, association or corporation doing business in the state of Ohio, who employs five or more regular employees, shall pay as provided therein.

* * * * * * * * *

A municipality cannot be considered as doing business in this state. It is solely a political subdivision of the state and not in any sense an individual, etc., as set forth in section 1 of the act.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said section would not apply to municipalities."

Seemingly, the section in question was passed to protect those wage earners whose employers were private individuals or corporations, and not the employes of municipalities or boards of education, for neither of these can be considered as doing business in this state.

Inasmuch as practically all employes of boards of education in Ohio are paid at the end of the school month for the services rendered during that month, and nothing is held back on them, they might gain very little under a strict construction of section 12946-1 G. C. by a board of education, for a careful reading shows that it does not provide for paying employes for services up to date, as is now the case on pay days of school boards, but does provide that "shall on or before the fifteenth day of each month pay such employes the wages earned by them during the last half of the preceding calendar month," and similarly on the first day of the month to pay the wages earned by them "during the first half of the preceding month ending with the fifteenth day thereof;" that is to say, the employer can hold back fifteen days under section 12946-1 G. C., which is not done by school boards, but employes are paid at the end of each school month up to date. To illustrate, a board of education, if operating under section 12946-1 G. C., could on October 1 pay a janitor for only the days of the term prior to September 15, instead of paying for the whole school month when the first four school weeks were up as is now the case, and the janitor would receive his first month's pay on October 15, though he may have worked six weeks. So there is little in favor of school employes in section 12946-1 G. C., as compared to present method of payment, for under such section fifteen days can be held back.

Further, it is found that the school month is not the calendar month, as mentioned in section 12946-1 G. C., for the school month is but four school weeks, and under such computation a board of education can not govern its pay days by such dates as the first and fifteenth of the month, for while such dates would operate uniformly in a calendar month, there would be confusion in calculating them in a school month, if it were desired to pay for services up to date.

However, boards of education have full power to pay their janitors twice each school month and up to date for services rendered if they care to do so, for section 7690 G. C. says:

> "Each board of education shall have the management and control of all the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. It may appoint * * * janitors and fix their salaries. * * *."

In view of the fact that practically all the federal, state and municipal employes, in practice, are now paid twice a month, much might be said in favor of paying all public employes at such intervals, where the statute does not say monthly. Considering present economic conditions and the small wage paid certain public employes, little objection would lie against paying such employes at lesser intervals than one month, though the statute does not compel it to be done. But where monthly reports might be required (as in the case of teachers) before the clerk can issue warrant (section 7786 G. C.), a semi-monthly payment could not be made; and again, section 4752 G. C., provides for the payment of teachers monthly, but does not restrict time of payment of other employes, that being a matter left to the board of education in its fixing of salaries and control of schools (section 7690 G. C.)

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that under section 12946-1 G. C., boards of education are not required to pay school janitors semi-monthly, but have the privilege of doing so under section 7690 G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROHIBITION AMENDMENT—WHAT LAWS EFFECTIVE ON MAY 27, 1919—WHEN LIQUOR LICENSE YEAR ENDS—LICENSES MAY BE GRANTED FOR ONE DAY, MAY 26, 1919.

The prohibition amendment to the constitution becomes effective coincident with the beginning of the day May 27, 1919, and is effective on and after said date.

The present liquor license year terminates at the end of the day preceding the fourth Monday of May, specifically, at twelve o'clock P. M. May 25th.

The last business day of the present license year is Saturday, May 24th.

Applications for license for the ensuing license year may be filed after March 15th, but action may not be taken thereon for the granting or rejection of licenses until after the beginning of the license year, to wit, on and after the fourth Monday of May, which licenses so granted would be effective until superseded by the prohibition amendment on Tuesday, May 27th.

Procurement of license is a necessary prerequisite to engaging in the sale of liquor as a beverage on May 26th.

The sections of the statute providing penalty for sales to minors, sales on Sunday on election days, sales within prohibited proximity to agricultural fairs and state institutions, and kindred sections, and for keeping a place where liquors are sold in violation of law will be operative and available for prosecution of alleged offenders after the prohibition amendment becomes effective on May 27th; the penalty sections of the liquor license law and local option laws will be inoperative after said date.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have yours of April 30th submitting for written opinion an inquiry as to the time at which the present liquor licenses will expire and also as to the authority for granting licenses upon applications that may yet be filed.

Inquiries have also been received from a number of sources as to what sections of the statutes will be available for prosecutions in case of sales of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes after May 27, 1919. Also as to the exact time when statewide prohibition becomes effective.

All of said inquiries involve questions of more or less general moment under the impending state of the law, and I am, therefore, considering same together in a general opinion directed to your department.

Your inquiry is as follows:

> "Numerous inquiries have come to this department from licensees in the state asking for definite information regarding the last day on which liquor can be sold without violating the provisions of the constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors in the state of Ohio, and what is the last business day of the license year.

Before giving definite answer to these inquiries, we would be pleased to have you advise us if you have made any ruling on the subject and if not, to favor us with an opinion as to the last day and hour under which licensees can operate under their present license issued by county boards under authority of section 1261-33 G. C.

In the event that you should decide that May 24, 1919, is the last business day of the license year, would it be necessary for a saloonist to secure a license to do business on Monday, May 26th, and if so, would it be possible for county boards to act upon applications that may yet be filed and grant licenses accordingly for the one day?"

The other inquiries may be thus summarized:

What statutes will be available for prosecutions for alleged unlawful sales of intoxicating liquor after the constitutional amendment providing statewide prohibition becomes effective?

What is the exact time at which statewide prohibition will become effective?

For convenience the last question submitted will be considered first.

The prohibition amendment to the constitution as adopted at the November election 1918 is as follows:

"Article XV.

Section 9. The sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage are hereby prohibited. The general assembly shall enact laws to make this provision effective. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the manufacture or sale of such liquors for medicinal, industrial, scientific, sacramental, or other non-beverage purposes.

Schedule.

If the proposed amendment be adopted, it shall become section 9 of Article XV of the constitution, and it shall take effect on the 27th day of May of the year following the date of the election at which it is adopted, at which time original sections 9 and 9a of Article XV of the constitution and all statutes inconsistent with the foregoing amendment shall be repealed."

The schedule to Article XV, as submitted at the 1918 election and adopted by vote of the electors, stipulates with clearness the time at which the article becomes effective, viz. "on the 27th day of May of the year following the date of the election at which it is adopted."

The language is apparently unambiguous, and falls clearly within the rule announced by the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. v. Roney, 82 O. S. 376, the first branch of the syllabus being as follows:

"The presumption is that the legislature intends a statute to take effect at the time it declares the statute shall be in effect, and a court may not by construction substitute a different time merely to correct defective legislation. The province of construction is to ascertain and give effect to the intention of the legislature, but its intention must be derived from the legislation and may not be invented by the court. To apply the intention and then give the statute effect according to such intention would not be construction but legislation."

The court in said case was considering the application of the Paine law to a state of facts before the court and the law provided that the act shall take effect and be in full force on and after August 1, 1909, excepting that the civil service provisions shall be in full force and effect from and after January 1, 1910.

Referring to the unreported case of State ex rel. v. Slabaugh, 81 O. S. 550, the court said:

> "It was held that the act went into effect on August 1, 1909 as therein expressly provided."

And again—

> "As already stated the repeal of the sections providing for the board of public safety was in effect on August 1, 1909."

A reading of the opinion discloses that the substance of the holding is that a provision that a law shall go into effect on a stated date is not open to construction and that the law is effective and in operation on said date.

It is not perceived that any different rule of construction could be sustained with respect to the time when a constitutional provision becomes effective than that applied in case of an act of the legislature, where the language is in substance the same.

Taken in connection with the familiar rule that the law does not regard fractions of a day in the application of provisions of the character under consideration, it follows that the prohibition amendment will be effective immediately after the close of the day preceding May 27, 1919, specifically immediately after twelve o'clock P. M. of May 26th.

Akin to the question just considered is that presented by your board as to "the last day and hour on which liquor can be sold by licensees under their present licenses issued by county boards under authority of section 1261-33 G. C."

I note also that your inquiry embodies the question as to the last day on which liquor can be sold without violating the provisions of the constitutional amendment, which question of course is answered by what has already been said as to the time at which the constitutional amendment becomes effective.

Considering then your inquiry as to the time when the present liquor licenses expire, as an authorization to engage in the sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage, it is necessary to note the provisions of the liquor license law defining the license year.

Section 1261-33 G. C., as amended in 1917 and found at page 23 of 107 Ohio Laws, is as follows:

> "From and after the fourth Monday in May, 1918, the license year shall begin on the fourth Monday of May and extend to the fourth Monday of May in the following year. From and after the termination of the current license year, which ends on the fourth Monday in November, 1917, there shall be an intermediary license period extending to the fourth Monday in May, 1918, which, for the purposes of the laws regulating and licensing the traffic in intoxicating liquors, shall also be regarded as a license year. Nothing contained in this act shall operate to modify or affect the rights, obligations or status of licensees granted license prior to the fourth Monday in November, 1917."

It is to be noted that the language of the foregoing section as to the time when the license year begins is the same as that above considered in connection with the constitutional amendment. It is provided that the license year shall begin on the fourth Monday of May, and under the doctrine of the Roney case, supra, the conclusion is at once apparent that the license year begins coincident with the beginning of the fourth Monday of May, and the language of the statute is equally clear as to the termination of the license year, the provision being "and extend to the fourth Monday of May in the year following."

If it were contended that the language just quoted is open to a construction that would include the fourth Monday of May at the end of the period, there are cogent factors which are strongly conducive of a contrary construction.

First, it is obviously intended that the license year should only be a yearly period, and not a period of one year and one day, which would be the consequence of a construction including both the Monday upon which the year begins and the Monday named as the termination of the license year, and that the first Monday must be included as a part of the license period we think is clear from what has previously been pointed out in that regard.

Again, upon inquiry at your office I find that it has been the practical construction placed upon the statute from its first enactment for licensees to engage in their business during the first Monday of the period and at each successive issuance of new licenses for the renewal to become operative on said first Monday thereby excluding the Monday at the termination of the period as a part of the preceding license year.

In State v. Ridgeway, 73 O. S. 31, the court said:

> "A long established and uniform practice is an authority of but little, if any, less weight than an adjudication to the same effect."

Again, in State v. Kaiser, 18 O. C. C. 349, the court said:

> "When the practice in the department in interpreting a statute is uniform, and the meaning of the statutes, upon examination, is found to be doubtful or obscure, the court will accept the interpretation by the department as the true one."

In Smith v. State, 71 O. S. 13, it was said:

> "While the practical construction thus adopted cannot be admitted as absolutely controlling, it is nevertheless, we think, deserving of consideration, and should, perhaps, be regarded as decisive in a case of doubt, or where the obligation imposed or the duty enjoined is not plain and specific."

I am not unmindful of the rule that in the computation of time the first day shall be excluded and the last day included, as recognized both by statute and judicial decision, but in adhering to said rule, the Supreme Court in State v. Elson, 77 O. S 489, said:

> "The courts could not depart from or change the language used * * *"

And also:

> "Either or both days may be either included or excluded, if the language of the provision for time is such as to require it."

In fact the rule is only applicable in determining the beginning or ending of a stated space of time, while in the statute we have under consideration the beginning and ending of the period is specific and is not to be fixed from a consideration of a stated space of time as the basis.

I conclude that the license year includes all of the fourth Monday of May upon which the license is issued and terminates at twelve o'clock P. M. on Sunday night preceding the fourth Monday of May of the year following, subject of course to the provisions of law which are in force pursuant to the authorization of the constitutional provision known as the license amendment, section 9 of Article XV, which provides in part as follows:

> "Section 9. License to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall be granted in this state and license laws operative throughout the state shall be passed with such restrictions and regulations as may be provided by law * * * and nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to repeal, modify or suspend any such prohibitory laws or any regulatory laws now in force or hereafter enacted * * *."

This leads to a consideration of your question as to "what is the last business day of the license year?"

Neither the license amendment to the constitution nor the license law or other act of the legislature now operative has repealed the provisions of section 13050 G. C which prohibits the trafficking in intoxicating liquor on Sunday, and requires all places where such liquor is sold on other days of the week to be closed. Said section is as follows:

> "Whoever, on Sunday, sells intoxicating liquor, whether distilled, malt or vinous, or permits a place, other than a regular drug store, where such intoxicating liquor is sold or exposed for sale on other days to be open or remain open on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned in jail or in a city prison not less than ten days nor more than thirty days, or both."

Therefore, answering your last inquiry specifically I have to advise that the last business day of the present license year is Saturday, May 24th.

Your inquiry as to the necessity for a licensee to secure a license to do business on Monday, May 26th, is therefore answered by what has just been said in answer to your last inquiry, and I advise that it would be necessary to secure such license as an authorization to engage in the sale of liquor on said date.

Coming next to consider your inquiry as to the authority for issuance of licenses upon applications that may yet be filed, it is necessary again to consider the provisions of the liquor license law in this regard.

Section 24 of said act, being section 1261-39 G. C., provides in part:

> "The county board shall grant licenses to the full number allowed by the constitution if applications are made therefor * * *."

The procedure for making application for and granting liquor licenses is somewhat loosely provided.

Section 20 of the act, being section 1261-35 G. C., provides, in so far as pertinent:

> "Applicants for the license to sell intoxicating liquors during any given license year shall file their applications with the county licensing board upon uniform blanks obtained from said county board and furnished to the latter by the state liquor licensing board. No application for a saloon license filed with the said county board before the first day of March preceding the said license year and after the fifteenth day of March preceding the said license year may be considered by the board until after the beginning of the said license year. * * *"

After the filing of the application it is provided in section 25 of the act, section 1261-40 G. C.:

"The county licensing board shall, without delay, cause to be published once in a newspaper of general circulation in the county notices of the application for license, transfer or removal filed hereunder. * * *"

It is further provided by subsequent sections that every applicant at the time of filing his application shall pay the county board a fee of $5.00.

It is provided by section 1261-43 G. C.:

"Not later than the fifth day of the month in which the license year begins, and in the case of a license applied for after the beginning of the license year, ten days after said application, the board shall announce the names of those to whom said board proposes to grant licenses * * *.

As soon as the names of those to whom licenses are proposed to be granted are announced such persons shall forthwith transmit to the secretary of the state liquor licensing board, at its office in Columbus, Ohio, a registration fee of one hundred dollars * * *."

It is then further provided that the state board shall issue a receipt to the applicant and notify the county board of the payment of the said fee and that upon the delivery of said receipt to the local board at the beginning of the license year the applicant shall be entitled to his license.

The foregoing are substantially all the provisions governing the issuance of licenses and it is to be noted that there is no provision governing the case of an application made after the 15th of March and before the beginning of the license year.

It is provided that no application filed after the 15th day of March shall be considered by the board until after the beginning of the license year, but it is obviously contemplated by the provisions of the act that applications may be filed and acted upon in case the quota of licenses has not been issued in full in pursuance of applications filed between the 1st and 15th of March, and it is provided that the board shall announce its ruling on applications filed after the beginning of the license year within twenty days. But as before noted there is no provision in terms applicable to the case of a license applied for during the interim between March 15th and the beginning of the license year.

There is the apparently mandatory direction that county boards shall grant licenses to the full number allowed by the constitution and also shall, without delay, cause to be published the notices of applications for licenses, so I am of the opinion the board may receive applications, publish notice thereof and perform the ministerial functions directed by the law up to the point of considering the application with a view to allowance or rejection, which function may not be performed until after the beginning of the license year, which would be on and after the fourth Monday of May.

From what has been said it follows that if the payment of fees to the state board and the transmission of the receipt to the local board can be accomplished, the board may act upon the application immediately on Monday morning within the authorization of the law, and I advise that the law does not exclude the filing of applications during the interim between the 15th of March and the beginning of the license year, and that it is the determination to grant or reject the license which is postponed by the law until after the beginning of the license year while the taking of the intermediary steps is not restricted in point of time.

I come next to a consideration of the question—what statutory law of the state, as now in effect, will be operative for the prosecution of persons engaging in the sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes after May 27th, the time at which the prohibition amendment becomes effective.

At the outset it is to be noted that the bulk of the statutes for the regulation of the liquor traffic as now in force consists of those enacted in pursuance of the license amendment to the constitution (so-called) and the various local option statutes (so-called), both of which classes or groups of legislation are operative only within portions of the state; the local option statutes having in the main been first enacted and adopted by particular local communities, wherein alone they are operative, and the later license system of regulation being expressly limited by the constitution to such territory as had not availed itself of the regulatory provisions afforded by the local option legislation; the constitutional amendment providing:

> "Where the traffic is or may be prohibited under laws applying to counties, municipalities, townships, residence districts or other districts now prescribed by law, the traffic shall not be licensed in any such local subdivision while any prohibitory law is operative therein. Nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to repeal, modify or suspend any such prohibitory laws * * *"

The prohibition amendment of 1918 provides in its schedule—

> "If the proposed amendment be adopted it shall become section 9 of Article XV of the constitution and it shall take effect on the 27th day of May of the year following the date of the election at which it is adopted, at which time original sections 9 and 9a of Article XV of the constitution and all statutes inconsistent with the foregoing amendment shall be repealed."

The substantive provision of the prohibition amendment itself is

> "The sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage are hereby prohibited."

Obviously the prohibition amendment is in letter and spirit repugnant to and inconsistent with the system of licensing the traffic in intoxicating liquor as a beverage and manifestly the provisions of the license law, so-called, looking to and providing for the licensing of the traffic must fall with the advent of the prohibition amendment.

And equally in my opinion are the provisions of the several local option laws inconsistent with the provisions of the prohibition amendment, for the reason that the mandate of the prohibition amendment is that the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage shall be prohibited generally throughout the state while with that general mandate and the further general mandate of the constitution that the purport and effect of the local option legislation is to impose restrictions and penalties operative only in the particular localities wherein the local option laws have been adopted, thus raising the situation, if the local option laws be said to remain in force, that a particular sale of intoxicating liquor in one part of the state entails liability to answer to different statutes and a different penalty than may be operative in an adjoining or other locality of the state.

> "all laws of a general nature shall have a uniform operation throughout the state." (Sec. 26, Art. II.)

As much may also be said in regard to the various provisions of the licensing law, so-called, which likewise does not purport to be operative in all parts of the state, and for the reasons just pointed out it is my opinion that when the prohibition amendment becomes effective providing a general and mandatory rule on the given subject for the entire state, reinforced by the uniform operation provision of the constitution, the general structure of the local option and licensing systems will fall for constitutional reasons.

Further, the penalty sections of the license law, being sections 48 and 49, aside from the fact of their obvious inadaptability to the condition which will prevail when license may not be granted by virtue of the constitutional mandate, are otherwise inadequately constructed for usefulness after the advent of general prohibition, for the reason that aside from providing a penalty only for sales without a license, even this provision is not of general application and a number of classes of sales are specifically exempted such, for example, as sales by the manufacturer in quantities of one gallon or more at one time at the factory, or sales by the manufacturer from the wagon or by the manufacturer to the holders of liquor licenses or to individual consumers at their homes, and a number of other exemptions.

How could the statute stand as properly adaptable to the enforcement of prohibition when by its terms special classes of sales are expressly excepted from its operation?

In short, I may say that the penalty sections of the liquor license act are adapted by specific language to the one offense of selling without a license, the fundamental theory of which is repugnant to and inconsistent with the prohibition amendment of the constitution and, further, the sections are not uniformly operative upon all sales prohibited by the constitution and for such reasons are not available as an authorization for prosecutions or penalty after the prohibition amendment to the constitution becomes effective. And for similar reasons as above noted the provisions of the various local option laws are likewise unavailable.

Certain other regulatory provisions providing penalties for stated classes of sales of intoxicating liquors remain to be considered, among which are the sections applicable to sales to minors, sales on Sunday, Sunday closing, election days, sales within prohibited proximity to agricultural fairs, state institutions and perhaps other kindred sections, without undertaking an exhaustive enumeration of which, I may say do not suggest any apparent inconsistency with the prohibition amendment to the constitution, but are in fact calculated to render it effective and secure obedience to its mandate, and therefore it is my opinion that said sections will remain in full force and effect and may be employed for prosecutions for sales coming within their terms.

It so transpires that the operation of said sections, however, is comparatively limited as to the subjects or classes of sales comprehended and there remains the large class of offenders commonly known as bootleggers, etc., which presents the more important phase of your inquiry. In other words, what statutes may be applied in prosecutions for sales otherwise than to a minor and outside the restrictions as to the limited number of prohibited days and places comprehended by the sections above noted.

Such offenders have heretofore been prosecuted mainly under section 48 of the license law and section 13195 G. C., the first of which I have found to be unavailable and must say that the latter is by no means free from doubt. This section provides in so far as pertinent:

> "Whoever keeps a place where intoxicating liquors are sold, furnished or given away in violation of law shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars and for each subsequent offense shall be fined not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars * * *."

This section does not furnish the complete definition for the offense in itself, inasmuch as the definition of unlawful sales of liquor must be sought elsewhere, and it has been the holding of the courts that the section comprehended the keeping of a place where liquors were sold to minors, on Sundays, without a license, and in such other ways as the unlawful sale of liquor had been defined by statute.

The question now presents itself whether the constitutional provision might be looked to to supply the definition of unlawful sale of liquor, and thereby furnish a complete provision for the prosecution of the keeper of a place where liquors are sold as a beverage generally.

It is significant, of course, to note that in all the long history of this section since its enactment in 1854 occasion has never arisen for looking to a constitutional provision to supplement the terms of the statute for a complete definition of the offense and it may well be argued that the phrase in this section, "in violation of law" imports statutory law as distinguished from constitutional provision. It is a familiar doctrine that we have no common law crimes in Ohio and it probably would be difficult to cite a case of conviction for crime except as defined by statute. There is also the rule that criminal statutes must be strictly construed which might be invoked in determining the construction of the phrase "in violation of law" on the question of its inclusion of a constitutional definition of unlawful sales.

However, constitutional provisions are to be read into and considered a part of statutes in determining their proper construction, and I incline to the opinion that the provision of the prohibition amendment is so clear and specific "the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage are hereby prohibited" that legislative action is not essential to complete or provide a definition of unlawful sale.

Of course it is further provided "the general assembly shall enact laws to make this provision effective" which suggests the necessity for legislation, and it is said by Blackstone

> "The main strength and force of a law consists in the penalty annexed to it. Herein is to be found the principal obligation of human laws."
> 1 Blackstone Commentaries, 57.

While the question is much incumbered with doubt, I advise that until the question has been judicially determined, the provision of the prohibition amendment may be looked to as furnishing the definition for unlawful sales as contemplated by the provisions of section 13195 G. C. providing a penalty for the keeper of a place where liquor is sold in violation of law.

My difficulty in reaching a conclusion has been further augmented by the fact that in frequent instances the constitution provides the substantive rule of conduct with the further language that same shall be administered "as provided by law," apparently used in the sense of legislative enactment which might be said to furnish warrant for a distinction between the primary meaning of the terms "law" and "constitution."

To summarize, then, briefly it follows from what has been said that prosecutions may be made under the sections providing a penalty for sale to minors, selling on election days, on Sundays, or the other limited provisions which have been suggested above, including the keeping of a place where intoxicating liquors are sold as a beverage.

As to the larger question of prosecution for the unlawful sale, not coming within the provisions of the foregoing sections of limited application, such as a common case of bootlegging, I am unable to advise of any provision applicable to such case, nor of course is there any provision for enforcing the prohibition of Article XV of the constitution against the manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquors.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—DUTIES OF PROBATION OFFICER FOR JUVENILES COMMITTED BY SAID COURT—NOT ENTITLED TO FEES IN SUCH CASES.

1. The probation officer may be directed by the juvenile court to take juvenile delinquents to such places as they are by such court lawfully committed.

2. For the performance of such services, such probation officer is not entitled to the fees provided by law for sheriffs in like cases.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

HON. CLARE CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren; Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated April 25, 1919, as follows:

> "Our juvenile court frequently has cases in which delinquent children are sent to the boys school at Lancaster. The court would like to have these delinquent children taken to the school by the probation officer. However, there is a question as to any authority under our Code for permitting the probation officer to serve in such cases.
> The question which I wish to have you consider is as to whether the probation officer may take the child upon commitment papers and thereupon receive the fee ordinarily allowed a sheriff for such work. If this can possibly be done, please advise .If not, what would you suggest as to a remedy whereby the probation officer could do the work?"

It is noted that your letter involves two questions: (1) May the probation officer legally take delinquent boys to the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster, Ohio, upon receipt of commitment papers from the juvenile court for that purpose, and (2) for such services may such probation officer receive the fee ordinarily allowed a sheriff for such work.

Sections 1662, 1663 and 1682 of the juvenile court act are pertinent and by these sections it is in part provided:

> "Section 1662.—The county auditor shall issue his warrant upon the treasury and the treasurer shall honor and pay the same, for * * * expenses provided for in this act, * * *.
>
> Section 1663.—The probation officer * * * shall serve the warrants and other processes of the court within or without the county, and in that respect is hereby clothed with the powers and authority of sheriff * * * and performs such other duties incidental to their offices, as the judge directs.
> Section 1682.—Fees and costs in all such cases, with such sums as are necessary for the incidental expenses of the court and its officers, and costs of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, shall be paid from the county treasury upon itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge of the court."

Consideration of the purpose of the juvenile court act generally, and particularly its policy to avoid the treatment of juvenile delinquents as criminals, and further consideration of the special provisions of the sections of that act, above quoted, lead to the conclusion that the probation officer may be directed by the juvenile court to take the juvenile delinquents to such places to which they are legally committed, and your first question is, therefore, answered affirmatively.

Your attention is also directed to Opinion No. 1037, rendered by the Attorney-General February 28, 1918, which, although raised on different facts, reaches the same general conclusion.

As to the probation officer receiving the fees allowed by sheriffs for like services involved in your inquiry, this department is of the opinion that the compensation provided for in section 1662, as amended in 103 O. L., 874, was intended to compensate the probation officer for all of his services in juvenile court work and there is no provision in that section, or in any other part of the act that I am aware of, which provides for payments to such probation officer of fees equivalent to those received by sheriffs for like services, and your second question is, therefore, answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION 6919 G. C. —"WITHIN ONE HALF MILE ON EITHER SIDE THEREOF."

The expression "within one-half mile on either side thereof," in section 6919 G. C., referring to road improvement and lands to be assessed, means lands lying on the right and left of the road to be improved, and does not embrace lands bordering on the "far side" of another road which the improved road meets at right angles.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

HON. ROBERT E. MARSHALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The receipt is acknowledged of your letter dated April 7, 1919, wherein you submit for opinion a question which may be stated as follows:

A road running north and south, designated as road A, terminates in a road running east and west, designated as road B. Road A is improved and part of the cost is to be provided for on the assessment plan. In making such assessment, in accordance with the terms of paragraph 4 of section 6919 G. C., "against the real estate situated one-half mile of either side thereof" (referring to the road which is improved), is the assessment to be confined to lands lying east and west of road A, or may the lands lying north of road B be included in the assessment zone?

Said section 6919 reads in part:

> "The compensation, damages, costs and expenses of the improvement shall be apportioned and paid in any one of the following methods, as set forth in petition:
> * * * * * * * * *
> 4. All or any part thereof shall be assessed against the real estate abutting upon said improvement, or against the real estate situated within one half mile of either side thereof, or against the real estate situated within one mile of either side thereof, or against the real estate situated within two miles of either side thereof, according to the benefits accruing to such real estate and the balance thereof, if any, shall be paid out of the proceeds of any levy or levies for road purposes upon the grand duplicate of all the taxable property in the county or from any funds in the county treasury available therefor."

It will be noted that the first reference in said paragraph 4 to assessable real estate is to that "abutting upon said improvement." Hence, if in the improvement of road A, the plan adopted for the assessment specified "the real estate abutting upon said improvement," there would be no question that the assessment could be made only against lands immediately adjoining road A on the east and west, and could not embrace that adjoining road B on the north, since the latter real estate abuts on road B and not on road A.

Keeping this proposition in mind, as well as the fact that one of the plans of assessment long in use in Ohio is the foot frontage plan, it would seem that the intention of the legislature in using the expression "within one-half mile on either side thereof." etc., immediately following the expression "against the real estate abutting said improvement," was merely to enlarge upon the "foot frontage" or "abutting land" idea. At any rate, the expression "on either side thereof" is akin to that of "abutting upon said improvement."

The proposition that the legislature in using the words "on either side thereof" had reference only to lands on the right and left of the improvement, finds further support in the use of the word "either" rather than the word "any," and also in a comparison of the terms of section 6919 with those of section 3812. In this latter section, which authorizes assessments by municipal corporations, this language appears:

> "The council of any municipal corporation may assess upon the abutting, adjacent and contiguous or other specially benefited lots or lands in the corporation, any part of the entire cost and expense connected with the improvement of any street," etc.

For these reasons it is concluded that the expressions "against the real estate situated within one-half mile on either side thereof," etc., as used in section 6919, permit the assessment of such lands only as lie to the right or left of the improvements, and do not embrace lands bordering along the "far side" of a road which the improved road meets at right angles.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE OF STATE LANDS TO THE UNION FURNACE OIL COMPANY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated April 28, 1919, with which was transmitted to this department for its approval the lease of the Union Furnace Oil Company, for certain lands in section 16.

From a careful examination of the lease and consideration of the provisions of section 3209, General Code, this department is of the opinion that this lease is authorized by said section.

It is to be noted also that this lease has been executed to carry into effect the understanding and agreement referred to in the second paragraph of your letter dated April 11, 1919, relative to the transmission of a supplemental agreement which was with the letter of that date submitted to this department for approval.

As stated in your letter of April 28th, this department was unable to approve of such modification, as in its opinion such supplemental contract was not authorized by law. But it appearing that the original lease provided for the lessee surrendering and cancelling said lease, and it further appearing that such surrender and cancellation has been made as so provided for, and it further appearing that the execution of the lease now submitted to this department for approval is, under the circumstances surrounding this lease, for the best interest of the beneficiary of said section 16, you are hereby advised that said lease is approved by this department.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—JOINT HIGH SCHOOL FORMED BY RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT AND AN ADJOINING VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT—HOW TAXES ARE TO BE APPORTIONED AND LEVIED FOR PURCHASE OF SITE AND ERECTION OF BUILDING AND SUPPORT OF SAME.

When a joint school district is formed for high school purposes by a rural school district, and an adjoining village school district, such combined territory becomes one district for high school purposes, and taxes levied for the purchase of a school site and the erection of the school building, and the support of such joint high school thereafter must be borne by the respective joined districts in proportion to the total valutaion of the property in each, notwithstanding the fact that the village district has the smallest valuation and sends the most pupils.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

HON. HOMER HARPER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request of April 19, 1919, for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "Madison village and Madison rural school districts propose to form a union high school district, and to purchase land and erect a high school building thereon. Sections 7669 and 7671 O. S. L. define how such a school is to be supported and maintained, but do not say anything about the construction of the building and purchase of land therefor. Now, the village board is willing to submit a bond issue to the people of the village district sufficient to pay one-half of the cost of the building and grounds, although the tax duplicate of said village is about one-third of the total duplicate of the combined districts. Can the village board legally levy a tax for such purpose, under such conditions?"

Section 7669 G. C. reads:

> "The boards of education of two or more adjoining rural school districts, or of a rural and village school district by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, may unite such districts for high school purposes.

Each board may submit the question of levying a tax on the property in their respective districts, for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting a building, and issue bonds, as is provided by law in case of erecting or repairing school houses; but such question of tax levy must carry in each district before it shall become operative in either. If such boards have sufficient money in the treasury to purchase a site and erect such building, or if there is a suitable building in either district owned by the board of education that can be used for a high school building it will not be necessary to submit the proposition to vote, and the boards may appropriate money from their funds for this purpose."

Section 7671 G. C. reads:

"The funds for the maintenance and support of such high school shall be provided by appropriations from the tuition or contingent funds, or both, of each district, in proportion to the total valuation of property in the respective districts, which must be placed in a separate fund in the treasury of the board of education of the district in which the school house is located, and paid out by action of the high school committee for the maintenance of the school."

Upon the question raised by you as to whether the two districts can agree on the amount each is to pay in the erection of a high school building, attention is invited to a very similar case upon which the Attorney-General rendered an opinion in 1911 (Vol. II, page 1042), copy of which is presumed to be in your office.

The question submitted was as follows:

"Can the board of the township and the board of the adjoining village agree upon the amount the township and the village shall use in erecting the buildings and purchasing a site, or must the village and township bear the burden in proportion to the total valuation of the property in the respective school districts?"

The then Attorney-General in discussing the above question said:

"The sections above quoted, really need no interpretation on the point raised by you, as they are silent with regard to it. Section 7670 refers to the high school district established as provided by section 7669 as a 'joint district'; therefore, it is to be regarded as one district—a joint high school district; section 7672, General Code, provides that 'boards of education exercising control for the purpose of taxation over territory within a township or joint township high school district may levy upon all the taxable property within such territory; section 7669, quoted above, provides that the bonds shall be issued as is provided by law in case of erecting or repairing school houses; this provision is found in section 7625 of the General Code; and section 7628 General Code, provides the method for leving taxes to pay the bonds issued under section 7625 and is as follows:

'When an issue of bonds has been provided for under the next three preceding sections, the board of education, annually, shall certify to the county auditor or auditors as the case may require, a tax levy sufficient to pay such bonded indebtedness as it falls due together with accrued interest thereon. Such county auditor or auditors must place such levy on the tax duplicate. It shall be collected and paid to the board of education as other taxes are. Such tax levy shall be in addition to the maximum levy for school purposes, and must be kept in a separate fund and applied only to the payment of the bonds and interest for which it was levied.'

Therefore, as all taxes must be uniform; as the district when established under section 7669 is one district; and no express authority is given by the statute for the board of the township and the board of the village agreeing upon the amount the township and the village shall use in erecting buildings or purchasing a site, it is my opinion that the same must be borne in proportion to the total valuation of property in the respective districts, and levied in the manner provided in section 7628 of the General Code."

In the above view, the present Attorney-General concurs, for while section 7669 G. C. was amended since 1911 in 104 O. L. p. 225, the part that bears on this question was not changed; that is, that the territory becomes one district for high school taxation purposes.

Bearing upon the practical side of your inquiry you say the village of Madison is willing to pay one-half of the cost of building and grounds, in order that such project may be consummated. Section 7669 G. C. provides in part:

"If such boards have sufficient money in the treasury to puchase a site * * * it will not be necessary to submit the proposition to vote, and the boards may appropriate money from their funds for this purpose."

Thus, the boards might have a site deeded to them and no bond issue would be necessary for purchasing a site, though it would be necessary for a building fund, and any levy for the latter must be uniform on all territory concerned.

Similarly, if the municipal corporation of Madison is sufficiently interested in this matter in the degree indicated, attention is invited to section 7644-1 G. C. which reads:

"A municipal corporation, may by ordinance duly passed authorize the transfer and conveyance by deed, of any real property owned by it and not needed for municipal purposes to the board of education of any such municipality, to be used by said board of education as an athletic field, a play ground for children or for school sites, upon such terms and conditions as are agreed to between the municipal corporation and the board of education and when such property is so conveyed, the same shall be under the control and supervision of such board of education."

Under this section the municipal council of Madison could convey by deed any real property it did not need for municipal purposes, and of which it was owner, to the board of education of such municipality after which such village board of education could convey a joint half interest in such site to the board of education of Madison rural school district, in which event both boards would have joint title to the site and the bond issue would be for the building only. In other words, a board of education may accept any gift under section 4755 G. C. which reads:

"By the adoption of a resolution, a board of education may accept any bequest made to it by will or may accept any gift of endowment from any person or corporation upon the conditions and stipulations contained in the will or connected with the gift or endowment. For the purpose of enabling the board to carry out the conditions and limitations upon which a bequest, gift or endowment is made, it may make all rules and regulations required to fully carry them into effect. No such bequest, gift or endowment shall be accepted by the board if the conditions thereof shall remove any portion of the public schools from the control of such board."

So while Madison village might offer a site, or make a gift of funds from its citizens to the boards of education concerned and the same could be legally accepted, on the single proposition of levying a tax to pay for both site and building, such tax must operate uniformly in the village and outside.

Section 7669 G. C. supra, says:

> "Each board also may submit the question of levying a tax on the property in their respective districts for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting a building * * *; but such question must carry in each district before it shall be operative in either."

It must be inferred manifestly that "the question" is the same in one portion of the territory to be joined as in another portion; that is to say, that if in Madison village the ballot said $30,000 as a bond issue, and in Madison rural school district some other amount was on the ballot, the same question would not have been submitted in all the territory affected, which is necessary for uniformity of operation of taxes.

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that when a joint school district is formed for high school purposes by a rural school district, and an adjoining village school district, such combined territory becomes one district for high school purposes, and taxes levied for the purchase of a school site and the erection of the school building, and the support of such joint high school thereafter must be borne by the respective joined districts in proportion to the total valuation of the property in each, notwithstanding the fact that the village district has the smallest valuation and sends the most pupils.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF CITY OF DELAWARE IN SUM OF $14,942.92—NOT AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE BONDS IN ANTICIPATION OF COLLECTION OF STREET ASSESSMENT FROM THE COLUMBUS DELAWARE & MARION RAILROAD COMPANY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 9, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

Re bonds of the city of Delaware, in the amount of $14,942.92, in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of South Sandusky Street, being 1 bond of $442.92 and 29 bonds of $500 each.

GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the city of Delaware, relative to the above bond issue and hereby decline to approve the legality and validity of said bonds for the reason that the transcript reveals that a part of the funds to be derived from the sale of said bonds is to be used to pay the cost and expense of constructing the portion of said improvement which by law the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railroad Company is required to construct.

The assessment ordinance provides that $6,271.16, being the portion of the cost of said improvement which said railroad company should pay, shall be assessed against the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railroad Co., and subsequent proceedings disclose that this amount is included in the bond issue to pay the property owner's share of said improvement.

Although the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railroad Co., under the terms of its franchise set forth in the transcript, can doubtless be required to pay the full amount of the cost and expense of said improvement charged against it, and although, under the terms of its franchise, this charge is deemed and may be treated as an assessment yet I know of no section of the General Code of Ohio which authorizes a municipality to issue its bonds in anticipation of the collection of such charge or assessment.

Section 3914 G. C., under authority of which the bonds in question are issued, provides that "municipal corporations may issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments."

Section 3812 G. C. provides in part as follows (107 O. L. 629):

> "* * * The council of any municipal corporation may assess upon the abutting, adjacent and contiguous or other specially benefited lots or lands in the corporation, any part of the entire cost and expense connected with the improvement of any street, alley, * * *."

The easement of the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railroad Co. in the street to be improved is not embraced within the description of the character of property which may be assessed under authority of the section of the General Code above referred to and quoted from.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the city of Delaware is not authorized to issue bonds in anticipation of the collection, from the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Railroad Co., of its share of the cost and expense of said street improvement, and I therefore advise you not to accept the bonds above referred to.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CONTRACT WITH GLUTRIN PAVING COMPANY ENTERED INTO WITH STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT CONSIDERED AND PASSED UPON.

A contract of the state highway department considered and passed upon.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1919.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of April 14, 1919, regarding a claim for material (glutrin) furnished the state for improvement of section "K," National road, I. C. H. No. 1, and submitting a copy of Mr. C. H. Duncan's letter to you of April 8, has had my attention. You request my opinion as to the validity of this claim.

The facts in the matter may be summarized as follows:

The state, through its agent, Harness Renick, contracted with the Glutrin Paving Company for a certain quantity of glutrin at the price of $16\frac{1}{2}$ cents per gallon applied. The original of this contract cannot be found.

The Glutrin Company delivered in 1917 under this contract about one-fifth of the quantity of glutrin called for therein, and was paid $798.16 on account. Thereafter the Glutrin Company became involved in financial difficulties and was unable to carry out its contract to supply the remaining glutrin and apply all the glutrin—that delivered in 1917 not having been applied. Previously to its having furnished any material at all, the Glutrin Company had assigned to a third party its right to receive compensation under the contract.

When the time came for using glutrin, the assignee made an arrangement with your department whereby the quantity remaining undelivered would be delivered at the shipping point nearest the work, the state in return to pay the freight on the glutrin and haul and apply the entire quantity and charge the cost of freight, haulage and application against the amount due for the glutrin, applied, under the orginal contract between the state's agent and the Glutrin Paving Company. At the time the Glutin Company made its assignment of right to compensation it deposited with the assignee a copy of its contract with the state, which copy was certified to and approved by Mr. H. M. Sharp, who was chief highway engineer at the time. In this certified copy appears a clause reading "charge for barrel, $1.25 each." The high way department and the assignee in making the arrangement noted, used in their negotiations such certified copy, and assumed that it represented the contract entered into between the department and the Glutrin Company. The Glutrin Company was represented as to all matters in connection with the contract, by its agent, Mr. Whitelaw.

The remainder of the glutrin having been delivered and all of the glutrin having been applied in accordance with the arrangements between the department and the assignee, your department in checking over the files with the assignee, found in the files a carbon copy of the original contract. An inspection shows that this carbon copy is identical with the certified copy furnished by Mr. Sharp, except that in the carbon copy an ink line had been run through the above quoted clause.

You inquire whether the barrel charge should be included in calculating the gross amount accruing under the original contract,—such gross amount, as has already been indicated, being the agreed basis of settlement with assignee.

Assuming, for the moment, that the original contract had been carried out by the Glutrin Company itself, without the intervention of any action on the part of the assignee, the only question would be one of fact, namely, whether the original contract is correctly set out in the carbon copy found in the files. There can be no question that in its form as signed by the parties, the contract provided that the barrels should be paid for,—a fact which in the first place is demonstrated by Mr. Sharp's certified copy furnished to the assignee, and in the second place is conceded as a necessary premise to the only explanation offered for the striking of the clause from the carbon copy. Hence, the carbon copy is not to be accepted as representing the contract unless it clearly appears that the clause in question was either inserted by oversight in the first instance, or was stricken out by mutual consent subsequent to the signing of the contract.

That the barrel charge was not inserted in the first instance by mistake is shown by the letter of Mr. Sharp of date December 17, 1918, which is here quoted in full:

> "Have your favor of the 16th in reference to agreement between the Glutrin Paving Company and Harness Rennick for furnishing glutrin on section "K" of the National road in Guernsey county.
>
> My recollection is that the agreement was approved by me in the early spring of 1917. At this time, the charge for barrels of $1.25 each, was brought up and Mr. Whitelaw agreed that the Glutrin Paving Company would have to make this charge for the barrels but after they were emptied, he would credit the state $1.25 for each barrel in good condition when loaded and returned to the factory. It is not clear to me at this time who was to stand the freight on the returned barrels but if there is no notation on this point, I would say that the state would be called upon to pay the freight on the barrels returned.
> It is further my recollection that the agreement did carry the charge of $1.25 each for the barrels and that it was not erased or scratched out on the contract that I approved.
> I trust that this information is in line with what you wanted and I give it as my best recollection of the agreement approved. If I can be of further service in this matter, I will be glad to do so."

It may be noted in passing that Mr. Sharp had severed his connection with the highway department some time before the above letter was written.

As to the point whether the clause was stricken out by mutual agreement, the following is quoted from letter of R. F. Darnell, division engineer, highway department, to yourself, dated April 23, 1919:

> "My memory in connection with this matter is that I took our file copy of the contract dated March 20, 1917, between the Glutrin Paving Company and Harness Rennick to the office of Mr. Whitelaw and discussed with him the meaning of the word 'applied' which appears in the contract after the price per gallon. During this interview it is my memory that the barrel charge was called to Mr. Whitelaw's attention and that he first marked this out with a lead pencil and at my suggestion used a pen and ink, as I did not believe a lead pencil would make a permanent record of the cancellation. As I recall it, Mr. Whitelaw's explanation for making this change was that it was a mistake in typewriting. Upon referring to our file after you gave me Mr. Duncan's letter, I found a memorandum of this interview written by me at the time as follows:
> 'Mr. Whitelaw says there will be no charge for the barrels. This was a mistake in typewriting.
>
> By "applied" they mean cost of handling job, cost of supervision, and cost of sprinkler will be paid by Glutrin people. They do not construe this to include hauling from R. R. to the job.
>
> They have told Rennick to notify them several days ahead.
> Darnell.' "

As compared with Mr. Darnell's statement, the following is quoted from Mr. Duncan's letter to you of date of April 8, 1919:

> "Mr. Whitelaw tells me that he has no recollection of this occurrence. He says he never consented to the elimination of the barrel charges, that the charge was in the contract when it was made, that his company could not have afforded to furnish the barrels without charge and that he never knowingly scratched out the barrel charge."

These seemingly conflicting statements of Mr. Darnell and Mr. Whitelaw may perhaps be reconciled on the theory that Mr. Whitelaw supposed that in striking out the clause in question, he was conforming to the "verbal agreement" referred to by Mr. Sharp as having been made at the time the written contract was executed, under which so-called verbal agreement the Glutrin Company was to take back at the same price the state was being charged for them the barrels found in good condition after they were emptied.

But after all, it is entirely unnecessary to speculate upon the legal effect of these several versions of what occurred; for it is evident that from the mere fact that there is a difference of opinion we must go back to the original written contract containing the barrel charge clause, which document, as is plain enough from Mr. Sharp's letter, expressed the intent of the parties at the time the obligation was entered into.

We may therefore safely conclude that if we had no other ground for payment of the barrel charges than a rejection of the carbon copy as it was found with the clause stricken out, there would be ample reason for such payment.

But an even stronger reason may be given as to why the payment should be made. It will be remembered that the Glutrin Company was unable to fulfill the terms of the contract, and that the assignee offered to do so. The state, being in need of the glutrin to finish the work in accordance with the specifications therefor, proceeded to deal with the assignee. Both parties, in good faith, resorted to the certified copy which had long before been furnished to the assignee by Mr. Sharp. As the assignee was in no wise bound to deliver the material, the state cannot now be heard to say that the material was bought from the assignee on some basis other than that on which both parties were dealing, or in good faith believed they were dealing.

The opinion of this department therefore is that the barrel charges should be paid.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

AGRICULTURE—CONSTRUCTION OF SECTIONS 12 AND 13 OF SENATE BILL 11 RELATIVE TO INSPECTION AND ANALYSIS OF SEEDS.

Sections 12 and 13 of the act known as S. B. No. 11 (83 General Assembly) are not unconstitutional because section 13 provides that the license fee exacted by section 12, for the purpose of defraying the costs of inspection and analysis under said act, shall be paid into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund, no other part of said act indicating any legislative intention to use such license fees for purposes other than defraying such expenses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1919.

HON. N. E. SHAW, Secretary of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of a letter of Professor V. C. Smith, of the College of Agriculture of Ohio State University, accompanied by your note of the same date, in which the opinion of this department is requested. Professor Smith's letter is as follows:

> "Attention has been called by Mr. Curtis Nye Smith, counsel for the American Seed Trade Association, to what might be considered a conflict between sections 12 and 13 of the amended senate bill No. 11, known as the Demuth Seed Bill, which has been passed by the present general assembly. The following is a quotation from his communication:
> 'I note by section 13 that for the purpose of defraying the costs of inspection and analysis, an occupation and license tax of five dollars per annum is charged against the dealers of agricultural seeds sold in Ohio. I also note by section 12 that these license fees, etc., are paid by the secretary of agriculture into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund. Will you kindly ascertain from official sources, if possible from the Attorney-General's office, how it is possible in these two sections above noted, to apply the license fees to the purpose of defraying the costs of inspection and analysis of agricultural seeds?'
> I beg to request a formal opinion on the question involved in the above paragraph. Also if these sections should be conflicting how the wording should be changed in order to be constitutional.
> If this matter could be given your earliest attention, the law could doubtless be amended before the adjournment of the present general assembly."

It is noted that the particular question relative to senate bill No. 11, is as to the constitutionality of sections 12 and 13 of said bill, and this opinion is restricted to that particular question.

Section 12 provides:

> "All monies received from license fees, fines and costs imposed and recovered under the provisions of this act, shall be paid to the secretary of agriculture or his agents and by him paid into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund."

Section 13 in part provides:

> "For the purpose of defraying the costs of inspection and analysis * * * under * * * this act, it is hereby further provided that before any person * * * shall sell * * * in this state any of the agricultural seeds, except as provided in * * * this act, he * * * shall pay each year a license fee to the secretary of agriculture of ten dollars."

It is also noted that the purpose of the bill in the title is declared to be "to regulate the selling, offering and exposing for sale, of agricultural seeds."

It is noted that this legislative recital of its purpose and intention for the imposition of this fee, while not decisive, must be given great weight in the determination of the purpose of sections 12 and 13.

This department is convinced that this act being for the protection of the public in the purchase of agricultural seeds, if otherwise in conformity to law, is a valid exercise of the police power of the state as defined in Board of Health vs. Greenville, 86 O. S., 1, where the police power is described as including everything which is reasonable and necessary to secure the peace, health, morals and best interests of the public.

However, it is also noted that the license fee provided for in section 13 is for the avowed purpose of defraying the costs of inspection and analysis of agricultural seeds under the provisions of this act.

In numerous decisions in this state its power to regulate occupations and to require persons engaged therein to secure a license to pay a fee therefor is clearly established. However, in the exercise of this power, in exacting the payment of a license for such purpose, the amount of the license must be reasonably consistent with the special benefit conferred upon the licensee or the special burden which his occupation places upon the public. As said in Marmet vs. State, 45 O. S., 63;

> "The general assembly has power to regulate occupations by license, and to compel, by imposition of a fine, payment of a reasonable fee, where a special benefit is conferred by the public upon those who follow an occupation or where the occupation imposes special burdens on the public."

It may be observed, however, that it has been held by the courts of this state that the general assembly, in the guise of exercising this police power, and the exaction of a license fee, cannot indirectly use such means for providing general revenue.

In the case of Graves vs. Janes, 18 C. C. (n. s.) 488, the constitutionality of the automobile license tax law was successfully challenged. That act, passed in 1913 103 O. L., 763, provided for the registration of motor vehicles and the payment of certain registration fees.

Section 3609 of that law provided that the > "revenues derived by registration fees provided for in this chapter shall be applied * * * toward defraying the expenses incident to carrying out and enforcing the provisions of this chapter and any surplus thereof shall be paid by him (secretary of state) monthly into the state treasury. One-third of the revenue paid into the state treasury shall be used for the repair * * * and patrolling of the public roads and highways of this state."

In stating the case, in his opinion at page 489 Judge Allread observed that:

> "The constitutionality of the act under consideration is challenged chiefly upon the following grounds: * * *
> 3. Illegality and unreasonableness in the amount and the purpose of the fee exacted."

After disposing of the other objections to the law, and coming to consider the one above quoted, the court at page 492 says:

> "This brings us to a consideration of the amount and legality of the license charge. This feature is the most difficult of solution. The identification and registration of motor vehicles has a legitimate purpose, but it is clear that the charge provided for in the act under consideration goes far beyond this purpose. The act clearly contemplates other purposes and such purposes must be ascertained and their legality determined by constitutional limitations. * * * The imposition of a reasonable charge for reimbursement for road maintenance and repair and for policing the road, in view of the special uses contemplated by the act, is warranted by the general grant of legislative power. This is not a property tax but a privilege tax. The reasonableness of a privilege tax is confined largely to the discretion of the general assembly, but for the abuse of such legislative power a final review is in the courts."

Considering section 3609, supra, and quoting therefrom, the court in question, on page 493, says:

"The act provides that one-third of the revenue paid into the state treasury 'shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patrolling of the public roads and highways of this state under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department.' No special provision having been made for the other two thirds of this revenue, it remains in the general fund. It is true that the general revenue fund is subject to special appropriation for any lawful purpose. But we cannot escape the conclusion that the manifest purpose of the general assembly in appropriating expressly for highway purposes, including both maintenance and policing, but one-third of such revenue, and leaving the other two-thirds in the general revenue fund of the state, clearly discloses an intention on the part of the general assembly to raise the larger portion of this fund for general revenue purposes. The act is, therefore, to that extent, a revenue measure."

The court distinguishes the cases of State ex rel. vs. Ferris, 53 O. S., 314, and Ashley vs. Ryan, 53 O. S., 504, from the automobile case in that those cases cited were excise tax cases and that the vehicle tax does not rest upon the same basis.

Without quoting further from the decision in the automobile tax case, it is sufficient to state the court's conclusion, which was:

"We are, therefore, forced to the conclusion that the act under consideration, so far as it applies to the owners and users of motor vehicles, is, in large part, a general revenue measure, and to that extent is unconstitutional and void."

The court indicated a reluctance in expressing an opinion as to whether the act may have been cured by an expression of the necessity to raise the entire fund for highway purpose and an appropriation of the entire amount for that purpose, less the cost of maintaining the department, which, it may be noted, would have been more responsive to our present question.

It may be contended that section 3609 of the automobile tax law was held to be unconstitutional because two-thirds of the revenue raised under that act, after the expenses of such automobile registration was paid, was unappropriated and placed to the credit of the general revenue fund. But this is only partly true as the court's reasoning is that by having specifically appropriated the one-third for highway purposes, and then turning over two-thirds to the general revenue fund unappropriated, the general assembly clearly disclosed an intention to raise the larger portion of the fund for revenue purposes. Had there been no special appropriation for the highways there would have been no expression of the legislature to indicate to what extent such fees were to be used for the related highway purposes, in the absence of which it may be suggested the court could not have logically concluded that the legislative purpose to raise general revenue was so clearly disclosed.

In this connection sections 12 and 13, supra, may be distinguished from section 3609 under consideration in the Graves case, in this, (1) that the use and purpose of the fees of the former are explicitly stated to be for "defraying the costs of inspection and analysis * * * under * * * this act." In the latter there is no such declaration of legislative intention; (2) the former provides for all fees to be paid into the general revenue fund, which, as stated in the Graves case, is subject to specific appropriation for any lawful purpose.

Obviously this would permit the payment of the expenses of inspection and analysis from that fund; the latter section having indicated a limit to the highway appropriation, turned over the larger part of the balance with nothing to indicate its application to uses and purposes related to the subject matter of the license.

There is nothing in senate bill 11 to indicate an intention to use these fees for any such unrelated purpose. The fees are to be credited to that fund from which the cost of inspection and analysis shall be paid. Here it is pertinent to recall that it is presumed that public officials will administer this fund according to law and that every intendment in favor of the validity of this statute is to be given it in determining its constitutionality and, as stated in Sipe vs. State, 86 O. S., 87,

> "True, the intention of the legislature is important in determining the proper construction to be given it, but that intent must be ascertained, first, if possible, from the language used and where that language is clear and unambiguous courts have no authority to change it."

In view of the terms of section 13, declaratory of its purpose, how can it be claimed that this section is clearly violative of any constitutional limitation and, therefore, invalid, for, before a court will declare it so, it must be clearly unconstitutional. As held in Board of Health vs. Greenville, 86 O. S., page 20:

> "A court is not authorized to adjudge a statute unconstitutional where the question of its constitutionality is at all doubtful. The question of the constitutionality of every law being first determined by the legislature, every presumption is in favor of its constitutionality. It must, therefore, clearly appear that the law is in direct conflict with inhibitions of the constitution before a court will declare it unconstitutional."

Whether the amount of the fee is so excessive as to be arbitrary, unreasonable and disproportionate to the expense of the enforcement of this law, is purely a question of fact concerning which your letter does not enlighten this department. However, it is suggested that for the purpose of this opinion, and at this time, such facts are unnecessary, as this question could hardly be determined until in its actual operation the amount of fees and the costs of inspection and analysis are ascertained.

Consistent with the foregoing principles, this department concludes that the sections involved in your inquiry are not unconstitutional.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SOLDIER BURIAL COMMITTEES—SECTIONS 2950 TO 2957 G. C. CONSTRUED AND DISCUSSED—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS' AUTHORITY RELATIVE TO SAID STATUTES.

1. The township or ward committee appointed by the county commissioners under section 2950, by the provisions of sections 2950 or 2957, inclusive, are empowered and authorized to enter into a contract for the burial of the deceased soldier or other person named in section 2950, at a cost not to exceed $75.00.

2. When such committee has so contracted for such burial, in conformity with the provisions of the above sections, and in the absence of fraud or collusion, the county commissioners are not authorized to review the action of said committee or modify their contract so made.

3. By virtue of the passage of house bill No. 8, signed by the governor March 19, 1919, the maximum amount of the expense which may be incurred under section 2950, upon the expiration of the referendum period, will be $100.00 instead of $75.00, as above stated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 10, 1919.

HON. C. A. WELDON, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter of April 25, 1919, as follows:

> "I shall be pleased to have you give me your opinion concerning the construction of section 2952 of the General Code with reference to the powers of the soldiers' burial committee as therein provided. The statute provides among other things that the committee shall satisfy themselves beyond a reasonable doubt that the family of the deceased is unable, for want of means, to defray the expenses of the burial of the soldier, or that the family may be deprived of means actually necessary for their immediate support, if the family bears the expenses. It sometimes happens that the family of the deceased may have some means, but insufficient to bury the deceased soldier and maintain or defray their own expenses. Under such circumstances if the committee decides that the whole expenses of the burial of the deceased soldier should be borne by the county, would the county commissioners have a right to review the decision of the committee, and modify it in any respect?
> "I have enclosed herewith a copy of the letter which was written by Fred Clark, an undertaker of this city, and handed to me, in which the facts are set forth about which the controversy has arisen concerning the effect of the committee's decision and the right to review the same."

It is to be noted that the extent of the powers and authority of the soldiers' burial committee, under section 2950 G. C., is involved, with the further question of the power and duty of the county commissioners to review the action of such committee in the matter of burial of deceased soldiers.

Sections 2950, 2951, 2952, 2954, 2955, 2956 and 2957 of the General Code are pertinent.

Section 2950 provides in part:

> "The county commissioners * * * shall appoint two suitable persons in each township and ward in the county, * * * who shall contract, at a cost not to exceed seventy-five dollars, with the undertaker * * * and cause to be interred * * * the body of any honorably discharged soldier."

Section 2951 in part is:

> "The committee so appointed shall use the forms of contracts herein prescribed, and abide by the regulations herein provided."

Section 2952 in part provides:

> "Before they assume the charge and expense of any such burial, the persons so appointed shall satisfy themselves beyond a reasonable doubt, by careful inquiry, that the family of the deceased is unable, for want of means, to defray the expenses, or that the family may be deprived of means actually necessary for their immediate support. Thereupon they shall cause to be buried such person, and make a report thereof to the county commissioners, setting forth * * * an accurate itemized statement of the expenses incurred by reason of such burial."

Section 2954 provides in detail the form of contract to be used in such cases. Section 2955 in part provides:

"The undertaker shall present his itemized bill and contract to the county auditor * * * in order to obtain his warrant."

Section 2956 in part is:

"If a saving of money is effected by reason of donations of carriages, * * * the amount of such saving shall go to the family of the deceased, * * * or remain in the general fund of the county, at the discretion of the committee."

Coming more directly to the duties of the commissioners, when the report and statement is filed with them, section 2957 in part provides that the commissioners shall "certify the expenses thus incurred, to the county auditor, who shall draw his warrant therefor * *."

The opinion of the former Attorney-General, found in volume 2, Annual Report of the Attorney-General, 1911-1912, page 1471 (referring particularly to section 2950 G. C.) that is approved.

"the statute certainly is one to be construed liberally in favor of the soldiers,"

These sections impose the duty of careful investigation of each case by the local committee. In fact, by the terms of section 2952, supra, before "they assume the charge and expense," the committee is bound to satisfy itself "beyond a reasonable doubt" as to the indigency of the family of the deceased. It may be noted that the degree of certainty as to this latter fact is the same as the law requires for the conviction of the person accused of a crime; a wholly meaningless phrase and an absurd proceeding if, after so finding such indigency to exist, and entering into what these sections term a contract with the undertaker, and causing the burial to be made, the commissioners were obliged to pass on the amount of compensation thus contracted for after consideration had been furnished by the undertaker.

Section 2957, supra, provides that the commissioners shall "certify the expenses thus incurred, to the county auditor, who shall draw his warrant therefor."

It is apparent that these sections come within the exceptions of section 2560 G. C., which prohibit the payment of claims against the county otherwise than upon the allowance of the county commissioners and is one of "those cases in which the amount due * * * is authorized to be fixed by some other person" as therein provided.

Consideration of the purpose of these statutes and of their express provisions, lead to the conclusion that such committee is authorized to contract for and bind the county up to the maximum of $75.00 in the matter of such burials, and in the absence of fraud or collusion the commissioners are not authorized to review their decision or to modify their contract in such matters.

This opinion is rendered upon the law now in force, but it is proper to call your attention to the fact that by house bill No. 8, signed by the governor March 19, 1919, the maximum amount to be charged was increased from seventy-five dollars to one hundred dollars.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TUITION—PRIVATELY SUPPORTED SCHOOL CANNOT COLLECT FROM BOARD OF EDUCATION—CANNOT PAY TUITION TO A BOARD OUTSIDE OF OHIO.

Tuition contracts and agreements must be made between boards of education representing school districts and any school privately supported cannot collect tuition from a board of education (sections 7750-7752 G. C.), and tuition can be paid only to boards of education within the state of Ohio.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter of recent date in which you request the opinion of this department, as follows:

> "1. May a board of education legally pay tuition for a pupil attending an educational institution of any nature whatsoever, if such institution is not a part of the public school system of Ohio?
> 2. May a board of education legally pay tuition for a pupil attending a school outside of the state of Ohio.?"

Upon careful analysis it will be observed that the first question really includes the second, if a negative answer be given thereto.

There are two ways in which a board of education may become obligated to pay the tuition of a pupil residing in the district under its control, at some other school: These are by contract and by operation of law. Authority to enter into contracts creating an obligation to pay tuition is found in sections 7734 (as to common schools) and 7750 G. C. (as to high schools). These sections, so far as material in this connection, reads as follows:

> "Sec. 7734. The board (of education) of any district may contract with the board of another district for the admission of pupils into any school in such other district, on term agreed upon by such boards. * * *"
> Sec. 7750. A board of education not having a high school may enter into an agreement with one or more boards of education maintaining such school for the schooling of all its high school pupils. * * *"

Under these sections it is perfectly clear that a contract can be made only with a board of education of the state of Ohio. Both parties must be "boards of education" (section 7750) or "boards of (school) districts" (section 7734). These terms can have no application to the trustees or other managing authorities of a private institution, nor to the board of education or other similar governmental authority of another state.

An obligation to pay tuition may arise by operation of law under sections 7735 and 7736 (elementary schools) and 7747 to 7752, inclusive, of the General Code (high schools). The following provisions of these sections may be quoted:

> "Sec. 7735. When pupils live more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned in the district where they reside, they may attend a nearer school in the same district, or if there be none nearer therein, then the nearest school in another school district, in all grades below the high school. In such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement to that effect. But a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside. * * *"

Sec. 7736. Such tuition shall be paid from either the tuition or the contingent funds and the amount per capita must be ascertained by dividing the total expense of conducting the elementary schools of the district attended, which shall include interest charges not to exceed five per cent. per annum, based upon the actual value of all property used in conducting said elementary school, by the total enrollment in the elementary schools of the district, such amount to be computed by the month. * * *"

Under these sections, which relate to tuition of elementary school pupils, it is very clear that the obligation to pay tuition without an agreement to that effect can only run in favor of a board of education of this state. In the first place, the school to be attended in order to create such obligation must be one "in another school district"; in the second place, the collector of the tuition must be "a board of education"; in the third place the amount of tuition must be computed upon the basis of the "total expense of conducting the elementary schools of the district attended" to be ascertained with reference to "the total enrollment in the elementary schools of the district." Clearly, the obligation here is one which arises in favor of one Ohio school district against another; it cannot arise in favor of the managers of a private institution nor in favor of the public authorities of another state or one of its subdivisions.

The high school sections are as follows:

"Sec. 7747. The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school who reside in village or rural districts, in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal residence, such tuition to be computed by the month. * * * No more shall be charged per capita than the amount ascertained by dividing the total expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended, which may include charges not exceeding five per cent. per annum and depreciation charges not exceeding five per cent. per annum, based upon the actual value of all property used in conducting said high school by the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district. * * *"

Sec. 7748. A board of education providing a third grade high school as defined by law shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year. Should pupils residing in the district prefer not to attend such third grade high school the board of education of such district shall be required to pay the tuition of such pupils at any first grade high school for four years, or at any second grade high school for three years and a first grade high school for one year. Such a board providing a second grade high school as defined by law shall pay the tuition of graduates residing in the district at any first grade high school for one year; except that, a board maintaining a second or third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district. No board of education is required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four years; * * * Where more than one high school is maintained, by agreement of the board and parent or guardian, pupils may attend either and their transportation shall be so paid. * * *"

Sec. 7752. No board of education shall be entitled to collect tuition under this chapter unless it is maintaining a regularly organized high school with a course of study extending over not less than two years and consisting mainly of branches higher than those in which the pupil is examined. The standing or grade of all public high schools in the state shall be determined by the superintendent of public instruction and his finding in reference thereto shall be final."

While the language of these sections is not quite so conclusive as that of the sections previously examined, yet it is impossible to draw from them any inferences productive of a contrary result. In the first place, section 7747 fixes the method of computing with reference to the "expenses of conducting the high school of the district attended" to be ascertained by the use of "the average monthly enrollment in the high school of the district." These phrases refer to school districts of the state of Ohio.

It is true that section 7748 standing by itself uses no term more definitive than "first grade high school," "second grade high school," etc.; so that by reference to this section alone some one might argue that any educational institution offering courses of study substantially the equivalent of those afforded by a high school of the proper grade might be entitled to resceive tuition. However, section 7747 must be read in connection with section 7748 because it fixes the basis of computing the tuition payable under section 7748, as well as that payable under section 7747, where the obligor district maintains no high school at all. Otherwise, there would be no way of arriving at the amount chargeable against a school district under section 7748, no contract being contemplated. Therefore, the inferences previously drawn from section 7747 apply to section 7748 as well.

In the same connection section 7752 surely contemplates that the obligee shall in all cases be a "board of education," by which, of course, is meant a board of education of the state of Ohio.

The sections examined cover the whole field of authority to pay tuition or liability to pay such tuition. In this connection see the opinion of the Attorney-General under date of May 16, 1918, No. 1213. It is apparent, therefore, that the first question submitted must be answered in the negative and that from such answer a like answer to the second question necessarily follows.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date April 7, 1919, you made request of this department for an opinion upon the following statement of facts and inquiries submitted by Hon. David Armstrong Jr., city solicitor, St. Marys, Ohio:

"STATEMENT OF FACTS.

The city of St. Marys, Ohio, intends within the near future to make an improvement on a portion of East Spring street in said city, said portion being a part of Main Market Road No. 11, and also being a part of Inter-County Highway No. 165, by paving, curbing, sewering, and otherwise improving the street, in accordance with G. C. sections No. 6950, 6951, 6952, 6953 and 6954. Said portion to be paved lies wholly within the corporate limits of the city, and is an extension of the Wapakoneta-St. Marys road.

The Western Ohio Railway Company, owns for railway purposes a strip of land adjoining said street to be improved, which said strip runs easterly and westerly. The street runs in the same directions. Said strip of railway land lies immediately south of said street and is adjacent to said street. Said strip used for railway purposes separates the street to be improved and the lots and lands of property owners lying south of said street and right-of-way. The north boundary line of said right-of-way coincides with the south boundary line of said street, while the south boundary line of said right-of-way coincides with the north boundary line of the property owners' lots and lands. The deed granting said right-of-way to said railway company is a clear warranty deed, containing, however, this provision, viz.: That should said company ever fail to operate a railway on said strip, that then, said strip should revert to the property owners from whom the strip was purchased or of course to their successors, vendees or assigns. Assessment to pay the cost of said improvement is to be made upon the foot frontage plan at the proper time.

The improvement in question was initiated by the county commissioners of this, Auglaize county. The improvement will be made under and in accordance with plan or method No. three (3) of section No. 6919, and not under section 6921. The width of the right of way in question is 36 feet. The railroad in question is an interurban railroad. The railroad connects the two cities of St. Marys and Wapakoneta, and extends on to Lima to the east and to Celina to the west of St. Marys. It runs through the center of streets in the several cities, but I take it that it would be classed as an interurban railroad, since it connects up several cities in this vicinity.

1. In your opinion, who is the abutting property owner on the south side of said street—the railway company or the owners of lands and lots lying south of said right-of-way?

2. Should the railway company pay the entire assessment, they being in one sense the abutting property owner, or should the property owners having lots and lands south of said right-of-way pay the entire assessment, or should the assessment for the south side of said street be prorated between the two?

3. In your opinion, can the railway company be assessed for any portion of the cost of said improvement, or is it exempt from assessment in this matter?

4. If in your opinion, the assessment should be pro-rated between the railway company and the property owners having lands and lots south of said right-of-way, upon what basis should said assessment be pro-rated?"

It may be noted that while in said statement, reference is made to section 6954 the same is found to have been repealed. It therefore appears that the statutes in point are sections 6949 to 6953, which in turn refer specifically to certain other statutes, among them section 6919, mentioned in the statement.

Said sections 6949 to 6953, are the concluding sections of a series of statutes sections 6906 to 6953, providing for road improvement under the supervision of county commissioners. Such concluding sections provide for the contingency of road improvement into, within, or through a municipality.

Section 6949 provides in substance that the municipality may assume such share of the cost of that part of the improvement lying within the municipality as may be agreed upon between the council and the board of county commisssioners, and that if no part of the cost is assumed by the municipality, then no action on its part is necessary, other than the giving of consent by its council to the improvement,—all other proceedings in such event being conducted by the county commissioners as though the improvements were wholly outside of a municipality.

Section 6950 first provides for certain steps to be taken by the council in the event that the municipality assumes any part of the cost of the improvement,—such as approving plans, agreeing on a proportion of cost to be assumed, publishing notices in newspapers, etc., and then continues:

"* * * claims for compensation and damages on account of the proposed improvement shall be filed with the council. Said notice shall be published at least one week before said time fixed for the filing of such claims. Claims for compensation and damages shall be in writing, and shall be filed with council not later than the time fixed in said notice, and all claims not so filed shall be barred, except as to minors and other persons under disability. If any claims for compensation or damages are filed and the council is not able to agree upon the amount of the same with the persons filing such claims, they shall order proceedings to be instituted in a court of competent jurisdiction to inquire into such claims for compensation and damages in the manner provided for the assessment of damages in the case of street improvements wholly under the control and jurisdiction of the municipality. All compensation and damages on account of said improvement shall be paid by the municipality. For the purpose of providing by taxation a fund for the payment of the proportion of the cost and expense of said improvement to be paid by the municipality and also the compensation and damages incident thereto, said municipality is authorized to levy taxes upon all the taxable property of such municipality under the same conditions and restrictions imposed by law in the case of taxes levied, for the purpose of providing funds for the payment of the municipality's share of the cost of street improvements under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the council of a municipality. The council of said municipality may assess against abutting property owners all or any part of the proportion of the cost and expense of said improvement and the compensation and damages to be paid by it. Said assessments shall be made in one of the methods provided for in the case of street improvements wholly within the municpality, and under the exclusive control of the council."

Section 6951 reads:

"The municipality shall pay to the county treasurer its estimated proportion of the cost and expense of said improvement as fixed in said agreement between the council and the county commissioners, out of any funds available therefor, and in anticipation of the collection of assessments to be made against abutting property as hereinbefore provided, and in anticipation of the collection of taxes levied for the purpose of providing for the payment of the municipality's share of the cost and expense of such improvement, said municipality is authorized to sell its bonds under the same conditions and restrictions imposed by law in the sale of bonds for street improvements under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the council of a municipality."

Section 6951-1 reads:

"The board of county commissioners may provide for an improvement within a municipality by levying against the property benefited in the same manner as is herein provided for in sections 6919, 6920, 6922, 6923 and 6925 of this act and as provided in section 6924 of the General Code. In such proceedings, however, the municipality shall pay all damages and compensation for land affected or taken by reason of such improvement. The municipality shall pay to the county treasurer its estimated portion of the cost and expense of such an improvement to be borne by the municipality as a whole as fixed in the agreement between the council and the county commissioners, out of any funds available, and may issue such bonds therefor and under such conditions as provided for in sections 6951."

Section 6952 provides for letting of contract by the county commissioners and the payment of the cost of the work on their allowance.

It would appear to have been the intent of the legislature that in case the municipality assumes a portion of the cost with the intention of assessing against abutting real estate, all or a part of the portion so assumed, sections 3812, et seq providing for assessments within municipalities are to be followed insofar as concerns the making of such assessment, easpecially as it is to be noted that by the provisions of section 6951, bonds for the assessment share, as well as the municipality's share of the cost, may be sold "under the same conditions and restrictions" as are imposed by law in the sale of bonds for street improvements under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the council of a municipality. Therefore the proposed assessment referred to in the above quoted inquiries is doubtless intended to be made as provided in sections 3812 et seq.

That a railroad right-of-way such as is described in the statement of facts above set out, is to be treated for assessment purposes as land abutting the proposed improvement, seems to have been held by our supreme court in two reported cases, the first of which is Railroad Co. vs. Connelly, 10 O. S. 159. In that case, the syllabi read:

"1. Section 116 of the act for the organization of cities, etc. (Swan's R. Stat. 985), authorizing the city council to assess the expense of improving a street upon the lots or lands abutting thereon in proportion to the feet front of said lots or lands, is not unconstitutional.

2. The assessment, whether by the front feet or upon the value assessed for taxation must be uniform, operating alike upon all the lots or lands so abutting; and the fact that one or more of the tracts may not have been benefited by the improvement, will not render such assessment invalid.

3. Lands appropriated by a railroad company for its track through a city, and crossing the improved street at right angles, and upon which the track was constructed after the work had been completed, is liable to such assessment.

4. As between the railroad company and the person performing the work (whatever may be the rights of bona fide mortgagees of said railroad), the lands so appropriated may be sold to pay such assessment.

5. The land appropriated for a railroad track within a city, and occupied exclusively for that purpose, is land within the meaning of section 116 of said act for the organization of cities, etc."

The second case is that of Railroad Co. vs. Commissioners, 19 O. S. 589, a memorandum decision reading as follows:

"By the Court—Held: That land appropriated by a railroad company for a railroad track and depot purposes is, in the possession of such company, 'land' for purposes of assessment under the provisions of the act of March 29, 1867, 'To authorize the county commissioners to construct roads, on petition of a majority of resident land owners along and adjacent to the line of said road, and to repeal an act therein named' (64 O. L. 80). and the act of April 5, 1866 (63 O. L. 114), thereby repealed.

The Northern Indiana R. R. Co. vs. Connelly 10 Ohio St. 159 followed and approved."

See also Dillon, Municipal Corporations (5th Ed.) section 1451; Page & Jones on Assessments, section 595.

The holding in these cases and the text of these writers must be read in the light of the subsequent case of Railway Co. vs. Cincinnati 62 O. S., 465, which holds that section 19 of article I of the Ohio constitution is a limitation upon section 6 of article XIII as to power of assessments (first syllabus) and further holds that this limitation extends to the amount of the assessment "which cannot exceed benefits." (Opinion p. 475.) This matter of limitation is now definitely provided for by statute, the opening words of section 3819 being:

"The council shall limit all assessments to the special benefits conferred upon the property assessed * * *."

The railway company by reason of the location of its right of way as described in the above statement of facts, having thus been seen to be the owner of real estate which is "land" within the meaning of municipal assessment statutes the answer to the first inquiry submitted is that the "abutting land" subject to assessment on the foot frontage plan is that of the railway company, and not that lying south of the railway company's land no statute having been found which authorizes land to be treated for municipal street assessment on the foot frontage plan as abutting land when in fact it does not abut on the improvement.

The foregoing observations bearing on the first inquiry submitted constitute a sufficient answer to all of the questions embraced in the second inquiry excepting the question "Should the railway company pay the entire assessment?" It is assumed. of course that this question has reference only to that portion of the entire assessment that is intended to be laid against the land abutting the improvement on the south, the land abutting on the north not having been made the subject of inquiry. Keeping in mind that it is proposed to make the assessment on the foot frontage plan, we may readily see that a categorical answer may not be given to the question whether the whole assessment applicable to land abutting on the south is to be laid against the railway company's land. The amount that may be assessed is not determinable merely by reference to the abstract proposition that the right of way is to be treated as "land" for assessment purposes, practical considerations must also play their part.

It has already been noted that by express statutory restriction based upon fundamental constitutional rights the amount of the assessment must not exceed special benefits conferred upon the property assessed. The same section of the statutes (3819 G. C.) which sets forth this restriction, contains the further limitation that,

> "in no case shall there be levied upon any lot * * * any assessment or assessments for any or all purposes, within a period of five years, to exceed thirty-three and one-third per cent. of the actual value thereof after improvement is made."

Furthermore, in the present instance, the right of way of the railway company is probably not shown upon the county tax duplicate n whole or in part as having been assessed locally for taxation, but is valued in accordance with statutes relating to public utilities, thus making necessary resort to section 3813 G. C. providing for the fixing of a value by council.

And as by he express terms of section 3813, the fixing of values by the council is "for the purpose of such assessments," it goes without saying that council must act in good faith and fix the value on a proper and not on an arbitrary basis. (Chamberlain vs. Cleveland, 34 O. S., 551; Walsh vs. Baron, 61 O. S., 15; Walsh vs. Sims 65 O. S., 211).

Another limitation on special assessments is provided in section 3822, in substance that where one special assessment for street improvement has been paid, the property assessed shall not be again assessed for more than one-half the cost of repaving or repairs, etc.

For these reasons, the question "should the railway company pay the entire assessment," may be answered by the statement that only to the extent that the sum total of the assessment does not exceed the special benefits accruing to the railway company's land, or the thirty-three and one-third per cent. limitation as defined in section 3819, or the limitation of section 3822, may it be levied against such land.

The answers thus given as to the first and second inquiries make unnecessary the answering of the third and fourth inquiries.

The views above expressed have relation to the fact that it is proposed to make the assessment on the foot frontage plan.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

NON-RESIDENT PAUPER DIES IN STATE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION —EXPENSES OF BURIAL—HOW PAID.

Where a non-resident pauper dies in a state benevolent institution, the county commissioners of the county from which he was sent are required to reimburse the board of administration for the expenses incurred in his burial, except when the body is delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 9984 G. C. See section 3496 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1919.

HON. WAYNE STILWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Millersburg, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of April 24, 1919, requesting my opinion as to whether or not the commissioners of Holmes county should pay the expenses of the burial of John Tracy, a pauper, who died at the Massillon State Hospital on February 26, 1919, was duly received.

The facts and circumstances surrounding this case are stated in your letter, which reads as follows:

> "I am enclosing a letter from the superintendent of the Massillon State Hospital to Hon. Charles A. Estill, probate judge, concerning a bill for the funeral expenses of John Tracy who died in the hospital February 26, 1919, in which he says that the hospital has no burial fund and that he feels the commissioners of Holmes county should pay the bill. The amount involved is not large but the board has held it up pending a ruling.
> This man, who was a non-resident of the county and state, was only in the county a day or two when he was picked up as a vagrant. An examination clearly showed a diseased body and mind. Sometimes he would say he was from Michigan and sometimes from Canada. It has since developed that he was from near London, Ontario.
> The probate judge, complying with section 1950 G. C. notified the state board of administration and, by their order, Tracy was committed to the state hospital.
>
> So far I have been unable to find a statute or ruling directly deciding whether the county or state would have to pay in a case of this kind. Section 1820 G. C., however, provides that when the domicile of a non-resident insane person is known, he may be transported thereto at the expense of the state.
> I would be pleased to receive your opinion as to whether the commissioners should allow this bill."

When application is made to the probate court for the commitment of a person to a state hospital for the insane, it is provided by section 1819 that:

> "If the judge or superintendent finds that the person whose commitment or admission is requested has not a legal residence in this state, or his legal residence is in doubt or unknown, and is of the opinion that such person should be committed or admitted to such institution, he shall notify without delay the Ohio board of administration, giving his reasons for requesting commitment or admission."

It is then provided by section 1820 G. C. that:

> "The Ohio board of administration by a committee, its secretary, or such agent as it designates, shall investigate the legal residence of such person, and may send for persons and papers and administer oaths or affirmations in conducting such investigation. At any time after investigation is made, and before or after the admission, or commitment to such institution, a non-resident person whose legal residence has been established may be transported thereto at the expense of this state."

The management and government of the Massillon State Hospital is imposed upon the Ohio board of administration by section 1835 G. C.

By the provisions of section 3496 G. C. the duty and obligation of paying the expenses of the burial of a pauper is, in the first instance, placed upon the board of administration (except when the body is delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 9984 G. C., which is not applicable to the present inquiry), which board in turn is required to send an itemized bill of the expense for payment to the county commissioners of the county from which the pauper was sent to the institution, and upon receipt of such bill the commissioners are required to immediately pay the same. Section 3496 G. C. reads as follows:

"In a county in which is located a state benevolent institution, the board in control of said institution shall pay all expenses of the burial of a pauper that dies in such institution, except when the body is delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 9984 of the General Code, and send an itemized bill of the expenses thereof to the county commissioners of the county from which the pauper was sent to the institution. Such county commissioners shall immediately pay the bill to such board in control."

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP POOR RELIEF FUND—NO AUTHORITY FOR TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES TO APPOINT TRUSTEE OF ADJOINING TOWNSHIP TO ADMINISTER SAID FUND.

There is no authority in law for township trustees to appoint or employ a trustee of an adjoining township to perform services in connection with the disbursement of township poor relief funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1919.

HON CLARE CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated April 25, 1919, as follows:

"A part of the city of Warren is in Howland township, and therefore under the jurisdiction of the Howland trustees. Heretofore the trustees of Warren township have been taking jurisdiction of all cases requiring public relief or support in the city of Warren. However, this matter has been corrected, and the Howland trustees are now looking after the cases in their township.

"There is one member of the Warren township board who has looked after the cases and has had experience which makes him very competent to serve in such matters, and the Howland board would like to employ him to look after those cases in their township, within the city of Warren.

It seems to me that the trustees are attempting to delegate authority where they have no right to do so. I therefore would like your opinion as to the power of the trustees to appoint a trustee of the adjoining township to serve in cases such as those in question, it being understood that a compensation would be paid for such services."

The question involved in your inquiry is that of the power and authority of township trustees to delegate their authority under the poor relief laws of the state, for it is assumed that by the words "all cases requiring public relief or support" you mean township poor relief cases.

Section 5, article X, of the constitution of Ohio, and section 3294 G. C., are pertinent.

Section 5 in part is:

"No money shall be drawn from any * * * township treasury, except by authority of law."

Section 3294 G. C., as amended in 107 O. L., 698, in part provides:

"Each trustee shall be entitled to * * * two dollars and fifty cents for each day of service in the business of the township, to be paid from the township treasury. The compensation of any trustee * * * shall not exceed two hundred and fifty dollars in any year, including services in connection with the poor."

It is to be observed that the compensation of the trustees so fixed is for their services in the business of the township and further examination of the laws relative to the duties and powers of such trustees does not disclose any authority to delegate this power to any other officer or person, in the absence of which, such authority, as required by the constitutional provision above quoted, would be lacking.

You are therefore advised that there is no authority in law for the delegation by township trustees of their authority as to the disbursement of poor relief, and the appointment or employment of a trustee of an adjoining township for such purpose is not authorized by law.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—ORDINANCE NO 30897 OF CITY OF COLUMBUS, OHIO, UNCONSTITUTIONAL—SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS BETWEEN HOURS OF TEN O'CLOCK P. M. AND SIX O'CLOCK A. M.

Ordinance No. 30897 of the city of Columbus, Ohio, makes it a misdemeanor to keep open any saloon or place where any intoxicating liquor is sold, kept or exposed for sale within the limits of said city, between the hours of ten o'clock P. M. and six o'clock A. M.

of the day following, without any exceptions as to drug stores or sales of intoxicating liquors therein for known pharmaceutical purposes.

HELD Because of the absence of such exception, said ordinance, being in conflict with general laws, is invalid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1919.

State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter dated February 25, 1919, in which you inquire if the facts as stated therein constitute a violation of ordinance No. 30897 of the city of Columbus.

Said ordinance, a copy of which you enclose with your letter, prohibits the keeping open of "any saloon or place where any intoxicating liquor is sold, kept or exposed for sale" between the hours of ten o'clock p. m. and 6 o'clock a. m. of the day following.

Section 1 of said ordinance, from which the above quotation is taken, makes such keeping open a misdemeanor and provides that upon conviction thereof the sentence shall be not less than $100.00 nor more than $250.00 for the first offense and an increased penalty for a second offense.

Section 2, having reference to hotels, boarding houses and restaurants, defines the acts and conditions which will amount to a compliance with the ordinance on the part of the proprietors of such places.

Section 3 repeals old sections 319 and 320 of the codified ordinances of the city of Columbus and, as provided therein, "all other ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith."

Section 4 of the ordinance relates to the time that it shall be in force and take effect.

The facts as stated in your letter and supplemented by other facts stated in personal conferences with you, are that a certain hotel company, which has a saloon license effective in the building wherein it conducts a hotel business, with a bar room or saloon in connection, permits the drinking of intoxicating liquors in what may be termed its grill room after ten o'clock p. m. The further fact is noted that, as stated in your letter, "the liquor is said to be sold and delivered to the guests before ten p. m. and the guests are permitted to remain in the _____ room until the liquor is consumed."

While your letter does not directly inquire if ordinance 30897 is valid, its validity is fundamentally involved in the question which you have submitted. Therefore it is deemed proper to first consider the validity of the ordinance in order that the opinion of this department may be responsive to the need of your board.

Preliminary to consideration of this ordinance and the decisions of the courts relative to such matters, it may be observed that this is a penal ordinance and must be strictly construed.

We may approach the question of the validity of this city ordinance by a consideration of the power of a municipality in such matters.

Article XVIII, section 3, and section 6065 G. C. are pertinent.

Article XVIII, section 3, of the constitution, adopted in 1912, is:

> "Municipalities shall have power * * * to adopt and enforce * * * such local police * * * regulations as are not in conflict with general laws."

Section 6065 of the saloon license law of 1913, 103 O. L., 241, in part is:

> "The phrase 'trafficking in intoxicating liquor' as used in this chapter, and in the penal statutes of this state, means the buying or procuring and selling of intoxicating liquor otherwise than upon a prescription * * * or for exclusively known * * * pharmaceutical purposes."

Section 3661 G. C., in the enumeration of the powers of municipal corporations authorizes them "to regulate ale, beer, porter houses and shops, and the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage."

Sections 6103 and 6137 are also pertinent. Section 6103 in part is:

> "No provision of this chapter or the penal laws relating thereto, shall prevent the sale of intoxicating liquor at retail by a regular druggist for exclusively known medicinal, * * * pharmaceutical * * * purposes."

Section 6137 provides:

> "Every municipal corporation shall have full power to regulate the selling, furnishing or giving away of intoxicating liquor as a beverage, and the places where such intoxicating liquor is sold, furnished or given away as a beverage, except as provided for in this chapter."

It is to be observed that the authority of the municipal corporation, under section 3661 G. C., is to regulate the class of houses therein referred to and which may now be included in the general term "saloon" which will include the place referred to in your letter, and the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and also that the grant of power to municipalities in section 3, article XVIII, to enact local police regulations, is limited to such regulations as are not in conflict with general laws.

Because of the exceptions of drug stores from the operation of the laws as to liquor licenses, and the penal laws with reference to the traffic in intoxicating liquors, it is clear that such places are neither regarded as saloons nor are druggists regarded as being engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, and in those laws they are specifically exempted from their provisions.

From the foregoing considerations it is equally clear that neither section 3661 G. C., nor section 3, article 18, of the General Code, authorizes the regulation of such places in the respect involved in the matter under consideration.

In the very early case, Canton vs. Nist, 9 O. S., 442, it was held:

> "In ignoring the statutory exceptions to which we have referred and in assuming to punish acts which the statute, by clear inference, authorizes, the ordinance becomes inconsistent with the laws and policy of the state and must, as to this section, be declared void."

At this point it is proper to point out that ordinance No. 30897 makes no exception as to drug stores and in its comprehensive term, in describing the places which must be closed, would include drug stores.

In Ackerman vs. Lima, 8 O. D., 430, it was held that an ordinance regulating the time of opening of places for sale of intoxicating liquors must include the statutory exceptions as to druggists, and that an ordinance not including such statutory exemptions is invalid.

In consideration of that case, the court used the following language:

> "But our supreme court, in Canton vs. Nist, 9 O. S., 439, held directly upon the proposition that a section of the ordinance, pursuing the statutory authority—the statute containing certain exceptions, the ordinance must contain the exceptions, and under the law of the state, giving authority to prohibit common labor upon Sunday, except in the case of persons who habitually and conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week—that an ordinance which in general terms seeks to prevent all common labor on Sunday, without the exception, is void. This case is commented upon and approved, although distinguished in Burckholter vs. McConnellsville, 20 O. S., 308, but especially at page 315; and the supreme court again in Daggett vs. Hudson, 43 O. S., 548, but particularly at pages 566 and 567, lay down the proposition that an ordinance under an authority of this kind, containing an exception, must itself contain the exception, and if it does not it is void. And in Canton vs. Nist, supra, it was held that the invalidity of an ordinance did not depend upon the defendant in a particular case coming within the exception, and the fact that Nist, in that particular case, was not able to say that he was not one of those who observes the seventh day of the week, it was not necessary for him to raise the question as to the validity of the ordinance, and such appears to be the well settled, and, it may be said, the undoubted, law now in the state of Ohio."

To the same effect was the holding in Columbus vs. Schaerre, 5 Low D., 101, 33 O. L. J., 113.

In the case of Emery vs. Elyria, 11 O. D., 316, an ordinance which by its terms could only apply to saloons was held to be valid without referring to or excepting drug stores from its operations. The ordinance in that case is quoted by the court, at page 318:

"The ordinance in question prohibits the keeping open of any house, shop, room or other place, where ale, porter or beer is habitually sold or furnished to be drank, or keep open in any manner any place or notorious or habitual resort for tippling or intemperance."

The court concluded that that ordinance could not be construed to have any application to a drug store, as follows:

"I am of the opinion that by no fair interpretation of this ordinance can it have any application to a drug store, and when the ordinance prohibits the keeping open of that kind of a place on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, it does not infringe upon any rights granted by the legislature under Sec. 11 of the Dow law.

"It will be observed that this ordinance does not aim or attempt to aid at places where intoxicating liquors are sold on prescription; but only aims to close places on Sunday where intoxicating liquors are sold to be drank, and that it has no reference to a drug store where intoxicating liquors are sold upon prescription or for exclusively known mechanical, pharmaceutical or sacramental purposes."

In the case of Landman vs. Columbus, (City) 17 O. D., N. P., 61, an ordinance passed by the city of Columbus to compel "mid-night closing" was considered and held to be valid because it exempted drug stores from its operation. The exempting clause is quoted by Judge Dillon to have been:

"Nothing in the provisions of any section of this ordinance shall be construed to prevent regular druggists from filling prescriptions by regular practicing physicians."

The question in that case was as to the necessity of the exemption clause being strictly in as full or as broad terms as the exemptions in the statute. The court held that the exempting feature of the ordinance was in compliance with the statute, as stated on page 63 of the opinion, as follows:

> "But it seems to me that a careful consideration of section 319 of the codified ordinance must satisfy one that the ordinance not only specifically omits and excludes any reference to druggists whatsoever, but on the contrary its constant reference is simply to saloons and places where beer, ale, spirituous or other intoxicating liquors are sold."

And, the reason for holding the ordinance valid is clearly indicated on the same page to be:

> "In view of the fact, therefore, that the exemption clause applies only to sales by druggists, and in view of the fact that this ordinance has not attempted to regulate any such sales but only sales by saloons, or kindred places, I hold the ordinance to be valid."

Had that ordinance been so drawn as to apply to druggists, the decision undoubtedly would have been against its validity as on the same page Judge Dillon asks and answers this question:

> "Does this ordinance in question apply to druggists? If so, it would probably fail for the reasons above stated, in that it does not contain the exemption provided for by the statute."

Both of these decisions are consistent with the Lima case, supra.

Sections 6137 and 6103 G. C. were formerly sections 4364-20 and 4364-20c R. S. respectively and were construed in Bramley vs. Euclid, 15 O. D. 155, where the direct question of the limitation of municipalities to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors by regular druggists for known medicinal and pharmaceutical purposes was raised and decided. On page 157 of the opinion in Bramley vs. Euclid, supra, the court holds:

> "The authority of the village to pass an ordinance of this character (Sunday closing of saloons) is granted by section 4364-20 Rev. Stat. (6137 G. C.) the grant of power being substantially in these words:
> 'Any municipal corporation shall have the full power to regulate the selling, furnishing or giving away of intoxicating liquors as a beverage and places where intoxicating liquors are sold, furnished or given away as a "beverage," except as provided for in Sec. 4364-20c of this act.'
> And the exception as contained in that further Sec. 4364-20c Rev. Stat. is, substantially, that municipalities shall not have power 'to regulate or prevent the selling of intoxicating liquors at retail by a regular druggist for exclusively known medicinal, pharmaceutical, mechanical or sacramental purposes.' Those sections state substantially the power, and the restriction upon that power."

Consideration of these statutes, in the light of judicial construction placed upon them in the foregoing cases and of the limitations of section 3, article 18, supra, compel the conclusion that the ordinance under discussion is in conflict with general law and therefore is invalid.

JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROPRIATION BILL—MERE ITEM IN SUCH BILL NOT SUFFICIENT AUTHORITY FOR PAYMENT OF GREATER AMOUNT OF SALARY THAN THAT AUTHORIZED BY PERMANENT LAW.

A mere item in a bill appropriating money is not sufficient authority for the payment to an officer or employe of a greater amount of salary than that authorized by permanent law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested the opinion of this department on the following question:

> "May the legislature legally increase a salary or per diem fixed by statute in the appropriation bill simply by appropriating a greater amount than is authorized by statute?"

An appropriation within its proper sphere is, of course, a "law." (See article II, section 22 of the constitution.) Its natural scope, however, does not go beyond authorizing the withdrawal of money from the treasury for the specfic purposes mentioned in it. It is true that in many instances its effect is larger than this, as where an item in an appropriation law authorizes the withdrawal of money from the treasury for the payment of the salary of a clerk or other employe in a department the head of which is not authorized by permanent law to employ such clerk or other assistant. By long usage such an appropriation is regarded as including, by necessary implication, the authority to make the employment, though logically it might well be questioned whether it has that effect. Of course, such implied authority could not last longer than the appropriation itself, viz.: for the period of two years.

But the doctrine of implied power does not exist where express power is granted. In the case submitted by you power to make the employment or appointment of the employe or officer, the amount of whose compensation is in question, is expressly conferred by statute. Hence, we cannot go to the appropriation to find such power by implication only.

Not only is the power to appoint or employ conferred expressly by statute, but there is a limitation therein upon the compensation to be paid to such appointee or employe. This limitation inheres in the office itself, if it be an appointment, or in the contract of employment, if the position be of that character. The head of the department is without authority to alter such terms; he cannot look to an ordinary item in an appropriation law for such authority.

It has been assumed in the foregoing discussion that all there is in the appropriation law is an item for personal service greater in amount or rate as to a given position than the salary or other compensation fixed by law. The discussion has been as to the possibility of drawing from such an item an implication strong enough to override the express limitations of the permanent law. As stated, an appropriation act is a law of equal dignity during its existence with all other laws of the state, and it is not intended in this opinion to hold that a permanent law may not be temporarily suspended by an appropriation act. Such things can be done, with respect, for example, tc the suspension of the state building code in the expenditure of certain appropriations. No reason is perceived why salary limits may not be similarly suspended if the intention to produce such a result is clearly expressed in the appropriation act. The general assembly has power to suspend laws (Constitution. article

I, section 18.) Indeed, the whole doctrine of implied repeals, so-called, rests upon this power as a foundation. As heretofore intimated, an appropriation law would seem to be just as efficacious as a suspension of other laws as any other legislative act could be.

But upon the assumption which has been made in discussing the question submitted, we are not dealing with the extent of the power which the legislature may exercise through an appropriation law, but rather with the interpretation of an ordinary item appropriating money, which does not expressly suspend existing laws. We must determine what effect such an item may have by implication. Here the principle employed in dealing with questions of so-called implied repeal is controlling. That principle is that implied repeals—and because fundamentally all implied repeals are suspensions, an implied suspension for the definite period of the life of an appropriation law—are presumed against. All laws, whatever the date of their respective enactments may be, are to be construed together and effect given to each, if possible. A later law is not potent to repeal, modify or suspend an earlier law unless the provisions of the later law are irreconcilably inconsistent with those of the former. In the case supposed there is no irreconcilable inconsistency; for the appropriation law expends its primary force in setting aside money in the treasury and making it subject to withdrawal; whereas the permanent law relates to a logically distinct subject matter, namely, the power to appoint or employ and the limitation on that power with respect to the payment of compensation. It is only by drawing from the item in the appropriation law an inference which takes its operation beyond the natural scope of the law that we are able to educe an intent to suspend the permanent law. To permit such effect to be given to the appropriation law by inference would be violative of the principle which must be applied in such cases. But where the intended effect of the appropriation law upon the permanent law is not left to conjecture, but is expressly stated in the appropriation law, the principle referred to can have no application.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MAY FUND UNPAID PAYROLLS OF TEACHERS AND OTHER EMPLOYES BY BORROWING MONEY OR ISSUING BONDS UNDER SECTION 5656 G. C.

Board of education may fund unpaid payrolls of teachers and other employes by borrowing money or issuing bonds under section 5656 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 12, 1919.

HON. GEORGE WAITE, Prosecuting Attorney, Urbana, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Replying to your letter of May 1st I beg to advise that the question submitted by you has been repeatedly passed upon in this department and the following ruling made:

A contract for the employment of teachers or other school employes is by virtue of section 5661 G. C. valid without a previous appropriation of money sufficient to discharge the contract on the part of the school district, or the issuance of a certificate of the clerk of the board of education that the money necessary for such purpose is in the treasury or in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose.

Therefore, when services are rendered under such contract and, by its terms, money is due from the school district to the employe, a valid, legal and binding obligation of the district for the payment of money exists within the meaning of section 5668 G. C., and the indebtedness so created may be extended by borrowing money on notes or funded by the issuance of bonds under section 5656 G. C.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF VILLAGE OF MT. STERLING—AMOUNT OF ISSUE IN EXCESS OF AMOUNT WHICH COUNCIL, WITHOUT VOTE OF ELECTROS, IS AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE FOR PURPOSE PROPOSED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 13, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.
GENTLEMEN:—

IN RE: Bonds of the village of Mt. Sterling, in the amount of $10,000.00, for the purpose of extending, enlarging and equipping the Mt. Sterling water and light plant, being 20 bonds of $500.00 each.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of Mt. Sterling, relating to the above bond issue, and herewith decline to approve the validity of said bonds for the reason that the amount of the issue is in excess of the amount which the council of the village of Mt. Sterling, without a vote of the electors, is authorized to issue for the purpose indicated in said bond ordinance.

The bonds in question are issued under authority of section 3939 of the General Code. Section 3940 of the General Code, as amended in 107 O. L., p. 578, which provides a limitation upon the amount of bonds which the council of a municipality may issue in any fiscal year, under the provisions of section 3939 G. C., is as follows:

"Section 3940: Such bonds may be issued for any or all of such purposes, but the total indebtedness created in any one fiscal year, by the council of a municipal corporation under the authority conferred in the preceding section, shall not exceed one-half of one per cent. of the total value of the property in such municipal corporation as listed and assessed for taxation."

The financial statement contained in the transcript states that the total valuation of the property in the village of Mt. Sterling, as assessed for taxation, is $1,600,000.00

One-half of one per cent. of this valuation amounts to only $8,000.00, whereas the council of the village is attempting to issue $10,000.00, or $2,000.00 in excess of the limitation fixed by law.

The bond issue in question is therefore clearly in excess of the limitation fixed by law, and I advise you not to accept the same.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY—WOMEN'S BUILDING—APPROPRIATION FOR NEW BUILDING IS NOT "FOR CURRENT EXPENSES OF STATE GOVERNMENT AND STATE INSTITUTIONS"—SUBJECT TO REFERENDUM.

An appropriation for a new building is not one "for the current expenses of the state government and state institutions," it is therefore subject to the referendum and does not go into effect until after ninety days after the law making it is filed in the office of the secretary of state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1919.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary, Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of May 14th requesting the opinion of this department upon the following question:

> "Attention is called to house bill No. 452, (107 O. L. 51), an act entitled, to provide for the erection of a Women's building at Ohio State University.
>
> Request is hereby made as to when the appropriation contained in this act began and when it lapses."

The act referred to is in full as follows:

> "AN ACT
> To provide for the erection of a women's building at the Ohio State University.
>
> Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Ohio:
>
> Section 1. That for the purpose of providing for the women students of the Ohio State University a place where the required physical education can be given, where proper rooms may be provided for study, for reading, for rest and recreation, where the student activities of the young women may be centered with proper direction and supervision with provision for restaurant and dining room facilities, where provision for proper social and educational development may be provided; there be and hereby is appropriated out of any money in the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue fund, not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.
> Section 2. The board of trustees of the Ohio State University is hereby authorized and directed to contract for and superintend the erection of such women's building at the Ohio State University under plans and specifications approved by the governor, and said trustees are hereby authorized to do all things necessary to carry out the intent and purpose of this act.'

While the first section of this act does not expressly mention the erection of a building for the purposes therein referred to, the second section together with the title shows that it was the intent of the general assembly not only to authorize, but to "direct" (section 2) or to "provide for the erection of" (title) a building for the use of women students of the Ohio State University.

This act was approved March 24, 1917, and if the appropriation therein made is one "for the current expenses of the state government and state institutions" it went into immediate effect by virtue of Article II, section 1-d of the constitution; but if the appropriation is not such a current expense appropriation it did not go into effect on that day, but its effectiveness was suspended for the period of ninety days from and after the day when the act was filed in the office of the secretary of state by virtue of article II, section 1-c of the constitution.

The question thus raised does not require a comprehensive definition of the phrase "current expenses" as used in article II, section 1-d, which has been cited. It is only necessary to inquire whether or not the expenditure of money for the erection of a new building to cost one hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a "current expense" within the meaning of the constitution. This department is clearly of the opinion that it is not. Whatever the term "current expenses" may mean as applied to various items of expense, it is clear that its meaning excludes expenditures in the way of permanent investments. A number of decisions of the courts of other states under statutes using this term so hold.

State vs. Marion county, 21 Kas., 419;
Sheldon vs. Purdy, 17 Wash., 135;
Helena Water Works Co. vs. Helena, 31 Mont., 243;

In Babcock vs. Goodrich, 47 Cal., 488, 510, the phrase was otherwise construed and the expense of constructing a new building was held to be within its scope, for the reason that any other construction would leave the subdivision concerned without means to provide new buildings. The court admitted that the construction placed upon the statute was not the natural one. Indeed, the phrase was read as if it had been "expenses of the current year" in order to supply what would otherwise have been a defect of the legislation.

But in the case under consideration no such necessity exists. Ample authority is vested in the general assembly to make appropriations for all the expenses of the state and its institutions. The requirement is simply that appropriations for expenses which are not current shall be subject to the referendum, and for that purpose laws providing for them shall not go into effect until after the expiration of the ninety day period.

For these reasons you are advised that the appropriation in question became effective ninety days after the law making it was filed in the office of the secretary of state. Such filing took place on March 24, 1917, and the appropriation therefore took effect on June 24, 1917, the day after the expiration of the ninety day period.

You also ask when this appropriation lapses. Article II, section 22 of the constitution provides in negative terms that—"no appropriation shall be made for a longer period than two years."

No other provision having been made in the law providing for the appropriation, it is presumed that the intention of the general assembly was that it should last for the full constitutional period. Accordingly, the appropriation will lapse on June 24, 1919.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

WHEN A FOREIGN CORPORATION MUST COMPLY WITH SECTION 183, GENERAL CODE.

A foreign corporation having a "principal place of business" in this state; at which, however, is transacted no other part of the corporate business than the collection of accounts, is liable to compliance with section 183 of the General Code and to the payment of at least the minimum fee under that and succeeding sections.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have requested the opinion of this department upon the following question:

> "The Federal Oil Company, a foreign corporation, has established a business office in this state which is designated as its principal place of business. The company is engaged in the business of boring and drilling for petroleum; all of its fields are located outside the state of Ohio and the production activities of the company are conducted in other states.
> The company does not market its product, but by a standing arrangement, apparently made before the company located an office in Ohio, all of its product is sold to another company, which is also a foreign corporation and which has no office in the state of Ohio.
>
> The company states that the function of the Ohio office consists of receiving checks mailed to it from time to time by the company to which it sells its entire product and banking the same in Cleveland where the office is located. Though the company's letter does not so state, it is assumed that such books of account as the company would have to keep are kept at the Cleveland office.
> The question is as to whether or not this company is required to comply with the provisions of section 183 of the General Code."

That section exacts compliance with its provisions from a foreign corporation "owning or using a part or all of its capital or plant in this state, before doing business in this state."

It may be assumed at the outset that some, doubtless very small, part of the capital of the company is located in Ohio, though this may consist only of office fixtures. It is certain also that in some senses the company is transacting business in Ohio. The activities of its Cleveland office are business activities. But the question is as to whether or not it is "doing business" within the meaning of section 183 G. C. The report required to be filed by that section leads to a determination by the secretary of state of "the proportion of the capital stock of the corporation represented by its property and business in this state."

This language is, as the commission is aware, essentially similar to that of section 5502 G. C. The commission is familiar with the rule established under these sections, to the effect that the volume of business done in the state must be measured and separated out, so to speak, from the total business of the company, so that it may be given equal weight with the factor of property in the determination of the proportion of the authorized capital stock upon which the initial fee (under the one section) and the annual fee (under the other) are to be based. Previous opinions of this department have laid down the rules whereby the amount of business represented by the production activities of a company may be measured; while the manne of arriving at the volume of business represented by the selling activities of the company is, of course, very familiar. But there are some business activities of a company of this kind which do not lend themselves to measurement. For example: at one end of the line of a manufacturing process comes the activity of buying raw material, machinery and the like. At the other end of the line comes the collection of book accounts growing out of the business. That is, the mining or manufacturing company has completed its peculiar activities of mining and manufacture to the point of disposing of the product, and none of its activities on that behalf is conducted within the state; but it maintains an office where its books are kept and where the moneys due to it from those to whom it has sold its product are collected and deposited. It is manifest that it is not practicable to arrive at any such exact measurement of the extent of such activities in this state as is possible with respect to the extent of the other activities mentioned

It would be different with a section like section 178 G. C., for example, which requires a foreign corporation before it "transacts business in this state" to procure a certificate of compliance from the secretary of state and to pay a fee based upon its authorized capital stock, without regard to the amount of business done in the state or the property owned therein as compared with the total business and property. Undoubtedly the facts stated with respect to the Federal Oil Company are sufficient to render it amenable to such a statute.

Now the language of section 183 G. C. is not distinguishable in purport from that of section 178. What we have to decide is whether or not the fact that there is or may be difficulty in fixing the amount of the initial fee under section 183 G. C. or the annual tax under sections 5502 et seq. G. C. in a given case is sufficient to take that case out of the operation of these sections entirely. It is the opinion of this department that such is not the case and that the company mentioned is liable to compliance with section 183.

In this connection attention is called to the fact that the secretary of state under section 184 G. C. and the tax commission under the similar provisions of the annual franchise tax law are authorized to have recourse to "any other facts coming to his knowledge" (section 184); also, that these sections impose a minimum fee, which is ten dollars as to the initial fee (section 184) and the same as to the annual fee (section 5583).

By virtue of these provisions it follows, in the opinion of this department, that a foreign corporation which actually does business in this state, though that business is of such character and amount, as compared to the total volume of business done by the company elsewhere, as to be almost incapable of measurement and therefore infinitesimal, is liable to compliance with sections 183 et seq. of the General Code, and to annual franchise taxation under sections 5502 et seq. of the General Code, and in connection therewith must pay at least the minimum fees under these sections.

Very respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—STATE AID GRANTED ON APPLICATION OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—TOWNSHIP LIABLE TO COUNTY FOR TOWNSHIP'S SHARE BY ACT OF 103 O. L. 449.

Where a highway improvement has been made with state aid granted on application of county commissioners, in accordance with highway laws as amended, 103 O. L. 449, et seq., the township is under a liability to the county for the township's share as defined in section 1208 G. C. (103 O. L. 456), unless such share has been waived and assumed by the county upon resolution adopted by the county commissioners as provided in section 1210-1 G. C. (103 O. L. 457).

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1919.

HON. HUGO, N. SCHLESINGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The receipt is acknowledged of letter of May 6, 1919, from your office and signed by your assistant Mr. Summers, reading as follows:

> "On December 17, 1913, the commissioners of Franklin county, Ohio, filed a petition with the state highway commissioner for the improvement of the Columbus and Washington C. H. I. C. H. No. 50, extending from the corporate limits of the city of Columbus southwardly to the boundary line between Franklin and Pickaway counties. The highway commissioner granted the improvement and the bonds of the county for fifty per cent. of the improvement covering the share of Franklin county, three townships within said county, and the abutting property owners were sold on the 1st of August, 1914, and the contract for said work was executed on the 31st day of August, 1913 (1914) by the state highway commissioner, the same being approved by the county commissioners. So far as the records show, no notice of the improvement was given officially to the trustees of Franklin, Jackson and Pleasant townships of this county, through which the road passes and in which the road was improved as per petition and contract. The work was completed some time in the latter part of 1915 or the early part of 1916, but the cost thereof was not certified as required by the statute to the auditor of Franklin county until the 30th day of January, 1918.
>
> The trustees of each of the three townships above mentioned have been notified of the certification of the cost and requested by the county commissioners that they pay the three-fifths of the twenty-five per cent. as provided by statute and assess the cost of two-fifths of the twenty-five per cent. against the abutting property owners. Pursuant to this notice, the trustees in each of these townships have promised to assess the proper proportion against the abutting property owners and Franklin township did so last fall. However, the trustees of Jackson and Pleasant townships refuse to pay the three-fifths of the twenty-five per cent provided for in section 1208 G. C. as amended in 103 O. L. page 456 on the advice of an employed attorney who states that section 1210-1 G. C., 103 O. L., page 457, by inference indicates that, unless the trustees agreed to pay a part of the cost of the road improvement, they are not bound for any part of the cost. They do, however, admit that they will have to assess the two-fifths of twenty-five per cent. against the abutting property owners.
> I, therefore, desire your opinion whether the trustees are bound for the payment of their share as provided in section 1208 G. C. and whether the county has a right of action under the above circumstances for that share."

Said sections 1208 and 1210-1 G. C., as amended by act of April 18, 1913, and hence as they are applicable to the situation stated by you, read as follows (103 O. L 456-457):

> "Sec. 1208. Except as otherwise provided, one-fourth of the cost and expense of such improvement, except the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, shall be apportioned to the township or townships in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned, three-fifths shall be a charge upon the whole township or townships and two-fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the owners of the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of land so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to the persons affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost and expense of establishing township ditches. If the improvement lies in two or more townships, the amount to be paid by each shall be apportioned according to the number of lineal feet of the improvement lying in each township.

Sec. 1210-1. The county commissioners of a county in which a highway is constructed under the provisions of this act may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such highway as herein provided to be paid by the township or townships or abutting property owners, and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such highway improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such highway improvement without any assessment whatsoever upon any township or townships of the property abutting on such highway. The township trustees of any township in which a highway is constructed under the provisions of this chapter may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such highway as herein provided to be paid by the county or abutting property owners and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such highway improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such highway improvement without an assessment upon the county or owners of abutting property upon such highway."

It is worthy of note that the trustees and their attorney are basing their claim upon inference from these sections, rather than upon the express terms thereof. It is believed that a short examination into the history and context of these sections will demonstrate that there is no ground for such an inference.

Sections 1206 to 1210 became effective as a part of the original General Code upon its enactment in February, 1910, and in their form at that time read as follows (General Code 1910 as issued by commissioners of public printing):

"Section 1206. One-half of the cost and expenses of the construction of the improvement shall be paid by the treasurer of state upon the warrant of the auditor of state issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner, from a specific appropriation made to carry out the provisions of this chapter.

Section 1207. One-half of the cost and expenses of such improvement shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in which the highway is located upon the order of the county commissioners, issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner, from any funds in the county treasury for the construction of improved highways under the provisions of this chapter. One-half of the amount so paid by the county shall be apportioned by the county commissioners to the township or townships and the abutting property as provided in the next section.

Section 1208. One-fourth of the costs and expenses of such improvement shall be apportioned to the township in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned to the township, three-fifths shall be charged upon the whole township and two-fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of lands so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to persons affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the costs of establishing county roads.

Section 1209. If a railway corporation owns in fee a strip of land along the side of the highway upon which it operates a steam or electric railway, the land back of such strip shall be regarded and treated as abutting upon such highway for all purposes of abutting ownership, and both such strip and land back thereof shall be assessed as provided in the preceding section.

Section 1210. The township trustees shall certify the assessment to the county auditor, who shall place it upon the tax duplicate against the property benefited. The county treasurer shall collect such assessment in the same manner as other taxes are collected, and in such payments as may be approved by the county auditor. The township trustees shall pay the portion of the costs and expenses assessed to the township in the same manner as other claims are paid."

As they thus read, said sections were adapted from sections 8, 16 and 17 of the highway act of 1908, appearing in 99 Ohio Laws 314.

Said five sections remained in their form as above quoted until certain amendments to them were made by act of May 31, 1911, approved June 9, 1911 (102 O. L. 342, 343). Said amendments, however, do not appear to have changed in the least the percentages which by the mandate of the sections in their earlier forms were to be charged respectively to the township and property owners; nor do said amendments appear to have relaxed the mandatory terms providing that the township and property owners should bear a part of the cost, or to have changed the assessment proceedings which the township trustees are commanded to carry out.

However, by an entirely new supplemental section designated as section 1210-1 (102 O. L. 344), enacted contemporaneously with the making of said amendments, an optional or alternative plan was provided whereby, upon action by the county commissioners or township trustees, the percentages might be changed, said section 1210-1 as then enacted reading as follows:

"The county commissioners of a county in which a road is constructed under the provisions of this act may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such road as herein provided to be paid by the township or townships or abutting property owners, and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such road improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such road improvement without any assessment whatsoever upon any township or townships or the property abutting on such road. The township trustees of any township in which a road is constructed under the provisions of this chapter may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such road as herein provided to be paid by the county or abutting property owners and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such road improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such road improvement without an assessment upon the county or owners of abutting property upon such road."

A comparison of said section 1210-1 as just quoted with its amended form as quoted above from 103 O. L., shows that the only change made by the amendment was the substitution of the word "highway" in the amended form for the word "road" in the earlier form.

It thus clearly appears by sections 1206 to 1210 that a legislative policy had been established prior to the time of the original enactment of section 1210-1, whereby as to certain classes of road improvement the state would contribute a definite portion of the cost, the remaining portion by mandatory provisions being distributed among county, township and property owners. Certainly no question could have been raised prior to the enactment of section 1210-1 G. C., that the township by any means might be relieved of its statutory portion. An inflexible rule had been laid down as to the portions to be borne, and methods had been provided for raising money to pay such shares. That policy was not changed in the least by any amendments made at the time that section 1210-1 was enacted, or by the legislative act of which it is a part. However, to provide for varying local conditions and to permit of the handling of such local conditions by local officials, the legislature enacted as a supplemental section said section 1210-1. Of course this required a slight change in the phraseology of section 1208, so that as amended 102 O. L. 343 it opened with the words "Except as otherwise provided," etc., which words were retained in the amendment of the section in 103 Ohio Laws.

In the light of the foregoing observations, does it not become entirely clear that the official action permitted by section 1210-1 G. C. is an action authorized for the purpose of relieving an obligation already established by statute, and is in no sense an action required to be taken as a step in establishing an obligation? And this being true, how can the township claim to have been relieved of its statutory obligation, unless it can show that the commissioners took action as provided in section 1210-1? You say that as far as the records show, no notice of the improvement was given officially to the trustees of the several townships. It is not perceived how that fact is in point. The statutes did not require any such notice; hence there can be no claim on the township's part of waiver by the county, for as stated by Davis, J., in the case of List vs. Chase, 80 O. S. 42, at p. 49 of the opinion:

> "A waiver is a voluntary relinquishment of a known right. It may be made by express words or by conduct which renders impossible a performance by the other party, or which seems to dispense with complete performance at a time when the obligor might fully perform. Mere silence will not amount to waiver where one is not bound to speak."

Furthermore, the legislature, in adopting section 1210-1, made use of language indicating precisely that the action of the county commissioners, if taken at all, should be for the purpose of relieving a burden falling upon the township and property owners, and not for the purpose of creating one. The terms of the statute are that the county commissioners—

> "may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment as herein provided to be paid by the township or townships or abutting property owners, and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such highway improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such highway improvement without any assessment whatsoever upon any township or townships or the property abutting on such highway."

When we keep in mind the rule, long established in Ohio, that the powers granted county commissioners are to be strictly construed, and that the commissioners represent the county in its financial affairs only so far as authority is given them by statute (State ex rel. vs. Com'rs., 11 O. S. 183; Jones vs. Com'rs., 57 O. S. 189, and many other cases), we can only conclude from the language above quoted that there is but one way in which the county may be held to have waived and assumed the share of the township or property owners, namely, by affirmative action of the commissioners in strict compliance with section 1210-1 G. C.

While you make no reference to former section 1200, it is thought proper to call attention to it. Said section, as in force at the time of the beginning of the improvement proceedings you mention, read as follows (103 O. L. 455):

> "Section 1200. Before their approval of the proposed highway improvement, the county commissioners may require that the trustees of the township or townships through which it extends by resolution approve the construction of the same and agree to pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost and expense thereof, excepting the cost of construction or improvement of bridges and culverts."

Construed in connection with former sections 1206 to 1210, inc., the seeming purpose of section 1200 was to allow the commissioners, before approving a highway improvement, to require the trustees of an affected township to assume in the first instance the whole twenty-five per cent. which, according to sections 1206 to 1210, inc., was payable three-fifths by the townships and two-fifths by the property owners—in other words, to require the township to guarantee in advance the collection of the property owners' share. But to say the least, said section 1200 affords no ground for a claim that the trustees were to be notified in advance of the intention to proceed with the improvement or an intention to charge the township with a part of the cost; for the matter of securing the approval and agreement was purely optional with the commissioners and in addition is to be treated as a provision for the protection of the county, rather than the township. It will be noted also that the optional character of the provisions of section 1200 is emphasized by reference to the fact that in its original form the section provided in mandatory terms that the commissioners should require the approval and agreement of the trustees (see section 1200 in original 1910 edition of General Code).

For these reasons, the specific answer to your question is that the trustees are bound for the payment of their share as provided in section 1208 G. C. and that the county has a right of action for such share.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 16, 1919.

HON. GEORGE W. SHEPPARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Attention has been given your communication of April 12, 1919, addressed to this department, reading as follows:

> "John G. Harper, surveyor of Scioto county, Ohio, has submitted to me the following questions and has asked me to submit them to your department for legal opinion:
> 'Can assessment be made on all roads constructed during the years of 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914 and 1915 which is prior to Cass highway law, September 6, 1915, if assessment has not been waived by county commissioners?
>
> How can assessment be made during this time—I mean can assessment be made on abutting property owners one-half mile or one mile from improvements? Can the township be assessed with improvements made during these various years if the county commissioners did not waive their assessment? How shall the assessment be made under the Cass law?
>
> If an improvement was started prior to the Cass law; that is, surveys, plans, etc., all of the preliminary work done, the improvement contracted for and made under the Cass law, can assessment be made on this improvement if not waived by county commissioners?
> If the preliminary work is started, under the Cass law (that is, surveys ordered and made, plans prepared, etc.), and the contract is let under the present law, shall the assessment be made under the Cass law or the present law?' "

From the trend of your inquiries and from information coming to this department it is assumed that you have in mind only those road improvements as to which state aid was granted on application of county commissioners; hence the views expressed and conclusions stated herein will have reference only to such improvements. The foregoing statement is made because of the fact that for several years past our statutes have provided for state aid under certain conditions upon application by township trustees; and it is important to bear in mind that the proceedings in connection with such an application are somewhat different from those relating to an application for state aid by the county commissioners.

Your first and third inquiries are as to whether the so-called "assessment share" or "property owners' share" may at this time be lawfully assessed, and whether the so-called "township share" may at this time be lawfully collected as to improvements pending prior to the taking effect of the Cass act on the first Monday in September 1915 if there has been no waiver by the county as to the payment of such shares.

These two inquiries will be considered together for the reason that both of them involve consideration of former sections 1206 to 1210 G. C. as well as of an enactment formerly designated as section 1210-1 G. C.

Sections 1206 to 1210 became effective as a part of the original General Code upon its enactment in February, 1910, and in their form at that time read as follows (General Code 1910 as issued by commissioners of public printing):

> "Section 1206. One-half of the cost and expenses of the construction of the improvement shall be paid by the treasurer of state upon the warrant of the auditor of state issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner, from a specific appropriation made to carry out the provisions of this chapter.
> Section 1207. One-half of the cost and expenses of such improvement shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in which the highway is located upon the order of the county commissioners, issued upon the requisition of the state highway commissioner, from any funds in the county treasury for the construction of improved highways under the provisions of this chapter. One-half of the amount so paid by the county shall be apportioned by the county commissioners to the township or townships and the abutting property as provided in the next section.
> Section 1208. One-fourth of the costs and expenses of such improvement shall be apportioned to the township in which such road is located. Of the amount so apportioned to the township, three-fifths shall be charged upon the whole township and two-fifths shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement. The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of lands so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to persons affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the costs of establishing county roads.
> Section 1209. If a railway corporation owns in fee a strip of land along the side of the highway upon which it operates a steam or electric railway, the land back of such strip shall be regarded and treated as abutting upon such highway for all purposes of abutting ownership, and both such strip and land back thereof shall be assessed as provided in the preceding section.
> Section 1210. The township trustees shall certify the asessment to the county auditor, who shall place it upon the tax duplicate against the property benefited. The county treasurer shall collect such assessments in the same manner as other taxes are collected, and in such payments as may be approved by the county auditor. The township trustees shall pay the portion of the costs and expenses assessed to the township in the same manner as other claims are paid."

As they thus read said sections were adapted from sections 8, 16 and 17 of the highway act of 1908, appearing in 99 Ohio Laws, 314.

Said five sections remained in their form as above quoted until certain amendments to them were made ay act of May 31, 1911, approved June 9, 1911 (102 O. L. 342, 343). Said amendments, however, do not appear to have changed in the least the percentages which by the mandate of the sections in their earlier forms were to be charged respectively to the township and property owners; nor do said amendments appear to have relaxed the mandatory terms providing that the township and property owners should bear a part of the cost, or to have changed the assessment proceedings which the township trustees are commanded to carry out.

However, by an entirely new supplemental section designated as section 1210-1 (102 O. L. 344), enacted contemporaneously with the making of said amendments, an optional or alterative plan was provided whereby, upon action by the county commissioners or township trustees, the percentages might be changed,—said section 1210-1 as then enacted reading as follows:

"The county commissioners of a county in which a road is constructed under the provisions of this act may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such road as herein provided to be paid by the township or townships or abutting property owners, and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such road improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such road improvement without any assessment whatsoever upon any township or townships or the property abutting on such road. The township trustees of any township in which a road is constructed under the provisions of this chapter may, by resolution, waive any part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such road as herein provided to be paid by the county or abutting property owners and assume any part or all of the cost and expense of such road improvement in excess of the amount received from the state up to the entire cost and expense of such road improvement without an assessment upon the county or owners of abutting property upon such road."

Sections 1206 and 1208 were subjected to further amendment, and section 1210-1 was also amended by act of April 18, 1913, in these particulars: (103 O. L. 456-457.)

(a) The words "and bridges" were added at the end of section 1206,—the effect of the amendment being to make county bridge funds available for the county's share of road improvement.

(b) The clause "except the cost and expense of bridges and culverts" was inserted in section 1208; and the clause "in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost and expenses of establishing township ditches," was substituted in said section 1208 for the clause "in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost and expense of establishing county roads"—the effect of such respective insertion and substitution being to except from the total cost the item of bridges and culverts in calculating shares of township and property owners; and to set up as assessment proceedings to be followed by the township trustees, the township ditch assessment proceedings in lieu of assessment proceedings relating to establishment of county roads.

(c) The word "highway" was substituted for the word "roads" in section 1210-1.

As no further changes were made in the series of statutes 1206 to 1210 or in section 1210-1, until the passage of the Cass act, the above references to the history of said sections carry us through the period covered by your first and third inquiries.

Assuredly a mere reading of these statutes is convincing that they place upon affected townships a positive obligation to pay a definite share of the cost of the improvement, and that they also make mandatory the payment of a definite share of such cost by affected property owners,—the making of such assessment being a duty cast upon township trustees to be carried out either in accordance with the plan of township ditch assessment or county road establishment assessment, depending on which plan was enjoined by statute in force at the time the road improvement became a pending proceeding as hereinafter defined.

Of course, as to those road improvements which became pending proceedings after June 9, 1911, and before the first Monday in September, 1915, there was an option in the county commissioners by virtue of said section 1210-1 to assume all or a part of the township's share and all or a part of the property owners' share, and a like option in the township trustees to assume all or a part of the county's share and all or a part of the property owners' share (which option, it may be said in passing, was as of the first Monday in September, 1915, and now is, restricted by section 210 of the Cass act, now section 1217 G. C. to the extent that in all cases the property owners must pay at least ten per cent.) The very terms of said former section 1210-1 indi cate that affirmative and formal action by the commissioners, namely, the passage of a resolution, is a necessary step to the assumption by the county of any part or all of the township's or property owners' share; for the section says in so many words that the county commissioners "may, by resolution, waive," etc. The use of the word "waive" and the requirement of formal action by resolution serve to emphasize the mandatory character of the other sections referred to, concerning the share to be borne by the township and property owners, if the commissioners have not seen fit to exercise the option of waiver.

Furthermore, in this connection, attention is called to an opinion of this department of date June 28, 1913, Annual Reports of the Attorney General for 1913, page 1279, in which it was held with reference to sections 1206 to 1210 as they stood prior to the enactment of section 1210-1 that no power was lodged in the township trustees to waive the ten per cent. provided by statute to be assessed against property owners, and cause said ten per cent. to be charged to the township. The same rule would apply to county commissioners in the absence of section 1210-1; and as a matter of course, if the commissioners took no action under section 1210-1, no claim can reasonably be made that either the township or property owners have been relieved of their respective shares.

Perhaps some reference should be made to former section 1200, which as incorporated into the original enactment of the General Code in 1910 read as follows:

> "Before their approval of a road improvement, the county commissioners shall require that the township or townships through which it extends shall pay twenty-five per cent. of the costs thereof, and that the trustees, by resolution, approve its construction."

By above mentioned act passed May 31, 1911, said section was amended to read as follows (102 O. L. 341);

> "Before their approval of the proposed road improvement, the county commissioners may require that the trustees of the township or townships through which it extends agree to pay twenty-five per cent. of the cost and expense thereof, and that the trustees by resolution, approve the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the same."

Of course, no claim could be made that the section as thus amended and becoming effective as of June 9, 1911, implies that as a condition precedent to charging the township with any part of the cost, the trustees must agree to assume twenty-five per cent. of the cost and by resolution approve the construction of the road, etc., for as amended said section left entirely to the option of the commissioners the matter of requiring agreement and approval of trustees.

On the other hand, the exact purpose of the statute as it stood prior to said amendment is somewhat vague, since co-existing sections 1206 to 1210 sufficiently provided for the shares to be paid by the township and property owners—twenty-five per cent in all. Probably the real intent of the section as it read before the amendment was to make the township liable in the first instance for the whole twenty-five per cent., including township's share and property owners' share as defined in sections 1206 and 1210; just as the county was made liable to the state in the first instance for the whole cost of the improvement over and above the portion assumed by the state. In any event, the several sections must be construed together, and from that standpoint, as well as from the fact that said section 1200 was plainly for the protection of the county as against the township and property owners, the provisions of said section cannot be construed as mandatory in the sense that the township and property owners would be relieved if the commissioners failed to make the requirement, in other words, the positive statutory obligation laid on the township and property owners by sections 1206 to 1210 is not to be avoided by the failure of the commissioners to perform an act required by another section (1200) of the same series of statutes.

Your second inquiry relates to the point whether as to improvements pending before Cass law became effective, assessments may be made against lands other than those immediately abutting the improvement, or to state your question specifically, whether a one-half mile or one mile assessment zone is permissible. You will find this question to have been answered in an opinion of this department heretofore rendered (Opinions of the Attorney General for 1916, p. 309), to the effect that the assessment may be made only against property abutting the improvement, and not against other property that might be embraced within a one-mile zone. True, the opinion just referred to related to the statutes as amended by the Cass law, but the opinion is equally applicable to the statutes as they existed before the Cass law took effect, the plan of having an assessment zone of one-half mile or greater extent not having made its appearance in the statutes relating to state aid improvements until the passage of the White-Mulcahy act, effective on June 28, 1917.

Your fourth question is: How shall assessment be made under the Cass law? It is assumed that you mean by this to inquire whether the assessment may include other land than that immediately abutting the improvement; hence the opinion last above referred to constitutes an answer to the effect that the immediately abutting land only may be assessed. The assessment procedure to be followed by the township trustees is set forth in section 207, et seq. Cass law (106 O. L. 637), which sections were designated sections 1214 et seq., G. C. It has already been noted that as to Cass law improvements, no option was left in either co nty commissioners or township trustees to waive assessment of, and assume, property owners' share.

The rule stated as to abutting realty is subject to an exception specified in former se tion 1209 (which with certain changes became section 1215 of the Cass law), relating to railroad right of way, etc., and lands adjoining it.

Your fifth and sixth questions relate to the matter of what set of statutes is to be followed in making the assessment. These questions are found to have been fully answered by an opinion of this department, not yet in print, rendered to Hon. Franklin J. Stalter, prosecuting attorney, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, under date of April 29, 1918, copy of which is enclosed. You will find on examination that it constitutes specific answer to your sixth question and an answer upon principle to your fifth question.

Of course, it must be borne in mind as a general principle when making assessments, that no tract of land may be assessed in excess of special benefits conferred (Railway vs. Cincinnati, 62 O. S. 465). This constitutional limitation is recognized in the statutes above referred to, wherein we find the expression, "according to the benefits accruing." It will be found, also, that the Cass act and White-Mulcahy act provide a special limitation of thirty-three per cent. of tax value.

In conformity with the views expressed herein and in the opinions above referred to, specific answer to your questions may be made as follows:

(1) With respect to all roads, improvement proceedings as to which became pending proceedings during the year 1911, and from that time until the first Monday in September, 1915, property owners' share must be assessed and collected, and the township's share must be paid, unless such respective shares have been waived and assumed in accordance with former section 1210-1, the manner of the assessment to be as prescribed by statutes in force when the improvement proceedings became pending.

(2.) Assessments for improvements mentioned in next preceding paragraph (1) must be confined to such reality as immediately abuts the improvement, subject only to the exception created by former section 1209 as to railroad right of way and land adjoining it.

(3.) The rule stated in next preceding paragraph (2) is applicable to improvements made under Cass law (said former section 1209, however, having been broadened and re-enacted as section 1215 in Cass law.)

(4.) A road improvement proceeding becomes a pending proceeding at the time the state highway commissioner approves the application of the county commissioners for state aid as to such improvement, and orders the county surveyor to make plans, etc., for such improvement.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF THREE LEASES FOR COAL LANDS TO JOSEPH CARPENTER, SHIRLEY E. WALDREN AND GEORGE U. BONE.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, MAY 19, 1919.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated May 10, 1919, with which it is noted you submit three leases from the auditor of state to Joseph Carpenter, Shirley E. Waldren and George U. Bone, for the approval of this department.

It is noted that the premises described in these leases are a part of section 16 and that provision is made in section 3209-1, as amended in 105 O. L., page 6, for the auditor of state to lease the coal in and under such lands as provided in said section, "upon such terms and for such time as will be for the best interest of the beneficiaries thereof."

It is noted also from the facts in your letter that the coal sold under these leases is contained in pockets and is of no value except for wagon mining.

It is also noted that a reservation is made in these leases for coal lying below the level of the valley.

A careful examination of these leases, and consideration of the laws applicable to such leases, convince this department that they are executed in conformity with section 3209-1 G. C. and are for the best interests of the beneficiaries of section 16, and for these reasons these leases are therefore approved.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—LAWS OPERATIVE RELATING TO POSSESSION OR STORAGE OF LIQUORS AT TIME PROHIBITION AMENDMENT TO OHIO CONSTITUTION BECAME EFFECTIVE.

Neither the prohibition amendment to the Ohio constitution nor statutes of the state now operative prevent the removal of liquor from the state nor purport to penalize the possession or storage of liquor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of May 6, 1919, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "We are in receipt of the following inquiry from an attorney of East Liverpool, Ohio:
> 'May liquor remaining in stock after May 27th be stored in this city outside of the place where the business was conducted, if so, may such liquor be legally shipped outside of the state at any time before July 1, 1919?'
> Will you kindly furnish this department an opinion on the above question?"

I am presuming that your inquiry relates to the state of the Ohio law upon the subject involved, and in reply to such inquiry I advise that the provisions of the prohibition amendment to become effective May 27th do not in terms provide against the possession or storing of liquor within the state; nor is there statutory law now in operation dealing with that specific phase of the subject.

True, the possession and storage of liquor may well be made the subject of legislation looking to the enforcement of the prohibition amendment, and while such provisions may be embodied in legislation considered or to be considered before the present session of the general assembly, yet none of such legislation is now in effect, and therefore has not been examined in connection with the consideration of your inquiry.

Likewise the provisions of federal legislation have not been considered, since it was presumed your inquiry relates to laws cognizable by the administrative agencies of the state.

As thus considered, I advise in answer to your inquiry that the possession and storage of liquor in Ohio is not the subject of legislation now in force.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—DISCUSSION OF STATUTES RELATIVE TO REFUNDERS FOR LIQUOR LICENSE ASSESSMENTS.

The thousand dollar tax provision and the Sunday closing provision of the Ohio statutes are cumulative regulations of the liquor traffic, and among other regulatory measures, are to be construed and applied together. The observance of one creates no immunity from the observance of the other, and no part of the tax assessment is referable to the "closed day."

The last business day of the present tax year is Saturday, May 24, 1919, and dealers are not entitled to a refunder as of May 25*th by virtue of the Sunday closing requirement.*

In case of refunders ordered by the common pleas court in pursuance of section 6071-1 G. C., when the temporary discontinuance of business is upon the order of federal or state authority, the refunder is payable from the state treasury out of moneys appropriated for such purpose, and when the discontinuance of business is in pursuance of an order of county, municipal or township authority, or is the result of fire, flood, earthquake or other public calamity, the refunder is to be paid from the county treasury out of any surplus or unexpended funds of the county in the hands of said treasurer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiries relative to questions of refunder of liquor assessments, and will consider the same together in one opinion.

Your first inquiry is as follows:

> "Is a liquor dealer entitled to a refunder as of Sunday, May the 25th, if he has complied with the technical requirements of the statute providing for such refunder?
> It has been the practice of this department since the enactment of the original liquor tax law to prepare tables of refunders and we attach one of the same to this request for opinion."

You also submitted the further inquiry, as follows:

> "If a discontinuance of a liquor dealer is had under the provisions of section 6071-1 G. C. (103 O. L. 818), we desire an opinion upon the following questions:
> If a discontinuance is had upon the order of a county, municipal or township authority, is the state required to bear any proportion of such refunder by the court under said section? "

The liquor tax involved in your inquiry is provided for in section 6071 et seq., G. C.

"Upon the business of trafficking in spirituous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquors, there shall be assessed yearly and paid into the county treasury, as provided by sections 6072, and following, of the General Code, by each person, corporation, or co-partnership engaged therein the sum of one thousand dollars."

Section 6072 provides that the assessment with any penalty thereon shall attach as a lien upon the real property on the fourth Monday of May of each year, and shall be paid in equal installments as other taxes are paid in June and December of each year. It further provides:

"Any person who traffics in intoxicating liquors as a beverage at retail shall not be entitled to any rebate or refunder under the liquor tax law without giving a bond in amount equal to twice the amount of such rebate or refunder, with securities acceptable to the county clerk that he will not traffic in intoxicating liquors without paying the liquor taxes provided by law; such bond shall be filed with the county auditor and certified to the state liquor licensing board."

Section 6074 provides:

"When a person, company, corporation or co-partnership, engaged in such business, has been assessed and has paid the full amount of such assessment and afterward discontinued such business, the county auditor, upon being satisfied thereof, shall issue to such person, corporation or co-partnership a refunding order for a proportionate amount of such assessment so paid, but the amount of such assessment so retained shall not be less than two hundred dollars unless such discontinuance of business has been caused by an election under a local option law or a lawful finding of a mayor or judge on a petition filed in a residence district as provided in this chapter, in which case the proportionate amount of such tax shall be refunded in full."

A further provision for refunder is made by section 6071-1 G. C. (103 O. L. 818), which section provides:

"When a person, association, partnership or corporation engaged in the traffic of intoxicating liquors is required by the order of the military or other authority of the United States or of the state, county, municipality or township or by or through fire, flood, earthquake or other calamity to discontinue business temporarily, said person, association, partnership or corporation shall be entitled to a refunder of a proportionate amount of the tax so paid under section 6071 and following of the General Code, based upon the number of days or fraction thereof, of enforced discontinuance. A person, association, partnership or corporation so affected upon written application to the common pleas court of the county shall be entitled to an immediate hearing by said court. The clerk of said court shall notify the county auditor and county prosecutor of the application and the time set for hearing, and the said officer shall represent the county at said hearing.

> The court shall thereupon make a finding as to the fact and the number of days of said enforced discontinuance and shall make an order for a refunder accordingly which order shall not be subject to review. If the discontinuance is upon the order of any state or federal authority for whatever reason said order is made then the auditor of state shall draw a warrant upon the treasurer of state in favor of any such person, association, partnership or corporation for the amount of such refunder found by the court, to be paid out of any sum appropriated by the general assembly therefor; and if the discontinuance is upon the order of any county, municipality or township authority or is the result of fire, flood, earthquake or other public calamity, then the auditor of the county shall draw a warrant upon the treasurer of the county in favor of such person, association, partnership or corporation for the amount of such refunder found by the court, to be paid out of any surplus or unexpended funds in the hands of said treasurer.
> The act shall apply to any such discontinuance of business in the assessment year beginning the fourth Monday of May, 1912, and thereafter."

Your first question, as above submitted, is understood to involve the right to a refunder for Sunday, May 25th, arising out of the fact of that day being included within the license year, but the sale of liquor being precluded by the provisions of the Sunday closing law, so-called, which is as follows:

> "Sec. 13050. Whoever, on Sunday, sells intoxicating liquor, whether distilled, malt or vinous, or permits a place, other than a regular drug store, where such intoxicating liquor is sold or exposed for sale on other days to be open or remain open on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned in jail or in a city prison not less than ten days nor more than thirty days, or both."

In arriving at the correct answer to your inquiry it is only necessary to recall that the provision for assessing the one thousand dollar liquor tax (Aiken tax so-called) does not constitute a license in any respect, but on the contrary is in the nature of a legislative measure for the regulation of the traffic in intoxicating liquor.

Taxes of this character were originally enacted when the constitution provided:

> "No license to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this state; but the general assembly may, by law, provide against evils resulting therefrom."
> Section 7, article XV, constitution.

And the tax provisions have been upheld as an exercise of the police power, as well as a legitimate exercise of the taxing power, and considered as accumulative regulations along with those of a penal character which have been in force from time to time.

Viewed in this light, it is readily apparent that there is no basis for a claim for refunder for Sunday, May 25th, as the payment of tax vested the payor with no rights to engage in the traffic free of such other legal restraints and regulations as were or might be in force, but on the contrary, was but one of the regulatory measures to be observed by those engaging in the liquor traffic, and at the same time in no respect was effective as an immunity from observance of the other regulatory measures, such as the Sunday closing requirement.

Therefore, answering your first question specifically, I advise that liquor dealers are not entitled to a refunder as of Sunday, May 25th by reason of being required to close under the present provisions of the law.

The question raised by your second inquiry I think is fully answered by a consideration of the language of the statute, section 6071-1 G. C. Said section provides for a refunder in case of a temporary discontinuance of the business necessitated by order of the military or other authority of the United States or the state, county, municipality or township, or by or through fire, flood, earthquake or other public calamity. The refunder under such circumstances is to be determined by the common pleas court upon an application duly filed for said purpose, and shall be based upon the number of days or fraction thereof of enforced discontinuance as found by the court.

It is then provided that > "if the discontinuance is upon the order of any state or federal authority for whatever reason said order is made then the auditor of state shall draw a warrant upon the treasurer of state in favor of any such person, association, partnership or corporation for the amount of such refunder found by the court, to be paid out of any sum appropriated by the general assembly therefor; and if the discontinuance is upon the order of any county, municipality or township authority or is the result of fire, flood, earthquake or other public calamity, then the auditor of the county shall draw a warrant upon the treasurer of the county in favor of any such person, association, partnership or corporation for the amount of such refunder found by the court, to be paid out of any surplus or unexpended funds in the hands of said treasurer."

This section provides a distinct authority for refunders entirely independent of that provided for in case of discontinuance of the business contemplated in section 6074 supra, and must be administered in accordance with its own specific provisions which provide the complete procedure governing in case of temporary discontinuance by order of the United States or the state and several political subdivisions of the state.

In accordance with the express provisions of the statute, I advise that in case a temporary discontinuance is made necessary by the order of a county, municipal or township authority the entire amount of the refunder determined by the common pleas court is payable from the county treasury, and in such case there is no provision for reimbursement of all or any part thereof from the state treasury.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

AGGREGATE SUM TO BE EXPENDED BY COUNTY OFFICERS PROVISION OF SECTION 2980 G. C. AS TO TIME DIRECTORY—OTHER LIMITATIONS.

1. The provision of section 2980 G. C. as to the time within which the county commissioners are to fix the aggregate sum to be expended by the county officers therein referred to, is directory.

2. The county commissioners are empowered under sections 2980 and 2980-1 G. C. to make allowances from time to time from the county fee fund, subject to the limitation that the aggregate sum allowed does not exceed an aggregate amount to be ascertained by making the percentage computations therein specified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of March 21, 1919, requesting my opinion as to the validity of the action taken by the board of county commissioners of Franklin county on February 6, 1917, amending its resolution of November 23, 1916, so as to increase the allowance made to the probate judge for clerk hire for the period beginning February 9, 1917, and ending December 31, 1917, was duly received.

The facts, as I gather them from your letter and the other papers transmitted therewith, are as follows:

On November 22, 1916, the probate judge then in office requested the board of county commissioners to make an allowance of $16,500.00 for clerk hire, etc., for the year beginning January 1, 1917.

The earnings of the office for the year ending September 30, 1916 (a percentage of which determines the maximum that may be allowed for clerk hire), amounted to $33,923.53. Of this amount the commissioners could have allowed the probate judge the sum of $24,135.00.

On November 23, 1916, the commissioners by resolution granted the request of the probate judge, and stipulated that the judge then in office be allowed to expend $1,763.00 of the amount allowed for the period beginning January 1, 1917, and ending February 8, 1917, the closing day of his term of office.

On February 6, 1917, it became apparent to the commissioners that the allowance made by them on November 23, 1916, (being diminished as it was by the expenditure of the $1,763.00, above mentioned), would be inadequate to meet the necessary expenses of the office for the balance of the year. At the same time the probate judge-elect made a survey of the needs of the office, and found that records had been allowed to fall back; that many accounts of administrators, executors, guardians, trustees and assignees had not been spread upon the complete record; that many proceedings to sell real estate had not been recorded: that many last wills and codicils, though duly admitted to probate, had not been recorded, and that divers and sundry things required by statute to be done, and some within a certain limit of time fixed by statute, had not been done. It was apparent to both the judge-elect and the county commissioners that an additional allowance of money for clerk hire was necessary if the court records were to be brought up and kept up as required by law.

The county commissioners, therefore, in consideration of the premises, by resolution unanimously adopted on February 6, 1917, amended their allowance of November 23, 1916, by increasing the amount to be expended by the probate judge from February 2, to December 31, 1917, to $16,970.00. In other words, an additional allowance of $2,233.00 was made. This sum, plus that allowed the retiring judge for the month of January and part of the month of February, 1917, would amount to $18,733.00 for the entire year 1917, and is $5,402.00 less than the amount the county commissioners could have allowed on November 23, 1916.

The question for decision is whether or not the action taken by the board of county commissioners on February 6, 1917, is valid.

What is commonly called the county fee fund was created under the Act of March 22, 1906 (98 O. L. 89), now sections 2977 G. C. et seq. This fund is raised from fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected or received as compensation for services by certain county officers, including the probate judge, and under section 2983 G. C. the sum collected and received by each office constitutes a "separate fund," and is credited to the office from which it is received.

To aid the county commissioners in fixing the allowance to the county officers, section 2980 G. C. provides that each officer shall prepare and file with the commissioners on November 20th a statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for the year beginning the following January, and it is further provided that not later than five days after the filing of such statement, the commissioners shall fix a reasonable and proper sum to be expended for such period. Section 2980 G. C. reads as follows:

> "On the twentieth of each November such officer shall prepare and file with the county commissioners a detailed statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks and other employes, except court constables, of their respective offices, showing in detail the requirements of their offices for the year beginning January 1st next thereafter with the sworn statement of the amount expended by them for such assistants for the preceding year. Not later than five days after the filing of such statement the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for such period for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes of such officer, except court constables, which sum shall be reasonable and proper, and shall enter such finding upon their journal."

The aggregate amount to be fixed by the county commissioners for each office cannot exceed an amount ascertained by computing 30 per cent. on the first $2,000 or fractional part thereof, 40 per cent. on the next $8,000 or fractional part thereof, and 85 per cent. on all over $10,000 of the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected in any such office during the year ending September 20th next preceding. See section 2980-1 G. C. which, omitting the provision hereinafter quoted, reads as follows:

> "The aggregate sum so fixed by the county commissioners to be expended in any year for the compensation of such deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes, except court constables, shall not exceed for any county auditor's office, county treasurer's office, probate judge's office, county recorder's office, sheriff's office, or office of the clerk of the courts, an aggregate amount to be ascertained by computing thirty per cent. on the first two thousand dollars or fractional part thereof, forty per cent. on the next eight thousand dollars or fractional part thereof and eighty-five per cent. on all over ten thousand dollars, of the fees, costs, percentages, penalties, allowances and other perquisites collected for the use of the county in any such office for official services during the year ending September thirtieth next preceding the time of fixing such aggregate sum, * * *.
> When the term of an incumbent of any such office shall expire within the year for which such aggregate sum is to be fixed, the county commissioners at the time of fixing the same, shall designate the amount of such aggregate sum which may be expended by the incumbent and the amount of such aggregate sum which may be expended by his successor for the fractional parts of such year."

It will thus be observed that the provisions of the statute so far quoted deal exclusively with a special fund commonly called the county fee fund, which is raised by the collection of fees, costs, etc., and not with the general county fund.

In the event that the amount legally payable from the fee fund is insufficient to carry on the business of a particular office, it is provided that the additional allowance must come from the general county fund. The authority for transferring the amount of such additional allowance from the general county fund to the fee fund, and the method and machinery by which it is to be transferred, is contained in a proviso found in section 2980-1 G. C., and reading as follows:

> "Provided, however, that if at any time any one of such officers require additional allowance in order to carry on the business of his office, said officer may make application to a judge of the court of common pleas, of the county wherein such officer was elected; and thereupon such judge shall hear said application and if upon hearing the same said judge shall find that such necessity exists he may allow such a sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salary of such deputy, deputies, assistants, bookkeepers, clerks or other employes as may be required, and thereupon the board of county commissioners shall transfer from the general county fund to such officers' fee fund, such sum of money as may be necessary to pay said salary or salaries.
> Notice in writing of such application and the time fixed by such judge for the hearing thereof shall be served by the applicant, five days before said hearing upon the board of county commissioners of such county. And said board shall file in said proceedings their approval or disapproval of the allowance asked for and shall have the right to appear at such hearing and be heard thereon; and evidence may be offered. * * *"

It clearly appears that the proviso just quoted only applies when the additional allowance is to come from the general county fund and that the judge of the common pleas court is not vested with any authority or jurisdiction over the fee fund or to make the additional allowance from that fund.

The statutes under consideration vest in the county commissioners the exclusive power to make allowances from the fee fund, and, in my opinion their jurisdiction is not exhausted by a single exercise of such power, but is continuing, and not exhausted until they have exercised to the fullest extent the 30, 40 and 85 per cent. computations provided for in section 2980-1 G. C. It is only after such jurisdiction has been completely exhausted that the jurisdiction of the common pleas court over the general county fund attaches. In other words, the term "additional allowance" in the proviso above quoted, refers to an allowance to be made from the general county fund only.

What has been said disposes of the same question stated in a different form viz.: Whether the county commissioners can amend their original order so as to increase the allowance thereby made, when it becomes apparent that the amount allowed is wholly inadequate for the ensuing year? There is no magic in words and it is my opinion that the action of the county commissioners was a proper exercise of their power to fix the allowance of the probate judge for the ensuing year whether it be called an amendment or by some other name so long as the aggregate amount did not exceed the amount arrived at under the percentage computations above mentioned.

There is no provision in the statute that the commissioners may not at any time increase an allowance made from the fee fund, either by way of amending their original order or by making a new order, so long as they keep within the percentages specified. As already stated, the power of the commissioners is continuing until they have reached the aggregate amount authorized in the section.

While it is true that section 2980 G. C. provides that the county officer shall prepare and file with the commissioners on November 20th a statement of the probable amount necessary to be expended for the year beginning January 1st, and that "not later than five days after the filing of such statement the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate sum to be expended for such period * * *, which sum shall be reasonable and proper," it is my opinion that the provision of the statute as to time is directory only, and that the provision with respect to the amount must be considered in connection with 2980-1 G. C., and, when so considered, refers to the aggregate amount ascertained by applying to the fullest extent the 30, 40 and 85 per cent. computations therein prescribed, and does not have the effect of preventing the commissioners from making further and additional allowances for use during a single ensuing year so long as the aggregate amount so ascertained is not exceeded.

In Weed vs. Tucker, 19 N. Y. 422, the court, in answer to the contention that where power is granted to an officer it is to be construed as limited to a single exercise, unless the statute provides for its exercise on more than a single occasion, said:

> "If such a general rule of construction prevails at all, and I have been unable to find the evidence of it, I am persuaded that it is limited to private grants or to the grants of the public property, or of franchises for the emolument of individuals or private corporations."

The statutes under consideration are not at all of that character. They are rather a part of the legal machinery for carrying on government, and providing for the administration of justice.

It must also not be overlooked that section 2980 G. C. clearly and expressly provides that the aggregate sum to be fixed by the commissioners shall be "reasonable and proper," and this, in my opinion, evinces the legislative intent to confer upon the commissioners continuing authority until a reasonable and proper amount has been allowed, subject only to the express limitation imposed by section 2980-1 G. C. What is a reasonable and proper amount, within the limitation just referred to, must be determined from the facts and circumstances of each particular case.

There is no universal rule by which directory provisions under all circumstances may be distinguished from those which are mandatory, and it is dificult at times to point out just where the line between the two classes is to be drawn. One of the tests frequently applied by the courts is to ascertain, if possible, whether it is the legislative intent that the act should not be performed at all, unless performed within the time fixed, and a factor to be considered in this connection is the effect upon the public interests of permitting or denying the right of the officer to act after the time has gone by.

In State vs. Lean, 9 Wis., 279, the court stated the rule as follows:

> "That when there is no substantial reason why the thing to be done might not as well be done after the time prescribed as before; no presumption that by allowing it to be done it may work an injury or wrong; nothing in the one itself, or in other acts relating to the same subject matter, indicating that the legislature did not intend that it should rather be done after the time prescribed than not to be done at all, there the courts assume that intent was, that if not done within the time prescribed, it might be done afterwards."

In the St. Hilaire case, 101 Maine, 522, the court, at page 525, after stating that it is difficult to formulate exact rules for determining when a statutory provision should be construed as mandatory and when as directory, summed up the authorities as follows:

> "When no rights are impaired, provisions concerning the time and manner in which public officers are to perform assigned acts are directory.
> When there is no substantial reason why an act may not as well be done after as at or before the time prescribed, such a statute is directory."

In State vs. Covington, 29 O. S., 92, the court at page 117 in distinguishing between directory and mandatory provisions of the constitution, attached importance to the consideration whether "less injury results to the general public by disregarding than by enforcing the letter of the law."

In my opinion there is nothing in the nature of the duty to be performed by the commissioners under the statutes involved, nor in the manner of its performance, nor in its effect upon public interests or private rights, to indicate that the legislature intended that, if not performed within the time prescribed, it should not be performed at all.

When it is kept in mind (and it certainly must be apparent to any one) that no person can with certainty anticipate the amount of work that probate courts may be called upon to perform during a particular year, by reason of causes over which they and the commissioners have no control, the unsoundness as well as the unfairness of any rule which denies the right of the commissioners to exercise continuing power under these statutes must readily occur. Such a situtation is presented here, for it became obvious to all concerned that the public records of the office could not be brought up and kept up and the other work of the office properly performed during the ensuing year without additional help, and consequently without additional money with which to employ and pay such help.

The effect of a conclusion other than the one at which I have arrived, would in some instances, be to clog the administration of justice, for it is obvious that the manifold duties and uncertain amount of work that the probate judge may find suddenly thrust upon him, and the recording and keeping up of the important public records in his office as contemplated and required by statute, could not be accomplished or performed without the necessary assistants and clerks, who cannot be procured to do the work without compensation. To deny the authority of the county commissioners to meet these situations and emergencies as they arise would, in many cases, of which the one under consideration is a fair sample, result in great public inconvenience and perhaps injustice.

The conclusion at which I have arrived is supported by the unreported decision of the common pleas court of Noble county, afterwards affirmed by the court of appeals, and also by a recent decision of the court of common pleas of Franklin county, Ohio. Opposed to the conclusion reached by myself and the three courts just mentioned, are the opinions of the former Attorneys-General (1913 Annual Reports of Attorney-General Vol. II p. 1322; 1916 Opinions of Attorney-General Vol. II p. 1837).

The questions under consideration have been squarely presented to and decided by three Ohio courts of competent jurisdiction. In the latest case decided by the common pleas court of Franklin county the opinions of the Attorneys-General above referred to were disapproved and until such time as some court of higher jurisdiction than the ones mentioned has authoritatively decided the contrary I can only advise that the provision of section 2980 G. C. as to the time within which the commissioners shall fix the aggregate sum to be expended by the officers therein referred to is directory and that under section 2980-1 G. C. the commissioners are authorized to make allowances from time to time from the county fee fund subject to the limitation that the aggregate sum allowed does not exceed an amount to be ascertained by computing 30 per cent. on the first $2,000 or fractional part thereof 40 per cent. on the next $8,000 or fractional part thereof and 85 per cent. on all over $10,000 of the fees etc. of the particular office involved and collected for the use of the county for official services during the year ending September 30th next preceding, etc.

TAX COMMISSION—ASSESSMENT OF SLEEPING CAR, FREIGHT LINE AND EQUIPMENT COMPANIES—MAY USE TRACK MILEAGE BASIS OR VALUE OF DAILY AVERAGE NUMBER OF CARS IN STATE DURING YEAR.

In the assessment of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies the tax commission is not obliged to use the method of apportioning the value of the whole number of cars owned by such companies to Ohio on the track mileage basis if it has information as to the value of the daily average number of cars in the state during the year, as that is the object of the assessment.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—At the verbal request of Mr. Peckinpaugh of your commission, I desire to amplify the opinion of recent date relating to the assessment of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies. In that opinion it was intimated that under the decision of the supreme court of the United States in Union Tank Line Co. vs. Wright U. S. Supreme Court Advance Opinions 1919, No. 11, page 320, the full extent of the taxing power of the state of Ohio with respect to such property is limited to such portion of the value of the daily average number of cars operated in Ohio as is represented by the ratio which the miles of track in Ohio bear to the total miles of track in Ohio and elsewhere. This intimation is somewhat misleading, and to that extent the former opinion must be modified.

As a portion of the decision of the supreme court quoted in the former opinion clearly states, the taxing power of a state extends to the taxation of the full value of the daily average number of cars operated in that state; and any reasonable means which the state may adopt to exert its power to that extent will be sustained and an assessment made by such means will be upheld. The vice of the Georgia assessment was found in the fact that the track mileage basis of apportionment of the entire value of all the cars owned by such company was the exclusive method of arriving at the value which was subject to the taxing power of the state and taxable by the state under its laws; whereas, on the admitted facts, the use of such a ratio of apportionment produced a result as to the Union Tank Line Company in the state of Georgia greatly in excess of the whole value of the daily average number of cars actually in Georgia during the year.

In the former opinion the view was expressed that no other result was possible under the Georgia statute, which therefore would have to be held unconstitutional in every case in which a showing of facts like that made by the Union Tank Line Company could be made but that the Ohio statute is more elastic than the Georgia statute and therefore could not be held unconstitutional.

I now call the attention of the commission to section 5465 of the General Code, which provides that the commission shall ascertain "the amount and value of the proportion of the capital stock of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies, representing capital and property of such companies owned and used in this state." This is the thing to be determined. The section goes on to provide that in making this determination the commission "shall be guided in each case by the proportion of the capital stock of the company representing rolling stock, which the miles of railroad over which such company runs cars, or its cars are run in this state, bear to the entire number of miles in this state and elsewhere over which such company runs cars, or its cars are run." In other words, in order to arrive at the thing to be determined it is the duty of the commission under this language to give due and proper weight, where other factors are lacking, to such an apportionment of the value of the whole number of cars owned by the company.

Stated in another way: this mathematical calculation which is to be applied to the value of the whole number of cars is one way of arriving at the result, and indeed, as was declared in the former opinion, the only legal way in which the result can be arrived at by an apportionment of the value of the whole number of cars. So that where the value of the whole number of cars is taken as the starting point, and Ohio's taxable share thereof is to be arrived at on the basis of an apportionment, the track mileage basis must be followed.

But the section does not stop here; it goes on to provide that the commission shall also be guided by "such other rules and evidence as will enable the commission to determine, fairly and equitably, the amount and value of the capital stock of such company representing capital and property owned and used in this state." In other words, if the commission has before it other evidence bearing upon the value of the capital owned and used in this state it may be guided by that evidence; and may make other rules than the one which the statute sets up in order fairly and equitably to arrive at the appraisement which the statute commands.

The section is like section 5452 of the General Code, which provides that in determining the value of the property of express, telegraph and telephone companies in this state, "the commission shall be guided by the value of the property as determined by the value of the entire capital stock of the companies," and then goes on to provide further that the commission shall also be guided by "such other evidence and rules as will enable such commission to arrive at the true value, in money, of the entire property of such companies within this state, in the proportion which such property bears to the entire property of the companies, as determined by the value of the capital stock thereof, and such other evidence and rules." Under this section it was held in State ex rel. vs. Jones, Auditor, 51 O. S. 492, that the taxing authorities are not limited to the capital stock method in determining the whole value of the property of an express company in the state.

It seems to me that the case is different from that of a section like section 5424 of the General Code, which provides, as to utilities other than express, telegraph and telephone companies, that—

> "In determining the value of the property of each such public utility to be assessed and taxed within the state, the commission shall be guided by the value of the property as determined by the information contained in the sworn statements made by the public utility to the commission and such other evidence and rules as will enable it to arrive at the true value in money of the entire property of such public utility within this state, in the proportion which the value of such property bears to the value of the entire property of such public utility."

Here the commission is to arrive at the value of the entire property of the public utility within this state, in the proportion which that property bears to the value of the entire property of the utility; and that proportion is further indicated by section 5445 General Code, which provides as follows:

> "When a street, suburban or interurban railroad or railroad company has part of its road in this state and part thereof in another state or states, the commission shall take the entire value of such property, moneys and credits of such public utility so found and determined, in accordance with the provisions of this act, and divide it in the proportion the length of the road in this state bears to the whole length thereof, and determine the principal sum for the value of the road in this state accordingly, equalizing the relative value thereof in this state."

The difference between section 5465 and sections 5424 et seq., respectively, lies in the fact that under the former the thing to be determined is the value of the property of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies in this state, and the apportionment is simply a means to that end; whereas, in the other sections the very thing to be determined is the value of a certain arbitrarily defined proportion, and the mileage basis is set up in the statute to define the proportion and is therefore binding upon the commission.

For these reasons, then, the commission is advised that it is not limited under section 5465 to the mileage rule as a means of determining, fairly and equitably, the value of the capital stock of sleeping car, freight line and equipment companies representing property owned and used in this state; unless the value of the property so owned and used in this state is ascertained or arrived at by working backward, so to speak, from the value of the whole property. When that is the case, and Ohio's share is arrived at by a process of apportionment, the track mileage basis is, as declared in the former opinion, binding upon the commission. But if information is furnished responsive to paragraph 11 of section 5463 of the General Code, referred to in the former opinion, whereby the commission can arrive at the actual average value of the company's property in the state, the commission may lawfully make its assessment on that basis, ignoring the artificial, roundabout, and possibly invalid—in a given case, as in Union Tank Line Co. vs. Wright—method of apportionment of the whole value in order to arrive at the same result.

Conceivably, there may be cases in which the commission cannot acquire the necessary information to make what might be termed a direct valuation of the cars actually in Ohio. Where such information is not available the statute steps in and requires the method of apportionment to be used as the means to an end. But where the information which enables the commission to make a direct appraisement of the property actually in Ohio during the year is available, that information should be used as the basis of the commission's assessment.

By following these rules the Ohio statutes can be complied with and the constitutional objections raised in Union Tank Line Co. vs. Wright obviated.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—NO HIGH SCHOOL MAINTAINED—MUST PAY TUITION—HOW PAID—WHEN DISTRICT IS ENTITLED TO STATE AID—WHEN COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION HAS AUTHORITY TO PAY OBLIGATIONS OF DISTRICT BOARD AND CHARGE SAME TO DISTRICT BOARD.

1. A board of education not maintaining a high school must pay the tuition of high school pupils resident in such district.

2. Such tuition can be paid from the tuition or the contingent fund and if either or both are insufficient, a tax levy can be made as provided in section 7751 G. C. but limited by section 5649-2 G. C.

3. When a tuition fund, levied as provided in section 7595 G. C. is so exhausted that teachers can not be paid, such school district is entitled to state aid.

4. Where a district board neglects to pay its proper obligations, the county board of education upon investigation shall make such payments as necessary, same to be a charge against the district board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

HON. CLARE CALDWELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your request of April 17, 1919, asking for an opinion on the following:

> "This situation has been presented to me. A pupil goes from one shool district, which has no high school, to a high school in an adjoining school district. The board of education of the latter district is desirous of charging the tuition against the board of education of the district wherein the pupil lives. The debtor board of education claims to have reached its maximum levy and that all funds are necessary for the support of its own schools. Question: Can the tuition be collected?
> Under section 7748 G. C. there is an exception which protects a district having either a second or third grade school, when the maximum levy has been reached and all funds raised thereunder are necessary for the support of the schools of such district. Can this exception be applied to a debtor board of education in which there is not a high school?"

Attention is invited to section 7747 G. C., which says in part:

> "The tuition of pupils who are eligible for admission to high school and who reside in village or rural districts in which no high school is maintained, shall be paid by the board of education of the school district in which they have legal school residence, such tuition to be computed by the month.
> * * *"

The above section refers to school districts which maintain no high school and is the law governing your inquiry, making it mandatory upon boards of education in such districts to pay tuition of eligible pupils.

Section 7748 G. C. says:

> "A board of education providing a third grade high school as defined by law shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year. Should pupils residing in the district prefer not to attend such third grade high school the board of education of such district shall be required to pay the tuition of such pupils at any first grade high school for four years, or at any second grade high school for three years and a first grade high school for one year. Such board providing a second grade high school as defined by law shall pay the tuition of graduates residing in the district at any first grade high school for one year; except that, a board maintaining a second or third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district. No board of education is required to pay the tuition of any pupil for more than four school years, except that it must pay the tuition of all successful applicants, who have complied with the further provisions hereof, residing more than four miles by the most direct route of public travel, from the high school provided by the board, when such applicants attend a nearer high school, or in lieu of paying such tuition the board of education maintaining a high school may pay for the transportation of the pupils living more than four miles from the said high school, maintained by the said board of education to said high school. Where more than one high school is maintained, by agreement of the board and parent or guardian, pupils may attend either and their transporation shall be so paid. A pupil living in a village or city district who has completed the elementary school course and whose legal residence has been transferred to a rural district in this state before he begins or completes a high school course, shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of a resident pupil of such district."

This section was passed in the same act with section 7747 G. C., supra, and is a saving clause for those districts which maintain a high school of some kind or grade, and a board of education having no high school can not avail itself of the language in such section, which says that, "when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district," such board is not required to pay such tuition, for such exception applies only to a district which maintains a second or third grade high school and is making an effort to comply with the clear intent of the law, that each child shall have an opportunity for a high school education.

Under section 7747 G. C., supra, there is no escape for a district maintaining no high school from paying tuition of its pupils eligible to high school, in their attendance at a high school in a neighboring district. The board can not plead that no avenue is open to them in the matter, for the board has recourse in its application to the superintendent of public instruction of the state for "state aid," if it is a week school district.

Bearing upon the matter of payment of tuition as affecting "state aid," the Attorney-General said in opinion rendered on July 22, 1913 (Vol. I, Ann. Rep. Atty.-Gen., 1913, p. 309):

"The payment of tuition of high school pupils (section 7751, General Code) * * * is chargeable either upon the tuition or the contingent fund * * * but if the contingent fund has not money sufficient therein with which to pay, and the tuition fund has, the payment would have to be made from the tuition fund.

* * * if three-fourths of the amount raised by taxation for all local school purposes went into the tuition fund and a deficit should occur, the school district would be entitled to aid from the state." (This fraction was changed to two-thirds in 106 O. L., 430.)

However, a board of education requiring funds for the payment of tuition due another district should first be governed by section 7751 G. C. (to be read in conjunction with the Smith one per cent. law, a later enactment) if it has no contingent or tuition funds sufficient to care for such obligations, such section reading as follows:

"Sec. 7751. Such tuition shall be paid from either the tuition or contingent funds and when the board of education deems it necessary it may levy a tax of not to exceed two mills on each dollar of taxable property in the district in excess of that allowed by law for school purposes. The proceeds of such levy shall be kept in a separate fund and applied only to the payment of such tuition."

Section 7595 G. C. reads in part:

"* * * When a school district has not sufficient money to pay its teachers such salaries as are provided in section 7595-1 of the General Code, for eight months of the year, after the board of education of such district has made the maximum legal school levy, at least two-thirds of which shall be for the tuition fund, then such school district may receive from the state treasurer sufficient money to make up the deficit."

Further, section 7596-1 G. C. (107 O. L. 623) provides:

"Whenever a school district receives state aid, as is provided for in section 7595-1 of the General Code the board of education of such school district may refund any tuition indebtedness by issuing bonds, as is provided by section 5656 of the General Code. When such bonds are due, the amount and interest of the bonds shall be a part of the deficit for the current year, and shall be paid as state aid by the auditor of state as is provided by section 7596 of the General Code."

However, should a district board of education neglect to carry out its clear duty in providing funds for tuition payments, the matter should be brought to the attention of the county board of education, for section 7610-1 G. C. (107 O. L. 623) says:

"If the board of education in a district fails to provide sufficient school privileges for all the youth of school age in the district, * * * or to pay out any other school money, needed in school administration, * * *. * * * the county board of education of the county to which such district belongs, upon being advised and satisfied thereof, shall perform any and all of such duties or acts, in the same manner as the board of education by this title is authorized to perform them. All * * * money so paid by the county board of education * * * shall be a charge against the school district for which the money was paid. The amount so paid shall be retained by the county auditor from the proper funds due to such school district, at the time of making the semi-annual distribution of taxes."

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that:

(1) A board of education not maintaining a high school must pay the tuition of high school pupils resident in such district who attend a high school in another district.

(2) Such tuition can be paid from the tuition or the contingent fund and if either or both are insufficient, a tax levy can be made as provided in section 7751 G. C.

(3) When a tuition fund, levied as provided in section 7595 G. C., is so exhausted that teachers can not be paid, such school district is entitled to state aid.

(4) Where a district board neglects to pay its proper obligations, the county board of education upon investigation shall make such payments as necessary, same to be a charge against the district board.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—AUTHORITY TO EMPOWER PROBATE JUDGES TO DEPORT NON-RESIDENT PATIENTS—EXPENSES HOW PAID.

Under section 1819 G. C., where the probate judge or superintendent finds that a person, whose commitment or admission to the state institutions referred to in section 1835 G. C., is requested, has not a legal residence in this state or his legal residence is in doubt or unknown, and such probate judge or superintendent is of the opinion that such person should be committed or admitted to such institution, upon notice as to such residence, as provided, in section 1819, it becomes the duty of the Ohio Board of Administration to investigate the legal residence of such person and that board may transport such person to the place of his residence at the expense of the state, and such expense is not payable from county funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter dated April 29, 1919, as follows:

> "We are sending you herewith communication received by this department from the Ohio Board of Administration concerning a legal procedure to be observed under sections 1817 to 1820, inclusive, of the General Code, and we would request your written opinion in regard to same, and especially ask you to outline a legal method of procedure thereunder, as it is our purpose to circularize your opinion to probate courts throughout Ohio in order that there may be uniform action in these matters."

From the communication attached to your letter, and from supplemental personal conference, it is observed that the particular question with reference to the sections quoted in your letter is as to the authority of the Ohio Board of Administration to empower probate judges to deport non-resident patients direct from their courts. It is also noted in that communication that difficulty and confusion have arisen as to the payments of the expenditures caused by such deportation.

It is also observed that you request this department to outline a legal method of procedure under said sections.

Sections 1817, 1818, 1819, 1820, 1835, 1838 and 1841-8 G. C. are pertinent to your inquiry.

Section 1835, relative to the powers and duties of the Ohio Board of Administration, provides that said board

> "shall have full power to manage and govern the following institutions: * * * The Ohio hospital for epileptics, * * * The Columbus state hospital * * * The institution for feeble-minded * * *."

Section 1838 provides:

> "The board, in addition to the powers expressly conferred, shall have all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive administration and fiscal supervision over all said institutions."

Section 1841-8, as amended in 103 O. L., 681, confers authority on such board to act as a commission of lunacy, with power "to examine into * * * the question of the sanity or condition of any person committed to or confined in any * * * hospital or asylum * * or restrained of his liberty by reason of alleged insanity at any place within this state."

Section 1817 provides that a person not a legal resident of this state shall not be admitted to a benevolent institution except as therein provided.

Section 1818 defines the requisites of an application for admission to the institutions referred to in section 1835, supra.

Section 1819 in part is:

"If the judge or superintendent finds that the person whose commitment or admission is requested has not a legal residence in this state, or his legal residence is in doubt or unknown, and is of the opinion that such person should be committed or admitted to such institution, he shall notify without delay the Ohio Board of Administration, giving his reasons for requesting commitment or admission."

Section 1820 provides that said board

"by a committee, its secretary, or such agent as it designates, shall investigate the legal residence of such person, * * *. At any time after investigation is made, * * * a non-resident person whose legal residence has been established, may be transported thereto at the expense of this state."

It is to be observed that when the probate judge or superintendent finds the facts as to residence, as stated in section 1819, he is obliged to notify the Ohio Board of Administration (which will be hereinafter referred to as the board) at once, and there is no further provision in these sections for the judge to perform other subsequent duties or exercise any authority after such notice, and it is suggested that from the time of such notice the probate judge or superintendent, to include both of whom the term judge will be hereinafter used, have nothing further to do with the case unless called upon to testify or furnish information in the investigation by the board, under section 1820, which provides that such board shall investigate the legal residence of such person.

Consideration of these sections leads to the conclusion that when the fact of the person's residence is certified to the board under section 1819, it becomes the exclusive function of the board to decide the legal residence of such person and the further question of transporting such person thereto at the expense of the state.

It is a pertinent question whether such board may delegate its power in such matters to another officer or person.

In support of the affirmative of this question, the first part of section 1820 might be cited. It provides:

"The Ohio Board of Administration by a committee, its secretary, or such agent as it designates, shall investigate the legal residence of such person, and may send for persons and papers and administer oaths or affirmations in conducting such investigation."

It is to be observed here, however, that the thing which the board is directed to investigate is "the legal residence of such person," and it is concluded that for the purposes of investigation of such residence the board may properly designate the probate judge or any other person and delegate to such official or other person the same powers possessed by the board.

It follows, however, that the agent of such board shall report the result of his investigation to his principal, the board which appointed him. There is no authority in this section for delegating the power and discretion of deciding as to the transportation which is contained in the latter part of section 1820.

A general rule of law as to the delegation of official authority may be profitable at this time.

The rule is succintly stated in Knauss vs. Columbus, 13 O. D., N. P., 200, where it is stated in the second branch of the syllabus:

> "Where a particular public agent or official is charged with the performance of certain duties, these duties cannot be voluntarily assumed by any other person nor delegated to any other person by him who is charged with the discharge of the duty."

It is to be borne in mind that the expense of such transportation is to be paid by the state, and it certainly was the legislative policy that such state funds should be expended upon the order of this state board of administration and not upon the order of a probate judge of the county or the superintendent referred to in section 1819.

From the foregoing considerations it is concluded that such board cannot delegate the duty of finally deciding as to the legal residence of such person and his transportation to his residence.

It is also noted that you request that this department outline a legal procedure for such transportation in conformity with the laws relative thereto.

In compliance with this request, and starting with section 1819, where the judge or superintendent finds the facts as to residence therein defined, this department suggests the following procedure:

1. Notice from such judge or superintendent to the board "without delay," with reasons for request of commitment.
2. Investigation by such board as to the legal residence of such person. Such investigation may be made by the probate judge or superintendent as the designated agent of the board, as desired.
3. After the completion of such investigation, the board shall make and enter on its records a formal finding as to the legal residence of such person, and if it decides to transport such person, an order to that effect should also be made and recorded.
4. The board in its order should designate the person into whose custody such transported person shall be placed and direct him to carry out the order of the board.
5. After the transportation of such person, pursuant to the order of the board, upon proper presentation of an account of the expense thereof, such account should be paid from the state treasury.

Trusting that this suggestion may be of service to you and the Ohio Board of Administration in the discharge of their duties under these sections, I am

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION — EMPLOYEE WHO TRAVELS AROUND STATE REQUIRED TO REMAIN IN COLUMBUS BY ORDER OF COMMISSION DUE TO EMERGENCY—ENTITLED TO EXPENSES—J. B. DUGAN, CHIEF RAILROAD INSPECTOR.

Where the duties of an employe of the Public Utilities Commission require him to travel around the state and the rules and orders of the commission do not otherwise specify, his headquarters from which he is entitled to traveling expenses and when away from which he is entitled to hotel bills, etc., is his home.

When in case of emergency such employe is detailed for service at the office of the commission for a limited and temporary period his official headquarters is not thereby changed and he is entitled to his expenses while at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested the opinion of this department in the matter of the allowance and payment of certain expenses incurred by Mr. J. B. Dugan, chief railroad inspector of the Public Utilities Commission. The following quotations from letters which have passed between the Public Utilities Commission and yourself will suffice as a statement of facts:

"The auditor of the Public Utilities Commission presented to you for payment the expense account of Mr. J. B. Dugan, chief railroad inspector of this department, * * * the same or most of it being for expenses incurred while located in Columbus, which account was returned to this department by you with a request that we 'show cause for paying Mr. Dugan's expenses when permanently located in Columbus.'

In reply to your request * * * wish to say that Mr. Dugan is not permanently located in Columbus, but has been ordered to remain at our offices only until such time as the present congested transportation condition, together with the coal and food situation clears up.

* * * * * * * * * * *

This commission is of the belief that in view of the urgent need of Mr. Dugan's services in Columbus for the present that his expenses should be paid and I am therefore returning same to you for further action."

(Letter of the chairman of the Public Utilities Commission to the auditor of state under date of December 5, 1917).

"In reply to your favor of December 6 with relation to the expense account of Mr. J. B. Dugan * * beg to say that I took this matter up with the governor and took over the certificate of appointment filed with me by the governor, which certificate states that J. B. Dugan was appointed under section 498 G. C., as chief railroad inspector, at a salary of $3,000.00 per year, and no mention is made of traveling expenses. I also directed the governor's attention to your letter and he read the same. He said he would make no further approval to the certificate already on file and asked me to do that which I believed to be my duty.

I have considered this question carefully and it is my opinion that we will allow no further expense accounts for Mr. Dugan while engaged in the office at Columbus. Of course any expenses incurred by him while traveling for the department will be paid promptly. I do not do this arbitrarily, simply because we have to define a policy that will accord the same treatment to all departments."

(Letter of the auditor of state to the chairman of the Public Utilities Commission under date of December 8, 1917.)

My opinion has been requested as to the authority of the Public Utilities Commission to present the vouchers referred to and as to the duty of the auditor of state to honor them by the issuance of a warrant.

The two statements above set forth present but one issue of fact, if indeed any issue of fact is presented; and that is the character of Mr. Dugan's presence in Columbus during the period covered by the vouchers. From the statement of the chairman of the commission it appears that his presence is not permanent, but that Mr. Dugan was detailed at Columbus for special service during an emergency. The last letter of the auditor of state does not disclose any assertion to the contrary, and I feel justified in assuming for present purposes that this statement is correct. We have it, then, that Mr. Dugan was appointed in the first instance as an inspector under section 498 of the General Code. This section provides that > "The (public utilities) commission shall have power to employ, during its pleasure, such * * * inspectors * * * as it may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter or to perform the duties and exercise the powers conferred by law upon the commission. All * * * inspectors * * * shall receive such salaries and compensation as may be fixed by the commission, with the approval of the governor; said salaries and compensation to said officers and employes to be paid out of the state treasury upon the warrant of the auditor, upon presentation of vouchers signed by the chairman and secretary of the commission."

The duties of an inspector of the kind referred to in this section are not prescribed by law and therefore are such as are prescribed by the commission, either by express order or by the custom of the service. I assume, however, that it may be taken for granted that the ordinary duties of an inspector are of a peripatetic character requiring him to travel from place to place; so that the special service upon which Mr. Dugan was detailed, as outlined in the letter of the chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, is not within the line of his ordinary duties. Nevertheless, there can be no question as to the authority of the commission to make such a detail, for the reason that it has complete and plenary power to order his duties, so long at least as he is not permanently deprived of his character as an inspector.

In the letter of the auditor of state it seems to be assumed that authority to pay traveling or other expenses must be found in the certificate of appointment approved by the governor; that is to say, that the governor's approval is necessary to authorize the payment of traveling expenses, or at least the payment of expenses other than traveling expenses. If this is the assumption I beg to advise that, in my opinion, it is erroneous.

Section 499 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "* * * the actual and necessary traveling and other expenses and disbursements of the commission, their officers and employes, incurred while on the business of the commission, shall be paid from funds appropriated for the use of the commission after being approved by the commission. An itemized statement of traveling expenses shall be sworn to by the person incurring same before payment is made."

The authority, therefore, of the commission to expend money for the reimbursement of expenses incurred by its employes is not derived from the governor's approval of its certificate of appointment, but directly from the provisions of section 499 above quoted. Said section authorizes the commission to draw on appropriations made for the use of the commission in reimbursement of any traveling or other expenses and disbursements incurred by its employes "while on the business of the commission." All that is required in order that this authority may be properly exercised is a showing that the expense was so incurred and that it was "actual and necessary." This requirement excludes the payment of expenses of a personal nature not referable to the business of the commission and not necessarily incurred while on such business. Ordinarily an employe of the public is engaged in the public business only during what may be termed "working hours." Therefore, his necessary personal expenses incurred outside of working hours are not such as pertain to the public business. His meals, his lodging and his transportation to and from the place where he must be to discharge his duties on ordinary occasions fall within this category.

But when a public employe is required by the order of his superior to leave his home or his official headquarters and travel about the state the custom of the service, as well as the dictates of common sense, allow him to be reimbursed not only for the transportation charges incurred by him, but also for lodging and meals while so absent from his headquarters. These practices and principles are familiar enough to require no further comment.

It sometimes happens that an official appointment or employment would be made to perform services or discharge duties requiring the permanent presence of an employe at a stated headquarters other than his own home. For example, a clerk in the office of the auditor of state is appointed from Cuyahoga county; in order to accept the appointment it is understood without express stipulation that the employe will have to be ready to present himself daily at the office of the auditor of state in Columbus during working hours; that is his headquarters; he is at liberty to do as he pleases with respect to the establishment of his home during his incumbency of the position; he may retain his family residence in Cuyahoga county and stay at a hotel while in Columbus, or he may remove his family to Columbus, as he pleases; in neither event is he entitled to traveling expenses going to and from his actual home to the office of the auditor of state nor to any allowance or reimbursement on account of food and lodging.

On the other hand, however, the character of the duties of an employe may be such that he is not required to maintain as a regular or permanent thing his headquarters at any given place. Such is true of an inspector or other traveling representative of a department. Ordinarily such an inspector is entitled to his expenses when away from his home under a statute like section 499 of the General Code. True, the head of the department may designate a particular headquarters from which expenses shall be allowed; or, without explicitly so stating, his definition of his duties may be such as to lead to the legal result that his traveling expenses are chargeable to and from a given place other than his home. I point out in this connection, however, that the authority to determine such matters resides, in the absence of statute, in the head of the department, in the first instance at least.

On this branch of the question, then, I am of the opinion that it is within the power of the Public Utilities Commission to take such action as shall determine what the headquarters of Mr. Dugan are in the sense which has been discussed—that is, to determine by its action whether a particular place is the one at which hotel bills and meals shall not be allowed and from which traveling expenses shall be allowed.

It is quite certain from all the correspondence that Mr. Dugan's regular employment is a traveling one and that if he were engaged in his regular service of inspection he would be entitled to hotel bills that he might incur while in the city of Columbus on his official journeys, though that naturally is, of course, the headquarters of the Public Utilities Commission, as such. This being true, I am led to inquire whether the detail of Mr. Dugan to service at Columbus temporarily has the effect of reversing the result. In my opinion, it does not have such effect in and of itself. If all the circumstances before me should indicate that a permanent change had been made in the character of Mr. Dugan's duties, so that his position had become what might be termed a headquarters position instead of an outside position, then I would be satisfied without more that such a change in his status had taken place as to make it illegal for him to receive reimbursement for lodging and meals while in Columbus. The situation in such event would be exactly the same as that of the clerk in the office of the auditor of state to whom I have referred. But it does not appear that such a permanent change in the character of Mr. Dugan's duties has taken place. His detail is but temporary, and though perhaps it is indefinite in duration yet it has been made with a specific intent on the part of the commission that it shall be terminated as soon as the extraordinary conditions that give rise to it shall have ceased. I am unable on the facts before me to draw a line between the situation which is here presented and one which would be presented if Mr. Dugan had happened to remain in Columbus under orders of the commission for a week at any other time in his official career.

I have not, however, thus far considered the question save from the point of view of the Public Utilities Commission. The correspondence before me shows quite obviously a conflict of opinion between that commission and the auditor of state. I have already stated that, in the first instance, the commission has some authority to act in determining official headquarters. I should supplement that statement by saying that the commission is again called upon to act when it approves of an expense voucher under section 499 G. C. Then it has the opportunity to determine the effect of its own previous orders and to decide whether or not in its judgment the expenses incurred have been necessary in the business of the commission within the principles which I have laid down. Undoubtedly the decision of the Public Utilities Commission in this respect is entitled to some weight.

I pass now, however, to the question as viewed from the standpoint of the auditor of state. It is his duty under section 243 of the General Code to "examine each invoice presented to him * * * and if he finds it to be a valid claim against the state and legally due, and that there is money in the state treasury duly appropriated to pay it" to "issue thereon a warrant on the treasurer of state for the amount found due * * *." The section further provides that: "He shall draw no warrant on the treasurer of state for any claim unless he finds it legal, and that there is money in the treasury which has been duly appropriated to pay it."

The first inquiry of the auditor of state must be directed under this section to the legality of the claim presented to him for payment. A claim of the character under consideration is "legal," in my opinion, if it represents "actual and necessary * * * expenses and disbursements * * * incurred while on the business of the commission." I do not understand that there is any dispute as to the actuality or necessity of any of the items of Mr. Dugan's expense account; that they were actually incurred seems to be admitted; that they were necessary in the same sense in which they would be necessary if they had been incurred outside of Columbus seems to be acknowledged by the statement of the auditor of state to the effect that "Of course, any expenses incurred by him while traveling for the department will be paid promptly." The only inquiry remaining is as to whether they were incurred while on the business of the commission. The commission by its order has made it necessary for Mr. Dugan to remain temporarily in Columbus for an indefinite period. He lives elsewhere, and the temporary character of his detail in Columbus is such as not, in my judgment, to place upon him the burden of adjusting his personal affairs to the situation. That is to say, where the service is but temporary it certainly is not contemplated that the person shall locate his family and home with reference to such temporary condition. Therefore I am of the opinion that it is legal for the commission to regard the expenses in question as having been incurred while on its business and not as having been incurred in the ordinary course of Mr. Dugan's family or home life.

The second thing which the auditor of state has to determine is that there is money duly appropriated to pay the claim. I find an appropriation in 107 Ohio Laws, page 250, for "transportation" for the use of the Public Utilities Commission. This term is not defined. I take it, however, that it has been interpreted in all instances to cover hotel bills and meals as well as actual railroad fare—in other words, to cover all the kinds of expenses which have been considered in this opinion. If this is true generally speaking then, in my opinion, this appropriation is available to pay the claim in question.

I find nothing in the general sections of the appropriation bill granting to the auditor of state in the disbursement of the appropriations therein made any authority greater than that vested in him by section 243 of the General Code. He may lawfully decline to honor a voucher only when in his opinion the claim represented thereby is not legal or there is no money appropriated to pay it. I have already stated that I find nothing in the facts disclosed by the correspondence which tends to show that the claim in question is illegal. To be sure, if the Public Utilities Commission had, as I have previously suggested, made an order so changing the character of Mr. Dugan's duties as to make him practically a headquarters employe, then it would be illegal for the commission itself to expend its appropriation in reimbursement of his expenses while at Columbus; and it would then accordingly be the duty of the auditor of state to refuse to honor a voucher in payment of such expenses. But inasmuch as Mr. Dugan's detail at Columbus was temporary merely and not of a character that ought to require of him a readjustment of his personal affairs, I do not think that the order in this instance has such effect, and conclude therefore that when the Public Utilities Commission approved the vouchers they thereby became legal claims.

I have made no inquiry into facts not disclosed by the correspondence itself. It will be understood, therefore, that the conclusion which I have reached is based entirely upon the letters which I have seen. On such basis, however, I am clearly of the opinion that it was the duty of the auditor of state to honor the vouchers in question.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—FAILURE OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS UNDER CASS HIGHWAY ACT TO ISSUE SUFFICIENT BONDS TO PAY TOWNSHIP'S SHARE OF IMPROVEMENT—TOWNSHIP HAS REACHED TAX LIMITATIONS—COMMISSIONERS MAY LEVY ON ALL TAXABLE PROPERTY OF COUNTY TO PAY DEFICIENCY FOR TOWNSHIP—WHAT STATUTES GOVERN.

Where county commissioners, in undertaking an improvement under the provisions of the so-called Cass Highway Act (106 O. L. 574), have issued a set of bonds under authority of section 1223 G. C., without having waived and assumed, on behalf of the county, in accordance with section 1217 G. C., the share of an affected township as specified in section 1214 G. C., and have subsequently found that the amount of bonds so issued is insufficient for the purpose contemplated, and that such township may not, because of tax limitations, bear any share of the additional amount necessary for the improvement, said commissioners are authorized to waive and assume such township's statutory share as to an additional issue of bonds proposed to be made under the same statutes as governed the first issue, and to levy a tax on all the taxable property of the county to meet its portion of such bond issue as augmented by assuming the township's share—provided that the total amount of bonds and levy of taxes be within the legal limitations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 21, 1919.

HON. CHARLES R. SARGENT, Prosecuting Attorney, Jefferson, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted for opinion of this department the following statement of facts and inquiry:

"In December, 1915, the commissioners of Ashtabula county applied for state aid in the construction of a portion of an inter-county highway lying in Monroe township in this county. At said time, they proceeded without any agreement between the county commissioners and the township trustees as to any proportion of the improvement leaving the proportion of the cost of the improvement to be assessed to the township of Monroe and the abutting property owners the fifteen and ten per cent respectively as provided by the Cass law where there is no agreement. The total estimated cost of the improvement at this time was approximately $113,000.00, of which state aid was given to the extent of $10,000.00.

In anticipation of the collection of taxes, etc., and for the payment of the county, township and abutting property owner's share for the remaining $103,000.00 of the cost of the construction of the improvement, bonds of the county of Ashtabula were issued, and the bond resolution in its recitals shows that the commissioners were following the statutory proportion without agreement with the township trustees. That is to say, the recited proportions in the bond resolution of the township and abutting property owners' respective shares, were fifteen per cent and ten per cent of the total cost of the improvement. The road was advertised, but at the letting there were no bids received to construct the road within the estimate. Subsequently, the estimate was amended at least once, and the present estimate is approximately $30,000.00 in excess of the original estimate. The tax duplicate of Monroe township is not, and at the time of this bond resolution was not large enough so that the two mill levy would raise sufficient money by taxation within the five year period, to provide a sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds and the payment of the interest thereon as they became due. As a matter of fact, a mistake was made in figuring ten year bonds instead of five year bonds, and as a result of this mistake the resolution was carried and the bonds were actually sold and marketed. All of the two mills authorized by the Cass law to be levied for the payment of the township's share of the cost of the improvement has already been levied and is now on the tax duplicate. As stated above, the bonds have been sold and the total of $103,000.00 is now in the county treasury, but the state, of course, has not let the contract as the balance of approximately $30,000.00 has not been raised or provision made therefor.

After the commissioners have proceeded and issued bonds, as above stated, on the basis of the county commissioners paying all of the cost of the improvement above the $10,000.00 received as state aid, and the fifteen per cent assessed to the township, and the ten per cent to the property owners, can they now waive, under section 210 above referred to, any amount to be paid by the township of this $30,000.00 required to be raised to cover the increased cost of the improvement under the new estimate? It being impossible to issue any bonds for the township's share inasmuch as the two mill limit for taxation as to said township's share has been reached, can the county commissioners issue bonds for this $30,000.00 and under section 215 of the Cass law levy a tax upon the taxable property of the county for the purpose of meeting the county's proportion of such bond issue—that is, all of said $30,000.00 and interest except the ten per cent to be levied against the abutting property owners? Having once proceeded without a waiver of the township's share, can the commissioners subsequently waive any part thereof—that is, after bonds have been issued as to the $103,000.00 on the basis of the township paying fifteen per cent, can they eliminate the township share of the $30,000.00?"

Section 1223 G. C., as it stood in the Cass highway act, read in part as follows (106 O. L. 641):

"The county commissioners, in anticipation of the collection of such taxes or assessments, and whenever in their judgment it is advisable, are hereby authorized to sell the bonds of any such county in which such construction, improvement or repair is to be made to an amount necessary to pay the respective shares of the county, township or townships, and the lands assessed for such improvement, but the aggregate amount of such bonds issued shall not be in excess of one per cent of the tax duplicate of such county. Such bonds shall state for what purpose issued and bear interest at a rate not to exceed five per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and in such amounts as to mature in not more than five years after their issue, as the county commissioners shall determine. Prior to the issuance of such bonds the county commissioners shall provide for levying and collecting annually a tax upon all taxable property of the county to provide a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity. The proceeds of such bonds shall be used exclusively for the payment of the cost and expense of the construction, improvement or repair of the highway for which the bonds are issued. * * *."

The taxes referred to in said section are those accruing from levies authorized by section 1222 G. C., which, as it appeared in the Cass act, authorized the county commissioners to levy a tax of one mill on all the taxable property of the county, and the township trustees to levy a tax of two mills on all the taxable property of the township; while the assessments referred to are those authorized by section 1214, to be made against abutting property owners. The respective shares of the county, township and property owners, as referred to in section 1223 G. C., were those fixed by section 1214 G. C. (106 O. L. 637), namely, county, twenty-five per cent; township and property owners, fifteen per cent and ten per cent, respectively, excepting therefrom cost of bridges and culverts. However, by favor of section 1217 G. C. the county commissioners might relieve the township of all or a part of its share, said section 1217 reading in part as follows:

"The county commissioners of a county in which a highway is constructed or improved, under the provisions of this act, may, by resolution, waive a part or all of the apportionment of the cost and expense of such highway as herein provided to be paid by the township or townships, and assume a part or all of the cost and expense of such highway improvement, in excess of the amount received from the state, up to the entire cost and expense of such improvement without any assessment or charge whatever upon the township or townships. * * *.

* * * In no case shall the property owners abutting upon said improvement be relieved by the state, county or township, from the payment of ten per cent of the cost and expense of such improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts, provided the total amount assessed against any abutting property does not exceed thirty-three per cent of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation."

The authority thus conferred is given the county commissioners in unambiguous terms, unaccompanied by any express mandate or direction in said section 1217 or elsewhere in the Cass act, as to the time at which the commissioners are to take action. Hence, if there are any limitations imposed in the matter of time, they are to be found, if at all, in the practical application of the highway improvement statutes. A brief examination into these statutes, as they appeared in the Cass act, is therefore pertinent.

Sections 1191 to 1193, relating to application for state aid, place no restrictions on the county commissioners in the way of preliminary proceedings—the filing of the application, accompanied by a certified copy of resolution that the public interest demands the improvement, and an agreement to pay one-half of the cost of surveys, etc., being the first step required of the commissioners.

Section 1204, which requires county commissioners to grant petitions of abutting property owners for state aid improvement, if the commissioners find the improvement to be in the public interest, contains the further provision that:

> "The county commissioners may, without the presentation of any petition, make application to the state highway commissioner for aid in the construction of inter-county highways or main market roads under the provisions of this chapter and nothing herein shall in any way restrict their right to make such application."

Section 1218 G. C. is to the effect that the state highway commissioner shall not let a contract where county commissioners are to contribute to the cost, unless such county commissioners shall first have made a written agreement to assume in the first instance that part of the cost of the improvement over and above the share to be paid by the state.

The foregoing brief references sufficiently indicate the comparatively simple procedure involved in arranging for a state aid improvement and also the legislative intent that when the application is made by the county commissioners, the dealings of the state shall be with the county only. It quite clearly appears that the state is not concerned in the question whether at any stage of the proceedings the county shall assume a part or all of the township's share. It is equally clear that the matter of time at which action may be taken by the commissioners under section 1217 is of no legal importance to the affected township or landowners; for on the one hand the commissioners may bring about the improvement without the consent of the township and landowners, and on the other hand such commissioners, if they do bring about the improvement, may take no action to increase the respective statutory obligations of the township and landowners with respect thereto. Nor is there anything in the statutes which, expressly or by implication, indicates that, so far as the improvement proceedings proper are concerned, the commissioners must take action at any particular time in order to bind the county.

Turning next to the matter of issuing bonds for the improvement, as provided in above quoted section 1223:

It may doubtless be urged with considerable force that if the commissioners are to relieve the township of a part or all of its share, they should take action to that end before the bonds are issued, for the reason that if the action were deferred until after the bonds had been issued, the commissioners would in effect be casting away a vested right of the county, namely, the fixed obligation of the township to pay a given sum into the fund for the redemption of such bonds. How potent such an argument may be, as against the fact that the statutes contain no express provision in the matter of time, and the further fact that at all events there is no question as to the power of the commissioners to waive the county's statutory rights in the first instance, need not be here decided; for the claim certainly falls of its own weight when applied to the particular situation stated by you.

In other words, if the time for action by the commissioners as to waiver is determinable by reference to the time at which they pass a resolution authorizing a bond issue, it is so determinable only as to that particular issue, and not as to a subsequent issue arising from the fact that the first issue has fallen short of its purpose. The county commissioners, of course, have the option of abandoning the improvement. If they do not see fit to avail themselves of that option, but find that the public interests require that the improvement be made, they will certainly have complied with the spirit of the statutes if before authorizing the second bond issue they adopt a resolution waiving the township's share, or part thereof, and assuming it on behalf of the county, thus definitely fixing the extent of the county's obligation at the time the second set of bonds is issued. To state the matter in another form, the fact that the commissioners may have bound the county upon a given financial basis, as to one set of bonds, does not estop them from binding it upon a different basis as to a subsequent issue made for the same purpose as the original issue, it being kept in mind that the second bond issue is proposed to be made under authority of the identical series of statutes applicable to the first bond issue.

You are therefore advised, in answer to your inquiry, that under the facts as stated by you, the commissioners are authorized, as to the proposed issue of thirty thousand dollars bonds, to waive the township's share and assume the same on behalf of the county, and are further authorized to levy a tax upon all the taxable property of the county for the purpose of meeting the county's proportion of such bond issue as thus augmented by its having assumed the township's share. In the event that the county commissioners conclude to take such action, it is recommended that, as a matter of careful procedure, their resolution be so drawn as to show in a preamble the facts on which your inquiry is based. Of course, it will be understood that the total amount of bonds and the levy of taxes must be within the legal limitations.

While your communication contains certain other inquiries, it is assumed that you desired the opinion of this department regarding them only in the event of a negative answer to the inquiries above considered.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF ELECTORS PETITION FOR TRANSFER—MANDATORY UPON COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION TO MAKE IT.

Where seventy-five per cent of the electors, located in territory which it is desired to transfer to an exempted village school district or a city school district or another county school district, petition for such transfer, it is mandatory upon the county board of education to make such transfer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1919.

HON. R. A. KERR, Prosecuting Attorney, Troy, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter in which you request the opinion of this department upon the following statement of facts:

> "I write to ask if my construction of section 4696 of the General Code is correct as I have given it to the officer making the inquiry. I have instructed him that the provision found in said section reading as follows:

'Provided, however, that if at least seventy-five per cent of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer the county board of education shall make such transfer' is mandatory on the county board and that they have no discretion concerning the matter and that the last clause of the section, which provides for certain things being done prior to the transfer being effective, does not change this condition even though some discretion may be necessary as to the division of funds or indebtedness but that these matters can be controlled by a mandamus proceedings should the county board fail to act. Am I correct in this ruling?"

In reply to such inquiry it is advised that it is the opinion of the Attorney-General that the language used in section 4696 G. C., stating that a county board of education shall transfer territory upon petition of seventy-five per cent of the electors of the territory in question from one school district to another, is mandatory.

Attention is invited to the fact, however, that considerable care must be exercised in making transfers of territory from one school district to another for the reason that section 4696, about which you inquire, covers only specific cases which are the transfer of territory from a school district of a county school district to (1) an adjoining exempted village school district, (2) a city school district, (3) another county school district and all other transfers of school territory from one district to another come within section 4692 G. C.

In order that a transfer be made under section 4696 G. C., the districts to which the territory is transferred must be one of the above named three exceptions and an adjoining exempted village school district must be one as is described in section 4688 G. C., and thus supervision districts which fall within section 4740 G. C. are not exempted village school districts.

The latter part of section 4696 G. C., which specifies when such transfer shall be in effect, does not govern in the matter of the first steps for such transfer and while the power to make such transfer is discretionary with the county board of education, when at least fifty per cent of the electors of the territory to be transferred petition for such transfer, should this number be increased to seventy-five per cent of the electors, then the county board of education has no other avenue than to make such transfer, provided that such transfer is made to an adjoining exempted village school district or a city school district, or to another county school district; for if the territory in question is not transferred to either one of these three mentioned, then the transfer falls under section 4692 of the General Code. Under the latter section attention is directed to the fact that no petition of any kind is authorized, that all transfers are voluntary with the county board of education and the only instrument that can be submitted by the electors in the territory in question is a remonstrance against, and not a petition for, such action.

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that where seventy-five per cent of the electors, located in territory which it is desired to transfer to an exempted village school district or a city school district or another county school district, petition for such transfer, it is mandatory upon the county board of education to make such transfer.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOLS—TUITION—WHAT NOTICE REQUIRED UNDER SECTION 7735 G. C. IS SUFFICIENT WHERE CHILDREN RESIDING MORE THAN ONE MILE AND A HALF FROM SCHOOL TO WHICH THEY ARE ASSIGNED ATTEND SCHOOL IN ANOTHER DISTRICT.

1. The notice required by section 7735, which permits children residing more than one mile and a half from the school to which they are assigned to attend a nearer school in another district, is a notice from the board of education of the district in which the children are attending to the board of the district in which they reside that a claim will be made for their tuition, the purpose of such notice being to give the debtor broad opportunity to settle the claim before the expense of suit is incurred.

2. Knowledge of the board of the district in which the children reside of the fact that they are attending school in an adjoining district and acquiescence therein is sufficient to satisfy the requirement as to notice.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1919.

HON. WALTER S. RUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

"A dispute has arisen between two rural boards of education with reference to the payment of tuition of pupils as provided under section 7735. In the school year 1917-1918 certain schools in Osnaburg township, Mapleton district, were closed because of a controversy which had arisen in the district about the consolidation of schools. When Mapleton district consolidated it provided means of transportation for pupils, but the parents of certain pupils refused to send them to the consolidated schools and sometime later in the year the pupils whose parents refused to permit them to attend the consolidated schools in Osnaburg township, attended school in Paris township, which schools, by the way, were the nearest schools open.

The Mapleton district board hired men to provide transportation for the pupils to the consolidated school and while the transportation van passed the homes of the pupils who afterward attended the Paris township schools, these pupils refused to be transported. Because of their refusal the Mapleton board stopped the transportation van after about thirty days and shortly thereafter these pupils began to attend the Paris township schools.

The Mapleton district consolidation was in the courts at that time and the court finally held that the consolidation was illegal and that the board had no right to provide a transportation van for these pupils and this was the position that the parents of the pupils took who did not permit their children to make use of the van. As a matter of fact no money has as yet been paid to the men who transported pupils to the consolidated school.

The board of education of Paris township has sent a bill for the tuition of these pupils to the Mapleton district board and the Mapleton district board refuses to pay the tuition, claiming that they had no notification as provided by section 7735. The Paris township board did not notify the Mapleton board that it intended to collect tuition of said pupils until December, 1918, at least six months after the close of the school year. The Mapleton board still refuses to pay and the Paris board is insisting upon payment.

On September 3, 1917, the district superintendent who had charge of the Mapleton district sent a letter to the clerk of the board of education of Paris township, a copy of which is hereto attached and while it is admitted that the children of the families whose names are in the letter did not attend the schools of Paris township, other children of the same district did attend the schools of Paris township and the board of Paris township takes the position that because of this letter they were not required to notify the Mapleton board before they would have the right to collect the tuition.

Both boards have agreed to abide by the opinion of the Attorney-General relative to their rights in this matter."

In your letter you further say:

"Under the statement of facts enclosed herewith what is your opinion with reference to the right of the Paris board of education to collect from the Mapleton district board of Osnaburg township the tuition of pupils who attended the Paris township schools during the school year of 1917-1918?

It is my opinion that the Paris board of education has no legal right to collect the tuition from the Mapleton district board because the Paris board of education did not give notice to the Mapleton board until December, 1918, which was more than six months after the school year of 1917-1918 had closed. It seems to me that the provision that 'a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils resided' means that no tuition can be collected until after notice is given and only such tuition as accrues after notice is given. The members of the Paris township board seem to think that they could give the notice at any time and that the Mapleton board would be required to pay the tuition.

I do not believe that the facts which I have enclosed add anything to the controversy although the Paris township board claims that it was their understanding that the letter from the district superintendent obligated the Mapleton board to pay the tuition of all pupils who attended.

The school situation in this county has been very bad and this is only one of the many controversies which have arisen. I endeavored to have these boards settle this matter among themselves, but was unable to get them to reach any compromise that would be satisfactory so they have agreed to abide by your opinion in the matter. The opinion will necessarily mean a construction of section 7735 as that seems to be the only section which deals with pupils attending other districts."

A study of the above statement of facts indicates that the proposed consolidation did not take place due to a court decision rendering the same invalid and therefore the question we have before us is a proper construction of the word "notice" as appears in section 7735 G. C., which reads as follows:

"When pupils live more than one and one-half miles from the school to which they are assigned in the district where they reside, they may attend a nearer school in the same district, or if there be none nearer therein, then the nearest school in another school district, in all grades below the high school. In such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement to that effect. But a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside. Nothing herein shall require the consent of the board of education of the district where the pupils reside, to such attendance."

This question as to what constitutes "notice" and when the same should be given, has been thoroughly discussed in the case of the board of education of Thorn township vs. Board of Education of Licking township, Licking county, which was decided by Judge Fulton in 1916 and reported in 20 O. N. P. (n. s.) 193. The case in question was one in which pupils in Licking township attended school in Thorn township and the board of education of Thorn township attempted to collect tuition from the board of education of Licking township for instruction rendered to the pupils in question.

The case is practically similar to the one before us, as the claim was made by the defendant board of education that proper notice had not been given. The decision in this case, as stated in the syllabus, reads:

"1. The notice required by section 7735, which permits children residing more than one mile and a half from the schools to which they are assigned to attend a nearer school in another district, is a notice from the board of education of the district in which the children are attending to the board of the district in which they reside that a claim will be made for their tuition, the purpose of such notice being to give the debtor broad opportunity to settle the claim before the expense of suit is incurred.

2. Kowledge of the board of the district in which the children reside of the fact that they are attending school in an adjoining district and acquiescence therein is sufficient to satisfy the requirement as to notice."

Commenting further in discussing the case, the court said:

"* * * this school was below the grade of a high school, and so it comes within the provisions of this section (7735), which reads:

'In such cases the board of education of the district in which they reside must pay the tuition of such pupils without an agreement to that effect.'

Now, if there wasn't anything more in the statute, there would be no question about it, and that would be the end of it. They must pay it without any agreement. There wasn't any agreement made about the schooling of the children at all. The statute says that they must pay for the schooling of the children although without any agreement so to do. The statute says:

'But a board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside. Nothing herein shall require the consent of the board of education of the district where the pupils reside to such attendance.'

Now this matter all turns upon this one clause in this section:

'But the board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given to the board of education of the district where the pupils reside.'

On the trial of the case before the jury the court permitted evidence to be given of all the notices that were given—whether they were given before or after, or when they were given against the objection of counsel for defendant; and counsel for the defendant seems to express great surprise at the holding of the court in reference to the meaning of this section.

The court held that this section meant that before they could bring a suit to collect this bill, notice must be given the other board, and that without that notice they could not bring the action at all.

Now there was no question but what notice had been given, just before the suit was brought, that a suit was about to be brought, or would be brought, unless this matter was settled before suit, and other notices are mentioned and described that were given to the board of education of Licking township.

* * * I cannot get any other construction out of these words 'but the board of education shall not collect tuition for such attendance until after notice thereof has been given,' than that they imply the bill has already been made, and they have a right to have notice before they are sued, before the expense of a lawsuit is incurred, and to settle without a suit if they so desire, and they can not be sued until this notice has been given; and I think that is as far as this section goes; and as far as this section is concerned, the court holds that notice was given—not only a notice before the suit was brought, but a notice was given * * * before * * *."

In the case in question the court further said, as regards the question of where centralization was attempted:

"Counsel rely considerably upon section 7737, which reads:

'When the schools of a district are centralized or transportation of pupils provided, the provisions of the next two preceding sections shall not apply.'

One of the next preceding sections is 7735 which I have just read and quoted. So that if the schools of the district had been centralized, there is no question but what section 7735 would not be invoked and would not apply in this case. But the schools of this district had not been centralized. * * * If the schools had been centralized in the township, then section 7735 could not be invoked."

In the case which you have submitted there was a proposed consolidation or centralization about which there was more or less controversy and which later was pronounced as null and void by the court. Hence the matter of centralization does not really bear upon the question at hand, the entire question being upon whether notice was required before the children were sent to school or whether notice was required before the tuition could be collected. The court, above quoted, has decided that the notice mentioned in section 7735 is only such notice as is required to be given prior to the beginning of a suit and not before the pupils start to school, but any time after such tuition service has been rendered, but before a suit is attempted. This decision of the common pleas court of Licking county was later affirmed by the court of appeals in the following memorandum opinion by Judge Shields, and in which the judges concurred:

"In this case a recovery was sought by the plaintiff for an amount claimed to be due from the defendant below for tuition for certain children residing in Licking county, Ohio, attending at said plaintiff's school in Perry county, Ohio.

Without here reciting the respective claims of the plaintiff and defendant below set out in the pleadings, it will be sufficient to state that we have read the same in connection with the evidence embraced in the bill of exceptions herein and we have also read and examined the opinion of the trial judge in said case, submitted with the papers herein, treating as it does of the several issues raised by said pleadings and argued by counsel, and without attempting to add to or enlarge upon the views therein expressed, and approving the conclusion therein reached as to the liability of the plaintiff in error to the defendant in error for said tuition, we adopt the opinion and judgment of the court of common pleas as the opinion and judgment of this court, and it follows that the judgment of said court of common pleas will be affirmed."

Since the matter has been decided by the courts that notice contemplated under section 7735 G. C. is a notice before suit is brought, then the board of education of Paris township, Stark county, can collect the tuition in question from the Mapleton district, Stark county, by giving notice any time prior to the time that suit might be brought, and such notice could really be given at this time and still be valid under the decision herein quoted.

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that (1) the notice required by section 7735, which permits children residing more than one mile and a half from the school to which they are assigned to attend a nearer school in another district, is a notice from the board of education of the district in which the children are attending to the board of the district in which they reside that a claim will be made for their tuition, the purpose of such notice being to give the debtor broad opportunity to settle the claim before the expense of suit is incurred; (2) that knowledge of the board of the district in which the children reside of the fact that they are attending school in an adjoining district and acquiescence therein is sufficient to satisfy the requirement as to notice.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TEACHERS' CERTIFICATES FOR ELEMENTARY OR HIGH SCHOOLS—WHAT PROFESSIONAL TRAINING REQUIRED — TEMPORARY AND EMERGENCY CERTIFICATES GRANTED, WHEN.

1. Applicants for teachers' elementary certificates at a regular teachers' examination must have to their credit not less than twenty-four weeks of professional training in a recognized school for training teachers, and after January 1, 1920, such training shall be thirty weeks and after January 1, 1921, it shall be one year.

2. Applicants for teachers' high school or special certificate at a regular examination must have the professional training defined in section 7823 G. C.

3. County boards of school examiners at their discretion can issue between examinations temporary certificates valid to the next regular teachers' examination to applicants without the professional training defined in sections 7822-7823 G. C.

4. Where there is a shortage of teachers a county board of examiners, upon the approval of the state superintendent of instruction, can issue a teacher's emergency certificate valid for one year to applicants who have had one year's experience as a teacher.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 22, 1919.

HON. F. B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter reading as follows:

"Will you very kindly render us an opinion in answer to the following question?

Section 7826 of the General Code provides as follows:

'Section 7826. Between regular examinations county boards of school examiners at their discretion may issue temporary certificates which shall be valid only until the next regular examination held by such boards after the issue of such certificate, and at any regular examination such board upon proper application being made, subject to the same rules and regulations as applied to the granting of regular certificates shall issue temporary certificates which shall be valid from the date of issue until the first day of September following.'

In order that a person may be granted a temporary certificate under the provisions of the above section, is it necessary that such person shall have the same amount of professional training as is provided for the granting of regular certificates in accordance with the provisions of sections 7822 and 7823 of the General Code? If such certificate can be granted to a person without the required professional training, the same to be valid until the next examination, can this act be repeated by the county board of school examiners at the time of the next examination and so on at each succeeding examination throughout the year, thereby qualifying the person to teach the entire year without any professional training as provided by sections 7822 and 7823 of the General Code?"

Section 7822 G. C. as amended in Ohio Laws 107, page 626, reads in part:

"Applicants for a one year or a three year elementary certificate shall possess an amount of professional training consisting of class room instruction in a recognized institution for the training of teachers, not less than the following: * * * after January 1, 1919, not less than twenty-four weeks of such instruction; after January 1, 1920, not less than thirty weeks of such instruction; after January 1, 1921, not less than one year of such class room instruction in a recognized school for the training of teachers."

The effect of the above section, which has been the law since July 2, 1917, is that at the present time no person can be granted even a one year elementary regular certificate to teach school unless such person shall have had twenty-four weeks of class room instruction in a recognized school for the training of teachers.

Regular certificates referred to in the law are those that are not temporary but have been issued in compliance with the rules and regulations one of which is the required training mentioned in section 7822 G. C. for elementary certificates and in section 7823 for high school and special certificates.

Section 7826 G. C., quoted in your letter, provides for two kinds of temporary certificates, viz.:

1. A board of school examiners can issue at their discretion, and between examinations by the board, a temporary certificate that is valid only till the next regular examination day, when the intent of the law is that such person shall submit to the regular examination for teachers.
2. At any regular examination by the board, it can issue a temporary certificate dating from that day and running until the first day of September following, or covering the current school year, but section 7826 G. C. provides that proper application shall be made and the 'same rules and regulations as * * * to the granting of regular certificates' shall apply.

It will thus be seen that it is discretionary with the board to grant the first named temporary certificate between examinations, but upon granting the second temporary certificate at the next regular examination the board must be governed by the same rules and regulations as are in force for regular certificates, that is to say, such applicant during 1919 must have had twenty-four weeks of class room instruction in a recognized teachers' training school. But there is nothing in section 7826 G. C. which prevents a board of examiners from giving a person who has failed in the examination, a short temporary certificate that runs only to the next examination but such short temporary certificates can only be granted "between regular examinations" and "at their discretion." One who is certificated at a regular examination for the remainder of the school year, to September first following, must have the training required for the granting of regular certificates which are issued as of the September first following the examination.

As to high school or special certificates the professional training required is stated in section 7823 G. C., which reads in part:

"5. On and after January 1, 1919, not less than thirty weeks of class room instruction in a recognized school for teachers .
6. On and after January 1, 1920, and thereafter not less than one year of class room instruction in a recognized school for the training of teachers." (104 O. L. 100)

Section 7823-1 G. C. also provides:

"On and after January 1, 1915, all applicants for a one-year of (or) a three-year high school or special certificate shall have had at least two years' training in an approved high school or its equivalent, and on and after January 1, 1920, all applicants for high school and special certificates shall have certificates of graduation from a first grade high school or its equivalent."

The "training" herein mentioned means two years attendance at an approved high school by applicants up to the end of the year 1919; on and after January 1, 1920, such applicants shall have graduated from a first grade high school, or its equivalent.

It is interesting to note the changes that have recently occurred in section 7822 G. C. which governs the requirements on professional training for applicants for their first certificate. Thus in 104 Ohio Laws (page 104) professional training in a teachers' college was required after January 1, 1915, the minimum being six weeks attendance, and the applicant without such training was eliminated; the next General Assembly in 105-106 Ohio Laws (page 340) provided that such professional training for the first elementary certificate was not necessary; the following General Assembly in 107 Ohio Laws (page 626) amended section 7822 G. C. as it now reads, and providing that no applicant can be granted a certificate following a regular examination unless such applicant in 1919, has not less than twenty-four weeks training in a recognized school for the training of teachers, to his or her credit.

Attention is invited to the fact that the following sections of the General Code have never been repealed or amended in the legislative acts which have changed section 7822 G. C. on professional training requirements, and they are still law, and it is for the state superintendent of public instruction to say if the high schools and normal schools indicated in sections 7832-1 G. C. and 7832-2 G. C. are "recognized schools for the training of teachers" as required in section 7822 G. C. (107 Ohio Laws, 626). Such sections read:

> "Sec. 7832-2.—The county board of school examiners may at their discretion grant one-year certificates to teachers who have completed a one year normal course in any high school or normal school which has been approved by the superintendent of public instruction. Such certificates shall be valid in any village or rural school district in the county in which it is granted and may be renewed for one or three years without examination."
> "Sec. 7832-3.—The county board of school examiners shall grant one-year certificates to graduates of first grade high schools who have completed in addition to the high school a one-year professional course in any high school or normal school which has been approved by the superintendent of public instruction."

But where there is a shortage of teachers in a district the law has wisely provided for another kind of certificate, for section 7832-1 G. C. reads:

> "A 'teacher's emergency certificate' which shall be valid for one year in any village or rural school district in the county may be granted by the county board of school examiners with the approval of the superintendent of public instruction to applicants who have had one year's experience teaching in the public schools whenever for any reason there is a shortage of teachers in such district."

Under the provisions of this section for emergency use where a shortage exists, a person who has taught one year or more in the past, can be certificated by the county board of examiners with the approval of the state superintendent of public instruction and such certificate is valid for one year. Such section does not conflict with section 7822 because that section refers to regular certificates and not to "emergency" certificate (7832-1 G. C.) To grant an emergency certificate there must be a shortage of teachers while a temporary certificate might be needed at any time to bridge over an occasion where a teacher died or resigned and a certain teacher's services were desired to take up the work, the next examination being some time distant, and the person in question not being certificated at that time or in that county.

It is therefore the opinion of the Attorney-General that:

1. Applicants for teachers' elementary certificates at a regular teachers' examination must have to their credit not less than twenty-four weeks of professional training in a recognized school for training teachers, and after January 1, 1920, such training shall be thirty weeks and after January 1, 1921, it shall be one year.

2. Applicants for teachers' high school or special certificate at a regular examination must have the professional training defined in section 7823 G. C.

3. County boards of school examiners at their discretion can issue between examinations temporary certificates valid to the next regular teachers' examination to applicants without the professional training defined in sections 7822-7823 G. C.

4. Where there is a shortage of teachers a county board of examiners, upon the approval of the state superintendent of instruction, can issue a teacher's emergency certificate valid for one year to applicants who have had one year's experience as a teacher.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—OATH PRESCRIBED BY SENATE BILL NO. 134 FOR APPLICANTS DESIRING TEACHERS CERTIFICATES DISCUSSED.

The oath prescribed by senate bill No. 134 will not be substantially changed, or its force or effect destroyed by permitting an applicant for a teacher's certificate, who so desires, to prefix thereto the clause, "Acknowledging the Lord Jesus Christ as the source of all authority."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1919.

HON. H. J. RITTER, Chairman, Joint Committee on German Propaganda, Ohio Senate, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 8, 1919, requesting my opinion as to the effect of permitting applicants for teachers certificates, who so desire, to prefix to the form of oath prescribed by S. B. No. 134, the words "Acknowledging the Lord Jesus Christ as the source of all authority," was duly received.

The oath is in the following form:

> "I solemnly swear or affirm, that I will support the constitution of the United States, the constitution of the state of Ohio, and the laws enacted thereunder, and, that I will teach, by precept and example, respect for the flag, reverence for law and order, and undivided allegiance to the government of one country, the United States of America."

An examination of the bill discloses, and it should be kept in mind that the bill does not attempt to disqualify any applicant on account of his religious belief, or to require that he shall have any particular religious belief. In those respects the bill is silent.

The law on the subject of oaths is discussed in the following authorities:

In 20 Ruling Case Law, page 508, it is stated that statutes prescribing the form of an oath are not intended to prescribe an inflexible iron formula, admitting of no deviation in words, but are intended rather to direct and point out the essential matters to be embraced in the oath, and that if there is a substantial compliance with the statute the oath is obligatory and binding.

In 21 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 752, the law is stated as follows:

> "Where a statute prescribes the form of an oath or affirmation to be administered upon a particular occasion, and does not expressly provide that the exact words of the prescribed form shall be used, a substantial compliance with such form is sufficient. * * * When the oath or affirmation administered means the same thing as does the oath prescribed, there is a substantial compliance. The substance of an oath or affirmation cannot, however, ever be dispensed with, * * * and the addition of words to a formula prescribed by statute does not invalidate it where the addition of words does not change the meaning of the oath."

The American and English cases on the subject are brought together in a note found in 5 Am. and Eng. Annot. Cases, p. 722, and the result of the decisions is stated as follows:

> "It has generally been held that a substantial compliance with the requirements of a statute prescribing the form of oath to be administered is sufficient, and that merely informal departure does not affect its validity."

The difficulty, however, in all cases is to determine what constitutes a material or fatal departure and in the foregoing note it is said:

> "There is a lack of uniformity in the decisions as to what is a fatal departure from what is the prescribed form."

No useful purpose will be served in reviewing the cases in this opinion, but the general conclusion seems to be that neither omission from nor addition to the prescribed form nor departure therefrom nor change therein, is considered fatal unless of such character as to substantially change or destroy the force and effect of the oath.

The question for decision is whether or not the oath prescribed by S. B. No. 134 will be substantially changed, or its force and effect destroyed, by prefixing at the time it is administered and subscribed the clause, "Acknowledging the Lord Jesus Christ as the source of all authority."

In my opinion the prefix referred to will have no such effect.

The prefix may be intended as a declaration of the applicant's belief that the source of our government and institutions is the Lord Jesus Christ, but whether or not that be his intention or belief, the effect of the prefix is, not that the applicant, in case there be any conflict between the doctrine and teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ, on the one hand, and our government and institutions, on the other, reserves unto himself the right to reject the latter and give his allegiance to the former, but rather that he will support the latter, notwithstanding his belief that the source of all authority may be in the former. In other words, should there be any difference or conflict of opinion as to the source of all authority, and irrespective of the applicant's belief, he nevertheless solemnly swears or affirms to support the federal and state constitution and laws enacted thereunder, and to give his undivided allegiance to the United States of America, etc.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF O. E. LUCHTENBERG CONTRACT FOR WOMEN'S COMFORT STATION IN CAPITOL BUILDING.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 23, 1919.

HON. ROY E. LAYTON, Adjutant General, Columbus, Ohio.

RE: O. E. Luchtenberg contract.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your recent letter in this matter, with which it is noted you have transmitted the proposal and bond of O. E. Luchtenberg to this department for its approval.

Section 416 G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 319, referring to the adjutant general, provides:

> "He shall have the supervision and control of the state house * * * the fixing and placing of all offices, * * * departments and bureaus of the state therein, and full control and supervision of * * * the grounds and appurtenances thereof."

House bill No. 276, making sundry and supplementary appropriations for the remainder of the current fiscal year, carries an appropriation as follows:

"STATE HOUSE AND GROUNDS

G-2—Buildings.
Women's Comfort Station.....$6,500.00" concerning which it is noted that the purposes of appropriations under "G-2" are for additions and betterments.

The facts obtained by personal conferences with your office and with Mr. Fred W. Elliott, architect, shows that the station referred to in the contract is not to be a new structure, but that it is in fact the repair and remodeling of rooms now used for the same purpose in the Capitol building and that the contemplated work is in fact the repair and remodeling of a present structure. It is in no sense the erection and construction of a new or separate building.

In this very important feature the question of the approval of a contract for this structure under the appropriation referred to is clearly distinguished from the character of the building involved in opinion No. 309, rendered by this department to Hon. Carl E. Steeb, secretary of the board of trustees, Ohio State University, where the appropriation for a new women's building at the University was held to be subject to the referendum. That opinion rests on the principle that such an expenditure as therein referred to would not be a current expense. In the present case, however, considering the character and purpose of the proposed repair and improvement, it is concluded that the expense involved in the enclosed contract is a current expense, and special appropriation being made therefor and said contract and bond being otherwise in conformity to law, the same is therefore approved.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TEACHERS PAID ONCE FOR SCHOOL DAY—WHERE SCHOOL CLOSED BOARD MAY ASSIGN TEACHERS TO OTHER SCHOOLS WHERE REGULAR TEACHERS OF SAID SCHOOL ILL WITH CONTAGIOUS DISEASE—SUBSTITUTES—PAY.

Teachers who were paid once for a school day are not entitled to a second pay from the board of education, which has purchased their time and can assign them as it seems fit under section 7690. Salaries of teachers ill with contagious disease can not be withheld by a board of education and the board must provide substitutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 24, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

"We are this day in receipt of the following communication:

'C————, O., March 12, 1919.

At the request of the C———— twp. school board I submit the following question to you for enlightenment as to what action would be proper and legal on the part of the school board.

One of the buildings in our school system was closed on account of an epidemic. The teachers in this building were, of course, entitled to regular pay during the time the building was so closed. School continued in our other buildings but several teachers in these other buildings were sick so that I had teachers from the closed school substitute for them. One of our school board members insists that these teachers who substituted for other teachers are entitled not only to their regular pay, which they would have received without teaching, but also to additional pay since they were taking the places of some one who would have had to be paid by the school board. As it now stands the board has paid the teachers of the closed building their regular pay, all alike, although some of them did substitute work and others did no service for the board. The pay of the teachers who were sick while their schools were in session was deducted for the time the regular teachers from the closed building substituted for them. The money due them for that time remaining in the school board treasury.

Are the regular teachers who thus substituted for other teachers in the same school system entitled to extra remuneration, and if so, how may it be legally paid them?

Thanking you for any information you may be able to give us, I am,

Very truly yours,

S. S. R.

District Supt. C———— Twp.'

As this is somewhat different from any question we have yet received, we are respectfully requesting your written opinion upon same."

Section 7690 G. C. (107 O. L. 47) reads in part:

"Each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. * * *. Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made. Teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic. * * *."

Prior opinions of this department have held that the contagion known as influenza was an epidemic and that teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed on account of the influenza epidemic.

It has been held further by this department that where a teacher was absent from duty because of being ill with a contagious disease, such teacher is entitled to pay even though the schools were in session. So teachers who are deprived from teaching because schools are closed on account of epidemic and those who are ill with contagious disease, when schools are in session, must be given full pay, and it is for the board to provide substitutes in the latter case, as it deems fit.

Under section 7690 G. C. the board has full control of the management of the schools and can assign teachers as it sees fit, unless a special contract would prevent. It can grant reasonable leaves of absence to teachers who are ill with a disease that is not contagious, if it sees fit to do so, but the schools must be kept going, if possible, by other teachers acting in place of those who are ill. Teachers should be encouraged to remain in that profession, for experience should make them better instructors, and they should not be cut in their pay with undue severity when sickness, which they can not prevent, occurs. Illness that frequently results in contagious disease has often been warded off by proper treatment taken before and in time. Boards of education should be as reasonable in dealing with their employes who are ill for short periods as other public officials and private employers are with salaried help.

But when a teacher contracts with a board of education, the teacher sells his or her time to the board and the board can control such time except in case of illness or unavoidable absence. The time of the teacher, even during the period when schools are closed on account of epidemic, belongs to the board, for it pays for it the same as if schools were in session. Hence, the board can assign any of its teachers, who are being paid, as it sees fit. Section 7690 G. C. says "schools in which employed" and it does not necessarily mean a single room which might be closed, thus releasing that particular teacher from any obligation to the board, when the latter performs its part of the contract in paying the teachers who must hold themselves in readiness for work when directed by the board.

You say that the pay of teachers who were sick was deducted from their salary, their schools being in session, and that other teachers drawing pay from the board substituted for them for the time being. If the teachers who were ill had a contagious disease, they must be paid. If such illness was not contagious, the board can grant such leave as it sees fit, at full pay, such grant being reasonable in time.

While a board of education can increase the pay of a teacher during the term for which appointed, the law does not contemplate that any teacher shall draw two salaries when their whole school time is already paid for with one salary. If the board, in its assignment of teachers who were to substitute, did not divide up the extra work equally to all concerned, that is the board's fault.

Under the law the teachers who were paid once for their time can not demand a second payment for the same time, though there is nothing to prevent private arrangements that are frequently made between teachers where substituting has been done.

The opinion of the Attorney-General is, therefore, that the teachers who were once paid are not entitled to a second pay from the board of education which has purchased their time and can assign them as it sees fit under section 7690 G. C.; that salaries of teachers ill with contagious disease can not be withheld by a board of education and the board must provide substitutes.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROHIBITION AMENDMENT—STATE AND COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSING BOARDS CEASE TO EXIST WHEN CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION AMENDMENT BECOMES EFFECTIVE.

1. The state and county liquor licensing boards created by the act passed April 18, 1913, and approved by the governor and filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 3, 1913, (103 O. L. 216-243), will cease to exist, and all powers and duties of these boards and their inspectors will end, when section 9 of Article XV of the state constitution becomes effective on May 27, 1919.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 26, 1919.

HON. C. C. CRABBE, House of Representatives, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your inquiry of recent date requesting my opinion as follows:

> "I looked over your opinion of a few days ago concerning the effect of the constitutional amendment upon the liquor license laws and as your opinion seems to knock out the penal provisions of the liquor license laws and owing to an article which I read today in the Cincinnati Enquirer, I desire to know what, if any, portion of the license machinery will remain in force after May 27 and what, if any, duties the board can perform concerning the enforcement of law.
> As I am interested in the passage of legislation which seeks to enforce state-wide prohibition, I am anxious to receive this opinion at an early date."

Your inquiry calls for consideration of the provisions of the liquor license act, 103 O. L., 216, and particularly involves the question as to the effect of the prohibition amendment to the constitution upon the administrative provisions of said law, certain other phases of the law having been considered in a previous opinion of this department rendered to the state liquor licensing board.

Upon consideration of the act in question as a whole it is to be noted that its provisions are devoted essentially to the creation of administrative machinery charged fundamentally with the function of licensing the liquor traffic.

The law is notably void of explicit and comprehensive definition of the functions to be performed by the administrative department of government created by the act, and in seeking out the scope of duties and authority of this administrative department, the provisions are found to be peculiarly limited and adapted to the one phase of regulation of the liquor traffic pertaining to licensing thereof, as distinguished from the function of enforcement of regulatory and penal provisions of liquor laws of the state generally.

It is provided in section 1 of the act that there shall be a board known as the "State Liquor Licensing Board," consisting of three commissioners * * . By succeeding sections of the act it is provided, among other things, that each of the commissioners and the secretary of the board shall take an oath of office to " * * carry into effect the letter and spirit of the liquor licensing system of this state."

The state liquor licensing board is authorized by section 5 of the act to provide itself with an office at the seat of government and to employ the necessary clerks, examiners, inspectors, stenographers and other assistants as it may deem necessary and fix their compensation subject to the approval of the governor, and provide furniture and supplies for the office.

It is provided by section 7 of the act that the state shall be divided into licensing districts, each county constituting a district, and that there shall be a liquor licensing board in each county to be appointed by the state board.

Section 16 of the act provides

> "It shall be the duty of the county liquor licensing boards of the respective counties of the state, and they are hereby authorized to grant, issue, renew and transfer, as provided by law, all licenses to traffic in intoxicating liquors in the county wherein the board is situated; also to suspend or revoke, subject to the conditions and in the manner provided by law, all licenses granted or renewed in said county; and to perform such other duties as may be required by law."

Provisions are then made for the procedure in granting licenses and it is provided that the fees payable to the county board in connection with the granting of licenses shall be transmitted to the state board, and it is further provided by section 38 of the act that there shall be a right of appeal to the state board in certain stated cases pending before the county board.

The fees and other moneys received by the state board are payable into the state treasury daily to the credit of a special fund known as the "State Liquor License Fund" and expenses and salaries of the licensing machinery of both state and county are payable from said fund upon the approval of the state board and warrant of the state auditor, while such balance as may be found unnecessary for the use of the board is to be transferred to the general fund of the state upon the certificate of the state board.

The foregoing constitute substantially all the provisions of the said law defining the duties and functions of the licensing boards.

It is expressly provided in section 56 of the act:

> "Nothing in this section shall be construed to amend, repeal or affect in any manner any law providing for the enforcement of local option laws prohibiting the sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors as a beverage or jurisdiction of any officer in enforcing such laws."

And it is worthy of note that no provision is found in the act under examination directing that the liquor licensing boards of the state or counties shall be charged with enforcement of the liquor laws generally of the state, or shall institute prosecutions for the violation of laws, or even that they shall through the inspection department make investigations to detect violations of the penal statutes of the state, or in fact administer any of the laws of the state other than the provisions relative to licensing. Certain provisions of another and distinct enactment relative to assessment of the Dow-Aiken tax, so-called, will be noted later. But with respect to the liquor license act itself, one is impressed with the unavoidable conclusion that the extensive administrative machinery provided in the act was provided solely for the uses and purposes of the licensing system to the exclusion and disregard of other liquor legislation of the state remaining in force, and this general purport of the law is so outstanding as to readily suggest that the provisions of the liquor license act were thought to be sufficient and complete within themselves and were intended to supersede other provisions of law dealing with the traffic, within the territory of the state wherein the licensing system was to be operative.

Now with this view of the law in mind it is next to be considered what effect the constitutional amendment has upon the licensing system as a whole. The prohibition amendment is as follows:

"ARTICLE XV.

Section 9. The sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage are hereby prohibited. The General Assembly shall enact laws to make this provision effective. Nothing herein contained shall prevent the manufacture or sale of such liquors for medicinal, industrial, scientific, sacramental, or other non-beverage purposes.

SCHEDULE.

If the proposed amendment be adopted, it shall become section 9 of Article XV of the constitution, and it shall take effect on the 27th day of May of the year following the date of the election at which it is adopted, at which time original sections 9 and 9a of Article XV of the constitution and all statutes inconsistent with the foregoing amendment shall be repealed."

It goes without saying that the amendment is inconsistent with the previous policy of the state to license the traffic in intoxicating liquor as a beverage and it would seem to as clearly follow that the administrative machinery or department of the government, created for the purpose and charged with the functions of carrying into effect the licensing system, would necessarily become defunct by virtue of its inconsistency with the mandate of the prohibition amendment.

It is of first importance to attribute to the solemn act of the electorate of the state as expressed in the amendment to the fundamental law, its full and exact meaning and effect.

Upon consideration of the full import of the amendment it is found to embody not only a mandate that the existing constitutional provision for license to traffic in intoxicating liquor and directing the enactment of license laws, shall be repealed, and that the sale and manufacture for sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage shall be prohibited, which latter provision would in itself have the effect of repealing all laws irreconcilable with the prohibition amendment, but also the further express avowal of the purpose and intent to repeal all statutes inconsistent with the provision of the prohibition amendment, and a direction that the general assembly shall enact laws to make it effective.

The express avowal of the intent to repeal all inconsistent statutes suggests a departure from the rule of construction in case of repeals only by implication, where there is said to be a presumption in favor of sustaining previous laws not irreconcilably inconsistent with the later enactment. Here the extent of the inconsistency has not been made the essence of the declaration for repeal, and the provisions of the liquor license act of 1913 essentially devoted to the creation of an agency in the form of state and county licensing boards and an enumeration of duties and functions addressed exclusively to the administration of the licensing system, obviously answer to the description "statutes inconsistent with the foregoing amendment," as employed in the schedule to the prohibition amendment.

It has been noted above that by another and distinct legislative enactment provision has been made for performance of functions in relation to assessment of Dow-Aiken tax by the liquor licensing board and inspectors appointed by it, and it remains to be considered as to what effect the provisions of said independent enactment may have in respect to sustaining the life of the department.

The act in question was passed April 18, 1913, approved May 5 and filed in the office of the secretary of state May 8, and as later amended in 1914 vests the duty in the inspectors appointed by the state liquor licensing board to "make investigations to secure the names of all persons, firms or corporations liable to such assessments or increased assessment (Dow-Aiken tax so-called), whose names are not already on the duplicate, and report such names to the state liquor licensing board."

It is then provided that the board shall determine from the report and forthwith certify to the auditor of state the names of persons, firms or corporations liable to such assessment and that the auditor shall cause such names to be entered upon the assessment duplicate of the proper county by the auditor thereof, etc.

It may be questioned whether the tax involved in said provisions of the law will still be assessable after the prohibition amendment becomes effective, but in view of the decisions upon the question of the operation of the tax provision in conjunction with local option prohibition laws, it will be assumed the tax will be assessable similarly in conjunction with prohibition operative throughout the state.

It was held in Brannan, Treas., vs. Schartzer, 4 O. App. 356:

> "When the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors is carried on in the county in which the sale of intoxicating liquor has been prohibited, such business is subject to the assessment provided for in section 6071 G. C."

While it does not appear that this case was reviewed by the Supreme Court, yet it is in accord with the general trend of authorities involving the assessment in territory where the traffic was prohibited under the several county, township and municipal local option laws, and this court follows an unreported decision of the Supreme Court, making the following observation:

> "This question, however, is no longer open to discussion, as the Supreme Court has directly passed upon it in Burrell vs. Holtz, Treas. et al., 84 O. S., 497. We have been furnished with certified copies of the proceedings in the court of common pleas and circuit court and a copy of the journal entry in the Supreme Court. The identical question was raised in that case and the Supreme Court held that such assessment might be imposed upon the business when conducted in so-called dry territory. The Supreme Court decision affirmed, without opinion, the judgment of the circuit court on the authority of Adler vs. Whitbeck, 44 O. S. 539, and of Conwell vs. Sears, 65 O. S. 49."

In the latter case Shauck, J. observed:

> "The historical development of our legislative policy upon the subject and the terms employed in the present statute indicate the sense in which the word 'prohibit' is used in this section. For nearly half a century prior to the enactment of the present statute, a statute had forbidden throughout the state the sale of intoxicating liquors to be drank upon the premises where sold. During this time the forbidden traffic grew much beyond the general growth of the state. It was, therefore, most obvious when the present statute was enacted that to make the traffic unlawful does not necessarily prevent it. A leading object of the present statute was to secure to the state the benefit of its experience."

After observing that a provision prohibiting the traffic does not in all cases prevent the traffic, the court further said:

> "The natural force of the language employed in this section is not inconsistent with that of the section which requires the traffic to be assessed wherever it may be carried on."

The question is again exhaustively considered in the case of Reider vs. Davis, Treas., 10 O. N. P. n. s. 177, where the syllabus is as follows:

> "The Dow tax is valid and operative in a county which has been voted 'dry' under the Rose county local option law."

The court quotes from the Supreme Court of the United States, 5 Wall., 462, which is expressive of the trend of reasoning upon which the assessment is held applicable in conjunction with prohibition, as follows:

> "There is nothing hostile or contradictory therefore in the acts or Congress to the legislation of the state. What the latter prohibits, the former, if the business is found existing, notwithstanding the prohibition, discourages by taxation. The two lines of legislation proceed in the same direction and tend to the same result."

And again it is said by the court:

> "The tax is not imposed as a protection to the liquor interest but to mitigate its pernicious effect upon society and is a step in the direction of prohibition."

Without pursuing this inquiry at greater length but assuming for the purposes of our present consideration that the imposition of the so-called Dow-Aiken liquor tax where the traffic may be found to be carried on, is not in derogation of the spirit of prohibition, yet its provisions imposing particular functions upon the liquor licensing board and its inspectors must necessarily become inoperative.

When a statute creating an office or agency of government has been repealed there remains no authority for the exercise of its functions nor can there be a legal incumbent of an office created by statute when the statute creating it has been repealed.

The license amendment to the constitution of 1912 and the liquor licensing statutes enacted in pursuance thereof which created the office of license commissioners were the basis upon which rested the legislation conferring functions in relation to the assessment of the Dow-Aiken tax on the incumbent thereof. They were the foundation while the latter was the superstructure erected thereon and when the foundation was removed the superstructure fell as a necessary consequence.

Therefore the repeal of the statutes creating the liquor licensing board by necessary implication rendered inoperative those sections of the statute prescribing particular duties to be performed in relation to assessment of the Dow-Aiken tax, for the reason that such implication is in harmony and consistent with the express constitutional mandate.

The state and county liquor licensing boards and their machinery were not created by the Dow-Aiken law, and the particular function relative to the assessment of the Dow-Aiken tax is not the characterizing or essential function of the board and in fact was simply added by separate enactment of the legislature.

To imply from the assumed validity of the Dow-Aiken tax law an intention not to repeal the liquor licensing laws would be to overcome by implication the expressed will of the electors of the state and fly in the face of their declared intent.

By previous legislation the inspection functions now vested in the inspection department under the state liquor licensing board, had been vested in the dairy and food department and this particular duty was simply transferred to the new department.

The assessment of the liquor tax, while substantially crippled by the passing of the liquor licensing department, will still be operative through the agency of the county taxing machinery, but the extent of interference with the operation of the assessment legislation is not considered decisive of the continued operation of the licensing machinery as against the plain mandate of the constitution that all statutes inconsistent therewith shall be repealed.

It may further be worthy of consideration that a vast amount of unfinished business may be pending under the administration of the liquor licensing department of the government, but that appears to be a matter more appropriately addressing itself to the legislature than as determinative of construction of the specific provision and effect of the constitutional amendment.

There is in the liquor licensing act the provision—Section 41—

> "If an election shall have been held in any county whereby the sale of liquor throughout the county is prohibited by law, the office of the county licensing board shall thereby be abolished within one month after the said prohibition shall take effect. The county board shall proceed to wind up its business and close its office. The commissioners, officers, clerks and assistants shall be entitled to one full month's compensation after the date upon which the prohibition in the said county becomes operative therein," but by its own plain provisions it is applicable only in the case of county prohibition by virtue of then existing provisions of the law under which the same might be accomplished and in any event the provision itself with other sections of the act becomes repealed with the advent of the constitutional amendment which provides a new system of dealing with the liquor traffic effective on the 27th of May at which time all inconsistent statutes shall be repealed, as well as the constitutional provision under which alone the statutes were authorized at the time of their enactment.

It is likewise provided in section 47 that the county boards shall make reports within thirty days after the expiration of the license year and that the state board shall make report to the governor not later than three months after the expiration of the license year, all of which provisions of the license law are no longer significant in view of the observations which have gone before, and we must look solely to the language of the constitutional amendment in determining when its terms become effective and the inconsistent laws become inoperative, and therefore whatever measures for closing the business of the liquor licensing department and rendering essential reports are to be available, must be found in action to be taken before that department becomes defunct by the impending prohibition, or by such appropriate legislation as the circumstances may require.

It is not to be overlooked that prohibition and license respectively import governmental policies which are far removed and fundamentally and essentially repugnant to each other. The prohibition amendment purports to provide a substitute for the whole subject matter of the former constitutional and statutory licensing system and such a general provision declaratory of the policy of the state must necessarily supersede all laws contradictory thereof.

An examination of the provisions of the liquor licensing laws, section by section, discloses that the substantive provisions are addressed substantially to the one object of licensing the liquor traffic and providing the machinery therefor, and it therefore follows that they must be regarded as in conflict with the purport and policy of the prohibition amendment and cease to be operative, in accordance with the provision of the schedule to the amendment, on the 27th of May.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE FOR REAL ESTATE ACQUIRED FOR EXECUTIVE MANSION—CERTAIN LIENS NOTED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1919.

HON. JAMES E. CAMPBELL, Chairman, Executive Mansion Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of May 6, 1919, you submitted for my examination certain deeds from Charles H. Lindenberg to the state of Ohio and Lincoln G. Kinsell and Denman R. Kinsell to the state of Ohio respectively, together with abstracts of title covering the premises described in said deeds, requesting my opinion as to the sufficiency of said deeds in form and substance as a conveyance of the premises, and also as to the state of the title to such premises as disclosed by the aforesaid abstracts.

You also requested that I prepare a deed of conveyance on the part of the state of Ohio to said Charles H. Lindenberg covering certain premises heretofore acquired by the state of Ohio as a site for an executive mansion, in accordance with negotiations evidenced by a contract of option entered into between said Charles H. Lindenberg and the executive mansion board, and the provisions of the legislative act pursuant to which the negotiations are to be consummated.

In accordance with your request I have examined the proposed deeds for conveyance of premises to the state of Ohio by Charles H. Lindenberg and by Lincoln G. Kinsell and Denman R. Kinsell, and find them to be in proper form for conveyance of title to the premises therein described to the state of Ohio, when duly executed, stamped and delivered.

Upon examination of the abstracts I find that they evidence legal title in Charles H. Lindenberg and Lincoln G. Kinsell and Denman R. Kinsell respectively, to the premises described in the respective proposed deeds of said parties and the corresponding abstracts, subject to the following liens:

The Lindenberg property is shown to stand assessed for taxes for the year 1918 amounting in the aggregate to $1,350.03, which are disclosed by the abstract to be unpaid and therefor a lien upon the premises.

The Kinsell property is shown to stand assessed for taxes for the year 1918 amounting in the aggregate to $300.92, which are disclosed by the abstract to be unpaid and therefore a lien upon the premises.

No other liens are found disclosed by the abstracts, and therefore, subject to said liens just noted, I find the abstracts evidence the title to be free of encumbrance.

I am furnishing you herewith, in pursuance of your request, a deed for conveyance of the state's property to Charles H. Lindenberg in exchange for property to be conveyed to the state, which I believe to be in proper form.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY—MILEAGE FOR REGULAR AND SPECIAL SESSIONS—WHEN PAID—NOT ENTITLED TO MILEAGE WHEN IN RECESS—CANNOT BE FIXED BY JOINT RESOLUTION.

1. The end of the regular or special session of which the mileage of members of the General Assembly is payable means the final adjournment thereof.

2. Only two sessions of the General Assembly are provided for in the constitution and laws of Ohio, namely, regular sessions provided for in section 25, Article II of the constitution and section 35 G. C.; and special sessions convened by the governor under section 8, Article III of the constitution.

3. Mileage being a part of the "fixed compensation" of legislators, which must be prescribed by law, the same cannot be fixed by a joint resolution, it not being a legislative act.

4. Members of the General Assembly are not entitled to mileage for the weeks the assembly is in recess.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 29, 1919.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your letter of this date inviting my attention to sections 35 and 50 G. C., and section 31, Article II of the constitution of Ohio, and propounding the following questions:

> "I desire to call your attention to sections 35 and 50 of the General Code, which provide for regular sessions of the General Assembly and compensation as salary and mileage to its members.
> I also desire to call your attention to section 31, Art. II of the constitution of Ohio, with relation to compensation.
>
> Section 50 provides that each member of the General Assembly shall receive two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session from and to his place of residence by the most direct route of public travel to and from the seat of government, to be paid at the end of each regular or special session.
> I desire to have you answer the following questions:
>
> 1. Can the auditor of state pay mileage to members of the General Assembly before the end of a regular or special session?
> 2. What constitutes a regular or special session in connection with the meaning of this statute?
>
> 3. Can the General Assembly legally pass a joint resolution authorizing the payment to themselves of three cents a mile, and would it be legal for the auditor of state, under the constitution and laws above quoted, to pay this amount from the public treasury?
> 4. In case the General Assembly would recess until December 1919, would they be entitled to mileage each week during the interim?"

Section 50 G. C. has been considered by one of my predecessors, and his opinion thereon is found in Vol. 1, 1916 Opinions of the Attorney-General, page 68, and so far as that opinion treats of the question, the same is followed and approved by me.

Section 31, Article II of the constitution is as follows:

> "Members and officers of the General Assembly shall receive a fixed compensation, to be prescribed by law * * * and no change in their compensation shall take effect during their term of office."

It is to be noted that mileage, to be paid at all, must be a part of the "fixed compensation," and the provision for mileage in section 50 G. C. was held by the Attorney-General in the opinion, supra, to be a part of the compensation of members of the General Assembly.

Since the compensation is to be prescribed by law, you are advised in answer to your third question that the General Assembly cannot legally pass a joint resolution authorizing the payment of three cents a mile; and because "no change in their compensation shall take effect during their term of office," the auditor of state could not legally pay an increased mileage to the present members of the General Assembly, even though they should enact a law which provided for an increase in mileage.

It is held in the case of R. R. Co. vs. State, 85 O. S. 251, that a joint resolution is not a legislative act. On page 294 of the opinion Judge Shauck says:

> "It should not need the citation of authorities to establish the proposition that a joint resolution is not an act of legislation, and that it cannot be effective for any purpose for which an exercise of legislative power is necessary."

As to your second question, what constitutes a regular or special session in connection with the meaning of the statute under consideration, you are advised that by the constitution and laws of this state, but two sessions of the General Assembly are provided for:

(1) Regular sessions commencing on the first Monday in January after the election of the members, and continuing until final adjournment. Section 35 G. C.; section 25, Article II, and sections 11 and 20, Article III of the constitution; and

(2) Special sessions called by the governor, under the authority of section 8, Article III of the constitution.

Section 50 G. C. provides that the mileage to members is "to be paid at the end of each regular or special session."

"Session" as used in this connection means the space of time or period between the first meeting and the adjournment. (Webster's Dictionary) And the end of such session means the final adjournment and not a recess or temporary adjournment. So that you are advised in answer to your first question that the mileage to members of the present General Assembly cannot be paid until the final adjournment of the present regular session.

Section 50 G. C. also provides:

> "Each member shall receive two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session * * *."

As used in this connection, "session" has a different meaning from that given above, and means "The actual assembly of the members, actually sitting for the transaction of business," (Webster's Dictionary), and precludes the right to receive mileage during a recess of one week, or more, when there is no actual assembly of the members, and the members are at their homes. And this is the practical construction heretofore placed on this section by the General Assembly itself.

You are therefore advised in answer to your fourth question that in case the General Assembly should recess until December, 1919, the members would not be entitled to mileage each week during the interim.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS—SECTION 8667 G. C. DOES NOT APPLY TO SUCH CORPORATIONS.

Section 8667 G. C. does not apply to foreign corporations seeking admission to transact business in this state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 3, 1919.

HON. HARVEY C. SMITH, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of June 2, 1919, inquiring whether section 8667 G. C. applies to foreign corporations desiring to transact business in this state, was duly received.

The statute reads as follows:

> "If a corporation be organized for profit, it must have a capital stock, which may consist of common and preferred, or common only; but at no time shall the amount of preferred stock at par value exceed two-thirds of the actual capital paid in in cash or property."

This statute is one of the sections of our general corporation law governing the incorporation and organization of domestic companies, and does not apply to foreign corporations. The admission of foreign corporations is regulated by sections 178 et seq. G. C., which do not require that the capital stock of such companies be adjusted in conformity to section 8667 G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—CUSTODY OF CHILD UNDER AGE OF EIGHTEEN YEARS BY REASON OF SECTION 1643 G. C.—CONFLICT AS TO JURISDICTION OF TWO JUVENILE COURTS—WHICH PREVAILS.

Under section 1643 G. C., for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, when a child under the age of eighteen years comes into the custody of a juvenile court, under the provisions of the juvenile court act, such child shall continue a ward of the court and under its continuing jurisdiction until such child attains the age of twenty-one years or is adopted under section 1672 G. C., and such facts being made to appear in a juvenile court of another county in a subsequent proceeding therein, the latter court is without jurisdiction to permanently commit said child under section 1653 et seq. G. C., but pending the final hearing may make necessary orders for the temporary well being of such child.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 3, 1919.

HON. H. H. SHIRER, Secretary Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter requesting the opinion of this department as follows:

> "In September, 1915, the juvenile court of Putnam county committed to the Mennonite Orphan's Home in Logan county a minor child, nine years of age, with the order that she be 'committed to said children's home to be there received, cared for, educated and kept in custody of trustees of said home until she arrives at age of eighteen years, unless sooner released according to law, by the proper authorities of said institution or by this court.'
> The child was later placed by the Mennonite Home with a family in the northern part of the state, where it was alleged she was neglected. The case was brought into the Fulton county juvenile court and the child placed by the judge of the latter court with a relative living in Miami county.
> There are two points at issue. Could the Fulton county juvenile court accept for permanent care and placement in a family home in a distant county, a child already a ward of the Putnam county court, pursuant to the provisions of section 1653 G .C.? What is the present status of the Mennonite Home in relation to the child?"

The order of the juvenile court of Putnam county to the Mennonite Orphan's Home in Logan county, it is noted, commits the minor to that home to be "cared for, educated, kept in custody of the trustees of said home until she arrive at the age of eighteen years unless sooner relieved according to law by the proper authorities of said institution or by this court.

From your letter it does not appear that the Mennonite Orphan's Home is an institution which has been approved by the board of state charities, as required in such cases of commitment under section 1653, infra, but no question being raised on this point in your letter, indicating that it has not been so approved for present purposes, it will be assumed that the board of state charities has approved of that institution.

It is also noted that the child was brought into the Fulton juvenile court on a charge that "she was neglected." In the absence of other specific facts as to her condition in Fulton county, it is assumed that this charge was made under section 1645, which defines a dependent child, and her last status in that county for the purpose of this opinion will be considered as that of a dependent child.

Sections 1653, 1672 and 1643, as amended in 103 O. L., p. 872, et seq., are pertinent.

Section 1653, relating to the commitment to institutions, in part provides:

> "The judge may make an order committing such child to the care of the children's home * * * or he may commit such child * * * to the care * * * of some association willing to receive it, which embraces within its objects the purposes of caring for or obtaining homes for, dependent, neglected or delinquent children or any of them, and which has been approved by the board of state charities, as provided by law."

Section 1643 G. C. is:

> "When a child under the age of eighteen years comes into the custody of the court under the provisions of this chapter, such child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, a ward of the court, until he or she attain the age of twenty-one years. The power of the court over such child shall continue until the child attain such age."

Pertinent provisions of section 1672 are:

> "If the court awards a child to the care of an association * * * in accordance with these provisions, unless otherwise ordered, the child shall become a ward, and be subject to the guardianship of such association. * * * Such association * * * may place such child in a family home and shall be made a party to any proceedings for the legal adoption of the child, and * * * upon such order (of adoption) being made, all jurisdiction of the juvenile court over such child, under section 1643 of the General Code, shall cease and determine."

Assuming that the Mennonite Orphan's Home is such an institution to which the court of Putnam county could and did legally commit the child in what appears to have been her first contact with the juvenile court, further information as to procedure by which said home placed the child with the family in the northern part of the state, as stated in your letter, might have thrown some additional light on the question involved, but it is assumed, however, that the child was not adopted by that family.

Section 1643 provides that for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection this child became and remained a ward of the juvenile court of Putnam county.

This appears clear from the unmistakeable provisions of this section, but by section 1672, upon the commitment by that court to the orphan's home, another guardianship resulted, because this section says that if the court awards a child to an association, the child shall become a ward and "be subject to the guardianship of such association," which may place such child in a family home and be made party to any proceedings to its adoption. The apparent conflict in such a double guardianship may be avoided by construing the guardianship of the association to be what might be termed a sub-guardianship, as section 1643, providing for the continuing jurisdiction of the court in such cases, would seem to be more special in its nature for the protection of the child and that the association's rights as a guardian would seem to prevail against other individuals and not to apply when the rights of such guardianship conflicted with the exercise of the juvenile court's continuing jurisdiction over the ward.

Consideration of these sections, however, does not of itself decide the authority of the juvenile court of Fulton county to make permanent the commitment of the child in that county after the child has become a ward of the Putnam county court under section 1643.

This question is not easy of solution and requires consideration of the proper rule of construction in such cases. It must be borne in mind that dependency is not a crime but a status and that the welfare of the child is the paramount consideration in the construction of the juvenile court laws.

As to the proper venue in a proceeding under section 1645, in which dependency is charged to exist, we have "dependent child" defined in that section in such broad terms as would cover most ordinary cases of neglect.

Section 1647 G. C. provides that:

> "Any person having knowledge of a minor under the age of eighteen years who appears to be either a delinquent, neglected or dependent child, may file with such juvenile court a complaint."

The words "such juvenile court" refer undoubtedly to the courts mentioned in section 1639 of the juvenile court act, which provides that courts of common pleas, probate courts, insolvency courts and superior courts, where established shall have and exercise concurrently the powers and jurisdiction conferred in that act. It further provides:

> "The judges of such court in each county * * * shall designate one of their number to transact the business arising under such jurisdiction."

from which it follows that in ordinary cases the court of the county in which the dependent child is alleged to be neglected, has jurisdiction to hear such complaint. Taking section 1643 at full face value, without reference to other sections of that act, and without special consideration of its whole purpose, would lead to the result that by reason of this child having become a ward of the juvenile court of Putnam county, it would be beyond the jurisdiction and control of the juvenile court of Fulton county, while it resided therein, regardless of what deplorable, dependent or delinquent condition to which it may be subjected. On the other hand, unless the prior guardianship of the Putnam county court is to be considered in the subsequent hearing in Fulton county, section 1643 is nearly meaningless, and to hold that the court in which the later proceeding is held may make a final disposition of the child, in the face of the continuing jurisdiction of the formerly acquired guardianship, is to practically nullify section 1643.

The undesirable results that may follow either of these extreme holdings may be avoided by reconciliation of the apparent conflicting provisions of this act.

In the case of In Re Angeline e. Crist, 89 O. S., 33, the former opinions of the Supreme Court of Ohio are considered and followed to the effect that where the common pleas court, in an action for divorce, awards the custody and control of the children of the marriage, such become the wards of that court and its jurisdiction over their custody and control is continuing and its order therein cannot be affected by a proceeding in the probate court or by a proceeding in habeas corpus.

In Children's Home vs. Fetter, 90 O. S., 110, the second branch of the syllabus is:

> "The probate courts of this state, acting as juvenile courts, under the provisions of section 1639 et seq. G. C., are courts of record and their judgments, where jurisdiction of the person and subject matter has been acquired and no fraud has intervened, are conclusive and can be assailed in no other court in an independent proceeding."

In the Fetter case the alleged conflict of jurisdiction was between the common pleas court of Erie county and the juvenile court of Marion county, and the minor was first brought under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, and, as stated in the opinion, at page 125,

> "In the case at bar, under the provisions of section 1643 G. C. * * the power of that court over him was continuing until he attained the age of twenty-one years. An independent proceeding in another court, even of higher jurisdiction, cannot be maintained to affect this order of a court of record and competent jurisdiction," and as to later interference with the order of the juvenile court, in that case Judge Newman held:

> "There is no authority for any court to interfere in an independent proceeding with the custody of the child thus entrusted by law to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court."

Without quoting further from these and other decisions, it may be stated that there effect is that after the child in this case came in contact with the Putnam county court, for the purposes stated in section 1643, it must remain a ward of that court, which shall have a continuing jurisdiction until the child reaches the age of twenty-one years or is adopted under section 1672, supra. But considering the other provisions of the juvenile court act, and its controlling purpose to safeguard the child, it is also quite clear that the juvenile court of the county of its actual residence is not without certain duties and powers under certain circumstances, and considering the urgent necessities which may arise in the county of the child's actual residence, in connection with the provisions of section 1647, above referred to, it is concluded that the court of the county in which such child actually resides has jurisdiction to hear complaints as to the child's condition at that time, and to make any necessary temporary order for its well-being, and if no facts come to the court's knowledge of the prior adjudication in another county, and in the absence of a direct attack upon the court's proceedings, such court may also commit such child as provided in the juvenile court act.

However, it being made to appear to the court that the alleged dependent or delinquent child is a ward of another juvenile court of the state, by reason of the facts as above stated, a citation must issue to the juvenile court exercising the guardianship over such ward, or preferably to the Mennonite Orphans' Home, which on the Putnam's county court's commitment also stands charged with its guardianship.

Consistent with this construction of this act, it is concluded that if the guardianship of the court first exercising the jurisdiction of the juvenile act be established, that beyond making such temporary order as the welfare of the child requires, the later acting juvenile court is without authority to permanently commit the child under sections 1653 G. C. et seq.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

CHATTEL LOAN BUREAU—COLLECTION OF INTEREST AND CHARGES IN ADVANCE NOT AUTHORIZED—SECTION 6343-5 G. C. APPLICABLE WHERE LOAN IS FOR INDEFINITE TERM AT RATE OF 1½ PER CENT PER MONTH, RETAINING 2 PER CENT OF LOAN IN ADVANCE.

The inhibition against collection of interest and charges in advance as provided in section 6343-5 G. C. is applicable to the case of a licensee who loans on invoices for an indefinite time at a rate of 1½ per cent per month, retaining 2 per cent of the loan in advance, and adjusting by rebate, in event the amount retained exceeds the stipulated interest and charges at time of settlement, and such method of doing business is in violation of the section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 3, 1919.

Department of Securities, Chattel Loan Bureau, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 10, 1919, you requested my written opinion as follows:

> "The Chattel Loan Bureau of the department of securities has always ruled, under section 6346-5 G. C. that no part of the 3 per cent per month allowed for charges, including interest, might be collected in advance. This has seemed to be the only construction which could be placed on this phase of said section.
> One of our licensees now questions this ruling, basing his contention on the following facts: This company lends on invoices, for an indefinite time, at 6 per cent per annum, plus 1-30 of 1 per cent per day, which is, of course, equivalent to 1½ per cent per month. The company retains from the borrower 2 per cent of the loan, which is admitted by the company as collecting in advance, and also, admittedly, done for the benefit to be derived from relending this 2 per cent. The company rebates to the borrower, when the loan is paid, any surplus there may be, after deducting interest at 1-30 per cent per day, plus 6 per cent per annum, from the 2 per cent.
> With this basis of facts, the company avers that the statute reading as follows:

'Said three per cent per month shall not be paid in advance,' does not apply to their case, as they do not charge three per cent per month."

From your statement it is observed that the question arises as to the authority to require payment in advance of all or a part of the charges authorized by law, by licensees engaged in the chattel loan business.

Apparently the question raised in the specific case you mention is as to whether the restriction against the advance charges is applicable where the maximum rate of the total charge is less than the maximum 3 per cent per month allowed by law.

The provisions of the law governing your inquiry will be found in section 6346-5 G. C. which section is as follows:

"No such licensee or licensees shall make a loan or purchase or furnish guaranty, or security, as hereinbefore provided at a greater total charge, including interest, than three per cent per month; except that on loans that do not exceed fifty dollars in amount, in whatever manner made payable, an inspection fee of not to exceed one dollar may be collected at the time the loan is made, when such loan is made for a period of not less than four months; and such inspection fee shall not be imposed upon the same borrower for any new or additional loan made within four months after such charge has been imposed. Said three per cent per month shall not be paid in advance and shall be computed on unpaid monthly balances, without compounding interest or charges. No bonus, fees, expenses, or demands of any nature whatsoever, other than said inspection fee and said total charge of three per cent per month (which shall include interest) as hereinbefore provided, shall be made, paid, or received, directly or indirectly, for such loans, purchases or furnishing guaranty or security, wage assignments or advancements except court costs upon the actual foreclosure of the security or upon the entry of judgment. Nothing in this act shall apply to pawn brokers who obtain a municipal license as provided in sections 6337 to 6346, inclusive, of the General Code or to national banks or to state banks or any person, partnership, association or corporation whose business now comes under the supervision of the superintendent of banks. No charge or fee shall be made unless the loan is actually made. A copy of this section shall be furnished each borrower at the time the loan is made."

Operative provisions of this section pertinent to the inquiry presented are slightly separated by intervening clauses relating to an exception in case of loans not exceding $50, and for a period of not less than four months, but when brought together the meaning is, we think, fairly free from difficulty.

The language used in the section we think is of the same import as though it read "no licensee or licensees shall make a loan or purchase or furnish guaranty, as hereinbefore provided at a greater total charge, including interest, than 3 per cent per month, which charge shall not be paid in advance, and shall be computed on unpaid monthly balances without compounding interest or charges.

In other words, the phrase "said three per cent per month," is simply a form of expression used to denote the legalized charges under said section which had been limited to a maximum of three per cent per month; that charges may not exceed three per cent per month, but obviously may be less than that amount, at the discretion of the parties to the transaction, and subject to the terms of the contract. And the phrase so mentioned is not to be construed as fixing a universal rate to be charged, nor as relegating the limitations and regulations provided in the remainder of the sentence to the one particular case of the maximum charge.

The maximum charge of three per cent per month is one of the regulations imposed, while in addition it is provided that the charges shall not be paid in advance, and further, shall be computed on unpaid monthly balances without compounding interest or charges, and I hold that the several provisions are cumulative regulations applicable to the case of any transaction coming within the terms of the introductory language of the section.

The opposing contention suggested by your letter is tantamount to a holding that while a licensee charging the maximum three per cent per month may not require payments in advance, yet licensees charging a slight fraction under the maximum or any other rate below the maximum would not be subject to any of the regulations applicable in case of the maximum charge, which is so obviously a strained and unreasonable interpretation of the language that its mere statement is its own direct refutation.

I interpret the section as providing that not only shall the total charges not exceed three per cent per month subject to the exception provided in the statute, but further, that the interest and charges shall not be payable in advance, but shall be computed on the unpaid monthly balances, and therefore that the method of collection by the company referred to in your letter is at variance with the provisions of the statute and constitutes a collection in advance in violation of the mandate of the statute.

The restriction against collection in advance is held to be applicable to all licensees without regard to the rate of the total charges, with the additional restriction that such total charges may not exceed three per cent per month.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—NOT AUTHORIZED TO INCUR EXPENSE FOR STENOGRAPHER UNDER SECTION 3004 G. C.—SECTION 2914 G. C. APPLICABLE—BOND REQUIRED BY SECTION 3004 G. C. ADDITIONAL TO THAT REQUIRED BY SECTION 2911 G. C.

1. Under section 3004 G. C. the prosecuting attorney is not authorized to incur expense for a stenographer, such expense being provided for in section 2914.

2. The bond required by section 3004 G. C. is an additional bond to that required by section 2911.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 3, 1919.

HON. WALTER B. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your recent communication with reference to your former communication requesting the opinion of this department at that time, as follows:

> "Last January, as provided by law, our common pleas judge failed to make any allowance for a stenographer for the prosecuting attorney of this county.

On the 26th day of April, this year, he fixed the allowance at the rate of $5.00 per month or $60.00 per year, and ordered the clerk to enter the same upon the journal under date prior to the first Monday in January, 1919.

The writer assumed the duties of his office on the first Monday in January this year, and on that day talked with the judge about this allowance. The judge stated to him that he would make an allowance necessary to pay for the actual work done, but, after the stenographer had done the work from that date up to April 28, believing that she would be paid for the same, the court then proceeds in the manner above set out.

The sum of $5.00 per month will not pay, nor begin to pay for the stenograhpic work required in my office.

I am writing you at this time requesting your opinion upon the following matters:

(1) Would I be entitled, under section 3004, to pay the reasonable and necessary stenographic expense incurred in my official capacity?

(2) Would it be different had the court made no allowance whatever?

I also desire your opinion upon the following question:

Is it necessary for the prosecuting attorney to file an additional bond, under section 3004 as amended, before he can avail himself of the benefits of said section, or if his original bond is for more than the amount of his salary, will it serve this purpose?

On the above question, I am somewhat undecided as the same refers to his oath of office, being enclosed and deposited with the bond referred to therein, and it seems that the provisions of the bond under that section are substantially the same as the general bond required. The common pleas court in our county fixed my original bond at $2,000, which exceeds the salary received by me."

Your questions may be stated thus:

(1) Does section 3004 G. C. authorize the incurring of expense by a prosecuting attorney for the payment of a stenographer?

(2) Is an additional bond required under section 3004 G. C.

Section 5, Article X of the constitution of Ohio and sections 2914 and 3004 G. C. are applicable to your first question.

Section 2914 in part provides:

"On or before the first Monday in January of each year in each county, the judge of the court of common pleas, * * * may fix an aggregate sum to be expended for the incoming year, for the compensation of assistants, clerks and stenographers of the prosecuting attorney's office."

Section 3004 in part is:

"There shall be allowed annually to the prosecuting attorney in addition to his salary and to the allowance provided by section 2914, an amount equal to one-half the official salary, to provide for expenses, * * * not otherwise provided for. * * *"

Section 5, Article X of the constitution provides that:

"No money shall be drawn from any county * * * treasury, except by authority of law."

By the plain and specific terms of sections 2914, supra, provision is made for compensation of stenographers in the prosecuting attorney's office. This fulfills the requirement of the constitutional provision above quoted, and at the same time it eliminates such an expense from being comprehended in that authorized by section 3004 G. C. under the provision for expenses "not otherwise provided for." It is quite clear that this expense, being specifically provided for, cannot be authorized in a statute which authorizes incurring expenses not provided for.

From this it follows that the opinion of this department is that such expense may not legally be paid under section 3004 G. C., and the answer to your first question is therefore in the negative.

However, it is suggested as a matter of practical assistance to you that the judge may make a further allowance under section 2914 G. C. on the same theory that the commissioners may increase the allowance to deputy county officers, as held in Opinion No. 323, rendered by this department to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

It may be observed that, consistent with the above conclusion, it would not be different had the court made no allowance.

For the proper solution of your second question consideration of section 2911 and the latter part of section 3004 G. C. is necessary.

Section 2911 requires that before entering upon the discharge of his duties the prosecuting attorney shall give bond to the state in a sum not less than one thousand dollars, to be fixed by the common pleas or probate court, and to be approved, conditioned and deposited as therein provided.

Section 3004, after providing for an additional allowance to the prosecuting attorney of an amount equal to one-half his salary, contains this language:

"Provided that nothing shall be paid under this section until the prosecuting attorney shall have given bond to the state in a sum not less than his official salary to be fixed by the court of common pleas or probate court."

It is not necessary to quote all of the further requirements of the bond referred to, and it is sufficient to say that in its execution, conditions, approval and disposition the terms of section 3004 do not differ from the provisions of section 2911.

It is to be noted, however, that the penalty of the bond in this section is that it shall be not less than the salary.

It is also to be noted that by the last paragraph of section 3004 it is contemplated that this fund shall or may be drawn by the prosecuting attorney in a lump sum, so that in the beginning of the year he may draw the entire amount from the county treasury. This is evidenced by that part of the section which, after providing that each year the prosecuting attorney shall file an itemized statement "as to the manner in which fund has been expended during the current year, and shall if any part of such fund remains in his hands unexpended, forthwith pay the same into the county treasury."

It is to be observed that under this section the prosecuting attorney draws not his own salary but trust funds of the county to be expended by him for certain purposes, and from its later enactment as part of a separate and additional allowance made for the prosecuting attorney it indicates a legislative requirement that two bonds must be given by the prosecuting attorney: one in a sum not less than one thousand dollars, and another in a sum not less than his official salary. It is to be observed that these constitute the minimum penalties for the bonds, and they may be for a greater amount.

From the foregoing observations the opinion of this department is that the original bond given under section 2911 G. C., unless the penalty amounts to the combined penalties required by both of these sections, is not sufficient and an additional bond must be given under section 3004. The answer to your second question is therefore in the affirmative.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DITCH CONSTRUCTED WHOLLY IN ONE COUNTY—WHEN PAYMENT IS TO BE MADE BY ADJOINING COUNTY ASSUMING PART OF EXPENSE.

Where, in pursuance of sections 6536, 6540 and 6541, G. C. a ditch is constructed wholly in one county as to the cost of which contribution from an adjoining county is sought, the portion payable by such adjoining county becomes due upon the collection of assessments for said improvement against lands in such adjoining county, and not at the time of the agreement of the boards of commissioners apportioning the cost as between the two counties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 3, 1919.

HON. CLYDE L. CANFIELD, Prosecuting Attorney, Wauseon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have requested the opinion of this department upon the following:

> "The prosecuting attorney of Lucas county and myself disagree as to the time the upper county should pay its agreed share of the cost of a proposed ditch construction when the entire line of improvement is in the lower county.
>
> The facts are briefly as follows:
>
> More than a year ago a petition was presented to the commissioners of Lucas county, asking that a ditch, wholly in Lucas county, be enlarged. This ditch drains land in Fulton county. The petition was granted and the joint board met on the line of the ditch and at that meeting the commismissioners of Fulton county agreed to pay twenty per cent of the cost of construction. G. C. 6536, 6540, 6541.
>
> Said ditch has not been sold and the total cost ascertained.
>
> The prosecuting attorney of Lucas county contends that by reason of said agreement there is now due Lucas county from Fulton county the said twenty per cent of the estimated cost of constructing said ditch.
> I maintain that the ditch should be sold and the total cost of construction ascertained, after which the total sum should be certified to Fulton county and procedure had as in single county ditches, which would delay the payment until the amount was apportioned and collected. G. C. 6489, 6490."

Your communication has reference to an improvement proposed to be made under authority of sections 6536, 6540 and 6541 G. C. These sections are found in the chapter entitled "Joint County Ditches" and in their form as amended 103 O. L. 836 and 838, read in part as follows:

> Sec. 6536.—"Ditches, drains or watercourses which provide drainage, or, when constructed, will provide drainage for lands in more than one county, may be located and constructed, enlarged, cleaned, or repaired or boxed or tiled as provided in this chapter and the laws prescribed for constructing, enlarging, cleaning or repairing single county ditches, drains or water courses, * * *."
> Sec. 6540.—"When the board of county commissioners * * * cause to be constructed, enlarged, cleaned or repaired a ditch, drain or watercourse * * * which is, or may be, an outlet for a ditch, drain or watercourse, or river, creek or run, of lands of an upper county, or which by reason of the improvement thereof, will provide better drainage * * * for lands of an upper county * * * the commissioners of said upper county shall pay the commissioners of such lower county such sum as is agreed upon by a majority of the joint board of the commissioners of all counties for the use and benefit of such outlet. The commissioners of such upper county shall apportion such sum to the lands in their county, for whose benefit said ditch or improvement was or is made or constructed."
> Sec. 6541.—"Before work is begun in the construction, enlarging, cleaning, or repairing, of a ditch, drain or watercourse, or the improving of the channel or a part thereof, of a river, creek or run, in either of such counties, as provided in the next preceding section, the amount to be paid by the commissioners of the upper county to the commissioners of the lower county, for the use and benefit, or burden of such outlet, or better outlet, shall be agreed upon or be determined at a joint meeting of the commissioners of the upper and lower counties upon the line or proposed line of such ditch, drain, or watercourse, river, creek or run."

At the outset, reference is made to an opinion of this department of date August 22, 1917, (Opinions of Attorney-General for 1917, p. 1575), in the course of which attention is called to the fact that the proceedings for compelling contribution from an "upper county" where the improvement lies wholly in a "lower county" (sections 6540 et seq.) are different from those leading to the apportionment of the cost between or among counties where the improvement lies in more than one county (sections 6537 to 6539). Our present discussion concerns only the situation first stated, an improvement lying wholly within a lower county, as to the cost of which contribution is sought from an upper county. Such an improvement, by virtue of section 6536, is authorized to be made as prescribed "in this chapter," (that is, the chapter headed "Joint County Ditches,") "and the laws" authorizing single county ditches.

However, as heretofore pointed out by this department in the opinion above referred to, and in another opinion (Opinions of Attorney-General for 1917, p. 1653), the proceedings leading to the ordering of such an improvement are carried on wholly within the lower county just as in the case of the ordinary single county ditch, resort being had to certain sections (6540 to 6553) of the chapter entitled "Joint County Ditches," only by way of what may be termed supplementary proceedings for the purpose of determining the amount to be paid by the upper county, and collecting such amount. It would seem that section 6557 offers an alternative to the plan just referred to; but inasmuch as your inquiry indicates that such alternative was not resorted to, no further mention need be made of it in the present discussion.

Coming, then, to consider the proceedings relating to single county ditches (sections 6442 to 6535), we find a general plan whereby after the filing of a petition, giving of bond, serving of notices, etc., the county commissioners hold a hearing as to the necessity of the improvement; whereupon, if the commissioners find against the improvement, they dismiss the petition, while if they find for the improvement, they proceed as directed in sections 6454 and 6455; that is, they order the county surveyor to go on the line of the proposed improvement, set stakes, make an estimate of cost of construction, and prepare an apportionment schedule based on benefits to the several tracts which will be benfited. On the return of the surveyor's report, the commissioners go into the matter of the apportionment as made by the surveyor, and make such changes therein as they may deem just. (Section 6457). Provision is also made (section 6460-6462) for the consideration by the commissioners of the matter of compensation for land taken and damages that will result from the construction of the improvement. Likewise, there is provision for the filing of exceptions (section 6468), as well as for an appeal to the probate court (sections 6467-6469-6480). Upon the completion of the appeal proceedings, if they result favorably to the improvement, or, if there has been no appeal, then upon the completion of the proceedings of the commisioners relative to granting the improvement, compensation, damages, apportionment, etc., the commissioners proceed to let the contract (sections 6481-6488).

Then follows section 6489, reading as follows:

> "When the working sections of the improvement are let, and the costs and expenses of location and construction, and all compensation and damages are ascertained, the county commissioners shall meet and determine at what time and in what number of assessments they will require them to be paid, and order that such assessments be placed on the duplicate, against the lots, lands, corporate roads or railroads assessed. They shall also determine whether they will issue the bonds of the county to raise the money necessary to pay such costs and expenses, and if they so determine, the bonds may be issued for a term of years, not exceeding twenty, at a rate of interest not exceding six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. They shall cause an entry to be made upon their journal, setting forth their finding and determination under this section."

Sections 6490 to 6493 provide for collection of assessments and issuing of assessment bonds.

At this point let us leave the chapter devoted to single county ditches and return to the chapter relating to joint county ditches, of which above quoted sections 6536, 6540 and 6541 are a part.

It will be noted that said sections 6540 and 6541 contemplate an agreement between the commissioners of the two affected counties as to the share of the cost to be paid by the commissioners of the upper county to those of the lower county. On the other hand, the next section, 6542, establishes a rule as to what shall be considered a prima facie case of failure to agree; and then comes a series of statutes, 6543 to 6551 (some of which were amended 103 O. L. 838) by virtue of which the matter may be laid before the common pleas court by either of the disagreeing boards of commissioners. Of this last named series of statutes, two sections are here quoted, namely, sections 6543 and 6550, as follows:

> Section 6543.—"On failure to agree or pay, as provided in the next three preceding sections, the commissioners of any of said counties and within twenty days after such proposed joint meeting, may commence their action in the common pleas court of the county in which the greatest length of such ditch or improvement or the greatest length of the channel of a river, creek or run ordered improved is located against the commissioners so failing to agree or refusing to pay, setting forth the fact that proceedings have been begun for such improvement, and the reason why the commissioners of the upper county should pay to the commissioners of the lower county compensation for such outlet, or the improvement of such outlet, or proposed outlet, and the failure to agree or pay, as provided in such sections, and praying for the relief provided in this chapter."

Section 6550.—"The court shall order the commissioners of such upper county, to apportion and assess the amount provided in said report, together with the entire expense of the proceedings, to the land in said county, in a like ratio as the expense of constructing said ditch or ditches, or the improving of the channel of said river, creek or run or part thereof in the upper county was apportioned and assessed and cause the sums so apportioned to the respective tracts of land in the upper county to be placed on the special duplicate thereof against such lands for collection. If the proposed improvement is abandoned, the court shall order the commissioners of the county from which the proposed improvement came to pay the costs of such proceedings."

Section 6551 refers to apportionment and assessment of costs of such court proceedings, and section 6552 reads as follows:

"The treasurer of the upper county shall collect said sum as other taxes are collected, and pay it to the treasurer of said adjoining county, upon the warrant of the auditor thereof."

In choosing between the two theories which are advanced as to the time and method of payment by the upper county to the lower county, as contemplated by the statutes outlined above—one theory being that the amount is payable in full promptly after the agrement of the commissioners, and the other that the amount promptly after the agreement of the commissioners, and the other that the amount upon lands in upper county—the following considerations seem to be determinative:

(1) While section 6543 stipulates that "on failure to agree or pay," resort may be had to the courts, yet section 6550 relating to the order to be made by the court, does not provide for a summary money judgment—it states that the court shall order the commissioners of the upper county to apportion and assess the amount, etc., and cause the sums apportioned against lands in upper county to be placed on special duplicate, etc.

(2) Section 6552 provides that the treasurer of the upper county shall collect "said sum as other taxes are collected, and pay it to the treasurer of the adjoining county." It is evident that the words "said sum" refer to the amount apportioned to lands in the upper county, whether in pursuance of agreement of county commissioners or upon order of court; for the last sentence of section 6540, and the terms of section 6550 are to the effect that in any event the amount is to be apportioned to the lands in the upper county by the commissioners thereof; and in addition, a reference to the earlier forms of sections 6540 and 6552 (see 86 O. L. 123) readily shows that such is the meaning of the two words. We are therefore reverted to the method named in said section 6552 as seemingly providing the only channel through which the share of the upper county may pass to the lower county.

(3) If there is any way out of the situation arising because of the matters noted in next preceding paragraphs (1) and (2), it would have to be found in some express or clearly implied authority in the lower county to procure funds with which to make the payment in cash. Provision for such authority seems not to have been made. It is true that section 6493, appearing in chapter on single county ditches, provides for an issue of bonds by a county in anticipation of assessments; but certainly the upper county does not by virtue of said section have authority to issue bonds in anticipation of assessments which it does not retain, but which according to statute must be paid over by its treasurer to the lower county. With much more reason may it be claimed that the lower county has authority under section 6493, taken in connection with sections 6536 and 6540 et seq. to issue such bonds, since after all it is the lower county wherein the main proceedings take place and which is secured in its expenditures by an assessment lien on lands in the upper county of equal standing with the assessment lien on lands within its own boundaries, accompanied by a specific statutory direction to the treasurer of the upper county to pay over the assessment receipts.

Section 6508 provides only for bonds to cover compensation and damages—authority having been provided in section 6463 for the county to assume all or a part of the compensation and damages; while section 6505, relating to tax levy, provides that out of the receipts of such levy the county may pay that part of cost of ditch construction apportioned to the county, and shall pay any sum assessed against the county lands. So that from neither of these sources of revenue is there authority given the upper county to anticipate the collection of the landowners' share.

It is therefore to be concluded that payment is to be made to the lower county through the medium of receipts from assessments as they become due, and not in a lump sum immediately after the agreement of the commissioners.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SENATE BILL NO 175 PROVIDING FOR LEVY AND COLLECTION OF TAX ON INHERITANCES GOES INTO IMMEDIATE EFFECT WHEN IT BECOMES A LAW.

Senate bill No. 175 providing for the levy and collection of a tax on inheritances will, if it becomes a law, go into immediate effect as an entirety.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 5, 1919.

Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You have requested the opinion of this department as follows:

> Senate bill No. 175 provides for the levy and collection of a tax on inheritances and has passed both houses of the General Assembly. Upon the assumption that it will be signed by the governor the commission desires to know whether it will become effective from the date of its approval by the governor or not until ninety days thereafter .
> The commission deems it highly important that information along this line be transmitted by it to the various county officers having duties to perform in connection with the administration of the law and, if it becomes effectve upon the approval of the governor, it desires to issue instructions to county officers immediately. You are therefore requested to furnish the commission your opinion in this matter at the earliest possible moment."

Article II, section 1d of the constitution provides, in part, as follows:

> "Laws providing for tax levies, appropriations for the current expenses of the state government and state institutions, and emergency laws necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, shall go into immediate effect. * * * The laws mentioned in this section shall not be subject to the referendum."

Senate Bill No. 175 provides, as you state, for the levy and collection of a tax on inheritances. It contains no emergency clause. Section 3 of the bill, which is in the nature of a schedule, contains language intimating the understanding of the General Assembly that the bill will become effective as a law upon its approval. Such language, of course, will not supply the need of an emergency clause, if such a clause is otherwise necessary. The question remains as to whether the bill, if signed by the governor or otherwise made a law, will upon its approval or other event having the effect of making it a law go immediately into effect as a "law providing for a tax levy."

The bill need not be quoted. The characterization of it which has already been made is sufficient for the purposes of this discussion. Of course, it contains many machinery provisions providing the method of the assessment of the tax, its collection and its distribution. Some of these provisions relate to judicial procedure, some to administration. Provision is made for the fees of officers having duties to perform in connection with the assessment and collection of the tax. All the provisions of the bill, however, of whatever character, are intimately related to and necessarily concerned with the levy of the tax in the sense that they are essential to a complete and effective exercise of the taxing power of the state with respect to inheritances.

I mention this fact because in one case there is an intimation on the part of the Supreme Court that a law, one section of which provides for a tax levy, is not thereby necessarily withdrawn entirely from the operation of the ninety day referendum period, as provided by Article II, section 1c of the constitution, as a whole but that the sections other than the one specifically imposing the tax may be subject to the referendum.

State ex rel. vs. Roose, 90 O. S., 345.

Examination of the law before the court in that case shows that it was of a charcter entirely different from that under consideration here; it provided (103 O. L. 155, 863) not only for the levy and collection of a tax for the purpose of constituting the "State Highway Improvement Fund," not only for the distribution of that fund and its application in part to the improvement of inter-county highways and in part for the construction and improvement of designated main market roads; but it also contained provisions relative to the powers and duties of the state highway commissioner, governor and board of administration with respect to the construction of state highways which may have had no necessary relation to the taxation provisions of the law. The only question involved in the case was whether or not the tax should have been extended on the then current tax duplicate, so that an affirmative holding on this point did not necessitate any decision as to the effect of Article II, section 1d upon all the sections of the law. Therefore what is intimated in the syllabus and in the opinion in this case as to the severable character of a law providing for a tax levy for the purpose of the operations of the constitutional provision referred to was really dictum.

In this connection it will be observed that while Article II, section 1c reserves the right to the people to order the submission to the electors of "any law, section of any law or any item in any law appropriating money," yet section 1d withdraws from the effect of the previous section not merely the sections of a law which provide for tax levies but "laws providing for tax levies," and hence the natural inference would arise that the entire law should be withdrawn from the effect of the referendum, at least if it might partake mainly of the character of a law providing for a tax levy.

However this may be, it is at least clear that there is a wide distinction between a case like that presented in the case cited and that presented by Senate bill No. 175, in that all of the sections of the latter are germane and essential to the exercise of the taxing power as such.

It is the opinion of this department, therefore, that said Senate bill No. 175, should it become a law, will go into effect as an entirety, i. e., all of its sections will become effective at the same time.

This conclusion, however, leaves open the further question as to whether or not it is a law providing for a tax levy. We are here without precedent in this state on the precise question, which may be stated thus:

> "Are any and all laws passed in the exercise of the taxing power 'laws providing for tax levies' or does the constitution refer merely to laws levying taxes on property?"

To be sure, we have the case previously cited, which holds that a levy on the taxable property in the state is such a law as is pointed out by section 1d of Article II of the constitution; and we have, on the other hand, the case of State ex rel. vs. Milroy, 88 O. S. 301, holding that a law regulating the machinery of levying property taxes is not such a law.

The decisions themselves obviously do not touch the point. However, there is certain language in the per curiam opinion in the case last cited which may be looked to in this connection. Speaking of what was known as the "Kilpatrick Law" amending certain sections of the Smith one per cent law, so-called, the court say, at page 304:

> "The General Assembly did not, in this act, impose a tax, stating distinctly the object of the same, nor did it fix the amount or the percentage of value to be levied, nor did it designate persons or property against whom a levy was to be made. * * * The act cannot be said to be one 'providing for tax levies,' within the meaning of those words as used in section 1d of Article II of the constitution."

In using this language the court at least suggested a definition of a "law providing for a tax levy." The definition thus suggested is not limited to property taxes; so that in so far as its decision may be taken as a precedent it at least tends to establish the conclusion that any law which imposes a tax, complying with the further provision of Article XII, section 5, that:

> "every law imposing a tax, shall state, distinctly, the object of the same, to which only, it shall be applied," fixes the amount or percentage of value to be levied and designates the persons or property against whom the levy will be made, is a law "providing for tax levies." Senate bill No. 175, if it should became a law, will satisfy these requirements. It is a complete law in itself and meets every condition of the definition thus suggested.

On principle, it is clear that this conclusion must be reached. Undoubtedly the reason actuating the people in the adoption of Article II, section 1d of the constitution must have been to avoid delay in the going into effect of a measure designed to produce revenue needed for the state and its sub-divisions.

This reason applies just as forcibly to an excise or other special tax as it does to a property tax. Therefore, if there is need of construction in the application of Article II, section 1d of the constitution and it is permissible, as it would be in such event, to have regard to the mischief to be remedied as indicating that spirit of the law which is its life, such considerations would compel the conclusion that a complete inheritance tax law, like Senate bill No. 175 will be if it becomes a law, is within the operation of the section.

For these reasons, then, the commission is advised that it is the opinion of this department that Senate Bill No. 175, if it becomes a law, will go into effect as an entirety immediately upon its approval by the governor or the happening of such other event as may give it vitality as an act of legislation.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF DEED FROM STATE OF OHIO TO JONATHAN D. PHILLIPS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1919.

HON. JAMES M. COX, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—

In re J. D. Phillips Deed, Section 16, 1871.

Upon receipt of your recent communication accompanied by letter of Attorney W. B. Brattain, of Paulding, Ohio, this department examined the record of deeds in the auditor of state's office and the legislative acts under which the deed from the state to Jonathan D. Phillips was made on July 21, 1871.

This clearly discloses an error in the recitals of the deed in that the act of congress appropriating land for the support of religion and acts of the General Assembly of the state of Ohio providing for the sale of section 29 were erroneously recited as the authority for executing and delivering said deed, whereas it should have referred to and recited the act of congress relating to the appropriation for the support of schools and the act of the General Assembly of the state of Ohio providing for the sale of section 16.

Further consideration of section 8528 G. C., convinces this department that the error above referred to is such that may be corrected by a proper conveyance under that section, pertinent parts of which are:

> "When, by satisfactory evidence, it appears to the governor and attorney-general that an error has occurred in a deed executed and delivered in the name of the state * * * the governor shall correct such error by the execution of a correct and proper title deed * * * to the party entitled to it, his heirs or legal agents as the case may require."

As stated in the enclosed deed, Albert Kemerer is the present owner of said real estate by virtue of certain mesne conveyances from Jonathan D. Phillips, the original grantee, and his successors in title.

Supplementing the application of said Albert Kemerer made to the auditor of state, as more fully appears in the records of that office, this department required of and received from the present owner an abstract of the land described in the deed showing the chain of title from said original grantee to Albert Kemerer, the grantee in the enclosed deed, which abstract is also certified under the seal of the county recorder of Paulding county, Ohio, and a copy of which is also on file in the office of the auditor of state.

Consistent with the conclusion of this department that the occurrence of the error above referred to has been proven by satisfactory evidence and agreeable to the provisions of section 8528 and at the request of the auditor of state the enclosed deed has been prepared and is herewith submitted to you with the approval of this department endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF CONTRACT BETWEEN OHIO BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION AND S. Q. HENKE & SONS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF DINING ROOM ADDITION, AT OHIO HOSPITAL FOR EPILEPTICS, GALLIPOLIS, OHIO—SECTION 2318 G. C. IN REGARD TO PUBLICATION OF NOTICE FOR PROPOSALS NOT COMPLIED WITH.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1919.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgement is made of your letters of June 4 and 5, submitting to me for approval, as per section 2319 G. C. (107 O. L. 455), a contract between your board and S. Q. Henke & Sons, Gallipolis, O. Said contract relates to the construction and completion of a dining room addition to West Hall, at the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics, Gallipolis, O. You have also submitted the bond covering said contract.

I find myself unable to approve the contract in question, because it does not appear, from the data furnished me, that compliance with section 2318 G. C. was had. Said section refers to publication of notice of the time and place when and where proposals for the improvement will be received, and says (107 O. L. 454):

> "The notice shall be published once each week for four consecutive weeks, the last publication to be at least eight days next preceding the day for opening the bids, in such newspaper or newspapers, and in such form and with such phraseology as the state building commission shall order. Copies of the plans, details, bills of material and specifications shall be open to public inspection at all business hours between the day of the first publication and the day for opening the bids, at the office of the auditor of state, and such other place or places as may be designated in such notice."

The state building commission designated the following newspapers in which the required notice was to be published: Ohio State Journal, Columbus; Cincinnati Enquirer, Cincinnati, and the Gallipolis Bulletin, Gallipolis. As to the first two papers named, to wit, the Journal and Enquirer, the requirements of section 2318 G. C. seem to have been met, said notice having been published therein once each week for four consecutive weeks, the last publication being at least eight days next preceding the day for opening the bids.

This cannot be said, however, as to the publication in the Gallipolis Bulletin. The proof of publication as to the notice in this paper shows that said notice "was published in said newspaper weekly for four consecutive weeks, beginning on the 4th day of May, A. D. 1919." If the first publication was not until May 4, 1919, the last publication (assuming that publication was had once each week for four consecutive weeks, as section 2318 G. C. requires) was not until May 25, which day was not "at least eight days next preceding the day for opening the bids." The bids were opened on the date mentioned in the notice, to wit, May 26, 1919.

While it is not necessary, under section 2318 G. C., that the state building commission designate more than one paper for the publication of the notice, yet the commission may, in its discretion, do so; and when more than one paper is designated, the publication in each and all of the papers so designated must be in accordance with the statute just mentioned.

Being of the opinion that the defect just referred to is vital to the validity of the contract, I cannot approve the same.

I return, herewith enclosed, all papers submitted to me in connection with said contract.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISTRICT HOSPITAL FOR TUBERCULOSIS—QUALIFICATIONS OF SUPERINTENDENT—INTERPRETATION OF "SUITABLE PERSON MEDICAL SUPERINTENDENT" IN SECTION 3153 G. C.

The provision of section 3153 G. C. (107 O. L. 498) that the board of trustees of a district hospital for tuberculosis shall appoint a "suitable person medical superintendent," requires that a person be appointed who possesses the qualifications of a person authorized to practice medicine in the state, and who has had experience with tuberculosis.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1919.

HON. WALTER S. RUFF, Prosecuting Attorney, Canton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter requesting my opinion as to the qualifications of a medical superintendent of a district hospital for tuberculosis, was duly received.

The appointment of a medical superintendent of a district hospital for tuberculosis, is provided for by section 3153 G. C. (107 O. L. 498), which reads as follows:

> "They (board of trustees) shall appoint a suitable person medical superintendent of the hospital who shall not be removed except for cause, and, upon the recommendation of the superintendent, such nurses and other employes as may be necessary for the proper conduct of the hospital. * * * Subject to the rules and regulations prescribed by the board of trustees, the superintendent shall have entire charge and control of the hospital. * *"

Considering the statute in its entirety, and in connection with all the statutes on the subject of tuberculosis, I am of the opinion, that the legislative intent is, that the medical superintendent must possess the qualifications of a person authorized to practice medicine in the state, and who has had experience with tuberculosis.

This conclusion is strongly evidenced not only by the fact that the person to be appointed must be a suitable person who shall have entire charge and control of the hospital, etc., but also because the appointing power of the board of trustees is limited to the appointment of, first, a medical superintendent, second, such nurses, and third, such other employes, as may be necessary for the proper conduct of the hospital. Unless the person appointed medical superintendent is a person possessing the qualifications of a person authorized to practice medicine under the laws of the state, and who has had experience with tuberculosis, it would follow that the hospital might in some instances be in charge of persons having no knowledge whatever of medicine or tuberculosis, thus rendering ineffective the very object and purpose for which these hospitals are established. A construction which would sanction such a condition of affairs would, in my opinion, be unreasonable and not within the intent of the general assembly, which undoubtedly had in mind the accomplishment of the most beneficent results possible, and should not be tolerated, in the absence of a clear statutory provision to the contrary.

As before indicated, while the language used by the legislature may not be particularly choice or clear, yet considering the section as a whole, and the entire scheme and object in view in establishing and maintaining a district hospital for the care and treatment of persons suffering from tuberculosis, I am of the opinion that section 3153 G. C. (107 O. L. 498) requires that the board of trustees shall appoint as medical superintendent a person who possesses the qualifications of a person authorized to practice medicine under the laws of Ohio, and who has had experience with tuberculosis.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

SECURITIES—EXAMINATION UNDER OATH—APPLICABLE TO VIOLATORS OF CHATTEL LOAN LAWS NOT LICENSED.

The provision of section 6346-4 G. C. relative to examination under oath by the commissioner of securities and his deputy and examiners is not limited to cases involving licensees, but is equally applicable to violators of the chattel loan laws who are not licensed thereunder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1919.

Department of Securities, Chattel Loan Bureau, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of April 10, 1919, you submitted for my written opinion the following inquiry:

> "The Chattel Loan Bureau of the Department of Securities, has, in the past, often found it difficult to obtain evidence which would be satisfactory to a magistrate, against a violator of the Lloyd act (sections 6346-1 to 6346-10 G. C.) when such suspected violator was not a licensee under the bureau, for the reason that we did not think said act granted the Commissioner of Securities or the examiners any right or power to examine the books, papers, etc., of non-licensees or to issue subpoenas and enforce testimony.
> It has recently been suggested that the last four words of section 6346-4 do give us authority to subpoena witnesses and possibly to demand free access to books, papers and accounts.
> Will you greatly favor us by rendering your opinion as to our rights and powers under section 6346-4, as against non-licensees of this department, whom we may have good reason to believe to be violators of other sections of this act?"

You further advise me in a personal interview that you are only concerned with the application of the provision of the section relative to examination under oath, in respect to alleged violators other than licensees, and not with respect to procedural questions in the carrying of the provision into operation.

The section to which you refer is as follows:

> "The commissioner of securities shall, either personally, or by such person or persons as he may appoint for the purpose at least once a year, and oftener, if he deems it advisable, investigate the business and affairs of every licensee, and for that purpose shall have free access to the vaults, books and papers thereof, and other sources of information with regard to the business of such licensee and whether it has been transacted in accordance with this act. Said commissioner of securities and his deputy and every examiner appointed by him, shall have authority to examine, under oath or affirmation, any person whose testimony may relate to the business of any such licensee or alleged violator herein."

It is provided in section 6346-1 of the act that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, etc., to engage or continue in the business of making loans as therein stipulated at a charge or rate of interest in excess of 8 per cent. per annum, including all charges, without having obtained a license so to do from the commissioner of securities and otherwise complying with the provisions of the act. It is provided in section 6346-8:

> "Any person, firm, partnership, corporation or association, and any agent, officer or employe thereof, violating any provision of this act, shall for the first offense be fined," etc.

Section 6346-9 provides that the commissioner of securities shall enforce the provisions of the act and make all reasonable efforts to discover alleged violators, etc.

The particular language of section 6346-4 to which you call attention is as follows:

> "Said commissioner of securities and his deputy and every examiner appointed by him, shall have authority to examine, under oath or affirmation, any person whose testimony may relate to the business of any such licensee or alleged violator herein."

Sufficient provisions of the act have been noted to show that the commissioner is charged not only with administering the act with respect to licensees, but also with enforcing its provisions with respect to those engaged in making loans of the character cognizable by the act, at a charge or rate of interest in excess of 8 per cent. per annum without being licensed, and shall make all reasonable effort to discover alleged violators.

I construe the term "violator" as used in this act to comprehend both licensees and nonlicensees engaging in the chattel loan business without observing the requirements of the law, and therefore that the provision for examination under oath or affirmation may be invoked as well in the case of an alleged violator who is not licensed as in the case of a licensee alleged to be violating the law.

This constitutes a determination of your question as limited in your personal interview, and I have confined my consideration accordingly.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General

COUNTY SURVEYOR—COMPENSATION OF ASSISTANTS AND EMPLOYEES—HOW DETERMINED—SECTIONS 2787 AND 2788 G. C. GOVERN—SERVICES RENDERED AT DIRECTION OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES CONSTITUTE OFFICIAL DUTIES OF SURVEYOR'S ASSISTANTS—AN EXCEPTION IN SECTION 3298-15k G. C.

The method of providing compensation for assistants and employes in the office of the county surveyor is governed by sections 2787 and 2788 G. C., which sections direct that the county commissioners shall fix an aggregate compensation to be expended for such purpose during the year and further that if an additional allowance is found to be necessary, the same may be granted by the court of common pleas upon proper application therefor; the compensation so authorized to be paid shall be drawn from the general fund of the county.

The services rendered by assistants or employes of the county surveyor in township road improvements at the direction of the township trustees constitute part of the official duties of the surveyor and compensation for such service is governed by the aforesaid statutes subject to the exception provided in section 3298-15k G. C., which authorizes payment of compensation of an inspector on a township road to be paid out of funds available for the construction of the improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1919.

HON. HARRY S. CORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Ottawa, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication requesting my opinion as follows:

"I have request from the county surveyor in his letter which I am inclosing, with reference to the payment of his assistants in office which from an exhibit shows the appointment of an assistant per diem at $6.00, while working at county work, under section 2787. The county commissioners have not allowed sufficient money to pay the necessary help for the office and the fund will soon become exhausted if the surveyor is required by the township trustees to perform the duties imposed on him by order of the trustees in road improvements, and the work cannot be charged entirely to the improvement and upon collection returned to the salary fund or paid directly to the assistant personally in charge of the improvement.

I have advised the surveyor, Mr. Ford, that all salaries paid for assistants from his office under the provisions of the law must be paid from that fund set aside by the commissioners or appropriated by the court and set aside for that fund, and that the work is chargeable to the improvement and that the return of the collection be to the county treasurer."

The surveyor's letter accompanying your communication reads as follows:

"My regularly appointed engineers are certified on the per diem basis.

The appropriation of the county commissioners is not sufficient for us to handle the work required of us by the township trustees. I would like to know if the engineers thus employed on township work could be paid by townships, requiring their services on road work directly, or whether their services must be paid out of the appropriation and the county reimbursed by the township."

The matter of providing funds for compensation of assistants and employes of the county surveyor is governed by section 2787 as found in the enactment of 1917 (107 O. L. 79), which section is as follows:

> "On or before the first Monday of June of each year, the county surveyor shall file with the commissioners of such county a statement of the number of all necessary assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or employes in his office for the year beginning on the first Monday of September next succeeding and their aggregate compensation. The county commissioners shall examine such statement and, after making such alterations therein as are just and reasonable, fix an aggregate compensation to be expended therefor for such year. Provided, however, that if at any time any county surveyor requires an additional allowance in order to carry on the business of his office, such county surveyor may make application to a judge of the court of common pleas of the county wherein such county surveyor was elected; and thereupon such judge shall hear said application, and if upon hearing the same said judge shall find that such necessity exists he may allow such a sum of money as he deems necessary to pay the salaries of such assistants, deputies, draughtsmen, inspectors, clerks or other employes as may be required. Notice in writing of such application and the time fixed by such judge for the hearing thereof shall be served by the county surveyor five days before said hearing upon the board of county commissioners of such county; and said board shall have the right to appear at such hearing and be heard upon said application and evidence may be offered both by the county surveyor and the county commissioners."

It is further to be noted that various provisions of the highway law make it the duty of the county surveyor in his official capacity, and as a part of the functions of his office to perform various services in relation to the establishment and improvement of township highways, so that such services so performed by the county surveyor or by his assistants, engineers, etc., are services, the compensation for which is to be made in pursuance of said section 2787 G. C. supra.

Without attempting an exhaustive enumeration of sections conferring duties upon the county surveyor in reference to township road improvements, I might call attention to section 3298-6 authorizing the trustees to order the county surveyor to make surveys, plans, specifications, etc.

Section 3298-15k provides that the road improvements undertaken by the township trustees shall be done under the general supervision and direction of the county surveyor, etc.

Also, similar provisions are made in section 3298-31 and various other sections.

Your inquiry raises the question as to authority for charging to the township the amount of compensation for assistants and engineers of the county surveyor's force when working upon township roads, which inquiry is substantially answered by the provisions of section 2787 and 2788 G. C. which provides for the method of fixing the compensation, and further that > "after being so fixed, such compensation shall be paid to such persons in monthly installments from the general fund of the county upon the warrant of the county auditor."

One exception to this provision is found, however, in section 3298-15k (107 O. L. 82) which provides:

> "The work shall be done under the general supervision and direction of the county surveyor and he may appoint some competent person or persons to act as inspector during the construction of such improvement. The person so appointed as inspector shall receive for each day actually employed at such work a sum not to exceed four dollars to be fixed by the county surveyor and to be paid out of any fund available for the construction of the improvement upon the order of the township trustees with the approval of the county surveyor."

With this one exception, I find that the compensation of engineers and other assistants of the surveyor for services upon township improvements is payable from the general fund of the county, and there is no provision for charging the same either to the township or against the special fund available for the improvement.

Therefore, since the services rendered by the surveyor's office in connection with improvements made under the direction of township trustees, constitute part of the official duties of the surveyor, and are chargeable against the allowance which may be provided in pursuance of section 2787 G. C., I advise that if the amount fixed and allowed by the county commissioners is found insufficient, the proper course is by way of an application to the common pleas judge for such additional allowance as the duties of the office make necessary.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 9, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your letter, accompanied by copies of a communication from the village clerk of Geneva, Ohio, and of village resolutions No. 426 and No. 427. It is noted that you request the opinion of this department upon the three questions as stated in your letter.

Question No. 1 is as follows:

"Even though there is no ordinance or resolution fixing compensation for the marshal other than his fees of office, and providing he has received no other compensation than his fees of office, can resolution granting regular compensation of $20.00 per month become legally operative in the midst of the term for which the marshal was elected, this being in addition to the fees of office?"

Section 4219 and 4387 G. C. are pertinent and in part are:

Sec. 4219.—"Council shall fix the compensation * * * of all officers * * * in the village government, except as otherwise provided by law. * * * The compensation so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which any officer * * * may have been elected or appointed."

Sec. 4387.—"He (the marshal) * * * shall receive the same fees as sheriffs and constables in similar cases, * * * and such additional compensation as the council prescribes."

It is to be noted that section 4387 G. C. vests in the city council the power to fix the compensation of the marshal, in addition to the fees he shall receive for services similar to those of sheriffs and constables, and that the inhibition contained in section 4219 is against increasing or diminishing the compensation of any officer "so fixed" during the term for which he was elected or appointed.

In State ex rel. vs. Madigan, 16 O. C. C. (n. s.) 202, a similar question was involved. The Madigan case arose under section 126 of the then Code, which, like section 4219, provided that except as otherwise provided therein, council shall fix the salaries of all officers and employes and that such salary so fixed should not be increased or diminished during the term for which such officers were elected or appointed, and it was held in that case that until council had fixed the salary, there was no inhibition preventing the council from fixing such salary during the term of an officer. This case is directly in point.

To the same effect was the holding in the case of State ex rel. vs. Carlisle, 16 O. D. N. P., 263, in the opinion of which the court asked and answered this question:

"Would it be constitutional for an incumbent in office, for which no salary or compensation was provided, when his term began, to take the salary enacted for such office after the beginning of his term, but before it ended?"

Here, prior to the enactment of resolution 427, there had been no salary or additional compensation provided for the marshal.

In considering the question which he had asked, Judge Evans quotes with approval Rucker vs. Supervisors, 7 W .Va., 661:

"That in order that a constitutional or statutory provision forbidding the increase or diminution of an officer's compensation should apply to a particular officer's compensation, it is necessary that such compensation should have been definitely fixed before the passage of the statute purporting to make the change."

After citing similar holdings, in other states, Judge Evans also says:

"The reason for the above holding is, that if there is no salary definitely fixed, or if no salary whatever has theretofore been provided, then there is no salary to increase or diminish by an act providing for a salary during an incumbency."

And, consistent with those principles, the court in the Carlisle case held that where a status, providing compensation for county commissioners, had been held invalid so that during the term of the then commissioners of Franklin county there had been no valid provision for compensation, and during their term later valid legislation provided such compensation, which was an increase over the former amount thereof, such commissioners were entitled to the compensation fixed by such later legislation during their term of office. Without quoting additioal authorities, it is sufficient to state that these cases correctly state the law of Ohio on this subject.

This department is not unmindful of the holding in Griffith vs. Newark, 6 O. N. P., 521, where it was held that the rate which the marshal of Newark could charge for feeding prisoners could not be changed during his term. This case, however, arose under old section 1717 R. S., which was much broader in its terms and prohibited changing the salary, compensation or "the emoluments" of an office, and is not applicable to the present statute.

For the foregoing reasons it is concluded that the act of the village council, as stated in your question, may become legally operative during the term of the marshal.

Your second question is:

> "Are the positions of fire chief and street commissioner compatible?"

A general rule as to the incompatibility of officers may be quoted from L. R. A., 1917-a, page 216, as follows:

> "The settled rule of common law prohibits a public officer from holding two incompatible offices at one time. This rule has never been questioned and its correctness and propriety are so well established as to be assumed, without discussion, in practically every case in which the matter of common law incompatibility arises."

And again, on the same page:

> "When it comes to stating what constitutes incompatibility, the courts invariably evade the formulation of a general definition and content themselves with a discussion of specific cases and the particular facts which, in separate instances, have been looked upon as creating incompatibility."

The general rule in Ohio is stated in State vs. Gebert, 12 O. C. C. (n. s.) 274, 21 O. C. D., 355, to be:

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to, or in any way a check upon, the other."

The holding in other cases are to the effect that it must be physically possible for the incumbent to discharge the compatible duties.

The special facts as to the extent and variety of the duties attached to these two offices in this particular village are not stated in your letter. The village council, presumably better acquainted with such duties, by these ordinances indicate their opinion that it is physically possible for one person to discharge the duties of both. For present purposes such opinion is assumed to be correct, and in the absence of such special facts, the question of such possibility is not here considered.

So it appears that the solution of this question lies in a consideration of the duties and functions of these two officers.

As to the fire chief, the laws authorizing the establishment of village fire departments and defining the duties of the marshal, are found in sections 4393, 4389 and 4390, which are found in Chapter 9, entitled "Public Safety." Sections 4393 and 4389 provide:

> Sec. 4393.—"The council may establish all necessary regulations to guard against the occurrence of fires, protect the property and lives of the citizens against damage and accidents resulting therefrom and for such purposes may establish and maintain a fire department * * * establish the hours of labor of the members of its fire department * * * and provide such by-laws and regulations for the government as is deemed necessary and proper."
> Sec. 4389.—"In each village having or hereafter establishing a fire department, the head thereof shall be a fire chief, appointed by the mayor for a term of two years, and shall be an elector of the corporation."

It is to be observed that these sections relate to the safety and protection of the property and persons of the inhabitants of the corporation with reference to fires.

As to the powers and duties of the village street commissioner, sections 4363 and 4364 are pertinent. It may also be noted that these sections are found in the chapter entitled "public service," being Chapter 8, and should be read in connection with section 3714 G. C., which provides that municipal corporations "shall have special power to regulate the use of the streets, to be exercised in the manner provided by law." In part section 4363 provides:

> "The street commissioner shall be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by council for a term of one year. * * * He shall be an elector of the corporation. * * * In any village the marshal shall be eligible to appointment as street commissioner."

Section 4364, defining the duties of the street commissioner, provides:

> "Under the direction of council, the street commissioner * * * shall supervise the improvement and repairs of streets, avenues, alleys, * * *. Such commissioner * * * shall also supervise the lighting * * * of all public places, and shall perform such other duties consistent with the nature of his office as council may require."

It is to be observed that these sections relate to the use, control and care of municipal property as distinguished from the safety of persons and property of its inhabitants, and that after committing the things therein enumerated to the street commissioner's direction, section 4364 makes provision for council requiring him to perform "such other duties consistent with the nature of his office," and there being ample specific authority for establishment and maintenance of fire prevention agencies in a separate department in sections 4393, 4389 and 4390, it is concluded that the term "other duties" by the rule of ejusdem generis relate to other duties of a like character, that is, those relating to public streets and alleys, from which it follows that the duties of the chief of fire department would not be consistent with the office of street commissioner in the sense that council could direct the street commissioner as such to discharge those duties.

It is noted that section 4389 does not define the duties of the fire chief nor are his duties directly defined by other sections.

Section 4393, supra, vests the power in the council to establish a fire department, fix the hours of labor and provide for its government by proper regulations, and the council is thus placed in control of the fire chief.

Consideration of the express purposes for which a fire department may be established and maintained as distinguished from the object and purpose of creating a street commissioner, leads to the opinion that neither of these offices are in any way subordinate to or a check upon the other, and tested by the above cited Ohio rule there is no incompatibility between the two offices and the answer to your second question is in the affirmative.

Your third question is:

> "Since the fire chief was appointed for two years, beginning with 1918, can he legally receive the additional compensation of $15.00 or $20.00 per month as street commissioner?"

Section 4219, supra, contains an inhibition against increasing or diminishing an officer's compensation as fixed by council during the term for which he is appointed or elected.

The conclusion reached as to your second question, viz., that the positions of fire chief and street commissioner in villages are not incompatible, necessarily results in an affirmative answer to this last question, especially as it is to be noted that the additional compensation therein referred to is not paid to the fire chief as such, but is paid by reason of his appointment to another independent compatible office. However, if the facts in this case should be that an ordinance was passed consolidating the two positions, it may be well to call attention to the fact that in State vs. Coughlan, 18 O. D., N. P., 289, and in other cases in Ohio, it has been held that such inhibition has no application where new duties, not germane to an office, are created and it is there held that such compensation may be thus provided for.

Without quoting at length from this case, it is sufficient to quote in part from the first syllabus:

> "Hence, the duties of a member of either board of equalization, not being part of the duties of a county commissioner, as such, and there being no rule of law prohibiting by legislative action extra compensation for additional services performed by an officer in some other capacity, the county is not entitled to recover compensation paid to a county commissioner for services rendered as a member of the county board of equalization."

In State vs. Lewis, 10 O. D., 537, the second branch of the syllabus is:

> "The provisions of section 20, article 2, of the constitution, that the salary of a county official cannot be increased during his term of office, apply only to compensation for duties germane to his office or incidental or collateral thereto, and do not apply to services rendered in an independent employment to which he is appointed by an act of the state legislature."

To the same effect are other decisions of this state, and also that of United States vs. Sounders, 120 U. S., 126. It is noted that these decisions arise under section 20, article 2 of the constitution, but that section, so far as the questions involved are concerned, by analogy has the same force and effect as section 4219 G. C.

By force of the conclusion reached as to your second question, it is concluded that the duties of street commissioner are not germane to the office of fire chief, and, consistent with the authorities above cited, you are advised that the additional compensation referred to in your letter is not within the inhibitions of section 4219 G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—CITY DEPOSITORY—ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING SAME AND CONTRACT GIVEN AS TO WHETHER DEPOSITORY OBLIGED TO ACCEPT FOREIGN CHECKS AS CASH ON WHICH INTEREST COMPUTED.

The obligation of a city depository is determined by the provisions of the ordinance establishing the depository and the contracts actually entered into. Whether or not the depository is obliged to accept foreign checks as cash on which interest is to be computed depends upon such provisions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1919.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of recent date enclosing copy of a letter from the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company of Cincinnati with reference to an opinion of the Attorney-General found in Opinions of the Attorney-General for 1916, Volume 1, page 666. In that opinion it was held, in the language of the head-note, that:

> "When deposits in the form of checks are made by the county treasurer in a depository duly designated by the county commissioners under authority of section 2715 et seq. G. C., and in compliance with the requirements of said sections, and the account of said county treasurer is credited by said depository with such deposits, the same go to make up daily balances on the respective days on which said deposits are made and the average of such daily balances, as shown by the statement which the depository bank is required to furnish the county treasurer on the first day of each month, by provision of section 2737, G. C., determines the basis for the computation of interest provided for in said section."

The vice-president of the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company submits that this ruling is unfair and that interest ought not to be charged on daily balances until the moneys are actually in the hands of the depository bank. His question relates to the law relative to city depositories, whereas the ruling of the Attorney-General related to county depositories. Moreover, the vice-president inquires:

> "If the law is drawn in such a way that interest starts on the day that the deposit is made and entered in the pass book, * * * would there be any objection if depository banks accept the out-of-town checks for collection only and credit the same when proceeds are received?"

Your question requires consideration of the city depository act with a view to determining whether or not the ruling of the Attorney-General previously referred to applies to that act as well as to a county depository law. It may be said, however, that even under the county depository law the specific question of the vice-president may be answered in the language of the opinion referred to, as follows: (p. 668)

> "It must be conceded, however, that a lawfully designated depository of county funds is not charged by any provision of the statute with the duty of making such collections, and could not be required to accept checks from the county treasurer and credit his account with a sum equal to their aggregate amount in the absence of a provision to that effect in the contract between the county commissioners and the depository. In other words, in the absence of such a provision in the contract, the depository might insist on the county treasurer making cash deposits rather than deposits in the form of checks, and this would place the burden of collecting the same on the county treasurer, and would deprive the county of the interest on the sum represented by said checks during the time the same are being collected.
> It has been the practice, however, in so far as county depositories are concerned, for the depository bank to make such collections and credit the county treasurer with the amount represented by checks deposited, on the day on which such deposits are made. It seems to me, in view of this practice, that the bank in question should have taken this situation into consideration at the time of bidding for the county funds and should have governed its bid accordingly. In this way any embarrassment on account of loss to the bank in the respect above mentioned would be avoided.
> The plan suggested by Mr. Firestone, i. e., to withhold crediting the county treasurer with a deposit of checks until the same are collected, is unauthorized, and the danger of the abuse of such an arrangement can readily be seen."

These observations in the body of the opinion, together with the main holding itself as abstracted in the head-note above quoted, furnish a complete answer to the question of The Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company, if applicable as well to the city depository law as to the county depository law. That question remains to be decided.

Sections 4295 and 4296 of the General Code govern this subject-matter as to cities. They provide in part as follows:

> "Sec. 4295.—The council may provide by ordinance for the deposit of all public moneys coming into the hands of the treasurer, in such bank or banks, * * * as offer, at competitive bidding, the highest rate of interest and give a good and sufficient bond * * * or secure said moneys by a deposit of bonds * * *."

"Sec. 4296.—In such ordinance the council may determine the method by which such bids shall be received, the authority which shall receive them, and which shall determine the sufficiency of the security offered, the time for the contracts for which deposits of public money may be made, and all details for carrying into effect the authority here given. Proceedings in connection with such competitive bidding and the deposit of money shall be conducted in such manner as to insure full publicity, and shall be open at all times to the inspection of any citizen. As to any deposits made under authority of an ordinance of the council, pursuant hereof, if the treasurer has exercised due care, neither he nor his bondsmen shall be liable for any loss occasioned thereby."

These sections differ from the county law in the following particulars, as evidenced by quotations from the latter law:

"Sec. 2715.—The commissioners in each county shall designate in the manner hereinafter provided a bank or banks or trust companies, situated in the county and duly incorporated under the laws of this state, or organized under the laws of the United States, as inactive depositaries, and one or more of such banks or trust companies located in the county seat as active depositaries of the money of the county. * * *"

"Sec. 2716.—When the commissioners of a county provide such depositary or depositaries, they shall publish for two consecutive weeks in two newspapers of opposite politics and of general circulation in the county a notice which shall invite sealed proposals from all banks or trust companies within the provisions of the next two preceding sections, which proposals shall stipulate the rate of interest, not less than two per cent per annum on the average daily balance, on inactive deposits, and not less than one per cent per annum on the average daily balance on active deposits, that will be paid for the use of the money of the county, as herein provided. * * *"

"Sec. 2736. Upon the receipt by the county treasurer of a written notice from the commissioners that a depositary, or depositaries, have been selected in pursuance of law, and naming the bank or trust companies so selected, such treasurer shall deposit in such bank or banks or trust companies as directed by the commissioners, and designated as inactive depositaries to the credit of the county all money in his possession, except such amount as is necessary to meet current demands, which shall be deposited by such treasurer in the active depositary or depositaries. * * *"

"Sec. 2737. All money deposited with any depositary shall bear interest at the rate specified in the proposal on which the award thereof was made, computed on daily balances, and on the first day of each calendar month, or at any time such account is closed, such interest shall be placed to the credit of the county, and the depositary shall notify the auditor and treasurer, each separately, in writing of the amount thereof before noon of the next business day."

It will be observed that both acts speak of the deposit of "moneys" in the possession of the respective treasurers. They are therefore alike in this particular. They differ in that the nature of the undertaking of the depository under the county law is completely regulated by law; whereas under the city law the council by its ordinance is to determine in detail the terms of such undertaking. For example, nothing is said in the city law as to the manner of the computation of interest, nor is there anything to prevent a special undertaking for special deposits of foreign checks to be received for collection only. All such matters may be fully regulated by the ordinance of council.

From the foregoing it follows that the previous opinion of the Attorney-General is not necessarily applicable to a city depository, and in fact is only applicable to such depository if the provisions of the ordinance under which bids are received and the contract entered into in accordance therewith are substantially similar to those of the county law as construed by my predecessor.

Upon the merits of the question submitted by the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company it will be impossible to pass without the other documents referred to herein.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—CONSTRUCTION OF DITCH WITHIN CORPORATE LIMITS—LAWS WHICH GOVERN—ASSESSMENTS—HOW MADE.

1. A municipality has power by virtue of sections 3647, 3677, 3784 and 3939 G. C. to provide for the construction of a ditch within its municipal limits, upon the plan of its paying the entire cost of the improvement without any assessment against benefited lands.

2. Section 3812 permits of assessment against benefited lands, subject to constitutional and statutory limitations, of the cost of the improvement of a street or other public place as specified in said section, by the construction of a ditch, whether such ditch be within the limits of the street or public place, or on land specially appropriated for the construction of the ditch.

3. Former opinions of Attorney-General referred to in connection with section 6494 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your bureau has submitted for opinion the following inquiries:

"1. What is the proper procedure for a municipal corporation to pursue in constructing a ditch across and through private property?

"2. Does section 3812 of the General Code empower municipal corporations to assess property for the construction of a ditch,

(1) On a public highway,

(2) Across private property?"

With your communication you transmit a letter from Mr. Roland A. Baskin, solicitor for the village of Brook Park, Ohio, in which he states that the inquiries are being made in connection with the desire of the council of that village to construct a ditch across and through private property to drain a certain highway and lowlands lying contiguous thereto. Mr. Baskin states that the impression has prevailed among members of the village council that where the limits of a village are co-extensive with those of a township, the procedure applicable to township ditches may be followed within the village. This question was dealt with in an opinion of this department of date July 11, 1913, Annual Reports of Attorney General, 1913, Vol. 2, page 1650, from which the following is quoted:

> "I, therefore, conclude that when the corporate limits become identical with those of a township, the corporation is confined to its municipal powers in ditch procedure and that individuals residing therein have no powers under the statutes providing for procedure in townships."

Coming, then, to the matter of municipal procedure as to the construction of a ditch across and through private property:

It has been held in previous opinions of this department that municipal corporations are authorized under section 6494 G. C., appearing in the chapter relating to single county ditches, to apply to the county commissioners for the construction of a ditch within the corporate limits. See Opinion of Attorney-General dated December 19, 1912, Reports of Attorney-General for 1913, Vol. 2, page 1085; and see also, opinion of July 11, 1913, supra. However, it should be stated as a matter of information that a bill is now pending in the General Assembly (amended S. B. No. 100), providing for the revision and codification of the ditch laws, and among other things includes the proposed repeal of said section 6494.

A procedure available to a municipality upon the plan of its paying the whole cost of the improvement, without any assessment against benefited lands, may be found by reference to sections 3647, 3677, 3784 and 3939 G. C. The first of these sections is to the effect that the municipality shall have power, among other things, "To open, construct and keep in repair * * * drains and ditches." Section 3677 confers on municipalities special power to appropriate real estate within their corporate limits "For sewers, drains, ditches. * * *" Section 3784 authorizes municipal corporations to levy and collect taxes "for the purposes of paying the expenses of the corporation, constructing improvements authorized, and exercising the general and special powers conferred by law." Section 3939 (Longworth act) provides, among other things, that municipalities may issue bonds "For constructing sewers * * * drains and ditches."

These several sections provide ample power for appropriating the real estate, and procuring the funds necessary for the improvement. The procedure in connection with appropriation of the property and issuing of bonds for such purpose is set forth in the sections immediately following sections 3677 and 3939 respectively. Mr. Baskin refers to section 3888, but an examination of that section shows that it has reference to joint sewer construction by two or more municipalities.

The second inquiry is as to whether section 3812 authorizes municipal corporations to assess property for the construction of a ditch (a) on a public highway, and (b) across private property; and in this connection Mr. Baskin makes the following statement:

> "I am in doubt as to the power of municipal corporations to assess property for the construction of a ditch even where the same is located in a public highway, as section 3812 of the General Code, providing for assessments, does not specifically include ditches, as do sections 3647, 3677 and 3939. Said section 3812 also includes only improvements in or along public streets, etc., and not improvements constructed through private property."

Said section 3812, as amended 107 O. L., 629, reads in part as follows:

"Each municipal corporation shall have special power to levy and collect special assessments, to be exercised in the manner provided by law. The council of any municipal corporation may assess upon the abutting, adjacent and contiguous or other specially benefited lots or lands in the corporation, any part of the entire cost and expense connected with the improvement of any street, alley * * * by grading, draining * * * constructing sidewalks, * * * sewers, drains, water courses * * *"

It thus appears that while, as suggested by Mr. Baskin, said section does not contain the word "ditch" as do the other specified sections of the Municipal Code, yet it does permit assessment for expense incurred in improving a street or other public place by "draining" and by "constructing sewers, drains, water courses." Is this difference in the wording of the statutes to be taken as indicating a legislative intent that section 3812 should not permit of assessment by municipalities for ditch construction?

Webster's Dictionary defines "drain" as

"That by means of which anything is drained; a channel; a trench; a watercourse; a sewer; a sink."

In 14 Cyc. 1023, the following appears as a definition:

"A drain is an artificial channel or trench through which water or sewage is caused to flow from one point to another; a ditch; or as sometimes defined by statute, an open ditch."

On the other hand, in 14 Cyc. 552, a ditch is defined as follows:

"A drain; a hollow space in the ground, natural or artificial, where water is collected or passes off."

In section 6442 G. C. relating to single county ditches, the following is found:

"The word 'ditch' as used in this chapter shall be held to include a drain or water course."

It would therefore appear that the intent of the legislature in using the expression "sewers, drains and ditches" in certain sections of the Municipal Code, and the expression "by draining and constructing sewers, drains and water courses" in said section 3812, was in both instances to confer general powers of drainage improvement, rather than to limit the municipality to particular types of improvement. In any event, it is quite clear that the words "ditch" and "drain" are practically synonymous, and that if there be any difference between them, the word "drain" is the broader term and includes "ditch." It is therefore concluded that section 3812 authorizes assessment for a ditch constructed on a public highway.

The remaining inquiry, * * * whether section 3812 permits of assessments against benefited property for construction of a ditch on private property—would, if answered in terms, probably have to be answered in the negative, since the municipality has no right to construct an improvement through private property. (See Harbeck vs. Connelly, 11 O. S., 227; Baker vs. Norwood, 22 O. C. C. 173). However, it is assumed that the inquiry has relation to the point whether there is any way open to the municipality of first securing title to the land necessary for a ditch and then assessing the cost of construction against benefited lands. From that standpoint it may be said that it is well understood that in practice the work of improving a street or public place cannot always be confined to the limits of the street or public place itself. Hence, we find in section 3677 power conferred on municipalities to appropriate real estate "for opening, widening, straightening, changing the grade of and extending streets * * * and for obtaining material for the improvement of streets and other public places;" and we also find in the same section like power to appropriate "for sewers, drains, ditches." Assuredly, the conferring of this latter power would be a vain thing had it not been contemplated that sewers, etc., would in some instances extend beyond street limits. True enough, as Mr. Baskin suggests, section 3812 relates to the improvement of streets or public places; but the theory of assessments is that in improving the street or public place, benefit will result to adjoining lands. It is not perceived how the improvement of a street by the construction of a ditch is any different in principle, so far as assessments are concerned, than improvement by paving, constructing sidewalks, sewers, etc. However, it has been held that in calculating for assessment purposes the cost of such improvements, the compensation and damages incurred by reason of an appropriation are not to be included. In the case of City of Dayton vs. Bauman, 66 O. S. 379, the following appears in the statement of the case:

> "None of the lots or lands of Mr. Bauman were appropriated, but an assessment was made on his lots for the payment of compensation, damages and costs awarded to others whose lots had been appropriated for the extension of said streets. He enjoined the city and proper officers from enforcing the assessments, and the circuit court having decided the case in his favor, the city came here on error, seeking to reverse the judgment below."

The court holds, as shown by the first syllabus:

> "The limitation of section 19 of article 1 of the constitution on section 6 of article 13 as to assessments, goes to the full extent of prohibiting the raising of money directly or indirectly by assessment to pay compensation, damages or costs for lands appropriated by the public for public use. Railway Co. vs. Cincinnati, 62 Ohio St., 465, approved and followed."

Therefore, the inquiry under consideration may be answered by the statement that if the municipality proceeds to improve a street by constructing a ditch, and provides at its own expense the right of way necessary for such ditch, it may by virtue of section 3812 assess for such ditch even though the same is not within the street limits.

Of course, the power of assessment is subject to certain constitutional and statutory limitations, which find general expression in section 3819 G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

> The contention in our office is for the following reason: There are two constructions claimed for this section: One is that the limitation generally applies to all purchases in excess of $50.00; and the next following words are merely an exception to the rule permitting the officer in question to bid and have a contract where public bidding is required by the law and the letting had pursuant to such law. The other contention is that a strict construction of this criminal statute would make the inhibition only in cases where the statute provided for advertising and bidding because of the general text and the use of the qualifying words 'as provided by law.' The department is in doubt, and anticipating the possibility of the question being judicially raised would like to be fully advised as to the correct construction. Therefore, we respectfully request your written opinion upon the following matter:
> (1) Does section 12911 G. C. only apply in such cases where advertising for bids is demanded by statute, or does such section apply in any contract exceeding $50.00 wherein the statute does not provide for advertising and competitive bid?
>
> To bring out a concrete case:
> (2) May a common pleas judge legally sell the county commissioners an automobile for the sum of $300.00, such sale being made without advertisement or competitive bidding?"

Sections 12910 and 12911 G. C. are pertinent. The former section prohibits an officer or public agent from being interested in public contracts for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of a political subdivision, or, as stated therein, "a public institution with which he is connected," and as punishment therefor provides a penalty of from one to ten years imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Section 12911 G. C. in part is:

> "Whoever, holding an office of trust * * * is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance, for the use of the county, * * * or a public institution with which he is not connected, and the amount of such contract exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised, as provided by law, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

These sections had their beginning in the acts found in 73 Ohio Laws, pp. 31, 43 and 86, which prohibited the officers and employes of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, the Ohio penitentiary and the hospitals for the insane, respectively, from being interested in any contracts or purchases made for and in behalf of those institutions and by the terms of those sections applied only to the trustees or employes.

In 1900 (94 O. L., 391), by enacting section 6969 R. S., the same provisions were carried into the general crimes act and the application of the statute was extended so as to embrace all officers elected or appointed to any office of trust or profit in the state.

Section 6969 R. S., as then enacted, provided:

"It shall be unlawful for any person holding any office of trust or profit in this state, either by election or appointment, or any agent, servant or employe of such officer, or of a board of such officers to become directly or indirectly interested in any contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, hamlet, board of education or public institution with which he is connected. And it shall be unlawful for any such person, agent, clerk, servant or employe to become interested in any contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of any county, township, city, village, hamlet, board of education or public institution with which he is (not) connected when the amount of such contract exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, unless the contract is let on competitive bids, duly advertised as provided by law. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not more than ten years nor less than one year."

This section retained its original form without amendment until February 14, 1910, the time of the passage of the act adopting the codification of the committee appointed by the General Assembly for that purpose.

In the General Code, then adopted, section 6969 R. S. was, with changes which are immaterial to the question herein concerned, divided into what is now section 12910 and 12911.

It is to be observed that section 12910 relates to the officers being interested in contracts with the political subdivision or public instruction with which they are connected, while section 12911 relates to such interest in contracts with such political subdivision and institutions with which the officer or employe is not connected. It may also be observed that these are criminal statutes and as such must receive a strict construction, consistent, however, with carrying out their manifest purpose.

These sections have previously received the attention of this department, especially in opinions rendered in 1912, Volume II, Annual Report of Attorney-General, page 1238, and Volume II, 1914, page 1201, and Volume II, 1916, page 1275.

In the 1912 opinion the question of the legality of a deputy state supervisor furnishing fire insurance to the county commissioners on county property was considered and the conclusion reached, as stated on page 1239, supra, is:

"In the opinion which I have herewith enclosed, I have construed the question of fire insurance in reference to the amount of such contract to relate to the premium * * * and that, therefore, if the premium on a policy exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, the contract must be let on bids duly advertised as provided by law."

In the 1914 opinion the facts were that a member of a city board of education contracted to furnish coal to municipal corporation which was the city in which a part of the city school district was located, and the conclusion reached in that opinion may be shown by quoting the last paragraph as follows:

"This statute prohibits interest on the part of an officer of trust in a contract for the purchase of property or supplies for the use of a city with which he is not connected, when the contract amounts to more than fifty dollars and when the same is not let on bids duly advertised as provided by law. * * * If the amount of the sale exceeds fifty dollars, therefore, and if the contract was not let on bids duly advertised as provided by law, the facts presented will constitute a violation of this statute."

The 1916 opinion raised the question of the legality of a deputy state supervisor of elections writing insurance on county and city property and furnishing bonds for the county, city and state officials.

The Attorney-General in that opinion concluded (No. 1276 supra) that:

"A member of the board of * * * elections holds an office by appointment of both trust and profit. He is, however, a state officer and is not therefore 'conected with' any political subdivision in the sense the same is used in sections 12910 and 12911 G. C."

And again, on the same page, it is stated:

"A member of a firm is necessarily 'interested in' the business transacted by the firm. It follows, therefore, that if such firm makes any contract for furnishing fire insurance, the premium of which amounts to more than fifty dollars, the member of said firm, who is also a member of the board * * of elections, would become liable to prosecution and conviction under said section 12911 G. C. unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law. I might add that I know of no provision in law for advertising and receiving bids for fire insurance."

It is to be noted that in each of these opinions the guilt or innocence of the official seems to turn entirely on the question whether the contract was let on bids "duly advertised as provided by law" without special consideration, unless it be in the last of these opinions, to the question of whether such last quoted part of section 12911 is of itself a mandate that such contracts, that is, between an officer or agent and such political subdivision or public institution, with which he is not connected, shall be "duly advertised as provided by law," or whether those provisions mean to make it a criminal offense for the official or agent to be interested in such a contract unless the contract is let on bids which are duly advertised according to or as provided by other laws requiring such procedure in making that kind of a contract. In other words, it is suggested that the key to the proper construction of this section lies in ascertaining the meaning of the words "unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law."

The Attorney-General, in the opinion last quoted, stated:

"I know of no provision in law for advertising and receiving bids for fire insurance."

It may be observed that as to the purchase of an automobile, as stated in your letter, this department is aware of no statute requiring the commissioners to advertise and receive bids and it may be stated that as to such contract of purchase there is no procedure "provided by law" and such advertisement would not be necessary unless it is made so by section 12911. If the latter part of section 12911 had provided that the interest in such contracts were punishable unless the contract was let in a manner therein provided, there would be little left to construction, but it saw fit to require such contracts to be let in a manner "as provided by law."

It has been already stated herein that there is no such manner provided by law for purchases of the kind suggested in your concrete illustration.

It may be argued that the words "provided by law" relate only to the manner and method of such advertisement and that the rest of the sentence, of which these words are a part, specifically provides that the contract shall be duly advertised.

If we adopt this theory, then we must turn to other statutes for a method of duly advertising, which it is suggested must provide a general standard of method and procedure for advertising contracts of cities, townships, counties, villages, boards of education or public institutions. Without citing all of the statutes relating to the various contracts which must be advertised, it is sufficient to say that the law provides no such standard or general method for advertisement. Of course, there are many statutes providing especially for advertising in connection with certain contracts, wherein the details of the method of advertising is defined, but the nearest approach to a general provision is section 6252, which in effect provides that notices (including notices to contractors) shall be published "in two newspapers of opposite politics at the county seat." But this section does not provide for the number of times the notice shall be published and is apparently a further provision for the publication of those notices which are made necessary under other laws.

It may then be added that there is no provision in law requiring the advertisement of the particular contract of purchase contained in your question, nor is there any general provision relating to all such contracts which may be used as a standard for complying with this section, requiring such bids to be duly advertised as provided by law.

To make this statute enforcible, it is certain that whichever horn of the dilemma is chosen, there must be some definite legal method of advertising such contracts provided before it could correctly be said that it was "provided by law." As above indicated, no such method has been provided unless section 12911 is self-sufficient and self-executing by reason of its terms "duly advertised as provided by law." This, to say the least, is very doubtful.

The phrase "as provided by law" has been defined as synonymous to "according to law." In 5th Corpus Juris, 597, defining "as," we find:

"Like; similar to; of the same kind; in the same manner."

Thus in Dawson vs. State, 38 O. S., p. 3, it is held:

" 'according to law' embraces statute law in force during the term of office, whether passed before or after the execution of the bond."

The Dawson case was an action on an official bond conditioned for the faithful discharge of official duties "according to law," and, as above indicated, that phrase was held to include the statute law of the state then in force.

To the same effect are the authorities cited in Corpus Juris, Volume I, page 585.

In the case of In Re Okkots, 9 Hawaiian, page 402, a question similar to the one under consideration was considered in an application for a writ of habeas corpus. Section 37, subdivision 8, of an act of 1892, applicable to the judicial department of Hawaii, provided that circuit judges should have power "to issue writs of habeas corpus according to law."

It was contended by counsel for the petitioner, as stated in the opinion, page 403:

> "that this act gives to the circuit judges the discretionary power formerly exercised by the supreme court justice, and that the words 'according to law' relate to the procedure or manner, and not to the class of cases, provided by law. For otherwise it is argued, why repeat or affirm such restrictive legislation? We cannot agree with counsel."

The court in that case further holds with reference to the effect of such a phrase, at page 404:

> "The insertion in the act of 1892 of the phrase 'according to law' does not indicate an intention to alter the law. It rather indicates a contrary contention."

The same general effect is reached in the conclusion of Chester, etc., Co. Marshall, 40 S. C., 59; 18 S. E., 247.

Consideration of section 12911, in the light of the foregoing decisions results in the conclusion of this department that there is no provision in law for advertising for bids for a purchase, as stated in what is termed a concrete case in your letter, from which it follows that the exception of conditions upon which the person holding an office of trust may be interested "in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance," as provided in section 12911, for the political subdivision or public institution with which he is not connected, viz., that the contract therefor "is let on bids duly advertised, as provided by law," does not apply because no provision in law being made for such advertisement the contract could not bet let on bids duly advertised as provided by law.

It must be noted that the particular thing which it is sought to prevent in this section is the interest in such contracts on the part of officers of trust and the first part of the section is an outright prohibition of such interest, the only exception to which prohibition is found in the latter part of the section. Under this exception if such contract be advertised as provided by law, the officer may legally be interested in such contract. In all others, as for example where there is no provision for so advertising, he is prohibited from having any interest.

Consistent with the above conclusion, the question involved in your concrete case may be answered in the negative with the further observation that no provision in law for competitive bidding, after advertisement in such case, being made, the further fact that it was advertised or not would not affect the question, as under the laws applicable to such sales and on the facts stated by you, section 12911 prohibits such official from being interested in such purchase, even if an unauthorized or unprovided for advertisement is made.

Respectfully,

JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY JAIL BUILDINGS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS HAVE AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE LIVING QUARTERS FOR COUNTY JAILER IN ERECTION OF SUCH BUILDING.

In the erection of a county jail building, under section 2419 G. C., the county commissioners have authority to provide living quarters for the county jailer therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1919.

HON. LOUIS H. CAPELLE, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for the opinion of this department as follows:

> "The county commissioners of Hamilton county have received a request from the sheriff that living quarters be provided for the county jailer in the jail building of the new court house now nearing completion. Some time past State Examiner Bliss of the state bureau of uniform accounting, made a finding in this county opposing the quartering of the jailer and his family in the jail building, and we are desirous of ascertaining whether or not there is authority for providing living quarters for the jailer in the new court house building. An opinion from your department has been requested by the county commissioners of this county and we have been directed to transmit their request to you."

Your letter in reference to this request dated May 17, 1919, has also been received and considered.

It is also noted you state that you find no direct authority for providing living quarters in the jail building of the new court house, but that the decision in the case of State of Ohio on relation of L. B. D. G. & N. Ry. Co. vs. N. W. Toan, auditor, 13 O. C. C. (n. s.) 276, rather supports the opposite view.

Article X, section 5, of the constitution of Ohio, and sections 2419, 3157, 3161, 3177 and 3178 G. C. are applicable.

Section 2419 G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 423, provides:

> "A court house, jail, * * * offices for county officers, * * * shall be provided by the commissioners when, in their judgment, they, or any of them, are needed. Such buildings and offices shall be of such style, dimensions and expense as the commissioners determine."

Section 3157 is:

> "The sheriff shall have charge of the jail of the county, and all persons confined therein, keep them safely, attend to the jail and govern and regulate it according to the rules and regulations prescribed by the court of common pleas."

Section 3161 provides:

> "The sheriff may appoint one of his deputies to be the keeper of the jail."

Section 3177 provides in part:

> "The county commissioners, at the expense of the county, shall provide suitable means for warming the jail and its cells and departments, frames and sacks for beds, * * * bed clothing, washing, nursing when required, and such fixtures and repairs as are required by the court. They may appoint a physician for the jail, at such salary as is reasonable, to be paid from the county treasury."

Section 3178 provides:

"The sheriff may appoint not more than three jail matrons, * * * and the commissioners shall provide suitable quarters in such jail for the use and convenience of such matrons while on duty."

Section 5, Article X, is:

"No money shall be drawn from any county or township treasury, except by authority of law."

It is at once apparent that no express authority is given in these statutes to the county commissioners to provide living quarters for the jailer and such authority, if found at all, must be found in the clear and necessary implication arising from the express authority to provide a jail, concerning which it is to be noted that such jail "shall be of such style, dimensions and expense as the commissioners determine," as provided in section 2419 G. C.

Other sections of the laws relating to the care, custody and control of inmates of the jail, however, shed some light on the question of what the legislature had or may have had in mind in providing for jails and jailers without specifically indicating that such jailer could or should reside in such jail in quarters provided for him.

Without quoting at length from these statutes, it is sufficient to say that Chapter 5, the title of which is "Jails," in sections 3157 and 3180 G. C., specifically define the duties of the jailer with respect to the custody of the inmates.

In this connection the character of the detention, the class of persons detained and the purposes of their detention may be considered in deciding whether or not the legislature contemplated the constant presence of the jailer at the jail.

Consideration of these matters leads this department to the conclusion that the legislature in placing the sheriff in charge of the jail, and authorizing him by section 3161, supra, to appoint one of his deputies as keeper of the jail, contemplated that such sheriff or deputy should be in constant attendance or in close proximity to the inmates with whose detention and custody he is charged by law. This is further strengthened by that part of section 2419 which vests in the commissioners full discretion as to the size, style and expense of such buildings.

There is no specific authority in these statutes for the sheriff to occupy rooms in the jail building as his residence, but this is a common practice throughout the state, sanctioned by the courts, as indicated by the opinion in the Toan case, supra, as follows:

"It is true that in most counties the jail buildings are so built as to furnish a residence for the sheriff, and so far as our opinion goes, in no county is the sheriff expected to pay anything as a rental for the building he occupies."

The authority to provide such quarters for the sheriff seems necessarily implied in consideration of the character of the services required and responsibilities placed upon the county sheriff and the same rule is applicable to the deputy appointed by the sheriff as jailer.

It is therefore concluded that the county commissioners, in the erection of a jail building, have implied authority to provide living quarters for the county jailer therein.

Your letters refer to the jail as "the jail building of the new court house now nearing completion." From this it is inferred that the jail building to which your question relates is a county jail, as provided for by section 2419 supra, and this opinion is based entirely upon that inference.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF DOVER TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT IN SUM OF $8,500.00—COAL BILL NOT A REFUNDING OBLIGATION BY STATUTE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 10, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

RE: Bonds of Dover Township Rural School district in the amount of $8,500, being 8 bonds of $1,000 each and 1 bond of $500.

GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Dover Township Rural School district, relating to the above bond issue, and hereby decline to approve the same.

The transcript recites that the bonds under consideration are refunding bonds issued for the purpose of paying certain indebtedness to banks for money borrowed from such banks to pay teachers' salaries, janitors' compensation and bills for coal and other supplies. The transcript does not indicate what portion of these obligations were incurred for each of the above named purposes.

Assuming that the teachers and janitors were legally employed, their salaries and compensations are valid debts which may be refunded. Sec. 5661 G. C. The board of education, however, was without authority to contract for coal and other supplies, unless the money therefor was in the treasury and set apart for the payment thereof. Sec. 5660 G. C.

Since the board is only authorized to refund legal obligations and since a part of the obligations, according to the recital of the transcript, is for coal and other supplies and hence incurred without legal authority, I decline to approve the issue.

If the board of education will amend its bond-issuing resolution, and limit the issue to an amount sufficient to pay obligations incurred in paying teachers' salaries and janitors' compensation, I am of the opinion that such bonds will be valid and binding obligations of the district and will approve the same.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE OF GENOA TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, DELAWARE COUNTY, OHIO—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 4751 G. C. AS TO NOTICE—PROPER DETERMINATION UNDER SECTION 7625 G. C.—WHAT MUST BE INCORPORATED IN RESOLUTION SUBMITTING ISSUE OF BONDS—CANNOT LATER MAKE CORRECTION.

1. Section 4751 of the General Code seems to require that notice of a called meeting of a board of education be given in writing as therein provided, whether the board has previously adjourned to meet at the call of the president or not.

2. A determination "that for the proper accommodation of the schools of the district it is necessary to purchase a site and to erect a school house," etc., is a jurisdictional prerequisite to the valid issuance of bonds under sections 7625 et seq. by a board of education.

3. The jurisdictional findings and determinations required to be made by section 7625, if not incorporated in the resolution submitted the question of the issuance of such bonds to the electors, cannot be supplied by later correction of the minutes of the meeting at which the same is adopted after the election has been held.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

RE: Bonds of Genoa Township Rural School District, Delaware county, Ohio, in the sum of $32,000, for the purpose of providing funds to purchase a site and building and equipping a centralized school in said school district.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of Genoa Township Rural School district in the issuance of the above described bonds, and find myself unable to approve them as an investment by the Industrial Commission, for the following reasons:

(1) The meeting of the board at which the preliminary resolution providing for the submission to the electors of the question of issuing the bonds was not a regular meeting of the board. Two members of the board were not present at the meeting.

Attached to the transcript is the following acknowledgment:

"Westerville, Ohio, May 20, 1919.

"I hereby acknowledge that I received notice of a called meeting of the Genoa Township School Board in ample time held March 21, 1919."

This acknowledgment is signed by the two members whom the transcript shows to have been absent from the meeting of March 21, which was the meeting at which the resolution above referred to was adopted.

If the meeting of March 21 be regarded as a special meeting the acknowledgment does not show compliance with section 4750 of the General Code, which provides in part that:

> "* * * No meeting of a board of education, not provided for by its rules or by-law, shall be legal, unless all the members thereof have been notified, as provided in the next section."

Section 4751 G. C. provides that:

> "A special meeting of a board of education may be called by the president or clerk thereof or by any two members, by serving a written notice of the time and place of such meeting upon each member of the board either personally or at his residence or usual place of business. Such notice must be signed by the official or members calling the meeting."

It will be observed that the "special" meeting referred to in section 4751 is a called meeting. The meeting of March 21, 1919, was also a called meeting; but it happens that the call was authorized by the adjournment of the previous meeting of March 10, 1919, which was in turn an adjournment of the regular meeting of March 4, 1919. The following excerpts from the transcript will show the relation of these three meetings:

> "March 4, 1919.
> The board adjourned to Monday, March 10, at one o'clock p. m."
> "March 10, 1919.
> The board adjourned to the call of the president."
>
> March 21, 1919.
> The board of education met this day at two p. m., pursuant to the call of President Fisher."

I do not believe that the requirement for special notice which is embodied in section 4751 can be avoided by adjourning to meet at the call of the president. Such a meeting is not an adjourned meeting in the proper sense, as would be, for example, the meeting of March 10, which was a continuation of the previous meeting by reason of that meeting having been adjourned to an hour and day certain. Section 4751 provides expressly how meetings shall be called by the president. There is no showing that its provisions were complied with.

The facts presented here have not been passed upon by any court, though in State ex rel. vs. Evans, 90 O. S. 243, at pages 250 et seq., a meeting which, in the language of Wanamaker, J., "might be considered either an adjournment of the regular meeting or a special meeting" was held to be a legal meeting because "proper notice was given to each and every member of the board, agreebly to the statute."

At all events the facts regarding the nature of the meeting of March 21, 1919, are such as to raise in my mind considerable doubt as to its legality.

(2) Another and more certainly fatal defect which the transcript shows lies in the character of the resolution submitting the proposition of issuing bonds to the people. The minutes of March 21, 1919, show the passage of the following:

> "Resolved by the board of education, etc., * * * that there be an election held in said school district on the 23d day of April, 1919, to consider the question of the bond issue in the sum of $32,000.00, for the purpose of building and equipping a new school house as provided by the General Code of Ohio."

The minutes of the same meeting show a resolution that "a copy of these resolutions be certified to the clerk of the board of elections of Delaware county, Ohio," etc.

Presumably the resolution as above quoted was the resolution certified to the board of elections.

This resolution is insufficient under section 7625 G. C., which requires a determination

"that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site or sites to erect a school house or houses, etc., * * * that the funds at its disposal or that can be raised under the provisions of sections seventy-six hundred and twenty-nine and seventy-six hundred and thirty are not sufficient to accomplish the purpose and that a bond issue is necessary."

This department has frequently held that these findings and determination are jurisdictional.

An attempt seems to have been made to supply the deficiency here by resolution adopted on May 20, 1919, purporting to correct the minutes of March 21, 1919, as follows:

2. "Whereas the minutes of this board dated March 21, 1919, are incomplete. Therefore, Be it Resolved, that they be corrected to read as follows:

As the funds at the disposal of this board of education or that can be raised from section 7629 and 7630 G. C., are insufficient to build and equip a new school house, that an election be held, etc."

Even with these additions one of the findings required to be made by section 7625, viz.:

"that for the proper accommodation of the schools of such district it is necessary to purchase a site * * * to erect a school house * * *"

is lacking. However, I do not believe that it is possible to correct the proceedings in this manner. An election has already been held and, so far as the trancript shows, in pursuance of a resolution passed on March 21, 1919, and correctly shown on the minutes thereof. In other words, there is nothing in the action of May 20 to show with certainty that the resolution shown on the minutes of March 21 was not the resolution passed by the board and certified to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections. If such were the fact and the resolution as actually passed and certified was the resolution shown by the minutes of May 20, I would still have to hold, as previously stated, that such proceedings are illegal and fatally defective because of the failure to incorporate a determination as to the necessity of the purchase of a site or the erection of a building for the proper accommodation of the schools.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE FROM NETTIE HIGHLANDS TO BOARD OF AGRICULTURE OF OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

HON. N. E. SHAW, Secretary of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—

RE—Highlands lease.

The lease from Nettie Highlands, et al., to the Board of Agriculture of Ohio, for 56/100 of an acre of land in Hamilton county, formerly submitted to this department for its approval and by it referred back for correction, in its correct form has been received by this department.

Consideration of section 1390 (107 O. L., 486) and section 1460 (107 O. L., 490) of the General Code, convinces this department that the uses and purposes for which this leasehold is required, to wit, to obtain land for and establish a fish hatchery, is within the authorized uses and purposes provided for in these sections.

Section 1390 G. C. provides:

> "The secretary of agriculture shall have authority and control in all matters pertaining to the protection, preservation and propagation of * * fish within the state * * * and in and upon the waters thereof. He shall * * * establish fish hatcheries and propagate fish therein or in any other manner for the waters of the state, and, so far as funds are provided therefor, shall adopt and carry into effect such measures as he deems necessary in the performance of his duties."

Section 1460 provides that all

"fines, penalties and forfeitures arising from prosecutions, convictions, * * under this act * * * shall be paid * * * into the state treasury to the credit of a fund which shall be appropriated biennially for the use of the secretary of agriculture."

It further appears, from personal conference, that the land described in the within lease is leased for and to be used as a fish hatchery and it further appears that available funds for the payment of the rental in said lease is available from the appropriation for uses and purposes—fish and game division, board of agriculture of Ohio—as evidenced by the auditor of state's certificate hereto attached.

Examination of the laws applicable to such matters and the purpose and form of the lease therefor, leads this department to approve said lease, which, with the approval of this department endorsed thereon, is herewith enclosed.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—COUNTY RECORDER—MAYOR OF CITY.

The offices of county recorder and mayor of a city or village are not incompatible and may be held by one and the same person, if it is physically possible for one person to perform the duties of both offices.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

HON. PHIL. H. WIELAND, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of May 29, 1919, reads as follows:

"I wish to submit to your office the following question:

Are the offices of county recorder and mayor of a city or village incompatible?"

I know of no constitutional or statutory provision which forbids the mayor of a city or village to act as county recorder, although the legislature has seen fit to forbid the mayor to act as deputy sheriff. See section 2830 G. C.

You will notice that the office of mayor of a city or village is not mentioned in section 11 G. C., reading thus:

"No person shall hold at the same time by appointment or election more than one of the following offices: Sheriff, county auditor, county treasurer, clerk of the court of common pleas, county recorder, prosecuting attorney, probate judge, and justice of the peace."

The further question arises whether the offices of county recorder and mayor are regarded as incompatible by the common law.

The case of State ex rel. vs. Gebhart, 12 O. C. C. (N. S.) 274, is frequently cited as containing a succinct statement of the common law rule as to incompatibility of offices. That case says:

> "Offices are considered incompatible when one is subordinate to or in any way a check upon the other, or when it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both."

I am unable to see that either of the offices in question is subordinate to or in any way a check upon the other. Whether it is physically possible for one person to discharge the duties of both is a question of fact. Assuming it is so possible, you are advised that the office of county recorder and mayor of a city or village are not incompatible and may be held by one and the same person.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE—NO AUTHORITY FOR PAYMENT OF COSTS OF SAID OFFICERS IN SEARCH AND SEIZURE PROCEEDINGS UNDER SECTION 1408 G. C.

There is no authority in law for the payment of justices of the peace costs in search and seizure proceedings under section 1408 G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

HON. CHARLES L. FLORY, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your request for the opinion of this department, as follows:

> "It has been the custom of deputy game wardens to appear before a justice of the peace in Licking county, file an affidavit and receive a search warrant under favor of section 1408, General Code, to make the inspection and search provided for by sections 1407 and 1408, General Code, to obtain evidence upon which to base a prosecution for violation of the fish and game laws. If, acting under the search warrant so obtained, no evidence were discovered upon which to base the commencement of a criminal proceeding, no further step was taken; but if such evidence were discovered, as the result of the search, then the warden would file an affidavit before the same justice, charging some person with a violation of the fish or game law, and such criminal proceeding would then proceed in due course.
> "The justice of the peace has now presented to the auditor of Licking county bills of costs made in numerous search and seizure proceedings, carried out under section 1408, General Code, in which the search disclosed no evidence of law violation, and no criminal proceeding against any person was subsequently commenced as the result of the search so made, the whole situation ending then and there. The justice has also presented to the auditor cost bills in such search and seizure proceedings where evidence was discovered and upon which evidence a regular action for violation of the fish or game law was later commenced and disposed of in due course.

"I shall be pleased to receive your opinion as to whether the costs made in such search and seizure proceeding under section 1408, General Code, are to be paid under section 1404, or any other section, of the General Code, (1) when, as the result of such search proceeding, no evidence of law violation of any kind is discovered, and (2) when, as the result of such search proceeding, evidence is found upon which a regular action for violation of the fish or game law is commenced."

It is noted that you call attention to the distinction between the proceeding under section 1408 G. C. and that referred to in section 1404 G. C., and the proceeding under the former, viz., search and seizure, where nothing was seized and no criminal prosecution followed, is the only kind of a proceeding on which this opinion is based or to which it may apply.

This opinion is to be distinguished from 234, date April 25, 1919, directed to the Department of Agriculture, which was based upon criminal prosecution under the fish and game laws and did not involve a question of costs in search and seizure proceedings.

Section 5, article 10, of the Constitution of Ohio, and sections 3016, 3017, 3018 and 3019 G. C. are applicable to your question. Section 5 provides:

"No money shall be drawn from any county or township treasury, except by authority of law."

The pertinent part of section 3016 is:

"In felonies, when the defendant is convicted, the costs of the justice of the peace * * * constable and witnesses, shall be paid from the county treasury."

In part section 3017 is:

"In no other case whatever shall any cost be paid from the * * * treasury to a justice of the peace, * * * or constable."

That these sections are of a general nature and may and have been modified by certain other special statutes relating to justices of the peace costs, is evidenced by section 3019, which provides:

"In felonies wherein the state fails, and in misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make allowance to any such officers in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowances to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars."

Sections 1404 and 1408 G. C., of the Commissioners of Fish and Game chapter, must also be considered as special statutes on this subject.

Section 1404 provides:

"A person authorized by law to prosecute a case under the provisions of this chapter, shall not be required to advance or secure costs therein. If the defendant be acquitted or discharged from custody, or if he be convicted and committed in default of payment of fines and costs, such costs shall be certified under oath by the justice to the county auditor, who shall correct all errors therein and issue his warrant on the county treasurer, payable to the person or persons entitled thereto."

Section 1408 in part provides:

"Upon filing an affidavit in accordance with law before an officer having jurisdiction of the offense, and receiving a search warrant issued thereon, such warden may forcibly open such package * * * or other place, and if upon inspection he finds any birds, fish or game * * * or other device unlawfully in possession of the person, he shall forthwith seize them and arrest the person in whose custody or possession they are found."

It may be observed that if the search is successful in this that any of the unlawful things are found in the possession of the person, ample authority is found in this and other sections of the fish and game statutes for a criminal prosecution, but that on the contrary when the search discloses no such unlawful possession, no further provision as to procedure or costs is found in this or other fish and game statutes unless section 1404, supra, can be construed as to bear upon proceedings for search and seizure.

Section 13484 G. C., relating to search warrants generally, before justices of the peace, is likewise lacking in such provision. Directing attention to section 1404, it is to be noted that the conditions which must obtain before that section will authorize the payment of such costs are (a) "if the defendant be acquitted or discharged from custody" or (b) "if he be convicted or committed in default of payment of fines and costs."

From the position of this section, following those provisions for criminal trial and procedure in cases of forfeiture, as well as from the intrinsic evidence in the statute itself, it is clear that this section relates to prosecutions and not to the preliminary procedure which is later provided for in section 1408, which latter statute, it may be observed, does not refer in any way to section 1404.

In the face of the inhibitions of section 5 of the constitution and section 3017, the general statute relating to the payment of justices of the peace from the county treasury, warrant must be found in these special statutes before it can be maintained that the payment of costs in such proceedings is authorized by law, and in view of the limitations to which section 1404 may be applied, and the non-existence of any other statute authorizing the payment of such expenses from the county treasury, this department is of the opinion that such payment is unauthorized and a negative answer is thus given to both of your questions, as, for the foregoing reasons, it is immaterial whether the search and seizure proceedings are or are not followed by criminal prosecutions as the costs the payment of which is authorized by section 1404 includes only those incurred in a criminal prosecution independent of the preliminary search and seizure proceedings. It is deemed advisable to call your attention to House Bill No. 45 which, when it becomes operative, will materially change the Fish and Game statutes.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—OFFICERS ATTEND CONFERENCE AT STATE CAPITAL FOR DRAFTING PROPOSED LEGISLATION—EXPENSES NOT PAYABLE FROM CITY TREASURY—OPINION NO. 85 DATED MARCH 1, 1919, AFFIRMED.

Municipal officers in attending a conference at the state capital for the purpose of drafting proposed legislation of a general nature which must have uniform operation throughout the state, are not exercising a power of local self-government.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Since the preparation and transmission to you of my opinion No. 85, dated March 1, 1919, relating to the use of public funds to pay the expenses of municipal officers in attending a meeting of mayors and city solicitors held for the purpose of drafting legislation for the relief of cities, one of the city solicitors interested has prepared a brief on the subject, and requested a reconsideration on behalf of the charter cities.

It is now contended that the duty of mayors to attend the Columbus meeting is imposed, or is at least authorized, by section 4250, G. C., which makes the mayor the chief conservator of the peace, and that the authority of the city solicitor to attend is found in section 4309 G. C., which makes that officer the legal adviser of the municipal officers. In support of this contention it is argued:

> "The mayor, being the chief conservator of the peace, and being the head of the administrative departments of the city, it certainly is of concern to him if the city is without sufficient funds derived from taxation and other sources to properly conserve such peace and to manage the administrative offices over which he has control. If, in view of such lack of finances and at the special direction of the council of the city he makes a trip to Columbus in order to petition the legislature to afford the city financial relief, it cannot be contended with any show of reason that his expenses on such trip are not necessarily implied in and reasonably and directly incident to his prescribed duties.
> And this is also true with respect to the city solicitor. His attendance upon the meeting in Columbus was, as set forth in the statement of facts, in order to assist in the draft of the proposed legislation. By section 4309 he is made the legal adviser of the various officers and boards of the city and is required to furnish opinions, and we submit that inasmuch as his attendance at said meeting was to consult with the mayor in connection with the draft of said proposed legislation, his expenses likewise were incurred in a matter necessarily implied in and reasonably and directly incident to his prescribed duties."

All municipal officers are interested in the conservation of the peace; and if the mayor and city solicitor, without authority other than the two statutes above referred to, are justified in attending at public expense a meeting held for the purpose of drafting state legislation for the levying and collection of taxes, it could also be argued with equal force that the other municipal officers, and probably citizens should be permitted to do the same.

Subjects of state legislation are for the General Assembly to investigate and determine, and it is for that purpose that representatives and senators from the several counties and senatorial districts of the state are elected, who represent not only the state as a whole, but also the political subdivisions and municipalities thereof. In the exercise of this power, the General Assembly, through its various committees and officers, is clothed with ample power to inquire into and make investigations concerning matters affecting the municipalities of the state, including the conservation of the peace and the levying and collection of taxes to be expended in that connection.

Municipal officers may instruct their representatives and petition the General Assembly for relief, but the right of municipal officers in that regard is no greater than that of citizens generally. It may also be noted in this connection that neither the state constitution nor any statute or city charter, so far as I have been able to ascertain, enjoins any duty upon municipal officers to instruct the members of the General Assembly as to what legislation should or should not be enacted, or as to the form legislation should take, or to petition the General Assembly on any subject. Whatever any municipal officer may do in that direction must be held to be his personal voluntary act.

It is contended that if there be no statute warranting mayors or city solicitors to attend meetings for the purpose of drafting such legislation, then a charter adopted under authority of section 7 of Article XVIII of the state constitution may furnish the authority, and that charter provisions such as the following have that effect:

> "The city shall have all powers of local self-government and Home Rule and all other powers possible for a city to have under the constitution of the state of Ohio."
> "All legislative power of the city shall be vested in council," etc.

All the power that the first provision attempts to confer, is the power of local self-government, including the authority to adopt and enforce such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations as are not in conflict with general laws (see sections 3 and 7, Art. XVIII); and the legislative power vested in the city council by the second charter provision is not unrestrained or unbounded, but is necessarily limited in its scope to subjects or matters embraced in the first provision, as distinguished from those of a general governmental nature affecting the entire state.

The right of charter city councils to legislate within constitutional limits is not denied, but I am unable to reach the conclusion that municipal officers in attending a meeting held for the purpose of drafting state legislation of a general nature which must have uniform operation throughout the state, are exercising any power or authority contemplated by the constitutional provision referred to.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

JUVENILE COURT—IN ADMINISTRATION OF ACT MINOR'S RESIDENCE SHOULD DETERMINE MINOR'S STATUS—MINOR RESIDENT OF ONE COUNTY VIOLATES LAW IN ANOTHER COUNTY—JUVENILE CAN BE PROCEEDED AGAINST IN EITHER COUNTY—COURT FIRST ACQUIRING JURISDICTION RETAINS IT TO EXCLUSION OF ANY OTHER COURT.

1. In the administration of the juvenile act, good policy in most cases suggests that the juvenile court of the county of the minor's residence be permitted to determine the minor's status.

2. Where a minor child under the age of eighteen years is a resident of A——— county, but while in W——— county violates a law of the state of Ohio, such minor may, as a matter of law, be proceeded against as a juvenile delinquent person in either the juvenile court of A——— county, or the juvenile court of W——— county.

3. The court first acquiring jurisdiction would, however, retain it to the exclusion of any other court, until the case were finally disposed of.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

HON. B. O. BISTLINE, Probate Judge, Bowling Green, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of recent date reads in part as follows:

> "A sixteen year old boy who resides in and is a legal resident of Athens county, Ohio, has been arrested for driving an automobile over the highways of this (Wood) county at a speed of forty miles per hour, and the justice before whom he was taken certified him over to me as juvenile judge.
> You have already ruled that the juvenile judge of the county in which the offender lives has jurisdiction of juvenile cases, although the offense was committed outside of the county in which the offender lives. Now, have I, as juvenile judge, jurisdiction of this offender since he is a resident of Athens county?"

In Opinion No. 154, dated March 31, 1919, addressed to Hon. Charles G. White, prosecuting attorney, Batavia, Ohio, the Attorney-General held that where a minor child under the age of eighteen years is a resident of W——— county, but while in C——— county violates a law of this state, said minor may be proceeded against in the juvenile court of W——— county. In that opinion it was said:

> "* * * It is unquestionably the intent of the juvenile court act that the interests of the child itself should be the paramount consideration in all proceedings taken under that act. 'That proper guardianship may be provided for the child' is not only the express direction set forth in section 1683 G. C., but is, indeed, the theme of the whole measure. In most juvenile cases, the main subject of investigation is the child's environment, and as a general rule the juvenile court of the county of the child's residence is the court best suited to ascertain that environment.
> In other words, assuming that the law permits a juvenile court, in a proceeding against an alleged juvenile delinquent residing in that county, to predicate a finding of delinquency upon a violation of law committed by said minor while in another county, good policy, in most cases, suggests that the juvenile court of the county of the minor's residence be permitted to determine the minor's status."

Occasion is taken to reaffirm the view just set forth as to the policy of allowing the juvenile court of the county of the child's residence to determine the status of that child.

Observations as to the policy of administering the law do not, however, furnish an answer to the legal aspects of your query, which is whether the juvenile court of a given county has the power to determine the status of an alleged delinquent minor who is a resident of another county, but who commits in the first mentioned county the act constituting an alleged delinquency.

The fact that under the law of crimes the non-residence of the defendant in the county of venue is immaterial to the court's jurisdiction, is of no weight in the present inquiry, for the reason that delinquency under the Ohio juvenile act is not a crime. In re Januszewski, 196 Fed. 123, 156. It is necessary, therefore, to go to the juvenile act itself for an answer to the question.

After careful study of that act, I find no provision therein that either expressly or impliedly makes the authority of a juvenile court of a county to determine the status of an alleged delinquent juvenile person depended upon the residence of such juvenile in that county.

On the contrary, the juvenile act contains evidence of an intention to dispense with the necessity of residence on the part of the minor delinquent. This evidence consists not alone of what is in the act, but also of significant omissions therefrom.

Section 1642 G. C. (103 O. L. 868) says:

"Such courts of common pleas, probate courts, insolvency courts and superior courts within the provisions of this chapter shall have jurisdiction over and with respect to delinquent, neglected and dependent minors, under the age of eighteen years * * *."

Section 1644 G. C. (106 O. L. 458), after defining the words "delinquent child," conclude with the provision that:

"A child committing any of the acts herein mentioned shall be deemed a juvenile delinquent person, and be preceeded against in the manner hereinafter provided."

It is considered significant that these sections wholly omit any requirement that the alleged juvenile delinquent be a resident of the county wherein the court is held.

Section 1648 G. C. (103 O. L. 870) provides, among other things, that the juvenile judge may in the first instance issue a warrant for the arrest of the minor. Under the terms of section 1660 G. C. (103 O. L. 874), such warrant may issue to a probation officer of any such court or to the sheriff of any county. Section 1663 G. C. defines the duties and powers of the probation officer and says, in part, that such officer "shall serve the warrants and other process of the court within or without the county * * *."

In view of the fact that express provision is made for the service of warrant upon the minor outside of the county wherein the juvenile court is held, it is not likely that the legislature intended to make the jurisdiction of such court dependent upon the residence of the alleged delinquent minor in the county wherein such court was held.

Again, certain practical difficulties suggest themselves in connection with the view that the minor's residence in the county where the juvenile court proceeding is instituted is a jurisdictional condition. Under such a view, just what would be meant by "residence?" The juvenile act nowhere defines such a term, and whether it was "residence" of the kind demanded by the election laws of Ohio, or "residence" under the laws relating to poor relief, or "residence" of some other description—this, under the view referred to above, would be left entirely to conjecture on the part of the juvenile judges of the several counties. Diversity of opinion and consequent uncertainty in enforcing the juvenile act could be the only result of such an interpretation.

It is therefore considered that where a minor child under the age of eighteen years is a resident of Athens county, but while in Wood county violates a law of the state of Ohio, such minor may be proceeded against as a juvenile delinquent person in either the juvenile court of Wood county or the juvenile court of Athens county. The court first acquiring jurisdiction would, however, under the general rule, retain it to the exclusion of any other court, until the case were finally disposed of. Orphan Asylum vs. Soule, 24 O .C. C. (n. s.) 151. Under section 1643 G. C. (103 O. L. 869), the jurisdiction of the juvenile court over a child under the age of eighteen years continues, for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, until said child attains the age of twenty-one years.

The conclusion hereinabove stated goes, of course, only to the question of the power of the juvenile court of the county wherein the alleged delinquent minor does not reside. I deem it important to repeat that only extraordinary circumstances would, in my judgment, justify a departure from the wise policy that has thus far characterized the administration of the juvenile act, namely, the policy of permitting the juvenile court of the county of the minor's residence to determine the minor's status.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

AGRICULTURAL LIME—WHEN SALE OF SAME IS PERMITTED AND WHEN PROHIBITED BY STATUTE—LIME AS FERTILIZER.

1. Sections 1150 to 1163 G. C. (107 O. L., 474) do not prohibit the sale of agricultural lime.

2. Sections 1177-43 to 1177-54 G. C. (107 O. L., 481) prohibit the sale of unregistered agricultural lime or the sale of such lime which is not branded as therein provided, and the sale of agricultural lime under an unregistered trade name of "lawn and garden fertilizer," is thereby prohibited.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

HON. N. E. SHAW, Secretary of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of the receipt of your request for the opinion of this department as follows:

"The opinion of your department is requested with reference to the meaning of certain sections of the Ohio fertilizer law, as amended in 107 O. L., 474, and being sections 1150 to 1163, General Code, inclusive.

The particular questions may be stated as follows:

Under the above law, could lime be sold as a fertilizer, either with or without analysis?

Also under the Ohio agricultural lime and limestone law, 107 O. L. 481, could it be permissible to sell an agricultural lime when the bags are properly branded as to analysis and give the product a trade name, as 'Lawn and Garden Fertilizer?'"

It is noted that your inquiry refers first to the sale of lime under sections 1150 to 1163 G. C., and, second, to the sale of agricultural lime under sections 1177-43 et seq., G. C.

As to the first, viz., can lime be sold as a fertilizer, sections 1150 G. C. to 1163 G. C. are pertinent. These sections comprise the Ohio fertilizer law.

Without quoting all of the sections, it is sufficient to state that by the exceptions contained in section 1150, defining commercial fertilizer in this language,

> "which means any substance for fertilizing * * * except * * * lime," the sale of lime is not regulated or controlled by sections 1150 to 1163 G. C., and your first question may be answered by stating that the sale of lime as a fertilizer, either with or without analysis, is not prohibited by the sections last referred to.

As stated in your letter, the second question is:

> "Could it be permissable to sell an agricultural lime when the bags are properly branded as to analysis and give the product a trade name, as 'Lawn and Garden Fertilizer?'"

The Ohio limestone act, as amended, is found in 107 O. L., 481, in sections 1177-43 to 1177-54. Pertinent parts of these sections are:

> Sec. 1177-43.—"Before any agricultural lime * * * is sold * * * offered or exposed for sale in Ohio, the manufacturer, importer, dealer, agent or person who causes it to be sold or offered for sale, by sample or otherwise, within the state, shall file with the secretary of agriculture at Columbus, Ohio, a statement that he desires to offer such agricultural lime * * * for sale in this state, and also a certificate, the execution of which shall be sworn to before a notary public * * * for registration, stating the name of the manufacturer, or shipper, the location of the principal office of the manufacturer or shipper, and the place of manufacture, the name, brand, or trademark under which the agricultural lime * * * shall be sold."

Section 1177-44 G. C. provides that any person selling or exposing for sale such lime,

> "shall affix or cause to be affixed, to every package * * * of such agricultural lime * * * a tag or label, which shall be accepted as a guarantee of the manufacturer, importer, dealer or agent, and which shall have plainly printed thereon * * * the name or trademark under which the agricultural lime * * * is sold."

Section 1177-46 requires the payment of an annual license fee

"before any person, firm, company or corporation shall sell, offer for sale or expose for sale in this state any agricultural lime * * * for each brand or kind of agricultural lime * * * and shall receive from said secretary of agriculture a certificate to sell such brand or kind of agricultural lime."

Section 1177-47 makes it a misdemeanor for the sale of such lime

"which has not been registered * * * as required in this act, or which does not have affixed to it the tag required by this act * * * or which shall be labeled with a false or inaccurate guarantee, or who shall adulterate any agricultural lime * * * without plainly stating on the label hereinbefore described, the kind and amount of such mixture," and provides that such offenses shall be punishable by a fine

"in the sum of fifty dollars for the first offense and in the sum of one hundred dollars for each subsequent offense."

Section 1177-50 G. C. empowers the secretary of agriculture

"to prescribe and enforce such rules and regulations relating to agricultural lime * * * as may be deemed necessary to carry into effect the full intent and meaning of this act, and *to refuse the registration of any agricultural lime * * * under a name which would be misleading.*"

Section 1177-53a provides further penalties as follows:

"Whoever sells, offers for sale, or keeps for the purpose of selling within the state agricultural lime * * * without complying with the provisions of this law relating to agricultural lime, * * * shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars or imprisoned not more than six months or both.

The possession of agricultural lime, except by a person who has the same for his private use, without complying with the provisions of this chapter, relating to agricultural lime. * * * shall be a prima facie evidence of keeping the same for the purpose of selling."

By personal conference with Mr. Palmer, of the division of feeds and fertilizer, it is learned that the lime with which your department is concerned was not registered under the name of "lawn and garden fertilizer," from which it is concluded that that lime is not registered.

From this it follows that its sale is unlawful, as such registration is plainly made a condition precedent to its lawful sale under section 1177-43, and such a sale would clearly be within the prohibition contained in sections 1177-47 and 1177-53a, being a sale of agricultural lime "which has not been registered * * * as required by this act," as stated in the former, and being a sale "without complying with the provisions of this law relating to agricultural lime" as prohibited in the latter section.

Therefore it is the opinion of this department that the sale of such an unregistered agricultural lime in this state is unlawful.

It is deemed proper to call your attention to the fact that by vesting the secretary of agriculture with the discretion of registration, the prevention of registering a product under a misleading name may be accomplished under section 1177-50 G. C.

Respectfully,
JOHN G. PRICE,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—MILITARY TRAINING—CANNOT ESTABLISH SAME UNDER EXISTING LAW.

1. Boards of education cannot establish military training in public schools under section 7721 G. C. of existing law.
2. All courses of study in high schools must be in compliance with section 7649 G. C.
3. A pupil cannot be discriminated against in his general standing in school because he does not join a military unit in such school.
4. There is no provision in law for a board of education to purchase military ordnance or pay expenses of physical training teachers at a military camp.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 13, 1919.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Acknowledgment is made of your request for an opinion on the following statement of facts:

> "On January 3, 1918, the board of education of the city school district of the city of Cleveland passed and adopted the following, known as Resolution No. 7596, 'To Provide Military Training:'
