

association, whose membership is restricted to persons engaged in any particular trade or occupation, may insure property classed as extra hazardous.

As to membership, the articles state:

“All persons, partnerships, firms or corporations wishing to become members of this association, shall be residents of the State of Ohio and shall be the owners, operators, lessees, or the owners of an insurable interest in premises used for restaurant purposes.”

A person may be an owner or lessee of premises used for restaurant purposes and not be engaged in the restaurant business. I suggest, therefore, that in order that the membership may be limited to those operating restaurants, the following words be inserted after the words “State of Ohio” appearing in the above quotation, to-wit: “shall be engaged in the occupation of operating a restaurant or restaurants.”

I am herewith returning the articles to you so that the above indicated addition may be made thereto.

I have not examined the constitution and by-laws of the association, as I have no authority to either approve or disapprove them.

Respectfully,

JOHN W. BRICKER,
Attorney General.
