MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—NEWSPAPER—PUBLICATION OF ORDINANCES AND RESOLUTIONS—WHEN OFFICER OF MUNICIPALITY IS INTERESTED IN NEWSPAPER WHICH PUBLISHES ORDINANCES—DOES NOT DISQUALIFY NEWSPAPER FROM MAKING SUCH PUBLICATION—OFFICER NOT LIABLE.

When but one newspaper is printed in a municipality in which said newspaper, under the provisions of section 4228, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 493, the publication of ordinances and other matters therein specified is required to be made, the fact that an officer of the municipality is interested in said newspaper does not disqualify it from making said publication nor does said publication make said officer liable under sections 3808 and 12912, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 10, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have recently received several communications from you regarding the application of sections 3808 and 12912, G. C., considered in connection with the provisions of section 4228, et seq., of the General Code, as amended 106 O. L., 493, in the case of an official of a municipal corporation being interested in a newspaper which is required to print the ordinances of said corporation. The inquiries submitted to me may be stated thus:

1. "Do the provisions of section 4228, G. C., prevail over to the extent of nullifying the provisions of section 3808 or 12912, G. C.? In the case of an official of a village who is the owner of stock in a newspaper printed and of general circulation in the village when such newspaper as the only partisan paper of the political party to which it belongs is required to print the ordinances of said village in order to make the same legal under the requirements of said first named section.

2. "The editor and owner of the only newspaper printed, published and of general circulation in the village of ————, Ohio, has been elected mayor of said village and desires to know whether or not he may be paid for publishing the ordinances required by law to be published in his paper. Can the ordinances of said village be legally enacted without publication in his newspaper?"

Is it is expressly stated in connection with your foregoing inquiries that an opinion is requested for your future guidance we are, therefore, concerned only with the law now in force, which is found in sections 4228, 4229, 4232, 4676 and 6255, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 493, and also section 4233, G. C. Without attempting to quote these various sections in full it is sufficient to say that they provide a plan or scheme for the publication of all ordinances, resolutions, statements, orders, proclamations, notices, and reports required by law or ordinance to be published. The plan provided by said sections requires:

(1) That such publication shall be in two newspapers of opposite politics published and of general circulation in the municipality.

(2) If two such newspapers are not printed and of general circulation in said municipality, then said publication may be made in any newspaper printed and of general circulation in said municipality.

(3) If no newspaper is printed and of general circulation in said municipality, then said publication may be made in any newspaper of general circulation therein, or by posting.

It is further provided that newspapers to meet the requirements of being printed in a municipality shall have at least one side thereof printed in such municipality. It is provided also, that if no newspaper possessing the above requirements be printed in a municipality, or if the publisher thereof upon tender of the legal charge for printing, refuses to print said publication, then said publication may be made in any newspaper of general circulation at such place. If anything further was necessary to add to the mandatory character of the provisions above quoted it may be found in section 4233, G. C., which provides that it shall be deemed a sufficient defense to any suit or prosecution under an ordinance, to show that no such publication or posting as herein required was made. Admittedly, then, the method of publication provided for as heretofore noted is mandatory and any publication of any ordinance, resolution, statement, order, proclamation, notice or report not made in conformity with said requirements is void and the subject matter of said ordinance, proclamation, resolution, statement, order, notice or report is of no legal force and effect.

It must also be emphasized in this connection that the foregoing provisions of the law do not permit of any alternative method of publication except under the conditions prescribed in the law itself, which conditions are certain, definite and fixed. That is to say, the publication is required first to be made in two newspapers of opposite politics. If two newspapers of opposite politics are printed within the municipality in question no other method of publication may be legal. It is no answer to the requirement of the law in this behalf to say that because a municipal officer may have a pecuniary interest in one of said newspapers it follows that such newspaper is disqualified, because the fact remains that a newspaper of the description named in the law is published in said municipality and when so published no other method for the publication of ordinances, etc., is legal. Again, it is provided, as before noted, that if but one newspaper be published in said municipality such publication shall be made therein unless the owner thereof refuses to publish the same, whereupon a tender must be made of the legal charge for printing such publication before it may be made in any other manner or by any other means.

Let us assume in the latter case that the owner of said newspaper, being an officer of the corporation or the mayor, as suggested in your second inquiry, refuses to publish said notice. Upon that ground then, before publication can be made by any other method, some duly authorized officer of the corporation must tender to the owner of said paper the legal charge for printing said publication, and is therefore placed in the utterly absurd position of being compelled by law to solicit another officer of the corporation to commit a crime. It would seem that without further comment it is clear that the legislature intended no such abnormal situation as this. However, the provisions of sections 3808 and 12912 are intended to prevent dishonest officials from profiting at the expense of the public. At common law a public officer was not prohibited from performing a purely ministerial duty for the reason that he may have some interest therein, but if his official act involved the exercise of judgment and discretion and he had a personal interest therein he was prohibited from acting unless the duty imposed upon him was one which could not be performed by any other official or in any other manner and the public good required that said duty be executed. Throop, Public Officers, section 607.

In the cases here presented the consideration to be paid for the publication required by the statutes under consideration is fixed by statutory law and no exercise of discretion or judgment is required of any official in determining what medium shall be selected for the publication of any ordinance because there is but one medium in each case through and in which said publication may be made.

It follows therefore, that the duty imposed by law upon a municipal officer to procure a publication in the newspaper named in your first and second inquiry is purely a ministerial duty because the law itself names such newspaper as the only medium through which such notices may be given to the public and fixes the maximum price which may be paid therefor.

In the case of Richardson v. Township Trustees, 6 O. N. P., (n. s. 505, the court in the syllabus states:

> "The fact that one of the township trustees is a stockholder and director in a bank situated within the township, which has submitted the highest bid for the usage of the township funds and to act as depository under the provisions of section 1513, does not under the provisions of section 6976 disqualify the bank from so acting."

The court in passing upon the facts in this case, which I think are analogous to the facts submitted in your inquiries, makes the following observation:

> "It can readily be seen that the application of the rigid principle urged by counsel for plaintiff in this case would thwart the very purpose of the law and work a great detriment to the public concerned. Carried to its last analysis, it would mean that no one who was in any way interested in the profits of a bank would be wise in assuming a public trust, such as a member of a school board or a board of township trustees. If they should assume those positions, and in many cases without pay, it would simply disqualify the banks in which they were interested from being depositories for the funds, and for that reason would make such persons practically ineligible for such positions, or in any event unwilling to hold them. Especially so, in view of the fact that the doing of the thing complained of in this case by the township trustee makes him, under the interpretation placed upon the statute by counsel for plaintiff, guilty of an offense of which he can be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or imprisoned not more than six months nor less than thirty days, or both, and for forfeiture of his office.
> "I cannot persuade myself to believe that section 6976 was ever intended for any such purpose. I am convinced that the township trustees of Sycamore township in doing the things complained of in the petition herein were acting strictly within the law and carrying out the duties imposed upon them."

The foregoing observations are in harmony with my conception of the situation presented by your inquiries. I am of the opinion that the interests of the public would be far less vitally affected by permitting publications to be made under the circumstances named, in the newspapers mentioned, than to permit the provisions of sections 3808 and 12912, supra, to be so construed as to cover and therefore prohibit such publication. Indeed, if publication of ordinances may not be made in the newspapers of the municipalities named, I am wholly unable to conceive of any legal method whereby said ordinances may be published in said municipalities. To make publication in any other manner would be to invite attack upon every ordinance and notice, and in the case of the issuing of bonds in my judgment would prevent their sale entirely.

In reaching this conclusion I am not overlooking the remarks of the court in the case of McCormick v. Niles, 81 O. S., 246. This case, however, was determined upon the theory that a contract was necessary to fix the liability of the city. I think contracts are necessary in the cases presented here, but that does not in the least detract from the fact that by law the newspapers named are the only parties with whom such contracts may be legally made, nor from the further fact that under no circumstances may the consideration of such contracts be more than the amount fixed by statutory law. In view of these considerations there is no opportunity for fraud and no reason for the application of the provisions of sections 3808 and 12912, supra, whose sole and only purpose, as before observed, is to prevent dishonest officials from making fraudulent contracts at the expense of the municipality and for their own profit.

I am of the opinion therefore, under the facts stated in your inquiries, and these observations must be understood as applying only to the cases presented here, that publication of ordinances and other notices required by law to be published may be made in both newspapers in question without involving the officials mentioned by reason of the provisions of sections 3808 and 12912, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SECRETARY OF STATE—AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE FARR BRICK COMPANY AUTHORIZED TO BE RECEIVED—LIMITED TO PARTICULAR CASE.

The secretary of state is advised to receive and record a certificate amending the Articles of Incorporation of The Farr Brick Company by changing (with the unanimous consent of all its stockholders) $1,000,000 of its unissued common stock to preferred stock. This advice is based upon the particular facts in the case and not to be taken as a reversal of opinion dated October 1, 1915.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1916.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretray of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 8, 1916, together with enclosures, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "We are submitting for your approval certificate to the Articles of Incorporation of 'THE FARR BRICK COMPANY,' together with check for $5.00, and a ten cent internal revenue stamp.

"The proposed amendment changes $1,000,000 of their authorized common capital stock into $1,000,000 preferred stock. As a late opinion rendered by you holds that common stock cannot be changed into preferred stock by amendment, we refused to file same.

"We would appreciate an early opinion on the question raised as to whether or not a corporation can by amendment change their authorized common stock into preferred stock."

I am in receipt of a letter under the same date from Honorable R. E. Westfall, attorney for The Farr Brick Company, which I also quote as it contains a statement of the facts which are of importance in determining how I should advise you:

"With reference to the amendment of the Articles of Incorporation of The Farr Brick Company this day referred to you by the secretary of state, and confirming personal statements heretofore made to you by Mr. Benjamin A. Gage, of the firm of Gage, Day, Wilkin and Wachner, of Cleveland, as well as by myself, I beg to say that the Articles of Incorporation of the above company providing for a capital stock of $3,000,000, filed on or about March 14, 1914, were filed with the secretary of state after a full discussion with the secretary of state and a consideration of the opinion of Attorney-General Ellis under date of November 21, 1904.

"In this conference with the secretary of state the purpose of the incorporators to organize with a capital stock in the sum of $3,000,000 and by a subsequent amendment convert to preferred stock a substantial part of the authorized capitalization was fully disclosed to the secretary of state, who, relying upon the opinion of Attorney-General Ellis, above referred to, sanctioned and approved the Articles of Incorporation as filed and the plan of subsequently converting a part of the authorized capital stock into preferred stock.

"Relying upon the sanction and approval of the secretary of state, as above indicated, the Articles of Incorporation were filed, the company perfected its organization and by amendment to the Articles of Incorporation submitted to the secretary of state today, and by him referred to you the company seeks to carry out and effectuate its original plan and purpose."

The statements contained in the above letter of Mr. Westfall were also made to me by Messrs. Benjamin A. Gage and Luther Day, of Cleveland, Ohio, who are also attorneys for The Farr Brick Company, in several discussions concerning the question submitted in your letter.

From the certificate of amendment presented to you for filing by The Farr Brick Company and the letter of Mr. Westfall, above quoted, it seems that The Farr Brick Company was incorporated on March 14, 1914, with a capital stock of $3,000,000, all of which was common stock. The incorporators of The Farr Brick Company contemplated the organization of a corporation having both preferred and common stock, but at the time of filing the Articles of Incorporation they were undecided as to what portion should be preferred stock and what portion should be common stock. Upon the advice of counsel and at the suggestion of the secretary of state, and relying upon an opinion of Attorney-General Ellis rendered on November 21, 1904, it was decided that the corporation should be incorporated with a capital stock of $3,000,000 common stock, and that subsequently the corporation should by amendment change to preferred stock such portion of common stock as it should thereafter determine.

In this connection I believe that a review of the opinions or rulings of this department will be helpful. Former Attorney-General Sheets, in the year 1903, rendered two opinions—one dated January 6, and the other August 15, in both of which opinions Mr. Sheets held that there was no statutory authority in Ohio to change common stock to preferred stock by amendment of the Articles of Incorporation. In both of these opinions, however, the author stated that he had no doubt that the stockholders of the corporation by unanimous consent might change the common stock to preferred stock and that the courts would respect and enforce such an agreement, his conclusion in this latter respect, however, being not upon authority of any statutory provision, but upon the ground that the rights of the state not being affected or involved the courts would doubtless enforce any legitimate or fair contract made among the stockholders themselves.

Under date of November 21, 1904, Attorney-General Ellis, in an opinion to the then secretary of state, held that a corporation by amendment under section 3238-a, Revised Statutes, (now section 8719 of the General Code) could change common stock to preferred stock. This opinion was followed by the secretary of state and certificates of amendment whereby common stock was changed to preferred stock were accepted and recorded by him until October 1, 1915, under which date I rendered to you the opinion referred to in your letter in which I held that there is no statutory authority in Ohio to change the common stock of a corporation to preferred stock by an amendment of its Articles of Incorporation.

I am by no means persuaded that the conclusion expressed in my opinion of October 1, 1915, just referred to, is erroneous, for I am still unable to find any statutory authority in Ohio to accomplish such change in the character of the capital stock of a corporation by amendment under section 8719 of the General Code.

However, in view of the facts revealed in the letter of Mr. Westfall and the statements made to me by Messrs. Gage and Day, which were entirely in harmony with Mr. Westfall's letter, I believe that in the present instance the proposed amendment should be accepted and recorded. I reach this conclusion because the company and its attorneys at the time of its incorporation had in mind the issuance of preferred and common stock but acting in harmony with the ruling of this office and in compliance with the suggestion of the secretary of state concluded at that time to provide that all of the company's stock should be common stock, and that the change should be made at a later date when the plans of the incorporators had been more maturely considered. It would, therefore, be manifestly unjust and unfair, in view of the further revealed facts that the proposed change is made with the unanimous consent of all the stockholders, to now refuse to accept and file the proposed amendment. The rights of the state will in no wise be affected, and since all the stockholders have agreed, I have no doubt, as was stated by Mr. Sheets, that the court would respect and carry out the agreement even though no statutory authority can be found to authorize the same.

Upon the specific facts revealed, I am therefore of the opinion that you should receive and record the certificate of amendment of The Farr Brick Company referred to and enclosed in your letter.

I am returning to you herewith the proposed certificate of amendment, the check for $5.00, letter addressed to you by Mr. Gage and the ten cent revenue stamp which were enclosed with your letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—ACTUAL AND NECESSARY EXPENSES INCIDENT TO MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION OF AN AUTOMOBILE USED EXCLUSIVELY BY SUCH SUPERINTENDENT IN HIS OFFICIAL BUSINESS MAY BE ALLOWED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—DISTINCTION BETWEEN EXPENSES FOR PUBLIC AND PRIVATE PURPOSES—HOW APPORTIONED.

If a county highway superintendent is the owner of an automobile and uses the same exclusively in his work, as such superintendent, the reasonable and necessary expense of maintaining the same may be paid to him. If the automobile is used both for public business and for private purposes, a division of the expense of maintaining the same should be made which division may be on a mileage basis, or an arrangement may be made involving the payment to the superintendent of a reasonable rate per mile covered by the automobile while used on public business, which rate must not include any item of compensation for the use of the automobile.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1916.

HON. JOHN E. BETTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your communication of January 7, 1916, in which you call my attention to the provision of section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., to the effect that the county highway superintendent and his assistants, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury their actual necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging, and then inquire as to whether the county highway superintendent can use his own automobile in traveling about the county on official business and charge therefor upon a mileage or other basis.

It should first be observed that upon well established principles of public policy, a public official charged with the duty of making an expenditure on behalf of the public may not deal with himself. Any payment made to the county highway superintendent on account of the use by him of his own automobile, while traveling on the official business of the county, would, therefore, have to rest upon the principle of reimbursement to him for expenses actually incurred and could not include any item of compensation to him for the use of the automobile.

A question very similar to the one submitted by you was passed upon by me in opinion No. 618, rendered to The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices on July 17, 1915. One of the questions passed upon in that opinion was as follows:

> "A county superintendent of schools owns an automobile which he uses almost exclusively in traveling about the county in the performance of his official duties. Under the terms of section 4744-1, G. C., 104 O. L., 142, may he include the cost of gasoline, lubricating oil, repairs to tires and parts of his automobile as traveling expenses, under the provisions of this section?"

The pertinent provision of section 4744-1, G. C., relating to the traveling expenses of county superintendents of schools, reads as follows:

> "The county board may also allow the county superintendent a sum not to exceed $300.00 per annum for traveling expenses and clerical help,"

A comparison of the above quoted provision with the provision of section 7181, G. C., referred to by you, shows that both county superintendents of schools and county highway superintendents are entitled to be reimbursed for actual and necessary traveling expenses incurred while in the performance of their official duties. There is a limit upon the amount which can be paid to a county superintendent of schools on this account, and no statutory limit as to the amount which may be so paid to a county highway superintendent; otherwise the provisions are very similar and the same principles applicable in the case of a county superintendent of schools will govern in the case of a county highway superintendent.

In answering the question relating to the county superintendent of schools, the following language was used in the opinion referred to above:

> "The money thus allowed may undoubtedly be used to pay the expenses incurred by the county superintendent in providing himself with the necessary means of conveyance for the performance of his duties. The ownership of the vehicles would not preclude the payment of expenses necessarily incurred in the operation thereof. Just what expenses or what proportion of the expenses may be charged against public funds will depend upon the facts in each particular case. It is really more a matter of policy than of law. If the automobile were used exclusively in his work as county superintendent, the reasonable and necessary expense of maintaining the same might be allowed by the county board (subject, of course, to the maximum limitation). Where, however, the automobile is not so exclusively used, but is used as well for private purposes, there should be some definite arrangement entered into between the board and the superintendent. I would suggest that this arrangement be made upon a mileage basis. For instance, if the automobile were run 300 miles in a month, 200 in official business and 100 for private purposes, it would be fair and equitable for the board of education to allow two-thirds of the expenses of the upkeep for the month. If such an arrangement be not practical, the board might agree to allow the superintendent a reasonable rate per mile covered by the automobile in public business as traveling expenses of the superintendent. These, however, are mere suggestions."

Applying the principles set forth in the opinion from which the above is quoted to the facts of the case presented by you, I advise you that if a county highway superintendent is the owner of an automobile and uses the same exclusively in his work as highway superintendent, the reasonable and necessary expense of maintaining the same may, under the provision of section 7181, G. C., referred to by you, be paid to such county highway superintendent. If the automobile is not used exclusively for public business but is used as well for private purposes, a division of the expense of maintaining the same should be made, which division may properly be upon a mileage basis. If an arrangement for a division of the expense of maintaining the automobile is not practicable, an agreement may be made between the county commissioners and the county highway superintendent involving the payment to the superintendent of a reasonable rate per mile covered by the automobile while the same is being used on public business, which rate must not include any item of compensation for the use of the automobile. In other words, while the county commissioners or county highway superintendent may not, under the law, purchase an automobile for the use of the county highway superintendent, and pay for the same from public funds, and while the county highway superintendent, being charged with the duty of providing himself with transportation when engaged on official business, may not deal with himself and include in his expense accounts compensation for the use of his own automobile, yet if the county highway superintendent is the owner of an automobile and uses the same in traveling about the county on official business, he may include in his expense accounts and the county commissioners may allow to him the actual and necessary expenses incident to the maintenance and operation of the automobile during the time the same is used in the public business of the county.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF A RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT CAN LEGALLY OWN REAL ESTATE IN LIMITS OF A VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT LOCATED WITHIN SAID TOWNSHIP.

If the board of education of a township rural school district, in consolidating the schools of such district at two points within the township, finds that the most convenient location for one of the buildings is within the limits of a village school district located within said township, said board of education may, under authority of section 4749, G. C., own school property within the limits of said village school district for the purpose of operating one of its schools under said plan of consolidation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1916.

HON. FRANK W. MILLER, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of December 21 you request my opinion as follows:

> "Jefferson township rural school district in Madison county, Ohio, is contemplating the consolidation of its schools at two points. The most convenient location for one of these schools is in West Jefferson. West Jefferson is a village school district. Has the board of education of Jefferson township rural school district the legal right to own the building and grounds and operate its school within the territory of West Jefferson village school district?"

Section 4749, G. C., provides that the board of education of each school district shall, when properly organized, be a body politic and corporate and, as such, be capable of acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of real and personal property, and of taking and holding in trust for the use and benefit of such school district any grant or devise of land and any donation or bequest of money or other personal property.

It will be observed that, under provision of said section 4749, G. C., the location of real property which the board of education of a school district may own and hold in trust for school purposes is not confined to such district by the terms of said statute.

While under provision of section 7690, G. C., the authority to manage and control the public schools in a school district is vested in the board of education of such district, the provisions of this statute relate to the schools of a district established by the board of education thereof for the accommodation of all the youth of school age of such district, and are not applicable to a school established by the board of education of a township rural school district within the limits of a village school district located in such township, for the convenience and accommodation of a part or all the youth of school age residing in said township rural school district.

If, therefore, the board of education of Jefferson township rural school district, Madison county, in consolidating the schools of said district at two points within said township, finds that the most convenient location for one of the buildings is within the limits of the West Jefferson village school district located within said township, I am of the opinion in answer to your question that said board of education may, under authority of section 4749, G. C., own school property within the limits of said village school district for the purpose of operating one of its schools under the aforesaid plan of consolidation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—ADVERTISEMENT FOR FIVE NEW COTTAGES AT DIFFERENT INSTITUTIONS MAY BE MADE IN SAME LEGAL NOTICE—CONTRACT SHOULD BE AWARDED TO LOWEST BIDDER ON EACH OF SAID BUILDINGS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1916.

Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 20, 1915, you submitted to me the following proposition:

> "We are enclosing herewith copy of letter received from Richards, McCarty & Bulford, the architects who have prepared plans for five new buildings for state institutions.
> "The plan of advertising these buildings in one advertisement instead of five seems to us to be all right and good business policy, but we desire to inquire if such procedure is legal in order that delays may be avoided when letting the contracts.
> "These five buildings will cost about $70,000 each, or $350,000 in all; and the architects feel certain that five per cent. or more can be saved by this plan, which would mean $1,500 or $2,000 to the state."

The letter which you enclosed is as follows:

> "Columbus, Ohio, December 17, 1915.
> "Dr. A. F. Shepherd, Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.
> "My Dear Dr. Shepherd:—I am anxious that all the money possible be saved in the manner of advertising and letting the contracts for the five buildings for which plans have been completed under design B-2 for the board of administration. We therefore ask, if you have not already secured such an opinion, that you secure an opinion from the attorney-general on the following point:

"First, in advertising the two buildings for Gallipolis, one building for the Columbus State Hospital, one building for the Custodial Farm, and one building for the Institution for Feeble-Minded at Columbus, if one advertisement cannot be made to cover all of these buildings; such advertisement to be inserted in the required number of papers in the state for general circulation and in the principal paper in the county in which each of these buildings is to be built; the cost of the advertisement to be prorated between the institutions, that is two-fifths to be paid by the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics at Gallipolis, two-fifths by the Institution for Feeble-Minded, and one-fifth by the Columbus State Hospital.

"Another object of this advertisement is to enable contractors who read these advertisements to know that there are five buildings of the same design, bids on which can be received all at the same time, and state in the advertisement that bids will be received on each building separately and that an alternate proposal will be received on each building in case the contractor is awarded the contract for all five buildings.

"It is my belief that if we can do this there will be a considerable percentage of the cost of the buildings saved if they can all be let to one contractor. The question in my mind is whether under the present law we could do this. If we can, it seems to me that it ought to be done.

"Yours respectfully,

"(Signed) C. E. Richards."

The sole question raised by your letter is relative to advertising for bids for the five buildings. The said buildings are to be erected under the building regulations—sections 2314, et seq., of the General Code.

Section 2314, G. C., provides that before entering into contract "for the erection, alteration or improvement of a state institution or building or addition thereto, excepting the penitentiary," accurate plans and specifications, bills of material and an accurate estimate of cost shall be made, which, under section 2315, G. C., shall receive the approval of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state, and, if approved, a copy thereof filed in the office of the auditor of state.

Under section 2316, G. C., public notice of the time and place where sealed proposals will be received shall be given, and, under section 2317, the method of advertising such notice is provided for.

Under section 2318, G. C., it is provided that "on the day named in the notice, such officer, board or other authority shall open the proposals and award the contract to the lowest bidder."

It will be readily seen, therefore, that in so far as the provisions of law governing the building regulations are concerned, the legislature had in contemplation that each particular improvement is a separate and distinct entity.

I can see no legal objection to the procedure that is outlined in the letter of your architect: to advertise all of the buildings contemplated to be built in one advertisement, dividing the cost thereof between the separate appropriations, pro rata, and in such advertising stating that bids will be received on each building separately and an alternate proposal will be received on each building in case the contractor is awarded the contract for all five buildings.

However, it must be borne in mind, as before stated, that each improvement is a separate and distinct entity, and that the contract on each such improvement must be let to the lowest bidder. Therefore, in order to let contracts to one contractor for the five buildings in question it would be necessary that he be the lowest bidder on each of said buildings, unless under section 2319, G. C., the written consent of the governor, auditor of state and secretary of state be obtained to accept on the various items a proposal other than the lowest.

I would also call your attention to the appropriations:

The appropriation to your board for the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics is for "two cottages to cost complete $140,000";

The appropriation to your board for the Columbus State Hospital, as amended by the veto of the governor, is for "one cottage to cost complete $70,000";

The appropriation to your board for the Institution for Feeble-Minded, Custodial Farm, is for "one cottage Custodial Farm to cost complete $70,000";

And the other appropriation for such Institution for Feeble-Minded, as amended by the veto of the governor, is for "one cottage to cost complete $70,000."

It therefore appears that so far as the legislature is concerned, it has considered the cottage for the Columbus State Hospital, the cottage for the Custodial Farm and the cottage for the Institution for Feeble-Minded as separate and distinct items, but it has considered as one item the two cottages for the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics.

From the letter of your architect, however, I assume that he has divided the above item for two cottages into two separate items. That being the case, therefore, each particular improvement is to be considered as separate and distinct from the other, and as to each, as before stated, the contract should be awarded to the lowest bidder, unless the provisions of section 2319, G. C., are complied with.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF CERTAIN CANAL LAND LEASES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1916.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 7, 1916, transmitting to me for examination the following leases of canal lands:

The Newburgh & South Shore Ry. Co., canal lands at Cleveland, valuation	$6,000.00
John W. McBroom, Logan, Ohio, portion of abandoned Hocking canal lands north of Logan, valuation	11,666.66
The Berea Pipe Line Company, St. Marys, lease granting the right to lay a gas main along the Ohio canal at Cleveland, valuation	5,750.00

I find these leases to be in regular form and am, therefore, returning the same with my approval endorsed upon the triplicate copies thereof.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CIVIL SERVICE—NON-COMPETITIVE OCCUPYING POSITIONS—PROPER CERTIFICATION OF ELIGIBLES FOR POSITIONS WHEN COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION HAS BEEN HELD—NON-COMPETITIVE WITH ELIGIBLE LIST MUST BE CERTIFIED—NO DISCRETION WITH COMMISSION.

The provisions of section 486-31, G. C. (106 O. L., 418) require the names of all persons holding positions in the classified service at the time said law became effective and who have not passed a regular competitive examination, or been in the service seven years as therein provided, to be certified, with the names of those qualifying by competitive examination, for permanent appointments to fill said positions.

This certification must be made by the commission not only when an eligible list exists but when such list must be prepared later by the commission, and the duty to so certify in both instances is a ministerial duty, mandatory in its character and regarding which the commission may exercise no discretion.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 11, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of January 5, 1916, as follows:

"Several points have arisen in regard to the certification of eligibles to positions occupied by non-competitives under the provisions of the new civil service law, upon which we do not feel competent to pass judgment.

"Paragraph 2 of sections 486-31 of the new law, provides that:

"'The name of each officer, employe and subordinate holding a position in the classified service of the state, the counties, and city school districts thereof, at the time this act takes effect, who has not passed a regular competitive examination, and who has not been in the service seven years as herein provided, shall, within ten days after this act becomes effective, be reported by the appointing authority to the commission, and shall be certified to the appointing authority in addition to the three candidates for appointment to such position. If any such person is reappointed, he shall be deemed to have been appointed under the provisions of this act. If no eligible list exists, such person may be retained as a provisional employe until such time, consistent with reasonable diligence, as the commission can prepare eligible lists, when such position shall be filled as prescribed in this act.'

"Is it the intent of this section:

"1. That non-competitives in order to be qualified within the provisions of this act must be appointed after consideration with three names from an eligible list within the ten days after the taking effect of the law?

"2. If such certification has not been made because of the fact that the State Civil Service Commission had no appropriate list from which to certify persons eligible, are non-competitives who are retained as provisionals given the same status with regard to the civil service law as persons provisionally appointed under the provisions of sections 486-14, and in order to qualify must they compete to secure a position on an eligible list that will entitle them to be certified back?

"In other words, is it the intent of this law that non-competitives retained provisionally when no eligible list existed, within the ten days shall be certified back to their positions as non-competitives along with three other names from an appropriate list when created?

"This further question has also arisen:

"The law provides that for certain reasons the State Civil Service Commission may refuse to receive applications from individuals, or refuse to certify individuals who have, by examination, secured a place on an eligible list. If it appeared that a non-competitive is not a satisfactory person by reason of his character or conduct in office, to occupy the position which he held under the former law, could the State Civil Service Commission refuse to certify his name for the same reasons that it has power to refuse to certify persons from an eligible list created by regular competitive examination?"

Before considering the provisions of said paragraph two, quoted in your letter, it is material that we refer to the plan or scheme of the law as it appears from the provisions of the preceding paragraph of said sections 486-31, as amended 106 O. L., 418. By this latter paragraph it is provided that all officers and employes holding positions under the civil service law by virtue of having taken a regular competitive examination as provided by law shall, when the provisions of the act of which said section is a part become effective, be deemed appointees within the provisions of said act. It is further provided, however, that no person holding a position in the classified service by virtue of having taken a non-competitive examination shall be deemed to have been appointed or to be an appointee in conformity with the provisions of said act. An exception, however, is made in the application of said last named provision by exempting therefrom all persons who have served continuously and satisfactorily the state or any political subdivision thereof for not less than seven years next preceding January 1, 1915. Persons who meet these qualifications are deemed appointees within the provisions of the act. From the foregoing provisions it appears that all persons holding positions by reason of non-competitive examination are not protected in said positions by the civil service law unless they come within the class last described.

Referring now to your first inquiry I am of the opinion that the ten days' limitation specified in said paragraph two, which you quote, refers to and applies only to the action of the appointing authority in reporting to the Civil Service Commission all persons who have not passed a regular competitive examination and who have not been in the service seven years as provided in paragraph one. That is to say, the clause "within ten days after this act becomes effective" modifies the verb "shall be reported" and does not qualify the verb "shall be certified." This being so, then the plain purpose of the law is to require the appointing authority to report to the commission within ten days the names of all persons who have not taken a competitive examination and who have not been in the service seven years as provided in paragraph one. It does not, however, require the commission to certify back to the appointing power an eligible list within ten days, or within any other specified period. All that is required, if an eligible list exists, is that such certification be made by the commission within a reasonable time and with reasonable diligence. If such eligible list exists, it therefore becomes the duty of the commission to certify from it the names of three persons together with the name of the "non-competitive," who is reported as holding the position by the appointing authority, within a reasonable time, when said position may be filled by the appointment of one of the four persons so certified to said appointing authority.

In answer to your first question, therefore, I am of the opinion that the cer-tification required from the commission of the names of three persons from the eligible list together with the name of the "non-competitive" holding the position is not required to be made within ten days after the taking effecct of said law, but that such limitation of ten days applies only to the report to be made by the appointing authority to the commission of the non-competitives holding positions in the classified service.

In your second inquiry you desire to know what are the further rights of non-competitives who are retained as provisionals in the event no eligible list exists at the time the appointing authority makes the report hereinbefore referred to in answer to your first inquiry.

The non-competitives who are retained as provisional appointees hold their positions until an eligible list is prepared, which must be done by the commission with reasonable diligence. When this list is so prepared the statute provides that said position shall be filled as prescribed in said act. That is to say, the same certification shall then be made as in the first instance, which must include the name of the non-competitive in the list with three other names standing highest on the list of those who have taken a competitive examination. From this eligible list of four names the appointing power may then fill the position permanently.

Replying to your third question I must advise that the certification of non-competitives, as required by the provisions of law hereinbefore considered, is a mandatory duty imposed upon the commission, purely ministerial in its character and regarding which the commission may exercise no discretion. If there are any reasons, such as those noted in your inquiry, which should prevent the appointment of a non-competitive, they must be considered by the appointing power and not by the commission unless charges are filed as provided by law for the removal of said non-competitives from the positions which they hold. If such charges are not filed then it is the duty of the commission to certify the names of all non-competitives as hereinbefore noted.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF AGRICULTURE—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO APPOINT APPRAISERS TO DETERMINE VALUE OF CATTLE WHICH ARE REQUIRED TO BE KILLED UNDER SECTION 1114, G. C.

The board of agriculture is without authority to appoint persons whose duties shall be to visit various parts of the state and appraise all such animals as may be determined by the board, through its secretary, necessary to destroy under section 1114, G. C., 106 O. L., 150, and to pay to persons so appointed salary or compensation for such services fixed by the board.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 12, 1916.

The Board of Agriculture, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a request for an opinion from Hon. R. W. Dunlap, secretary of the board of agriculture, under date of December 31, 1915, as follows:

"Section 1114 of the General Code, provides in part:

"'If, in order to prevent the spread of any dangerously contagious and infectious disease among the live stock of the state, the board of agriculture deems it necessary to destroy animals affected with or which have been exposed to dangerously contagious or infectious disease, it shall determine, through its secretary, what animals shall be killed and appraised or cause them to be appraised by disinterested citizens as provided by law.'

"Acting under this statute and in the face of an emergency, the board of agriculture on November 4, 1915, appointed a board of appraisers to determine the value of cattle which had been tested and condemned on account of being infected with tuberculosis.

"We have no specific appropriation available to pay the salaries and expenses of these appraisers. The board of agriculture had directed me to ask your opinion as to how the salaries and expenses of this board of appraisers can properly be paid."

From your inquiry and personal interview it is learned that it was contemplated by your board, in the appointment of what is by you termed a board of appraisers, consisting of four or more members, to have at least two members of such board of appraisers to visit the various sections of the state and to view and appraise all animals which the board of agriculture, through its secretary, may determine it to be necessary to kill in order to prevent the spread of any dangerously contagious or infectious disease among the live stock of the state, under the provision of section 1114, G. C., 106 O. L., 150. It is proposed by the board of agriculture to fix the compensation to be received by the said "board of appraisers" for the services by them rendered, and inquiry is made as to how such compensation may be lawfully paid.

I construe that part of section 1114, G. C., 106 O. L., 150, above quoted, to mean that when it shall have been determined by the board of agriculture, through its secretary, what animals shall be killed, it then becomes the duty of the board, either to appraise such animals or to cause the same to be appraised, by disinterested citizens, as provided by law. Unless it shall be deemed practicable and expedient to cause such animals to be appraised by disinterested citizens, that duty would then devolve upon the board of agriculture.

The appraisal of such animals will, in every case, involve the exercise of sound personal judgment and discretion of a peculiar character upon the part of persons authorized to make the same. It might be argued with force that the board could readily select persons with special qualifications and ability in the valuation of such animals, whose judgment would be more accurate in the opinion of its members than that of the board itself, yet the legislature has not seen fit to make specific provision for the appointment of persons so specially qualified for this service.

We are here concerned with the taking of private property for public benefit and while in the exercise of the police power of the state it was competent for the legislature to have authorized the destruction of such animals without any compensation therefor, since the legislature has determined upon the policy of compensation for animals so destroyed, there is by reason of the statutory declaration thereon, in every owner of such animals, the right to have his compensation for their restriction fixed in strict accordance with the method prescribed by statute. In other words, the authority conferred upon the board so involves the exercise of personal judgment and sound discretion and so nearly approaches a quasi judicial function, that it may not be delegated, notwithstanding the provision of section 1087, G. C., 106 O. L., 145, that "the board of agriculture shall appoint heads of bureaus, experts, clerks, stenographers and other assistants and employes, and said board shall fix their compensation within the limits prescribed by law."

A permanent board of appraisers would not be such "disinterested citizens" as are within the contemplation of the statute. The legislature having chosen to define specifically those persons in whom authority to appraise cattle so destroyed shall be vested, I am inclined to the view that such appraisement may not be made by persons other than those upon whom such power is conferred.

An examination of house bill No. 701, 106 O. L., 660, discloses, as stated by you, that there is no appropriation therein available for the payment of the salary or compensation of appraisers such as are referred to by you, whether they be members of a permanent board such as suggested in your communication or "disinterested citizens." In the absence of such appropriation, by reason of the provision of section 22 of article 2 of the Constitution, that "no money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law," it follows of necessity that no such compensation or salary is authorized to be paid.

I am therefore compelled to advise that the salary or compensation of appraisers appointed by the board of agriculture to appraise animals which said board, through its secretary, may determine necessary to kill, under the provisions of section 1114, G. C., supra, cannot lawfully be paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF RESOLUTION FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CERTAIN ROAD IN DEFIANCE COUNTY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 10, 1916, transmitting to me for examination final resolution relating to the improvement of the Hicksville-Defiance road, petition No. 574, I. C. H. No. 420, section "C," in Defiance county.

I find this resolution to be in regular form and am therefore returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOND ISSUE OF VILLAGE OF BREWSTER, STARK COUNTY, OHIO, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In re. bonds of the village of Brewster, Stark county, Ohio, in the sum of $10,000.00 being 20 bonds at $500.00 each, dated January 1, 1916, payable one each year beginning January 1, 1917, and bearing interest at 5½% per annum payable semi-annually.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of Brewster, relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, also the bond and coupon form and certificates attached to said transcript, and am of the opinion that said proceedings have been regular and in conformity with law, and that said bonds, when properly executed and delivered, constitute valid and binding obligations of said village, and I hereby certify my approval thereof.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STEAM BOILERS—BOILERS OF LESS THAN FIFTEEN POUNDS PRESSURE EXEMPT FROM INSPECTION WHEN EQUIPPED WITH SAFETY DEVICES—RESOLUTION AUTHORIZING INSPECTION WHEN BOILERS NOT SO EQUIPPED, UNNECESSARY.

Steam boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen (15) pounds are expressly exempted from inspection by section 1058-7, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 649, when equipped with safety devices as provided in boiler rules.

No resolution is necessary to authorize the inspection of boilers not so equipped.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion relative to boiler inspection, which request is as follows:

"J. C. Callery, chief deputy of the boiler department of the Industrial commission, is having the rules of the boiler department printed at this time. He submitted to the Industrial Commission for its approval a resolution, which reads as follows:

RESOLUTION.

RESOLVED, That all boilers in the state of Ohio, carrying pressures of less than 15 lbs. per square inch, shall be inspected by a duly qualified inspector. After such inspection shall be made and boiler equipped with approved safety devices, and approved by the chief deputy inspector, and upon the payment of regular inspection fee, including $1.00 for a certificate, that a certificate shall be issued, same to be exhibited under glass at location of boiler; and this boiler will hereinafter be exempt from further inspection, as long as it is used in present location and settings.

"The members of the Industrial Commission, upon consideration, concluded that inasmuch as your department might be called upon to prosecute violators of this resolution that it would be well to call upon you to either re-draft this resolution, embodying in it the essentials as contained in the original, or to approve the original as herein drawn by the boiler department.

"Our commission is accordingly referring to you this resolution for such action as may seem to you to be advisable."

Sections 1058-7, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., page 649, is as follows:

"All steam boilers and their appurtenances, except boilers of railroad locomotives subject to inspection under federal laws, portable boilers used in pumping, heating, steaming and drilling, in the open field, for water, gas and oil, and portable boilers used for agricultural purposes, and in construction of and repairs to public roads, railroads and bridges, boilers on automobiles, boilers of steam fire engines brought into the state for temporary use in times of emergency for the purpose of checking conflagrations, boilers carrying pressure of less than fifteen pounds per square inch, which are equipped with safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules, and boilers under the jurisdiction of the United States, shall be thoroughly inspected, internally and externally, and under operating conditions at intervals of not more than one year, and shall not be operated at pressures in excess of the safe working pressure stated in the certificate of inspection hereinafter mentioned. And shall be equipped with such appliances to insure safety of operation as shall be prescribed by the board of boiler rules."

It will be noted from a reading of the provisions of sections 1058-7, supra that steam boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen pounds per square inch, which are equipped with safety devices approved by the board of boiler rules, are expressly exempted from inspection, and the purpose of your letter would appear to be the extension of the inspection laws to such boilers, under the general powers granted to the Industrial Commission of Ohio, for the purpose of securing safety to employes.

In addition to the letter submitted, Mr. Callery, chief deputy of the boiler department of your commission, has just handed me a copy of section 4, part 1 of the boiler rules, which rules, according to his statement, were amended to comply with amended section 1058-7, supra, section 4 of which rules being as follows:

"THESE RULES AMENDED TO COMPLY WITH AMENDED 103 OHIO LAWS, P. 649. PART I. SECTION 4.

"BOILERS CARRYING PRESSURES LESS THAN FIFTEEN POUNDS PER SQUARE INCH are exempt from all other requirements, if provided with the following APPROVED SAFETY DEVICES:

"Each boiler must be provided with a SAFETY VALVE of the spring pop type which cannot be adjusted to a higher pressure than that specified in section 1058-7 of the law, (page 5, section 2, this book of rules) i. e. (LESS THAN 15 POUNDS PER SQUARE INCH). Such valve to be stamped, lettered or tagged showing that it is adjusted to meet the requirements of the Industrial Commission of Ohio.

"Each boiler must also be provided with the necessary GAGE COCKS OR GLASS WATER GAGE for determining the water level in the boiler; the necessary CHECK and STOP VALVES in feed water pipes and in pipes returning condensation to the boiler; and the necessary STEAM GAGE and fusible plug.

"Owners should have the above equipment inspected by a qualified inspector after installation. If the equipment has been properly installed, the inspector shall then report to the department that the boiler is 'Exempt from further inspection.'

"If changes are to be made in the equipment, or it becomes necessary to increase the steam pressure above fifteen pounds, the department must be notified by the owner or user before such changes are made."

The questions raised by Mr. Callery verbally were as to the powers of the department, through its inspectors, to inspect boilers alleged by the owners to be equipped with safety devices, which safety devices, however, are not in accordance with section 4 of the rules quoted above.

The purpose of section 1058-7, G. C., as amended, supra, is to render unnecessary the inspection of certain classes of boilers therein mentioned, and with special reference to boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen pounds the requirement for the exemption from inspection is that the rules laid down by your commission, with reference to safety devices have been complied with; in other words, that the boilers have been equipped as provided in section 4 of the boiler rules, supra.

It is my opinion, therefore, that there is no authority vested in your department to inspect boilers carrying a pressure of less than fifteen pounds, when such boilers have been equipped with safety devices in accordance with the rules provided pursuant to section 1058-7, supra, and the general powers of the commission, with reference to its safety matters, are limited with respect to the boilers referred to specifically in section 1058-7, G. C., supra. I therefore cannot approve of the resolution as adopted, nor in fact do I see any necessity for the adoption of any resolution covering the point in question, as your commission has ample authority under its general provisions to inspect such boilers as are not specifically exempted by section 1058-7, G. C., as amended, supra.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—TOWNSHIP CLERK—TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT.

The offices of township clerk and township highway superintendent are not incompatible and may be held by one person at the same time unless the volume of the township's business be such that it is physically impossible for one person to properly discharge the duties of both offices.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 29, 1915, I have a communication from Mr. Winkeljohn, mayor of St. Henry, Ohio, in which he inquires as to whether the township trustees may appoint the township clerk as township highway superintendent, and I am addressing an opinion to you covering the matter referred to in Mr. Winkeljohn's letter.

It should first be observed that there is no statutory provision to the effect that one person may not hold the offices of township clerk and township highway superintendent at the same time. It therefore follows that both offices may be held by one person at the same time unless the offices are incompatible.

In determining whether the offices are incompatible, it becomes important to consider in the first instance whether one is subordinate to or in any way a check upon the other. An examination of the statutes relative to the appointment, compensation, expenses, powers and duties of township highway superintendents discloses that township highway superintendents are appointed by the township trustees, who fix their compensation, and that their compensation and all proper and necessary expenses, when approved by the township trustees, shall be paid by the township treasurer upon the warrant of the township clerk. Township highway superintendents are not authorized to certify any claims to the township clerk which the latter may pay without the approval and allowance of the trustees. In so far as claims for dragging roads are concerned, such claims are to be reported by the township highway superintendent to the trustees and these claims cannot be paid until allowed by the trustees.

The statutes relating especially to the duties of township highway superintendents, in connection with road repair work, do not provide the method of paying claims for such work, but inasmuch as this work, when performed by the township highway superintendent, is to be done under the direction of the trustees, it is apparent that claims for work or materials in connection with the repair of township roads are to be allowed by the trustees before payment.

From the above it seems clear that the township clerk is not in any way a check upon the office of township highway superintendent for the reason that the township clerk is not authorized to audit or allow any claims presented by the township highway superintendent, either in favor of himself or in favor of others, and is not authorized to draw any warrants in favor of the township highway superintendent or in favor of other persons for the payment of debts incurred by the township highway superintendent, until the claims covered by such warrants have been passed upon and approved by the township trustees.

It remains to consider the question of whether it is physically possible for one person to discharge the duties of both offices and this question is one that must be determined in each instance by reference to the volume and importance of the business of any particular township. It is my opinion, therefore, that the offices of township clerk and township highway superintendent are not incompatible and may be held by one person at the same time unless the volume of the township's business be such that it is physically impossible for one person to properly discharge the duties of both offices.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEE—INSPECTOR OF ROAD IMPROVEMENT WHEN ROAD IS CONSTRUCTED UNDER PROVISION OF SUB-DIVISION 3 OF SECTION 6919, G. C.

A trustee of a township may act as inspector for a county in the construction of a road through the township for which such inspector is trustee, where the road is constructed under the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 6919, G. C., unless the volume of the township's business requiring the attention of the trustee and the character of the inspector's duties be such that it is physically impossible for one person to properly discharge the duties of both positions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1916.

HON. OTHO W. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Bucyrus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 29, 1915, which reads as follows:

> "I desire your opinion on this question: Can a trustee of a township act as inspector for the county, in the construction of a road through the township for which said inspector is trustee, said road improvement being made under subdivision 3 of section 98, of the Cass road law?
> "As I understand it, an inspector would come under the civil service law and of course would have to take an examination and all of that, but the question is as to whether or not there is any incompatibility between the positions of inspector and township trustees on a road improvement being made under subdivision 3 of section 98, of the Cass road law.
> "The sole question probably would be this: That the township would be called upon to pay a certain portion of this expense, thereby giving the township certain rights in respect to the construction of the road. As for instance, say that the contractor would not construct said road according to his contract, possibly the trustees would have a right to raise some question in respect thereto, and if one of the trustees were an inspector upon the road, it is very evident that he would not be in a very good position to make any complaint or raise any objection whatever, as trustee."

Subdivision 3 of section 98, of the Cass highway law, section 6919, G. C., reads as follows:

> "The county commissioners may assess all or such part of the costs and expenses, as they deem equitable, on the real estate abutting upon said improvement, according to the benefits thereto, and the balance thereof, if any, shall be paid by the county and the township or townships in which such road may be in whole or in part situated in such proportions as may be agreed upon between the county commissioners and trustees of such township or townships."

Section 98 of the Cass highway law, section 6919, G. C., is a part of the chapter of that act relating to road construction and improvement by county commissioners. The section in question provides that the board of county commissioners shall, at the time a county road improvement is granted, whether upon a petition or by unanimous vote of the board without a petition, determine by resolution the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses thereof, and such compensation, damages, costs and expenses shall be apportioned and paid in the manner specified in the petition, when the board is acting upon a petition, which shall be in one of eight methods enumerated in the section. Subdivision 3 of the section referred to by you and quoted above sets forth the third of the eight enumerated methods. Under subdivision 3 all of the cost of an improvement may be assessed on the real estate abutting thereon or a part may be assessed against such real estate and the balance paid by the county and the township or townships in which the road may be, in whole or in part, situated, in such proportions as may be agreed upon between the county commissioners and township trustees.

From the argument contained in your communication, I assume that in the case referred to by you only a part of the cost is to be assessed and that the balance is to be divided between the county and township according to the terms of the agreement between the commissioners and trustees. Inasmuch as the commissioners must determine the method of payment at the time the improvement is granted, it is manifest that the agreement between the commissioners and trustees as to the division of expenses must be made prior to the granting of the improvement. When the township trustees have entered into an agreement with the county commissioners as to the division of that part of the cost and expense of the improvement not assessed against the real estate abutting thereon, the township trustees are functi officio. All subsequent proceedings are to be carried forward by the county commissioners and the township trustees are thereafter absolutely without any authority whatever in the premises.

Under section 6911, G. C., the commissioners are to determine the route and termini of the road and the kind and extent of the improvement and are vested with authority to order the county surveyor to make such surveys, plats, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications as may be required for the improvement and the profile and grade are subject to the approval of the commissioners. All notices to be given in connection with subsequent proceedings are to be given by the county commissioners who, under section 6915, G. C., are authorized to allow compensation for land or property taken and such damages as will in their judgment accrue from the construction of the improvement.

Under sections 6917 and 6918, G. C., the final determination of the question of whether the improvement is to be constructed, taking into consideration the questions of public convenience and welfare and cost and expense, rests with the county commissioners; under section 6922, G. C., estimated assessments are made by the county surveyor and are subject to the approval of the county commissioners; under section 6927, G. C., the levy made for the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of that part of the cost to be paid by the township is to be made by the county commissioners; under section 6945, G. C., the contract for the work is let by the county commissioners, and other sections of the act provide that the work shall be done under the supervision of the county highway superintendent and all estimates are to be paid to the contractor only when approved by such county highway superintendent.

From the above it appears that when, prior to the granting of the improvement, a board of township trustees enters into the agreement contemplated by subdivision 3 of section 6919, G. C., such board has completely exhausted its authority in the premises, has no control of the subsequent proceedings and does not even levy the tax to pay the proportion of the cost and expense which the board has agreed to assume on behalf of the township. Inasmuch as the township trustees have no official functions to perform after entering into an agreement with the county commissioners, which agreement must precede the granting of the improvement, I am unable to say that the township trustees have any check upon any officials who may be concerned in the carrying out of the work subsequent to the time the agreement is entered into between the trustees and commissioners.

I therefore conclude that the office of township trustee is not incompatible with the position of inspector upon road work being carried forward under the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 6919, G. C., unless it is physically impossible for one person to discharge the duties of both positions.

I advise you, therefore, in answer to your specific inquiry, that the trustee of a township may act as inspector for a county in the construction of a road through the township, for which such inspector is trustee, where the road is constructed under the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 6919, G. C., unless the volume of the township's business requiring the attention of the trustee and the character of the inspector's duties be such that it is physically impossible for one person to properly discharge the duties of both positions. This latter question is one that must be determined in each instance by reference to the particular facts of the case under consideration. Such inspector is an assistant to the county highway superintendent appointed under authority of section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., but your inquiry does not involve any discussion of the application of the civil service law of the state. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—EMPLOYMENT OF AN INVESTIGATION OFFICER FOR HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT—NO AUTHORITY TO COMPENSATE SUCH AN EMPLOYE FROM "MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR" FUND.

The state highway commissioner is without authority to compensate an employe from the "maintenance and repair" fund, so-called, and require him to devote any considerable or substantial part of his time to the investigation of accounts, payrolls, bills, quantities of materials furnished, the financial status of contractors and similar matters, or to require such employe to devote any substantial or considerable portion of his time to the performance of any duties the compensation for which is to be properly regarded as a part of the overhead expense of the state highway department.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 13, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 10, 1916, which communication reads as follows:

"I respectfully direct your attention to the provisions of section 6309, General Code, which reads as follows:

"'The revenues derived by registration fees provided for in this chapter shall be paid by the secretary of state weekly into the state treasury. Any surplus of such revenues which may remain after the payment of the expenses incident to carrying out and enforcing the provisions of this chapter shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling of the public roads and highways of this state, under the direction, supervision and control of the state highway department.'

"I respectfully request an opinion from you as to whether or not this department may legally employ, under the above mentioned section, a man to protect, police and patrol the inter-county highways and main market roads of this state, and include as a substantial portion of his duties as making for 'protection' the following:

"The investigation of accounts, payrolls, bills, quantities of materials furnished, financial status of contractors,—in short the making of investigations generally into matters wherein the state highway department might possibly be defrauded or where greater economy could be exercised in its various operations by its various agents.

"If you find that this department has such authority, I respectfully request you to advise me if such an employe should be secured from the classified lists of the State Civil Service Commission."

A proper answer to your inquiry involves, in the first instance, a reference to opinion No. 1149 of this department, rendered to you on January 5, 1916. It was pointed out in that opinion that from a consideration of the Cass highway law, in connection with house bill No. 701 (106 O. L., 666), and being the current appropriation measure, it was apparent that the item of $750,000.00 carried by section 2 of said house bill No. 701, for repairing, maintaining, protecting, policing and patroling public highways, as provided in section 6309 of the General Code, and all sections supplementary or amendatory thereof, was available for the payment of the compensation of employes of your department under certain conditions.

The illustration used in that opinion had reference to the appropriation of $562,500.00 carried by section 2 of house bill No. 701, for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads, but the same principle is applicable to the so-called "maintenance and repair" appropriation.

The conclusion expressed in that opinion was that compensation is payable from the three items of $1,533,400.00 for inter-county highways, $562,500.00 for main market roads, and $750,000.00 for repairing, maintaining, protecting, policing and patroling public highways, carried by section 2 of said act, only when such compensation is a part of the cost of constructing, improving, maintaining, repairing, protecting, policing or patroling some specific section of highway or the highways of some particular county under state control, and that in so far as employes of your department whose services cannot be regarded as a charge against any particular county or any particular road improvement are concerned, you are limited as to the number, character and compensation of such employes by the appropriations for your department under the head of "Personal Service."

The same conclusion was expressed in other language by observing that those salaries which are to be regarded strictly as overhead expense, and which are not paid out on account of any particular road improvement or on account of the state's road activities in any particular county, are provided for under the head of "Personal Service" and the appropriations under that head constitute a limitation which you are not authorized to disregard.

In view of the foregoing I advised you in the opinion above referred to that there is no appropriation available for the payment of the salary of an employe of your department whose duties would be to investigate accounts, payrolls, bills, quantities of materials furnished and the financial status of contractors,—in short, to make investigations generally into matters wherein the state highway department might possibly be defrauded or where greater economy could be exercised in its various operations by its various agents. It was intended to base this conclusion principally upon the proposition that in order to warrant the employment by you of any person having certain specific duties, and whose compensation must be regarded as strictly in the nature of overhead expense, an appropriation for such employe must be found in the current appropriation measure under the head of "Personal Service."

Coming now to consider section 6309, G. C., (104 O. L., 6), which section is quoted by you in your communication to me, it is provided in this section that surplus automobile revenues shall be used for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling of the public roads and highways of this state.

The appropriation of such surplus automobile revenues carried by section 2 of house bill No. 701, is to repair, maintain, protect, police and patrol public highways. In other words, the language of section 6309, G. C., is incorporated in that item of the appropriation bill carrying surplus automobile registration fees. That no part of the moneys appropriated for the repair, maintenance, protection, policing and patroling of the public highways may be used to meet the overhead expenses of the state highway department, and that as to such expenses, insofar as they consist of the compensation of employes, the appropriations for "Personal Service" constitute a limitation which may not be exceeded, is further indicated by the provision of subdivision 1 of section 214, of the Cass highway law—section 1221, G. C., to the effect that seventy-five per cent. of the state highway improvement fund shall be used for the construction, etc., of inter-county highways and for the maintenance of the state highway department, including the state's portion of the salaries of the county highway superintendents.

By the enactment of subdivision 1 of section 1221, G. C., in its present form the legislature clearly intended that all of the overhead expense incident to the operation of the state highway department should be paid from the three-fourths part of the state highway improvement fund referred to in that subdivision, and the terms of the current appropriation measure serve to strengthen and support this conclusion.

Referring to the terms "repair," "maintenance," "protection," "policing" and "patroling," these terms must be given a meaning which will make the section in which they are found consistent with the general provisions of the Cass highway law.

I am of the opinion that by the use of the word "protection" the legislature intended physical protection, and that the expenditure which may be made from surplus automobile registration fees on account of protecting the public highways of the state is an expenditure for such materials and labor as are designed to protect the surface of a roadway or its embankments from the wear of traffic or the operation of the elements. If the state highway commissioner should have reason to believe that the statutes of the state framed for the protection of the state highways and designed to prevent their improper use were being violated as to a certain specific road or roads, then, under the authority to make expenditures for policing public highways, he would have a right to employ, if he deemed it proper, such person or persons as might be necessary to police the highway or highways in question and see that the several statutes designed to prevent the improper use of the highways were observed. Under an appropriation for patroling the public highways of the state, the state highway commissioner would be authorized to employ such person or persons as might be necessary to actually go upon state highways and patrol the same, either for the purpose of preventing their abuse by the traveling public or for the purpose of detecting slight defects arising from use and repairing the same or reporting the same for repair.

But any expenditure from the appropriation for repairing, maintaining, protecting, policing and patroling the public roads and highways of this state, if in the nature of compensation, must be paid to some person actually engaged in repairing, maintaining, affording physical protection, policing or patroling a certain specific road or roads, and no part of this appropriation can be used to pay the compensation of an employe whose time is employed in the supervisory work of the department and whose compensation must be properly regarded as overhead expense.

The overhead expense of your department must be met entirely from the three-fourths part of the state highway improvement fund referred to in the first paragraph of section 214 of the Cass highway law—section 1221, G. C., and insofar as that overhead expense consists of the compensation of assistants and employes, other than county highway superintendents or engineers appointed under section 7185, G. C., where county highway superintendents are removed from their control of state work, such compensation must be paid from the appropriation made for your department under the head of "Personal Service."

The compensation of persons actually employed in repairing or maintaining or in affording physical protection to a state road, or in policing the same for the purpose of preventing and punishing violations of the laws relating to the use of such roads, or patroling the same in order to detect and repair slight defects, and whose service would be in the nature of patrol maintenance, may be paid by you from the so-called "maintenance and repair" fund.

The compensation of a person to investigate accounts, payrolls, bills, quantities of materials furnished and the financial status of contractors, being in the nature of overhead expense, may not be paid from the so-called "maintenance and repair" fund, and, as pointed out in opinion No. 1149 of this department, there is no appropriation available for your department for the compensation of such an employe.

Your question therefore resolves itself into the proposition of whether you may employ a man for one purpose, for which purpose an appropriation is available for his compensation, and then require him to devote a substantial amount of his time to the performance of duties incident to another and different position, for which position no appropriation is available.

I am compelled to answer this inquiry in the negative, and to advise you that you have no authority to compensate an employe from the "maintenance and repair" fund, so-called, and require him to devote any considerable or substantial part of his time to the investigation of accounts, payrolls, bills, quantities of materials furnished, the financial status of contractors and similar matters, or indeed to require him to devote any substantial or considerable portion of his time to the performance of any duties the compensation for which is to be properly regarded as a part of the overhead expense of your department. To reach any different conclusion would do violence to the statutes and defeat the manifest intention of the legislature, which was to require the payment of all the overhead expenses of your department from the three-fourths portion of the state highway improvement fund referred to in paragraph 1 of section 214 of the Cass highway law—section 1221, G. C., and to limit the compensation of employes engaged in a supervisory capacity, with the exception of county highway superintendents or engineers appointed under section 7185, G. C., to the appropriations for "Personal Service" carried by the current appropriation measure.

The conclusion which I have reached as to the first branch of your inquiry renders it unnecessary for me to discuss the second branch thereof.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

INTERPRETATION OF PARRETT-WHITTEMORE LAW PROVIDING FOR LISTING AND VALUATION OF PROPERTY FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION—ANNUAL APPRAISEMENT OF REAL ESTATE NOT REQUIRED UNLESS ORDERED BY TAX COMMISSION—RE-ASSESSMENT OF REAL PROPERTY ORDERED BY TAX COMMISSION—AUTHORITY VESTED IN COUNTY AUDITOR TO DETERMINE WHO SHALL PERFORM SUCH DUTY—COUNTY AUDITOR WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ORIGINATE OR CHANGE ANY ASSESSMENT OF REAL PROPERTY—ASSESSORS BEGIN APPRAISING REAL PROPERTY ON SECOND MONDAY IN APRIL—"UNIT OR TENTATIVE" VALUES OF REAL PROPERTY NOT PERMITTED—POWERS AND DUTIES OF COUNTY BOARDS OF REVISION AT ITS JUNE AND AUGUST SESSIONS—POWERS CONFERRED UPON COUNTY AUDITOR BY SECTION 5401, G. C., MAY BE EXERCISED BEFORE OR AFTER COMPLETION OF TAX LIST.

Under the provisions of the act of the general assembly known as the Parrett-Whittemore law, as found in 106 O. L., 246-272, the appraisement or assessment of real property is limited to the control of the tax commission of Ohio, the county auditor and such officers and boards as are mentioned in section 55 of the act, section 5548, G. C., and an annual appraisement of real estate is not required unless so ordered by said tax commission. If the tax commission of Ohio orders an assessment of real property, the same should be made in all counties of the state at the same time, i. e., in the same year.

The term "subdivision" as used in sections 77, 79 and 80 of the act, sections 5614, 5624-4 and 5624-5, G. C., refers to the parts of an assessment district in the case where the county auditor, under authority of section 18 of the act, assigns a part of said assessment district to an assistant assessor for the return of personal property and the assessment of such real property as may be required under section 55 of the act, and said term applies to the parts of said assessment district as subdivided. Said term also refers to the "part" of an assessment district as mentioned in the provision of the first part of section 55 of the act.

Where a re-assessment of real property is ordered by the tax commission of Ohio, under authority of section 79 of the act, section 5624-4 G. C., the discretion to determine whether said assessment shall be made by the assessor of the district in which said property is located or by an assistant assessor or assistant assessors appointed by the county auditor, under authority of section 18 of the act, is vested in said county auditor as the chief supervising assessing officer of said county, and the said tax commission may not interfere with the exercise of this discretion.

County auditors are without authority to originate or change any assessment of real property, either under any provision of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law or under any provision of any other section of the General Code now in force. Under the provisions of sections 5399, 5400 and 5401, G. C., which apply only to personal property, a county auditor may exercise such authority under the conditions named and provided in said sections.

The regularly elected and qualified assessors may not begin the work of appraising real property for the year 1916 before the second Monday in April of said year.

The county auditor is without authority to direct the assessors to fix "unit or tentative" values of real property, and he may not himself or through his deputies or assistants fix such values.

The county board of revision, in the performance of its duties, under section 51 of the act, section 5605, G. C., at its June session in any year, is limited in its consideration of valuations of real property to the statements and returns of such year, as placed before it by the county auditor in compliance with said section, and said board may not increase or decrease valuations of real estate which has not been appraised during said year.

The county board of revision may increase or decrease any valuations or correct any assessment of real property complained of, regardless of whether an appraisement of all such property has been made for the current year under provision of section 55 of the act.

The powers of the county board of revision, under provision of section 45 of the act, section 5598, G. C., may only be exercised by said board in the performance of its duties under section 44 of the act. In increasing or decreasing the valuations of real property, the county board of revision, in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by the provisions of section 43 of the act, section 5596, G. C., is limited to the investigations which it may make under section 51 of the act. Said powers may be exercised by said board in connection with the discharge of its duties under that part of section 51 of the act which relates to the examination and correction of statements and returns of personal property. Said powers may also be exercised by said board in the performance of its duties under the provisions of sections 44 and 52 of the act, sections 5597 and 5609, G. C.

The only notice of changes in valuation made by said county board of revision, acting as a board of equalization at its June session, required to be given, is that provided for in sections 58 and 59 of the act, sections 5606 and 5607, G. C.

Before said county board of revision, in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by sections 44 and 52, in connection with the exercise of the powers conferred upon it and the discharge of the duties placed upon it by the provision of section 44 of the act, can increase any valuation complained of, notice must be given as required by the provision of section 46 of the act, section 5599, G. C.

The powers of the county board of revision at its August session are confined to the hearing of complaints only.

The powers conferred upon the county auditor by provision of section 5401, G. C., may be exercised before the completion of the tax list, as well as thereafter, and the only notice required to be given in connection with the exercise of such powers is that provided for in said section.

Section 70 of the act, section 5623, G. C., makes it the duty of the tax commission of Ohio to decide all questions that may arise with reference to the construction of any statute affecting the assessment, levy or collection of taxes, in accordance with the advice and opinion of the attorney-general, and such opinion and the rules, regulations, orders and instructions of the commission prescribed and issued in conformity therewith shall be binding upon all officers, who shall observe such rules and regulations and obey such orders and instructions unless and until the same are reversed, annulled or modified by a court of competent jurisdiction. The tax commission of Ohio should formally decide the questions considered in conformity with this opinion of the attorney-general.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 14, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter requesting my opinion upon a number of questions involving an interpretation of various provisions of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law as found in 106 O. L., 246-272, and entitled "An act to provide for the listing and valuation of property for purposes of taxation and to repeal certain sections of the General Code, relating thereto."

Section 104 of said act provides:

> "This act shall take effect and be in force from and after January 1, 1916, except sections 17 to 24, both inclusive, which shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law."

Sections 17 to 24, both inclusive, of the act relate principally to the election and qualification of assessors, the appointment and qualification of assistant assessors, and to the general powers and duties of such assessors and assistants. Being excepted from the above provision of section 104 of the act, said sections became effective August 10, 1915.

Sections 31, 32 and 39 of the act were amended by an act of the general assembly found in 106 O. L., 433. Reference will hereafter be made to the provisions of said sections as amended.

It should be observed at the outset that, by provision of section 1 of the act, the offices of district assessors, district boards of assessors and district boards of complaints, created by the act of the general assembly passed April 18, 1913, 103 O. L., 786, and known as the Warnes law, are abolished and the terms of office of all persons appointed to said offices shall, upon the taking effect of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law, cease and terminate.

Said section further provides that:

> "District assessors and district boards of assessors shall turn over to the county auditor of the counties constituting their respective assessment districts, and district boards of complaints shall turn over to the county boards of revision, created by this act, of the counties constituting their respective districts, all the books, papers, files, records and furniture of their said offices. Any unfinished business of a district assessor or a board of assessors shall be completed by such county auditor and any unfinished business of a district board of complaints shall be completed by such county board of revision."

Section 2 of the act, being section 5579 of the General Code, provides that in addition to all other powers and duties vested in or imposed upon it by law, the tax commission of Ohio shall direct and supervise the assessment for taxation of all real and personal property in the state, and further provides that:

> "County auditors shall, under the direction and supervision of the tax commission of Ohio, be the chief supervising, assessing officers of their respective counties, and, with the local assessors selected in the manner provided in this act, shall list and value real and personal property for taxation, within and for their respective counties, except as may be otherwise provided by law. There shall also be in each county, a board to hear complaints and revise assessments of real, and personal property for taxation, which shall be known as the county board of revision."

Section 24 of the act (Sec. 3354, G. C.) provides that:

"Assessors, within their respective districts, and assistant assessors within such territory as may be assigned to them respectively, shall, under the direction of the county auditor, list and value for taxation the property subject to taxation therein, except as otherwise provided by law, and in the performance of such duties shall have and perform under his direction all the powers and duties of the county auditor in respect thereto."

Said section further provides that:

"Wherever in the General Code, or in this act, the words 'assessor,' 'district assessor,' 'township assessor,' 'ward assessor,' 'precinct assessor,' 'assessor of real estate' or 'assessor of real property,' are used, the same shall be deemed to mean the county auditor or the assessor, as the case may be. The county auditor or the assessor shall, unless otherwise provided by law, perform, or cause to be performed, all the duties, exercise all the powers and be subject to all the liabilities and penalties devolved, conferred or imposed by law upon such officers."

It will be observed that, under the above provisions of the statutes, the power and authority to direct and supervise the assessment for taxation of all real and personal property in the state is still vested in the state tax commission, while the county auditor, generally speaking, takes the place of the district assessor or district board of assessors, as the chief supervising, assessing officer of the county, the assessors and assistant assessors selected in the manner provided in the act take the place of the deputy district assessors heretofore appointed under provision of said Warnes law, and the county board of revision succeeds the district board of complaints as a board to hear complaints and revise assessments of real and personal property for taxation.

Your questions will be considered in the order in which you have submitted them, the first question being as follows:

"Is an annual appraisement of real property required, or is the same only to be made when directed by the tax commission, or considered advisable by the county auditor?"

I have experienced much difficulty in coming to a satisfactory conclusion as to the proper answer to this question. Arguments difficult to meet may be advanced for or against either the annual appraisement or the appraisement only when ordered by the state tax commission.

The policy of the state in the past, together with the attendant question of unnecessary expenditure of money, as well as what appears to be the general understanding of those who had to do with the bill, have led me to take the position that annual appraisement is not required.

The question is a very important one and its determination now different from that of a court hereafter might cause serious complications were it not for the provisions of section 70 of the act (G. C. 5623) to the spirit of which at least I believe the courts will give due consideration. This section provides:

> "The tax commission of Ohio shall decide all questions that may arise with reference to the construction of any statute affecting the assessment, levy or collection of taxes, in accordance with the advice and opinion of the attorney general. Such opinion and the rules, regulations, orders, and instructions of the commission prescribed and issued in conformity therewith shall be binding upon all officers, who shall observe such rules and regulations and obey such orders and instructions unless and until the same are reversed, annulled or modified by a court of competent jurisdiction."

A somewhat similar provision to section 70 was upheld by the court in the case of State v. Halliday, 61 O. S., 352.

In many counties of the state it takes the greater part of a year to make the real estate appraisement and in the larger counties costs approximately from $100,000 in Franklin to $300,000 in Cuyahoga county.

Real estate values do not fluctuate rapidly enough to justify such an annual expenditure and I can see nothing to be gained by it. While the Warnes law provided for annual appraisement of real estate as a matter of fact it was omitted, the assessors merely adopting the assessment of the year before.

The argument herein will therefore be directed to support the proposition that annual appraisement of real property is not required. In connection with this question, however, I desire to call your attention to what is a very important matter not raised specifically by your inquiry. That is, the question as to whether the tax commission may order an assessment of real estate in one county and not in another. This, too, is a question not free from doubt. The constitution provides that all property shall be taxed by a uniform rule according to its true value in money. If there was an original assessment of real property in one county one year while in the adjoining county there had been no original assessment for several years, it might well be argued that the real estate in the two counties was not being taxed by a uniform rule. The only safe course therefore for the tax commission to pursue will be to order an assessment of real property in all counties of the state at the same time, i. e., in the same year. This interpretation, however, will not prevent reassessments in any one or more districts.

Recurring then to the question as asked: This question involves a consideration of section 55 of the act (section 5548, G. C., 106 O. L., 260) which provides in part as follows:

> "Each county auditor shall, annually, when so directed by the tax commission of Ohio, or when in his opinion it is advisable to reassess the real property, or any class thereof, in any district or part thereof, within his county, make and deliver to the assessor of such district an abstract from the books of his office, containing such description of such real property therein, together with such plat books and such lists of transfers of title to land made therein during the next preceding year as may be deemed necessary to enable the assessor to perform the duties imposed upon him by law in listing and valuing such property for taxation. Such abstracts, plat books and lists of transfers of title to land shall be in such form and detail as the tax commission of Ohio may prescribe. The board of county commissioners of the county, the board of township trustees of a township, the board of education of a school district, the council of a municipal corporation, or twenty-five tax payers, owners of real property, in a district, may file with the county auditor a petition asking for a reassessment of the real property or a class thereof, in any township, school district or municipal corporation or part thereof. * * *"

It will be noted that the first sentence of this section does not specifically require assessment or reassessment of real property. The force of this provision is, however, to require the auditor to make and deliver to assessors abstracts, lists of transfers and plat books necessary to enable the assessor to perform the duties imposed upon him by law.

Since, however, the abstracts, lists of transfers and plat books referred to in the section last above quoted are in every case indispensable to an assessment of real property, it follows of necessity that such assessment of real property can be said to be required only when it is provided that the abstracts, lists and books will be delivered to those officers upon whom is imposed the duty of making such assessments. That is to say, an assessment of real property cannot be said to be required except at such time as the auditor is required to make and deliver the abstracts, lists of transfers and plat books necessary therefor.

It will be observed that the phrase "or when in his opinion it is advisable to reassess the real property or any class thereof, in any district or part thereof, within his county," and all that part of section 5548, G. C., supra, following the first sentence thereof, has reference only to a reassessment of real property and can be construed to require the delivery of such abstracts, lists, books and maps only when such reassessment is authorized to be made. In so far then as said section has application to original assessment, it reads as follows:

"Each county auditor shall, annually, when so directed by the tax commission of Ohio, * * * make and deliver to the assessor of such district an abstract from the books of his office, containing such description of such real property therein, together with such plat books, and such lists of transfers of title to land made therein during the next preceding year as may be deemed necessary to enable the assessor to perform the duties imposed upon him by law in listing and valuing such property for taxation."

There is little room for doubt that without the term "annually" this provision would require the auditor to make and deliver plat books, etc., only when so directed by the tax commission or when in his opinion it was advisable to reassess real property, or when the county commissioners, township trustees, board of education, council or 25 taxpayers, owners of real property, petitioned for a reassessment of real property. What then was the effect of the insertion of the word "annually?"

If this provision read "each auditor shall, annually, make and deliver to the assessor," etc., then no doubt could arise that it was the legislative intent that the auditor should make and deliver the plat books, etc., to the assessors every year, and if such had been the legislative intent, no more apt or concise language could have been adopted. The failure of the legislature to adopt such plain and specific language is, to my mind, conclusive that it was not contemplated to impose the duty upon the auditor every year, and since such plats, lists and abstracts are in every case indispensable to an assessment or reassessment of real property, it therefore follows that an annual appraisement of real property was not contemplated or intended to be required by the enactment of section 5548, G. C., supra.

It might be argued with reason that the effect of the insertion of the word "annually" was to restrict rather than to extend the imposition of the duties of the auditor as well as the authority of the tax commission to order an assessment and to thus limit the exercise of that authority to once each year. Although we give to the term "annually" that construction most favorable to any contention, that section 5548, G. C., supra, requires an annual appraisement of real property, we may yet not overlook that provision immediately following this term which, if given any operative force at all, must attach as a condition precedent to the statutory mandate that "the auditor shall annually" make, etc. That is to say, no such construction of the term "annually" may be adopted as to render nugatory the plain terms of its accompanying provision, "when so directed by the tax commission of Ohio." As stated above, the maps, abstracts and lists here referred to being indispensable to an assessment or reassessment of real property on the order of the state tax commission, under section 5624-4, G. C., 106 O. L., 267, or the determination of the county auditor of the advisability of reassessing any real property, being a condition precedent to the furnishing of the same and, therefore, a condition precedent to such assessment or reassessment, it follows that no authority or requirement of such assessment or reassessment, except the same be in every case subject to the action of the tax commission or auditor, or the filing of a petition therefor, can be found in section 5548, G. C., supra. On the contrary, I am of the opinion that when the tax commission so orders, under section 5624-4, G. C., 106 O. L., 267, or the auditor deems it advisable, the provisions of this section require that a reassessment of real property be made as well as when the same is petitioned for and ordered under the succeeding provisions of the same section. In addition thereto, or, more correctly stating it, precedent to any such reassessment, there is authorized and required an original assessment of real property only when the same is so directed by the tax commission of Ohio, which may not be oftener than once each year.

Section 4 of the act (section 5366-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 247) provides in part as follows:

> "The listing of all property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, except the stock in trade of transient persons, shall be made between the second Monday of April and the first Monday of June, annually. The listing and valuation of all such property for taxation shall be made as of the day preceding the second Monday of April, annually, and all personal property, moneys, credits and investments except as otherwise provided in this act shall be listed and valued with respect to the ownership thereof on said date and in the place where then taxable. Wherever any property is by any existing provision of law required to be listed or returned for taxation as of a day other than the day preceding the second Monday of April, such provision shall be deemed to mean the day preceding the second Monday of April, and whenever the liability of any person or of any property to taxation is, by any existing provision of law, to be determined by reference to a day other than the day preceding the second Monday of April, said liability shall be determined by reference to the day preceding the second Monday of April. * * *"

The use of the term "all property" in the first sentence of the above section, if standing alone, would lead us to the conclusion that this section within itself requires an annual appraisement of every kind, including both real and personal property. The phrase "such property" in the second sentence, manifestly refers to all that property to which the first sentence applies. It then follows that the scope of the operation of the second sentence is dependent upon the meaning to be given to the term "all property" in the first sentence, and if the broadest meaning to which these terms are susceptible is to be adopted without reference to the further provisions of the act, an annual appraisement might be said to be required.

We may, however, in determining what meaning should be given to the phrase "all property" take into consideration, together with the provisions of the other sections of the act, the purpose of the section under consideration. It will be noted that the only purpose of this section is to fix a time as of which and the period within which the liability for taxes attaches and the valuation thereof is to be made, and it is not believed that the legislature here intended to determine the frequency with which real property should be valued for taxation.

The language of the first sentence of sections 5366-1, G. C., supra, was manifestly adopted upon consideration of section 2 of article XII of the constitution, which provides in part as follows:

> "Laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule, all moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise; and also all real and personal property according to its true value in money," etc.

While the terms of section 5366-1, G. C., are susceptible of a construction which would require an annual appraisement of real property, this section must be read in the light of its manifest purpose and construed together with and held, subject, in so far as applicable to the assessment of real property, to such limitations thereof as are effected by the provisions of section 5548, G. C., supra. That is to say, the purpose of sections 5366-1, G. C., is solely to fix the time as of which and the period within which all property which is required to be assessed within each year, shall be valued and it was not the purpose thereby to determine the frequency with which real property shall be assessed.

I am therefore of opinion that under the Parrett-Whittemore bill the appraisement or assessment of real property is limited to the control of the state tax commission and the reassessment thereof to the control of the tax commission, the county auditor and such officers and boards as are mentioned in section 5548, G. C., and that an annual appraisement of real estate is not in any wise required unless so ordered by the tax commission of Ohio. In conformity with section 70 of the act (G. C. 5623) above quoted, the tax commission should decide this question according to the above opinion of the attorney-general.

Your second and third questions read as follows:

> 2. "If a reassessment is ordered, can the tax commissioner control whether or not the reassessment shall be made by the assessor of such district, or by an assistant appointed by the county auditor?"
> 3. "What is meant by 'subdivision' of an assessment district, as set forth in section 79 of said law?"

Inasmuch as I am informed that in your second question you have in mind a reassessment of real or personal property ordered by your commission, under authority of section 79 of the act, as distinguished from a "reassessment" of real property directed by the county auditor under authority of section 55 of the act as above quoted, and under the conditions prescribed in said section, I deem it advisable, before answering your second question, to determine the proper meaning to be given to the term "subdivision" as used in said section 79, as well as in sections 77 and 80 of the act. Your third question will therefore be considered first.

Section 79 of the act (Sec. 5624-4, G. C.) provides:

> "The tax commission of Ohio may order a reassessment of the real or personal property, or any class of either, in any district or subdivision thereof, when in its opinion, such property has been unequally or improperly assessed, to the end that all classes of property in such district shall be assessed in compliance with the law."

Section 80 of the act (Sec. 5624-5, G. C.) provides:

> "When a reassessment is ordered in any district or subdivision thereof, the assessor of such district, or an assistant assessor to be appointed by the auditor, shall proceed to make such reassessment in the manner provided by law for making original assessments. Provided, however, that if the tax commission of Ohio so orders, the county auditor shall, in the case of personal property, make such reassessment by revising and correcting the statements and returns on file in his office without taking new statements or returns from the persons required by law to list or return personal property for taxation."

Upon a careful examination of all the sections of the act under consideration, I find that the term "subdivision" as used in the above provisions of sections 79 and 80, as well as in the provision of section 77 of the act, is no where defined. I think, however, that the proper meaning of said term may be determined by reference to the provision of section 18 that "the county auditor shall assign to each assistant assessor such portion of the work of the assessor as he thinks proper" taken in connection with the provision of said section that "an assistant assessor shall possess all the qualifications of an elected assessor and, after giving bond and taking an oath of office as prescribed by law, shall, in the work assigned to him, perform all the duties and be subject to all the liabilities and penalties enjoined upon elected assessors by the provisions of law," and the provision of section 55 that "each county auditor shall, annually, when so directed by the tax commission of Ohio, or when in his opinion it is advisable to reassess the real property, or any class thereof, in any district or part thereof, within his county, make and deliver to the assessor of such district an abstract from the books of his office, etc."

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your third question, that the term "subdivision," as above used, refers to the parts of an assessment district in the case where the county auditor, under authority of section 18 of the act, assigns a part of said assessment district to an assistant assessor for the return of personal property and the assessment of such real property as may be required under section 55 of the act, and said term applies to the parts of said assessment district as subdivided. Said term also refers to the "part" of an assessment district as mentioned in the above provision of section 55 of the act.

Coming now to a consideration of your second question it will be observed that under provision of section 2 of the act, as above set forth, the county auditor under the direction and supervision of the state tax commission is the chief supervising, assessing officer of the county, and with the local assessors selected in the manner provided by section 17 of the act, and the assistant assessors appointed by him under authority of section 18 of the act, is required to list and value real and personal property for taxation.

Section 17 of the act (Sec. 3349, G. C.) provides:

"At the regular election to be held in November, 1915, and biennially thereafter, assessors shall be elected in the manner provided by law for the election of ward, district, city, village and township officers, as follows: In municipal corporations divided into wards, one assessor shall be elected in each ward; in villages one assessor shall be elected; in cities not divided into wards, the board of deputy state supervisors of elections or the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as the case may be, shall, acting in conjunction with the county auditor, within ten days after this act shall become effective, divide such cities or such part or parts thereof as may be located in their county, into such number of assessment districts as in the judgment of the county auditor may be necessary in order to provide for the assessment of all the property therein; a division so fixed shall remain in effect for a period of four years, at the expiration of which and quadrennially thereafter a like division shall be made in the same manner and by the same authority. One assessor shall, at the time specified in this section, be elected in each assessment district so created; provided, however, that nothing therein shall be so construed as to require a division of any municipal corporation or part thereof into assessment districts when, in the judgment of the county auditor, such division is not necessary, in which event one assessor shall be elected in the entire municipal corporation or in that part thereof which may be located in one county as the case may be; in townships not having a municipal corporation therein, one assessor shall be elected in such township; in townships composed in part of a municipal corporation, one assessor shall be elected in the territory outside such municipal corporation. An assessor shall be a citizen possessing the qualifications of an elector of such ward, district, city, village or township. Such assessor shall take and hold his office for the term of two years, from and after the first day of January following his election. Upon the election and qualification of such assessor, the right of the deputy assessor, theretofore appointed under any provision of law to exercise any powers or perform any duties as such deputy assessor shall cease and determine, and he shall turn over to the person so elected and qualified, all the books, records, papers and furniture of said office. Such elected assessor shall be the successor of said appointed officer, with full power to take up, carry on and complete any and all of the unfinished business thereof, and he shall perform all the duties, exercise all the powers and be subject to all the liabilities and penalties devolved, conferred or imposed by law upon the deputy assessor so appointed."

Sestion 18 of the act (Sec. 3350, G. C.) provides:

"A county auditor, who deems it necessary to enable an assessor to complete his work within the time prescribed, may appoint one or more assistant assessors for such ward, district, city, village or township. The county auditor shall assign to each assistant assessor such portion of the work of the assessor as he thinks proper. An assistant assessor shall possess all the qualifications of an elected assesssor and, after giving bond and taking an oath of office as prescribed by law, shall, in the work assigned to him, perform all the duties and be subject to all the liabilities and penalties enjoined upon elected assessors by the provisions of law. Such assistant assessors shall not be subject to the provisions of any civil service law or regulation."

Section 71 of the act (Sec. 5624, G. C.) provides:

"The tax commission of Ohio shall, from time to time, prescribe such general and uniform rules and regulations and issue such orders and instructions, not inconsistent with any provision of law, as it may deem necessary, respecting the manner of the exercise of the powers and discharge of the duties of any and all officers, relating to the assessment of property and the levy and collection of taxes. It shall cause the rules and regulations prescribed by it to be observed, the orders and instructions issued by it to be obeyed and the forms prescribed by it to be observed and used."

Under the above provisions of the statutes, it is clear that the county auditor, as the chief assessing officer of his county, can always direct and if necessary order the reassessment of real property under the conditions prescribed in section 55 of the act, as above quoted, and that the assessor, elected under authority of section 17, and the assistant assessor appointed by said county auditor under authority of section 18, are at all times under the direction and subject to the orders of said officer. All rules and regulations prescribed by the state tax commission and orders made by said commission under authority of section 71 of the act, as above quoted, in connection with the listing of personal property and the reassessment of real property must be directed to the county auditor of the county in which such property is located and through him to the local assessors and assistant assessors in the various assessment districts of such county.

It seems equally clear that if a reassessment of real property in any assessment district or subdivision thereof is ordered by your commission, under authority of section 79 of the act, such reassessment must be made by the assessor of such district or by an assistant assessor or assistant assessors appointed by the county auditor under authority of section 18 of the act, and that the assessor of such district or the assistant assessor or assistant assessors, as the case may be, in the performance of their duty, are at all times subject to the direction and orders of said county auditor.

I am of the opinion therefore, in answer to your second question, that, where a reassessment of real property is ordered by your commission, under authority of said section 79 of the act, the discretion to determine whether said assessment shall be made by the assessor of the district in which said property is located or by an assistant assessor or assistant assessors, appointed by the county auditor under authority of section 18 of the act, is vested in said county auditor, as the chief supervising, assessing officer of said county, and that the state tax commission may not interfere with the exercise of this discretion.

Your fourth question is as follows:

"Is the county auditor an original assessing officer? Can he change valuations listed and returned to him by local assessors? Is his authority in this respect identical with the authority of the present district assessors under the Warnes law, particularly that contained in section 4 and section 9 of said law?"

The original assessing officers as to real and personal property are the elected assessors and their assistants, except when a reassessment is ordered by the tax commission as to a class of personal property, when, under section 80 above quoted, the reassessment may be made by the county auditor himself as an original assessing officer. While the district assessor under the Warnes law had authority to make original assessments of real property, I do not think such power is vested in the county auditor, as the chief supervising, assessing officer of the county, by any provision of the act under consideration. This power is vested in the elected assessor, and in the event no assessor is elected it is the mandatory duty of the auditor to fill the vacancy. It is likewise true in the event the assessor is not able to discharge his duties in the time limit in accordance with law that an assistant assessor must be appointed. It seems clear that in no event can the county auditor make the original appraisement.

I take it from the form in which the latter part of your foregoing inquiry is phrased that you desire to know to what extent section 3 of the act, being section 5366, G. C., confers upon the county auditor the authority formerly vested in district assessors by the Warnes law. Said section provides as follows:

> "Whenever any person, company, firm, partnership, association or corporation was by any existing provision of any law repealed by this act required to return property to the district assessor for taxation, the same shall be returned to the county auditor; and whenever the district assessor was by any provision of any such law charged with any duty or vested with any powers in making up the original tax list, or in listing and valuing any property which has been omitted from the tax list, or in correcting any returns or statements of property for taxation, either with respect to its valuation or amount, such duty shall devolve upon and be performed by the county auditor and such power shall vest in him and be exercised by him."

I am compelled to conclude that the foregoing section is without any operative force and is null and void because in contravention of the provisions of section 16 of article II of the constitution of this state. Said section 16 provides, among other things, that:

> "No bill shall contain more than one subject * * * and no law shall be revived or amended unless the new act contains the entire act revived, or the section or sections amended, and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed."

The provisions of the Warnes law, to which reference is made in section 3 aforesaid of said act, are repealed by section 103 thereof. It follows therefore that said provisions thus repealed, so far as they may be considered a part of the present law, are the same as if "they are not and never were." In other words, the duty and power conferred upon the county auditor by the terms of said section 3 may be determined only by reference to the powers and duties of district assessors under laws which are now repealed and whose provisions have not been carried into and made a part of the new law. This is an attempt to revive and continue in force a repealed law without carrying into the new act its provision as required by the constitution. Section 3, therefore, is not intelligible without reference to the provisions of the repealed Warnes law and under the constitutional inhibition above quoted we are not permitted to refer to a repealed law to supply the operative terms of the new law.

In the case of Lehman v. McBride, 15 O. S., 603, Judge Scott in commenting upon this constitutional provision, said:

> "The constitutional provision to which, it is said, this act does not conform, was intended, mainly, to prevent improvident legislation; and with that view, as well as for the purpose of making all acts, when amended, intelligible without an examination of the statute as it stood prior to the amendment, it requires every section which is intended to supersede a former one to be fully set out. No amendments are to be made by directing specified words or clauses to be stricken from, or inserted in, a section of a prior statute which may be referred to; but the new act must contain the section as amended."

For the foregoing reasons, therefore, I am compelled to hold that section 3 aforesaid is inoperative and no duty or power conferred upon district assessors by the repealed Warnes law may now be exercised by county auditors under favor of said section. With this section thus eliminated, I am of the opinion that county auditors are without authority to originate or change any assessments of real property either under any provision of the act under consideration or under any provision of any other section of the General Code now in force. However, under the provisions of sections 5399, 5400 and 5401 of the General Code, which apply only to personal property, a county auditor may exercise such authority under the conditions named and provided in said sections.

Your fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth questions will be considered together. Said questions read as follows:

> 5. "When are assessors qualified with the authority—under the direction and supervision of the county auditor—to begin the work of appraising real estate for the duplicate of 1916? May such appraisement begin before the second Monday of April?
> 6. "Has the county auditor authority to direct the assessors to fix 'unit' or other tentative valuations between the first Monday of January and the second Monday of April and then subsequently, formally and officially, list and value them at their taxable value so fixed as of the latter date?
> 7. "Can the county auditor himself, or through his deputies and assistants, fix tentative values of real estate between such dates?
> 8. "What may be done by county auditors in the matter of appraising real estate prior to the second Monday of April, 1916?"

I have already held in answer to your first question that the purpose and effect of section 4 of the act (Sec. 5366-1, G. C.) is to fix the time as of which and the period within which all property which is required to be assessed within each year shall be valued. The time so fixed by the provisions of said section is between the second Monday in April and the first Monday in June.

In view of this conclusion, I am of the opinion in answer to your fifth question, that the regularly elected and qualified assessors may not begin the work of appraising real property for the year 1916, before the second Monday in April of said year.

Inasmuch as section 5554, G. C., provides that the assessor in all cases from actual view, and from the best sources of information within his reach, shall determine as near as practicable the true value of each separate tract and lot of real property within his district, according to the rules prescribed by law for valuing real property, I am of the opinion in answer to your sixth and seventh questions that the county auditor is without authority to direct the assessors to fix "unit" or "tentative" values of real property and that he may not himself or through his deputies or assistants fix such values.

Your eighth question has been answered in determining the answer to your fifth question.

Your ninth inquiry is as follows:

> "May the board of revision increase or decrease real estate if no reappraisement has been made? May the board consider complaints as to real property if no reappraisement of real estate has been made?"

Sections 31, 32 and 39 of the act, being sections 5580, 5581 and 5592 respectively, of the General Code, as amended in 106 O. L., 433, relate to the appointment and organization of the county board of revision.

Section 31 provides:

> "The county treasurer, prosecuting attorney, probate judge, and the president of the board of county commissioners of each county shall constitute a county board for the appointment of three members of county boards of revision. All appointments made by such county appointing board must be approved by the tax commission of Ohio before the same shall become effective. In case the county board fails to make any appointment as provided in this act, or such appointment is not approved by the tax commission of Ohio within ten days after such appointment is made, the tax commission of Ohio shall make such appointment."

Section 32 provides in part:

> "On or before January 10, 1916, on or before April 10, 1917, and on or before April 10 of each year thereafter the county board provided for in the next preceding section shall appoint three competent persons who shall constitute the county board of revision for the county. Such persons shall serve until the completion of the work as provided in section 40 of this act."

Section 39 provides that:

> "Each county board of revision shall organize annually, on the second Monday in June, or at such time as may be directed by the tax commission of Ohio, by the election of a chairman for the ensuing year."

and further provides that the county auditor shall be the secretary of the board of revision.

Section 40 of the act (Sec. 5593, G. C.) provides:

> "County boards of revision shall hold sessions beginning on the second Monday of June, and the first Monday of August respectively and convene at such other times as the tax commission of Ohio may order. Such boards may adjourn from day to day and shall complete their work within such times as may be fixed by the tax commission of Ohio for the completion thereof."

Under provision of section 45 of the act (Sec. 5598, G. C.) said county board of revision shall have power to investigate all assessments on the tax list, with respect to the amount of property listed as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed. Said section further provides that:

"The power of the board shall extend to all cases in which real or personal property has been assessed for taxation for the current year, but not to assessments, additions or corrections hereafter made by the tax commission of Ohio."

Sections 51 and 52 of the act (sections 5605 and 5609, G. C.) relate to the examination, revision and correction of all property statements and returns and to the filing of complaints, and provide as follows:

Section 51. "On the second Monday of June, 1916, and annually, thereafter, the county auditor shall lay before the county board of revision the statements and returns of property received by him for the current year, and such board shall forthwith proceed to examine and revise the statements and returns of all property, both real and personal, to see that the valuations thereof are equal and uniform throughout the county, and that all property, and each and every class, kind or description thereof, is valued for taxation throughout the county at its full and true value in money. If the board finds any statement or return of personal property to be erroneous, either in the amount of property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stock, joint stock companies or otherwise, listed in the name of any person, company, firm, partnership, association or corporation, or in the valuation of any item or items thereof, it shall correct such statement or return, by listing thereon any omitted property and giving to it, as well as to any property that has been listed therein but which has been incorrectly valued, the true value in money thereof, and by omitting therefrom property improperly listed thereon. The county auditor shall add to any such statement or return, any dog omitted therefrom. If the board finds that any tract, lot or parcel of land or any buildings, structures or improvements thereon, or any minerals therein or rights thereto have been improperly listed either in the name of the owner, the description or quantity thereof, or have been incorrectly valued, or have been omitted and not valued, it shall make the necessary corrections and shall give to each such tract, lot or parcel of land, or any buildings, structures or improvements thereon or any minerals therein or rights thereto, incorrectly valued or omitted, the true value in money thereof. The board of revision shall not undertake the hearing of complaints or the exercise of any other power at its June session, until its powers and duties under this section have been exercised and discharged. The county auditor shall not make up his tax list and duplicate, as provided in section 56 of this act, nor advertise, as provided in section 58 of this act, until the board of revision has completed its work under this section and has returned to the auditor all the statements and returns laid before it with the revisions and corrections thereof, as made by it."

Section 52. "Complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year may be filed with the county auditor before the meeting of the county board of revision on the first Monday of August or within thirty days thereafter if the board remains in session so long. Any taxpayer may file such complaint as to the valuation or assessment of his own or other's property, and the county commissioners, the prosecuting attorney, county treasurer or any board of township trustees, any board of education, mayor or council of any municipal corporation in the county shall have the right to file such complaint. The county auditor shall lay before the county board of revision all complaints filed with him."

Section 46 of the act (Sec. 5599, G. C.) provides that:

"The county board of revision shall not increase any valuation complained of, nor increase the listed amount of any taxable property complained of without giving reasonable notice to the person in whose name the property affected thereby is listed, and affording him an opportunity to be heard."

Under provision of section 47 of the act the county board of revision may not decrease any valuation complained of nor reduce the listed amount of any taxable property complained of, unless the party affected thereby, or his agent, makes and files with the board a written application therefor, verified by oath, showing the facts upon which it is claimed such decrease should be made, and not without affording the county auditor an opportunity to be heard thereon.

Under provision of section 43 of the act (Sec. 5596, G. C.) the county board of revision has the authority to call persons before it and examine them under oath as to their own or other's property, moneys, credits and investments to be placed on the tax list and duplicate for taxation, or the value thereof, and said board may compel the attendance of said persons in the manner provided in said section.

Section 44 of the act (Sec. 5597, G. C.) makes it the duty of the board of revision to hear complaints relating to the assessment of both real and personal property laid before it by the county auditor and to investigate all such complaints, and authorizes said board to increase or decrease any valuation or correct any assessment complained of, or it may order a reassessment by the original assessing officer.

I observe that your ninth question is divisible into two parts; the first part of said question relates to the function of the county board of revision at its June session to equalize valuations of property, and the second part of said question relates to the function of said board at its August session to revise valuations of property on complaint.

Under provision of section 51, which provides for the equalization of property, the county auditor is required to lay before the county board of revision "the statements and returns of property received by him for the current year," and the county board of revision is required to proceed "to examine and revise the statements and returns of all property, both real and personal."

It seems clear that under the provisions of said section 51 of the act the county board of revision at its June session is limited to the values listed on the returns filed with said board by the county auditor, especially in view of the last sentence of the section which states that the county auditor shall not make up his tax list and duplicate "until the board of revision has completed its work * * * and has returned to the auditor all the statements and returns laid before it with the revisions and corrections thereof, as made by it."

While section 45 of the act provides that the county board of revision shall have power to investigate all assessments on the tax list with respect to the amount of property listed as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed, by the further provision of said section the power of the board referred to in the first part of said section only extends to "cases in which real or personal property has been assessed for taxation for the current year."

It is evident that the authority of the county board of revision conferred by the provisions of section 45 of the act may only be exercised by said board in the performance of its duties under section 44 of the act for the reason that under provision of the latter part of section 51, the tax list for the current year is not made up by the county auditor until after the county board of revision has completed its work under said section and has returned to the auditor the statements and returns laid before it with the revisions and corrections thereof as made by it.

I am compelled to conclude therefore in answer to the first part of your ninth question that the county board of revision, in the performance of its duties under section 51 of the act, at its June session in any year is limited in its consideration of valuations of real property to the statements and returns for such year as placed before it by the county auditor in compliance with section 51 of the act, and that said board may not increase or decrease valuations of real estate which has not been appraised during said year.

Under provision of section 52 of the act complaints may be filed with the county auditor as secretary of the county board of revision, against any valuation or assessment on the tax list as placed before said board of revision by the county auditor, at the August session of said board, and section 44 of the act makes it the duty of said board to hear said complaints and investigate the same, and it may increase or decrease any valuation or correct any assessment complained of, or it may order a reassessment by the original assessing officer.

It will be observed that the jurisdiction of said county board of revision at its August session is determined by the filing of a complaint, and the complaint may be made as to any assessment on the tax list.

Section 56 of the act (Sec. 2583, G. C.) provides that:

> "On or before the first Monday of July, annually, the county auditor shall compile and make up, in tabular form and alphabetical order, separate lists of the names of the several persons, companies, firms, partnerships, associations and corporations in whose names real or personal property has been listed in each township, city, village, special district or separate school district in his county, placing separately, in appropriate columns opposite each name, the description of each tract, lot or parcel of real estate, the value of each tract, lot or parcel and the value of the improvements thereon, if any, and in a separate list the aggregate value of the personal property as listed therein and revised by him, or the county board of revision, as the case may be, and the number of dogs and the value, if given by the owner."

Said section further provides that:

> "If the name of the owner of any tract, lot or parcel of real estate or of any item of personal property is unknown, the word 'unknown' shall be entered in the column of names opposite said tract, lot, parcel, or item. Such lists shall be prepared in duplicate. On or before the first Monday of September in each year, the county auditor shall correct such lists in accordance with the additions and deductions ordered by the tax commission of Ohio and by the county board of revision, and shall certify and on the first day of October deliver one copy thereof to the county treasurer. The copies prepared by the county auditor shall constitute the auditor's tax list and treasurer's duplicate of real and personal property for the current year. In making up such tax lists, the county auditor may place each town lot in its numerical order, and each separate parcel of land in each township according to the numerical order of the section."

Under the above provisions of section 56 of the act, the old appraisement must necessarily become the tax list assessment for all real property which has not been assessed under section 55 of the act, or which has not been reassessed under provision of said section 55 of the act or by direction of the tax commission under provisions of sections 79 and 80 of the act, and said valuations, being on the tax list for the current year, become the subject of complaint under provision of section 52 of the act.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to the second part of your ninth question that the county board of revision may increase or decrease any valuation or correct any assessment complained of regardless of whether an appraisement of all such property has been made for the current year under provision of section 55 of the act.

Your tenth inquiry is as follows:

"Does the power of the board conferred by sections 43 and 45, extend to the increase or decrease of the valuation of real or personal property, and also to the listing of any such property omitted? If so, may this be done without notice to the parties?"

I have already held in answer to the first part of your ninth question that the powers of the county board of revision under provision of section 45 of the act may only be exercised by said board in the performance of its duties under section 44 of the act, and that the county board of revision, acting as a board of equalization, at its June session, is limited in its consideration of valuations of real property to the statements and returns for the current year as placed before it by the county auditor in compliance with the requirements of section 51 of the act, and may not at said session increase or decrease valuations of real estate which has not been appraised in said year.

It follows therefore that in increasing or decreasing the valuations of real property, said board, in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by the provisions of said section 43 of the act is limited to the investigations which it may make under said section 51 of the act.

I am of the opinion, however, that said powers may be exercised by said board in connection with the discharge of its duties under that part of said section 51 which provides that:

"If the board finds any statement or return of personal property to be erroneous, either in the amount of property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, listed in the name of any person, company, firm, partnership, association or corporation, or in the valuation of any item or items thereof, it shall correct such statement or return, by listing thereon any omitted property and giving to it, as well as to any property that has been listed therein but which has been incorrectly valued, the true value in money thereof, and by omitting therefrom property improperly listed thereon."

Said powers may also be exercised by said board in the performance of its duties under provisions of sections 44 and 52 of the act.

The only notice of changes in valuations, made by said county board of revision acting as a board of equalization at its June session, required to be given is that provided for in sections 58 and 59 of the act (sections 5606 and 5607, G. C.)

Section 58 provides:

"When the board of revision has completed its work of equalization and has transmitted the statements and returns to him, the county auditor shall give notice, by advertisement in two newspapers, of opposite politics, published in and of general circulation throughout the county, that the tax statements and returns for the current year have been revised and the valuations completed and are open for public inspection in his office, and that complaints against any valuation or assessment, except the valuations fixed and assessments made by the tax commission of Ohio, will be heard by the county board of revision, stating in the notice the time and place of the meeting of such board. Such advertisements shall be inserted in a conspicuous place in each such newspaper and be published daily for ten days unless there be no daily newspaper published in and of general circulation throughout such county, in which event such advertisement shall be so published once each week for two weeks. The county auditor shall, upon request, furnish to any person a certificate setting forth the assessment and valuation of any tract, lot or parcel of real estate or any specific personal property, and mail the same, when requested to do so, upon receipt of sufficient postage."

Section 59 provides:

"On or before the 15th day of July, annually, the county auditor shall cause to be printed a list showing all changes made in the assessment of any tract, lot or parcel of real estate or improvement thereon or minerals or mineral rights therein, and shall cause a copy of such list to be mailed to each owner whose assessment has been changed, if known, and if not, then to his agent, if known."

Before said county board of revision in the exercise of the powers conferred upon it by sections 43 and 45 of the act, in connection with the exercise of the powers conferred upon it and the discharge of the duty placed upon it by provision of section 44 of the act, can increase any valuation complained of, notice must be given as required by provision of section 46 of the act, as above quoted.

Valuations complained of may be decreased only upon written application under oath of the party affected thereby, or his agent, as provided in section 47 of the act, as above set forth.

Your eleventh question is as follows:

"Are the powers of the board at its August session confined to the hearing of complaints only?"

In view of the provisions of section 51 of the act and especially the provision of the latter part of said section, taken in connection with the provisions of section 52 of the act, it seems clear that while section 51 gives the county board of revision power to correct the amounts of valuations of any of the listings for the current year, and also gives it power to make any investigation in regard to said listings, it does not give to said board any authority to hear any complaints of said listings until after they have been revised and corrected by said board and have been returned to the county auditor to be thereafter reviewed upon complaint. It seems equally clear that at the August session the work of the county board of revision is confined to a review upon complaint of any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year, as returned to the county auditor by said county board of revision after its work of equalization has been completed at its June session. I am of the opinion, therefore, that your eleventh question must be answered in the affirmative.

Your twelfth question is as follows:

"May the power vested in the board by sections 43 and 45 be exercised at the June session, or at the August session of the board, or both?"

This question has been answered in determining the answer to your ninth and tenth questions.

Your thirteenth inquiry is as follows:

"Has the county auditor the same power, and if so, may it be exercised before the completion of the tax list as well as thereafter, and without notice?"

Inasmuch as I have already held in answer to your fourth question that no provision of the act under consideration vests in the county auditor, as the chief supervising, assessing officer of the county, any authority to originate or to change valuations of real estate listed and returned to him by the local assessors or assistant assessors, as the case may be, and that the only authority in said county auditor to originate or to change the valuations of personal property is found in the provisions of sections 5388, 5400 and 5401, G. C., it follows that the authority of said county auditor, referred to in section 56 of the act (Sec. 2583, G. C.), to revise lists of personal property, must be determined by reference to said sections of the General Code.

Section 5401, G. C., provides in part as follows:

"The county auditor, if he shall have reason to believe, or is informed that a person has in the year ninteen hundred and eleven or in any year thereafter, given to the assessor a false statement of the personal property, moneys, or credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, that the assessor has not returned the full amount required to be listed in his ward or township, or has omitted or made an erroneous return of property, moneys, or credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, which are by law subject to taxation, shall proceed, in said year nineteen hundred and eleven or in any year thereafter at any time before the final settlement with the county treasurer to correct the return of the assessor, and charge such persons on the duplicate with the proper amount of taxes. To enable him so to do, he may issue compulsory process, and require the attendance of any persons whom he thinks have knowledge of the articles, or value of the personal property, money or credits, investment in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies, or otherwise, and examine such persons, on oath, in relation to such statement or return. The auditor, in all such cases, shall notify every such person, before making the entry on the tax list and duplicate, that he may have an opportunity of showing that his statement or the return of the assessor was correct."

It will be observed that the powers conferred by this section upon the county auditor are practically the same as those conferred upon the county board of revision by section 43 of the act.

Replying to your thirteenth question I am of the opinion that the powers conferred upon the county auditor by provision of section 5401, G. C., may be exercised before the completion of the tax list as well as thereafter, and that the only notice required to be given in connection with the exercise of such powers is that provided for in said section.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

FINES IMPOSED BY COMMON PLEAS AND PROBATE COURTS FOR VIOLATIONS OF ANY LOCAL OPTION LAWS SHOULD BE PAID INTO COUNTY TREASURY—WHEN PART OF SUCH FINES ARE TO BE TURNED OVER TO LAW LIBRARY ASSOCIATIONS.

Fines imposed by common pleas and probate courts of any county for violations of local option laws and which under section 13247, G. C., are to be paid into the county treasury, are subject to the provisions of section 3056, G. C., and such fines, or such part thereof as may be necessary to bring the payments to the law library association for any year up to $500 should be turned over to said association.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1916.

HON. G. O. MCGONAGLE, Prosecuting Attorney, McConnelsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 1, 1916, requesting my opinion, received, and is as follows:

"Our clerk of courts has collected and now has in his hands, a fine of $200.00 assessed against a defendant by our common pleas court, under an indictment for a violation of the Beal municipal local option law in force here.

"We have a law library association organized under G. C. 3054, et seq., that is claiming this fine under provision in G. C., 3056, latter part of section, the association not having received funds reaching the $500 limit.

"G. C., 13247, directs this fine to the county treasury.

"The question, therefore, arises as to which section shall control."

Your question involves a consideration of sections 12378, 13247 and 3056, G. C. Section 12378, G. C., is a general statute regulating the disposition of fines and provides as follows:

"Unless otherwise required by law, an officer who collects a fine, shall pay it into the treasury of the county in which such fine was assessed. to the credit of the county general fund within twenty days after the receipt thereof, take the treasurer's duplicate receipts therefor and forthwith deposit one of them with the county auditor."

This is an old statute and has been in force in its present form since the revision of 1880. This general provision is subject to exceptions contained in a number of special statutes on the same subject, among them being the following provision of the Beal municipal local option law, 95 O. L., page 90:

"Money received from fines and forfeited bonds collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation wherein said fine was imposed or bond forfeited, and shall be applied to such fund or funds as the council of the said corporation may direct."

A similar provision was contained in the Jones district local opinion law, 98 O. L., page 68.

In the case of Mt. Vernon v. Mochwart, 75 O. S., 529, the court had under consideration the question of the disposition of fines imposed by a common pleas court under the Beal municipal local option law. The court held that by reason of the fact that it was impossible to determine to what municipality such fines should be paid the provision of the Beal law above quoted did not apply to such fines and that they should be paid into the county treasury under the provisions of section 6802, R. S., now section 12378, G. C., supra.

Following this decision, and in all probability as a result thereof, the legislature in 99 O. L., page 475, apparently attempted to provide that fines imposed by common pleas and probate courts for a violation of any local option law should be turned into the county treasury. Whether the act in question was effective for the purpose or not is immaterial for this result was undoubtedly accomplished by the codification of 1910 when section 13247 assumed its present form. This section provides as follows:

"Fines and forfeited bonds collected under this subdivision of this chapter, except as provided in section thirteen thousand two hundred and thirty-one, if enforced in the county court, small be paid into the county treasury, and, if enforced in municipal courts, shall be paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation in which the cause was tried. Such funds paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation shall be applied as the council thereof may direct."

At the very latest this section was effective February 5, 1910, when the General Code was adopted by the general assembly.

It should be noted that the purpose of section 13247, supra, was merely to remove the special provision theretofore existing with reference to local option fines insofar as common pleas and probate courts were concerned and permit them to be covered into the county treasury in the same manner as other fines under the provisions of section 12378, G. C., supra, so that section 13247, G. C., supra, while it may be said to be a special statute directing the disposition of fines in local option cases imposed by municipal courts, is not a special statute with reference to fines imposed by common pleas and probate courts, the effect of it being merely to remove the special direction theretofore existing and provide that such fines should be paid into the county treasury as other fines.

With this in view we come to a consideration of section 3056, G. C., and its effect upon the foregoing statutes. Section 3056, G. C., provides as follows:

> "All fines and penalties assessed and collected by the police court for offenses and misdemeanors prosecuted in the name of the state, except a portion thereof equal to the compensation allowed by the county commissioners to the judges, clerk and prosecuting attorney of such court in state cases shall be retained by the clerk and be paid by him quarterly to the trustees of such law library associations, but the sum so retained and paid by the clerk of said police court to the trustees of such law library association shall in no quarter be less than 15 per cent of the fines and penalties collected in that quarter without deducting the amount of the allowances of the county commissioners to said judges, clerk and prosecutor. In all counties the fines and penalties assessed and collected by the common pleas court and probate court for offenses and misdemeanors prosecuted in the name of the state, shall be retained and paid quarterly by the clerk of such courts to the trustees of such library association, but the sum so paid from the fines and penalties assessed and collected by the common pleas and probate courts shall not exceed five hundred per annum. The moneys so paid shall be expended in the purchase of law books and the maintenance of such association."

This section had been in existence for many years as to fines imposed by police courts, but the provision thereof as to fines imposed by common pleas and probate courts was placed therein by amendment in 94 O. L., 295, which act became effective May 18, 1910, subsequent to both of the sections heretofore quoted. This is a general provision and modifies section 12378, G. C., supra, to the extent that fines which, under its terms were to be covered into the county treasury, must now be turned over to the law library association until the same amount in any year to five hundred dollars. This general provision, however, would not operate to modify any special provisions as to the disposition of any designated class of fines. Section 13247, G. C., supra, in so far as it applies to fines imposed by police courts in local option cases, is such a special provision and is therefore not modified by section 3056, G. C. The portion of section 13247, G. C., however, which applies to fines imposed by common pleas and probate courts is not, as has been shown above, a special provision and that portion of the section is modified by section 3056, G. C., supra, to the same extent as section 12378, G. C.

I am therefore of the opinion that the fine imposed by your common pleas court under an indictment for a violation of the Beal municipal local option law is subject to the provisions of section 3056, G. C., and the same, or such part thereof as is necessary to bring the payments to the library association up to five hundred dollars, should be turned over to said association.

In reaching the foregoing conclusion I have read and considered the opinions of former Attorney-General U. G. Denman, found in the annual report of the attorney-general for the year 1910, part II, page 784, with which I agree, and former Attorney-General Timothy S. Hogan, found in the annual report of the attorney-general for the year 1913, part II, page 1103, with which I am unable to agree.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—"FURTHERANCE OF JUSTICE FUND"—BIDS FOR DEPOSIT OF FUND NOT REQUIRED—PROSECUTOR'S BOND IS COUNTY'S SECURITY.

The county's security for any money drawn, as well as for any money expended by the prosecuting attorney, is the bond specially required by section 3004, G. C. Security for deposit of any of this fund when drawn out of the treasury and placed in a bank is a matter personal to the prosecuting attorney alone.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 15, 1916.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your request for an opinion under date of January 10, 1916, reading as follows:

> "During my incumbency and during that of my predecessor the county prosecutor's fund has been deposited in a Cincinnati bank which pays us 3 per cent interest on our average balances, which interest was of course credited to the fund. It was my memory that the last legislature passed an act providing that any funds in the hands of a public officer might be deposited as the funds in the hands of the county treasurer may be. The only act I find on the subject is an amendment to Sec. 744-12, General Code, 105-106 O. L., page 505. I wish you would advise whether, in your opinion, the county prosecutor's fund is within the intendment of this act and whether bids should be received and security taken for the deposit. The prosecutors of this county have not exacted security for the deposits made by them and were, of course, personally liable for any default on the part of the bank."

I am clearly of the opinion that section 744-12, G. C., as amended (106 O. L., page 505), has no application to the "furtherance of justice fund" drawn from the county treasuries by prosecuting attorneys under section 3004.

Section 3004, G. C., does not require or contemplate that the full amount of the allowance be drawn from the public treasury at one time by the prosecuting attorney. Neither does said section prevent the prosecuting attorney from leaving all of the funds in the county treasury and paying them out upon voucher to the county auditor for warrant upon the county treasury as the expenses are incurred.

The county's security for any money drawn, as well as for any money expended by the prosecuting attorney, is the bond specially required by section 3004. The question of whether or not the prosecuting attorney shall take security for the deposit of any of this fund when he draws it out of the treasury and places it in a bank is a matter personal to the prosecuting attorney alone. If the prosecuting attorney is allowed interest upon the deposit by a bank, the course you have pursued in crediting the interest to the fund is proper.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—NO AUTHORITY TO ASSESS AGAINST ABUTTING PROPERTY OWNERS ANY PORTION OF COST IN EXCESS OF TEN PER CENT, EXCLUSIVE OF BRIDGES AND CULVERTS—SEE OPINION NO. 1148, JANUARY 5, 1916, OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR 1915.

Where a highway is constructed, reconstructed or improved and the work is carried on by the state highway department, there is no authority to assess against the abutting property owners any portion of the cost in excess of ten per cent thereof, exclusive of bridges and culverts.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1916.

HON. C. H. CURTISS, Prosecuting Attorney, Ravenna, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 12, 1916, in which you inquire as follows:

> "Under the Cass law what is your ruling under state aid construction on the question as to whether abutting property owners can be assessed in excess of ten per cent of the cost of the improvement exclusive of bridges and culverts?"

The exact question submitted by you has not been passed upon by this department, but the general subject of assessments on work carried forward by the state highway department was dealt with in opinion No. 1148, rendered by me to Hon. Clinton Cowen, state highway commissioner, on January 5, 1916, a copy of which opinion I enclose for your consideration.

It was held in that opinion that as to any work in the nature of construction, reconstruction or improvement carried on by the state highway department, ten per cent of the cost thereof must be assessed against the owners of the abutting property, but that so long as work carried on by the state highway department may be properly classified as a maintenance or repair operation, there is no authority to assess any part of the cost thereof against the owners of the abutting property. In the opinion referred to above you will find a reference to all of the sections of the Cass highway law referring to the matter of assessments where the work is carried on by the state highway department. All of these sections which relate to the amount of the assessment provide for an assessment of ten per cent of the cost, and I do not find that any authority has been conferred upon the state highway department, the county commissioners or the township trustees to either increase or diminish the amount of this assessment.

I advise you, therefore, in answer to your inquiry, that where a highway is constructed, reconstructed or improved and the work is carried on by the state highway department, there is no authority to assess against the abutting property owners any portion of the cost in excess of ten per cent thereof, exclusive of bridges and culverts.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BROTHERHOOD OF ALL RAILWAY EMPLOYES, FOREIGN FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION, CANNOT BE LICENSED TO DO BUSINESS IN OHIO—ITS CHARTER AUTHORIZES PAYMENT OF DEATH BENEFITS ONLY IN EVENT OF DEATH RESULTING FROM ACCIDENTS—SUCH PROVISION DOES NOT MEET REQUIREMENTS OF GENERAL CODE OF OHIO.

Brotherhood of all railway employes, a foreign fraternal benefit association incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois, which is authorized by its charter to pay death benefits only in event of death from accidental causes and which cannot therefore meet the requirements of the Ohio fraternal benefit act relative to annually reporting a valuation of its death certificates equal to or higher than the national fraternal congress table of mortality of 1899, cannot be licensed by the superintendent of insurance to do business in Ohio under the Ohio fraternal benefit act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1916.

HON. FRANK TAGGART, Superintendent of Insurance, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 29, 1915, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "The brotherhood of all railway employes is a fraternal benefit association duly incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois, and duly licensed. By its articles of incorporation, it is empowered 'to provide and maintain by means of dues and assessments, or either of them, from its members, a benefit fund from which shall be paid to its members in the event of bodily injury, disablement or death resulting from accident, to his then designated beneficiary or beneficiaries who shall be of the relationship provided by the laws of this state, and is now or that may hereafter be provided in and by the constitution and laws.'
> "This association, by its application and certificates of membership, provides for the payment of death benefits resulting from accidental death. This association has filed its application for admission to write this class of insurance in the state of Ohio, and had complied, or offered to comply, with all the provisions of section 9477, paragraph 16, of the General Code of Ohio, in that it has filed with the superintendent of insurance a duly certified copy of its charter, or articles of association, a copy of its constitution and laws certified by the secretary or corresponding officer, a power of attorney to the superintendent as provided in this law, a statement of its business under oath of its president and secretary, or corresponding officer, in the form required by the superintendent of insurance, a certificate from the proper officials of the state of Illinois that the society is legally organized, and copies of its contracts which show that benefits are provided for by periodical, or other payments, by persons holding its contracts.

"Its charter, however, and its constitution and by-laws, simply provide for death benefits resulting from accident, and do not provide for the payment of death benefits generally. Section 9477 provides that any foreign society desiring admission to this state 'shall have the qualifications required of domestic societies organized under this act, and have its assets invested as required by the laws of the state, territory, district, country or province where it is organized.'

"Section 9466 provides that 'every society transacting business under this act, shall provide for the payment of death benefits.'

"Section 9484 of the General Code requires a valuation of the certificates of associations of this kind, the legal minimum standard valuation of which shall be the national fraternal congress table of mortality as adopted by the national fraternal congress April 23, 1899, or, at the option of the society, any higher table. As this table of mortality is only adapted to the valuation of certificates providing for death benefits generally, and not for death by accident, I am desirous of knowing whether I am entitled to admit this association to transact business in this state unless it shall by its constitution and by-laws provide for the payment of death benefits generally and not limit to death benefits from accidental causes.

"Your instruction and advice in this regard are respectfully requested."

Upon an examination of certificate-of-membership forms A and B, which you have since submitted to me, I find that in addition to paying benefits to its members in event of bodily injury, disablement or death resulting from accident, as recited in your letter, the brotherhood of all railway employes also contracts to pay benefits to its members in case of disability resulting from illness. It does not, however, offer to pay death benefits in event of death from sickness or from any cause other than accident.

Section 9466 of the General Code, referred to in your letter, and which is a part of the fraternal benefit act, provides, in part, as follows:

> "Every society, transacting business under this act shall provide for the payment of death benefits, and may provide for the payment of benefits in case of temporary or permanent physical disability, either as a result of disease, accident or old age; provided, etc. * * *"

If the above quoted language stood alone, unqualified and unrestricted by the provisions of other sections of the act, I would have little difficulty in concluding that the brotherhood of all railway employes should be licensed and admitted to do business in Ohio because it does in its certificate "provide for the payment of death benefits," although within a limited scope only.

There are other provisions and requirements of the act, however, which indicate a general legislative purpose and intent to require all fraternal benefit societies to provide for the payment of death benefits generally, and not to permit such societies to issue certificates calling for the payment of death benefits only in case death should result from limited causes. In other words, it is apparent from an examination of the entire act that the powers and privileges created and conferred by the act were intended to apply to and govern only such societies as issue certificates providing for the payment of death claims generally, i. e., claims arising from death caused by both sickness and accident.

Section 9477 of the General Code, relative to licensing of foreign fraternal societies provides, in part, as follows:

"* * * any foreign society desiring admission to this state shall have the qualifications required of domestic societies organized under this act and have its assets invested as required by the laws of the state, territory, district, country or province where it is organized. For each such license or renewal the society shall pay the superintendent twenty-five dollars. When the superintendent refuses to license any society or revokes its authority to do business in this state he shall reduce his ruling, order or decision to writing and file the same in his office, and shall furnish a copy thereof, together with a statement of his reasons, to the officers of the society, upon request, and the act of the superintendent shall be reviewable by proper proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction within the state * * *"

From the above quoted provisions it follows that every foreign society admitted to do business in this state must have the same qualifications as required of domestic societies organized under the Ohio act. Section 9470 of the General Code, in part, is as follows:

"* * * The funds from which benefits shall be paid and the funds from which the expenses of the society shall be defrayed, shall be derived from periodical or other payments by the members of the society and accretions of such funds; provided, that no society, domestic or foreign, shall hereafter be incorporated or admitted to transact business in this state, which does not provide for stated periodical contributions sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligations contracted, when valued upon the basis of the national fraternal congress table of mortality as adopted by the national fraternal congress, August 23, 1899, or any higher standard, with interest assumption not more than four per cent per annum, nor write or accept members for temporary or permanent disability benefits except upon tables based upon reliable experience, with an interest assumption not higher than four per cent per annum."

Section 9473 of the General Code, relative to the incorporation of domestic fraternal benefit associations and prescribing certain other qualifications, contains the following language (quoting from paragraph 6):

"* * * * but no such society shall incur any liability other than for such advance payments nor issue any benefit certificate nor pay nor allow or promise to pay or allow, to any person any death or disability benefits until * * * there has been submitted to the superintendent of insurance under oath of the president and secretary or corresponding officers of such society, a list of such applicants, giving their names, addresses, date examined, date approved, date initiated, name and number of the subordinate branch of which each applicant is a member, amount of benefits to be granted, rate of stated periodical contributions, which shall be sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligation, contracted, when valued for death benefits upon the basis of the national fraternal congress table of mortality, as adopted by the national fraternal congress August 23, 1899, or any higher standard at the option of the society, and for disability benefits by tables based upon reliable experience and for combined death and permanent total disability benefits by tables based upon reliable experience, with an interest assumption not higher than four per cent per annum. * * *"

Section 9484 of the General Code provides, in part as follows (quoting from paragraph 2):

> "* * * In addition to the annual report herein required, each society shall annually report to the superintendent a valuation of its certificates in force on December 31, last preceding; * * *
> "Such valuation shall be certified by a competent accountant or actuary, or, at the request and expense of the society, verified by the actuary of the department of insurance of the home state of the society, and shall be filed with the superintendent within ninety days after the submission of the last preceding annual report. The legal minimum standard of valuation for all certificates, except for disability benefits, shall be the national fraternal congress table of mortality, as adopted by the national fraternal congress April 23, 1899, or, at the option of the society, any higher table; or, at its option, it may use a table based upon the society's own experience of at least twenty years and covering not less than one hundred thousand lives with interest assumption not more than four per centum per annum * * *"

From the language above quoted from the several sections of the Ohio act it is clear that foreign as well as domestic corporations, excepting such as come within the exempting language of the fourth paragraph of section 9491, G. C., must annually report to the superintendent of insurance a valuation of its certificates in force on December 31, preceding such report, with certain enumerated exceptions.

The brotherhood of all railway employes cannot avoid the necessity of reporting a valuation of its policies under the provisions of said paragraph four of section 9491, G. C., referred to, because the exception therein in that respect is specifically limited to "any fraternal benefit society heretofore organized and incorporated and operating * * *" Section 9491, G. C., is a part of the fraternal benefit act passed May 31, 1911, 102 O. L., 533, whereas the brotherhood of all railway employes was not organized, incorporated or in operation until subsequent to that date.

The General Code adopts as the standard of valuation for all such certificates required to be valued the table of mortality as adopted by the national fraternal congress of August 23, 1899, or, at the option of the society making the valuation, any higher table, or it may use a table based upon the society's own experience of at least twenty years and covering not less than one hundred thousand lives with interest assumption of not less than four per centum per annum.

From the facts stated in your letter and other documents submitted, it appears that the brotherhood of all railway employes has not been in existence for twenty years. Therefore, it cannot avail itself of the latter of the three enumerated methods of valuation. It must necessarily then use the table of mortality as adopted by the national fraternal congress of August 23, 1899, or any higher table.

I am informed that the table of mortality of the national fraternal congress referred to was based and computed upon statistics of deaths resulting from sickness as well as from accident, and that there was no table adopted by this congress computed upon statistics of death resulting from accidents only. It follows, therefore, that it would be practically impossible for the brotherhood of all railway employes to remain in competitive business and value its certificates in accordance with the method and standard required by the Code. Since all death certificates must be valued and the standard of valuation adopted and required by the legislature deals solely with general death certificates, it must be concluded that the legislative intent was to make the act applicable only to societies issuing general death certificates.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the brotherhood of all railway employes cannot be licensed to do business in Ohio under the provisions of the fraternal benefit act.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF COLUMBUS, OHIO—PERSONS CONVICTED IN SAID COURT FOR VIOLATION OF SECTION 12758, G. C., SHOULD BE REQUIRED TO PAY ALL NECESSARY COSTS OF ANALYSIS AND INSPECTION AS PROVIDED IN SECTION 12759, G. C.

Persons convicted in the municipal court of Columbus, Ohio, of a violation of section 12758, G. C., should be required to pay all necessary costs of anaylsis and inspection, as provided in section 12759, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1916.

Board of Agriculture, Dairy and Food Division, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 14, 1916, asking my opinion as to whether in prosecutions in the municipal court of Columbus, Ohio, for violations of section 12758, G. C., the defendant is required to pay the cost and expense of inspection and analysis, received.

Section 12758, G. C., provides as follows:

"Whoever manufacturers for sale, offers for sale or sells a drug, article of food, or flavoring extract which is adulterated or misbranded as the terms 'drugs,' 'food,' 'flavoring extract,' 'adulterated' and 'misbranded' are defined and described by law, or manufacturers, offers or exposes for sale or delivers a drug or article of food and fails, upon demand and tender of its value, to furnish a sample thereof for analysis, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and, for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one hundred days, or both."

Section 12759, G. C., provides as follows:

"A person found guilty of manufacturing, offering for sale or selling an adulterated article of food or drug, as described in the next preceding section, shall pay all necessary costs and expenses incurred in inspecting and analyzing such adulterated article."

Section 13423, G. C., 103 O. L., 539, provides in part as follows:

"Justices of the peace, police judges and mayors of cities and villages shall have jurisdiction, within their respective counties, in all cases of violation of any law relating to:

"1. The adulteration or deception in the sale of dairy products and other food, drink, drugs and medicines."

Section 1558-54, G. C., 106 O. L., page 367 (part of the Columbus municipal court act), provides in part as follows:

"The municipal court shall have and exercise all jurisdiction now conferred by law or which may hereafter be given to police courts."

The municipal court of Columbus having been given jurisdiction in prosecutions for violations of section 12758, G. C., supra, the provisions of section 12759, G. C., supra, apply to convictions in such cases in said court in the same manner as to other courts.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that a person found guilty in the municipal court of Columbus of manufacturing, offering for sale or selling adulterated articles of food or drink, should be required to pay all necessary costs and expenses incurred in inspecting and analyzing such adulterated article.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BANKS AND BANKING—DEPOSITORY OF COUNTY FUNDS—MAY DESIGNATE ANOTHER BANK OR TRUST COMPANY AS ITS AGENT—ORIGINAL DEPOSITORY AND ITS SURETY STILL RESPONSIBLE FOR SAFE KEEPING OF SUCH FUNDS.

A lawfully designated depository of county funds may, with the consent of its surety, designate another bank or trust company as its duly authorized agent to receive the deposit of such funds from time to time as the same may be made by the treasurer of such county, if at the same time it authorizes the commissioners of said county to direct said county treasurer to deposit funds of said county, according to the terms of its contract, with said bank or trust company as its duly authorized agent, and said depository and its surety will still be responsible for the safe keeping and repayment of the funds so deposited by said county treasurer, it being understood that said arrangement will be made with the consent of said surety company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1916.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of December 24th, you request my opinion as follows:

"We desire your opinion on the matter of depositories of county funds as it concerns one of the local banks which was designated as one of the county depositories. Bids were asked and received for the county funds in the usual manner, one of the bidders being the Lorain County Banking Company. Recently The Lorain County Savings & Trust Company was incorporated under the laws of this state and purchased, or took over, the assets of the Lorain County Banking Company. In effect the stockholders of the Lorain County Banking Company intend simply to acquire additional authority which that company did not possess, but the two corporations are still in existence. The charter of the Lorain County Banking Company will, we understand, not be surrendered for some time owing to matters which cannot be settled at once.

"The new company acquired the lease, furniture, deposits, etc., and proceeded with, we believe, the same or practically the same board of directors and officers. When the Lorain Banking Company's bid was accepted and its bond approved, the bond provided for the safe keeping, re-payment, etc., of the funds to be deposited by the county treasurer with that company and not with its successors or assigns. No occasion arose for the question as to the deposit under this bid and bond until the new company took over the business of the old company. No new bond has been given to guarantee the deposits which might be made with the new company, nor has the new company been named as an emergency depository under the statutes.

"We have advised the county treasurer that if deposits were made with The Lorain County Savings & Trust Company we had no bond securing such deposits, nor in fact did he have any authority to so deposit under the bid and bond of the Lorain County Banking Company. The query which confronts us under the foregoing circumstances is do we have to deposit with the old company whose bid was accepted and who gave the bond required by law, and which corporation still exists, or do the circumstances above related require the commissioners to treat this condition as nullifying the further contract to deposit and re-advertise for bids under the statute?"

The commissioners of Lorain county, acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing the designation of depositories for the funds of said county, having designated the Lorain County Banking Company as one of the depositories for said funds, and having accepted the bond offered by said company in compliance with the requirements of sections 2722 et seq., of the General Code, it follows that under provision of section 2729, G. C., said the Lorain County Banking Company became a depository for such part of said funds as was awarded to said company by said county commissioners for a term of three years from the date of the acceptance of said undertaking.

By the aforesaid designation of the Lorain County Banking Company, the giving of the bond by said company and the acceptance of the same by the commissioners of Lorain county, a contract was effected between said county commissioners and said the Lorain County Banking Company for a term of three years from the date of the acceptance of said bond and the county treasurer, by virtue of the terms of said contract and of the written notice from said county commissioners, issued to him in compliance with the requirements of section 2736, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 562, advising him of the selection of said the Lorain County Banking Company as an active or as an inactive depository of a part of the funds of Lorain county, has the right to deposit funds of said county in said depository as provided in said section 2736, G. C., and in a sum not to exceed the amount awarded to said depository by said county commissioners for the aforesaid term of three years, or until the undertaking of its successor, designated in the manner provided by law, has been accepted by said county commissioners.

The rights of said county commissioners under the aforesaid contract are in no way affected by the taking over of the assets and place of business of the Lorain county Banking Company by The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company, and the Lorain County Banking Company and its surety will be responsible for the safe keeping and re-payment of the money deposited with said company by the treasurer of said county, according to the terms of said contract. The county treasurer has no authority under said contract to deposit money with The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company, and any deposit made with said company would be in violation of the statutes governing the deposit of county funds.

While the aforesaid contract has many of the characteristics of an ordinary contract, and it may be argued that the Lorain County Banking Company has the right to assign said contract to The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company, in view of the peculiar relation existing between your county commissioners and the Lorain County Banking Company as a depository of county funds, by virtue of the designation of said company as said depository by said county commissioners in compliance with all the requirements of the statutes governing such designation, I am of the opinion that the contract effected by said designation and by the acceptance by said county commissioners of the undertaking of said the Lorain County Banking Company, may not be assigned by said company to The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company.

Inasmuch, however, as it is the desire of the Lorain County Banking Company that The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company shall take over its place of business and its assets including the deposit of the public funds, I can see no objection to the Lorain County Banking Company with the consent of its surety designating The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company as its duly authorized agent to receive the deposits of county funds from time to time as the same shall be made by the county treasurer, and at the same time authorizing the commissioners of Lorain county to direct the county treasurer to deposit funds according to the terms of the aforesaid contract with said The Lorain County Savings and Trust Company, as the duly authorized agent of said the Lorain County Banking company. Such an arrangement would not violate any of the terms of said contract and the Lorain County Banking Company and its surety would still be responsible for the safe keeping and re-payment of the funds so deposited by the county treasurer, it being understood that said arrangement will be made with the consent of said surety company.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that such an arrangement may be effected and in this way the deposit of the county funds may be made according to the terms of said contract for the remainder of the three-year term.

This plan, of course, necessitates the continuing of the corporate existence of the Lorain County Banking Company until the expiration of said three-year term.

If, on the other hand, such an arrangement is not effected and the Lorain County Banking Company fails to provide for the receipt and safekeeping of that part of the county funds awarded to it according to the terms of its contract, then I am of the opinion that your county commissioners should at once provide for the deposit of said part of said funds in the manner prescribed by the statutes governing the designation of depositories for county funds.

If your county commissioners are compelled to provide a new depository because of the failure of the Lorain County Banking Company to perform its contract, said company and its surety will be responsible to said county commissioners for the safe keeping and re-payment of any funds deposited with it according to the terms of said contract until such time as the same shall be withdrawn by the county treasurer under the direction of said county commissioners, and will be liable for any loss occasioned by its default.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE OF CERTAIN CANAL LANDS IN CITY OF AKRON TO MARTIN D. KUHLKE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 17, 1916.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintend of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 4, 1916, transmitting to me for examination a lease of certain canal lands in the city of Akron to one Martin D. Kuhlke, the valuation of said lands being $11,000.00.

I find this lease to be in regular form and am, therefore, returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE ECONOMY MUTUAL CASUALTY COMPANY OF DAYTON, OHIO, APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I herewith return the articles of incorporation of The Economy Mutual Casualty Company, of Dayton,Ohio, with my approval attached thereto.

I have some doubt as to the necessity of securing the approval of the attorney-general to articles of incorporation of a company organized under said section 9445 of the General Code, but to make sure of compliance with the statute I have done so.

Section 9341 of the General Code, requires the approval of the attorney-general to articles of incorporation of legal reserve life insurance companies. The company in question is, however, not a legal reserve life insurance company.

Section 9512 of the General Code, requires the approval of the attorney-general to articles of incorporation of a company formed for the purpose of insurance, other than life insurance. The broad language used in this section would indicate that it was the legislative intent to require the approval of the attorney-general to articles of incorporation of all insurance companies.

This same section, however, viz. 9512, provides further that,

> * * * "if such articles of incorporation be found by him to be in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, and not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of this state, and of the United States, he shall certify and deliver them back to the secretary."

This would seem to indicate that the section was only intended to apply to corporations organized under the chapter of which section 9512 is a part, and which is chapter 1, division III, subdivision II, title IX. Section 9445 of the General Code, however, under which this company is organized, is a part of chapter 3, division III, subdivision I, title IX, and it would obviously be impossible for the attorney-general to find that its articles of incorporation are in accordance with the provisions of chapter 1, division III, subdivision II, title IX.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ANSWERS TO SIXTEEN QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO OFFICERS AND MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY—ATTENDANCE AND MILEAGE OF MEMBERS—SALARIES OF CLERKS—PURCHASE OF ARTICLES FOR USE OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY— WHAT VOUCHERS SHOULD BE APPROVED BY CLERK OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND PRESIDENT OF SENATE—PORTRAIT OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR—NO PROHIBITION AGAINST A MEMBER BEING INTERESTED IN CONTRACTS LET BY STATE—TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH SERVICE OF MEMBERS, PRIVATE AND PUBLIC—POSTAGE —AUDITOR OF STATE CAN PRESCRIBE SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTING FOR GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

1. In the absence of fraud or gross neglect of duty the president of the senate or speaker of the house of representatives would not be personally liable for a mistake in the certification of the number of days' attendance of members of such houses, as provided in section 54, G. C.

2. The mileage provided for in section 50, G. C., is a part of the fixed compensation of members of the general assembly and the members are entitled to same each week, whether they actually travel to and from their homes or not. Payment of such mileage is not a violation of section 31 of article II of the constitution of Ohio.

3. The vouchers for salaries of the clerks of the house of representatives or the senate after adjournment in "making indexes to the recorded and printed journals and reading proof sheets of the printed journals" should be approved by the commissioners of public printing.

4. The salaries of the clerks of the senate and house of representatives are limited to five dollars per day by section 51 of the General Code, and it would not be competent for one branch of the general assembly to authorize, by resolution or in any other manner, the payment of more than such stipulated compensation to said officers.

5. The salaries of the clerks of the senate and house of representatives for the time employed after the adjournment of the general assembly in making indexes to the recorded and printed journals and reading the proof sheets of the printed journals may be changed and such clerks may be retained for other services, provided the general assembly has made an appropriation therefor, the expenditure of which for such purposes has been duly authorized by resolution of the branch of the general assembly to which the appropriation is made.

6. Purchases of stationery, books, blank books and articles of the same general character for the use of the general assembly must, in the absence of joint resolution, be purchased by the secretary of state, as provided in sections 171 and 172 of the General Code. Purchases of articles for the use of the general assembly for either branch thereof which do not come within the foregoing class, may be purchased by anyone duly authorized so to do.

7. Vouchers drawn against the funds appropriated to the house of representatives, except those for attendance and mileage, should be approved by the clerk of the house of representatives, pursuant to house resolution No. 8, passed January 4, 1915. Vouchers drawn against the funds appropriated to the senate should be approved by the president of the senate.

8. Vouchers drawn pursuant to a resolution of the senate for the painting of a picture of the lieutenant governor and the taking of a picture of the members of the senate is sufficient to warrant such payments, providing funds have been appropriated by the general assembly for said purposes.

9. Neither section 15, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 306, nor as it stood immediately prior to such amendment, nor section 19 of article II of the constitution, generally speaking prohibit a member of the general assembly from being interested in contracts let by the state, either with or without competitive bids. This rule, however, is subject to modification by specific facts.

10. Whether a member of the general assembly comes within the provisions of sections 12910 and 12911 of the General Code, depends entirely upon the facts in each particular case. Generally speaking, section 12910 would not apply to a member of the general assembly but it is possible that a state of facts might arise which would come within the provisions of said sections.

11. Members of the general assembly are not entitled to be furnished with telephone, telegraph and other means of communication for private purposes but an appropriation by the general assembly to furnish telephone, telegraph and other services of like character to members of the general assembly necessary to the proper discharge of their duties would not constitute an allowance such as is prohibited by section 31 of article II of the constitution.

12. The furnishing of postage by the state to carry out the provisions of section 768, G. C., is not a violation of section 31 of article II of the constitution of Ohio.

13. Under sections 274, et seq., G. C., the auditor of state, as chief inspector and supervisor of public offices, can prescribe and require in the offices of the clerk of the house of representatives and the clerk of the senate the installation of a system of accounting and reporting for the disbursement of public money appropriated to the respective branches of the general assembly, so far as said clerks may handle such funds or vouchers. This authority of the auditor of state does not extend to records of the general assembly such as journals, etc., the method of keeping which is provided for in the constitution and the general code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of September 21, 1915, asking for a written opinion upon a number of questions, was received in this office on October 5, 1915. The questions are so numerous that each question will be stated in the order in which the same is answered.

> First question: "Under section 54, G. C., can the president of the senate and the speaker of the house be held personally responsible if the 'number of days' attendance' is not correctly certified?"

Section 54, G. C., provides:

> "The president of the senate, and speaker of the house of representatives, shall ascertain the number of days' attendance of each member and officer of the respective houses, during the session, the number of miles travel of each member to and from the seat of government and certify such attendance and mileage, and the amount due therefor, to the auditor of state."

In the absence of fraud or gross neglect of duty, the president of the senate or speaker of the house of representatives would not be liable personally if a mistake were made in the number of days' attendance certified to.

Second question: "Can the mileage provided for in section 50, G. C., be regarded as fixed compensation' under Art. II, Sec. 31, constitution of Ohio?"

The answer to this question is necessarily involved in the answer to your third question and I will, therefore, at this point merely answer your second question in the affirmative and refer you to the answer to your third question for the reasons therefor.

Third question: "Are members entitled to mileage once a week as provided in section 50, G. C., whether they go home or not?"

Section 50, G. C., provides as follows:

"Every member of the general assembly shall receive as compensation a salary of one thousand dollars a year during his term of office. Such salary for such term shall be paid in the following manner: Two hundred dollars in monthly installments during the first session of such term and the balance of such salary for such term at the end of such session.

"Each member shall receive two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session from and to his place of residence, by the most direct route of public travel to and from the seat of government, to be paid at the end of each regular or special session. If a member is absent without leave, or is not excused on his return, there shall be deducted from his compensation the sum of ten dollars for each day's absence."

The answer to your third question depends upon whether the purpose of the provision of section 50, G. C., supra, in reference to the payment of two cents per mile is to fix a basis for the computation of compensation of members of the general assembly, or to provide the basis upon which such members are to be reimbursed for expenses incurred in such travel. A careful reading of said section indicates that the first proposition above stated is the correct interpretation. That is to say, this section has no reference to expense whatever, but is purely a statute fixing the compensation of members of the general assembly. The section provides: "Every member of the general assembly shall receive as compensation" —what? "A salary of one thousand dollars a year" and "two cents per mile each way for mileage once a week during the session from and to his place of residence."

The statute also fixes the time at which the portion of the compensation designated as "salary" shall be paid, and the time at which the portion of the compensation designated as "mileage" shall be paid. It is significant that the word "expense" does not appear in section 50 anywhere, and it is also significant that section 54 of the general code, in its present form and as originally enacted by the legislature (see 60 O. L., page 5), in providing for the ascertainment of the attendance and mileage of the members of the general assembly, uses the following language: "The number of miles travel of each member to and from the seat of government." This language does not provide for the ascertainment of the number of miles actually traveled by members of the general assembly, but the number of miles which it is necessary to travel in going to and from the seat of government to the residence of the member, by the most direct route. No provision is made for the making of a statement by members or anyone else as to the number of times they go back and forth during the session, and there is no record from which these facts can be ascertained by the officers of the general assembly.

While the foregoing is apparently the only logical and practical interpretation of the statute, yet it cannot be said to be absolutely free from doubt and we are, therefore, justified in looking at matters extrinsic of the statute to arrive at the proper interpretation thereof. The cardinal principle in the interpretation of statutes is, of course, to ascertain the intention of the legislature and in determining such intention we are aided materially by the fact that in this connection the legislature itself is on record as to the interpretation of the same. For many years it has been the custom of the legislature to provide by resolution for the appointment of mileage committees to ascertain and report the mileage due to members. Reports of such committees may be found on page 279 of the printed House Journal of the session of 1911, page 55 of the Senate Journal of the same year; page 304 of the House Journal of the session of 1913, page 62 of the Senate Journal of the same year; page 150 of the House Journal of the session of 1914, page 75 of the Senate Journal of the same year; page 7 of the House Journal of February 17, 1915, page 3 of the Senate Journal of January 21, 1915.

All of the foregoing reports of committees are in substantially the same form and it is necessary to quote only one of them. The report of the committee found at page 150 of the House Journal of the session of 1914, is as follows:

> "We, the undersigned, a select committee of three appointed pursuant to house resolution No. 11, to ascertain and report the mileage due members of the house of representatives, beg leave to submit the following:
> | "Name | County | Mileage | Amount due each week. |

Under the appropriate heads of the report then appears names, counties, number of miles and amount due each week to each member of the general assembly and the computation is made in accordance with the foregoing interpretation of section 50, G. C., to-wit: That each member is entitled to two cents a mile each week, regardless of whether he actually travels back and forth to and from his home each week.

No mention is made in the reports of these committees, nor in the resolution providing for their appointment, of any reduction from mileage because of the failure of any member to go back and forth to and from his home each week during the legislative session. The reports of these committees were adopted by vote of the respective branches, thus giving the above interpretation of the statute sanction of the entire body and not merely that of one or more of its members.

There remains another and probably stronger reason for the foregoing interpretation than any of those above stated. Courts will always endeavor to give to a statute a construction which will make it constitutional, if possible, in preference to an interpretation which would render the statute unconstitutional and inoperative. Applying this principle, I call your attention to section 31 of article II of the constitution of Ohio, which provides as follows:

> "The members and officers of the general assembly shall receive a fixed compensation, to be prescribed by law, and no other allowances or perquisites, either in the payment of postage or otherwise; and no change in their compensation shall take effect during their term of office."

With this provision of the constitution in mind, it becomes clear that both the salary and mileage provided for in section 50, supra, were intended to be and are a part of and constitute the compensation of members of the general assembly. If the portion of the compensation heretofore designated as salary is the entire compensation of the members of the general assembly, then the provision for payment of mileage would be an additional allowance or perquisite, and the provision for the payment of same would be unconstitutional and void.

Under the foregoing interpretation section 50 is in harmony with said section 31 of article II of the constitution, for the reason that the salary fixed therein is definite and the allowance for mileage is definite under the rule that that is certain which may be made certain, and the aggregate of both constitutes the "fixed compensation" of members of the general assembly as required by the constitution.

Fourth question: "If the preceding question is answered in the negative, can the speaker of the house and the president of the senate be held personally liable if the 'number of miles travel of each member' (Sec. 54) is not correctly certified?"

The preceding question having been answered in the affirmative, it is, of course, unnecessary to discuss this question.

Fifth question: "Under section 53, G. C., must the salaries of the employes of the general assembly after adjournment be approved by the printing commision?"

Your question refers to the salaries of the employes of the general assembly after adjournment, but inasmuch as you have specifically directed your question to section 53, G. C., the answer to the same is limited to the employes of the general assembly mentioned in said section, to wit: The clerks of the senate and house of representatives:

Section 53, of the General Code, provides as follows:

"The clerks of the senate and house of representatives shall be paid five dollars per day, each, for the time employed after the adjournment of the general assembly in making indexes to the recorded and printed journals, and reading the proof sheets of the printed journals. . The bills therefor must be approved by the commissioners of public printing or a majority of them. Such clerks shall have no other allowance or compensation for services after the adjournment of the general assembly, except as provided by law or resolution."

The primary purpose of this section is to fix the rate of compensation to be paid to the clerks of the senate and house of representatives for certain specifically enumerated services, and it is provided that the bills of these clerks for the performance of services so designated must be approved by the commissioners of public printing. It is clear, however, that the requirement of approval by the commissioners of public printing, or a majority of them, has application only to those services so specifically mentioned in the next preceding sentence, viz: "Making indexes to the recorded and printed journals and reading proof sheets of the printed journals."

While the concluding sentence of said section 53, G. C., supra, is restrictive in its character, it is so only with reference to the disbursing officers of the state, and it not only does not apply to the general assembly, but clearly recognizes the power of that body, or either branch thereof, to require of its clerks other and additional services after adjourning than those enumerated and to fix their compensation therefor by law or resolution. In other words, the power of the general assembly to appropriate money for the use of one of the branches thereof and the power of said branch to direct the expenditure thereof for the purpose of paying its clerks for services other than those specifically mentioned in section 53, G. C., supra, at a rate to be determined by it, is in no way restricted by the provisions of section 53.

Specifically answering your fifth question, therefore, you are advised that the bills of the clerks of the senate and house of representatives for the time employed after the adjournment of the general assembly, in making indexes to recorded and printed journals and reading the proof sheets of the printed journals, must be approved by the commissioners of public printing, and that such approval is not required by section 53, G. C., supra, on bills for services of the clerks of the senate and house of representatives for the performance of other duties which may be placed upon them by the general assembly, or either branch thereof, by law or resolution.

> Sixth question: "Under sections 51 and 53, G. C., are the clerks of the house and the clerk of the senate limited to a salary of five dollars per day? If they are can money paid them in excess of five dollars per day be recovered under section 270?"
> Seventh question: "Under section 53, G. C., can clerks be retained after the work mentioned is finished? If they can, in what form?"

These two questions are considered together for the reason that the answer to the seventh question is involved in the answer to the sixth.

Section 51 of the General Code, prior to its amendment in 106 O. L., page 14, provided as follows:

> "The clerks and sergeant-at-arms of the senate and house of representatives, and their assistants, shall each be paid five dollars for each day's attendance during the session. For services rendered at the organization of the general assembly, each of the officers named in section thirty-three, unless re-elected to his position, shall be paid five dollars for each day, for not exceeding ten days."

The amendment of this section did not become effective until after the adjournment of the last general assembly and does not affect your question. It will be noted that this section provides for the compensation of the clerks and sergeants-as-arms of the senate and house of representatives during the session and for the compensation of the officers mentioned in section 33, G. C., to wit: The chief clerk, journal clerk, message clerk, sergeant-at-arms and the second assistant sergeant-at-arms of each house in the organization of the general assembly in case such officers are not re-elected to their positions, and section 53 provides for the compensation of the clerks of the senate and house of representatives for the time employed after the adjournment of the general assembly, in making indexes to the recorded and printed journals and reading the proof sheets of the printed journals. Section 53, however, as pointed out heretofore in the answer to your fifth question, recognizes the right of the general assembly, or either branch thereof, to retain the clerks for the performance of services other than those specifically mentioned in said section 53, and to fix their compensation for such services, either by law or resolution. But section 51, G. C., supra, contains no such provision. It would not be competent, therefore, for one branch of the general assembly to authorize, by resolution or in any other manner, the payment of more than the stipulated compensation to the officers mentioned in section 51, supra, during the session or during the organization thereof, nor for the services specifically mentioned in section 53, G. C., supra, and any payment in excess of such stipulated compensation, if paid by the treasurer upon the warrant of the auditor, could be collected and returned to the state treasury under section 270, G. C.

Specifically answering your seventh question, you are advised that the clerks of the house and senate may be retained after the work mentioned in section 53, supra, is completed, provided such retention is authorized by law or resolution, and may be paid for such services if there is money appropriated for the purpose.

Eighth question: "Under the provisions of sections 171 and 172, G. C., can any purchases be made other than from the secretary of state except by joint resolution?"

The form of your question indicates that it is directed solely to purchases for the use of the general assembly, and it is upon this assumption that the question is considered and answered.

Section 171, of the General Code, provides as follows:

"On or before the first day of November of each year the secretary of state shall purchase and cause to be delivered at his office, so much and such kinds of stationery and other articles as may be necessary for the use of the general assembly and state officers. No person other than the secretary of state shall purchase any article for the use of the general assembly, or either house thereof, unless directed so to do by joint resolution. The amount that may be necessary for the purchase of such stationery and other articles shall be drawn upon the order of the secretary of state."

Section 172, G. C., provides as follows:

"The secretary of state, when he delivers stationery, books, blank books or other articles to the sergeant-at-arms of either house of the general assembly or other officer entitled by law thereto, shall take a receipt therefor, stating the amount and value thereof, and in his annual report shall give a statement of each class of stationery, blank-books, and other articles so delivered, the amount and value thereof, and to whom delivered. The statement shall also contain an inventory of the amount of stationery, blank-books and other articles on hand in his office on the fifteenth day of November, and the amount and value of each class thereof, received by him in the preceding year, together with a list of the names of the persons from whom received."

These two sections apply to the same subject matter and should be read together in determining what purchases should be made for the use of the general assembly by the secretary of state. These sections speak for themselves and never having been repealed by the legislature are in full force and effect. Not all purchases which may be made by the general assembly, however, are covered by these sections. It will be noted that section 171 contains the language: "stationery and other articles," and section 172 contains the language "stationery, books, blank-books or other articles." Under the familiar rule of construction that where specific words in a statute are followed by general language, such general language is to be construed to cover only things of the same general character unless a contrary intention clearly appears, these two sections can only be held to cover such purchases as stationery, books, blank-books and supplies of that character, intended for the use of the general assembly. It would be impractical to attempt here to specify what articles may or may not be purchased other than by the secretary of state, but the above rule must be applied to each particular case.

The foregoing discussion has been limited to an interpretation of sections 171 and 172, G. C. It should be borne in mind, however, that the provisions of said sections may be modified or changed not only by joint resolution, as provided in section 171, supra, but also by subsequent act of the general assembly inconsistent therewith. If, therefore, the general assembly has appropriated or should appropriate money to someone other than the secretary of state, for the purchase of the articles above described, such appropriation would operate, during the life of the bill in which it appears, as a modification of said sections.

With these limitations in mind, the answer to your eighth question is that in the absence of a joint resolution, or other modification of said sections 171 and 172, G. C., by sebsequent act of the general assembly, no one has authority to purchase the articles above described for the general assembly except through the secretary of state.

> Ninth question: "Upon the adjournment of the general assembly it transpires that many bills are being presented against the funds appropriated for the general assembly, and no provision of law has been made for lodging in any officer of the general assembly the power of determining or approving the validity and correctness of such bills. Should the auditor of state pay such bills upon presentation, and, if so, are there any prerequisite acts on the part of myself or any other officer required by law before such payments are made?"

At the outset it should be stated that there was no appropriation made to the general assembly, as such, and it is assumed that you refer to appropriations made to the senate and to the house of representatives.

The form of your question suggests that the difficulty arises from the provisions of section 4 of H. B. 314—106 O. L., page 100—or of section 6 of H. B. 701—106 O. L., 826. These sections are similar so far as their effect on your question.

Section 6, of H. B. 701, provides in part as follows:

> "The moneys appropriated in sections 2 and 3 of this act shall be drawn upon a requisition or voucher presented to the auditor, approved by the head of the department or by the trustees of an institution or by the members of a board or commission, or by an officer or employe of such department, institution, board or commission, specially designated by resolution or order to approve and present such requisition or voucher, a copy of which resolution or order shall be filed with the auditor of state."

I call your attention to house resolution No. 8, passed January 4, 1915, which is as follows:

> "Resolved, That except in cases in which the signature or approval of the speaker is required by law, the clerk of this house is hereby directed and empowered to sign all vouchers to be presented to the auditor of state for the payment of any claim or claims against the house for services rendered or supplies furnished or for any other matter whatsoever."

This resolution authorizes the clerk of the house to sign all vouchers on its behalf except those required by law to be signed by the speaker. The only voucher so required to be signed by the speaker is the certification of attendance and mileage, provided for in section 54, G. C., which is quoted in the early part of this opinion.

So far as the house of representatives is concerned, there is, therefore, ample authority for approval of vouchers and when so approved the same should be paid as other vouchers.

The senate, not having adopted a resolution authorizing any particular officer or employe to sign or approve vouchers, the same should (for the protection of the auditor) be approved by the president of the senate, and when so approved should be paid as other vouchers.

> Tenth question: "Is a resolution passed by the senate and not approved by the house authorizing the painting of a picture of the lieutenant governor and of the taking of a picture of the members of the senate sufficient to warrant this payment?"

Section 22 of article II of the constitution, provides as follows:

> "No money shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law."

Under this provision the payments mentioned in your question cannot be made unless an appropriation has been made therefor and such appropriation would, of course, have to be approved by both branches of the general assembly. Assuming that such an appropriation has been made, such payments can be made upon a resolution adopted by one branch of the general assembly. This was the holding of the supreme court of this state in the case of State ex rel v. Oglevee, 36 O. S., 324. At page 326 of the opinion the court said:

> "Where a fund is provided by law for the contingent expenses of either branch of the general assembly the disbursement of the fund for such purpose is subject to the control of such branch."

If, therefore, an appropriation has been made for the general assembly and is available for the purposes mentioned in your question, a resolution adopted by the branch of the general assembly for which the appropriation was made is sufficient authority for the auditor to issue a warrant for the amount of same if he finds it to be otherwise a legal and proper claim.

Your 11th and 12th questions are as follows:

> 11th question: "Can a member of the general assembly be interested in contracts let by the state at competitive bids?"

12*th question:* "Can a member of the general assembly be interested in contracts let by the state where competitive bids are not required by law?"

It is impossible to answer these questions intelligently in the absence of specific facts relating to each one of them. If it is your purpose to ascertain whether or not such acts are inhibited by section 15 as amended 106 O. L., 306, or as it stood immediately prior to such amendment, the answer is "No." If it is the purpose of your inquiry to find whether or not such action is in conflict with section 19 of article II of the constitution of Ohio, the answer is again "No." However, the specific facts in each case might cause the answer to be in the affirmative rather than in the negative.

Your 13th question is as follows:

13*th question:* "Does a member of the general assembly come under the provisions of sections 12910 and 12911 of the General Code?"

Section 12910, G. C., provides as follows:

"Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or public institution with which he is connected, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

In the absence of specific facts I would say generally, and I am inclined to say universally, that a member of the general assembly would not come under the foregoing section.

Section 12911, G. C., provides as follows:

"Whoever, holding an office of trust or profit, by election or appointment, or as agent, servant or employe of such officer or of a board of such officers, is interested in a contract for the purchase of property, supplies or fire insurance for the use of the county, township, city, village, board of education or a public institution with which he is not connected, and the amount of such contract exceeds the sum of fifty dollars, unless such contract is let on bids duly advertised as provided by law, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than ten years."

It would depend entirely upon the facts in the particular case as to whether or not a member of the general assembly would come within the inhibition of this section.

14*th question:* "Under Art. II, Sec. 31, are members entitled to telephone, telegraph, and other means of communication, whether personal or official?"

Article II, section 31 of the constitution, has already been referred to and set out in the earlier part of this opinion. It provides that members of the general assembly shall receive a fixed compensation "and no other allowance or perquisites, either in the payment of postage or otherwise." You have designated the telephone, telegraph and other communications as "personal" and "official." It is assumed that by this you mean communications for purely private purposes and having no connection with the discharge of the duties of the members as distinguished from such communications as may be necessary to the proper discharge of such duties. With this distinction in mind, payment by the state for telephone, telegraph and other services of like character rendered to members of the general assembly in "personal" matters would be such an allowance as is prohibited by said section 31 of article II, but it would be entirely competent for the general assembly to appropriate money to pay the expense of furnishing to members of the general assembly means of communication in "official" matters and such payment would not constitute an allowance such as is prohibited by said section 31 of article II; such expense would be no more an allowance to the members of the general assembly than the furnishing of heat, light, desks and other conveniences intended for the more prompt and efficient discharge of their duties. Such payments are more properly characterized as expenses of the general assembly itself than of the individual members.

15*th question:* "In carrying out the provisions of section 768, G. C., is the state required to furnish the postage? If so, is this a violation of Art. II, Sec. 31, constitution of Ohio, and unconstitutional?"

Section 768 of the General Code, provides as follows:

"Each day one copy of such pamphlet shall be placed on the desk of each member of the senate and house of representatives, one copy shall be sent to each state department, two hundred copies shall be distributed by the members of the senate, under the direction of the clerk thereof and six hundred copies shall be distributed by the members of the house of representatives under the direction of the clerk of the house of representatives. The proper number of sheets for the permanent copies of such journals shall be printed, retained and bound with the indexes therefor, as provided by law."

The effect of this section is to place upon the clerks of the house of representatives and senate the duty of distributing copies of the daily journals of those bodies and it will undoubtedly be conceded that it is entirely proper for the general assembly to make provision and appropriate money for the purpose of advising the people of the state of Ohio as to what has taken place in the general assembly from day to day. The legislature is the best and only judge of how this should be accomplished and the fact that they have provided that the members of the general assembly shall be permitted to designate to whom certain of the copies shall be sent, does not render the statute unconstitutional, as a violation of section 31 of article II of the constitution.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it is competent for the general assembly to appropriate money to pay postage required to distribute the copies of the journal of the house of representatives and senate, as provided in section 768 of the General Code, and that the section is not in contravention of section 31 of article II of the constitution.

16*th question:* "Can the auditor of state, under the provisions of sections 274, 277, 278, 279, or other sections, prescribe forms for keeping the accounts and records of the general assembly of Ohio?"

Section 274 of the General Code (106 O. L., 26) provides as follows:

"There shall be a bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices in the department of auditor of state which shall have power as hereinafter provided in sections two hundred seventy-five to two hundred eighty-nine, inclusive, to inspect and supervise the accounts and reports of all state offices, including every state educational, benevolent, penal and reformatory institution, public institution and the offices of each taxing district or public institution in the state of Ohio. Said bureau shall have the power to examine the accounts of every private institution, association, board or corporation receiving public money for its use and purpose, and may require of them annual reports in such form as it may prescribe. The expense of such examination shall be borne by the taxing district providing such public money. By virtue of his office the auditor of state shall be chief inspector and supervisor of public offices, and as such appoint not exceeding two deputy inspectors and supervisors, and a clerk. No more than one deputy inspector and supervisor shall belong to the same political party."

Section 277 of the General Code provides as follows:

"The auditor of state, as chief inspector and supervisor, shall prescribe and require the installation of a system of accounting and reporting for the public offices, named in section two hundred seventy-four. Such system shall be uniform in its application to offices of the same grade and accounts of the same class, and shall prescribe the form of receipt, vouchers and documents, required to separate and verify each transaction, and forms of reports and statements required for the administration of such offices or for the information of the public."

Other sections of the General Code contain detailed provisions for the purpose of the carrying out of the general provisions of section 277, supra.

The offices of the clerk of the house of representatives and the clerk of the senate are "state offices" and are covered by the provisions of sections 274 and 277, supra.

I am therefore of the opinion that the auditor of state, as chief inspector and supervisor, can prescribe and require in these offices the installation of a system of accounting and reporting for their disbursement of public money appropriated to the respective branch of the general assembly, so far as these officers may handle such funds or vouchers.

Your question refers to "keeping the accounts and records of the general assembly." It must be borne in mind that specific provision is made in the constitution and the General Code for the keeping of certain records of the general assembly, such as the journals and records of that character, which are clearly not contemplated as coming under the supervision of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COMBINED NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT OF WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY—CONTRACTS AND BONDS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM APPROVED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 18, 1916.

Board of Trustees of the Combined Normal and Industrial Department of Wilberforce University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have examined the five contracts presented to me for the furnishing of materials for and constructing the improvement to the water supply system at the combined normal and industrial department at Wilberforce University, and the bonds attached thereto, and have this day approved the same as being in compliance with law, and have filed same in the office of the auditor of state.

The said contracts are as follows:

1. Contract with The Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., for an 80,000 gallon steel tank and tower.
2. Contract with Samuel H. Barnes, Dayton, Ohio, for an 8-inch well complete, 60 feet deep.
3. Contract with The Weimman Pump Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, for the furnishing of two steam pumps.
4. Contract with The Shartle Machine Company of Columbus, Ohio, for furnishing one hot water storage heater.
5. Contract with The Shartle Machine Company of Columbus, Ohio, for water softening plant; plumbing, steam fitting, water mains, miscellaneous.

I have returned the rest of the papers to The Richards Engineering Company of Columbus, Ohio, your engineer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—EXPENSES OF SUCH OFFICER TO BE PAID FROM GENERAL COUNTY FUND WHEN SAME ARE INCURRED IN PERFORMANCE OF HIS DUTIES WITH RESPECT TO ROADS AND BRIDGES.

The expenses of the county highway superintendent incurred in the performance of his duties with respect to roads and bridges under the Cass highway law are to be paid from the general county fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 19, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of December 20, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon a question set forth in certain correspondence from Mr. Frank R. Smith, county auditor of Sandusky county, which correspondence was attached to your communication.

It appears that there has been filed in the office of the county auditor of Sandusky county a statement of the expenses of the county highway superintendent of that county. The expense account of the county highway superintendent, consisting for the most part of expenses incurred for livery, is so itemized as to indicate the particular road or bridge improvement in connection with which each item of expense was incurred. The question upon which my opinion is desired is whether this expense account should be paid out of the general county fund or whether the different items should be paid from the different road and bridge funds as specified in the items. The question assumes that a specific fund has been created and is in existence for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of each road or bridge in question. This assumption may be correct as to the situation confronting the county officials of Sandusky county, but the question will have to be answered with reference to any situation which might arise.

The pertinent provision of the Cass highway law is found in section 138 of that act, section 7181, G. C., and is to the effect that in addition to his salary the county highway superintendent, when on official business, shall be paid out of the county treasury his actual necessary traveling expenses, including livery, board and lodging. This provision is silent as to the particular fund from which the payment of expenses is to be made, the provision being merely that payment shall be made out of the county treasury.

An examination of the scheme of road improvement by county commissioners, as set forth in chapter VI of the Cass highway law, discloses that in some instances at least, expenses will be incurred by the county highway superintendent in connection with the improvement of a specific section of road before any particular fund has or can be created for the improvement of such road. It is not until the completion of the survey for an improvement and the final determination of all questions of compensation and damages that the board of county commissioners finally determines and orders that the improvement shall be constructed, and where a bond issue is necessary, certainly no authority to issue bonds and create a special fund for the construction of the improvement in advance of the time when it is finally determined to build the improvement can be gathered from the sections of the law. It therefore follows that the county highway superintendent, under the scheme of road improvement provided for county commissioners, will often be called upon to perform services and incur expenses where no special fund has been created, and inasmuch as he is entitled to receive his expenses so incurred out of the county treasury, it follows in such cases at least that such expenses must be paid to him out of the general county fund. There is not found in the Cass highway law any authority in such cases to pay the expenses in the first instance out of the general county fund and thereafter reimburse such county fund from a special fund created for a specific improvement.

Considering the question in the light of the fact that under a number of the methods of paying the costs and expenses of a county road improvement, either all or a part thereof are to be assessed, it is apparent that an inequality might arise if the expenses of the county highway superintendent are to be paid out of the special fund, in case such fund existed at the time the expenses were incurred.

In view of the holding in the cases of Longworth v. Cincinnati, 34 O. S., 101, and Spangler v. Cleveland, 35 O. S., 496, to the effect that the value of surveying and engineering which is done by the salaried officers of a municipal corporation and paid out of the general fund may not be included in assessments, and in view of the further fact that there is no authority in the act for paying the expenses of the county highway superintendent out of the general county fund and thereafter reimbursing such fund from a special fund created after the expenses are incurred, it follows that in cases where the special fund was created before any expenses were incurred, all the expenses of the county highway superintendent would be paid from such special fund and in cases where the special fund was not created until after the survey had been made, only a part of the expenses would be paid from the special fund. This, as previously indicated, would result in an inequality, the special fund which would furnish the basis of assessment having to bear all of the expenses of the county highway superintendent in one case and only a part of such expenses in the other.

In view of the foregoing considerations and of the fact that the statute itself merely provides that the expenses of the county highway superintendent shall be paid out of the county treasury without stipulating the fund out of which they are to be paid, I advise you that such expenses should be paid from the general county fund and that no effort should be made to pay the same out of special funds where the same exist or to reimburse the general county fund where payment is originally made from the general county fund and a special fund is thereafter created for the improvement in question.

This opinion is limited to the facts presented and it is only intended to hold herein that the expenses of the county highway superintendent incurred in the performance of his duties with respect to roads and bridges under the Cass highway law are to be paid from the general county fund.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP CLERK—MANDATORY DUTY OF SUCH OFFICER TO CANVASS RETURNS OF ELECTIONS OF TOWNSHIP OFFICERS AND ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF ELECTION—CANNOT QUESTION REGULARITY OF SUCH ELECTION—TOWNSHIP CLERK CONTINUES TO HOLD OFFICE UNTIL DULY ELECTED SUCCESSOR QUALIFIES —TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES OR CLERK NOT AUTHORIZED TO DETERMINE WHO IS ENTITLED TO OFFICE OF TOWNSHIP CLERK.

It is the mandatory duty of township clerks to canvass the returns of elections of township officers and to issue certificates of election to those persons shown by the returns to have been elected. He may not pass upon any question of the regularity of such election.

A township clerk whose term expired December 31, 1915, may continue to hold that office and discharge the duties thereof until his successor is elected and qualified, and the failure of a successor duly elected to qualify according to law does not create a vacancy which the township trustees may fill by appointment.

Neither the township trustees nor the clerk are authorized to determine disputed questions of title to the office of township clerk.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 19, 1916.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of January 1, 1916, is as follows:

"At the recent election in Union township, in this county, a dispute has arisen over the clerkship. Union township has two voting precincts.

The ballots in one of these precincts were erroneous, in that the name of one of the candidates for clerk was printed as candidate for trustee and not for clerk, as a result of which quite a number of voters marked his name as a candidate for trustee. On the face of the returns he was defeated by a small vote and claims that had the ballots been correct and the true intention of the voters been expressed, he would have been elected.

"Section 5112 of the General Code, provides that the returns of the township elections shall be delivered to the clerk who shall canvass the vote, announce the result and issue certificates to the officers elected. The candidate to whom I refer above, whose name was erroneously printed on the ticket, was the old clerk, and in view of his contention that he was elected at the last election, I am informed that he has not canvassed the vote and has issued no certificate of election. Thereupon the old clerk, claiming to have been re-elected, tendered a bond to the trustees for approval and at about the same time, the other candidate who, on the face of the returns, has received the majority of the votes for clerk, tendered his bond to the trustees for approval. The trustees found each bond to be correct in form and sufficient as to surety, but declined to approve either of them for the reason that no certificate of election was presented by either candidate. The old clerk claims the right to hold office under his former election until a successor is elected and qualified.

"I desire to inquire what course the trustees should follow in the matter, whether by authority of section 3261 they have power to treat the office of clerk as vacant and appoint a clerk for the next two years. Second, whether they have power to appoint a clerk temporarily until a certificate of election is issued to one of the contestants. And third, whether or not their action in finding the bonds of each of the candidates to be sufficient in form and as to sureties and declining to approve either of them for lack of certificate is correct.

"I very much regret to trouble you with these questions, but it was the opinion of the trustees, until within the last few days, that the candidates, by some legal proceeding, would determine which of them was elected, but they have failed to do this and inasmuch as the new clerk should have taken office today, the trustees are confronted with the question as to who shall keep their records and whether or not the acts of such trustees would be legal until there is a clerk duly qualified.

"From the information I have received, I am of the opinion that there can be little question but that there was a mistake in the ballots in one of the two precincts of Union township, which might have tended to prejudice the chances of the old clerk at the election, and inasmuch as he was defeated by a small majority, it might, it seems to me, be successfully contended that there had been no legal election."

Your first and second questions may be considered together and are, in effect, whether under the facts stated there is a vacancy in the office of township clerk which may be filled by appointment by the township trustees.

Section 3261, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

"If by reason of non-acceptance, death, or removal of a person chosen to an office in any township, except trustees, at the regular election, or upon the removal of the assessor from the precinct or township for which he was elected, or there is a vacancy from any other cause, the trustees shall appoint a person having the qualifications of an elector to fill such vacancy for the unexpired term."

From the provisions of this section, it will be observed that it is only when there is a vacancy in a township office, other than trustee, that there is authority to appoint. A vacancy cannot exist in an office so long as there is a qualified person in possession of and authorized to discharge the duties of the same.

Section 8, G. C., provides as follows:

"A person holding an office of public trust shall continue therein until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified, unless otherwise provided in the constitution or laws."

By force of this section it will be noted that until the successor of the clerk, whose term of office expired December 31, 1915, has been elected and duly qualified, such clerk will continue to be lawfully entitled to hold the office and discharge the duties thereof. This, I think, fully disposes of the question as to the authority of the trustees to make an appointment and, as well, the further question suggested as to the legality of the official acts of the clerk who is in possession of the office. There is little if any doubt that, under the facts stated by you, the clerk in possession of the office is at least a de facto officer, and a de jure officer if no successor has been duly elected and qualified (State ex rel. v. Howe, 25 O. S., 595), whose official acts are valid in so far as the public or other persons may be affected or concerned.

Your third question, however, is involved in some difficulty. Section 5112, to which you refer, provides as follows:

"The returns of township elections shall be made by the judges and clerks in the several precincts to the proper township clerk within one day after the election. Such clerk shall canvass the vote, declare the result and issue and deliver certificates to the officers so elected."

It is therefore the mandatory duty of the clerk of the township, within a reasonable time after the receipt of the returns of a township election, to canvass the vote as shown by such returns, to declare the result of such election and to issue to those persons shown by such returns to have been elected a proper certificate of their election. This plain duty imposed by law is, when neglected or refused to be performed by the township clerk, enforceable by an action in mandamus.

There is no authority for the canvassing officer to go behind the returns made to him in determining the result of an election. Irregularities of various character may have occurred which would render the election subject to contest, but the question of such irregularities is not within the authority of the canvassing officers to consider. Though the question under consideration was not identical, the principle here involved was applied in the case of State ex rel. v. Pattison, 73 O. S., 305, the fourth branch of the syllabus of which is as follows:

"In certifying the election of an officer the power of the deputy supervisors of elections is limited to certifying that the successful candidate has been elected, and they have no power to decide upon a disputed term of office."

> "Before entering upon the discharge of his duties, the township clerk shall give bond payable to the trustees with sureties approved by them, in such sum as they determine, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as clerk. Such bond shall be recorded by the clerk, filed with the township treasurer and carefully preserved."

It was incumbent, therefore, upon the person who was elected township clerk at the November election in 1915, to present to the trustees a proper bond for their approval and by necessary implication it was the plain duty of the trustees to approve the same if in all respects in conformity with the requirements of the law. Yet, there is no authority in the trustees to determine or consider questions as to who has been duly elected to the office of clerk, nor may they take what is termed "judicial notice" of the result of the election. The only method by which the election of a clerk may be brought to the official knowledge of the trustees is by the presentation of a proper certificate of election to that office, signed by the clerk of the township, whose duty it was to determine by canvass of the election returns the result of the election. It therefore follows that without the presentation of such certificate, the trustees may not be compelled to approve the bond of one claiming to have been elected to the office of township clerk, since their authority in that respect is limited to the approval of the bond of a person so elected. If the trustees should choose to approve the bond of one claiming to have been elected as successor to a clerk whose term has expired on December 31, 1915, and who has taken the oath of office, the same would not constitute a legal qualification entitling such successor to enter upon the discharge of the duties of the office in the absence of a legal election. It will be observed, from an examination of section 3300, G. C., supra, that the only authority there conferred or duty imposed upon the trustees in reference to the bond in question, is to approve the sureties and determine the amount thereof. You state that the trustees determined the bond to be correct, and this I take to mean that it was sufficient in amount, and that they determined or found that the sureties thereon were sufficient, and this you state they did in respect to both of the bonds to them presented.

Whether the action of the trustees was a substantial approval of both bonds is not necessary here to consider. There would yet remain the essential question of who, if any one, was elected, and this it is not within the authority of the trustees to determine.

Answering, therefore, your first and second question specifically, I am of opinion that no vacancy in the office of township clerk exists which may be filled by appointment by the township trustees. The clerk in office December 31, 1915, under your statement of facts, may continue in possession of the same and to discharge the duties thereof so far as it concerns the township trustees, until by legal proceedings the rightful claimant to the office is determined.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CORONER—NOT REQUIRED TO PAY ANY FEE AT TIME OF FILING DECLARATION OF CANDIDACY FOR NOMINATION FOR SUCH OFFICE.

Candidates for county coroner are not required to pay any fee at the time of filing declaration of candidacy for nomination for that office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of January 12, 1916, is as follows:

> "We are herewith enclosing communication from the deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections of Butler county, with the request for your opinion on the following question:
> "'Under section 4970-1 of the General Code of Ohio, is a candidate for coroner of a county required to deposit a fee with the board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections when said candidate files his certificate as a candidate?'
> "If your answer to the aforesaid be in the affirmative what process of computing the fee should be followed?"

Section 4970-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 548, to which reference is made, provides in part as follows:

> "At the time of filing the declaration of candidacy for nomination for any office, each candidate shall pay a fee of one-half of one per cent. of the annual salary for such office, but in no case shall such fee be more than twenty-five dollars. * * * No fee shall be required in the case of candidates for committeeman or delegate or alternate to a convention or for president or vice-president of the United States, nor for offices for which no salary is paid."

There is a well defined distinction in this state between those offices for which there is prescribed by law a fixed annual salary and those the emoluments of which consist of certain prescribed fees which are authorized and required to be paid to or collected by an officer for the performance of official services defined by law.

The annual salary of an officer, I think, has no other meaning than that specific sum which the law authorizes or requires to be paid to such officer for each year of his incumbency in such office, usually paid in equal monthly or quarterly installments, as distinguished from the compensation of those officers who are authorized to receive and collect for their personal use only certain prescribed fees for the performance of certain specific official services or duties.

It seems that there can be no doubt that the term "salary" as found in the exception at the conclusion of the above quoted section has reference to an annual salary such as is referred to in the first sentence thereof.

There is not provided by law any sum certain or salary which is authorized or required to be paid to county coroners, but on the contrary they are in that class of officers whose compensation consists of and is limited exclusively to certain prescribed fees which that officer may receive and collect for, or upon the performance of certain official duties and services.

I am therefore of opinion that county coroners are not paid a salary within the meaning of that term as found in section 4970-1, G. C., supra, and are not, therefore, by the terms of said section required to pay any fee at the time of filing a declaration of candidacy for nomination for that office.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW—IN HEARING BEFORE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION COSTS MADE IN TAKING DEPOSITIONS BY A CLAIMANT MAY NOT BE TAXED BY COMMISSION AGAINST A PARTY.

In a hearing before the Industrial Commission of Ohio, under the workmen's compensation law, the costs made in taking depositions by a claimant may not be taxed by the commission against a party.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following letter from your department in which you request my opinion on the question therein contained, which is as follows:

> "In a claim pending before the commission involving an injury sustained by an employe of an employer who has been authorized to pay compensation direct, under section 22 of the compensation act, where it has been necessary for the claimant to file depositions of various witnesses, transcript of which testimony is filed with the Industrial Commission as proof of his claim, should the commission in its finding of fact and order assess the costs for taking such depositions against either party, and is there authority under the statute for such procedure on the part of the commission?"

In answer to your question I find that the only provisions of the workmen's compensation law which provide for the subpoenaing of witnesses and the taking of depositions and the payment of witness fees, etc., are contained in sections 1465-47, 1465-48, 1465-49, and 1465-50 (102 O. L., 526-527).

It is provided in section 1465-49 of the General Code, that witness fees shall be paid from the state treasury in the same manner as other expenses are audited and paid upon the presentation of proper vouchers approved by any two members of the board. No witness subpoenaed at the instance of a party other than the board of an inspector shall be entitled to compensation from the state treasury unless the board shall certify that his testimony was material to the matter investigated. The provisions above referred to are the only ones in the workmen's compensation law relating to the payment of witness fees, the taking of depositions, etc., that there is no provision therein for the taxing of fees or costs against a party. It will be noted that the above sections provide for the payment of witness fees, etc., out of the state treasury upon the audit of the claim or account, and upon the certification of any two members of the board or commission.

Therefore, answering your question directly, I am of the opinion that the Industrial Commission has no authority to tax costs against a party in a hearing before it, for the reason that the finding of the commission is limited to the allowance of compensation, medical, surgical, nursing and hospital services, and funeral expenses, and that the costs in proper cases upon certification are paid from the state treasury within the limits of appropriations in accordance with sections 1465-47, et seq., of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

POLL BOOKS—TALLY SHEETS—WHERE TRANSMITTED IN REGISTRATION CITIES AND WHERE REGISTRATION NOT REQUIRED—THOSE OF REGULAR ELECTIONS IN ODD NUMBERED YEARS FOR TOWNSHIP OFFICERS AND JUSTICE OF PEACE RETURNED TO TOWNSHIP CLERK—WHERE OTHER RETURNS SHOULD BE MADE—TICKET NOMINATED BY SINGLE PETITION PRINTED IN SEPARATE COLUMN—INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES NOMINATED BY SEPARATE PETITIONS IN LIST TO RIGHT OF TICKETS—RETURNS OF ELECTIONS FOR ELECTION OF OFFICERS OF NEWLY CREATED MUNICIPALITY.

Except in registration cities the returns of the November elections held in the even numbered years for the election of state, district and county offices are required to be transmitted, one poll book and tally sheet to the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county and the other poll book and tally sheet to the clerk of the township or to the clerk or auditor of the municipal corporation in which the election precinct for which the election returns are made is located. In registration cities the returns of such elections are required to be delivered, one poll book and tally sheet to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county, and the other poll book and tally sheet to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county at its office.

Both poll books and tally sheets of regular elections held in November of odd numbered years for township officers (except members of boards of education) and justices of the peace, except in election precincts in registration cities, are required to be returned to the clerk of the township. The returns of such elections of township offices and justices of the peace in precincts in registration cities are required to be made to the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county. The returns of elections of members of boards of education, except in registration cities, are required to be made to the clerk of the board of education of the district in which such election is held. In registration cities the returns of elections of members of the board of education and of municipal offices are required to be made to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county. In municipalities, except registration cities, the returns of the election of municipal offices, except members of boards of education, are required to be made to the clerk or auditor of the municipality.

Where a ticket or list of candidates, not containing the names of more candidates for any one office than may be elected, is nominated by a petition, and there is designated a proper name or title for such ticket or list of candidates, it is required that such ticket be printed in a separate column on the ballot to the right of all party tickets, under the name so designated, having printed above such designated name or title a circular space similar to that above party tickets.

The names of all independent candidates nominated by separate petitions should be placed in a list to the right of party tickets and tickets nominated by petition, without any name, title or designation thereover and without any circular space over the same, and the names of such independent candidates for the several offices to be elected should be placed under the title of such offices in alphabetical order according to surnames. Tickets or lists of candidates for offices may not be nominated by a single petition in townships nor in municipalities of less than 2,000 population in which no primary election is held for the nomination of candidates.

The returns of elections held under authority of section 3536, G. C., for the election of municipal offices of a newly created municipal corporation are required to be made to the clerk of the township in which such municipality is located, and such clerk is required to canvass the same and issue proper certificates of election to those persons by him determined from such returns to have been elected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1916.

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of January 11, 1916, is as follows:

> "As there will be held in this county soon a special municipal election when part of the following questions will be pertinent thereto, I shall be pleased to have your opinion on them as soon as you can furnish me the same:
> 1. "Where are the returns of the elections held in November each year to be made, and what disposition is to be made of the poll books, except those returned to the Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections? Is any different disposition to be made at the elections held in even-numbered than in odd-numbered years, or in municipalities where registration is required?
> 2. "Where a ticket is nominated by a single petition as provided by section 4996, G. C., and such petitioners designate themselves the 'Citizens' Ticket,' as provided by section 5003, G. C., is such a ticket or list of candidates entitled to a separate column and a circle over such ticket, on the ballot?
> 3. "In case of candidates nominated by single petitions under the same section, would not the names of the several candidates for the different offices have to be grouped in one column, without any designation whatever on the ballot except 'Independent Ticket'?"

Your first inquiry comprehends only the general elections held in november of the even numbered years and regular elections held in November of the odd numbered years, and as to the former, involves first a consideration of section 5093, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "The judges and clerks in each precinct shall make out the returns of the election in duplicate, sign and certify one of the poll books and tally sheets thereof and immediately transmit it to the deputy state supervisors by the presiding judge or such other judge as he may designate. The other poll book and tally sheet signed and certified in like manner shall be forthwith deposited with the clerk of the township or the clerk or auditor of the municipal corporation. as the case may require, by another judge designated by the presiding judge, and shall be preserved one year from the date of such election. Such returns shall be securely sealed in an envelope and addressed transversely upon the upper end thereof to the proper officer with whom they are to be deposited, with the designation of the township, precinct and county. In registration cities, such delivery shall be made as provided in the chapter relating to registration."

In this section is found the general provision for the returns of general elections held in November of the even numbered years. Its provisions are clear and unequivocal, requiring that one of the poll books and tally sheets shall be transmitted to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections and the other to the clerk of the township or auditor of the municipal corporation, except in registration cities, which will be hereafter noted. It will be also further noted that it is here provided in mandatory terms that the poll books and tally sheets so returned to the township clerk or the clerk or auditor of the municipality, shall be preserved one year from the date of such election. The exception to the provisions of the above section, to which reference is therein made as to registration cities, is found in section 4937, G. C., 103 O. L., 846, which provides as follows:

"After having set down the number of votes for each person, certified and signed it in the poll books and tally sheets in the manner prescribed by law, the judges of elections shall put under cover one of the poll books and tally sheets, seal it and direct it to the clerk of the court of common pleas. The other poll book and tally sheet shall be sealed in like manner and directed to the board of deputy state supervisors. Before separating, they shall designate two of their number as messengers, by lot, if they cannot agree, one of whom shall personally and within twenty hours from the close of the polls deliver to the clerk of the court of common pleas the poll book and tally sheets so addressed to such clerk, and the other shall personally and within twenty hours deliver the other poll book and tally sheet to the board of deputy state supervisors at its office."

It will be readily observed that it is here provided that the poll books and tally sheets, when made out in duplicate, in registration cities, shall be delivered within twenty hours, one to the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county and the other to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county. There is here found no provision as to the length of time poll books returned to the clerk of courts shall be preserved. In the absence of such provision the presumption would arise at least that it was the purpose and intention that the returns so directed to the clerk of courts should be perpetually kept on file and preserved.

From a consideration of the foregoing statutory provisions, I conclude that, except in registration cities, the returns of the November elections held in the even numbered years, for the election of state, district and county officers, are required to be transmitted, one poll book and tally sheet to the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county and the other poll book and tally sheet to the clerk of the township, or to the clerk or auditor of the municipal corporation in which the election precinct from which the election returns are made is located. In registration cities the returns of such elections are required to be delivered, one poll book and tally sheet to the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county and the other poll book and tally sheet to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county at its office.

As to the returns of elections held in odd numbered years for township officers, justices of the peace, municipal officers and members of boards of education, section 5111, G. C., provides:

> "In November elections held in odd numbered years for township officers, justices of the peace, municipal officers and members of boards of education, the judges and clerks of elections in each precinct shall make and certify the returns to the clerk of the township or the clerk or auditor of the municipality in or for which the election is held or the clerk of the board of education of the school district, respectively, instead of to the board of deputy state supervisors of the county. This provision shall not apply to the returns of elections for assessors of real property."

Section 5112, G. C., provides:

> "The returns of township elections shall be made by the judges and clerks in the several precincts to the proper township clerk within one day after the election. Such clerk shall canvass the vote, declare the result and issue and deliver certificates to the officers so elected."

Section 5114, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "The returns of municipal elections shall be made by the judges and clerks in each precinct to the clerk or auditor of the municipality. Such clerk or auditor, or, in his absence or disability, a person selected by the council, shall call to his assistance the mayor, and, in his presence, make an abstract and ascertain the candidates elected, as herein required with respect to county officers. * * *"

Section 5115, G. C., provides as follows:

> "In registration cities the returns of the election of municipal officers, members of boards of education or justices of the peace shall be made to the board of deputy state supervisors of the county in which such city is located, and canvassed by a board of canvassers, consisting of such board of deputy state supervisors and the city auditor."

It will be observed that it is thus provided by sections 5111 and 5112, G. C., that in the odd numbered years the returns of elections of township officers, except in townships in which there is a registration city, shall be made to the clerk of the township in which such election is held. Since it is required that "the returns," without qualification or limitation, shall be made to the township clerk, the phrase "the returns" in its ordinary meaning, would include all the returns. This presumption is strengthened by the further provision of section 5111, G. C., that the certification to the clerk of the township shall be instead of to the deputy state supervisors of the county, thus precluding any inference that might otherwise arise to the effect that one poll book should be returned to the clerk of the township and the other to the deputy state supervisors of elections.

Sections 5111 and 5112, G. C., must be read together and given such construction as to give operative force to both under familiar rules of statutory construction. The only purpose, perhaps, in the retention of section 5112, when section 5111 was enacted in its present form, was to preserve the provision in the last sentence of section 5112 for the canvassing of the returns of the election of township officers.

The phrase "township officers," as used in section 5111, G. C., it would seem, was not intended to include members of township boards of education, since it is therein specifically provided that returns of elections of members of boards of education shall be made to the clerk of the board of education in the district in which such election is held. This view is supported by the provisions of section 5120, G. C., that in "school elections" the returns shall be made to the clerk of the board of education of the district and canvassed by the board. I take it that "school elections" as here used, includes in every case the election of members of boards of education.

It will be observed that by the provisions of section 5115, G. C., supra, it is required that in all registration cities "the returns," which as above stated I deem to include all returns of the elections of municipal officers which are to be held in November of the odd numbered years, together with the returns of the election of members of boards of education and justices of the peace, be made to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county in which such registration city is located.

I therefore conclude that both poll books and tally sheets of regular elections held in November of odd numbered years for township officers, (except members of boards of education) and justices of the peace, except in election precincts in registration cities, are required to be returned to the clerk of the township. The returns of such elections of township officers and justices of the peace in precincts in registration cities are required to be made to the deputy state supervisors of elections of the county. The returns of elections of members of boards of education, except in registration cities, are required to be made to the clerk of the board of education of the district in which such election is held. In registration cities the returns of elections of members of the board of education and of municipal officers are required to be made to the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of the county. In municipalities, except registration cities, the returns of the election of municipal officers, except members of the board of education, are required to be made to the clerk or auditor of the municipality.

The statutes above referred to and considered do not apply to special elections as to which there is special provision governing the returns thereof.

Your second question involves a consideration of a number of statutes. Sections 4996 and 4999, G. C., 103 O. L., 844, authorize the nomination of candidates for office by petition. Section 5003, G. C., to which you refer, provides as follows:

> "Besides containing the names of candidates, all certificates of nomination and nomination papers shall specify as to each candidate:
> 1. "The office for which he is nominated;
> 2. "The party or political principle which he represents, expressed in not more than three words;
> 3. "His place of residence, with street and number thereof, if any.
> "In nominations by petition, the certificate may designate instead of a party or political principle any name or title which the signers may select. Candidates nominated by petition without distinctive appellations shall be certified as independent candidates. In case of electors of president and vice-president of the United States, the names of the candidates for president and vice-president shall be added to the party or political appellation."

Under the provision of this section a list of candidates for the several offices to be elected may be nominated by one petition. That is to say, the names of candidates for each of the several offices to be elected may be placed at the head of a single petition or the parts thereof in the form prescribed and the names of the signers of such petition or parts thereof counted for each of the several candidates for the various offices to be filled, so long as there are not more candidates named in such petition for any office than there are incumbents to be elected to such office. A number of candidates so nominated would, I take it, constitute a ticket within the meaning of that term as used in statutes prescribing the form of ballot. The signers of such petition may designate a name or title for such ticket.

By the provisions of section 5017, G. C., 106 O. L., 346, it is required that the ballot "shall contain the names of all the candidates whose nomination for any offices specified in the ballot have been duly made and not withdrawn in accordance herewith, arranged in tickets or lists. * * *"

> "In general the arrangement of the ballot shall conform as nearly as practicable to the plan hereinafter given. The tickets of the various political parties shall be printed in parallel columns headed by the chosen device upon a shaded background, and the party names in such order as the secretary of state directs, precedence being given to the political party which held the highest number of votes for governor at the next preceding November election, and so on, provided, however, that the names of candidates for United States senator shall appear upon the ballot next below the name of the candidates for governor. The tickets, or lists, of candidates, nominated by nomination papers, with their party names or designations, shall be printed at the right of and parallel with the tickets of political parties in such order as the secretary of state directs, precedence being given to the order herein prescribed for party tickets. No ticket or list of candidates containing more candidates for any office than are to be elected shall be printed under the name of any party."

Here it is provided that tickets or lists of candidates so nominated pursuant to the provisions of section 5003, G. C., supra, shall be printed with their party names or designations at the right of or parallel with tickets of political parties, in such order as the secretary of state directs. If, therefore, the names of several candidates for different offices who are nominated by what is termed one petition in the manner above suggested, constitute a ticket as before indicated, all such tickets are required to be put in separate columns in the order prescribed.

> "The ballot shall be so printed as to give each elector a clear opportunity to designate by a cross mark in a large blank circular space, three-quarters of an inch in diameter, below the device and above the name of the party at the head of the ticket or list of candidates his choice of a party ticket and desire to vote for each and every candidate thereon. * * *"

Specific requirement is here found that the ballot shall be so printed as to give each elector an opportunity to express his choice, by placing a cross mark in a circular space at the head of a list of candidates as well as by placing the mark in a circular space at the head of a party ticket.

The terms "list of candidates" cannot be here construed to apply to other than those lists or tickets which are above referred to as having been nominated by one petition and cannot be made to include those candidates nominated by separate petition, which are required to be certified as independent candidates. By separate petitions any number of candidates may be nominated for the same office and it would be impracticable to determine the voters' choice among such candidates from a cross mark placed above any list of such independent candidates.

Upon consideration of the provisions of the statutes above referred to, I am of the opinion, in answer to your second inquiry, that where a ticket or list of candidates, not containing the names of more candidates for any one office than may be elected, is nominated by a petition or certificate, and there is designated therein a proper name or title for such ticket or list of candidates, it is required that such ticket be printed in a separate column on the ballot to the right of all party tickets under the name so designated, having printed above such designated name or title a circular space similar to that above party tickets.

It should be here observed, however, that no ticket or list of candidates may be nominated by petition as above suggested in townships, nor in municipalities, with a population less than two thousand in which no primary election is had for making nominations.

Your third inquiry refers to the nomination of candidates for office by separate petitions without distinctive titles or designation. It is provided in section 5003, G. C., supra, that candidates so nominated shall be certified as independent candidates.

Section 5017, G. C., 106 O. L., 346, requires, as stated above, that the ballot shall contain the names of all candidates duly nominated and not withdrawn, and it will be remembered also that section 5018, G. C., 104 O. L., 11, provides that:

> "The tickets, or lists, of candidates nominated by nomination papers, with their party names or designations, shall be printed at the right of and parallel with the tickets of political parties * * *."

This provision applies as well to independent candidates nominated in the manner stated in your third question, by separate petitions, as to tickets nominated in the manner suggested in your second inquiry, i. e., tickets nominated by single petition. Independent candidates nominated by separate petitions will constitute a list of candidates which are by the above provision required to be placed on the ballot to the right of party tickets and tickets nominated by petition or nomination papers.

While it is provided in the same section that "no ticket or list of candidates containing more candidates for any office than are to be elected shall be printed under the name of any party," this has no application to lists of independent candidates. Such lists of independent candidates are not authorized to be printed under any name or designation. More detailed provision is not found for the form in which such lists of independent candidates for other offices shall be printed upon the ballot. I think, however, it is the uniform practice to print the names of all candidates for each office in such list in groups under the designation or title of the office for which nominated, in alphabetical order, according to surnames, as provided in section 5028, G. C., 103 O. L., 520, for the printing of the names of candidates in townships and municipalities having a population less than two thousand.

Answering your third inquiry, I am of opinion that the names of all independent candidates nominated by separate petitions should be placed in a list to the right of party tickets and tickets nominated by petition, without any name, title or designation thereover and without any circular space over the same; and that the names of such independent candidates for the several offices to be elected should be placed under the title of such office in alphabetical order according to surnames.

In your further communication under date of January 17, 1915, you state that the special election to which you made reference in your letter above quoted, is a special municipal election authorized to be held under the provisions of section 3536, G. C., in newly created municipal corporations. Said section 3536, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The first election of officers for such corporation shall be at the first municipal election after its creation, and the place of holding the election shall be fixed by the agent of the petitioners. Notice thereof, printed or plainly written, shall be posted by him in three or more public places within the limits of the corporation, at least ten days before the election. The election shall be conducted, and the officers chosen and qualified, in the manner prescribed for the election of township officers, and the first election may be a special election held at any time not exceeding six months after the incorporation, and the time and place of holding it shall be fixed by such agent, and notice thereof shall be given as is required herein for the municipal election."

It is assumed that the municipality in question, if it may be considered such at all, has a population of less than two thousand, and is therefore unauthorized to nominate candidates by primary election. From this it follows that candidates for municipal offices to be elected at the anticipated special election authorized under section 3536, G. C., supra, may be nominated only by petition, and unless so nominated may not have their names printed upon the ballot, by reason of the provision of section 4949, G. C., 104 O. L., 9.

There is, however, to be found no special provision as to the time of the filing of nomination petitions for nomination of candidates to be voted for at a special election of municipal officers to be held under section 3536, G. C., supra, and the time of the filing of such petitions would, therefore, be governed by the general provisions of section 5004, G. C., 104 O. L., 10, which provides that:

> "Certificates of nomination and nomination papers of candidates shall be filed as follows:
> "For township or municipal officers, justices of the peace, or members of the board of education, with the board of deputy state supervisors of the county, not less than sixty days previous to the date of election:"

A compliance with the statutory requirements referred to, relative to the nomination of candidates, will necessitate fixing the date of such special election at such time as will give reasonable time and opportunity for candidates to file petitions for nomination at least 60 days prior to the date of election. Since no primary election may be held in the municipality in process of organization, as stated above, no ticket may be nominated by one petition. All candidates must in such election be placed upon the ballot in accordance with the provisions of section 5028, G. C., 103 O. L., 520.

The returns of such special municipal election are not specifically provided for since prior thereto there can be no clerk or auditor of such municipality to whom the returns may be made, under the provisions of section 5114, G. C., supra.

It will be observed that it is provided by section 3536, supra, that "the election shall be conducted, and the officers chosen and qualified, in the manner prescribed for the election of township officers." There is here adopted by reference and implication, in my judgment, the provision of section 5112, G. C., supra, and the same made applicable to the returns of special elections of municipal officers under section 3536, G. C., supra, and the returns of such election are required by virtue of said section 5112, so adopted, to be made to the clerk of the township in which the municipality is located, and such clerk is required to canvass the same and issue proper certificate of election to those persons by him determined from such returns to have been elected.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT FOR BOND ISSUE, BOARD OF EDUCATION OF WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP, PICKAWAY COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—IN RE bonds of Washington township, Pickaway county, Ohio, in the sum of $27,000.00, being fifty-four bonds of $500.00 each, numbered consecutively from one to fifty-four, falling due two every six months commencing March 1, 1917, and ending March 1, 1930.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of said rural school district, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code.

I am therefore of the opinion that said bonds prepared in the form set forth in the resolution authorizing their issue, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of the said school district.

I enclose the transcript herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW—MINIMUM PERIOD FOR WHICH COMPENSATION MAY BE AWARDED FOR LOSS OF ONE-THIRD OF FOURTH FINGER IS FIVE WEEKS—WHERE DISABILITY FOR LOSS OF ONE-THIRD OF FOURTH FINGER IS FOR GREATER PERIOD THAN FIVE WEEKS—AWARD MAY BE MADE UNDER SECTION 1465-79, G. C.

1. The minimum period for which compensation may be awarded for the loss of one-third of the fourth finger is five weeks, as provided in the schedule of section 33 of the workmen's compensation law, or section 1465-80, G. C. (103 O. L., 85).

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following letter from your department in which you request my opinion with reference to the allowance of compensation under section 33 of the workmen's compensation law, or section 1465-80, of the General Code (103 O. L., 72):

> "In a case of injury resulting in the amputation of one-third of the fourth finger, for which a specific allowance of five weeks' compensation at two-thirds wages is provided in section 33 of the compensation act, and where the actual period of disablement lasts for more than five weeks, does the statute require or allow the payment of compensation to cover the period of disability in excess of the specific period provided for by section 33?
> "The attached statement sets forth in detail the facts in the case in which the question arose."

Omitting such parts of section 33 of the act, referred to above, as are not applicable to your question, the section reads as follows:

> "In case of injury resulting in partial disability, the employe shall receive sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of the impairment of his earning capacity during the continuance thereof, not to exceed a maximum of twelve dollars per week, or a greater sum in the aggregate than thirty-seven hundred and fifty dollars. In cases included in the following schedule, the disability in each case shall be deemed to continue for the period specified and the compensation so paid for such injury shall be as specified herein, to wit:
> "For the loss of a fourth finger, commonly known as the little finger, 66 2-3% of the average weekly wages during fifteen weeks * * *
> "The loss of the third, or distal phalange, of any finger shall be considered to be equal to the loss of one-third of such finger. * * *"

This section provides that in cases enumerated in the schedule the disability in each case shall be deemed to continue for the period specified and the compensation shall be as therein provided. It would seem from the language of the statute just quoted that compensation for an injury resulting in partial disability shall not be paid for a less period than is provided in the schedule. The statement attached to your letter shows that there was a temporary disability extending beyond the period specified for one-third loss of the fourth finger. Your question then is whether or not compensation can be awarded covering this further period of temporary disability.

Section 32 of the act, or section 1465-79 of the General Code (103 O. L., 85) provides as follows:

> "In case of temporary disability, the employe shall receive sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. of his average weekly wages so long as such disability is total, not to exceed a maximum of twelve dollars per week, and not less than a minimum of five dollars per week, in which event he shall receive compensation equal to his full wages; but in no case to continue for more than six weeks from the date of the injury, or to exceed three thousand, seven hundred and fifty dollars."

The section just quoted refers to injuries resulting in temporary disability. There is a temporary disability resulting to the employe in the case you cite in your letter which is for a greater period than that provided in the schedule under section 33 of the act.

We think that the purpose and object of the workmen's compensation act was to compensate the injured employe during the period of his disability, and that therefore sections 32 and 33 should be construed together, and that compensation can be properly awarded covering a temporary disability where the period extends for a longer time than is specified in the schedule of section 33 for partial disability.

The question submitted in your letter is identical with one which arose under the workmen's compensation law of the state of New Jersey. The New Jersey law in section 2, clause A, provides compensation for injuries producing temporary disability, and clause B provides for disability total in character and permanent in quality. Clause C provides for disability partial in character but permanent in quality, and it is further provided in this section and clause, that in cases included in its following schedule the compensation shall be that named in the schedule.

In the case of The Nitram Company v. Creigh, reported in 86 Atl., 435, compensation was awarded for temporary disability to which was added the period specified in the schedule for a partial disability. The employer objected to the award, the case was taken to the supreme court of that state, and the award was sustained, the syllabus of the case being as follows:

> "Where a servant employed under the workmen's compensation law got his fingers mashed and some of them were amputated and such injury produced temporary disability partly due to an affection preventing him from going to work, damages were properly allowed both under clause A, concerning temporary disability and clause C, providing for disability partial in character but permanent in quality even though the damage would exceed the maximum recovered under clause B, relating to total and permanent disability."

Therefore, in answer to your question, I am of the opinion that compensation can properly be allowed for temporary disability which exceeds that of partial disability as specified in the schedule contained in section 33 of the workmen's compensation law, or section 1465-80 of the General Code, and that section 33 provides the minimum amount which shall be paid in cases therein specified.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—MAY CLASSIFY PERSONS WHO HAVE NOT BEEN INCLUDED IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE OR UNSKLLED LABOR CLASS OR ANY CLASS OTHER THAN COMPETITIVE CLASS, UPON GROUND OF PRACTICABILITY OF COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS TO TEST MERIT AND FITNESS FOR POSITIONS FOR WHICH THEY ARE APPLICANTS—THOSE EXEMPT FROM COMPETITIVE CLASS IN CLASS NOT NAMED.

The State Civil Service Commission, under authority of section 486-9, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 406, and related sections, may classify the persons remaining in the employ of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof, who have not been included in the unclassified service or unskilled labor class or any class other than the competitive class, upon the ground of practicability of competitive examinations to test their merit and fitness for the position for which they are applicants. When such classification is made those persons whose merit and fitness for a position it is decided practicable to determine by competitive examination may be included in the competitive class, while those persons whose merit and fitness for a position to be filled are found by said commission to be impracticable to determine by competitive examinations may be exempted from said competitive class, and when so exempted are removed from the operation of the civil service law, and are not within any class named therein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 20, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Sometime since you submitted to me an inquiry which was reserved for consideration until certain proceedings involving the constitutionality of the new civil service law could be determined. Those proceedings having settled the constitutionality of this law, I now respectfully submit my answer.

Your inquiry is as follows:

"Subdivision (b) of section 486-8 of the new civil service law, reads as follows:

"'The classified service shall comprise all persons in the employe of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof not specifically included in the unclassified service, to be designated as the competitive class, and the unskilled labor class.'

Paragraph 1, under subdivision (b), reads as follows:

"'The competitive class shall include all positions and employments now existing or hereafter created in the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof, for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examinations. Appointments shall be made to, or employment shall be given in, all positions in the competitive class that are not filled by promotion, reinstatement, transfer or reduction, as provided in this act, and the rules of the commission, by appointment from those certified to the appointing officer in accordance with the provisions of this act.'

"Your opinion on the following question is respectfully requested:

"Inasmuch as the new law states that the classified service shall comprise all persons not specifically included in the unclassified service, has this commission authority to exempt any positions from the classified service on the ground of impracticability? In other words, if this commission decides that it is impracticable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants for any position by competitive examination, does this exempt the position from the classified service or only from the competitive class of the classified service?"

Your inquiry must be answered by determining the persons and positions included in the classified service rather than by determining what persons or positions may be excepted therefrom. This requires a consideration of all the provisions of the civil service law, 106 O. L., page 400, which apply to the classified and unclassified service.

It is provided in the section you quote that the civil service of the state shall be divided into two general classes, viz.: The classified and unclassified service. No attempt is made anywhere in the whole law to define the unclassified service. This is so because the law itself specifically designates what person shall be included in that service, which specifications are to be found in the succeeding paragraphs of said section 486-8. These provisions having clearly and definitely designated the persons included in the unclassified service, the legislature in subdivision (b), which you quote, defines the persons and positions that shall comprise the classified service. They are, as therein defined, all persons in the employ of the state and the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof "not specifically included in the unclassified service." The term "specifically," as here used, must be held to apply to the precise or definite person or persons in the different paragraphs of subdivision (a) as hereinbefore noted, and to such other persons who may be designated by the state civil service commission, under authority granted to it by the provisions of paragraphs 10 tnd 12 of said subdivision (a). That is to say, the persons specifically included in the unclassified service constitute two classes: First, those named by the legislature and specified in the law, and second those to be designated by the state commission, under the provisions of paragraphs 10 and 12 aforesaid, from a class which is named by the legislature. It is clear, therefore, that as to the unclassified service, the legislature has delegated no administrative duty whatever to the state commission save and except the duty under the prescribed conditions of said paragraphs 10 and 12 aforesaid, which duty, it must be noted, is expressly limited and confined to the persons specified in said paragraphs. Not only is this true, but no similar authority can be found in any other section of the civil service law, with the exception of that granted in paragraph 2 of section 486-14, which paragraph refers to positions requiring particular and exceptional qualifications, and which positions, while removed from the competitive class, still remain in the classified service.

The legislature having thus definitely fixed and determined what persons shall constitute the unclassified service, and having provided that all persons not in the unclassified service shall comprise the classified service, it would seem to leave but little to conjecture as to the persons who are thus to constitute the classified service. In other words, the legislature, up to this point, in its plan or scheme of civil service, has clearly and definitely fixed the division between classified and unclassified service. Having done so, it then undertakes to divide the classified service into two classes, viz.: The competitive and the unskilled labor class. This division seems to be in some conflict with the provisions of paragraph 3 of section 486-1 of the civil service law, wherein the classified service and competitive classified service are designated as synonymous terms. Nor can it be said to be in entire harmony with the unskilled labor clause of paragraph 12 of subdivision (a) aforesaid, because that clause apparently recognizes that unskilled labor positions may be in the competitive classified service unless excepted by the state or municipal civil service commission, as therein provided, whereas by the provisions just quoted, the unskilled labor class is expressly separated from the competitive class. However, these matters do not reflect upon your inquiry except as they may indicate that the provisions of the first clause of subdivision (b) may not have been thoroughly understood by the law making power.

The competitive class thus constituted is made to include all positions and employments now existing "or hereafter created in the state, the counties, cities and city school districts thereof for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants by competitive examination."

Here then we find for the first time a qualification applied to the competitive class. While, as before suggested, it would seem that, not only by the express terms of said subdivisions (b) but by other provisions of the law hereinbefore noted, the competitive classified service included all remaining positions in the state and other political subdivisions named in the law, yet it seems that still another condition is to be met before said competitive class may be fully determined. Did the legislature, therefore, intend by this language:

> "for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicant by competitive examinations,' to add a further qualification to admission into the competitive class? That such is the purpose of the law seems to be indisputable. Independent of any other considerations, the language of this statute itself precludes any other conclusion. Its plain and unequivocal terms are that the competitive class shall include all positions for which it is practicable to determine the merit and fitness of applicants therefor by competitive examinations. This is a qualification imposed by language that cannot be ignored. It means that it is not enough that a position is not included in the unclassified or unskilled labor class, or any other class theretofore named in the statute, to warrant it being classified in the competitive class. Such position must possess another attribute or quality. It must be a position that it is practicable by competitive examination to determine the merit and fitness of an applicant therefor. It must be noted, too, in this connection that this condition so imposed is in complete harmony with the constitutional requirement that appointments "in the civil service * * * shall be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by competitive examinations." Not only, however, is this law in harmony with the constitutional provision aforesaid, but this construction of the law is in harmony with the repeated interpretations by the courts of New York of constitutional and statutory provisions very similar to our constitution and the statutory law under consideration, not only in language and expression, but in effect. A citation to but one authority is sufficient.

In the case of Chittenden v. Wurster, 152 N. Y., 345, Judge Haight, in delivering the majority opinion of the court of appeals, said:

> "We have carefully read the evidence in this case and not a word have we found tending to show that a competitive examination is practicable for a position where the appointee receives, opens, reads and answers the letters of his chief; where he is to counsel and advise him with reference to the conduct and management of his office, sign his name to checks or warrants, collect and pay out his money, have the combination of his safe and the custody and control of its contents. A candidate may be ever so competent and still lack many of the necessary elements of a trustworthy officer; he may be ever so learned and still lacking in > judgment and discretion; he may be discreet and still without character; he may be honest and yet meddlesome and a person in whom you could not confide. To our minds the framers of the constitution or of the statutes never contemplated or intended that a competitive examination was practicable for such a position."

It is manifest, even to a casual observer, that there are many positions in the service of the state and its political subdivisions to which the foregoing remarks apply and which, it must be assumed, were known to the legislature, and which are not specifically included in the unclassified service or any other class of service in the civil service law under consideration. More than that, there are many positions not otherwise classified which by the operation of this law, without this condition, would fall into the competitive class which could not be filled at all, because they would not be worth the trouble of qualifying for an appointment thereto. Many other and further considerations might be urged outside of the language of the law itself to support this interpretation, but I will not pursue this branch of our discussion further.

I conclude that by the terms of said paragraph 1 of section (b), all positions placed in the competitive class must be determined to be positions which may be filled by persons whose merit and fitness therefor it is practicable to determine by competitive examination. From this it follows that such qualification is a condition precedent and, if a condition precedent, it is only fair to assume that the legislature by some appropriate provision has constituted some authority to determine these qualifications, not for the purpose of exempting any persons and position from the competitive service, but for the purpose of placing them therein. That duty, in my judgment, is imposed upon your commission by the provisions of section 486-9, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 406. The provisions of said section to which I refer are as follows:

> "As soon as practicable after the taking effect of this act, the commission shall put into effect rules for the classification of offices, positions and employments in the civil service of the state and the several counties thereof; for appointment, promotions, transfers, lay-offs, suspensions, reductions, reinstatements and removals therein and examinations and registrations therefor."

The provisions aforesaid delegate to your commission complete authority to classify offices, positions and employments and, therefore, to determine by such classification what offices, positions and employments shall be placed in the competitive class. The exercise of the power thus conferred involves a determination of questions of fact and, therefore, requires the exercise of judgment and discretion, and the duty thus conferred may be said to be more than a mere ministerial duty. I think, however, that the commission may exercise such power and that the same was fully contemplated, not only by the provision of said section 486-9, G. C., but by the other provisions of the civil service law.

It is provided in said paragraph 1 of subdivision (b) that "appointments shall be made to or employments shall be given in, all positions in the competitive class that are not filled by promotion, reinstatement, transfer or reduction, as provided in this act, and the rules of the commission, by appointment from those certified to the appointing officer in accordance with the provisions of this act." This language plainly implies that in addition to the provisions of law pertaining thereto the rules of the commission shall also have the effect of law and control with and in addition to the law. Again, it is provided in section 486-7, G. C., that "the commission shall prescribe, amend and enforce administrative rules for the purpose of carrying out and making effectual the provisions of this act."

While the duties prescribed in these sections are designated as administrative duties, yet such duties may frequently call for the exercise of discretion.

People v. Salsbury, 96 N. W., 941.

These various provisions, when considered in connection with said section 486-9, in my judgment, emphasize a purpose in the law to invest your commission with more than mere ministerial duties, and make it manifest that under said section 486-9, authority is conferred upon you to exercise your judgment and discretion in classifying offices, positions and employments with reference to the facts that may apply to each. The discretion, however, thus vested in your commision must be exercised with due regard for the requirements of the law as expressed in said paragraph 1 of subdivision (b), for when so exercised it is subject to review by the courts. This is so because while the duty of classification is imposed upon you in the first instance, yet if such classification is made in conflict with the express requirements of the law the courts will take jurisdiction of the matter when presented in a proper action, and hold such classification void as in case of any other unlawful act. It is expressly held in the case of Chittenden v. Wurster, reported in 14 N. Y., App. Div. 483, that when the character and functions of any particular position are ascertained the question whether competitive examination for appointment to that position is practicable or not, is a question of law and may be reviewed by a court of competent jurisdiction in a proper action.

Again, it is especially provided in section 486-29, G. C., (106 O. L., 418) that the right of any taxpayer to bring an action to restrain the payment of compensation to any person appointed to or holding any office or place of employment in violation of the provisions of the civil service law shall not be limited or denied by reason of the fact that said office or place of employment shall have been classified as or determined to be classified as not subject to competitive examination. From this it appears that while your commission is authorized to make the classification above noted, and in so doing is empowered to exercise its judgment and discretion, yet such classification, when completed, may be reviewed by the courts of competent jurisdiction.

Coming now to a specific answer to the inquiry submitted, I am of the opinion that your commission has full authority to classify the persons remaining in the employ of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof which have not been included in the unclassified service and the unskilled labor class, or any other class except the competitive class; that such classification may be made so as to include in one division thereof all persons whose merit and fitness for a position it is practicable to determine by competitive examination, which said division shall constitute the competitive class; and in another division those persons whose merit and fitness for the positions to be filled are found by your commission to be impracticable to determine by competitive examinations, which last named positions may be exempted from the competitive class, and when so exempted are removed entirely from the operation of the civil service laws and are not within any class named therein.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—ROAD IMPROVEMENT COMMENCED UNDER SECTION 6956-1 ET SEQ., G. C., PRIOR TO REPEAL BY CASS HIGHWAY LAW—ASSESSMENT ACCORDING TO BENEFITS—REAL ESTATE LYING WITHIN AND WITHOUT A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—ABUTTING PROPERTY OF IMPROVED ROAD WHICH WAS BUILT ENTIRELY BY GENERAL TAXATION MAY BE ASSESSED—SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT OWNED BY CITY AND LYING OUTSIDE OF CITY AND WITHIN ONE MILE ASSESSMENT DISTRICT, MAY BE ASSESSED.

1. Where a road improvement was commenced under section 6956-1 et seq., G. C., prior to their repeal by the Cass highway law, and the road improvement began at the east corporation line of a city and extended in an easterly direction from that point, real estate within such city and lying within one mile of the western end of the road improvement may be assessed for a part of the cost of the improvement in question, the assessment to be made according to the benefits derived from the improvement.

2. Real estate lying within one mile of the eastern end of the road improvement in question and abutting upon another improved road, which other improved road is an extension of the road now being improved, and which other road was built entirely by general taxation, may be assessed for a part of the cost of the road improvement in question, the assessment to be made according to benefits.

3. A tract of land owned by the city in question and lying outside said city and immediately south of the improved road in question and within the assessment district for such road, and which land is used by the city for a sewage and garbage disposal plant, may be assessed for a part of the road improvement in question, which assessment must also be made according to benefits.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 21, 1916.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communications of December 2 and December 11, 1915, in which you state that under the provisions of section 6956-1 et seq., of the General Code, which sections were repealed by the Cass highway law (106 O. L., 574), a certain proceeding was commenced in your county prior to the repeal of the sections in question.

This proceeding was for the improvement of a section of highway beginning at the east corporation line of the city of Mansfield and extending in an easterly direction from that point. The petition was filed and granted, the intermediate steps were taken, the contract was let and the greater part of the work was completed before the Cass highway law went into effect, and you therefore correctly observe that the proceeding is to be concluded under said section 6956-1 et seq., of the General Code.

You now make certain inquiries in regard to the assessment of that part of the cost of the improvement to be charged against and collected from owners of real estate, which inquiries may be phrased as follows:

1. "May real estate within the city of Mansfield and lying within one mile of the western end of the road improvement be assessed for any part of the cost of the improvement in question?

2. "May real estate lying within one mile of the eastern end of the road improvement in question and abutting upon another improved road, which other improved road is an extension of the road improved in the proceeding now under discussion and which other road was built entirely by general taxation, no part of its cost being specially assessed against any real estate, be assessed for any part of the cost of the road improvement now under consideration?

3. "The city of Mansfield owns a tract of land immediately south of the improved road in question, which land is used for a sewage and garbage disposal plant and lies outside the limits of the city. The city uses the road in question in conveying garbage to its disposal plant. May the land owned by the city of Mansfield and described above, be assessed for any part of the cost of the road improvement in question?"

Replying to your first inquiry, it may be observed that, as a general proposition of law, where a right to impose an assessment is claimed it must clearly appear that such power has been granted by statute; but authority being shown, in general terms, to make an assessment, whoever insists that his property is exempt from the burden will be required to support his claim by a provision equally clear.

Lima v. Cemetery Association, 42 O. S., 128.

The section of the law in question relating to the lands to be assessed, section 6956-10, G. C., provided that not less than twenty nor more than thirty-five per cent. of the cost and expense of an improvement should be assessed upon and collected from the owners of real estate lying and being within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement, and assessed according to the benefits derived from the improvement, as determined by the commissioners, and that the assessments so made should be in addition to all other assessments authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitation upon the aggregate amount of assessments on such property. At no place in the act under consideration was there any language which could have been construed to create an exception to the above rule in favor of property lying and being within a municipality. In the absence of any further provision in the act shedding any light upon this question, there would seem to have been little doubt as to the authority of the commissioners in making assessments under section 6956-10, G. C., to assess lands lying within a municipal corporation, provided such lands were situated within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement.

That the legislature did not intend to limit the jurisdiction of the county commissioners under this law to unincorporated territory was, however, clearly established by the provisions of section 6956-2, to the effect that in locating roads and road improvements within the territorial limits of any municipality the county commissioners should be confined to the platted streets of such municipality. This provision clearly indicted that the legislature intended to confer upon the county commissioners the power and authority to actually construct roads within municipalities under authority of the sections now being considered. It would be impossible to reach the conclusion that the commissioners had authority to construct roads within municipalities under section 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, and did not have authority to assess lands lying within municipalities. I therefore advise you, in answer to your first question, that the county commissioners, under the facts disclosed by your communications and set forth above, are authorized to assess upon and collect from the owners of real estate in the city of Mansfield lying and being within one mile from the western end of the road improvement in question a part of the cost and expense of such improvement, which assessment must be made according to the benefits derived from the improvement, as determined by the commissioners. The view above expressed is in accord with that of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, as set forth by him in an opinion rendered to Hon. Cheever W. Pettay, prosecuting attorney of Harrison county, on February 21, 1912, and found at page 1187 of the attorney-general's report for that year.

The discussion of the pertinent sections of the law rendered necessary in answering your first question makes it unnecessary, in answering your second question, to do more than to cite the provision of section 6956-10, relating to assessments and already referred to herein, and in view of that provision I advise you that the lands referred to by you in your second question, and lying and being within one mile from the eastern end of the road improvement in question, may be assessed for a part of the cost and expense of the improvement in question, according to the benefits derived therefrom.

Your third question is one of some difficulty in view of the absence of any Ohio authority and the conflicting decisions of other states. The question is as to the right to levy special assessments against real estate owned by a municipality. In the particular instance referred to by you the real estate lies outside the corporate limits of the municipality, but by the great weight of authority the question of whether the real estate is located within or without the municipality is immaterial. It should first be observed that the fact that property is exempt from general taxation does not render it exempt from local assessments.

Lima v. Cemetery Association, 42 O. S., 128;
Watterson v. Halliday, 2 O. N. P., (n. s.) 693;
Gilmour v. Pelton, 5 O. D. R., 447.

The case of Dick v. City of Toledo, 11 O. C. C., 349; 5 O. C. D., 157, is cited in support of the proposition that the public grounds of a municipal corporation should be assessed for their proportionate share of the total expense of a street improvement, but a careful reading of the opinion of the court leaves some doubt as to whether the case is authority for such a proposition. The decisions of the courts of the other states are in such conflict that it is impossible to frame a general rule.

Judge Freeman, in a note appended to the case of Herrick and Stevens v. Sargent and Lohr, 132 Am. St. Rep., 291, 301, makes the following observation:

> "The authorities relative to the question whether land owned by the public is exempt from local assessment are not entirely harmonious. The weight of authority * * * is to the effect that such lands are not exempt."

It was held in the case of Newberry v. City of Detroit, 164 Mich., 413, that a municipal park is not exempt from assessment for paving an adjoining street where the statutes constitute as the assessment district the parcels of land situated on the street, and direct the cost of paving to be assessed according to frontage.

In the case of Edwards v. Jasper County, 117 Ia., 365, the court held that property in a city owned and used for public purposes by a county was not exempt from special assessments for street improvements. The statutes of Iowa, considered by the court in its decision, were very similar to the Ohio statutes bearing on the question now under discussion.

It was held in the case of Town of Franklinton v. Parish of Washington, 126 La., 2, that the exemption of a court house square from taxation does not extend to a special assessment for paving sidewalks levied against all abutting real estate.

In the case of Commissioners of Franklin County v. City of Ottawa, 49 Kans., 747, the court was called upon to construe a statute which provided generally for assessing the cost of street improvements, there being no statutory declaration as to whether county property within a city might or might not be assessed. The court held that a city had power to levy a special assessment for the improvement of a street in front of the court house square within a city, and that if the claim for such improvement is disallowed by the board of county commissioners, the district court, upon appeal, may adjust the amount thereof, and such a judgment may be paid as other judgments against a county.

In the case of County of McLean v. City of Bloomington, 106 Ill., 209, the court held that mandamus will lie to compel a county to pay a special assessment levied against the county for the improvement of a street, the county being the owner of the lot occupied by the court house and abutting on the street improved.

The above case was cited and followed in the case of Whittaker v. Deadwood, 23 S. D., 528.

In the case of Adams County v. City of Quincy, 130 Ill., 566, the right of the city of Quincy to levy a special assessment for a street improvement against a lot occupied by the county court house was sustained. The court house property was by statute exempted from general taxation.

A similar question was before the court in the case of City of Mt. Vernon v. Illinois, 147 Ill., 359. In this case the court distinguished between property of the state and property of cities, villages and counties, holding that state property could not be specially assessed but that such rule did not apply to the property of cities, villages and counties. The court made the following observation as to the method of enforcing the payment of special assessments levied against public property:

> "Although the property of the city or county cannot be sold so as to pass the title thereto to private parties, yet mandamus will lie to compel the payment of the amount assessed out of the city or county treasury."

The case of Lima v. Cemetery Association, supra, is authority for the proposition that in Ohio the power to levy special assessments against benefited real estate is not necessarily dependent upon the power to sell such real estate in order to enforce the collection of such assessments, and that a political subdivision may have the power to levy a special assessment against a particular piece of real estate, even though it does not have the power to sell such real estate in order to enforce collection.

The court was called upon in this case to pass upon the validity of a special assessment levied against a cemetery association, and in sustaining the validity of the assessment the court held that while the lands of an incorporated cemetery association so far as exempted cannot be sold to pay an assessment for the improvement of a street, the municipal corporation may enforce the assessment by such remedies as the statute and courts of equity afford.

The Illinois, Kansas, Iowa, Louisiana and South Dakota cases cited above deal with the question of the right of a municipal corporation to levy special assessments against the property of a county. The case presented by you is as to the right of a county to levy a special assessment against the property of a municipal corporation, but I am unable to distinguish in principle between the two situations, and am of the opinion that in the absence of a statutory distinction the same rule must apply to both.

The section of the General Code relating to the power of municipal corporations to levy and collect special assessments, being section 3812, G. C., authorizes special assessments upon the abutting, adjacent and contiguous or other specially benefited lots or lands in the corporation. The section of the General Code under which the assessment now under consideration is to be made, being section 6956-10, G. C., which section is now repealed but is still applicable in the case presented by you on account of the saving provisions of the Cass highway law, provides for an assessment upon the owners of real estate lying and being within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement according to benefits. Both provisions are general in their nature and contain no exemption as to property owned by a county or a municipality. It is interesting, therefore, to look for a moment at the question of the right of a municipality to levy special assessments against county property. I find no reported case in Ohio dealing with this question, but learn that the general practice has been for municipal corporations to levy special assessments against property owned by a county and specially benefited, and it appears that such assessments have been paid without protest.

The proposition that in Ohio a municipal corporation may, under authority of section 3812, G. C., levy a special assessment against property owned by a county, has, therefore, the sanction of practice, and it is a well established rule of statutory construction that the contemporaneous and long continued practice of officers required to execute or take cognizance of a statute is strong evidence of its true meaning, and should not be disregarded except for cogent reasons. 26 Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law, 635.

If municipal corporations in Ohio have authority to levy special assessments against property owned by a county and specially benefited by an improvement, then it would seem equally clear that a county may, under the same conditions, levy a special assessment against property owned by a municipality.

I therefore advise you that under the facts presented by you the land owned by the city and lying outside the city limits, and used for the purpose of a sewage and garbage disposal plant, may be assessed for a part of the cost and expense of the improvement, and this assessment, like all others, must be made according to the benefits derived from the improvement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

FIRE MARSHAL TAX—HOW COMPUTED IN YEAR 1915 WHEN STATUTE WAS AMENDED BY LEGISLATURE AND SAME TOOK EFFECT BEFORE TAX WAS DUE—AMENDED STATUTE GOVERNS—GROSS PREMIUM RECEIPTS LESS RETURNED PREMIUMS AND CONSIDERATIONS RECEIVED FOR RE-INSURANCE BASIS FOR COMPUTATION.

The fire marshal tax due in November, 1915, should have been computed under the provisions of section 841, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 502, upon the gross premium receipts of the fire insurance company after deducting returned premiums and considerations received for re-insurance.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 21, 1916

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 28, 1915, you certified to me certain claims of the state of Ohio for collection, among which are included a number of claims against fire insurance companies for the so-called fire marshal tax. The companies against which this tax is charged as delinquent, contest the collection of the same upon the ground that the amount charged is in excess of the tax authorized by the statute.

Section 841 of the General Code, prior to its amendment by the general assembly in 1915, provided that:

> "Each fire insurance company doing business in this state shall pay to the superintendent of insurance in the month of November each year, in addition to the taxes required by law to be paid by it, one-half of one per cent. upon the gross premium receipts of such company on all the business transacted by it in Ohio during the year next preceding, as shown by its annual statement under oath of the insurance department."

This section (G. C., 841) was amended by an act passed May 5, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state on May 10, 1915 (106 O. L., 240). In the section as there amended it was provided that this tax of one-half of one per cent. should be computed upon the gross amount of premiums received by such companies from policies covering risks within this state during the preceding calendar year "after deducting return premiums and considerations received for re-insurance, as shown by the next preceding annual statement, verified under oath as required under the provisions of section 9590 of the General Code."

This amendment went into effect on August 8, 1915.

The section was again amended by an act of the general assembly on May 27, 1915, filed in the office of the secretary of state on June 3, 1915, and which became effective on September 1, 1915. This last amendment effected no change in the basis or method of computing the tax. In both amending acts referred to, section 841, of the General Code, was specifically repealed.

The charges certified to me for collection were computed under the provisions of said section 841 before its amendment by the general assembly of 1915, and were based upon the gross premium receipts of said companies for the preceding year without making any deductions for returned premiums and considerations received for re-insurance, which deductions are required under the provisions of both amending acts. The resulting question is, therefore, whether the tax should have been computed under the provisions of section 841 of the General Code, before its amendment, or under the provisions of said section after amendment.

The section both before and after its amendment provided that the tax "shall be paid in the month of November of each year." I find no provision of law which makes this tax a lien on a charge as of an earlier date, and the reference to the report of the preceding year is for the sole purpose of establishing a basis of computation whereby the amount to be paid may be ascertained.

If section 841 of the General Code had been repealed without amendment by the act of May 5, 1915, or by the subsequent act of May 27, 1915, no authority or method of procedure would have existed in November of 1915, under which to require payment of such tax. I am therefore of the opinion that the authority to compute, charge and collect the fire marshal tax for the year 1915 must be found in section 841 of the General Code, as amended and in force on the first day of November, 1915 (106 O. L., 502).

A brief history of the fire marshal tax may be of interest in this connection. The original act was passed April 16, 1900 (94 O. L., 388), and provided for a tax to be paid in November of each year, of one-half of one per cent. upon the gross premium receipts of such companies from the business transacted by them for the year next preceding as shown by their annual statements, etc. Although the section was amended in 95 O. L., 474, and in 97 O. L., 418, no change was made in respect to the method of computing the tax. From April 29, 1902, to May 8, 1914, the fire marshal tax was computed upon the balance of the gross receipts of such companies after deducting return premiums and considerations received for re-insurance. The history of the law and the reasons for this interpretation are set forth in detail in an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to Hon. Price Russell, superintendent of insurance, under date of September 10, 1914, to be found in Vol. II of the annual report of the attorney-general for the year 1914, at page 1516, in which he held that:

> "the term 'gross premium receipts' as used in section 841, General Code, providing for the so-called fire marshal tax, includes all premiums received by an insurance company on the business transacted in Ohio, and no deductions whatever can be made therefrom."

Under this opinion the tax charged in November, 1914, was computed upon the gross premium receipts of said company as shown by its report for the next preceding year without any deductions. To this method of computation many of the insurance companies objected. The matter was taken up by the attorneys for the objecting insurance companies with Mr. Russell as superintendent of insurance, and with this department, and an understanding was finally reached that all the companies should pay the tax as charged against them in November, 1914, without further controversy, and that an amendment to the law should be secured, authorizing a deduction of returned premiums and the amounts paid for re-insurance from the amount of the gross premium receipts upon which such tax should thereafter be computed. This amendment was passed by the legislature (106 O. L., 240 and 502), and I believe that it was generally understood by the legislature and the insurance companies that the language used in the section as amended amounted practically to a legislative interpretation of the provisions of said old section 841 of the General Code, although the act was drawn and adopted simply as an amendment.

In view of my construction of the original act and the effect of the amendment made by the legislature in 1915, as above indicated, the understanding existing between the state departments and the insurance companies in pursuance of which the amendment to the act was secured, is immaterial, and I call attention to this understanding only for the purpose of showing that the legislative intent is not violated by my conclusion.

I therefore advise you that the fire marshal tax, due in November, 1915, should have been computed under the provisions of section 841 of the General Code, as amended (106 O. L., 502), and that the amounts certified for collection are in excess of the proper charge, and should be reduced to meet the requirements of said section as amended.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—SUCCESSOR OF TRUSTEES OF MASSILLON STATE HOSPITAL—AS SUCH AUTHORITY HAS RIGHT TO CHANGE CONTRACT WITH THE WHEELING AND LAKE ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY AND ITS RECEIVER.

Under section 1839, G. C., the board of administration is the successor of the trustees of the Massillon State Hospital, and as such has the right to agree to a change in the contract with The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company and its receiver, relative to the operation of spur track at such institution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 21, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 30, 1915, you wrote to me as follows:

"Please note the enclosed communications from the manager of The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company, in reference to repairs at the hospital siding at Massillon.

"You have on file in your office quite a bunch of correspondence relating to this switch. It seems that when the road went into the hands of a receiver some years since, they took advantage of the law that allowed them to abrogate any contract which showed a loss; and the contract they had with the state when the switch was put in, required that they keep up the maintenance and pay into the state treasury 33 1-3% of all freights collected until they had paid in the money advanced by the state to purchase right of way and build the track, which, we understand, amounted to $25,000. The last inquiry the writer made at the auditor's office showed they have paid in now something like $18,000.

"When the original contract was cancelled by the board then in charge at Massillon, they (the board) agreed for the state to keep up the repairs on the switch, and also agreed to pay a switching charge of $1.50 per car. Since that time the state has paid out quite a considerable sum for maintenance as well as the $1.50 switching charge per car; and, as the writer wrote Mr. McMaster, it certainly seems as if we were getting the worst of the deal.

"They now suggest, in order to clean the matter up for all time to come, that they take over the track and right of way, and agree to keep up repairs and deliver all our freight at a switching rate of $1.50 per car. This arrangement would, of course, involve the cancellation of the original contract to pay into the state treasury $25,000.

"As far as the board of administration is concerned, we can only say that such an arrangement would be satisfactory to us, as the track is badly in need of repair and there are two wooden bridges which will have to be replaced soon; and if some such arrangement can be entered into legally we would like to have it done.

"May we ask you for an opinion at your very earliest convenience?"

The communications which you enclosed with your letter are as follows:

"December 21, 1915.

"Mr. T. E. Davey, Chairman Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, O.

"Dear Sir:—The spur track leading from our main line to the Massillon State Hospital requires immediate attention to insure safety.

"Under the terms of the contract the expense incident to the maintenance of this track is chargeable to the state. Our company has made repairs to the amount of $887.92 for which we have not as yet been reimbursed by the state. The estimate for necessary repairs to put the track in safe condition amounts to approximately $3,500.00.

"If the state will pay the $887.92 due and agree to pay bills promptly upon presentation, we will have the necessary repairs made to place this track in safe condition for operation, otherwise we will be compelled to cease making delivery of cars at the hospital until such repairs are made.

"If the board desires to cancel the contract and turn the track over to this company without further refund payments, we will agree to put the same in safe condition for operation, cancelling present bills against the state for work on that particular track, and further agree to assume all cost in connection with future maintenance without change in the switching rate of $1.50 per car.

"Either proposition will be perfectly satisfactory to us, but please understand that prompt action is absolutely necessary.

"Very truly yours,

"(Signed) H. W. McMaster."

"December 24, 1915.

"Mr. T. E. Davey, The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

"Dear Sir:—Replying to yours of the 22nd inst. My letter to you of the 21st was along the lines of Mr. Coe's report of his meeting with you at Columbus a few days ago, and is the only proposition that will be submitted.

"We have been trying for the past three years to get this matter straightened out so that both the hospital people and our local officers would know just what their duties were with reference to the contract.

"I note your comment regarding the contract. This is a matter in which the present management had nothing to do, further than to carry out the terms of the contract as executed, and it is only for the reason that we wish to get the matter in such shape as to permit of this track being properly maintained that we offer the alternate proposition to the board of administration of either carrying out the terms of the present contract, which provides that the state maintain the track, or cancel it and turn the track over to this company in order that we may keep it in safe condition at all times.

"Very truly yours,

"(Signed) H. W. McMaster."

Immediately upon receipt of your letter I caused our files to be searched for a copy of the contracts referred to, but did not locate the same. However, I found on file in the office of the auditor of state the original contract, and obtained from Mr. H. W. McMaster, general manager, a copy of the amended contract. From said papers I ascertained that on the 24th day of September, 1904, the trustees of Massillon State Hospital entered into a contract with The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company whereby said trustees agreed to procure the necessary right of way for a spur track leading from the main track of the railroad company to the Massillon State Hospital upon which to construct said spur track, and agreed to deed the said right of way to the railroad company, and at the same time granted permission to the railroad company to enter upon the grounds occupied by the Massillon State Hospital, and to construct and maintain said tracks properly thereon and extend the same; that the railroad company agreed, upon receipt of a deed of the right of way, to construct said spur track, and to maintain the same during the continuance of said agreement, the material used in the construction thereof to remain the property of the railroad company; that it was estimated that the cost of securing the right of way and the building of the spur track would be $30,000.00, of which $25,000.00 was to be paid by the state of Ohio through the trustees of Massillon State Hospital, and all sums in excess thereof by the railroad company. The railroad company agreed to reimburse the state through the said trustees by paying them 33 1-3% of the gross earnings on all freight to and from the hospital until the said sum with interest at 5% had been paid.

There are other and further conditions of the agreement which I do not deem it necessary to mention. The said lease was duly signed by The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company and the trustees of Massillon State Hospital. Thereafter, the said railroad company went into the hands of a receiver, and Hon. B. A. Worthington was appointed such receiver. On the representation that the said contract was resulting in a material loss to the railroad company, and that the receiver was not inclined to carry out the said contract, said contract was, after conference between the then attorney-general, auditor of state and possibly the governor, amended on the 23rd day of July, 1909, in the following particulars:

In consideration of the receiver continuing to operate over the spur track, the board of trustees of the Massillon State Hospital agreed to bear the cost and expense of maintaining and removing said spur track, including bridges, etc., the maintenance and removal to be done by the railroad company, and the trustees to pay within thirty days for such maintenance and removal. It was further agreed that a switching charge of $1.50 per car would be made by the railroad company without any refund. In all other respects the contract of September 24, 1904, was continued in force.

The only authority I have been able to find for the contract in the first instance is the appropriation made in 97 O. L., page 588, wherein $25,000.00 was appropriated to the Massillon State Hospital for "railroad switch."

Section 1835, G. C.—both prior to and as amended in 106 O. L., page 26—provides that the board of administration "shall have full power to manage and govern the following institutions: * * * Massillon State Hospital," and section 1838, G. C., provides:

> "The board, in addition to the powers expressly conferred, shall have all power and authority necessary for the full and efficient exercise of the executive, administrative and fiscal supervision over all said institutions."

Section 1839, G. C., provides that the board on its organization shall succeed to and be vested with the title and all rights of the trustees of Massillon State Hospital in and to land, money or other property, real and personal, held for its benefit or for other public use, without further process of law, but in trust for the state of Ohio, and terminated after August 15, 1911, the existence of the board of trustees of Massillon State Hospital. In said section the board of administration was further "authorized and directed to assume and continue, as successor thereof, the construction, control and management of said institutions, subject to the provisions of this act."

The method of operation of a spur track for the purpose of carrying coal and other supplies to the institution in question is undoubtedly within the full power of the board of administration, and if at any time it shall deem it advisable for the best interest of the state to change the method of such operation, it would seem to me that it would have full and complete authority so to do.

In your letter you state that it would be a saving to the state if the agreement made on September 24, 1904, as modified by the agreement of June 24, 1909, was abrogated, and I therefore believe that your board is fully authorized to enter into an agreement with the receiver of The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company abrogating the former agreement.

If it should be determined that the agreement heretofore existing between your board, as successor of the board of trustees of Massillon State Hospital and the receiver of The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company, should be abrogated, and that a new agreement be entered into with said receiver whereby the said receiver of said road agrees, in consideration of the abrogation of the former contracts, to put the spur track in safe condition for operation, cancel the present bills against the state for work done on said track, and further agrees to maintain and assume all cost in connection with further maintenance of said tract without change in the switching rate of $1.50 per car, the same should be duly approved by the court which appointed the receiver, and the entry approving the same should distinctly show that the said agreement was to be binding not only upon the receiver and his successors, but also upon any person or corporation acquiring title to said The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad through order of court, and upon The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad Company, its successors and assigns.

The contemplated contract abrogating the contract of September 24, 1904, to be entered into between your board and the receiver of the railroad company cannot seek to adjust any amounts due the state under said contract of September 24, 1904, for the reason that the amounts due thereunder are claims due the state, and under section 268, G. C., only the auditor of state and attorney-general are authorized to abate a claim due the state.

Any agreement entered into in conformity to this opinion should be filed with the auditor of state in order that he may be advised that no further payments will accrue under the original contract of September 24, 1904.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION—SALARY OF MEMBER CANNOT BE REDUCED DURING HIS TERM OF OFFICE—CONSTITUTIONAL INHIBITION—STATUTE INEFFECTIVE.

The salary of an officer cannot be reduced during his term of office, and the enactment of a law for that purpose is ineffective in view of the provisions of section 20 of article II of the constitution.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 22, 1916.

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to reply to your request for an opinion which is as follows:

> "On the twenty-first day of August, 1913, Mr. O. H. Hughes assumed the office of a member of The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio by virtue of an appointment by Governor Cox until February 1, 1916, at a salary of $6,000 per annum. Mr. Hughes continued in such commissionership until the fifteenth day of December, 1915, and received such salary until the eighth day of June, 1915, when, without protest, he accepted his monthly salary on the basis of $4,500 per annum, to which the salaries of the members of this commission had been reduced by the general assembly.

"On the seventh inst. Mr. Hughes submitted a bill to this commission for the sum of $687.50, being balance, claimed by him, of salary as commissioner from July 1, 1915, (the amount involved from June 8, to 30, 1915, is omitted, presumably because of the lapse of the unused balance of appropriations expiring on the latter date) to December 15, 1915, representing the difference between salary of $6,000 per year, to which he claims he was entitled under article 2, section 20, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, and the salary of $4,500 per year, which he received for said five and one-half months period.

"The commission will be pleased to receive your opinion as to its legal right to pay this bill."

In addition to your letter you enclose duplicate copy of a voucher of your commission, which is as follows:

Balance on salary as commissioner from July 1, 1915, to December 15, 1915, representing the difference between salary of $6,000 per year to which Commissioner Hughes claims he was entitled under article 2, section 20, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, and the salary of $4,500 per year, which he received for the above five and one-half months period_____	$687.50

Received of the auditor of state his warrant on the treasurer of state in full for the above account.

THE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION OF OHIO.
By_____
Present to the auditor of state.

The salary of Mr. O. H. Hughes, who, on the 21st day of August, 1913, according to your letter, assumed the office of member of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio by virtue of an appointment at the hands of the then governor, was fixed by the provisions of section 490 of the General Code (103 O. L., 805), which was section 4 of an Act to Create the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, etc., and which is as follows:

"Section 4. Each of the members of the Public Utilities Commission shall receive from the state an annual salary of six thousand dollars ($6,000.00), payable in the same manner as other state officers are paid."

Under the provisions of section 487 of the General Code (103 O. L., 804), the governor was authorized to appoint three members to comprise the Public Utilities Commission, the term of one being made to expire on the first day of February, 1919, and it was to that position that Mr. Hughes was appointed, hence, as stated in your letter, his term of office which began on the 21st day of August, 1913, was to expire on the 1st day of February, 1919, at a salary of $6,000.00 as provided in section 490 of the General Code, supra.

Among the provisions of amended senate bill No. 101, to amend certain sections and to repeal section 490 of the General Code, abolishing certain state officers and reducing the compensation of state officials, which was approved by the governor on March 8, 1915, is to be found section 2250-2, of the General Code (106 O. L., 28), which is as follows:

> "Each of the members of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio shall receive an annual salary of four thousand five hundred dollars, payable in the same manner as the salaries of other state officers are paid."

I find upon an examination of the records of the office of the auditor of state, that during the period of five and one-half months from July 1, 1915, to December 15, 1915, Mr. Hughes received pay for services at the usual intervals at the rate of $4,500.00 per annum, and that the same was accepted by him and receipted for in full for services indicated on the payroll, and for the period covered by each payroll prepared in your office, but I do not find that at any time since the enactment of section 2250-2, of the General Code, supra, that he expressly agreed to accept compensation for his services at the rate of $4,500 per annum, or that he waived his right to the full amount of $6,000 per annum, provided in section 490 of the General Code, in its original form.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Raine, Auditor, to be found in 49 O. S., 580, a question similar to the one under consideration, and in which the constitutionality of the statute was assailed on the ground that it increased the salary of the county commissioners of Hamilton county during the term for which they had been elected, and for that reason contravened section 20 of article II of the constitution of 1851, was under consideration, and the court held:

> "A statute, whatever terms it may employ, the only effect of which is to increase the salary attached to a public office, contravenes section 20 of article II of the constitution of this state, in so far as it may affect the salary of an incumbent of the office during the term he was serving when the statute was enacted."

Section 20 of article II of the constitution, supra, continues as it was in the constitution of 1851, and it is my opinion that insofar as section 2250-2 of the General Code, supra, is concerned, it is ineffective as to the making of a change or authorizing the withholding of compensation to which Mr. Hughes was entitled as a member of the Public Utilities Commission when he assumed the office for a term of six years, which was fixed at $6,000 per annum, and which amount had been appropriated for the period from July 1, 1915, to December 15, 1915, when he relinquished the office, and that in the absence of any other fact in the possession of your commission which has not been communicated to this office to the contrary, your commission has a legal right to pay the sum of $687.50 to Mr. Hughes, that being the difference between the amount paid on the basis of $4,500 per annum and the amount claimed on the basis of $6,000 per annum.

The voucher submitted by you and quoted above is returned to you herewith, the same being in duplicate.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—APPROVAL OF PARTIAL LIST OF INSTRUCTIONS TO COUNTY AUDITORS INTERPRETING PROVISIONS OF PARRETT-WHITTEMORE LAW.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 22, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter under date of January 19, 1916, transmitting for my consideration and approval, a partial list of instructions to county auditors, involving the interpretation of some of the provisions of the so-called Parrett-Whittemore law, 106 O. L., 246-272. A copy of said list of instructions is as follows:

"To County Auditors:

"A number of questions have arisen as to the construction of the act of May 8, 1915, 106 O. L., 246, commonly known as the Parrett-Whittemore law.

"The tax commission of Ohio has decided such questions in accordance with the advice and opinion of the attorney-general as follows:

"There may be a re-assessment of real estate or any class thereof in any taxing district or subdivision thereof as follows:

"First—When the tax commission, under the provisions of section 79 of the act, so orders.

"Second—When the county auditor, under the provisions of section 55 of the act, deems it advisable.

"Third—When the county auditor grants a petition for re-assessment, under the provisions of section 55 of the act.

"Fourth—When the county board of revision grants such petition on appeal and orders the re-assessment.

"Fifth—When the tax commission grants such petition on appeal and orders the re-assessment.

"Sixth—When the board of revision, under the provisions of section 44 of the act, so orders.

"When a re-assessment of real estate or any class thereof is ordered in any taxing district or subdivision thereof, it shall be made by the assessor of such district or an assistant assessor to be appointed by the auditor, and it shall be made in accordance with the general provisions of the act and the General Code relating to the assessment of real estate.

"The work of making such re-assessment may be commenced at any time the county auditor directs.

"County auditors are not assessing officers, and cannot originate or change any assessments of real or personal property, except in pursuance of the provisions of sections 5398, 5399, 5400, 5401 and 5574, of the General Code, which refer to omitted real and personal property, and except in pursuance of the provisions of sections 5404, 5405, 5406, of the General Code, referring to the assessment of the property of incorporated companies, and except in pursuance of sections 5407 to 5414, of the General Code, referring to the assessment of the shares of banks.

"County auditors may exercise the powers conferred by sections 5398, 5399, 5400, 5401 and 5574, of the General Code, in the current year, either before or after the completion of the tax list.

"Values fixed by county auditors in exercising the powers conferred by these sections may be reviewed by the board of revision.

"Values fixed by county auditors under the provision of section 5405, of the General Code, upon the property of incorporated companies, may be reviewed by the board of revision.

"Values fixed by county auditors under the provision of section 5412 of the General Code, upon the shares of stock of banks may not be reviewed by the board of revision for the reason that the tax commission is given that power.

"In accordance with this construction of the law, the commission directs that you make a careful investigation as to the necessity of a re-assessment of real property or any class thereof in any or all taxing districts or subdivisions thereof in your county for the year 1916, and upon such investigation you direct that a re-assessment of real property be made in such taxing district or subdivision thereof as you may, in your opinion, deem it to be advisable.

"County auditors are specifically directed by this commission to order a re-assessment of all real estate which has been changed by the erection, within the past year, of any building or structure or addition or improvement, or by the destruction or removal of any building or structure.

"Detailed instructions as to the use of the card system, etc., and as to the powers and duties of boards of revision, will be issued in the near future."

In compliance with your request I have examined said list of instructions and I find that your commission, in compliance with the requirement of section 70 of the act above referred to, being section 5623 of the General Code, has decided all questions therein considered in accordance with the advice and opinion of the attorney-general.

I am therefore returning said list of instructions with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CIVIL SERVICE—APPLICANTS FOR EXAMINATIONS—TRAVELING EXPENSES MAY NOT BECOME CHARGE AGAINST STATE.

The payment of traveling expenses of applicants for civil service examinations may not become a charge against the state and be paid from state funds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 22, 1916.

State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of January 17, 1916, as follows:

"Attached to this letter you will find a communication from the Hon. A. V. Donahey, under date of January 14th, in answer to a communication —carbon copy of which we are also sending you.

"It appears from Mr. Donahey's reply that the payment of expenses to persons who are asked to come to Columbus to take examinations may be somewhat irregular, but it is often a source of considerable saving to the state.

"Will you kindly give us, at the earliest possible moment, an opinion as to whether or not we have authority to pay out funds appropriated for our department in this way?"

From the correspondence attached to your letter and named therein, it appears that your commission very frequently finds, before a date set for an examination at some distant point, that but one or two applicants will attend. As it is necessary, in order to conduct said examination, to send at least one examiner from your office, and sometimes two, considerable expense is involved in holding said examination. It appears further from said correspondence that in certain cases where but one or two applicants are expected to attend said examinations, you have requested them to report elsewhere for said examinations and have paid their traveling expenses to other points, upon the theory that it was much cheaper to send said applicants to other points than to pay the expenses of examiners from your office to conduct said examinations. Some question having arisen as to the legality of this procedure, you have submitted the inquiry stated in your letter in regard to the legality of payments thus made of the expenses of said applicants when directed to attend examinations at other points.

There is no authority of law, either express or implied, for the payment of the expenses of candidates under the conditions described in said correspondence. Under these circumstances the only safe course is to abandon the practice of such payments entirely. While, as suggested, it may be a matter of economy to the state, yet that in itself is not sufficient to give it the warrant of law.

In cases such as are described in your correspondence, I respectfully suggest that your commission would be warranted in placing the examination wholly in charge of local officials, as provided in section 486-5, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 502, as follows:

"The commission may designate persons in or out of the official service of the state to serve as examiners or assistants under its direction. Each such person shall receive such compensation for each day actually and necessarily spent in the discharge of his duties as examiner or assistant as shall be determined by the commission; provided, however, that if any such examiner or assistant is in the official service of the state, or any political subdivision thereof, it shall be a part of his official duties to render such services in connection with such examinations, without extra compensation."

This plan, if followed, would eliminate all expense and would, in my judgment, prove a very practical solution of your trouble. At any rate, under no circumstances may the traveling expense of applicants become a charge against the state and be paid from state funds.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS—MAY NOT USE MONEYS DRAWN UNDER SECTION 3004, G. C., to PAY ASSISTANTS, CLERKS OR STENOGRAPHERS WHO ARE APPOINTED UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF SECTION 2915, G. C.

Prosecuting attorneys may not use moneys drawn under section 3004, G. C., to pay assistants, clerks or stenographers who are appointed under and by virtue of section 2915, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 22, 1916.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 19th, asking for an opinion as follows:

"I shall be pleased to have your official opinion in regard to the power or authority of a prosecuting attorney to employ help in his office and pay for the same under section 3004 under the following facts and circumstances:

"Our county is somewhat large in population and I have about fifteen hundred dollars per annum at my disposal under this section.

"I get along without an assistant attorney but cannot do the people justice or fulfill the duties of the office without office help.

"Sec. 2915 provided that a prosecuting attorney may appoint such assistants, clerks and stenographers as he deems necessary for the proper performance of the duties of his office, and fix their compensation, not to exceed in the aggregate the amount fixed by the common pleas judge.

"Sec. 2914 provides that the common pleas judge may fix an aggregate amount to be expended for the year for assistants, clerks and stenographers of the prosecuting attorney's office.

"Sec. 3004 provides a fund for expenses of the prosecutor's office in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for.

"The expenses under both sections 2915 and 3004 are payable out of the general fund of the county.

"I took the matter up with the common pleas judge a year ago under Sec. 2914 and he was of the opinion that I could pay for such help under Sec. 3004; and further expressed himself that said section provided enough for this purpose and for all other purposes for which it could be used, and refused to fix an amount under Sec. 2914.

"I, therefore, did employ help in the office during the year and paid them under said Sec. 3004, and used only about half of the fund for this purpose and all others.

"A state examiner reports that this is unlawful. I desire to be set right. He says such help should be paid under Sec. 2915, but it would seem to me that the provisions of that section are a nullity without the court acting under Sec. 2914, and if the court refuses to act under this section then payment for such services is not 'otherwise provided for.'"

Section 3004 of the General Code provides as follows:

"There shall be allowed annually to the prosecuting attorney in addition to his salary and to the allowance provided by section 2914, an amount equal to one-half the official salary, to provide for expenses which may be incurred by him in the performance of his official duties and in the furtherance of justice, not otherwise provided for. Upon the order of the prosecuting attorney the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer payable to the prosecuting attorney or such other person as the order designates for such amount as the order requires, not exceeding the amount provided for herein, and to be paid out of the general fund of the county.

"Provided that nothing shall be paid under this section until the prosecuting attorney shall have given bond to the state in a sum not less than his official salary to be fixed by the court of common pleas or probate court with sureties to be approved by either of said courts, conditioned that he will faithfully discharge all the duties enjoined upon him, by law, and pay over, according to law, all moneys by him, received in his official capacity. Such bond with the approval of such court of the amount thereof and sureties thereon and his oath of office inclosed therein shall be deposited with the county treasurer.

"The prosecuting attorney shall annually before the first Monday of January, file with the county auditor an itemized statement, duly verified by him, as to the manner in which fund has been expended during the current year, and shall if any part of such fund remains in his hands unexpended, forthwith pay the same into the county treasury. Provided, that as to the year 1911, such fund shall be proportioned to the part of the year remaining after this act shall have become a law."

Section 3004, G. C., provides for a fund to be used only for expenses not otherwise provided for and by its terms provides a fund different and in addition to that provided for in section 2914, G. C. The expense of assistants, clerks and stenographers is provided for in section 2914, G. C., and such expense may not be paid out of funds drawn from the county treasury under section 3004, G. C. The logical deduction from the fact that the court makes no allowance under section 2914, G. C., is that, in his opinion, such assistants, clerks or stenographers are not necessary.

The foregoing interpretation of section 3004, G. C., has been the uniform interpretation of that statute since its enactment.

I, therefore, hold that if the court refuses to make an allowance under section 2914, G. C., for assistants, clerks and stenographers, or either, that the prosecuting attorney may not use any of the funds drawn from the county treasury by virtue of section 3004, G. C., for either of such purposes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO COMMUTE AN AWARD FOR PERMANENT TOTAL DISABILITY TO A LUMP SUM.

The industrial commission of Ohio has no authority under section 40 of the workmen's compensation law, section 1465-87, G. C., 103 O. L., 72, to commute an award for a permanent total disability to a lump sum.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 24, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your communication under date of November 9th, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "The industrial commission respectfully requests that you render it an opinion as to whether or not the commission has the right to commute into a lump sum the award made in a case of permanent total disability.
> "By way of explanation, I might state that in cases of permanent total disability, where the amount of compensation would continue during the life of the claimant, the commission is often requested by said claimant to make a lump sum award in an amount which the claimant specifies for a particular purpose.
> "The question upon which the commission is asking an opinion is as to its right under the law to make a lump sum award in such cases of permanent total disability."

Your question is as to the right, under the workmen's compensation law of Ohio, of the industrial commission to make a lump-sum award in cases of permanent total disability.

Section 40 of the workmen's compensation law, or section 1465-87 of the General Code (103 O. L., 72), provides as follows:

> "The board, under special circumstances, and when the same is deemed advisable, may commute periodical benefits to one or more lump sum payments."

Your question, without doubt, arises out of section 34 of the workmen's compensation act, or section 1465-81 of the General Code (103 O. L., 72), and the construction that shall be placed upon the language of that section, to wit: wherein it says that in cases of permanent total disability the award shall be 66 2/3 per cent. of the average weekly wage, and shall continue until the death of such person so disabled, etc.

The specific authority given in section 40 of the workmen's compensation act, or section 1465-87 of the General Code, supra, is to commute periodical benefits to one or more lump sums. It would seem that there is a distinction to be made between the meaning of the words "compensation" and "benefits" as used in this statute.

Section 32 of the act (1465-79, G. C.) provides that in cases of temporary disability the employe shall receive 66 2/3 per cent. of his average weekly wages so long as such disability is total, not to exceed a maximum of $12.00 per week and not less than a minimum of $5.00 per week, unless the employe's wages shall be less than $5.00 per week, in which event he shall receive compensation equal to his full wages, etc.

Section 33 of the act (1465-80, G. C.) provides for an injury resulting in partial disability, and further provides what compensation shall be paid for certain injuries contained in the schedule to that section.

Section 34 of the act (1465-81, G. C.) provides that in cases of permanent total disability the award shall be 66 2 '3 per cent. of the average weekly wages, and shall continue until the death of such person so totally disabled. Section 34 further provides that if the employe's average weekly wage is less than $5.00 per week at the time of the injury he shall receive compensation in an amount equal to his average weekly wages.

It is apparent from the language used in sections 32, 33 and 34, above referred to, that the award is the payment of compensation to injured employes.

Section 35 of the act (1465-82, G. C.) provides that in case the injury causes death within a period of two years the benefit shall be in an amount and to the persons defined as dependents.

Section 36 of the act (1465-83, G. C.) provides that the benefit in case of death shall be paid to such one or more of the dependents of the decedent for the benefit of all the dependents as may be determined by the board, etc. It is further provided in section 36 that the dependents or persons to whom benefits are paid shall apply the same to the use of the several beneficiaries thereof, etc.

The word "benefits" as used in sections 35 and 36 of the workmen's compensation act plainly refers to the award paid to the dependents of a killed employe—the distinction between the words "compensation" and "benefit" being that compensation is the award which is paid to injured employes, while benefits means the award which is payable to the dependents of a killed employe.

Section 40 of the act provides for the commutation of periodical benefits to a lump sum, and the construction we give to the word "benefits," as used in this section, means an award payable, under the provisions of section 35 of the act, to the dependents of a killed employe, and does not refer to the compensation payable to an injured employe. Benefits payable to the dependents of a killed employe are for a certain amount fixed by the statute, while awards for permanent total disability cannot be for a fixed or certain aggregate amount, because the amount payable in a permanent total disability claim depends entirely upon the length of life of the injured employe, which is based upon his average weekly wage at the time of the injury. Section 34 provides that the award shall continue until the death of such person so totally disabled.

There is no provision in the statutes which provides what mortality table shall be used in calculating a lump sum payment, neither is there a provision contained in the statutes as to what rate of interest shall be charged against a lump sum payment. In the absence of any express provision in the statutes authorizing the commutation of periodical payments to a lump sum in permanent total disability cases we are of the opinion that the same cannot legally be made.

Therefore, answering your question direct, I am of the opinion that the industrial commission of Ohio cannot commute periodical payments in case of a permanent total disability to a lump sum award for the reasons above stated.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PAY TEACHER'S SALARY AND EXPENSES WHILE ATTENDING CONTINUATION SCHOOL OR UNIVERSITY; NOR TO EXCHANGE TEACHERS WITH ANOTHER STATE OR COUNTRY; NOR TO MAKE ALLOWANCE TO A TEACHER FOR SUCCESSFULLY MAINTAINING SCHOOL SAVINGS BANK—BOARD MAY ESTABLISH ELEMENTARY SCHOOL IN GENERAL CITY HOSPITAL—CINCINNATI.

The board of education of a school district is without authority in law:

1. To send a teacher under the employ of said board to a continuation school or to a university and pay a part or all of said teacher's salary and expenses while attending said continuation school or university.

2. To send said teacher into the school of another state or country in exchange for the services of a teacher to be sent into said district from such other state or country.

3. To make an allowance to a teacher, in addition to salary, for successfully maintaining a school children's savings bank.

The board of education of a city school district may establish and maintain an elementary school in the general city hospital and contract with a teacher to give instructions in the branches mentioned in section 7648, G. C., to children who are residents of said city district and who are confined in said hospital.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 24, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of December 21, 1915, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Our examiner, during the course of his examination of the Cincinnati school district, has encountered some unusual expenditures of the school funds, and we would request your written opinion as to the legality of same.
> "1. Said board sent a teacher to Munich, Bavaria, to take a three months' course in a continuation school, allowing full salary and $300.00 for expenses.
> "2. Last June (1915) a teacher, in order to study at either the Leland Stanford university or the University of California, was given a year's leave of absence at half pay.
> "3. The board authorized an exchange of teachers by the boards of education of Cincinnati and Portland, Oregon, each board to pay its own teacher.
> "4. Said board has authorized the superintendent to make similar arrangements with the boards of education of South American cities for exchange of teachers.
> "5. Said board allowed twelve teachers $25.00 each, and one teacher $50.00 (additional to salary) for having successfully maintained school children's savings banks in their respective rooms.
> "6. The board employs a teacher at the general city hospital at a salary of $800.00 per year, the theory being that the children in said institution may be properly educated."

Section 7690, G. C., provides as follows:

"Each board of education shall have the management and control of all of the public schools of whatever name or character in the district. It may appoint a superintendent of the public schools, truant officers, and janitors and fix their salaries. If deemed essential for the best interests of the schools of the district, under proper rules and regulations, the board may appoint a superintendent of buildings, and such other employes as it deems necessary, and fix their salaries. Each board shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made. Teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other public calamity."

The rule is well settled in this state that, inasmuch as the control and management of the schools of Ohio are conferred upon boards of education by provision of the first part of section 7690, G. C., as above quoted, the courts will not interfere with such boards in the exercise of the duty so conferred upon them, unless they have grossly abused the discretion confided in them.

State ex rel. v. McCann, 21 O. S., 198.
State ex rel. v. Board of Education, 76 O. S., 297.
Board of Education v. State ex rel. Wiskham, 80 O. S., 133.

Under provision of section 4749, G. C., the board of education of each school district shall, when properly organized, be a body politic and corporate and, as such, capable of suing and being sued, contracting and being contracted with, acquiring, holding, possessing and disposing of real and personal property and taking and holding in trust for the use and benefit of such district, any grant or devise of land and any donation or bequest of money or other personal property, and the exercise of such other powers and privileges as are conferred by the provisions of the statutes relating to public school districts and the public schools of the state.

It will be observed that under provision of the latter part of section 4749, G. C., boards of education may exercise, in addition to the powers expressly conferred by the provisions of said statute, such other powers and privileges as are conferred by the statutes therein referred to.

Numerous authorities might be cited in support of the proposition that public officers, such as members of the board of education, have no power except such as is expressly conferred by the statute or necessarily implied from the power so expressly conferred.

If, therefore, the board of education referred to in your inquiry has authority in law to expend the funds of its district for the purposes mentioned in said inquiry, such power must be expressly conferred upon said board by the statutes governing it and defining its power and duties, or must be necessarily implied from the powers thus conferred.

Upon a careful examination of all of said statutes, I am compelled to conclude that said board of education has no authority, either expressed or implied, to expend the funds of its district for the purposes mentioned in items 1 to 5, inclusive, as set forth in said inquiry.

Section 7690, G. C., above quoted, provides that each board of education shall fix the salaries of all teachers, which may be increased, but not diminished during the term for which the appointment is made and further provides that teachers must be paid for all time lost when the schools in which they are employed are closed owing to an epidemic or other calamity. By provisions of other statutes, the board of education is held strictly accountable for the proper expenditure of the funds of the district.

It is significant that the legislature enacted the provisions of section 7870, G. C., authorizing boards of education to pay the teachers and superintendents of their respective districts their regular salaries for the week they attend the county teachers' institute, providing the same is held while the schools are in session. Said section further provides that if the institute is held when the public schools are not in session such teachers or superintendents shall be paid two dollars per day for actual daily attendance as certified by the county superintendent, for not more than five days of actual attendance, to be paid as an addition to the first month's salary after the institute, by the board of education by which such teacher or superintendent is then employed. In case such teacher or superintendent is unemployed at the time of the institute, such salary shall be paid by the board next employing said teacher or superintendent, if the term of employment begins within three months after the institute closes.

It seems clear that if the legislature considered that such payments were not legal in the absence of an express provision of the statute authorizing their payment, it cannot be said that a board of education may send a teacher to a continuation school or to a university and pay a part or all of said teacher's salary and expenses while attending said continuation school or university in the absence of express statutory authority.

While the board of education of a school district may contract with a teacher for services to be rendered in one of the schools of said district and, under the above provisions of section 7690, G. C., may fix the salaries of such teachers, I find no authority in law warranting said board of education in sending said teachers into the school of another state or country in exchange for the services of teachers to be sent into said district from such other state or country, even though said foreign teachers might comply with the provisions of the statutes prescribing the qualifications of a teacher in an elementary school or in the several classes of high schools in this state.

An allowance to a teacher, in addition to salary, for successfully maintaining a school children's saving bank would be in the nature of a bonus and a board of education has no authority under any provision to expend money for this purpose.

As to the authority of the board of education of the school district referred to in your inquiry to employ a teacher at the general city hospital, I am of the opinion that, under the above provisions of section 7690, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 7644, G. C., that

> "Each board of education shall establish a sufficient number of elementary schools to provide for the free education of the youth of school age within the district under its control, at such places as will be most convenient for the attendance of the largest number thereof," said board of education may establish and maintain an elementary school in said hospital and contract with a teacher to give instructions in the branches mentioned in section 7648, G. C., to children who are residents of said city district and who are confined in said hospital.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your questions, that the board of education of the school district referred to in your inquiry was without authority in law to expend the funds of said district for the purposes mentioned in items 1 to 5, inclusive, of said inquiry, and that said board has authority, within the limitations above prescribed, to expend the funds of said district for the purposes mentioned in item 6 of said inquiry.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—EXPENDITURE COSTING OVER $500.00—COUNCIL MUST FIRST AUTHORIZE AND DIRECT SAME BY ORDINANCE BEFORE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC SERVICE MAY PROCEED WITH IMPROVEMENT—ENGINEER FOR SUCH IMPROVEMENT MUST HAVE SALARY FIXED BY COUNCIL BEFORE HE CAN BE EMPLOYED—COUNCIL CANNOT DIRECT EMPLOYMENT OF A CERTAIN ENGINEER.

Before the director of public service may proceed with an improvement costing over $500.00, council must authorize and direct the expenditure therefor by ordinance in pursuance of section 4328, G. C.

An engineer employed on such an improvement is a "person" employed within the department of public service and his salary must, therefore, be fixed by council under the provisions of section 4314, G. C., before he can be employed. Council in fixing such salary is not authorized to direct the employment of a certain engineer.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 24, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 20, 1915, you submitted for my opinion the following questions:

"1. When an Ohio city has resolved upon certain improvements, and through councilmanic action or a vote of the people have issued bonds, and the proceeds thereof are in the treasury, is further councilmanic action necessary ordering the director of service to proceed with the work?

"2. Under the above conditions may the director of service, without further authority from council, employ an engineer to proceed with the preparation of plans for the work contemplated under the bond issue?

"3. Presuming the engineer to have been employed and the plans prepared ready for adoption by the council, is councilmanic action, other than their adoption in order that they may be submitted to the state board of health, necessary to further procedure as regards said improvement?

"4. Is it within the province of a city council, by resolution or ordinance, to instruct the director to employ a certain engineer, whose selection we will say is against his best judgment, and could they, under the conditions above outlined, block the director in going ahead with the work other than their final refusal to approve the plans for submission to the state board of health?"

Section 4328, G. C., provides as follows:

"The director of public service may make any contract or purchase supplies or material or provide labor for any work under the supervision of that department not involving more than five hundred dollars. When an expenditure within the department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, exceeds five hundred dollars, such expenditure shall first be authorized and directed by ordinance of council. When so authorized and directed, the director of public service shall make a written contract with the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for not less than two nor more than four consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation within the city."

It is to be noted that the director of public service is not authorized to make any expenditure within his department, other than the compensation of persons employed therein, in excess of $500.00, unless such expenditure be first authorized and directed by ordinance of council, and that when so authorized and directed the director of public service shall proceed to advertise for bids.

I assume in answering your first question that the improvement contemplated will involve an expenditure of more than $500.00. Such being the case my answer to your first question is that it is necessary that council authorize and direct the expenditure of the money by ordinance of council before the director of public service my proceed to advertise for bids for such improvement.

Your second question involves a further consideration of section 4328, G. C. I assume that the engineer who is to be employed on the preparation of plans for the work contemplated is an engineer other than the one known as the city engineer who is permanently employed, and the question arises as to whether or not a person so employed would be considered as a person employed in the department. If such an engineer is not considered as a person employed in the department, it would be necessary, under the provisions of said section 4328, to proceed to advertise for bids and to employ such engineer on competitive bidding. This I do not believe is within the contemplation of council but rather since under the provisions of section 4327 the director of public service is authorized to determine the number of persons—among whom are engineers—necessary for the execution of the work and the performance of the duties of the department, his determination that an engineer other than the city engineer is necessary for the execution of the work under consideration would make such person so employed a person employed within the department. Such being the fact, the director of public service should create the position in question and then ask council to fix the salary of the person to be employed therein, under the provisions of section 4314, G. C.

The question as to whether under said section 4314, G. C., the right to fix a salary rests with council rather than under the provisions of section 4327 by inference rests with the director of public service has received judicial construction in the case of Smith, Solicitor, v. Lotschuetz, Auditor, 10 O. N. P. (n. s.), 257 (affirmed by the circuit court without report May, 1910), the first paragraph of the syllabus of which is as follows:

"A director of public service has no power under sections 4324, 4325 and 4326 of the General Code, which give him the management and supervision of his department, to fix the salaries or compensation of employes therein, but the exclusive right to fix such salaries and compensation is reposed in the city council by section 4214, General Code."

For a discussion of the question, in view of the condition of the statute, I would call your attention to the opinion beginning at the bottom of page 260.

Your third question presumes that the engineer was employed and plans prepared ready for adoption by council, and inquires whether councilmanic action is necessary to further procedure in regard to said improvement after the said plans have received the approval of the state board of health?

My answer to your first question fully covers this question, but in order that there may be no mistake I would state even if the council has adopted the plans and the same have received the approval of the state board of health, if the expenditure for the improvement involves more than $500.00, proceedings should be taken by the director of public service under section 4328, G. C.

In this connection I would point out that even if the director has proceeded to advertise for bids and has received the same, yet in the awarding of the contract on such bids the provisions of section 4403, G. C., relative to the board of control, should be complied with.

Your fourth question asks whether or not council can determine what engineer shall be employed?

The answer to your second question hereinbefore made covers this question. However, I would further point out that under the provisions of section 4211 council is only given legislative powers, and it is distinctly stated in said section that council "shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those in its own body, except as is otherwise provided in this title."

I do not find any provision in the statutes relative to the duties of the director of public service, which statutes are within the same title as section 4211, that shows any legislative intent that council shall have any authority whatever to appoint any person to a position in the department of public service. Consequently I would state that council is without authority to instruct the director, by resolution or ordinance, to employ a certain engineer. The only power of council in the premises would be that after the position of engineer for said improvement has been determined by the director of public service, under section 4327, G. C., to fix the salary for said position under the provisions of section 4314, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SECRETARY OF STATE—WHEN CORPORATION CAN CHANGE ITS UNISSUED COMMON STOCK INTO PREFERRED STOCK BY AMENDMENT—EXCEPTION TO GENERAL RULE AS NOW PROMULGATED.

The secretary of state having for many years followed the opinion of a former attorney-general, to the effect that a corporation can change its unissued common stock into preferred stock by amendment, and accepted amendments, to that effect, it is not improper for the secretary of state to accept amendments to that effect, provided the unanimous consent of its stockholders to make such change has been obtained, since neither the state nor the stockholders or creditors of the corporation would be injured thereby.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25, 1916.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of November 13, 1915, I received a letter from Hon. T. H. Hogsett, of the firm of Tolles, Hogsett, Ginn & Morley, attorneys at law, Cleveland, Ohio, relative to my opinion to you under date of October 1, 1915, wherein Mr. Hogsett contends that a corporation has the right to change by amendment to its articles of incorporation part of its common stock into preferred.

As you well know, I have been giving this matter considerable attention and, under date of January 11, 1916, I rendered you an opinion relative to The Farr Brick Company. In the course of said opinion I stated as follows:

"In this connection I believe that a review of the opinions or rulings of this department will be helpful. Former Attorney-General Sheets, in the year 1903, rendered two opinions,—one dated January 6th, and the other August 15th, in both of which opinions Mr. Sheets held that there was no statutory authority in Ohio to change common stock to preferred stock by amendment of the articles of incorporation. In both of these opinions, however, the author stated that he had no doubt that the stockholders of the corporation, by unanimous consent, might change the common stock to preferred stock, and that the courts would respect and enforce such an agreement, his conclusion in this latter respect, however, being not upon authority of any statutory provision, but upon the ground that the rights of the state not being affected or involved, the courts would doubtless enforce any legitimate or fair contract made among the stockholders themselves.

"Under date of November 21, 1904, Attorney-General Ellis, in an opinion to the then secretary of state, held that a corporation by amendment under section 3238-a, Revised Statutes, (now section 8719 of the General Code) could change common stock to preferred stock. This opinion was followed by the secretary of state, and certificates of amendment whereby common stock was changed to preferred stock, were accepted and recorded by him until October 1, 1915, under which date I rendered to you the opinion referred to in your letter in which I held that there is no statutory authority in Ohio to change the common stock of a corporation to preferred stock by an amendment of its articles of incorporation.

"I am by no means persuaded that the conclusion expressed in my opinion of October 1, 1915, just referred to, is erroneous, for I am still unable to find any statutory authority in Ohio to accomplish such change in the character of the capital stock of a corporation by amendment under section 8719 of the General Code."

Mr. Hogsett contends in his letter that the conversion of common stock into preferred "cannot be made except by agreement of all of the stockholders. The courts have expressly held that all of the stockholders can effect such conversion by agreement."

There is no doubt that no harm can be done to the corporation or its creditors if such an amendment is allowed by unanimous consent of all the stockholders.

In view of that fact I would suggest that the interests of the state or the creditors or stockholders of the corporation would not be affected by accepting an amendment changing the unissued common stock into preferred, up to the percentage allowed by law, and that, due to the fact that the ruling of Attorney-General Ellis has been acted upon in many instances, it would not be improper for you to permit such practice to continue, provided, of course, that the certificate itself shows that the unanimous consent of the stockholders has been obtained.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

2. Where bonds are issued under section 108 of the Cass highway law, section 6929, G. C., in anticipation of a tax levied against a county, a tax levied against a township and special assessments levied against the owners of benefited real estate, the county commissioners should, in the legislation providing for the issue of bonds, provide for levying and collecting annually, by taxation, on all the taxable property of the county, an amount sufficient to pay the county's proportion of the interest on said bonds, and to provide the county's proportion of a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity; they should provide for levying and collecting annually, by taxation, on the taxable property of the township in which the road improvement is located, an amount sufficient to pay the township's proportion of the interest on said bonds and to provide the township's proportion of a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity; and they should also provide, in addition to said levies, for the levying of a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to cover any deficiency in the payment or collection of the taxes levied upon the township, and any deficiency in the payment or collection of the special assessments.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 25, 1916.

HON. C. P. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 31, 1915, I have a communication from Mr. Dow W. Harter, assistant in your office, which communication reads as follows:

> "A number of questions have arisen under the new highway act which are perplexing our office, and we would appreciate an opinion from your office covering the following matters:
> "Upon the filing of a petition for the improvement of a county road, signed by the owners of a majority of the foot frontage of the lots and lands abutting on said road, a resolution was adopted in February, 1915, by the board of county commissioners, finding the route specified in the petition was a part of a county road, determining the improvement of the road as prayed for in said petition by establishing a grade, grading, draining, curbing, paving and improving the same, and directed the county surveyor to go upon said road and make all necessary surveys, profiles, plans, and specifications, for such improvement. The county surveyor, in pursuance of this resolution, has prepared surveys, profiles, plans, specifications and estimates, which have been filed with the present board of county commissioners since the first Monday in September, 1915.
> "The question arises whether further steps looking toward the improvement of this road shall be taken in accordance with the provisions of the so-called Cass highway law, amended senate bill number 125, volume 105-6

Ohio laws, page 574, or whether the county commissioners shall disregard the preliminary resolution heretofore passed after the filing of the petition and start anew under the Cass law, or whether the whole improvement shall be carried out under section 6903, et seq., General Code, the old Dodge law as was contemplated when the petition was filed and the original resolution passed.

"When a county improvement is to be made under an agreement between the county commissioners and the trustees of a township, or townships, and it is found necessary to issue bonds to provide for the township's portion of the cost and expense of such improvement, are said bonds issued by the county commissioners under authority of section 108 of the Cass law, and, if so, upon what property is the tax levied to provide a sum to pay the interest thereon and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity?"

The first question presented by Mr. Harter's communication is as to the right of county commissioners to complete a road improvement under section 6903, et seq., of the General Code, repealed by the Cass highway law, where the petition for the improvement was filed and granted by the county commissioners prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law. A very similar question was presented to this department by Hon. F. J. Bishop, prosecuting attorney of Ashtabula county, and in opinion No. 1045, rendered by me to Mr. Bishop on the 29th day of November, 1915, it was held that where proceedings for the improvement of a road were started under section 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, and the commissioners, prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law on the 6th day of September, 1915, had made a favorable finding upon the petition presented to them, a right existed in the petitioners to have the improvement completed, and that under the saving provisions of the Cass highway law it is the duty of the county commissioners to proceed with the construction of the improvement and to prosecute the work to completion under the law in force at the time the petition was filed, and the resolution making a favorable finding thereon adopted by the board of county commissioners. The same principles are applicable where the improvement was started under sections 6903, et seq., of the General Code, and I therefore advise you, in answer to Mr. Hunter's first question, that the improvement should be completed under section 6903, et seq., of the General Code, as was contemplated when the petition was filed and granted by the county commissioners. I enclose for your information a copy of the opinion rendered to Mr. Bishop and referred to by me.

Coming now to consider the second inquiry contained in Mr. Harter's letter, it may be observed that under section 100 of the Cass highway law, section 6921, G. C., authorizing the county commissioners of a county to enter into an agreement with the trustees of a township or townships in which a road improvement is in whole or part situated, the agreement may provide for a division of the cost and expense of the improvement between the county and the township or townships.

Under section 105 of the act, section 6926, G. C., the county commissioners are authorized to levy a tax upon the taxable property of the county for the purpose of meeting the county's proportion of the cost and expense of road improvements carried forward under chapter VI of the act.

Under section 106 of the act, section 6927, G. C., the county commissioners are authorized to levy a tax upon the taxable property of a township for the purpose of meeting such township's proportion of the cost and expense of road improvements carried forward under the chapter in question.

Under section 98 of the act, section 6919, G. C., a number of methods of paying the cost and expense are provided, which methods call for an assessment of all or some part of the cost and expense against the owners of benefited real estate.

The county commissioners are by section 108 of the act, section 6929, G. C., authorized to issue bonds in anticipation of the taxes and assessments referred to above. The section in question reads as follows:

> "The county commissioners in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments may, whenever in their judgment it is deemed necessary, sell the bonds of said county in the aggregate amount necessary to pay the estimated cost and expenses of such improvement. Such bonds shall state for what purpose they are issued, and shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and in such amounts and to mature at such times as the commissioners shall determine, subject to the provision, however, that said bonds shall mature in not more than ten years prior to the issuance of such bonds, the county commissioners shall provide for levying and collecting annually a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to provide a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity. The sale of such bonds shall be advertised once not later than two weeks prior to the date fixed for such sale in a newspaper published and of general circulation within such county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no such paper published in said county then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county. Such bonds shall be sold to the highest responsible bidder for not less than par and accrued interest. The county commissioners may reject any or all bids. The proceeds of such bonds shall be used exclusively for the payment of the costs and expenses of the improvement for which they are issued."

It should be noted in the first instance that there is an error in the punctuation of this section. The second sentence of the section is in reality two sentences, and under the familiar rule that the courts will, in the construction of a statute, disregard the punctuation or re-punctuate it if need be, the section in question should be re-punctuated by placing a period after the word "years," in the second sentence of the section as printed, thus separating this sentence in order to make the same conform to the manifest intention of the legislature and render it intelligible.

Bearing in mind the fact that the bonds authorized by this section may be issued in anticipation of collection of taxes levied upon a county, taxes levied upon a township and special assessments, it becomes necessary to consider the force and effect of the following sentence found in the section in question:

> "Prior to the issuance of such bonds, the county commissioners shall provide for levying and collecting annually a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to provide a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity."

It is apparent that the legislature in using the above quoted language did not intend that where, under section 6929, G. C., bonds were issued in anticipation of a tax on a county, a tax on a township and special assessments against benefited real estate, then the entire interest and redemption fund for such bonds should be provided by a levy on the county duplicate. Where bonds are issued in anticipation of a tax on a county, then the tax levied for the payment of such bonds is to be levied on the county, and where bonds are issued in anticipation of a tax on a township then the tax levied for the payment of such bonds is to be levied on the township. Where bonds are issued in anticipation of special assessments, the interest and redemption fund is to be created by the special assessments in question. It is manifest that the legislature in using the above quoted language had in mind a tax similar to that provided for by section 5630-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 495, which section reads as follows:

> "Bonds issued by county commissioners in the manner provided by law in anticipation of the collection of special assessments levied against the property abutting upon a proposed improvement, or to be benefited thereby, or in anticipation of the collection of taxes upon the taxable property of any township, or townships, of the said county within which such improvement is to be made, shall be full, general obligations of such county, for the payment of the principal and interest of which, when due, the full faith, credit and revenues of such county shall be pledged. The county commissioners shall, prior to the issuance of the bonds above mentioned, provide for the levying of a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to cover any deficiency in the payment or collection of such special assessments or township tax."

It would not have been within the power of the legislature to provide that bonds should be issued in anticipation of a county tax, a township tax and special assessments, and then further provide that the township tax and the special assessments should not be levied, but that the entire interest and redemption fund should be provided by a levy on the taxable property of the county.

Wasson v. Commissioners, 49 O. S., 622;
Hubbard v. Fitzsimmons, 57 O. S., 436;
State ex rel. Brennan v. Benham, 89 O. S., 351;
Cooley on Taxation, page 227;
27 Am. and Eng. Encyc. of Law, 2nd Ed., 595;
37 Cyc., 723.

It is elementary that there is a presumption in favor of the constitutionality of a statute, and that when a statute is susceptible of two constructions, one of which supports the act and gives it effect, and the other renders it unconstitutional and void, the former is to be adopted. The whole statute and all its parts are also to be taken together, and any particular provision must, if possible, receive a construction consistent with the rest of the act.

In view of the above considerations, it would be impossible to reach a conclusion different from that herein announced even if it be conceded that the language now under discussion is of doubtful import. It is my opinion that the legislature, by the use of the language in question, intended to provide that as between a county and the holder of bonds issued under section 6929, G. C., such bonds should be the full and general obligation of the county, that the credit and revenues of the county should be liable for the payment of such bonds, and that prior to the issuance of such bonds the commissioners should provide for levying and collecting annually a tax upon all the taxable property of the county sufficient to cover any deficiency in the township tax or assessments, to the end that there might be provided under all circumstances and conditions, a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity.

When a county road improvement is to be made under an agreement between the county commissioners and the trustees of a township, and it is necessary to issue bonds to provide for the township's proportion of the cost and expense of such improvement, the county commissioners may issue such bonds under authority of section 108 of the Cass highway law, section 6929, G. C., and the county commissioners should, in the legislation providing for the issue of bonds, provide for levying and collecting annually, by taxation, on all the taxable property of the county, in case any of the county's proportion of the cost and expense of such improvement is to be provided by the bond issue, an amount sufficient to pay the county's proportion of the interest on said bonds, and to provide the county's proportion of a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, they should provide for levying and collecting annually, by taxation, on the taxable property of the township in which the road improvement is located, an amount sufficient to pay the township's proportion of the interest on said bonds, and to provide the township's proportion of a sinking fund for their final redemption at maturity, and they should also provide, in addition to said levies, for the levying of a tax upon all the taxable property of the county, to cover any deficiency in the payment or collection of the taxes levied upon the township.

While not involved in Mr. Harter's inquiry, it should be further observed that where bonds are issued under section 6929, G. C., in anticipation not only of county and township taxes, but also in anticipation of special assessments, the bond legislation should further provide for the levying of a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to cover any deficiency in the payment or collection of the special assessments.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 26, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of December 27, 1915, in which you request my opinion upon the following questions:

(1) "Are the per diem and expenses of deputy or deputies in the county highway superintendent's office to be paid from the county treasury when working under the direction of the township trustees?

(2) "Does section 144 of the Cass law provide that the county commissioners must enter into contract in writing for all road and bridge improvements, or are contracts in writing only necessary where the cost of the improvement exceeds two hundred dollars?

(3) "Does this section make it necessary for the county highway superintendent to prepare plans and specifications and furnish estimates for road and bridge improvement, the cost of which does not exceed two hundred dollars ($200.00), or is it optional with the county commissioners whether or not they have plans and specifications prepared for contract such as above mentioned?"

In connection with your first question it should be noted that any deputies of the county highway superintendent engaged on road work for or under the direction of the township trustees, must be the "assistants" referred to in section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C. The subordinates which the county highway superintendent is authorized to appoint in connection with road and bridge work are either the "assistants" referred to in section 7181, G. C., or the "assistants," "superintendents" and "inspectors" referred to in section 212 of the act, section 1219, G. C. The "assistants," "superintendents" and "inspectors" whose appointment is authorized by section 1219, G. C., must be employed upon work carried forward under the direction of the state highway department, and it therefore follows that any assistants or deputies employed upon road work carried forward by the township trustees, must be the "assistants" referred to in section 7181, G. C. As to the compensation and traveling expenses of these assistants it is provided by section 7181, G. C., that such compensation and expenses shall be paid out of the county treasury. The township trustees may call upon the county highway superintendent under sections 3298-3, 3298-7, 3298-14 and 3298-15 of the General Code, to perform services in connection with a road improvement carried forward by the trustees. These services consist of the making of surveys, plats, plans, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications, and the making of an apportionment or tentative assessment against benefited real estate, and it is also apparent from section 3298-7, G. C., that a certain degree of supervision is to be exercised by the county highway superintendent over construction work carried forward by township trustees, inasmuch as payments for such work are to be made upon estimates furnished by the county highway superintendent. There is no provision, however, for the payment of any part of the compensation or expenses of the county highway superintendent or of his assistants when engaged on township work out of the township treasury, and no provision for the reimbursement by the township of the county which is charged with the payment of such compensation and expenses.

I therefore advise you, in answer to your first question, that the compensation and expenses of deputies or assistants of the county highway superintendent when engaged on road work carried forward by the township trustees, are to be paid from the county treasury, and that no scheme of reimbursement is provided by the law, it evidently being the intention of the legislature to cast this expense upon the county.

It should be noted, however, that when an inspector for township road work is appointed by the township trustees under the provisions of section 3298-6, G. C., the compensation of such inspector is to be paid out of the township treasury. Under section 3373, G. C., the compensation and expenses of the township highway superintendent are to be paid from the township treasury, and by the terms of section 3376, G. C., all claims for dragging roads are also to be paid out of the funds of the township.

The pertinent provision of section 144 of the Cass highway law, section 7187, G. C., referred to by you in your second and third inquiries, reads as follows:

> "Plans and specifications must be prepared in all cases where the cost of the bridge or culvert exceeds two hundred dollars, and contracts in writing must be entered into in such cases."

It will be noted that this provision applies in terms only to bridge and culvert work, and an answer to your second and third questions involves a consideration not only of this provision but also of the following provision, found in section 156 of the act, section 7199, G. C.

> "If, in the opinion of the county commissioners, it is advisable to provide for the improvement, maintenance and repair of any portion of the highways of the county by contract, such contract, if the cost and expense of the improvement, maintenance or repair of any section of highways, or of any bridge or culvert, exceeds two hundred dollars, shall be let by competitive bidding. All such contracts shall be awarded by the county commissioners or township trustees on estimates, plans and specifications to be furnished by the county highway superintendent, to the lowest and best bidder. If the estimated cost of such work is less than five hundred dollars, and more than two hundred dollars, the same may be let at competitive bidding after advertising the same by posters in at least three public places in the county, for ten days prior to the letting, and if the estimated cost of such work is more than five hundred dollars, the same shall be let by competitive bidding, after advertisement once not later than two weeks prior to the letting of contracts, in some newspaper published and of general circulation within the county, if there be any such newspapers published in said county, but if there be no such newspapers published in said county, then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county. All bids for such work shall be filed in the office of the township clerk or county auditor."

An answer to your second question also involves a consideration of the following language found in section 126 of the act, section 6947, G. C.:

"Before entering into a contract the county commissioners shall require a bond payable to the state of Ohio * * *."

In the case of Hughes v. Village of Clyde, 41 O. S., 349, the court was called upon to consider the effect of the use in the statute of the phrase "entered into," its use in the statute construed by the court in that case being similar to the use of the phrase "entering into" in the statute now under consideration. The court held that the acceptance of a bid legally made under the statute considered by it did not conclude the matter, but only gave to the bidder a right to a contract embracing the stipulations, expressed or implied, in the records or files relating to the improvement.

It should also be noted that section 127 of the act, section 6948, G. C., provides that all contracts for extra work not contemplated by the original contract and rendered necessary by unforeseen contingencies, must be in writing. In view of the foregoing considerations I advise you as follows in reference to the necessity for a written contract for road, culvert or bridge work under the Cass highway law:

(1) All contracts for work costing more than two hundred dollars must be in writing.

(2) All contracts for extra work not contemplated by the original contract and rendered necessary by unforeseen contingencies must be in writing.

(3) There is no statutory requirement that contracts must be in writing where the cost of the improvement does not exceed two hundred dollars, but although written contracts are not required by the statute in such cases, it is my view that the public business will be more satisfactorily transacted for all parties concerned if the practice of entering into written contracts without regard to the amount involved be generally adopted. If the amount involved be two hundred dollars or less, and no written contract be entered into, the person to whom the contract is awarded should in all cases be required to make his proposal in writing and, of course, the action of the county commissioners in accepting the same should appear upon their journal.

Coming now to consider your third question, which relates to the necessity for plans, specifications and estimates to be furnished by the county highway superintendent, it is provided by section 7187, G. C., that as to bridges and culverts, plans and specifications must be prepared in all cases where the cost of the bridge or culvert exceeds two hundred dollars. Section 7199, G. C., provides that all contracts for the improvement, maintenance or repair of any highway, bridge or culvert, exceeding two hundred dollars in amount, shall be awarded on estimates, plans and specifications to be furnished by the county highway superintendent. I find no similar provision as to contracts involving two hundred dollars or less, and the language used by the legislature in the two provisions referred to above seems to indicate that it was the intention of the legislature that where the cost of a road or bridge improvement or repair did not exceed two hundred dollars, such improvement might be let without requiring the county highway superintendent to first prepare plans and specifications and furnish estimates. Section 7187, G. C., provides that the county highway superintendent shall furnish estimates at any time when called for by the county commissioners.

In view of the above provisions I conclude that where a road or bridge improvement does not exceed two hundred dollars in cost, the question of whether the county highway superintendent shall first prepare plans and specifications and furnish estimates, rests in the discretion of the county commissioners, and they may require plans, specifications and estimates, or they may enter into a contract for the work without requiring the county highway superintendent to prepare plans and specifications and furnish estimates. If they do enter into a contract for such work without requiring the county highway superintendent to prepare plans and specifications and furnish estimates, they should call their action to the attention of the county highway superintendent, for the reason that even though plans and specifications be not prepared and estimates furnished by him, yet the work is to be done under his supervision, and the compensation of the contractor can be paid only upon his approval. Plans and specifications must be prepared and estimates furnished by the county highway superintendent in all cases where the cost of the bridge, road or culvert exceeds two hundred dollars.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BONDS OF TOWNSHIP OFFICERS DO NOT REQUIRE GOVERNMENT STAMPS UNDER SCHEDULE A OF THE EMERGENCY REVENUE ACT OF 1914.

Schedule A of the emergency revenue act of 1914, United States Statutes at Large, Vol. 38, p. 761, does not authorize a tax or require the stamping of bonds given by township officers to qualify them to perform the duties of their office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 26, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following letter from Mr. E. E. Emerick, clerk of Lake township, Ashland county, Ohio:

> "I wish to be informed if the bonds of township officers require government stamps. Please let me hear from you."

As the question asked is of general interest and concerns rights of practically all the officers in the several sub-divisions of the state government, I deem it advisable and proper to answer the same, and in harmony with former practice, I am directing my opinion to your department.

The emergency revenue act of 1914, entitled "An act to increase the internal revenues and for other purposes," United States Statutes at Large, Vol. 38, page 761, under schedule A, provides as follows:

> "BOND. For indemnifying any person or persons, firm or corporation who shall become bound or engaged as surety for the payment of any sum of money, or for the due execution or performance of the duties of any office or position, and to account for money received by virtue thereof, and all other bonds of any description, except such as may be required in legal proceedings, not otherwise provided for in this schedule, 50 cents."

This language standing alone would seem broad enough in scope to require the stamping of bonds required for the proper qualification of township officers. Section 15 of the act, however, contains the following proviso or limitation:

> "* * * Provided, that it is the intent hereby to exempt from the stamp taxes imposed by this act such state, county, town, or other municipal corporations in the exercise only of functions strictly belonging to them in their ordinary governmental, taxing or municipal capacity. * * *"

The question arising therefore is whether the giving of a bond by the township officer, as one of the necessary steps to qualify him for the performance of official duties, is the exercise of a governmental function of the state or one of its subdivisions.

The principle involved was considered and decided by the United States circuit court of appeals, sixth circuit, in the case of Bettman v. Warwick, 106 Fed. Rep., 46, in which the court, confirming the decision of the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Ohio, held that the bond required of a notary public as part of his qualification for office was not subject to the revenue tax provided in the act of June 13, 1898, entitled: "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures and other purposes."

The language of the 1898 act, under which it was sought to exact a tax upon the bond of a notary public, was very similar to the provision of the present law, and was as follows:

> "BOND. For indemnifying any person or persons, firm or corporation, who shall have become bound or engaged as surety for the payment of any sum of money, or for the due execution or performance of the duties of any office or position, and to account for money received by virtue thereof, and all other bonds of any description, except such as may be required in legal proceedings, not otherwise provided for in this schedule, fifty cents."

The 1898 act also contained a proviso or exemption in section 17, similar to the exempting clause of the present law above quoted, which was as follows:

> "Provided, that it is the intent hereby to exempt from the stamp taxes imposed by this act such state, county, town or other municipal corporations in the exercise only of functions strictly belonging to them in their ordinary governmental, taxing or municipal capacity."

The circuit court of appeals confirming the decision of the lower court held that a notary public was a state officer exercising state functions, and by the language of the statute itself exempt from the payment of a tax upon his bond of qualification. The court went further in its opinion and stated that regardless of specific exemptions contained in the statute itself, it was incompetent for the federal government to tax a state function or the means by which state functions are exercised. Numerous authorities are cited by the court in support of this principle, which is set forth in the first branch of the syllabus, as follows:

> "The United States and the states act separately and independently of each other in the field within which each is sovereign, and neither have power to impose a tax which will interfere with the exercise of the sovereignty of the other within their own sphere, either by taxing their functions or the means by which they are exercised. A power in the federal government to exact a tax upon the right to qualify, under a state law, for the performance of the duties of a state office, is inconsistent with the existence of any supreme governmental authority in the state, and the converse is true as regards the power of the state to tax the means employed by the federal government to carry into execution the powers vested in it by the constitution."

Upon the principle laid down by the court in the above case, and the authorities there cited by the court, I am of the opinion that the federal act of 1914, "to increase the internal revenue and for other purposes," does not authorize a tax upon or require the stamping of bonds of township officers.

I am sending a copy of this opinion to Mr. E. E. Emerick, clerk of Lake township, Loudonville, Ashland county, Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

P. S. The above opinion is in harmony with the ruling of the treasury department of the United States, given December 28, 1914, Vol. 16, Treasury Decisions, Internal Revenue.—E. C. T.

LIEN STATUTES, SECTIONS 8312, 8313, 8314, G. C., APPLICABLE ONLY TO PRIVATE CONTRACTS—SEE SECTIONS 6947 AND 3298-4, G. C., CASS HIGHWAY LAW FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT CONTRACTS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 27, 1916.

HON. JOSEPH T. MICKLETHWAIT, Prosecuting Attorney, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of January 14, 1916, is as follows:

> "Are sections 8312, 8313 and 8314, as amended in 105 O. L., page 522, applicable to public contracts, made by the county or public corporations, such as enumerated and set forth in section 8310, as amended 103 O. L., page 369?

"Will you approve and follow opinion No. 1154 by your predecessor, Honorable Timothy S. Hogan, found in Vol. 2 of the opinions of the attorney-general for 1914?"

The opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, to which you refer, is found at page 1235 of the report of the attorney-general for the year 1914, and holds that section 8312, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 370, had no application to work done by a public agency such as a township, municipality or county and was intended to apply only to work carried on by persons, firms or corporations in a private capacity, and that section 8324, G. C., prescribes the only procedure for procuring a lien upon funds due under a public contract.

Sections 8312, 8313 and 8314 of the General Code, 103 O. L., 369, were amended in 106 O. L., 522. These sections are designed to prescribe the procedure or to provide the machinery by which laborers, material men, subcontractors and other persons may secure to themselves a lien upon certain classes of property, appurtenances and structures described and defined in section 8310 and section 8311, G. C., 103 O. L,. 369, and the real estate upon which the same are located, for their respective claims for work or labor performed upon, machinery, material or fuel furnished in the construction, erection, alteration, repair or removal of any of those classes of property, structures or appurtenances in said sections named.

It is impracticable to here quote said sections 8312, 8313 and 8314, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 522, but it is sufficient to say that the persons, contractors, subcontractors, material men and the claims thereof, and the owners, part owners, mortgagees and lessees therein referred to will be found upon examination to be those mentioned, defined and described in sections 8310 and 8311, G. C., 103 O L., 369. Original sections 8312, 8313 and 8314 were a part of house bill 290, 103 O. L., 369, and manifestly had direct reference to the preceding sections of the same act, 8310 and 8311, G. C.

Under a familiar rule of construction these amended sections will be interpreted as if having been set into the original act instead of the original sections thereof. So that so far as pertinent to your inquiry, the application of sections 8312, 8313 and 8314, G. C., supra, is dependent upon the scope and operation of sections 8310 and 8311, supra, which provide as follows:

"Section 8310. Every person who does work or labor upon, or furnishes machinery, material or fuel, for constructing, altering, or repairing a boat, vessel, or other water craft, or for erecting, altering, repairing, or removing a house, mill, manufactory, or any furnace, or furnace material therein, or other building, appurtenance, fixture, bridge or other structure, or for digging, drilling, boring, operating, completing, or repairing of any gas well, oil well or other well, or for altering, repairing or constructing any oil derrick, oil tank, oil or gas pipe line, or furnishes tile for the drainage of any lot or land by virtue of a contract, express or implied, with the owner, part owner, or lessee, of any interest in real estate, or the authorized agent of the owner, part owner, or lessee, of any interest in real estate, and every person who shall as subcontractor, laborer, or material man, perform any labor, or furnish machinery, materials, or fuel, to each original or principal contractor, or any subcontractor in carrying forward, performing, or completing any such contract, shall have a lien to secure the payment thereof upon such boat, vessel, or other water craft, or upon such house, mill, manufactory, furnace, or other building or appurtenance, fixture, bridge or other structure, or upon such gas well, oil well, or other well, or upon such oil derrick, oil tank, oil or gas pipe line, and upon the machinery or material so furnished, and upon the interest, leasehold, or otherwise, of the owner, part owner, or lessee, in the lot or land upon which they may stand, or to which they may be removed, to the extent of the right, title and interest of the owner, part owner, or lessee, at the time the work was commenced or materials were begun to be furnished by the contractor, under the original contract, and also to the extent of any subsequent acquired interest of any such owner, part owner, or lessee.

"Section 8311. Any person who performs labor or furnishes machinery, material or fuel for the construction, alteration or repair of any street, turnpike, road, sidewalk, way, drain, ditch, or sewer, by virtue of a private contract between him and the owner, part owner, or lessee of lands upon which the same may be constructed, altered, or repaired, or of lands abutting thereon, or any person who shall, as subcontractor, laborer, or material man, perform labor or furnish machinery, material or fuel to such original or principal contractor or to any subcontractor in carrying forward or completing such contract, shall have a lien for the payment thereof against the lands of such owner, part owner or lessee, upon which said street or other improvement above mentioned is constructed or upon which any such above mentioned improvement abuts, as provided in section 1, hereof."

Section 1, mentioned in the conclusion of section 8311, has reference to section 8310, supra.

Without consuming unnecessary time and space in undertaking to trace their legislative history, it is sufficient here to say that section 8308, G. C., had its origin in section 1, and section 8316, G. C., in section 3, and section 8324, G. C., hereinafter referred to, in section 10 of the act of May 4, 1877, 74 O. L., 168.

Section 1 of said act became section 3184, section 3 became section 3186, section 10 became section 3193, R. S., and section 8308, G. C., by the act of May 2, 1913, 103 O. L., 369, became section 8310, G. C.

These sections were subject to various changes and amendments but until after the codification of 1910, what was carried into the code as section 8308 was confined in its scope and operation to persons who did work or labor upon or furnished machinery, material or fuel, upon contracts of certain enumerated classes. Section 8316, G. C., applied alike to persons who performed labor or furnished material by virtue of private contracts on additional enumerated classes.

Section 8324, G. C., included within its scope and operation only subcontractors, material men, laborers or mechanics who performed labor or furnished material, fuel or machinery upon all those classes of contracts enumerated in both sections 8308 and 8316 and in addition thereto included contracts for the construction, improvement, or repair of any turnpike, road improvement, sewer, street or other public improvement or public building between the owner or any board, officer or public authority and a principal contractor. That is to say, prior to the changes thereof effected in 103 O. L., 369, sections 8308 and 8316 included within their terms only persons who do or perform work or labor or furnish material, machinery or fuel, while section 8324 included only subcontractors, material men, laborers and mechanics. Section 8316 was specifically limited to private contracts and section 8324 included all the contracts within sections 8308 and 8316 and in addition thereto certain specifically enumerated public contracts.

By the act in 103 O. L., 369, section 8308, G. C., was specifically repealed but was re-enacted and given code section number 8310 by the attorney general. In such re-enactment or amendment there was inserted therein, beginning at the end of the fourteenth line thereof, the following:

> "and every person who shall as subcontractor, laborer or material man perform any labor, or furnish machinery, materials, or fuel, to each original or principal contractor, or any subcontractor in carrying forward, performing, or completing any such contract," and there was added to said original section 8308, at the conclusion thereof:

> "to the extent of the right, title and interest of the owner, part owner, or lessee, at the time the work was commenced or materials were begun to be furnished by the contractor, under the original contract and also to the extent of any subsequent acquired interest of any such owner, part owner, or lessee."

Section 8308, now section 8310, G. C., was thus made to include subcontractors, laborers and material men along with section 8324, G. C., which was not repealed by this act but was not made to include those classes of public contracts within section 8324, in addition to those in section 8308, then repealed, and section 8316 also then repealed. Section 8316, G. C., was, however, in effect amended by section 28 of the act and given code number 8311 and made to include both persons who perform labor or furnish machinery, material or fuel and subcontractors, laborers or material men who perform labor or furnish machinery, material or fuel, but continues specifically to be limited to "private contracts."

Some of the difficulties met with may be obviated if it be consistently borne in mind that we are here dealing with purely statutory liens and that in every case such lien must be founded upon clear statutory authority therefor.

If we examine carefully section 8310, G. C., supra, it will conclusively appear that all those classes of property, structures and appurtenances therein enumerated are of a character and nature clearly distinguishable from those structures, appurtenances, improvements and property with which public agencies are in the ordinary course of affairs accustomed to deal, with a bare exception of bridges. No substantial reason can be suggested, however, for including bridges constructed by public agencies to the exclusion of all the other works of a structural character in which public agencies may be engaged and I am, therefore, inclined to the view that the term "bridges" as here used includes only private bridges. That is to say, that section 8310, G. C., deals exclusively with work done, improvements made and construction prosecuted under private contract. This position, I think, is strengthened when it is observed that in section 8311, supra, where the structures and improvements named are of such character as are frequently constructed, improved, repaired or removed by public agencies, and which might give rise to an inference that contracts of public agencies were intended to be included, there is specific limitation to "private contracts."

In view of the specific limitation of section 8311, G. C., to private contracts and the character of property and structures enumerated in section 8310, G. C., I am clearly of opinion that it was not the legislative intent that they should apply to contracts of public officers or agencies. This position is supported, in my judgment, when it is remembered that the legislature again distinguished between public and private contracts in section 8324, which includes only subcontractors, laborers, material men and mechanics. I, therefore, concur in the conclusion of my predecessor and am of the opinion that sections 8312, 8313 and 8314 have no application to contracts of public officers for public improvement.

Relative to contracts entered into by public agencies, attention is called in particular to section 127 of the highway law, 6947, G. C., 106 O. L., 607, which requires that the county commissioners, before entering into a contract for the improvement of a public highway, shall require a bond for the use of the county in a sum equal to the contract price, conditioned for the faithful performance of the contract and also conditions for the payment of all material and labor furnished for or used in the construction of the road for which such contract is made, and which is furnished to the original contractor or subcontractor, agent or superintendent of either engaged in said work, and also to section 63 of the highway law, section 3298-4, G. C., 106 O. L., 598, which requires that the township trustees shall let the contract for road improvement to the lowest and best bidder who shall give bond for the faithful performance of the contract in an amount not less than the contract price and for the payment of all material and labor furnished for or used in the construction for which such contract is made.

It is unnecessary to suggest that these provisions impose upon the county commissioners and trustees a mandatory duty as to the contracts therein referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

JUDGES—COMMON PLEAS—COURT OF APPEALS—REIMBURSEMENT FOR EXPENSES—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 2253, G. C.—"YEAR" AS USED REFERS TO THE OFFICIAL YEAR AND NOT TO CALENDAR YEAR—ALLOWANCE, PERSONAL TO JUDGE.

The word "year" as used in section 2253, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 251, relative to the expenses of common pleas judges and judges of the courts of appeals refers to the official year and not to the calendar year, nor to the year determined by the commencement of the actual tenure of office of the judge appointed to fill a vacancy. The official year of a judge of the court of appeals begins on the 9th day of February.

The maximum limitation of section 2253, G. C., is applicable to the amount of expenses for which any one person holding the office of judge may be reimbursed in any one official year; accordingly, if two persons successively hold the same official position in any one judicial year each of them is entitled to reimbursement for expenses not exceeding $300.00 incurred in that year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 27, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of January 20, 1916, requesting my opinion upon the following facts:

Hon. T. T. Ansberry was appointed to fill a vacancy on the bench of the court of appeals caused by death. He took the oath of office on January 9, 1915, and resigned within a year of the time of taking office. Judge Ansberry rendered three expense vouchers aggregating $355.20 from January 11, 1915, to December 29, 1915, inclusive, for which warrants on the state treasurer, aggregating $300.00 have been issued to him leaving a balance of $55.20 for which he has not been reimbursed. Is Judge Ansberry entitled to any further allowance of expenses?

Section 2253, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 251, provides in part as follows:

"In addition to the annual salary and expenses provided for in sections 1529, 2251, 2252, 2252-1, each judge of the court of common pleas and of the court of appeals, shall receive his actual and necessary expenses, not exceeding three hundred dollars in any one year, incurred, while holding court in a county in which he does not reside, to be paid from the state treasury upon the warrant of the auditor of state, issued to such judge; * * *"

This department has previously held that the word "year," as used in this context, means the official year; that is, the year determined by the commencement or termination of an official term. It does not refer to the calendar year nor to a year commencing on the date when a judge appointed to fill a vacancy may have assumed office.

The official year of judges of the courts of appeals is therefore determined by section 1514, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 411. Without quoting that section it is sufficient to state that the term of office of a judge of the court of appeals begins on the 9th day of February next after his election. Therefore, the year for the purpose of section 2253 begins as to judges of courts of appeals on the 9th day of February and ends with the 8th of February.

These things being true it is impossible for me to advise you as to just how much if anything remains due to Judge Ansberry. While the allowance is referable to an official year yet it is personal to the judge being a mere limitation on the amount of actual and necessary personal expenses for which he may be reimbursed. That being the case, if more than one person serves in one judicial position in a given official year each person so serving is entitled to reimbursement for expenses incurred by him during the year to the amount of $300.00. So that if two persons successively hold the same judicial position during parts of the same official year, the aggregate expense allowance limit for the position is $600.00 for that year, $300.00 for each person. It follows, therefore, that Judge Ansberry was entitled to reimbursement for actual and necessary expenses incurred by him between January 11 and February 8, 1915, not exceeding $300.00 in all regardless of the amount which his predecessor has drawn from the state treasury in the same year; and that Judge Ansberry is also entitled to reimbursement for expenses incurred by him during his incumbency on and after February 9, 1915, up to $300.00. In short, the limit on Judge Ansberry's expenses for the period referred to in your letter is in the aggregate $600.00, not $300.00, provided, however, that not more than $300.00 thereof be incurred on and after February 9, 1915.

Your statement of facts makes it appear almost certain that Judge Ansberry did not draw more than $300.00 from the state treasury on account of expenses incurred by him prior to February 9, 1915. He has, therefore, up to date not overdrawn his expense allowance for either year. The only question then is as to whether the expense vouchers presented by him show the incurring of expenses in excess of $300.00 between February 9, 1915, and the date of his resignation. If such is shown to be the case then Judge Ansberry must be denied reimbursement to the extent of such excess; but if as heretofore stated the amount of expenses incurred by him within the period last above referred to was less than $300.00 he is entitled to reimbusement in full therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TAX COMMISSION—AUTHORITY UNDER PARRETT-WHITTEMORE LAW—HAS POWER TO DIRECT COUNTY BOARD OF REVISION TO ORGANIZE PRIOR TO 2ND MONDAY IN JUNE, 1916—SAID BOARD CAN ONLY PASS UPON UNFINISHED BUSINESS OF DISTRICT BOARD OF COMPLAINTS—WHAT COMPLAINTS CAN AND CANNOT BE PASSED UPON BY COUNTY BOARD OF REVISION AT SUBSEQUENT SESSIONS.

The tax commission has power, under the provisions of section 39 of the Parrett-Whittemore law as amended 106 O. L., 433, section 5592, G. C., and section 40 of said law, section 5593, G. C., as found in 106 O. L., 257, to direct the duly appointed and qualified members of the board of revision of any county to organize at any time prior to the second Monday in June 1916, and said board of revision may, when properly organized, proceed under the direction of the tax commission to complete any unfinished business of the district board of complaints of such county in compliance with the provision of the latter part of section 1 of said law.

If the tax commission, in the exercise of the authority conferred upon it by said section 39 as amended and section 40 of said Parrett-Whittemore law, directs the duly appointed and qualified members of the county board of revision of any county to convene at any time prior to the second Monday in June, 1916, for the purpose of organization and for the further purpose of completing any unfinished business of the district board of complaints of such county, said board of revision will be without authority in law to hear complaints upon valuations of real or personal property on the tax list for the year 1915, filed after the final adjournment of said board of complaints for said year, or which may be filed after said board of revision has been called into session by said tax commission, and said board of revision will be confined at said session to the hearing of such complaints against the valuations of real or personal property upon the tax list for said year 1915, as were filed with said district board of complaints and as were not disposed of by said board prior to its final adjournment for said year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of January 25th, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "1. Has the commission the power to call the board of revision of any county in session, at any time between January 1 and the second Monday in June, 1916?
> "2. If the commission has that power and exercises it, may the board of revision so called into session hear complaints upon valuations of real or personal property upon the tax list of 1915, filed after the adjournment of the board of complaints, and also any which may be filed after the board of revision has been called into session, or is such board confined to the hearing of complaints filed with and not disposed of by said board?"

Section 32 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, as originally enacted, 106 O. L., 255, being section 5581 of the General Code, provided for the appointment of the members of the county board of revision in the month of April, 1916, and annually thereafter. Section 39 of said law (section 5592, G. C.) as originally enacted, 106 O. L., 256, provided that:

> "Each county board of revision shall organize annually on the second Monday of June by the election of a chairman for the ensuing year."

These sections of said law as originally enacted were amended by the legislature, 106 O. L., 433, and section 32 as amended now provides for the appointment of members of the county board of revision on or before January 10, 1916, and on or before April 10th of each year thereafter, and section 39 as amended provides that:

> "Each county board of revision shall organize annually, on the second Monday in June or at such time as may be directed by the tax commission of Ohio, by the election of a chairman for the ensuing year."

Under provision of the latter part of section 1 of said law any unfinished business of the district board of complaints of a county shall be completed by the county board of revision of such county.

Section 40 of the law (section 5593, G. C.) provides that:

> "County boards of revision shall hold sessions beginning on the second Monday of June and the first Monday of August respectively and convene at such other times as the tax commission of Ohio may order."

It was evidently the intention of the legislature in enacting the aboxe provisions of sections 1 and 40 of said act, and in amending said section 32 of said act so as to provide for the appointment of the members of the county board of revision for the year 1916 on or before January 10th, of said year, and in amending said section 39 of the act so as to authorize said county board of revision to organize at such time other than the second Monday in June of any year as the tax commission may direct, to provide ample authority in the tax commission to call the board of revision of any county in session at any time in the year 1916 after the members of said board have been duly appointed and qualified.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question that the tax commission has power, under the above provisions of section 39 as amended and section 40 of the act, to direct the duly appointed and qualified members of the board of revision of any county to organize at any time prior to the second Monday in June, 1916, and that said board of revision may, when properly organized, proceed under the direction of the tax commission to complete any unfinished business of the district board of complaints of such county in compliance with the above provision of section 1 of the act.

Coming now to a consideration of your second question I call your attention to sections 19 and 24 of the so-called Warnes law as in force prior to January 1, 1916, the date when the Parrett-Whittemore law became effective.

Section 19 of said Warnes law provided:

> "The district board of complaints shall begin its session on the first Monday of August annually and may adjourn from day to day. The board shall complete its work within such time as may be fixed for the completion thereof by the tax commission of Ohio."

Section 24 of said law provided in part as follows:

> "Complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year may be filed with the county auditor before the meeting of the district board of complaints or thereafter during its session."

It will be observed that under provision of section 19 of said Warnes law, as above quoted, the time within which the district board of complaints was required to complete its work was fixed by the tax commission, and under the above provision of section 24 of said law complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year had to be filed with the county auditor before the meeting of the district board of complaints or thereafter during its session. The district board of complaints was neither required nor authorized to consider complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for any year filed with the county auditor, as secretary of said board, after its adjournment in said year at the time fixed by the tax commission for the completion of its work for said year.

It follows that the only "unfinished business" of the district board of complaints of any county which the county board of revision of such county is required to complete, under provision of the latter part of section 1 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, will be the work of considering those complaints filed with the auditor of such county before the meeting of the district board of complaints of said county on the first Monday of August, 1915, or thereafter during the session of said board for said year.

In addition to the power conferred upon the county board of revision under provision of the latter part of section 1 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, section 44 of said law (section 5597, G. C.) provides that:

> "It shall be the duty of the board of revision to hear complaints relating to the assessment of both real and personal property laid before it by the county auditor and it shall investigate all such complaints and may increase or decrease any valuations or correct any assessment complained of, or it may order a re-assessment by the original assessing officer."

And section 45 (section 5598, G. C.) provides that:

> "The county board of revision shall have power to investigate all assessments on the tax list, with respect to the amount of property listed as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed."

Said section further provides, however, that the power of the board shall extend to all cases in which real or personal property has been assessed for taxation for the current year but not to assessments, additions or corrections hereafter made by the tax commission of Ohio.

It is evident that the power of the county board of revision, conferred by the above provisions of section 44 and 45, extends only to the investigation of assessments on the tax list for the current year and may only be exercised by said board at its August session of said year when, under provision of section 52 of said Parrett-Whittemore law (section 5609, G. C.) complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year may be filed with the county auditor before the meeting of said county board of revision on the first Monday of August of said year or within thirty days thereafter if the board remains in session so long.

The authority of the county board of revision at its June session in 1916, under provision of section 51 of said law (section 5605, G. C.), will be confined to the examination, revision and correction of all property statements and returns for said year placed before said board by the county auditor on the second Monday of June of said year.

It seems clear, therefore, that the county board of revision has no authority under any provision of the Parrett-Whittemore law to hear complaints upon valuations of real or personal property upon the tax list for 1915 filed after the adjournment of the district board of complaints at the close of its session for said year or which may be filed with the county auditor after the board of revision has been called into session by order of the tax commission under authority of section 40 of said law.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question that if the tax commission, in the exercise of the authority conferred upon it by section 39 as amended and section 40 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, directs the duly appointed and qualified member of the county board of revision of any county to convene at any time prior to the second Monday in June, 1916, for the purpose of organization and for the further purpose of completing any unfinished business of the district board of complaints of such county, in compliance with the requirement of the latter part of section 1 of said law, said board of revision will be without authority in law to hear complaints upon valuations of real or personal property on the tax list for the year 1915, filed after the final adjournment of said board of complaints for said year, or which may be filed after said board of revision has been called into session by said tax commission, and that said board will be confined at said session to the hearing of such complaints against the valuations of real or personal property upon the tax list for said year 1915 as were filed with said district board of complaints and as were not disposed of by said board prior to its final adjournment for said year.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—BIDS AND BIDDERS—ADVERTISEMENT FOR HEATING AND VENTILATING SCHOOL BUILDING—MAY HAVE SUCH GENERAL SPECIFICATIONS AS TO PERMIT BIDS BEING OFFERED FOR INSTALLATION OF ANY SYSTEM OF HEATING AND VENTILATING THAT MAY BE DETERMINED BY BOARD AFTER BIDS OPENED.

A board of education may advertise for bids for heating and ventilating a school building under such general specifications as to permit bids being offered for the installation of any system of heating and ventilating, which system may be determined by the board after the bids are opened.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of January 19, 1916, submitting the following inquiry:

> "Is it legal for a board of education to award a contract for heating and ventilating a school building upon competitive bids received under merely general specifications, permitting each bidder to submit with his proposal the detailed specifications of the system which he, if awarded the contract, proposes to install?"

The question involved in your foregoing inquiry is by no means a new one. Cases involving practically the same question have been considered by the courts of this state under the various statutes providing for competitive bidding with the net result that no rule has been established which is not the subject of some doubt. The laws of this state requiring competitive bidding vary to some extent in expression and language and this fact has been adopted by the courts in some instances in attempting to harmonize what would otherwise appear to be conflicting opinions. The law which controls the board of education in the inquiry submitted by you is found in paragraphs 5 and 6 of section 7625, G. C., which paragraphs are as follows:

"5. When both labor and materials are embraced in the work bid for, each must be separately stated in the bid, with the price thereof.

"6. None but the lowest responsible bid shall be accepted. The board in its discretion may reject all the bids, or accept any bid for both labor and material for such improvement or repair, which is the lowest in the aggregate."

The foregoing law requires a board of education to accept the lowest responsible bid or reject all bids. Ross v. Board of Education, 42 O. S., 374. In this respect the statute in question may be said to be one of the most imperative and restrictive found in the General Code upon this subject. For this reason it is useless in this discussion to direct attention to the construction of other statutes more liberal in their terms in this particular.

The question as presented by you involves a consideration of how general the specifications may be and whether a competition between system and not price may be legal under this law. It must be conceded in the beginning that the method suggested by your inquiry does not provide for competitive bidding as generally understood and contemplated under the laws pertaining to this subject. There is no competition, strictly speaking, unless there is an opportunity for bids on precisely the same plan and involving the same thing or service. It is the opportunity to propose to furnish a certain thing or certain services at different prices that makes competition. This means in the final analysis that prices make competition. It is urged, however, in the particular instance presented by your inquiry that there may be no competition in price if the bidding is limited to a certain specific system adopted by the board of education in the plans and specifications advertised and to which or upon which bids must be confined. This claim is urged because of the fact that heating and ventilating systems are practically all under the patent laws of the United States and controlled absolutely by their owners and that each owner has his own particular price for his own system and that when a certain system is adopted there may be no competition in the price to be paid therefor. It is further claimed in support of this contention that the only competition available in case of the purchase of a heating and ventilating system by a board of education is in determining what system shall be adopted. As in the case of the purchase of an automobile, for instance, the only competition available to the purchaser is the choice of a machine in the first instance. When the merits of different machines are considered and the purchaser has determined what machine he will buy, there is no competition as to the price of that particular machine because the company making it controls the price in every section in which it is sold.

In the case of Ohio ex rel. v. The Board of Education of Toledo, Ohio, 14 C. C., page 15, this question was considered by the court and the following observations made in reference thereto:

> "The board, it seems to us, acted exactly right in advertising as they did advertise for bids, without any mention in the notice as to the kind of system they were going finally to adopt. They gave those interested in that question an opportunity to bid on any kind of an apparatus the individual or company owned, and to name a price to the board. The natural tendency of that kind of a notice would be to make the price so given, as low in amount as possible.
> "But after all, the board is not required to finally adopt a system whose owner has bid a sum lower for putting it into a public building than the owner of some other system. It can leave the question of determining finally, what system it will adopt, for consideration after all the bids are in. * * *
> "It is clear that these bids are not competitive bids in any sense of the word. To make them competitive, it must be averred that these systems are exactly alike and equally good. No averment of that kind is contained in the petition. They must have been so similar that when a party bid upon them he was bidding upon exactly the same basis as his competitor. * * * But for these things controlled by patents, the market is not free and open. It is controlled by a single owner. We know of no way in which the law can regulate that. We do not believe that you can control the discretion of the board of education to adopt the system after the bids are in, nor do we think it would be wise to do it. So long as it is the privilege of the inventor to secure from the United States government the right to his own inventions, and so long as the law protects him in that right, we see no object in saying, that because some other person has a different patent the owner of which bids a lower sum than the owner of this one, that the discretion of the board to adopt one or the other should be controlled nor do we think it can be."

A question very similar to the one under consideration arose in the case of Ampt v. City of Cincinnati, reported in 17, C. C., at page 516, which case was afterwards affirmed by the supreme court without report, 60 O. S., 621. This case grew out of a controversy over the letting of contracts for a water works system in the city of Cincinnati. The court in passing upon the right of the trustees to permit bidders to determine to a certain extent their own plans and details for the plant made this observation:

> "The machinery required for this work is only capable of being built by ten firms in the United States. Of these eight were bidders on this work. The difficulty that presented itself at once to the trustees in making exact drawings and specifications of every part, was this: Machinery of this magnitude has as yet not reached that state of perfection, and probably never will, where all builders build to any certain and fixed plan as to details. In this respect each builder has his own detailed plans, and no two are alike, and their tools and patterns are made to produce their own work after their own plans; therefore, if the detailed plans of this complicated work was to be given in all of its parts, the trustees were either compelled to adopt the plans of one of the concerns which had produced such work, or else get up a plan of the same kind of their own. It will be seen at once that the object of the law would be defeated if the board were to adopt the detailed plans of any one of the firms, for this would virtually destroy all bidding by firms other than the one whose plan was adopted, and place the trustees at the mercy of that firm. The price to the city would in all probability be much greater than it should be. This would destroy competition in bidding, the very thing the law was intended to bring about and this must not be except from necessity."

While the observations of the courts in the foregoing cases would seem to support the method suggested in your inquiry, yet in the case of Holbrook v. Toledo, 28 C. C., page 284, which was afterwards affirmed in 73 O. S., 400, without report, the question of the right of a municipality to limit bids for the construction of a street out of material owned and controlled exclusively by one company and covered by letters patent issued by the United States was expressly upheld. In other words, the court in that case, after a very elaborate review of all the authorities, reached the conclusion that, because under the advertisement for bids, no proposition could be made that did not involve the use of certain material which was the subject of a monopoly, this fact was not sufficient to invalidate the contract subsequently made with the company controlling this product. In commenting upon this phase of the case the court said:

"In the absence of any provision in the Ohio statutes that a city may not let just such a contract as has been let here, in the absence of any provision in this statute such as we find in the statute with reference to the city of Cincinnati, which was cited to us, containing the express terms upon which a patented improvement may be used, we are of one mind that we ought not to read into this law the restrictions and qualifications for which counsel for plaintiff contend. Wherever the exclusive right to a thing is owned or controlled, it has seemed to us that the people of a city ought not to be deprived of an opportunity to avail themselves of a useful and valuable thing simply because it is so controlled. * * * Not much encouragement would be given to the inventor of a patented pavement if his market were restricted to individuals, if municipalities were shut out of the number of purchasers of that which he has invented. Individuals do not ordinarily buy pavements. And the question then comes, whether it is public policy to discourage inventions along this line which in the end may inure to the highest benefit of the cities. We have passed through very many stages of bad roads; from the old clay roads, the corduroy and the plank roads, through the divers forms of pavement. Now we have the bitulithic pavement, which has been selected by this board of public service, and it has seemed to this court and to each member of it, that it is wise that the people who have organized themselves into municipalities should be free to avail themselves of every beneficent invention keeping pace with the world's progress."

The authorities heretofore presented are not irreconcilable and may in my judgment be said to support two methods of advertising under the statutes providing for competitive bidding and especially under the statute involved here. That is to say, a fair construction of the foregoing authorities will support the conclusion that a board of education may select a system for heating and ventilating in the first instance and confine all bids to that particular system, or it may under general specifications leave the field open to bids from the owners of all systems with the right to determine what system shall be adopted and the price to be paid therefor after said bids are opened.

This conclusion is supported by the case of State ex rel. v. The Board of Education of the City of Columbus, in the Franklin county common pleas court, which case is reported in the 20 Law Bulletin, page 156. In this case the defendant advertised for bids for plans and specifications for heating and ventilating the Central German, Park street and Second avenue school buildings of the city of Columbus. In response to this advertisement six bids were received, each bidder presenting his own plans and specifications and his own system of heating the various buildings named. The contract was awarded to a company from Toledo whose bid was the highest in price. A tax payer of the city of Columbus brought suit to enjoin the carrying out of this award upon the ground that it was not in accordance with law; that the company did not offer a separate bid for labor and materials and that its bid was not the lowest responsible bid. The court in passing upon this contention says:

"The court is not prepared to say this award is not in the interest of the public. The board awarded it to the highest bidder if we look only to the amount of money. The lowest bidder, however, means the lowest in reference to the thing bid for; it is not the price alone. The heating and ventilation of the school buildings is not alone a question of economy; it is a question as well of the health and comfort of the scholars committed to the care of the board. Smead is the lowest bidder for the thing he proposes to furnish. His is the lowest and only bid for the kind of apparatus selected by the board. The court takes judicial notice that there are various systems and methods of heating and ventilating buildings. The board selected the Smead system as the best. The statute is not to be construed so that the award must be made to the lowest bidder in price independent of utility, durability or the value of the apparatus. * * *

"The advertisement was broad and comprehensive enough to give every system an opportunity to come in and compete with every other. Unquestionably the board had a right to select from the various systems that one which was modern and which would best accomplish the objects desired. The board in making its advertisement, was required either to advertise for one system and run the risk of the objection that the advertisement was for one kind and exclude competitive bidding, or to advertise for plans and specifications for heating and ventilating certain buildings, and from the various kinds submitted award the contract to the apparatus in its judgment best adapted for the purposes intended—the board by the advertisement not determining the kind of apparatus before putting the various kinds of apparatus into competition.

"It was legal under section 3988, R. S. (said section now being section 7623, G. C., supra) to call for proposals for heating and ventilating certain school buildings without discriminating in the call for the kind of apparatus that would be selected, and the board had the legal right, in thus putting in competition the various systems, to select the system which, in its judgment, was most meritorious and to award the contract to the person who was the lowest bidder for the system thus selected. * * * The board might legally have confined in the advertisement the bidding to certain specified systems or specifications, but if it had done so, the best method would not have been adopted to secure the broadest competition and get the lowest responsible bids. The broader the competition the greater the number of those who will watch the proceedings and see that just awards are made and impartial judgments pronounced. * * *

"By section 3988, R. S., the board of education is vested with the discretionary power to determine what system of heating and ventilating shall be used in the public schools under its charge, and the board may exercise this discretion before the advertisement for bids is published or after the bids are opened. The case of Ross v. Board of Education, 42 O. S., 374, is not in conflict with this decision. But after the board has finally adopted a system and is proceeding to award the contract, the doctrine of Ross v. Board of Education applies and the lowest responsible bidder for the system thus adopted, if there be more than one bidder for such system, who has the lawful power to perform his undertaking, has the absolute legal right to have the contract awarded to him, unless the board in the exercise of its discretion rejects all of the bids."

The concluding clause of the foregoing quotation, in my judgment, states the law of this case. The board of education has the discretionary power to determine what system of heating and ventilating shall be placed in any school building and this discretion may be exercised either before or after bids are received for installing such system. If a choice of system is made before the advertisement for bids, the bidding of course will be confined to that system, but if the board does not desire to make a choice of systems until after the bids are opened, an advertisement containing general specifications which would permit bids being offered for the installation of any system, said system to be determined after the bids are opened, will in my judgment be clearly in harmony with the law and this conclusion is supported by the authorities above quoted.

In view of these considerations, the answer to your inquiry must be in the affirmative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

Since this opinion was prepared my attention has been directed to the case of Chamberlin v. Board of Education of Dayton, et al., decided by the court of appeals for Montgomery county, July 6, 1915, in which the method of advertising as suggested in your inquiry is approved.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—CONSTRUCTION OF NATIONAL ROAD BY THE H. E. CULBERTSON COMPANY—AN ESTIMATE FOR WORK NOT COVERED BY PREVIOUS ESTIMATE MAY BE ALLOWED UNDER FACTS SUBMITTED.

Upon the facts submitted, an estimate for work not covered by previous estimates may now be allowed to The H. E. Culbertson Company, under its contract for the construction of the national road in Muskingum and Licking counties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 24, 1916, relating to the contracts of The H. E. Culbertson Co., for the construction of the national road in Muskingum and Licking counties, which communication reads as follows:

"I respectfully direct your attention to your opinion to this department under date of June 19, 1915, in which you authorize the release by this department of part of the retained percentage of estimates due The H. E. Culbertson Company in the construction of the national road in Muskingum and Licking counties.

"Pursuant to your opinion, we released to the above named company $10,000.00 of the retained percentage on their Muskingum county contract, and $15,000.00 of the retained percentage on their Licking county contract, and an additional $10,000.00 on September 24, 1915.

"The last estimate paid the contractor was on December 10th, in the sum of $1,201.90 for work performed during the last half of November.

"Some work has been performed since December 1st, for which no estimate has been allowed the contractor.

"The highway department now has for expenditure under its direction $7,000.00 in the state treasury of Ohio and $11,000.00 in goverment vouchers. The sum of $22,000.00 is still retained by the federal government, and the government has never turned over its share of the released portion of retained estimates.

"The estimated cost of completing the work on the above contract is $13,300.00. The contractor now being in absolute need of funds with which to complete the work, I desire your advice in view of all the facts above, as to what payments may lawfully be made by me at the present time to the contractor, and as to what action may be taken looking toward a release of further United States government funds.

"For your information, I am attaching hereto a copy of letter from this department to Mr. L. W. Page, director of public roads, Washington, D. C., and a copy of his answer. This department has in its files a copy of the contract between the United States government and the state of Ohio with relation to the above improvement, and as same is quite voluminous, I am retaining it in my files, but shall be pleased to offer it for inspection by any representative from your department at any time."

The opinion of this department to which you refer, being opinion No. 515, was based upon your statement that the retained percentages on the Culbertson contracts amounted at that time to something less than $45,000.00, and that the contractor had appealed to you for a partial allowance from these retained percentages of approximately $25,000.00, to permit him or assist him in carrying on the work. On these facts you inquired as to what effect the release of a part of the retained percentages would have on the contracts and bonds for the completion of the work. You were advised that should you see fit to modify the original contracts and pay to the contractor a part of the retained percentages of the estimates already allowed, such action on your part would have no effect on the bonds given by the contractor. This opinion was based on the stipulation in the proposal and contract bonds to the effect that no changes, extensions, alterations, deductions or additions in or to the terms of the contracts should in any wise affect the obligation of the surety. The suggestion was made that should you see fit to pay the contractor a part of the retained estimates, it would be the part of wisdom to first obtain the formal written consent of the surety company signing the bonds and I understand that this was done. The opinion in question was directed only to the legal feature of the matter and it was expressly stated that the same should not be taken as in any way advising either for or against the wisdom of releasing any part of the retained estimates. In the preparation of the opinion referred to above, regard was had to the fact that the contract was one involving the expenditure of main market road funds and that there was no statutory provision whatever governing the matter of retained percentages. The only provision relating to retained percentages was found in the contracts and the modification of the terms of the original contracts did not conflict with any statutory provision.

In releasing retained percentages you have evidently proceeded upon the theory that you should retain at all times in the state treasury and in government vouchers an amount sufficient to complete the work in case of a default on the part of the contractor. While not directly involved in your inquiry, I am prepared to fully endorse your view in this respect. As a result of such view, you now have in the state treasury and in government vouchers, the sum of $18,000.00, while the estimated cost of completing the work is $13,300.00, thus leaving a balance of $4,700.00, which I am not prepared to say is too large, in view of the fact that owing to contingencies the cost of completing an improvement often substantially exceeds the estimate.

Your letter to Mr. L. W. Page, director of public roads, contains a statement of the facts set forth in your communication to me and a suggestion that the department of agriculture adopt a somewhat more liberal attitude toward the state of Ohio and its contractor, the H. E. Culbertson Co. In this connection it might be observed that the original contract between the state of Ohio and the department of agriculture is very indefinite as to the method of payment of that portion of the cost of the improvement to be met by the department of agriculture. By the terms of this agreement the state is to expend state and county funds amounting to not more than $320,000.00 in the manner provided in sections 1178 to 1231, of the General Code of Ohio and house bill No. 134, being the main market road law so-called. Payments from these funds can be made by the state only upon the approval of the department of agriculture. The department of agriculture agrees to devote $120,000.00 to the work in question, but the contract does not cover the method of disbursement applicable to this $120,000.00.

Charles H. Moorefield, United States highway engineer, was detailed to represent the department of agriculture in this matter and the following is a part of his instructions from the department of agriculture taken from a copy of the same found in the files of your department:

> "You are hereby authorized to order the payment of accounts in the improving of the designated post road in Licking and Muskingum counties, Ohio, from the local fund of $320,000 lying subject to my order in the treasuries of Licking and Muskingum counties and the state of Ohio. Accounts for which you are authorized to draw such orders will comprise all regular pay rolls, partial and final payments on contracts, bills for material and unexpendable equipment, rent, clerical services, and all other obligations which may be properly charged against the improvement of the designated post road in Licking and Muskingum counties, Ohio, according to the terms of the contract of March 23, 1914, between the state highway commissioner of Ohio and the department of agriculture.
> "These orders should be drawn in triplicate and the approved estimate, pay roll or statement of account ordered paid should be attached to the original order, and a copy of the approved estimate, pay roll or statement should be attached to the duplicate copy of the order which you will send to this office. Enclosed is a copy of the form which you are to use in making all orders."

Mr. Page's letter to you, referred to in your communication, contains the following statement:

"The fiscal regulations of the department of agriculture would in no case permit payments from the federal fund to be premised on the department's agreement with the state of Ohio, except as reimbursements for actual expenditures made by the state, pursuant to the terms of this agreement. This is in accord with an opinion already expressed by the department solicitor. It would be entirely permissible, however, for our engineer assigned to the project to consider the releases which your department has already made to the contractor from the retained percentage, in certifying vouchers for the government's share of future estimates. That is, the releases may properly be considered as applying on the estimates which are hereafter allowed the contractor, and the government's share of such estimates may be paid in advance of the actual payments by the state of the amounts called for in the estimates, provided the releases are sufficient to cover such amounts."

You will note that Mr. Page states that it would be entirely permissible for the engineer representing the department of agriculture to consider the release which the state highway department has already made to the contractor from the retained percentage, in certifying vouchers for the government's share of future estimates.

Referring now to your statement of facts, it appears that some work has been performed since December 1st, and that no estimate has been allowed the contractor for this work. I understand that this work is of the value of about $1,000.00. I suggest that the contractor might now be allowed an estimate covering this work performed since the last estimate was allowed and that upon the approval of the proper officials of the department of agriculture this estimate may be paid to him. If the contractor is now allowed an estimate of approximately $1,000.00 for work actually performed since the last estimate was allowed and paid to him, the effect will not be to reduce the margin of safety between the estimated cost of completing the work and the funds within your control below what it was at the time the last estimate was allowed and paid. In other words, if the margin between these two items was sufficient, at the time the last estimate was paid, to guard against contingencies, and if since that time $1,000.00 worth of work has been done, then if $1,000.00 is now paid to the contractor, the margin will still be sufficient for the reason that the cost of completing the work will have been reduced by $1,000.00. This course of action is free from danger, if it be assumed that a sufficient margin of safety between estimated cost of completion and funds within your control has been maintained in the past, and would seem to offer hope of needed relief from the department of agriculture in the way of reimbursement to the state to the amount of the department's proportion of retained percentages paid to the contractor. When this estimate has been allowed, strong representations should be made to the department of agriculture toward the release by that department and the forwarding to you in the form of government vouchers of the government's proportion not only of the amount of this estimate but also of the $35,000.00 in retained percentages previously allowed and paid to the contractor.

As I understand Mr. Page's letter, he is on record to the effect that it will be entirely permissible for the government engineer assigned to the project to consider the release of $35,000.00 heretofore paid to the contractor from retained percentages in certifying vouchers for the government's share of the estimate which it is now suggested may be allowed to the contractor. This being true, the engineer in certifying vouchers for the government's share would be allowed to consider total payments by the state of about $36,000.00, and since the government's proportion of the cost and expense is either exactly or approximately three-elevenths of the entire cost, it would seem that upon the payment to the contractor of an estimate approximating $1,000.00 and the calling to the attention of the officials of the department of agriculture, including the engineer assigned to the work, of the fact that the state, with the approval of the department of agriculture, has advanced to the contractor $35,000.00 out of retained percentages, then the department of agriculture would be authorized and indeed required by the terms of the agreement, as interpreted by it, to pay three-elevenths of an amount approximating $36,000.00, its payment to be between $9,000 and $10,000.

If the $18,000.00 now in the state treasury and in your hands in the form of government vouchers is depleted to the extent of $1,000, and then increased by a payment from the department of agriculture amounting to nearly $10,000.00, you will have within your control funds amounting to nearly $27,000.00, and will be in a position to make a further substantial advance to the contractor and still maintain an ample margin of safety between the estimated cost of completing the work and the funds directly under your control.

I suggest, therefore, that this course be followed and that representations along the line herein suggested be made to the department of agriculture and that efforts to secure relief from the present situation be at this time confined to the action above suggested.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO RELEASE, PRIOR TO FINAL COMPLETION OF CONTRACT, ANY PORTION OF PERCENTAGE REQUIRED TO BE RETAINED BY SECTION 1212, G. C.—MAY ALLOW AND PAY AN ESTIMATE UPON MATERIAL ONLY AFTER SUCH MATERIAL HAS BEEN INCORPORATED IN THE WORK.

1. The state highway department is not authorized to release, prior to the final completion of a contract in accordance with the plans and specifications, any portion of the percentage required to be retained by section 1212, G. C.

2. The state highway department is authorized to allow and pay to a contractor an estimate based upon material only after such material has been incorporated in the work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 10, 1916, which reads as follows:

> "I respectfully direct the attention of your office to the following portion of section 1212, General Code:
> "'No payment by the state, county or township, on account of a contract for any improvement under this chapter shall, before the completion of said contract, exceed eighty-five per cent. of the value of the work performed to the date of such payment. Fifteen per cent. of the value of the work performed shall be held until the final completion of the contract in accordance with the plans and specifications.'
> "I desire to know whether or not the above provision is mandatory, or if this department is authorized to release, prior to the final completion of the contract, any portion of the fifteen per cent. retained percentage under any circumstances.

"I also respectfully request an opinion from you as to the meaning of the words 'value of the work performed.' Is this department authorized to pay the contractor on estimates based upon material delivered on the site of the improvement and not yet incorporated in the work, or are we to allow estimates based only upon material in place?"

The part of section 1212, G. C., quoted by you, was manifestly intended by the legislature for the protection of the public. The chapter in which the section in question is found, relates to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department, and it is elsewhere provided in this chapter that in case the contractor does not carry forward his work with reasonable progress, or is improperly performing the same, or has abandoned or fails or refuses to complete his contract, the state highway commissioner is authorized to enter upon and construct the improvement, either by contract or force account, and pay the full cost and expense thereof, from the contract price unpaid to the contractor. In case there is not a sufficient balance to pay for the work, the state highway commissioner shall require the contractor or his surety to pay the cost of completing the work. It was the intention of the legislature, in providing for the retention of fifteen per cent. of the value of the work performed, to insure that under ordinary circumstances at least there would always be a sufficient balance of the contract price unpaid to the contractor to complete the work in case of a default on the part of the contractor, thus avoiding the necessity of a suit against the contractor and his surety. The legislature in framing the provision in question, was careful to include therein not only a limitation upon payments made to the contractor before the completion of the contract, but also an affirmative statement as to the amount which should be retained until the contract is finally completed in accordance with the plans and specifications.

It seems clear that the legislative purpose would be defeated if this statute were held to be merely directory, and in view of the fact that its provisions are designed for the protection of the public, and the further fact that the language used contains not only a statement of the rule which is to govern as to payments made, but also a statement of the converse of that rule, I am of the opinion that it must be regarded as mandatory, and that the state highway department is not authorized to release, prior to the final completion of a contract in accordance with the plans and specifications, any portion of the retained percentage.

You also inquire whether, in view of the use of the expression "value of the work performed," you are authorized to pay a contractor estimates based upon material delivered on the site of the improvement and not yet incorporated in the work, or whether you are authorized to allow estimates based only on material in place. It will be noted that the statute uses only the word "work," and makes no reference to materials furnished. It is obvious that despite this fact, an estimate may be based upon materials furnished under certain circumstances. In view of the fact, however, that the legislature in its enactment has referred only to "work performed," and has made no reference to materials furnished, I am of the opinion that the more strict of the two constructions suggested by you is the one that must be adopted, and that you are authorized to allow and pay to a contractor an estimate based upon material only after such material has been incorporated in the work. This construction will obviate the possibility of litigation with material men who might, upon a claim of fraud, seek to repudiate a contract with a person engaged in the construction of a road under the supervision of your department, and recover material delivered to such contractor. Aside from this consideration, however, the language used is not such as to warrant the conclusion that the legislature intended to authorize the allowance and payment of estimates, based upon materials delivered upon the site of the improvement but not yet in place, and upon or in connection with which no work has been performed by the contractor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF A NUMBER OF LEASES OF CANAL LANDS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 20, 1916, transmitting to me for examination the following leases of canal lands:

	Valuation.
The Edward H. Everett Co., of Newark, O., a portion of the north fork feeder to the Ohio canal	$4,000.00
The American Bottle Co., Newark, O., a portion of the north fork feeder, Ohio canal	2,000.00
Carrie Lane, Logan, O., a portion of the abandoned Hocking canal	100.00
Frank Wilson, Logan, O., portion of the abandoned Hocking canal	133.33
Thomas Braddock, Logan, O., portion of the abandoned Hocking canal	350.00
Edward Bishop, Logan, O., portion of the abandoned Hocking canal	100.00
Geo. W. Weeks and Frank A. Henne, Troy, O., portion of the Miami & Erie canal lands in Troy, O.	100.00
J. F. Courter, Logan, O., portion of the abandoned Hocking canal	133.33

I find these leases to be in regular form, and am therefore returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, VILLAGE OF MENTOR, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 28, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—RE:—Bonds of the village of Mentor, Ohio, in the sum of $21,000.00, bearing interest at 5½%, being forty-two bonds of the denomination of $500.00 each, payable one every six months, commencing September 1, 1916, and ending March 1, 1937.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of Mentor, relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code.

I am therefore of the opinion that the said bonds prepared in the form set forth in the ordinance authorizing the issuance, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of the said village of Mentor.

I enclose the transcript herewith. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW—CLAIM FOR COMPENSATION DUE AN INJURED EMPLOYE CANNOT BE COMPROMISED BY INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION BEFORE SUIT, ACTION OR PROCEEDING IS BROUGHT AGAINST EMPLOYER FOR COLLECTION OF SUCH COMPENSATION—SECTION 1465-74, G. C., CONSTRUED.

A claim for compensation due an injured employe from his employer by virtue of the provisions of section 27 of the Ohio workmen's compensation act, or General Code, section 1465-74, 103, O. L., 72, cannot be compromised by the Industrial Commission of Ohio before a suit, action or proceeding is brought against the employer for the collection of such compensation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 29, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following communication under date of January 24, 1916, from your department:

> "Enclosed herewith find two copies of the Supplemental and Amended Finding of Facts and Order issued by the commission in the case of Antonio Balbie v. Peter Praechter of Cincinnati, Ohio. This finding and order provides for the payment of compensation in the sum of $765.00, together with medical expenses amounting to $5.00. Since the employer has failed to make settlement within the time specified, the matter is placed in your hands for collection.
> "This claim is referred to you at this time instead of waiting until the first Monday in February, which is the usual time for certifications of this nature, because of the urgency of the case. In this connection, we are sending you herewith copy of letter received from S. S. Stewart, deputy in charge of our Cincinnati branch office, which is self-explanatory.
> "In the event you find it is advisable to effect a compromise of this claim, any suggestion you may make in this connection will be given prompt attention by the commission."

To your letter is attached a copy of the letter from Mr. S. S. Stewart, deputy in charge of your Cincinnati office, referred to in your communication, and which is as follows:

> "Antonio Balbie was in the office this morning and informed me that Peter Praechter, Balbie's employer, would not comply with the order issued by the commission, January 11, 1916, but would pay $500.00 in settlement of the claim. If such a settlement is not consummated, it is the employer's intention to refuse to pay anything and allow the claim to be certified to the attorney-general, and then insist upon the matter awaiting a review by the supreme court of Judge Bigger's decision relative to the constitutionality of section 27 of the act.

"I called Mr. Yaple by long distance and gave him the information the above conveys to you. He stated that he would ask the claims department to refer the matter to the attorney-general, and that the attorney-general's office would then take the matter up with me to determine whether or not the matter should be compromised. I write this to you in order that you may be informed as to the status of this case, and beg to ask that the claim be referred at the earliest moment possible in order that it may be closed, as Balbie has long been a charge upon his friends at Milford, and I am inclined to the opinion that the compromise is far better than to allow this matter to go to suit."

It will be noted in the above letter that Peter Praechter was the employer of Antonio Balbie who was injured in the course of his employment, and in whose favor an award of $765.00 as compensation was made, and that said Praechter, according to the information given to Mr. Stewart by Balbie, is willing to pay $500.00 in settlement of the claim. You ask my opinion in reference to the proposed compromise.

This claim arises under section 27 of the workmen's compensation act, or section 1465-74 of the General Code (103 O. L., 72), and I call your attention to the language used in the latter part of the section, which is as follows:

"Any suit, action or proceeding brought against an employer under the provisions of this section may be compromised by the board, or such suit, action or proceeding may be prosecuted to final judgment as in the discretion of the board may best subserve the interest of the persons entitled to receive such compensation."

This department, in a former opinion to your commission upon the question as to its right to compromise or settle a claim for compensation arising under the provisions of section 27, held that your commission did not have authority to compromise a claim before a suit or action had been brought. Therefore, adhering to our former holding upon this same question, it is my opinion that this claim cannot be compromised until a suit, action or proceeding has been brought against the employer. I would advise that your Cincinnati representative take the matter up with the employer, Peter Praechter, and if he will consent to the payment of $500.00 as compensation to this injured employe, that a petition may then be drawn and filed in the proper court, after which your board would have authority, under the provisions of the above quoted sections, to compromise the suit, action or proceeding brought against the employer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL MAINTAINING SECOND GRADE HIGH SCHOOL—PUPILS WHO ATTEND FIRST GRADE HIGH SCHOOL IN ANOTHER DISTRICT FOR FIRST THREE YEARS, AND ARE NOT GRADUATES OF A SECOND GRADE HIGH SCHOOL, ARE NOT ENTITLED TO HAVE TUITION PAID FOR FOURTH YEAR'S ATTENDANCE AT SAID FIRST GRADE HIGH SCHOOL BY TOWNSHIP BOARD MAINTAINING SECOND GRADE HIGH SCHOOL.

Pupils who have resided in a township rural school district maintaining a second grade high school and who have chosen to attend a first grade high school in another district for the first three years of the high school course rather than to attend the second grade high school in the district in which they reside, and who are not graduates of said second grade high school, are not entitled to have their tuition paid for the fourth year of their attendance at said first grade high school by the board of education of said rural school district maintaining said second grade high school.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 29, 1916.

HON. BENJAMIN OLDS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mt. Gilead, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of January 4th you request my opinion as follows:

> "Cardington village school board desires your opinion of the law upon the following statement of facts:
> "Cardington village maintains a first grade high school; Lincoln township maintains a second grade high school. Two pupils residing in Lincoln township have taken three years of the high school course in Cardington village school, and paid their own tuition for such time; they desire to take the fourth year and complete the course here, but insist that Lincoln township pay the tuition for the fourth year.
> "Is Lincoln township liable for this fourth year tuition under section 7748, R. S. of Ohio?
> "As you will observe, the statute provides for the payment by the township for the fourth year of graduates from their own school, and while these pupils have taken the full course of three years required for graduation from the Lincoln township school, they have not taken the course in that school.
> "Will you kindly give us your opinion as to whether the parents shall pay the tuition of these pupils for the fourth year, or whether Lincoln township is liable therefor?"

Pupils who are eligible for admission to high school, and who reside in a rural school district in which no high school is maintained, may attend a high school in another district, and section 7747, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 125, requires that the tuition of such pupils shall be paid by the board of education of the rural district in which they have legal school residence.

Section 7748, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 126, provides that:

> "A board of education providing a third grade high school as defined by law, shall be required to pay the tuition of graduates from such school residing in the district at any first grade high school for two years, or at a second grade high school for one year. Should pupils residing in the district prefer not to attend such third grade high school, the board of education of such district shall be required to pay the tuition of such pupils at any first grade high school for four years, or at any second grade high school for three years, and a first grade high school for one year."

Said section further provides that:

"Such a board providing a second grade high school as defined by law, shall pay the tuition of graduates residing in the district at any first grade high school for one year; except that, a board maintaining a second or third grade high school is not required to pay such tuition when the maximum levy permitted by law for such district has been reached, and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of the schools of such district."

It will be observed that under provision of that part of section 7748, G. C., as above quoted, where the board of education of a school district maintains a third grade high school as defined by law, a pupil eligible for admission to high school and residing in said district, may attend the high school maintained by said board of education for two years, or until such time as said pupil is graduated from said high school, and then said pupil may attend a first grade high school in another district for two years, or a second grade high school for one year, and the board of education of the district in which said pupil resides is required to pay the tuition of such pupil for such attendance in a first grade high school of another district for two years, or in a second grade high school of another district for one year, or said pupil may choose to attend the first grade high school of another district for four years, or the second grade high school of another district for three years, and a first grade high school for one year, and the board of education of the school district in which such pupil resides, is required to pay the tuition for such pupil for such attendance.

It will be observed, however, that under the further provision of said section 7748, G. C., as above quoted, the right of pupils residing in a school district which maintains a second grade high school, as defined by law, to attend the high school in another district, and have their tuition for such attendance paid by the board of education of the district in which they reside, is limited to graduates of such second grade high school who may attend a first grade high school in another district for one year, for the purpose of securing the fourth year of high school work, which has not been provided for by the board of education of their own district.

In any event the board of education of a school district maintaining either a second or third grade high school is not required to pay tuition for any of the pupils residing in such district attending high school in another district, when the maximum levy permitted by law has been made by said board of education, and all the funds so raised are necessary for the support of its schools.

Upon examining the provisions of the first part of section 7748, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 104 O. L., I find that the only material change made by the legislature in amending said section was to add to said part of said section the provision that:

"Should pupils residing in the district prefer not to attend such third grade high school, the board of education of such district shall be required to pay the tuition of such pupils at any first grade high school for four years, or at any second grade high school for three years, and a first grade high school for one year."

It was evidently the intention of the legislature in enacting the above provisions of sections 7747 and 7748, G. C., that all the pupils of the state should receive their school education as far as possible in the respective school districts wherein they have legal school residence, and to require each board of education to educate the pupils having legal school residence within its respective district, to the full extent of the course of study therein maintained, and not to throw the burden of educating such pupils onto boards of education of districts other than those wherein such pupils have legal school residence, until they have completed the full course of study provided and maintained by the boards of education in the respective districts in which such pupils reside.

It seems equally clear that it was the purpose of the legislature in amending said section 7748, G. C., in the manner above set forth, to raise the standard of high schools in the state by giving to pupils residing in districts maintaining third grade high schools the right to attend a high school of a higher grade, and have their tuition paid for the entire time of such attendance, and limiting this right in a district maintaining a second grade high school to the graduates of such school, who are only entitled to have their tuition paid in a first grade high school in another district for the fourth year of the high school course. Said amendment will have the effect of encouraging boards of education maintaining third grade high schools to comply with the necessary requirements of the statutes governing high schools of the first or second grade.

Inasmuch as the above limitation in a rural school district maintaining a second grade high school would work a hardship on a pupil living in a village or city district maintaining a first grade high school, who has completed the elementary school course and a part of the high school course, and whose legal residence has been transferred to such rural district, before the completion of said high school course, the latter part of said section 7748, G. C., as amended provides that:

"A pupil living in a village or city district who has completed the elementary school course, and whose legal residence has been transferred to a rural district in this state before he begins or completes a high school course, shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges of a resident pupil of such district."

As I understand this latter provision of the statute it gives to such pupil the right to attend a first grade high school in another district for one year, and to have his tuition paid for such year by the board of education of the rural school district to which his legal residence has been transferred and which maintains a second grade high school.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question that the pupils referred to in your inquiry who have resided in a township rural school district maintaining a second grade high school, and who have chosen to attend a first grade high school in another district for the first three years of the high school course, rather than to attend the second grade high school in the district in which they reside, and who are not graduates of said second grade high school, are not entitled to have their tuition paid for the fourth year of their attendance at said first grade high school, by the board of education of said rural school district maintaining said second grade high school. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

OHIO SOLDIERS AND SAILORS HOME—FUNDS OF DECEASED INMATES—HOW DISPOSED OF—ADMINISTRATOR OR EXECUTOR SHOULD BE APPOINTED.

Funds belonging to deceased inmates of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home in the hands of the treasurer of the home should be paid to the administrator or executor of the estate of such deceased inmate upon the the appointment and qualification of such administrator or executor.

Claims cannot be maintained by the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home for the maintenance of deceased inmates against their estates.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 29, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have yours under date of January 17, 1915, with which is enclosed correspondence relative to the disposition of funds in the hands of the treasurer of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, belonging to the estate of Robert McKissick, deceased. It is stated in this correspondence that Robert McKissick was admitted to the home December 10, 1911, and died there December 25, 1915, leaving in the hands of the treasurer of the home certain funds, claim to which is now being made by alleged relatives and heirs at law of the deceased. Upon this statement you make inquiry as to the proper procedure of your board and the custodian of the funds mentioned.

Assuming that the deceased died intestate, attention is directed to section 10604, G. C., which provides:

> "Upon the death of an inhabitant of this state, letters testamentary, or letters of administration on his estate, shall be granted by the probate court of the county in which he was an inhabitant or resident at the time he died. When a person dies intestate in any other state or county, leaving an estate to be administered within this state, administration thereof shall be granted by the probate court of a county in which there is any estate to be administered. The administration first lawfully granted, in the last mentioned case, shall extend to all the estate of the deceased, within the state; and exclude the jurisdiction of any other court."

Upon the appointment and qualification of an administrator of the estate of the deceased according to the provisions of sections 10604 and 10618, G. C., the treasurer of the home should pay over to such administrator all the money in his custody and possession belonging to the deceased, and take a receipt from such administrator therefor. The funds and estate of the deceased may then be regularly and lawfully paid out to creditors of the estate, and the remainder, if any, after payment of the cost of administration and lawful claims of creditors, may then be distributed among the heirs at law, if there be any.

It is further suggested in your communication that your board contemplates making claim against the estate of the deceased, Robert McKissick, for his maintenance for the four years during which deceased was an inmate of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home.

Section 1815, G. C., provides as follows:

"All persons now inmates of, or hereafter admitted into, a benevolent institution, except as otherwise provided in this chapter, and except as otherwise provided in chapters relating to particular institutions, shall be maintained at the expense of the state. They shall be neatly and comfortably clothed, and their traveling and incidental expenses paid by themselves or those having them in charge."

An examination of the chapter in which this section appears in the General Code will disclose that the exceptions to the provisions of section 1815 therein contained are limited to persons committed to the Longview Hospital, the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics, the Institution for Feeble-Minded (Sec. 1815-1, G. C.), and patients at the Ohio State Sanatorium (Sec. 1815-13, G. C., 106 O. L., 559).

No provision of the chapter of the General Code relating to the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, being sections 1905 to 1918, G. C., inclusive, in any way modifies or limits the provisions of section 1815, G. C., supra, nor am I aware of any statutory provision elsewhere which would operate to modify or limit the provisions of said section.

The language of section 1815, G. C., supra, places beyond question the obligation of the state to maintain the inmates of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, in the absence of a contrary provision elsewhere to be found, except as to their clothing, traveling and incidental expenses.

It would therefore follow that without statutory authority therefor the officers of the home could not make lawful claim against an inmate or his estate for reimbursement of the state for the expense of maintaining an inmate in said home, beyond such expense as had been incurred for clothing, traveling or necessary incidentals.

I am therefore of opinion that claim against the estate of Robert McKissick for maintenance during the time he was an inmate of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, other than for expense of furnishing necessary and proper clothing, of traveling and of necessary incidentals, could not be maintained by the officers of the home or the state board of administration.

It is not deemed improper to suggest, however, that under the provisions of section 10714, G. C., the funeral expenses of the deceased, together with the costs of administration, are made first in the order of payment of the claims against the estates of deceased persons.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

VILLAGE COUNCIL—FAILURE TO MAKE AN APPROPRIATION FOR SALARY OF ITS MEMBERS—SUCCEEDING COUNCIL CANNOT ACT.

If a village council refuses or neglects to make an appropriation for the salary of its members, or at least to pass a resolution authorizing the payment of such salary, none of the members of said council have an enforcible claim against the public funds of the village, and mandamus would not lie to require a succeeding council to appropriate therefor.

Unless a village council during its term by a resolution or appropriation authorizes the payment of the salary of its members at the rate of two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year, the members of such council have no claim, either legal or moral, against the village, and any succeeding council would be without power to make an appropriation therefor, and it would be the duty of the village clerk, if the succeeding council attempts to provide for such payment by appropriation, to refuse to draw his warrant therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 29, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of December 21, 1915, you request my opinion upon the following questions:

1. "If a village council refuses or neglects to make appropriation for the salaries of its members, for an entire year, or any appropriation period, have the members, who attended at least twenty-four meetings in a fiscal year, an enforcible claim against the public funds of the village, and would mandamus action lie to require the succeeding council to appropriate for such back salaries?

2. "If you should hold that said salaries are not enforcible obligations against the revenues of the succeeding year, are they such moral obligations as an appropriating body may provide for in making the appropriations for the ensuing year, or half year, and may the village clerk, if council provides therefor by appropriation, refuse to draw his warrant under the authority vested in him by section 4285, General Code?"

Section 4219, G. C., relates to the powers of the council of a village and provides:

"Council shall fix the compensation and bonds of all officers, clerks and employes in the village government, except as otherwise provided by law. All bonds shall be made with sureties subject to the approval of the mayor. The compensation so fixed shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which any officer, clerk or employe may have been elected or appointed. Members of council may receive as compensation the sum of two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year."

While the foregoing section fixes definitely the amount of salary that may be drawn by a member of a village council, it leaves the question of whether or not council are to receive that salary optional with council. In other words, unless council authorizes the payment of a salary by resolution or appropriation, then the salary provided for in section 4219, G. C., may not be paid.

In the case of Walker et al., v. Dillonvale, 82 O. S., 137, the second branch of the syllabus reads as follows:

> "Section 197, Municipal Code, as amended in 1914 (97 O. L., 118), fixes the compensation of a member of council of a village at two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year, and it is not necessary that it should have been fixed by an ordinance, passed before the commencement of his term of office, but the council may authorize its payment by a resolution passed after the services have been renderd."

It will be noted that the court holds in this case that the statute itself fixes the amount of the salary for which council may authorize payment by resolution.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that if the village council refuses or neglects to make an appropriation for the salary of its members, or at least to pass a resolution authorizing the payment of such salary, none of the members of council have an enforcible claim against the public funds of the village, and mandamus would not lie to require a succeeding council to appropriate therefor.

I am further of the opinion in answer to your second question, that unless a village council, during its term by a resolution or appropriation, authorizes the payment of the salaries of its members at the rate of two dollars for each meeting, not to exceed twenty-four meetings in any one year, that the members of such council have no claim, either legal or moral, against the village, and that any succeeding council would be without power to make an appropriation therefor. Further, it would be the duty of the village clerk, if the succeeding council attempts to provide for such payment by appropriation, to refuse to draw his warrant therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APROVAL OF CERTAIN LEASES OF CANAL LANDS AT CLEVELAND, DAYTON AND LOGAN, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 31, 1916.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 26, 1916, transmitting to me for examination the following leases of canal lands:

The American Steel & Wire Co., Ohio canal lands near Cleveland, Ohio	$3,885.00
The Davis & Sherer Co., of Dayton, Ohio, lot in the city of Dayton, Ohio	3,333.33
Rachel L. Wolfe, Logan, Ohio, abandoned Hocking canal lands at Logan, Ohio	250.00
Minnie C. Wright, Logan, Ohio, abandoned Hocking canal lands at Logan, Ohio	166.66

I find these leases to be in regular form, and am therefore returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY NOT BORROW MONEY TO PAY FIXED EXPENSES ANTICIPATING EXHAUSTION OF APPROPRIATION FOR GENERAL COUNTY FUND—SALARIES OF COUNTY SURVEYOR AND ASSISTANTS.

Money may not be borrowed by county commissioners to pay the fixed expenses of the county in anticipation of the exhaustion of the appropriation for the general county fund for the fiscal half year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 31, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter enclosing a communication addressed to the bureau by the auditor of Ashland county, in which he presents the following question on which my advice is requested by you:

> "The salaries and compensation of the county surveyor and his assistants provided for by the highway code of 1915, and particularly by section 138 thereof (106 O. L., 612—therein designated as section 7181 of the General Code), and payable 'out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officials are paid,' imposed, upon the going into effect of said act, a burden upon the general county fund, from which by virtue of section 2989, of the General Code, the salaries of 'other county officials are paid,' not contemplated when the levy for such fund was made in the year 1914 (the proceeds of which constitute the existing fund) nor when the levy for such fund was made in the year 1915 (the proceeds of which will constitute said fund for the year beginning March 1, 1916). In some counties these additional expenditures, together with those anticipated and provided for, will cause the early exhaustion of the general county fund, unless such exhaustion can be avoided.
> "May money be borrowed under section 5656 of the General Code, in order to avoid this result?"

Section 138 of the Cass highway law, 7181, G. C., 106 O. L., 612, referred to in the letter submitted, fixes the salary of county surveyors and provides that:

> "Such salaries shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salaries of other county officials are paid."

In the same section it is further provided that:

> "In the event the county highway superintendent cannot properly perform all the duties of his office, the county commissioners shall fix the aggregate compensation to be expended for assistants by the county highway superintendent during the year. Such compensation shall be paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as the salary of county officials is paid."

The manner of payment of the salary of county officials is prescribed by section 2989, G. C., as follows:

> "Each county officer herein named shall receive out of the general fund of the county the annual salary hereinafter provided, payable monthly upon warrant of the county auditor."

The payment of assistants of the county highway superintendent is required to be made from the same fund and in the same manner as the salary of the county surveyor, so that, for the purposes of the present consideration, the salary of the county surveyor only need be referred to.

By virtue of the statutory provisions above quoted, there was on and after September 6, 1915, at which time the Cass highway law became effective, created by operation of law a liquidated obligation of the county, payable monthly out of the general county fund on the warrant of the county auditor.

There is, however, imposed by law further conditions precedent to the auditor's drawing a warrant upon funds in the county treasury.

Section 5649-3d, G. C., provides as follows:

> "At the beginning of each fiscal half year the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a of this act, shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, from the moneys known to be in the treasury from the collection of taxes and all other sources of revenue, and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget, nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances."

Among the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a, as above referred to, is the board of county commissioners.

By the specific terms of section 5649-3d, all expenditures from the county treasury are limited to the purposes set forth in the budget, and the amount for each of said purposes fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances. The purposes referred to in section 5649, G. C., are, to my mind, identical with those purposes mentioned in section 5649-3a, wherein it is provided that:

> "Such annual budget shall specifically set forth:
> (1) "The amount to be raised for each and every purpose allowed by law for which it is desired to raise money for the incoming year."

The purposes here referred to are manifestly those purposes for which the taxing authorities mentioned in that section are authorized to levy taxes and create funds. That is to say, such purposes as the county fund, the poor fund, the blind relief fund, the soldiers' relief fund, the judicial fund, the bridge fund, the interest and sinking fund, and perhaps others which might be mentioned. The commissioners are then not required to set forth in the county budget the amount to be raised for each and every purpose, more in detail than to state the aggregate amounts desired to be raised for each of the several funds for which they are authorized by law to levy a tax.

Applying this conclusion then to the provisions of section 5649-3d, G. C., supra, the semi-annual appropriations are thereby limited only to the aggregate amount to be raised for each particular fund for which a levy is lawfully made. From this it follows that the only limit upon appropriations from the general county fund is the aggregate of that fund that is fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances, and it matters not that the commissioners have chosen to subdivide such aggregate in the preparation of the budget. Such aggregate sum when so appropriated, or so much thereof as is in the aggregate appropriated, is available for the payment of any expenditure authorized to be paid out of the fund from which the appropriation is made. That is to say, the county commissioners are not limited in their expenditures from appropriations of general county funds, by reason of the enumeration of subdivisions of that fund in the preparation of the county budget.

It was their duty to make, and it is assumed that at the beginning of the fiscal half year at the regular meeting of the county commissioners in September, 1915, the board made an appropriation from the general county fund for the payment of those anticipated expenditures lawfully paid out of said fund for the current fiscal half year. That appropriation then became available for the payment of all such expenditures, and particularly for the payment of those fixed expenses such as officers' salaries and all those other county obligations which arise and become liquidated by operation of law. It was the duty of the county commissioners, in making such appropriation, to provide for all such fixed expenses, and it is now their further duty to so limit the miscellaneous or contingent contract expenditures of a county from such fund as to retain sufficient of such appropriation to discharge all fixed expenditures imposed by law.

In other words, the appropriation made in September for general county purposes, was then available for the payment of the salary of the county surveyor as well as that of other county officers, notwithstanding the commissioners had not specifically mentioned the county surveyor in the budget submitted in June, 1914, and notwithstanding the county surveyor was not specifically mentioned in such appropriation, and it is the duty of the commissioners and county auditor to so limit other expenditures out of that appropriation during the current fiscal half year as to leave a sufficient amount thereof to pay the salary of the surveyor as well as all other fixed expenses.

It therefore follows that until the total appropriation for county purposes for the fiscal half year is exhausted, the county auditor should draw his warrant upon the county treasurer monthly for the salary of the county surveyor. Occasion for borrowing money for this purpose could not arise at least until the appropriation for county purposes for the fiscal half year has been totally exhausted.

While it is manifestly the purpose of section 5649-3d, G. C., supra, to keep within the limits of taxation the current expense of political subdivisions, it is as clearly not its purpose to delay or to in any way interfere with the payment of the obligations, which become liquidated claims with the lapse of time, by operation of law. The force and effect of its operation is, then, to place a limit upon the incidental or miscellaneous contract expenditures for the fiscal half year, as well as to make imperative the duty of disbursing officers to reserve such portion of the appropriation as will be necessary to discharge all fixed expenses for the fiscal half year when the same shall become due.

It is not anticipated that county commissioners will so disregard their duty in this matter as to allow the appropriation for general county purposes to be so depleted as to be insufficient to discharge the fixed expenses payable from that fund.

I am, therefore, of opinion that money may not be borrowed under section 5656, G. C., to pay the salary of the county surveyor and assistants of the highway superintendent, provided in section 7181, G. C., 106 O. L., 612, under the facts stated in the above inquiry.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, CITY SCHOOL DISTRICT, ZANESVILLE, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 31, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—RE: Refunding bonds of the city school district of Zanesville, Ohio, in the amount of $30,000.00, being sixty bonds of $500.00 each, dated February 5, 1916, bearing interest at rate of five percentum per annum, and falling due six each year beginning February 5, 1922.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of the said city school district of Zanesville, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above bonds, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds, when prepared in accordance with the resolutions authorizing their issuance and properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of the said city school district of Zanesville, Ohio.

As no copy of the bond and coupon form which the board of education proposes to use is attached to the transcript, I suggest that when said bonds are presented for delivery you submit them to me for approval as to form and execution.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE OF EDISON VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICT, MORROW COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 31, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—RE: Bonds of Edison village school district, Morrow county, Ohio, in the sum of $18,000.00, to secure funds to pay the cost of constructing an addition to the school building, being thirty-six bonds of $500.00 each, dated September 1, 1915, falling due as follows: Bond No. 1, September 1, 1917; bond No. 2, September 1, 1918, and thereafter one bond on the first days of March and September of each year until September 1, 1935.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of the Edison village school district relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, also the bond and coupon form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds drawn in accordance with the form presented, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said village of Edison. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—WHEN CONTRACTOR ACCEPTS PAYMENT IN FULL ON FINAL ESTIMATE—CANNOT LATER CLAIM INTEREST FROM TIME PAYMENT SHOULD HAVE BEEN MADE AND WAS MADE.

If contractor accepted payment in full on final estimate on work done for city after period for payment therefor under contract had expired, he is not thereafter entitled to claim interest from period between time payment should have been made and was made, unless contract so specified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 31, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 21, 1915, you submitted to me the following inquiry:

> "On the 16th day of May, 1911, the city of Akron, Ohio, entered into contract with E. McShaffrey & Son, to grade and pave Cuyahoga Falls avenue in said city. The work was completed on June 28, 1912, and was accepted within thirty days thereafter. The final estimate was paid to McShaffrey & Son, on January 15, 1914, which said McShaffrey & Son accepted without any claim being made for interest on the amount of said final estimate.
> "Question. Is said contractor at this time entitled to interest on the amount withheld from him through delay of the city officials in issuing said final estimate?"

The general principle of law relative to the recovery of interest on contract is stated in 22 Cyc., page 1570, as follows:

> "While in a number of cases interest is stated generally to be an incident of the debt, apparently without regard to the distinction between interest as damages and contractual interest, the proper distinction is that where interest is payable by virtue of a contract, it is an integral part of the debt, as much so as the principal debt itself; but where it is recoverable as damages it is merely an incident to the principal debt, and follows the principal as such incident, until it is separated and set apart in some manner as a particular debt."

And as corollary thereto it is stated at page 1572 of the same volume of Cyc.:

> "Where interest is provided for by contract the payment of the principal debt will not defeat the right to recover accrued interest by a subsequent suit. But where interest is recoverable only as damages, and payment of the principal as such is made and accepted, no interest can be recovered, the payment of the debt extinguishing the right to recover interest thereon."

Under such heading the author of the article cites the case of Graveson v. Odd Fellows' Temple Co., 4 O. N. P., 112, the syllabus of which is as follows:

1. "Interest is of two kinds: (1) That which is given by reason of the contract providing for the same. It is a substantive part of the debt, as much so as the principal, for both were contracted for. (2) That which is given by way of damages and is incidental to the debt.

2. "Where the interest is contractual, the acceptance of the principal by the creditor does not bar the right to recover the interest; but where the interest is given by way of damages, the acceptance of the principal is a waiver of the right to recover interest.

3. "The above principles are not affected by our statutes relating to interest which in the main are intended to fix the rate of interest."

In the above cited case the facts were very similar to the facts in the case submitted by you. We can assume without any hesitation the fact to be that there was no provision in the contract that the final estimate was to draw interest after the same was due, at a particular rate.

The case of Electric Co. v. Toledo, 13 O. D., (N. P.) 137, recognizes the principle above stated, but differentiates the facts on the ground that the payment of the contract price for the lights, at stated times, was made in partial payments, and that, therefore, interest was to attach on failure to pay the amount at the stated time, and payments as made could be applied as payments of interest and partial payments on principal.

See also Stewart v. Barnes, 153 U. S., 456, and note found under such case in 38 L. Ed., 791.

But in the case submitted by you I understand the fact to be that the final estimate was paid in full at a particular time, without mention being made of interest, and was received as full payment of the final estimate.

Such being the case, the payment so made was made solely on the principal, and the debt being extinguished there would be no claim for damages by way of interest.

Answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that the contractor, having received the final estimate in full, is not at this time entitled to claim interest on the amount between the time that the final estimate should have been paid and the time when it was paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—CONTRACTOR IS ENTITLED TO INTEREST ACCRUING ON GUARANTY FUND, IF IT IS SO STIPULATED IN CONTRACT.

Contractor is entitled to interest accruing on guaranty fund, if it is so stipulated in the contract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, January 31, 1916.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 21, 1915, you submitted the following inquiry:

"Stanton avenue, of the city of Akron, Ohio, several years ago was improved under a contract which contained sections 28 and 85, quoted in the letter of Mr. Scott Kenfield, assistant city solicitor, of Akron, submitted herewith. The three per cent. (3%) guarantee retained by the city for two years under said contract, is now more than a year over due.

"Question 1. If no demand has been made by the contractor, should the city auditor issue his warrant for interest accruing on and after the expiration of the two years when said guarantee fund was, under the conditions of the contract, to be paid to said contractor?

"Question 2. Would the fact that the director of service, through the engineering department, has not certified to the city auditor, after the expiration of the two-year period, that said improvement was in good condition, and that the contractor was entitled to the 3 per cent. guarantee fund retained, prevent the recovery of interest accruing after the expiration of the two-year period?"

The sections of the contract to which you refer, to wit: Sections 28 and 85, are as follows:

"Section 28. There will be retained by the city from the amount due upon the contract, a sum of money as a deferred payment, equal to three per cent. of the cost of the improvement, which amount will be retained as a guaranty upon the part of the contractor that the workmanship and materials furnished under these specifications are in all respects first class, as herein provided, and that the improvement will remain in good and sound condition for and during the entire period of two years from and after its completion and acceptance as indicated by the engineer, in writing, on the final estimate, and in the case of special repair work to the end of the term of the guaranty.

"In case the contractor shall make all the repairs, renewals and special repairs which may become necessary under and by virtue of this contract and guaranty, and shall leave said improvement in good and sound condition at the expiration of said guaranty as required by said director of public service and to his acceptance, or if the said pavement, curbing, gutters, sidewalks or catchbasins shall remain in good and sound condition to the acceptance of said director, and for the full time of said guaranty, without such repairs being necessary thereon, then at the expiration of said term of guaranty, said amount together with all accrued interest and dividends thereon, if not withdrawn, less any expense which the city may have incurred necessarily in connection therewith, shall be returned to said contractor as full payment for any balance due on said contract and improvement, as herein provided."

"Section 85. Payment for the work herein specified to be done will be made in the following manner and upon the following conditions:

"The director of public service will cause approximate estimates to be made monthly by the city engineer, of the amount, in his opinion, of the work done, or acceptable materials delivered on the ground, as specified under the contract. Ninety (90) per cent. of the contract price of said work, after deducting former payments from said ninety (90) per cent., will be paid in cash within five days after said estimate has been duly approved by the director of public service and filed with the city auditor, but the making of any such estimates, or any payment made thereon, shall not be taken or construed as an acceptance by the city of any work so estimated. The ten (10) per cent. of the amount of the monthly estimates remaining unpaid, will be retained by the city as a guarantee that the contractor will faithfully and completely fulfill all obligations and conditions imposed by the contract and specifications, and any damages caused to the city by reason of any failure on the part of the contractor to fulfill all the conditions and obligations herein contained. Within thirty days after the completion of the work as above specified, and its acceptance by the director of public service, the director of public service will cause the city civil engineer to make a final estimate of all the work done, and the full amount of said final estimate will be paid, less any amounts paid on monthly estimates, less amount retained to complete work according to the provisions of these specifications, and any or all damages or moneys paid by the city by reason of said contractor having failed to carry out faithfully and completely all the obligations and requirements herein contained."

It is fully apparent from the provisions of section 28 of the contract, that it was in contemplation of the parties that the money was the property of the contractor after the final acceptance of the work, and was simply retained by the city during the period of two years as a guaranty fund.

Such being the case, it should not profit at all by the retention of said fund, but all moneys earned on said fund while the same is in the hands of the city belong to the contractor, less the expense which the city may have incurred during the time that it retained said fund.

Answering your first question, therefore, I am of the opinion that should the city auditor determine that the guaranty fund has been increased by way of accrued interest and dividends while the same was in his hands, he should turn the same over to the contractor, whether demand has been made or not, less any expense which the city may have incurred necessarily in connection with the improvement and the retention of the fund.

The above answer to your first question applies as well to your second question. If the city auditor has paid over the principal amount of the guaranty fund, but has failed to turn over the accrued interest thereon he still has in his hands money belonging to the contractor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ORDER, STATE BOARD OF HEALTH, RELATIVE TO WATER SUPPLY, SEBRING, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed you will find an order of the state board of health to the City Water Works Company, of Pittsburg, Pa., in regard to the water supply of Sebring, Ohio, said order to become effective when you have approved the same.

This order is identical with the order of the state board of health issued August 24, 1914, and concerning which a hearing was had in your office on November 18, 1915, except that the time within which the water purification plant is to be completed has been changed to eighteen months from the date upon which this order is signed by the governor and attorney-general.

I have approved the same and, under the provisions of section 1252, of the General Code, the same is now transmitted for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ORDER, STATE BOARD OF HEALTH, POLLUTION OF MUD RUN BY SEWAGE FROM VILLAGE OF HUBBARD, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed you will find an order of the state board of health relating to the pollution of Mud Run by sewage from the village of Hubbard, Ohio, said order to become effective when you have signed the same.

I have conferred with the state board of health, and learn that said order is identical with the order submitted to the council of sail village of Hubbard, and declared by said council to be satisfactory, and one with which the village could reasonably comply, and concerning which further hearing was waived by said council.

I have approved the same under the provisions of section 1251 of the General Code, and the same is now transmitted for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF COLUMBUS—JUDGES NOT AUTHORIZED TO RETAIN FEES FOR SOLEMNIZING MARRIAGES—PAID INTO CITY TREASURY.

Judges of the municipal court of the city of Columbus are not authorized to retain the legal fee of $2.00 collected by them for solemnizing marriages. Such fee should be collected by the clerk of the municipal court and paid into the city treasury as other fees and costs collected by him.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of January 21, 1916, in which you request my opinion as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"May judges of the municipal court of the city of Columbus, Ohio, retain the legal fee of $2.00 for solemnizing marriages, or would they be required to pay the same into the city treasury?"

Section 1746 of the General Code, provides that a justice of the peace may receive a fee of $2.00 for "marrying and making return."

Section 1558-51 of the General Code (106 O. L., 366), prescribing the original jurisdiction of the municipal court of Columbus, Ohio, provides in part as follows:

"The municipal court shall have and exercise original jurisdiction within the limits of the city of Columbus as follows: * * *

"9. The right to perform marriage ceremonies * * * and perform any other duties now given or that may be conferred upon justices of the peace. * * *"

It is to be noted from the language just quoted that the right to perform the marriage ceremony is made an official act of the municipal court rather than the prerogative of the several individuals constituting that court.

Under section 1558-85 of the General Code, (106 O. L., 378) the municipal court of Columbus is, by reference, given authority to tax the same fees and costs as are justices of the peace for like services. Therefore, the proper fee for performing a marriage ceremony by the municipal court of Columbus is $2.00, as stated in your letter.

Section 1558-48 of the General Code, (106 O. L., 366) fixes an annual salary for the judges of such municipal court, and it must be concluded that this salary is intended as compensation for all official acts or for all services performed under the command or authority of the municipal court act.

Section 1558-79 of the General Code, (106 O. L., 375) prescribing the duties of the clerk of such municipal court is, in part, as follows:

"* * * He shall pay over to the proper parties all money received by him as clerk; he shall receive and collect all costs, fees, fines and penalties, and shall pay the same monthly into the treasury of the city of Columbus, and take a receipt therefor, except as otherwise provided by law; * * *"

As above stated the right to perform the marriage ceremony is a part of the section conferring original jurisdiction upon the court. For such services a fee of $2.00 is authorized, and no distinction should be made or different rule should apply in the collection and disposition of the fees for performing the marriage ceremony than is made and applied in the collection and disposition of fees and costs charged and collected for any other official act.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the judges of the municipal court of the city of Columbus, Ohio, are not authorized to retain the legal fee of $2.00 for solemnizing marriages, but that the same should be collected by the clerk of said court and paid into the city treasury as other costs and fees.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

OHIO SOLDIERS AND SAILORS HOME—PROBATE COURT OF ERIE COUNTY, OHIO, HAS JURISDICTION TO APPOINT ADMINISTRATOR OR GUARDIAN OF ESTATE OF DECEASED INMATE OF SUCH HOME.

Jurisdiction to appoint an administrator of the estate of a deceased inmate of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home who entered said home with the intention of making same his permanent place of abode, and who dies while in said home, is vested in the probate court of Erie county, Ohio, and no other court in the state has such jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of such an inmate of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home at Sandusky, Ohio, under section 11011, G. C., providing for the appointment of a guardian of a person incapable of taking proper care of himself by reason of intemperance, improvidence or habitual drunkenness, and section 10989, G. C., which provides for the appointment of a guardian for an insane person or imbecile, is likewise vested in the probate court of Erie county, Ohio.

The above rules are general and subject to change upon consideration of specific facts in a particular case.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On December 15, 1915, you requested my opinion as follows:

> "Herewith is respectfully submitted the request for an opinion on certain legal points which frequently appear in the performance of the duties of the treasurer of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, Sandusky, Ohio.
> "This request for the opinion was forwarded to this board at the suggestion of General Burnett, commandant of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, and is respectfully referred to your department."

Enclosed with your communication is a letter directed to your board by Hon. A. A. Pomeroy, of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home Hospital, Sandusky, Ohio, in which he states that, as a matter of administrative convenience and expediency, a department has been created at said Soldiers' and Sailors' Home Hospital, with the approval of the board of administration, to take charge of certain financial interests of the inmates of said hospital, in the way of assisting disabled patients in properly signing pension checks and depositing the same to their credit in bank, etc.; and that at the death of said inmates the treasurer pays legitimate funeral expenses from any balance to the credit of such deceased inmate, or the expense of embalming, etc., in case the remains are to be shipped to a former place of residence for interment, and distributes the balance remaining to the legal heirs.

This department is designated, in the communication, as the "Treasury of the State Soldiers' and Sailors Home Hospital," and it is stated that Mr. A. A. Pomeroy is acting as the treasurer, having given bond in the sum of $10,000.00.

It is further stated that confusion arises from "the appointment of administrators and guardians by probate courts of other counties in the state of Ohio, who apparently believe they have jurisdiction over the estate of a resident or citizen of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, in Erie county, said citizen having lived twelve or more consecutive months in said county and having died in said county.

This petition is based upon section 1, Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, 4867, Page and Adams Annotated Code. * * *

1. Is Erie county, in which such asylum is located, the lawful place of residence of such disabled soldiers and sailors, all of whom were national soldiers?

2. If so, have probate courts in all other counties in the state of Ohio the jurisdiction which qualifies them to issue letter of administration over the estates of such citizens who die in Erie county?

3. Have probate courts of all other counties than Erie, in which said asylum is located, lawful right to issue letters of guardianship over a resident of Erie county, such resident being physically unable to appear before the court in another county which is asked to grant said letters of guardianship?

4. In order to legally qualify, is it possible or advisable to have a state law enacted giving the board of administration authority (without expense to the heirs) to name the treasurer of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home Hospital a temporary or public administrator of the funds in his custody only, to enable him to settle the debts of those who leave legal heirs, paying the funeral expenses, such as embalming the remains for shipment to the place of interment, and proper division of any remainder to the legal heirs?"

I observe from the statement of Mr. Pomeroy that balances in the hands of the treasurer of the home hospital to the credit of deceased inmates at the time of their death, are disbursed by the treasurer in the payment of funeral expenses or expenses of embalming, etc., and the residue distributed to legal heirs. While no question is asked in regard to this, I beg to suggest, in this connection, that the statutes clearly contemplate the appointment of administrators for the settlement of estates of persons dying intestate and fail to provide any lawful way of settling such estates or making distribution to beneficiaries otherwise than through the executor or administrator, and there is no provision of law, when the identity of the deceased is known, authorizing the payment of funeral expenses or expenses of embalming, or any other distribution of funds, except by the executor or administrator of such estate, and any such payments made by the treasurer are made at his own risk and subject him to liability to account for the money so paid out, to any person able to show better title thereto. With this observation, which is made for your consideration and the consideration of Mr. Pomeroy, I will proceed to answer the questions asked.

Section 4867, of the General Code, to which Mr. Pomeroy refers, is only applicable to homes or asylums under the control of the federal government and, therefore, has no application to the home at Sandusky.

The appointment of administrators of the estates of deceased persons is provided for in section 10604, G. C., which is as follows:

> "Upon the death of an inhabitant of this state, letters testamentary, or letters of administration on his estate, shall be granted by the probate court of the county in which he was an inhabitant or resident at the time he died. When a person dies intestate in any other state or country, leaving an estate to be administered within this state, administration thereof shall be granted by the probate court of a county in which there is any estate to be administered. The administration first lawfully granted, in the last mentioned case, shall extend to all the estate of the deceased, within the state; and exclude the jurisdiction of any other court."

Especial attention is called to the use of the word "resident" in this section. Not only is there no limitation of time, but the word is used interchangeably with the word "inhabitant." The only question to be determined, therefore, in the application of the foregoing section is whether or not the deceased at the time he came into the county did so with the intention of making it his permanent place of abode and, if so, such residence for any length of time, however short, would give the probate court of that county jurisdiction to appoint an administrator of his estate.

It must be remembered, however, that section 10617, G. C., gives the right of administration to residents of this state in the following order:

"1. To the husband or widow of the deceased;
"2. To one or more of the next of kin of the deceased;"

and in the absence of any voluntary action by such persons to accept or decline said administration, they must be cited before the court for that purpose. If such persons decline or are incompetent and unsuitable to discharge the trust, or if without sufficient cause they neglect to take such administration, then one or more of the principal creditors of the deceased, if such there be, are entitled to administer the estate. If there be no such creditors and the estate exceeds the value of one hundred dollars, the court may appoint any person it deems fit to administer the estate. Your attention is directed to these provisions of the law that you may understand that the right to appoint an administrator in Erie county does not necessarily give the administration of the estate to a resident of said county.

Section 11011 of the General Code, provides in part as follows:

> "Upon satisfactory proof that any person, resident of the county wherein the application is made, is incapable of taking proper care of himself or herself, or of his or her property, or neglects or fails to provide for his family, or for other persons whom he is charged by law to provide for, by reason of intemperance, improvidence or habitual drunkenness, the probate court forthwith shall appoint a guardian * * *."

The word "resident" in this section is also used without any express limitation of time, and its meaning is the same as in section 10604, G. C., supra.

The appointment of a guardian for an insane person or an imbecile is provided by section 10,989, G. C., which requires that such person shall be a resident of the county, or have a legal settlement in some township thereof. Insofar as these provisions may apply to inmates of your institution they must, in my opinion, be limited to the provision requiring residence, and not to that requiring a legal settlement. This is so because of the peculiar circumstances under which they live at your institution. In view of these circumstances they could not establish a legal settlement in any township in Erie county, unless such settlement was established before they entered your institution. Therefore, the requirements of residence may be considered to be the same under the law providing for the appointment of guardians of insane persons or imbeciles, as they are under the section providing for the appointment of guardians of improvident persons, insofar as said laws may apply to the appointment of guardians of inmates of your home.

It follows, from the foregoing observations, and you are so advised, that jurisdiction to appoint administrators of the estates of deceased inmates of your home is vested in the probate court of Erie county, if said inmate is an inhabitant or resident of said county, as herein explained, at the time he dies; and that jurisdiction to appoint guardians for improvident or insane inmates of your home is vested in the probate court of Erie county, if such persons have established a residence at said home, as herein explained.

The rules above laid down are general, and are subject to change by the facts in a particular case. For this reason care must be used in the application thereof, and if any question is raised or doubt exists, the specific facts should be submitted for further advice.

Admission to the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home is regulated by section 1909 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "All honorable discharged soldiers, sailors and marines who served the United States government in any of its wars, and have been citizens of Ohio one year or more at the date of making application for admission, who are unable to support themselves, and not entitled to admission to the national military homes, or cannot gain admission thereto, and all soldiers of the National Guard of Ohio who heretofore have lost, or hereafter may lose an arm or leg, or his sight, or may become permanently disabled from any cause, while in the line and discharge of duty, and are not able to support themselves, may be admitted to the home under such rules and regulations as its board of trustees adopt."

One of the conditions of admission to the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, prescribed by section 1909, supra, is the inability of the applicant to support himself, which, in itself, is only consistent with a purpose to adopt such home as his permanent place of residence.

Mr. Pomeroy's inquiry pertains particularly to cases of soldiers or sailors who die at the home after a residence there for twelve or more consecutive months, and it may be said in all such cases, and in fact as a general rule, in view of the conditions for admission to the home, that in the absence of an affirmative showing of an intention to remain at the home only temporarily, with a purpose to return to a former home after such temporary residence, the residence of the inmates of such Soldiers' and Sailors' Home is to be regarded as Erie county, and, therefore, the jurisdiction in the matter of appointment of administrators of the estates of such deceased inmates, and in the appointment of guardians of any such living, as provided in section 11011, supra, is in the probate court of Erie county.

Answering your several inquiries specifically, therefore, I advise:

As to your first inquiry, that Erie county is to be regarded as the county of the residence of inmates of the Soldiers' and Sailors' home, at Sandusky, in the absence of an affirmative showing of mere temporary residence at the home with an intention of returning to a former place of residence;

As to your second and third inquiries, that probate courts of other counties of the state have no jurisdiction to issue letters testamentary, or letters of administration, upon the estates of deceased inmates of the Sandusky home, who have established their residence at said home, nor to appoint guardians of such inmates, whose residence at such home is established;

As to your fourth inquiry, suggesting legislation empowering the board of administration to name the treasurer of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home Hospital a temporary or public administrator of the funds of deceased inmates, remaining in his custody at the time of their death, I would say that, aside from difficulties in making such a provision conformable to constitutional requirements, it seems to me that it would impose obligations upon the officer not essential to the accomplishment of the paramount purpose of the legislation under which the home is maintained, which might be found burdensome, and that perhaps a more adequate and expeditious method of adjusting the rights and claims of all persons against such assets in the hands of the treasurer would be by having recourse to the provisions of the law for the appointment of an administrator, who, in proper cases, may be the treasurer of the home hospital, if such course is found expedient by the probate court.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—FUND CREATED PRIOR TO GOING INTO EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW FOR "PIKE REPAIR"—MAY BE USED FOR REPAIR OF COUNTY ROADS OR INTERCOUNTY HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT.

A fund created by the county commissioners prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law for "pike repair" purposes may now be used either for the repair of county roads or for meeting the county's proportion of the cost of an intercounty highway improvement carried forward under the supervision of the state highway department.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1916.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On January 10, 1916, you forwarded to me a copy of a resolution passed by the county commissioners of Noble county December 23, 1907. This resolution recited the fact that at the time the law establishing the state highway department was enacted, there had been constructed in Noble county permanent highways of standard width as therein provided, said highways consisting of sixty miles of macadam construction. The resolution contained an agreement on the part of the commissioners to levy on the first day of June, 1908, on the county duplicate, a tax of nine mills for the repair of the improved roads in said county, and to use the proceeds of said levy, together with the state aid apportionment to said county, for the repair of the improved roads of the county, as provided in the then existing law relating to the state highway department. The resolution further directed the county auditor to make formal application to the state highway department for the amount of state aid apportioned to the county for the year 1908. You stated in your communication of January 10, 1916, that the fund derived from the levy referred to in the resolution in question was denominated the "pike repair fund" and that every year since that time a levy has been made and the proceeds thereof credited to such fund and that there is at the present time something like $4,000.00 to the credit of this fund. Further information contained in your communication of January 10th is that the commissioners have designated the roads mentioned in said resolution as county roads, that demands are now being made that the money in the fund be used on the roads mentioned in the resolution and that it be used for intercounty highway construction; that the macadam roads mentioned in said resolution are still in existence and the commissioners have no other road fund except a fund for compensation and damages in the establishment of roads. You inquire in your original communication to me whether any of this fund may be used in conjunction with state aid for the construction of intercounty highways. Replying to my request for further information, you advised me under date of January 28th, that the journal of the county commissioners of Noble county shows the following levies for the "pike repair fund," which fund now contains about $4,000, and in the proper disposition of which you are interested:

"June 2, 1908—Under section 31, act passed May 9, 1908, state and county improvement fund, nine-tenths mills (.9).
"June 9, 1909—State aid or pike repair, nine-tenths mill.
"June 7, 1910—Pike repair, nine-tenths of one mill.
"June 12, 1911—Under section 1224 pike repair, .33.
"June 5, 1912—Pike repair fund, .33.
"June 3, 1913—Pike repair, .30.
"June 1, 1914—Pike repair, .30.

The levy made in 1908 was made under section 31 of the then existing law relating to the state highway department. The levy made in 1909 contains a reference to state aid and also a reference to pike repair. The levy made in 1910 was made for pike repair purposes and the levy made in 1911 is the only other levy containing any reference to the law relating to the state highway department. The 1911 levy was made under the section authorizing a levy for the creation of the state and county road improvement fund and the only purpose specified in that section and for which the proceeds of a levy made thereunder might be used was the improvement of state and county roads. Since 1911 the levies have been made for pike repair purposes and it is impossible to determine the section of the General Code under which the levies were made, as there were in existence during this period several sections of the General Code under which it may have been intended to make the levy.

You express the view that it may have been the intention of the county commissioners to follow the sections of the Code relative to state aid improvements through their various amendments, repeals and re-enactments. While this may be true, there is nothing on the commissioners' journal in connection with the levies made in 1912 and subsequent years, from which such intention might be gathered.

In addition to the inquiry contained in your first communication as to the right to use the fund in question in conjunction with state aid for the construction of intercounty highways, you inquire in your second communication as to the right to use this fund for the repair of pikes in the county that do not conform to the requirements of the state highway department for state highways and for the purchase of equipment to be used in connection with such repair. You state that the pikes enumerated in the resolution of the county commissioners first herein referred to do not conform to the standard required by the state highway department but that they are county roads and are in a condition requiring immediate attention in the way of repairs. You also desire to know whether the fund in question may be transferred or whether it is a special levy that cannot be transferred in case it be determined that the same cannot be used for the repair of county roads.

In view of the fact that beginning in 1912 the fund in question has been sustained and replenished by levies made for pike repair purposes and of the further fact that during these years the commissioners in making the levy in question made no reference to the state highway department or its activities, I am of the opinion that there can be no doubt as to the right of the county commissioners to use this fund for the repair of any county roads within the county.

I desire to call your attention to the provision of section 205 of the Cass highway law, section 1212, G. C., being one of the sections relating to road work carried forward by the state highway department, to the effect that the proportion of the cost and expense of construction, improvement, maintenance or repair payable by the county, township and property owners, shall be paid from any funds in the county treasury available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of roads, bridges and culverts within the county and not otherwise specifically appropriated. While the Cass highway law provides a specific levy for the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the county's proportion of work carried forward by the state highway department, yet it seems clear that under the provision of section 1212, G. C., such payment may be made not only from the fund produced by the specific levy provided by section 1222, G. C., but may also be made from any fund in the county treasury available for road construction, improvement, maintenance or repair not otherwise specifically appropriated. In this respect the Cass highway law is not different from the statutes relating to the activities of the state highway department in force prior to September 6, 1915.

I therefore conclude, in answer to your specific questions, that the fund referred to by you may be used for the purpose of repairing either the county roads referred to in the resolution of the county commissioners, adopted December 23, 1907, or any other county roads within the county, and for purchasing material and equipment for use in such repair work should the county commissioners determine to proceed by force account; or the fund in question may, at the option of the county commissioners, be used in meeting the county's proportion of the cost of an intercounty highway improvement carried forward under the supervision of the state highway department.

This conclusion renders it unnecessary to discuss the further question of a transfer of funds suggested by you. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—CONTROLS CITY SCHOOL DISTRICT—JANITORS OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS IN CLASSIFIED SERVICE—CLERKS OF BOARDS OF EDUCATION IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE.

The civil service commission of a city has control and supervision of the city school district in which said city is located.

Janitors of school buildings are in the classified service under the provisions of section 486-8, subdivision b, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 418.

State ex rel. v. Witt, 3 O. App., 419, and may be appointed only as provided by the law relating to appointments in such service.

Clerks of boards of education are in the unclassified service by virtue of the provisions of paragraph 8 of section 486-8, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 404.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 1, 1916.

HON. DON. C. PORTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Coshocton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 8, 1916, submitting the following inquiries:

> "1. The city school district embraces quite a large amount of territory outside of the limits of the boundary of the city of Coshocton, Ohio. Therefore, is the board of education under the control of the city civil service commission or the state civil service commission?
> "2. The city board of education having by resolution on the first day of the school year, 1915, employed its janitors for the term of one year at a salary to be paid to each of them monthly, can the board of education after January 1, 1916, issue their orders for the payment of said janitors under their contract without the janitors first taking a civil service examination?

"3. Is the clerk of the board of education under the classified or the unclassified list of employes?"

It is provided in section 486-19, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 413, that the mayor or other chief appointing authority of each city shall appoint three persons who shall constitute the municipal civil service commission of such city and of the city school district in which such city is located. It is further provided in said section that such municipal commission shall prescribe, amend and enforce rules not inconsistent with the provisions of this act for the classification of positions in the civil service of such city and city school district. It is also provided in said section that said municipal commission shall have and exercise all other powers and perform all other duties with respect to the civil service of such city and city school district, as is prescribed and conferred upon the state civil service commission with respect to the civil service of the state in the civil service law of which said section is a part.

By reason of the foregoing provisions of said law the municipal civil service commission of the city of Coshocton, Ohio, has control and supervision of all positions in the civil service in the city school district named in your first inquiry.

Referring now to your second question, the positions of the janitors named therein, not being specifically included in the unclassified service, are included in the provisions of section 486-8, subdivision (b), G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 418. This classification is in harmony with the opinion of the court in the case of State ex rel. v. Witt, 3 O. App., 419. It follows, therefore, that said janitors may be appointed only as provided by the law relating to appointments in the competitive class. If, however, no eligible list exists they may be provisionally appointed as provided by section 486-14, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 409. If they are so appointed as provisionals the board of education may issue its orders for the payment of their salary as provided by their contracts; otherwise they may not legally be paid.

In answer to your third question I must advise that clerks of boards of education are in the unclassified service by virtue of the provisions of paragraph 8 of section 486-8, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 404.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

NOTICE OF SALE OF SALOON LICENSE AS A WHOLE UPON ORDER OF PROBATE COURT—PUBLICATION ACCORDING TO SECTION 10700, G. C.

Notice of the sale of a saloon license as a whole upon the order of the probate court, under section 1261-52, G. C., 103 O. L., 231, is required to be given by publication according to the provisions of section 10700, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 2, 1916.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a request for an opinion addressed to me by Mr. Henry G. Hauck, assistant prosecuting attorney of your office, which is as follows:

"We are writing requesting your opinion as to the meaning of section 37 of the Ohio liquor license code, which provides 'that if a license or interest therein shall pass by descent or otherwise to one who cannot qualify, or if a survivor or relict or child or children shall not in the time prescribed elect to assume decedent's interest in the license or if said survivor or relict, etc., as the case may be, does not comply with the terms fixed by the court, the probate court shall order the license as a whole sold, without delay but after proper notice given by publication, and shall order the proceeds distributed,' etc.

"Our inquiry relates to the meaning of the phrase 'without delay but after proper notice given by publication.'

"Does the publication referred to in section 37 of the act mean 'the fifteen days' notice by publication of some newspaper in general circulation throughout the county, as prescribed in section 10700 of the General Code, which prescribed the terms and manner under which executors and administrators are authorized to sell personal property of decedents?' If section 10700 of the General Code governs, then every saloon or retail liquor license belonging to decedents must be sold at public auction as prescribed by section 10700 aforesaid.

"If the publication referred to in section 37 is not the publication mentioned in section 10700, kindly give us your opinion as to what publication is meant.

"The probate court is called upon almost daily to act in the matter of transferring or ordering the transfer of licenses and is frequently called upon to sanction transfers of private sales thereof and we should therefore respectfully urge you to hasten your opinion in the matter."

That part of section 37 of the license law, section 1261-52, G. C., 103 O. L., 231, first to be considered in answering your inquiry, is as follows:

"Upon the death of a licensee or of any person who has an interest in a license, such as a partner or member of an association of persons or otherwise, the interest of the decedent shall be disposed of by the administrator or the executor under the direction of the probate court without delay. The surviving member or partner, members or partners (or if there be no survivors in interest then the relict of the deceased, or if there be no relict then the child or children), paying to the said administrator or executor such an amount and upon such terms as the court may direct, shall have the right to assume the interest of said decedent providing that notice is given of such intention to the probate court within thirty days after the death of the decedent. If a license or an interest therein shall pass by descent or otherwise to one who cannot qualify under the law as licensee, or if the survivor or relict or child or children, as the case may be, shall not in the time prescribed elect to assume said decedent's interest in the license, or if said survivor or relict or child or children, as the case may be, does not comply with the terms fixed by the court, the probate court shall order the license as a whole sold, without delay but after proper notice given by publication, and shall order the proceeds distributed to the survivors in the ownership of the license, if there be such and the executor or administrator of the decedent, according as their interest may appear, providing, however, that the purchaser of the license shall be duly qualified under the law, and provided further that the said purchaser shall have filed the application required by law of an original applicant for a license.

"If all the conditions have been complied with, and if the applicant is qualified by law, the county licensing board shall, upon proper certificate from the probate court and without fee, transfer the license to the purchaser thereof for the remainder of the license year. The said purchaser shall have all the rights and obligations of the original licensee under said license."

It will be observed that the provisions of said section 1261-52, G. C., supra, above quoted, relate only to licenses and interests therein and in no way are applicable to other property or rights of the decedent, either real or personal. That is to say, the provisions of this section do not apply to the saloon itself, the fixtures, stock in trade or other property of the decedent, whether personal or real or otherwise, and all such other property of the decedent must be disposed of and distributed according to the general statutory provisions governing the administration and disposition of the estates of deceased persons.

The inquiry submitted assumes the existence of all the conditions precedent, necessary to the authority of the probate court to order the license to be sold as a whole and inquiry is made as to what constitutes "proper notice given by publication" as required in that part of section 1261-52, G. C., above quoted.

There is not to be found in the license law specific provision as to the time and manner of such publication. It is further provided by said section 1261-52, 103 O. L., 232, however, that:

"In all cases the court shall, before ordering a sale or an assumption of a license, appoint three appraisers to appraise said license and the interest of the licensee therein, which said appraisers shall be sworn to appraise said interest according to its true value. Any creditor of the deceased or of the owner of the license shall have all rights with reference to the appraisement or sale and the distribution of the assets as any creditor has with reference to any personal property left by any decedent. No license shall be sold or assumed for a sum less than two-thirds of the appraisement. When the articles of partnership in force at the death of a partner, or when the will of a deceased licensee or co-licensee provides for a different mode of settlement of the deceased person's interest from that provided for herein or dispenses with appraisement and sale, or either, then the interest of the deceased shall be settled in accordance with said articles of said will, and appraisement or sale may be dispensed with providing the disposition is otherwise in accordance with law.

"So far as applicable, and so far as is not inconsistent herewith, the laws of Ohio concerning the disposition of the personal estate of a deceased person shall be applied."

Since it is not otherwise specifically provided as to the manner of publication of the notice of sale of a saloon license, I see no inconsistency as between the provisions of the statutes for such sale here under consideration and the laws concerning the disposition of the personal estate of deceased persons. The statute governing the sale of personal property of deceased persons is found, as pointed out in the inquiry submitted, in section 10700, G. C., which provides in part as follows:

"The sale of personal property shall be made at public auction after at least fifteen days' notice has been given in some newspaper in general circulation throughout the county, or by advertisement set up in at least five public places in the county where such sale is to take place, though for good cause the court may extend the time for sale."

It will be noted that the notice required to be given in the matter under consideration is limited by section 1261-52, G. C., supra, to notice by publication.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that where a saloon license is ordered to be sold as a whole by the probate court, notice of such sale should be made by publication according to the provisions of section 10700, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT, BOND ISSUE BY CITY OF MIDDLETOWN, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 2, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—RE: Bonds of the city of Middletown, Ohio, in the sum of $9,703.10, issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of both sides of Sycamore street from Armco avenue to the south corporation line of Middletown, both sides of Michigan avenue from Walnut street to Yankee road, both sides of Bellemonte avenue from Third street to North street, and the south side of Armco avenue from Garfield avenue to Walnut street, by the construction of cement sidewalks, curbs and gutters, being twenty bonds,—ten of which are in the denomination of $500 each, and ten in the denomination of $413.70 each, bearing interest at the rate of five percentum per annum, and falling due two each year beginning January 1, 1917, and ending January 1, 1926.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the commissioners and other officers of the city of Middletown relative to the issuance of said bonds; also the bond and coupon form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the city charter of Middletown and with the provisions of the General Code of Ohio.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds drawn in accordance with the form submitted, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said city of Middletown.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE BOARD OF EMBALMING EXAMINERS—FAILURE TO PAY RENEWAL FEE IN SPECIFIED TIME—SECTION 1343, G. C., CONSTRUED.

Upon receipt of proper fee therefor, after the date fixed by the Ohio State Board of Embalming Examiners for the payment of same, said board should issue a renewal of license, unless the failure to pay said fee within the prescribed time was due to a wilful intent to violate the law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 2, 1916.

The Ohio State Board of Embalming Examiners, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 13, 1916, asking my opinion received and is as follows:

"It has been the custom of the state board of embalming examiners to require renewals of embalmers' licenses on or before January 1st of each year, and each and every year there are several of the embalmers who fail to renew by the payment of the $1.00 fee provided by statute within the time specified, and the question arises as to whether or not our board may after January 1st, accept the $1.00 fee and thus renew the license for the current year.

"On March 4, 1909, Hon. U. G. Denman rendered an opinion (see attorney-general's report for that year, page 404), wherein he construed section 1343, and held that upon failure of a license embalmer to pay the sum of $1.00 annually for the renewal of his license on or before the date fixed by the board, it is not within the power of the board to restore the license after such failure except by examination.

"On August 12, 1911, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, then attorney-general, affirmed the opinion of Mr. Denman (see attorney-general's report for 1911, page 902).

"On March 21, 1912, in a letter to the then secretary of our board, Mr. Hogan reached the conclusion in regard to certain parties, that our board would be fully authorized to issue a renewal of license in the cases mentioned without examination, since there was no attempt on the part of any of the parties to wilfully violate the laws or the rules as established by the board.

"It is because of the said letter that I ask your opinion."

Also your letter of January 25, 1916, enclosing a copy of a renewal card issued by your board for the year 1916, and which you state is a replica of the cards used by the board for a number of years. Said card is in the following form:

"No. Class.

"---------- ----------

"The Ohio State Board
Embalming Examiners.

"This certifies that----------
---
paid one dollar for the RENEWAL OF---------- EMBALMER'S LICENSE for the year ending Dec. 31, 1916.

"ATTEST: H. H. Shaw,
"Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 1, 1916. Secretary."

Section 1343, G. C., provides as follows:

> "If the state board of embalming examiners finds that the applicant possesses a good moral character, and has passed a satisfactory examination in such subjects, it shall register such applicant as a duly licensed embalmer. The license shall be signed by the president and secretary of the board and attested by its seal. The person to whom a license is issued shall register it with the board of health of the city, village or township in which he proposes to practice. He shall also display such license in a conspicuous place in his office, and annually thereafter on or before the date fixed by the state board, pay to the secretary thereon one dollar for its renewal."

An examination of the records of your board shows that at the first meeting of the state board of embalming examiners held July 7, 1902, the following resolution was adopted:

> "It was moved by W. M. Bateman that all licenses issued herein upon affidavit or by examination, do expire on the 31st day of December of each ensuing year after 1902. Adopted."

As stated by you, Hon. U. G. Denman, then attorney-general, construed the provisions of section 1343 supra, in an opinion dated March 4, 1909, and held the same mandatory, and that the board had no authority to renew a license after the date fixed by the board therefor. Said opinion was concurred in by my predecessor, Hon. T. S. Hogan, in an opinion dated August 12, 1911, cited by you in your letter.

The above opinions, however, were modified by Mr. Hogan in a letter to the secretary of your board, dated March 21, 1912, to which you call attention, in which Mr. Hogan considered certain specific cases submitted by your board, in which renewals had not been consummated in the specified time.. The following is quoted from the letter:

> "Feeling as I do that the granting of a renewal of license to the above named parties would not in any way be detrimental to public interest or harm any one in so doing, and feeling further that the rule as laid down by my predecessor, Mr. Denman, is somewhat drastic, in its operation, I desire to say that in my opinion your board would be fully authorized to issue a renewal of license in the above mentioned cases as it would appear from an examination of the facts, that there is no attempt on the part of either of the parties to wilfully violate the laws or the rules as established by your board."

While section 1343, supra, authorizes the board to fix the date for renewals, which authority has been exercised by the board, as above set out, and while such fact has been conveyed to the licensees by the renewal cards issued to them each year, as above set out, said cards stating that the licenses will expire on the 31st of the following December, yet in view of the fact that the legislature has seen fit to place in the board some discretion in determining the date for renewals, I am of the opinion that the language used by Mr. Hogan in the letter above quoted, is properly applicable to the general question submitted by you, and that it was not the intention of the legislature that another examination should be required where the renewal fee was not paid at the time fixed by the board in cases which came within the rule there laid down.

Specifically answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that your board should issue a renewal of license upon receipt of the fee therefor after the date fixed by the board, unless the board finds as a matter of fact that the failure to pay the fee within the prescribed time was due to a wilful intent to violate the law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—OFFICIAL BONDS OF MUNICIPAL OFFICERS MADE PAYABLE TO MUNICIPALITY ARE NOT INVALID—MAY BE MADE PAYABLE TO STATE OF OHIO.

Official bonds of municipal officers made payable to the municipality are not thereby rendered invalid, either as to the claim of the public or of a private person injured by reason of a breach thereof by the officer giving the same.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 3, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Sometime ago I received from you the communication hereinafter set forth, which has not been answered sooner because of my inability to get any authoritative report of the case to which you refer. It was not until very recently that I secured the transcript hereinafter mentioned. Your communication is as follows:

> "Several years ago a damage suit was filed against the marshal of the village of Convoy, Van Wert county, Ohio. The common pleas court of said county held that all bonds of municipal officers should be made to the state of Ohio, as provided in section 6 of the General Code, and that the sureties on the bond of said marshal were not liable on said bond, for the reason that it was made payable to the village of Convoy. We find no provision in the municipal code that specifically provides that bonds of municipal officials shall be made payable to the city, or the village, as the case may be, but Ellis' Municipal Code, and other municipal authorities, in their form of official bonds, state that the same is payable to the city or the village.
> "If the decision of the common pleas court of Van Wert county is the law in the case, it is vastly important that the prevailing practice be corrected. Therefore, we ask your written opinion as to whether such bonds should be made payable to the state of Ohio for the use of the city or village, or is it sufficient that the same be made payable to the city of ----------, or village of----------? In other words, do you concur in the opinion of the common pleas court of Van Wert county?"

The case to which you refer is the unreported case of John Kienzel v. Charles Ingmire, as marshal, etc., et al., heard in the common pleas court of Van Wert county sometime during the year 1904. I have only been able to secure from the stenographer, who was present at the trial thereof, a partial transcript of the opinion of the court and of the further proceedings in the case which are, of course, subject to the infirmity of not being officially approved as the judge who heard the case died several years ago.

It appears from the transcript that a suit was instituted by the plaintiff against the defendants upon the official bond of the defendant Ingmire, as marshal of the village of Convoy, for an alleged malicious prosecution and false imprisonment. It appears further from the transcript that the official bond, upon which said action was predicated, when offered was not admitted in evidence by the court. It does not appear clearly from the opinion of the court in this connection upon what ground said bond was excluded. The court in said transcript is quoted as saying:

> "I think it has always been the law of Ohio that where an official bond is required, and the statute is silent as to the payee of the bond, the bond must be given to the state of Ohio, and when the state is thus made payee all persons within the state may avail themselves of its benefits if there is a breach of its condition."

But again in ruling upon the competency of said bond the court is quoted as saying:

> "It does not appear that any ordinance was ever enacted in that village prescribing the amount of the bond to be given by the marshal of that village, and until they do that and until the mayor accepts the bond, then there is no bond. It is possible the omission to accept it might not invalidate the bond, but a failure to pass an ordinance prescribing the amount of the bond would surely not permit a bond to be given in the absence of such ordinance and bind the obligors of the bond. So I think before the bond is admissible it must first be made to appear that the village passed such an ordinance, and that the bond complied with that ordinance."

While it appears that the bond in this case was made payable to the village of Convoy, in view of the foregoing remarks of the court, I am not satisfied to accept as official the claim made that the sureties on said bond were released because it was made payable to the municipality. Upon the refusal of the court to admit the bond in evidence there was nothing before the court upon which the action could proceed against the sureties. Their dismissal then was the inevitable result of the ruling out of the bond. If, however, the fact that this bond named said municipality as the obligee contributed to the conclusion the court reached in holding the bond was not operative, I am not willing to accept said conclusion as the law. If this fact induced the court to hold that the bond was not valid and binding against the sureties, such result must have been reached by reason of the provisions of section 6 of the General Code, which are as follows:

> "A bond payable to the state of Ohio, or other payee as may be directed by law reciting the election or appointment of a person to an office or public trust under or in pursuance of the constitution or laws, and conditioned for the faithful performance, by such person, of the duties of the office or trust, shall be sufficient, notwithstanding any special provision made by law for the condition of such bond."

This section may have been construed as exclusive in that it provides that a bond payable to the state of Ohio, when no other payee is directed by law, and which recites the election or appointment of a person to an office of public trust, shall be sufficient. I cannot construe this section as having that effect. I do not think that it goes to the extent of invalidating official bonds not payable to the state of Ohio when no other payee is directed by law. While it is true that the statutes do not direct the official bonds of municipal officers to be made payable either to the municipality or to the state of Ohio, and that therefore they may properly be made payable to the state under the foregoing provisions of said section, yet I am not ready to admit that in the event they are made payable to the municipality they are thereby rendered invalid.

In the case of Barret v. Reed, 2 O., 409, the validity of an official bond of a constable who was defendant in an action for false imprisonment was under consideration by the court. In that case the defendant was seeking to justify his acts as an officer, and to show that he had duly qualified for such official position. The sufficiency of his bond was questioned because it was made payable to the trustees of the township in which he was elected, whereas the statute at that time required said bond to be made payable to the township treasurer and not to the trustees. In commenting upon this question the court said:

> "Why is such bond void? Can any other reason be assigned than that it is not according to the letter of the statute? There is nothing upon the face of it which is illegal. * * * The sole object is to secure, on the part of one of the obligors, the performance of duties, which, if no bond had been required, he would have been bound to perform. Suppose there had been no bond required by law, would this bond have been void? I apprehend not, and it appears to me that the single circumstance that it is required by the statute, that a bond should be made payable to a different obligee, is not sufficient to destroy the obligatory effects. Upon the whole, I come to the conclusion that the bond, if not good under the statute, is good at common law, and that any person who should be injured in consequence of the neglect of the officer to discharge any duty appertaining to his official station, might obtain redress by suit upon it."

The general rule is well stated in Ramsey v. People, 90 Am. St., 197, note I, as follows:

> "A mistake in the name of the obligee in an official bond does not vitiate it. For example, a bond given to the state instead of to the county as required by statute, or to the county commissioners instead of to the state, or to the township trustees instead of to the township treasurer, or to the selectment of the town instead of to the town, will be upheld as a common law undertaking, if not as a statutory bond."

Many authorities are cited in support of the foregoing rule, including the Ohio case of Barret v. Reed, supra.

The modern tendency of judicial opinion seems to lean to the theory that in all official bonds and bonds affecting the public generally, the obligee named is a trustee who stands for any and all persons who may be affected by a breach of the conditions of said bond, and when an injury results from a breach of a bond the party injured may maintain an action upon the bond to redress his wrongs. Such proceedings are covered by statutes in many states. In this state we have section 11242, G. C., which provides:

> "When a person forfeits his bond, or renders his sureties liable thereon, a person injured thereby, or who is entitled to the benefit of the security, may bring an action thereon, in his own name, against the person and his sureties, to recover the amount to which he is entitled by reason of the delinquency, which action may be prosecuted on a certified copy of the bond; and a judgment for one delinquency shall not preclude the same or another person from bringing an action on the instrument for another delinquency."

Under the provisions of this section an action may be predicated upon an official bond in behalf of any individual injured by reason of any breach of the conditions of said bond committed by the principal thereof.

I am therefore of the opinion that official bonds of municipal officers made payable to the municipality, are not invalid, either as to any claim the public may have thereon or as to any claim of private persons who may be injured by reason of a breach thereof by the officer giving the same.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SALE OF CANAL LANDS—PURCHASER REQUIRED TO MAKE CERTAIN CHANGES IN ADJOINING LAND RETAINED BY STATE—NOTICE SHOULD CONTAIN CONDITIONS.

Where lands are to be sold under section 13971, appendix to General Code, and the purchaser is to be required to make certain changes in the adjoining land retained by the state, notice of such conditions should be included in the notice of sale required to be published.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1916.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 2, 1916, which reads as follows:

"On December 20, 1915, you rendered to me an opinion No. 1113, in which you advised me that a sale of Ohio canal lands in the vicinity of The B. F. Goodrich Company's plant at Akron, should not be made without reserving a 75-foot strip of land for the state. The B. F. Goodrich Company is desirous of being given an opportunity to bid at public sale on so much of the land at that point, as may properly be sold under your ruling referred to above. The land in question which this company desires to purchase, is worth more than $500, and must, therefore, be sold at public sale. This land cannot be leased so as to yield 6% on the valuation thereof, and is not required in any way for the use, maintenance and operation of the canal.

"I am of the opinion that the same should be offered for sale, and The B. F. Goodrich Company is willing, in case it is the successful bidder, to do all dredging and other work required in making necessary changes in the canal embankment, and is also willing to construct cement retaining walls on both sides of the canal where the same are not already in existence. The company is willing to do this work in addition to paying the state the amount of its bid. Inasmuch as all bidders should be placed upon the same terms, I desire to inquire whether notice of these conditions should be embodied in the legal advertisement of the sale, and if so, would suggest that you suggest the proper language to be used in setting forth such conditions."

In the opinion referred to by you, my conclusion upon the matter therein discussed was expressed in the following language:

> "You are authorized by the provisions of section 412, G. C., to narrow the towing path embankment between Cedar street and Bartges street by the use of concrete retaining walls, and to eliminate, by the construction of a new berme bank, so much of the basin to the west of the plant of The B. F. Goodrich Company as is not needed for canal purposes, and that when this narrowing process is completed a part of the land not occupied by the canal and its embankments may, under certain conditions, be sold, but that in making such sale of land you should, under no circumstances, reduce the width of the state's property below its narrowest width at any adjacent point. In other words, in making a sale of any lands not occupied by the canal or its embankments, after such embankments have been reconstructed and narrowed, you should reserve for the state a strip of land between Cedar street and Bartges street, not less than 75 feet in width, that being the approximate width of the state's property at Bartges street at the present time."

It is now proposed to sell the land which may properly be sold and to require the purchaser, as a part of the consideration paid by him to make the changes which you would be authorized to make under section 412, G. C. I see no objection to this procedure, but it can properly be carried forward only by including in the legal advertisement made under section 13971 of the appendix to the General Code of Ohio, a full and complete statement of the conditions under which the land is offered for sale. I understand that these conditions are that the purchaser shall, at his own expense, do all dredging and other work required in making necessary changes in the embankments, and that this work shall be so done as to leave a channel not less than 40 feet wide at the top water line, and 6 feet deep below the water line. A further condition is that the purchaser shall construct at his own expense a concrete retaining wall on the east side of the canal from the end of the existing retaining wall to the north line of Bartges street, and a concrete retaining wall along the entire west water line of the canal. All of the work referred to above is to be done under your supervision and in accordance with plans and specifications either prescribed or approved by you.

I therefore suggest that the following language be incorporated in the legal advertisement:

> The purchaser of said parcel of real estate, in addition to paying to the state of Ohio the purchase price thereof, will be required to do, at his cost and expense, all dredging and other work required in making such changes in the location of the embankments of the Ohio canal between the southerly line produced of Cedar street and the northerly line of Bartges street, as may in the judgment of the superintendent of public works be rendered necessary by the sale of the lands herein described. Said dredging and other work shall be done under the supervision, control and inspection of the superintendent of public works of Ohio, and at such time and along and upon such line as he shall direct, and shall be so done as to produce upon the state's property between said lines a channel not less than forty feet wide at the top water line and not less than six feet deep below the water line. The purchaser of said parcel of real estate will also be required to construct, at his cost and expense, within such time as may be directed by the superintendent of public works of Ohio, on such line and in accordance with such plans and specifications as may be prescribed or approved by said superintendent, and under the supervision, control and inspection of said superintendent, a suitable concrete retaining wall from the southerly end of the existing concrete retaining wall on the east water line of the Ohio canal at lock one thereof, to the north line of Bartges street, and also under the same conditions a suitable concrete retaining wall along the entire west water line of said Ohio canal between the southerly line produced of Cedar street and the northerly line of Bartges street. The above conditions will be incorporated in the deed to the purchaser.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—CERTIFICATE AS TO CERTAIN SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS—ASSESSMENT COLLECTIBLE WITHOUT INTEREST.

Under the facts as submitted, a certificate to the county auditor of Medina county as to certain special assessments is sufficient, but no effort should be made to collect interest on the assessments in question.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1916.

HON. A. B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On December 21, 1915, you addressed to me the following communication:

"I enclose herewith a certification, made under sections 1178-1231, G. C., inclusive, and sent by township trustees to the county auditor.

"The road upon which these assessments were made was built in the latter part of 1914, and the assessments were made prior to the passage of the Cass highway bill. Through negligence or mistake, no effort was made to collect said assessments until recently. I now understand that the other abutting owners have voluntarily paid their shares to the township trustees, leaving only two delinquents, as in said certification named. I also understand that the state highway department has ruled that it is not yet too late to collect these assessments in the manner provided by law.

"I wish to ask, therefore, first, whether or not in your opinion, the enclosed certification is sufficient under the law, and secondly, whether or not interest may be charged against these delinquents."

The instrument referred to by you as a certification reads as follows:

"CERTIFICATION

"To the Auditor of Medina County, Ohio:—

"In the matter of assessing the abutting property owners for benefits accruing to their respective lands, by virtue of the improvement of the Medina county state highway 'D' and 'E,' known as the Wadsworth-Wooster road, in Wadsworth township, under petition No. 548. We, the duly appointed, elected, qualified and acting trustees of Wadsworth township, Medina county, Ohio, acting under authority of the laws of Ohio, and sections 1178 to 1231 inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, do hereby certify that, Seth J. Swain has been assessed three hundred and ten and 1-100 dollars ($310.01) for 2126.2 feet frontage of 200 acres of land owned by him on said improvement in tract 8, lots 4 and 5 of Wadsworth township, and that Jacob Stall has been assessed three hundred and seventy-eight dollars and ninety-five cents ($378.95) for 2476.8 feet frontage of 130 acres of land owned by him on said improvement in tract 9, lots 8, 15 and 28 of Wadsworth township. We, as township trustees, hereby advising that said sums, together with interest on each sum respectively from October 5, 1914, be placed on the tax duplicate against said lands in 4 semi-annual payments.

"(Signed) THE BOARD OF TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES, WADSWORTH TOWNSHIP, MEDINA COUNTY, OHIO.
"J. S. Lucas,
"R. A. Auble,
"A. M. Baughman.

"Attest: J. B. Hilliard, Clerk."

In response to my request for additional information, you advised me under date of January 13, 1916, as follows:

"I am forwarding herewith additional information, requested by you, in re. certification of special assessments on the Medina county state highway 'D' and 'E,' known as the Wadsworth-Wooster road. I will take your questions up in order.

"1. Was the cost of the inter-county highway improvement in question chargeable against the county, township and abutting property owners met from the proceeds of a bond issue, or was the same paid from the current levies of the county and township?

"Ans. In the county, it was met from the current levies. In the township, it was met from the proceeds of two bond issues. The township issued its voucher in favor of the county auditor, on October 5, 1914, for one-fourth of the cost and expense of such improvement. The township's share thereof, viz. 15%, had been raised by the sale of $6,000.00 worth of bonds in January, 1913. The abutting property owners' share, viz. 10%, not yet having been paid in, was taken from a fund for general road purposes raised in 1909, by the sale of $35,000.00 worth of bonds. A short time after October 5, 1914, the abutting property owners paid their assessments into the township, leaving but two delinquents, viz., Seth J. Swain and Jacob Stall, as in said certification named, and it is against these two men that interest is sought to be charged from October 5, 1914, that being the date when the township paid the abutting property owners' share.

"2. Was any item of interest included in the aggregate cost of the improvement as originally computed, or, in other words, is any item of interest included in the amounts assessed and, if so, what was the nature of that item?

"Ans. The state highway commissioner computes the aggregate cost and apportions same to state, county, township and abutting owners, as per inclosed sheet marked exhibit 1. I am of the opinion, as are also the county and township officials, that no item of interest is included in the amounts assessed against the different political divisions. I think perhaps that the state highway commissioner could better answer this question. I can say this much, that no item of interest was included in the township's apportionment against the abutting land owners of said improvement.

"3. Are the descriptions of the two tracts of land as found in the certification the same descriptions appearing on the tax duplicate and, if not, how are the two tracts described on the tax duplicate?

"Ans. The descriptions are in main part identical with the exception, perhaps, that the lots are more particularly described on the tax duplicate. The entry there is about as follows:

"Name	Tract	Lot	Part	Acres	"The Valuation Land	Bldgs.
"Stall, Jacob	9	8	S. W. Part	10	920	1620
	9	15	Whole	50	3770	----
	9	28	Whole	42	3180	----
"Swain, Seth J.	8	4	Whole	166.70	12970	2500
	8	4	Mid W. Side	4	310	----
	8	5	N. E. Part	13.82	1070	----"

Sections 1208 and 1210 of the General Code, now repealed, contained the only statutory provisions relating to the assessments now under discussion. The right to make the assessments under the repealed sections is preserved by the saving provisions of the Cass highway law. Section 1208, G. C., contained the following provision:

> "The township trustees shall apportion the amount to be paid by the owners of the abutting property according to the benefits accruing to the owners of land so located. At least ten days' notice of the time and place of making such apportionment shall be given to the persons affected thereby, and an opportunity given them to be heard in the manner provided by law for the assessment of the cost and expense of establishing township ditches. If the improvement lies in two or more townships, the amount to be paid by each shall be apportioned according to the number of lineal feet of the improvement lying in each township."

Section 1210, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "The township trustees shall certify the assessment to the county auditor, who shall place it upon the tax duplicate against the property benefited. The county treasurer shall collect such assessments in the manner as other taxes are collected, and in such payments as may be approved by the county auditor."

It appears from your second communication that Swain is the owner of 184.52 acres, and Stall the owner of 102 acres, while the certificate refers to Swain as the owner of 200 acres, and Stall as the owner of 130 acres. I do not regard this as material, however, if as appears from your communication, the description contained in the certificate is such as to enable the county auditor to identify with certainty the lands sought to be charged, for the reason that the assessments are based on benefits and not on acreage. For the same reason I do not regard it as material that the certificate refers to Swain as owning 2126.2 feet frontage, while if the statement from the state highway department attached to your second communication is correct, he owns but 2026.2 feet. Assuming that the descriptions of the real estate contained in the certificate are such that the auditor can identify with certainty the lands sought to be charged, I advise you that the certificate submitted by you is sufficient.

In connection with the second branch of your inquiry, it should first be observed that the statute does not expressly confer any authority on the trustees or auditor in reference to the inclusion of interest. Your communication also discloses an irregularity in the proceedings which, while in no way affecting the validity of the assessments, has a substantial bearing on the matter now under discussion. The law under which this road was improved provided that where it was necessary to issue bonds in anticipation of special assessments, the same should be issued by the county commissioners. See section 1223, G. C., as that section stood prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law. In the case now under discussion, instead of resorting to a bond issue under the proper section, the amount to be specially assessed was paid in the first instance from a fund created by a township bond issue, the bonds being issued several years before the improvement in question was constructed. In view of the foregoing, I am of the opinion that no effort should be made to collect interest upon the assessments in question, and that the auditor should disregard the request in the certificate that interest be colleced.

The assessment resolution and other proceedings of the township trustees are not before me and no opinion is, therefore, expressed as to their regularity.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

CIVIL SERVICE—INTERPRETATION PARAGRAPH 8, SECTION 486-8, G. C.—PERSONS WHO CLAIM EXEMPTIONS AS "ASSISTANTS"—WHERE THERE IS NO MUNICIPAL CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—FAILURE OF MAYOR TO APPOINT SUCH COMMISSION IN SIXTY DAYS—STATE COMMISSION MAY APPOINT—FOR PERMANENT APPOINTMENTS, ELIGIBLE LIST MUST CONTAIN THREE NAMES.

1. The term "assistant" as used in paragraph 8 of section 486-8, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 405, may include any officer or employe, regardless of his title, who aids and assists his principal in the discharge and performance of duties which are of a confidential and fiduciary character, and which involve the responsibility of said principal.

2. When prior to January 1, 1916, no municipal civil service commission has been appointed by the mayor or the state civil service commission, the mayor whose term begins on said date may have sixty days from said date within which to appoint said commission. Should said last named mayor fail to appoint a municipal commission within said sixty days the state civil service commission may make such appointment as provided in paragraph 2 of section 486-19, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 414. When the appointment of said municipal civil service commission has been made by said mayor or by the state civil service commission, the mayor who has been suspended the chief of police since said first day of January, 1916, shall certify such fact together with the cause of suspension to said municipal civil service commission so appointed. Until said commission is appointed and such certification made, said chief of police so suspended is without any remedy. The provisions of the law as to the time within which such certification must be made, and said charges heard by said municipal civil service commission, do not become operative until such commission is appointed.

3. Permanent appointments in the competitive class under the civil service law may not be made from an eligible list of fewer than three names. If an appointment is made from an eligible list containing less than three names, a full list of three names should be furnished the appointing authority from which another appointment may be made.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of January 7, 1916, as follows:

> "We have had requests from various departments and county officials for the exemption of persons under paragraph 8 of section 486-8 of the civil service law. Such exemptions are being claimed as 'assistants.' Persons so claimed exempt appear under various titles on the pay roll. In one instance, a probation officer has been claimed exempt from the classified service as an 'assistant.' Will you kindly render us an opinion as to the meaning and the proper application of the word 'assistants,' appearing in paragraph 8 of section 486-8 of the new law? Can a position of any title be exempted under this head?
> "Our attention has been called to the case of the dismissal of the chief of police of the city of Defiance, who has been discharged by the incoming mayor. It appears that he was appointed from an eligible list in 1903, and has served continuously until January 1, 1916. The former mayor, whose term expired on January 1st, failed to appoint a civil service commission as provided by the civil service law. In the meantime, the discharged chief of police has no civil service commission to which he may appeal his case. Under such circumstances, what should be the attitude of the state civil service commission? Should this commission appoint a municipal civil service commission at once, or should it allow the new mayor sixty days within which to make such appointment? During this time, what action should the chief of police take in regard to the appeal of his case? Can he appeal to the common pleas court, or is it the duty of the state commission to appoint a municipal commission at once, with which he may file his appeal?

"A question has also arisen in regard to certification made to positions formerly occupied by non-competitives. This commission has, in one or two cases where we had only one eligible in a district, certified to the industrial commission the name of one person from an eligible list along with the name of the non-competitive incumbent of the position. In one case the non-competitive incumbent has been permanently appointed after such certification. Is an appointment made in this way valid?

"In the case of certification made in response to an ordinary request, can appointments be legally made from a list of less than three persons certified?"

Paragraph 8 of section 486-8, G. C., 106 O. L., 405, under which your first inquiry is submitted, provides:

"Three secretaries, assistants or clerks, and one personal stenographer for each of the elective state officers; and two secretaries, assistant or clerks, and one personal stenographer for other elective officers and each of the principal appointive executive officers, boards or commissions, except civil service commissions, authorized by law to appoint such secretary, assistant or clerk and stenographer."

It must be observed in the first place that the term "assistant," as used in this statute, cannot be limited to those persons who are so named and denominated by statutory law because such persons are practically all excepted under other provisions of said section 486-8. Obviously, therefore, the legislature intended it to apply in a more general way, but to give you a definition that would furnish a test in every instance would be an impossibility. This is so because in a certain sense and to some extent all subordinate officers are assistants of their principals. As is very pertinently observed in the case of State v. Longfellow, 69 S. W., 596:

"The word assistant is susceptible of a considerable variety of meanings to be made definite in each case by the aid of the context, the circumstances and other recognized materials of interpretation."

In view of these considerations I am of the opinion that the term as used in this statute must be interpreted so as to harmonize with the general spirit and purpose of the civil service law as well as the general character of those positions which, by other provisions of the law, are exempted and excepted from the classified service. If we so construe this term it then must be held to mean something more than a person who aids or assists his principal. It must be one who not only aids and assists his principal, but whose relation to his principal, because of the duties of his position, is one of a confidential or fiduciary character. In other words, the position of assistant as here contemplated means a position of trust and confidence, the duties of which involve, to some extent at least, the responsibility of the principal. When these qualifications are added to the ordinary acceptation of the term it brings it, in my judgment, in harmony with the other provisions of the law relating to exempted positions, and is consistent with the general purpose of the civil service law.

Therefore, adopting this view of the matter, I must advise that the term "assistant," as used in said section, may include any officer, regardless of his title, who aids and assists his principal in the discharge and performance of duties which involve the responsibility of the principal, and are of a confidential and fiduciary character.

This being so I am of the opinion that a probation officer holds such relation to the court which appoints him as to warrant his exemption as an assistant under said provision of the law.

Referring now to your second inquiry, it is provided in part in section 486-19, G. C., 106 O. L., 413, that:

> "The mayor or other chief appointing authority of each city in the state shall appoint three persons, one for a term of two years, one for four years, and one for six years, who shall constitute the municipal civil service commission of such city, and of the city school district in which such city is located; provided, however, that members of existing municipal commissions shall continue in office for the terms for which they have been appointed, and until their successors are appointed and have qualified. Each alternate year thereafter the mayor or other chief appointing authority shall appoint one person as successor of the member whose term expires, to serve six years and until his successor is appointed and qualified. * * *
> "If the appointing authority of any such city fails to appoint a civil service commission or commissioner, as provided by law, within sixty days after he has the power to so appoint, or after a vacancy exists, the state commission shall make the appointment, and such appointee shall hold office until the expiration of the term of the appointing authority of such city and until the successor of such appointee is appointed and qualified."

Under the provisions of the law quoted your commission was authorized to appoint a civil service commission in the city of Defiance at any time prior to the taking of office by the present mayor. However, by reason of the peculiar language used in the latter part of the section quoted, viz., "within sixty days after he has the power to so appoint," I incline to the opinion that the present mayor is now entitled to the period of sixty days named within which to make said appointments, and that until the expiration of said period, your commission may not appoint a municipal civil service commission for said city.

Should the present mayor fail to act within the time specified then, at the expiration of said period, your commission should appoint a municipal civil service commission for said city to which the discharged chief of police named in your inquiry may then appeal his case. Should such commission be appointed by the mayor, said chief of police may appeal to that commission, but until there is a commission appointed to which his appeal may be made, I am of the opinion that he is without any remedy and must reserve any action until a civil service commission for said city is appointed. The provisions of the statute as to the time within which such appeal may be heard do not become operative until a commission is appointed.

Your third inquiry in reference to the certification of an eligible list of fewer than three persons is answered fully by the statutory provisions pertaining thereto. It is provided in section 486-12, G. C., 106 O. L., 408, that from the returns of the examinations the commission shall prepare an eligible list of the persons whose general average standing upon examination is not less than the minimum fixed by the rules of the commission and who are otherwise eligible. In the succeeding section it is provided that when an appointing authority shall notify the commission of the fact that an appointment is to be made in the classified service, said commission shall certify to said appointing authority the names and addresses of the three candidates standing highest on the eligible list for the class or grade to which such position belongs. It is further provided that in the event the eligible list to which said position belongs has become exhausted, through inadvertance or otherwise, or when no eligible list for such position exists, names may be certified from other eligible lists most appropriate for the class or group in which said position to be filled is classified.

From the foregoing provisions it is clear that the names and addresses of the three persons standing highest on the eligible list must be certified for appointment, and the certification of fewer than three names does not meet the requirement of the law. This purpose is made more manifest by the further provisions which permit a certification from other lists when an eligible list does not exist for the grade or class to which said position belongs.

A question very similar to the one under consideration here was before the court in the case of the State ex rel. v. Hoglan, 64 O. S., 532. The controversy in that case arose over the removal of the municipal civil service commission of the city of Columbus by the mayor of said city, the principal ground of removal being that said commission had not certified the required number of names from an eligible list as provided by the civil service law then in force. That law provided:

> "In case of any vacancy in the classified service of said city, notice shall be given the commission by the appointing power of said vacancy, and thereupon the commission shall certify in writing to the appointing power, the names, addresses and grades of the candidates, not exceeding three in number, for any such vacancy, whose names shall stand highest on the appropriate register, and it shall then be the duty of the appointing power to appoint on probation, to fill such vacancy, one of the said candidates whose name shall have been so certified."

It appears from the facts stated that the commission in question claimed that it complied with the foregoing statute by furnishing the name of one such person when requested, while the construction placed upon said statute by the mayor was that it required said commission to furnish the names of three persons, and upon refusal of the commission to adopt the mayor's construction he made the order of removal. The court in passing upon the facts thus presented said:

> "The court is of the opinion that the commission erred in the construction it placed on the statute. The fair construction is that they should certify to the proper department when requested at least two names, on the other hand we think the mayor is in error in his claim that it should certify three names."

It will be observed that the statute considered in the foregoing case was not as specific as the statute under consideration here, because the former fixed the number at not exceeding three, yet the court held that this required more than one.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that permanent appointments in the competitive class may not be legally made from a list of fewer than three names.

In view of this conclusion I would respectfully suggest that your commission at once certify the required number of names to the appointing authorities in the cases mentioned in your inquiry, and that upon such certification you require new appointments to be made which, of course, would not prevent the appointment of the persons now holding said positions under said former appointments. Should no eligible list exist for such positions, resort may be made to other lists which are most appropriate to secure the requisite number of names for certification. This suggestion is made because the payment of the salaries of said appointees may be made the subject of attack at any time under the provisions of section 486-29, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 418.

See State ex rel., Bailey et al. v. George et al., O. L. B. No. 12, Vol. 61, page 123.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

OFFICES COMPATIBLE—MEMBER VILLAGE BOARD OF EDUCATION—CLERK OF VILLAGE COUNCIL.

The duties of the offices of member of village board of education and clerk of the village council are not incompatible, and both positions may be held contemporaneously by one person.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 4, 1916.

HON. GEORGE C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 29, 1916, as follows:

> "One William Cramer in the village of Fairport, Lake county, Ohio, has been elected to the position of village clerk. Also he has been elected as a member of the board of education, serving that board also as its clerk.
> "I have examined the statutes very carefully, and as well all the reports of the attorney-general. I am unable to find any law prohibiting one person from holding both the office of member of the board of education of the village and clerk of the council.
> "I can see no incompatibility in his being both clerk of the board of education and clerk of the village, unless it be that in the apportionment and arrangement of funds from taxation he might unduly favor one or the other, in his conference with the county auditor and county budget commission.
> "If you have passed on this matter heretofore, will you please cite me to the opinion, and if not, may I please have, at your earliest possible convenience, your view of the situation."

I concur in your conclusion that there is no incompatibility in the offices named in your foregoing inquiry. While the party in question, as a member of the village board of education, which is a taxing authority under the laws of this state, is charged with official duties in relation to the work imposed by law upon the county budget commission, yet as clerk of the village council he has no official connection whatever with the budget commission, and I am unable to conceive of any circumstances under which he as clerk of said council would be called into conference with the county budget commission. It is only when the duties which are imposed by law of various positions are incompatible that the rule of incompatibility may apply. In this case, as before observed, there are no duties imposed by law upon the clerk of the village that would conflict in any manner whatever with the discharge of the duty imposed by law upon a member of the village board of education.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the offices of member of the village board of education and of clerk of the council of said village are not incompatible, and may be held by the same person.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CONTRACT BETWEEN SEREFF BROTHERS, CONTRACTOR, AND STATE ARMORY BOARD—WHEN AND HOW BOARD MAY COMPLETE UNFINISHED CONTRACT—NO AUTHORITY FOR CONTRACTOR OR SUB-CONTRACTOR TO PERFECT LIEN AGAINST STATE PROPERTY.

Under the first division of article V of the contract made between Sereff Brothers, contractors, and the state armory board, the state armory board may supply additional workmen and materials necessary, and pay for same without taking the contract away from the original contractors.

Under the second division of said article V the state may take the contract away from the original contractors, but in so doing must comply with the provisions of section 5259, G. C.

There is no authority for contractors or sub-contractors to perfect a lien against state property.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1916.

HON. BYRON L. BARGAR, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of January 15, 1916, you wrote to me as follows:

"I herewith enclose the following papers, relative to the Spencerville, Ohio armory contract.

"No. 1. A letter from Major Gamble of Spencerville, Ohio, dated January 11, 1916, stating that the contractors, Sereff Brothers, have done no work on the armory for a week.

"No. 2. A certificate dated January 14, 1916, signed by Architect Best, contractors' foreman, P. P. Baker, and Lieutenant Neidhardt, stating that no construction work on the armory since January 6, 1916, had been done.

"No. 3. A paper signed January 14, 1916, by Sereff Brothers by P. H. Sereff, contractors, purporting to relinquish their contract for the said armory.

"The state entered into a contract on April 14, 1915, for the construction of said armory with J. W. and P. H. Sereff, for the aggregate sum of $17,792.75, which includes extras to date.

"Prior to December 23, 1915, the board has allowed estimates for payment on said contract aggregating $9,424.00..

"The said contractors owe to sub-contractors and for materials and labor, all on account of this armory, a sum probably in excess of the balance that would be due contractors, if the armory was completed. But their contract is only four-fifths completed, and about twenty per cent. of the armory remains to be finished.

"Meanwhile said contractors have attempted to give orders on the state to some of their creditors, and other creditors have attempted to file liens, and have advised the board of their claims against the said contractors.

"Please direct further procedure of the board, in the light of section 5259, and other laws relating to conditions stated."

With your letter you submitted the above named enclosures. This entire question is answered by the provisions of section 5259, G. C., wherein it is stated:

"In case of default upon the contract, the board may sue on the bond and advertise for other bids for the completion of the work."

Article V of the contract entered into by your board with the said J. W. Sereff and P. H. Sereff on April 14, 1915, provides as follows:

"Should the contractors at any time refuse or neglect to supply a sufficiency of properly skilled workmen, of materials of the proper quality, or fail in any respect to prosecute the work with promptness and diligence, or fail in the performance of any agreement herein contained, such refusal, neglect or failure being certified by the architect, the owner shall be at liberty, after three days' written notice to the contractors, to provide any such labor or materials, and to deduct the cost thereof from any moneys then due or thereafter to become due to the contractors under this contract; and if the architect shall certify that such refusal, neglect or failure is sufficient ground for such action, the owner shall also be at liberty to terminate the employment of the contractors for the said work and to enter upon the premises and take possession, for the purpose of completing the work included under this contract, of all materials, tools and appliances thereon, and to employ any other person, or persons, to finish the work, and to provide the material therefor; and in case of such discontinuance of employment of the contractors he shall not be entitled to receive any further payment under this contract until the said work shall be wholly finished, at which time, if the unpaid balance of the amount to be paid under this contract shall exceed the expenses incurred by the owner in finishing the work, such excess shall be paid by the owner to the contractors, but if such expense shall exceed such unpaid balance, the contractors shall pay the difference to the owner. The expense incurred by the owner, herein provided, either for furnishing materials or for finishing the work, and any damage incurred through such default shall be audited and certified by the architect, whose certificate thereof shall be conclusive upon the parties."

Article V of the contract, above quoted, is divisible into two parts. The first part provides that if the contractors fail or neglect to supply a sufficiency of properly skilled workmen or materials of the proper quality, or to prosecute the work with promptness and diligence, etc., the owner, after notice to contractors, is authorized to supply such labor or materials and deduct the cost thereof from moneys in its hands due the contractors. If the state proceeds under this provision of article V and simply supplies the deficiency created by the neglect of the contractors, it could not in any sense be considered as default upon the contract since, in contemplation of such provision, the contract still remains in the contractors.

The second division provides that if the architect certifies that the refusal, neglect or failure of the contractors is sufficient grounds, the owner shall be at liberty to terminate the employment of the contractors, to enter upon the premises and take possession, and to employ other persons to finish the work. It is further provided that the contractors shall not be entitled to further payment under the contract until the work is wholly finished and the new contractors are paid the amount due them. Since this second provision of article V looks to a termination of the contract, any action thereunder would be, within the provisions of section 5259, G. C., supra, a default upon the contract and would require an advertisement for bids for the completion of the work and also notice to the bondsmen.

It appears from the papers submitted that the contractors, Sereff Brothers, under date of January 14th, have advised your board that their financial condition prohibits them from the performance of the work under the contract, and that they are not able to secure money due and, therefore, relinquish said contract. They further ask that if after completion of the building there is any money due, said money be proportioned to the creditors who have supplied materials or labor, or both, on the building.

It further appears from a letter from you under date of January 21st, that your architect, Mr. Best, has figured out that to complete the armory at Spencerville, Ohio, it will require the sum of $3,719.00, and from your first inquiry that there is approximately $8,000.00 still on hands unexpended of the original amount set aside for the construction of said armory. In your letter of inquiry you ask me to direct further procedure of the board in the light of section 5259, G. C., and other laws relating to conditions stated.

In answer thereto I would state that if your board desires to permit the contractors to continue under the contract, and your board to supply the deficiency of properly skilled workmen and materials, it may do so after three days' written notice to the contractors, and would be authorized to deduct the cost thereof from any moneys now due or hereafter to become due to the contractors under this contract.

But if your board determines that it desires to turn the contract over to somebody else, it will have to proceed under the provisions of section 5259, G. C., and advertise for bids for the completion of the work. In both instances, however, due notice should be served upon the bondsmen of the contractors. Under no circumstances should the board recognize in any way the attempt of Sereff Brothers to relinquish the contract since the acceptance of the relinquishment of the contract might release the bondsmen.

I state the above as a general proposition for the reason that there appears to be more than sufficient funds now in your hands with which to complete the building by providing the properly skilled workmen and materials of proper quality, or if the other course be taken a sufficient amount on hand to cover the contract price for the completion of the work should a new contract for such completion be awarded to another contractor. After the completion of the work under either of the above methods and the payment of all bills incurred thereby, if there is any money that has not been spent in order to complete such work still available then, the same may be paid over to the original contractors or as they direct.

The state does not recognize any lien against state property. There is no power in a sub-contractor or material man to perfect a lien against the property of the state. This matter was decided in opinion No. 935 rendered under date of October 14, 1915, to Hon. J. E. Shatzel, secretary board of trustees, Bowling Green State Normal College, Bowling Green, Ohio, copy of which is herewith enclosed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TELEPHONE COMPANIES—CONTRACT OF SALE—INVENTORY OF PROPERTY REQUIRED IN ORDER TO FIX AND DETERMINE RATES, TOLLS, CHARGES AND RENTALS TO BE CHARGED UPON CONSUMMATION OF SALE—IRONTON, OHIO

A, a telephone company owning and operating a local telephone exchange and property in a certain city and its vicinity, and B, a telephone company owning and operating a separate telephone plant and property in said city and vicinity and in addition long distance lines and telephone exchanges in other localities, apply jointly to the public utilities commission for the approval of a contract of sale by B to A of its local exchange and property in the common locality, one of the features of which contemplates the connection of the exchange of A, after its acquisition of the additional property, with the toll lines of B, so that the subscribers of the local exchange shall have long distance service throughout the field of operations of B.

As a part of said agreement B is to receive stock and bonds of A.

Held: That upon such application it is the duty of the public utilities commission, under section 614-61, G. C., to appraise the telephone property within the city and its vicinity which will, upon the consummation of the sale, constitute the plant of A, and on the basis of the valuation so ascertained to fix and determine the rates, tolls, charges and rentals to be charged by A.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1916.

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You submit to me the following statement of facts and inquiry:

"The Home Telephone Company of Ironton, Ohio, and the Central Union Telephone Company, own and operate separate local telephone exchanges and property in the city of Ironton and its vicinity, with all of that owned by the Central Union Telephone Company being located within a radius of nine miles of the city of Ironton. In addition thereto the Central Union Company owns and operates long distance lines and telephone exchanges in the states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, it being an Illinois corporation. The Home Telephone Company is entirely local to Ironton and its vicinity.

"Upon joint application of these companies this commission is asked to approve the sale by the Central Union Company of its local telephone exchange and property in Ironton and vicinity to the Home Company. As a part consideration for the proposed sale and transfer, the companies intend to enter into a traffic agreement whereby the toll lines of the Central Union Company are to be connected with the exchange of the Home Company, giving the subscribers of the Home Company access to all the lines and stations of the Central Union Company.

"As a part of the purchase price the Central Union Company is to receive $50 000.00 of the stock and $13,000.00 of the bonds of the Home Company, the purchase price being $63,725.00. The Commission has approved the sale for the consideration above named. In approving this sale the commission respectfully requests your opinion as to whether it shall require the petitioning parties to comply with section 614-61, or only with section 614-60 of the General Code of Ohio.

"The same question was propounded to Attorney-General Hogan by the public service commission on October 6, 1911, to which he replied on November 24, 1911. On November 29, 1911, Mr. Hogan, by letter to the commission, qualified his opinion of the 24th, stating that he was still investigating the question and that later on he could give the commission a rule for permanent guidance. This commission has no evidence that Mr. Hogan gave any additional or supplementary opinion on the subject. The matter has been standing in that condition since November 29, 1911.

"The question involved here is being raised in connection with other telephone purchases and sales, and this commission respectfully asks for your views as to the correctness of Mr. Hogan's opinion and for your opinion generally as to the question herein presented."

The facts upon which Attorney-General Hogan based his opinion and the facts presented to me by you, presenting the same legal questions and calling for a construction, primarily, of sections 614-60 and 614-61 of the General Code, it will be unnecessary for me to write a separate opinion if I find that Attorney-General Hogan has expressed conclusions with which I can agree.

I note that in Mr. Hogan's opinion of November 24, 1911, which involves a lengthy and careful analysis and comparison of the two sections in question, he stops short of saying unqualifiedly that your commission should ascertain and determine the valuation of the merged property, and upon such valuation fix the rates to be charged, as provided for in section 614-61 of the General Code. I find also that on November 29, 1911, he addressed a communication to you in which he substantially recalls his opinion of November 24, 1911, and suggests that doubt should be resolved in favor of the jurisdiction of the commission, and that you should proceed to ascertain and determine the value of the properties in question and fix the rate to be charged for service. I find no record in this department of any opinion which Attorney-General Hogan may have given on the question you present, except the opinion and the letter to which you refer.

Being substantially in accord with the analysis of said section 614-60, as made by Mr. Hogan, and being in accord with the conclusions he arrived at therein with reference to the application of said section, it is unnecessary, in answering your question, to again analyze said section.

I am not in accord with the conclusions which he appears to have arrived at in his said opinion with reference to section 614-61, and particularly with reference to paragraph 4 of said section. These sections being of length and set out in full in his opinion appearing in attorney-general report for the year 1911, at page 729, and in the annual report of your commission for the year 1912, at page 712, it is unnecessary to restate the two statutes herein, except paragraph 4 of section 614-61, which is as follows:

"No consolidation, purchase, lease or contract by which two or more telephone companies merge or operate their lines or plants jointly or in connection with each other, shall become valid or effective until after the commission shall have ascertained and determined the valuation as provided in this act upon which the rates, tolls, charges and rentals are based and also shall have fixed and determined such rates, tolls, charges and rentals so to be charged."

It will be observed that section 614-60 applies to public utilities generally, while section 614-61, immediately following said section 614-60, in the act of May 31, 1911 (102 O. L., 549), applies exclusively to telephone companies; that the two sections as enacted, each complete in itself, are for manifestly different purposes, yet in each the legislature has conferred rights upon telephone companies which before their enactment were forbidden by law; that section 614-61 provides for and makes mandatory the valuation of the property of telephone companies and the fixing of rates, tolls, charges and rentals to be charged by such companies as come within its purview, while said section 614-60 does not so provide. Again, section 614-60 refers to and is limited to the connection of physical properties, while section 614-61 refers to and applies to the merger of corporate entities. I therefore reach the conclusion that section 614-61 is applicable to the question presented by you. It remains then to determine whether or not under said section 614-61 there must be a valuation and the fixing of rates thereon.

In order to ascertain the legislative intent in the enactment of said sections, and their relationship to each other, if any, I have made examination of the legislative records relating thereto and find that said paragraph 4 of said section 614-61 was not a part of the original draft of said section, but was added to the section by a conference committee to which the bill had been referred by the legislature. This paragraph 4, while to me quite clear in its own provision and intent, is not so clear when read in connection with the remainder of the section of which it is a part. However, an analysis of the section reveals its express purpose and its clear intent.

It is a question whether or not the words "consolidation," "purchase," "lease," or "contract," as used in said section 614-61 make that section applicable to the case under consideration. In my opinion they do. The word sale necessarily implies purchase, and vice versa. I approve the legal interpretation given to these words by Mr. Hogan in his opinion to you and may add thereto that in my opinion the legislature intended these words to include, and that they do include, every form of transfer of property by which two or more telephone companies merge or operate their plant jointly in connection with each other, where the result is the elimination of the factor of competition as tending to regulate rates.

It is urged by counsel for the Central Union Telephone Company that there is nothing to be gained by requiring the appraisal and fixing rates as a necessary incident to the consummation of the transfer under consideration; that rates may be investigated and fixed by the commission at any time. In the enactment of paragraph 4 of section 614-61, the legislature evidently considered both of these questions and decided that the time to fix the rate should be concurrent with the merger, and that by so fixing the rate at that time it eliminated the inducement to inject into property fictitious values upon which a rate might be fixed.

The claim is also made that section 614-61 does not apply in this instance because all of the property of the Central Union Telephone Company is not being sold to the Home Telephone Company of Ironton. By the sale under consideration, the Central Union Company transfers to the Home Company all of its telephone facilities in and within a radius of nine miles of Ironton, leaving the Home Company the sole owner of all the telephone property in and within said territory. What were competing companies are now merged and under one ownership and control. So far as affecting the interests of the users of telephones in Ironton and within a radius of nine miles thereof, it is unimportant as affecting the application of this section, whether or not the Central Union Telephone Company may own other telephone property, and located elsewhere.

Without further discussion, I may express my conclusion and opinion that you should proceed to ascertain and determine the valuation of the property in question and to fix and determine the rates, tolls, charges and rentals, so to be charged by the Home Telephone Company of Ironton.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW—INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION ADVISED TO ADJUST PREMIUM DUE STATE INSURANCE FUND FROM THE COLUMBUS BOLT WORKS.

The industrial commission of Ohio advised to adjust the question as to the amount of premium due the state insurance fund from the Columbus Bolt Works Company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from your department which is as follows:

> "The industrial commission respectfully requests your opinion on the questions involved in the matter of state insurance carried by the Columbus Bolt Works Company under the workmen's compensation law, as evidenced by the enclosed statements and records. The following motion passed by the industrial commission expresses the wishes of the commission in general terms:
> "'The following action was taken by the commission on January 10, 1916:
> "'Mr. Post and Mr. Barrett were present for a conference with the commission relative to the amount of premium due from the Columbus Bolt Works Company.
> "'The matter was discussed at some length after which Mr. Eliot moved that all papers in the case be referred to the attorney-general for an opinion as to the rights of the parties; that he be instructed not to bring suit and that on the preparation of his opinion he be requested to take the matter up personally with the commission; that Mr. Watson be instructed to co-operate with the attorney-general and to demonstrate to the commission the steps taken to arrive at the conclusions set forth in the two settlement sheets.
> "'The motion was seconded by Mr. Duffy, and voted upon as follows: Mr. Duffy, aye; Mr. Eliot, aye; Mr. Yaple, aye.'
> "The questions involved are technical and it would be very difficult to commit them to writing so as to be perfectly clear to you. Messrs. Follett and Price, of your office, conferred with the industrial commission a few days since with reference to these questions."

There are several other papers attached to your letter which clearly show that there is a misunderstanding existing between the industrial commission of Ohio and the Columbus Bolt Works Company, of Columbus, Ohio, as to whether or not there is a deficit in the amount of premium due the state insurance fund from the Columbus Bolt Works Company, or as to whether there is a credit in said fund in favor of the said company.

In accordance with the suggestion contained in your letter we have discussed the matter with Mr. E. E. Watson, your actuary. The history of this transaction, as given by Mr. Watson, is about as follows:

The Columbus Bolt Works was one of the first subscribers to the state insurance fund, it being risk No. 55. The first premium paid by this company was on March 27, 1912. At this time a classification of the employment of this company was made, which was designated as class 10, sub-class 22. Premiums were paid to the state insurance fund upon this classification based upon an estimated pay roll at the rate adopted for this class and sub-class, which premiums were paid for five periods of six months each and the period of payment under this classification extended from March 28, 1912, to October 14, 1914, a total premium being paid amounting to $7,084.43. This amount was paid to the state insurance fund upon the estimated pay rolls covering the five periods above named. Upon the audit of the pay rolls covering said five periods it was found that the actual pay roll expenditure was in excess of the estimated pay roll for said five periods, and that the amount of premium due the state insurance fund based on the actual pay roll expenditure covering said periods was $7,400.28, which left a balance due the state insurance fund on October 14, 1914, from the Columbus Bolt Works of $315.85.

It seems that about this time a Mr. Sohl, who had charge of this branch of the business of the Columbus Bolt Works Company, conceived the idea that a part of its pay roll should be placed under a different sub-class. This question was taken up with the state liability board of awards or someone of its departments and accordingly a division of the pay roll was made—a part being rated under class 10, sub-class 22, and a part being placed in class 10, sub-class 44. This division was made retroactive. Under this division of the pay roll the amount of premium due the state insurance fund covering the five periods from March 28, 1912, to October 14, 1914, based upon actual pay roll expenditure for said five periods was $4,876.49; whereas, the amount of premium paid to the state insurance fund upon the estimated pay roll under the classification of class 10 and sub-class 22 amounted to $7,084.43, which, therefore, left an unearned premium credit to the Columbus Bolt Works Company on October 14, 1914, of $2,207.94. The amount of premium due the state insurance fund based upon the actual pay roll expended under class 10, sub-class 22 and 44 for the period from October 14, 1914, to April 14, 1915, plus a penalty for death, was $862.04. This amount deducted from the unearned premium credit due to the Columbus Bolt Works Company on October 14, 1914, left a balance of unearned premium due the Columbus Bolt Works Company on October 14, 1915, of $1,345.90. The amount of premium due the state insurance fund for the period from April 14, 1915 to October 14, 1915, based upon an estimated pay roll under class 10, sub-classes 22 and 44, was $940.06, and which amount deducted from the balance of unearned premium due the employer on April 14, 1915, left a balance of unearned premium due the Columbus Bolt Works Company on October 14, 1915, of $405.84. A settlement sheet went forward to the Columbus Bolt Works Company showing a credit due it of $405.84.

About this time a question arose in the auditing department of the industrial commission of Ohio as to whether there had been a proper classification of this employment. Mr. Watson informs us that Mr. Sohl was called to the office of the industrial commission and that he (Mr. Sohl) was informed by Mr. John Higgins, then auditor, that the settlement sheet of June 2, 1915, which showed a credit of $405.84 to the Columbus Bolt Works Company was incorrect and it could not be considered as a basis of settlement.

About July 1, 1915, the Columbus Bolt Works Company was reorganized and a majority of the stockholders in the old company became minority stockholders in the new company. In the meantime Mr. Sohl was taken ill and the question of adjustment or settlement on a proper classification with reference to the amount of premium due was never settled by Mr. Sohl, because of his illness, and shortly thereafter Mr. Sohl died.

The new company, on September 3, 1915, was advised by a settlement sheet of that date, which showed a calculation of premium due the state insurance fund based upon the original classification of the industry, to wit: Class 10, sub-class 22, which showed an earned premium covering five periods from March 28, 1912, to October 14, 1914, of $7,400.28. It showed a credit by advance premiums based upon estimated pay rolls covering said five periods in the sum of $7,084.43, which left a balance due to the state insurance fund on October 14, 1914, of $315.85.

The settlement sheet of September 3, 1915, also showed a premium due in the sum of $1,105.00 based upon an estimated pay roll expenditure from October 14, 1914, to April 14, 1915, which advance estimated premium, together with the additional earned premium due as of October 14, 1914, in the sum of $315.85 made a total amount due to the state insurance fund of $1,420.85.

At this time a representative of the new or reorganized Columbus Bolt Works Company came to the industrial commission and claimed that upon the reorganization of this company the new company was led to believe that the settlement sheet of June 25, 1915, which showed a credit of $405.84 was correct and that they had accepted this settlement from the industrial commission as correct and as an asset of the old company. He was informed that the latter settlement sheet under date of June 25, 1915, was recalled from Mr. Sohl personally and that no adjustment had been made of the matter. This representative of the new company attempted to see Mr. Sohl about the matter but was unable to do so on account of his serious illness, and no information was gained by the new company from Mr. Sohl because of his subsequent death. The matter was then referred by the commission to Mr. Watson, its actuary, who had under date of October 18, 1915, calculated the amount of earned premium due the state insurance fund from the Columbus Bolt Works Company covering the periods from March 28, 1912, to October 14, 1915, and which showed a total amount due of $9,866.33. It showed also that the advance premiums which were paid upon the estimated pay rolls covering the same periods amounted to $7,084.43, which therefore leaves an additional earned premium due the state insurance fund covering said period in the amount of $2,801.90. The settlement sheet of October 18, 1915, which shows an estimated pay roll expenditure from October 14, 1915, to April 14, 1916, and an advance estimated premium of $984.24, which together with the additional premium which was a balance due covering seven periods from March 28, 1912, to October 14, 1915, made a total amount due to the state insurance fund of $3,786.14 to April 1, 1916.

I find that Mr. Watson in his calculation and classification of this industry under date of October 18, 1915, has used a different class and sub-class than was originally used to classify this concern, to wit: He has used class 10, class 25, sub-class 22, 72, 38½ and 11-a, whereas class 25 or sub-class 72, 38½ and 11-a do not appear in any of the former classifications of the industry. The amount of the actual pay roll expended is also different in Mr. Watson's calculation than the amount contained in previous settlement sheets. Mr. Watson also informs us that there has always been great difficulty experienced with this company in getting the actual amount of the pay roll expenditure and that the new organization or company realized this when it took over the old company and it employed Mr. Edwin Merrill, a former employe of the industrial commission, to audit its pay roll with a view to applying a proper classification and proper rate against the same. Mr. Watson also says that Mr. Merrill's report as to the audit of the pay rolls shows something like $1,400 or $1,600 additional premium due the state insurance fund, which amount is not correct, however, owing to some improper application of the system of rating as against said pay rolls. The resolution controlling the application of retroactive rates to the pay rolls, which has been adopted by your commission, is as follows:

> "Be it further Resolved, That no sub-class receive a reduction whose losses have equaled or exceeded its earned premium; and,
> "Be it further Resolved, That every rate revision (where the rate revision is a reduction) be on a retroactive basis from the time the employer paid his first premium into the state insurance fund, provided the sub-class has not shown a deficit in any previous financial statement, in which event the rate shall be retroactive to the date the sub-class exhibited a deficit;

The error throughout this entire transaction seems to have occurred in the improper application of the rate in that the commission's rule had been disregarded by some one in its application on a retroactive adjustment against a period showing a deficit, whereas the rate should not have been applied beyond any period which shows a deficit, and it appears that the application was made without regard to any particular period, where a deficit was shown. This seems to be where the error has occurred.

Mr. Watson informs us that it is his opinion that the newly organized Columbus Bolt Works Company would be willing to adjust this matter by paying to the state insurance fund an amount somewhere about $1,800.00 to $2,000.00. He has also informed us that if a settlement can be made upon this basis and on condition that this company remains as a contributor to the state insurance fund, that under the present rules and system of rating he will individually classify and rate this company, and that within a period of approximately two years based upon the accident experience which has developed with the Columbus Bolt Works Company any amount remaining unpaid between the amount of $1,800.00 or $2,000.00 and $3,786.14 will be recovered to the state insurance fund.

If this statement of the actuary is true and can be successfully carried out by agreement with the Columbus Bolt Works Company it would seem to be advisable to adopt that plan.

The question submitted in your letter above quoted is one which concerns the administration and policy of your department in relation to the proper classification and rating of the employments of employers coming within the provisions of the workmen's compensation law, and it seems that an adjustment should be made between your commission and the Columbus Bolt Works Company which would be satisfactory both to the commission and the company.

There is, however, a legal question involved as to the power of the commission to go back of a six-months period in adjusting rates. Inasmuch as you have been following the rule of going back beyond such period, I would hesitate to recommend any change until the question is raised by some contributor and passed upon by the court of last resort.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BUILDING COMMISSION—SALARY—SECTIONS 2343 TO 2366, G. C., APPLICABLE TO COMMISSION—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS APPROVE PLANS AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEY APPROVES CONTRACTS—HOW INMATES ARE TO BE CARED FOR WHEN INFIRMARY DESTROYED.

1. The time of fixing the salary of a building commission, appointed under the provisions of section 2333, G. C., and the method of paying such salary are matters wholly within the discretion of the judge appointing said commission. The bond required of each person appointed must be the same in amount as required of county commissioners, and the clerk of the board of county commissioners may act as clerk of said commission.

2. Section 2338, G. C., as amended by the adoption of the Code in 1910, limits the powers of building commissions as granted in the original act creating them, and the provisions of sections 2343 to 2366, G. C., applying to the erection of public buildings must be observed by said commissions. In case of the erection of an infirmary, the county commissioners must approve the plans as provided by section 2349, G. C., and the prosecuting attorney must approve the contracts as provided by section 2356, G. C.

3. When a county infirmary has been destroyed by fire the inmates thereof, during the erection of a new building, may be placed in infirmaries in other counties, but such disposition of them is strictly a temporary emergency proceeding and if they may be cared for within the county such plan is to be preferred.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1916.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of January 19, 1916, as follows:

"An election having been held in Warren county, pursuant to the provisions of section 5639-1 of the General Code of Ohio, upon the expenditure of money in the erection of an infirmary building, and having resulted favorably to such an expenditure, the commissioners are now about to apply to a judge of the common pleas court of this county for the appointment of four persons as members of the building commission as provided by section 2333 of the General Code. Section 2342 provides that the auditor shall be the clerk of the building commission. Section 2409 provides for the appointment of a commissioner's clerk and relieves the auditor from the duty of acting as secretary to the board of commissioners as provided in section 2566.

"I desire to inquire first, when the four gentlemen, who are to act as members of the building commission in connection with the county commissioners, are appointed should their compensation be fixed at that time under section 2334, G. C., by the judge appointing them, or should it be fixed at the time of the completion of their work?

"Second. Is an order of the court appointing them fixing the amount of their bond necessary, or should they give the same bond which the commissioners in this county have given, which is $5,000.00?

"Third. Is the auditor their clerk or is he relieved from that duty by reason of the fact that the commissioners have heretofore appointed a commissioner's clerk?

"Fourth. Do sections 2343 to 2366, G. C., inclusive, apply to building commissions appointed under Sec. 2333, G. C., and does the last paragraph of Sec. 2338, which reads, 'and shall be governed by the provisions of this chapter relating to the erection of public buildings of the county,' as construed by the court in the case of The State, ex rel., v. Cass, 13 C. C. N. S. at page 449, change the rule as laid down by the supreme court in the McKenzie, et al., v. State case in 76 O. S., at page 369? It will be noted that Sec. 2338 was last amended on March 14, 1906, that the case of McKenzie v. The State above referred to was decided June 4, 1907, but inasmuch as the case of McKenzie v. State was probably brought prior to the last amendment of Sec. 2338, and inasmuch as the circuit court in 13 C. C. N. S., at page 449, hold that a commission appointed previous to the amendment of Sec. 2338, G. C., was not governed by the provisions of Sec. 2343, G. C., to Sec. 2366, G. C., inclusive, it occurs to me that possibly the amendment to Sec. 2338, G. C., would be held to change the rule as laid down in McKenzie v. State.

"Fifth. If Sec. 2343, G. C., to Sec. 2366, G. C., inclusive, apply, then in that event, should the plans, drawings, etc., be approved by the commissioners under Sec. 2349, as a body separate from the building commission, the board of infirmary directors having been abolished?

"Sixth. Is the prosecuting attorney, under Sec. 2356, G. C., required to sign the contract for the new building and is he required to sign the contract with the architect in the event each of such contracts exceed $1,000.00?

"I desire to inquire further whether or not in a county in which the infirmary has been destroyed by fire, if the commissioners may legally contract with infirmaries in other counties for the care of a part of the inmates of such destroyed infirmary, when there is no suitable building that may be utilized for an infirmary pending the rebuilding of the destroyed structure?"

In answer to your first question, the time of fixing the compensation of the members of the building commission in question under the provisions of section 2334, G. C., is a matter addressed entirely to the discretion of the court. This is also true of the method of payment. The compensation may be fixed at the time of appointment as a salary to be paid at stated intervals, or it may be fixed and allowed in such sums as the court thinks proper from time to time during the course of the employment of the commission, or it may be paid in one lump sum at the completion of the work of the commission, but the amount so paid under any plan or method is subject to the limitation that it may not in the aggregate exceed two and one-half per cent. of the amount received by the county from the sale of bonds or from taxes raised for the purpose of constructing said building.

Answering your second question, section 2336, G. C., commands and requires each member of the commission to give a bond in the same amount as required of county commissioners. The statute therefore fixes the amount of the bond and no order of the court is necessary in that regard.

I am of the opinion in answer to your third question that a clerk of the board of county commissioners, appointed under the provisions of said section 2409, G. C., may perform for the building commission the duties imposed by section 2342, G. C., upon the county auditor.

The paragraph in section 2338, G. C., to which you refer in your fourth question, which reads as follows: "And shall be governed by the provisions of this chapter relating to the erection of public buildings of the county," was first made a part of said section by the adoption of the code in 1910. It is generally understood that this amendment was made to this section in view of the construction theretofore placed upon said section in the case to which you refer, viz.: McKenzie v. The State, 76 O. S., 369. The effect of this amendment, therefore, is to limit the powers of the commission as granted in the original act and as constructed in the case aforesaid, and to confine said commission to an observance of all the provisions of the chapter named relating to the erection of public buildings. It follows that said sections 2343 to 2366, G. C., apply to building commissions and must be followed by them. The plans, therefore, must be submitted to the commissioners as provided by section 2349, G. C., and in this connection it must be observed also that said plans must be submitted to the state board of charities as provided by section 1353, G. C. The prosecuting attorney also must approve the contract made for the erection of the building as provided by section 2356, G. C.

Referring now to your last inquiry, while there are no statutory provisions covering the matter therein submitted, I incline to the opinion that the county commissioners under their general powers may make provision for caring for the former inmates of your infirmary by placing them in infirmaries of other counties until your new building may be completed. If this may be done as cheaply or at a less cost than by renting temporary quarters or by contracting for their care within your county there may be no ground for criticism or complaint and as the duty of caring for them is imperative upon the board of county commissioners, I think they may lawfully exercise their discretion in so doing by providing for their care in other infirmaries during the erection of your new building. This, however, should be regarded as strictly a temporary emergency proceeding and if said inmates may be cared for within your county at a reasonable expense, where they will be at all times under the personal supervision and control of your commissioners, such disposition of them is to be preferred.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE UPSON-WALTON COMPANY DISAPPROVED—PURPOSE CLAUSE CONTAINS MORE THAN ONE MAIN PURPOSE.

The secretary of state advised not to accept or record the certificate amending the articles of incorporation of the Upson-Walton Company, because the purpose clause as amended contains more than one main purpose.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 1st, enclosing a certificate of amendment to the articles of incorporation of the Upson-Walton Company presented to you for filing and recording, also check of five dollars, a ten-cent revenue stamp, and a communication from Messrs. White, Johnson, Cannon and Neft, attorneys for the Upson-Walton Company, in which you request my opinion as to the legality of the amended purpose clause and whether you should accept and record the same. The proposed certificate of amendment recites, in part, as follows:

"Resolved, That the articles of incorporation of the Upson-Walton Company be, and the same are hereby amended so as to change article 3 from

"'Said corporation is formed for the purpose of carrying on a general cordage and ship chandlery business and for importing, manufacturing and dealing in all articles used in those branches of business, and also for importing manufacturing and dealing in all articles used in the construction, equipment and repairing of vessels, and in supplying the wants of vessels and their crews, and for building, owning, operating and selling vessels of all kinds.'

To

"'Said corporation is formed for the purpose of manufacturing, buying, selling, leasing and dealing in machinery, cordage, ship supplies, hardware, paint, oils, dry goods and other merchandise, and for the purpose of carrying on a general hardware, machinery, and railway mill and mine supply business, and to do all things that a general hardware or ship chandler company could or might do, and for importing, exporting, manufacturing and dealing in all articles used in those branches of business, and also for importing, exporting, manufacturing and dealing in all articles used in the construction, equipment and repairing of vessels, or in supplying the wants of vessels or their crews, and for building, owning, operating and selling vessels of all kinds, and to do all things incident thereto or connected therewith.'"

I am informed that this corporation has been incorporated and in active operation for a number of years. I do not, therefore, deem it necessary, or even advisable, at this time to consider the legality of the purpose clause contained in its original articles of incorporation. The sole question here to determine is whether or not the purpose clause which the company seeks to adopt by amendment is authorized by law. Section 8623, General Code, provides:

"Except for carrying on professional business, a corporation may be formed for any purpose for which natural persons lawfully may associate themselves."

The supreme court of Ohio in the case of State ex rel. v. Taylor, 55 O. S., 61, laid down the rule that corporations can be organized, under the above quoted language, for one main purpose only and such collateral purposes as may be incidental to the main purpose. This rule has been universally followed by my predecessors in office in advising your department.

I am clearly of the opinion that the proposed amendment to the purpose clause of the articles of incorporation of the Upson-Walton Company sets forth more than one main purpose. Among other things, it would permit the corporation to do a manufacturing business, a merchandise business and a transportation business.

I, therefore, advise you that you should not accept and record the proposed certificate of amendment of its articles of incorporation presented by the Upson-Watson Company.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE DENTAL BOARD—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 1316, G. C., AND SECTION 22, ARTICLE II, CONSTITUTION—SPECIFIC APPROPRIATION REQUIRED OF MONEYS PAID INTO STATE TREASURY.

Section 1316, G. C., 106 O. L., 297, is not such an appropriation of the funds paid into the state treasury by the secretary of the state dental board as is contemplated by section 22 of article II of the constitution, as such funds cannot be used by said board until so appropriated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 5, 1916.

DR. R. H. VOLLMAYER, Secretary Ohio State Dental Board, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 31, 1916, requesting my opinion received, and is as follows:

> "As we have spent all the appropriation allowed us for transportation, it is necessary for us at this time either to be able to draw upon the money we have deposited with the state auditor or to apply to the emergency board for assistance. The last sentence of 1316 reads as follows:
> " 'Each week all moneys received by the secretary shall be paid by him into the state treasury to the credit of a fund for the use of the state dental board.' "
> "I believe that in 1913 there was a law passed by the general assembly requiring the auditor to put all moneys received by him from the various state boards into the general fund. This section 1316, however, was amended by the general assembly of 1915 to read that this money should be placed in the state treasury to the credit of a fund for the use of the state dental board. Will you please let me know at your earliest convenience whether or not it would be proper for us to draw a voucher on this fund?"

Section 1316, G. C., 106 O. L. 297, provides in part as follows:

> "Each week all moneys received by the secretary shall be paid by him into the state treasury to the credit of a fund for the use of the state dental board."

Section 22 of article II of the constitution of the state of Ohio provides as follows:

> "No moneys shall be drawn from the treasury except in pursuance of a specific appropriation made by law."

The effect of the provision of section 1316, supra, is to require the secretary of the Ohio state dental board to pay into the state treasury each week all moneys received by him, and directs that the same be carried in a fund for the use of said board, thereby precluding the use of said money for any other purpose, but said provision is in no sense an appropriation of such moneys as contemplated by section 22 of article II of the constitution, supra.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that it would not be proper for the auditor of state to issue a warrant against said funds upon a voucher drawn by your board until a specific appropriation of said moneys has been made by the general assembly.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE GEORGE B. LUPHER COMPANY—UNISSUED COMMON STOCK CHANGED TO PREFERRED STOCK.

Secretary of state advised to receive and record the certificate of amendment to the articles of incorporation of the George B. Lupher Company which changes, by unanimous written consent of all its stockholders $50,000 of its unissued common stock to preferred stock.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 3, 1916, with enclosures, in which you request me to advise you whether or not you should accept and record the certificate of amendment to its articles of incorporation presented to you by the George B. Lupfer Company.

In your letter you state that the authorized capital stock of this corporation is $100,000.00, consisting entirely of common stock. The corporation by its proposed amendment seeks to change $50,000.00 of its authorized common stock to preferred stock, and to create certain designations, preferences and restrictions upon the voting power thereof.

The certificate recites that the proposed amendment is authorized by the written consent of all the stockholders of said corporation. I am in receipt also of a letter from Mr. Charles J. Pretzman, attorney for the George B. Lupher Company, under date of February 4, 1916, in which he states that: "No part of the $50,000.00 of common stock which the company by its amendment seeks to change to preferred stock has ever been issued."

Upon the facts herein recited, and for the reasons set forth in my opinion to you of January 11, 1916, being opinion No. 1160, I am of the opinion that you are authorized to accept and record the said certificate of amendment of the George B. Lupher Company.

I am returning to you the said certificate of amendment, check for $5.00, and ten-cent internal revenue stamp enclosed in your letter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—FORM OF BOND OF DEPOSITORY FOR MONEYS PRIVATELY CONTRIBUTED FOR ROAD WORK.

Form of bond prescribed of the depository for moneys contributed to the state highway commissioner for road work.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 18, 1916, which reads as follows:

"I respectfully direct your attention to your opinion No. 1154 in which you advise that the state highway commissioner should act as custodian of private funds contributed in connection with state road improvement, with the condition that the depository furnish a surety bond for the safe keeping of such funds.

"I am attaching hereto a blank form of depository bond and respectfully request that your office make the insertions necessary to constitute such blank a valid bond in accordance with your opinion.

"If it is found that the blank form submitted cannot be satisfactorily filled in so as to meet our requirements, I respectfully request that you furnish this department with a blank form of bond which will amply protect me when acting as custodian of private funds."

JAIL OR TURNKEY FEES ALLOWED BY SECTION 2845, G. C., MUST BE PAID BY SHERIFF INTO HIS FEE FUND—HOW PAID IN CASES WHERE STATE FAILS TO CONVICT—WHEN SHERIFF MAY BE PAID SUCH FEES.

The costs known as jail fees allowed by section 2845, G. C., for receiving, discharging and surrendering a prisoner, when paid to the sheriff in cases from a city court having a contract with the county for the care of its prisoners, are received by said sheriff by virtue of his office and must be paid by him into the sheriff's fee fund.

In cases wherein the state fails to convict, such fees may be submitted to the county commissioners with other costs, as provided by section 2846, G. C., and if allowed by said commissioners may be paid to the sheriff.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 7, 1916.

HON. FORREST G. LONG, Prosecuting Attorney, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of December 23d submitting the following statement and inquiries:

> "Logan county has a jail for its own state prisoners and also has a contract with the city of Bellefontaine, Ohio, for the care of city prisoners. When a prisoner is put into this jail fifty cents is charged against him in the costs and when said prisoner is taken out of jail another fifty cents is charged against him in his costs, commonly called turnkey's fee. All of such fees have heretofore been turned into the sheriff's fee fund. State inspector holds that turnkey fees, in city cases, belong to the sheriff individually, but the city solicitor holds the opposite opinion.
> "State inspector also says that in state cases, where the state fails to convict, the turnkey fees belong to the sheriff individually.
> "The sheriff has no official turnkey but does the work himself or hires it done both for state and city cases. We beg to ask your opinion in answer to the following questions:
> "1. Where the sheriff receives turnkey fees through the city court of Bellefontaine, to whom do they belong?
> "2. In cases where the state prosecutes and fails to convict, to whom do the fees belong?
> "3. If the turnkey fees, in municipal cases as above stated and in state cases where the case is lost as above stated, belong to the sheriff individually, can he recover from the due fee fund the amount of such fees paid in by him during the year 1915?"

If the city of Bellefontaine has a contract with Logan county whereby the county jail is used by the city for its prisoners, the sheriff of said county who receives said city prisoners into the county jail and discharges them therefrom does so by virtue of his official position as sheriff of said county. The costs, known as jail or turnkey fees, to which you refer, are, therefore, due the sheriff as such county official, are earned by him as such official under section 2845, G. C., and the services for which said fees are paid to him are part of his official duties as sheriff of Logan county. It follows, therefore, that such fees, when so received by him, should be paid with other fees and costs into the sheriff's fee fund.

In answer, therefore, to your first question, when such fees are paid to the sheriff of said county through the city court of Bellefontaine they belong to the sheriff's fee fund and should be paid into said fund by the sheriff when so received.

In answer to your second question it may be said that in all cases wherein the state fails to convict such fees belong to no one because they may not be taxed against either the defendant or the state of Ohio. However, in such cases these fees, with other costs which have been earned by the sheriff in cases wherein the state fails to convict, may be submitted to the county commissioners under the provisions of section 2846, G. C., which provides in part as follows:

> "Upon the certificate of the clerk and the allowance of the county commissioners the sheriff shall receive from the county treasury in addition to his salary his legal fees for services in criminal cases wherein the state fails to convict and in misdemeanors upon conviction where the defendant proves insolvent, but not more than three hundred dollars shall be allowed for the services rendered in any one year of his term."

This section expressly directs that the allowance made thereunder shall be received by the sheriff in addition to his salary. By reason of this provision, therefore, all allowances made under favor of this statute are paid to the sheriff and belong to him independent of his salary. This application of the law is in harmony with an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. T. S. Hogan, reported at page 1182 of volume II of the attorney-General's report for the year 1912. In this opinion a full history of the legislation upon this particular matter is given.

Therefore, in answer to your second question I must advise that said fees in the cases mentioned therein, viz.: Cases wherein the state fails to convict, may be submitted to the county commissioners under favor of said section 2846, supra, and if allowed by said commissioners belong to the sheriff.

The foregoing observations made in answer to your first and second inquiries sufficiently answer your third inquiry. However, I desire to say that in all cases in which prisoners are committed to the county jail, as stated by you in your first inquiry, the jail fees paid in such cases belong to the sheriff's fee fund and may under no circumstances be claimed by the sheriff. In all other cases jail fees stand precisely as other costs and when paid to the sheriff he must cover them into the county treasury with all other fees. When, however, the state fails to convict or when in cases of misdemeanor the defendant proves insolvent, these fees may be submitted to the county commissioners as provided by section 2846, G. C., supra, and if allowed by said commissioners may be paid and belong to the sheriff.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—EXCESSIVE AMOUNTS ALLOWED BY CITY TO CONTRACTORS ON PARTIAL ESTIMATES—INTEREST NOT CHARGEABLE IN ABSENCE OF FRAUD—NOT ENTITLED TO INTEREST ON FINAL ESTIMATE UNTIL DEMAND FOR BALANCE AND REFUSAL.

If without fraud on the part of a contractor, he is allowed excessive amounts on partial estimates, he is not chargeable with interest during the time he was in possession of such excessive amounts; otherwise if fraud on his part.

If by mutual mistake contractor has on final estimate not been paid full amount due him, he is not entitled to interest on balance due, until demand for balance and refusal.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 21, 1915, you submitted for my opinion two questions.

The first question which you ask is stated as follows:

> "Our examiners have developed some unusual conditions in the city of Akron, Ohio, as regards the payments to contractors for construction of public improvements, and we desire to know what your ruling would be as to charging interest on the excessive payments to said contractors upon partial estimates, etc. For instance, it was found that in some paving contracts, the quantities allowed on partial estimates greatly exceeded the estimated quantities in the preliminary estimate as well as the actual quantities determined in the final estimate. This practice, or custom, was quite general in the operations of the engineering department and resulted in contractors having the use of a considerable sum of money that otherwise would have been in the city treasury earning the depository rate of interest.
> "Question 1. Under such circumstances could a finding for recovery be enforced against the contractors for interest upon the moneys received upon excessive partial estimates, and if so, should the computation be made at the legal rate (6%) or at the rate paid by the depository bank?"

The partial payments on public improvements are based on the estimates of the engineer, and if the engineer has incorrectly estimated the amount and the contractor has received the amount without knowledge of the incorrect estimate, it is a mutual mistake of fact.

The rule as laid down in 22 Cyc., page 1506, is as follows:

> "It has been held that interest will not be allowed on money paid and received through a mutual mistake of the parties, without fraud or misconduct on the part of either, until after discovery of the mistake and ascertainment of the person to whom the money is rightly due; but in other cases interest has been allowed notwithstanding such mistake."

I have been unable to find any case in Ohio which bears directly upon this subject, but the rule as first laid down above seems to me to be the correct rule.

That is to say, if without fraud or misconduct upon the part of the contractor he has received what he supposed to be a proper estimate of the amount of work done by him and has been paid thereon, he should not be chargeable with interest for having received an amount over and above what in fact was the proper estimate; but if through fraud on his part an improper estimate has been paid him and he has received money that is in excess of the amount rightfully due him, he should be chargeable with interest.

In the case which you submit it appears that upon the final estimate the proper amount has been paid to the contractor; but if said contractor has, through fraud, obtained a greater sum on partial estimates than that to which he was entitled, he has been benefited thereby to the extent of the excess and the city has been damaged thereby.

If the contractor, in the absence of fraud or misconduct on his part, has received excessive payments on partial estimates, and the city has subsequently paid him the proper amount on final estimate, I believe that that could properly be considered as an accord and satisfaction, but not so if fraud intervenes. Fraud being present, there can be no proper accord and satisfaction.

Answering your first question, therefore, I am of the opinion that a finding could not be enforced against the contractor for interest on moneys received upon excessive partial estimates in the absence of fraud, but that if he has fraudulently received excessive partial estimates he may be charged with interest for the time that he had the use and benefit of money received on such partial estimates.

You further inquire as to the rate at which interest should be computed. The interest charged against a contractor who has fraudulently received money upon excessive partial estimates is by way of damages, and is to be computed at the rate the money would have earned had such payments not been made, which would be at the depository rate of interest.

Your second question is as follows:

> "In some instances it has been found that the contractor, accepting payment on final estimate, certified to by the engineer and allowed by the director of service, had not been paid for all work actually performed by him under his contract. For instance, in one improvement, although sidewalks on both sides of the street had been constructed, a certain contractor had only been paid for sidewalk on one side of the street. In another street paving contract, he had not been paid for the brick pavement; but in both instances, said contractor had accepted the final estimate of the engineer, which was erroneous in the particulars set forth.
> "Question 2. Under the above circumstances, would the contractor be entitled to interest on the moneys withheld by reason of said errors, and at what rate of interest?"

A contract with the city which does not provide for interest to be paid on deferred payments would not bear interest except by way of damages.

It has been held that

> "Where the fact of nonpayment is ascribable to mutual misapprehension of the parties, * * * interest does not run from that time till the debt is demanded."
> Perley on the Law of Interest, page 138.

In the case which you have submitted there was undoubtedly a mutual mistake of the engineer in estimating the work and the contractor in accepting the final payment.

Such being the case, I am of the opinion that under the facts stated by you the contractor would not be entitled to interest on the moneys withheld by reason of the said error until he had made demand therefor and the same had been refused. If he has made demand and the same has not been paid over to him the rate of interest to which he would be entitled would be the legal rate of interest, which has been fixed in Ohio at six per cent.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—WHAT TOWNSHIP OFFICERS SHOULD ATTEND MEETING PROVIDED BY SECTION 7189, G. C.—TOWNSHIP CLERKS SHOULD NOT ATTEND—HOW EXPENSES AND PER DIEM OF TOWNSHIP OFFICERS ARE TO BE PAID.

1. The county highway superintendent in calling the meeting provided for by section 7189, G. C., should not request the attendance of township clerks, and even should a township clerk attend such meeting, his expenses and per diem for such attendance may not be paid from the public treasury.

2. Where township officers attend the meetings provided for by section 7189, G. C., their actual and necessary expenses incurred in such attendance should be paid from the general fund in the county treasury and their per diem should be paid from the township treasury.

3. The per diem of township trustees for their attendance at the meeting provided for by section 7189, G. C., comes within the limitation of $150.00 provided by section 3294, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of January 24, 1916, which reads as follows:

> "We would respectfully ask for your construction of the meaning of section 7189, General Code, as amended 106 O. L., 615, as same may affect the following questions:
> "(1) May the county highway superintendent, in calling a meeting provided for, include the clerks of townships; and if so, are their expenses and per diem, or compensation, to be paid?
> "(2) Where township officers are requested to attend this meeting, are the expenses of attendance to be paid out of the county treasury; if so, out of what fund?
> "(3) Are the per diems, or compensations, of township officers to be paid out of the county treasury, or out of the township treasury?
> "(4) In the case of township trustees, does the per diem so paid them come within the limitation of $150.00 a year as provided by section 3294, G. C.?"

Section 7189, G. C., 106 O. L., 615, referred to by you, reads as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of the county highway superintendent to annually call a meeting within the county, at a time and place to be approved by the state highway commissioner, of all the township and county authorities having directly to do with the construction and repair of roads and bridges within the county. Such meeting shall be open to the general public. At such meeting, the county highway superintendent, or such other person as may be designated by the state highway commissioner, shall instruct the proper authorities as to the best and most economical plans for repairing and maintaining the roads and bridges of the county, so as to provide a uniform system of highway work for the county. Each official attending such meeting shall receive for attending such meeting his actual and necessary expenses in addition to his regular per diem, or salary, the same to be paid by the county treasurer on itemized vouchers approved by the county highway superintendent."

Referring to your first question, it will be noted from the section above quoted that only those county and township authorities having directly to do with the construction and repair of roads and bridges are required to attend the meeting called by the county highway superintendent. Township trustees and township highway superintendents are township officers of this class, but it cannot be said that township clerks have directly to do with the construction and repair of roads or bridges. It therefore follows that the county highway superintendent, in calling the meeting provided for by section 7189, G. C., should not request the attendance of township clerks, and even should a township clerk attend such meeting, his expenses and per diem or compensation for such attendance may not be paid from the public treasury.

Your second and third questions involve a construction of the language used in the last sentence of the section above quoted. It will be noted that in this sentence reference is made to the "regular per diem" of those officers attending the meeting. The regular per diem of township trustees is payable from the township treasury. I am of the opinion that the word "same" as used in this sentence refers only to the expression "actual and necessary expenses." The statute directs that such expenses must be paid by the county treasurer and it must, therefore, have been intended by the legislature that payment should be made from the county treasury, and inasmuch as the statute does not direct payment from any specific fund, it must have been in the mind of the legislature that payment should be made from the general county fund. Answering your second and third questions, specifically, I advise you that where township officers attend the meeting provided for by section 7189, G. C., their actual and necessary expenses incurred in such attendance should be paid from the general fund in the county treasury and their per diem should be paid from the township treasury.

Section 3294, G. C., provides that the compensation of any township trustee to be paid from the treasury shall not exceed one hundred and fifty dollars in any year including services in connection with the poor. Inasmuch as the per diem of township trustees for their attendance at the meeting provided for by section 7189, G. C., is to be paid from the township treasury, it follows, in answer to your fourth question, that such per diem comes within the limitation of $150.00 provided by section 3294, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CLERK OF COURTS—COMMISSION ALLOWED FOR COLLECTING MONEYS ON JUDGMENTS SUCH AS ALIMONY ORDERED PAID TO CLERK—FEE FOR ENTERING ON CASH BOOKS, COSTS RECEIVED —NO COMMISSION MAY BE CHARGED ON DEPOSITS OR PRE-PAYMENT OF COSTS IN DIVORCE CASES.

Clerks of courts are required to charge and collect a commission of one per centum on the first one thousand dollars and one-fourth of one per centum on all exceeding one thousand dollars of all money to them paid pursuant to an order of court or on judgments, except payments of costs and fees, which have not been collected by the sheriff or other officer on order of execution.

The fee of twenty-five cents for entering on the cash books costs received may be charged but once in each cause.

No commission may be charged on deposits or pre-payment of costs in divorce cases, by the clerk of common pleas court.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your inquiry under date of January 28, 1916, is as follows:

"Sections 2977 and 2978 of the county salary law requires the officers therein named to tax and collect all the fees allowed by law for the benefit of their fee funds. Section 2901, General Code, contains the following provision:

"'* * * For receiving and disbursing money, other than costs and fees, paid to such clerks in pursuance of an order of court or on judgments, and which has not been collected by the sheriff or other proper officer on order of execution, to be taxed against the party charged with the payment of such money, a commission of one per centum on the first one thousand dollars, and one-fourth of one per centum on all exceeding one thousand dollars; * * *'

"Would this percentage apply to the receipts of alimony by the clerk, ordered by the court to be paid to the clerk and to be disbursed by him?

"If you hold in the affirmative, does the percentage, which the clerk would charge to the person paying the alimony in a court, be a cost which would entitle the clerk to charge the additional fee mentioned in section 2901, General Code, which reads as follows:

"'For entering on cash book costs received in each cause, twenty-five cents;' and would this apply in instances, where alimony is ordered paid in a court weekly? In other words, if you hold in the affirmative, would the commission and the entry fee have to be taxed on every payment of alimony?

"Would the commission mentioned in section 2901, General Code, as quoted above, apply to deposits required by the court to be made in divorce cases to guarantee costs, and would same also apply to attorney fees ordered paid into court by the court at any time and in any kind of a case?

"We think these questions are important because we believe that in no instance do clerks of courts tax this percentage for receiving and disbursing alimony."

Section 2900, G. C., provides in part:

> "For the services hereinafter specified, when rendered, the clerk shall charge and collect the fees provided in this and the next following section and no more."

In the next following section (2901) is found the provision first above quoted in your inquiry. The language of the provision of section 2901, G. C., quoted, when read in connection with that of section 2900, G. C., supra, is clear, specific and unequivocal to the effect that the clerk of courts shall charge and collect a commission of one per centum on the first one thousand dollars, and one-fourth of one per centum on the excess of that amount of all moneys received and disbursed by him, pursuant to an order of court or on judgments, except costs and fees and money collected by the sheriff or other proper officer on order of execution. Barring the specific exceptions, the language of the provision under consideration comprehends all money received and disbursed by the clerk in pursuance of an order of court or on judgments, so that unless payments of alimony come within such specific exceptions, they would be within the requirement of this provision for the collection of the commission prescribed.

Alimony is clearly not within the exception of fees and costs and, therefore, when not collected by the sheriff or other proper officer on order of execution, but paid pursuant to an order or on a judgment of court to the clerk in the discharge of such order or judgment for distribution by the clerk, such payments seem to come clearly within the requirement that the clerk shall charge and collect the prescribed commission, to be taxed against the party charged with the payment of such money. I am therefore of opinion that your first inquiry must be answered in the affirmative, and that it is the duty of clerks of courts to charge and collect the commission prescribed in that part of section 2901, G. C., above quoted, upon all receipts of alimony ordered by the court to be paid to such clerk and by him disbursed.

The language quoted from section 2901, G. C., in your second inquiry, is another of numerous specifically enumerated fees in which it is provided that clerks shall charge and collect.

It will be observed that the language here used is hardly susceptible of such construction as would require the collection of twenty-five cents for the entry of each payment of costs received in each cause. On the contrary, it seems quite clear that the meaning of this provision is that the clerk shall charge and collect once in each cause for entering on the cash book the costs received by him in that cause. It will therefore follow that if the commission referred to is an item of costs in the cause at all, the fee of twenty-five cents for entering on cash book costs received would be chargeable but once in each cause.

Answering your second inquiry more specifically, I am of opinion that the commission should be taxed on every payment of alimony ordered by the court to be paid to the clerk, and that the fee of twenty-five cents for entering on the cash book costs received may be charged but once in each cause.

The first part of your third and last inquiry, I assume, has reference to the pre-payment of costs in divorce cases, which is required in the provisions of section 11981, G. C., following:

> "No clerk of a court of common pleas shall receive or file a petition for divorce or alimony until the party named as plaintiff therein, or some one on his or her behalf, makes pre-payment or deposit with the clerk of such an amount as will cover the costs likely to accrue in the action, exclusive of attorney fee, or gives such security for the costs as in the judgment of the clerk is satisfactory. * * *"

This pre-payment or deposit is only an advance payment of costs and fees and is, therefore, within the exception specifically made in the provision of section 2901, G. C., relative to commission on money received and disbursed by the clerk.

I am, therefore, of opinion that commission may not be charged and collected on pre-payments or deposits for costs in divorce cases. Such money is not in any sense paid pursuant to an order of court or on judgment.

As to the second part of your third inquiry, it may be said that it is hardly practicable here to lay down a rule that would cover every conceivable case without exception. In the majority of those cases in which attorneys' fees, as such, are required to be paid into court for an opposite party, such attorney fees constitute a part of the judgment proper, or are taxable as costs in the case. If such attorney fee is taxable as costs in the case, then under the exception as to fees and costs, no commission is chargeable thereon. If the attorney fees are a part of the judgment proper, then payments thereon to the clerk would be subject to the commission.

It may be observed that what are usually termed attorney fees in divorce and alimony cases are in fact a part of alimony pendente lite, and if paid to the clerk on order of the court would be subject to the commission charge the same as other payments of alimony ordered by the court to be paid to the clerk.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CANAL LANDS—SALE OF A PORTION OF SUCH LANDS IN VILLAGE OF NEWBURGH HEIGHTS, CUYAHOGA COUNTY, AND ALSO IN VILLAGE OF MILLERSPORT, FAIRFIELD COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 26, 1916, transmitting to me resolutions providing for the private sale of certain state canal lands in the village of Newburgh Heights, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, to The American Steel and Wire Company; and certain portions of the spoil embankment of the abandoned Ohio canal property in the village of Millersport, Fairfield county, Ohio, to the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church of Millersport.

I note in both instances that the valuation of the land to be sold is less than five hundred dollars—the land in Newburgh Heights being valued at three hundred and fifty dollars, and the land in Millersport being valued at fifty dollars.

I also note that all the jurisdictional facts have been found by you to exist, and I have therefore attached my signature to the duplicate copies of the two resolutions providing for the sale of the lands in question, and I am herewith returning the same to you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL OF LEASE OF CERTAIN RESERVOIR LANDS TO THE RUSSELL'S POINT AMUSEMENT COMPANY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your letter of February 4, 1916, transmitting to me for examination a lease of certain reservoir lands to The Russell's Point Amusement Company.

It does not appear, from an examination of this lease, whether the lessee is a corporation, or whether it is a partnership operating under a fictitious name. I learned, from an investigation of the records in the office of the secretary of state, that The Russell's Point Amusement Company is a domestic corporation.

I therefore suggest that there be inserted in the first clause of the lease, following the name of the lessee, a recital to the effect that said lessee is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the state of Ohio. The lessee being a corporation it follows that proper evidence that the directors of the corporation authorized the making of the lease should also be required by you. The directors of the corporation, if they have not already done so, should adopt a resolution authorizing the making of the lease and instructing the president and secretary of the corporation to execute the same on behalf of the company. Triplicate copies of this resolution, properly certified, should be furnished, and one copy attached to each copy of the lease. The officers of the corporation should also attach the corporate seal, if the company has a seal.

For the reasons above stated I am returning the lease in question without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF LEASES OF CERTAIN CANAL AND RESERVOIR LANDS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 4, 1916, transmitting to me for examination the following leases of canal and reservoir lands:

	"Valuation.
"A. B. Jones, land at Indian Lake	$883.33
"Thomas E. Thorpe, embankment lot at Indian Lake	883.33
"Mrs. Margaret Byers, Logan, Ohio, abandoned Hocking canal lands at Logan, Ohio	300.00
"C. C. Sherwood, Maumee, Ohio, portion of the old abandoned side cut canal in village of Maumee, Ohio	100.00
"Anthony Toerner, Logan, Ohio, abandoned Hocking canal lands in the village of Logan	300.00"

I find these leases to be in regular form, and I am therefore returning the same to you with my approval endorsed on the triplicate copies thereof.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—IMPROVEMENT MADE UNDER SECTION 6956-1, G. C., NOW REPEALED—WHEN ASSESSMENT MAY BE MADE ON LAND PREVIOUSLY ASSESSED AND LYING WITHIN ONE MILE OF TERMINUS OF ROAD IMPROVED.

Where a road was improved under sections 6956-1, et seq., G. C., now repealed and the road in question connects with or intersects another road previously improved, lands lying within one mile of the terminus of the road improved under sections 6956-1, et seq., G. C., and assessed for the other road previously improved, should also be assessed for a part of the cost of the improvement made under sections 6956-1, et seq., G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 8, 1916.

HON. JOSEPH W. HORNER, Prosecuting Attorney, Newark, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 20, 1916, from which it appears that the improvement of that portion of the Newark-Linnville road immediately north of the National pike and intersecting or connecting with said pike was petitioned for and constructed under the provisions of sections 6956-1 to 6956-15, of the General Code, now repealed. The lands lying south of the National road and within one mile of the southern end of the Newark-Linnville road improvement referred to above have been assessed on account of the improvement of the National road. You desire to know whether any portion of the cost of improving that portion of the Newark-Linnville road referred to above should be assessed against the lands lying south of the National road and within one mile of the southern end of the Newark-Linnville road improvement, in view of the fact that such lands have already been assessed on account of the improvement of the National pike.

It should first be observed that the right to make the assessment under the repealed sections is preserved by the saving provisions of the Cass highway law. Section 6956-10, G. C., provided, among other things, that not less than twenty per cent. nor more than thirty-five per cent. of the cost and expense of an improvement constructed under section 6956-1, et seq., of the General Code, including all damages and compensation awarded, should be assessed upon and collected from the owners of real estate lying and being within one mile from either side, end or terminus of the improvement and assessed according to benefits derived from the improvement as determined by the commissioners. It was further provided that such assessment should be in addition to all other assessments authorized by law, notwithstanding any limitations upon the aggregate amount of assessments on such property.

I know of no principle of law which, in the absence of a statutory inhibition, precludes assessing real estate for a portion of the cost of a road improvement which confers benefits on the real estate in question merely because such real estate has been previously assessed for the improvement of another and different road; and it could not be said that because a particular parcel of real estate is benefited by the improvement of one road no benefit could be conferred upon it by the improvement of another and different road. Some of the old road laws of Ohio contained certain exceptions as to lands previously assessed for other roads, but the statute under which the assessment in this case is to be made expressly recognized the existence of previous assessments for other improvements, and contained no exception in favor of lands previously assessed for such improvements.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the lands referred to by you should be assessed for a part of the cost of the improvement in question, which assessment, like all others, must be according to the benefits derived from the improvement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF CENSORS OF MOTION PICTURE FILMS—MEMBERS OF SUCH BOARD ARE IN UNCLASSIFIED SERVICE OF STATE CIVIL SERVICE.

The members of the board of censors of motion picture films are included in the unclassified service under the provisions of paragraph 3 of section 486-8, G. C., 106 O. L., 404.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 3, 1916, submitting the following inquiry:

> "Will you, therefore, kindly render us an opinion as to whether or not the members of the board of moving picture censors, under the industrial commission, are exempted from the classified service by any provision of section 486-8 of the civil service law?"

The board of censors of motion picture films was created by an act of the general assembly passed April 16, 1913, which is found in 103 O. L., page 399, et seq. Section 1 of this act, being section 871-46 of the General Code, provides as follows:

> "There is created under the authority and supervision of the industrial commission of Ohio, a board of censors of motion picture films. Upon the taking effect of this act, the industrial commission shall appoint with the approval of the governor, three persons, one for one year, one for two years and one for three years, who shall constitute such board. Upon the expiration of the term of each member so appointed a successor shall be appointed in like manner for a term of three years."

Section 486-8 of the General Code, 106 O. L., 404, to which you refer in your inquiry, provides that the civil service of the state of Ohio and the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof shall be divided into the unclassified service and the classified service. Said section further provides that the unclassified service shall comprise certain positions which shall not be included in the classified service and proceeds to specify in twelve paragraphs what positions shall be exempt from examinations required by the civil service act. Paragraph 3 of said exceptions provides as follows:

> "The members of all boards and commissions and heads of principal departments, boards and commission appointed by the governor or by and with his consent; and the members of all boards and commissions and all heads of departments appointed by the mayor, or if there be no mayor such other similar chief appointing authority of any city or city school district. Provided, however, that nothing contained in this act shall exempt the chiefs of police departments and chiefs of fire departments of municipalities from the competitive classified service as provided in this act."

This paragraph of said section 486-8, supra, places the members of all boards and commissions appointed by the governor or by and with his consent in the unclassified service. The section first quoted requires that all members of the board of censors of motion picture films shall be appointed with the approval of the governor. In legal meaning and effect there is no perceptible difference between an appointment made by and with the consent of the governor and one made with his approval. It necessarily follows that members of said board of censors must be held to be included in the provisions of said paragraph 3 aforesaid, which exempt all members of boards appointed by and with the consent of the governor.

I therefore hold that members of the board of censors of motion picture films by virtue of said provisions of paragraph 3 of section 486-8 aforesaid, are included in the unclassified service and are therefore exempt from all examinations required by the civil service law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE FIRE MARSHAL—PAYMENTS MADE FROM ITEM A-3, 106 O. L., 690, ARE NOT SUBJECT TO APPROVAL OF STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

The item designated as A-3 in the appropriations made for state fire marshal, 106 O. L., 690, does not include persons in the classified civil service in the regular employ of said department, and payments from the appropriation for said item are not subject to the approval of the state civil service commission.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1916.

HON. BERT B. BUCKLEY, State Fire Marshal, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 1, 1916, as follows:

"Referring to the appropriation for the department of state fire marshal, H. B., 701, with particular reference to the item appearing at the top of page 33, reading as follows:

"'A-3. Unclassified—

Fees, mileage and maintenance of witnesses, township clerks, special attorneys and stenographers.....$5,474.00'

"Kindly advise this department whether the state civil service commission has any jurisdiction over the expenditures from this contingent fund."

The item designated as A-3 in the appropriations made for your department, 106 O. L., 690, is not intended to include persons in the classified civil service in the regular employ of your department. In addition to the fees and mileage of witnesses, this appropriation is intended for the payment of stenographers employed temporarily to take testimony and statements, and to furnish transcripts of same when necessary for the use of your department in the preparation and prosecution of cases in which it is interested.

As this appropriation is not intended for the payment of persons in the classified civil service in the regular employ of your department, payments which may be made therefrom are not therefore subject to the approval of the state civil service commission. Your inquiry therefore is answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—LIMITED IN CONTRACTS FOR MEDICAL AND SURGICAL TREATMENT AND HOSPITAL SERVICE TO PERSONS WHO ARE PROPER COUNTY CHARGES—LEVY AUTHORIZED BY SECTION 3138-2, G. C.—HOW CONTRACTS WITH HOSPITALS UNDER SECTION 2502, G. C., ARE LIMITED.

The authority conferred upon county commissioners by the provisions of sections 3138-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 67, and 3138-2, G. C., is limited to making contracts with corporations, joint stock companies and associations mentioned in section 3138-1, G. C., for medical and surgical treatment, hospital service and attendance necessary to the proper care and maintenance of the indigent sick and disabled persons who are under the law a proper county charge.

The payment of the contract price for such service must be made from the proceeds of the levy authorized under section 3138-2, G. C., and is subject to the provisions of sections 5660 and 5649-3*d, G. C.*

The authority conferred by the provisions of section 2502, G. C., is limited to contracts with hospitals for reimbursement for the maintenance, support and treatment of indigent poor in such hospital.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 9, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your communication under date of January 31, 1916, is as follows:

> "We are sending you herewith copy of a letter addressed to this department by Hon. Frank J. Murray, probate judge of Madison county, and we would ask your written opinion upon the three questions propounded by Judge Murray in said letter."

The letter of Hon. Frank J. Murray, probate judge of Madison county, to which you refer, is as follows:

> "About two years ago a number of the leading citizens got together and organized what they denominated 'The Health and Welfare League.' Its purpose being to promote the health and general welfare of the community by teaching the people to be clean, to keep their surroundings sanitary, and to administer to the wants of the indigent sick and disabled.

"We work under the supervision of the state board of health.

"To do our work effectively we employed a professional nurse who was sent us by the state board of health. This nurse spends her time going from home to home of the poor people. Where she finds sickness baths are given, changes of clothing are furnished, and instructions given in what and how to cook proper food for the sick. Where there are children this nurse cleans them up, instructs the girls in cooking and sewing, and if there is any defect of vision or adenoids or bad tonsils, a report is made and necessary and proper relief furnished by the league. Likewise visits are made to the schools and examinations made of the students.

"The nurse visits all the homes of the poor people, and it is the effort of the league to bring relief to these people in their homes.

"The report of the nurse for the past year shows that she has been making about eighty to one hundred visits to such homes per month.

"No charge is made for the nurse's services, and any needed surgical operations are paid for by the league.

"This league is incorporated as a corporation not for profit, and has a membership of about one hundred members who contribute fifty cents per year dues. The rest of the money necessary to run the affair is raised by tag day collections and contributions.

"Some time ago a lady of the county died leaving twelve acres in the town of London to the county commissioners to be used by them for a hospital or for any other similar charitable purpose.

"This league thought that with the approval and aid of the commissioners it would equip one of the houses as a sort of an emergency hospital and make it the center and basis of its other health and welfare work.

"The commissioners agreed to help us in this latter undertaking, but when we investigated the property it was found to be in such run-down condition that it would not be feasible to do what we intended in the way of a hospital, so with the consent of the commissioners we have given up that plan for the present. Instead of using this property, we have rented a few rooms elsewhere in the town, which we use for headquarters, and to this place the children are brought for examination for defective vision, adenoids, etc.

"I have attempted to give you the detail information concerning our work. The commissioners have signified their willingness to give us financial aid in the work we are doing without requiring us to equip and maintain the hospital, but I, as a member of the league, have not been satisfied in my own mind that this can be legally done, and because of a difference of opinion we have agreed to submit the matter to you for instruction, realizing, as we do, that if the money is given over to us, it will be your department of inspection and supervision that will call us to time if it is improper.

"Upon the foregoing facts we would like to know:

"1. Whether, under section 3138-1 as amended in Vol. 103, page 67, the commissioners can legally give us aid to carry on our work. Our actual expense is about eleven hundred dollars per year.

"2. If we go ahead and equip an emergency hospital on the property bequeathed to the county, and there take care of the indigent sick of the county who desire to avail themselves, can the county give us financial aid?

"3. If under this last situation the county can help us, will not the aid given have to bear a reasonably close relation to expense we incur in the actual taking care of the indigent, or will the fact that we do take care of a few of the indigent be sufficient justification for the commissioners allowing us as much money as they deem fit, of course keeping within the maximum fixed by law?"

Section 3138-1 of the General Code (103 O. L., 67), to which reference is made, and section 3138-2 of the General Code, provide as follows:

"Section 3138-1. That the board of county commissioners of any county may enter into an agreement with a corporation or association, organized for charitable purposes, or if there is no such corporation or association, then with any corporation or association organized for the purpose of maintaining and operating a hospital in any county where a hospital has been established, or may hereafter be established, for the care of the indigent sick and disabled, excepting persons afflicted with pulmonary tuberculosis, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between said commissioners, and such corporation or association, and said commissioners shall provide for the payment of the amount agreed upon, either in one payment, or installments, or so much from year to year as the parties stipulate.

"Section 3138-2. The board of commissioners may annually, at the June session, levy a tax not exceeding two-tenths of one mill upon the taxable property of said county for the purpose of providing such aid and assistance to any such corporation or association; and all taxes so levied and collected under this act shall be applied under the order of said board to the purpose for which the same are so levied and collected."

It may be first noted that with reference to agreements with corporations or associations organized for the purpose of maintaining and operating a hospital, the authority of the county commissioners may be exercised only in a "county where a hospital has been established, or may hereafter be established, for the care of the indigent sick and disabled." It appears that as yet no such hospital has been so established in the case under consideration, and that part of the section just quoted would, therefore, be without application.

I fail to find any record in the office of the secretary of state of the incorporation of "The Health and Welfare League" referred to and as stated in the above correspondence. If, however, the statement as to the incorporation should be in error, I think sufficient appears in the facts presented to fully warrant the assumption that "The Health and Welfare League" is at least an association organized for charitable purposes such as is contemplated by the terms of section 3138-1, of the General Code, supra.

Any association such as is within the contemplation of section 3138-1 of the General Code, supra, will of necessity be also within and subject to the provisions of section 6 of article VIII of the constitution, which is as follows:

"No laws shall be passed authorizing any county, city, town or township, by a vote of its citizens, or otherwise, to become a stockholder in any joint stock company, corporation or association whatever; or to raise money for or to loan its credit to, or in aid of, any such company, corporation or association. * * *"

From this it clearly follows that no such construction of section 3138-1 of the General Code, supra, may be accepted as to permit the county commissioners to raise funds and appropriate the same to the mere aid or maintenance of any corporation or association of whatever kind, however laudible its purpose or praiseworthy its accomplishments. This was very clearly pointed out in an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, which is found at page 1067 of the report of the attorney-general for the year 1911.

In view of this constitutional inhibition it must be presumed, unless the language admits of no other reasonable interpretation, that the purpose in its enactment was not merely to permit the county commissioners to raise money for the aid of a corporation, joint stock company or association. One of the first duties of public authorities is, however, the care and maintenance of the indigent and helpless poor of society, and this duty has to a very considerable extent heretofore, either directly or indirectly, devolved upon the county commissioners. It would not seem unreasonable, therefore, to assume that the purpose of the enactment of sections 3138-1 and 3138-2, General Code, supra, was to enable the county commissioners to more conveniently and effectively provide for the proper and necessary medical and surgical treatment of the indigent residents of the county who are, under the law, a proper county charge. In other words, the purpose of sections 3138-1 and 3138-2 of the General Code, supra, is to authorize the county commissioners to contract with that class of corporations and associations therein defined for medical and surgical treatment, hospital service and the attendance necessary to the proper care and maintenance of the indigent sick and disabled persons who are under the law a proper county charge.

I am inclined to the view that a contract so limited in its terms and operation for the payment to such corporations or associations as come within the terms of section 3138-1 of the General Code, of a sum not in excess of the fair and reasonable value thereof, made by the commissioners with such corporation or association for medical and surgical treatment, care, maintenance and hospital service of the indigent sick and disabled persons who are a proper county charge, would not contravene the provisions of section 6 of article VIII of the constitution. That is to say: "the aid and assistance" mentioned in section 3138-2 of the General Code, must in all cases be confined to the contract price as a fair and reasonable sum for the services hereinabove defined.

The contract or agreed price to be paid for the above service is not authorized to be paid from the general county fund nor from the poor fund, but on the contrary a special levy is provided therefor. Section 3138-1 is enabling only, hence the use of the word "may" in the succeeding section. It seems quite apparent that it was the legislative intent that in event the agreement provided for in section 3138-1 of the General Code shall be entered into, then the commissioners "shall" make the levy provided for in section 3138-2 of the General Code, and that the price agreed upon shall not be paid out of any other fund than that produced by such levy.

The contract above defined would in any event be subject to the provisions of sections 5660 and 5661 of the General Code, which, in part, are as follows:

> "Sec. 5660. The commissioners of a county * * * shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; * * *
> "Sec. 5661. All contracts, agreements or obligations, and orders or resolutions entered into or passed contrary to the provisions of the next preceding section, shall be void. * * *"

Such contracts or agreements would also be subject to the further provisions of section 5649-3d of the General Code, as follows:

> "At the beginning of each fiscal half year the various boards mentioned in section 5649-3a of this act, shall make appropriations for each of the several objects for which money has to be provided, from the moneys known to be in the treasury from the collection of taxes and all other sources of revenue, and all expenditures within the following six months shall be made from and within such appropriations and balances thereof, but no appropriation shall be made for any purpose not set forth in the annual budget nor for a greater amount for such purpose than the total amount fixed by the budget commissioners, exclusive of receipts and balances."

Since, as it is assumed, no such levy has been made and is now in process of collection, there can be no fund now appropriated which could be certified against as provided in section 5660, of the General Code, supra.

I am, therefore, of the opinion, in answer to your first inquiry, that the county commissioners are without authority to enter into any agreement with "The Health and Welfare League" under the provisions of sections 3138-1 and 3138-2, of the General Code, on the facts submitted, and more particularly are they without authority to otherwise raise money for the aid of such association or corporation. That is to say, the authority under the sections referred to conferred upon the county commissioners is limited to that class of contracts or agreements hereinabove defined, and in the absence of such contract no "aid or assistance" may be afforded or given by the county commissioners to any corporation, joint stock company or association named or referred to in said section 3138-1 of the General Code.

In addition to sections 3138-1 and 3138-2 of the General Code, it is provided by section 2502 of the General Code as follows:

> "Except in counties containing hospitals supported by public funds, the commissioners of any county, in their discretion, may pay to a hospital organized or incorporated for purely charitable purposes, in which the indigent poor of the county may receive, free of charge, needed medical and surgical treatment, a sum not to exceed twenty-five hundred dollars each year. Such amount shall be paid from the county poor fund in equal payments on the first day of January and July, and shall be for the maintenance and support of such indigent poor and the reimbursement of such hospital for treatment thereof. Nothing herein shall authorize the payment of public funds to a sectarian institution."

This section of the General Code is also subject to the provisions of section 6 of article VIII of the constitution, if such hospital is maintained and operated by a corporation, joint stock company or association, and to that general principle of the law of taxation that public funds may not be raised for purely private use and benefit, if such hospital were established, maintained and operated by a private individual so that the operation of this section is, by force of the constitutional provision and the general principles of law referred to, limited to contracts such as are defined in the earlier part of this opinion. It will be noted that the payment of such sum as is mentioned in the earlier part of this section, is specifically limited in the concluding portion thereof to a reimbursement for maintenance, support and treatment of indigent poor in such hospital.

It will be noted further that contracts under this section may be made only with "hospitals organized or incorporated for purely charitable purposes." It could hardly be maintained that "The Health and Welfare League" is such a hospital as is contemplated by the provisions of the section, or that it has, established and in operation, such hospital as is contemplated by the terms of the statute now under consideration.

Contracts under this section would also be subject to the provisions of sections 5660 and 5649-3d of the General Code, supra, and for the same reasons as suggested in reference to contracts under the provisions of section 3138-1, could not be entered into by the county commissioners under the state of facts submitted.

In answer to your second and third questions, I am of the opinion that the county commissioners may enter into such an agreement only with "The Health and Welfare League" as is defined in the answer to the first inquiry, and therefore that further consideration of the second and third enquiries is rendered unnecessary.

Attention is called to opinion No. 893, under date of October 5, 1915, a copy of which is herewith enclosed, in which it is held that the board of education of a school district may, under authority of section 7692 of the General Code (103 O. L., 897), appoint a school physician and a trained nurse to aid in the performance of the duties of such school physician.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

PROPOSED AGREEMENT BETWEEN STATE AND THE MIAMI CONSERVANCY DISTRICT, APPROVED.

A proposed agreement between the state of Ohio and the Miami conservancy district may lawfully be executed by the superintendent of public works, acting on behalf of the state, and when the same has been approved by the governor it will be valid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1916.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 3, 1916, transmitting to me a copy of an agreement between the state of Ohio and the Miami conservancy district, relative to the temporary occupancy of certain portions of the Miami and Erie property by the conservancy district for the purpose of constructing levees and other similar works. The agreement in question has been executed by the conservancy district but has not yet been executed by you and you request my opinion as to whether or not your department has a right to enter into the contract in question.

The agreement and accompanying resolution of the directors of the Miami conservancy district, authorizing execution of the same, read as follows:

> "At a meeting of the board of directors of the Miami conservancy district held at its office in Dayton, Ohio, on Saturday, January 22, 1916, there being present Messrs. Deeds, Allen and Rentschler, upon motion of Mr. Rentschler, seconded by Mr. Allen, and upon roll call, as follows: Mr. Allen voting aye, Mr. Rentschler aye, and the President, Mr. Deeds, aye, it was resolved that the president of the board, duly attested by the secretary, be authorized and directed to enter into an agreement with the superintendent of public works of the state of Ohio, to be approved by the proper officers of the state, reciting the necessity of the agreement with the proper preambles and specifications for the conveyance to the state of Ohio, as specified in the agreement hereinafter written, for the temporary occupation of certain canal property therein specified, and is therein fully stated, and that the president and secretary be fully authorized to carry the same into effect.

"The agreement is as follows:

"AGREEMENT.

"This agreement made and entered into this 22d day of January, 1916, and between the state of Ohio, through its authorized agent, the superintendent of public works, and duly approved by the governor, both officers of the state of Ohio acting for and on behalf of said state pursuant to law, party of the first part, and the Miami conservancy district, a political subdivision of the state of Ohio, a corporation duly established under the conservancy law of Ohio by the court of common pleas of Montgomery county, Ohio, in case No. 36847, June 28, 1915, and duly filed with the secretary of state of Ohio and recorded June 30, 1915, which district was established for the purpose of protecting not only farm lands and public roads in the valley of the Great Miami river from devastating floods, but also the municipalities of Piqua, Troy, Tippecanoe City, Dayton, Miamisburg, Franklin, Middletown, Hamilton and others and which extends from the Loramie reservoir in Shelby county on the north following the Great Miami river and its tributaries down through Hamilton county, party of the second part, Witnesseth:

"Whereas, it becomes necessary in the official plan for flood protection of said district that certain canal lands of the Miami and Erie canal be temporarily occupied; and,

"Whereas, the said officers of the state of Ohio in the performance of their duties desire to protect the ownership of the state in its public works and if possible increase the value of the same by acquiring additional lands and privileges for the improvement of canal lands for a ship canal, which the state may hereafter determine to construct, without any additional cost or expense to the state; and,

"Whereas, the canal property to be temporarily occupied, provided for herein, has not been navigated for many years and is not navigable by reason of the destruction of its banks, locks and works by floods and other causes; and,

"Whereas, the official plan of the party of the second part will require certain temporary flood gates, as hereinafter specified, for the protection of said district from floods; and,

"Whereas, by its power under the law and upon the approval of the official plan, the party of the second part is willing and agrees to compensate the state of Ohio for its privileges herein, and should the state of Ohio determine at some future time to improve or enlarge its present canal system or construct a barge canal, the conservancy district agrees that, at all places where the canal lands are occupied by the constructions or works of the district or where such lands may be within the possible flood line of the water within the reservoirs, it will furnish the state of Ohio a right-of-way of the same width and cross section as that now occupied by said canal, which right-of-way shall be protected from floods by the district without expense to the state, or if said right-of-way and flood protection is not furnished the state within a reasonable time to be named by the proper state authority, the district agrees to pay in cash the amount of money required therefor by the state; and,

"Whereas, it is specifically agreed by the said district that so long as any part of the public works of Ohio remains within the territory which would be flooded by reason of the construction or operation of any part of the works or devices of the Miami conservancy district, as shown by its official plan, it will repair the same without expense to the state for any damage done to the public works of Ohio on demand of the superintendent of public works, or his successor; and,

"Whereas, it is specifically agreed that the state of Ohio shall not by reason of this agreement lose title to or alienate any of its property or any of its rights to the canal, and that the arrangement outlined in this agreement is a temporary one to hold only until such time as navigation is resumed or the state determines upon a policy as to its canal lands; and,

"Whereas, the word 'temporary' as used herein does not signify that the works or plans of the Miami conservancy district are temporary, but indicates that as against the state the works of the district contained in the several items below enumerated are temporary, and that other plans consistent with the protection of the said district will be inaugurated by the district in lieu thereof in order to carry out its flood protection plans, and that such changes will not be a burdensome expense, and that such new plans cannot be perfected until the plans of navigation or other plans have been made definite by the state; and,

"Whereas, under section 15 of the conservancy law of Ohio under the general powers therein defined, the party of the second part is authorized and empowered to construct any and all of the works and improvements of said district across, through or over any public highway or canal, in or out of said district, and to remove or change the location of any canal or other improvement in or out of said district, and the right to sell real or personal property or any easement, riparian right, right-of-way or canal, for any necessary purposes; and,

"Whereas, it is further agreed that such works as are hereinafter described under the several items will not be constructed until plans for such construction have been submitted by the party of the second part to the superintendent of public works and have been approved by him. This, however, shall not apply to item 7 so as to require the said superintendent of public works to approve the plans and construction of the proposed dam, but the plans for the construction of a canal across said dam shall be submitted by the proper authorities to the said party of the second part for its approval; and,

"Whereas, all of said plans are subject to the approval of said court of common pleas in the adoption of said official plan of said the Miami conservancy district according to law.

"Now, therefore, It is agreed that the particular points where the canal property will be affected by the works of the district and the particular arrangement to be entered into are outlined in detail, as follows:

"Item 1. At a point about one and one-quarter miles north of the village of Lockington, where it is necessary to construct a road across the canal, the conservancy district agrees to construct, at its own expense, a lift bridge equal in character to those heretofore built and of sufficient dimensions to care for traffic and span the canal. However, as such a bridge probably would deteriorate before the canal again comes into operation, it is agreed that the construction of such bridge shall be postponed until the canal is in operation, and that until such time, a road crossing may be built across the canal by means of a fill through which shall be placed a pipe of sufficient dimensions to carry the water flowing in the canal, the exact size of said pipe to be determined and approved by the superintendent of public works. This fill shall be similar in character to the one now crossing the canal a short distance south of the point indicated.

"Item 2. At a point about three-quarters of a mile north of the village of Lockington, where it is necessary to construct a road crossing over the canal, it is agreed that an exactly similar course shall be taken, as in the above mentioned case, and that the exact size of such pipe shall be determined and approved by the superintendent of public works.

"Item 3. Between these two crossings, it is agreed to allow the construction of a highway within the canal right-of-way and immediately adjoining the canal, this highway to be removed, whenever, due to resuming navigation in the canal, such removal shall, in the opinion of the superintendent of public works, or his successor, be desirable.

"Item 4. It is agreed that at a point just north of the city of Troy, where a ditch now crosses under the canal, a levee shall be built across the canal, immediately south of such ditch, with sufficient opening to allow water now flowing in the canal to pass, said opening to be fitted with gates which may be closed during floods, the size of said gates to be determined and approved by the superintendent of public works, when the water otherwise would flow into the city of Troy. It is further agreed that such levee will be removed whenever, as a result of the resumption of navigation, such removal shall, in the opinion of the superintendent of public works, or his successor, be desirable.

"Item 5. It is agreed that a levee may be constructed on the east side of the canal, within the canal right-of-way, extending from the above mentioned point southerly to high ground within the limits of the city of Troy of such height as may be necessary to prevent flood waters from the Miami river crossing the canal and flowing into the city of Troy, it being further agreed that such levee shall be removed whenever, with the resumption of navigation, the superintendent of public works, or his successor, shall indicate such removal to be necessary or desirable.

"Item 6. It is agreed that at Tippecanoe City a levee may be constructed along the canal, for all or a part of the distance from the crossing of the east and west road just north of the city, southerly to the southerly corporation limits of Tippecanoe City, such levee may be wholly or partly within the canal right-of-way, and may, if necessary, cross from one side to the other of the right-of-way. In the bottom of this levee, where it follows within the canal right-of-way, a 24-inch pipe shall be placed to furnish water to all persons now receiving water, through this reach of the canal, under lease from the state, the size of said pipe to be approved and determined by the superintendent of public works. It is further agreed that whenever navigation is resumed in this section of the canal, the Miami conservancy district will remove such levee, rebuilding it to the same elevation, at a sufficient distance to the east, to protect fully the Miami and Erie canal through this section. It is further agreed that if the state of Ohio determines at some future time to improve or enlarge its present canal system or construct a barge canal through Tippecanoe City, the Miami conservancy district will, prior to building the levee as above outlined, subject to the approval of the conservancy court, provide the state with a right-of-way to the width and cross section of the present canal property directly east of the present right-of-way of said canal throughout said entire distance, except for such land as may now be occupied by the power plant of the water supply and lighting plant of Tippecanoe City.

"Item 7. It is further agreed that the state shall have a right to construct a canal on the side of the dam which is to be built across the Miami river about six miles below Tippecanoe City, whenever the state of Ohio shall determine to improve or enlarge or construct a new canal, and the said district agrees that the state shall have the right-of-way across said dam for its canal of the same width and cross section as the present canal, and if any enlargement of said Taylorsville dam shall be required to accommodate said canal, it shall be done at the expense of the said conservancy district and not at the expense of the state of Ohio. It is further agreed that until navigation is resumed in the canal, at the point where the outlet works of the dam across the canal right-of-way, the Miami conservancy district may build a concrete weir and may occupy the present location of the canal, on the condition that whenever navigation is resumed, in case the state shall not avail itself of the right to cross the river valley on the dam, the Miami conservancy district will remove such part of said concrete weir as may be necessary, will replace it with a gate, and will replace the cross section of the canal.

"Item 8. It is agreed that the conservancy district may, at its own expense, renew and strengthen the canal gates and appurtenances above Findlay street, in the city of Dayton, so as to make the city secure against flood waters entering through the canal, the size of said gates to be determined and approved by the superintendent of public works.

"Item 9. It is agreed that the Miami conservancy district may construct sluice gates and openings at points on the Miami and Erie canal in the city of Miamisburg, in order to prevent the overflow of the city by water flowing through the canal, as follows:

"Near the north line of the city, three 4 x 5-foot sluice gates; north of Sycamore creek, one 4 x 5-foot sluice gate, and south of Sycamore creek one 4 x 5-foot opening.

"It is agreed that all these structures shall be removed, when, with the resumption of navigation, the superintendent of public works, or his successor, shall indicate that their removal is desirable.

"Item 10. It is agreed that the Miami conservancy district may construct near Mound street, in Miamisburg, an emergency outlet for storm water from the Mound street storm sewer into the canal, to afford protection to the city against flooding from the hillside water. Said outlet shall be removed by the Miami conservancy district at its expense at any time that the navigation of the canal is resumed by the state, if, in the judgment of the superintendent of public works, such removal is necessary to the proper use of the canal. The said conservancy district agrees to remove from the canal without expense to the state any deposits left thereby reason of the construction or operation of said storm water sewer and to repair all damages to the canal caused by the construction or operation of said sewer.

"Item 11. It is agreed that the Miami conservancy district may, at its own expense and cost, raise the banks of the canal through the southern part of the city of Miamisburg to such an extent that flood water will not flow out of the canal into the city, such fill to be removed whenever, in the opinion of the superintendent of public works, such removal may be necessary to provide for navigation.

"Item 12. It is agreed that at Middletown a levee may be carried across the canal to prevent flood water from entering the city through the canal, this levee to be provided with three 5 x 6-foot sluice gates, these sluice gates to be left open at all times, except during flood, provided the Miami conservancy district shall remove these gates at any time when, in the opinion of the superintendent of public works, their removal may be necessary in order to provide for navigation. The size of said gates shall be determined and approved by the superintendent of public works.

"Item 13. It is agreed that a levee may be constructed on the east bank of the canal, extending from the proposed gates at Middletown above mentioned, northerly to about 500 feet above the Poast Town road of such height as may be necessary to prevent flood waters from the Miami river crossing the canal and flowing into the city of Middletown, it being further agreed that such levee shall be removed, whenever with the resumption of navigation, the superintendent of public works, or his successor, shall indicate such removal to be necessary or desirable.

"Item 14. It is agreed that a levee may be constructed on the bank of the canal, extending from the levee crossing at the southerly end of the city of Middletown, northerly to the canal locks near Eighth street to such height as may be necessary or desirable. Such levee shall be removed by the Miami conservancy district at its expense at any time that the navigation of the canal is resumed by the state, if, in the opinion of the superintendent of public works, such removal is necessary to the proper use of the canal.

"Item 15. It is agreed that the Miami conservancy district may construct two 5 x 5-foot sluice gates at the levee crossing of the canal opposite Gill street in the city of Piqua, in order to prevent the overflowing of the city by water flowing through the canal during floods, the size of said gates to be determined and approved by the superintendent of public works.

"It is agreed that these structures shall be removed when, with the resumption of navigation, the superintendent of public works shall indicate that their removal is desirable.

"Item 16. It is agreed that the plans and specifications for all pipes, valves, gates, sewers and other devices located on or over the state canal property shall be approved by the superintendent of public works of Ohio prior to the commencement of work thereon, and the sizes mentioned in this contract shall be subject to such changes and modifications as the superintendent of public works may deem necessary. This, however, shall not apply to the Taylorsville dam or appurtenances.

"Item 17. It is agreed that the Miami conservancy district shall indemnify the state of Ohio for any loss or damage that may result from any interference on the part of the Miami conservancy district with the rights of any lessees of the state of Ohio on any lease now in existence.

"This agreement signed in quadruplicate the day and year first above written.

Section 15 of the conservancy law, being section 6828-15, G. C., 104 O. L., 20, authorizes the board of directors of a conservancy district to construct any and all of its works and improvements across, through and over any canal and to remove or change the location of any canal. By the same section the board of directors of a conservancy district is authorized to purchase and sell real property, easements and riparian rights. It would not be argued, of course, that this section would authorize the board of directors of a conservancy district to construct its works across the canals of the state or to change the location of such canals unless the consent of the state be first secured. The conservancy act does not provide any method by which such consent may be secured, but in so far as the facts of this particular case are concerned, it would seem clear that ample authority in the premises is conferred upon the superintendent of public works by section 412, G. C., 103 O. L., 120, which provides that the superintendent of public works shall have the care and control of the public works of the state and shall make such alterations or changes thereof and construct such devices or improvements as he may deem proper in the discharge of his duties and may, subject to the approval of the governor, purchase on behalf of the state such real or personal property rights or privileges as it may be necessary in his judgment to acquire in the maintenance of the public works or their improvement, subject to the approval of the governor.

The agreement submitted by you does not involve the alienation by the state of its title to or right in any canal land. It cannot be said that the state is leasing or selling any of its canal property, but the agreement does involve the acquiring by the state of real property and easements, and in view of the provisions of section 412, G. C.,such agreement may therefore be consummated only with the approval of the governor.

There is no doubt that under section 412, G. C., the superintendent of public works, if he had an appropriation available therefor, would be authorized to construct on the canal property of the state many, if not all, of the works which the conservancy district proposes to construct. These works are designed in the main to protect adjoining property from damage from flood waters which find their way into the canal. Damage of this sort has always been made the basis of claims against the state, and the legislature has been often asked in the past to appropriate money for the payment of such claims. It requires no forced construction, therefore, to conclude that the superintendent of public works would, under section 412, G. C., if appropriations were available therefor, be authorized to construct along and across the canals of the state dams and other works calculated to protect the adjoining property from flood waters, provided these dams did not interfere with navigation. Navigation has been abandoned in the canal property affected by the agreement now under consideration, and the gist of the proposed agreement is that the superintendent of public works grant permission to the conservancy district to construct dams and other works on the canal property, which works cannot interfere with navigation for the reason that there is no navigation on this part of the canal. These works are to be so constructed as to care for the rights of persons who are buying water from the state, and the conservancy district agrees to remove the works at any time that their removal is necessary or desired in the judgment of the superintendent of public works, on account of the resumption of navigation in that part of the canal affected. In other words, the superintendent of public works grants to the conservancy district authority to do certain things which he might do if he had the necessary appropriations available. In exchange for these privileges, the state acquires certain real estate and easements, and in so far as the agreement involves the acquisition of real estate and easements, the approval of the governor is, as has already been pointed out, required.

I am therefore of the opinion, and advise you, that you may lawfully execute an agreement of this character, and that when the same has been approvel by the governor, it will be valid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

WHEN JUVENILE COURT MAY COMMIT A DELINQUENT MALE CHILD TO OHIO STATE REFORMATORY—CHILD SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE AT TIME OF HEARING.

Under section 1652, G. C., 103 O. L., 871, a juvenile court may commit a delinquent male child, who is delinquent because of having committed a felony, and who at the time of the hearing is sixteen years of age or over, to the Ohio State Reformatory, even though such child was not yet sixteen years of age at the time of committing such felony.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1916.

HON. C. P. KENNEDY, Prosecuting Attorney, Akron, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—The letter of Mr. J. C. Musser, assistant prosecuting attorney, under date of February 3, 1916, asking my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "On December 23, 1915, Joseph Frame was bound over to the grand jury of this county by the police judge of the city of Akron. At that time it appeared that Frame was seventeen years of age. Some time later it was learned through Frame's parents that at the date of his hearing in the Akron police court he was but fifteen years of age, and that he would not attain his sixteenth year until January 25, 1916.

"The result was that yesterday, February 2, an affidavit was filed in the probate court, charging the said Joseph Frame with being a delinquent male child. Frame was found guilty by the court, but was not sentenced. I recommended to the probate judge that Frame be committed to the Ohio State Reformatory. Probate Judge Lytle was of the opinion that this boy be committed to that institution, but doubted his power to so commit him, owing to the construction which he, Judge Lytle, placed on the last sentence of section 1652 of the General Code, as amended in 103 O. L., page 872.

"Judge Lytle was of the opinion that Frame, being but fifteen on the day the felony was committed,and arriving at the age of sixteen years between the date of his arrest and the date of his hearing, the said Joseph Frame could not be committed to the Ohio State Reformatory.

"I personally, am of the opinion that section 1652, G. C., should be interpreted to mean that the delinquent child's age at the date of his hearing is the determining factor. However, the judge has requested me to write you for your opinion upon this section of the code, which I am accordingly doing."

Section 1644 of the General Code, 106 O. L., 458, provides in part as follows:

"For the purpose of this chapter, the words 'delinquent child' includes any child under eighteen years of age who violates a law of this state. * * * A child committing any of the acts herein mentioned shall be deemed a juvenile delinquent person, and be proceeded against in the manner hereinafter provided."

Section 1652, G. C., 103 O. L., 871, provides in part as follows:

"Where it appears at the hearing of a male delinquent child, that he is 16 years of age, or over, and has committed a felony, the juvenile court may commit such child to the Ohio State Reformatory."

Section 2084 of the General Code, 103 O. L., 879, provides as follows:

"Male youth, not over eighteen nor under ten years of age, may be committed to the boys' industrial school in the manner provided by law on conviction of an offense against the laws of the state."

Section 2131, G. C., 103 O. L., 885, provides as follows:

"The superintendent shall receive all male criminals between the ages of sixteen and thirty years sentenced to the reformatory. * * *"

At the outset it should be observed that a boy under eighteen years of age who commits an act which constitutes a felony, and who is tried before the juvenile court, is not tried for the felony, but such act gives to the juvenile court jurisdiction to sentence him to the proper institution as a delinquent child.

It is apparent from the foregoing provisions that it was the intention of the legislature to make it possible for all delinquent boys to be committed to the boys' industrial school, but to lodge in the courts the discretion to commit a delinquent boy to the Ohio State Reformatory where the delinquency was due to the committing of a felony, and the boy has reached the age at which he may be received at that institution.

I am therefore of the opinion that the language of section 1652, G. C., supra, should be given its natural and apparent meaning, which is that if it appears upon the hearing of a delinquent male child that his delinquency is due to his having committed a felony, and he is at the time of the hearing sixteen years of age or over, he may be committed to the Ohio State Reformatory. It follows from the foregoing that your juvenile court is authorized to commit the boy in question to the Ohio State Reformatory, and that institution is authorized to receive him.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SHERIFF—CONVEYING MORE THAN ONE PRISONER TO WORKHOUSE AT SAME TIME—MILEAGE MAY BE CHARGED ONLY ONCE—CANNOT CHARGE ON EACH WRIT.

When conveying more than one prisoner to a workhouse at the same time, the sheriff is only authorized to charge the mileage as fixed in section 12385, G. C., once; he is not authorized to charge such mileage on each writ.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of January 24th you submit for my opinion the following inquiry:

> "We desire to call your attention to an opinion of Attorney-General Timothy S. Hogan, approving an opinion of Hon. Wade H. Ellis, attorney-general, to be found in the annual report of attorney-general, 1913, Vol. 1, page 379, holding that officers serving writs are entitled to mileage for the actual number of miles traveled in serving each writ.
> "We desire your opinion as to whether this could be applied to the mileage of an officer conveying more than one prisoner to a workhouse at the same time, in view of the language of section 12385, General Code. Does the clause in said section, 'To be allowed as in penitentiary cases,' have reference to the number of guards that may be employed by the officer, as provided in section 13725, General Code; or does it refer to the manner and method of allowance and payment for transportation?"

I have examined the opinion rendered by Mr. Hogan, referred to by you in your letter, and find that the same was rendered to your bureau under date of October 8, 1913. The inquiry as submitted in that opinion was as follows:

> "May a sheriff serve two writs such as subpoenas, summonses, writs of conveyance to workhouse, either in civil or criminal cases, on the same trip and charge mileage upon each of such writs?
> "If you hold that mileage is limited to the distance actually traveled, how should it be taxed?"
> "May it be apportioned to the several writs in taxing costs?"

In that opinion reference was made to an opinion rendered by Hon. Wade H. Ellis, as attorney-general, on February 2, 1905, and found reported in the report of the attorney-general for 1905, at page 51. The opinion of Attorney-General Ellis was relative to the construction of section 1230-b, R. S., respecting the right of the sheriff of Champaign county to charge mileage on each of two writs served on William Wooley in the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield, when both writs were served at the same time.

Attorney-General Hogan in his opinion calls attention to that part of section 2845, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "In addition for the fee for service and return the sheriff shall be authorized to charge on each summons, writ, order or notice, except as otherwise specifically provided by law, a fee of eight cents per mile going and returning, provided, that where more than one person is named in such writ, mileage shall be charged for the shortest distance necessary to be traveled."

and then states the law to be that the rule laid down by Mr. Ellis should be followed until otherwise provided by law. The rule laid down by Mr. Ellis was stated to be that the statutory mileage could be allowed on both writs referred to in the inquiry.

Mr. Hogan was undoubtedly endeavoring to answer the question submitted to him generally, and did not take cognizance of the provisions of section 12385, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "The sheriff, or other officer, transporting a person to such workhouse shall have the following fees therefor: six cents per mile for himself, going and returning, and five cents per mile for transporting each convict, and five cents per mile going and coming for the services of each guard, to be allowed as in penitentiary cases, the number of mile to be computed by the usual routes of travel, to be paid in state cases out of the general revenue fund of the county on the allowance of the county commissioners, and, in cases for the violation of the ordinances of a municipality, by such municipality on the order of the council thereof."

From a reading of the above section it is plainly to be seen that the sheriff of a county having no workhouse transporting more than one person to a workhouse provided for by the county commissioners is entitled himself to six cents a mile going and returning, and to five cents a mile for transporting each convict, and for the services of each guard five cents per mile going and coming.

In view of the language of section 12385, supra, I am of the opinion that the opinion rendered by Mr. Hogan, as found in Vol. 1 of the 1913 reports of the attorney-general, at page 379, is not to apply to the conveyance of more than one person to a workhouse by the sheriff of a county in which there is no workhouse.

You further ask whether the clause in said section 12385, supra, "To be allowed as in penitentiary cases," has reference to the number of guards that may be employed to help convey the convicts to the workhouse, or does it refer to the manner and method of allowance and payment for transportation. You refer to section 13725, G. C., which section provides as follows:

> "In transporting convicts to the penitentiary, the sheriff may employ one guard for every two convicts transported; but the court may authorize a larger number, in which case a transcript of the order of such court shall be certified by the clerk thereof, under the seal thereof, and the sheriff shall deliver it to the warden of the penitentiary with such convict. The sheriff shall receive eight cents per mile for mileage, five cents per mile for transporting each convict, and six cents per mile for the service of each guard, the number of miles to be computed by the usual route of travel."

Section 12385 as originally enacted on March 19, 1883, 80 O. L., 220, provided that the sheriff or other officer transporting any person to such workhouse should have the same fees as allowed by law for transporting prisoners to the penitentiary. The fee allowed by law for the transportation of prisoners to the penitentiary was eight cents a mile for the sheriff, five cents per mile for transporting each convict, and six cents per mile for each guard; the number of guards to be employed to first receive the authority of the court, provided there was more than one guard for every two convicts transported.

In 81 O. L., 84, the compensation of the sheriff was changed as appears in section 12385, G. C., supra. Section 12385 specifically states the compensation which is to be received by the sheriff, and also the allowance to him for the service of each guard, but does not undertake to specify the number of guards that the sheriff might employ, whereas section 13725, relative to the transportation of convicts to the penitentiary does specify that the sheriff may employ one guard for every two convicts transported, but upon authority of court a larger number might be employed. While I would not state that the language "to be allowed as in penitentiary cases" has reference solely to the number of guards that may be employed, since under the provisions of section 13726 it is provided that:

"The warden of the penitentiary shall allow so much of the cost-bill and charges for transportation as is correct," and certify and since under the provisions of section 12385 the county commissioners are to allow the bill, nevertheless for all practical purposes the language "to be allowed as in penitentiary cases," might be deemed to refer solely to the number of guards that may be employed. Under the provisions of section 12385 the amount paid is to be paid on the allowance of the county commissioners in state cases, and in cases of violation of ordinances on the order of the council of the municipality.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COUNCIL DETERMINES WHO SHALL LET CONTRACTS FOR PRINTING OF MUNICIPAL BONDS.

The municipal council is the proper authority to determine who shall let contracts for the printing of municipal bonds, contracts and other instruments in writing in which the municipality is concerned, unless otherwise specifically provided by the General Code.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 10, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 2, in which you request my opinion as follows:

"We enclose herewith brief submitted by Hon. Fred L. Carhart, city solicitor of Marion, Ohio, and we would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:

"Who is the proper municipal authority in cities to make contract for printing of municipal bonds? Has council the authority within itself, or may it delegate such authority to some other official, or is the authority lodged in the city solicitor?

"An early reply will be appreciated."

The brief of Mr. Carhart, referred to and enclosed in your letter, is in support of his claim that the authority to make contracts for the printing of municipal bonds is, in cities, lodged in the city solicitor. This claim is based entirely upon the language of section 4305 of the General Code, which is as follows:

"The solicitor shall prepare all contracts, bonds and other instruments in writing in which the city is concerned, and shall serve the several directors and officers mentioned in this title as legal counsel and attorney."

A reasonable and sensible construction of the language used in the above section must lead to the conclusion that the word "prepare" was intended to apply to the form, phraseology and contents of such contracts, bonds and other instruments in writing, and not to require the solicitor to reproduce by printing or otherwise the many required copies. To adopt the literal construction of the language of section 4375, urged in the brief submitted, would result in the conclusion that the manual preparation of all the numerous copies of contracts, bonds and other instruments in writing in which the city is concerned, is the statutory duty of the city solicitor, and this would lead to the further conclusion that if council failed to make an appropriation to pay the expense of typewriting or printing the necessary blank contracts, bonds and other instruments, the city solicitor would himself be obliged to write or print them, or pay the expense of such writing or printing from his own pocket.

There is no section of the General Code which definitely provides who shall make contracts for the printing of municipal bonds, contracts, etc. It follows, therefore, that the authority to authorize the making of such contracts rests in the council, which may make provision therefor either by general ordinance or by special act in each instance.

In the case of McCormick v. City, 81 O. S., 246, wherein was considered the question of who was by law authorized to let contracts for the publication of municipal ordinances, the court, in the second branch of the syllabus, uses the following language:

"Where the statute has not prescribed the person who shall execute such contracts in behalf of a municipal corporation, it is consistent with section 1536-653, R. S., for the council, by ordinance or resolution, to authorize the clerk thereof to execute such contract according to the directions of the council."

At page 254 of the opinion in the above case, the court say:

"It would seem that council may authorize, by resolution or ordinance, the board or department of public service to contract for the public printing, and we see no valid objection to giving the clerk of council authority to make such contracts. The council appears to be the source of authority to contract, and it is the authority to make the necessary appropriations."

I, therefore, advise you that the authority in municipalities to determine who shall let contracts for printing of municipal bonds, contracts and other instruments in writing, in which the city is concerned, unless otherwise specifically provided by the General Code, is lodged in the municipal council, which may make provision therefor either by general ordinance or by special actions as occasion arises.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 5785, G. C., AS TO WHAT IS NOT "MISBRANDING" UNDER STATUTE—WHEN PRODUCT CONTAINS SUBSTANTIAL PROPORTION OF EACH OF SAID INGREDIENTS ON LABEL—WHAT CONSTITUTES SUBSTANTIAL PROPORTION OF ANY INGREDIENT—TOWLE'S LOG CABIN SYRUP.

Failure to place on the label under which a food product which is a mixture or compound is sold or offered for sale, the statement that same is a mixture or compound and the percentages of the ingredients thereof, as provided in section 5785, G. C., is not a violation of the laws which provide a penalty for "misbranding," provided such product contains a substantial proportion of each of said ingredients.

What is a substantial proportion of any ingredient mentioned on the label is under the statute a question of fact to be determined in each case. The law does not prescribe a definite standard by which the same may be determined.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 12, 1916.

The Board of Agriculture, Dairy and Food Division, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of January 27, 1916, asking my opinion received, and is as follows:

"Referring to opinion No. 1044 rendered by you to the board of agriculture dairy and food department, under date of November 26, 1915, with reference to proper labels for syrups, an additional question has been raised upon which we desire your opinion.

"Enclosed you will find a label which is being used by The Towle Maple Products Company, of St. Paul, Minnesota, and which is similar to labels being used by a number of manufacturers of syrup.

"The question we desire to ask is—does the label submitted herewith, or a label similar thereto, constitute a violation of any of the laws of the state of Ohio?"

The label referred to therein is as follows:

"One gallon net Absolutely pure

LOG CABIN SYRUP
PURE CANE SUGAR AND MAPLE SUGAR
THE TOWLE MAPLE PRODUCTS CO.,
ST. PAUL, MINN. ST. JOHNSBURY, VT."

Opinion No. 1044 of this department, referred to by you, construes sections 12763, 12764, 12765 and section 5785, G. C., and I understand from statements of your Mr. Calvert and from briefs submitted with your letter, that your present question is directed particularly to section 5785, G. C., which provides as follows:

"Section 5785. Food, drink, flavoring extracts, confectionery or condiment shall be misbranded within the meaning of this chapter:

"1. If the package fails to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of morphine, opium, cocaine, heroine, alpha or beta eucaine, chloroform, cannabis indica, chloral hydrate, or acetanilide, or any derivative or preparation of such substances contained therein; (2) if it is labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or purport to be a foreign product when not so; (3) if in package form, and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package; (4) in case of a flavoring extract, for which no standard exists, if it is not labeled "artificial" or "imitation," and the formula printed in the manner hereinafter provided for the labeling of "compounds" or "mixtures" and their formulae; (5) if the package containing it or a label thereon bears a statement, design or device regarding it or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which is false or misleading in any particular; provided, that this section shall not apply to mixtures or compounds recognized as ordinary articles or ingredients of articles of food or drink, if each package sold or offered for sale is distinctly labeled in words of the English language as mixtures or compounds with the name and percentage, in terms of one hundred per cent. of each ingredient therein. The word "compound" or "mixture" shall be printed in letters and figures not smaller in height or width than one-half the largest letter upon any label on the package, and the formula shall be printed in letters and figures not smaller in height or width than one-fourth the largest letter upon any label on the package, and such compound or mixture must not contain an ingredient that is poisonous or injurious to health."

I also understand that no question is here raised as to subdivisions 1, 3 and 4 of the foregoing section, but that you are interested in the proper interpretation of the proviso thereof, and its relation to subdivisions 2 and 5.

Section 5785, supra, is a definition of "misbranding," the penalty for which is fixed by section 12758, G. C., which provides as follows:

"Section 12758. Whoever manufactures for sale, offers for sale or sells a drug, article of food, or flavoring extract which is adulterated or misbranded as the terms 'drugs,' 'food,' 'flavoring extract,' 'adulterated' and 'misbranded' are defined and described by law, or manufactures, offers or exposes for sale or delivers a drug or article of food and fails, upon demand and tender of its value, to furnish a sample thereof for analysis, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and for each subsequent offense, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one hundred days, or both."

The proviso in section 5785, G. C., cannot be said to impose any imperative duty upon any one as to the manner in which merchandise sold or offered for sale shall be labeled, but its effect is to exclude from the operation of section 12758, G. C., supra, "mixtures or compounds recognized as ordinary articles or ingredients of articles of food or drink," which, if sold without being labeled as prescribed therein, would come within the definition of "misbranding," and thereby subject dealers therein to the penalty provided in said section 12758, G. C.

The label submitted by you and quoted above does not purport to comply with the provisions of the proviso, but this fact alone does not make the use thereof a violation of section 12758, supra, but it must be further determined whether an article so labeled comes within the definition of "misbranding" as laid down in said section 5785, G. C. Subdivision 2 of said section provides as follows:

"If it is labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser, or purport to be a foreign product when not so;"

Subdivision 5 provides as follows:

"If the package containing it or a label thereon bears a statement, design or device regarding it or the ingredients or substances contained therein, which is false or misleading in any particular;"

In the absence of a statutory standard or a definite interpretation by the courts it is, of course, impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to the proportions of ingredients which a product sold under a label such as that submitted by you and quoted herein should contain in order to avoid a violation of the foregoing provisions of law.

I submit, however, for your consideration a ruling of the United States department of agriculture, issued under date of July 5, 1907, in which that department places its interpretation on similar provisions of the national food and drug act of June 30, 1906, as follows:

"The director of the agricultural experiment station at Orno, Maine, in a recent letter made the following statement:

"'There are in Maine many sirups which are labeled something like this:

"'"A Fancy Quality Sirup Made from Pure Maple and White Sugar." Many of these sirups carry but little maple, one company saying that in a sirup analogous to this they put 90 per cent. of cane sugar and 10 per cent. of maple.'

"When both maple and cane sugars are used in the production of sirup the label should be varied according to the relative proportion of the ingredients. The name of the sugar present in excess of 50 per cent. of the total sugar content should be given the greater prominence on the label, that is, it should be given first. For example, a sirup the sugars of which consist of 51 per cent. cane sugar and 49 per cent. maple sugar would be properly branded as 'Sirup Made from Cane and Maple Sugar,' or as 'Cane and Maple Sirup.' The terms 'maple sugar' and 'maple sirup' may only be used on the label as part of the name when those substances are present in substantial quantities as ingredients. They should not appear on the label as part of the name when only a small quantity of those substances is used to give a maple flavor to the product. A cane sirup containing only enough maple sirup or maple sugar to give a maple flavor is properly labeled as 'Cane Sirup, Maple Flavor,' or 'Cane Sirup Flavored with Maple.'

"Whenever it is necessary to declare cane sugar (sucrose) on a label it should be declared as cane sugar and not as white sugar.

"Frederick L. Dunlap,
"George P. McCabe,
"Board of Food and Drug Inspection.

"Approved: W. M. Hays, Acting Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., July 5, 1907."

While your board is, of course, not bound by the foregoing interpretation, yet it would be justified in adopting the same as the proper interpretation of the Ohio law; or it may decide upon any other minimum which to it may seem proper, but in this connection I call your attention to the case of in re Wilson decided by the United States circuit court in Rhode Island, and reported in 168 Federal Reporter, 566. In that case the court had under consideration the question of whether a syrup labeled "Gold Leaf Syrup" and "composed of maple and white sugar," which syrup in fact contained ten per cent. of maple sugar and ninety per cent. of white sugar, was misbranded within the meaning of the national food and drug act. The court held that such syrup was not misbranded and said:

"In order to convict a person of misbranding upon such a showing of fact, the court would be obliged to go entirely beyond all the established legal principles upon the question of deceit and misrepresentation, and beyond any of the decisions of the equity courts as to what is abhorrent to the conscience of a chancellor. In fact, I think that we should be obliged to go, not only outside the boundaries of legal and equitable rules, but also outside the boundaries of rational common sense."

In the light of this decision I would not advise prosecutions for misbranding in cases where it is found that a product sold under a label such as the one submitted to me and quoted herein, does in fact contain as much as ten per cent. of maple sugar. Where the percentage of maple falls below ten per cent. it is necessarily within the discretion of your board as to whether prosecutions should be instituted, and the courts must determine whether such a product is misbranded under the provisions of section 5785, G. C., supra.

Your question, therefore, must be answered by saying that the label submitted by you, and quoted herein, is not of itself a "misbranding" under section 5785, G. C., supra, but it must be determined by ascertaining the contents of the product sold thereunder whether such a label constitutes misbranding.

Summarizing my opinion I advise that no label is in and of itself illegal under the sections which have been considered in this opinion. It is impossible for the board of agriculture either to approve or disapprove a label as such without knowledge of the contents of the package which it purports to describe. This statement is of itself sufficient to answer the precise question which you submit.

Second: Whether or not a particular can of syrup or other food product is misbranded depends upon two factors: the nature of the contents and the statements or representations on the label. These two factors must be compared in the case of each can in order to determine whether or not an offense is committed.

Third: The proviso which has been considered does not have the force of a positive requirement, so that in the event that a given product is or purports to be a compound or mixture of more than one ingredient it is not necessary on that account that the word compound or mixture be used as a part of the name, nor that the formula be set forth upon the label.

Fourth: If, however, the label of a food product describes the contents of the package or can as consisting of a mixture or compound of two or more ingredients, such label would be misleading if it should appear upon analysis or otherwise that the ingredients so mentioned on the label were not present in the product in substantial quantities or proportions, or that the product actually contained some other ingredients not mentioned on the label of an inferior or deleterious character. In such event the package would be misbranded within the meaning of the law. However, the mere mention of two ingredients on the label does not amount to a representation that such ingredients are present in the product in equal proportions.

Fifth: What is a substantial proportion of an ingredient mentioned on the label is under the statute a question of fact to be determined in each case. The law does not prescribe a definite standard by which it may be determined that a given percentage or proportion of a certain ingredient is or is not substantial.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF A POLITICAL PARTY—STATUTE DOES NOT FORBID COMMITTEE DIVIDING COUNTY INTO DISTRICTS FOR PURPOSE OF ELECTING DELEGATES TO STATE CONVENTION.

Section 4953, G. C., 103 O. L., 478, does not forbid the state central committee of a political party making provision for the districting of counties so that delegates and alternates to the state convention may be selected from such districts in such counties.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 12, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 10, 1916, as follows:

> "Under the law of the state of Ohio, are state central committees authorized to have counties districted so that delegates and alternates to state convention may be elected from such districts in such counties, or must delegates and alternates to state conventions be elected at large from such counties?"

Your inquiry involves a consideration of section 4953, G. C., 103 O. L., 478, which provides as follows:

> "Candidates for presidential elector shall be nominated by delegate state conventions, the delegates to which shall be chosen at a primary election which shall be held on the last Tuesday in April, 1916, and similarly every fourth year thereafter. The state committee of each political party shall determine the time and place for holding the state convention of such party, and shall apportion the delegates and alternates throughout the state in proportion to its party vote for governor cast in the several counties at the last preceding general election. Each state committee shall also, by resolution, determine the ratio of representation in such state convention. In addition to nominating candidates for presidential elector such state convention shall formulate the state party platform for that year."

The primary purpose of the foregoing section is to require that delegates to state conventions which nominate candidates for presidential electors shall be chosen at a primary election held on the last Tuesday in April, 1916, and every fourth year thereafter. It must be conceded that without any other or further provision than the requirement that delegates to said convention shall be elected at a primary election, the state committee of each political party would be authorized to make all other necessary provisions to carry this purpose of the law into effect. This is so because at common law such committees are vested with such power and authority as the political organization which they represent confers upon them. The legislature knew this and, therefore, in the further provisions of this section it did not furnish or undertake to furnish a complete, detailed method or plan whereby all matters connected with the selection of delegates to said conventions should be regulated. It provided, however, that the state committee of each party shall fix the time and place of holding its convention, that it shall determine the ratio of representation in that convention, and that the delegates thereto should be apportioned by it throughout the state in proportion to the party vote for governor cast in the several counties in the state at the last preceding general election. It is contended that under these provisions of the law the authority of the state committees with regard to the selection of delegates ends with the execution of the power thus conferred and that, therefore, said committees have no further rights that may be exercised in the determination of how and in what manner each county may apportion its delegates. It is further contended that, by the express provisions of the foregoing section, with reference to the apportionment of delegates, the county is made the unit for the election of said delegates.

I am unable to agree with either contention. The authority delegated by this statute to state committees to fix the time and place of holding a convention, to determine the ratio of representation and to apportion delegates in proportion to the vote of each county, did not confer upon them any new rights or vest in them any authority they did not already possess. The authority to do these things has always been vested in such committees, and gives them such authority by virtue of the rules and regulations of the political organizations which they represent. The statute recognizes the existence of political parties, and does not attempt to (and it is quite doubtful if the legislature would have the power to) prescribe all the powers and duties of political parties. There is nothing to show any purpose of the legislature to in any way limit or restrict the ordinary rights and authority of state committees, but, upon the contrary, the provisions under consideration are very general in their character and, as before observed, do not in any manner confer any new rights or authority upon said committees.

I am unable, therefore, to conclude that it was the intention of the legislature, in the enactment of these provisions, to in any manner impose any restriction upon the recognized jurisdiction and authority of state committees. Again, it is not by any means clear that the provision regarding apportionment, measured by its own language, has the effect of making a county the unit for the election of delegates. It is very difficult to determine from the language used, whether the vote of each county is not made the unit of apportionment rather than the unit of election. In other words, it is the vote of each county which determines the apportionment, and when such apportionment is made in accordance with said vote, I am unable to see, from the provisions of the law, any limitation or restriction made upon the right of a committee to subdivide such apportionment within such county. The apportionment must be in proportion to the votes of each county, and when that requirement of the law is met, no further condition or restriction is imposed upon any action a state committee may determine to take in reference to said apportionment.

I am therefore of the opinion that the provisions of said section in regard to the apportionment provided for therein do not so limit the authority of a state committee as to prevent or prohibit it from prescribing and directing a reasonable division of said apportionment within a county. In this connection there may be some question as to whether any apportionment of delegates within a county may be made effective by reason of the provisions of the primary election laws. That is to say, whether when such apportionment of delegates is made their election is feasible under the general system of primary elections, as provided by law. This is a matter which must be considered by any authority in making a division of delegates within a county. Any subdivision of territory for the election of delegates must be made with due regard to the operation of the primary election law. Whether or not the division of territory is practicable for the conduct of the primary is a matter for the determination of the election authorities.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

AFFIDAVIT OF THE CENTRAL OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY—SECRETARY OF STATE ADVISED TO RECEIVE AND FILE SAME—FEE TO BE CHARGED.

Secretary of state advised to receive and file the affidavit presented to him by The Central Ohio Railroad Company for the purpose of furnishing a record in his office showing the existence and amount of the capital stock of said company; and to charge as a fee for recording the same twenty cents per one hundred words with the minimum fee of not less than five dollars.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 12, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 9, 1916, in which you ask my opinion as follows:

> "We are herewith submitting to you for an opinion a blank affidavit of C. W. Woolford, secretary of THE CENTRAL OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, presented to this office by Mr. J. L. Johnson, of the firm of Booth, Keating and Pomerene, Columbus, Ohio, and beg to submit the following question to you for an opinion:
> "'Should the aforesaid affidavit be received and filed and recorded by the secretary of state?

"'If your answer is in the affirmative, what fee should be collected from said company by the secretary of state for filing and recording the same?'"

The affidavit of C. W. Woolford, referred to in your letter, recites, in part, as follows:

"Affidavit further says that The Central Ohio Railroad Company was incorporated by special act of the general assembly of the state of Ohio, passed February 8, 1847; that subsequently said corporation became insolvent and duly passed into the hands of a receiver; that thereafter, on November 1, 1865, a meeting of the stockholders and creditors of said corporation was called for the purpose of reorganizing said corporation by virtue of an act of said general assembly passed April 7, 1863, entitled 'An act to provide for the adjustment of the affairs of insolvent railroad companies and for their reorganization without a sale of the property thereof,' at which meeting plans for the reorganization of said corporation were adopted in the form of resolutions which were written into the minutes of said meeting, and of which resolutions the following is a true copy: * * *"

Here follows a copy of the resolutions adopted by the stockholders and directors of said corporation on November 1, 1865, in the second paragraph of which the following statement is contained:

* * * "RESOLVED, that the body corporate to be created and constituted as aforesaid shall be called and known by the name of the 'THE CENTRAL OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY,' as reorganized, the capital stock of which company shall be the sum of three millions of dollars; * * *

"Affidavit further says that pursuant to the plans so adopted The Central Ohio Railroad Company as reorganized, was created with a capital stock of three million dollars.

"Affiant further says that he has reason to believe, and does believe, either that no certificate showing the reorganization and capital stock of said corporation, last aforesaid, was filed in the office of the secretary of state of the state of Ohio, as required by law, or that such certificate, if filed, has been lost from the records of that office, and that no trace of it can be found; and that this affidavit is made for the purpose of completing the records of the secretary of state of the state of Ohio in regard to The Central Ohio Railroad Company as reorganized."

As is stated in the affidavit, the sole purpose of seeking to file the same in your office is to secure a record of the existence and the amount of the authorized capital stock of said The Central Ohio Railroad Company, which was incorporated under a special act, and subsequently reorganized under a later general act.

I am unable to find any provision of the General Code which, in terms, makes it the duty of the secretary of state either to accept and record or to reject an affidavit of the character enclosed in your letter.

Section 8626 of the General Code provides, in part, as follows:

"Articles of incorporation shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state, who shall record them and shall also record certificates relating to that corporation, thereafter filed in his office * * *"

As was stated to you in my opinion under date of October 21, 1915, being opinion No. 957, the language of the section above quoted, as do other sections of the General Code, indicates the general legislative policy that all evidence of corporate existence and authority shall be recorded in the office of the secretary of state, and since the avowed purpose of filing and recording said affidavit is to secure a record in your office, which through oversight was neglected or through some mischance has been lost, I am of the opinion that you should receive and record the same.

Replying to your second question, I am of the opinion that you should charge for filing the affidavit in question a fee of twenty cents for each one hundred words contained therein, but in no event less than the minimum fee of five dollars, as provided in paragraph 12 of section 176 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

HON. HUGH F. NEWHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 29, 1916, which reads as follows:

> "Is the levy authorized under section 60 of the Cass highway act within the ten mill limitation or within the 15 mill limitation provided by law?
> "Must the township trustees make the levy provided for in section 60 before they provide for the issuing of bonds under sections 67 and 68 of the act, when they are aware at this time that this levy provided for in section 60 will be insufficient for the purpose?
> "Must the levy for sinking fund and interest to retire bonds issued as above, under sections 67 and 68, come within the ten mill limitation or within the 15 mill limitation?
> "May funds derived from the issuance of bonds under sections 67 and 68 be used in co-operation with the state highway department under sections 185, 186 and 187 of the act, provided the inter-county highway to be improved has been designated by the township trustees under section 62 of the act?
> "Must the levy authorized to provide for the township's proportion under section 215 of the act, come within the ten mill limitation?"

Referring to your first question, the levy authorized by section 60 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-1, G. C., is by the terms of that section made subject to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The language of the section, in so far as this feature of the matter is concerned, is almost identical with that of sections 105, 238 and 239 of the act, being sections 6926, 6956-1 and 3298-18 of the General Code. The question of whether the tax limitation prescribed in said sections 105, 238 and 239 of the act is ten mills or fifteen mills, was considered by this department in opinion No. 847, rendered to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, on September 21, 1915, and in that opinion it was held that as between the ten mill and the fifteen mill limitation, the levies provided for in sections 105, 238 and 239 of the act, are above the ten mills but within the fifteen mills. It was pointed out in that opinion that the answer therein given is not sufficient without some further explanation, and that as no levies might be made under the Cass highway law until 1916, consideration of the question of tax levies under that law might be deferred for a time. With the qualification expressed in that opinion to the effect that the answer to your question herein given may not, of itself, be sufficient, and that the matter may require further consideration, I advise you that as between the ten mill and the fifteen mill limitation the levy provided for by section 60 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-1, G. C., is above the ten mills but within the fifteen mills.

Your second question was considered in opinion No. 849, rendered by me to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, on September 21, 1915, and in accordance with the holding in that opinion I advise you that township trustees must make the levy provided for in section 60 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-1, G. C., and it must be determined that said levy does not furnish sufficient funds, before the trustees may even submit the question of a bond issue to the qualified electors of the township, and this is true even if the township trustees are aware at the present time that a levy which may be hereafter made will be insufficient for the purpose of improving the roads designated by them.

Your third question relates to the levy for sinking fund and interest purposes in connection with bonds issued by township trustees under section 67 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-8, G. C., and the succeeding sections.

Section 72 of the act, section 3298-13, G. C., provides that levies for the payment of principal and interest on such bonds shall be in addition to the two mills authorized to be levied for general township purposes, but subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The use of the expression "combined maximum rate for all taxes" in connection with the other language of the section, indicates that as between the ten mill and fifteen mill limitation the levy in question is above the ten mills but within the fifteen mills.

Your fourth question relates to the right to use funds derived from a bond issue under section 3298-1, et seq., of the General Code, in co-operation with the state highway department, under section 185 of the Cass highway law, section 1192, G. C., and the related sections, provided the inter-county highway to be improved has been designated by the township trustees under section 62 of the act, section 3298-3, G. C.

It should first be observed that chapter III of the Cass highway law relates to road construction and improvement by township trustees, while chapter VIII relates to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department. A full consideration of both chapters indicates that the tax levying and bond sections of each chapter are exclusive. In other words, the proceeds of a tax levied under section 3298-1, G. C., and the proceeds of bonds issued under section 3298-8, et seq., of the General Code, can be used only for road work carried forward by the township trustees.

It is provided by section 3298-2, G. C., that when collected the taxes authorized by the preceding section shall be paid to the treasurer of the township from which they are collected, and the money so raised shall be under the control of the township trustees of such township for the purpose of improving the roads of said township "as provided herein." The expression "as provided herein" evidently refers to the chapter in which section 3298-2 is found. The bond issue provided for by section 3298-8, G. C., is intended to take the place of an insufficient tax levy, and it is manifest that the proceeds of a sale of bonds issued under section 3298-8, G. C., must remain under the control of the township trustees and be used by them in the construction or re-construction of roads designated by them. If funds produced by a tax levy or by a bond issue, under chapter III of the act, were used in co-operation with the state highway department, the funds would, it is true, remain in the township treasury until finally paid to the contractor, but they would not be under the control of the township trustees, and the improvement would not be carried forward by the township trustees. Such part of the cost and expense of an inter-county highway improvement as is to be met by a township must, therefore, be paid from the proceeds of a tax levied by the township trustees under section 215 of the act, section 1222, G. C., or from the proceeds of a sale of bonds issued by county commissioners in anticipation of a tax levied by the township trustees, the bonds to be issued under section 216 of the act, section 1223, G. C.

Answering your question specifically, I therefore advise you that funds derived from the issuance of bonds under section 67 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-8, G. C., may not be used in co-operation with the state highway department under section 185 of the act, section 1192, G. C., and the related sections, even where the inter-county highway to be improved has been designated by the township trustees under section 3298-3, G. C.

Coming now to consider your last question, it is provided by section 215 of the act, that the levy for the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the proportion of the cost and expense of an improvement carried forward by the state highway department, to be paid by the township or townships, shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes, and shall be outside the limitation of two mills for general township purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. In conformity with what has already been said in answering your first question, I advise you that as between the ten mill and fifteen mill limitation, the levy referred to by you is above the ten mills but within the fifteen mills.

I am enclosing a pamphlet containing opinions Nos. 847 and 849, of this department, referred to herein.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SCHOOL TEACHERS' PENSION FUND—PROPER TREASURER BEFORE AND AFTER CLERK ASSUMED DUTIES OF TREASURER OF SCHOOL FUNDS WHEN DEPOSITORY IS AND IS NOT PROVIDED—CITY SCHOOL DISTRICTS—VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICTS—RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICTS—SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

In a city school district in which a school teachers' pension fund has been established, and in which the board of education has not provided a depository for the school funds, or having provided a depository, has not dispensed with the treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., as amended, the county treasurer, being ex officio treasurer of the school funds of said district, is treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund under authority of said section 7889, *G. In a school district in which a school teachers' pension fund has been established and is being maintained, and in which the board of education has provided a depository for the school funds in the manner authorized by law, and has dispensed with the treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., the clerk of said board, who is now performing all the services and discharging all the duties, and who is subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school district, is treasurer of said school teachers' pension fund under provision of said section 7889, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of January 8th you request my opinion upon the following questions:

"1. Who, before the amended law required the clerk of a school district to assume the duties of the treasurer of the school funds, was the proper treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund?

"2. Who, since the clerk has assumed the duties of the treasurer of the school funds, is the proper custodian of said school teachers' pension fund?"

Section 7875, G. C., provides that:

"When the board of education of a school district by resolution, adopted by a majority vote of the members thereof, declares that it is advisable to create a school teachers' pension fund for that school district, such fund shall be under the management and control of a board to be known as 'the board of trustees of the school teachers' pension fund' for such district."

Section 7879, G. C., provides that:

"Such board of trustees may invest such pension fund (created and maintained under provisions of sections 7877, 7879 and 7895 of the General Code) in the name of the board in bonds of the United States, or of the state of Ohio, or of any county, or municipal corporation, or school district in this state."

Said section further provides that said board "may make payments from such fund for pensions granted in pursuance of the laws relating thereto," and "may make and establish such rules and regulations for the administration of the fund as they deem best."

Section 7889, G. C. provides:

"The treasurer of such school district (in which a school teachers' pension fund has been established) shall be the custodian of such pension fund, and keep it subject to the order, control and direction of the board of trustees. He must keep books of accounts concerning the fund in such manner as may be prescribed by such board which always shall be subject to the inspection of the board of trustees or of any member thereof. Such treasurer shall execute a bond to the board of trustees with good and sufficient sureties in such sum as the board requires, which bond shall be subject to its approval, and be conditioned for the faithful performance of his duties as custodian and treasurer of the board."

Section 7890, G. C., provides:

"Such treasurer must keep and truly account for all moneys and profits coming into his hands belonging to such fund, and at the expiration of his term of office pay over, surrender and deliver to his successor all securities, moneys and other property of whatsoever kind, nature and description in his hands or under his control as treasurer. For his services he shall be paid not to exceed one per cent. annually of the amount paid into the fund during the year."

While the above provision of section 7889, G. C., makes the treasurer of a school district which has established a school teachers' pension fund, the treasurer of the board of trustees and as such the custodian of said fund, it will be observed that the treasurer of said school district as treasurer of said board of trustees and as custodian of said fund, is in no way accountable to the board of education of said district. The bond required to be given by provision of the latter part of section 7889, G. C., is executed to said board of trustees and is subject to the approval of said board. In view of the provisions of sections 7889 and 7890, G. C., taken in connection with the above provisions of sections 7875 and 7879, G. C., it seems clear that the board of education of a school district is in no way charged with the administration of the school teachers' pension fund, and that said fund is not a fund of the school district within the meaning of section 7604, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 328, which provides that:

> "Within thirty days after the first Monday in January, 1916, and every two years thereafter, the board of education of any school district by resolution shall provide for the deposit of any or all moneys coming into the hands of its treasurer."

The provision in this latter statute has reference only to the funds belonging to the school district. This distinction must be borne in mind in the further consideration of your questions.

Section 4763, G. C., as in force prior to the date when said section, as amended in 104 O. L., 158, became effective, provided as follows:

> "In each city, village and township school district, the treasurer of the city, village and township funds, respectively, shall be the treasurer of the school funds. In each special district the board of education shall choose its own treasurer, whose term of office shall be for one year beginning on the first day of September."

This section as amended in 104 O. L., now provides as follows:

> "In each city school district, the treasurer of the city funds shall be the treasurer of the school funds. In all village and rural school districts which do not provide legal depositories as provided in section 7604 to 7608 inclusive, the county treasurer shall be the treasurer of the school funds of such districts."

Section 4782, G. C., formerly provided:

> "When a depository has been provided for the school moneys of a district, as authorized by law, the board of education of the district, by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members, may dispense with a treasurer of the school moneys, belonging to such school district. In such case, the clerk of the board of education of a district shall perform all the services, discharge all the duties and be subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school districts."

By the same act of the general assembly amending section 4763, G. C., as found in 104 O. L., 158, section 4782, G. C., as above quoted, was amended, and the only change effected by said amendment was to substitute the word "shall" in place of the word "may" before the word "dispense." While it might seem that the legislature in making this change intended to make said section 4782, G. C., mandatory instead of directory, I have held in opinion No. 656 of this department rendered to your bureau under date of July 27, 1915, that inasmuch as the action therein referred to is to be "by resolution adopted by a vote of a majority of its members," the provision of said section authorizing the board of education of a school district to dispense with the treasurer of the school moneys belonging to such school district when a depository has been provided for said moneys in the manner authorized by law, must still be considered as directory rather than mandatory.

It will be observed that the above provision of section 4782, G. C., relates to the depository for school moneys belonging to the school district, and in view of the distinction hereinbefore referred to, the question arises whether or not, in a school district in which a school teachers' pension fund has been established, and in which the board of education has dispensed with the treasurer of the school moneys under provision of section 4782, G. C., the clerk of said board of education, who by provision of the latter part of said section, is now performing all the services, discharging all the duties and is subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school district, is treasurer of the board of trustees of said pension fund and as such custodian of said fund.

While section 7889, G. C., provides that the treasurer of the school district shall be the custodian of the school teachers' pension fund, and section 4763, G. C., 104 O. L., 158, provides that in each city school district the treasurer of the city funds shall be the treasurer of the school funds, and further provides that in village and rural school districts which have not provided legal depositories in the manner authorized by law, the county treasurer shall be the treasurer of the school funds of such districts, it will be observed upon an examination of the statutes relating to the treasurer of the school funds of a school district, that the phrase "treasurer of the school funds," and the phrase "treasurer of a school district," are used interchangeably.

It seems clear that under provision of section 4763, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 104, O. L., the city treasurer was ex officio treasurer of the city school district, and as such treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund, if such fund was established in said district, providing the board of education of said district had not provided a depository for the school funds, and had not dispensed with the treasurer of said funds under authority of section 4782, G. C., and the treasurer of the funds of a village or township, respectively, being ex officio treasurer of the school funds of the respective village or township school district, was treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund of such district, if the same was established therein, providing the board of education of such district had not provided a depository for the school funds of said district and dispensed with the treasurer of the school funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C.

It seems equally clear that under provision of section 4763, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 158, the city treasurer is still ex officio treasurer of the city school district, and as such treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund, if such fund has been established in such district, providing the board of education of said district has not dispensed with the treasurer of the school funds of said district under provision of section 4782, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 158, and that the county treasurer, being ex officio treasurer of the school funds of all village and rural school districts in such county which have not provided depositories for the funds of such respective districts, in the manner authorized by law, and which have not dispensed with the respective treasurers of the school funds of such districts in the manner provided by said section 4782, G. C., as amended, is treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund, if such fund has been established in such districts.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that in a city school district in which a school teachers' pension fund has been established, and in which the board of education has not provided a depository for the school funds, or having provided a depository, has not dispensed with the treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., the city treasurer, being ex officio treasurer of the city school district, is treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund under provision of section 7889, G. C., and that in a village or rural school district in which a teachers' pension fund has been established, and in which the board of education has not provided a depository for the funds of said district in the manner provided by law, and has not dispensed with the treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., the county treasurer, being ex officio treasurer of the school funds of said district, is treasurer of the school teachers' pension fund under authority of said section 7889, G. C.

It should be noted in this connection that section 7604, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 328, makes it mandatory on boards of education of school districts to provide depositories for the school funds, and section 7609, G. C., as amended in 106 O. L., 328, provides that the members of a board of education shall be liable for any loss occasioned by their failure to provide a depository, and in addition thereto requires them to pay the treasurer of the school funds two per cent. on the average daily balance of said funds during the time the school district is without a depository.

Replying to your second question I am of the opinion that in a school district in which a school teachers' pension fund has been established and is being maintained, and in which the board of education has provided a depository for the school funds in the manner authorized by law, and has dispensed with the treasurer of said funds under authority of said section 4782, G. C., the clerk of said board, who is now performing all the services and discharging all the duties, and who is subject to all the obligations required by law of the treasurer of such school district, is treasurer of said school teachers' pension fund under provision of said section 7889, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—HOW MEMBERS ARE TO BE ELECTED—SERVE UNTIL SUCCESSORS ELECTED AND QUALIFIED.

Under provision of section 4729, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 136, the members of the county board of education elected on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for the terms of one, two, three, four and five years respectively, will hold office until the third Saturday in January of the respective years 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919 and 1920, and until their respective successors are duly elected and qualified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

HON. E. A. SCOTT, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of January 15th you request my opinion as follows:

> "The county superintendent of schools for Adams county called a meeting by giving the proper notice to the presidents of boards of education in said county to meet at West Union, Ohio, on January 14, 1916, to elect a member for county board of education as required by section 4729. There are 19 presidents in Adams county entitled to a vote, and 16 of said presidents were present at said meeting. The vote as shown by the minutes of the meeting gives eight votes to one candidate and seven to another—the one receiving the eight votes was declared elected by the chairman of the meeting. After the meeting adjourned a re-canvass of the ballots gave each candidate eight votes. I have given you the facts, and I desire your opinion on the following questions:

"1. Should not the county superintendent have called this meeting during the year 1915?

"2. Should not the candidate receive at least nine votes before there could be an election when 16 were present?

"3. Does not a vacancy exist when the presidents fail to elect?

"4. By whom should vacancy be filled? In the event the county board of education cannot agree on a member, then can the county commissioners fill said vacancy?

"5. Can a member of county board whose time has expired, but holding said position by reason of the fact, a member has not been elected to take his place, vote for himself to fill said vacancy?"

Section 4729, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 136, provides in part as follows:

"On the second Saturday in June, 1914, the presidents of the boards of education of the various village and rural school districts in each county school district shall meet and elect the five members of the county board of education, one for one year, one for two years, one for three years, one for four years, and one for five years, and until their successors are elected and qualified. The terms of office of such members shall begin on the fifteenth of July, 1914, and each year thereafter on the third Saturday of January. Each year thereafter one member of the county board of education shall be elected in the same manner for a term of five years."

The presidents of the boards of education of the various village and rural school districts in your county having met on the second Saturday in June, 1914, and having elected five members of the county board of education for the respective terms provided in section 4729, G. C., the question arises whether the term of office of the member who was elected for one year and until his successor is elected and qualified, expired on the second Saturday in June, 1915, or whether said member held over until the third Saturday in January, 1916, and until the election and qualification of his successor.

While it is difficult to construe the above provisions of section 4729, G. C., in view of the patent ambiguity as to when said term expires, I think it was the intention of the legislature in providing for the first election of the members of the county board of education on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for the terms of one, two, three, four and five years respectively, and until their successors should be elected and qualified, and by further providing that in each year after 1914, one member of said county board of education shall be elected for a term of five years to begin on the third Saturday of January, that the member elected on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for the one year term should hold over until the third Saturday in January, 1916, and that the terms of office of the members elected for two, three, four and five years respectively, should expire on the third Saturday of January in the respective years 1917, 1918, 1919 and 1920.

This interpretation of the provisions of section 4729, G. C., in no way conflicts with the provisions of section 4732, G. C., 104 O. L., 137, that each county board of education shall meet on the third Saturday of July, 1914, and on the third Saturday of March of each year thereafter, and shall organize by electing one of its members president, and another vice-president, both of whom shall serve for one year."

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that the meeting of the presidents of the boards of education of the various village and rural school districts of your county, on January 14, 1916, for the purpose of electing a member of the county board of education to succeed the member of said county board, who was elected at the meeting held on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for a term of one year, and until his successor should be elected and qualified, was properly called by the county superintendent under the above provisions of section 4729, G. C., as amended, and if said presidents of said boards of education had elected said successor, in compliance with the provisions of said statute, the person so elected, upon qualifying for the office of member of the county board of education, would have held said office for a term of five years commencing on January 15, 1916.

It appears, however, that only sixteen of said presidents were present at said meeting, and that eight votes were cast for one candidate and seven for another. In view of the provision of section 4730, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 137, that, "the vote of a majority of the members present shall be necessary to elect each member of the county board of education," it is evident that there was a failure to elect. Your second question therefore must be answered in the affirmative.

Inasmuch, however, as the member of said county board, elected at the meeting held on the second Saturday in June, 1914, for a term of one year, holds over until his successor is elected and qualified, I am of the opinion in answer to your third question that no vacancy exists in said county board within the meaning of the latter part of section 4731, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 137, which provides that,

> "Any vacancy on the board shall be filled in the same manner as is provided in section 4748 of the General Code."

The answer to your third question makes it unnecessary to answer your fourth question.

Your fifth question may be answered by observing that inasmuch as the member of the county board of education whose term has expired, is holding over by reason of the fact that a successor has not been elected to take his place, no vacancy in said board exists.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION— WITHOUT POWER TO ENTER INTO BINDING CONTRACT—NO OBJECTION TO PROPOSED RECIPROCAL ARRANGEMENT WITH OTHER STATES FOR CARE OF NON-RESIDENT INSANE.

Ohio Board of Administration is without power to enter into binding contract. No objection to proposed reciprocal arrangement for care of non-resident insane.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of January 29, 1916, reading as follows:

> "Please note the enclosed from the state hospital commission of New York:
> "Will you be good enough to look over the proposed agreement, and let us know whether there would be any legal objections to this board's entering into such an agreement?"

The proposed agreement which you enclose reads as follows:

> "Reciprocal arrangement for the exchange of insane persons entered into by the state board of insanity of the commonwealth of Massachusetts and the state hospital commission of the state of New York.
> "(1) The term 'resident,' as used in this agreement, shall be a person who has lived continuously in either state for a period of at least one year and, subsequently to acquiring such a residence in either state, has not acquired a residence in any other state by living continuously one year in such other state; provided that time spent in an institution or on parole from an institution for the insane shall not be counted in determining the time of residence in a state.
> "(2) All insane residents of either state shall be promptly accepted by the institutions of such state.
> "(3) In certain cases where the relatives or legal guardians or committee or persons legally liable for the maintenance and support of the patient are residents of either state, and some member of the family, or the ward of such guardian or committee, acquires a residence as defined in this agreement in the other state and becomes a public charge because of insanity, for the convenience of the relatives and for humanitarian reasons the person may be accepted by the duly constituted authorities of the state in which such relatives, etc., reside.
> "(4) Each hospital in each state shall accept promptly persons paroled by such hospital when returned to the institution by the proper authorities of the other state during the period of parole.
> "(5) For the purposes of this agreement, the residence of a minor shall be considered the same as the residence of the parents.
> "(6) Accurate and detailed histories are to be presented by each state in asking for the acceptance of a patient.
> "(7) No person is to be transferred from one state to the other who is not in condition to travel without danger to himself or to others, such transfers, however, to be made as soon as the mental and physical condition of the patient warrants.

"(8) In returning an accepted patient under this agreement, the state making the return shall bear all the expenses incurred, and the patient shall be accompanied in every case by an authorized agent of the state making the return to the place designated by the authorities of the state to which the patient is returned.

"(9) By mutual consent, in any particular case not covered by the terms of this agreement, it may be modified to meet the special conditions."

Admission to the hospitals for the insane in this state is regulated by statute. Section 1950, General Code, 103 O. L., 447, provides as follows:

"No person shall be admitted into any such hospital, who is not an inhabitant of the state, except by authority of the Ohio Board of Administration as provided by law. Within the meaning of this section, no person shall be considered an inhabitant who has not resided in the state one year next preceding the date of his or her application. No person is entitled to the benefits of the provisions herein except those whose insanity occurred during the time of his or her residence in the state. The board may direct the discharge of a person when they deem it expedient."

Section 1819, G. C., 103 O. L., 446, provides as follows:

"If the judge or superintendent finds that the person whose commitment or admission is requested has not a legal residence in this state, or his legal residence is in doubt or unknown, and is of the opinion that such person should be committed or admitted to such institution, he shall notify without delay the Ohio Board of Administration, giving his reasons for requesting commitment or admission."

Section 1820, G. C., 103 O. L., 446, provides as follows:

"The Ohio Board of Administration by a committee, its secretary, or such agent as it designates, shall investigate the legal residence of such person, and may send for persons and papers and administer oaths or affirmations in conducting such investigation. At any time after investigation is made, and before or after the admission, or commitment to such institution, a non-resident person whose legal residence has been established may be transported thereto at the expense of this state."

I see no objection to your board entering into the proposed arrangement, but it should be distinctly understood by all persons concerned that your board would be without power to enter into any binding contract of this sort that you might not afterwards modify yourselves or might not be wholly repudiated by your board or by the legislature of the state. Instead of it being a contract it should be gotten up in the form of a general understanding as to what the Ohio Board of Administration's policy at the present time would be.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

PROBATE COURT—MAY GRANT MINISTER'S LICENSE TO SOLEMNIZE MARRIAGE—APPLICANT MUST BE AN ORDAINED OR LICENSED MINISTER OF A SOCIETY OR CONGREGATION WITHIN THIS STATE.

An ordained or licensed minister of any religious society or congregation within this state may apply to the probate judge of any county within the state in which he expects to perform the marriage ceremony for a license to solemnize marriages.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

HON. GEORGE M. HOKE, Probate Judge, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of January 22, 1916, requesting my opinion, received and is as follows:

> "A regularly ordained minister of the gospel regularly officiated in this, Seneca county, some six or eight years ago, but never procured a minister's license to solemnize marriages from any probate court within this state. He then moved to another state where he has since officiated as minister of the gospel. He desires to come here to officiate at the wedding of a friend, after which he will return to his charge in the other state.
> "QUESTION—Can this court lawfully grant him a 'minister's license to solemnize marriages,' he not returning except to solemnize the marriage of his friend?"

Section 11182 of the General Code provides as follows:

> "An ordained or licensed minister of any religious society or congregation within this state, who has obtained a license for that purpose, as hereinafter provided, * * * may join together as husband and wife all persons not prohibited by law."

The license referred to in the foregoing section is provided for in section 11183 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "A minister of the gospel, upon producing to the probate judge of any county within this state in which he officiates, credentials of his being a regularly ordained or licensed minister of any religious society or congregation, shall be entitled to receive from the court a license, authorizing him to solemnize marriages within this state so long as he continues a regular minister in such society or congregation."

The section first quoted provides that an ordained or licensed minister of a religious society or congregation within this state, who has obtained a license for that purpose, may perform the marriage ceremony. Two conditions are prescribed by this statute. First, the minister must be an ordained or licensed minister of a religious society or congregation within this state. Second, he must have a license to solemnize marriages.

It follows from the foregoing provisions that if a minister has a license to perform the marriage ceremony and yet is not an ordained or licensed minister of a society or congregation within this state, he may not perform the marriage ceremony. In view of these provisions it would seem that it is only an ordained or licensed minister of a society or congregation within this state who may obtain a license under section 11183, and yet the provisions of that section do not attach to the term "religious society or congregation" the further qualification "within this state." The difficulty, therefore, in answering your inquiry is in harmonizing the provisions of said two sections 11182 and 11183.

It is said by Rockel in his Probate Practice at page 1671, in note, that:

> "A minister need not reside nor have a charge in the county in which he applies for a permit. It is sufficient if he intends to officiate therein and perform the marriage ceremony."

Giving to the term "officiates," as it appears in section 11183, this construction, it follows that under the provisions of that section any minister of the gospel upon producing credentials of his being a regularly ordained or licensed minister of any religious society or congregation, either in this state or elsewhere, may receive from the probate judge of any county in which said minister expects to perform the marriage ceremony a license authorizing him to solemnize marriages.

I am of the opinion, however, in view of the conditions prescribed by section 11182, that it must appear that the applicant for a license is an ordained or licensed minister of a religious society or congregation within this state and when that fact is shown he may then apply for and receive from any probate judge in any county in the state in which he expects to perform the marriage ceremony a license authorizing him so to do.

Applying this construction to the facts stated in your inquiry, if the minister in question is an ordained or licensed minister of any religious society or congregation within this state, and he intends to officiate in your county at a marriage ceremony, he may lawfully receive a license authorizing him to solemnize marriages within this state so long as he continues as an ordained or licensed minister of such religious society or congregation.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—SECTION 5331, G. C., 103 O. L., 463, CONSTRUED—LINEAL DESCENDANT—BEQUEST TO CHURCH.

Where property within the jurisdiction of this state passes by will to a person or persons, other than those expressly excepted by the provisions of section 5331, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 463, even though said will was made in accordance with a verbal agreement between the testator and devisee or legatee, and in consideration for services rendered or to be rendered to said testator by said devisee or legatee, said property is nevertheless subject to the collateral inheritance tax under the provisions of said section 5331, G. C., as amended.

When a person bequeaths or devises property to or for the use of father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, or adopted child, during life or for a term of years, and the remainder to a collateral heir or to a stranger to the blood, the value of the prior estate shall be determined as of the date of the death of the testator and within sixty days thereafter by the appraisers appointed by and acting under the order of the probate court, and when so determined shall be deducted together with the sum of five hundred dollars from the appraised value of such property according to the provisions of section 5333, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 463. The value of the life estate shall be determined by the so-called Actuaries' combined experience tables and five per cent. compound interest in accordance with the provision of the latter part of section 5543, G. C.

A bequest to a church is not one "to or for the use of an institution in this state for the purposes only for public charity or other exclusively public purposes" within the meaning of the provision of section 5332, G. C., and as such a bequest, over and above the sum of five hundred dollars exempted by provision of section 5331, G. C., as amended, is subject to the collateral inheritance tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

HON. GEORGE THORNBURG, Prosecuting Attorney, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of January 5th you request my opinion as follows:

> "I desire your opinion as to the liability under sections 5331, et seq., General Code of Ohio, relating to collateral inheritance tax:
> "First: Walker V. Kilgore died testate May 6, 1914. By his will, duly admitted to probate in Belmont county, after providing for the payment of his just debts and funeral expenses, he gives, devises and bequeaths to his brother, William M. Kilgore, and Chattie M. Kilgore, wife of William M. Kilgore, all the remainder of his property, both real and personal, of any and every kind, wherever found; 'Providing, William M. Kilgore and Chattie M. Kilgore care for me in my last sickness.' After payment of all the debts and funeral expenses, (not including any claim which William M. Kilgore and Chattie M. Kilgore had for services rendered during his last sickness) there remained for distribution the sum of $10,826.30, including the appraised value of the real estate. The last sickness of the deceased covered a period of more than eleven years prior to his death, and services to a very considerable extent were rendered by William M. Kilgore and Chattie M. Kilgore. William M. Kilgore was named as executor and was duly appointed as such. No claim was presented by William M. Kilgore and Chattie M. Kilgore to the court for allowance in view of the provision which gave them all of the property after payment of testator's debts; but upon application to determine the collateral inheritance tax, it is contended by William M. Kilgore and Chattie M. Kilgore that the services rendered in the last sickness of testator were reasonably worth more than the balance for distribution, and it is contended that there should be no collateral inheritance tax for this reason, and said William M. and Chattie M. Kilgore contend that they having cared for testator during his entire last sickness, the testator having been paralyzed for years before his death, that regardless of the fact whether they are not able to show the exact monetary value of the services rendered, the bequest and devise to them is compensation only for whatever services were actually rendered, and is in accordance with the verbal agreement between the testator and them, and that the will was made in pursuance of such agreement, and that there should be no tax. What is your opinion as to the rule to be followed in such case?

"Second. T. J. Buchanan died testate on November 25, 1914, leaving a widow, Clara G. Buchanan, age 47 years, who died March 12, 1915. By the terms of the will of T. J. Buchanan, he devises and bequeaths to his wife, Clara G. Buchanan, 'for and during the term of her natural life, and for her sole and exclusive use, our home residence property on North Chestnut street, in Barnesville, Ohio, and also the "Garden lot" lying west of C. J. Bradfield's residence property, in Barnesville, Ohio.' 'At the death of my wife, I hereby authorize and direct my executor, hereinafter named, to sell at public auction or private sale, as he may deem best, and upon such terms as he may deem best, and to convey to purchasers, by proper deed, or deeds, my residence property on North Chestnut street, Barnesville, Ohio, and the "Garden lot," above given to my wife during her natural life, and to divide and distribute the proceeds of such sale as follows: One-third to my sister, Mary W. Lewis; one-third to my sister, Eliza Griffin, and one-third to the heirs of my sister, Margaret Thompson, deceased, namely, her daughters, Mabel Thompson, Bertha Thompson Lauritzen, and Lidella Thompson.' At the time of the appraisement of the personal estate, the court ordered the real estate to be also appraised, and the residence property and the garden lot in the village of Barnesville, Ohio, was appraised at $7,870.00. In order to determine the value of the remainder liable for the collateral inheritance tax, is it necessary to determine and deduct the value of the prior life estate given to Clara G. Buchanan, the widow? The application to determine the collateral inheritance tax was not filed until after the death of Clara G. Buchanan; would this life estate be determined according to its actual duration, or would it be determined according to the expectancy of life of the widow at testator's death as given in the so-called mortality tables? If, according to mortality tables, what table shall be used? Would it be the duty of the appraisers to determine the valuation of the remainder, or the duty of the court? Section 5343 seems to be inconsistent in that it first provides that the value of the property subject to the tax shall be its actual market value as found by the probate court, but provides for the appointment of three, disinterested persons to appraise the property at its actual value, and also provides that, 'In case of an annuity or life estate, the value thereof shall be determined by the so-called Actuaries' combined experience tables and 5% compound interest.' What is meant by this last clause? After diligent inquiry and search, I have not been able to find any so-called Actuaries' combined experience tables and 5% compound interest. Can you furnish a copy of such table, or inform where the same may be obtained? The Code gives the Actuaries' combined experience table at certain per cents., but not 5%.

"Third. By the will of said T. J. Buchanan, he gives and bequeathes 'To the Presbyterian Church of Barnesville, Ohio, the sum of one thousand dollars, to be paid to the trustees of said church in cash within a reasonable time after my death.' Is this bequest liable for the collateral inheritance tax? The Presbyterian Church of Barnesville, Ohio, is duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio."

Your questions will be considered in the order in which you have submitted them.

Section 5331, G. C., as amended in 103, O. L., 463, provides:

"All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interests therein, whether belonging to inhabitants of this state or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, or by deed, grant, sale or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor, to a person in trust, or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant or adopted child, shall be liable to a tax of five per cent. of its value above the sum of five hundred dollars. Fifty per cent. of such tax shall be for the use of the state; and fifty per cent. of such tax shall go to the city, village or township in which said tax originates. All administrators, executors and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance made during the grantor's life, shall be liable for all such taxes, with lawful interest as hereinafter provided, until they have been paid, as hereinafter directed. Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent, and shall at once become a lien upon the property, and be and remain a lien until paid."

Under the plain terms of the above provisions of section 5331, G. C., the passing of interests in property by will or by the intestate laws of this state, to or for the use of persons other than those expressly excluded, is sufficient to make the estate taxable.

While section 5332, G. C., adds to the list of exemptions by excepting from the operation of the provisions of section 5331, G. C., interests in property transmitted to certain public subdivisions or institutions and sections 5334, G. C., provides that:

"When a decedent appoints one or more executors or trustees, and instead of their lawful allowance makes a bequest or devise of property to them which would otherwise be liable to such tax, or appoints them his residuary legatees, and said bequests, devises, or residuary legacies exceed what would be a reasonable compensation for their services, such excess shall be liable to such tax, and the probate court having jurisdiction of their accounts shall fix such compensation."

I find no language in any provision of the statutes, relating to collateral inheritances, which modifies the general provisions of said section 5331, G. C., as above quoted, by making the fact that a devise is founded upon a valuable consideration material as affecting the question of the exemption of the same from the inheritance tax.

While in the case of Haggerty v. State, 55 O. S., 613, the court, in interpreting the word "sale" as used in said section 5331, G. C., held that:

> "The property 'which shall pass by sale' within the meaning of the act (the collateral inheritance statute) is such only as passes in transactions which are in fact gifts, though in form sales, and the act does not restrict the right to dispose of property by sale for a valuable consideration, which the parties, in good faith, deem adequate," it cannot be held that this decision goes to the extent of limiting the force and effect of the statute upon inheritances created by will to such as are in the nature of gifts as distinguished from those which rest upon a valuable consideration.

In interpreting the statute of the state of New York, which contains a provision similar to that of section 5331, G. C., the court in the case of In Re Gould, 156 N. Y., 423, held that:

> "The transfer by will, subjected to taxation by the act 1892, is not intended to be limited to property gratuitously given by will, but extends to a testamentary transfer in payment of a debt.
> "It matters not what the motive of a transfer by will may be, whether to pay a debt, discharge some moral obligation, or to benefit a relative. If the devise or bequest is accepted by the beneficiary, the transfer is made by will within the meaning of the transfer tax act."

and again in the case of In Re Kidd, 188 N. Y., 274, the court held:

> "Where it has been adjudicated by the supreme court, in an action brought by the step-daughter of a testator against his executors and trustees and beneficiaries named in his will, that she was entitled to all of the real and personal property of testator, under an ante-nuptial agreement between him and her mother whereby he agreed to devise and bequeath all of his property to such step-daughter, if no children should be born of his marriage with her mother, and the judgment directed the defendants to execute and deliver to the plaintiff all necessary releases and conveyances of such property, the property passing to testator's step-daughter under such judgment is not exempt from taxation under the transfer act, since the contract, enforced by such judgment and under which testator's step-daughter receives the property, was not a contract to convey the property, but a contract to make a will in her favor, and even if the testator had performed his agreement and given her his property by his will, the estate would have been subject to the tax."

The above cited authorities are in support of the proposition, that in the absence of express statutory provision to the contrary, an inheritance tax applies as well to a devise or bequest upon a valuable consideration as to one which is intended as a mere gratuity, and the further proposition that even where there has been a definite contract to make a will founded upon a valuable consideration, and the contract was executed on the part of the devisee or legatee, and the will made, property passing to said devisee or legatee by the terms of said will is subject to the inheritance tax without reference to the contract. In such case the devisee or legatee may renounce his respective devise or bequest and elect to claim from the estate of the decedent as a creditor, but he may not take under the will except on the terms upon which all other devisees or legatees, except those expressly exempt, take under the will, i. e., subject to the tax.

As stated by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion found in the annual report of the attorney-general for the year 1914, at page 1344 of said report:

> "A very clear distinction is made by the authorities between the taxability of property passing by will, founded upon a consideration, and property passing by deed, grant or sale intended to take effect after the death of the testator, and founded upon a consideration. For a deed intended to take effect at the death of the testator or other similar instrument is only conventionally an inheritance, and the convention which the statute constructs will be limited to the purpose of the statute, which is to guard against the evasion of the tax by the expedient of making sales, grants or deeds intended to take effect at the death of the testator; so that where the sale, grant or deed is in reality founded upon a valuable consideration it is not permitted to stand upon a different foundation from any other similar transaction merely because it happens to be so made as not to take effect until after the death of the testator, and is, therefore, not to be regarded as within the purview of the statute. But the real subject of the tax is the privilege of inheriting property. This is regarded as in a sense something other than a natural right, whereas the right to dispose of property by grant, sale or deed is a natural right inherent in the very idea of property itself. Therefore, no reason exists in the view of the authorities for making any such distinction as to taxation of inheritances created by will as is made with respect to conventional inheritances created by grant, sale or deed intended to take effect after the death of the testator."

While from your statement of facts it appears that there was a verbal agreement between the said Walker V. Kilgore and the said William M. and Chattie M. Kilgore, according to the terms of which the said Walker V. Kilgore was to make a will, in which, after providing for the payment of his just debts and funeral expenses, he was to devise and bequeath to his brother, William M. Kilgore, and Chattie M. Kilgore, wife of William M. Kilgore, all the remainder of his property, both real and personal, of any and every kind, wherever found, in consideration of services to be rendered by the said William M. and Chattie M. Kilgore in caring for him in his last sickness, and that said will was made in accordance with said verbal agreement, the property passes to the said William M. and Chattie M. Kilgore by the terms of said will, and I am of the opinion, therefore, that said property is subject to the collateral inheritance tax under the provisions of section 5331, et seq., of the General Code.

From your statement of facts in connection with your second inquiry it appears that the life estate in question was terminated on March 12, 1915, prior to the date when the application to determine the collateral inheritance tax was filed.

Section 5333, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 463, provides:

> "When a person bequeaths or devises property to or for the use of father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant, or adopted child, during life or for a term of years, and the remainder to a collateral heir, or to a stranger to the blood, the value of the prior estate, shall be appraised, within sixty days after the death of the testator, in the manner hereinafter provided, and deducted, together with the sum of five hundred dollars, from the appraised value of such property."

Under provision of the latter part of section 5331, G. C., as amended, the collateral inheritance tax became due and payable immediately upon the death of the testator, T. J. Buchanan, and at once became a lien upon the property which by the terms of the will passed to the persons therein mentioned subject to the life estate of the widow of said testator.

It seems clear under the above provisions of the statutes that for the purpose of determining the collateral inheritance tax the value of the life estate as well as of the estate in remainder must be determined as of the date of the death of the testator, and while the property in question was not appraised until after the sixty-day period provided in section 5333, G. C., as amended, and until after the death of the life tenant, this fact is not material as affecting the value of the prior estate to be deducted from the appraised value of said property.

Under the terms of the will the widow was to have the sole and exclusive use of the property in question during the term of her natural life. I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your second question that the value of this life estate, based on the expectancy of life of the said Clara G. Buchanan, widow of the testator, and determined as of the date of the death of said testator, should be ascertained by the appraisers, appointed by and acting under the order of the probate court, and when so determined should be deducted together with the sum of five hundred dollars from the appraised value of said property, according to the provisions of section 5333, G. C., as amended.

The latter part of section 5543, G. C., provides that the value of the life estate "shall be determined by the so-called Actuaries' combined experience tables and five per cent. compound interest."

According to the Actuaries' combined experience tables as set forth in Wolfe's "Inheritance Tax Calculations," the present value of an annuity of $1.00, payable at the end of each year for the remainder of the life of a person at the age of forty-seven, is $12.02.

Assuming that the appraisers should find that the entire value of the real estate in question at the time of the death of the testator was $8,800.00, the estimated annual income on this valuation at 5% would be $440.00. Multiplying the above sum of $12.02 by 440 gives $5,288.80, the value of the life estate. This sum plus $500.00 deducted from the entire value of the property in question, which we have assumed to be $8,800.00, leaves a remainder of $3,011.20 which would be subject to the collateral inheritance tax.

The foregoing is merely an illustration of the application of the Actuaries' combined experience tables in determining the value of the life estate.

I am informed by the superintendent of insurance that the above mentioned work on collateral inheritance tax calculations has been carefully prepared, and that the tables therein set forth may be relied upon as being correct. If you desire to secure a copy of said work you can write to S. H. Wolfe, the author and publisher, 165 Broadway, New York City.

Your third question calls for an interpretation of that part of section 5332, G. C., which provides that the provisions of section 5331, G. C., shall not apply "to property or interests in property transmitted to * * * or for the use of an institution in the state for purposes only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes."

In an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, as found in the annual report of the attorney-general for the year 1913, at page 1178 of said report, it was held that a bequest to a church is not one "to or for the use of an institution in this state for purposes only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes" within the meaning of the provision of section 5332, G. C., and that such a bequest is therefore subject to the collateral inheritance tax if it exceeds the amount exempted by section 5331, G. C.

I concur in said opinion, and therefore hold that the bequest, referred to in your third inquiry, over and above the sum of five hundred dollars exempted by provision of said section 5331, G. C., as amended, is subject to the collateral inheritance tax.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CENSUS BY DEPARTMENT OF LABOR AND COMMERCE IS NOT SUCH A FEDERAL CENSUS AS IS CONTEMPLATED IN SECTION 4871, G. C.—ANNUAL REGISTRATION OF ELECTORS IS BASED ON DECENNIAL FEDERAL CENSUS—CITY OF AKRON.

The basis upon which the requirement of annual registration of electors provided in section 4871, G. C., is the decennial federal census.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDERBANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of February 8, 1916, is as follows:

"We herewith enclose a communication from the Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections of Summit county, a communication from the Department of Labor, Washington, D. C., to Dow W. Harter, assistant prosecuting attorney, Akron, Ohio, a communication from the Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, Washington, D. C., to Charles Kennedy, prosecuting attorney, Akron, Ohio, and a map of the city of Akron with annexed territory to said city, and ask your opinion upon the following question, to wit:

"Under sections 4870 and 4871, G. C., of Ohio, is the census so taken, as shown in the aforesaid communications from the department of labor and department of commerce, such a federal census as is contemplated in the aforesaid sections of the statutes of Ohio?

"If your answer is in the affirmative, does the board of deputy state supervisors of elections of Summit county become automatically a board of deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as provided in section 4788 of the General Code, or must the members of said board be appointed as deputy state supervisors and inspectors of elections, as provided in section 4789 of the General Code of Ohio, on the first day of May, 1916?"

The communication from the department of labor, directed to Dow W. Harter, assistant prosecuting attorney, Akron, Ohio, referred to, is in part as follows:

"In response to your request of January 24th, for a report on the census of Akron, Ohio, for April 10, 1915, I beg to inform you that as a preliminary to the study of infant mortality in Akron, the children's bureau employed local persons to visit each habitation in the city in order to learn the number of babies born during the years 1913 and 1914. At the same time, the visitors were instructed to learn the number of persons living in each habitation on April 10, 1915."

The result of the foregoing enumeration showed the total inhabitants of the city of Akron on April 10, 1915, to be 100,079.

The communication from the department of commerce, addressed to Hon. Charles Kennedy, prosecuting attorney, Akron, Ohio, is as follows:

> "My attention has been called to the enumeration of the city of Akron made by the department of labor, which gives the population of your city as 100,079. This, no doubt, is official so far as the department of labor is concerned."

The provisions of sections 4870 and 4871, G. C., to which you refer, pertinent to your inquiry, are as follows:

> "Section 4870. In cities which at the last preceding federal census had, or which at any subsequent federal census may have, a population of eleven thousand eight hundred or more, there shall be a general registration of electors in the several wards or precincts thereof in the manner, at the times and on the days hereinafter provided. * * *
> "Section 4871. In cities which now or hereafter may have a population of one hundred thousand or more, when ascertained in the manner provided in the preceding section, there shall be an annual general registration of all the electors therein in the several wards and precincts thereof on the days and in the manner hereinafter provided."

The answer to your inquiry turns upon the interpretation to be given to the phrase "federal census" as found in the statutory provisions above quoted. This phrase has an established and well recognized meaning when used in the ordinary affairs of every day life. It is a well defined rule of statutory construction that terms are to be interpreted in their plain and ordinary acceptation unless it is manifest from the context that they are used in a special or different sense or such interpretation is palpably inconsistent with the purpose of the statute. No such reason for a construction or interpretation other than that of the ordinary acceptation of the terms appears in the present instance.

The federal census is uniformly accepted and understood to mean the actual enumeration of the population required by clause 3, section 2 of article 1 of the constitution of the United States, and by the act of July 2, 1909, c2, section 1 (section 4385 of the United States, compiled statutes of 1913) is to be taken in the year 1910 and every ten years thereafter, the promulgation of which is provided for in certain respects by sections 3498 and 4212, G. C. In view of this accepted meaning of the phrase "federal census," it is manifest that only such census was in contemplation of the legislature in the enactment of the statutes under consideration.

The enumeration referred to in the letters accompanying your inquiry is manifestly not such a census as is contemplated in sections 4870 and 4871, G. C. This enumeration was only incidental to an investigation being made by the "children's bureau" of the department of labor of the United States government, and does not purport to be in any sense a federal census. While it is stated, supra, that such enumeration is to be regarded as official, by the department of labor, it is not in any wise asserted to be an official census.

I am therefore of the opinion, in answer to your first inquiry, that the enumeration therein referred to is not a federal census within the meaning of section 4870 and section 4871, G. C., and that the census to which the provisions of those sections now refer is the census which was taken by the federal government in the year 1910.

The foregoing answer to your first inquiry renders unnecessary consideration of your second question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CORRUPT PRACTICE ACT—PERSONS MAY BE EMPLOYED TO DISTRIBUTE MARKED UNOFFICIAL BALLOTS AND CARDS AT POLLS ON ELECTION DAY.

The payment of $3.00 for the services of a person to circulate and distribute marked unofficial ballots and cards, showing the name of a candidate and the office which he seeks, among the voters at the polls on election day is not in violation of the provisions of section 5175-26, G. C., 106 O. L., 437.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 14, 1916.

HON. CHARLES E. BALLARD, Prosecuting Attorney, Springfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of February 5, 1916, is as follows:

> "I respectfully request your opinion upon the following question:
> A. is a candidate for public office in Clark county, Ohio, and after the election files with the board of elections in said county a statement of his expenses, as required by law, showing that on the day of election he employed B. to stay near the polls and 'circulate pamphlets and literature bearing on the election,' and paid him $3.00 for his services. Is A., the candidate, guilty of a corrupt practice, as provided under section 5175-26, G. C., of what is known as the 'Corrupt Practices Act,' providing the pamphlets and literature circulated are marked ballots and a card giving the name and stating the office for which A. is a candidate?"

The provisions of section 5175-26, G. C., 106 O. L., 437, to which you refer, and which are particularly applicable to your inquiry, are as follows:

> "Any person is guilty of a corrupt practice if he, directly or indirectly, by himself or through any other person, in connection with, or in respect of any election, pays, lends or contributes, or offers or promises to pay, lend or contribute any money or other valuable consideration, for any other purpose than the following matters and services, at their reasonable, bona fide and customary value; * * *
> "The preparation, printing and publication of posters, lithographs, banners, notices and literary material, reading matter, cards and pamphlets. * * * The preparation and circulation of letters, pamphlets and literature bearing on election. * * *"

Section 5175-26 was originally enacted in 102 O. L., 327, and defines a criminal offense, the penalty for the commission of which is prescribed by section 13323-1, G. C., a part of the same act.

These sections being penal, are subject to a strict construction against the state, or, stated conversely, a liberal construction in favor of one accused thereunder.

While the term "literature" has a narrow technical meaning which would manifestly not include marked ballots or cards such as are above referred to, the term in its ordinary meaning is susceptible of a much more comprehensive definition, as found in the Century dictionary, as follows:

"Literature:

"(2) The use of letters for the promulgation of thought or knowlelge; the communication of facts, ideas or emotions by means of books or other modes of publication.

"(3) Recorded thought or knowledge; the aggregate of books or other publications in either an unlimited or a limited sense."

and in the Standard dictionary as follows:

"(1) The printed productions of the human mind collectively."

It is not believed to be indulging in any strained or unusual construction or application of this term, as understood in its every day use, and in view of the rule of construction of penal statutes above suggested, to say that a marked unofficial ballot or a printed card, giving the name of a candidate, together with the office sought by him, is literature within contemplation of the provision permitting "the preparation and circulation of letters, pamphlets and literature bearing on election." It would hardly be conceived to be consistent with the provision permitting the printing and publication of cards if it were not contemplated that the same might be distributed and circulated among the electors of the election district. Indeed, the term "publication" itself as here used manifestly includes more than the mere printing of such cards and may without inconsistency be held to include the circulation or distribution, as well as the mere printing, of reading matter, cards and pamphlets.

I am therefore of opinion that the payment of $3.00 for the services of a person to circulate and distribute among the voters at the polls on election day marked unofficial ballots and printed cards, showing the name of a candidate and the office which he seeks, is not in violation of the provisions of section 5175-26, G. C., to which you refer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

PRESIDENT OF CITY COUNCIL—VACANCY IN OFFICE FILLED BY APPOINTMENT BY MAYOR.

In case of the death or resignation of the president of council, the vacancy thus created may be filled by appointment by the mayor and the president pro tem does not, under such circumstances, succeed to the presidency of council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 15, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—This department is in receipt of the following inquiry which I deem of sufficient importance to answer, and am therefore directing the opinion to you:

"When the presidency of the council of a city becomes vacant either by death or resignation, does the president pro tem become president, and the council elect a new councilman, as well as another president pro tem?

"According to section 4274 of the latest edition of Ellis' Municipal Code, this line of succession follows in the case of a vacancy in the mayorship, and does the same section apply in the case of a vacancy in the presidency of the council?"

The provisions of section 4274, G. C., to which reference is above made, provides as follows:

"In case of the death, resignation or removal of the mayor, the president of council shall become the mayor, and serve for the unexpired term, and until the successor is elected and qualified. Thereupon the president pro tem of council shall become president thereof, and shall have the same rights, duties and powers as his predecessor. The vacancy thus created in council shall be filled as other vacancies, and council shall elect another president pro tem."

The circumstances and conditions prescribed by the foregoing section, and under and by which the president pro tem of council succeeds to the office of president thereof, are wholly different from those stated in the foregoing inquiry. It is not possible by any rule of construction to extend the provisions of said section beyond their plain terms, and therefore they cannot apply to the conditions named in said inquiry. It follows that said section furnishes no authority for the succession of president pro tem of council to the office of president of council in case of the death or resignation of the latter.

The president of council is an elective officer under the provisions of section 4272, G. C. Other than the provisions of section 4274, supra, hereinbefore noted, no authority may be found in the statutes under which the president pro tem of council may succeed to the office of president of council. When the latter, therefore, becomes vacant under any circumstances other than those named in said section 4274, we must look to the general provisions of the law for the filling of vacancies in offices of municipalities, and that is found in section 4252, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 65, which provides as follows:

"In case of death, resignation, removal or disability of any officer or director in any department of any municipal corporation, unless otherwise provided by law, the mayor thereof shall fill the vacancy by appointment, and such appointment shall continue for the unexpired term and until a successor is duly appointed, or duly elected and qualified, or until such disability is removed."

The president of council is an officer of the municipality. He therefore comes within the provisions of the foregoing section, and in case of his death or resignation the mayor, by the provisions of said section, is authorized to fill the vacancy so created by appointment.

This conclusion is in harmony with an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, reported at page 1519, of Vol. II of the Annual Report of the Attorney-General for the year 1913.

I am of the opinion therefore in answer to this inquiry, that in case of the death or resignation of the president of council the vacancy thus created may be filled by appointment by the mayor, and that the president pro tem does not, under any circumstances, succeed to the presidency of council.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF CERTAIN OIL AND GAS AND COAL LEASES IN VINTON AND ATHENS COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 15, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for approval the following leases:

First. Oil and gas lease executed to T. E. Warren covering lands in section 16, township 11, range 17, Vinton county, Ohio, containing one hundred and sixty-two (162) acres more or less.

Second. Coal lease executed to J. C. Hewitt of Athens, Ohio, covering lands in section 29, township 11, range 15, Athens county, Ohio, containing thirty-six and forty-seven hundredths (36.47) acres more or less.

Third. Coal lease executed to E. P. Snyder, covering lands in section 16, township 11, range 17, Vinton county, Ohio, containing eighty (80) acres more or less.

These leases are drawn in pursuance of the provisions of sections 3209-1, G. C. (105 O. L., 6.)

I have carefully examined these leases and also considered the statements made by you relative to the advisability of executing these leases. I am returning the leases to you with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATION—FRANCHISE TAX COMPUTED UPON SUBSCRIBED BUT NOT YET ISSUED CAPITAL STOCK AND ALSO UPON ITS ISSUED CAPITAL STOCK.

The franchise tax provided in section 5498, G. C., should be computed upon the subscribed but not yet issued or outstanding capital stock of a corporation, and also upon its issued and outstanding capital stock.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 15, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 9, 1916, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "A domestic corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100,000 of which $10,000 is issued and outstanding. It then secures subscriptions to an additional $40,000 of stock, none of which is issued and outstanding.

"What is the amount of subscribed stock?"

I assume that my opinion in this matter is desired for your guidance in determining the amount of subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock of such corporation upon which is computed the franchise tax provided for in section 5498 of the General Code. The section of the Code just referred to defines or describes this tax as > "* * * a fee of three-twentieths of one per cent. upon its subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock, which fee shall not be less than ten dollars in any case. * * *"

Strictly speaking, "issued and outstanding capital stock" is of necessity subscribed stock, because all stock issued by a corporation must be issued upon subscription. The term "subscribed," however, is sometimes used to indicate the stock of a corporation which has been contracted for, but a certificate for which is not to be issued until wholly or partially paid for.

It is apparent that the legislature had in mind this latter restricted meaning of the word when section 5498 of the General Code was enacted, and in order to make sure that the tax would be computed not only upon the issued and outstanding stock, but also upon stock contracted for but not yet issued, they used the expression: "subscribed or issued and outstanding capital stock."

Directly answering your question, the corporation referred to has $50,000 of subscribed stock, $10,000 of which is issued and outstanding and $40,000 merely subscribed.

My answer to your question is in harmony with the conclusion expressed by former Attorney-General Ellis in an opinion given to the then secretary of state on June 6, 1907. I am, however, unable to agree with the statements made in the opinion of Mr. Ellis that the treasury stock of a corporation, which he concedes is issued and outstanding stock, is not subscribed stock, because, as I understand the term, "treasury stock" of a corporation is subscribed and issued stock which has later become the property of the corporation. The mere fact that this stock is an asset of and owned by the corporation itself does not take away its character as subscribed stock.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATION—WHEN INCREASING AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK —NOT REQUIRED TO FILE CERTIFICATE SHOWING TEN PER CENT. OF ITS ENTIRE CAPITAL STOCK HAS BEEN SUBSCRIBED.

A corporation, which by proper action and the filing of a certificate with the secretary of state, increases the amount of its authorized capital stock, is not required to file a certificate showing that ten per cent. of its entire capital stock, after such increase, has been subscribed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 15, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 9, 1916, requesting my opinion as follows:

"A domestic corporation having an original authorized capital stock of $1,000, all of which is issued and outstanding, increases its authorized capital stock to $100,000.

"Is it required to increase its subscribed stock to be equal to ten per cent. of its total authorized stock?

"Your attention is respectfully directed to A. G. R., 1906, page 52."

Former Attorney-General Ellis, in an opinion rendered May 4, 1906, to the then secretary of state, which opinion is referred to in your letter, held, in substance, that a corporation increasing its capital stock must, after such increase has been effected, file a certificate showing that ten per cent. of its entire capital stock has been subscribed. This opinion was based upon no specific statutory authority, but apparently upon the general legislative policy relative to corporations.

I am unable to agree with the conclusion expressed in this opinion, and I do not believe that it is in harmony with the requirements of the General Code. Section 8633, of the General Code, requires the filing of a certificate with the secretary of state by subscribers to the articles of incorporation, or a majority of them, when ten per cent. of the capital stock of such corporation has been subscribed, applies to the organization of the corporation. Until this certificate is filed the corporate organization cannot be completed and it cannot even organize by the election of directors and officers or act as a legal entity until such certificate has been filed. It will be noted that the legislature has made effective provision to enforce the filing of this certificate by providing that it must be done before the corporation can organize or elect its officers or do any corporate act.

The situation is entirely different where a corporation increases its capital stock under sections 8698 and 8699 of the General Code. The corporation at that time must be in existence and fully organized. The section of the Code authorizing the increase of the capital stock makes no requirement that any part of such increase shall be subscribed before the increase becomes effective. The method of securing such increase is clearly defined in the law and is complete when a proper certificate to that effect is filed with the secretary of state. The fact that the organizers of a corporation might evade the requirements of the code, that ten per cent. of its capital stock must be subscribed before its organization can be completed, by organizing with a small capital stock and thereafter increasing the amount of such capital stock, does not justify reading into the section authorizing an increase of such capital stock a provision which is not there. Whether or not such provision should be in the law in order to effect a consistent legislative policy concerns the legislature of the state rather than the officers whose duty it is to interpret the law as enacted.

I am therefore of the opinion that the corporation referred to in your letter is not required to increase the amount of its subscribed stock to ten per cent. of its entire capital stock after the increase referred to.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE TO REAL ESTATE IN ATHENS COUNTY—REFORESTATION TRACTS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1916.

HON. CHARLES E. THORNE, Director Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have carefully examined the abstract of title to the premises described as follows:

> "Situate in Waterloo township, Athens county, Ohio, and in sections numbered twenty-five (25) and thirty-one (31), and the northwest quarter of said section No. 25, excepting forty (40) acres lying east of the public highway, heretofore conveyed by W. C. Foster to Julian E. White, to which reference is hereby made for a more particular description. The land hereby conveyed containing in all, two hundred twenty-one and one-half (221½) acres, more or less, and being the same premises formerly owned by Thomas Robinett."

From my examination of said abstract of title I am of the opinion that on December 11, 1915, the date of the continuation of said abstract made by R. D. Williams, abstractor, Juliet Seward was the owner in fee simple of said premises subject only to the following incumbrances:

1st. The mortgage for $1,200.00 executed by Juliet Seward and husband, Millard F. Seward, to Martin F. Morris, trustee, which mortgage is recorded in volume No. 40, page 148, record of mortgages of Athens county, Ohio.

2nd. The taxes for the year 1915, the amount of which is not stated in said abstract. However, under date of February 10, 1916, I am informed by the treasurer of Athens county that the taxes on said premises, due and payable in December, 1915, have been paid. This leaves only the taxes for the last half of 1915 payable in June, 1916, to be paid. On the same day I was advised by the recorder of Athens county that the mortgage above referred to had not yet been satisfied.

I am of the opinion that when the tax payable in June, 1916, and the mortgage above referred to are paid and discharged, that Juliet Seward and husband can, by a sufficient warranty deed, convey to the state of Ohio an estate in fee simple to said premises.

The abstract of title is herewith returned to you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION—VACANCY IN OFFICE —PERSON APPOINTED CONTINUES FOR FULL TERM OF FOUR YEARS—CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISION GOVERNS APPOINTMENT.

Section 4 of article VI of the constitution governs the appointment of the superintendent of public instruction, and under the provisions of said section the term of a person appointed by the governor to fill a vacancy in said office begins at the date of the appointment and qualification of said person, and continues for the full term of four years.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—In your letter under date of February 14, 1916, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Article VI, section 4 of the constitution of Ohio provides:
> "'A superintendent of public instruction to replace the state commissioner of common schools, shall be included as one of the officers of the executive department to be appointed by the governor, for the term of four years, with the powers and duties now exercised by the state commissioner of common schools until otherwise provided by law, and with such other powers as may be provided by law.'
> "In accordance with the above quoted provisions of the constitution, the records of this department show that Frank W. Miller was appointed and commissioned as such superintendent of public instruction for the term beginning July 29, 1913, and expiring July 28, 1917.
> "Section 352 of the General Code of Ohio, passed February 16, 1914, provides:
> "'There shall be a superintendent of public instruction, who shall be appointed by the governor. He shall hold his office for a term of four years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified, such term commencing on the second Monday of July. He shall have an office in or near the state house, in which the books and papers pertaining to his office shall be kept.'
> "Frank W. Miller having resigned and Frank B. Pearson having been appointed to the office of superintendent of public instruction, your official opinion is requested as to the date of expiration of the term of office of the said Frank B. Pearson, in order that the commission may be drawn properly."

The provisions of article VI, section 4 of the constitution, as quoted by you, were adopted September 3, 1912, and went into effect on the second Monday in July, 1913.

While it was evidently the intention of the legislature in amending section 352 of the General Code, as found in 104 O. L., 226, and as quoted by you, to carry into effect the provisions of said section 4 of article VI of the constitution, I am of the opinion that the governor of the state had the authority after said second Monday in July, 1913, under said provisions of said section 4, to appoint a superintendent of public instruction to take the place of the commissioner of common schools who had been elected at the November election in 1910, for a term of two years, commencing with the second Monday in July, 1911, under the provisions of section 352, G. C., as then in force.

Said constitutional section 4 provides for the appointment of a superintendent of public instruction by the governor for a term of four years. This provision is controlling as to the length of the term for which an appointment may be made. The amendment of said section 352 does not in any way change the term so fixed, and if any provision of said amended section did undertake to make any change in this regard, it would not control. In other words, it is not within the power of the legislature to change the term of four years as fixed by section 4 of article VI of the constitution.

Neither the constitution nor the statute establishes said term to exist between fixed dates. While the statute undertakes to provide that such term shall commence on the second Monday of July, it does not specify in what year. As hereinbefore noted, it appears that at the time this statute went into effect a superintendent was serving a full term of four years, having been appointed on July 29, 1913, said appointment being made under authority of the constitutional provisions aforesaid. It follows, therefore, that no provision of statutory law could interfere with or change in any way the term of the then serving superintendent of public instruction so appointed under the provisions of the constitution. If it was the intention of the legislature in this enactment to refer to the second Monday of the first July coming after said statute went into effect, which would be in the year 1914, such provision would be wholly inoperative because of the considerations above noted. It is clear that no provision of said section 352 could affect either the plain meaning of the constitution or any appointment then existing thereunder.

No provision whatever is made, either in the constitution or by statutory law, for filling a vacancy in this office. There is no question of the right or power of the legislature to provide for filling such vacancy. This authority is conferred by section 27 of article II of the constitution. The legislature, however, has either neglected or deliberately declined to make such provisions. In either event the conclusion is inevitable that the legislature was not interested in filling vacancies in this office, and this fact alone, independent of any other consideration, is sufficient to sustain the conclusion that it was not intended that fractional terms should be served by any appointee, but only original appointments made for the full term when vacancies in this office occur.

In the case of State v. Wentworth, 55 Kansas, 298, the court commenting upon similar facts says:

> "The circumstance that where the legislature has seen fit to recognize vacant fractional terms, it has expressly provided for the filling of the places for the unexpired terms, furnishes a strong reason for holding that where they have not done so it was intended and deemed best that the officer at whatever time appointed should hold his office for the term prescribed by the statute, and that if he should vacate the place before the expiration of that time, this should not shorten the term of the next incumbent. In other words, when one goes into office by virtue of an appointment under this statute, he has a right to fill it for the prescribed period, but if he quits, his term ends and a new one begins when the appointment of his successor takes effect, and this doctrine is sustained by the great weight of authority."

However, I prefer to base my conclusions in this matter upon the fact that the constitution fixes the term of this office at four years, and that the power conferred upon the governor is expressly limited to an appointment for four years and for no other term. It must also be observed in this connection that there is no other or further limitation upon nor prohibition against the exercise of this right by the governor, either in the constitution or in any section of the General Code referring to this office. The only provision therefore under which the appointment referred to in your letter may be made, is the constitutional provision aforesaid, and the question therefore to be determined is whether the language of the constitution may be so construed as to admit in any case the appointment of a superintendent for a term of less than four years as therein provided.

Similar questions have been considered by the courts of various states under constitutional provision, which, like the one under consideration, contain no provision with respect to unexpired terms.

Quoting now from the case of Ex Parte Meredith, 74 Va. 119, which the same question was considered, it is said:

> "In every instance those words have been construed as requiring an election for the full constitutional term, whether the vacancy be created by death or resignation or by expiration of a regular term. Each incumbent holds for the length of time prescribed by the constitution unless prohibited by express enactment or implication equally plain. When we see certain provisions incorporated into our constitution also found in the constitutions of other states, and these provisions have received uniformly the same construction in numerous cases, we must suppose it was intended they should be construed in like manner here. At all events it would be a little surprising if this court should now give to these provisions a construction entirely different from that given in every other state by judges of the highest respectability and learning."

This case is a well considered case, in which many authorities are cited and analyzed by the court, and the conclusion reached that in a case where the term of an office is fixed by the constitution and no provision made for appointment for an unexpired term, when a vacancy occurs in said office the appointment must be for the full term fixed by the constitution. In this connection the court says:

> "If we are to believe the attention of the men who framed the present constitution was called especially to this subject, if their purpose was that in cases of vacancy the incumbent shall hold only for the unexpired term, would they not have said so in plain and unmistakable language? Would they have left a matter of so much importance in doubt and uncertainty? * * * In the language of Judge Marcy in The People v. Greene, already cited, 'the framers of the constitution must have foreseen that such cases would happen very frequently.' It is therefore reasonable to infer that if they intended that persons elected to fill vacancies in the office of sheriff should hold for a shorter period than the general term, they would not have left that intention to be evolved by ingenious distinctions and dubious inferences."

In an advisory opinion rendered by the supreme court of Florida to the governor of said state in the matter of the tenure of office of judges of the circuit courts, precisely the same question was considered as is presented here, that is, whether in case of the resignation of an incumbent in the office of judge an appointment should be made for the unexpired term or for the full term. The court in announcing its opinion, among other things, says:

"The language of the constitution is plain and simple, 'there shall be seven circuit judges appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate, who shall hold their office for eight years,' article VI, section 7. The remaining clause of this section provides permanent judicial subdivisions composing each circuit. There is nothing in this which limits the time of service of one appointee by reference to the time served by the previous one.. * * * Unless, therefore, there is some other provision of the constitution limiting or otherwise explaining this language, it must have its usual and ordinary effect. There is nothing here establishing a term of office to exist between dates of months or years, nor is there anything having the most remote reference to an unexpired term or to a vacancy in the office as distinct from the office itself. There is no other provision of the constitution which changes or affects this section. * * * The conclusion we reach is that a judge of the circuit court, appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate, holds his office for eight full years, and that no part of a previous eight years during which another has held the office but who has vacated it, enters into the computation of the time for which the second appointee holds."

Many other authorities may be cited in support of the conclusions reached in the foregoing cases, but I deem it unnecessary to incumber the record by further citations. My conclusion is that under the provisions of section 4 of article VI of the constitution aforesaid, you are without any authority to appoint the person named in your inquiry for a term of less than four years, and that the term of said appointee begins at the date of his appointment and qualification, and continues for the full term of said four years.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CITY SOLICITOR—WHEN ASSISTANTS MAY BE EMPLOYED—COMPETITIVE BIDS NOT REQUIRED FOR CONTRACTS OF EMPLOYMENT OF ASSISTANTS TO SOLICITOR—COUNCIL FIXES COMPENSATION.

A city council may not employ special counsel or attorneys to assist the city solicitor in litigation to which the city is a party in the absence of refusal of the solicitor to make request for assistants.

The employment of assistants by the city solicitor is not subject to the provisions of section 3627, G. C., which requires competitive bids in certain classes of contracts therein defined.

The compensation of counsel employed to assist the city solicitor in litigation may be fixed by the council by per diem, percentage, monthly salary or lump sum, according to the judgment and discretion of the council.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours under date of February 3, 1916, reads as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:

"(1) If a city is involved in important litigation, or such litigation is imminent, may the council of said city employ special counsel to assist the city solicitor in the absence or refusal of said solicitor to make request for assistance?

"(2) Could the council delegate the mayor, director of service, director of safety, or the head of the department particularly interested in the matter, to contract for such service, or may the council itself select the special counsel and fix his compensation?

"(3) If there be a conflict between the city solicitor and the council, or delegated official, in the selection of such special counsel, as a matter of law which would prevail?

"(4) If the probable amount to be expended for such service is likely to exceed $500.00, must competitive bids be taken and contract entered into by the city, or would the council be required to create the position in the solicitor's department and fix the compensation?

"(5) May said compensation be fixed by per diem, percentage, monthly salary, or may it provide a lump sum for the services required in the case?

"We desire an outline of the procedure to be taken in the event that the above conditions obtain."

By the provisions of section 4303, G. C., a city solicitor is required to be elected for a term of two years, and by section 4305, G. C., such city solicitor is required to prepare all contracts, bonds and other instruments in writing, in which the city is concerned, and to serve the several directors and officers mentioned in this title as legal counsel and attorney, and under the provisions of section 4306, G. C., the city solicitor is made the prosecuting attorney of the police or mayor's court, and he is by section 4307, G. C., required to prosecute all cases brought before such court. Under section 4309 the city solicitor is required to reply orally or in writing to all questions submitted in writing to him by an officer of the corporation concerning the law in any matter before such officer. He is required by section 4311, G. C., to apply to a proper court for an order of injunction to restrain the misapplication of the funds of the corporation, or the abuse of its corporate powers, or the execution or performance of any contract in violation of law. Under section 4312 he is required to apply for the forfeiture of the specific performance of a contract granting a right or easement, or creating a public duty, when the same is being evaded or violated. Section 4313, G. C., provides that the city solicitor shall apply for a writ of mandamus in case an officer or board fails to perform any duty expressly enjoined by law or ordinance. Section 4308, G. C., provides as follows:

"When required to do so by resolution of the council, the solicitor shall prosecute or defend, as the case may be, for and in behalf of the corporation, all complaints, suits and controversies in which the corporation is a party, and such other suits, matters and controversies as he shall, by resolution or ordinance, be directed to prosecute, but shall not be required to prosecute any action before the mayor for the violation of an ordinance without first advising such action."

Thus the city solicitor is made the legal adviser, counsel and attorney of the several directors and officers of the city and the legal adviser of the council and all boards of the city and is specifically charged with the duty of prosecuting and defending for and in behalf of the corporation all complaints, suits and contro versies in which the corporation is a party, when required so to do by a resolution of the council and such other matters and controversies as he shall, by resolution and ordinance of council, be directed to prosecute, except as to violations of city ordinances.

There is thus left to the city council the matter of determining in the first instance whether or not any suit, complaint or controversy, to which the corporation is a party, shall be prosecuted or defended, but it is made by specific provision the duty of the solicitor to prosecute or defend all such complaints, suits or controversies upon the direction of coucil so to do.

Council may, as I understand is the usual practice, by general resolution, require the city solicitor to defend all complaints, suits and controversies in which the corporation is a party.

The city solicitor is manifestly an executive officer of the city within the terms of section 4246, G. C. With reference to such officers, clerks and employes as are authorized and necessary to enable the city solicitor to fully and properly perform the duties imposed upon him, section 4247, G. C., provides as follows:

> "Subject to the limitations prescribed in this subdivision such executive officers shall have exclusive right to appoint all officers, clerks and employes in their respective departments or offices, and likewise subject to the limitations herein prescribed, shall have sole power to remove or suspend any of such officers, clerks or employes."

By force of the provisions of this section, the city solicitor is given exclusive authority and right to appoint all officers, clerks and employes in his department of the city government, subject, however, to the civil service law, and to the control of council as to number and compensation.

A careful examination of the statute fails to disclose any specific provision authorizing council or other officer of the city to employ legal counsel or attorneys other than the city solicitor, nor does there appear any general provision which contemplates such power or authority. On the contrary, the power of council is limited by the provision of section 4211, G. C., as follows:

> "The powers of council shall be legislative only, and it shall perform no administrative duties whatever, and it shall neither appoint nor confirm any officer or employe in the city government except those of its own body, except as is otherwise provided in this title. * * *"

In view of the provisions of this section and the absence of specific provision for employment of council or attorneys by the city council, it seems conclusive that no such power is lodged in that body.

In answer to your first inquiry, I am therefore of opinion that the council of a city is without authority to employ special counsel or attorneys to assist the city solicitor in litigation independent of and in the absence of a request therefor by the solicitor, and upon such request by the solicitor the exclusive power of selection or appointment rests with such solicitor.

This answer to your first question renders unnecessary a consideration of your second and third inquiries.

Your fourth and fifth inquiries may be considered together. Attention is called to the provisions of section 4214, G. C., which are as follows:

> "Except as otherwise provided in this title, council, by ordinance or resolution, shall determine the number of officers, clerks and employes in each department of the city government, and shall fix by ordinance or resolution their respective salaries and compensation, and the amount of bond to be given by each officer, clerk or employe in each department of the government, if any be required. Such bond shall be made by such officer, clerk or employe, with surety subject to the approval of the mayor."

It is thus specifically provided without restriction that the council shall fix the compensation of officers, clerks and employes of the department of the city solicitor, as well as of the other departments of the city government. This authority is conferred in general terms and without prescribing the amount of such compensation or the manner of the payment thereof, thus leaving the details of the exercise of such authority to the sound discretion and determination of the council.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that where special counsel is determined by the council to be necessary, it may authorize the employment of the same by the city solicitor, and may fix the amount of compensation to be paid therefor and the manner of the payment thereof at its discretion. Such special counsel would be in the employ of the solicitor and not subject to the provisions of section 3627, G. C., which provides for competitive bids in certain classes of contracts therein defined with the city, when the amount of the expenditure involved is in excess of $500.00.

Answering your fourth inquiry specifically, I am therefore of opinion that the employment of special counsel in the manner authorized by law, as above pointed out, is not subject to the statutory requirements for the acceptance of competitive bids for such services.

In answer to your fifth question I am of the opinion that council may fix the compensation for special counsel so employed by per diem, by percentage, by monthly salary or by a lump sum according to the judgment and discretion of the council.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BRIDGES AND CULVERTS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES ARE AUTHORIZED TO REPAIR AND MAINTAIN SAME ON TOWNSHIP ROAD—WHEN TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MAY INCLUDE PLANS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A BRIDGE OR CULVERT.

1. Both the county commissioners and the township trustees are authorized to repair or maintain a bridge or culvert on a township road, but the duty of such repair or maintenance rests primarily on the trustees.

2. If township trustees construct or reconstruct a road under chapter III of the Cass highway law, and it is necessary or desirable, in their judgment, to include in the plans for such construction a bridge or culvert on the line of the road in question, they are authorized so to do.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 16, 1916.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 21, 1916, in which you call my attention to the repeal of section 7562, G. C., by the Cass highway law and request my opinion as to the present jurisdiction of township trustees over bridges and culverts, and as to what extent, if any, township trustees may now go in the construction and maintenance of bridges and in the payment of the cost thereof.

Section 7562, G.C., referred to by you, read as follows:

> "The township trustees shall cause to be built and keep in repair all bridges and culverts, except upon improved and free turnpike roads when the cost of construction does not exceed fifty dollars, and shall keep in repair all bridges constructed by the commissioners. Such repair by said trustees of a bridge in any year shall not exceed ten dollars and they may levy a tax for the payment thereof."

The repeal of the above quoted section by the Cass highway law has changed the jurisdiction of the township trustees in relation to bridges and culverts and no separate levy by the township trustees for bridge purposes is provided for by that law.

The bridge levy provided for by old section 7562, G. C., is abolished and at least a part of the duties of the township trustees as to bridges and culverts formerly conferred upon them are taken away from the trustees and lodged with the county commissioners. Inasmuch as a separate bridge levy and bridge fund were abolished by the Cass highway law, it was pointed out in opinion No. 1063, rendered by this department to Hon. Hugh F. Neuhart, on December 3, 1915, that balances in the township bridge fund not needed for bridges on account of a transfer of authority from the trustees to the commissioners might properly be transferred in the manner provided by section 2296, et seq., of the General Code. The extent of the transfer of authority and the question of whether all authority in bridge and culvert matters had been transferred to the county commissioners were not involved or considered in the opinion rendered to Mr. Neuhart. While the Cass highway law has transferred to the county commissioners much of the authority of the township trustees as to bridge and culvert matters and especially as to the repair of bridges and culverts, yet there are some duties which still devolve upon township trustees in the matter of bridges and culverts, and their expenditures in the performance of these duties are to be made from the general township road levies provided by the Cass highway law. This conclusion is supported by a number of the provisions of the Cass law cited by you in your communication to me, read in connection with certain other provision of that act.

Section 144 of the act, section 7187, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "The county highway superintendent shall, on or before April first of each year, make an annual estimate for the township trustees of each township, for the improvement, maintenance and repair of roads, bridges and culverts, or for the construction of new roads required in said township, and shall submit the same to the township trustees for their action."

Section 239 of the act, section 3298-18, G. C., provides that after the annual estimate for each township has been filed with the township trustees by the county highway superintendent and adjusted by the trustees, they shall make their levies for the purposes set forth in the estimate.

Section 150 of the act, section 7193, G. C., provides among other things that at the request of the township trustees or county commissioners the county highway superintendent shall inspect any highways, bridges or culverts, within the county at any time.

Section 160 of the act, section 7203, G. C., reads as follows:

"The county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, purchase from any public institution, any road material, machinery, tools or equipment, quarried, mined, prepared or manufactured by said institution, provided the same conform to the standard specifications therefor, for highways, bridge or culvert work in said county."

Section 230 of the act, section 7214, G. C., provides, among other things, that the county commissioners or township trustees may contract for and purchase such material as is necessary for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing any highways, bridges or culverts within the county.

There may be other provisions in the act similar to those referred to above, but the provisions above cited are sufficient to indicate that it was the intention of the legislature that township trustees should have certain duties in regard to bridges. These duties are not specifically defined and must be gathered from a consideration of sections conferring upon township trustees general duties in relation to roads.

Section 241 of the act, section 7464, G. C., contains the following provision:

"Township roads shall include all public highways of the state other than state or county roads as hereinbefore defined, and the trustees of each township shall maintain all such roads within their respective townships and provided further, that the county commissioners shall have full power and authority to assist the township trustees in maintaining all such roads, but nothing herein shall prevent the township trustees from improving any road within their respective townships, except as otherwise provided in this act."

Under section 75 of the act, section 3370, G. C., it is made the duty of the township highway superintendent, acting under the direction of the township trustees, to keep the township roads of his district in good repair. Under sections 7464 and 3370, G. C., the duty of maintaining and repairing township roads is cast in the first instance on the township trustees. In view of this fact and the further fact that the act manifestly contemplates the performance by the township trustees of certain duties with reference to bridges and culverts and does not expressly define these duties, I am of the opinion that the township trustees are charged with the duty of maintaining and repairing bridges and culverts on township roads. While this duty is cast in the first instance on the township trustees, yet in view of the fact that the county commissioners have full power and authority to assist the township trustees in maintaining all township roads, it follows that the commissioners are also authorized to repair or maintain a bridge or culvert on a township road. In other words, both the county commissioners and the township trustees are authorized to repair or maintain a bridge or culvert on a township road, but the duty of such repair or maintenance rests primarily on the trustees.

Under chapter III of the Cass highway law, township trustees are authorized to construct or reconstruct roads and their power in this respect is not limited to township roads. For the reasons heretofore given, I am of the opinion that if township trustees proceed to construct or reconstruct a road under chapter III of the act, and it is necessary or desirable, in their judgment, to include in the plans for such construction a bridge or culvert on the line of the road in question, they are authorized so to do. No opinion is herein expressed, however, as to the right to assess against the owners of real estate any part of the cost of such bridge or culvert.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—CAPITAL UNIVERSITY, COLUMBUS, OHIO, EXEMPT—THE WERNLE ORPHANS' HOME, RICHMOND, INDIANA, SUBJECT TO TAX—SECTION 5332, G. C., NOT REPEALED BY IMPLICATION.

While the Capital university at Columbus, Ohio, is under the supervision and control of the Evangelical Lutheran joint synod of Ohio, the students in said institution are or may be of all denominations and there are no restrictions as to creed or nationality for admission. Said university is, therefore, a "public institution of learning" within the meaning of the provisions of section 5332, G. C., and a bequest to said university is exempt from the collateral inheritance tax.

The Wernle orphans' home, located at Richmond, Indiana, is a corporation organized under the laws of said state of Indiana and a bequest to said institution is subject to the collateral inheritance tax under the provisions of section 5331, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 463.

The provisions of section 5332, G. C., were not repealed by implication by the act of the general assembly amending sections 5331 and 5333, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 463.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 18, 1916.

HON. ARTHUR D. DAVIS, Probate Judge, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of January 31st, you state that under the will of William C. Bickel, deceased, the Capital university at Columbus, Ohio, will receive a gift of about $25,000.00, and the Wernle orphans' home at Richmond, Indiana, will receive $1,000.00; that the board of directors of the Wernle home are the same men who compose the board of directors of the Capital university of Columbus, and all reside in this state. You request my opinion on the following questions:

"1. Is Capital university an 'institution of learning' within the meaning of section 5332, G. C., such as to exempt it from the collateral inheritance tax?

"2. Is the Wernle orphans' home also exempt?

"3. Was section 5332, G. C., repealed by implication by the act of the general assembly amending sections 5331 and 5333 of the General Code as found in 103 O. L., 463?"

Section 5331, G. C., as amended provides:

"All property within the jurisdiction of this state, and any interests therein, whether belonging to inhabitants of this state or not, and whether tangible or intangible, which pass by will or by the intestate laws of this state, or by deed, grant, sale or gift, made or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment after the death of the grantor, to a person in trust, or otherwise, other than to or for the use of the father, mother, husband, wife, lineal descendant or adopted child, shall be liable to a tax of five per cent. of its value above the sum of five hundred dollars. Fifty per cent. of such tax shall be for the use of the state; and fifty per cent. of such tax shall go to the city, village or township in which said tax originates. All administrators, executors and trustees, and any such grantee under a conveyance made during the grantor's life, shall be liable for all such taxes, with lawful interest as hereinafter provided, until they have been paid, as hereinafter directed. Such taxes shall become due and payable immediately upon the death of the decedent and shall at once become a lien upon the property and be, and remain a lien until paid."

Section 5332, G. C., provides as follows:

"The provisions of the next preceding section shall not apply to property, or interests in property, transmitted to the state of Ohio under the intestate laws of the state, or embraced in a bequest, devise, transfer or conveyance to, or for the use of the state of Ohio, or to or for the use of a municipal corporation or other political subdivision thereof for exclusively public purposes, or public institutions of learning, or to or for the use of an institution in this state for purpose only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes. The property, or interests in property so transmitted or embraced in such devise, bequest, transfer or conveyance shall be exempt from all inheritance and other taxes while used exclusively for any of such purposes."

Item 7 of the will of the said William C. Bickel, deceased, a copy of which will is enclosed with your letter, provides:

"To THE WERNLE ORPHANS' HOME, of the city of Richmond, Wayne county, Indiana, I give and bequeath the sum of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be held in trust. Said sum to be safely and profitably invested by the proper officers or authorities of said ORPHANS' HOME, and the net income and profits received therefrom each year, to be used for the benefit of the inmates of said institution."

Item 11 of said will provides:

"All the rest, residue and remainder of my estate, which is left after the payment of my debts, legacies and bequests given by me in this will, and costs of administering my estate, I give, devise and bequeath to the CAP-ITAL UNIVERSITY OF COLUMBUS, OHIO (which University is under the supervision and control of the EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN JOINT SYNOD OF OHIO) to be held in trust by the proper officers of said CAPITAL UNIVERSITY, and the income, rents, issues and profits received therefrom each year, after payment of all proper and legitimate expenses incident to the management of trust estate, shall be applied for the benefit of said CAPITAL UNIVERSITY, to such uses and purposes as said officers so mentioned may deem meet and proper."

While this university is under the supervision and control of the Evangelical Lutheran joint synod of Ohio. I am informed that the students in said institution are or may be of all denominations and that there are no restrictions as to creed or nationality for admission. I am of the opinion, therefore, that said university is a "public institution of learning" within the meaning of the above provision of section 5332, G. C., and that the bequest referred to in your first inquiry is exempt from the collateral inheritance tax.

This conclusion is in keeping with my two former opinions, one rendered to Hon. William H. Lueders, judge of the probate court of Hamilton county, under date of April 19, 1915, and the other rendered to Hon. John V. Campbell, prosecuting attorney of said county, under date of November 15, 1915. Copies of said opinions are enclosed for your consideration.

The bequest referred to in your second inquiry is one to an institution of public charity located in the state of Indiana. I am informed by the president of the Evangelical Lutheran joint synod of Ohio that the Wernle orphans' home is a corporation organized under the laws of said state of Indiana. In the case of Humphreys v. State, 70 O. S., 67, the court, at the second branch of the syllabus, held:

"Boards and societies and auxiliaries thereto, which are incorporated and organized under the laws of other states, for 'purposes of purely public charity or other exclusively public purposes,' are not 'institutions' of that class in this state within the meaning of the latter clause of section 2731-1, Revised Statutes (section 5332, G. C.); and where they are entitled to receive property within the jurisdiction of this state, by deed or gift, bequest or devise, such gift, bequest or devise is liable to a collateral inheritance tax as provided in said section, although some of the charitable work, operations and enterprises of the institutions so incorporated and organized are carried on within this state."

Numerous authorities are cited by the court in support of its conclusion in its opinion at page 84 that:

"The exemptions of charitable institutions, would relate only to domestic institutions of that class, even if the words 'in the state' had been omitted from the statute."

In view of the holding of the court in the case of Humphreys v. State, supra, I am of the opinion in answer to your second question that the bequest therein referred to is subject to the collateral inheritance tax under the provisions of section 5331, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 463.

In the consideration of your first and second questions it is necessarily assumed that the provisions of section 5332, G. C., were not repealed by implication by the act of the general assembly amending sections 5331 and 5333, G. C., as found in 103 O. L., 463, and that said provisions are still in force. The provisions of said section 5332, G. C., are in no way in conflict or inconsistent with the provisions of said sections 5331 and 5333, G. C., as amended. Your third question is, therefore, answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, BRISTOL TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, TRUMBULL COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 19, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Bristol township rural school district, Trumbull county, Ohio, in the sum of $30,000.00, to secure funds for the purpose of purchasing a site and the erection and equipment of a school building for the accommodation of the centralized schools of said school district, being sixty bonds of $500.00 each, dated March 1, 1916, payable two bonds every six months, beginning October 1, 1917, until paid, with interest at five per cent. per annum payable semi-annually."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of Bristol township rural school district relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, also the bond and coupon form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the General Code of Ohio.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds, drawn in accordance with the form presented, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said township school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT HAS AUTHORITY TO EXCUSE A CHILD FROM ATTENDING PUBLIC SCHOOL IN RURAL DISTRICT UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS—CLERK OF BOARD OF EDUCATION OF SAID RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT WITHOUT SUCH AUTHORITY—PERSON TEACHING CHILD AT HOME NOT REQUIRED TO HOLD TEACHER'S CERTIFICATE OR COLLEGE DIPLOMA.

Under the provisions of section 7763, G. C., as amended in 104, O. L., 232, the authority to excuse a child, within the age limit prescribed by said section, from attendance at a public school in the rural district in which such child resides, is vested in the district superintendent in charge of such rural school district and this authority may only be exercised by such district superintendent upon a satisfactory showing either that the bodily or mental condition of such child does not permit of its attendance at such public school or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such district superintendent, to teach the branches named in section 7762, G. C. The clerk of the board of education of said rural school district has no authority under provision of said section 7763, G. C., as amended, to determine the qualification of said person to give such instruction.

A person teaching a child at home, under the provision of the latter part of said section 7763, G. C., as amended, is not required to hold a teacher's certificate or college diploma.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. E. A. SCOTT, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of January 31st, you request my opinion as follows:

"The following are the facts on which I desire your opinion: The district superintendent and probation officer have notified 'A,' father of a girl 15 years of age, to send said girl to school; she has no certificate from physician showing bodily or mental condition but father has the clerk of the rural board of education give certificate showing that the father is teaching her at home and that said father is competent to teach said girl. Said certificate is given under section 7763 of the school laws, page 275. This girl is a pupil of what was formerly called a subdistrict which is now a part of the rural district. The father teaching his daughter does not hold a teacher's certificate and not a graduate of any school or college.

"Question. Has the clerk of rural board of education the authority to issue certificates? If so, under what conditions?

"2. Should not the person teaching said pupil be the holder of a teacher's certificate or college diploma?

"3. Should not all certificates now come from the district superintendent and not the clerk of school board?"

Section 7762, G. C., provides:

"All parents, guardians and other persons who have care of children, shall instruct them, or cause them to be instructed in reading, spelling, writing, England grammar, geography and arithmetic."

Section 7763, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 232, provides:

"Every parent, guardian or other person having charge of any child between the ages of eight and fifteen years of age if a male, and sixteen years of age, if a female, must send such child to a public, private or parochial school, for the full time that the school attended is in session, which shall in no case be for less than twenty-eight weeks. Such attendance must begin within the first week of the school term, unless the child is excused therefrom by the superintendent of the public schools, or by the principal of the private or parochial school, upon satisfactory showing either that the bodily or mental condition of the child does not permit of its attendance at school, or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such superintendent or clerk, as the case may be, to teach the branches named in the next preceding section."

The first part of section 7763, G. C., as above quoted, makes it the duty of the parent of the child referred to in your inquiry to send said child to school in compliance with said part of said section, unless such attendance is excused under the conditions provided in the latter part of said section. Inasmuch as said child has not been excused upon a satisfactory showing that her bodily or mental condition does not permit her attendance at school, the only condition under which such attendance may be excused is upon a satisfactory showing that said child is being instructed at home in the branches named in the above provision of section 7762, G. C., by a person qualified to teach said branches.

You state that the clerk of the board of education of the rural school district in which said child resides has certified that the father of said child is teaching her at home and that said father is competent to give such instruction.

You first inquire whether said clerk has authority under said statute to issue such a certificate and if so, under what conditions.

You will observe that under the above provisions of section 7763, G. C., as amended a child may be excused from attending school under the conditions provided in the latter part of said section, either by the superintendent of the public school or by the principal of the private or parochial school.

Section 7763, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 104 Ohio Laws, provided as follows:

"Every parent, guardian or other person having charge of any child between the ages of eight and fourteen years must send such child to a public, private or parochial school, for the full time that the school attended is in session, which shall in no case be for less than twenty-eight weeks. Such attendance must begin within the first week of the school term, unless the child is excused therefrom by the superintendent of the public schools, in city or other districts having such superintendent, or by the clerk of the board of education in village, special and township districts not having a superintendent, or by the principal of the private or parochial school upon satisfactory showing, either that the bodily or mental condition of the child does not permit of its attendance at school, or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such superintendent, or clerk as the case may be, to teach the branches named in the next preceding section."

It will be observed that under the provisions of said statute as formerly in force and as above quoted the authority to excuse a child from attendance at a public school, under the conditions provided in the latter part of said section, was vested in the superintendent of the public schools, in city or other districts having such superintendent, and in the clerk of the board of education in village, special and township districts not having a superintendent.

Under the provisions of the statutes now in force and relating to the public schools of the state, all of said schools are now under the direct supervision of either the county, district or local superintendent.

In keeping with the changes made by the legislature in enacting the new school code, so-called, the authority formerly vested, by the provisions of said section 7763, G. C., as in force prior to its amendment in 104 O. L., in the clerk of the board of education of a village, special or township school district not having a superintendent, to excuse a child from attending a public school in such district, under the conditions provided in the latter part of said section, was taken away by the amendment to said section and is now vested in the superintendent of the public schools of such district.

In view of the change effected by the amendment of said statute, it is evident that the words "or clerk as the case may be" should have been omitted from the latter part of said amended statute, as such words read in connection with the provisions of said statute in the amended form have no force or meaning.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question that, under the provisions of said section 7763, G. C., as amended, the authority to excuse a child, within the age limit prescribed in said section, from attendance at a public school in the rural district in which such child resides, is vested in the district superintendent in charge of such rural school district and that this authority may only be exercised by such district superintendent upon a satisfactory showing either that the bodily or mental condition of such child does not permit of its attendance at such public school or that the child is being instructed at home by a person qualified, in the opinion of such district superintendent, to teach the branches named in section 7762, G. C., and that the clerk of the board of education of said rural school district has no authority under provision of said statute to determine the qualification of said person to give such instruction.

Inasmuch as the qualification of a person to instruct a child at home is to be determined by the superintendent of the school district in which such child resides, under provision of the latter part of said section 7763, G. C., as amended, and inasmuch as no provision of the statute requires that such person shall be the holder of a teacher's certificate or college diploma, your second question must be answered in the negative.

Your third question has been answered in determining the answer to your first question.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION—MAY NOT PUNISH WITNESS FOR CONTEMPT—COMMON PLEAS COURT HAS JURISDICTION.

A municipal civil service commission may not punish a witness for contempt in refusing to obey its lawful commands. Its remedy is by application to the court of common pleas as provided by paragraph 5 of section 486-7, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 403.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—The following inquiry, submitted by a municipal civil service commission of a city in this state, presents a question of sufficient interest to require an answer, and I am therefore directing my opinion thereon to your commission. The inquiry is as follows:

> "As secretary of the civil service commission for ————, Ohio, I wish to have a ruling from your department as to whether a municipal civil service commission is empowered with authority to punish for contempt a witness and other attendants at a hearing before said commission.
> "We desire to know if we have the same power along this line as the courts of this state."

The acts claimed by the municipal civil service commission, submitting the foregoing inquiry, to constitute the contempt complained of are not given. Reference, however, is first made to an alleged contempt by a witness. Without entering into a lengthy discussion of the matter, it is sufficient to say that the municipal civil service commissions in Ohio are not invested with any judicial powers. Their duties are administrative. They have the power to hear and determine certain matters connected with the administration of their office, including the appeals of persons who have been reduced, suspended, laid off or removed from positions in the civil service of the political subdivision they serve. This, however, is not the exercise of judicial power, and is not in contravention of any constitutional provision.

State ex rel. v. Hawkins, 44 O. S., 98.
DeCamp v. Archibald, 50 O. S., 618.

They may not, therefore, exercise any of the inherent powers of courts. Their rights in respect to the punishment of a contumacious witness in any hearing before them are such and only such as are granted by statutory law. The legislature has prescribed a special proceeding in such cases, which is found in the concluding clause of paragraph 5 of section 486-7, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 403, as follows:

> "In case any person, in disobedience to any subpoena issued by the commission, or any of them, or their chief examiner, fails or refuses to attend and testify to any matter regarding which he may be lawfully interrogated, or produce any documentary evidence pertinent to any investigation, inquiry or hearing, it shall be the duty of the court of common pleas of any county, or any judge thereof, where such disobedience, failure or refusal occurs, upon application of the state commission, or a municipal commission, or any commissioner thereof, or their chief examiner, to compel obedience by attachment proceedings for contempt as in the case of disobedience of the requirements of a subpoena issued from such courts or a refusal to testify therein."

I am of the opinion that the remedy afforded a municipal civil service commission in the foregoing statute is exclusive and that it is limited to the proceeding therein described. In the absence of this direct legislation upon this matter and upon the authority of DeCamp v. Archibald, supra, I would incline to the opinion that municipal civil service commissioners are officers within the meaning of that term as used in sections 11510 and 11512, G. C., and as such officers would be authorized to act under the provisions of said last named sections. However, as the legislature has dealt directly with this matter in section 486-7, supra, its provisions in this respect must be held to be exclusive.

Included in this inquiry is a reference to "attendants." If this refers merely to spectators and by-standers attending a hearing of any matter before a municipal civil service commission, any conduct upon their part in any way interfering with the proper dispatch of business would be a matter coming under the supervision of the police department of the city, and ample protection through this authority may be given the civil service commission at any hearing.

Answering the foregoing inquiry specifically I therefore hold that municipal civil service commissions have no authority to punish witnesses for contempt, but must apply to the court of common pleas, or judge thereof, to compel their obedience by attachment proceedings as provided in paragraph 5 of section 486-7, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 403.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—TEN PER CENT. ASSESSMENT DIRECTED TO BE LEVIED UPON PROPERTY ABUTTING ON IMPROVEMENT—WHEN ENTIRE EXPENSE OF REPAIR OF A MACADAMIZED ROAD CONSTRUCTED BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MAY BE PAID BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

1. Where an inter-county highway is improved under the supervision of the state highway department, the ten per cent. assessment directed to be levied upon the property abutting on the improvement may not be levied against all the real estate lying within one mile on either side of the improvement.

2. County commissioners may pay from the proceeds of a levy authorized by a vote of the electors of the county for the improvement and repair of the public roads in the county, the entire expense of the repair of a macadamized road constructed by township trustees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. T. B. JARVIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Mansfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 8, 1916, in which you submit two questions relating to the Cass highway law. Your first question may be stated as follows:

> "Where an inter-county highway is improved under the supervision of the state highway department, may the ten per cent. assessment directed to be levied upon the property abutting on the improvement be levied against all the real estate lying within one mile on either side of the improvement?"

This question is to be answered in the negative. The rule of assessment in such cases is set forth in section 1214, G. C., in the following language:

> "Ten per cent. of the cost and expense of improvement, excepting therefrom the cost and expense of bridges and culverts shall be a charge upon the property abutting on the improvement, provided the total amount assessed against any owner of abutting property shall not exceed thirty-three per cent. of the valuation of such abutting property for the purposes of taxation."

In the absence of any statutory authority for a variation from this rule, the rule must be regarded as exclusive, and the Cass highway law contains no provision authorizing any change in the rule in question.

Where county commissioners, acting under authority of chapter 6 of the Cass highway law, relating to road construction and improvement by county commissioners, determine to improve an inter-county highway or main market road under the provisions of that chapter, and secure the approval of the chief highway engineer to the plans and specifications for the improvement, then the compensation, damages, costs and expense thereof may be apportioned and paid in any one of the several ways provided for by section 98 of the Cass highway law, section 6919, G. C. Section 98 of the act has no application, however, where the improvement is carried forward under the supervision of the state highway department, and in that case neither more nor less than ten per cent. of the cost of the improvement, exclusive of the cost of bridges and culverts, may be assessed, and such ten per cent. must be assessed only against the property abutting on the improvement.

Your second question may be phrased as follows:

"Can the county commissioners pay from the proceeds of a levy authorized by a vote of the electors of the county for the improvement and repair of the public roads in the county, the entire expense of the repair of a macadamized road constructed by the township trustees?"

Subdivision b of section 7464, G. C., reads as follows:

"County roads shall include all roads which have been or may be improved by the county by placing brick, stone, gravel or other road building material thereon, or heretofore built by the state and not a part of the inter-county or main market system of roads, together with such roads as have been or may be constructed by the township trustees to conform to the standards for county roads as fixed by the county commissioners, and all such roads shall be maintained by the county commissioners."

It is unnecessary to inquire, however, whether the township road or roads to which you refer have been built to conform to standards for county roads fixed by the county commissioners, in view of the provision of subdivision C of section 7464, G. C., to the effect that the county commissioners shall have full power and authority to assist the township trustees in maintaining all township roads.

Answering your question specifically, I therefore advise you that county commissioners are authorized to pay from the proceeds of a levy voted by the electors of a county for the improvement and repair of public roads in the county, the entire expense of repairing a macadamized road or roads constructed by a township. If such township road or roads conform to the standards for county roads, as fixed by the county commissioners, then such road or roads are county roads, and it is the duty of the county commissioners to maintain the same. If such road or roads constructed by the township do not conform to the standards for county roads, as fixed by the county commissioners, then such road or roads are township roads, and the duty of maintaining the same rests in the first instance upon the township or townships in which such road or roads are located, but the county commissioners, while not bound to repair or maintain such roads, are authorized so to do.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF PAULDING COUNTY—APPLICATION FOR INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY FUNDS APPROVED.

An application by the county commissioners of Paulding county for inter-county highway funds, made under section 1203, G. C., as submitted by the state highway commissioner, is in regular form.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 2, 1916, which communication reads as follows:

> "I am attaching hereto an application of the county commissioners of Paulding county for inter-county highway funds under section 1203, G. C.
> "It is to be noted that the county requests the sum of $20,000.00 paid into the treasury of Paulding county from the state.
> "It is also to be noted that Paulding county's share of the inter-county highway fund for the year 1916 will approximate but $17,000.00. There is a balance of $5,000.00 from the 1915 apportionment to Paulding county which is subject to expenditure in Paulding county this year.
> "I therefore respectfully request an opinion from your office as to my duties in connection with the above mentioned application."

On November 6, 1915, this department rendered to you opinion No. 998, which opinion prescribes a form of application by county commissioners for inter-county highway funds under section 1203, G. C. I have carefully examined the application of the county commissioners of Paulding county, submitted by you, and find that the same has been made in the exact form prescribed by this department.

So much of section 1203, G. C., as is pertinent to said inquiry, reads as follows:

> "* * * whenever forty per cent. of the mileage of all the roads of any county are improved by the use of gravel, broken stone, slag, brick, cement and bituminous products or the aggregate of any of these, to a standard established by the county commissioners and approved by the county highway superintendent, and the county commissioners appropriate an equal sum for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing all or any part of the inter-county highways within such county, then, on request of the county commissioners, which request shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the county highway superintendent and reciting that at least forty per cent. of the mileage of all the roads of the county have been improved, as provided herein; and a certified copy of a resolution duly adopted by the county commissioners, which resolution shall contain an agreement upon the part of the county commissioners to expend the sum realized therefrom, and the sum appropriated by the county commissioners in accordance with plans and specifications approved by the state highway engineer, as herein provided; and a certificate signed by the county auditor and reciting that the sum appropriated by the county commissioners is in the county treasury and has not been otherwise appropriated, or has been levied, placed upon the duplicate and in process of collection, the state highway commissioner shall order the apportionment of any appropriation by the state or of any funds available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways, due or to become due and available for such county as state aid, paid into the treasury of said county. The state highway commissioner shall issue his voucher therefor upon the auditor of state against any such fund, and the auditor shall issue his warrant therefor upon the state treasurer and deliver the same to the treasurer of such county. The sum realized therefrom shall be deposited to the credit of the road fund of said county, together with the sum appropriated by such county, and both sums shall be used by the commissioners in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of such inter-county highways within the county, in accordance with plans and specifications approved by the state highway engineer as herein provided."

Determination of the proper action to be taken by you in the premises must be based upon a consideration of several facts. First, there is a balance of $5,000.00 from the 1915 apportionment to Paulding county, which balance is still available for expenditure in that county. This balance represents a part of the proceeds of the August, 1915, settlement. Second, Paulding county's apportionment of inter-county highway funds for the year 1916 will approximate only $17,000.00, while the application of the county commissioners of that county is for $20,000.00. Third, the state's portion of the salary of the county highway superintendent of Paulding county is payable from the apportionment of inter-county highway funds to that county.

If the balance of the 1915 apportionment to Paulding county is to be regarded as available for payment under section 1203, then that balance, plus the 1916 apportionment to said county, will exceed the $20,000.00 applied for by said county. If the opposite conclusion be reached as to the balance of the 1915 apportionment, then the 1916 apportionment will not equal the amount applied for by the county commissioners.

It should be observed that under the present scheme of appropriation, which scheme precludes the taking of moneys from the general revenue fund to support the highway department, it is practically impossible to determine in advance the exact apportionment of inter-county highway funds to a given county for any one year, for the reason that the appropriations for the uses and purposes of the state highway department, carried by the current appropriation measure, are available for the full amounts expressed only in case such amounts come into the state treasury from the specified sources. I do not, therefore, regard as an infirmity the fact that the application of the county commissioners of Paulding county does not request the payment of the exact amount now in the state treasury or which will come into said treasury during the year 1916.

The section of the General Code, quoted above, contains a reference to the appropriation by the county commissioners of "an equal sum," but the statute leaves to inference the determination of the sum which the sum appropriated by the county commissioners must equal. The reasonable inference in this respect is that the sum appropriated by the county commissioners must equal the sum for which application is made. The sum for which application is made may be the apportionment to the county of any funds available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county highways, due or to become due, and available for such county as state aid. In view of the above provision, I am of the opinion that section 1203, G. C., applies as well to the balance of the 1915 apportionment as to the 1916 apportionment. In any event, however, the state highway commissioner, in issuing his voucher, must take into consideration the fact that the state's portion of the salary of the county highway superintendent is payable from the apportionment of the inter-county highway funds to any given county, and the amount required for this purpose is not available for expenditure as state aid on any specific improvement.

Applying the above stated principles to the state of facts presented by your inquiry, I advise you that out of the balance of $5,000.00 remaining from the 1915 apportionment to Paulding county, you should retain an amount sufficient to pay the state's portion of the salary of the county highway superintendent of that county until such time as the February, 1916, settlement will come into the state treasury, and you should issue your voucher for the remainder of said balance of $5,000.00 upon the auditor of state. After the February, 1916, settlement, you should retain from the apportionment to Paulding county, out of the proceeds of that settlement, an amount sufficient to pay the state's portion of the salary of the county highway superintendent of Paulding county until the time when the August, 1916, settlement will come into the state treasury, and should issue your voucher upon the auditor of state for the remainder of said apportionment. After the August, 1916, settlement, you should issue your voucher upon the auditor of state for the remainder of said sum of $20,000.00, applied for by the county commissioners of Paulding county, and not theretofore paid to the treasurer of that county, this statement being based on the assumption that such payment will leave in the state treasury sufficient funds to pay the state's portion of the salary of the county highway superintendent of said county until such time as the proceeds of the next ensuing semi-annual settlement will come into the state treasury. It will be the duty of the state auditor, upon receipt of your vouchers, to issue his warrants for the sums therein expressed upon the state treasurer and deliver said warrants to the treasurer of Paulding county.

I am returning herewith the application of the county commissioners of Paulding county submitted by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MOTHERS' PENSION LAW—THE WORDS "LEGAL RESIDENCE" IN SECTION 1683-2, G. C., 106 O. L., 436, CONSTRUED.

When a man, having a legal residence in this state, removes with his family to another state with no intention of making the latter state his home and with no intention of abandoning his residence in this state, he does not thereby lose his legal residence in this state by reason of an actual residence of four years in the state to which he removes. If, therefore, upon his death his wife and children return to their former home in this state they have the necessary qualifications as to residence required by section 1683-2, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 436, providing for mothers' pensions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. D. FINLEY MILLS, Prosecuting Attorney, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 15, 1916, bearing the following statement and inquiry:

> "Mrs. Charles Theurer, of this county, went with her husband and family to Tennessee in October, 1911. They had no intention of making that their home, and never at any time decided to abandon their residence in Ohio. Mr. Theurer was drowned in Tennessee early in 1915, and Mrs. Theurer, with her six little children, came back to Shelby county, in March 1915.
> "Under that state of facts, I desire to ask your opinion as to whether she is eligible at this time for a mother's pension under the provisions of section 1683-2, G. C., as amended in 106 Ohio Laws, page 436, providing that they must have a 'legal residence' in this county for two years."

The provisions of section 1683-2, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 436, pertinent to your inquiry, are as follows:

> "For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, or become permanently disabled by reason of physical or mental infirmity, or whose husbands are prisoners or whose husbands have deserted, and such desertion has continued for a period of three years, when such women are poor, and are the mothers of children not entitled to receive age and schooling certificate, and such mothers and children have a legal residence in any county of the state for two years, the juvenile court may make an allowance to each of such women as follows: * * *"

The requirements of the foregoing section with reference to residence are that the mother and children have a legal residence for two years in any county of this state.

Prior to his death in 1915, the legal residence of Mr. Theurer, the husband and father of the widow and children in question, was their legal residence (section 7996, G. C.). If Mr. Theurer had established a legal residence in your county prior to his removal in 1911 to Tennessee, that also established the legal residence of Mrs. Theurer and his children in said county. If Mr. Theurer by his removal to Tennessee did not change or abandon his legal residence in your county, then the legal residence of his wife and children was not abandoned or changed, and they continued to be and were legal residents of your county during the time of their actual residence in Tennessee.

It must be remembered that a man's legal residence may not be his actual residence and vice versa. It has frequently been said by the courts that a legal residence consists of both fact and intention and that both must concur. When a legal residence is once established, it therefore requires both fact and intention to change it. These principles are incorporated in the statute law of this state providing the conditions or facts under which a legal residence may be determined with regard to the right of a person to exercise the elective franchise. It may be observed in this connection that in this state the right to vote is an infallible test of one's legal residence, and perhaps the only true test. These principles are found in section 4866, G. C., which, among other things, provides:

> "2. A person shall not be considered to have lost his residence who leaves his home, and goes into another state, or county of this state, for temporary purposes merely, with the intention of returning.
> "5. If a person remove to another state with an intention to make it his permanent residence, he shall be considered to have lost his residence in this state.
> "6. If a person remove to another state, with an intention of remaining there an indefinite time, and as a place of present residence, he shall be considered to have lost his residence in this state, notwithstanding he may entertain an intention to return at some future period.
> "7. The mere intention to acquire a new residence, without the fact of removal, shall avail nothing; neither shall the fact of removal without the intention.
> "8. If a person go into another state, and while there exercise the right of a citizen by voting, he shall be considered to have lost his residence in this state."

I am of the opinion that the foregoing provisions of law, when applied to the facts stated by you in your inquiry, warrant the conclusion that the legal residence of Mr. Theurer, established in your county prior to 1911, was never changed or abandoned by him. That is to say, that his removal to Tennessee under the facts stated by you, which are, first, that such removal was unaccompanied by any intention to remain there and make that state his home, and, second, that such removal was with no intention of abandoning his residence in Shelby county, did not change his legal residence, and that, therefore, at the time of his death he was a legal resident of Shelby county, and had so continued during his absence therefrom.

This being so, as before observed, the status of Mrs. Theurer and the children in this respect would be the same as that of the husband and father, and she and they now possess the necessary qualifications as to residence required by section 1683-2, G. C., supra.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY VACATE PART OF AN INTER-COUNTY HIGHWAY WHEN A NEW RIGHT-OF-WAY FOR PART CHANGED HAS BEEN PROVIDED AND NEW PART OF HIGHWAY HAS BEEN CONSTRUCTED.

Where a substantial change in the line of an inter-county highway is suggested by the state highway commissioner, and the county commissioners provide a right-of-way for that part of the inter-county highway, the location of which is to be changed, and the inter-county highway improvement is constructed over the new right-of-way, that part of the old road not followed by the new improvement ceases to be an inter-county highway, and proceedings for its vacation brought under chapter I of the Cass highway law may be entertained by the county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 15, 1916, which communication reads as follows:

"In 1834, under the provisions of law then in force, a road was established through Lorain county running from the lake southward to Ashland county, which road extends through what is now a part of the city of Lorain, through the village of Oberlin and the village of Wellington. It was established as a state road.

"About two and one-half or three miles north of the village of Wellington this road crosses a stream known as Black river, over which a bridge has been maintained by the county commissioners. In 1913 the county commissioners condemned a strip of land lying at a little distance east of an angle in the old road, in which angle the above bridge was located. This new strip of land so condemned was opened up for the purpose of straightening out the highway and a new bridge erected over the river. At the time these proceedings were had the location of the road was designated by the state highway commissioner, Mr. Marker.

"The road prior to the opening of the new portion had been designated as inter-county road No. 144, Oberlin-Ashland, and the highway had been improved under the direction of the state highway commission, except that portion which I have termed above the angle, and which has been really replaced by the new section of road, land for which was so condemned by the county commissioners.

"The new portion of the highway was included in the improvement of the inter-county road. There no longer exists any necessity for that short stretch of the highway which was unimproved and in which is found the bridge above referred to, and it is the desire of the county commissioners that the unused portion may be closed and abandoned, and further expenditure upon that portion of the road and upon the bridge may be cut off, and that no liability may arise should accidents occur on the old bridge.

"We had in mind that the changing of the route by the commissioners, under the direction of the state highway commissioner, and the improvement of the road as changed probably made a change also on the status of that portion which the commissioners now desire to close and abandon, and that if it no longer was a portion of the inter-county highway the commissioners could, under authority of statute, proceed to vacate and close that unused portion.

"I desire to secure your opinion as to the commissioners' authority to vacate the unused portion of the road, or if you are of opinion that they have no authority, then I would like your opinion as to how such vacation may be brought about."

I learn by an examination of the records in the office of the state highway commissioner that the new portion of the inter-county highway in question constructed over the right-of-way acquired by the county commissioners is 5218 feet in length. Of this new highway, which is almost a mile in length, 5218 feet consists of roadway and 175 feet is occupied by the Black river bridge.. A considerable portion of the new roadway lies on the opposite side of the Black river from the old highway, and at a distance of several hundred feet therefrom. The right-of-way for the new road was obtained by the county commissioners in condemnation proceedings, carried forward early in 1913, under authority of section 1195. It does not appear with certainty whether the section, as amended in 102 O. L., 333, or as amended in 103 O. L., 449, was in force at the time condemnation proceedings were had, but this question is not material in so far as the present inquiry is concerned. There can be no doubt that the change made in the course of the inter-county highway was authorized under the provisions of sections 1190 and 1195, G. C., now repealed, and that the course of the inter-county highway in question is now over the new right-of-way, and that so much of the old highway as lies to the west of the new right-of-way and between the termini thereof, has ceased to be an inter-county highway. The road in question was originally constructed as a state road, but the chapter of the General Code, relating to state roads, was repealed by the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 574, and that act provided a new classification for the public highways of the state. Under section 241 of the act, so much of the old highway as is not followed by the new inter-county highway improvement is either a county road or a township road, probably the former, but it is immaterial to determine for the purposes of the present inquiry whether such portion of the old road is a county or a township road, for the reason that under chapter I of the Cass highway law, the power to vacate all roads other than inter-county or main market roads is lodged in the county commissioners.

While it might be argued that the deviation made in the inter-county highway, through the action of the state highway commissioner and the county commissioners, has effected a complete vacation of so much of the old highway as was not followed by the new improvement, yet in view of the possible rights of abutting land owners, I think the safer ground to take is that the deviation has only affected an abandonment of the old route as an inter-county highway, and that it still subsists as a public highway, and that the commissioners would not be authorized in closing the same until proper proceedings have been had for its vacation. Where the deviation in the line of an inter-county highway, effected under authority of the sections heretofore referred to, is slight and no rights of abutting land owners are involved, it might be safe to assume that no subsequent proceedings for the vacation of the old road are necessary or required, but I am not able to reach that conclusion under the state of facts existing in the case presented by you. It should be noted in this connection that section 1195, G. C., now repealed, while it contained complete provisions for the protection of persons whose lands might be desired for the new right-of-way, provided no method of awarding damages to persons whose rights may be affected by the vacation of the old highway. There can be no doubt, however, of the right of the county commissioners, under chapter

I of the Cass highway law, to entertain proceedings for the vacation of so much of the old highway as is not followed by the new inter-county highway improvement, for the reason that such part of the old highway has ceased to be an inter-county highway, and the authority of the county commissioners to vacate roads, now extends to all roads other than inter-county highways and main market roads.

Answering your question specifically, I therefore advise you that under chapter I of the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 574, the commissioners have authority to vacate that portion of the old road not followed by the new inter-county highway improvement. Such vacation is to be had in the manner prescribed in the chapter in question and may, under the provisions of section 19 of the Cass highway law, section 6878, G. C., be initiated by a unanimous vote of the county commissioners and without the filing of any petition therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY—TRUSTEES WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO PERMIT CITY OF COLUMBUS TO ERECT HOSPITAL ON CAMPUS —CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

The trustees of the Ohio State University are not authorized, without further legislation, to permit the city of Columbus to erect a city hospital on the campus of such university.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. W. O. THOMPSON, President Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 16th, as follows:

> "The city of Columbus recently voted for bonds to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars for the erection of a hospital for contagious diseases. It has been suggested that it would be of mutual advantage to the city and to the university if that contagious hospital could be erected on the campus either as a part of, or near to, a general hospital proposed for the college of medicine.
> "I recognize that there may be legal difficulties from the standpoint of both the city and state. I am therefore, requesting from you an opinion whether the university trustees would be authorized to enter into an arrangement by which such a hospital could be erected on any portion of the land controlled by the university trustees.
> "I should appreciate very much a reply to this question."

Your specific question is whether the trustees of the Ohio State University would be authorized to enter into an arrangement to permit a hospital owned by the city to be erected on land controlled by the university trustees.

The statutes governing the Ohio State University are sections 7942, et seq., of the General Code. Under section 7950 the board of trustees is given "general supervision of all lands, buildings, and other property belonging to the university," and under section 7951 the board of trustees is authorized to receive and hold in trust, for the use of the university, "any grant or devise of land," to be applied to the general or special use of the university. Under section 7952 it is provided that the title to all the university lands shall be in fee simple in the state. None of these sections, however, authorizes the board of trustees to permit to be built upon the university campus a building that is not under the supervision and control of the trustees.

This seems to have been recognized by the state legislature when it enacted section 7950-1, G. C., which authorizes the construction of a high school on the campus "upon such terms as may be agreed upon by the trustees of the Ohio State University and the board of education of the city school district of the city of Columbus, Ohio," such high school to be used "as an observation and practice school by the college of education of the Ohio State University upon the terms and conditions as agreed upon by the said board of trustees and the said board of education." Said section further provides that "At no time shall the state of Ohio be called upon to assist in defraying the expenses of conducting or repairing such school."

I do not undertake to pass upon the proposition as to whether or not the city of Columbus, being a charter city, would be authorized to donate a sum of money to the university for the purpose of erecting a hospital upon the campus of said university. Even if such city were authorized so to do, it is not the intention, as I gather from your letter, that said city should donate money for any such purpose, but only that the city itself is to erect a building, with the consent of the trustees of the Ohio State University, upon the campus of said university, to be operated by said city of Columbus. There is at present no authority to do this. If it is desirable that the building of such a hospital on the university campus be allowed, consent of the legislature will have to be first obtained, as was done relative to the high school, as disclosed by section 7950-1, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APROVAL OF RESOLUTIONS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENTS IN DARKE, RICHLAND AND CHAMPAIGN COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 21, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 19, 1916, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions relating to the following road improvements:

"Dark county—Celina-Greenville rd., Pet. No. 844, I. C. H. No. 211.
"Richland county—Mansfield-Galion rd., Pet. No. 1138, I. C. H. No. 202.
"Champaign county—Urbana-Sidney rd., Pet. No. 1680, I. C. H. No. 192."

I find these resolutions to be in regular form and am, therefore, returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—ORDINANCE WHICH DOES NOT FIX LICENSE FEE DEFINITELY BUT LEAVES FIXING OF SUCH FEE WITHIN LIMITATIONS TO MAYOR, INVALID—COUNCIL CANNOT DELEGATE ITS LEGISLATIVE FUNCTION—VILLAGE OF OXFORD, OHIO—LICENSE TO EXHIBITORS OF SHOWS AND PERFORMANCES.

An ordinance of a municipality which does not fix a license fee definitely, but leaves the fixing of such fee, within limitations, to the mayor, is invalid as a delegation by council of a part of its legislative function.

If an ordinance authorizes the mayor to fix a different license fee for persons in the same class and condition, it is invalid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 23, 1916.

HON. R. M. HUGHES, President Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 3d, which is as follows:

> "I submit herewith a letter from Mayor J. S. Hughes, of Oxford, and a copy of the ordinance to which he refers. This ordinance has not been enforced during the last ten or fifteen years and probably more.
> "The entertainments given at Miami, for which fees are charged, are as follows: Football, baseball, basketball, track and tennis games; concerts by several musical clubs of students; three plays given by students; four or five numbers of a Union Lyceum course, including lectures, plays, concerts as may be determined from year to year; and a series of entertainments given in the summer for the summer school students. In none of the above entertainments is there personal profit. The receipts go to the organization giving the entertainment, and are used to meet the expenses of the organization.
> "It is a question in my mind whether such ordinance covers entertainments given as above, and also whether the village council has jurisdiction over entertainments of any kind given by Miami University in connection with her educational work.
> "Will you kindly advise me whether this ordinance applies to Miami University?"

Enclosed with your letter is a letter from Hon. J. S. Hughes, mayor of Oxford, to the following effect:

> "Please be advised that there is a village 'ordinance to license exhibitions of shows and performances' of every description, except lectures on scientific, historical and literary subjects, for which compensation or money is charged or demanded, or reward is demanded or received, the amount of said license to be fixed by the mayor, ranging from one to thirty dollars per day.
> "In the future, when booking entertainments, please take this matter up with the advance agent, or others concerned, so that arrangements can be made for said license."

The ordinance referred to by the mayor in his letter is as follows:

"ORDINANCE.

"An ordinance to license exhibitors of shows and performances.

"Section 1.—Be it ordained by the common council of the village of Oxford, Ohio, that it shall be unlawful to exhibit in said village, without first having secured from the mayor of said village a license therefor, any theatrical performance of any kind whatever, any circus, menagerie, pupet show, or animal show of any kind whatever, tumbling, rope or wire walking, balancing, or slight of hand, any paintings or panoramas, or any natural or artificial curiosity or deception, lecture or performance of whatever kind for which compensation or money is charged or demanded, or any reward is demanded or received, except lectures on scientific, historical or literary subjects.

"Section 2.—Every person taking out a license to exhibit as provided in the first section of this ordinance, shall pay into the village treasury therefor a sum fixed by the mayor which shall not be less than one dollar ($1.00) per day, nor more than thirty dollars ($30.00) per day, and the mayor for good cause shown may revoke any license so issued or granted by him. For every license so issued the mayor shall receive a fee of fifty cents.

"Section 3.—Any person violating the provisions of the first section of this ordinance shall, upon conviction thereof before the mayor of said village, be fined in any sum not exceeding fifty dollars ($50.00) and costs of prosecution, and the mayor, upon the conviction of any person for violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance, may make it a part of the sentence that the person so convicted shall stand committed to the prison of said village until the fine and costs of prosecution assessed against said person shall be paid, or secured to be paid, or the party discharged by due process of law.

"Section 4.—Be it further ordained that this ordinance shall take effect at the expiration of ten days after publication has been completed as required by law.

"Passed this fourteenth day of December, A. D., 1875.

"B. B. Davis,
Mayor of said village.

"James A. Kennedy,
"Clerk of said village.

"Oxford, Ohio, December 28, 1875.

"I hereby certify that the above ordinance was published according to law in the Oxford Citizen, dated December 16, A. D. 1875.

"James A. Kennedy, Clerk."

There is no doubt that the provision of section 2 of article XII of the constitution, to the effect that "laws shall be passed, taxing by a uniform rule, all moneys, etc.," does not apply as to licenses, the rule of uniformity of taxation applying only to direct taxes. It is likewise no doubt that it is an established rule of law that licenses may be required in accordance with classification, and that one class may be required to take out a license and another may not, and further, that the amount assessed for a license is within the discretion of the legislative body, provided that the same is not unreasonable or unjust; but there is a well established rule of law that there must be no discrimination between persons of the same class.

Section 3616 of the General Code provides that "all municipal corporations shall have the general powers mentioned in this chapter, and council may provide by ordinance or resolution for the exercise and enforcement of them."

In such chapter, among such general powers, is the power under section 3672 "to license exhibitors of shows or performances of any kind, not prohibited by law."

It was undoubtedly in pursuance of said power, which has been in existence for many years, that the ordinance of 1875, quoted above, was passed by the village of Oxford.

In section 1 of the ordinance above referred to it is provided that

> "it shall be unlawful to exhibit in said village, without first having secured from the mayor of said village a license therefor, any theatrical performance of any kind whatever, * * * lecture or performance of whatever kind for which compensation or money is charged or demanded, or any reward is demanded or received, except lectures on scientific, historical or literary subjects."

Section 2 of the ordinance provides that every person taking out a license to exhibit shall pay into the village treasury "a sum fixed by the mayor which shall not be less than one dollar per day, nor more than thirty dollars per day."

Council has not undertaken to fix a certain sum for the taking out of licenses by the classes above specified, but has delegated that authority, within certain limits, to the mayor. This I do not believe to be a valid exercise of the power conferred upon council.

In the case of Bills v. Goshen, 117 Ind., 221, the court, in the opinion, says:

> "It is further a well settled principle that cities cannot discriminate between citizens engaged in the same business; that if they license, they must license all alike. See Graffty v. Rushville, 107 Ind., 502, 5 West. Rep. 858; Benjamin v. Webster, 100 Ind., 15.
> "It is therefore material to the validity of an ordinance that a fixed and definite license fee should be named in the ordinance, which all persons engaged in like business shall pay."

In the case of State Center v. Barenstein, 66 Iowa, 249, it was held that an ordinance requiring a peddler to pay as a license "not less than one nor more than twenty-five dollars for a fixed time, in the discretion of the mayor" was void for unreasonableness. This case is not exactly in point, for the reason that the court held that the limitation of twenty-five dollars had no significance, because the time for which that sum might be charged was left wholly to the mayor, and he might fix so short a time as to be equivalent to a refusal to license at all, which the court believed was not a proper exercise of the power vested in council to regulate and license peddlers, for the reason that it was more in the nature of a delegation of their whole power to the mayor. Nevertheless, it seems to me that the case does recognize the principle that in order for a licensing ordinance to be valid council must therein fix the amount of the fee which is to be charged for the taking out of a license.

In so answering, I am not unmindful of the case of Crawford v. Sideman, 89 O. S., 260, wherein the court held as follows:

> "Under the provisions of section 6364, General Code, in the absence of an ordinance of the municipality providing therefor, the clerk or mayor of the municipality may determine a reasonable amount to be paid by an itinerant vendor as a local license fee, and the granting of this right to the clerk or mayor is a legal exercise of legislative power and not repugnant to the constitution."

In that case, however, the legislature had provided that in the absence of an ordinance fixing the fee, the clerk or mayor shall determine the same. There is no such provision in the general powers granted to municipalities in the sections hereinbefore referred to.

The ordinance having undertaken to vest in the mayor the power of determination as to the amount that should be charged, within the limits of not less than one dollar per day nor more than thirty dollars per day, it would be possible for the mayor to charge one person of a certain class the sum of one dollar and another person of identically the same class thirty dollars for a license; or it would be possible for the mayor to charge a person of a certain class thirty dollars for one day and on the next succeeding day but one dollar, or vice versa. This, I believe, to be a discrimination, and, therefore, the ordinance is of no force and effect.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

INTERPRETATION OF SECTIONS 12, 13, 14 and 15, SECTIONS 5371-4, 5406-1, 5406-2, 5406-3, G. C., PARRETT-WHITTEMORE BILL PROVIDING FOR LISTING AND VALUATION OF PROPERTY FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION—WHETHER PROPERTY OF COMPANY MAY BE CONSIDERED AS A UNIT—WHETHER PROPERTY PERTAINING TO A BUSINESS CARRIED ON IN MORE THAN ONE POLITICAL SUBDIVISION UP TO A COUNTY MAY BE VALUED AS UNIT BY COMMISSION—WHETHER BUSINESS CARRIED ON IN MORE THAN ONE COUNTY MAY BE VALUED BY COMMISSION—CONSTRUCTION OF WORD "BUSINESS" AS FOUND IN THE LAW.

Section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, 106 O. L., 249, does not require or authorize the valuation of the property of an incorporated company located in more than one county as a "unit" or "going concern," but merely requires the ascertainment of the aggregate value of all such property as a whole and by the same assessing officer or tribunal.

Section 12 of the said act does not authorize the application of the so-called "unit rule" to the valuation of property pertaining to a business carried on in one or more taxing districts or county; but the rule with respect to the ascertainment of the value of such property is the same as that respecting the valuation of the property of incorporated companies.

When a business is carried on in more than one taxing district of a county, but entirely within a single county, the requirements of the Parrett-Whittemore law is that the value thereof shall be ascertained by a single assessing authority, and when ascertained in the aggregate such value shall be apportioned among the different taxing districts and assessed therein according to the rules applicable to the apportionment and assessment of the property of incorporated companies located in more than one taxing district of the same county. The county auditor is required by the law to make the initial ascertainment and the apportionment and assessment. The manner in which he shall discharge his duties not being specifically provided for by law, the tax commission may by general rules and regulations prescribe such machinery. There being no explicit provision for the separate return of property pertaining to a business, as such, the tax commission may in the form of return prescribed by it provide for such separate listing and return.

But where a business is carried on in more than one county of the state the intent of the law is that the tax commission shall make the initial aggregate valuation of such property and the apportionment thereof among the counties, and it is the power and duty of the commission to provide detailed machinery for carrying such intent into effect, which machinery should follow the outline of the provisions of section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law relative to the valuation, apportionment and assessment of the property of incorporated companies.

The word "business" is used in section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law in its popular or restricted sense, and means and contemplates all occupations which deal with property in a commercial way, but the operations of which with respect to such property commence after it is severed from the realty. Accordingly, professions and other occupations which render services rather than deal with property are not "businesses," nor is the occupation of "farming," "mining" or "market gardening" a "business." The occupations of florists and nurserymen, however, in so far as they deal with personal property, as such, and to the extent that such dealings can be separated from the mere cultivation of the soil and the sale of the products thereof, are to be regarded as "businesses."

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 23, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter of January 10th, receipt whereof is acknowledged, you request my opinion upon the following questions involving the interpretation of sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 of the act of May, 1915, known as the Parrett-Whittemore bill:

"1st. In determining the value of the property of an incorporated company as required by section 13, may the commission consider the property of the company as a unit without dividing it into the separate items which are required to be listed under the provisions of section 5376 of the General Code? In the case of the Champion Coated Paper Company decided by the supreme court under the law as it existed prior to the passage of the Parrett-Whittemore bill, and with which you are familiar, it was held that the taxing authorities were without power to value the property of all incorporated company as a unit. The commission now desires to know whether the enactment of the Parrett-Whittemore bill confers that power upon it, as to such companies as have property in more than one county in the state.

"2nd. May the property pertaining to a business carried on in more than one township, city, village or county in the state by a person, firm, partnership, association or unincorporated company be valued as a unit by the commission?

"3rd. Is the property of a person, firm, partnership, association or unincorporated company pertaining to a business carried on in more than one township, city or village in the same county in this state required to be valued by the tax commission, or is the tax commission only required to value the property of such person, firm, partnership, association or unincorporated company if the business is carried on in more than one county in this state?

"In connection with this question the commission calls attention to the fact that there appears to be no provision in sections 13, 14 and 15 of the act for the tax commission to apportion the property of an incorporated company to taxing districts, neither is there any provision for the tax commission to value the property of an incorporated company unless it has property in more than one county. It also desires to call attention to the fact that it would be exceedingly difficult for the commission to determine the persons, firms, partnerships, associations or unincorporated companies which have property pertaining to a business in more than one township, city or village in the same county.

"4th. The commission desires an interpretation of the word 'business,' as used in section 12 of the act. It would seem desirable that if this section of the law is to be enforced, that there should be a uniform interpretation of this word; for example, a farmer might under certain circumstances be considered to be conducting a 'business' and his farm might be located in more than one township in the same county, or even in more than one county in the state. Is the word 'business' to be confined to persons or partnerships engaged in commercial and manufacturing lines or is it to extend to such business as that of a florist, gardener or nurseryman? In short, the commission desires to advise local taxing officials as to just what kinds of businesses are included within this term, and make preparations to have returns made to the commission for the purpose of fixing the value of property."

In answering your first question I find it necessary to quote but one of the sections to which you refer, namely, section 13—section 5406-1, G. C. (106 O. L. 249). This section provides as follows:

> "Section 13. If the property of an incorporated company is situated in more than one county, return shall be made to the county auditor of the county wherein the principal place of business of the company is located, or if the company has no principal place of business in this state, to the county auditor of any county wherein it transacts business or its property is situated. The county auditor to whom return is made shall certify the fact, together with the return and all information in his possession relating thereto, to the tax commission of Ohio, which shall ascertain and determine the aggregate value of the entire property of the company required to be listed in this state, and, from the aggregate sum so found, make the deductions provided in section fifty-four hundred and five of the General Code. The commission shall apportion the value of the property of such company, after making such deductions, among such counties in proportion to the value of the property located in each, and certify its findings to the county auditors, who shall severally apportion the amount certified to their respective counties, to the cities, villages, townships and other taxing districts, therein, in the manner prescribed in section 5405 of the General Code."

The two italicized words in the above quoted section are inconsistent, if full force is to be given to each of them. The word "entire" as modifying the word "property" as the subject of valuation has, in certain contexts, been given the effect of requiring property devoted to a given business purpose and, though physically consisting of separate articles, being organically a unit of ownership and use, to be valued as a unit. In other words, the word "entire" in an appropriate context has been regarded as the keynote of the expression of a legislative intention to impose the rule of valuation of property as a unit and a going concern. This was the case with the so-called "Nichols law" applicable to the assessment of the property of express companies. In State ex rel. v. Jones, Auditor, 51 O. S. 492, at page 510, will be found evidence, in the language of Dickman, J., of the significance attached by the supreme court of Ohio to the use of the word "entire" in that law.

In a word, it is natural to suppose that when a value is to be placed upon the "entire" property of a single owner, the inference is that the property is to be valued as an "entirety," particularly where it is all devoted to a common business purpose.

The word "aggregate," on the other hand has an opposite significance. An aggregate value is a figure which is made up by adding together separate and distinct primary values. Hence, it follows that the phrase "the aggregate value of the entire property" is meaningless if full force be given to both the adjectives. A group of different things cannot, in strict logic, be considered as an aggregation and as an entirety at the same time.

I think that the interpretation of section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law is made clear by the fact that it is merely supplementary to sections 5404 et seq. of the General Code, which said sections in a part of their application at least are left unaffected by the Parrett-Whittemore law.

Section 5405 of this group provides as follows:

> "Return shall be made to the several auditors of the respective counties where such property is situated, together with a statement of the amount thereof which is situated in each township, village, city, or taxing district therein. Upon receiving such returns, the auditor shall ascertain and determine the value of the property of such companies, and deduct from the aggregate sum so found of each, the value as assessed for taxation of any real estate included in the return. The value of the property of each of such companies, after so deducting the value of all the real estate included in the return, shall be apportioned by the auditor to such cities, villages, townships, or taxing districts, pro rata, in proportion to the value of the real estate and fixed property included in the return, in each of such cities, villages, townships or taxing districts. * * *"

While it must be conceded that this section is modified by section 13, in so far as its application to the field common to both sections is concerned, yet it must also be conceded that section 5405 is not modified in its application where not inconsistent with section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law. The two sections are inconsistent only when the condition described in the first clause of section 13 exists, viz.: "If the property of an incorporated company is situated in more than one county." So that if the property of an incorporated company is situated wholly within one county of the state, section 5405 applies to that situation just as if section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law were not in existence.

As your letter states, section 5405 has received judicial interpretation, and your statement of the decision of the court is sufficiently accurate for the purposes of this opinion.

There is but one difference between section 5405 and section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, viz.: that which arises out of the use of the word "entire" in section 13. If the word "entire" had been in section 5405 the judicial interpretation of that section might have been different; for then the statute in words would have been quite similar to the Nichols law interpreted in State v. Jones, supra. As a matter of fact it may be observed in passing, however, that section 5405 should never have received such an interpretation, the employment of the unit rule being negatived by the very fact that it required return to be made to different county auditors.

It is probably true that had what is section 5405 of the General Code and what is section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law been passed at the same time, as parts of a single act of legislation, what is section 13 might have been used to construe what is section 5405 and a result different from that arrived at in the case referred to by you might have been reached.

Such questions afford an interesting ground of speculation, but they are put out of the main question which you ask because of the fact that section 5405 received a well-settled judicial interpretation before section 13 was enacted, and because, too, section 13 was obviously designed as a supplement to section 5405.

Under all the circumstances, I think that the word "entire" as used in section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law cannot be given the significance which was attached to that word as it was found in the Nichols law. As used in section 13 it can mean nothing more than that when the property of a corporation is located in more than one county the tax commission shall assess the whole property. It is used as meaning "all" rather than as meaning "as an entirety."

Any other result would lead to the conclusion that if the property of a corporation is located entirely within one county it is, on the authority of the case referred to by you, to be valued distributively like the property of an individual, whereas, if it is located in more than one county it is to be valued as a unit and going concern. Such a result would be palpably unconstitutional because it would provide two essentially different methods of valuation for property of the same class. This is because it would have to be conceded that the mere location of property belonging to a corporation in more than one county does not give it a character different from what it would have if it were located wholly within one county. Classification would, therefore, be arbitrary and would constitute a violation of the uniform rule enjoined by article XII, section 2 of the constitution.

Aside from the constitutional question which is thus presented, I think that as a matter of interpretation merely section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law must be regarded as simply an effort on the part of the general assembly to provide the administrative machinery for doing in the state at large what has always been done in the county under section 5405; that is, giving to one assessing officer or tribunal the power to assess all the property of a given corporation, instead of having the property subject to assessment by different officers and tribunals.

For all the foregoing reasons, then, I answer your first question in the negative.

The answer to this question dictates the answer to your second question.

Section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law provides as follows:

> "Property pertaining to a business carried on by a person, firm, partnership, association or unincorporated company shall be listed in the township, city or village in which such business is carried on. Provided, however, that if such business is carried on in more than one township, city, village or county in this state, the value thereof shall be ascertained and apportioned to and assessed in the several townships, cities, villages or counties in which such business is carried on, in the manner provided for the assessment of the property of incorporated companies by sections 13, 14 and 15 of this act."

Inasmuch as it has been determined that section 13 does not authorize unit valuation as to corporations, it necessarily follows that business property, the value of which is to be "ascertained and apportioned" in the manner described in section 12 cannot be so valued.

I might add that investigation shows that sections 12 to 15, inclusive, of the Parrett-Whittemore law are copied almost verbatim from a proposed bill constituting the "Recommendations of the tax commission of Ohio to the governor and general assembly," made on February 20, 1913 (see sections 5371-5 and 5405-2 and 5405-3 as embodied in said recommendations). That bill, however, contained a section which is not found in the Parrett-Whittemore law nor elsewhere in the enacted laws of this state. The language of the proposed section is as follows:

> "Section 5387-1. The provisions of sections 5381 and 5387, inclusive, of the General Code shall not be so construed as to prohibit the listing and valuation of a mercantile, manufacturing or other plant or any business of any kind as a unit; but every such plant or business shall be listed and valued as a unit or going concern."

This proposed legislation, which was, of course, never adopted, is not cited for the purpose of interpreting the legislation which was actually adopted (which would, of course, not be permissible), but for the purpose of showing what sort of a provision would be necessary in order to bring about the result suggested by your first two questions, the other statutes of the state remaining as they are.

For the foregoing reasons, your second question is answered in the negative.

In answering your third question regard must first be had to the provisions of section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, to which you refer and which I have quoted.

The first sentence of this section lays down a rule of situs similar and supplementary to the rules laid down in section 5371 of the General Code and in sections 9, 10 and 11 of the act. While the word "personal" is not used in this sentence, nor is the word "property" followed as it is in sections 9 and 11, which may be regarded as in pari materia, by the words "moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise," yet I think it is apparent that the single word which is used in section 12 does not contemplate real estate, for the situs of real estate is fixed. It can be located nowhere excepting where it is. It will not be presumed that the general assembly intended an impossible result. The provision being one for the fixing of situs, it must be conclusively presumed, I think, to be limited in its application to movable property—property the situs of which is not fixed by its very nature.

For example, if an individual should own a factory in one township of a county and should lease a warehouse in another township in the same county, carrying on the business of manufacturing at one place and the business of selling at the other, but both being in the very nature of things merely different parts of the same single business, the rules of this section could not, I think, be so applied as to assign any of the value of the real property on which the factory is situated to the township where the selling business is carried on.

Again, this provision is an embodiment of the principle of business situs which has come to be generally recognized by the courts, but the principle as so recognized applies only to personal or movable property—never to real estate.

I reach the conclusion, therefore, that so far as the first sentence of section 12 is concerned movable property is alone contemplated and real estate is not included.

Now the second sentence of the section, on which your question arises, is to be interpreted in the light of the manifest application of the first sentence, for the only word therein referring to or defining the property to which it applies is the word "thereof," which is, of course, purely relative and necessarily refers to the word "property" with its qualifications as used in the first sentence. Inasmuch, therefore, as the word "property" contemplates movable property only, the second sentence of section 12 applies only to movable property. Paraphrased, then, the second sentence provides that if a business is carried on in more than one township, city, village or county within this state the value of the movable property pertaining thereto shall be ascertained, apportioned and assessed in the several townships, cities, villages or counties in which the business is carried on, as provided in the other sections therein referred to.

This conclusion is strengthened by consideration of the fact that the sections referred to in the second sentence of section 12 are sections 13, 14 and 15 of the Parrett-Whittemore law. Section 5404 of the General Code is not referred to therein. This point has already been mentioned. Now section 5404 of the General Code, which applies, of course, to corporations only, is the only section requiring the inclusion of any real estate in the return. Section 13, to be sure, requires the county auditor to deduct from an aggregate sum which he is to find in accordance with section 5405 of the General Code, and the deductions referred to in section 5405 of the General Code are to be made for and on account of the real estate included in the return of the corporation. But in view of the fact that no real estate is required to be listed by section 12, the conclusion is irresistible that this part of section 13 relative to deductions does not apply to business property, as such.

Looking at the second sentence of section 12 from another point of view, it is apparent that what is to be done with business property in accordance with its provisions consists of the following three steps:

(1) The ascertainment of value.

(2) The apportionment.

(3) The assessment.

All these things are to be done "in the manner provided for the assessment of the property of incorporated companies by sections 13, 14 and 15 of this act."

Taking these up in their order, the question arises as to what is the manner in which the value of movable property is to be ascertained under sections 13, 14 and 15.

The first sentence of section 13, which has been previously quoted, does not bear upon the ascertainment of value. It relates to the making of a return. The ascertainment of value is a separate step in the assessment of property which follows the listing and the making of the return. Moreover, this sentence of section 13 cannot at least apply to all the situations contemplated by the second sentence of section 12, because according to its own terms it is only applicable "if the property of an incorporated company is situated in more than one county." That is, it is not intended that return should be made "to the county auditor of the county wherein the principal place of business of the company is located, or * * * to the county auditor of any county wherein it transacts business or its property is situated," if all of the business to which the property pertains is carried on in one county.

For these two reasons, then:

> "First. Because the second sentence of section 12 does not require that business property shall be returned in the manner provided by sections 13, 14 and 15 of the act, but is limited in its application to the ascertainment of value, the apportionment and the assessment as therein provided for; and
> "Second. Because the first sentence of section 13 manifestly does not apply in case property to be returned is situated wholly within one county;"

I am of the opinion that the first sentence of section 13 is not adopted by reference in the second sentence of section 12, and that "the manner provided for the assessment of the property of incorporated companies by sections 13, 14 and 15 of this act" does not include the making of the initial return provided for in section 13.

This conclusion makes it plain that the first part of the next sentence of section 13, viz.:

> "The county auditor to whom return is made shall certify the fact, together with the return and all information in his possession relating thereto, to the tax commission of Ohio," does not apply to business property, as such, for this part of the sentence still deals with the machinery of the return or listing; it has nothing to do with the manner of ascertaining the value.

We come now to the provision of section 13 which does bear upon the ascertainment of value. It is as follows:

> "The tax commission of Ohio * * * shall ascertain and determine the aggregate value of the entire property of a company required to be listed in this state. * * *"

I have omitted from the second sentence of section 13 the reference to the making of the deductions provided in section 5405, G. C., for a reason already disclosed. We have, then, the provision that the tax commission shall ascertain and determine the aggregate value of the entire property, as that provision is interpreted in answering your first question. It is possible to separate this legislative idea into two subordinate ideas, viz.:

> "(1) The property of the class the legislature had in mind shall be considered together and valued as a whole—though not as a unit.
> "(2) The tax commission of Ohio shall make the ascertainment and determination."

Are both of these subordinate ideas included in the idea of "manner" within the contemplation of section 12? I think the answer to this question is in the negative. The manner in which a thing shall be done and the person, officer or tribunal by whom or by which it shall be done are two separate and distinct subjects of legislation. For example, section 71 of the Parrett-Whittemore law directs the tax commission from time to time to prescribe such rules and regulations, orders and instructions not inconsistent with any provision of law "as it may deem necessary respecting the manner of the exercise of the powers and discharge of the duties of any and all officers relating to the assessment of property. * *" Clearly here the authority of the commission stops short of imposing substantive duties upon officers. This provision presumes that a duty is imposed upon an officer by the law itself and not by the order of the commission, and gives to the commission the authority to regulate the manner of the discharge of that duty. The word "manner" is, therefore, used in section 71 of the law in such a way as not to include the designation of the person or officer who shall discharge a given duty. I think it must likewise be used in this way in section 12.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the phrase "the value thereof shall be ascertained * * * in the manner provided for the assessment of the property of incorporated companies by sections 13, 14 and 15 of this act," if business is carried on in more than one township, city, village or county in this state, means that in such case the value of the property pertaining thereto shall be ascertained as an aggregate and the whole property pertaining to such business shall be considered together, though not as a unit and going concern.

How, then, do sections 13, 14 and 15 of the act provide for the manner of the apportionment of the value so ascertained? This question requires consideration of the next provision of section 13, which is as follows:

> "The commission shall apportion the value of the property of such company, * * * among such counties in proportion to the value of the property located in each, and certify its findings to the county auditors, who shall severally apportion the amount certified to their respective counties, to the cities, villages, townships and other taxing districts therein, in the manner prescribed in section 5405 of the General Code."

Here, again, are two ideas:

> "(1) The idea involving the identity of the officer who shall make the apportionment; and
> "(2) The idea of the manner of making the apportionment."

Indeed, the word "manner" is itself used in section 13 as applicable to the method of apportionment within the county.

For reasons similar to those above stated in discussing the manner of ascertainment of value, I reach the conclusion that all that section 12 provides for is that in case business is carried on in more than one county, and the aggregate value of the entire property pertaining thereto is once ascertained, that value shall be distributed among the counties "in proportion to the value of the property located in each," and after such distribution is made, or in the event that the business is carried on wholly within one county, the apportionment within the county shall be further carried out "in the manner prescribed in section 5405 of the General Code."

How, then, is it provided by the sections named that property shall be "assessed?" This, it seems to me, is provided for by section 15 of the act, which provides as follows:

> "Section 15. In determining the location of property for the purpose of the two preceding sections, all moneys and credits used in or appertaining especially to a separate business transacted by an incorporated company at a particular place shall be deemed to be located at such place where the business is transacted, and moneys and credits not used in or appertaining especially to such separate business transacted at any particular place shall be deemed to be located at the principal place of business of such company."

This section, it will be observed, as applied to business property, as such, is merely an amplification of the rule embodied in the first sentence of section 12, which rule has already been discussed.

These conclusions, it must be admitted, leave the law in an imperfect condition, for as I have interpreted sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 they lack any provision as to making returns or listing property of the character under consideration, and they also lack any provision as to what officer or tribunal shall perform the several processes which the law attempts to require.

So far as the county is concerned, however, this difficulty is obviated by the second sentence of section 2 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, which provides as follows:

> "County auditors shall, under the direction and supervision of the tax commission of Ohio, be the chief supervising, assessing officers of their respective counties, and, with the local assessors selected in the manner provided in this act, shall list and value real and personal property for taxation, within and for their respective counties, except as may be otherwise provided by law."

Having just concluded that it is not "otherwise provided by law" with respect to the listing and valuation of business property located wholly within the county, I now conclude that the duty to list and value such property, where the business is carried on in more than one township or taxing district of the county, devolves by virtue of this provision upon the county auditor. The duty thus devolving upon the auditor and the machinery whereby the duty may be discharged being perhaps imperfect, the tax commission of Ohio may, under section 71 above referred to, prescribe such general and uniform rules and regulations as it may see fit "respecting the manner of the discharge of the duty." That is to say, it being the duty of the county auditor under section 2 to list and value all property within his county, the listing and valuation whereof is not otherwise provided for by law, and the listing and valuation of business property, where the business is wholly carried on within one county but in more than one taxing district thereof, not being provided for by law, it necessarily follows that the county auditor must list and value such property; and there being a lack of specific machinery for the listing and valuation of such property, and such machinery being a mere matter of administration rather than a matter of substantive law, the tax commission of Ohio, under the section above quoted, may provide such machinery.

Other machinery is also lacking here. That is to say, there is no specific provision in section 12 requiring the separate listing of business property, so that the returns of such property can be separated from other property of the same taxpayer. This defect, however, is cured, in my opinion, by section 73 of the law, which provides as follows:

> "The tax commission of Ohio may require, in the forms for listing property, prescribed by it, the separate listing of such items of personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, subject to taxation and the furnishing of such information respecting the property owned or controlled by the person, or incorporated company required to list, as it deems necessary to secure accurate, full and honest returns and values for taxation. The commission may in such forms, require the person, or incorporated company listing property for taxation, to affix to each and every item prescribed by it therein the true value in money of the property listed thereunder, and may require such statement of total values as it may deem proper to be made."

While this section applies only to movable property, yet it is in this respect equally as broad as section 12, which, as I have held, applies solely to that kind of property. Section 73, therefore, authorizes the tax commission to prescribe appropriate forms of returns for the separate listing of business property.

The question remains as to the identity of the officer or tribunal who shall value the property pertaining to the business carried on in more than one county. I have no doubt that it was the intention of the general assembly to devolve this duty upon the tax commission, yet nowhere is it expressly so devolved. The word "manner" as used in section 12 cannot, for reasons which have been suggested, be given this force unless force be given to the conditional clause introducing section 13 of the act, viz.: "If the property of an incorporated company is situated in more than one county," and it be held that the word "manner" as used in section 12 does include the making of returns and the selection of the officer who shall assess and apportion.

This method of reasoning, while somewhat inconsistent with the reasoning previously employed, would not affect the conclusion previously reached, and would open the way to hold that section 13, but for the provision therein respecting deductions, has perfect application in all of its terms to the assessment of business property where the business is carried on in more than one county.

The same result, however, may be reached, I think, in another way. It is clear that the county auditor cannot assess property pertaining to a business carried on in more than one county under section 2, because the power therein is limited to assessments "within and for their respective counties;" whereas, the assessment which sections 12 and 13 et seq. primarily require must be made with respect to property which is not wholly "within" any one given county, and the initial process in the assessment, viz.: the ascertainment of the aggregate value of the whole property is not made "for" any one county.

The tax commission does not have express power under section 2 of the act to make such an assessment. That section provides in part as follows:

> "In addition to all other powers and duties vested in or imposed upon it by law, the tax commission of Ohio shall direct and supervise the assessment for taxation of all real and personal property in the state. * * *"

This sentence gives to the tax commission the power of direction and supervision, but not the power to make an assessment itself; yet the law primarily requires that the assessment shall be made, and shall be made in the first instance without reference to county lines. While the act is in some confusion on this point, I am of the opinion that the manifest intention of the legislature is that the tax commission shall assess the property pertaining to a business carried on in more than one county, and shall make the apportionment among counties.

I, therefore, conclude, in answer to your third question, that the listing and valuation of property pertaining to a business carried on in more than one taxing district, but wholly within one county, is to be made by the county auditor, and that the tax commission of Ohio has power to prescribe blank forms for the separate listing of such business property and rules and regulations governing the manner of the discharge by the county auditor of the duty thus imposed upon him, such rules and regulations not being afforded by the express provisions of the statutes themselves.

I am also of the opinion that it is the duty of the county auditor to make all apportionments of value of property pertaining to a business within his county among the proper taxing districts therein, whether he determines the aggregate value in the first instance, as is the case where business is carried on wholly within one county, or receives from the tax commission, as hereinafter stated, the values apportioned to the county as a whole, in the event that the business is carried on in more than one county.

I am also of the opinion that it is the duty of the tax commission under the law to list and value the property pertaining to a business carried on in more than one county of the state, and to apportion the aggregate value so ascertained among the counties of the state in which the business is carried on; and that while the law is far from clear on this point, the return in such case should be made in such manner and upon such blank forms as are prescribed by the tax commission of Ohio by rules and regulations, which should, however, provide that the initial return should be made to the auditor of the county wherein the principal place of business is located, if such principal place of business is located within this state, and, if not, then to the auditor of any county in which business is transacted, consistently with the first sentence of section 13 of the Parrett-Whittemore law. There is doubt, as hereinbefore suggested, as to whether or not this sentence has perfect application to the question at hand, and for that reason I recommend that the commission formally adopt rules on the subject. But because it seems to have been the legislative intention that the machinery should be of the kind just described, I am also of the opinion that the commission's rules and regulations should follow the statute.

Generally as bearing upon the third question, I am of the opinion that the property pertaining to a business to which the special rules of section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law apply embraces only movable property, i. e., tangible personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stocks, joint stock companies or otherwise, pertaining to a business, and that such property does not include real estate.

Your fourth question requires an interpretation of the word "business" as used throughout the section which has been quoted, as well as the other sections such as section 10 of the law. While in its most primary and accurate meaning this term means simply occupation—that which as a customary and habitual pursuit occupies the time and attention of a person, ordinarily as a means of livelihood or gain, but not necessarily so. (See Beickler v. Guenther, 96 N. W. 895 [Iowa]; Snow v. Sheldon, 126 Mass. 332; Earle v. Commonwealth, 180 Mass. 579); and while in the statutes of this state applicable to taxation the term "business" is sometimes used in a connection from which it is obvious that but for qualifications in the context it might have this broad meaning (see section 5407, applicable to banks; section 5416, applicable to public utilities; and sections 5432 et seq. applicable to insurance companies); yet in ordinary speech the word "business" is most often used to distinguish a certain very general class of occupations from other classes which are characterized, for example, as "professions" and from other occupations such as "farming" and "mining." We speak of "business men" and "professional men" as belonging to distinct classes.

I cannot escape the impression that the legislature used the word "business" in section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law rather in its restricted and popular sense than in its broader and perhaps technically more accurate meaning. This impression comes to me first from the language of section 12 itself, wherein there is at least an implied qualification or narrowing of the term in the context, which in full is:

> "A business carried on by a person, firm, partnership, association or unincorporated company."

The legislature certainly had in mind some limitation of the principal term here or else it would have used no qualifying language whatever. The character and extent of the qualification, however, is not, it must be admitted, apparent from section 12 itself; nor are there any other sections of the Parrett-Whittemore law in which the term is used which indicate with any certainty what the limitation is. I refer to sections 10 and 15, both of which give the notion of a limitation just as section 12 does, but which in themselves do not indicate with any certainty the character and extent thereof.

However, I think it is obvious that the most natural place in which to search for a definition of the idea which seems to be implicit in section 12 is in some statutes in pari materia.

Proceeding a step further away from the immediate context, and going now to the unrepealed provisions of the General Code on the subject of the taxation of property, which unrepealed sections are clearly in pari materia with the sections under consideration, the following uses of the term are found:

> "Sec. 5382. When a person is required by this chapter to make out and deliver to the assessor a statement of his other personal property, he shall state the value of such property appertaining to his business as a merchant.
> "Sec. 5385. A person who purchases, receives or holds personal property * * * for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by manufacturing * * * is a manufacturer, and when he is required to make and deliver to the assessor a statement of the amount of his other personal property * * * he shall include therein the average value * * * of all articles * * * held for the purpose of being used * * * in manufacturing * * * and of all articles which were at any time by him manufactured * * * which, from time to time, he has had on hand during the year * * * if he has been engaged in such manufacturing business so long. * * *
> "Sec. 5386. Such average value shall be ascertained by taking the value of all property subject to be listed * * * owned by such manufacturer, on the last business day of each month the manufacturer was engaged in business during the year, adding such monthly values together and dividing the result by the number of months the manufacturer was engaged in such business during the year. * * *
> "Sec. 5387. When a person commences business as a merchant or manufacturer after the day preceding the second Monday of April in any year, * * * such person shall report to the auditor of the county the probable average value of the personal property by him intended to be employed in such business until the day preceding the second Monday of April thereafter."

In connection with these sections, section 5371, G. C., to which sections 10 et seq. of the Parrett-Whittemore law are to be regarded as supplementary and of which they are in a measure amendatory, provides in part as follows:

"Merchants' and manufacturers' stock, and personal property upon farms shall be listed in the township, city or village in which it is situated."

I think it may be argued that merchants and manufacturers are the only persons, excepting pawn brokers, to be regarded as engaged in business within the meaning of section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law. It is clear that the word "business" is not used to designate any occupation other than that of a merchant or manufacturer in the general property tax provision of the General Code as we find it prior to the adoption of the Parrett-Whittemore law.

These kinds of business were the only kinds as to which peculiar rules existed prior to the adoption of the Parrett-Whittemore law. The object of the first sentence of section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law is merely declaratory of the above quoted sentence of section 5371, G. C., in so far as merchants' and manufacturers' stock is concerned. So that when it is provided that property pertaining to a business shall be listed in the township in which the business is carried on, it means merely that property pertaining to the business of a merchant or manufacturer shall be so listed.

It is no answer to this suggestion to point out that the sentence in section 5371, G. C., in which reference is made to merchants' and manufacturers' stock also refers to personal property on farms. So that if section 12 is to be regarded in the broad sense as merely declaratory of the rule of section 5371, G. C., it should extend also to "farming" as a business, because that occupation is also, by inference, mentioned in section 5371. While merchants' and manufacturers' stock and personal property on farms are mentioned together in section 5371, it does not follow that all three occupations or classes of occupations thus denoted constitute "businesses." The other sections above quoted show that the occupation of a merchant and that of a manufacturer do constitute "businesses."

On the whole I think the best general definition which can be given to the term "business" as used in section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law might be phrased as follows:

"A 'business,' within the meaning of section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, is any occupation which deals with property in a commercial way, i. e., with the object of selling or otherwise dealing with the same for gain, but the operations of which with respect to that property commence after it is severed from the realty."

This definition excludes "farming" and all related occupations, such as that of a truck gardener, on the one hand, and all occupations which do not deal with property as such and the activities of which constitute the rendition of services, such as professions, on the other hand. It must be observed that the term as I have defined it is broad enough to include occupations other than those which are technically merchandising or manufacturing, as the other taxation statutes define those terms; but upon reflection I am contented to let the definition rest as I have framed it. Thus, under some circumstances pointed out in a recent opinion to the commission, a broker selling on commission would not be a "merchant" within the meaning of sections 5381, 5382 and 5383, G. C., but he would be engaged in a "business" within the meaning of section 12 of the Parrett-Whittemore law as I have defined that term.

As to the specified cases of nurserymen and florists, it seems to me that in so far as that portion of the activities of either of these classes of persons which deal with personal property, as such, can be separated and distinguished, they are to be regarded as "businesses" and the property pertaining to such separate and distinguishable activities is to be assessed in the manner heretofore dscribed. (See on this point the case of Miller v. Miller, 15 N. P. (n. s.) 33, and the comments of my predecessor thereon in his opinion to the commissioner under date of September 4, 1914—annual report of the attorney-general for that year, volume 2, page 1180).

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, MONROE TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MADISON COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1916.

The Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Monroe township rural school district, Madison county. Ohio, in the sum of $40,000.00, bearing interest at five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, being eighty bonds of $500.00 each, falling due between March 1, 1917, and September 1, 1936, inclusive."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education of Monroe township rural school district of Madison county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, also the bond and coupon form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code of Ohio.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds, drawn in accordance with the form presented, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said Monroe township rural school district of Madison county, Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—NOT LEGAL WHEN UNDER CONTRACT WITH PARENTS TO TRANSPORT CHILDREN TO SCHOOL, TO PAY SUCH PARENTS FOR SUCH TRANSPORTATION WHEN SAME IS NOT FURNISHED BY THEM.

It is not legal for a board of education, under a contract with parents to transport their children to school, as provided by section 7731, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 133, to pay said parents for transporting when the same was not furnished and said children were required to walk. When payments are so made, findings for recovery may be made against said parents for the amount so paid and if the board of education allowed the same with knowledge of the fact that such transportation was not furnished, said findings may be made jointly against said board and said parents.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 25, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 3, 1916, submitting the following inquiries:

> "(1) Is it legal for a board of education to disburse the school funds directly to parents of children entitled in law to transportation service to and from the public schools, notwithstanding that said children, for the whole or a part of the time, were not transported by a conveyance but walked?
> "(2) If our examiner establishes the proportionate number of times that such transportation was effected by the use of the pedal extremities of the pupils instead of by sled or wheeled conveyance, would the law require a proportionate reduction of the contract price for the transportation of said pupils, and would findings for recovery against the members of the board of education obtain if it is found full payment of said contract price had been made although the pupils had walked?"

The section under which your foregoing inquiries arise, being section 7731, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 133, provides as follows:

> "In all rural and village school districts where pupils live more than two miles from the nearest school the board of education shall provide transportation for such pupils to and from such school. The transportation for pupils living less than two miles from the school house, by the most direct public highway shall be optional with the board of education. When transportation of pupils is provided, the conveyance must pass within one-half mile of the respective residences of all pupils, except when such residences are situated more than one-half mile from the public road. When local boards of education neglect or refuse to provide transportation for pupils, the county board of education shall provide such transportation and the cost thereof shall be charged against the local school district."

This law was enacted for the benefit and protection of children coming within its provisions. It was not intended to inure to the financial benefit of the parents of such children. While there is nothing in its provisions prohibiting a board of education from contracting with parents to transport their own children to school, yet such contracts should not be encouraged and should not be made except in cases where it is impracticable to make other arrangements without involving greater expense to the public. Other things being equal, contracts provided for under this section should be made with persons having no parental control over the children to be transported. If this is done it removes all opportunities and inducements to evade the provisions of the contract, either by compelling the children to walk, as in the case stated, or upon some excuse or pretext keeping them out of school entirely when they should be in attendance. However, when such contracts are made the parents stand in relation to the same as entire strangers. They are not permitted to exercise any parental authority over their children in the matter of the performance of such contracts and are required by law to do and perform all the conditions of such contracts on their part to be performed or there is no consideration to support the same. When, therefore, said parents fail to furnish transportation as required by their contract they have no legal claim of compensation therefor and to the extent payment is made to them under such circumstances, for transportation which was not furnished as required by the contract, such payment is an unlawful expenditure of public funds.

Answering your first inquiry specifically, I must advise that it is not legal for a board of education, under a contract with parents to transport their children to school, to pay said parents for such transportation when the same is not furnished by them.

Referring now to your second inquiry: If it is possible to ascertain with reasonable certainty what proportion of the time covered by said contracts transportation was not furnished by said parents, findings should be made against them for the proportionate amount of the consideration provided for by said contract which was paid for the time during which no transportation was furnished. If said payments were made by a board of education with knowledge of the fact that such transportation was not furnished, findings should be made against said board jointly with said parents. If the board, however, made said payments in good faith believing said contracts had been faithfully performed, findings for a recovery as aforesaid should be confined to the parents.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—WHEN TOWNSHIP HALL MAY BE SOLD.

Township trustees may sell a township hall if such hall is not needed for township purposes, the sale to be made in the manner provided by section 3281, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

HON. IRVING CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of January 29, 1916, in which you state that one of the townships of Huron county owns a township hall, which township hall consists of the second story of a building, the first story of which is owned by two other persons. The use of the township hall has been forbidden unless extensive improvements are made and the township trustees desire to sell the hall and you inquire as to their authority so to do.

This matter is regulated by section 3281, G. C., which provides in part as follows:

> "When the township has real estate or buildings which it does not need, for township purposes, the trustees may sell and convey any such real estate or buildings. Such sale must be by public auction and upon thirty days' notice thereof in a newspaper published, or of general circulation in such township."

Under the above quoted provision the township trustees of the township in question may sell the township hall, if such hall is not needed for township purposes, the sale to be made in the manner pointed out in the section in question.

This opinion is based on the assumption that the township in question has a fee simple title to the property, and that the deed to the township does not contain a clause providing that the property shall revert to the grantor in case it is not used for township purposes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO DEED REAL ESTATE WITHOUT LEGISLATIVE CONSENT.

The board of administration is without authority to deed real estate belonging to the state without legislative consent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of December 30, 1915, you wrote me for an opinion as to the power in your board to again modify the contract originally made between the board of trustees of the Massillon State Hospital (of which your board is the successor) and The Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company, in regard to the building and operating of a spur track between the main line of said railroad company and the Massillon State Hospital, and I advised your board under date of January 21, 1916, that there was ample authority in your board to modify the contract, if your board should deem it advisable for the best interests of the state to do so.

Under date of February 11, 1916, you submit for my consideration a form of contract to be signed by the receiver of The Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company, as such, and your board, which contract is to be a modification of the former contract as modified, and request me to advise you whether, in my opinion, it is a fair one for the state.

When I was considering the matter in my former opinion of January 21, 1916, I carefully examined the contract entered into by the trustees of the Massillon State Hospital with The Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company under date of September 24, 1904, and noted that it was the duty of the trustees of the Massillon State Hospital to procure the necessary right-of-way and do deed the same to the railroad company by good and sufficient warranty deed, and the second clause of said contract provided that when such right-of-way shall have been so deeded the railroad company should proceed to prepare and construct a suitable grade, etc.

While I noted that in your letter of December 30, 1915, you stated that the present receiver suggests

> "in order to clean the matter up for all time to come, that they take over the track and right-of-way, and agree to keep up repairs and deliver all our freight at a switching rate of $1.50 per car" my attention was not particularly drawn to the fact that the title to the right-of-way still remained in the state and the reason that my attention was not so drawn was because the contract of September 24, 1904, specifically stated that the right-of-way should be first deeded before the road-bed and track were constructed, and I assumed, therefore, that the right-of-way acquired by the state had long since been deeded to the railroad company, for the reason that the railroad company was not to construct anything until it had received a deed to the right-of-way.

In the contract which you submit for my advice as to its fairness it is stated as one of the preambles that the trustees of the Massillon State Hospital have "failed or neglected to deed to said railroad company the right-of-way," and the first clause of the agreement provides that your board "will forthwith convey or cause to be conveyed to the first party (the receiver), or to The Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad Company, the right-of-way as described and provided for in section 1 of said contract of September 24, 1904."

As stated to you in my opinion of January 21, 1916, the only authority for the building of this track that I have been able to find is the appropriation found in 97 Ohio Laws, page 588, wherein there was appropriated the sum of $25,000 to the Massillon State Hospital for "railroad switch," and I am totally unable to find any authority of law which would authorize your board to make a deed to the railroad company for the right-of-way purchased from state funds, and until such authority is acquired from the legislature there would be no such authority. Consequently, the first clause of the contract could not be carried out until legislative authority has been obtained.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF THE UNDERWRITERS LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 18, 1916, enclosing proposed articles of incorporation of The Underwriters Life Insurance Company, with attached check for one hundred dollars, and requesting my approval thereof as required by section 9341 of the General Code.

I have examined said proposed articles of incorporation, and herewith return the same with my certificate of approval endorsed thereon.

I return the check for one hundred dollars herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY TREASURER—COURT COSTS—FOR COLLECTION OF PERSONAL TAXES WHEN JUDGMENT SECURED AND EXECUTION IS ISSUED, BUT NO PROPERTY FOUND—ALLOWANCE MUST BE MADE BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO PAY SUCH COSTS.

Court costs adjudged against a county treasurer in a suit instituted by him for the collection of personal taxes as provided by section 5697, G. C., must be presented to the county commissioners for allowance, and when allowed by them may be paid from the county treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your favor of February 11, 1916, submitting the following inquiry:

> "A county treasurer brings suit for the collection of delinquent personal tax under the provisions of section 5697, General Code. He secures a judgment for the tax, but when an execution is issued same is returned not satisfied because of nothing to levy upon. How is the justice of the peace and constable to be paid their fees and costs in a case of this kind? Is the county liable for the costs in this case; or, if the county is not liable, who shall pay these costs?"

The section to which you refer provides in part as follows:

> "When personal taxes stand charged against a person, and are not paid within the time prescribed by law for the payment of such taxes, the treasurer of such county, in addition to any other remedy provided by law for the collection of personal taxes, shall enforce the collection thereof by a civil action in the name of such treasurer against such person for the recovery of such unpaid taxes."

While the foregoing provisions of said section in respect to the collection of personal taxes seem to be mandatory, I am not prepared to say that they make it the imperative duty of the county treasurer to institute suit in every instance where personal taxes are not paid. In very many instances it is well known that any attempt to collect taxes in this way would be futile because no property could be found upon which to levy. It would, therefore, seem to be more in keeping with sound business methods to interpret this statute to mean that the treasurer should exercise some judgment and discretion in these matters, and when it is apparent that no judgment when recovered may be collected, suit should not be instituted.

This conclusion is further strengthened by the fact that when the delinquent has goods and chattels within the county the treasurer may distrain the same as provided by section 2658, G. C., and thus avoid any delay and the uncertainty of litigation. The proceedings thus authorized by said section 2658, are intended to and do furnish a complete and expeditious method of collecting delinquent personal taxes, and unless there are special circumstances in a case they should be followed by the treasurer in preference to the suit provided by the statute under consideration. When, however, the treasurer in good faith determines it to be his duty to institute suit under the provisions of said section 5697, the authority so to do conferred upon him therein carries with it the implied power to incur all legal and necessary expenses connected with such suit. This necessarily includes a liability for costs if the suit, when instituted, should be determined adversely to the claim of the treasurer. The costs of the case under such circumstances would necessarily be adjudged against the treasurer, and would therefore certainly become a claim against the county which it would be the duty of the county commissioners to allow and order paid from the county treasury. The same rule would apply in the cases submitted in your inquiry if proper care was exercised by the treasurer in instituting suits in said cases. If the treasurer acted in good faith he should be protected in the same manner as he would be protected if from no fault of his the judgment of the court should be adverse to the claim of the county as in the cases first specified.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question, that in the cases named in your inquiry if the treasurer acted in good faith the fees and costs in the cases specified are claims against the county which should be presented to the county commissioners for allowance as required by the provisions of section 2460, G. C., and when allowed by them may be paid from the county treasury.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of a letter from Hon. Frank W. Miller, your predecessor in office, under date of February 10, 1916, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "A part of Somerford township, Madison county, Ohio, was transferred to Monroe township rural school district in Madison county. This section of Somerford township petitioned to be transferred to Mechanicsburg village school district of Champaign county, Ohio. The board of education of Madison county ignored said petition on a technicality.
> "Subsequently Monroe township rural school district voted on centralization and bond issue, both of which carried.
> "Every elector in said section of Somerford township now petitions the board of education of Madison county to be transferred to Champaign county school district.
> "Query: Can the board of education of Madison county legally make said transfer after a vote for centralization and bond issue carried?"

I am in receipt of a letter from Hon. C. C. Crabbe, prosecuting attorney of Madison county, under date of February 14th, submitting the same inquiry presented by Mr. Miller. Mr. Crabbe states that the question of centralizing the schools of said Monroe township rural school district, and of issuing bonds to provide funds to erect the necessary buildings for said purpose, was submitted to the electors of said district on the 24th of January, 1916, the vote being 169 for and 16 against; that a few months prior to said election the county board of education had attached certain territory from the Somerford township rural school district to the Monroe township rural school district, and that said territory was a part of said Monroe township rural school district at the time of said election; that a short time before the election a petition was filed with the county board, asking said board to transfer a part of the territory that had been recently added to the Monroe township rural school district, Madison county, Ohio, to Champaign county; that no action was taken on said petition, and that said petitioners are now insisting that said territory be transferred to said Champaign county school district.

I have just been informed, however, by Mr. Crabbe, that the aforesaid petition prayed for the transfer of said territory therein described from said Somerford township rural school district to the said Mechanicsburg village school district.

It will be observed that Mr. Crabbe's statement of facts in connection with said inquiry is practically the same as the statement made by Mr. Miller.

The authority of the board of education of Madison county school district to transfer a part of the Somerford township rural school district to Monroe township rural school district in said county school district is found in section 4692, G. C., 106 O. L., 397, which provides in part as follows:

> "The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer."

After this transfer was made and after the board of education of said Monroe township rural school district determined to submit to the electors of said district, as enlarged by the addition of the territory transferred to said district by said county board of education, the question of centralization, but after the election was held, it appears that the electors of a part of the territory, transferred as aforesaid, petitioned said county board of education to transfer said part of said territory to the Mechanicsburg village school district located in Champaign county school district.

This petition was filed with said board of education under section 4696, G. C., 106 O. L., 397, which provides as follows:

"A county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district, or to another county school district, provided at least fifty per centum of the electors of the territory to be transferred petition for such transfer. Provided, however, that if at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer, the county board of education shall make such transfer. No such transfer shall be in effect until the county board of education and the board of education to which the territory is to be transferred, each pass resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, and until an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness be decided upon by the boards of education acting in the transfer; also a map shall be filed with the auditor or auditors of the county or counties affected by such transfer."

I am informed by Mr. Crabbe that the Mechanicsburg village school district is not exempt from county supervision, and is a part of Champaign county school district and that, while the aforesaid petition was signed by at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of said territory, petitioning for such transfer, the board of education of Madison county school district refused to act on said petition on the ground that it was without authority, under the above provision of section 4696, G. C., as amended, to proceed under said provision of said statute to take the necessary steps in co-operation with the board of education of said Mechanicsburg village school district to effect the transfer prayed for in said petition.

While it is clear that the board of education of Mechanicsburg village school district was without authority, under the provisions of said section 4696, G. C., as amended, to act on the transfer proposed in said petition, I am of the opinion that said transfer might have been effected under said provisions of said statute by the boards of education of the respective county school districts, above referred to; first, taking the necessary steps under said provisions of said statute to transfer the territory in question from said Somerford township rural school district to the Champaign county school district, and the board of education of said Champaign county school district could then have annexed said territory as a part of said Champaign county school district to the Mechanicsburg village school district, under authority of the provisions of section 4692, G. C., as above quoted.

However, in order to effect said transfer, it would have been necessary (1), that the board of education of Madison county school district should have secured the consent of the board of education of Champaign county school district to the transfer of the territory in question, and for this purpose it would have been necessary for each of said boards to pass a resolution indicating the action taken and definitely describing the territory to be transferred, the passage of such resolution requiring a majority vote of the full membership of each board by yea and nay vote, entered on the records of such boards; (2) that a map showing the boundaries of the territory transferred should have been placed upon the records of said boards, and that copies of said resolutions, certified to by the president and clerk of each board, together with a copy of said map, should have been filed with the auditors of said counties; (3) that at the time of said transfer the boards of education of said county school districts should have agreed upon an equitable division of funds or indebtedness of the local district from which said territory was to be transferred.

No such action was taken. While it appears that at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors in said territory petitioned for said transfer, and, assuming that said petition gave said county board of education jurisdiction to act under said section 4696, G. C., it might be argued that the provision of said section, that "if at least seventy-five per cent. of the electors of the territory petition for such transfer, the county board of education shall make such transfer" is mandatory. I have already held in opinion No. 903 of this department, rendered to Hon. Milton Haines, prosecuting attorney of Union county, under date of October 8, 1915, that in view of the further provision of said section 4696, G. C., as amended, that "no such transfer shall be in effect until the county board of education and the board of education, to which the territory is to be transferred, each pass resolutions by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, and until an equitable division of the funds or indebtedness be decided upon by the board of education, acting in the transfer," said provision is directory rather than mandatory. It follows that said county boards of education could not have been compelled to act on said petition, and could not now be compelled to act on the petition filed with the board of education of Madison county school district since the question of centralization was submitted to the electors of said Monroe township rural school district, as enlarged by the aforesaid transfer of territory.

The board of education of said Monroe township rural school district, having submitted to the electors of said district the proposition to centralize the schools of said district, under authority of section 4626, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 139, and at the same election the proposition to issue bonds under authority of section 7625, G. C., for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to erect a suitable building or buildings on the site which I am informed has been donated for this purpose by one of the residents of said district, and 169 of the 185 electors voting on said proposition having voted in favor of the same, Mr. Miller inquires whether the board of education of Madison county school district can legally make the aforesaid transfer of territory to the Champaign county school district.

I am further informed by Mr. Crabbe that the board of education of Monroe township rural school district, acting in pursuance of the authority conferred upon it by the vote of the electors of said district, and in compliance with the requirements of said sections 4726 and 7625 of the General Code, have, by resolution, accepted the site donated as aforesaid, on which to erect the necessary buildings for the aforesaid purpose, and are proceeding to take the necessary steps to issue the bonds of said district to provide the necessary funds for the erection of said buildings, and that said bonds have been presented to the Industrial Commission of Ohio in compliance with the requirement of section 1465-58, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 76.

While it is true that the centralization of the schools of said district is not yet completed, and cannot be until the necessary buildings will have been constructed and ready for use, inasmuch as the electors of said district, as enlarged, have decisively expressed themselves in favor of centralization, and inasmuch as the board of education of said district has proceeded with diligence to carry out the will of said electors, and to comply with the requirements of sections 4726 and 7625 of the General Code, I am of the opinion that said schools may be considered as centralized within the meaning of section 4727, G. C., as amended, 104 O. L., 139, which provides in part that "when the schools of a rural school district have been centralized, such centralization shall not be discontinued within three years and then only by petition and election, as provided in said section 4726."

In support of this conclusion, I call your attention to the holding of the court in the case of Fulks et al., v. Wright, 72 O. S., 547. From the statement of facts in that case it appears that the board of education of Washington township, Coshocton county, at a regular meeting of the board, held January 23, 1905, decided by resolution to submit to the electors of said township at an election to be held February 14, 1905, the question of centralization of the schools of said township, under section 3927-2, R. S., which provided that:

> "A township board of education may submit the question of centralization, and upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such township district must submit such question to a vote of the qualified electors of such township district."

Notice was given as provided by law, and such election was duly held on said February 14th, and at a meeting of the board held on February 27, 1905, the board canvassed the vote and entered upon its record the result, which was in favor of such election, with a vote of 76 for and 63 against. On the 13th day of February, 1905, the day preceding the day said election was held, the defendants in error, as petitioners, filed their petition in the probate court of Coshocton county for the establishment of a special school district, comprising, with other territory, about one-fourth of Washington township within the boundaries of said district. The plaintiffs in error, male electors residing in Washington township, on March 15th, filed in said probate court a remonstrance against including part of Washington township in said special school district. A hearing was had in said court, and on March 22, 1905, the probate judge ordered that the district, as petitioned for, be established.

The remonstrators prosecuted error in the court of common pleas where the order of the probate judge was reversed, and on error in the circuit court the judgment of the common pleas court was reversed, and the order of the probate judge was affirmed, and error was prosecuted to the supreme court by said remonstrators. It will be observed that the provision of section 3927-2, R. S., was practically the same as the provision now found in the first part of section 4626, G. C. Said section 3927-2, R. S., contained the further provision that:

> "When the schools of a township have been centralized, such centralization shall not be discontinued within three years thereafter, and then only by petition and election as required herein."

This latter provision of said section of the Revised Statutes is almost identically the same as the provision of section 4727 of the General Code, as above quoted. The court held that, proceedings having been commenced for the centralization of the schools of the township prior to the filing of the petition in the probate court for the establishment of the special school district, the territory of Washington township, pending those proceedings, was not subject to be taken for a special school district, and the probate judge was without jurisdiction to include in the special school district any part of the territory of said Washington township school district.

While it may be argued that the authority of the county boards of education, under provision of said section 4696, G. C., as amended, to act on the aforesaid petition, filed with the board of education of Madison county school district since the commencement of the proceedings in Monroe township rural school district to centralize the schools of said district, is in no way limited by the provisions of section 4726, G. C., as amended, and that said county boards, in the exercise of their discretion, may ignore the fact that said proceedings have been commenced and are being prosecuted under provisions of said sections 4726 and 7625, G. C., and may proceed to exercise the authority conferred upon them by the provisions of said section 4696, G. C., I think such action on the part of said county boards of education at this time would be clearly in conflict with the holding of the court in the case of Fulks et al., v. Wright, supra.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to Mr. Miller's question, that the boards of education of Madison and Champaign county school districts are without authority to act, under provision of said section 4696, G. C., as amended, on said petition filed with said board of education of said Madison county school district since the commencement of the aforesaid centralization proceedings.

A copy of this opinion will be sent to Mr. Crabbe.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

GARNISHMENT—IN AN ACTION TO COLLECT DEBT FROM A STATE EMPLOYE—STATE MAY NOT BE MADE A GARNISHEE.

The state may not be made a garnishee in an action before a justice of the peace against an employe of the state for the purpose of subjecting money owing by the state to the employe to the payment of a judgment against the employe.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In a communication under date of February 11, 1916, Hon. T. E. Davey, of your board, requests my opinion upon the legality of making the state a garnishee in an action before a justice of the peace against a state employe for the collection of a debt of such employe.

Your inquiry and the proceedings in garnishment assume that the state is or may be indebted to the employe, the defendant in an action before a justice of the peace. Garnishment before justices of the peace is an ancillary statutory proceeding in actions for the recovery of money governed by the provisions of sections 10265, G. C., et seq. This being a purely statutory proceeding, it must be strictly pursued. Said section 10265, G. C., provides as follows:

> "When the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, makes oath in writing that he has good reason to believe, and does believe, that any person, partnership or corporation in the affidavit named, has property of the defendant in his possession, describing it, if the officer cannot get possession of such property, he shall leave with such garnishee a copy of the order of attachment, with a written notice that he appear before the justice, at the return of the order and answer as provided in this chapter."

Section 10266, G. C., makes provision for the service of the order and notice upon persons, partnerships and corporations, but no provision is made for the service of such order and notice upon the state. Nor is there found any authority in law for serving such notice and order upon any officer or agent of the state. It will be further noted that section 10265, supra, includes within its terms only persons, partnerships and corporations.

By section 10267, G. C., the garnishee is required to appear before the justice and disclose the amount, if any, owing by the garnishee to the defendant in the action, whether due or not. If the garnishee (that is to say the assumed debtor of the defendant) in the action does not appear, it is provided by section 10274, G. C., that the justice may proceed against him for contempt. If the garnishee appears, fails to appear, or fails to comply with the order of the justice to deliver property or to pay money owing to the defendant into court, the plaintiff may proceed against him in an action as in other cases (section 10276, G. C.). From this it appears that no purpose can be served by the service of the notice, order and answer of the garnishee, except the same be made the foundation of the order for the payment of money, or the delivery of property owing or belonging to the defendant, into court.

It would not be contended that the state would be subject to punishment by a justice of the peace for failure to appear, as for contempt, and no remedy for failure or refusal to obey an order to pay any money or deliver property may be had except by action against the garnishee in his own name. That is to say, the enforcement of any order against the garnishee would necessitate bringing a suit.

It is well settled in law that prior to the amendment of section 16 of article I of the constitution, September, 1912, the state could not be sued without its consent.

Cunningham v. Railroad Co., 109 U. S., 446, 27 L. Ed., 992.
State ex rel. v. Bd. of Public Works, 36 O. S., 409.
Ley v. Kirtley, 5 N. P. (n. s.), 529.
Meirs v. Turnpike Co., 11 Ohio, 273.

It is said in Cunningham v. Railroad Co., supra, that:

"Whenever it can be clearly seen that the state is an indispensable party to enable the court, according to the rules which govern its procedure, to grant the relief sought, it will refuse to take jurisdiction."

The above rule applies where the state is not named as a party, if the state is the real party in interest.

In the case of Ley v. Kirtley, the court said:

"The approved rule now appears to be that though the United States or a state is not named as a defendant, but is the real party against which relief is asked and upon whom the judgment will operate, that the suit or action is really against the government, and the same cannot be maintained without its consent."

Re Ayers, 123 U. S., 443, 31 L. Ed., 216.

Fitts v. McGee, 172 U. S., 516, 43 L. Ed., 535.
Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S., 373, 46 L. Ed., 954.
Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S., 59, 50 L. Ed., 934.

It is held in Secor v. Witter, 39 O. S., 218, that a garnishee is not a party to the original action, but is the party defendant in an action under section 10276, G. C., upon an order to pay money or deliver property into court. Any order of attachment against an officer or agent of the state in such action as is here under consideration could not in effect be otherwise than an action against the state. The state would, of necessity, be the real party against which any judgment therein would operate. Hence the court would be without jurisdiction in such action. It therefore follows that though an officer or agent of the state answer to an order of attachment, no action could be maintained upon an order to pay into court, founded upon such answer, and the same would therefore be unenforcible. The rule that the state cannot be sued without its consent is doubtless broader in its import and operation than the language in which it is stated might at first suggest. It is conceived that the meaning of this rule is that the state is not in any way subject to the jurisdiction or authority of the courts, and hence a justice's court is without power to serve notice or order of attachment upon an officer or agent of the state, as such, in a proceeding where the real party sought to be affected thereby is the state.

Although section 16 of article I of the constitution of this state, was amended September, 1912, to provide that:

> "Suits may be brought against the state, in such courts and in such manner, as may be provided by law."

the same does not operate to in any way modify the rules applicable to actions against the state above referred to. This provision of the constitution is not self executing, and the legislature of the state has not as yet seen fit to make statutory provision for the manner in which suits may be brought against the state, nor to designate courts in which such actions may be maintained.

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your inquiry, that neither the state nor any officer or agent thereof, as such, may be made a garnishee in an action before a justice of the peace against an employe of the state wherein it is sought to subject money or credits owing by the state to such employe to the payment of such judgment as may be recovered against the employe in such action.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—TAX LIEN ON REAL PROPERTY OF PUBLIC UTILITY ACCRUES SECOND MONDAY IN APRIL—DATE PERSONAL PROPERTY OF SAID PUBLIC UTILITY BECOMES LIABLE IS FIRST DAY OF JANUARY OF SAID YEAR.

By provision of section 5671, G. C., the day when the tax lien on the real property, of a public utility, engaged in the business of supplying electricity for light, heat and power purposes to consumers within this state, accrues for any year, is the day preceding the second Monday in April of said year.

The date as of which the owner of the personal property of said public utility becomes liable for the taxes on said personal property for any year is the first day of January of said year.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

HON. HENRY W. CHERRINGTON, Prosecuting Attorney, Gallipolis, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of January 13, 1916, you submit the following facts for my consideration:

> "On January 15, 1914, all of the property of The Gallipolis Gas and Coke Company, of Gallipolis, Ohio, was sold by the sheriff of this county on foreclosure to W. R. Tanner, trustee. On February 13, 1914, Tanner, trustee, sold this property to one L. B. Harrington. * * * The property consisted of real estate on which was situated the power plant of the company; a franchise to erect poles and wires on the streets of the city of Gallipolis, and poles and wires, etc., located on the streets of the city of Gallipolis. The taxes have gone delinquent. * * * The valuation of this property was fixed in the first instance for taxation by the tax commission of Ohio, it being a public utility corporation."

Upon the facts as above stated, you ask to be advised as to who is liable for the taxes for the year 1914, upon the property formerly owned by The Gallipolis Gas and Coke Company.

In answering your question it is necessary to determine the day in said year as of which the property referred to in your inquiry, or the owner thereof, became liable for the taxes for said year.

Section 6 of the Warnes law (section 5584, G. C. as originally enacted by the general assembly of Ohio on April 18, 1913, 103 O. L., 788, provided as follows:

> "Whenever any property is by any existing provision of law required to be listed or returned for taxation at any time between the second Monday of April and the third Monday of May, in any year, such property shall be listed or returned between the first Monday of February and the first Monday of June, annually; whenever any property is by any existing provision of law required to be valued as of the day preceding the second Monday of April, in any year, such property shall be valued as of the day preceding the first Monday of February, annually; and whenever the liability of any person or of any property to taxation is by an existing provision of law to be determined by reference to the day preceding the second Monday of April, said liability shall be determined by reference to the day preceding the first Monday of February; provided, that the provisions of this section shall not apply in any case where property is by any existing provision of law required to be returned for taxation, or to be valued by, the tax commission of Ohio; nor in any case where the liability of any person or of any property to taxation is by any existing provision of law required to be originally determined by the tax commission."

This section of said law was amended in 104 O. L., 253, and as amended became effective June 9, 1914. Said section as amended provided as follows:

"Whenever any property is by any existing provision of law required to be listed or returned for taxation at any time between the second Monday of April and the third Monday of May, in any year, such property shall be listed or returned between the first Monday of April and the first Monday of June, annually; whenever any property is by any existing provision of law required to be valued as of the day preceding the second Monday of April, in any year, such property shall be valued as of the day preceding the first Monday of April, annually; and whenever the liability of any person or of any property to taxation is by any existing provision of law to be determined by reference to the day preceding the second Monday of April, said liability shall be determined by reference to the day preceding the first Monday of April; provided, that the provisions of this section shall not apply in any case where property is by any existing provision of law required to be returned for taxation to, or to be valued by, the tax commission of Ohio; nor in any case where the liability of any person or of any property to taxation is by any existing provision of law required to be originally determined by the tax commission."

It will be observed that the provisions of said section, fixing the time, generally speaking, when property should be listed or returned, and when liability should attach, as originally enacted or as changed by the amendment, are immaterial for the purpose of determining the answer to your question, for the reason that from your statement of facts it appears that the valuation of the property referred to in your inquiry was fixed in the first instance by the state tax commission for taxation, and the latter part of said section, as originally enacted, as well as in the amended form, provided that the provisions of said section should not apply in any case where property was by any existing provision of law required to be returned for taxation or to be valued by the tax commission of Ohio; or in any case where the liability of any person or any property to taxation was, by any existing provision of law, so required to be originally determined by the tax commission.

The day as of which the property of said public utility, or the owner thereof, became liable for the said year of 1914, must, therefore, be determined by reference to the provisions of other statutes then in force and fixing said liability.

Section 5671, G. C., which has been in force since 1862, reads as follows:

"The lien of the state for taxes levied for all purposes, in each year, shall attach to all real property subject to such taxes on the day preceding the second Monday of April, annually, and continue until such taxes, with any penalties accruing thereon, are paid. All personal property subject to taxation shall be liable to be seized and sold for taxes. The personal property of a deceased person shall be liable in the hands of an executor or administrator, for any tax due on it from the testator or intestate."

As stated in opinion No. 71 of this department, rendered to the senate of the 81st general assembly under date of February 8, 1915, a copy of which was enclosed to you, this is the only statute that I have been able to find which fixes the time for the attaching of a lien for taxes. A distinction was made in said opinion between the word "lien" as used in said section 5671, G. C., and the word "liability" as used in section 5584, G. C., as above quoted. It was observed in said opinion that "generally speaking, all property real and personal is liable for taxation, but a lien attaches only to real property that is subject (liable) to taxes." It was further observed that "while the term 'lien' may include the term 'liability,' the term 'liability' by no means necessarily includes the term 'lien'."

Inasmuch as the third clause of section 5584, G. C., as above quoted, provided the general rule for liability of any person or of any property, and did not distinguish between property and persons, while on the other hand section 5671, G. C., clearly distinguishes between a lien upon real estate and the liability of personal property, subject to taxation, to be seized and sold, under familiar rules of statutory construction, I held that the two statutes were reconcilable, and that the day when the tax lien on real property would accrue for the year 1915 would be the day preceding the second Monday in April of said year, under the provisions of section 5671, G. C.

In keeping with said opinion, I now hold that, generally speaking, the day when the tax lien on real property accrued for the year 1914 was the day preceding the second Monday of April of said year. It follows that unless the provision of some other statute fixed the day as of which the tax lien on the real property referred to in your inquiry would accrue for said year 1914, said day would be the day preceding the second Monday of April of said year.

From your statement of facts, it appears that The Gallipolis Gas and Coke Company was a public utility as defined by sections 5415 and 5416, G. C., and that the valuation of its property was fixed in the first instance by the state tax commission. It further appears that said company owned only such real property as was necessary for the daily operations of said public utility.

Section 5419, G. C., provides that:

"The property owned or operated by a public utility, required to make return to the commission of its property to be assessed for taxation by the commission, shall be deemed and held to include such utility's plant or plants, and all real estate necessary to the daily operations of the public utility and all other property, moneys and credits owned or operated, or both, by it wholly or in part within this state, used in connection with or as incidental to the operation of the public utility, whether the same be held in common or by the individuals operating such public utility. * * *"

Said section further provides that

"in the case of incorporated companies, all the real estate, personal property, moneys and credits owned and held by such corporation within this state in the exercise of its corporate powers, or as incidental thereto, whether such property, or any portion thereof, is used in connection with such public utility business or not, shall be conclusively deemed and held to be the property of such public utility."

Sections 5420 and 5421, of the General Code, make it the duty of each public utility, except telegraph and telephone companies, to make and deliver to the tax commission of Ohio, on or before the first day of March of each year, in such form as the commission may prescribe, a sworn statement with respect to such utility's plant or plants and all property owned or operated, or both, by it wholly or in part within this state.

Section 5422, G. C., provides that said statement shall contain:

"* * * (8) A detailed statement of the real estate owned by the company in this state, where situated, and the value thereof as assessed for taxation, making separate statements of that part used in connection with the daily operations of the company, and that part used otherwise, if any such there be.

"(9) An inventory of the personal property, including moneys, investments and credits, owned by the company, in this state, on the first day of the month of January in which the state was made, where situated, and the value thereof, making separate statements of that part used in connection with the daily operations of the company, and that part used otherwise if any such there be."

Section 5425, G. C., provides that the property of such public utilities to be so assessed by the commission shall be all the property thereof, as defined in section 5419, G. C. This includes all the property of The Gallipolis Gas and Coke Company referred to in your inquiry.

Section 5428, G. C., provides:

"The commission shall deduct from the total value of the property of each of such public utilities in this state, as assessed by it, the value of the real property owned by such public utilities, if any there be, as otherwise assessed for taxation in this state, and shall justly and equitably equalize the relative value thereof."

Section 5446, G. C., requires the tax commission to apportion the value of the property of all public utilities, other than street, suburban or interurban railroad companies, as assessed by said commission, in the manner provided in said section. Subdivision (a) of said section provides that when all the property of such public utility is located within the limits of a county, the assessed value thereof shall be apportioned by the commission between the several taxing districts therein, in the proportion which the property located within the taxing district in question bears to the entire value of the property of such public utility, as ascertained and valued by the tax commission, so that, to each taxing district there shall be apportioned such part of such valuation as will fairly equalize the relative value of the property therein located, to the whole value thereof.

Section 5447, G. C., provides:

"On the second Monday of July, the commission shall certify such apportionment to the auditor of each county in which any of the property of the public utility is located."

I understand from your statement of facts that all of the property of the public utility referred to in your inquiry is located within Gallia county. The above provisions of subdivision (a) of section 5446, G. C., would, therefore, apply in the apportionment of the value of said property if the same is located in more than one taxing district in said county.

Section 5448, G. C., provides:

> "The county auditor shall place the apportioned value on the tax list and duplicate, and taxes shall be levied and collected thereon, in the same manner and at the same rate, as other personal property in the taxing district in question."

While under the provision of section 5425, G. C., as above quoted, the tax commision was charged with the duty of assessing all of the property of the public utility in question, as defined in section 5419, G. C., and this included said public utility's plant and all real estate owned by it and necessary to its daily operation, as well as all other property, moneys and credits owned or operated, or both, by it wholly or in part within this state, used in connection with or as incidental to its operation, whether the same was held in common or by the individuals operating such public utility, section 5428, G. C., made it the duty of the tax commission to deduct from the total value of the property of said public utility, as assessed by it, the value of the real property owned by said public utility and assessed for taxation by the legal authorities of the taxing district or taxing districts in which said real property is located.

This deduction having been made, and the fair valuation of the remainder of said property having been determined and apportioned by the tax commission, in compliance with the provision of subdivision (a) of section 5446, G. C., and having been certified to the auditor of Gallia county in compliance with the requirement of section 5447, G. C., it was the duty of said county auditor to place said valuation, as apportioned by said tax commission, on the tax list and duplicate of the district or districts in which said property was located, and taxes should have been levied and collected on said property "in the same manner and at the same rate as other personal property" in said taxing district or districts.

Upon a careful examination of all the statutes governing the taxing of the property of public utilities, I find no provision which in any way excepts the real property of the public utility in question from the operation of the provisions of section 5671, G. C. By the plain terms of section 5428, G. C., the tax commission is required to deduct from the total value of the property of said public utility, as assessed by it, the value of the real property owned by said public utility and assessed for taxation by the local authorities of the county in which such real property is located. I am of the opinion, therefore, that under the provisions of said section 5671, G. C., the day when the tax lien on the real property referred to in your inquiry accrued for the year 1914, was the day preceding the second Monday in April of said year.

Said taxes not having been paid and being delinquent, it follows that said lien may be enforced and said taxes on said real property may be collected by your county treasurer in the manner authorized by law for their collection.

Coming now to a consideration of the question as to the date as of which the owner of the personal property of said public utility became liable for the taxes on said personal property for said year 1914, consideration must be given to the provisions of sections 5420 and 5421 of the General Code, taken in connection with the provisions of subdivision 9 of section 5422, G. C., as above quoted.

From an examination of these provisions of the statutes, it is evident that inasmuch as the sworn statement which the public utility in question was required to file with the tax commission on or before the first day of March of said year 1914, showed an inventory of the personal property, including moneys, investments and credits owned by said The Gallipolis Gas and Coke Company, on the 1st day of January of said year, and upon this information taken in connection with the other information contained in said statement and furnished by said company in compliance with the other provisions of said section 5422, G. C., the tax commission determined the total value of all the property of said public utility, the value of the property remaining after the deduction by the tax commission of the value of the real estate of said public utility in compliance with the requirement of said section 5428, G. C., was the value of the personal property owned by said company on the 1st day of January of said year, and this was the value certified by the tax commission to the auditor of Gallia county in compliance with the requirement of section 5447, G. C.

The personal property of said public utility, as well as the ownership thereof, must have been determined by the tax commission as of said date of January 1, 1914, and so certified to said county auditor. I am of the opinion therefore that the date as of which the owner of said personal property was liable for the taxes on said personal property for said year 1914, was the 1st day of January of said year.

No provision of the statutes makes said taxes on said personal property a lien on the property of said public utility, and I am of the opinion that the said L. B. Harrington, who purchased said property on February 13, 1914, and who has been the owner of said property since said date, cannot be required to pay said personal property taxes in the absence of an agreement to that effect.

It follows that unless the Gallipolis Gas and Coke Company, or its successors or assigns, can be required to pay said personal property taxes, your county treasurer has no other recourse in law for their collection.

In reaching this conclusion I am not unmindful of the provisions of section 5506, G. C. This section provides as follows:

> "The fees, taxes and penalties, required to be paid by this act, shall be the first and best lien on all property of the public utility or corporation, whether such property is employed by the public utility or corporation in the prosecution of its business, or is in the hands of an assignee, trustee or receiver for the benefit of the creditors and stockholders thereof."

Upon an examination of the various sections of the act, mentioned in said section 5506, G. C., as found in 102 O. L., 224-262, it will be observed that the taxes therein referred to are the excise and franchise taxes provided for in said act. The provisions of said section 5506, G. C., have therefore no application to the taxes on the personal property of the public utility referred to in your inquiry.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE FOR BALLVILLE TOWNSHIP ROAD DISTRICT, BALLVILLE TOWNSHIP, SANDUSKY COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 28, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Ballville township road district, Ballville township, Sandusky county, Ohio, to the amount of $20,000.00 for improving the public ways of said Ballville township road district, being forty bonds of $500.00 each, dated March 1, 1916, and payable at stated periods from March 15, 1928, to September 15, 1934, inclusive."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the township trustees of Ballville township, Sandusky county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above bonds: also, the bond and coupon form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the General Code.

I am therefore of the opinion that said bonds, drawn in accordance with the form presented, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said township road district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CORPORATION—MAY REDUCE ITS CAPITAL STOCK WITHOUT PROPORTIONATELY REDUCING PAR VALUE OF ALL ITS SHARES OF CAPITAL STOCK—THE TIMKEN-DETROIT AXLE COMPANY—SECTION 8700, G. C., INTERPRETED.

A corporation may reduce its capital stock without proportionately reducing the par value of all its shares of capital stock, section 8700, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 29, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 25, 1916, in which you request my opinion as follows:

"We are herewith enclosing for your opinion a certificate of decrease of capital stock of "The Timken-Detroit Axle Company," which was presented to this department by the firm of Lynch, Day and Fimple, attorneys at law, Canton, Ohio, for filing and recording.

"We have refused to file the said certificate for the reason that under a former opinion of yours it was held that before a certificate of reduction of capital stock can be filed, the nominal value of the shares thereof must be reduced accordingly.

"We would like an early opinion on the question as to whether or not the capital stock of a corporation can be reduced without the par value of the shares thereof being reduced accordingly."

Your letter directly presents the question: "Must a corporation reduce the nominal value of all its shares into which its capital stock is divided in order to secure a reduction of its capital stock, or may it accomplish the same result by reducing the number of its shares?"

In my opinion to you under date of November 11, 1915, referred to in your letter, the certificate of stock reduction presented to you for record, and upon which I advised you, disclosed upon its face that the corporation, in order to secure a reduction of its capital stock, was buying in some of its outstanding common stock and of necessity thereby impairing its assets. That fact alone was sufficient to justify the conclusion I then expressed to you, and the question you now present was not given the careful and full consideration warranted by its importance, but was answered in view of the disclosure in the certificate of decrease above mentioned, and in accordance with the ruling of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in a carefully prepared opinion addressed to your predecessor in office on February 28, 1914, the conclusion of which was that:

> "A corporation, in reducing its capital stock, may not decrease the number of shares into which the same is divided."

I have since had occasion to give much time and study to the question presented, and after full and careful consideration of the language of section 8700, of the General Code, which authorizes a corporation to reduce its capital stock, and also in view of the practice which prevailed for many years prior to the ruling above referred to, I find myself unable to concur in the conclusion expressed by my predecessor, and to the extent hereinafter stated I desire to modify the language in my own opinion, to which you referred in your letter.

Section 8700 of the General Code, under which the authority to reduce capital stock of a corporation is conferred, is as follows:

> "With the written consent of the persons in whose names a majority of the shares of the capital stock thereof stands on its books, the board of directors of such a corporation may reduce the amount of its capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof, and issue certificates therefor. The rights of creditors shall not be affected thereby; and a certificate of such action shall be filed with the secretary of state."

My predecessor based his opinion of February 28, 1914, upon the meaning attributed by him to the word "and" as used in the phrase in section 8700 of the General Code: "may reduce the amount of its capital stock and the nominal value of all the shares thereof." He held that the word "and" inseparably connected the two actions, viz.: the reduction of the capital stock and the reduction of the nominal value of all its shares, so that the one might not be done without the concurrent doing of the other.

In other words, he gave to this phrase a meaning which might much more clearly have been expresed by the legislature in the following language:

> "May reduce the amount of its capital stock BY the reduction of the nominal value of all the shares thereof."

or,

> "May reduce the amount of its capital stock if it proportionately reduces the nominal value of all the shares thereof."

or,

> "May reduce the nominal value of all its shares of stock and thereby reduce the amount of its capital stock."

I am unable to agree that the word "and" was used by the legislature with this restricted meaning. I understand it simply to connect in one sentence language which confers two powers which may be exercised either separately or in unison. If the following language had been used: "the board of directors of such a corporation may reduce the amount of its capital stock and may reduce the nominal value of all the shares thereof," the meaning I now attribute to the sentence as worded would be clear and unquestioned, and yet it would be difficult to state wherein the sentence is changed in meaning by including or omitting the inserted words.

To my mind, the word "and" is more properly used to convey the meaning that both or either power may be exercised than is the word "or," which carries with it the meaning that either may be done separately, and not that both powers may be exercised concurrently. It is, however, a well recognized rule of construction that "and" is often read "or," and "or" read "and." I therefore do not attribute great significance to the fact that in section 8698, of the General Code, which provides that a corporation, under certain conditions and restrictions, "may increase its capital stock or the number of shares into which it is divided," the word "or" is used. Under a very technical construction of this last section, a corporation could increase either its capital stock or the number of shares into which its capital stock is divided, but could never do both concurrently, which was obviously not the legislative intent.

I am informed that prior to the opinion of my predecessor, referred to, it had always been the practice to permit a reduction in the capital stock of a corporation without reducing the nominal value of the stock shares, but by simply reducing the number of shares. This practice was in keeping with the natural interpretation of the language of the code and prior statutes, and it worked no hardship or wrong upon any stockholder, it impaired the rights of no creditor, and affected no credits of the public. If the rule followed by the 1914 opinion is followed it cannot fail to produce absurd and rediculous situations. The resulting reduced stock of a corporation may have a par value of fractional dollars, or even fractional cents, which would injure, if not destroy, its market value and complicate the bookkeeping of the corporation.

The most numerous instances of stock reduction are those where the corporation has unissued stock and for various reasons desires to make a reduction to that extent in its authorized stock. If a corporation must reduce the nominal value of all its shares it is no nearer a solution of its problem after filing a certificate of reduction than before, because it still has its unissued stock with a reduction of the nominal value. In order, then, to get rid of all its unissued stock, the corporation would be obliged to reduce its capital stock by one hundred per cent. This construction of law, therefore, produces an unworkable rule in most instances where a reduction of the capital stock is desired. If, on the other hand, a construction be adopted which permits a reduction of the number of shares as an incident to the separate power to reduce the authorized capital stock, no difficulty is experienced in applying the law. If the amount by which its capital stock is reduced equals the amount of its unissued capital stock, which is the case in a majority of instances, it simply pushes out of existence such unissued stock. If a reduction is made which affects the issued stock, certificates showing fractional shares may be issued; or certificates showing shares of decreased valuation may be issued, at the option of the corporation.

I am not unmindful of the rule that merely because a provision of law is unworkable, or produces results not contemplated, by no means justifies a disregard of its plain meaning. Where an uncertainty exists as to the proper meaning of the language used by the legislature it is proper to consider and give weight to results and consequences which will follow each of the several possible constructions to which it is susceptible.

For the foregoing reasons I am, therefore, of the opinion that a corporation may reduce its capital stock without proportionately reducing the par value of all its shares of capital stock.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—COMPENSATION OF BUILDING COMMISSION FOR NEW COURT HOUSE—ALSO ARCHITECTS AND OTHER EMPLOYES—FROM WHAT FUND PAID—WHEN EXPENSES OF SAID COMMISSION ARE PAID FROM GENERAL COUNTY FUND AND WHEN FROM BUILDING FUND.

The compensation of a building commission as provided by section 2334, G. C., and all architects and other employes employed by said commission under provisions of section 2339, G. C., is payable from the building fund. The expenses of said commission, specified in section 2335, G. C., may be paid from the general county fund until said building commission fund becomes available for their payment, when they also should be paid from said building fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, February 29, 1916.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 16, 1916, bearing the following statement and inquiry:

> "Preble county has voted on the question of issuing bonds in the amount of $250,000.00 for the erection of a new court house and jail. The building commission has been appointed under section 2333 of the General Code of Ohio. Section 2334 provides for the compensation of the commission. Section 2339 of the General Code vests the power in the commission of employing architects, superintendents, and other necessary employes. Section 2335 of the General Code provides for the expenses of the commission. The county commissioners have raised this question 'out of what fund is the building commission and the services of the architects paid? ' Also 'out of what fund is the expenses of this commission paid?' We have been unable to find any authority upon this proposition and therefore ask that we may have your opinion upon the same at your very earliest convenience."

There are no express provisions of law directing from what specific fund the different expenses to which you refer in your foregoing inquiry shall be paid.

It is provided in section 2334, G. C., that the compensation of the persons appointed on the building commission shall be fixed by the court of common pleas and paid on its approval from the county treasury. No other or further provisions are made with respect to the payment of said compensation.

It is provided in section 2335, G. C., that the necessary expenses for stationery, postage, correspondence and travel out of the county required in the discharge of the duties of the commission shall be paid from the county treasury on the order of the county commissioners. There are no other provisions of law relating in any way to the payment of the expenses specified in this section.

By the provisions of section 2341, G. C., it is provided that when signed by five members of the commission, the county auditor shall draw his warrant on the county treasurer for the payment of all bills and estimates of such commission.

The foregoing sections contain the only provisions of law relating in any way to the matters submitted by you in your inquiry.

The only method by which any conclusion may be reached, therefore, in respect to the fund from which the payment of these various expenses may be made is to deduce from the purpose of the law generally the probable intention of the legislature in this regard. It is not the purpose of the laws relating to the erection of court houses and other county buildings specified in section 2333, G. C., that the board of county commissioners, as such board, shall have any control or supervision of the fund provided by said section for the erection of such buildings. It is manifest from the general provisions of the law that the control of said fund is in the hands of the building commission. For this reason alone, if no other existed, we could safely conclude that all expenses and bills payable on the allowance and order of the building commission should be paid from the building fund. However, the expenses named in section 2335, supra, are paid upon the order of the county commissioners, and as to these expenses this conclusion will not apply. The expenses specified in this section may be, and in most cases are, preliminary expenses, and are ordinarily incurred prior to the sale of bonds. This is so because under the provisions of section 2333 a building commission may be appointed immediately after the election authorizing the issuing of bonds. This section expressly provides that application for their appointment shall be made within thirty days after said election. Whether this provision may be construed as strictly mandatory or not, is not material here, for its requirements must be assumed to be followed in every instance, and in consequence thereof said building commissions should be appointed and begin their work within the time limit named.

It is evident then that the expenses named in said section 2335 will also begin with the work of the commission, and that the building fund will not be available for the payment of such expenses until some time after they are incurred. For this reason it has therefore generally been considered that the legislature intended the expenses named in said section 2335 to be those incurred by the commission in its preliminary work, and before any building fund is available for their payment. To that extent, therefore, payments of such expenses have been made from the general county fund, and I am not prepared to except to this practice, but the payment of any expenses of the commission from the general county fund should not continue after the building fund is in the treasury.

I therefore hold that the expenses named in section 2335, supra, which are incurred prior to the sale of bonds, may be paid from the general county fund, but as to all other bills, claims, estimates and expenses, including the services of the architect, allowed and ordered paid by the commission, it is manifestly the intention of the law that such be paid from the building fund. This will also include the compensation of the commission as fixed and ordered paid by the court of common pleas; their compensation and the compensation of all other persons employed in and about the erection of said building by the commission are naturally and properly a part of the cost of said building, as contemplated by section 2333, G. C., and are included in the amount submitted to the voters for their approval under the provisions of said section.

Answering your inquiry specifically, I must advise that the compensation of the building commission and all of its expenses after the building fund becomes available for the payment therefor, and the compensation of architects employed by said commission are payable from the building fund, and that the expenses of the commission specified in section 2335, supra, which are incurred prior to the creation of the building fund from the sale of bonds may be paid from the general county fund.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF ABSTRACT OF TITLE AND DEED TO REAL ESTATE IN COSHOCTON COUNTY TO STATE OF OHIO—GRANTORS, GILBERT J. McKEE AND WIFE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1916.

HON. FRANK R. FAUVER, Superintendent of Public Works, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Some time since you submitted to me for examination an abstract of title to the following described premises:

"Situated in the 3d quarter of Bethlehem township, county of Coshocton, state of Ohio, being all the land in the southwest part of a tract of land sold to Gilbert J. McKee by Wm. Coffman and wife as recorded in volume 116, page 439, in the records of Coshocton county.

"Located in lot No. 6 of the Rathbone section in the 3d quarter of the 6th township and 7th range. Being all that land now owned by Gilbert J. McKee lying between the following described line and the Walhonding river and east of the west line of lot No. 6. Said line beginning at a stake in the west line of lot No. 6, 1215 ft. south of the center of the Warsaw and Coshocton road, and on the line between the lands of Matthew Crawford and Gilbert J. McKee. Thence east 14 ft. to a concrete monument from which a maple tree 14" in diameter bears S. 76° E. a distance of 77.9 ft. and a concrete monument bears S. 23° 00" W. a distance of 49.9 ft. Thence S. 49° 45' E. 1437.1 ft. to a concrete monument; thence N. 88° 25' E. 133.6 ft. to a concrete monument on the east line of said lot No. 6 on the line between Samuel Hamilton and Gilbert J. McKee. Thence with said east line S. 3° 3' W. 231 ft. to the Walhonding river at the west end of a retaining wall to the Six Mile dam.

"This tract also includes all of tract No. 1, of the abandoned Walhonding canal lands, being the same lands deeded by state of Ohio to John G. Frederick by deed February 21, 1898, beginning at the west line, extended, of said lot No. 6, which point is station 904+45 of E. J. Olney's survey of the Walhonding canal in the year 1896 and running eastward the full width of the abandoned Walhonding canal and its embankments 1,000 ft. to station 914+45 of said Olney's survey which is at the upper end of lock No. 5 as numbered on the Walhonding canal from Roscoe, O.

"The total to be conveyed is estimated to contain 22.3 acres more or less of which there now is approximately 4.5 acres cultivated land, 12.3

acres sanded and covered with gravel, 5.5 acres covered with water.

"Also a right-of-way 14 ft. wide extending along the west line of lot No. 6, from the above described tract 1215 ft. north to the Warsaw-Coshocton road, also the privilege of a temporary camp on the lands of Gilbert J. McKee to be removed after the completion of the levee now under construction."

This abstract under date of August 4, 1915, was prepared by Solomon Mercer, abstractor of Coshocton, Ohio. Since the date of said abstract I have also had submitted an additional certificate of Mr. Mercer under date of September 17, 1915.

In addition to the abstract and the certificate referred to above, on February 11, 1916, I received a certificate from the treasurer of Coshocton county, Ohio, and certificate from the recorder of Coshocton county, Ohio, and on February 28, 1916, an additional certificate from the recorder of Coshocton county, Ohio.

From my examination of the abstract and the various certificates above referred to, I am of the opinion that Gilbert J. McKee and wife were on the 28th day of February, 1916, seized of an estate in fee simple to the premises described above, free from all encumbrances whatsoever.

I have also examined the deed submitted by you which was executed by Gilbert J. McKee and Myrta A. McKee, his wife, to the state of Ohio under date of February 7, 1914.

This deed is in proper form and in my opinion will convey to the state of Ohio an estate in fee simple to said premises. The abstract of title and various certificates attached thereto and the deed are herewith returned to you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

AMENDMENT TO ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION ADOPTED BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT OF STOCKHOLDERS CHANGING UNISSUED COMMON STOCK TO PREFERRED STOCK OR UNISSUED PREFERRED STOCK TO COMMON STOCK, APPROVED—THE RADIUM-ACTIV COMPANY.

The secretary of state may permit the filing of amendment to articles of incorporation adopted by the unanimous consent of the stockholders changing unissued common stock to preferred stock or unissued preferred stock to common stock.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1916.

HON. CHARLES Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 25, 1916, with enclosures, in which you request my opinion as follows:

"We are enclosing for your opinion an amendment to the charter of 'THE RADIUM-ACTIV COMPANY.'

"We have not filed the said amendment for the reason that under a former opinion of yours it was held that preferred stock cannot be changed into common stock by amendment.

"We are withdrawing the request for an opinion asked for in our communication of February 16, 1916."

Upon examination of the charter of the Radium-Activ Company I find that it has at present a total authorized capital stock of $300,000.00, $100,000.00 of which is common stock divided into one thousand shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and $200,000.00 of which is preferred stock divided into two thousand shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each.

The company seeks to amend its articles of incorporation by changing $100,000.00 of its authorized but unissued preferred stock to common stock, and to change its resulting $200,000.00 common stock to forty thousand shares of the par value of $5.00 each.

The following is a copy of a letter written to you under date of February 19, 1916, by Mr. B. W. Coffland, manager of the Radium-Activ Company, which you have turned over to me for consideration:

"Supplementing our interview with the assistant secretary and your chief clerk of the 16th instant, I wish to state that the proposed amendment to the articles of this company does not contemplate any change in any outstanding preferred stock as the present authorized issue is two hundred ($200,000.00) thousand dollars; the proposed amendment changes one hundred thousand of this to common, but there is at present only thirty-six shares, representing thirty-six hundred ($3,600.00) dollars of this stock subscribed for or issued."

The question raised and upon which you desire my opinion is as to whether or not the Radium-Activ Company may, with the written consent of all its stockholders, by amendment to its articles of incorporation, change $100,000 of its unissued preferred stock to common stock.

I have recently advised you in opinion No. 989, dated October 30, 1915, in opinion No. 1160, dated January 11, 1916, and in opinion No. 1244, dated February 7, 1916, which were based upon the particular facts presented in each case, that the corporations there under consideration might by amendment authorized by the unanimous consent of all stockholders change unissued common stock to preferred stock.

I am not unmindful of an earlier opinion referred to in your letter in which I advised you that a corporation was not authorized to change preferred stock to common stock by amendment, nor have I yet been able to find in the General Code any specific provision authorizing such an amendment. In view, however, of the practice which has long existed under the ruling of your department, and of which I was not fully aware at the time my former opinion was prepared, of permitting amendments to articles of incorporation changing the character of corporate stock, particularly common stock to preferred stock, and in view of the advice given you in the three opinions above referred to relative to the changing by amendment unissued common stock to preferred stock with the unanimous written consent of all stockholders, I am of the opinion that you should file and record the certificate of amendment presented to you by the Radium-Activ Company. The rights of neither creditors nor stockholders can in any way be affected or prejudiced by permitting this change, as all the stockholders have consented thereto in writing, and the assets of the corporation and the liabilities of its stockholders, in so far as creditors are concerned, are in nowise impaired.

For your future guidance in this connection, I may add that it is my opinion that you should file and record certificates of amendment to articles of incorporation, adopted by the unanimous consent of all the corporation's stockholders, changing unissued common stock to preferred stock, or unissued preferred stock to common stock.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MOTHERS' PENSION LAW—GRANTEE INELIGIBLE TO RECEIVE PENSION AFTER REMARRIAGE—STEPFATHER NOT LIABLE FOR SUPPORT OF STEPCHILDREN.

Grantee of mothers' pension under section 1683-2, G. C., as amended, is ineligible to receive the same after remarriage, while her husband is alive, not permanently disabled or a prisoner or has not deserted and continued such desertion for a period of three years.

Stepfather not subject to prosecution under the provisions of section 13008, G. C., for failure to support children of his wife by a former marriage, unless he has taken some action towards the adoption of her children.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 1, 1916.

HON. MEEKER TERWILLIGER, Prosecuting Attorney, Circleville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your request for an opinion concerning mothers' pensions which is as follows:

"The juvenile court of this county has referred a question to me relating to mothers' pensions and as the question has never been passed upon by any court of this state, that I am able to find, I am constrained to refer the matter to your department for the purpose of obtaining an opinion on the question as probably the same question has been referred to you before. The facts are these:

"Mr. and Mrs. James Curry were the parents of six children; Mr. Curry died two years ago leaving a widow and the six children surviving him, none of the children being entitled to an age and schooling certificate. The juvenile court allowed Mrs. Curry a mothers' pension for the partial support of herself and her six children. About two months ago, Mrs. Curry, being yet a young woman, married a Mr. Stebleton, and they are now living together as man and wife and have some of her children by her first husband living with them. Mr. Stebleton is a poor man, living upon his daily earnings and does not want to support the Curry children as he claims he is not able to do so, but he wants his wife, the former Mrs. Curry, to live with him. Mrs. Stebleton insists that the mothers' pension be continued for the partial support of her children.

"Her present husband, Mr. Stebleton, is not permanently disabled by reason of physical or mental infirmities, but works when the weather permits and when he can get work.

"Is Mrs. Stebleton entitled to a mothers' pension under section 1683-2 of the General Code?

"Is Mr. Stebleton liable under section 13008 of the General Code of Ohio for the support of the Curry children, now his stepchildren?

"If you have already passed upon these questions I would thank you for a copy of the opinion, and if you have not I would thank you to give me your opinion at your earliest convenience."

The authority for the granting or allowance of mothers' pensions is to be found in the juvenile court act, sections 1683-2, and 1683-3, as amended, 106 Ohio L., 436, the same being, in part, as follows:

"Section 1683-2. For the partial support of women whose husbands are dead, or become permanently disabled by reason of physical or mental infirmity, or whose husbands are prisoners, or whose husbands have deserted, and such desertion has continued for a period of three years, when such women are poor, and are the mothers of children not entitled to receive age and schooling certificate, and such mothers and children have a legal residence in any county of the state for two years, the juvenile court may make an allowance to each of such women as follows: * * *

"Section 1683-3. Such allowance may be made by the juvenile court, only upon the following conditions: First, the child or children for whose benefit the allowance is made must be living with the mother of such child or children; second, the allowance shall be made only when in the absence of such allowance, the mother would be required to work regularly away from her home and children, and when by means of such allowance she will be able to remain at home with her children, except that she may be absent for work for such time as the court deems advisable; third, the mother must in the judgment of the juvenile court be a proper person, morally, physically and mentally for the bringing up of her children; fourth, such allowance shall in the judgment of the court be necessary to save the child or children from neglect and to avoid the breaking up of the home of such woman; fifth, it must appear to be for the benefit of the child to remain with such mother; sixth, a careful preliminary examination of the home of such mother must first have been made under the direction of the court by the probation officer, the agent of an associated charities organization or humane society, or in the absence of such probation officer, society or organization in any county, the sheriff of such county shall make such investigations as the court may direct, and a written report of the result of such examination or investigation shall be filed with the juvenile court, for the guidance of the court in making or withholding such allowance."

From a reading of the sections quoted it will be noted that to make a woman eligible to receive a mothers' pension she must be either a widow, the wife of a man who is permanently disabled by reason of physical or mental infirmity, the wife of a prisoner who does not support his child or children, or of a man who has deserted herself and her children for a period of three years. If the woman is poor and the mother of children under the stipulated age, the juvenile court has jurisdiction to allow a mothers' pension if one or more of the conditions recited above are present.

In the case of Mrs. Stebleton the jurisdictional requisites are lacking as Mrs. Stebleton, the applicant, does not appear before the court under either of the conditions outlined by the statutes.

I am not unmindful of the provisions of section 1683 of the General Code, which direct that a liberal construction be given to the juvenile court act to the end that proper guardianship may be provided for the child, but notwithstanding the unfortunate conditions which command close attention in the case under consideration the most liberal construction which might be given to the mothers' pension act would not remove the barriers which exclude Mrs. Stebleton from its benefits.

It is my opinion, in answer to your first question, that under the conditions outlined by you, Mrs. Stebleton is not eligible to receive a mothers' pension under the provisions of section 1683-2 of the General Code, as amended, supra.

The second question in your letter is as to whether or not Mr. Stebleton is liable under section 13008 of the General Code of Ohio for the support of the Curry children, now his stepchildren. Section 13008 of the General Code is as follows:

> "Whoever, being the father, or when charged by law with the maintenance thereof, the mother, of a legitimate child under sixteen years of age, or the husband of a pregnant woman, living in this state, being able by reason of property, or by labor or earnings, to provide such child or such woman with necessary or proper home, care, food and clothing, neglects or refuses so to do, shall be imprisoned in a jail or workhouse at hard labor not less than six months nor more than one year, or in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years."

There is only one decision in the state of Ohio on this subject, and that is the case of Trustees of Bloomfield v. Trustees of Chagrin, 5 Ohio R., page 315. In that case it was held by the court that:

> "The second husband has no legal control over his wife's children by former marriage. He has no right to their services, and is not bound to support them, consequently they can derive no settlement from him."

In the case of Frank Kraft v. Herman Wolf, 3 Ohio N. P. (N. S.), 105, which was a case of homestead and family exemption in the common pleas court of Cuyahoga county, the court, at page 107, makes the following observation:

> "Sections 3137-a and 3139, Revised Statutes, throw some light upon whether or not a stepdaughter is a child, not by what they say, but by what they involve and by what they exclude.
> "The first named section provides, in substance, that any inhabitant of the state being the husband of any woman who has a child by a former husband may file a petition in the probate court, etc., for a change of name of such stepchild.
> "Section 3139 provides that when this provision has been complied with, when he has made the application and had a change of name, when all these things have been done, the probate court shall declare on its order that from that date such child is, to all legal intents and purposes, the child of the petitioner. The court shall make that declaration after all these things be done. I think a fair construction of that is to say that the legislature has fairly said that up to that time the child is not the child of the petitioner. There is only one decision in this state on that subject, and that is in 5 Ohio, 315. The fact that it was never modified in any way indicates that it is a settled rule. It was held in that case that a stepfather has no right to the services of a stepchild. The court is, therefore, of opinion that, although this man is a widower and that his child is unmarried, she is not his daughter."

The doctrine announced in the case of Trustees of Bloomfield v. Trustees of Chagrin is the law of the state, it never having been altered, modifid or reversed, and it is my opinion, therefore, that unless Mr. Stebleton has taken some positive steps towards the adoption of the children of his wife by her former marriage he could not be successfully prosecuted under the provisions of section 13008 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL, BOND ISSUE OF DOVER TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, TUSCARAWAS COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 2, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Dover township rural school district to the amount of $30,000.00 accepted by the industrial commission by resolution dated February 10, 1916, being sixty bonds of $500.00 each, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually."

Upon examination of the transacript of the proceedings of the board of education of Dover township rural school district relative to the issuance of the above bonds I find that such school district is not authorized to issue bonds to the amount of $30,000.00 under the provisions of section 7629 of the General Code, as the tax duplicate of said school district amount to only $3,119,980.00, and the total amount of the bonds which may be issued by a vote of the board under said section cannot exceed the aggregate of a tax at the rate of two mills upon the said tax valuation.

I am in receipt of a letter from Hon. E. E. Lindsey, prosecuting attorney of Tuscarawas county, advising me that the board of education of Dover township rural school district will call a special election to authorize the issuance of bonds in the amount of $30,000, and that they will again be offered to your commission as soon as proceedings relative thereto have been completed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SECTION 5660, G. C., APPLICABLE TO CONTRACT FOR ERECTION OF NEW COURT HOUSE—BONDS MUST BE SOLD AND IN PROCESS OF DELIVERY—BONDS FOR ERECTION OF COURT HOUSE MUST BE OFFERED TO INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION BEFORE ADVERTISING SAID BONDS FOR SALE.

When money for the erection of a court house is to be derived from the sale of bonds, no legal contract may be made for the erection of such building until sufficient bonds are sold and in process of delivery to pay the cost of erection, as provided in said contract.

The provisions of section 1465-58, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 76, referring to the taking of bonds by trustees of the sinking fund of the taxing district issuing said bonds, do not apply to bonds issued by a county for the erection of a court house, but such bonds shall be directly offered in writing to the Industrial Commission before the same are advertised for sale.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

HON. P. A. SAYLOR, Prosecuting Attorney, Eaton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 29, 1916, bearing the following statement and inquiry:

> "Sometime since I wrote you with reference to the building of our court house and the payment of the commission and the architect. Since then the auditor of our county has raised the question about the certificate required when the contract is let that the funds are in the treasury for the payment of the obligation of the contract. We are about to advertise for bids for contracts to erect the court house, and the auditor's question involves in construing section 5660 of the G. C. of Ohio. Section 5660 is as follows:
> " 'The commissioners of a county, the trustees of a township and the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund for which it is to be drawn or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the treasury and in the appropriate fund. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education, is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force.'
> "We voted on selling bonds in the amount of $250,000.00, and the advisability of selling all these bonds at one time was questioned by the county commissioners. It might be a saving to the county to sell these bonds at different times, as the work progressed, and the commission needed the money.
> "The contract for the court house will probably be in the neighborhood of $200,000.00. Would we have to sell bonds to the amount of $200,000.00 so that the auditor could make the certificate required in section 5660, or are the bonds after they have been once authorized by a vote of the people, considered in the process of collection whether they have been advertised for sale or not?

"We would like to hear from you in reference to this matter as well as our preceding questions contained in former letter, at your earliest convenience.

"The act creating the state liability board of awards, 103 Ohio laws, page 76, provides:

"'And it shall be the duty of the boards or officers of the several taxing districts of the state in the issuance and sale of bonds of their respective taxing districts, to offer in writing to the state liability board of awards, prior to advertising the same for sale, all such issues as may not have been taken by the trustees of the sinking fund of the taxing district so issuing such bonds.'

"This raises the question 'Is there a board of commissioners of the sinking fund for the county?' If there be such a board, how was it appointed or selected?"

The provisions of section 5660, G. C., quoted by you in your foregoing inquiry, have been repeatedly held by the courts of this state to be mandatory. They apply to the contract for the erection of your new court house. They require that the money necessary to complete any contract made for its erection shall be in the treasury at the time said contract is consummated. If, however, the money for building a court house is to be derived from the sale of bonds (as in your case), it is sufficient that said bonds are lawfully authorized to be sold, and are sold and in process of delivery. It is, therefore, not sufficient, as suggested by you, that said bonds are authorized by a vote of the people. They must be sold and in process of delivery. This is the plain requirement of the law aforesaid, and it may not be evaded. Your board of county commissioners cannot make a legal contract for the erection of your court house until sufficient bonds are sold and in process of delivery to pay the cost of building as provided by the contract.

Referring to your second inquiry, there is no county sinking fund and, therefore, no statutory provisions for the appointment of trustees or commissioners thereof. The provisions of the law, quoted in this inquiry, do not apply to county bonds, except to require that county commissioners shall offer, in writing, all bonds issued by the county to the Industrial Commission of Ohio before advertising said bonds for sale. It will be necessary, therefore, in your case that all bonds which your county commissioners determine to sell shall, first, be offered in writing to said Industrial Commission of Ohio, and if not accepted by them, as provided by law, may then be advertised by your commissioners.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COUNCIL HAS DISCRETION TO FURNISH LAW BOOKS TO MAYOR—MAYOR HAS NO CONTROL OF BOOKS FURNISHED ANY OTHER DEPARTMENT OF VILLAGE.

The matter of furnishing law books, including a set of the General Code of Ohio, for use in the office of mayor of any village rests in the discretion of the council of said village. If said council neglects or declines to furnish said books the mayor is without any recourse, nor has he any control of said books if furnished by council for use in any other department of the village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 25, 1916, submitting the following inquiries:

> "FIRST. If the council of a village refuses to provide the General Code of Ohio for the use of the mayor's office of said village, is there any recourse left to the mayor by means of which he can provide such equipment for his office at the expense of the village?
> "SECOND. If said village is owner of a set of Page & Adams Annotated General Code of Ohio, may the council of said village place said books with their legal counsel instead of with the mayor or clerk of the village?"

The furnishing of law books for use in a mayor's office in a village is a matter which rests in the discretion of council. The only statute which refers to the matter of furnishing an office for the mayor of a municipality is section 4550, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "He shall keep a docket, and shall be entitled to receive the same fees allowed justices of the peace for similar services. He shall keep an office at a convenient place in the corporation, to be provided by the council, and shall be furnished by the council with the corporate seal of the corporation, in the center of which shall be the words, 'Mayor of the city of_____,' 'Mayor of the village of_____,' as the case may be.

This section confers upon council the authority to provide an office for the mayor of its municipality. The right to provide an office includes the power to furnish and equip said office with everything reasonably necessary for the use of the mayor while occupying it as an official of the municipality. This includes the furnishing of law books and the books in question, but it is not a duty specifically imposed upon council and for that reason may not be enforced by mandamus. This being so, if council declines to furnish the books named, the mayor is without any recourse, nor has he any control of any books which council may procure for its legal counsel and by its orders placed in the office of such counsel.

Your first inquiry, therefore, is answered in the negative and your second in the affirmative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY AUDITOR—PETITION AND BOND FILED WITH COUNTY AUDITOR UNDER SECTION 6447, G. C.—AUDITOR MUST GIVE NOTICES REQUIRED BY SECTIONS 6448 TO 6451, G. C.

When a petition and bond are filed with the county auditor in all respects in accordance with the provisions of section 6447, G. C., it becomes the duty of the county auditor to give the notices as required by sections 6448, 6449, 6450 and 6451, G. C., and of the county commissioners to determine the necessity of the proposed improvement in the manner prescribed by section 6451, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of February 5, 1916, is as follows:

> "There seems to be some controversy in reference to a private ditch that was built in Falls township this county by private individuals. The trustees nor the county commissioners did not in any way have anything to do with the so-called private drain or ditch. I have advised the commissioners that under the circumstances they have no right to interfere in any way in the adjustment of the conditions between the private owners and this ditch and Mr. Haines representing the petitioners who filed a petition with the auditor of our county asking the commissioners to adjust the conditions between the property owners and figuring the assessments that each should pay and I can see no reason why under the section of the statutes referred to by Mr. Haines where the commissioners have any right legally or otherwise, statutory or otherwise, to comply with the request of these petitioning creditors. I am sending you the letter that was handed to me by Mr. Haines, attorney, and also a map of his drawing."

It appears from the accompanying plat and correspondence that in the township named and near the city of Zanesville there was constructed along a natural water course, other than a living stream, some 18 years ago, a tiled drain about 1,000 feet in length, for the purpose of draining the surrounding lots and land and carrying away the water which would follow the natural water course and in time of storm overflow the surrounding lots and land. Some three hundred feet of this tiled drain or water course has so collapsed as to render it ineffective in carrying away the water and causing the same to overflow and percolate the surrounding land and lots to the damage and inconvenience of the owners thereof. It is stated that it is desired by surrounding lot and land owners to have this drain, ditch or water course repaired or improved in such manner as to effectively and properly drain the lots and land adjacent thereto and so flooded by reason of the present condition of the water course in question. It is stated by you also that there has been filed with the county auditor a petition "asking the commissioners to adjust the conditions between the property owners." No copy of such petition is submitted and its sufficiency cannot, therefore, be considered, nor is any question asked which you request that I undertake to answer or express an opinion upon. I shall, however, call your attention to the provisions of section 6443, G. C., which are as follows:

> "The board of county commissioners, at a regular or called session, when necessary to drain any lots, lands, public or corporate road or railroad, and it will be conducive to public health, convenience or welfare, in the manner provided in this chapter, may cause to be located and constructed, straightened, widened, altered, deepened, boxed, or tiled, a ditch, drain or water course, or box or tile part thereof, or cause the channel of a river, creek or run, or part thereof, within such county, to be improved by straightening, widening, deepening, or changing it, or by removing from adjacent lands timber, brush, trees, or other substance liable to obstruct it. The commissioners may change either terminus of a ditch before its final location, if the object of the improvement will be better accomplished thereby."

Section 6446, G. C., provides that application for such improvement shall be made to the commissioners of the county, signed by one or more owners of lots or lands which will be drained or benefited thereby, or to other public authorities therein named.

Section 6447, G. C., provides:

"A petition shall be filed with the county auditor setting forth the necessity and benefits of the improvement and describing the beginning, route and termini thereof. It shall also contain the names of the persons and corporations, public or private, who, in the opinion of the petitioner or petitioners are in any way affected or benefited thereby. There shall be filed therewith a bond, subject to the approval of said auditor, payable to the state of Ohio, with at least two sufficient sureties, in not less than two hundred dollars, conditioned for the payment of all costs if the prayer of the petition is not granted or is dismissed for any cause. If the name of a person or corporation, either public or private, in any way affected by the proposed improvement, is omitted from the petition, the county commissioners, upon discovering that such omission has been made, shall supply such name and cause notice to be served as herein provided."

Sections 6448, 6449, 6450 and 6451 prescribe the manner of giving notice of the filing of the petition, the time for a hearing, a view of the proposed improvement and requires that the commissioners determine the necessity thereof. If the commissioners find for the improvement, the machinery for the appropriation of land necessary, the fixing of damage therefor and making assessment of the cost of the improvement is provided in subsequent sections.

The only question I am able to gather from the correspondence submitted is whether the county commissioners have jurisdiction to proceed to effect such improvement upon the petition of a lot or land owner for same. If the petition and bond are in all respects in conformity with the provisions of section 6447, G. C., supra, it then becomes the duty of the county auditor to give notice thereof according to the provision of sections 6448, 6449 and 6450, G. C. Upon the day stated in said notice for the hearing on said petition, it is the duty of the county commissioners to go over and along the line of the proposed improvement and view the same and to determine whether or not it will be conducive to public health, convenience or welfare. If it is found by the commissioners that such proposed improvement will be so conducive to the public health, convenience or welfare, the commissioners are then authorized to proceed, pursuant to the provision of said section 6451, G. C., et seq., supra, to the establishment or construction of such improvement as may be found to be authorized by said section 6443, G. C., supra.

The question of jurisdiction in the first instance in these matters depends solely upon the petition and bond required by section 6447, G. C., supra, independent of any other fact pertinent to the necessity of such improvement. The facts pertinent to the necessity of the improvement are matters for consideration in connection with the view and the determination on the part of the commissioners of the question of whether the same will be conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare, and may not be taken into consideration in determining the sufficiency of the petition and bond to give jurisdiction to the commissioners to proceed to give notice, hear, view and determine the necessity of the improvement.

In the case of Chesbrough v. Commissioners, 37 O. S., 508, it was held:

> "4. It is the public health, convenience or welfare of the community to be affected by the proposed ditch, and not that of the public at large, that is to be regarded in the construction of a ditch. Hence, if it appears that the proposed ditch will be 'conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare of the neighborhood' through which it will pass, the commissioners are authorized to construct the same."

So that it is not essential that the commissioners find that the proposed improvement will be conducive to the general public health, convenience and welfare, but it is sufficient if it be found that the proposed improvement will be conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare of the surrounding community or the neighborhood, as it was put in this case. This may not be taken, however, to authorize the commissioners to order such improvement established or constructed merely for the personal benefit of the lot and land owners interested therein, but it must be found necessary to the public health, convenience and welfare. That is to say, the benefits to be derived therefrom must go beyond the mere improvement of the land and property affected thereby.

Attention is called to the first branch of the syllabus of the case of Commissioners v. Gates, 83 O. S., 19, in reference to the proceedings under section 4447, R. S., which were incorporated in the General Code as section 6443, et seq., and which is as follows:

> "2. The county commissioners, sitting as a board, in hearing an application on the part of land owners for the establishment of a ditch, as provided by section 4447, and following, of the Revised Statutes, represent the land owners, petitioners, and not the county, where it is found that the improvement is of local interest only, and that the cost and expense should be assessed wholly against the lands benefited. Where the finding is that the improvement is of sufficient importance to the public to justify the payment of damages and compensation, in whole or in part, out of the county treasury, the board may so order, and in such condition the board represents the county, and not exclusively the petitioners."

From this it conclusively appears that the action of the county commissioners is fully authorized, although the interest in the improvement proposed is local in its nature and the benefits to be derived therefrom confined to a particular community or locality, and that in case the benefits of such proposed improvement are restricted to such narrow limits, the commissioners act in their official capacity as representatives of the parties to such proposed improvement.

As stated above, if the petition and bond are regular, it is not for the commissioners to anticipate what the pertinent facts to the necessity of the improvement may demand and refuse to recognize the petition. The jurisdictional matter in the first instance must be sought in the bond and petition alone.

In view of the indefinite character of your inquiry, I am unable to advise you further than to say that in my opinion if the petition and bond are regular and sufficient in law, it is the duty of the county auditor to proceed to give the notice required by statute and of the commissioners to proceed to give a hearing thereon on the date fixed in said notice, to view the line of the proposed improvement and then to determine its necessity. Whether further proceedings shall be had thereon must be determined by the finding of the commissioners on the question whether said improvement will be conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—CITY ENGINEER IS WITHIN CLASSIFIED CIVIL SERVICE—PERSON IN CLASSIFIED CIVIL SERVICE PROHIBITED FROM BEING AN ACTIVE CANDIDATE FOR AN ELECTIVE POLITICAL OFFICE.

1. A city engineer holding the regular and permanent appointment as such in the department of public service in a city is within the classified civil service of said city.

2. The provisions of section 486-23, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 416, prohibit a person who is holding a position in the classified civil service from being an active candidate for an elective political office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 25, 1916, submitting the following inquiries:

> "1. Does the appointment of an engineer or surveyor in cities and villages come within the classified service of the civil service laws of the state?
> "2. May a person holding a position under the classified service of the civil service laws of the state be an active candidate for an elective office while holding such position?"

By the express provisions of paragraph 1 of section 486-1, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 400, the civil service law of this state applies only to "all offices and positions of trust or employment in the service of the state and the counties, cities and city school districts thereof." It does not, therefore apply to villages and your first inquiry in respect to the appointment of an engineer or surveyor in a village must be answered in the negative.

A city engineer is the head of a subdepartment of the department of public service in a city. Section 4327, G. C. He is, therefore, in the classified civil service as only the heads of departments are exempted under the provisions of paragraph 3 of section 486-8, G. C., which provides:

> "And the members of all boards and commissions and all heads of departments appointed by the mayor, or if there be no mayor such other similar chief appointing authority of any city or city school district."

Referring now to your second inquiry: It is provided among other things in section 486-23, G. C.

> "Nor shall any officer or employe in the classified service of the state, the several counties, cities and city school districts thereof be an officer in any political organization or take part in politics other than to vote as he pleases and to express freely his political opinions."

The prohibitions in this statute are intended to prevent persons in the classified service from engaging in any conduct which is incompatible with an independent and wholly disinterested service to the state. The legislature has the absolute right to determine upon what conditions any citizen shall hold a public office or employment. As one of the conditions for holding an office or employment in the classified service it is prescribed, as above noted, that the incumbent thereof shall not take part in politics. These conditions, therefore, prohibit an officer or employe in the classified service from engaging in any act or conduct which may be said to be taking a part in politics. It does not require an argument to sustain the contention that an active candidate for an elective office is taking a part in politics because the things for which a candidate stands under such circumstances and upon which he seeks support are of the very essence of politics and this is so whether such candidate represents a party in his campaign for such office or stands upon a platform of his own.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that an active candidate for an elective office is taking a part in politics within the prohibition of the statute quoted and that if he is at the same time holding an office or employment in the classified civil service he should resign therefrom or he would be subject to prosecution as provided by section 486-28, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 417.

It must be noted in conclusion that the observations herein made regarding the appointment of a city engineer apply only to the regular and permanent appointment of a city engineer and not to the appointment or employment of a consulting engineer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—MAIN MARKET ROAD AND INTERCOUNTY HIGHWAY FUNDS—HOW DISBURSED—FORMER CANNOT BE PAID TO COUNTY AND DISBURSED BY IT—SECTION 1203, G. C., GOVERNS INTERCOUNTY HIGHWAY FUNDS.

The state highway commissioner is not authorized to pay main market road funds to a county for disbursements. Payments of intercounty highway funds to a county can only be made in accordance with the provisions of section 1203, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 24, 1916, which communication reads as follows:

"I am attaching hereto copy of letter from the board of county commissioners of Ashtabula county, requesting that this department pay to that county $35,000 from the intercounty and main market road appropriations in order that a greater assessment may be made against the abutting property owners.

"I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to the proper answer to be given by me to the commissioners' inquiry."

The copy of the letter from the board of county commissioners of Ashtabula county, attached to your communication, and which was dated February 1, 1916, reads as follows:

"Owing to the shortage of funds for the construction of main market road No. 1 in Ashtabula county, we, the commissioners and engineer of said county, desire to place before you the following proposition, and beg you to give the matter careful consideration:

"The section of main market road extending from Ashtabula to Geneva is six and one-half miles in length and is estimated to cost, in round figures, $150,000.00. Under the state aid law the property's share would be 10 per cent. or $15,000.00, the township's share would be 15 per cent. or $22,500.00, plus the state's share, $35,000.00, making a total of $72,500.00, which would leave a balance of $77,500.00 to be paid by Ashtabula county. What we request is as follows:

"Allow the county commissioners to proceed under the county aid law and we could build from Ashtabula to the county line, a distance of eight and one-half miles. This eight and one-half miles is estimated to cost approximately $200,000.00.

"Under the county aid law, the property's share is 20 per cent. or $40,000.00, the township's share 30 per cent. or $60,000.00, together with the state's share of $35,000.00, making a total of $135,000.00, leaving a balance of $65,000.00, to be paid by Ashtabula county, which would show a saving of $12,500.00 to the said county, and two miles more of road could be constructed without more funds from the state highway department.

"In asking for this $35,000.00 to be paid to the county, we do not ask the state highway department to waive any supervision or inspection that would otherwise fall on them should we build under the state aid law. In fact, we desire the state supervision and would be glad to have your department exercise the same authority over this road whether it is constructed under the state aid or county aid law.

"Under the county aid law, we propose to assess the property within one mile on each side of this improvement which is the same method carried out in the construction of our county roads, and we believe the method to be as fair to the property owners along the main market road as it is to property less valuable further back in the county.

"One other argument in favor of the county aid law is that the assessment bonds can run ten years instead of five years under the state aid method.

"We do not feel that further comment is necessary upon this request as the same clearly speaks for itself, and we are ready and willing to cooperate with the department in the construction of roads in our county, and we also want the funds applied to road improvement to go as far as possible and in making this request, we feel the county will save at least $12,000.00 and at the same time we will construct the entire mileage of main market road between Ashtabula and the county line and not leave the two miles west of Geneva for future improvement."

It appears from the above quoted communication that your inquiry relates both to intercounty and to main market road funds. The payment to counties of state funds appropriated for highway construction is governed by section 196 of the Cass highway law, section 1203, G. C., and so much of the section as is pertinent reads as follows:

> "* * * whenever forty per cent. of the mileage of all the roads of any county are improved by the use of gravel, broken stone, slag, brick, cement and bituminous products or the aggregate of any of these, to a standard established by the county commissioners and approved by the county highway superintendent, and the county commissioners appropriate an equal sum for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing all or any part of the intercounty highways within such county, then, on request of the county commissioners, which request shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the county highway superintendent and reciting that at least forty per cent. of the mileage of all the roads of the county have been improved, as provided herein; and a certified copy of a resolution duly adopted by the county commissioners, which resolution shall contain an agreement upon the part of the county commissioners to expend the sum realized therefrom, and the sum appropriated by the county commissioners in accordance with plans and specifications approved by the state highway engineer, as herein provided; and a certificate signed by the county auditor and reciting that the sum appropriated by the county commissioners is in the county treasury and has not been otherwise appropriated, or has been levied, placed upon the duplicate and is in process of collection, the state highway commissioner shall order the apportionment of any appropriation by the state or of any funds available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty highways, due or to become due and available for such county as state aid, paid into the treasury of said county. The state highway commissioner shall issue his voucher therefor upon the auditor of state against any such fund and the auditor shall issue his warrant therefor upon the state treasurer and deliver the same to the treasurer of such county. The sum realized therefrom shall be deposited to the credit of the road fund of said county, together with the sum appropriated by such county and both sums shall be used by the commissioners in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of such intercounty highways within the county, in accordance with plans and specifications approved by the state highway engineer as herein provided."

You will note that the operation of the above section is by its terms limited to the apportionment of any appropriation by the state or of any funds available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty highways due or to become due and available for any given county as state aid. The only fund that is apportioned to the several counties of the state is the three-fourths part of the state highway improvement fund appropriated for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty highways. That part of section 1203, G. C., quoted above, does not by its own terms apply to main market road funds and in so far as your inquiry involves the proper handling of main market road funds, I advise you that you are without any authority whatever to pay such funds to the authorities of any county. Main market road funds must remain in the state treasury and be disbursed by you in the manner provided in chapter 8 of the Cass highway law relating to the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads and bridges by the state highway department. You, therefore, have no authority whatever to comply with the request of the county commissioners of Ashtabula county in so far as the same relates to main market road funds. In so far as any intercounty highway funds apportioned to Ashtabula county and against which no contingent liabilities have been created are involved, you are to be governed by the provisions of section 1203, G. C., quoted above.

On November 6, 1915, this department rendered to you opinion No. 998, which opinion prescribes a form of application by county commissioners for intercounty highway funds under section 1203, G. C. On February 21, 1916, a further opinion was rendered to you relating to the method of payment of intercounty highway funds where an application in due form had been filed with you. I, therefore, advise you that you are authorized to issue your voucher for the apportionment of any appropriation by the state or of any funds available for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty highways due or to become due and available for Ashtabula county as state aid, but such voucher may be issued only after the county commissioners have complied with the provisions of section 1203, G. C., and have made an application substantially in the form suggested in opinion No. 998 referred to above. Your voucher for such funds may be issued, as pointed out in opinion No. 1286, referred to above, only after such funds have come into the state treasury and in every instance a sufficient portion of the apportionment to the county in question must be reserved to pay the state's porion of the salary of the county highway superintendent of the county in question until such time as the next semi-annual installment of taxes will come into the state treasury.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

TREASURER OF STATE—NOT AUTHORIZED TO ACCEPT WARRANTS AS PART OF DEPOSIT REQUIRED OF TRUST COMPANIES.

The treasurer of state is not authorized to accept warrants issued by a county in another state as a part of the deposit required of trust companies under section 9778, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

HON. R. W. ARCHER, Treasurer of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 25, 1916, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "We herewith beg to enclose a communication from the Security Savings Bank and Trust Company, of Cleveland, Ohio.
> "This company has $100,000.00 of bonds on deposit in this department. They desire me to withdraw $34,000.00 of Portland, Oregon, improvement bonds, and substitute an equal amount of Atascosa county, Texas, six per cent. road and bridge coupon warrants.
> "Would the treasurer of state be permitted to accept these warrants in lieu of the above $34,000.00 in bonds? A prompt reply will be appreciated. We are also enclosing a transcript of these warrants and have one of the original warrants in this department, which we would be glad to have you look over.

"Your early decision will be appreciated."

Section 9778 of the General Code, relative to the deposit required of trust companies before accepting trusts in Ohio, is as follows:

"No such corporation either foreign or domestic shall accept trusts which may be vested in, transferred or committed to it by an individual, or court, until its paid in capital is at least one hundred thousand dollars, and until such corporation has deposited with the treasurer of state in cash fifty thousand dollars if its capital is two hundred thousand dollars or less, and one hundred thousand dollars if its capital is more than two hundred thousand dollars, except that, the full amount of such deposit by such corporation may be in bonds of the United States, or of this state, or any municipality or county therein, or in any other state, or in the first mortgage bonds of any railroad corporation that for five years last past paid dividends of at least three per cent. on its common stock."

The question raised by your enquiry is whether the Atascosa county, Texas, road and bridge coupon warrants are bonds of a county of another state.

The distinction between warrant and bonds is very clearly defined in the case of Shelly v. St. Charles County Court, 21 Fed. 699, as follows:

"Warrants are general orders, payable when funds are found, and there is propriety in the rule providing that they shall be paid in the order of presentation; the time of presentation to be endorsed by the treasurer on the warrants; they are thus distinguished from bonds which are obligations payable at a definite time running through a series of years, and payable when the time of their maturity arrives, independent of any presentation."

Although the coupon warrants of Atascosa county, Texas, a copy of one of which is attached hereto, have been given many of the distinguishing characteristics of a bond and, in my opinion, constitute valid obligations of the county, yet I do not believe that they are bonds within the meaning of section 9778, of the General Code, above quoted.

In the statement of the Security Savings Bank and Trust Company, of Cleveland, relative to said warrants, which is attached to your letter, I find the following language:

"We are also advised that the attorney-general of Texas, under date of February 13, 1910, rendered an opinion upholding the validity of these warrants. Under the statutes, the attorney-general is not obliged to approve warrant issues as he is in the case of bonds, but there is no question concerning the legal authority for the issuance of these warrants."

Apparently from this statement there is a distinction between bonds and warrants which is recognized by Texas law. Whatever this distinction is, and whether or not it materially affects the character of the two classes of obligations, it is at least sufficient to cause the enactment of the following legislation by the Texas legislature, article 619, Vol. 1, of Vernon's Sayles' Texas Civil Statutes, 1914, at page 319:

> "Conditions precedent to the issuances of bonds; examination by attorney-general, etc. Any county, city, or town in the state of Texas, desiring to issue bonds as authorized by the constitution and laws of this state, shall, before such bonds are offered for sale, forward to the attorney-general the bonds to be issued, a certified copy of the order, or ordinance, levying the tax to pay interest and provide a sinking fund, with a statement of the total bonded indebtedness of such county, city, or town, including the series of bonds proposed, and the assessed value of property for purposes of taxation, as shown by the last official assessment, of such county, city or town, together with such other information as the attorney-general may require; whereupon it shall be the duty of the attorney-general to carefully examine said bonds in connection with the facts and the constitution and laws on the subject of the execution of such bonds, and if, as the result of such examination, the attorney-general shall find that such bonds were issued in conformity with the constitution and laws, and that they are valid and binding obligations upon such county, city, or town, by which they are executed, he shall so officially certify."

I believe that the provisions of section 9778 of the General Code, authorizing you to accept bonds of municipalities or counties of another state in lieu of cash, should be strictly construed, and I advise you therefore that you should not accept the road and bridge county warrants of Atascosa county, Texas, which the Security Savings and Trust Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, desires to substitute for $34,000.00 of Portland, Oregon, improvement bonds, which it now has on deposit with you.

In so advising you I do not wish to be understood as in any way reflecting upon the security or the validity of the warrants above referred to, as I believe they are valid obligations of Atascosa county, Texas. My opinion is given only upon the language of section 9778 of the General Code.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—RABIES—PERSON PRESENTING BILL TO COMMISSIONERS MUST BE BITTEN OR INJURED BY AN ANIMAL AFFLICTED WITH RABIES.

County commissioners may not allow a bill for Pasteur treatment rendered a person not bitten by an animal afflicted with rabies, but exposed thereto, unless such person was injured by such animal.

County commissioners may not allow such a bill rendered by person not bitten or injured by an animal afflicted with rabies, but who only attended a person suffering with rabies.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 3, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 23d, wherein you submit for my opinion the following inquiry:

"May the county commissioners legally allow a bill for Pasteur treatment rendered to a person not bitten by an animal, but exposed to same in handling an animal afflicted with rabies, or in attending a person suffering with rabies; or does section 5851, General Code, limit such payments for treatment to persons actually bitten?"

Section 5851 of the General Code provides as follows:

"A person bitten or injured by a dog, cat or other animal afflicted with rabies, if such injury has caused him to employ medical or surgical treatment or required the expenditure of money, within four months after such injury, and at a regular meeting of the county commissioners of the county where such injury was received, may present an itemized account of the expenses incurred and amount paid by him for medical and surgical attendance, verified by his own affidavit or that of his attending physician; or the administrator or executor of a deceased person may present such claim and make such affidavit. If the person so bitten or injured is a minor such affidavit may be made by his parent or guardian."

It is to be noted that it is not only a person who has been bitten by an animal afflicted with the rabies to whom the commissioners may allow an itemized account of expenses paid for medical and surgical attendance, but also a person who has been injured by any such animal. The statute is permissive in form and not mandatory.

If a person has been exposed to an animal afflicted with the rabies in handling said animal and has been injured thereby, and the commissioners deem it proper that his expenses shall be paid, they are authorized to allow the same.

If a person has not been injured in handling an animal afflicted with the rabies, he would not, under section 5851, G. C., be entitled to reimbursement for expenses.

There is nothing in the statute that authorizes the county commissioners to allow a bill for expenses incurred by a person in attending a person suffering with the rabies. The statute is specific in that the person to whom the commissioners are authorized to allow expenses must either have been bitten or injured by an animal afflicted with the rabies.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—COMPENSATION OF TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT MUST BE FIXED ON A PER DIEM OR PER HOUR BASIS—NO AUTHORITY TO FIX AT A STATED SUM PER MONTH.

Township trustees are not authorized to fix the compensation of township highway superintendents at a stated sum per month or per year, but such compensation must be fixed on a per diem or per hour basis.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 4, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of February 24, 1916, in which you submit the following question:

"May the township trustees, under section 78 of the Cass highway law, fix the compensation of the township highway superintendents on a salary basis; for instance, at $800.00 per year, payable monthly, or does the phraseology of said section imply and require that the compensation of said superintendents be fixed on a per diem, or per hour, basis?"

Section 78 of the Cass highway law, section 3373, G. C., reads as follows:

"The township trustees shall fix the compensation of the township highway superintendent for time actually employed in the discharge of his duties, which compensation shall be paid from the township road fund. The compensation and all proper and necessary expenses, when approved by the township trustees, shall be paid by the township treasurer upon warrant of the township clerk."

Neither the section above quoted nor any other section of the Cass highway law contains any express provision that the compensation of the township highway superintendent shall be fixed on a per diem or per hour basis. It is provided, however, that the compensation shall be fixed for the time actually employed by the township highway superintendent in the discharge of his duties. This language warrants the inference that it was not in the mind of the legislature that the official duties of a township highway superintendent would require all the time of that official, and an examination of the statutes relating to the duties of the township highway superintendent warrants the conclusion that a situation which would, in any given township, require the highway superintendent to devote all his time to his duties, would be very unusual. I think the language of section 3373, G. C., and the nature of the duties of the township highway superintendent are such as to fully warrant the conclusion that it was the intention of the legislature that the compensation of the township highway superintendent should be fixed on some basis which would give him full compensation for the time actually employed in the discharge of his duties, and no compensation when not actually employed about the duties of his office.

I therefore advise you, in answer to your specific question, that township trustees are not authorized to fix the compensation of township highway superintendents at a stated sum per month or per year, but that such compensation must be fixed on a per diem or per hour basis in order to insure the carrying out of the legislative intent, to the effect that the township highway superintendent should receive compensation from the public treasury for the time actually employed in the discharge of his duties, and should not receive any compensation from the public treasury when not engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—FORMS OF APPLICATION FOR STATE AID ON HIGHWAYS WITHIN VILLAGES.

Prescribed forms of applications by county commissioners for state aid on highways within villages, which highways are continuations of inter-county highways or main market roads.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 4, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of December 10, 1915, which communication reads as follows:

"The county highway superintendent of Cuyahoga county, Mr. W. A. Stinchcomb, has written us the following letter:

"'Our board of county commissioners has referred to me the forms of resolutions, together with your letter of November 23rd, submitting those resolutions asking for state aid to the commissioners. In reading your letter the fourth paragraph stipulates that "'"These resolutions should be signed without any alterations in the description or in the inter-county mileage."

"'On going over the resolutions as prepared we find that I. C. H. No. 2, No. 31 and No. 3 are entirely omitted, and we also find that the mileage on several is not correct. We find the description referring to I. C. H. No. 34 describes it as intersecting with I. C. H. No. 32 instead of No. 2. Of course I believe that it is the intention of your department to have these resolutions first cover all the inter-county highways of the county, and second that the descriptions and mileage therein be correct. If I am right in this, before submitting these resolutions to the board with my approval, I desire to have your concurrence and approval in making such modifications or alterations as might be necessary to make these resolutions correct, and also to include the three which are omitted. To that end it might be advisable to either have the omitted three roads included in resolutions prepared in your office, or, if you will submit the blank forms I will have the same done here, ask our board to approve them, and submit them to you when finally approved by the commissioners.'

"In connection with the above letter, it is to be noted that inter-county highways Nos. 2, 3 and 31 extend up to the Cuyahoga county line, and from there on in Cuyahoga county their courses lie within the corporate limits of various municipalities. This is the reason that inter-county highways Nos. 2, 3 and 31 were 'entirely omitted' from the resolutions sent to the board of county commissioners of Cuyahoga, and also the reason for Mr. Stinchcomb's statement that the mileage on the several more is not correct.

"I am submitting herewith, copies of the forms of resolutions forwarded to the board of county commissioners of Cuyahoga county, also two letters to the above named board—one for the withdrawal of applications made under the old law which had not been acted upon by this department, and the other suggesting the filling out of the blanks mentioned.

"As I am not clear as to the duties of this department with respect to co-operation with municipalities in the improvement of extensions of intercounty highways and main market roads, I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to the procedure which would authorize this department to so co-operate with such municipalities."

Authority for the co-operation of the state highway department with county commissioners or township trustees in the improvement of highways within villages is found in section 186 of the Cass highway law, section 1193, G. C., the first sentence of which reads as follows:

> "Each application for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of inter-county or main market roads, shall be accompanied by a properly certified resolution of the county commissioners or township trustees stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the inter-county or main market roads therein described, which may include any portion of a highway in the limits of any village, when the same is a continuation of the proposed improvement, and the consent of the village has been first obtained."

I note that the forms of resolutions forwarded to the board of commissioners of Cuyahoga county are drawn in accordance with the suggestions made in opinion No. 998 of this department, rendered to you on the 6th day of November, 1915. Where a part of an inter-county highway lies within a county and the county commissioners desire to apply for state aid not only on said part of inter-county highway but also on a portion of a highway in the limits of a village in said county, which portion of highway is a continuation of the inter-county highway which it is proposed to improve, such fact should be taken into account in the preparation of the resolution of the county commissioners applying for state aid. I suggest that under such circumstances there be inserted in the resolution of the county commissioners applying for state aid, drawn in accordance with the form prescribed in opinion No. 998, referred to above, and between the first and second paragraphs thereof and following the language "in _____ township___, in all a distance of _____ miles, and be it further" the following language:

> "RESOLVED, That the public interest also demands the improvement, under the provisions of sections 1178 to 1231-4, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, of the following described highway in the village of_____ _____in said county, to wit:_____ _____ _____ _____ in all a distance of _____ miles, said highway being a continuation of that part of inter-county highway No. _____ above described, and said village having consented to the making of this application and to the improvement of said highway within its limits, under the provisions of the General Code of Ohio, above referred to, by an ordinance duly passed by the council of said village on the _____ day of _____, 191__, and be it further"

In case the application is made for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a main market road, rather than an inter-county highway, the proper changes to be made in the above suggested language will readily suggest themselves to you, and this is also true in case the application should be made by the township trustees rather than the county commissioners.

As indicated in my letter to you under date of December 24th, replying to your letter of December 10th, quoted above, the matter upon which you request my opinion is one of special interest to Cuyahoga county, and I therefore deemed it proper to communicate with the prosecuting attorney of that county and give him an opportunity to express his views before preparing an opinion. I have only recently had the benefit of an informal conference with a representative of the prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county, and the preparation of this opinion has been delayed for that reason. The unusual situation existing in Cuyahoga county, and which makes the proper application of the law a matter of some doubt in that county, grows out of the fact that all of the territory in Cuyahoga county bordering on the lake has been incorporated and is now included within the limits of the several cities and villages lying along the lake. Inter-county highways Nos. 2, 3 and 31 are situated near Lake Erie and, in a general way, run parallel to the lake shore, and no part of either of these three inter-county highways is situated within Cuyahoga county. The inter-county highways in question extend up to the county line, and at that point their course intersects the corporate limits of villages lying within Cuyahoga county. While no part of any of these three inter-county highways is situated within Cuyahoga county, yet as to each inter-county highway there is within Cuyahoga county a highway lying within the limits of a village or villages, which highway is an extension of the inter-county highway. The embarrassment arises from the language of section 1193, G. C., to the effect that each application for state aid shall be accompanied by a resolution stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the inter-county or main market road therein described, and that there may be included any portion of a highway in the limits of any village when the same is a continuation of the proposed improvement and the consent of the village has been first obtained. If this language is to be given its literal interpretation, it would be impossible for county commissioners or township trustees to apply for state aid on a highway within the limits of a village, which highway is a continuation of an inter-county highway or main market road, unless in the same application the commissioners or trustees also ask for state aid on the inter-county highway or main market road of which the highway within the village is an extension. Such an interpretation would, however, if carried to its logical conclusion, produce ridiculous results. As an illustration, county commissioners who had already applied for and secured state aid on all that part of an inter-county highway lying within their county, would be precluded from thereafter applying for and securing state aid on a highway within a village, which highway was a continuation of the inter-county highway already improved, for the reason that there would be no unimproved portion of the inter-county highway which might be included in the application.

I think it may safely be assumed that the legislature, in using the language in question, intended to provide only that the highway within a village, upon which state aid is sought, must be a continuation of an inter-county highway or main market road, and that the consent of the village must be first obtained.

As an illustration, it was clearly not the intention of the legislature to preclude the county commissioners of Cuyahoga county from applying for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of any highway, beginning at the east line of Cuyahoga county and extending through the village of Euclid of the said county, and which highway within said village is a continuation of an inter-county highway or main market road, merely because such inter-county highway or main market road ends at the east line of Cuyahoga county, and no part thereof lies within said county. Under the circumstances such as I have referred to above,—that is to say, where an inter-county highway or main market road runs to a county line and there stops for the reason that the territory across the county line is incorporated as a village—I advise that the county commissioners of the county in which the village is located are authorized, under the provisions of section 1193, G. C., to apply for state aid on a highway within the village in question, provided said highway is a continuation of the inter-county highway or main market road in question, and the consent of the village has been first obtained, and I suggest the following as a proper form for the body of the resolution of the county commissioners applying for state aid under such circumstances:

> BE IT RESOLVED by the board of commissioners of _____ county, Ohio, that the public interest demands the improvement under the provisions of sections 1178 to 1231-4, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, of the following described highway in the village of _____ in said county, to wit:_____
> _____
> _____
> said highway being a continuation of (inter-county highway, main market road) No. _____, in _____ county, and said village having consented to the making of this application and to the improvement of said highway within its limits, under the provisions of the General Code of Ohio, above referred to, by an ordinance duly passed by the council of said village, on the _____ day of _____, 191__, and be it further
> RESOLVED, That we, the commissioners of said county, do hereby make application to the state highway commissioner for aid from any appropriation by the state from any funds available for the (construction, improvement, maintenance, repair) of (inter-county highways, main market roads) for the improvement of said highway above described and lying within said village, and we do hereby agree, for and on behalf of said county, to pay in the first instance from the funds of said county one-half of the cost and expense of surveys and other expenses preliminary to the (construction, improvement, maintenance, repair) of said highway.

I have so far referred to the proper form of application where county commissioners co-operate with the state highway department in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of a highway within the limits of a village, when such highway is a continuation of an inter-county highway or main market road. The necessary modifications in the suggested forms, where township trustees make the application, will, I think, suggest themselves to you.

In all cases where county commissioners or township trustees apply for state aid on a highway within a village, the application should be accompanied by a properly certified copy of the village ordinance consenting to the application and improvement.

The statute is silent as to the subsequent procedure, and I therefore conclude that all steps subsequent to the application are to be taken in the same manner as though the projected improvement were situated outside a village.

The state highway commissioner is also authorized to co-operate directly with the authorities of a village, and to agree with such authorities as to the division of cost, but I understand that you are not at the present interested in the procedure under such circumstances. Authority for direct operation is conferred by section 1231-3, G. C., being section 229 of the Cass highway law, and should you deem it expedient at any time to exercise the authority conferred by this section, I will be glad to advise you as to the proper course of procedure.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—FORM OF HYPOTHECATION OF BONDS AS COLLATERAL SECURITY FOR DEPOSIT OF FUNDS OF A SCHOOL DISTRICT IN BANK DULY DESIGNATED AS DEPOSITORY FOR SUCH FUNDS.

Prescribed form of hypothecation of bonds as collateral security for the deposit of funds of a school district in a bank duly designated as a depository for such funds under provisions of sections 7604 to 7609, inclusive, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 4, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter under date of February 3, 1916, which is as follows:

"We enclose herewith form of hypothecation of securities offered by a depositary bank as surety for the deposit of school funds in said bank, and we would ask that you pass upon the legality of same. As this question is of such vital importance, we believe it to be advisable for your department to give definite instructions that outline the form of resolution and procedure which should be taken by a board of education in the hypothecation of securities. Many school officials believe that the mere handing over by a depositary bank (national, state or private), of state, county, municipal, township or school bonds of the state of Ohio, to the clerk of the board of education, without any endorsement or written assignment of such securities, is a legal hypothecation of same, and we respectfully ask your instruction in said matter."

The form of hypothecation enclosed in your letter is as follows:

"RECEIPT AND AGREEMENT FOR DEPOSITORY BONDS.

"Norwood, Ohio, February 1, 1916.

"Whereas the Norwood Board of Education has designated the First National Bank of Norwood to act as depository of all its funds, not exceeding $200,000.00, for a period of two years from Feb. 1, 1916, and

"Whereas the First National Bank of Norwood has agreed to receive and care for all deposits and pay all warrants on these funds drawn by the Board of Education, paying in addition interest at the rate of 3-30-100% per annum on daily balances, payable monthly.

"Therefore, and in consideration thereof, the First National Bank of Norwood hereby transfers to the Norwood Board of Education the bonds listed herein, to be held by said board on deposit under the terms of section 7605 of the General Code, as security for the custody, with the understanding that all coupons maturing while bonds are held in deposit may be removed and retained by the said First National Bank.

"If the First National Bank fails to perform any of its functions as bank of deposit as set forth herein, causing any financial loss to the said Board of Education, the said Board may sell sufficient bonds to reimburse it for said loss, and may appropriate and retain the proceeds of said sale to the amount mentioned.

"If, however, the bank performs all its functions as bank of deposit under its contract and under the law, and pays over to the Board of Education all its funds on demand, then this transfer becomes null and void, and the ownership and custody of these bonds will revert to the First National Bank aforesaid.

"_____

"_____

"Under the conditions hereof, the Board of Education of Norwood accepts receipt of the following bonds:—"

The provisions of the statutes governing the designation of depositories for school funds by boards of education are found in sections 7604 to 7609, both inclusive, of the General Code, sections 7604, 7605 and 7609 being amended in 106 O. L., 328.

Section 7605, G. C., as amended provides in part as follows:

"Such bank or banks (having been designated as depositories) shall give a good and sufficient bond, or shall deposit bonds of the United States, the state of Ohio, or county, municipal, township or school bonds issued by the authority of the state of Ohio, at the option of the board of education, in a sum not less than the amount deposited. The treasurer of the school district must see that a greater sum than that contained in the bond is not deposited in such bank or banks, and he and his bondsmen shall be liable for any loss occasioned by deposits in excess of such bond."

Care should be exercised by the board of education of a school district, in accepting bonds as collateral, to see that they come within the class prescribed by the above provision of section 7605, G. C. Proper evidence should be submitted to show that they are a valid issue, having been issued in conformity to law, and that there will be no question as to their salability. Said board of education should also require a certified copy of the resolution of the directors of a bank, designated as depository, authorizing the president and cashier of said bank to hypothecate such bonds, and should see that all legal steps have been complied with in order to make a legal and binding assignment of such bonds.

The form of hypothecation as submitted by you is not complete in some of the foregoing respects, and I therefore prescribe the following form which, in my opinion, meets the aforesaid requirements:

HYPOTHECATION OF BONDS.

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of_____School District, _____County, Ohio, did on the_____day of_____, 19__, designate the_____Bank of_____,Ohio, as depository for the money of said _____ School District in any sum not exceeding_____Dollars, in and by virtue of the provisions of sections 7604 to 7609, both inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, and

WHEREAS, at a legal meeting of the board of directors of said bank, held on the _____day of _____, 19__, a resolution was duly adopted authorizing _____, as president, and_____,

as cashier of said bank, to enter into a good and sufficient undertaking payable to the Board of Education of said_____School District, or to hypothecate securities, owned by said bank, hereinafter described, as collateral security, or both, in such sum not less than the maximum amount above mentioned, as such Board of Education may direct, conditioned for the receipt, safe-keeping and payment over of all the money of said school district, deposited with said bank with the interest thereon at the rate specified in the proposal, and for the faithful performance of all duties imposed by law upon depositories of money of said school district, a certified copy of which resolution is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and

WHEREAS, at a legal meeting of said Board of Education of said _____ School District a resolution was duly adopted authorizing_____, the president, and _____, the clerk of said board, to accept said securities, owned by said bank and hereinafter described, as collateral security for a sum not to exceed _____Dollars, to be deposited with said bank according to the terms of the aforesaid proposal and designation, now, therefore,

WITNESSETH: That the undersigned as said officers of said bank hereby transfer and have this day duly pledged and delivered to the Board of Education of said _____ School District, as collateral security as aforesaid for the faithful performance of said contract so awarded and the faithful performance of the duties imposed by law upon depositories of school funds, the following described securities:

(Here describe the bonds under the following heads: Number, Bonds Issued by, Serial Numbers, Date of Issue, Date Due, Rate of Interest, Face Value, Estimated Market Value.)

All of the above described securities shall be the property of the Board of Education of said _____ School District, in case of any default upon the part of said bank in its capacity as depository. The above described securities may be negotiated or released only by a resolution of the Board of Education of said _____ School District, authorizing such negotiation or release, passed by a majority vote of the full membership thereof, at a regular meeting or at a special meeting called for that purpose.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the said_____Bank has hereunto subscribed its name and affixed its corporate seal, by and through its president and cashier, being thereunto duly authorized, this _____ day of_____ A. D., 19__.

_____ Bank,

(SEAL) By _____President,

Attest: _____Cashier.

The above bonds are hereby accepted as collateral security for the deposit in any sum not to exceed $_____.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF _____SCHOOL DISTRICT,

By _____President,

Attest: _____Clerk.

(In case the cashier of the depository bank is designated by some other title, such title should be substituted for the word "cashier" wherever the same appears in the above prescribed form.)

In prescribing the form of hypothecation as above set forth I do not desire to be understood as holding that this formality is, as a matter of law, necessary to the valid assignment of bonds as collateral security for the deposit of school funds. On the contrary, I think the delivery of bonds as collateral security for the deposit of such funds in a bank duly designated by the board of education of a school district as a depository of the funds of such district, by the officer or officers of said bank duly authorized to make such delivery, and the acceptance of said bonds as such collateral security by said board of education, would constitute a valid assignment of the same for said purpose.

I am of the opinion, however, that the exacting of said formal hypothecation by said board of education is in keeping with sound public policy and the best interests of said school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—CHARTER PROVISION FIXING DIFFERENT STANDARD OF MILK FROM STATE LAW—NEVERTHELESS STATE LAW MAY BE ENFORCED—CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Legislation by a municipality which had adopted a charter, fixing a standard of milk different from that fixed by state law, does not abrogate the provisions of the state law but same may be enforced without regard to said municipal legislation or any prosecution which may have been instituted thereunder.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 4, 1916.

The Board of Agriculture, Dairy and Food Division, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of February 1, 1916, requesting my opinion received and is as follows:

> "Will you kindly give me an opinion whether municipalities have the authority and power to make rules allowing the per cent. of solids in milk to be lower than that required by the state law, or the water or fluids containing a larger per cent. than provided by the laws?
> "My attention has been called to rules adopted by the city of Cleveland in which this is done and it seems to me it conflicts with the Ohio laws."

Section 3 of article XVIII of the constitution of Ohio provides as follows:

> "Municipalities shall have authority to exercise all powers of local self-government and to adopt and enforce within their limits such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations, as are not in conflict with general laws."

Section 7 of article XVIII of the constitution of Ohio provides as follows:

> "Any municipality may frame and adopt or amend a charter for its government and may, subject to the provisions of section 3 of this article, exercise thereunder all powers of local self-government."

It will be noted that the powers of municipal corporations to adopt and enforce within their limits local police, sanitary and other similar regulations are limited to such provisions as are not in conflict with general laws. While there has been no specific judicial interpretation since the adoption of the above provisions of the constitution, as amended, as to what is included in the phrase "local police, sanitary and other similar regulations," some language is found in the case of Fitzgerald v. Cleveland, 88 O. S., at page 338, which, while it may be said to be obiter in that case, indicates the conception entertained by the court as to what is embraced therein. The court at page 359 of the opinion said:

> "Concerning the provision in section 3, article XVIII (may adopt such local police, sanitary and other similar regulations as are not in conflict with general laws), the general laws referred to are obviously such as relate to police, sanitary and other similar regulations, and which apply uniformly throughout the state. They involve the concern of the state for the peace, health and safety of all of its people, wholly separate and distinct from, and without reference to, any of its political subdivisions—such as regulate the morals of the people, the purity of their food, the protection of the streams, the safety of buildings and similar matters.
> "Manifestly, therefore, it was necessary, when the constitutional convention was conferring all powers of local self-government on cities, to provide that, in the adoption of such regulations by any city for itself (police, sanitary and similar ones), they should not conflict with general laws on the subject."

Section 12716 of the General Code fixes the standard of milk in the state and provides:

> "In all prosecutions under this chapter, if milk is shown upon analysis to contain more than eighty-eight per cent. of watery fluid, or to contain less than twelve per cent. of solids or three per cent. of fats, it shall be deemed to be adulterated."

This section of the law is a general provision, and in accordance with the statement of the court in Fitzgerald v. Cleveland, supra, may be safely said to be one of the general provisions of law which cannot be abrogated by municipal legislation in a charter city.

It is not necessary, for the purposes of this question, to discuss the constitutionality of a municipal ordinance enacted by a charter city which fixes a lower standard for milk than that contained in section 12716, G. C., supra, but it is sufficient to say that such an ordinance does not prevent the state from enforcing its laws with reference to the sale of adulterated milk in a charter city. That is to say, the state laws with reference to the sale of adulterated milk are in full force and effect throughout the state and even though a prosecution has been instituted and a person punished, for the sale of such milk, under a municipal ordinance, the state is not barred from instituting another prosecution for the same offense under the state law. This was settled by the case of Koch v. State, 53 O. S., 433, the syllabus of which is as follows:

> "A former conviction before a mayor for the violation of an ordinance is not a bar to the prosecution of an information charging the same act as a violation of a statute."

You are, therefore, advised that the passage of an ordinance in the city of Cleveland fixing a lower standard for milk than that fixed by section 12716, G. C., supra, does not operate to abrogate the provisions of state laws with reference to the sale of adulterated milk, and said state laws may be enforced without regard to said municipal ordinance or any prosecution which may have been instituted thereunder.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES—TUBERCULAR PATIENTS AT STATE SANATORIUM OR TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL, CITY OR COUNTY—WHEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS ARE LIABLE FOR SUPPORT OF SUCH PATIENTS AT EITHER OF ABOVE INSTITUTIONS—AUTHORITY OF BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES WITH RESPECT TO STATE SANATORIUM.

When the commissioners of a county, which does not maintain a tuberculosis hospital, provide for the care and treatment of the resident tubercular patients of said county under a contract with the director of public safety of a city located in said county and maintaining a tuberculosis hospital, said contract being made under authority of section 3143, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 492, and in compliance with the provision of section 1815-15, G. C., 106 O. L., 559, the board of state charities cannot charge to said county commissioners the support of indigent tubercular patients, residents of said county, who are being cared for and treated in the state sanatorium. Said county commissioners may, however, in the exercise of the discretion vested in them by provision of the latter part of said section 1815-15, G. C., enter into an agreement with said board of state charities to support or aid in the support of said patients at said state sanatorium.

If, however, the commissioners of said county refuse to pay for the support, at the state sanatorium, of a tubercular patient, resident of said county and of said city within said county, the amount which the board of state charities, acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of sections 1815-13 and 1815-14, G. C., 106 O. L., 559, finds that said patient or the persons legally liable for his support, under provision of section 1815-9, G. C., are unable to pay, said board of state charities is without authority in law to continue to care for said patient at the state sanatorium and it is the duty of said board to return said patient, resident of said county and of said city within said county, to said county to be cared for in the local institution of said city or by the county commissioners under their contract with said city.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 4, 1916.

Board of State Charities, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from your secretary, Mr. H. H. Shirer, requesting my opinion as follows:

"In our efforts to carry out some of the provisions of H. B. 154 (O. L. 106, page 558), we have encountered a certain condition which causes doubt in our minds as to the proper procedure.

"Section 1815-15 sets forth the idea that no county that is maintaining a county tuberculosis hospital or had joined in the maintenance of a district hospital or has contracted with the authorities of a county, district or municipal hospital shall be compelled to support patients in the state sanatorium.

"The entire act does not seem to clearly provide a method of adjustment of conditions as they exist in Hamilton county. In that county the poor fund referred to in section 1815-14 arises from a portion of the Dow tax upon saloons located outside of Cincinnati. If this is not sufficient, a tax may be made against taxable property located outside of Cincinnati.

"The city of Cincinnati has erected and maintains a municipal institution for tubercular patients known as the Branch hospital.

"There are a number of patients in the state sanatorium who, prior to the date this act went into effect, were supported by private organizations. An investigation of the patients and legally liable relatives shows that they are in destitute circumstances. The private organizations feel that because of section 1815-15 they should not be expected to continue this support.

"On May 24, 1914, a contract was entered into by the commissioners of Hamilton county and the director of public safety of the city of Cincinnati whereby the county would pay the city of Cincinnati one dollar per day for care and treatment at the Branch hospital of tubercular persons who are residents of Hamilton county, but outside of the municipalities thereof. This contract was made for one year and has not been formally renewed, although payments have been made since the expiration of contract including the month of December, 1915. There are still a few patients at the Branch hospital for whom the county expects to pay.

"Under these circumstances, we submit the following:

"1. Can the board of state charities charge to the county commissioners of Hamilton county the support for patients now at the state sanatorium who are personally unable to pay or any legally liable relatives for them?

"2. Has the superintendent of the state sanatorium power to accept patients without personal payment of the five-dollars-per-day (week) fee who are residents of the municipality of Cincinnati, as is done in certain counties where no public institution exists for the treatment of tubercular patients or any provision made in the manner set forth in H. B. 154?

"In this connection I desire to state that a somewhat similar situation exists in Cuyahoga county.

"The commissioners of Hamilton county insist that they will not pay for patients at Mt. Vernon from their county."

By the act of the General Assembly, known as H. B. No. 154 (as found in 106 O. L., 558) section 2068, G. C., was amended and section 1815, G. C., was supplemented by adding thereto sections 1815-13, 1815-14 and 1815-15 of the General Code.

Section 2068, G. C., as amended relates to the admission of persons suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis to the Ohio state sanatorium, and provides:

"Any citizen of this state of more than seven years of age, suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis in the incipient or early stage, as determined by the superintendent, may be admitted to the sanatorium upon payment in advance of five dollars each week, which charge shall fully cover all expenses for medical treatment, medicine, nursing, board, lodging and laundry. Payment for the support of patients in the sanatorium shall be made in accordance with the provisions of section 1815-13, 1815-14 and 1815-15 of the General Code."

Section 1815-13, G. C., makes it the duty of the board of state charities to make collections for the support of patients at said state sanatorium, and provides that:

> "When the superintendent of the Ohio state sanatorium shall report to the board of state charities that an applicant for admission to or an inmate of that institution or any person legally responsible for his support is not financially able to pay the amount fixed by section 2068 of the General Code, it shall be the duty of the board of state charities by its authorized agents to make a thorough investigation as is provided by law for such investigations in other institutions."

Section 1815-14, G. C., provides that:

> "If, after the investigation provided in the next preceding section, it shall be found that said applicant or inmate or any person legally responsible for his support is unable to pay the amount fixed by law, said board of state charities shall determine what amount, if any, said applicant or inmates or any person legally responsible for his support shall pay," and further provides that:

> "The difference between the amount so determined and the amount fixed by section 2068 of the General Code shall be paid by the county in which said applicant or patient has a legal residence. The amount so determined to be paid by the county shall be paid from the poor fund on the order of the county commissioners."

Section 1815-15, G. C., however, provides that:

> "No county that is maintaining a county tuberculosis hospital or has joined in the erection or maintenance of a district tuberculosis hospital or has contracted with the proper authorities of a county, district or municipal tuberculosis hospital for the care and treatment of residents of that county suffering from tuberculosis shall be compelled to support patients in the Ohio state sanatorium, but the county commissioners of any such county may agree to support or aid in the support of a resident of that county in the Ohio state sanatorium."

Under the above provisions of section 1815-14, it is clear that, where a county has not provided for the care and treatment of residents of such county, suffering from tuberculosis, in one of the ways mentioned in section 1815-15, G. C., said county can be compelled to pay a part or all of the expenses incident to the care and treatment of said resident patients of the state sanatorium as determined by the board of state charities acting under authority and in compliance with the provisions of said section 1815-14, G. C., taken in connection with the provisions of section 1815-13, G. C.

It is equally clear that under the provision of section 1815-15, G. C., said county commissioners may, at any time, terminate this liability by making such provision for said resident patients.

From your statement of facts it appears that the commissioners of Hamilton county entered into a contract with the director of public safety of Cincinnati for the care and treatment of the resident tubercular patients of said county at the Branch hospital in said city. While it appears that said contract was made for the term of one year commencing with the 24th day of May, 1914, that the same was not formally renewed at the end of said one year term, it further appears that said county commissioners are still paying for the care and treatment of said patients at said hospital, according to the terms of said contract, and that said contract is being treated by the parties thereto as still in full force and effect.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question that, inasmuch as the commissioners of Hamilton county are providing for the care and treatment of the resident tubercular patients of said county in the manner above set forth, your board cannot charge to said county commissioners the support of indigent tubercular patients, residents of said county, who are now being cared for and treated in the state sanatorium. Said county commissioners may, however, in the exercise of the discretion vested in them by provision of the latter part of said section 1815-15, G. C., enter into an agreement with your board to support or aid in the support of said patients at said state sanatorium.

Coming now to a consideration of your second question, it will be remembered that I have already held in opinion No. 970 of this department, rendered to your board under date of October 27, 1915, that so long as the patient applying for admission to the state sanatorium is financially able to pay and until the superintendent reports inability to pay, your board has no function to perform, and that the superintendent has authority, and it is his duty, to collect in advance the charge stipulated in the above provision of section 2068, G. C., as a weekly charge for the support of the patient.

In keeping with this former holding I am of the opinion that the superintendent of the state sanatorium is without authority to accept, as patients, any of the persons, referred to in your second inquiry, who are financially able to pay the charge fixed by said section 2068, G. C., except upon the payment in advance of said weekly charge.

If, however, said superintendent reports to your board that any one of said persons, either as an applicant for admission or as an inmate of said state sanatorium, or any person, legally responsible for his support under provision of section 1815-9 of the General Code, is not financially able to pay the amount fixed by said section 2068, G. C., it becomes the duty of your board to make the investigation required by the provision of the latter part of section 1815-13, G. C. If, upon said investigation, your board finds that said applicant or inmate or any person legally responsible for his support, is unable to pay the amount fixed by law, it becomes your further duty under provision of section 1815-14, G. C., to determine what amount, if any, said applicant or inmate or person legally responsible for his support, shall pay. The difference between the amount fixed by section 2068, G. C., and the amount so determined would be the amount which the commissioners of said county would be required to pay by the provision of the latter part of section 1815-14, G. C., if said county commissioners were not providing for their resident tubercular patients at the Branch hospital of Cincinnati as hereinbefore set forth.

I have already held in answer to your first question that inasmuch as said county commissioners have made said provision for said tubercular patients, they cannot be compelled to pay the aforesaid amount, as determined by your board, for the care and treatment at the state sanatorium of a tubercular patient resident of said Hamilton county, but that such county commissioners may, under the provision of the latter part of section 1815-15, G. C., enter into an agreement with your board to support or aid in the support of said patient. That is to say, they may agree to pay the aforesaid amount for the support of said patient as determined by your board in compliance with the requirements of sections 1815-13 and 1815-14 of the General Code.

If, however, said county commissioners refuse to pay said amount and the same is not contributed from private sources, then I am of the opinion that your board is without authority in law to continue to care for said patient at the state sanatorium and that it will be your duty to return such patient, resident of Hamilton county and of the city of Cincinnati, to said county to be cared for in the local institution by said city of Cincinnati or by the county commissioners under their contract with said city.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—CITATIONS OF STATUTES RELATING TO RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES BY SAID BOARD AS PREPARED BY BUREAU, APPROVED.

The citations of the statutes relating to receipts and expenditures of moneys by county boards of education as prepared by the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, together with the rulings made by said bureau in connection therewith, as set forth in said opinion, are in conformity with opinions heretofore rendered by the attorney-general interpreting the provisions of said statutes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter under date of February 18th, which is as follows:

> "We hand you herewith citations of the laws relating to the receipts and expenditures of moneys by the county boards of education, which we believe conform to opinions already rendered by your department. These are briefed in order that they may be handy to county superintendents and boards of education for ready reference. Will you kindly review same and make the necessary corrections therein, if any, and embody same in a letter or opinion to this department at your early convenience?"

Citations of the provisions of the statutes, relating to the receipts and expenditures of moneys by county boards of education, as prepared and submitted by you, are as follows:

"COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION FUND.

"Sources of Revenue.

"The legal sources of revenue of the county board of education fund are:

"1. Reservations from local school funds. Section 4744-3, G. C.

"2. The state's share of county and district superintendents' salaries. Sections 4743 and 4744-1, G. C.

"3. Examination fees. Section 7820, G. C.

"4. Transfers from dog tax fund. Section 5653, G. C.

"The funds are available for expenditures as follows:

"(a) Those accruing from classes Nos. 1 and 2 are automatically appropriated, at the time of their origin, for the payment of the salaries of the county and district superintendents and for contingent expense, in the various sums as specified in the certificate under section 4744-2, G. C.

"(b) Those arising from receipts under Nos. 3 and 4 are available for conduct of teachers' institutes and the expenses of the members of the county board of education.

"These payments are to be made upon vouchers signed by the president of the board. Sections 4734, 4743 and 4744-1.

"No other sources of revenue are provided for the county board of education fund, nor has the board any powers of expenditure other than those mentioned above, viz.:

"EXPENSES OF THE COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION TO BE PAID UPON THE ALLOWANCE OF THE COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION AND WARRANT OF THE COUNTY AUDITOR.

"1. Salary of the county superintendent. Sec. 4744-1, G. C.

"An attempt by the board to fix the salary of the county superintendent high enough to cover the $300.00 expense provided by section 4744-1, G. C., is contrary to the spirit of the law, as provision is made for reimbursement of actual and necessary expense.

"2. Salary of district superintendents. Sec. 4743, G. C.

"3. Allowance to county superintendent for expenses and clerk hire. Sections 4734 and 4744-1, G. C.

"A flat allowance of $300.00 to the county superintendent for expenses is illegal.

"The expenses may include traveling and personal expenditures incurred by the superintendent while engaged on official business within the county school district.

"The county board of education may allow the superintendent an amount sufficient to cover the actual and necessary expense of maintaining and operating an automobile owned by him, when used in the discharge of his official duties.

"4. The official expense of the members of the county board of education, within the county school district. Section 4734, G. C.

"A member of the county board cannot reimburse himself for the use of his own vehicle or automobile, but may be reimbursed for the actual expense of operation; i. e., the cost of gasoline or horse-feed.

"Includes transportation and hotel expense.

"5. Stationery and supplies for the office of the county board and superintendent. Opinion of attorney-general, March 17, 1915.

"Includes postage, telephone and telegraph tolls on official business, stationery and supplies for office use of the superintendent and members of the county board of education on official business.

"6. Expense of county institutes. Section 7860, G. C.

"7. Transportation of pupils where local boards neglect or refuse to provide same. The cost thereof to be charged against the local district. Section 7731, G. C.

"8. Expenses of publication of course of study. Section 4737, G. C."

All of the statutes governing the legal sources of the county board of education fund and the availability of the funds constituting said county board of education fund for expenditure, as well as the manner in which such expenditures shall be made, have been cited by you. I suggest, however, that the proper year book in which each of said statutes as enacted or as last amended is found should be noted.

As stated by you no source of revenue other than those mentioned in said statutes are provided for said county board of education fund and the authority of the county board of education to expend money is confined to the provisions of said statutes.

I deem it advisable in this connection to call your attention to a recent decision of the court of appeals of the second appellate district in the case of State of Ohio ex rel. O. P. Mitman, et al., as the Board of Education of Greene county, Ohio, v. The Board of County Commissioners of Greene County, Ohio, interpreting the provisions of section 5653, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 145. Said court holds that the provisions of said section authorizing the transfer, from the dog tax fund, of any surplus as defined in said section, to the county board of education fund at the direction of the county commissioners, is directory rather than mandatory. This holding is contrary to the holding of this department in opinion No. 654 rendered to your bureau under date of July 27, 1915. The case of State ex rel. Mitman, et al., etc., v. Board of County Commissioners, supra, is now pending in the supreme court.

Your observations as to the proper limitations imposed by law on the allowance to the county superintendent for traveling expenses and clerical help and all expenditures which may be made by the county board of education, are in keeping with opinions heretofore rendered by this department.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that, with the addition above suggested, the foregoing citations of the statutes relating to receipts and expenditures of moneys by county boards of education as submitted by you together with the rulings made by you in connection therewith, are in conformity with opinions heretofore rendered by the department interpreting the provisions of said statutes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—TRANSFER OF TERRITORY FROM LOCAL DISTRICT TO ANOTHER WITHIN SAME COUNTY DISTRICT —SECTION 4692, G. C., GOVERNS—TRANSFER OF TERRITORY FROM ONE COUNTY TO ANOTHER COUNTY—SECTION 4696, G. C., GOVERNS.

The authority of the board of education of a county school district to transfer territory from one local district to another within such county school district is under provision of section 4692, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 397.

The term "county school district" as the same appears in the phrase "to another county school district" in the provision of section 4696, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 397, refers to a county shool district as defined by section 4684, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 133, and as distinguished from a rural or village or city school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

HON. S. W. ENNIS, Prosecuting Attorney, Paulding, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of February 10, 1916, you refer to your letter under date of January 25, 1916, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "In the month of April, 1915, the county board of education of Paulding county, Ohio, transferred twelve (12) sections of land from the Harrison township rural school district of said county, to the village school district of Payne, Ohio. Since the enactment of section 4696 of the General Code of Ohio, the electors in the school district, which was transferred from Harrison township aforesaid, have petitioned the county board of education with more than 75 per cent. of the electors in said territory for the transfer of said territory back to the Harrison township rural school district, and I would like to have your opinion whether or not said section 4696, would permit a transfer of this kind of the county board of education?
> "Said section 4696 provides in part as follows: 'A county board of education may transfer a part or all of the school district of the county school district to an adjoining exempted village school district or city school district or to another county school district.' Does that part of said section, which provides, or to another county school district mean to another district of Paulding county or does it mean to another district of an adjoining county?"

I am informed by the superintendent of public instruction that Payne village school district is not exempt from county supervision and is, therefore, a part of Paulding county school district.

In view of this fact it is evident that you have confused the above provision of section 4696, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 397, with the first part of section 4692, G. C., as amended by the same act of the general assembly amending said section 4696, G. C. By this same act section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 138, was again amended.

By virtue of these amendments the authority of the county board of education is extended under provision of section 4736, G. C., as now in force, to the creation of a new school district from one or more local districts or parts thereof; the provisions of said section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., authorizing the county board of education to transfer territory from one rural or village school district to another within the county school district was carried into the first part of section 4692, G. C., and the authority of said county board was extended so that under provision of said part of said section 4692, G. C., as now in force, the county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district, subject to the conditions and in compliance with the requirements prescribed by the further provisions of said section.

The provision of section 4692, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., 135, authorizing the transfer of a part of any county school district to an adjoining county school district, or city or village school districts, by the mutual consent of the boards of education having control of said districts, was amended and as amended is now found in the first part of section 4696, G. C., as quoted by you.

By the plain terms of the above provision of said section 4696, G. C., as amended the board of education of a county school district may, by complying with the conditions and requirements contained in the further provisions of said section, transfer a part or all of a school district of such county school district, to an adjoining exempted village school district or to a city school district, or to another county school district, provided at least fifty per cent. of the electors of the territory to be transferred petition for such transfer.

I am clearly of the opinion, in answer to your second question, that the above provision of section 4696, G. C., as amended has no application to transfers of territory by the board of education of a county school district from one local school district to another within such county school district, the authority to make such transfers being vested in said county board by the above provision of section 4692, G. C., and that said provision of said section 4696, G. C., only applies to transfers made from a local district within a county school district to one of the districts mentioned in said section and located without said county school district.

The term "county school district" as the same appears in the phrase "to another county school district" in the above provision of section 4696, G. C., refers to a county school district as defined by section 4684, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 133, and as distinguished from the rural or village or city school district, and the phrase "to another county school district" must be given the same effect as if it read "to an adjoining county school district." In other words, in order to effect a transfer of territory from a rural or village school district within one county school district to a rural or village school district within an adjoining county school district, under authority of said section 4696, G. C., as amended, said territory must first be transferred from said rural or village school district within one county school district to the adjoining county school district, by the joint action of the boards of education of said county school districts, in the manner provided in said section and according to the conditions therein prescribed. The board of education of said adjoining county school district may then annex said territory as a part of said adjoining county school district to said rural or village school district within said adjoining county school district.

The effect of the further provisions of said section 4696, G. C., as modifying the provision of the first part of said section and determining the proper meaning to be given to said section taken as a whole, was carefully considered in opinions Nos. 903 and 926 of this department, copies of which were enclosed to you under date of January 26th.

Coming now to a consideration of your first question it is evident that in view of the fact that the Payne village school district is a part of Paulding county school district, the authority of your county board of education to transfer a part of Harrison township rural school district within said county school district to said village school district, at the time the said transfer was made in April, 1915, was under provision of section 4736, G. C., as amended in 104 O. L., and as then in force.

It appears that since the amendments above referred to became effective more than seventy-five per cent of the electors residing in the territory transferred as aforesaid have petitioned your county board to transfer said territory back to your rural school district.

From what has already been said in answer to your second question it follows that the provisions of section 4696, G. C., as amended have no application to the case presented by you. The authority of your county board of education to transfer the territory in question, now a part of Payne village school district, back to Harrison township rural school district, is under the above provision of section 4692, G. C. The filing of the petition referred to in your inquiry was not, therefore, jurisdictional to the right of said county board of education to exercise the discretion vested in it by provision of said section 4692, G. C.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that, unless a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory in question and acting under the further provision of said section, filed with said county board of education, within thirty days after the filing of the map of said territory with the county auditor, a written remonstrance against the said proposed transfer, said county board may, in the exercise of said discretion, and by complying with the requirements of the further provisions of said section 4692, G. C., transfer said territory from said village school district to said Harrison township rural school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—NEWSPAPERS—PUBLISHING NOTICES OF DELINQUENT TAX SALES—PUBLICATION FOR ONLY ONE WEEK, NO LIABILITY AGAINST COUNTY.

Newspapers publishing notices of delinquent tax sales must observe the statutory requirements in reference thereto, and publication of such notice for only one week creates no liability against the county for payment therefor.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of February 29, 1916, containing the following statement and inquiry:

> "Section 5704, General Code, provides for the publication of the delinquent tax sale, and section 5706, General Code, provides for the fees for the publication of same.
> "The county auditor's office of a certain county, in making up the list for the newspapers of the delinquent land and lot sale, in delivering the advertisement to the English newspaper, through some confusion or inadvertence, only ordered it to be published one time in said English newspaper. In delivering the manuscript for advertisement to the German newspaper the proper instructions were given to publish same two times. On the day of the sale, aware of the fact that same had not been published according to the law by the English newspaper, upon the advice of the prosecuting attorney the sale was stopped and none was had. Now the question of payment of the newspaper bills for this advertisement of delinquent land sale has arisen.
> "Question 1. Under the circumstances here given is the German newspaper entitled to the fees for said publication out of the county treasury?
> "Question 2. Is the English newspaper entitled to all or any part of the fees for publishing this advertisement out of the county treasury?"

The matter of the publication of the list of delinquent lands in each county is specifically provided for by statutory law to be found in sections 5704, 5705 and 5706 of the General Code. By the provisions of said first named section each county auditor is required to have said list published weekly for two weeks between the twentieth day of December, and the second Tuesday in February, next ensuing in one newspaper in the English language, printed and of general circulation in the county, and also in one newspaper printed in the German language if such there be printed and published and of general circulation in said county.

Said section 5705 provides the form for the notice of said delinquent tax sale so to be published, and section 5706 fixes the amount that may be charged by newspapers for publishing said notice.

It will thus be seen that every essential matter connected with the publication of said delinquent tax sale is carefully and fully covered by statutory law. These provisions and requirements of the law are notice to everyone, concerned in said publication, of what is necessary to make the same legal, and all persons connected with said publication are bound by such notice. Buchanan Bridge Company v. Campbell et al., 60 O. S. 406.

The English newspaper named in your inquiry was bound to know what the requirements of the law were in regard to the publication it was called upon to make, and in law must be held to have known that such publication was required for two weeks, and that a publication for only one week was unlawful. Buchanan Bridge Company v. Campbell et al., supra. It, therefore, has no legal claim against the county for such publication and may not receive payment therefor from the county treasury.

The German newspaper named in your inquiry, upon the other hand, having complied with the law in every respect, so far as appears from your statement, is now entitled to payment for its services in that respect, and said payment may be made from the county treasury as provided by section 5706, supra.

Your first question, therefore, is answered in the affirmative and your second question in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—CHARTERS ADOPTED UNDER HOME RULE AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION WHICH PROVIDE FOR CIVIL SERVICE IN CITIES SUPERSEDE STATE LAW.

Charters adopted under the home rule amendments of the constitution, which provide for civil service in municipal affairs in compliance with constitutional requirements, supersede the state law in such municipalities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

The State Civil Service Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from the municipal civil service commission of Toledo, Ohio, in which the inquiry is made as to what law shall control in the administration of civil service in said city, its charter provisions or the state law? As this is a question of some importance I am directing my answer thereto to your commission.

An examination of the charter of the city in question shows that it provides a complete method or plan for the administration of civil service as applied to its municipal affairs. Its provisions appear to be in compliance with the requirements of section 10 of article XV of the constitution of Ohio that:

> "Appointments and promotions in the civil service of the state, the several counties, and cities, shall be made according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by competitive examinations."

It may also be noted in this connection that said charter was prepared and adopted under the authority of sections 3, 7, 8 and 9 of article XVIII of the constitution, and a duly certified copy thereof was filed in the office of the secretary of state. The civil service provisions of said charter may be found in sections 167-180 thereof, inclusive, and are too lengthy to be repeated here.

Whatever individual opinion may be on the questions involved in this inquiry, and however widely divergent thereon may have been the opinions of the individual members of our supreme court as ascertained by their published reports, it must be assumed, upon the principle of stare decisis that these questions may now be considered conclusively and finally settled by the cases of Fitzgerald v. Cleveland, 88 O. S., 338, and State ex rel. Lentz v. Edwards et al., 90 O. S., 305. The latter case is certainly decisive of the question here. The following observations of the court quoted from its opinion therein are a complete answer to the inquiry under consideration:

> "The manner of regulating the civil service of a city is peculiarly a matter of municipal concern. One of the powers of local self-government is the power of legislating with reference to the local government within the limitations of the constitutional provisions above referred to. As long as the provisions made in the charter of any municipality with reference to its civil service comply with the requirement of section 10 of article XV, and do not conflict with any other provisions of the constitution, they are valid and under the cases referred to discontinue the general law on the subject as to that municipality. That provisions adopted by a city might differ from the general laws within the limits defined was not only expected, but the very purpose of the amendment was to permit such differences and make them effective.
> "The averments of the petition show that the charter for the city of Dayton was framed and adopted under and in accordance with the terms of article XVIII and duly certified to the secretary of state. By the sections of the charter, which are set forth in the petition, it is further shown that the city of Dayton fully complied with the letter and the spirit of section 10 of article XV by providing for appointments and promotions in the civil service of the city according to merit and fitness to be ascertained by competitive examinations."

The charter in question here, as before observed, meets the constitutional requirements of section 10 of article XV, aforesaid, in that it provides for appointments and promotions in the civil service of said city, according to merit and fitness, to be ascertained as required by said constitutional provision, so far as practicable, by competitive examinations. It was framed and adopted as provided by the various sections in aforesaid article XVIII of the constitution. It, therefore, in the language of the court, "discontinues" the state law as to civil service in municipal affairs within said city, and the provisions of said charter, with respect to civil service in said municipality, must control over the provisions of the state law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

AUDITOR OF STATE—HAS AUTHORITY TO RELEASE BOND GIVEN UNDER SECTION 291, G. C., PROVIDED NEW BOND IS GIVEN.

The auditor of state has authority to release a bond given under section 291, G. C., provided a new bond is given, which new bond must be so worded as clearly to cover past transactions.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 4, 1916, you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

> "July 3, 1908, G. R. Cerrito executed a bond to the state of Ohio in accordance with sections 290-295, General Code. A copy of said bond is enclosed herewith; you will note that it is signed by The Bankers' Surety Company as surety.
> "January 25, 1916, Attorney B. D. Nicola advised this office that his client had to give a mortgage on his premises in order to obtain this bond. Now he desires to sell his premises and in order to do so must cancel the mortgage. He proposed filing a substitute bond with personal surety and inquired of this office if we would grant the Surety Company a release from liability under their bond. We advised him that such bond would be acceptable and that we would grant the company a release from liability after the acceptance of the new bond.
> "Under date of January 27th, Mr. Nicola advised that this was not acceptable to the Surety Company saying that they insisted upon a release from all liability under their bond both for past actions of Cerrito and for future transactions, and he inquired if we would grant such a release if in the new bond there was incorporated a condition binding the new sureties for past as well as future acts of Cerrito.
> "To this we replied that we were reluctant to complicate matters by accepting such a bond and that we doubted our right or authority to accept a bond guaranteeing something which has already been done. In a letter of the second instant, Mr. Nicola insists that we inquire further into our right to do so saying that it is the only means by which his client can have this mortgage cancelled.
> "The question is, therefore, can we accept a bond guaranteeing past as well as future transactions? If we can accept such a bond can we grant such a release to the surety considering that these bonds are executed to the state of Ohio and not to the auditor?"

You stated in your request for opinion that the matter had been referred to you by Mr. B. D. Nicola, attorney-at-law, Cleveland, Ohio. I wrote to Mr. Nicola for his views upon the matter, and, under date of February 24, 1916, received from him a very able brief.

The statutes relative to bonds of transportation agents are contained in sections 290 to 295 of the General Code.

Section 290, G. C., requires the obtaining from the auditor of state of a certificate of compliance with sections 291 and 292 before engaging in said business.

Section 291, G. C., provides that a person about to engage in said business shall execute a bond to the state of Ohio in the sum of five thousand dollars "conditioned for the faithful holding and transmission of any money, or the equivalent thereof, delivered to it for transmission to a foreign country, or conditioned for the selling of genuine and valid steamship or railroad tickets for transportation to or from foreign countries, or both, if to be engaged in both of such businesses."

Section 292, G. C., provides as to the sureties, and further states that "the bond shall be approved by the auditor of state, and filed in his office. Upon the relation of any party aggrieved, a suit to recover on such bond may be brought in a court of competent jurisdiction."

Section 293, G. C., provides that the auditor shall keep a bond book, giving the date of receipt, the names of principals, place of transacting business, names of surety and the name of the officer before whom the bond was executed.

There is nothing in the statutes whatsoever relative to the right of the auditor to accept a second bond in place of the first or to require additional sureties after the bond has been given, or to permit the substitution of one bond for another. In fact, the statutes are entirely silent upon the subject, and the sole question that arises is whether or not, the statutes being silent upon the subject, the auditor may deal with such bonds in the same manner as a private individual.

The law is well established that if the bond is properly worded a bond may be given to cover past transactions of the person bonded. It all depends upon the language of the bond.

> "As a general rule, the bond of a public officer has no retroactive effect, and does not cover past delinquencies unless it in terms says that it is to have such effect."
> Brandt on Suretyship, section 625.

The same rule is recognized in the case of Farrar v. United States, 5 Pet., 373.

> "Resort must be had to the language of the bond itself, to determine the time within which defaults must occur, in order that they may be covered by the undertaking. The bond will not be retroactive unless the contract so stipulates; it may be unlimited in duration or expire at a definite time, depending upon the language of the instrument."
> Stearns on Suretyship, section 147.

It is clear, therefore, that if the bond stipulates that it shall have a retroactive effect the courts will give it such effect.

Your question is:

> "Can we accept a bond guaranteeing past as well as future transactions?"

Since in ordinary practice a bond can be given to cover past transactions as well as future, and since it appears to be the only intent of the legislature that a bond shall be given which can be sued upon in case of any defalcation—and that would be accomplished now by the acceptance of a bond to cover past transactions—I am of the opinion that you may accept such a bond, and also that after accepting the same you may release the former bond heretofore filed with you.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDING FOR BOND ISSUE BY CITY OF NEWARK, OHIO, BOND FORM.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

RE:—Bonds of the city of Newark, Ohio, in the sum of $30,000.00, for the purpose of re-constructing, improving and enlarging the municipal works of the city of Newark, Ohio, for the generation and transmission of electricity for the use of the city, being thirty bonds of the denomination of $1,000.00 each, falling due from March 1, 1917, to March 1, 1926, inclusive.

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the city of Newark, relative to the above bonds, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the General Code. I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds, when properly drawn, executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said city of Newark.

I am unable to approve the bond form submitted with the above transcript, and I am writing the city auditor suggesting a change in the language of one paragraph, which suggestion will doubtless be followed. I suggest, however, when the bonds are presented to the treasurer of state for delivery that I be given an opportunity to further examine the same. Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—ROAD IMPROVED UNDER AGREEMENT BETWEEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—BONDS SHOULD BE ISSUED BY COUNTY COMMISSIONERS UNDER AUTHORITY OF SECTION 6929, G. C.

Where a road is improved under an agreement between county commissioners and township trustees, by the terms of which the cost is to be divided between the county and the township, and it is necessary to issue bonds, the same should be issued by the county commissioners under authority of section 6929, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 6, 1916.

HON. IRVING CARPENTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Norwalk, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On January 29, 1916, you addressed to me a communication, calling my attention to section 3295, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 536, and requested my opinion as to the proper interpretation of the section in question in the following particulars:

"1. What tax limitations apply to levies made for interest and sinking fund purposes for such bonds; especially do the two mill for Twps. and the ten mill aggregate limitations both apply?

"2. What is the length of time such bonds may run?

"3. It provides that 'bonds shall be advertised and sold in the manner provided by law.' To what provisions of law does this have reference?"

Under date of February 1, 1916, you submit the following additional inquiry regarding section 3295, G. C.:

"In issuing bonds under said section for road improvement purposes by the trustees of a township in which a municipal corporation is situated, are they an obligation on the entire township including such corporation, or only that part of the township outside the corporation?"

Under date of February 22, 1916, in response to my request for additional information as to the exact purpose or purposes for which it is proposed to issue bonds under the section in question, you advised me that the trustees of several townships in Huron county and the county commissioners of that county have agreed upon a plan for the improvement, during the coming summer, of several roads by the joint action of the trustees and commissioners, provided the trustees can raise the funds necessary to pay their part of the cost of such improvements.

You observe that for the trustees to raise the money under the Cass highway law, as interpreted by this department, would make the construction of the improvements this season impossible and say that the only method you have to suggest by which the work can be done this year is for the trustees to raise the money under section 3295, G. C., which you say seems to you to authorize an issue of bonds in an amount not greater than one per cent. of the tax duplicate of a given township without a vote of the people, both for road improvements by townships under agreement with county commissioners and also by townships alone. You further state that in several of the townships in question there are municipal corporations and that this fact led to the inquiry made by you under date of February 1st.

Section 3295, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 536, reads in part as follows:

"The trustees of any township may issue and sell bonds in such amounts and denominations, for such periods of time and at such rate of interest, not to exceed six per cent., for any of the purposes authorized by law for the sale of bonds by townships or by municipal corporations for specific purposes, and for the purpose of providing funds to pay the township's share of the cost of any improvement made under an agreement with the county commissioners, * * *.

"* * * All bonds heretofore issued by township trustees under assumed authority for the improvement of roads in connection with county commissioners, shall, in so far as the same might otherwise be held invalid on account of the absence of power of such trustees to issue bonds for such purpose, be held to be legal, valid and binding obligations of the township issuing such bonds."

Whatever may be the force and effect of section 3295, G. C., the situation which presents itself to you finds a full and complete solution in the provisions of chapter VI of the Cass highway law, relating to road construction and improvement by county commissioners. While it is true that the Cass highway law was passed May 17, 1915, approved June 2, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, and while the act amending section 3295, G. C., being senate bill No. 315, was passed May 27, 1915, approved June 4, 1915, and filed in the office of the secretary of state June 5, 1915, so that the Cass law was passed before senate bill No. 315 was passed, and was approved before that bill was approved, and it might therefore be argued that if there is any inconsistency between the Cass highway law and senate bill No. 315, the latter should govern, being the later expression of the legislature, yet there is another rule of statutory construction which renders it extremely doubtful whether township trustees have any authority whatever to issue bonds for road improvements under authority of section 3295, G. C. I refer to the well established principle that where there are two statutory provisions, one of which is general and designed to apply to cases generally, and the other is particular and relates to only one case or subject within the scope of the general provision, then the particular provision must prevail and, if both cannot apply, the particular provision will be treated as an exception to the general provision. It is even doubtful whether senate bill No. 315 is to be regarded as a later expression of the legislature than the Cass highway law, in view of the decision of the supreme court of Ohio in the recent case of State v. Lathrop, and the fact that senate bill No. 315 went into effect on the 4th day of September, 1915, 90 days after it was filed in the office of the secretary of state, while the Cass highway law did not go into effect until September 6, 1915.

A further question as to the right of township trustees to issue bonds for the township's share of the cost of a road improvement to be carried forward under an agreement with county commissioners is raised by a consideration of the history of senate bill No. 315, 106 O. L., 536, in which bill section 3295, G. C., was put in its present form. This bill amended sections 3295, 6912-1 and 3939, G. C., and its manifest purpose was to validate bonds theretofore issued by township trustees under assumed authority for the improvement of roads in connection with county commissioners. So far as section 6912-1, G. C., is concerned, it can have no effect, as all the other sections of the General Code, relating to the scheme of road improvement referred to in said section, were repealed by the Cass highway law. So far as section 3295, G. C., is concerned, it has already been indicated that the Cass law makes specific provision as to the issue of bonds where a road improvement is made under an agreement between county commissioners and township trustees.

It is unnecessary, in answering your inquiry, however, to determine finally whether township trustees, under authority of section 3295, G. C., may issue bonds for road improvements carried forward by them or carried forward under an agreement between the trustees and the county commissioners, inasmuch as chapter VI of the Cass highway law furnishes ample authority for the issue of bonds to meet the situation presented by you, which authority is not subject to any question, and the levies for the redemption of bonds issued under that chapter are outside of certain limitations that would undoubtedly apply if an attempt were made to issue bonds under authority of section 3295, G. C.

It appears from your communication of February 2nd, that it is desired to improve certain roads in your county, a part of the cost to be met by the county and a part by the township or townships in which the roads are situated.

Section 6921, G. C., being section 100 of the Cass highway law, provides, among other things, that the county commissioners may enter into an agreement with the trustees of the township or townships in which a road improvement is in whole or in part situated, whereby said county and township or townships may pay such proportion of the amount of costs, damages and expenses as may be agreed upon between them.

Under section 6927, G. C., being section 106 of the Cass highway law, county commissioners are authorized to levy a tax upon all the taxable property of the township or townships interested in a road improvement and in which the same is to be constructed, for the purpose of providing by taxation a fund for the payment of the proportion of the cost and expenses of the improvement to be paid by the township or townships. This tax is, by the language in question, made subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. By the use of this language the legislature has indicated that the levy in question is subject to the fifteen mill limitation but is outside the ten mill limitation. Inasmuch as the levy may, under the terms of the section itself amount to as much as three mills, it is manifest that the legislature did not intend that such levy should be subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes. Under section 6929, G. C., being section 108 of the Cass highway law, the county commissioners, in anticipation of the levy provided for by section 6927, G. C., may, whenever in their judgment it is deemed necessary, sell the bonds of the county. If in your county the proportion of the costs and expenses of the projected improvement to be paid by the county is to be paid from current levies, and no bond issue is necessary to meet the county's proportion of the costs and expenses of the improvement, then it will only be necessary for the county commissioners to issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of taxes levied on the township or townships interested, and it will not be necessary to sell bonds in the aggregate amount necessary to pay the estimated costs and expenses of the improvement. If, however, it is necessary to sell bonds to pay the county's share of the costs and expenses, then both the county and township's portions of the costs and expenses may be provided by one bond issue under authority of section 6929, G. C. In either event, the bonds must state the purpose for which they are issued, the interest rate must not exceed five per cent., and the bonds must be advertised and sold in the manner provided by law.

In opinion No. 1203, rendered by this department to Hon. C. P. Kennedy, prosecuting attorney of Summit county, under date of January 25, 1916, procedure for a bond issue to care for the cost of a county road improvement to be made under an agreement between the county commissioners and the trustees of a township or townships was fully discussed, and I enclose a copy of that opinion for your information. The discussion of the matter in question will be found on pages 3 to 9, inclusive, of the opinion rendered to Mr. Kennedy.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

RESTAURANT CONDUCTED ON WEEK DAYS IN CONNECTION WITH SALOON MAY BE KEPT OPEN ON SUNDAY IF REGULAR EATING HOUSE—SECTION 13050, G. C., CONSTRUED—INTOXICATING LIQUOR.

A restaurant conducted on week days in connection with a saloon may be kept open on Sunday if it is a regular eating house without violating section 13050, G. C., providing it is securely closed off from that part of the room where liquors are regularly sold.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1916.

HON. PERRY SMITH, Prosecuting Attorney, Zanesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your enclosure under date of February 23, 1916, is as follows:

"A party has been conducting in this city for some time past a saloon business at the corner of Main and a side intersecting street. His room has a depth of about 100 feet and is about 20 feet in width, fronting on Main street, with a side entrance opening out on the side street near the center of the building (serving as an entrance to the restaurant, hereinafter mentioned). The room is made up of what was originally a room 50 feet in depth, fronting on Main street, and a room of equal depth, to the rear thereof, fronting on the side street, with the original wall between the two rooms removed. His license authorized the conduct of the saloon business in the entire room, and his Aiken tax is assessed accordingly. The front of the room to the depth of 45 feet (being substantially the original front room) is occupied by a bar, with all furniture, fixtures and equipment for the conduct of the retail liquor or saloon business, and the furnishing of liquor is restricted to this space, except as hereinafter mentioned.

"Substantially the whole of what was originally the rear room is occupied in the conduct of the restaurant business, being equipped with lunch counter, tables, chairs, and all necessary furniture and fixtures, meals and lunch being regularly served as a separate and independent business, blended only in their common ownership, management and serving of liquors to patrons of the restaurant, in connection with their meals, by waiters, who procure the liquor at the bar. All liquors are paid for by patrons of the restaurant at the bar. Lunch and meals are paid for by them at the restaurant. Upon the line of and in the place of the original wall separating what was originally two rooms, door casings and folding doors are erected making, when closed, substantially a solid wall, being of a character indicating a severance of the premises into two rooms, but accessible to each other. If the owner should keep his room, occupied by the restaurant, open on Sunday for the purpose of conducting his restaurant business therein, using his side street entrance for access thereto, and kept his folding doors securely closed and locked, and neither displayed nor furnished any liquors therein, would he be violating the provisions of sections 13050 and 13051 of the General Code? By separating restaurant from saloon, as herein indicated, and serving patrons of the restaurant on week days with liquors, in connection with their meals, paid for by them at the bar, would the restaurant be subject to additional Aiken tax?"

Sections 13050 and 13051 of the General Code, to which you refer, provide as follows:

"Sec. 13050. Whoever, on Sunday, sells intoxicating liquors, whether distilled, malt or vinous, or permits a place, other than a regular drug store, where such intoxicating liquor is sold or exposed for sale on other days to be open or remain open on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, etc."

"Sec. 13051. In regular hotels and eating houses the word 'place,' as used in the next preceding section, shall mean the room or part thereof where such liquors are usually sold or exposed for sale, and the keeping of such room or part thereof securely closed, shall be a closing of such place within the meaning of such section."

The primary question involved in the consideration of the matter submitted is as to the character of the restaurant which, during the week days, is operated in connection with the saloon. In other words, does it bear to the saloon the same relation as the bar room in a hotel bears to the dining room and other parts of the hotel?

From the statement of facts submitted it seems to me to be conclusive that the restaurant referred to is a regular eating house, such as is contemplated under the provisions of section 13051 of the General Code, supra, which section is a limitation on the operation of the provisions of section 13050 of the General Code, supra. From the statement of facts submitted it is made to appear that all the transactions of the saloon are separate and distinct from those of the restaurant connected therewith, payment for drinks being made at the bar, while payments for restaurant service are made in the restaurant proper.

In section 13051, of the General Code, it is specifically provided that the "place" referred to in section 13050, and which can mean nothing else but a bar room, shall be regarded as closed if the room or part thereof is securely closed, and the facts in this case, to my mind, constitute a case which may be clearly distinguished from the one referred to in the case of Lederer v. State, 5 O. C. C., 623, in which it was held:

> "Where the bar in a dining hall in which liquors are served at tables throughout the week is enclosed on Sundays by a wire screen only, and the hall is open to the public and other refreshments are served, it is a violation of this section."

In the case under consideration the restaurant-keeper has apparently taken every possible precaution to securely close off his restaurant from the saloon proper, and it seems to me that it would be an unwarranted and arbitrary rule which would deprive a man of the use of his property for a legitimate business to be conducted on Sunday, such as would result from an interpretation of section 13051 in this case along the lines of the decision in the case of Lederer v. State.

The question in reality turns on whether or not the restaurant herein is a "regular eating house," and that fact is specifically determined by the statements in your letter.

Therefore, assuming that the restaurant referred to is a regular eating house, and that on Sunday the restaurant is securely closed off from the part of the bar room used in connection therewith during the week, it is my opinion that section 13051 has been complied with, and the benefits of that section are extended to the keeper of the restaurant, whose action in keeping the restaurant open on Sunday under these conditions would not be a violation of the law.

This conclusion, of course, disposes of the necessity of replying to the second question, which relates to the payment of additional Aiken tax on the ground that the saloon business is being conducted in more than one place, which, of course, would be in violation of the constitutional provision governing matters of this kind.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

LIQUOR LICENSE LAW—APPLICATION TO SOCIAL CLUBS AND FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS—WHEN SALE IS MADE BY CLUB THE TRANSACTION CONSTITUTES A SALE.

The application of the license law to clubs, lodges and associations furnishing intoxicating liquors to their members at their rooms.

Where the property in intoxicating liquor passes from a club, lodge or association to a member thereof for which there is a payment of a price or an agreement to pay the same, such transaction constitutes a sale for which a liquor license is required under the license law of this state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1916.

State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours under date of February 14, 1916, is as follows:

"We are in receipt of a letter from the Hamilton County Liquor Licensing Board of Cincinnati, from which we quote as follows:

"'Judge Spiegel, of our municipal court, before whom is pending a case of violation of the Sunday closing law by one of the so-called "Clubs," is desirous of a ruling from the attorney-general, and accordingly wrote to Mr. Turner upon the subject.

"'Mr. Turner replied that he would be glad to render an opinion, if requested so to do by your board. It is our opinion that any method of disposing of intoxicating beverages by a check or ticket system, constitutes a sale, and we think it would be a great assistance, not only to our board, but to the various local boards throughout the state, if a ruling to this effect could be obtained from the attorney-general.'

"The matter of social and fraternal club operations in the state has become very acute, and at our request several social and fraternal clubs in one of the cities of the state have written us setting out in full their method of operation. The originals of these letters we are enclosing herewith, numbered from one to five.

"No. 1 states its plan of handling intoxicating liquors as follows:

"'The privileges of the club are limited to members only, and sales are made to them in two ways:

"'First—Coupon books like attached, containing coupons worth five cents each are sold to members.

"'Second—Those who do not buy coupon books sign tickets which are charged to members' accounts.'

"Club No. 2 states its plan of operation as follows:

"'The dues of the club are fifty dollars a year for each member payable quarterly. In addition to this at the first of each year each member is charged with an additional forty dollars out of which fund the supplies of the club are purchased and charged the members at an agreed amount. This is done for the purpose of equalizing the accounts of the members. A great many of the members do not use up their credit, and in such case pay the balance in cash. Those who exceed the amount make up the difference at the agreed rates. In case of default in the payment of a member's account the deficit is charged off and the loss is borne equally by the members of the club. The rates at which supplies are distributed are limited to the cost of the supplies and the cost of their service.

"'All cigars, liquors, beverages and other supplies are purchased by the members as a whole, and are distributed in the manner just mentioned. This distribution is only incidental to the main objects of the club, and in no sense is the club "a person, corporation, or co-partnership engaged in the business of trafficking in spirituous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquor." The word "trafficking" being defined as a purchase and sale, there is no sale as the essential element that there must be a transfer of title from one person to another is lacking. A man cannot buy from himself. The only "business" in which the club is engaged, if any, is in the maintenance of its clubhouse with its ball rooms, kitchen, library, grill rooms, reception, reading and other rooms for the promotion of the social intercourse of its members.

"'It is true that the club has a federal license to engage in the business but this is not conclusive evidence that it is "in the business of trafficking in liquor," as against the facts which prove the contrary. Frankly, the federal license was obtained in the belief that it was cheaper to pay it than engage in such a controversy as this. But in view of the holding of the state commission it will be abandoned at the end of the year.

"'It is practically impossible for this club to obtain a state license. The cost is prohibitive. But if this were not so, to whom could it be issued? The club is not a person, a corporation, and according to all the authorities, we but mention the latest, cannot possibly be considered a partnership.'

"Club No. 3 gives its plan of operation as follows:

"'First—No one but a member in good standing has access to the club rooms, and must show his receipt for dues, upon request. If he desires any beer, same can be had only through our locker system. He must fill out a card, same as copy enclosed, stating what brew he desires and sign the card; the upper half is sent to the brewery as his order, and the other half is retained by the member, after payment of $1.00 for one case of 12 pint bottles; of this amount 45 cents is for the 12 bottles and the balance of 55 cents is for icing same. Whenever he desires a bottle of beer, he presents said card and it is punched at the bottom in the space provided for same.

"'We will positively state that no other liquors of any kind are kept or handled in club.'

"Club No. 4 gives its plan of operation as follows:

"'A member wishing to have beer at the rooms must order same on order slips as per sample enclosed. At the time of ordering he pays the price of the beer, that is, the amount charged by the brewery. This makes it a transaction between him and the brewery. When the case of beer arrives at the hall it is numbered and his name placed on same. We have our different ice boxes subdivided with iron partitions so that 3 bottles from each case is kept in there separately to be iced. The number on this subdivision is the same as the member's number on the case. We give him a strip of tickets with his name and number on, also the kind of beer he has ordered. When he wishes a bottle he presents one of his tickets to the custodian at the wicket at locker room door, and said custodian goes to the ice box and takes from his compartment a bottle of beer and gives it to him. He then takes a bottle from his case which is arranged along the wall and puts it in the ice box, replacing the one that was taken out. In this way each man that orders beer gets his particular beer and no other. This is the manner of handling our beer proposition. In addition to the above we make a charge for the locker rent of each man that has beer ordered. Any additional information you may wish we will gladly give upon request.'

"Club No. 5 states that in the use of intoxicating liquors in their club rooms they pursue the following course:

"'We use a coupon and ticket system—these coupons and tickets being redeemable in merchandise for that amount.

"'We don't conduct a bar. Refreshments of all kinds are served at tables in the club rooms, and to no one but members of the order in good standing.'

"We may state further, that we are informed by a number of other clubs situated in various parts of the state that they maintain what may be termed a locker system. That is, each member of the club has his individual locker or compartment under lock and key in which he stores his supply of wet goods purchased by himself, and to which no one else has access, which supply is only used by himself or friends upon his invitation, no money being passed except in the original purchase of the goods from brewery or liquor dealer.

"This department submitting this information to you would like to have your opinion upon the entire matter of social and fraternal clubs having no license from this department, but in which intoxicating liquors are kept by the members or for the use of members, whether all or any of the various plans discussed above are in compliance with the licensing law of the state; or if none of them are, under what plan, if any, may private, social or fraternal clubs operate so as to permit the use of intoxicating liquors by its members within the club precincts?

"You will please understand that we are requesting an opinion not only upon the various plans indicated above, but also upon the entire question of the use of intoxicating liquors in private organizations or clubs."

Your communication suggests a somewhat general consideration of the application of the liquor license law to the purchase and sale for consumption of intoxicating liquors by lodges, fraternal and social orders, clubs, associations or societies, or the members thereof, at the rooms of such lodges, orders, clubs, associations or societies.

What is known as the liquor license law (amended senate bill 203, approved May 3, 1913, 103 O. L., 216) is entitled "An act to provide for license to traffic in intoxicating liquors and to further regulate the traffic therein, etc.," and was enacted pursuant to article XV, section 9 of the constitution as adopted September, 1912, the primary provision of which is as follows:

> "License to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall be granted in this state, and license laws operative throughout the state shall be passed with such restrictions and regulations as may be provided by law, and municipal corporations shall be authorized by general laws to provide for the limitation of the number of saloons."

We have already observed that the basic or fundamental subject matter of both the constitution and statutory provisions to be considered is the "traffic in intoxicating liquors." The constitution requires that laws shall be passed for granting licenses to traffic in intoxicating liquors subject to certain restrictions and limitations therein prescribed, and the license law referred to makes specific detailed provision for the method of, machinery for and conditions under which "license to traffic in intoxicating liquors" may be granted throughout the state. After making full provision for the granting of licenses, there was enacted in the license law, for the prevention of persons engaging in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors without first procuring such license, and for the purpose of enforcing said act, certain penal provisions as follows:

Section 48 of the license law, 1261-63, G. C., 103 O. L., 237,

> "Whoever sells intoxicating liquors without having been duly licensed as provided herein shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, etc."

Certain exceptions to this provision are thereafter made, which are not material to the present consideration.

Section 49 of the license law, 1261-64, G. C., 103 O. L., 238,

> "Whoever, whether licensed or not, sells intoxicating liquors in a quantity of less than two gallons, as provided therein, and who does not hold a saloon license, shall be guilty of the offense of selling liquor without a license, etc."

Prior to the adoption of article XV, section 9 of the constitution, above referred to, the phrase "trafficking in intoxicating liquors" had a statutory definition as found in section 6065, G. C., which was modified by the amendment of said section in the enactment of section 60 of the license law, 103 O. L., 241.

This definition is not, however, of substantial importance to the present consideration for the reason that the penal statutes applicable to the subject matter in hand, as above quoted, do not contain this phrase, but instead thereof there is found the phrase "sells intoxicating liquors." To this phrase the legislature has not chosen to give any special statutory definition. Whatever application the statutory definition of the phrase "trafficking in intoxicating liquors" may have to the provision of the license law in which this phrase is found, or even to the phrase "sells intoxicating liquors" as found in the penal provisions of the law, is not material to the present consideration for the reason that it is conceived that the operations or transactions of any club, lodge, society or association, to which you refer in your inquiry, which would come within the meaning of the phrase "sells intoxicating liquors" would also be within the meaning of the phrase "trafficking in intoxicating liquors" as defined by the statute, and vice versa.

While section 6099, G. C., provides that in clubs, societies or other combinations of individuals where intoxicating liquor is kept for the use of the members in dry territory, the keeping of a place where intoxicating liquors are furnished or given away in violation of the local option laws, it is not provided that such place shall be held to be a place where intoxicating liquors are sold, hence the provisions of this section offer little, if any, aid in determining the application of the license law which has reference only to sales..

The primary subject of inquiry, in so far as it is affected by the license law, is then whether or not there is a sale of intoxicating liquors by any person, firm, corporation or association not having been duly licensed according to the provisions of sections 1261-6 to 1261-73, G. C., inclusive. Since the license law is operative only upon sales, it has no application, as above observed, to the mere furnishing or giving away of intoxicating liquors.

Sale is defined by section 8381, G. C., as follows:

> "(2) A sale of goods is an agreement whereby the seller transfers the property in goods to the buyer for a consideration called the price."

From this definition of sale it will be readily observed that the determinative feature of a sale for first consideration in the present instance is the transfer of the property in the goods which are the subject matter of the transaction under consideration.

Assuming for the purpose of your inquiry that the individual members of the lodge, club, order or association in question are the consumers of the liquors referred to, and that there is a price paid for the liquor at the time or before it reaches the consumer, the question then resolves itself into this: From whom does the property in the liquor pass to the consumer, the member of the club, order, lodge, association or society or other person who pays the price therefor? If the property in the liquor passes to the consumer, who pays the price from any person, firm, corporation or association not duly licensed and authorized to engage in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors under the laws of this state there is manifestly a violation of the penal provisions of the license law hereinbefore quoted, assuming that the consumer pays a price therefor. In other words, if the person from whom the property in the liquor passes to the person who pays the price therefor is not authorized and licensed to sell intoxicating liquors, such transfer will constitute a sale, and therefore a violation of the license law.

Whether or not the furnishing of intoxicating liquors by a club or association to the members thereof constitutes a sale is a question which has been much before the courts. There are two distinct and irreconcilable lines of decisions upon this question. One of these lines of decisions follows the English rule as laid down in the case of Graff v. Evans, L. R. S. Q. B. Div. 373, which is based principally upon the theory that the furnishing of intoxicating liquors by a social club to its members is only a method or device for the distribution among the several members of the common property of all. Another theory advanced in support of this holding is that the license laws are intended to operate upon only that class of transactions which constitute a business. In other words, is applicable only to that class of individuals who pursue the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors for a livelihood, or, in short, conduct that class of places which are ordinarily termed saloons.

The other line of decisions is based upon the fundamental principle of the law of sales, viz., that where there is a transfer of the property in goods accompanied by the payment, or an agreement to pay a price therefor, such transaction constitutes a sale irrespective of the character of the parties thereto. One of the later cases upon this question is that of the County of Ada v. Boise Commercial Club, 20 Idaho, 421, 38 L. R. A. (n. s.) 101. This is a well considered case in which practically all the cases in the different lines of decisions heretofore referred to are reviewed and considered, holding that:

> "Where a social club, organized as a corporation under the general laws of the state governing social and religious corporations, keeps intoxicating liquors at the club rooms, and delivers to members such quantity of liquor as the member may request, for which the member pays in cash or gives a card to have the same charged to his account, and thereafter pays such account, and pays or agrees to pay the price fixed by the clubs, the liquor being purchased to be drank upon the premises, such liquor being kept and sold as a mere incident to the general objects and purposes of the club, such club is subject to the provision of Rev. Code, section 1506, and is required to procure a license."

The conclusion in this case, it will be observed, is based upon the primary principle heretofore referred to, that the property in the liquor passes from the club to the member accompanied by the payment of a price or an agreement to pay the same. The question of whether or not the furnishing of intoxicating liquors to members of a social club was within the meaning of the phrase "trafficking in intoxicating liquors," was before the court in the case of University Club of Cincinnati v. Frank Ratterman, 3 C. C., 18, under the following state of facts:

> "A bona fide social club, incorporated under the laws of the state, 'for the promotion of higher education and of social and friendly relations between its members,' and not for profit, leased a building in which were reading, dining, sitting and other rooms and a library, which was open to the members of said club at all reasonable hours; and with the funds of such corporation it purchased food, wines, liquors and cigars, which during the years 1886 and 1887 were furnished at such club house, to such members as desired the same, and which were there used and paid for by the persons receiving the same, at a price fixed by the management, so as simply to pay the cost of procuring and serving them. No dividends or profits can be received by any member, nor does any officer receive a salary, and the club is not engaged in any business with a view to profit. During such period by the rules and regulations of the club, a member was authorized to introduce strangers having certain qualifications, who thereupon, for a limited period became entitled to the privileges of such club-house, and to be furnished with food, wines, liquors, etc., at the price so fixed as aforesaid, the member introducing such guests being liable for all supplies furnished him and being not paid for by such guest. During these years this privilege was occasionally exercised by the members of the club and persons so introduced were furnished by the club with wines, liquors and other supplies, which were paid for by them or the persons introducing them.
> "HELD: That the furnishing of such wines and liquors so purchased by said club to its members in this manner was a 'traffic in intoxicating liquors' within the meaning of section 8 of 'An act providing against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors' passed May 14, 1886 (82 O. L., 157), the same being a sale by said club to its members, and rendered it liable to assessment under the terms of said statute, as did also the furnishing of such liquors to the guests of such club in the manner stated."

In view of this holding of the circuit court of this state, and being inclined to the view taken by the supreme court of Idaho in the case above referred to rather than that of the line of cases following the English rule, it is believed as heretofore stated that the controlling factor in determining the parties to a sale is the question from whom to whom the property passes rather than the character of the parties to such transaction.

With these observations we may proceed to a consideration of the specific statements of fact submitted in your inquiry. The language of the court in the case of United States v. Alexis Club (D. C.) 98 Fed. 725, deemed particularly applicable to the present question, is as follows:

> "Did the defendant then sell liquor to its members? I shall not review the irreconcilable cases upon this subject, nor make the superfluous attempt to produce a new argument in support of my conclusion. I content myself with saying, briefly, that I agree with the general opinion of the community, and hold the transaction to be a simple, ordinary sale. If a chartered club, such as the defendant, buys liquor, the legal title to this property is in the corporation, and not in the members. * * * The legal title, then, being in the corporation, it is further to be observed that, when the title passes to a consumer, it passes by a transaction that exhibits every element of a sale, and shows no outward sign of being anything else. The intending consumer asks to be served with a definite quantity of intoxicating drink. The owner of the legal title to the liquor, acting by a paid servant, agrees to the request, requires the price to be paid in cash, or accepts the consumer's promise to pay in the future, and thereupon delivers the subject of the bargain. Nothing else takes place, and, if this is not a sale, but is really a partial distribution of the common stock, the truth is so veiled that the participants in the transaction, I venture to assert, rarely suspect that they are taking part in anything but a commonplace sale."

In addition to the statement of club No. 1, as above set forth, the accompanying correspondence shows among other things the following: "The club is incorporated not for profit."

"The fiscal year of the club ends March 31st of each year, and the books were audited some months ago up to April 30, 1915, which showed the following:

"Income from dues and initiation fees including sales of refreshments, restaurant service, cigars, billiards and pool	$16,659.19
"Expenses	17,144.71
"Deficit for year	$ 485.52
"Loss for above year from sale of refreshments and restaurant service	$ 2,709.60"

It may be here observed that whether the transaction results in profit or loss is altogether immaterial to the question as to whether or not said transaction constitutes a sale. (Sing v. Roth 14 O. N. P. (n. s.) 29). And if there is a sale it is equally as immaterial to whom the same is made, whether a member of a club or a stranger.

From the above statements it seems a fair presumption at least that the liquor in question prior to the order of the member of the club is the property of the club. The language of the court in the opinion in the case of Southshore Country Club v. The People, 228 Ill. 74, 12 L. R. A. (n. s.) 525, is pertinent as follows:

> "The liquor belongs to the corporation as a legal entity, and no member owns any share of the liquor, as a tenant in common with the other members or otherwise. An association organized merely for social, literary, scientific or political purposes, although not incorporated is not a partnership. 25 A. & E. Ency. of Law, 2nd Ed., page 1137. A member of such an association has no individual right or interest in the property, and owns no proportionate share of it, but only has a right to the joint use so long as he continues to be a member. Even if they were tenants in common the transfer of a specific part of the property to one for a stipulated price would be a sale."

In the case of State ex rel., Young v. Minnesota Club, 106 Minn., 516, it was held that the rule declared by some of the cases, that the distribution of intoxicating liquors to club members does not constitute a sale, for the reason that the members are the joint owners of the property, and are merely distributing to themselves property which they already own, has no application where the organization is a legally constituted corporation, and the statute prohibiting sales without a license makes no express exception in favor of such corporation.

The coupon book attached contains twenty coupons each of which states on its face "Good for Five Cents. The _____ Club." On the front cover thereof is "$1.00." No further description of the ticket is given. These coupons and tickets are manifestly only a device adopted for the payment of the price of those things, whether liquors or otherwise, for which they are exchanged. Nothing appears from the coupons indicating from whom the purchase was made other than the name of the club as above stated. I am inclined to believe, however, that the financial statement of the club above set forth warrants the presumption that "sales of refreshments" has reference to and includes the sale of intoxicating liquors. If the term "refreshments" includes intoxicating liquors of any kind, the sales thereof by the club, which is a corporation, is admitted. It would not be argued that a corporation, other than such social club, organized under the laws of the state for any lawful purpose, which engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors without being licensed, although only as incidental to its main purpose, would be immune from the penalties of the law solely on the ground that it confined or limited its sales to persons who were members or stockholders of the corporation. If the property in the liquor is in the corporation and is transferred to a member or stockholder of such corporation for a price paid or to be paid, such transaction constitutes a sale notwithstanding some coupon or ticket device is adopted as a means of payment of the purchase price.

In Woolan & Thornton on the Law of Intoxicating Liquors, section 795, page 1337, it is said:

> "We agree with the views expressed in State v. Easton Social, Literary and Musical Club, that there is no occasion to be astute, and indulge in questionable refinements in order to relieve these corporations of the just consequences of their acts or endeavor by artificial or fictitious reasonings to permit persons in combinations to do what individuals without combinations could not do. The fact that there is no profit in a sale does not deprive the transaction of its character as a sale, and surely it makes no difference that the sale of liquor is only incidental to the main purpose of the club. The sale of liquor is but an incident to the business of a drug store or restaurant. It is certainly but a trifling incident of the business of a large hotel.

While as stated above the facts as set forth in your inquiry warrant the presumption that the property in the liquor is passed from the club to the purchaser of the coupons or tickets, thus making a sale by the club, they are perhaps not sufficient to make such presumption conclusive.

In the absence of other facts material to determine in whom the property in the liquor is when transferred to the member of the club, I can only say, in reference to what is referred to by you as "Club No. One," I am of the opinion that if the property in the liquor is transferred from the club to the member the facts stated as to the manner of payment of the price thereof would constitute such transaction a sale, and in the absence of the club having been duly licensed would be in violation of the license law of the state.

As I understand the statement designated by you as "Club No. Two," it is in brief this: The club is an unincorporated organization or association of individuals each of whom at the beginning of each year in addition to the annual dues of fifty dollars, payable quarterly, is required to pay to the club for the purpose of creating a fund the sum of forty dollars. The purpose of this fund is to provide the several members of the club with cigars, liquor, etc., which are supplied to the several members without further payment in such quantities as he may desire at rates established by the club. If an individual member fails to exhaust his forty dollar credit at the end of the year he is paid his balance in cash. If a member has used an amount of cigars, liquors, etc., when calculated at the established rate, in excess of forty dollars during the year, he agrees to pay and is charged for the excess of his supplies at the established rate. If any member fails to pay for such excess supplies the remaining members are charged, agree to pay and do pay into the fund of the club the deficit of such defaulting member or members. A further fact not set out in your statement, which is apparently deemed to be material to the consideration, is found in the correspondence submitted, viz.:

> "The privileges of the club are never extended by card or otherwise to any residents or non-residents of the city, and no one other than a member has ever obtained any supplies at the club for cash or upon credit."

I assume this may be taken to mean that no person other than a member of the club is permitted, either directly or indirectly, to pay or contribute any money or thing of value to the club or the funds of the club which are in any way appropriated directly or indirectly to furnishing the club its supply of intoxicating liquors. In respect to this statement, however, it need only be again observed that if there is a sale of intoxicating liquor by the club it becomes altogether immaterial whether the person to whom such sale is made is or is not a member of such club.

This plan of operation is, however, clearly distinguishable from that designated in your inquiry as "Club No. One." Whether there is a sale by the club to the members under this latter plan is a question not at all free from difficulty. It might be argued with much force and apparent reason that the fund created by the payment of the forty dollars by each member is the common property of all; that likewise the stock of liquors is the common property of all, and that the establishment of fixed rates and prices is only a device adopted for the distribution of the common property according to the individual interests of the several members or shareholders, and that no price is charged or paid to the club for the liquor supplied.

It is a principle of the law of sales too elementary to necessitate reference to authorities that it is immaterial to the determination of whether a transaction constitutes a sale, whether the price of the subject of the transaction is paid before or after its delivery or the transfer of the property therein.

In all the plans submitted in your inquiry much stress is apparently laid upon the manner in which the consumer of the liquors is relieved of his money. It seems to be conceived that all depends upon the method by which payment of the price of the liquor is effected. Much cunning and ingenuity have doubtless been wasted in devising schemes, the purposes of which are too palpable for speculation. The controlling factor in determining whether or not a transaction as between given parties constitutes a sale is, as before repeatedly stated, more often dependent upon from and to whom the property in the subject of the transaction passes than the manner of the payment of the purchase price.

If, as it has been assumed from your statement since it is not altogether clear on that point, the payment of forty dollars is actually made by each member at the beginning of each year, and there is not merely a charge of that amount made against the member on the books of the club, the fund thus created by such payments to the club becomes the property of the club and ceases to be the property of the individual member. Southshore Country Club v. People, supra. No member of the club can make any claim of individual right to any part of such fund if the fund is the property of the club as distinguished from its members. No further argument is needed in support of the position that the property in the liquors purchased from such fund is still in the club as distinguished from its members. That is to say, that payment by the members is in effect and to all intents and purchased from such fund is still in the club as distinguished from its members. which the club, as distinguished from the members, thereby agrees to furnish at such times and in such amounts as may be desired by the member at an agreed price.

Under the plan designated "Club No. Two," now under consideration, let us suppose a possible case. At the beginning of the year immediately after the payment of the forty dollars by each of the several members the fund thus created is immediately invested in a stock of supplies consisting of liquors and cigars. At the end of six months one-half of the members have consumed each his entire credit of forty dollars. None of the other half of the members have consumed any part of their several credits. There is then on hand one-half of the original stock. This is by fire or other casualty destroyed. On whom does the loss fall? Under the facts the latter half of the membership would be clearly entitled to a refunder of their money from the club. Then the property in the stock must have been in the club and would be transferred to the members only upon delivery to them individually. Again, suppose the entire fund has been invested and at the end of the year there is on hand one-fourth of the stock. One-fourth of the original amount of the fund must be refunded to those members who have not consumed the amount of their payment calculated at the fixed rate. To whom does the surplus stock belong? Manifestly to the club as an organization. If the property in the liquors is at any time in the club as distinguished from its members, it beyond question passes or is transferred from the club to the member at the time of the delivery to such member, and it matters not that the price thereof, together with the price of other liquors and supplies similarly obtained, has been paid through some device in advance.

I am for the reasons above suggested, therefore, of the opinion that intoxicating liquors may not be lawfully supplied by a club or association to its members in the manner set forth in your statement designated as "Club No. Two," without the club being duly licensed to traffic in intoxicating liquors.

The conclusion as to what is termed "Club No. Three" will turn largely if not altogether upon whether the order described therein is filled directly by the brewery or a licensed dealer, subsequent to the members signing the same, or by the club. If such orders are filled by the club from a stock had on hand by it for that purpose, such transaction would constitute a sale under the principles hereinbefore referred to. On the other hand, if no liquors come into the possession of the club, its officers or employes except from the brewery or other licensed dealer upon an order, such as described, made in good faith and in the manner stated, and no stock of liquors is kept at the club by the brewery or licensed dealer in advance for the purpose of filling such orders, I am inclined to the view that the property in the liquors passes directly from the brewer or dealer to the member of the club upon delivery of the liquors at the locker, and that no other member of the club, or the organization as such, at any time has any right, title, interest or property therein. From this it follows that the sale is between the brewery or dealer and the member as an individual, and for carrying on such transactions there is no requirement that a license be obtained by the club.

Your statement as to what is termed "Club No. Four" is in fuller detail, and, as I understand, your No. Four is substantially similar to No. Three just considered. The order is made in No. Four direct to the brewery accompanied with the purchase price thereof, and delivery of the liquors is made by the brewery as directed in said order. The liquor becomes the individual property of the ordering member upon delivery, and neither the club nor any other member thereof could maintain any claim of right, title, interest or property therein. As I understand the statement of facts the tickets used serve no purpose other than to identify the owner of certain quantities of liquor then in store in the ice box or rooms of the club under certain designated numbers or marks to which the member has the sole and absolute right. He may claim and take such liquor at his pleasure, and the transaction described gives him no right or interest in other liquors similarly in the custody of the club. I am therefore of the opinion under the plan described in "Club No. Four" that the club is not required by law to obtain a liquor license.

Under "Club No. Five" the facts stated are not sufficient to enable me to render any opinion thereon. It may be suggested, however, that if intoxicating liquors are purchased by the club and exchanged for the coupons and tickets so that the property in the liquors is at any time in the club, I am inclined to the view that such transaction would constitute a sale by the club under the principles heretofore discussed, for which a license would be required by law.

The question of the liability of clubs or associations in what is known as "dry territory" for the Dow-Aiken tax is not here considered, nor may this opinion be so construed as to limit or restrict the operation of section 6099, G. C., in local option territory.

This opinion is limited to the facts stated herein, and is not to be held to apply to any other case where the facts may be different.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS—A LICENSE TO ENGAGE IN SAID BUSINESS IS NOT SUBJECT TO LEVY AND SALE ON EXECUTION ISSUED FOR SATISFACTION OF A JUDGMENT AGAINST THE LICENSEE.

A license to engage in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors issued pursuant to law in this state, is not subject to levy and sale on execution issued for the satisfaction of a judgment against the licensee. Whether license may be reached by proceedings in aid of execution, not involved herein.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 7, 1916.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours under date of January 22nd, is as follows:

> "Within the last few days a judgment was rendered against a licensee in the city of Columbus, Franklin county, by the municipal court of this city, and an execution placed in the hands of the execution bailiff of that court. The bailiff proceeded to the place of business of the licensee with his execution on the claim of a small amount something like sixty odd dollars and he levied upon a stock of bottled goods, some cigars and tobaccos but did not levy upon the entire business of the licensee, but attempted to include in this levy the license certificate issued to the licensee by the Franklin county board and removing the same from the wall of the saloon where it was hanging in accordance with law, took it away and locked it up in a safe. The licensee closed his place of business and reported the situation to the local board, which, after some investigation, concluded that the act of the execution bailiff in taking down and carrying away the license certificate was unauthorized. The board, therefore, granted the licensee written permission to conduct his business until the license certificate was returned to him or he had obtained a duplicate of same, or until further action of their board. This act on the part of the local board was approved by the state board.

"Will you, upon the above state of facts, kindly advise this board whether or not a saloon license certificate issued to a licensee as evidence that he had been found qualified to conduct a saloon, can be levied upon as personal property apart from the entire business of the licensee? Also whether or not, if you find a saloon license certificate under such circumstances can be levied upon, the execution officer has the right to take down and remove from the place of business the certificate without bringing the entire business of the licensee under the control of the court? Also, if you find that such license certificate has sufficient of a property nature to be levied upon and to be removed from the wall of the saloon, together with only a part of the property of the licensee, whether or not such license certificate can be offered for sale and sold by the officer separate from that part of the business assets and property remaining in possession of the licensee not levied upon.

"While the individual case cited is of small concern the principle involved is of very material concern to the operating of this department and the administration of the licensing law, and we will be glad to have your opinion as requested above."

Section 10417, G. C., in reference to the requisites of an execution issued by a justice of the peace, provides in part as follows:

* * * * * * * * * *

"1. If it be a case in which the defendant cannot be arrested, it must direct the officer to collect the amount of the judgment out of the personal property of the debtor, and pay it to the party entitled thereto;

"2. If it be a case in which any of the judgment debtors are certified on the docket as surety, it shall command the money to be made of the personal property of the principal debtor, and for want thereof, of the personal property of the surety. In such cases the personal property of the principal, subject to execution within the jurisdiction, shall be exhausted before any of the property of the bail can be taken in execution;"

Section 10490, G. C., provides as follows:

"The provisions of title four, part third, of the statutes, in their nature applicable to proceedings, before justices, and in respect of which no special provision is made in this title shall apply thereto."

and section 11655, G. C., which is found in title 4, part 3, of the General Code, provides as follows:

"Lands and tenements, including vested interests therein, permanent leasehold estates renewable forever, and goods and chattels, not exempt by law, shall be subject to the payment of debts, and liable to be taken on execution and sold as hereinafter provided."

Further sections of the same chapter relative to execution are limited in their terms to "goods and chattels," viz.: 11657, 11664, 11666, 11667, 11669 and 11670.

Since a license to engage in the business of trafficking in intoxicating liquors is clearly not within the other enumerated classes of property subject to sale on execution for the payment of debts, it remains only to be determined if such license is within the meaning of the terms "personal property" or "goods and chattels" as herein used.

Section 37 of the license law, section 1261-52, G. C., 103 O. L., 231, provides as follows:

"Upon the death of a licensee or of any person who has an interest in a license, such a partner or member of an association of persons or otherwise, the interest of the decedent shall be disposed of by the administrator or the executor under the direction of the probate court without delay. The surviving member or partner, members or partners (or if there be no survivors in interest then the relict of the deceased, or if there be no relict then the child or children), paying to the said administrator or executor such an amount and upon such terms as the court may direct, shall have the right to assume the interest of said decedent providing that notice is given of such intention to the probate court within thirty days after the death of the decedent. If a license or an interest therein shall pass by descent or otherwise to one who cannot qualify under the law as licensee, or if the survivor or relict or child or children, as the case may be, shall not in the time prescribed elect to assume said decedent's interest in the license, or if said survivor or relict or child or children, as the case may be, does not comply with the terms fixed by the court, the probate court shall order the license as a whole sold, without delay but after proper notice given by publication, and shall order the proceeds distributed to the survivors in the ownership of the license, if there be such, and the executor or administrator of the decedent, according as their interest may appear, providing, however, that the purchaser of the license shall be duly qualified under the law, and provided further that the said purchaser shall have filed the application required by law of an original applicant for a license.

"If all the conditions have been complied with, and if the applicant is qualified by law, the county licensing board shall, upon proper certificate from the probate court and without fee, transfer the license to the purchaser thereof for the remainder of the license year. The said purchaser shall have all the rights and obligations of the original licensee under said license.

"Pending the settlement in the probate court, the executor or administrator may continue the business upon notice to the county licensing board that such is his intention, but within three days said executor or administrator must file an application in all respects as is required of an original applicant, except that no fees shall be required. And if said executor or administrator does not possess the qualifications required by law, the probate court may appoint some person who has such qualifications to serve as trustee of the license pending said settlement. If there are survivors in interest in the license, said survivors shall have the privilege of continuing said business until the settlement in the probate court has been effected.

"In case the survivor continues in temporary charge of the business, or in case the executor or administrator continues the business, accountings shall be made to the probate court of the business done in the interim, and distribution shall be made to the decendant's estate and to the survivors in interest, as the law and justice shall require.

"If a guardian or a receiver or other officer of a court shall be appointed for a licensee or for one holding an interest in a license, or if in any way a licensee's business shall come under the control of any court in the state, the said license or interest therein shall be treated by the court as personal property and the purchaser at any sale shall have all the privileges and duties of a purchaser in the case of the death of a licensee, as provided for herein.

"In all cases the court shall, before ordering a sale or an assumption of a license, appoint three appraisers to appraise said license and the interest of the licensee therein, which said appraisers shall be sworn to appraise said interest according to its true value. Any creditors of the deceased or of the owner of the license shall have all rights with reference to the appraisement or sale and the distribution of the assets as any creditor has with reference to any personal property left by any decedent. No license shall be sold or assumed for a sum less than two-thirds of the appraisement. When the articles of partnership in force at the death of a partner, or when the will of a deceased licensee or co-licensee provides for a different mode of settlement of the deceased person's interest from that provided for herein or dispenses with appraisement and sale, or either, then the interest of the deceased shall be settled in accordance with said articles or said will, and appraisement or sale may be dispensed with providing the disposition is otherwise in accordance with law.

"So far as applicable, and so far as is not inconsistent herewith, the laws of Ohio concerning the disposition of the personal estate of a deceased person shall be applied."

While it is here declared that under certain conditions and circumstances a license or an interest therein shall be "treated by the court as personal property" and that so far as not inconsistent with the license law, the law governing the disposition of personal estate shall be applied to licenses of deceased licensees, it is no where in the license law specifically stated that licenses shall be or are personal property.

Indeed, a careful reading of section 1261-52, G. C., supra, will disclose the exercise of some degree of care on the part of the legislature to avoid just such statement. If it had been the purpose to put licenses in the class of personal property, it seems that all that is aimed at in that section could have been effectively accomplished with the simple declaration that licenses shall be regarded as personal property and in the event of the death of the owner thereof, or any interest therein, the same might be taken over at the appraised value thereof by the heirs of the deceased or the survivors in interest, or the same immediately sold as other personal property, provided in every case that the purchaser taking over or purchasing the same should have the qualifications of a licensee.

It necessitates no argument to support the proposition that if a saloon license is within the meaning of the term "goods and chattels," and subject to levy and sale on execution, it is, therefore, "personal property." If a saloon license is personal property, it must be subject to that provision of section 2 of article XII of the constitution, which requires that "laws shall be passed taxing by uniform rule * * * all real and personal property according to its true value in money."

It could hardly be maintained that such a license is subject to assessment and taxation, as a stock of merchandise. A saloon license is a mere privilege, a franchise. I can conceive no substantial distinction between the license to traffic in intoxicating liquors and a corporate franchise, or the privilege of being a corporation, for the purposes of the present consideration.

A license is defined in the case of State v. Hipp, 38 O. S., 199, as follows:

> "A license is a permission granted by some competent authority to do an act which, without permission, would be illegal."

If a saloon license bears an analogy to a corporate franchise such as I have above suggested, it will, of course, be subject to the same rules with reference to the determination of the question, as to whether or not it is property, as such corporate franchise has by the courts of the state been subject.

The supreme court in considering the question whether a corporate franchise was properly subject to taxation, in the case of Bank v. Hines, 3 O. S., 1, 8-9, made the following observations:

> "Does a corporate franchise, in sober truth and reality, possess the essential qualities of property? It is said that the corporate franchise of a bank, conferring a peculiar legal capacity, and the high function of making and circulating paper money, is valuable—indeed, a thing of real value. The right of suffrage is esteemed valuable; a public office, with its emoluments, is valuable; a license to keep a tavern, as formerly granted in this state, or a license to carry on any special business, which is prohibited without a special grant of authority from the government, may be valuable; and a right to either of these things may be asserted and maintained in a court of justice, yet neither of them possess the essential qualities which constitute property. Our right to the free use and enjoyment of things which are in common, such as air, light, water, etc., is valuable; and our right to the free use of the public highways, and to many of the privileges and advantages derived from the government, may be valuable, and may be maintained by legal process. Yet none of these things come within the denomination of property. Those things which constitute the subject-matter of private property are such as the owner may exercise exclusive dominion over in the use, enjoyment and disposal of them without any control or diminution, save only by the laws of the land. 1 Wend. Bla., 138. It is a fundamental principle, that "property, considered as an exclusive right to things, contains not only a right to use those things, but a right to dispose of them either by exchanging them for other things, or by giving them away to any other person, without any valuable consideration in return, or even of throwing them away, which is usually called relinquishing them. Rutherford's Institutes, 20 Puffendorf, chap. 9, b. 7.
> "It is said that capability of alienation or disposal, either by sale, devise, or abandonment, is an essential incident to property. 2 Kent. Com. 17.
> "A corporate franchise, therefore, being a mere privilege, or grant of authority by the government, is not property of any description, and consequently not subject to taxation under the above provision of the constitution."

This case was cited with approval in the case of Baker v. Cincinnati, 11 O. S., 450, in holding that a license fee for theatrical exhibitions imposed by the municipality was not in violation of any provisions of the constitution restricting the power of taxation vested in the general assembly. The effect of the holding in this case was that a license of theatrical exhibitions was not property and that therefore, the license fee exacted therefor was not a tax. No distinction is suggested as between a saloon license as granted at present under the statute of the state of Ohio and the class of licenses under consideration in this case granted by the city of Cincinnati to persons conducting theatrical exhibitions.

In the case of Telegraph Co. v. Mayer, 28 O. S., 521, it is held in the third branch of the syllabus, that:

> "The privilege that a foreign corporation enjoys by legislative consent of exercising its corporate powers, and of carrying on its business within the state, is not property within the meaning of article 12, section 2 of the state constitution."

In 17 Cyc. 947, the rule is laid down as follows:

> "A franchise, being an incorporeal hereditament, cannot, upon the settled principles of the common law, in the absence of statute, be seized and sold under a fieri facias."

If a saloon license is not "goods and chattels" within the meaning of those terms, as found in section 11655, G. C., supra, then there is no specific statute in Ohio making such license subject to execution and under the rule stated in 17 Cyc., 947, supra, such license would not be at common law so subject to sale.

The decisions of the state courts and those of the federal courts are apparently not in harmony as to whether a liquor license is property subject to sale on execution.

In Porter v. Johnson, 96 Ga., 145, it is held:

> "3. Where a licensed retailer of spirituous liquors dies pending the term for which the license was granted, such license is not assets of the estate of the deceased in the hands of his administrator nor can the latter legally continue the business under the license for the unexpired term covered by it."

In the case of Blumenthall's Petition, 125 Pa. St., 412, it is held:

> "The right to sell liquors under a license granted by the state is personal to the licensee, is not assignable, does not pass to the personal representatives, and, therefore, cannot be transferred unless expressly authorized by an act of the assembly."

In Grimm's Estate, 181 Pa. St., 233, it is said:

> "A liquor license is a personal privilege which ends with the life of the licensee; it is not assignable by him, does not go to his personal representatives, and is not an asset of his estate."

A similar holding was made in the case of Breen's License, 2 Pa. Dist. Rep., 651, quoting from Randenbusch's case, 120 Pa., 328.

In the case of Ulrich's License, 6 Pa. Dist. Rep., 408, U. agreed to transfer license to B. Public notice of transfer for ten days was required. During the interval a creditor of U. had execution levied upon U.'s interest in the license. The court overruled an objection made to the allowance of transfer after levy, saying:

> "A liquor license could not be levied upon and sold in the ordinary way, because the sheriff had no power to make title to the purchaser. The original licensee could not transfer unless the court approved and unless a petition and bond were presented by the proposed transferee in accordance with law. To hold that the sheriff might disregard these statutory requirements, and by virtue of a levy might convey to a purchaser an enforceable right, would be equivalent to a decision that the sheriff could sell what the debtor never had and by this means could override the court's discretion and force upon the quarter sessions a person who might be altogether unfit."

In the case of Koehler v. Olsen, 22 N. Y. Sup., 677, the court held:

"A liquor license, being assignable only with the consent of the board of excise (laws 1892, c. 401, sec. 26) is not property which can be reached by a creditor's action."

The statute under consideration in this case provided that:

"The board of excise may * * * grant written permission * * * to sell, assign, or transfer such license during the term for which it was granted."

The court in the opinion said the license was a personal privilege which was not subject to transfer or assignment without the consent of the board and the interest of the licensee therein was not property which could be reached by a creditor's action as the court has no power to enforce a transfer.

This action was brought in the form of a creditor's bill, as stated in the opinion, for the reason and upon the ground that the license and other property sought to be reached was not then subject to levy and sale on execution.

In the case of McNeely v. Wetz, 166 N. Y., 124, in which levy was made upon a liquor tax certificate under the New York statutes, the court said:

"The judgment creditors and their representative, the sheriff, took nothing by virtue of the execution and the attempted levy thereunder, because a liquor tax certificate is not subject to levy and sale under execution, at least unless a warrant of attachment has been issued and a levy made by virtue thereof (Code of Civ. Proc., Sec. 648). It is a mere chose in action incapable of seizure and delivery by the sheriff. * * * It does not come within the description of 'personal property bound by execution' as laid down in section 1405 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that "the goods and chattels of the judgment debtor * * * and his other personal property * * * are bound by execution? * * * While the certificate was personal property, it was not a chattel, but an intangible right."

In the case of Semple v. Flynn, 10 Atl., 177, it is held:

"A saloon keeper's license is personal to the holder, and cannot be delegated, assigned, nor committed to the care of any receiver by the court."

Thus the decisions of the state courts of New York and Pennsylvania have apparently been uniform to the effect that a liquor license or a license to engage in the business of the sale of intoxicating liquors is not in any sense property subject to levy and sale on execution and are in harmony with the decision of the supreme court of this state in the case of Bank v. Hines, 33 O. S., 1, supra, holding that the corporate franchise of a banking company was not property. On the contrary, in the case of in re Broddine, 93 Fed., 643, the court held:

"Under the laws and regulations in force in the city of Boston, the right to apply for the renewal of a license to sell liquor, held by a bankrupt, passes to his trustee as assets in bankruptcy and may be disposed of by the latter for the benefit of the estate."

It is also held in the case of Becker, 98 Fed., 407:

"Where the laws of the state permit the transfer of a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors, subject to the approval of the buyer by the licensing authority, and such licenses have an actual money value for the purpose of sale and transfer, the right to sell a license of this kind will vest in the trustee in bankruptcy of the licensee, for the benefit of the estate, and the bankrupt will be required to execute the instruments necessary to effectuate the sale."

The second syllabus in the case of Fisher v. Cushman, 103 Fed., 860, 51 L. R. A., 292, is as follows:

"A liquor license which is by law transferable to any person who is satisfactory to a board of police commissioners, though it may be destroyed without compensation by subsequent legislation, is 'property' within the meaning of the bankrupt act, Sec. 70 (30 Stat. at L. 565, 566), which provides that a bankrupt must transfer 'property which, prior to the petition, he could by any means have transferred.'"

The legal conditions under which liquor licenses could be transferred in the city of Boston, under consideration in this case, were analogous to the provision of statute with reference to the transfer of liquor licenses in this state at the present time and the question at issue was whether or not the license or its proceeds were under the control of the district court for the purpose of the action which it took in reference thereto. That is to say, whether it was "property which, prior to the petition he (the bankrupt) could by any means have transferred or which might have been levied upon and sold under judicial process against him." The court in this case did not choose to put its decision upon the ground that a liquor license was property subject to levy and sale on execution, but rather that it was "property which, prior to the filing of the petition of the bankrupt, could by any means have been transferred." The court in the course of its consideration observed:

"* * * that there may be property which cannot be sold under judicial process, and that there may be property of that character which passes for the benefit of creditors."

The court on this basis held that the licensee might be compelled by the trustee to execute such endorsement upon the license as was necessary under the statute to transfer the same and ordered the same sold for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt.

The question here involved was considered in the case of Distilling Co. v. Hornstein, unreported, decided by the common pleas court of Cuyahoga county, in which it was held that a saloon license was subject to levy and sale on execution. So far as I am aware, no other court in this state has passed upon the question.

The court summarized its conclusion in the following statement:

"I am of the opinion that under our law it is the policy of the state liquor license commission and the policy of our state to recognize that as property and to be transferred as property. That being so, if the sheriff could get this license in his possession, he could make a levy upon that as he could upon anything else."

It seems that the court here perhaps overlooked a distinction which might well be urged. The paper which may be seized by the officer is only the tangible evidence of an intangible right. The paper writing evidencing the right of a licensee to engage in the sale of intoxicating liquors is certainly not so clearly the evidence or representative of a property right as a certificate of corporate stock, yet the latter is subject to attachment only by virtue of special statutory provision in reference thereto (Sec. 8673-13, G. C., et seq.) and is subject to taxation solely by reason of special reference thereto rather than as coming within the general term "property" as found in section 2 of article XII of the constitution of this state. The seizure of the paper does not confer upon any one the right to exercise the privilege of which it is the evidence, nor does it deprive in the least the licensee of the power to exercise the privilege conferred upon him of which it is the evidence. Nor is there any power or authority in the levying officer to restrict the privilege of the licensee. It would not be argued that if the paper license of any licensee were destroyed by fire or other casualty, the licensing authority would not be fully authorized to deliver to him proper evidence of the license granted to him in the absence of any disqualification, and so long as the licensee has or could procure any stock from which to make sales, no power could restrain such sale. If, on the other hand, he could not procure any liquor to sell, that would not of necessity curtail his privilege so long as the license remained unrevoked or unsurrendered. If the privilege followed the paper evidence thereof in to the hands of whomsoever it might fall, and it was of any value whatsoever, it might be contended with much force that it was property subject to execution, but this is clearly not so, as above pointed out.

So long as the licensee lives, is not under disability or legal disqualification, and his business does not come under the control of a court, under the provisions of section 37 of the license code above quoted, no power exists to deprive him of the privilege unless he chooses to make application for transfer. This, it is held by the federal courts, the licensee may be compelled to do in bankruptcy proceedings, but I am not inclined to the view that a levying officer or court of this state could compel the licensee to make such application for the transfer to the purchaser.

Though it is provided that the license shall, in certain cases, be treated as personal property, it will be noted it is only in those cases in which the licensee becomes incapacitated to exercise the privilege conferred by the license and that the transfer of the license is essential to the protection of the value of the business that such provision is made. The express provision being limited in its terms to the particular class of cases above referred to, gives rise to the inference, at least, that its application to such cases is exclusive. I am further inclined to the view that property subject to sale on execution must in every case be property within the meaning of the constitutional provision of section 2, article XII, requiring all property to be taxed by a uniform rule at its true value in money. It has not yet been suggested that a liquor license is subject to taxation as property and it is not believed that such a position is at all tenable. On the contrary, I am of opinion that a liquor license may be sold and transferred in this state only in the manner and under the conditions for which there is specific statutory provision and that it may not, therefore, be levied upon and sold upon execution issued upon judgment against the licensee.

Whether a saloon license may be reached by and subjected to sale under proceedings in aid of execution, is not here submitted, has not been considered and no opinion thereon is herein expressed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—DUTY OF ALLEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TO MAINTAIN MAIN STREET BRIDGE ACROSS OTTAWA RIVER IN CITY OF LIMA AND REPLACE IT WHEN NECESSARY.

Under the facts as submitted, it is the duty of the county commissioners of Allen county to maintain the Main street bridge across the Ottawa river in the city of Lima and to replace the present structure with a new bridge should the necessity for such action arise.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1916.

HON. ORTHA O. BARR, Prosecuting Attorney, Lima, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of November 30, and December 30, 1915, and February 26, 1916, relating to the duty of the county commissioners to maintain the Main street bridge across the Ottawa river in the city of Lima and to replace the present structure with a new bridge, should the necessity for such action arise. The facts as submitted to me in your several communications are quite involved and while not all material, in my opinion, I deem it proper to set them forth in detail.

Originally the St. Johns road came into the city of Lima from the southeast and ran in a northwesterly direction until it intersected what is now Main street about one hundred and thirty-three feet south of what is now Circular street. The Wapakoneta road originally came into the city of Lima from the southwest and ran in a northeasterly direction, crossing Kibby street at a point where Greenlawn avenue and Kibby street now intersect and continuing in practically a straight line to what is now Main street at a point almost opposite the point where the St. Johns road entered what is now Main street. A township line road between Shawnee and Perry townships, established about 1841, intersected the Wapakoneta road at a point about where Kibby street intersects Greenlawn avenue. Greenlawn avenue is either an extension of this township line road, or, what is more probable, the township line road was named Greenlawn avenue. The original St. Johns road has been vacated between Central avenue and Main street and traffic on this road coming into the city is now diverted to Central avenue. The greater part of the old Wapakoneta road between Metcalf street and Main street has been vacated. When this road was vacated traffic coming into the city on the township line road—now Greenlawn avenue—was compelled to use Kibby street to Main street and Main street from Kibby street into the central portion of the city. Later Greenlawn avenue, which was the township line road, was closed through the Lake Erie & Western Railroad Company's yards and through the grounds now occupied by the Lima Locomotive Works Company's plant. The township line road between Perry and Shawnee townships is a county road, under the jurisdiction of the county commissioners, and traffic coming into the city over this road was first diverted from the original road over Kibby street to Main street and later over Fourth street to Main street, and at the present time the only route over which those coming into the city on this township line road can travel is over Fourth street to Main street and north on Main street into the central portion of the city. The intersection of Kibby street and Greenlawn avenue marks the corner of Shawnee, Perry, Bath and German townships, as they originally existed. The bridge about which you inquire is on Main street and spans the Ottawa river at a point several blocks north of the point where the original St. Johns and Wapakoneta roads formerly intersected what is now Main street. That part of the St. Johns road between Central avenue and Main street was vacated in 1882. What is now Central avenue, extending northward from the southeast end of that part of the St. Johns road vacated in 1882 was opened in 1855 as a county road as far north as the Ottawa river. That part of the original Wapakoneta road between Kibby street and Main street was vacated in 1877 and the part of this road between Metcalf street and Kibby street was vacated in 1883. Metcalf street was opened as a county road from the Wapakoneta road northward crossing the Ottawa river in 1880. Greenlawn avenue was vacated from Fourth street northward to a point crossing the Lake Erie & Western Railroad Company's tracks in 1912. All of the vacations referred to by you and mentioned above were made by the councils of the village or city of Lima and you state that they were made when the various plats of territory were accepted and such territory annexed to the city.

You further state that you believe that the Wapakoneta and St. Johns roads were originally established as state roads, and that they existed as such at the time the territory traversed by them was annexed to the village or city of Lima, as the case may be; and that Main street at the point of intersection of the Wapakoneta and St. Johns roads was a state road and that this state road extended northward along the present route of Main street from the point of intersection of the Wapakoneta and St. Johns roads across the Ottawa river to a point known as Elm street. The present bridge across the Ottawa river was constructed by the city of Lima in the year 1888 and the city has since maintained the same.

It should first be observed that the rule is well established in Ohio that a municipal council has no power to vacate that part of a county road which lies within the municipality.

Railroad Co. v. Cummins, 53 O. S., 683.
Railroad Co. v. Akron, 6 N. P. N. S., 81.

In the case last cited above the decision of the court contains an exhaustive review of the authorities, and from an examination of the same it is apparent that the same rule must be applied to state roads, and that a municipal corporation has no power to vacate that part of a state road which lies within the municipality.

Sections 7557 and 2421 of the General Code are the sections relating to the duties of county commissioners as to bridges in villages and cities.

Section 7557, G. C., reads as follows:

"The county commissioners shall cause to be constructed and kept in repair, as provided by law, all necessary bridges in villages and cities not having the right to demand and receive a portion of the bridge fund levied upon property within such corporations, on all state and county roads, free turnpikes, improved roads, transferred and abandoned turnpikes and plank roads, which are of general and public utility, running into or through such village or city."

Section 2421, G. C., reads as follows:

"The commissioners shall construct and keep in repair necessary bridges over streams and public canals on state and county roads, free turnpikes, improved roads, abandoned turnpikes and plank roads in common public use, except only such bridges as are wholly in cities and villages having by law the right to demand, and do demand and receive part of the bridge fund levied upon property therein. If they do not demand and receive a portion of the bridge tax, the commissioners shall construct and keep in repair all bridges in such cities and villages. The granting of the demand, made by any city or village for its portion of the bridge tax, shall be optional with the board of commissioners."

In an opinion rendered by my predecessor, Hon. U. G. Denman, to Hon. E. E. Sayles, prosecuting attorney of Sandusky county, on October 28, 1910, and found at page 781 of the Attorney General's Report for 1910-1911, it was held, in effect, that no city or village now has a right to demand and receive any part of the bridge fund levied upon property therein. The following is quoted from the opinion in question:

"I beg to advise that section 2824 of the Revised Statutes provided for certain cities receiving part of the bridge fund from the county. This section has been divided and written into the General Code as sections 5635 and 5636. Neither of these sections now provide for paying any portion of the bridge fund to any city, I note from the table of revision in the General Code that that portion of old section 2824, R. S., which provided for certain cities receiving a portion of the bridge fund, was considered special legislation by the codifying commission and was omitted in the General Code.

"Section 2421 of the General Code makes a reference to cities which receive a part of the bridge fund, but I am unable to find anywhere in the General Code any provision for any city to receive any portion of such fund, and I am, therefore, of the opinion that the city of Fremont is not entitled to demand and receive any portion of the bridge fund."

I concur in the view expressed by my predecessor and it follows that sections 7557 and 2421, G. C., are of general application and require the county commissioners to construct and keep in repair all necessary bridges over streams and public canals on all state and county roads, free turnpikes, improved roads, transferred and abandoned turnpikes and plank roads in common public use, or which are of general and public utility, without regard to whether the bridges are located within or without municipal corporations.

In view of the sections of the General Code above quoted and of the construction which must necessarily be placed thereon, it is my opinion that it is the duty of the county commissioners of Allen county to maintain the bridge referred to by you, and to replace the present structure with a new bridge should the necessity for such action arise. This conclusion rests on the fact that Main street at the point where it crosses the Ottawa river was established as a state road, and the duty of the county commissioners under sections 7557 and 2421, G. C., arises from that fact. Should further investigations on your part alter your conclusion as to the original establishment as a state road of what is now Main street, then the opinion herein expressed would not apply.

It should be added that the road referred to in sections 7557 and 2421, G. C., as a state road is a road which existed as such prior to the going into effect of the Cass highway law, which law provides a new classification for roads.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—IF HE IMPROVES INTERCOUNTY HIGHWAY OR MAIN MARKET ROAD WITHOUT CO-OPERATION OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OR TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES, COST OF LAND NECESSARY FOR NEW RIGHT OF WAY, PAID BY STATE.

Where the state highway commissioner is improving an intercounty highway or main market road without the co-operation of county commissioners or township trustees, and it is necessary to acquire or appropriate lands for a new or for additional right of way, it is the duty of the state highway commissioner to make payment for the same, which payment is to be regarded as a part of the cost and expense of the improvement, and under such circumstances the county commissioners or township trustees are without authority in the premises and cannot be charged with any duty in reference to the furnishing of the additional land that may be needed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 23, 1916, in which you request my opinion as to whether the state highway department must, of necessity, pay for the purchase of right-of-way when the same is needed and where the state is improving an intercounty highway or main market road without co-operation with either a county or a township.

The first sentence of section 194 of the Cass highway law, section 1201, G. C., reads as follows:

> "If the line of the proposed improvement deviates from the existing highway, or if it is proposed to change the channel of any stream in the vicinity of such improvement, the county commissioners or township trustees making application for such improvement must provide the requisite right of way."

The portion of section 1201, G. C., not quoted above, relates to the procedure for condemnation in those cases where the commissioners or trustees are unable to agree with the owner or owners of the land needed.

Section 195 of the Cass highway law, section 1202, G. C., reads as follows:

> "If the state highway commissioner proposes to improve an intercounty or main market road without the co-operation of the county commissioners or township trustees, and it is necessary as a part of the proposed improvement of the said highway, bridge or culvert to acquire or appropriate lands or property, and the state highway commissioner is unable to agree with the owner or owners of such land or property as to the value thereof, the said highway commissioner may proceed to condemn such land or property in the manner hereinbefore fixed for county commissioners and township trustees. The state highway commissioner may condemn materials for road purposes in like manner."

A comparison of the provisions of sections 1201 and 1202, G. C., can leave no doubt that in those cases where the state highway commissioner is proceeding without the co-operation of the commissioners or trustees, it is his duty to provide any new or additional right-of-way that may be needed. Indeed, it would be foreign to the idea of non-co-operation if the state highway commissioner might require local authorities to furnish right-of-way, and if the commissioners or trustees should furnish right-of-way at the expense of the county or township it could not be said that they were not co-operating in the making of the improvement.

I, therefore, advise you, in answer to your specific inquiry, that where the state highway commissioner is improving an intercounty highway or main market road without the co-operation of county commissioners or township trustees, and it is necessary to acquire or appropriate lands for a new or for additional right-of-way, it is the duty of the state highway commissioner to make payment for the same, which payment is to be regarded as a part of the cost and expense of the improvement, and under such circumstances the county commissioners or township trustees are without authority in the premises and cannot be charged with any duty in reference to the furnishing of the additional land that may be needed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF AMENDMENT OF ORDER, STATE BOARD OF HEALTH TO CITY OF XENIA, OHIO, TO INSTALL SEWERS AND SEWAGE TREATMENT PLANT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 8, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Enclosed herewith you will find an amendment of an order of the state board of health to the city of Xenia, Ohio, to install necessary sewers and a new sewage treatment plant to correct certain conditions complained of as set forth in a resolution adopted by the board of county commissioners of Greene county, Ohio.

I have examined said amendment and find same to be regular, and it is my opinion that it should be approved. I have, therefore, approved the same under the provisions of section 1251 of the General Code and am transmitting the same to you for your approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—THE TERMINAL HOTELS COMPANY—APPROVED.

Purpose clause of the proposed articles of incorporation of the Terminal Hotels Company, approved.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 10, 1916.

HON. C. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.
DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 7, 1916, with enclosures, requesting my opinion as follows:

"We are submitting proposed articles of incorporation of 'THE TERMINAL HOTELS COMPANY,' check for $10.00, and a ten cent internal revenue stamp, and would like an opinion as to whether or not the purpose clause in the articles of incorporation is dual in character."

The purpose clause of the proposed articles of incorporation of The Terminal Hotels Company, referred to in your enquiry, is as follows:

> "Said corporation is formed for the purpose of constructing and maintaining a building or buildings to be used for hotels, store rooms, offices, warehouses and factories, with the right to acquire by purchase or otherwise and the right to hold, own, mortgage, pledge, assign, transfer, sell and dispose of all the real and personal property, tangible and intangible, necessary or convenient for use in connection with and in carrying on the business herein mentioned, or any part thereof, and doing all things necessarily or conveniently incident to said business."

The purpose clause above quoted was evidently taken from the language of section 10210 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "A corporation organized for the purpose of constructing and maintaining buildings to be used for hotels, store rooms, offices, warehouses, and factories, may acquire by purchase or lease, and hold, use, mortgage and lease all such real estate or personal property as is necessary, for such purpose. But no such corporation shall acquire or mortgage any real or leasehold estate, or lease it for a period exceeding, with all privileges of renewal, the term of five years, without the consent of the holders of two-thirds of the stock, obtained at a meeting called for that purpose, written notice of which was given to each stockholder, either personally, or deposited in the postoffice, properly addressed and duly stamped, not less than ten days before the day fixed for such meeting. Nothing herein shall authorize corporations to buy and sell, or to deal in real estate for profit."

Although the above section does not in terms contain authority to organize a corporation, yet it apparently recognizes the right to organize a corporation with such purpose clause, otherwise the restrictions and regulations prescribed for such a corporation would be useless. A careful examination of the language of the purpose clause under consideration discloses that the real purpose for which the corporation is organized is that of constructing and maintaining buildings. The words, "to be used as hotels, store rooms, offices, warehouses and factories," are simply descriptive of the different kinds of buildings which the corporation may construct and maintain and limits rather than to enlarge the prior language of the purpose clause.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the proposed articles of incorporation of The Terminal Hotels Company set forth a proper purpose clause and should be received and recorded by you.

I return the enclosures herewith.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—PROCEEDINGS OF JOINT BOARDS OF HANCOCK AND HARDIN COUNTIES FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT, INVALID—EFFECT OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW ON PRIOR PROCEEDINGS.

Proceedings had by the joint board of county commissioners of Hancock and Hardin counties, prior to September 6, 1915, for the improvement of a county line road, known as the Garling road, are invalid, and the proceedings are, therefore, not saved by section 303 of the Cass highway law.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. JOHN E. BETTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Findlay, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge the receipt of your communication of February 14, 1916, in which you request my opinion as to the legality of certain proceedings had by the joint board of county commissioners of Hardin and Hancock counties, and looking toward the improvement of a county line road known as the Garling road.

The petition for the improvement was filed with the county commissioners of Hancock county in December, 1913, and action was taken by the joint board of commissioners of the two counties in June, 1914. The improvement was projected under the provisions of house bill No. 544, 103 O. L., 198, amending sections 6926 to 6956, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio. You transmitted to me a complete copy of the record of the action of the joint board of commissioners of Hancock and Hardin counties, relative to the road improvement in question, and you state that no other or further action was ever taken by the commissioners save as set forth in the copy of the record of proceedings forwarded to me. A number of defects in the proceedings are pointed out by you in your communication and certain other defects are apparent after an examination of the record.

Section 6930, G. C., provided that when the road proposed to be improved was along the county line between two or more counties, a copy of the petition certified to by the commissioners of the county in which the original was on file should be filed with the commissioners of each of the several counties along the line of the proposed road. In the case now under consideration the petition was filed with the commissioners of Hancock county and a copy of the same was filed with the commissioners of Hardin county, but such copy was not certified to by the commissioners of Hancock county.

Under sections 6926 and 6930 of the General Code, the several boards of county commissioners were required to go upon the line of the road described in the petition. It does not appear from the record submitted to me that this duty was ever performed by the boards of county commissioners of the two counties.

Section 6926, G. C., contained the following provision:

> "If, in their opinion, the public utility requires such road to be graded and improved, they shall determine whether the improvement shall be partly or wholly constructed of stone, gravel or brick, any or all, and what part or parts of such road improvement shall be of stone, gravel or brick, and enter their decision on their journal."

The record submitted to me does not show that the joint board ever made a finding that the public utility required the road described in the petition to be graded and improved. The record does not show any determination by the joint board as to the kind of material to be used in the construction of the improvement. In fact, the record submitted to me makes no reference to the petition for the improvement. The record does not show the purpose for which the meeting of the joint board was held and the only reference to the improvement in question, indicating any action by the board, is contained in the following quotations from the record:

> "Moved by Glock, seconded by Breidenbach that Garling road be granted to start at the southwest corner of section 32, Madison township, Hancock county, Ohio, and run east on the county line to the first road east of the Mt. Olive church running south and there terminate, and Hardin county be permitted to make their assessments according to benefits. Vote: Deringer, yes; Breidenbach, yes; Glock, yes; Beck, no; Finsel, no; Orwick, yes. Motion carried.
> "Moved by Glock, seconded by Orwick that * * * L. R. Anspach be appointed to survey and superintend the Garling pike. All voted 'yea.' Motion carried."

You state that as a matter of fact the description of the road which was "granted" by the county commissioners is not the same as that contained in the petition, the road as granted being about a mile shorter than that described in the petition.

Section 6927, G. C., required that the commissioners should order that the improvement be made. The record submitted to me does not show that the commissioners ever made any such order.

Under sections 6928 and 6929 of the General Code, the county commissioners were required to determine the proportion of the cost to be paid by general taxation and the proportion to be assessed upon and collected from the owners of real estate benefited by the improvement in proportion to the benefit to be derived therefrom, and this order was also required to state the lands which should be subject to be assessed and whether the estimated assessment should be made before the improvement was commenced or after it was completed. All of the above stated requirements were entirely ignored by the joint board of county commissioners.

It has already been observed that the commissioners in their action made no reference to the petition and it should be added that they made no determination as to whether the petition had been signed by the requisite number of owners of real estate. It is extremely doubtful whether the action of the commissioners, in appointing L. R. Anspach to "survey and superintend" the road, was a sufficient compliance with the provision of section 6927, G. C., to the effect that the county commissioners should appoint an engineer to go over the line of such road and make such markings, gradient lines, plat, profiles and estimates as they prescribed in the entry on their journal. You state that it was the intention of the county commissioners to adopt separate methods of assessment in the two counties, which fact is indicated, in a way, by the record quoted above, and such a proceeding seems to have been unauthorized by the sections of the General Code under consideration.

It is unnecessary to proceed further, however, with a discussion of the defects in the proceedings submitted to me, as it is apparent from the facts already set out that the action of the joint board of county commissioners must be regarded as a nullity for the reasons, among others, that the jonit board never made any finding that the public utility required the road in question to be graded and improved, that the board never determined the material with which the improvement should be constructed, and that the board failed to make any order as to the portion of the cost to be paid by general taxation and the portion to be specially assessed, and never made any order setting forth the lands which should be subject to be assessed.

There never having been a valid resolution adopted by the joint board of county commissioners, it follows that there is nothing upon which the saving provisions of the Cass highway law, found in section 303 thereof, can act, and I, therefore, advise you that the joint board is without authority to take any further action in the premises.

I may add that upon receipt of your communication, I wrote Hon. Donald F. Melhorn, prosecuting attorney of Hardin county, requesting his views in the matter, for the reason that Hardin county is affected equally with Hancock county and that the opinion herein expressed is in accordance with the views of Mr. Melhorn, as set forth in a letter to me under date of February 21, 1916.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—NO AUTHORITY FOR PAYMENT OF EXPENSES OF COMMISSIONERS IN PROCEEDINGS FOR JOINT COUNTY DITCHES.

There is no authority in law for the payment of the expenses of county commissioners in proceedings under sections 6536, 6537 and 6556, G. C., as amended, 103 O. L., 836, or section 6559, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. D. F. MILLS, Prosecuting Attorney, Sidney, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of March 4, 1916, is as follows:

> "I would like to have your opinion as to whether or not county commissioners are to be allowed their actual expenses while engaged in the location, construction or improvement of joint county ditches.
> "Section 6563-44, G. C., provides as follows:
>
> " 'Said surveyors named in section 8 shall meet with the joint board of county commissioners whenever required by said board, and said surveyors and auditors shall be paid their necessary expenses while employed under this act, and shall be allowed the same fees as are allowed in ditch work generally, and said commissioners shall receive the sum of $3.00 a day and their actual expenses while employed under this bill.'
> "This particular section of the statute specifically refers to the bill passed by the General Assembly in Vol. 102, p. 575 O. L., now designated in the General Code as sections 6563-1 to 6563-48 inclusive. While it is clear that the commissioners are allowed their expenses, if the proceedings are instituted and the improvement constructed under the provisions of said bill, I would like to know as to whether or not they are allowed their actual expenses if the proceedings are instituted and the improvement constructed under sections 6536 and 6537, G. C., as amended in O. L., 836; 6556, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 836, or 6559, G. C."

Section 6563-44, G. C., quoted by you, was enacted as section 44 of house bill No. 489, approved May 12, 1911, 102 O. L., 575, as stated by you.

In this act there was provided a distinct and complete scheme for the construction of joint county ditches. The procedure therein provided was not made exclusive, however, since none of the statutory provisions then in force and operation, relative to the subject matter of joint county ditches, were specifically repealed by said act.

An examination of the statutes governing the activities or proceedings of county commissioners, in respect to joint county ditches, in force and operation at the time of the enactment of said house bill No. 489, being sections 6536 to 6563, G. C., inclusive, fails to disclose any provision for the payment of the expenses of county commissioners, incurred in the discharge of their duties in relation to joint county ditches under said section, nor is there found any provision for payment of the expenses of commissioners in joint county ditch matters in the amendment of a number of said last mentioned sections of the General Code, enacted in 103 O. L., 836.

It will be readily observed that the provision for the payment of the expenses of county commissioners, found in section 6563-44, G. C., quoted by you, is expressly limited by its terms to "actual expenses while employed under this bill." The application of this provision is specifically limited by its terms to the expenses of commissioners employed under the act of the legislature in which said section of the General Code was originally enacted. The language of this provision is too plain to require interpretation and cannot be given such construction as to render it applicable to cases clearly not within its terms. It may be difficult to assign a satisfactory reason for a provision for the payment of expenses of public officials in a given case, and a failure to make such provision in another similar case. It is, however, a sufficient reason for such distinction, in the present instance, that the legislature has seen fit to make provision for the payment of expenses in the one case and omitted to do so in the other.

It is a principle well established that public officials are entitled to receive only such compensation, fees and salaries as are authorized by law. Since, then, the legislature has chosen to make specific provision for the payment of expenses of county commissioners when employed under the provisions of sections 6563-1 to 6563-48, inclusive, of the General Code, but has not chosen to make provision for the payment of expenses when engaged in similar service under other statutory provisions, it follows from the familiar principle just referred to that in the latter case there is no authority for the payment of the expenses of county commissioners.

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your inquiry, that the expenses of county commissioners in proceedings under the provisions of sections 6536, 6537, 6540 and 6556, as amended, 103 O. L., 836, or section 6559, G. C., are not authorized by law to be paid.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TAXES AND TAXATION—SECTIONS 2746 TO 2749, G. C., PROVIDE METHOD FOR COLLECTION OF TAXES IN CITY OR VILLAGE OTHER THAN COUNTY SEAT—TAX PAYERS MAY SELECT AGENT TO PAY THEIR TAXES—CITY OF LORAIN.

The provisions of sections 2746 to 2749, G. C., provide the exclusive method of plan whereby tax receiving offices may be established in a city or village other than the county seat. While agents may be selected by the tax payers of such cities or villages through whom such tax payers may pay their taxes, yet such agents may not represent the county treasurer in receiving taxes nor may said treasurer in any manner be officially connected with such arrangement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 16th bearing the following statement and inquiry:

> "The city of Lorain, with about 35,000 population, is located nine miles north of Elyria, the county seat of Lorain county. Many of the tax payers of Lorain are working men who are obliged to lose from one-half day to a day, and incur the additional expense of transportation in order to pay their taxes at Elyria.
> "The county treasurer, while anxious to accommodate the tax payers of Lorain, does not feel that he desires under sections 2746-49, General Code of Ohio, to open an office in the city of Lorain for the receipt of taxes.
> "One of the leading merchants of Lorain, and one with large financial backing, has proposed that he receive the taxes from Lorain tax payers as the agent of the tax payers, the same to be paid into the county treasurer's office before the 20th of June and the 20th of December each year, and upon the payment of taxes by him into the county treasurer's office, receipts for same are to be issued by the county treasurer to the different tax payers so paying.
> "It is further suggested that the receipt given by the merchant to the tax payers bear upon it an endorsement in substance, that the tax payer constitutes the merchant his agent to pay the taxes, and that no liability attaches to the county treasurer by reason of the same until paid into his office, at which time receipt will be given. This will mean a great saving in time and money to the tax payers of Lorain, and be decidedly convenient, and I desire to know whether in your opinion this proposal is in violation of any of the statutes or improper.
> "I personally can see no objection to it as in fact the county treasurer, aside from furnishing to the merchant the list of tax payers and amount of taxes, has nothing to do with money until it is paid into his hands."

The sections of the General Code to which you refer in your foregoing letter, being sections 2746 to 2749, inclusive, provide a complete method whereby taxes may be collected by a county treasurer in offices established outside of the county seat and under the provisions of said sections your county treasurer may establish a tax receiving office in the city in question. It would seem from the circumstances stated in your letter that very potent reasons exist for the establishment of such an office in said city, but that the treasurer, while anxious to accommodate the tax payers thereof, does not desire so to do. Be that as it may, the provisions of said sections must be considered as exclusive, and therefore your treasurer may not under any other plan or method permit the collection of taxes in said city.

Unquestionably the citizens of Lorain may legally constitute the merchant named in your letter as their agent to pay their taxes. They may, as between said agent so constituted and themselves, adopt any plan to accomplish their purpose in this respect, but your county treasurer cannot in any manner whatever officially recognize or acquiesce in any arrangements so made between the citizens of said city and their said agent. The law does not permit the treasurer to prepare a list of tax payers in said city, and the amount of taxes due from each at the expense of the county. His activities must be confined and limited to receiving from the agent the taxes due from each person the agent represents, and returning to the agent or to said person his receipt therefor. Everything necessary to effectuate the arrangement between the agent and the taxpayers of said city must be done by them without any assistance from the treasurer which might in any way be construed as an official adoption of or acquiescence in the same. He must not be connected with their transactions in any way. With these limitations, then it becomes simply a matter of the tax payers of said city paying their taxes through an agent, to which plan or arrangement no objection may be made.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

SALOON LICENSE—PUBLICATION OF NOTICE OF SALE, MANDATORY —MAY BE SOLD AT PRIVATE SALE AFTER SUCH PUBLICATION.

The publication of notice of the sale of a saloon license ordered by the probate court under the provisions of section 1261-52, G. C., 103 O. L., 231, may not be dispensed with.

Under the conditions prescribed in section 10700, G. C., for the sale of personal property of a decedent at private sale, a saloon license when ordered sold pursuant to said section 1261-52, G. C., may be sold at private sale after publication of proper notice thereof.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. WILLIAM H. LUEDERS, Probate Judge, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of March 1, 1916, is as follows:

> "The following matter was presented to me this morning, and as I am in doubt concerning same, I write you today for your opinion in the matter:
> "O. L. 103 of the year 1913, section 1261-52, sub-section 37, on page 231, at bottom of page 2d, last line, directs as follows:
> "'The probate court shall order the license as a whole sold, without delay, but after proper notice given by publication' the words 'by publication' on page 232.
> "Under an opinion written by you to the Hon. John V. Campbell, of date of February 2, 1916, you direct and give as an opinion:
> "'That where a saloon license is ordered to be sold as a whole by the probate court, notice of such sale should be made by publication according to the provisions of section 10700, G. C.'

"QUERY—Are the directions as set forth, that the probate court shall order the license as a whole sold without delay, but after proper notice by publication, mandatory? In other words, must the license be sold by public sale after said publication?

"QUERY—Can executor or administrator follow section 10700, G. C., 'when on sufficient proof the court is satisfied that it would be for the advantage of the estate to sell any part of the personalty, etc., at the appraisers' valuation by private sale, the court may authorize the executor or administrator so to sell any part thereof either for cash or on other terms at its discretion * * * at not less than its appraised value, etc.?' In other words, is the sale mandatory, or can executor or administrator sell at private sale under section 10700, G. C., without publication?

"In case at issue, the administrator has an offer for more than the appraisers' valuation, and grave doubts exist as to whether on a public sale as large a sale would be realized?

"It is my opinion that sale at public auction after publication must be had, and that the private sale under section 10700, G. C., does not apply."

That part of section 37 of the license law, section 1261-52, G. C., 103 O. L., 231, particularly applicable to the questions submitted, is as follows:

"If a license or an interest therein shall pass by descent or otherwise to one who cannot qualify under the law as licensee, or if the survivor or relict or child or children, as the case may be, shall not in the time prescribed elect to assume said decedent's interest in the license, or if said survivor or relict or child or children, as the case may be, does not comply with the terms fixed by the court, the probate court shall order the license as a whole sold, without delay but after proper notice given by publication, and shall order the proceeds distributed to the survivors in the ownership of the license, if there be such, and the executor or administrator of the decedent, according as their interests may appear."

As stated in the inquiry, under date of February 2, 1916, I rendered an opinion to Hon. John V. Campbell, prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county, in which it was held that the notice required by the above provision to be given by publication should be published in accordance with the provisions of section 10700, G. C.

It is further provided by said section 1261-52, G. C., supra, that:

"So far as applicable, and so far as not inconsistent herewith, the laws of Ohio concerning the disposition of the personal estate of a deceased person shall apply."

and it is assumed that it is this provision which gives rise to the questions now under consideration. This provision would, beyond question, give full authority to the probate court "when, on sufficient proof, it is satisfied that it would be for the advantage of the estate to sell any part of the personalty not taken by the widow at the appraiser's valuation at private sale," to "authorize the executor or administrator to sell any part thereof, either for cash or on such other terms as in its discretion it directs, but not at less than its appraised value," etc., at private sale as per the terms of section 10700, G. C., unless such latter provision be found to be inconsistent with the provisions of the license law relative to the disposition of the interest of deceased licensees in liquor licenses.

It will be observed, upon examination of said section 10700, G. C., that the provision thereof authorizing private sale of property of deceased persons, under the conditions therein stipulated, constitutes an exception to the general provisions of the same section requiring the sale of all personal property of decedents to be made at public auction, after notice, etc. This, in itself, would subject the provision as to private sale to a strict construction, favorable to a sale at public auction and tend to exclude from the application of the provision for private sale, the sale of all property not clearly within its specific terms.

On the other hand, the provisions of the license law, above referred to, are special in character and control to the exclusion of general statutes governing the sale and disposition of personal property of decedents, in so far as the special provisions are applicable. Indeed, it is believed that the only purpose of the last sentence of said section 1261-52, G. C., supra, is to make provision for such matters as are not covered by the license law as to sale of licenses of deceased persons.

The subject of the sale or transfer of liquor license is a matter wholly subject to statutory control. That is to say, the authority to sell a liquor license in any event is found solely upon the statutory provision, and it is not believed that in the absence of such statutory authorization a liquor license would be the subject of barter and sale at all. This being then a purely statutory proceeding, it must, under the general rule as to such matters, be strictly pursued, and for these reasons, I am inclined to the view that the publication of the notice of sale may not be dispensed with.

It could not be maintained, however, that the publication of notice, according to the provision of said section 10700, G. C., is materially inconsistent with a private sale of a license, under the provisions of said section.

The primary purpose of the notice is that the greatest amount possible may be realized from the sale of the license, and while it is true that perhaps in a great majority of cases this purpose would be more effectively attained by a public sale, I am not prepared to say that there may not be circumstances and conditions which would render it to the advantage of the estate that the license be sold at private sale, even after publication of notice in the manner prescribed by said section 10700, G. C., thus bringing the same within the provisions of said section authorizing a private sale.

The manifest purpose of the authorization of the sale of personal property of a decedent at private sale is that the same be made in the manner of the greatest advantage to the estate, so, in the case of a liquor license, if it appeared to the satisfaction of the court, upon proof, that it would, for any reason, be to the financial advantage of the estate that the license be disposed of at private sale, no purpose would be served in making a sacrifice of the interest of the estate in adhering to the requirement for a public sale. Indeed a case may be readily imagined in which it would be to the substantial advantage of the estate that the entire business of the decedent, together with the license, be sold at private sale, and under such condition, as above observed, it would contravene the whole policy of the law of administration of estates to make the sale at public auction, to the disadvantage of the estate.

I am therefore of the opinion that under the conditions prescribed therefor in said section 10700, G. C., a liquor license of a decedent, when ordered sold by the probate court, may be ordered by said court to be sold at private sale, after publication of notice thereof, as hereinbefore suggested.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

ONLY PORTION OF ROAD IMPROVED BY COUNTY ASSUMES CHARACTER OF COUNTY ROAD—OTHERWISE RETAINS ITS FORMER CHARACTER.

When a county has improved only a portion of a given road, such improvement operates only so far as to give to the portion improved the character of a county road and has no effect as to the portion of the road not improved, and the portion of road not improved, if formerly a township road, retains its character as such and is to be maintained by the township trustees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. ADDISON P. MINSHALL, Prosecuting Attorney, Chillicothe, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 21, 1916, which reads as follows:

> "The Ross county highway superintendent has requested me to obtain from you a construction of section 241 of the road laws (section 7464 of the General Code), classifying highways. He desires to know whether, when the county has improved a mile or so of road by placing gravel thereon, the entire road shall be maintained by the county commissioners or just that part of the road which has been improved as before stated."

That portion of section 241 of the Cass highway law, section 7464, G. C., pertinent to your inquiry, is paragraph (b) thereof, which paragraph reads as follows:

> "County roads shall include all roads which have been or may be improved by the county by placing brick, stone, gravel or other road building material thereon, or heretofore built by the state and not a part of the intercounty or main market system of roads, together with such roads as have been or may be constructed by the township trustees to conform to the standards for county roads as fixed by the county commissioners, and all such roads shall be maintained by the county commissioners."

I am of the opinion that the context requires that the word "roads," as used in the above quoted provision, must be taken to mean only such portions of entire roads as have been or may be improved by the county, or were heretofore built by the state and not a part of the intercounty or main market system of roads, or as have been or may be constructed by the township trustees to conform to the standards for county roads. Any other construction would result in consequences manifestly not intended by the legislature. As an illustration of what might result if a different construction were to be adopted, it would be within the power of the trustees of a township, in which a township road, several miles in length, might be situated, to relieve the township of the duty of maintaining the entire road and to cast that duty upon the county merely by improving a small portion of the road in question, so as to conform to the standard for county roads for the particular county.

I, therefore, advise you, in answer to your specific question, that when a county has improved only a portion of a given road, such improvement operates only so far as to give to the portion improved the character of a county road and has no effect as to the portion of the road not improved, and the portion of road not improved, if formerly a township road, retains its character as such and is to be maintained by the township trustees.

Respectfully.
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—HIS EXPENSES AND COMPENSATION TO BE PAID FROM GENERAL COUNTY FUND.

The expenses of the county highway superintendent, incurred in the performance of any duty with respect to roads, and also his compensation, are to be paid from the general county fund.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. JOHN H. SCHRIDER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 3, 1916, in which you submit the following inquiry:

> "Are the expenses and fees of the county highway superintendent, acting under the authority of the state highway commissioner, in making the surveys, plans, specifications, maps and profiles, for the construction and improvement of intercounty highways included in the terms 'costs and expenses of such improvement' referred to in sections 91, 98, 101 and other sections of the Cass law?"

You observe, in connection with the inquiry submitted by you, that if the term "costs and expenses," referred to by you, does not include the expenses and fees of the county highway superintendent and if such expenses and fees of the county highway superintendent are not to be paid from special funds created for specific improvements, or if the county fund is not to be reimbursed from the special fund, after the same is created, the result will be the exhaustion of the county fund.

It should first be observed that sections 91, 98 and 101 of the Cass highway law, referred to by you, do not relate to the activities of the state highway department in the construction of intercounty highways, but relate to the activities of the county commissioners relative to county roads. This fact will not interfere, however, with an answer to your inquiry, as the rule is the same whether the county highway superintendent be engaged under the general supervision of the state highway department in the preparation of plans for intercounty highways, or whether he be engaged at the instance of the county commissioners in the preparation of plans for county road improvements.

It ought also to be observed that the compensation of the county highway superintendent, when engaged in road work, cannot be properly referred to as "fees," for the reason that such compensation takes the form of a stated salary.

Your inquiry, in so far as it relates to the expenses of the county highway superintendent, was answered in opinion No. 1184 of this department, rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, on January 19, 1916, in which opinion it was held that the expenses of the county highway superintendent incurred in the performance of his duties with respect to roads and bridges, under the Cass highway law, are to be paid from the general county fund and that no effort should be made to pay the same out of special funds, where the same exist, or to reimburse the general county fund where payment is originally made from the general county fund and a special fund is thereafter created for the improvement in question. Under section 138 of the Cass highway law, section 7181, G. C., both the salary and the expenses of the county highway superintendent are made payable from the county treasury and the section is silent as to the particular fund from which payment is to be made. The reasoning of opinion No. 1184, referred to above, therefore, applies as well to the compensation of the county highway superintendent as to his expenses and I am, therefore, of the opinion, in answer to your specific inquiry, that not only the expenses of the county highway superintendent incurred in the performance of any duty with respect to roads, under the provisions of the Cass Highway Law, but also his compensation for the time so employed, are to be paid from the general county fund and that the same should not be paid out of any special fund, where the same exists, and the general county fund should not be reimbursed where payment is made from it and a special fund is thereafter created for the improvement in question.

A copy of opinion No. 1184, referred to above, is enclosed for your information.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AUTHORIZE EMPLOYMENT OF NECESSARY MEN FOR COUNTY ROAD REPAIR WORK BY COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT AND FIX THEIR COMPENSATION—SELECTION OF INDIVIDUALS IS WITH COUNTY HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT.

Where men are to be employed in the operation of a road roller in the repair of county roads, the county commissioners will have exhausted their authority when they have authorized or approved the employment of the necessary men by the county highway superintendent and have fixed the compensation of such employes, and the selection of individuals to fill the authorized employments lies wholly with the county highway superintendent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 11, 1916.

HON. J. H. MUSSER, Prosecuting Attorney, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 7, 1916, in which you call my attention to section 155 of the Cass highway law, section 7198, G. C., which section reads as follows:

> "The county highway superintendent may, with the approval of the county commissioners or township trustees, employ such laborers, teams, implements and tools, and purchase such material as may be necessary in the performance of his duties."

You state that Auglaize county has a steam road roller and other equipment, which has been used in repairing and maintaining the roads, and the roller has heretofore been in charge of the county commissioners and has been operated by a force of two men, the men being designated as foreman and engineer, and receiving salaries of $75.00 and $60.00 per month, respectively. These men have been employed continuously from April 1st to about December 1st of each year, and have received a straight time salary during that period. The present county commissioners desire to continue this arrangement and the question has arisen as to who has the appointing authority in naming the men for these two places. You request my opinion as to whether the county commissioners are authorized to name these two men or whether the employment of any particular persons is subject to the approval of the county commissioners, or whether, on the other hand, the selection of the individuals to fill these specified employments lies wholly with the county highway superintendent, the only authority of the commissioners being to authorize or approve the employment of a foreman and engineer, at a stated salary, for the purpose of operating the road roller.

Your question was touched upon and in effect answered in opinion No. 1093 of this department, rendered to Rodger D. Hay, prosecuting attorney of Defiance county, on December 13, 1915, in which it was held that in view of the language of section 7198, G. C., laborers engaged on county road work, where the county commissioners are proceeding by force account, are to be employed by the county highway superintendent, such employment having been authorized by the county commissioners. I am unable to see how any other conclusion could be reached, in view of the language of the section in question, and I, therefore, advise you that under the circumstances presented by your communication, the county commissioners will have exhausted their authority when they have authorized or approved the employment by the county highway superintendent of a foreman and engineer to operate a road roller, and have fixed the compensation of such employes, and that the selection of individuals to fill these specified employments lies wholly with the county highway superintendent. The county highway superintendent will, of course, be without authority to act in the premises until the commissioners have taken the action suggested above.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES, CLERK OR TREASURER'S EXPENSES CANNOT BE PAID FROM TOWNSHIP TREASURY IN ABSENCE OF STATUTES AUTHORIZING SUCH EXPENDITURES.

In the absence of a law expressly authorizing payment of expenses, expenses of township trustees, clerk or treasurer cannot be paid from township treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 13, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of your letter of February 21, 1916, as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following question:

"May the railroad fare and hotel and meals of township trustees, clerk, treasurer, or township highway superintendent be paid from the township funds if such expenses have been necessarily incurred in the transaction of public business within or without the township, in the absence of a law expressly providing for the payment of such expenses from the township funds?"

In this state the rule is that an officer is not entitled to be reimbursed for expenses incurred by him while in the discharge of a public duty unless the statute specifically authorizes such expenditure, if such officer receives compensation for the performance of such duties.

That an officer is not entitled to be reimbursed for expenses incurred by him unless the statute specifically provides therefor is recognized in the case of Richardson v. State ex rel., 66 O. S., 108.

This doctrine is likewise recognized in Pennsylvania, in the case of Albright v. County of Bedford, 106 Pa., 582.

Furthermore, in regard to township trustees, a trustee under section 1245, G. C., when chosen as a delegate to the annual conference of the board of health, is by statute authorized to receive from the township his necessary expenses upon the presentation of a certificate from the secretary of the state board; and when attending under the provisions of section 7189, G. C. (106 O. L., 615) the annual meeting called by the county highway superintendent is authorized to receive his actual and necessary expenses.

The statutes providing in certain instances that the trustees of a township may receive their actual and necessary expenses, it is clear that the legislature intended that, in the absence of such special authorization by statute, no expenses shall be paid.

The same is true with respect to the township clerk and treasurer.

I hold, therefore, that railroad fare and hotel bill and meals of township trustees, clerk and treasurer cannot be paid from township funds in the absence of a law expressly providing for the payment of expenses.

In regard to the township highway superintendent, I would call your attention to section 3373, G. C. (106 O. L., 594), wherein it is provided that the township trustees shall fix the compensation of the township highway superintendent, and further provides:

> "The compensation and all proper and necessary expenses, when approved by the township trustees, shall be paid by the township treasurer upon warrant of the township clerk."

While it is true that in the case of Richardson v. State ex rel., supra, the court held in regard to the commissioner, in the second branch of the syllabus:

> "Expenses incurred for railroad fare, livery hire, charges for the use of his own conveyance, for the feed and shoeing of horses used by him, and for his board and others of a like nature, are of a personal character, for which no valid claim can be made against the county, although they are incurred while about the business of the county."

nevertheless, in that case the facts were that besides the three dollars per day allowed the commissioner, the statute likewise allowed him mileage, which the court construed to mean an amount allowed to compensate him for expenses of travel on official business. Such is not the case in regard to the township highway superintendent.

I therefore believe and hold that the actual expenses of the township highway superintendent incurred while in the discharge of his official duties may be paid from township funds, and that said expenses may include necessary railroad fare and hotel charges and meals, provided, of course, that the same are allowed by the township trustees.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAX—CONSTRUCTION OF WORDS "TO OR FOR USE OF AN INSTITUTION IN THIS STATE FOR PURPOSE ONLY OF PUBLIC CHARITY OR OTHER EXCLUSIVELY PUBLIC PURPOSES" AS USED IN SECTION 5332, G. C.—MARIETTA, OHIO.

A devise of real property or a bequest of personal property to certain persons named as trustees in a will to be held by said persons in trust and to be administered by them for a benevolent or charitable purpose according to the terms of said will, is not one "to or for use of an institution in this state for purpose only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes" within the meaning of the provision of section 5332, G. C., and such devise or bequest is not therefore exempt from the collateral inheritance tax.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1916.

HON. ALLEN T. WILLIAMSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Marietta, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of February 11, 1916, which is as follows:

> "In behalf of the probate judge of this county I herewith submit to you for your opinion whether or not the collateral inheritance tax under section 5331 and 5332, General Code of Ohio, should be charged and collected against the bequests bequeathed by items 15 and 17 of the will of Sarah R. Warren, deceased, duly admitted to probate in this county. Are the two items embraced within the exceptions of section 5332. We are not clear whether these bequests are exempt from the payment of the tax when not made to an 'institution' in this state although made in accordance with the last part of the first sentence of said section 5332 for 'exclusively public purposes.' As bearing upon the question I cite you the case In Re Estate of Isabella Brown, 13th Ohio Decisions, page 168. I enclose copy of items in the will."

Items 15 and 17 of the will of the said Sarah R. Warren, deceased provide in part as follows:

> "Fifteenth—I give, devise and bequeath to Herbert Minshall, Katharine Parr Nye and Robert M. Noll, Esq., the sum of three thousand dollars ($3,000.00), to hold as trustees, and be expended by them, without charge for their services, except necessary expenses incurred by them, in the erection and maintenance and repair of a public drinking fountain for man and animals, but especially for horses and dogs, to be erected by them at such place in the city of Marietta, Ohio, as they may deem best for such purpose.
> "Seventeenth—I devise and bequeath to the following named persons, as trustees, to wit: Edward M. Booth, John A. Gallagher and Winfield S. Hancock, all the rest and residue of my estate, both real and personal property, not hereinbefore devised and bequeathed, and wheresoever the same may be situated, to have and to hold in trust, for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.
> "Until such a time as a free public hospital is established by the city of Marietta, Ohio, or a free public hospital is given said city, and endowed, which in either case said hospital shall be of a value of not less than twenty thousand ($20,000.00) dollars, including grounds, building and equipment: the income arising from said property shall be used by said trustees or their successors, in providing funds for hospital services rendered by any private hospital in said city to persons, when required by said trustees, and those who shall have preference thereto shall be as follows: First—To worthy poor widows with children or other members of their family dependent on them for support: second, to worthy poor single women dependent on their own exertions for support; third, to worthy poor men, with families or children dependent on them for support; all of such persons to be residents of Marietta township, Washington county, Ohio, and shall be cared for irrespective of their religious beliefs. Each case, however, shall be passed upon by said trustees and their decision shall be final.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Said trustees shall keep an account of all moneys received and expended and shall every two years file with the probate court of said county, an itemized statement of the same.

"Whenever a free public hospital shall be established by the city of Marietta, Ohio, as permitted by the laws of the state or a free public hospital is given to said city in the sum hereinbefore mentioned for either of said hospitals, then the trustees shall assign and convey to the city of Marietta, for the hospital fund of said city for the use of said free public hospital, the property hereinbefore mentioned, and such property and the funds arising from the sale thereof, may then be used in any manner or way the city of Marietta may deem proper for the benefit of said free public hospital."

Section 5332, G. C., provides:

"The provisions of the next preceding section (providing for a collateral inheritance tax) shall not apply to property, or interests in property, transmitted to the state of Ohio under the intestate laws of the state, or embraced in a bequest, devise, transfer or conveyance to, or for the use of the state of Ohio, or to or for the use of a municipal corporation or other political subdivision thereof for exclusively public purposes, or public institutions of learning, or to or for the use of an institution in this state for purpose only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes. * * *"

If the respective bequest or devise to the respective persons named in items 15 and 17 of the will of the said Sarah R. Warren, deceased, as above set forth, to be held in trust and to be used and expended by said persons for the purposes therein mentioned, is exempt from the collateral inheritance tax under provision of section 5332, G. C., as above quoted, it must be on the ground that said bequest or devise is one "to or for the use of an institution in this state for purpose only of public charity or other exclusively public purposes." Unless it can be said that said bequest or devise is to or for the use of an institution in this state for the purposes mentioned in the statute, the same is not exempt from the collateral inheritance tax provided for in section 5331, G. C., as amended in 103 O. L., 463.

In the case of Humphreys v. Little Sisters, 29 O. S., 201, the court in its opinion said:

"By the term institution is to be understood as an organization which is permanent in its nature, as contradistinguished from an undertaking which is transient and temporary."

In the case of Gerke v. Purcell, 25 O. S., 229, in the opinion of the court at page 244 appears the following definition:

> "The term 'institution' is sometimes used as descriptive of the establishment or place where the business or operation of a society or association is carried on; at other times it is used to designate the organized society."

The Century dictionary defines the term "institution" as "an establishment for the promotion of some object; an organized society or body of persons, usually with a fixed place of assemblage and operation, devoted to a special pursuit or purpose."

In the case of in re Brown, 15 O. D., 168, the court held that the purpose of the exception in the collateral inheritance tax law contained in the words "or to or for the use of any institution in said state for the purposes of purely public charity or for other exclusively public purposes," is to exempt from taxation charitable bequests and devises when made to permanent organizations in the state, corporate or otherwise, capable of holding property, and also to exempt charitable bequests or devises when the property so devised or bequeathed is actually located in this state and used here permanently for the charitable purposes for which it is given.

Section 9624 of the statutes of Illinois provides that:

> "When the beneficial interest of any property or income therefrom shall pass to or for the use of any * * * benevolent or charitable purpose the same shall not be subject to the inheritance tax."

In the case of in re Graves, 242 Ill., 23, the court held that under the above provision of the statute a certain gift to public authorities for the erection of a drinking fountain or drinking basin for horses, and in connection therewith a bronze statue of a certain horse together with a record of his performances, was exempt from the inheritance tax as a charitable gift. It must be observed, however, that under the provision of said statute it is only necessary that the beneficial interests in any property or the income therefrom shall pass to or for the use of any benevolent or charitable purpose, and the right to exemption is not necessarily limited to the transfer of such beneficial interests to or for the use of an institution as above defined organized and established for benevolent or charitable purposes.

The statute of Massachusetts relating to the collateral inheritance tax exempts from the tax bequests or devises to "charitable institutions the property of which is exempt from taxation." In the case of Hooper v. Shaw, 176 Mass., 190, the court held that a legacy left to the New England Trust Company of Boston, "the interest of which they will pay to needy aged men and women who had been in better circumstances in early life but had become in want when in old age" is not "to or for a charitable institution" within the meaning of the collateral inheritance tax law. The court in its opinion said:

> "Giving the broadest latitude to the word 'institution,' and assuming that there is an exemption if a charitable institution of the kind described is either trustee or cestui que trust, we cannot read the words as meaning to embrace all charitable gifts. Very likely the institution need not be incorporated, but it is contemplated as an owner of property, not as property."

In the case of Knight v. Stevens, 66 N. Y., App. Div., 267, the court held that a bequest to trustees in trust to found, erect and maintain "a home for those who by misfortune have become incapable of providing for themselves and those who have slender means of support," is subject to the transfer tax as the statute providing that the property of a "corporation or association" organized exclusively for charitable or benevolent purposes shall be exempt from taxation, and the statute imposing a transfer tax upon property passing "to persons or corporations not exempt by law from taxation" do not include a gift for charitable purposes made to trustees.

In view of the foregoing definitions of the term "institution" and the authorities cited, I am compelled to conclude that the bequest provided for in item 15 of the will of the said Sarah R. Warren, deceased, as well as the devise and bequest provided for in section 17 of said will, is not one to or for the use of an institution in this state within the meaning of the above provision of section 5332, G. C., and I am of the opinion therefore that said devise and bequests are not exempt from the collateral inheritance tax.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—HOW NOTES MAY BE EXECUTED TO CONSTITUTE A LEGAL OBLIGATION AGAINST SCHOOL FUNDS OF DISTRICT.

Where the board of education of a school district, properly organized and in the exercise of the authority conferred upon it by the provisions of sections 4749 and 5656, G. C., borrows money under the conditions prescribed in said section 5656,G. C., and for the purpose mentioned in said section, and in consideration therefor issues its note for the sum of money so borrowed, the members of said board of education may sign the corporate name of the board of education to said note or they may authorize one or more of the officers of said board to sign said name to said note.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 14, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of February 25th you request my opinion upon the following questions:

> "In auditing a village school district it was found that a note had been given by the board of education of said district for loan under section 5656, General Code, said note being signed as follows: 'The board of education of the village school district of the village of Eastview, Ohio, by Flora M. Kinner, president; F. W. Blasdell, vice-president; S. H. Sisley, secretary; L. J. Clozie, and Bessie Collins Newton,' said individuals comprising the board of education of said village school district.
> "Questions:—
>
> "In your opinion would said note, executed in that form, be a legal obligation against the school funds of said district?
> "If held to be illegal, what, in your opinion, would be the proper method of attaching the signature of the board of education to such instrument?"

Under provision of section 4749, G. C., the board of education of a school district, when properly organized, is a body politic and corporate, and as such is capable of suing and being sued and of contracting and being contracted with.

Under provision of section 5656, G. C., said board of education may, under the conditions therein prescribed and for the purpose therein mentioned, borrow money.

Assuming therefore that the board of education of the village school district referred to in your inquiry was properly organized and that, in the exercise of the authority vested in it by the provisions of said sections 4749 and 5656 of the General Code, said board of education issued the note, mentioned in your inquiry, under the conditions prescribed in said section 5656, G. C., and for the purpose mentioned in said section, I am of the opinion in answer to your questions that said note, executed in the manner set forth in your inquiry, is a valid and binding obligation against the school funds of said district.

The members of said board of education, at a legal meeting of the board and by a resolution duly passed, might have authorized one or more of its officers to sign the name of the board of education to said note and said instrument so signed by said officer or officers duly authorized thereunto would have evidenced a binding obligation on the school funds of said school district. Said members having chosen to sign the corporate name of the board of education to said note rather than to authorize one or more of its officers to sign said instrument, there can be no question as to its validity.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—BONDS ISSUED PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 6, 1915, UNDER SECTION 7004, G. C., NOW REPEALED—TRUSTEES NOW WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ISSUE ADDITIONAL BONDS UNDER SAID SECTION NO FURTHER ACTION HAVING BEEN TAKEN IN THE PREMISES BY THE TRUSEES.

Where prior to September 6, 1915, township trustees had issued bonds under section 7004, G. C., repealed by the Cass highway law, but had taken no action looking toward a further and additional issue of bonds thereunder, the trustees are now without authority to issue additional bonds under said section.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1916.

HON. RUSSELL M. KNEPPER, Prosecuting Attorney, Tiffin, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 8, 1916, you requested my opinion with reference to the sale of bonds under the General Code, sections 6976 to 7019, where the proceedings were begun prior to September 6, 1915. You stated that it was to be assumed that all proceedings were regular and that the plats and maps were regularly filed and the system properly begun and the funds raised from the present sale would go toward finishing said improvement plan. The vote was taken April 20, 1915, and only $10,000 worth of bonds were sold.

Under date of February 22, 1916, in response to my request for additional information, you wrote me that the plats and maps provided for under the scheme of improvement in question, and which designated the principal roads of the township, were properly filed. From the roads so designated and certified to the trustees, the trustees selected some five miles to be improved the first year and issued $10,000 worth of bonds for the improvement of the roads so selected. The remainder of the roads certified in the maps and plats remain unimproved and you request my opinion as to the right of the trustees to continue to sell bonds under the repealed sections. You express the view that such right does not exist, and in view of the nature of the scheme of road improvement provided for by sections 6976 to 7019 inclusive, of the General Code, now repealed, I concur in the opinion expressed by you.

Section 6976, G. C., provided that the trustees of a township, on petition of one hundred or more tax payers, should submit the question of road improvement to the qualified electors of the township. Under section 6977, G. C., the electors voted on the proposition of road improvement by general taxation, and did not vote upon a bond issue. Under sections 6981 and 6982, G. C., the trustees, in the event of a favorable vote, were required to assess taxes for road improvement purposes and appoint three freeholders as commissioners, and under section 6985, G. C., it was the duty of the commissioners so appointed to designate and determine the established roads and streets in the township which, in their opinion, should be improved. The commissioners were required to call to their assistance a competent engineer, and it was the duty of this engineer to make a correct map of the township, showing the established roads and streets therein, which had been designated by the commissioners for improvement, and also profiles of such roads and streets. Under section 6987, G. C., the township trustees, after the report of the commissioners and the map and profiles have been filed with the township clerk, were required to determine which roads should be first improved, of those designated by the commissioners. Section 7004, G. C., provided that for the purpose of providing the money necessary to meet the expenses of improving such roads and streets, the trustees of a township, if advisable in their opinion, might issue the bonds of the township.

If, prior to September 6, 1915, all of the preliminary steps had been taken and the township trustees had adopted a resolution providing for a further additional bond issue, then in conformity with opinions Nos. 978 and 1128 of this department, relating to the effect of the saving provisions of the Cass highway law on proceedings under old sections 7033 to 7052 inclusive, and for the reasons expressed in such opinions, it would be my view that such bonds provided for by the resolution of the township trustees might be issued after September 6, 1915, and the proceeds used in accordance with the provisions of the old sections 6976 to 7019 inclusive, of the General Code.

Under the facts submitted by you, the trustees did not, however, prior to September 6, 1915, take any action looking toward a further and additional bond issue and a bond issue was never authorized by a vote of the people, the submission of the question of a bond issue to the voters not being authorized by the scheme of road improvement in question. I am unable to see, therefore, how the saving provision of section 303 of the Cass highway law, to the effect that the provisions of that act shall not affect or impair any act done or right acquired under or in pursuance of any resolution adopted by the trustees of any township, prior to the time of the taking effect of the Cass highway law, can have any operation under the state of facts disclosed by your inquiry, and it is my opinion, in answer to your specific question, that the trustees of the township to which you refer are without authority to continue to sell bonds under sections 6976 to 7019, inclusive, of the General Code, now repealed.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—MAY USE BOTH INTERCOUNTY AND MAIN MARKET ROAD FUNDS IN CO-OPERATION WITH COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WHEN HIGHWAY HAS BEEN DESIGNATED AS AN INTERCOUNTY HIGHWAY AND MAIN MARKET ROAD.

Where a highway which it is proposed to improve is both an intercounty highway and a main market road, the state highway commissioner may use both intercounty highway funds and main market road funds in improving a section of such highway in co-operation with county commissioners.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 2, 1916, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions relating to the improvement of the Barnesville-Hendrysburg road, I. C. H. No. 101, petition No. 1196, in Belmont county.

As appears by your certificate upon said resolution, the intercounty highway in question has been designated as a main market road. It further appears from the certificates of the chief clerk of your department that of the $30,100.00 required for the state's half of the cost of this improvement, it is proposed to pay $10,900.00 from the main market road fund and $19,200.00 from the intercounty highway fund. Section 226 of the Cass highway law, section 1231, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "County commissioners, township trustees and village councils shall have the same power and authority to co-operate in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of main market roads as is granted to them by this act in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways; and in case the commissioners of any county, the trustees of any township and the council of any village, or any of such authorities, determines to co-operate in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of any main market road, the procedure shall be the same as in the case of co-operation by such authorities in the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of intercounty highways, as provided in this act."

In view of the above quoted provision and of the fact above noted that the road which it is proposed to improve is both an intercounty highway and a main market road, I see no objection to the use of intercounty highway and main market road funds in constructing a single improvement in the manner contemplated by you. An identical result could be obtained by dividing the portion of road which it is proposed to improve into two sections and proceeding separately and letting a separate contract as to each section. I am unable to see how any advantage could be gained by such division or how any evil can result from the contemplated arrangement, and incline to the view that the same is authorized in the present state of the law.

I am, therefore, returning the final resolution in question with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT —DUTY OF DRAGGING ALL GRAVELED AND UNIMPROVED ROADS RESTS PRIMARILY WITH SUCH TOWNSHIP OFFICIAL. .

The duties of township officials with reference to the dragging of roads under chapter I' of the Cass highway law, extend to all graveled and unimproved roads, whether the same be township roads, county roads or state roads.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1916.

HON. J. W. WATTS, Prosecuting Attorney, Hillsboro, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 17, 1916, in which you submit the following inquiry:

> "Are the township trustees required under section 3375, G. C., to drag county and state roads as defined by section 7464, G. C., provided they are graveled roads, and are the county commissioners and the state highway department required to drag any roads?
> "Section 85 of the Cass road law (G. C., 6906), empowers the county commissioners to reconstruct or repair any existing road or part thereof by grading, paving, draining, dragging, etc., but I find no provision in said law by which the county commissioners are required to carry out any particular system of road dragging."

You observe that the question of whether township trustees are required, under section 3375, G. C., to drag county and state roads, as defined by section 7464, G. C., provided they are graveled roads, seems to have been answered in the affirmative by opinion No. 847 of this department, rendered to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, on September 21, 1915, in which opinion the following language was used:

> "By section 3375, G. C., et seq., the township highway superintendent is given certain duties in reference to dragging the graveled and unimproved public roads of his district and these duties extend to all the graveled and unimproved public roads of the district without reference to their class."

You state that certain township trustees of your county are interested in this question, and that you have advised them that township trustees are required to drag all graveled public roads even though the same might be county or state roads, your advice being given in accordance with your understanding of opinion No. 847, referred to above, but that the trustees desire you to submit the matter to this department for a more specific answer.

You are entirely correct in your understanding of the opinion referred to by you, it being intended to hold therein that the duties of the township highway superintendent and other township officials, with reference to the dragging of the graveled and unimproved public roads, extended to all roads of the township or district, as the case might be, without regard to whether such roads were township, state or county roads. As a matter of fact, the duty of township authorities in reference to dragging state roads is very limited at the present time, inasmuch as there cannot be an unimproved state road under the present classification, and in view of the further fact that of over a thousand miles of state roads, only about twenty miles have been improved by the use of gravel. I advise you, in answer to your specific question, that it is the duty of the township highway superintendent, under section 3375, G. C., to divide all the graveled and unimproved public roads of the township into road dragging districts, which must include all mail routes and main traveled roads within the township which are graveled or unimproved, and that in exercising this duty the township highway superintendent should take into consideration all graveled and unimproved public roads, whether they be county roads, township roads or state roads, and must include in the road dragging districts all mail routes and main traveled roads which are graveled or unimproved, without reference to whether such roads be state roads, county roads, or township roads. County commissioners are undoubtedly authorized to drag certain roads, and the same may also be said of the state highway commissioner, but the duty of dragging all graveled and unimproved roads rests primarily on the township authorities, and this duty is not limited to roads of any particular class but extends to all graveled and unimproved roads.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES ARE AUTHORIZED TO PURCHASE IRON PIPE, ETC., FOR CULVERT WORK IN REPAIR OF TOWNSHIP ROADS.

Township trustees are authorized to purchase iron pipe or other materials suitable for culvert work, and to use the same in their repair work on township roads, carried forward through the township highway superintendent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 15, 1916.

HON. T. M. POTTER, Prosecuting Attorney, New Lexington, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I acknowledge receipt of your communication of February 18, 1916, in which you state that the trustees of the various townships of your county are in doubt as to their right to construct culverts in the repair of roads, the usual character of culverts that they have been using being iron pipe running in diameter from 8 to 36 inches. You state that all of the townships have so-called bridge funds, produced by a levy under section 7562, G. C., repealed by the Cass highway law. You call attention to section 3370, G. C., which provides, among other things, that the township highway superintendent, under the direction of the township trustees, shall have control of the roads of his district and keep them in good repair. You also call attention to section 6956-1, G. C., which provides, among other things, that the board of county commissioners shall provide, annually, a fund for the repair and maintenance of bridges and county highways. The question upon which you desire my opinion is as to whether township trustees, in the general repair of the roads, are authorized and empowered, as part of that repair, to place in such roads underground drains consisting of a pipe of the character referred to by you, and pay for the same out of the road fund of the township.

This department has, in effect, covered the matter submitted by you in a number of opinions previously rendered. In opinion No. 847, rendered to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, on September 21, 1915, it was pointed out that the duty of the township highway superintendent to keep the roads of his district in good repair is limited to township roads as defined in section 241 of the Cass highway law, section 7464, G. C. It was held in opinion No. 1063, rendered to Hon. Hugh F. Neuhart, prosecuting attorney of Noble county, on December 3, 1915, that balances in the township bridge fund not needed for bridges on account of a transfer of authority from the trustees to the commissioners, might properly be transferred in the manner provided by section 2296, et seq., of the General Code. It was pointed out in this opinion that the Cass highway law had changed the jurisdiction of the township trustees in relation to bridges and culverts, and that no separate levy by the trustees for bridge purposes is now provided by law. It was further observed that at least a part of the duties of the township trustees, as to bridges and culverts, formerly conferred upon them, are taken away from the trustees and lodged with the county commissioners.

In opinion No. 1279, rendered to Hon. E. E. Lindsay, prosecuting attorney of Tuscarawas county, on February 16, 1916, the exact nature of the duties of township trustees with respect to bridges and culverts, under the Cass Highway Law, was defined and it was held, among other things, that while both the county commissioners and the township trustees are authorized to repair or maintain all bridges and culverts on a township road, yet the duty of such repair or maintenance rests primarily on the trustees.

In view of the foregoing and with the preliminary observations that the duty of the township in respect to the repair and maintenance of roads, bridges and culverts extends only to township roads and to the bridges and culverts situated thereon, I advise you that township trustees are authorized to purchase iron, pipe or other materials suitable for culvert work, and to use the same in their repair work on township roads, carried forward through the township highway superintendent. If there remains any balance in the so-called bridge fund created by levy under section 7562, G. C., now repealed, payment for such culvert pipe should be made from such fund. If, however, there is no balance in such fund, payment may properly be made from the road fund of the township.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPOVAL, TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE FOR RURAL NO. 1 SCHOOL DISTRICT OF NEWPORT TOWNSHIP, WASHINGTON COUNTY OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 16, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.
GENTLEMEN :—

> "RE:—Bonds of rural No. 1 school district in Newport township, Washington county, Ohio, in the sum of $15,000.00, being thirty bonds of $500.00 each, bearing interest at five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of rural No. 1 school district of Newport township, Washington county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above bonds, also the bond form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that said bonds prepared in accordance with the form submitted, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said rural school district.

DISAPPROVAL, TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, VILLAGE OF JEFFERSON, MADISON COUNTY, OHIO—ASSESSMENT BONDS ISSUED BY VILLAGE TO PAY COST OF PAVING BETWEEN RAILS OF AN INTERURBAN RAILROAD.

Industrial commission advised not to accept the bonds of the village of Jefferson, Madison county, Ohio, in the amount of $14,600.00, because said bonds were issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments to be collected from The Columbus, London and Springfield Railway Company to pay the cost of improving that portion of Main street in said village which the railway company, under its franchise, is required to pave at its own expense.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 16, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

> "RE:—Bonds of the village of Jefferson, Madison county, Ohio, in the amount of $14,600.00, issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of Main street in said village."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of Jefferson relative to the above bond issue, and I find that said bonds are issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments to pay the cost and expense of so much of the improvement of said street as is properly chargeable to The Columbus, London and Springfield Railway Company. The tracks of this company are laid in the street so improved, and under its franchise the company is required to construct a pavement between its rails and for two feet on each side thereof.

It is established in Ohio that if a railway company fails to comply with the provisions of its franchise in respect to paving its right-of-way, the municipality may itself construct the improvements and collect the cost from the company by suit. I am, however, unable to find any provision of the General Code authorizing the municipality, by agreement or otherwise, to pay this cost and then reimburse the municipal treasury by an assessment against the railway payable in ten annual installments, or to issue municipal bonds in anticipation of the collection of such special assessments. The practical result of this proceeding is that the municipality loans its credit to the railway company.

In reply to a letter which I wrote to F. G. Brown, clerk of the village of Jefferson, on March 1, 1916, calling his attention to this lack of authority on the part of the village council, I have received a letter from E. W. Johnson, solicitor of the village of Jefferson, which is as follows:

> "In re village of Jefferson $14,600.00 bond issue, issued for the purpose of paying the Ohio Electric Railway Company's portion of the Main street paving.

"Upon receipt of your letter to Forest G. Brown, clerk of the village of Jefferson, concerning this bond issue, I advised him to mail the same to the attorneys for the Andrews Asphalt Paving Company, of Hamilton, Ohio, as these people had already agreed with the village of Jefferson to accept these bonds in payment for the work which they have already completed, provided the same were not taken when offered to the industrial commission, or taken by bidders when advertised and sold.

"The proceedings of West Jefferson as you noted by the transcript of proceedings contemplated a cash settlement by the railway company, and the bond issue arranged for was made at their request and with the consent of the contractor.

"Although I feel that this bond issue comes within the provisions for special assessments, and that the assessments will be paid the same as by other property benefited and assessed as abutting property, nevertheless at the time aforementioned arrangement was made, I raised the same point as solicitor for the village, that has been raised by you, and it was because of that status of affairs that caused Mr. Andrews to agree to take the bonds.

"For these reasons I do not care to make a different ruling on the proposition, and I will ask that you have the industrial commission accept or reject the bonds at once, so that the village can take final action to dispose of them."

In view of the statements contained in this letter, and in view of the lack of authority upon the part of the municipal officers to issue the bonds under consideration, I am unable to approve the same, and advise you that they should be rejected by your commission.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

KENT STATE NORMAL SCHOOL—EIGHT-HOUR LAW IS APPLICABLE TO JANITORS AT SAID INSTITUTION.

The provisions of sections 17-1 and 17-2, G. C., 103 O. L., 854, apply to janitors of state normal schools.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 16, 1916.

HON. JOHN E. MCGILVREY, President Kent State Normal College, Kent, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 10, 1916, setting forth a copy of an order received by you from the Industrial Commission of Ohio which directs you to not require or permit a janitor or other employe of your institution to work more than eight (8) hours in any calendar day or more than forty-eight (48) hours in any week. You desire to know whether such employments in your institution are covered by sections 17-1 and 17-2 of the General Code, 103 O. L., 854.

Replying to your inquiry I beg to say that this order made by the industrial commission is in harmony with an opinion to said commission from this department under date of September 15, 1915, in which certain employes of the Ohio University including janitors were in question, and which opinion held that said employes, including janitors of said institution, were within the operation of said sections 17-1 and 17-2 of the General Code, aforesaid.

In answer therefore to your inquiry I must advise that the provisions of said sections aforesaid cover the employment of janitors and other employes at your institution.

The scope and effect of these sections were fully discussed in opinion No. 814 under date of September 10, 1915, a copy of which is herewith enclosed. A further discussion therefore of their provisions is unnecessary.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—WHERE IT IS DESIRED TO BORROW MONEY IN ANTICIPATION OF TAX LEVIES MADE UNDER SECTIONS 1222 AND 6926, G. C., ONLY METHOD PROVIDED BY LAW IS BOND ISSUE UNDER SECTIONS 1223 AND 6929, G. C.

Where it is desired to borrow money in anticipation of tax levies made under sections 1222 and 6926, G. C., the only method provided by law is a bond issue under sections 1223 and 6929, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 16, 1916.

HON. ROBERT C. PATTERSON, Prosecuting Attorney, Dayton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 6, 1916, which reads as follows:

> "At the November election, 1915, the electors of Montgomery county voted in favor of a one mill levy for two years for road improvements under chapters VI and VIII of the Cass law.
> "The commissioners are about to proceed with these improvements, and desire to know if they can borrow money as well as issue bonds in anticipation of the collection of this tax. They are of opinion that they can save considerable interest money if permitted to borrow amounts needed as the work progresses. I am unable to find any other provisions, except under General Code, 1223 and 6929, which authorizes only bond issues; but, as the commissioners desire to borrow only such amounts as are needed from time to time, I write asking if you know of any proceeding by which this can be done. I ask the favor of an early answer.
> "If you decide that a bond issue is necessary, I enclose for your inspection a form of resolution for that purpose, calling attention particularly to the provision as to a levy to meet any deficiency in the collection of the tax, and ask if the form meets with your approval."

As I understand your inquiry, you desire to know whether there is any method other than the issuance of bonds under sections 1223 and 6929, G. C., by which county commissioners can borrow money in anticipation of levies made under sections 1222 and 6926, G. C. Sections 1223 and 6929, G. C., provide only for the issuance of bonds, and it is my opinion that the method of anticipating tax levies provided for by the sections in question is exclusive and that county commissioners are without authority to borrow money in anticipation of levies made under sections 1222 and 6926, G. C., in any manner other than by the issuance and sale of bonds. I am unable to see where any advantage could accrue from any other method of borrowing money. Under section 5660, G. C., the county commissioners cannot enter into a contract involving the expenditure of money unless the auditor first certifies that the money required for the payment of the obligation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn or has been levied and placed on the duplicate and is in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose. Even if it were permissible for the commissioners to issue short time notes, such notes would have to be issued before road contracts could be entered into, and in view of the fact that the obligation, whatever its nature, is to be met from the taxes levied for the year 1916, the maturity of notes could not be earlier than that of the bonds which your county commissioners propose to issue.

The form of bond resolution submitted by you is as follows:

"RESOLUTION.

"Whereas, at a general election held in Montgomery county, Ohio, on the 2nd day of November, 1915, the question of levying taxes for two years at a rate of one mill on each dollar of the taxable property of said county in excess of the maximum rate authorized by sections 5649-2 and 5649-3 of the General Code of Ohio, for the purpose of improving, reconstructing or repairing certain roads under the provisions of chapters VI and VIII of the act of May 17, 1915 (106 O. L., 574), was submitted to a vote of the electors of said county; and a majority of said electors voting at such election voted in favor thereof;

"And Whereas, said tax has been certified and levied for collection upon the duplicate of said county for each of the years 1916 and 1917; Now, therefore "Be it Resolved by the board of county commissioners of Montgomery county, Ohio, for the purpose of improving, reconstructing or repairing the following roads, or parts thereof, to wit:

(Naming roads)

"and in anticipation of the collection of the tax above mentioned, deem it necessary to sell the bonds of said county, as hereinafter set forth.

"Resolved further, That the bonds of said county be issued for the aforesaid purpose in the sum of $_____, each of said bonds to be in the denomination of $_____, numbered consecutively from one to _____all made payable on the 1st day of September, 1917, and bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, the first installment of interest to be payable March 1, 1917, evidenced by coupons attached thereto; said bonds to be dated _____ (day of sale) _____ and payable at the county treasury of said county. Said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they are issued, and that they are issued in pursuance of this resolution and sections 1223 and 6929, of the General Code of Ohio.

"Resolved further, That there shall be levied and collected by taxation on all taxable property on the tax duplicate of Montgomery county, Ohio, for the year 1916, an amount sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for the payment of said bonds at maturity, provided that the amount of such levy shall be such as to provide for and make up any deficiency in the revenues of said county available for the payment of such interest and the creation of such sinking fund from the collection of the one mill levy above mentioned; and the proper taxing authorities shall complete the amount of such general tax levy and certify the same for collection as other taxes are certified and collected.

"Resolved further, That said bonds shall be first offered to the Industrial Commission of Ohio, as provided in section 1465-58 of the General Code of Ohio, and such of said bonds that are not taken by said commission shall be advertised and sold in the manner provided by law."

I assume from the form of the bond resolution submitted by you that it is proposed to issue bonds only for the purpose of paying the county's proportion of the cost and expense of the projected improvements. In so far as roads may be improved by the commissioners, the entire cost and expense may be paid by the county, but under the law relating to inter-county highway and main market road improvements, carried forward by the state highway department, and in which a county may co-operate, ten per cent. of the cost and expense of such improvements must be assessed against the owners of the abutting real estate. That portion of the bond resolution submitted by you which relates to tax levies, indicates, however, that you propose to provide by the bond issue in question only the county's portion of the cost and expense of the projected improvement, inasmuch as all tax levies referred to in the bond resolution are to be made on all the taxable property of the county. What is said herein in reference to the form of resolution submitted by you will, therefore, be based upon the assumption that the proposed bond issue is designed to provide only the county's share of any costs and expenses to be incurred, and in view of that fact I suggest that the third paragraph of the bond resolution, as submitted, should be so worded as to recite that it is necessary to sell the bonds of the county for the purpose of paying the county's portion of the cost of improving, reconstructing or repairing the described roads.

It is apparent from an examination of the form of resolution submitted by you that it is at present proposed to anticipate only the levy made for the year 1916, and I suggest that this fact should also be indicated in paragraph 3 of the resolution. With the two changes above mentioned, the paragraph in question might read as follows:

Be it Resolved by the board of county commissioners of Montgomery county, Ohio, that for the purpose of paying the county's portion of the cost and expense of improving, reconstructing or repairing the following roads or parts thereof, to wit:

(Naming roads)

and in anticipation of the collection of the taxes above mentioned and levied for the year 1916, said county commissioners deem it necessary to sell the bonds of said county, as hereinafter set forth.

It is my opinion that in all other respects the form of bond resolution submitted by you is in substantial compliance with the requirements of the statutes.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—APPLICATION FOR STATE AID WITHIN AND WITHOUT A VILLAGE—SUBSEQUENT PROCEDURE FOR IMPROVEMENT OUTSIDE OF A VILLAGE.

Where an application to the state highway department for state aid relates to any portion of a highway within a village, all steps subsequent to the application are to be taken in the same manner as though the projected improvement were situated outside a village.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 16, 1916.

HON. GEORGE THORNBURG, Prosecuting Attorney, St. Clairsville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—On March 8, 1916, you addressed to me the following communication:

> "The National road through Belmont county except the part lying within the municipality of Morristown, was improved under the state highway law in force prior to the passage of the Cass law.
> "Under section 128 of the Cass law the county commissioners may extend a road improvement into and through a municipality.
> "I desire your advice as to the method of paying the proportion of the costs and expense of the improvement in the municipality, which the commissioners under an agreement with the council oblige themselves to pay.
> "We understand that you have already rendered an opinion on a similar matter in another county, and if so, please send me your opinion."

Under date of March 13, 1916, in response to my request for additional information, you advised me as follows:

> "Morristown is a small village containing about one and one-eighth miles of the National road, has a tax valuation of $88,000, a debt of approximately $1,000, a tax rate of 15 mills. The town as a corporation does not desire to pay any part of the cost of the improvement, but the abutting property owners are willing to pay ten per cent.
> "The county commissioners desire to know whether it will be lawful for them to assess 15 per cent. of the cost of this improvement upon all the taxable property of Union township which contains the village of Morristown. The county and state are taking care of the other seventy-five per cent. of the cost of improvement."

Your reference in your letter of March 8th, to section 128 of the Cass highway law, section 6949, G. C., led me to conclude that it was proposed that the county commissioners should improve that part of the National road lying within the village of Morristown without co-operation with the state highway department, inasmuch as section 6949, G. C., applies where the county commissioners are making an improvement and does not apply where the improvement is being made under the control and supervision of the state highway department. It appears, however, from your communication of March 13th, that the state is to pay a portion of the cost and expense of the proposed improvement, and that the same is to be carried forward under the supervision of the state highway department.

Where the improvement is being made by the state highway department upon the application and with the co-operation of the county commissioners, the authority for such a procedure is found in section 186 of the Cass highway law, section 1193, G. C., which section provides in part as follows:

> "Each application for state aid in the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of intercounty or main market roads, shall be accompanied by a properly certified resolution of the county commissioners * * * stating that the public interest demands the improvement of the intercounty or main market roads therein described, which may include any portion of a highway in the limits of any village, when the same is a continuation of the proposed improvement, and the consent of the village has been first obtained."

The above quoted provision was fully discussed and the proper procedure thereunder was outlined in opinion No. 1317 of this department, rendered to Hon. Clinton Cowen, state highway commissioner, on March 4, 1916, and I enclose a copy of that opinion for your consideration.

In the opinion in question it was pointed out that the statute is silent as to the procedure subsequent to the application, where the application relates to any portion of a highway within the limits of any village, and that therefore it must be concluded that all steps subsequent to the application are to be taken in the same manner as though the projected improvement were situated outside a village. The normal and ordinary division of the cost and expense of improvements carried forward under the supervision of the state highway department is provided for by sections 206 and 207 of the Cass highway law, being sections 1213 and 1214, G. C. These sections provide for the apportioning to the township or townships in which the improvement is located of fifteen per cent. of the cost and expense of such improvement, except the cost and expense of bridges and culverts.

I therefore advise you, in answer to your specific inquiry, that fifteen per cent. of the cost of the projected improvement through the village of Morristown may lawfully be apportioned to Union township, in which the village of Morristown is situated. The tax levy resorted to for the purpose of producing the township's share of the cost and expense of the improvement, or the tax levy made for the redemption of bonds issued to meet the township's portion of the cost and expense, is, of course, to be made on all the taxable property of Union township, both within and without the village of Morristown.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL OF LEASE TO THE SMITH-EATON COMPANY, CERTAIN CANAL LANDS IN CITY OF AKRON.

Lease to The Smith-Eaton Company of certain canal land in the city of Akron is in proper form. The superintendent of public works has a right to enter into the lease in question and the claims of The Smith-Eaton Company under a former alleged lease have enough of merit to make it unwise for the state to attempt to enter into a lease with any other party covering the premises in question, especially in view of a tentative agreement made for the settlement of a controversy between the company and the state.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 23, 1916, which reads as follows:

"Under date of April 25, 1914, the state of Ohio, through its superintendent of public works, entered into a lease with The Smith-Eaton Company of Akron, Ohio, covering four certain tracts of canal lands, all within the city of Akron. This lease was properly signed by John I. Miller, superintendent of public works, and by the president and secretary of The Smith-Eaton Company. It was later approved by the attorney-general, and bore also what was supposed to be the signature of James M. Cox, governor. Acting in good faith, upon the theory that the signature of the governor was genuine, The Smith-Eaton Company at once proffered the first six months' rental ($936.00), which was accepted by this department and a receipt given therefor. This rental money was deposited in the usual way, and is still in the custody of the secretary of this department. On the first of each May and November, since the signing of this lease, a representative of The Smith-Eaton Company has appeared at this office and has tendered in cash the rental, according to the terms of the lease.

"Shortly after April 25, 1914, the date of the lease, The Quaker Oats Company, a property owner adjoining the canal lands, supposed to be under lease to The Smith-Eaton Company, appeared before Governor Cox and protested against the Smith-Eaton lease on the grounds that, as adjoining property owners, their interests had been disregarded in the granting of this lease. After some investigation Governor Cox announced that the signature upon the lease was not his own but was the act of one of his secretaries, performed without his knowledge or consent. The governor immediately repudiated his signature and instructed the superintendent of public works to cancel the lease, which was done May 16, 1914.

"After the cancellation of the Smith-Eaton lease, a conference was held in the office of Governor Cox, between Governor Cox, the superintendent of public works and representatives of the Smith-Eaton and the Quaker Oats Companies. The result of this conference was the granting of certain rights, contained in the Smith-Eaton lease to the Quaker Oats Company, with the understanding that The Smith-Eaton Company would be granted a new lease at a reduced rental. The rights obtained by the Quaker Oats Company were incorporated in two leases and signed by Governor Cox on January 7, 1915, four days before he left office.

"The Smith-Eaton Company and John I. Miller, my predecessor in office, for some reason, were unable to agree on the terms of a new lease up to the time Mr. Miller left office, July 31, 1915.

"The lease attached hereto covers the same property, contains the same conditions and provides for the same rental as agreed upon at the conference previously referred to in the office of Governor Cox.

"Since the drafting of this new lease several protests have been filed with the department, but all of them have been withdrawn except that of Mr. Otto Hower's, who owns property adjoining the canal tract on Market street. Mr. Hower offers a substantial increase in rental for this property, and in view of his offer he questions our right to enter into a lease with The Smith-Eaton Company.

"The Smith-Eaton Company, on the other hand, claim that their rights under the original lease are of such a nature as to at least throw doubt upon the validity of any lease covering the property in question, which might be entered into between the state and any party, other than The Smith-Eaton Company.

"I am anxious to secure for the state all the income possible from what is now a non-productive property, but at the same time I do not want to enter into a lease that might involve the state in endless litigation.

"The accompanying lease is submitted to you for your approval with the request that you give your opinion as to the state's right to enter into this proposed lease, and also as to whether or not the rights of The Smith-Eaton Company, under its original lease, are of such a nature as to render it unwise for the state to enter into a lease, for the property in question, with any party other than The Smith-Eaton Company."

Your statement of the facts relating to the proposed lease to The Smith-Eaton Company corresponds in all substantial particulars with my information relating to said facts. So far as the alleged approval of the original lease to The Smith-Eaton Company by the then governor, Hon. James M. Cox, is concerned, it should be stated that it appears from a statement of facts made by Mr. Dow Harter to me on March 9, 1915, that it was the practice in the governor's office at that time for a subordinate to approve canal leases, and that the original lease to The Smith-Eaton Company was approved by this subordinate in the usual manner. If the act of approval could not be regarded as the act of the governor, then many, if not all, of the canal leases executed during the administration of former Governor Cox have the same status, and must be regarded as never having been approved by him. In other words, if the original lease of The Smith-Eaton Company is invalid for the reason that the same was never approved by the governor, then many, if not all, of the canal leases executed during the administration of former Governor Cox are invalid for the same reason.

To your statement of facts there should be added also the following facts, which I regard as important:

The situation several weeks ago was that the original lease to The Smith-Eaton Company had been cancelled, or at least the superintendent of public works had assumed to cancel the same. The first installment of rental paid by that company remained in the hands of your department and tenders of subsequent installments had been made and refused. The Smith-Eaton Company was claiming that its original lease was in every respect valid, and the situation was complicated by the subsequent lease to the Quaker Oats Company. Litigation resulting in the establishment of the validity of the original Smith-Eaton lease would have invalidated the subsequent lease to the Quaker Oats Company. There were at that time no persons manifesting any substantial interest in the property in question or offering therefor any rental in excess of that offered by The Smith-Eaton Company. Under this state of facts there was affected, as a proper and business-like solution of the entire difficulty, what might be styled a gentleman's agreement, which agreement, as far as I can learn, had the assent not only of The Smith-Eaton Company, but of all the state officials charged with any duty in the premises. This agreement was, in effect, that the Smith-Eaton Company should execute a release of any rights which it might have under its original lease, and that it should be given a lease covering the remainder of the premises in question at the agreed rental of $1,672.00 per year. In pursuance of this arrangement, the lease referred to by you as the new lease, and which you now submit to me for approval, was drawn, and in order to avoid any errors that might creep into the procedure, this department was requested to prepare, and did prepare, forms for the resolutions by the directors of The Smith-Eaton Company, authorizing the cancellation of the old lease and authorizing the application for and execution of the new lease, and also a form for the release in question.

The lease, as now submitted for approval, has attached to it properly certified copies of the resolutions and a properly executed release, all of which are drawn in accordance with the suggestions made by this department. It must have been a matter of common knowledge in Akron, for many months, that the question of whether or not the state had actually leased these premises was in dispute, and that should that question be determined in the negative, the state would desire to lease the premises to the person offering the highest rental. It was not, however, until a tentative agreement covering the entire matter had been reached between the representatives of the Smith-Eaton Company and the representatives of the state that protests were filed against the making of the lease and an offer of an increased rental made by Mr. Hower.

The persistency with which the officers of the Smith-Eaton Company have pursued this matter and asserted their alleged rights warrants the belief that if the officers of the state should now refuse to carry out the tentative agreement above referred to and make a lease to a third party, the matter would be involved in litigation at once, and in view of the established practice of your department not to attempt to enforce the collection of rentals where you are unable to put the lessee in peaceable possession of the leased premises, the state would be deprived of all revenue from this land until such time as the validity of the original lease to The Smith-Eaton Company might be passed upon and determined by the courts.

I find no provision of law which gives Mr. Hower any legal rights in the matter or which requires you, after you have appraised a piece of canal land and entered into a tentative agreement for its rental, to repudiate such agreement and enter into a lease with a new bidder offering a higher rental. While you are entirely correct in your attitude, to the effect that you should secure for the state all the income possible from leased premises, and while under ordinary circumstances negotiations with a prospective lessee should be so conducted as to leave the matter open and give you a free hand to negotiate a lease with any new bidder offering a higher rental, I am not prepared to say that such principle is the one which should govern you in the present transaction.

It is unnecessary to determine the question of whether the original lease to The Smith-Eaton Company is valid or invalid. It is sufficient for the purpose of this inquiry to observe that the facts surrounding the transaction are involved in such doubt as to make the issue a doubtful one, and for that reason it is impossible to assert with confidence that the lease is void, and that The Smith-Eaton Company has no rights under the same.

Answering your specific inquiries, it is my opinion that you have a right to enter into the lease with The Smith-Eaton Company, as submitted by you for approval, and that the claims of The Smith-Eaton Company, under its original lease have enough of merit to make it unwise for the state to attempt to enter into a lease with any other party covering the premises in question, especially in view of the tentative arrangement made for the settlement of the controversy.

I find that the lease submitted by you is properly drawn and for the reasons above stated I am returning the same with my approval endorsed thereon.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—BONDS MAY BE ISSUED FOR CONSTRUCTION OF BRIDGES UNDER SECTION 2434, G. C., 102 O. L., 55.

Bonds may be issued by county commissioners for the construction of bridges under the provisions of section 2434, G. C., as amended 102 O. L., 55.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your letter of March 9, 1916, as follows:

> "Section 2434, General Code, as originally adopted by the general assembly upon the incoming of the work of the codifying commission, read as follows:
> "'For the execution of the objects * * * or for a court house, county offices, jail, county infirmary, or other necessary building or bridge, or for the purpose of * * *'
> "This section clearly authorizes bond issues for bridge construction.
> "This section was amended March 28, 1911, (102 O. L., 55) to read as follows:
> "'For the execution of the objects * * * or for a court house, county offices, jail, county infirmary, detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home or other necessary buildings or bridges, or for the purpose * * *'
> "The absence of a comma after the word 'home,' where it last appears above, the grammatical context of the section, as amended, apparently limits the power to issue bonds as to bridges to the acquisition of additional land.
> "The section as above amended is now in law.
> "QUERY: Can bond issues be made under this particular section for the construction of bridges?"

Section 2434, G. C., as it appeared prior to its amendment in 102, O. L., 55, read as follows:

> "For the execution of the objects stated in the preceding section or for the purpose of erecting or acquiring a building in memory of Ohio soldiers or for a court house, county offices, jail, county infirmary, or other necessary building or bridge, or for the purpose of enlarging, repairing, improving or rebuilding thereof, or for the relief or support of the poor, the commissioners may borrow such sum or sums of money as they deem necessary at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum and issue the bonds of the county to secure the payment of the principal and interest thereof."

As amended 102 O. L., 55, aforesaid, it now provides as follows:

"For the execution of the objects stated in the preceding section, or for the purpose of erecting or acquiring a building in memory of Ohio soldiers, or for a court house, county offices, jail, county infirmary, detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home or other necessary buildings or bridges, or for the purpose of enlarging, repairing, improving, or rebuilding thereof, or for the relief or support of the poor, the commissioners may borrow such sum or sums of money as they deem necessary, at a rate of interest not to exceed six per cent. per annum, and issue the bonds of the county to secure the payment of the principal and interest thereof.

"Provided, that if the judge designated to transact the business arising under the jurisdiction provided for in section 1639 of the General Code of the state of Ohio, shall advise and recommend in writing to the county commissioners of any county the purchase of land for and the erection of a place to be known as a detention home, or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home, the commissioners without first submitting the question to the vote of the county may levy a tax for either or both of such purposes in an amount not to exceed in any one year two-tenths of one mill for every dollar of taxable property on the tax duplicate of said county."

It will be observed from the foregoing sections that the amendment made in 102 O. L., added in the first paragraph of said section the following "detention home," and "or additional land for an infirmary or county children's home." It also added the concluding paragraph of said section which is devoted entirely to provisions referring to a detention home or to the purchase of additional land for an infirmary or county children's home, being the new matter inserted as before observed in the first paragraph of said section by the amendment. As suggested in your letter, had a comma followed the term "children's home" in the amendment no question could be raised as to the meaning of the amended statute.

It is a general rule of law in the construction of a statute that the matter of punctuation is of little consequence in determining the effect of its provisions. It is held in the case of Albright v. Payne, 43 O. S., 8,

"In construing a statute, punctuation may aid, but does not control unless other means fail; and in rendering the meaning of a statute, punctuation may be changed or disregarded."

Referring to the same subject, Black on Interpretation of Laws, page 185, observes:

"The British statutes, on the original rolls of parliament, are not punctuated at all, and although more or less marks of punctuation appear in the printed transcripts of the acts of parliament, they are not inserted by authority and are not regarded as an essential part of the law. In the legislative bodies of this country, the punctuation marks are usually inserted, with a greater or less approach to correctness, by the member who drafts and introduces the bill, are sometimes changed by the engrossing clerks, and are frequently reformed by the printer. They very seldom receive the attentive consideration of the legislature, and no great importance is ever attached to them during the progress of the bill through the house. For this reason it has come to be recognized as a settled legal doctrine that the punctuation marks are no part of the statute."

On page 186 the same author again remarks:

"If, therefore, the words of the act, taken in themselves alone, or compared with the context and read in the light of the spirit and reason of the whole act, convey a precise and single meaning, they are not to be affected by the want of proper punctuation or by the insertion of incorrect or misplaced marks. In that event, the court will disregard the existing punctuation, supply such stops as may be missing, transpose those which are erroneously placed, eliminate those which are superfluous, reform such as are incorrectly used, and read the act as if correctly punctuated."

When we consider the purpose of the amendment to this section, as stated above, it is manifest that it was made for the purpose of adding to the provisions of the former section the additional purposes of providing for a detention home, and for purchasing additional land for an infirmary or county children's home, and that said amendment was made for no other purpose. This conclusion is unavoidable when we consider the concluding paragraph of the amended statute which deals with the amendments in the first paragraph thereof exclusively. I am convinced, therefore, that the legislature did not intend that the provision for the purchase of additional land for an infirmary or county children's home should apply to that which immediately follows it, viz., "or other necessary buildings or bridges," but that said terms "buildings" and "bridges" are used in the amended statute in the same sense as they were used in the original enactment.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that your inquiry must be answered in the affirmative, and that bond issues may be made under the provisions of said amended statute 2434, supra, for the construction of bridges.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, WARREN TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, TRUMBULL COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Warren township rural school district, Trumbull county, Ohio, in the sum of $30,000.00, to secure funds for the purchase of a site and the erection and equipment of a school building for the accommodation of the centralized schools of said school district, being sixty bonds of $500.00 each, bearing interest at five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the board of education and the other officers of Warren township rural school district of Trumbull county, Ohio, relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the General Code of Ohio.

I am of the opinion that said bonds drawn in accordance with the form presented, when properly executed and delivered, will constitute valid and binding obligations of said school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TAX COMMISSION—DISTRICT BOARD OF COMPLAINTS—WHAT APPEALS MAY OR MAY NOT BE HEARD BY THE TAX COMMISSION —BOARD OF COMPLAINTS OF LUCAS COUNTY.

The tax commission is without authority in law to act on an appeal from the decision of the district board of complaints of a district filed with said commission by the auditor of the county constituting such district, prior to January 1, 1916, and within the thirty day period provided by section 5609, G. C., as in force prior to said date of January 1, 1916, in a case in which the county auditor was not the complainant to said district board of complaints, or on an appeal from the decision of said district board of complaints filed with said commission by said county auditor since said date of January 1, 1916, but more than thirty days after said decision was rendered, or on an appeal from the decision of said district board of complaints filed with said commission by the complainant below since date of January 1, 1916, and more than thirty days after said decision was rendered.

The tax commission has authority in law to act on an appeal from the decision of said district board of complaints filed with said commission since said date of January 1, 1916, but within said thirty day period, if said appeal was filed with said commission by the county auditor, as the complainant below, or by any other person or officer authorized to file said complaint with said district board of complaints by provision of section 5602, G. C., as in force prior to said date of January 1, 1916, taken in connection with the provision of section 26 of the General Code, or if said appeal was filed by said county auditor, not as the complainant below but as the successor of the district assessor or district board of assessors, under provision of section 1 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, so-called, as found in 106 O. L., 246.

If, however, upon an investigation by the tax commission of all the facts and circumstances of any of the above cases, and upon a careful consideration of the same said tax commission determines that in such case an appeal from the decision of said district board of complaints within said thirty-day period was prevented by the fraudulent act or wilful misconduct of the district board of assessors or said district board of complaints, or of any member of either of said boards, in such case, insofar as said fraudulent act or wilful misconduct prevented the filing of said appeal within said thirty-day period, said limitation will not prevail.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

The Tax Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—In your letter under date of February 15th you request my opinion as follows.

"On the hearing of numerous appeals from the decision of the board of complaints of Lucas county, motions were made in divers cases as to the jurisdiction of the commission for the following reasons:

"1. Appeals were filed by the auditor, who was not a complainant below; said appeals being filed prior to January 1, 1916, and within thirty days from the decision of the board of complaints.

"2. Appeals were filed by the auditor, who was not a complainant below; said appeals being filed since January 1, 1916, and more than thirty days after the decision of the board of complaints.

"3. Appeals were filed by the auditor who was not a complainant below; said appeals being filed since January 1, 1916, but within thirty days from the decision of the board of complaints.

"4. Appeals were filed by parties who were complainants below; said appeals, however, being filed more than thirty days after the decision of the board of complaints.

"The commission respectfully requests your opinion as to what ruling it should make on the various grounds stated."

You have submitted for my examination a transcript of testimony taken by your commission in a hearing held at the office of the prosecuting attorney of Lucas county, for the purpose of investigating certain rumors of fraud and irregularity on the part of the taxing officials of said county in connection with certain reductions made by the district board of complaints in the valuations of property as returned for taxation by the district board of assessors of said county.

In arriving at the conclusions hereinafter expressed in answer to your foregoing inquiry, I would not be understood as expressing any opinion upon the evidence disclosed in the aforesaid transcript as to whether there was in fact such fraud or irregularity in connection with said reductions as would justify your commission in holding that in any or all of the cases referred to in your inquiry in which an appeal was not taken to your commission within thirty days from the decision of the district board of complaints, as provided in section 31 of the Warnes law so-called, as hereinafter set forth, the filing of said appeal was prevented by said fraud or irregularity.

I am of the opinion, however, that in making the investigation above referred to your commission acted within the scope of its authority, and if, upon a careful consideration of all the facts and circumstances of each particular case, your commission determines that in such case an appeal from the decision of said district board of complaints within said thirty day period was prevented by the fraudulent act or willful misconduct of said district board of assessors or district board of complaints, or of any member of either of said boards, then I am of the opinion that in such case, in so far as said fraudulent act or willful misconduct prevented the filing of said appeal within said thirty day period, said limitation would not prevail.

I call your attention to the following provisions of sections of the Warnes law, so-called, 103 O. L., 786-804, as in force prior to January 1, 1916, the date when the act of the general assembly, known as the Parrett-Whittemore law, became effective:

Section 14 of said act (section 5592, G. C.):

"It shall be the duty of the board of complaints to hear all complaints relating to the assessment of both real and personal property. It shall have power to lower or raise the assessments of all property submitted to it for review, or it may order a re-assessment by the original assessing officer. At any hearing before the board, the assessing officer may appear to defend his assessments. Either party may appeal to the tax commission of Ohio from the decision of the board. * * *"

Section 18 of the said act (section 5596, G. C.):

"The district board of complaints shall have power to investigate all complaints against assessments on the tax list, with respect to the amount of property listed as well as with respect to the valuation at which the same is listed. The power of the board shall extend to all cases in which real estate or personal property has been assessed for taxation for the current year, and to addition and corrections made during the next preceding year to the tax lists of previous years, but not to assessments, additions or corrections made by the tax commission of Ohio."

Section 21 of said act (section 5599, G. C.):

"On or before the first day of July, annually, the district assessor shall give ten days' notice, * * * that the tax lists for the current year have been completed and are open for public inspection in his office, and that complaints against any valuation or assessment, except the valuations fixed and assessments made by the tax commission of Ohio, will be heard by the district board of complaints. * * *"

Section 24 of said act (section 5602, G. C.):

"Complaints against any valuation or assessment on the tax list for the current year may be filed with the county auditor before the meeting of the district board of complaints or thereafter during its session. Any tax payer may file such complaint as to the valuation or assessment of his own or other's property, and the county commissioners, the prosecuting attorney, county auditor, county treasurer or any board of township trustees, any board of education, mayor or council of any municipal corporation in the county shall have the right to file such a complaint."

Section 25 of said act (section 5603, G. C.):

"The county auditor shall lay before the district board of complaints all complaints filed with him. The board shall investigate all such complaints and may increase or decrease any valuation or correct any assessment complained of, and no other."

Section 27 of said act (section 5605, G. C.):

"The district board of complaints shall not increase any valuation complained of without giving reasonable notice to the person in whose name the property affected thereby is listed, and affording him an opportunity to be heard. * * *"

Section 29 of said act (section 5607, G. C.):

"The district board of complaints shall certify its action to the district assessor, who shall correct the tax lists and duplicates according to the deductions and additions ordered by the board, in the manner provided for by law for making corrections thereof. If the tax list and duplicate have been delivered to the county auditor, the district assessor shall certify such corrections to him and he shall enter such corrections on his tax list and the treasurer's duplicate."

Section 31 of said act (section 5609, G. C.):

"An appeal from the decision of a district board of complaints may be taken to the tax commission of Ohio, within thirty days after the decision of such board, by the district assessor, or by any complainant, as provided in section twenty-four of this act. Such appeal shall be taken by written notice to that effect filed with the tax commission and with the county auditor, who shall thereupon certify to the commission a copy of the record of the board of complaints, pertaining to the original complaint, together with the minutes thereof, and all evidence, documentary or otherwise, offered in connection therewith. Upon receipt of notice of appeal, the county auditor shall notify all parties interested, and shall file proof of such notice with the tax commission of Ohio."

It appears that the district board of complaints of Lucas county, in the exercise of the authority conferred upon it by the above provisions of the statutes, acted upon certain complaints duly filed with said board, and that appeals from the decisions of said district board of complaints have been filed with the tax commission.

The jurisdiction of the tax commission to hear said appeals and act upon them is challenged by motions filed in the several cases, and you ask to be advised as to what ruling should be made on the various grounds set forth in your inquiry.

Considering first those appeals from the decisions of the district board of complaints of Lucas county, filed with the commission by the auditor of said county, prior to January 1, 1916, and within thirty days from said decisions of said district board of complaints, in cases in which said county auditor was not complainant to said district board of complaints, I am of the opinion that in such cases your commission is without jurisdiction to hear said appeals, and the motions filed in said cases should be sustained, for the reason that, in said cases, the county auditor, not having been the complainant below, was without authority in law to file said appeals. If in said cases the county auditor, in the exercise of the authority vested in him by the above provision of section 5602, G. C., as in force prior to January 1, 1916, had complained to the district board of complaints that the several valuations of property involved in said cases, as returned for taxation by the district board of assessors, were not returned at their true value in money, I think that his right to appeal to your commission from the decisions of said district board of complaints, under authority of section 5609, G. C., as in force prior to said date of January 1, 1916, could not be questioned.

By the plain terms of the provisions of the first part of said section 5609, G. C., the right to appeal from the decision of the district board of complaints to the tax commission was limited to the district assessor or the complainant as provided in section 24 of the act (section 5602, G. C.). The county auditor, not having been the complainant below, could not therefore file said appeals. Inasmuch as neither the district board of assessors nor the complainant below appealed to your commission from the decisions of the district board of complaints, within thirty days after said decisions in said cases were rendered, I am of the opinion that this failure to exhaust the administrative remedy afforded by the provisions of said section 5609, G. C., foreclosed any judicial remedy, and that said decisions of said district board of complaints are therefore final.

As to those appeals from the decisions of said district board of complaints, filed with the tax commission by said county auditor since January 1, 1916, and more than thirty days after said decisions were rendered, in cases in which said county auditor was not the complainant to the district board of complaints, I am of the opinion that in said cases your commission is without jurisdiction to hear said appeals, and that the motions, filed in said cases, should be sustained.

I do not base this conclusion upon the fact that the said appeals were filed since said date of January 1, 1916, when the repeal of the Warnes law became effective, nor upon the fact that the county auditor was not the complainant below, but upon the fact that said appeals were not filed within the thirty day period provided in said secion 5609, G. C., as in force prior to said date of January 1, 1916.

I am of the opinion that, in any of said cases, the complainant below had the right to appeal from the decision of the district board of complaints to your commission within said thirty day period even though said period extended over into the month of January, 1916, such right being afforded to said complainant by the provisions of section 26 of the General Code which provides:

> "Whenever a statute is repealed or amended, such repeal or amendment shall in no manner affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, civil or criminal, and when the repeal or amendment relates to the remedy, it shall not affect pending actions, prosecutions, or proceedings, unless so expressed, nor shall any repeal or amendment affect causes of such action, prosecution, or proceeding, existing at the time of such amendment or repeal, unless otherwise expressly provided in the amending or repealing act."

The filing of said complaint with the district board of complaints and the appeal from the decision of said a "proceeding" within the meaning of the above provision of said section 26, G. C.

> Cincinnati v. Davis, 58 O. S., 225.
> State ex rel. v. Cass, 32 C. C., 208..
> Affirmed without report, 84 O. S., 443.

It is equally clear that, in any of said cases, the district board of assessors had this right to file an appeal with your commission within said thirty day period, at any time prior to said date of January 1, 1916, and if said thirty day period extended over into said month of January, 1916, I am of the opinion that the county auditor, who by the provision of section 1 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, 106 O. L., 246, is authorized to complete any of the unfinished business of the district board of assessors, would have had the right under provision of said section 26, G. C., to file said appeal after said date of January 1, 1916, and within said thirty day period.

The fact remains, however, that this action was not taken within said thirty day period. I am therefore compelled to reach the conclusion that, in so far as the tax commission is concerned, the decisions of the district board of complaints in said cases are final, and that inasmuch as the right to appeal to your commission was not exercised within said thirty day period, no judicial remedy is now available. This conclusion is in harmony with an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to your commission under date of December 14, 1914, as found in the annual report of the attorney-general for said year, at page 1539 of said report.

It follows from what has already been said that, as to those appeals from the decisions of the district board of complaints, filed with the tax commission by said county auditor since January 1, 1916, but within said thirty day period, even though said county auditor was not the complainant below, said county auditor, in such cases, succeeds the district board of assessors by virtue of the above provision of section 1 of said Parrett-Whittemore law, and therefore had the right to file said appeals. I am of the opinion therefore that, in these cases, the motions filed with your commission and praying that said cases be dismissed on the ground that your commission has no jurisdiction to hear said appeals are not well taken and should be overruled.

In cases of appeals from the decisions of said district board of complaints, filed with the tax commission by the complainants below, more than thirty days after said decisions were rendered, I am of the opinion, for reasons already stated, that your commission is without jurisdiction to hear said appeals and that the motions to dismiss, filed with your commission in said cases, should be sustained.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—CENTRALIZATION ADOPTED—BOARD MAY SECURE SITES AT DIFFERENT POINTS IN SUCH DISTRICTS AND ERECT SUITABLE BUILDINGS.

Where the qualified electors of a rural school district vote in favor of centralization under provision of section 4726, G. C., 104 O. L., 139, the board of education in proceeding to centralize the schools of said district, may, in the exercise of its sound discretion, secure sites at different points in such district and erect suitable buildings thereon for the accommodation of its pupils.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

HON. F. B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 2nd, you request my opinion as follows:

> "The following question has been submitted to this department:
> "Conditions: A rural school district has voted to centralize in accordance with section 4726.
> "Query: May the board of education erect buildings at more than one point in a township and still conform to the provisions of this section 4726, G. C.?
> "This department would like to have your opinion on this question which is frequently asked."

Section 4726, G. C. (104 O. L., 139), provides:

> "A rural board of education may submit the question of centralization, and, upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such rural district, or upon the order of the county board of education, must submit such question to the vote of the qualified electors of such rural district at a general election or a special election called for that purpose. If more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it, at such election, such rural board of education shall proceed at once to the centralization of the schools of the rural district, and, if necessary, purchase a site or sites and erect a suitable building or buildings thereon. * *"

It will be observed that the above provision of section 4726, G. C., makes it mandatory upon the board of education of a rural school district to proceed at once to centralize the schools of such district if, upon the submission of the question, more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it.

Said provision of the statute, however, vests in said board of education the discretion to determine whether it is necessary, for the purpose of centralizing said schools, to secure one or more sites and erect a suitable building or buildings thereon.

The question naturally arises whether said board of education may, in the exercise of its discretion, secure sites at different points in the district and erect buildings on such sites for the accommodation of its pupils.

I find upon investigation that practically the same provision of the statute as above set forth in section 4726, G. C., was formerly found in section 3927-1 of the Revised Statutes (94 O. L., 317).

Said section 3927-1, R. S., provided as follows:

"A township board of education may submit the question of centralization, and upon the petition of not less than one-fourth of the qualified electors of such township district, must submit such question to a vote of the qualified electors of such township district, and if more votes are cast in favor of centralization than against it, at such election, it shall then become the duty of the board of education, and such board of education is required to proceed at once to the centralization of the schools of the township, and, if necessary, purchase a site or sites and erect a suitable building or buildings thereon; * * *"

In the case of State ex rel. Haines v. Board of Education, 15 O. C. D., 424, the court, in interpreting the above provision of section 3927-1, R. S., held:

"It is only when the board deems it necessary to purchase a site and erect a building thereon that the act requires them to do so, and there is nothing in the act itself preventing the original board, before the building is erected or commenced, from reconsidering the action taken, and resolving to centralize the schools not in one but in two places. It may have made a mistake in the first instance and the very discretion vested in it by the act carries with it the power and duty to correct that mistake. If the original board may reconsider its action in this respect, then its successor, being clothed with all the powers of the old board, may exercise them, with a like discretion, subject, however, to the rights of a party to any contract the former board may have made. It may be said that successive boards may thus undo all that their predecessors have done, prevent the centralization of the schools and ultimately defeat the will of the people; but it is only the natural result of an elective system of government and which is in reality the expression of the will of the people through its chosen representatives. Such boards cannot legally refuse to centralize the schools because the law makes this duty imperative, but the mode and manner of performing it is discretionary, and if the duty is not performed by the old board such discretion is vested in its successor."

Cases may be readily conceived in which the accommodation of pupils attending the centralized schools and their economic transportation would require the location of said schools at different points in the district.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question that, where the qualified electors of a rural school district vote in favor of centralization, the board of education, in proceeding to centralize the schools of said district, may, in the exercise of its sound discretion, secure sites at different points in such district and erect suitable buildings thereon for the accommodation of its pupils.

I might add that the board of education of a rural school district may effect this same result under provision of section 7730, G. C. (106 O. L., 398), without a vote of the people by suspending all of the schools in said district and conveying the pupils attending such schools to centralized schools established by said board of education at such points in said district as said board in the exercise of its discretion may determine. It would probably be necessary, however, for said board of education, in the exercise of the authority vested in it by provision of section 7625, G. C., to submit to the electors of said district the question of issuing bonds for the purpose of securing the necessary funds to provide suitable buildings for said centralized schools.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

FOREIGN RAILROAD COMPANY—REAL ESTATE ACQUIRED FOR NEW RIGHT OF WAY—LEASE OF SAME TEMPORARILY—NOT LIABLE FOR EXCISE TAX ON THAT PART OF EARNINGS FROM SUCH PROPERTY.

A foreign railroad company which does no intrastate transportation business is not liable for excise taxes on that part of receipts or earnings from property acquired and held by it with a view to use as a right of way, but not actually used as such, and which has been leased temporarily so as to produce rent.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—There has been certified to me for collection a claim of the state of Ohio against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company (P. U. No. 4318) for excise taxes on account of intra-state business for the year 1915.

It is well known, of course, that the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company's ordinary transportation business in Ohio is entirely interstate, the company having nothing excepting its terminals in this state. The present claim, however, is not founded upon transportation activities, but owes its existence to the fact that the company had during the year in question accumulated receipts by virtue of the following transactions:

The company acquired for right of way purposes in the city of Cincinnati certain tracts of real estate, some of which it purchased and some of which it leased.

The sole purpose of the company in making these acquisitions was to procure land on which to build tracks and perhaps other terminal facilities. The purpose of the company failed of achievement because of the fact that it was unable to complete the acquisition of the real estate necessary for its right of way. The real estate being on its hands, in the meantime the company leased that which it had purchased and subleased that which it had originally leased. Assurance is given by the company to the effect that such leasing was solely for the purpose of making the property for the time as productive as possible, and that as a matter of fact no real profit accrued to the company as a result of the transaction. Moreover, the company does not conduct any managerial or strict business activity with respect to the property so owned or controlled by it. The rentals which the company receives constitute the "earnings" upon which the tax has been computed.

I am of the opinion, for the following reasons, that this claim is not collectible:

In the first place, I am convinced that under the facts as stated the company does not appear in these transactions as "doing business." It is clear, of course, that the receipts are from a source other than the operation of a utility or anything incidental thereto. They must be claimed as taxable earnings, if at all, under favor of section 5418 of the General Code, which provides as follows:

> "The term 'gross earnings' shall be held to mean and include the entire earnings for business done by any person or persons, firm or firms, copartnership or voluntary association, joint stock association, company or corporation, wherever organized or incorporated, from the operation of any public utility, or incidental thereto, or in connection therewith. The gross earnings for business done by an incorporated company, engaged in the operation of a public utility, shall be held to mean and include the entire earnings for business done by such company under the exercise of its corporate powers, whether from the operation of the public utility itself or from any other business done whatsoever."

While this section undoubtedly has the effect of enlarging the liability of incorporated public utilities in so far as it has proper application, yet it is not broad enough in its scope to include every species of income which such a company may receive in the exercise of its corporate powers, but only that which arises from "business done."

It is the understanding of this department that the supreme court observed this distinction in arriving at its decision in the recently decided, but unreported, case of Ohio Traction Company v. The State, 92 O. S. 529, in which it was held that receipts or earnings from mere passive investments, not attributable in any way to business management and operation, are not within the scope of the statute.

From the facts as stated it appears that the property is not being used for the business purposes for which it was acquired by the company, nor indeed for any other business purpose whatsoever, but that the company is acting with respect to it as a mere owner rather than in a business way.

I am impelled by the foregoing considerations to the conclusion that the charge against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company is not collectible. It should, therefore, be cancelled.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

Section 499-8 to 499-14, G. C., and sections 614-49 and 614-50; and sections 4000-1 to 4000-5, G. C., construed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 17, 1916.

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—You submit for my opinion thereon the following facts and inquiries:

"On the 19th day of March, 1914, the public utilities commission of Ohio adopted and promulgated its administrative order No. 176, copy of which is hereto attached and made part hereof, under favor of section 499-8 of the General Code of Ohio. (103 O. L., page 808.)

"Since the 19th day of March, 1914, the commission has granted from time to time extension, upon application, for the filing of such inventories and appraisements. Approximately one-half of the utilities amenable to said order have filed their inventories and lists of property as provided for in said order.

"On May 5th, 1915, the legislature amended section 499-8 of the General Code of Ohio (105-106, O. L., page 225).

"The commission respectfully requests your official opinion concerning this order and the statute under which it was promulgated, as follows:

"First. Was the public utilities commission of Ohio legally authorized to make, promulgate and require compliance with said order No. 176?

"Second. If the commission had and has such legal authority, and the order should be valid for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonableness and justness of rates and charges for the service rendered by public utilities or railroads of this state, or for any other purpose authorized by law, has the commission the legal authority to require a public utility or interurban railroad, within the state of Ohio, to make and file with it such inventory and appraisement, when the question of the reasonableness and justness of rates and the charge for the service rendered by the public utility or railroad is not an issue or object?

"Third. When the purpose is not to ascertain the reasonableness and justness of rates and charges for the service rendered by public utilities or railroads of this state, and there has been no request of the council of any municipality that the commission, after hearing, determine that such a valuation is necessary, has the commission the legal authority to either require the public utility or interurban railroad to make and file the inventory and appraisement, or at its own instance to make an inventory and appraisement?

That part of said order No. 176, the consideration of which is necessary to answer the questions you submit, is as follows:

"The commission having under consideration the investigation and ascertainment of the value of the property of public utilities and of interurban railroads of the state of Ohio, for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonableness and justice of the rates and charges for service rendered by such public utilities and interurban railroads, and for other purposes authorized by law, and it appearing that the value of the property of such public utilities and interurban railroads should be investigated and ascertained, and that rules and regulations prescribing the details of the inventory of the property of each such public utility and interurban railroad are necessary, and it appearing further that public utilities and interurban railroads are required by law to co-operate with and aid the commission in investigating and ascertaining the value of the property of such public utilities and interurban railroads. It is, therefore,

"ORDERED, That all public utilities and interurban railroads operating, doing business or holding property, except messenger and signalling companies, in the state of Ohio be, and they each and all are hereby notified, directed and required to provide and furnish to the commission lists and inventories of all the kinds and classes of property with the value of each kind and class owned, operated or leased by each such public utility and interurban railroad. It is further

"ORDERED, That the lists, inventories and valuations herein required to be provided and furnished shall be in the form and detail following: * * *"

This order was issued at Columbus, Ohio, on the nineteenth day of March, nineteen hundred and fourteen, and provided that the lists, inventories and valuations therein required should be filed in duplicate at the office of the commission at Columbus, Ohio, on or before the first day of August, nineteen hundred and fourteen. The order also provided that the public utilities and interurban railroads of the state, to which it was made to apply, might obtain extensions of the time designated in the order for the filing of such inventories and that in accordance therewith, extensions have been made from time to time, until at present, as stated in your inquiry, approximately one-half of the public utilities subject to said order have filed such inventories and valuations with the commission.

This order was promulgated under authority of section 21 of act of April 18, 1913, section 499-8, G. C., which section is as follows:

"The commission, for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonableness and justice of rates and charges for the service rendered by public utilities or railroads of this state, or for any other purpose authorized by law, shall investigate and ascertain the value of the property of every public utility or railroad in the state, used and useful for the service and convenience of the public. At the request of the council of any municipality, the commission shall also investigate and ascertain the value of the property of any public utility used and useful for service and convenience of the public where the whole or major portion of such utility is situated in such municipality. Every public utility or railroad shall furnish to the commission, its engineers, experts or other assistants from time to time and as the commission may require maps, profiles, contracts, reports of engineers and other documents, records and papers or copies of any or all of the same, in aid of any investigation or ascertainment of the value of its property, and shall grant to the commission or its agents free access to all of its premises and property and its accounts, records and memoranda whenever and wherever requested by any such duly authorized agent, and every public utility or railroad is hereby directed and required to co-operate with and aid the commission in the work of the valuation of its property in such further particulars and to such extent as the commission may require and direct. The commission shall have such power to make all rules and regulations, as to it may seem necessary, to ascertain the value of each and every utility or railroad in the state." (103 O. L., page 808.)

On May 5, 1915, this statute was amended to read as follows:

"The commission for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonableness and justice of rates and charges for the service rendered by public utilities or railroads of this state, or for any other purpose authorized by law may investigate and ascertain the value of the property of any public utility or railroad in this state, used or useful for the service and convenience of the public. At the request of the council of any municipality the commission after hearing and determining that such a valuation is necessary may also investigate and ascertain the value of the property of any public utility used and useful for the service and convenience of the public where the whole or major portion of such utility is situated in such municipality. Every public utility or railroad shall furnish to the commission, its engineers, experts or other assistants from time to time and as the commission may require maps, profiles, contracts, reports of engineers and other documents, records and papers or copies of any or all of the same, in aid of any investigation and ascertainment of the value of its property, and shall grant to the commission or its agent free access to all of its premises and property and its accounts, records and memoranda whenever and wherever requested by any such duly authorized agent, and every public utility or railroad is hereby directed and required to co-operate with and aid the commission in the work of the valuation of its property in such further particulars and to such extent as the commission may require and direct. The commission shall have such power to make all rules and regulations, as to it may seem necessary, to ascertain the value of each and every utility or railroad in the state." (106 O. L., page 225.)

Said section 499-8, General Code, as enacted April 18, 1913, authorized and required the public utilities commission of Ohio to make an investigation and valuation of the property of the public utilities and railroads of this state for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonableness and justice of the rates and charges for the service rendered by them, or for any other purpose authorized by law. Said section also conferred the mandatory authority upon the commission, at the request of council of any municipality, to investigate and ascertain the value of the property of any public utility used and useful for service and convenience of the public, where the whole or major portion of such utility is situated in such municipality.

Sections 499-9 to 499-14, inclusive, and sections 614-49 and 614-50, of the General Code, and being of the act of April 18, 1913, authorized the commission to prescribe the details of the inventory of the property of each public utility or railroad of the state, as authorized to be made by said section 499-8, General Code, and upon completion thereof to thereafter keep the inventory up to date by showing all extensions and improvements, or other changes in the condition and valuation of the property of all public utilities and railroads in the state and to ascertain the value of said extensions and improvements and changes as might from time to time be made.

Sections 614-24 to 614-26, inclusive, of the General Code, and other related sections of the act of May 31, 1911 (102 O. L., 549), being an act changing the name of the railroad commission of Ohio to that of the public service commission of Ohio, defining the powers and duties of the latter commission with respect to public utilities, conferred upon the commission the right to investigate and determine the value of all the property, including the value of its physical property, of every public utility within its jurisdiction, actually used and useful for the service and convenience of the public, whenever it deemed the ascertainment of such valuation necessary in order to carry into effect any of the provisions of the said act.

It thus appears that by said act of April 18, 1913, the legislature changed the policy of the state with reference to the valuation of public utilities as was provided for in said act of May 31, 1911, thereby making it mandatory that the public utilities commission ascertain the value of all the property of every public utility or railroad in the state, used and useful for the service and convenience of the public. These mandatory sections were enacted April 18, 1913, and, pursuant to authority by them conferred upon it, the public utilities commission of Ohio issued said order No. 176 of the nineteenth day of March, 1914.

The wording of this order is so similar to the wording of said section 499-8, by authority of which it was promulgated, it would seem that for the purposes and objects of the order as therein declared, it would be valid if the statute is valid. There is nothing on the face of said order that would, in my opinion, make it legally unreasonable.

That the state has the right to regulate those businesses, in which the public has an interest, has long since been the law. Legislation laying down rules in first instances for the course in which those who engage in these businesses must follow, has always been regarded as due process of law, if kept within proper bounds. This principle was fully recognized in the case of Munn v. Illinois (96 U. S. 113).

Consistently reconciling the division of powers of government, our courts have held valid a multitude of statutes in which the legislature, after laying down rules and principles as substantive law, has been content to leave the execution and detail to other officers, such as administrative bodies. The power of the legislature to establish a commission, with power to fix rates and to do the reasonable things required in order to ascertain the values upon which reasonable rates may be fixed, has not been successfully challenged since the courts upheld such a conferred power by the legislature in the railroad commission cases, reported in 116 U. S., 307.

Section 2 of article XIII of the Ohio constitution of 1851 with 1912 amendments prvided that:

> "Corporations may be formed under general laws; but all such laws may, from time to time, be altered or repealed. Corporations may be classified and there may be conferred upon proper boards, commissioners or officers, such supervisory and regulatory powers over their organization, business and issue and sale of stocks and securities, and over the business and sale of the stocks and securities of foreign corporations and joint stock companies in this state, as may be prescribed by law. Laws may be passed regulating the sale and conveyance of other personal property, whether owned by a corporation, joint stock company or individual."

It is unnecessary to argue at length or to cite additional authorities in order to reach the conclusion that the statute in question, properly interpreted and applied, is valid. The question as to whether or not the application of the order and the enforcement thereof, within a certain time, or at any time, would make it an unreasonable order, or amount to the taking of property without due process of law or without just compensation, would be one of fact to be determined with reference to each particular case.

It appears that while the order is general in its terms as to public utilities and interurban railroads, it was served directly upon, and service thereof acknowledged, in writing, by the utilities and interurban railroads of the state. The result of such service is that the order was made special as to each utility and railroad coming within the scope of its provision and acknowledging receipt of service thereof.

That the legislature intended that the commission should have the means of obtaining full information with reference to a public utility, when a question of public service is being considered by it with reference to such, is further evidenced by section 614-35, G. C., which is as follows:

> "Each such utility shall furnish to the commission in such form and at such times as the commission may require such accounts, reports and information as shall show completely and in detail the entire operation of the public utility in furnishing the unit of its product or service to the public."

This section has to do primarily with operation, but operation and resultant service are factors in valuation and rate making.

I come now to a consideration of the amendments to said section 499-8, G. C., as adopted May 5, 1915. It will be noted that in the amended form of the statute the language "shall investigate and ascertain the value of the property," was changed to "may investigate and ascertain the value of the property," thus leaving it optional with the commission as to whether or not it would make a valuation for any of the purposes set forth in the statute. Again, the phrase "of every public utility or railroad" was changed to "of any public utility or railroad," this making it clear, to my mind, that the legislature intended the commission to ascertain the value of the property of any public utility or railroad of this state only when in its discretion such a valuation should be made for any of the purposes enumerated in the section.

The provision of the statute relating to valuation at the request of a municipality was made to read as follows:

> "At the request of the council of any municipality the commission, after hearing and determining that such a valuation is necessary, may also investigate and ascertain the value of the property of any public utility used and useful for the service and convenience to the public where the whole or major portion of the utility is situated in such municipality."

Here we have a special provision, that when a municipality desires to have a valuation made of the property of certain public utilities, there must be a request therefor by the council of any such municipality and the commission upon hearing shall determine whether or not there is a necessity for such valuation.

These amendments of May 5, 1915, to said section 499-8, G. C., have changed the mandatory provisions thereof, with reference to valuation by the commission, and returning to the policy with reference thereto adopted by said act of May 31, 1911, have again left it to the discretion of the commission, in each particular case, to determine whether or not a valuation of the property of a public utility or railroad in this state shall be made for any one of the purposes named in said section.

Said order No. 176 was promulgated and became effective under the mandatory form of said section 499-8, G. C., as enacted April 18, 1913, and is, therefore, valid and continuing until modified or revoked by the commission in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon it, in these respects, by the amendment to said section 499-8, G. C., as adopted May 5, 1915.

For answer to your first inquiry, I advise that the public utilities commission of Ohio was authorized to make, promulgate and require compliance with said order No. 176.

As to your second inquiry, I call your attention to the amendment to said order No. 176, adopted by your commission January 14, 1916, as follows:

> "First. That, pending the further order of the commission, any public utility or interurban railroad, upon application by it, may be granted an extension of time until January 1, 1917, within which to file its inventory and list of property.
> "Second. That any public utility or interurban railroad hereafter furnishing list, inventory and valuation, as required by said order No. 176, may furnish same either as of July 1, 1914, or as of any subsequent date certain."

This so-called amendment to said order does not effect any change in the method of the commission with reference to requiring the lists, inventories and valuations therein required. It is proof that the commission is still enforcing the order as made under the mandatory form of said section 499-8.

While the authority of the commission to act under the order is limited to its terms, it appears therefrom that the commission has under consideration the value of the property of all public utilities and of all interurban railroads in the state of Ohio, "for the purpose of ascertaining the reasonableness and justice of the rates and charges for service rendered by such public utilities and interurban railroads, and for all other purposes authorized by law." Hence, there are no public utilities or interurban railroads in Ohio to which your second inquiry can apply; and this is true also with reference to your third inquiry.

Since submitting these formal inquiries, you have advised me orally that they arise out of the requests of some of the officers of the city of Toledo, Ohio, unofficially made, that the commission require the Toledo Railways & Light Company to furnish forthwith to the commission lists, inventory and valuation of all of its property pursuant to said order No. 176, notwithstanding the extension of the time granted in the amendment thereto, as above set forth, and that no request for such valuation has been made by the council of said city of Toledo. You further advise me that there is no question pending before your commission as affecting the reasonableness and justice of any of the rates or charges made, or to be made, by the said Railways & Light Company for its public service, except as appears in said order No. 176.

If the city of Toledo desires to have made the list, inventory and valuation of the property of the Toledo Railways & Light Company at any time other than that in which the commission is proceeding to have such list, inventory and valuation made and filed with it, the method therefor, as specially provided by the legislature, is full and complete as appears in the provisions of said section 499-8, G. C., hereinbefore quoted.

If the city of Toledo desires to have made the inventory and valuation of the property of said the Toledo Railways & Light Company for the purpose of determining whether or not it will acquire the same, your commission is fully authorized to make such inventory, appraisal and valuation upon request of the city, in the manner provided for in sections 4000-1 to 4000-5, inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio, 103 O. L., page 726.

APPROPRIATION TO CITY OF COLUMBUS—"REPAVING HIGH STREET FROM BROAD TO STATE IN FRONT OF STATE GROUND" ITEM, COST AND EXPENSE OF CONSTRUCTING WATER MAIN IN HIGH SREET, INCLUDED.

From the appropriation to the city of Columbus for "repaving High street from Broad to State in front of state ground" the state's proportionate share of the cost and expense of constructing water line in High street may be paid.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 18, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of February 29th you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

"The general assembly appropriated a sum of money for the improvement of High street in Columbus, as follows:

"'Repaving High street from Broad to State in front of state ground, $5,000.00.' (104 O. L., 217.)

"In the act of May 27, 1915 (106 O. L., 827), is the following:

"Any monies * * * appropriated to the city of Columbus for paving contiguous to state property, against which no liabilities shall have been incurred prior to July 1, 1915, shall be available for expenditures, at any time prior to July 1, 1917, for the purposes for which they were originally appropriated * * *.'

"The city of Columbus presents to us vouchers as follows:

"For 'cost and expense of improving High street, from Livingston avenue to the south end of the superstructure of the North High street viaduct, 660 feet front on High street ---------- $2,731.66
'Credit for curb ---------- 338.25

'Net assessment ---------- $2,393.41'

"For 'cost and expense of constructing water line in High street, from Livingston avenue to the North High street viaduct, 660 feet frontage on High street ---------- $1,617.00'

"We are in doubt whether the second voucher can be paid under the above mentioned appropriation. Will you kindly advise us?"

The appropriation to which you refer, made in 104 O. L., 217, read as follows:

"CITY OF COLUMBUS

"Repaving of High street from Broad to State in front of state ground ---------- $5,000.00"

Under the final clause of said act it was provided that the money appropriated in the bill containing the above appropriation should be paid upon the approval of a special auditing committee, and said committee was authorized and directed "to make careful inquiry as to the validity of each and every claim herein made, and to pay only so much as may be found to be correct and just."

In an opinion rendered to you by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, on November 28, 1914, it was held as follows:

> "Under familiar rules of law it has been decided that there is no authority to make a valid assessment against property belonging to the state, or at least that there is no method of payment other than by appeal to the legislature.
> "Such being the case it is apparent that the legislature has decided to recognize the moral obligation of the state to bear its proportionate share of the cost of the improvements referred to, and for that purpose has set aside the amounts as specified heretofore. * * * The legislature having determined, as it appears to me, that the state should stand its proportionate share of the assessment upon the improvements specified, it should only pay the same after the amount thereof has been determined in the same manner as the amounts to be paid by other abutting property owners are determined, and that as soon as the same is so determined the claim should be presented to the special auditing committee, which committee should go over carefully and allow the same."

Mr. Hogan's opinion, therefore, was that the five thousand dollars which was appropriated for the purpose of repaving High street was a sum set aside out of which the state's proportionate share of the cost of repaving High street should be paid, and not that the entire five thousand dollars should be paid at all events. In this conclusion I am in hearty accord.

Such being the fact, the question then to be determined is whether or not the appropriation for repaving High street shall include not only the state's share of the expense of repaving High street, but also the state's share of placing a water line in said High street.

Under the provisions of section 3812, G. C., a municipal corporation is given the power to levy and collect special assessments. Said section provides that the council of any municipal corporation may assess upon the abutting, etc., property in the corporation "any part of the entire cost of an expense connected with the improvement of any street * * * by grading, draining, curbing, paving, repaving, repairing, constructing sidewalks, * * * retaining walls, sewers, drains, * * * water mains or laying of water pipe, etc."

In other words, under section 3812, G. C., a municipality is authorized to improve any of its streets in the manner above indicated, and I do not doubt that in the improvement of a street all of such matters may be taken care of in one improvement.

After the receipt of your inquiry I requested the city attorney of Columbus, to advise me relative to the construction of the improvement on High street, and have received from him a letter as follows:

> "In answer to your request for information as to the method which was used in constructing High street water main and the High street paving, proper, I beg to state that both were constructed under the provisions of sections 3812, G. C., et seq. There were separate proceedings for the water main and the paving, but they were carried on simultaneously. I quote the title and first sections of the ordinances determining to proceed:

"'An Ordinance No. 28102.

"'Determining to proceed with the improvement of High street, from Livingston avenue to the south end of the superstructure of the North High street viaduct in the city of Columbus, Ohio.

"'BE IT ORDAINED by the council of the city of Columbus, state of Ohio:

"'Section 1. That it is hereby determined to proceed with the imporvement of High street, from Livingston avenue to the south end of the superstructure of the North High street viaduct, by laying water mains with valves and appurtenances.'

"'An Ordinance No. 28103.

"'Determining to proceed with the improvement of High street, from Livingston avenue to the south end of the superstructure of the North High street viaduct in the city of Columbus, Ohio.

"'BE IT ORDAINED by the council of the city of Columbus, state of Ohio:

"'Section 1. That it is hereby determined to proceed with the improvement of High street, from Livingston avenue to the south end of the superstructure of the North High street viaduct by grading, draining, curbing and paving the roadway with asphalt or wood block.'

"You will notice that these ordinances bear consecutive numbers. They were introduced in council on the same evening. I also note that the estimated assessments, both for the water main and the paving proper, were filed with council on the same date, to wit, January 17, 1916. I am informed by our engineering department that the general assembly, preliminary to its passage of the act making the appropriation, was furnished an estimate of the state's share of the cost of the whole improvement, to wit, $5,000. It was, I think, generally known at the time that the amount $5,000 was a larger amount than was necessary to simply cover the cost of the paving proper. The engineering department in making the estimate had in mind both the cost of the water main and the paving."

It appears, therefore, that the city of Columbus undertook to make two improvements in the said High street—one by laying water mains and the other by grading, draining, curbing and paving the roadway.

Although council undertook to make the improvement of High street under two separate ordinances, nevertheless, the improvement itself can well be considered as one. The appropriation by the legislature is for such amount as to apparently include the entire improvement made, and although the legislature in making the appropriation used the word "repaving," nevertheless, I am of the opinion that a strictly technical meaning should not be given to such word, but that it should be read as if the word "improving" had been used.

The letter from the city attorney of Columbus indicates that the engineering department of the city in making up the estimate which was submitted to the general assembly for the sum of five thousand dollars had in mind both the cost of the water main and of the paving.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the voucher calling for the cost and expense of constructing the water line in High street, can be paid from the appropriation of five thousand dollars.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—UNDER ORDINANCE PASSED BY COUNCIL OF ALLIANCE, VACATING PARTS OF STREETS THE STATE HAS ACQUIRED PROPER TITLE TO PARTS OF STREETS SO VACATED.

Under ordinance passed by council of Alliance, vacating parts of streets the state has acquired proper title to parts of streets so vacated.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 18 1916.

HON. BYRON L. BARGER, Secretary Ohio State Armory Board, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of March 3rd you submitted for my opinion the following letter:

> "Pursuant to your decision of September 8, 1915, relative to the Alliance armory site, I secured the record of the deed for said site and the recorded deed has been returned by the recorder of Stark county to this office.
> "In further compliance with your said decision, I signed and forwarded to City Solicitor Morris, of Alliance, the petition for vacation of parts of certain streets. The city solicitor informed me that said vacation has been accomplished, and the evidence thereof has been sent to me by the city clerk of Alliance, and is herewith forwarded.
> "Please advise whether or not the state of Ohio has acquired proper title to the parts of streets mentioned in enclosed transcript of proceedings, under Alliance ordinance 2007, and has such title properly added said parts of streets to the armory site described in your opinion of September 8, 1915."

Enclosed with your letter was a copy of the ordinance referred to, in the following language:

> "An ordinance to vacate the following strips of land, to wit: A strip of land twelve feet in width running along the south side of said Hester street and lying immediately north of and adjacent to the north lot line of said lot number 240 between Mechanic avenue and the west right-of-way line of the New York Central Railroad Company; a strip of land 11 feet in width running along the east side of Mechanic avenue and lying immediately west of and adjacent to the west lot line of said lot number 240 from Hester street to Ely street, and a strip of land 9 feet in width running along the north side of Ely street and lying immediately south of and adjacent to the south lot line of said lot number 240 from Mechanic avenue to the west right-of-way line of the New York Central Railroad Company, said strips of land lying immediately north, west, south and adjacent to the west portion of said lot number 240, in the city of Alliance, Ohio.
> "WHEREAS, on the 13th day of September, A. D. 1915, a petition by the owner of the west portion of lot number 240 in the city of Alliance, Ohio, and lying in the immediate vicinity of Hester, Mechanic and Ely streets in the city of Alliance, Ohio, was duly presented to council, praying that the following strips of land, to wit: A strip of land 12 feet in width running along the south side of said Hester street and lying immediately north of and adjacent to the north lot line of said lot number 240 between Mechanic avenue and the west right-of-way line of the New York Central Railroad Company, a strip of land 11 feet in width running along the east side of Mechanic avenue and lying immediately west of and adjacent to the west lot line of said lot number 240 from Hester street to Ely street, and a strip of land 9 feet in width running along the north side of Ely street and lying immediately south of and adjacent to the south lot line of said lot number 240 from Mechanic avenue to the west right-of-way line of the New York Central Railroad Company, said strips of land lying immediately north, west and south and adjacent to the west portion of said lot number 240 in the city of Alliance, Ohio, be vacated; and notice of the pendency and prayer of said petition has been given as required by law, by publication in the Alliance Daily Review, a newspaper of general circulation in the corporation for six consecutive weeks ending October 23, 1915, and,

"WHEREAS, council upon hearing is satisfied that there is good cause for such vacation as prayed for, that it will not be detrimental to the general interest and ought to be made, now therefore,

"BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF ALLIANCE, STATE OF OHIO:

"Section 1. That the following strips of land, being a portion of Hester, Mechanic and Ely streets, to wit: A strip of land 12 feet in width running along the south side of said Hester street and lying immediately north of and adjacent to the north lot line of said lot number 240 between Mechanic avenue and the west right-of-way line of the New York Central Railroad Company; a strip of land 11 feet in width running along the east side of Mechanic avenue and lying immediately west of and adjacent to the west lot line of said lot number 240 from Hester street to Ely street, and a strip of land 9 feet in width running along the north side of Ely street and lying immediately south of and adjacent to the south lot line of said lot number 240 from Mechanic avenue to the west right-of-way line of the New York Central Railroad Company, said strips of land lying immediately north, west, south and adjacent to the west portion of said lot number 240 in the city of Alliance, Ohio, be and the same are hereby vacated.

"Section 2. That this ordinance be and remain in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

"Passed November 15, 1915.

"Arthur A. Reeves, President of Council.

"ATTEST: Chas. O. Silver, Clerk.

"Approved November 16, 1915.

"W. P. Barnum, Mayor.

"Published in Review, 11-17-24.

"February 7, 1916.

"I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of ordinance number 2007, passed November 15, 1915, and that the same was published in the Alliance Daily Review, a newspaper of general circulation in the city of Alliance, Ohio, November 17, 1915, and November 24, 1915.

"Chas. O. Silver, Clerk of Council, City of Alliance, Ohio.

"March 11, 1916.

"I hereby certify that no referendum petition has been filed against the above ordinance, No. 2007.

"Chas. O. Silver, Clerk of Council, City of Alliance, Ohio."

Section 3725, of the General Code, provides as follows:

"On petition by a person owning a lot in the corporation praying that a street or alley in the immediate vicinity of such lot may be vacated or narrowed, or the name thereof changed, the council of such municipality, upon hearing, and upon being satisfied that there is good cause for such change of name, vacation or narrowing, that it will not be detrimental to the general interest, and that it should be made, may declare by ordinance such street or alley vacated, narrowed, or the name thereof changed. And council may include in one ordinance the change of name, or the vacation or narrowing, of more than one street, avenue or alley."

I am of the opinion that the ordinance is in conformity with the statute and that, therefore, the state has acquired proper title to the parts of the streets mentioned, and that said parts of streets have been properly added to the armory site described in my opinion of September 8, 1915.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

NEWSPAPER—ADVERTISEMENTS DEEMED BY PUBLIC OFFICERS TO BE OF GENERAL INTERST TO TAX PAYERS UNDER SECTION 6252, G. C., ARE TO BE PAID FOR AT RATE FIXED IN SECTION 6251, G. C.

Advertisements deemed by the county auditor, treasurer, probate judge or commissioners to be of general interest to tax payers under section 6252, G. C., and ordered published, are to be paid for at the rate fixed in section 6251, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 18, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of February 23rd you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

"Section 6251, General Code, provides the maximum price that may be paid per square for the publication of advertisements, notices and proclamations required to be published by a public officer, and section 6254, General Code, defines what a square is.

"Section 6252, General Code, seems to authorize the auditor, treasurer, probate judge or commissioners to cause publication of such other advertisements of general interest to the taxpayers as the officers may deem proper.

Question: Where any of these officers deem it necessary to publish a brief notice, can such be regarded as being one required by law which must come within the price per square mentioned in section 6251, General Code, or may the publisher, for printing these, render a bill at so much per line according to the commercial rates of the paper in which same is published?"

An examination of the statutes discloses that the original act fixing the prices of legal advertising is found in 73 O. L., page 75. The first section of said act provided:

> "That publishers of newspapers shall be allowed to charge and entitled to receive for the publication of all advertisements, the price or rate for which is not now fixed by law, which by law are required to be published by any public officer or officers of counties, cities, villages, townships, schools, benevolent or other public institutions, and all notices and publications known as official advertisements, notices relating to the estates of deceased persons, and all notices and publications generally known as legal advertisements, and all advertisements appertaining to any public interest and required by law to be printed in any newspaper in this state, the following sums, to wit: For the first insertion, one dollar for each square; and for each additional insertion authorized by law, or by the officer or person so ordering, fifty cents for each square, fractional squares to be estimated at the same rate for space occupied; and in advertisements containing tabular or rule work, an additional sum of fifty per cent. may be charged in addition to the before mentioned rates."

The second section of said act provided:

> "That hereafter all proclamations by sheriffs for elections; orders fixing times of holding courts; treasurer's notice of rates of taxation; bridge, pike, and ditch notices; notices to contractors, and such other advertisements or notices of general interest to the tax payers, as the auditor, probate judge, treasurer and commissioners may deem proper, shall be published in two newspapers, etc."

This was the condition of the statutes until the same were changed in the codification of the statutes made in 1880. At that time the codification committee changed the language of the said statutes so as to read as follows:

Revised Statutes:

> "Section 4366. Publishers of newspapers may charge and receive for the publication of advertisements, notices, and proclamations, the price or rate for which is not otherwise fixed by law, required to be published by any public officer of the state, or of a county, city, village, hamlet, township, school, benevolent, or other public institution, or by a trustee, assignee, executor, or administrator, the following sums, to wit: For the first insertion, one dollar for each square, and for each additional insertion, authorized by law or the person ordering the insertion, fifty cents for each square, fractional squares to be estimated at the same rate for space occupied; and in advertisements containing tabular or rule work, an additional sum of fifty per cent. may be charged in addition to the foregoing rates.
> "Section 4367. Every proclamation for an election, order fixing the time of holding court, notice of rates of taxation, bridge, pike, and notice to contractors, and such other advertisements of general interest to the tax payers as the auditor, treasurer, probate judge, or commissioners may deem proper, shall be published in two newspapers of opposite politics, if there be such published in the county; but this chapter shall not apply to the publication of the notices of delinquent tax and forfeited land sales."

An examination of sections 6251 and 6252 of the General Code, will disclose that the said sections are practically a re-enactment of sections 4366 and 4367, R. S., above quoted.

The original act as found in 73, O. L., 75, fixed the rate of legal advertising for publication of all advertisements which by law were required to be published —all notices and publications known as official advertisements—all notices relating to the estates of deceased persons—all notices and publications known as legal advertisements—and all advertisements required by law to be printed, and the rate fixed was one dollar for each square for the first insertion, and fifty cents for each additional square.

There is no doubt that the act as originally enacted covered the advertisements of general interest which were deemed by the county auditor, treasurer, probate judge or commissioners proper to be published; but does the statute as it now exists apply to such advertisements?

Section 6251, G. C., provides the rate for advertisements required to be published by a public officer of the state, etc. The original act stated "by law required to be published," but also referred to advertisements that were not strictly required by law to be published.

Does the language "required to be published by a public officer" as used in section 6251, G. C., mean that it must be required by law to be published only, or does it likewise mean that it might be required by the public officer to be published?

The statute is ambiguous, and, under the established interpretation of statutes in Ohio relative to codification, if a statute as codified is ambiguous resort may be had to the original statute in order to clear the ambiguity.

Referring to the statute as originally enacted, there is no doubt that such an advertisement as that concerning which you inquire would fall within the legal rate for advertising. There is doubt as to whether it would or would not under the condition of the statutes as found in the codification of 1880 and the codification of 1910.

Applying the rule as above stated, that the original statute may be consulted in order to solve an ambiguity, I am of the opinion that advertisements of general interest to the tax payers, deemed proper to be published by the auditor, treasurer, probate judge and commissioners, fall within the legal rate of advertising fixed in section 6251, G. C.

That the above is the proper construction of section 6251, G. C., is further shown by the fact that the rate fixed states that for the first insertion the price shall be one dollar per square, "and for each additional insertion, authorized by law or the person ordering the insertion, fifty cents for each square."

If we were to read the provision "required to be published" as "required by law to be published," then there would be no authority whatsoever for any officer or other person to order additional insertions.

The fact that the phrase "or the person ordering the insertion" was retained in the law, both in its codification of 1880 and in its present form, clearly establishes the fact that the same effect is to be given thereto as was to be given to the law as enacted in 73 O. L., 75.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COUNCIL CHANGES GRADE OF STREET AFTER CONTRACT HAS BEEN LET AT A UNIT PRICE FOR ALL EXCAVATION—CONTRACTOR NOT REQUIRED TO MAKE ADDITIONAL EXCAVATION AT PRICE BID IN ORIGINAL CONTRACT.

Council having in resolution of necessity established grade of street and contractor having bid a unit price for all excavation on the improvement contemplated, if council subsequently changes the grade of the street the additional excavation caused thereby is not under the price bid for excavation in the original contract.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 20, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of February 28th you submitted for my opinion the following inquiry:

"In a certain contract for the improvement of a street by grading, curbing, paving, building sewers with necessary accessories and the laying of sidewalks, the contract providing for payment at unit prices, it was found necessary during the progress of the work to alter the grade of the street for a distance of 300 feet in order to make the grade conform to that of an intersecting street. By an error the grades of the two streets were established on lines which did not meet. This alteration was made in proper form by the passage of an ordinance of council.

"This change of grade was such as to increase the quantity of excavation to the extent of 1,800 cu. yds., and the service director of the city executed a supplementary contract with the contractor, after the work was done, for 1,800 cu. yds. of rock excavation, agreeing to pay for such extra excavation at the rate of $2.00 per cu. yd., the price fixed in the proposal and original contract being 29 cents per cu. yd. for all excavation. Settlement was finally made on the basis of the supplementary contract at $2.00 per cu. yd., or $3,600.00.

"The following are quotations from the specifications, (which were made a part of the contract) for this work:

"'SECTION 8.

"'The director of public service reserves the right to make any additions or alterations in plans or specifications, by giving written notice to the contractor setting forth the same. If such change or alteration involves the omission of any material or work called for by the original plan or specifications, any claims for loss or profit, or any other cause growing out of any such omission, is hereby expressly waived.

"'SECTION 9.

"'If such change or alteration involves labor or material on which a price is fixed in this contract, that price shall govern. If the price of such labor or material is not so fixed, the sum to be allowed for such materials and labor shall, before the work is proceeded with, be agreed upon and fixed in a written contract, etc.

"'SECTION 31.

"'Whatever earth, loam sand, clay, shale, rock, paving, macadam, iron pipe, iron work, sewer pipe, brick, or any other material is to be excavated, moved or filled in embankment to whatever extent within the limits of any proposed improvement, such earth, loam, etc., and any other material shall be known and classified as earth, and such classification shall extend to the word excavation whenever it may appear in these specifications, or in any proposal, contract, bond or writing, pertaining to the improvement which these specifications govern.

"'SECTION 41.

"'The price bid for excavation or embankment shall include the excavation and removal of all earth of every kind necessary, and all rock, cinder, shale, boulders, and the removal of all stumps, etc.'

"Question 1: Under the specifications quoted, which were a part of said contract, was it the duty of the director of service to require the contractor to construct the improvement including the extra excavation caused by the change of grade for the specific price mentioned in his original bid and contract, or was it said director's duty, upon the change of grade being ordered, to require that a supplementary contract be entered into for said extra excavation at such price as may be agreed upon between him and the contractor, which price in this instance was at an increased price over that fixed in the original contract?

"Question 2: If it be held that for the extra excavation the contractor should have received the price stipulated in his unit bid for excavation, contained in his original contract, and not that fixed in the supplementary contract, would the fact that he has been paid the price fixed in the supplementary contract bar a finding for recovery?"

Section 3814 of the General Code provides that in making a public improvement, to be paid for in whole or in part by special assessment, the council of a municipality shall declare the necessity thereof by resolution; and section 3815, G. C., provides what such a resolution shall contain. Among other things, the said resolution shall determine "what shall be the grade of the street * * * to be improved." And said resolution shall also approve the plans, specifications, estimates and profiles for the proposed improvement. A notice of the passage of such resolution is required to be served upon the owner of each piece of property to be assessed, under the provisions of section 3818, G. C.

The contract as let to the contractor in the matter concerning which you inquire was let on the basis that the grade of the street was determined in the resolution of necessity, and the plans and specifications were prepared on the basis that said grade was so established in the resolution.

When the contractor made his bid at a certain price for excavation work, and the specifications contained the provision found in section 8 thereof, to the effect that the director of public service reserved the right to make any additions or alterations in plans or specifications, by giving written notice to the contractor setting forth the same, and that found in section 9:

"If such change or alteration involves labor or material on which a price is fixed in this contract, that price shall govern."

It must be presumed that such provisions in the specifications on which the contractor bid were founded on the proposition that the grade for the street improvement had been established by council.

In construing the contract entered into by the contractor with the municipality it must be first determined what effect should be given to section 9 of the specifications, the grade of the street having already been determined; that is to say, whether or not a fair interpretation of the contract would embrace any or all changes or alterations which the director of public service might make, even including a change of grade, or whether it was only those changes and alterations that would be made in the contract as the work progressed, but not so radical in their nature as a change of grade.

I am inclined to the opinion that the provisions of sections 8 and 9 do not go to the extent of binding the contractor to make such extra excavation as was made necessary by a change of the grade at the price fixed in his original contract.

In some jurisdictions it has been held that whenever council, after a contract for an improvement had been let, made a change of grade it voided the entire contract so let, and it was necessary to proceed ab initio with the new change of grade. In such cases, however, the change of grade was over the entire improvement, and not simply at one end as in the case under discussion; nor does it appear in the decisions whether or not there was any statutory authority for any change or alteration in the original contract.

See Warren v. Chandos et al., 115 Cal., 382.

Syllabus:

"The supervisors have no power to authorize a change in the amount of assessment constituting a lien, by increasing or diminishing the work to be done by a contractor for a street improvement, and where they lowered the grade of a street after the letting of a contract under a resolution of intention fill it to a higher grade, the improvement to fill it to the lower grade not being specified in the resolution of intention, nor in the contract, the supervisors had no jurisdiction to order such improvement, and there was no contract therefor, and no basis for a valid assessment for such improvement."

Furthermore, in the case under consideration neither the director of public service nor the contractor assumed that the provision relative to the price to be paid for additions and alterations would apply to such a radical change as was necessitated by the change of grade, for the reason that the director of public service agreed to pay and did pay, and the contractor received, a price in excess of that fixed in his original bid.

It appears from the question submitted that the contract for the extra excavation due to the change of grade was made after the work was done, and that the same was not made in compliance with section 4331, G. C. Therefore, the requirements of the statute in that regard were not complied with. However, the contractor has received his money, and there is no intimation that the amount paid to him was excessive for the amount of work done, but was the price that was agreed upon between himself and the director of public service as being the proper price. The city has received the benefit of the work done and the contractor has received pay for the work so done. This brings the case, as I view it, within the principle laid down in the case of State v. Fronizer, 77 O. S., 7.

Answering your questions specifically, I am of the opinion in answer to your first question that under the specifications quoted, which were a part of the contract mentioned, it was not the duty of the director of public service to require the contractor to construct the improvement, including the extra excavation caused by the change of grade, for the specific price mentioned in his original bid and contract. The contractor having received the price fixed by himself and the director of service for the extra excavation due to the change of grade, and assuming that the price therefor is not so excessive as to indicate fraud, no recovery can be had against him for the amount received.

An answer to your second question is not necessary, for the reason that I have held that the extra excavation was not required to be done at the price fixed in the original contract.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY TREASURER—DUPLICATE PAYMENT OF TAXES—CONSTITUTES TRUST FUND—SUGGESTIONS AS TO HOW MONEY CAN BE REFUNDED.

Money received from the duplicate payment of taxes constitutes a trust fund to be held by the county for the repayment of those who under a mistake of fact made said duplicate payments in the first instance. The bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices should require a complete detailed report of such payments at each examination of the treasurer's office.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 20, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 8, 1916, submitting the following inquiries:

> "Is a county treasurer required by law to account for double payments of taxes or assessments erroneously received by him? Do duplicate payments so made to him become public moneys within the meaning of section 286, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 507?
> "If you hold in the affirmative, should he report such collections as collections that are required by section 2642, G. C., to be credited to the undivided general tax fund, to be refunded by the county auditor under section 2589, G. C., when the person, entitled to same, demonstrates his right to recover by reason of erroneous payment?
> "If you hold in the negative, how shall the county treasurer dispose of such moneys? How shall the examiners of this department report on same, in either event, as to findings in regard to same?
> "We feel justified in asking for your written opinion upon these questions for the reason that the examiners of this department report that duplicate payments of taxes and assessments in the larger counties of the state amount, in the aggregate, to very large sums of money."

It is apparent from your statement and from information gained from personal interviews with your examiners that the duplicate payment of taxes in many counties is becoming a matter of serious concern to county officials as well as to your department. It appears that said payments have reached such proportions in many counties as to imperatively require the adoption of some plan for the proper disposition of the same in the absence of any statutory regulations providing for their disposal.

It is well to observe that no statutory provisions have been made for the disposition of these funds because under the plan or scheme of the statutory law it was not anticipated that such payments could occur. I refer in this connection to section 2594, G. C., which provides that when payment of either half of taxes is made the treasurer shall write in the blank space required to be left on each duplicate opposite such taxes the word "paid." This provision of said section does not mean that the entry of this word shall be made in this column the next day after such taxes are paid or at some future time. This provision means and requires that such entry shall be made when the taxes are paid. If this is done, as it was intended it should be done, duplicate payment of taxes could not possibly occur because it would be discovered instantly. It seems, therefore, incredible that such payments, even if the provisions of this law were observed in a reasonable manner, could amount to many thousands of dollars each year in certain counties, as the examinations of your department show in the case.

Referring now to your inquiry in reference to section 286, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 507, we find its provisions which are pertinent to said inquiry are as follows:

> "The term 'public money' as used herein shall include all money received or collected under color of office whether in accordance with or under authority of any law, ordinance or order, or otherwise, and all public officials, their deputies and employes, shall be liable therefor."

Unquestionably money collected in any manner by a county treasurer for taxes, whether received and paid under a mistake of fact or law, is collected by said treasurer under color of office. I have no hesitancy, therefore, in saying that duplicate payments of taxes, paid and received under a mistake of fact, constitute public money within the meaning of this section. Such payments, therefore, are proper subjects for the attention of your examiners when making the annual examination required by law in the office of each county treasurer. But it must be understood that this statute does not thereby make such payments public money in the sense that the money received therefrom may be used by the county for public purposes or may be credited to any fund of the county to be used for public purposes. The money so received from duplicate payments of taxes becomes, is and must continue to be until exhausted a trust fund for the benefit of those who created it by mistake and who are entitled to be repaid from it upon proof of such mistake and their consequent right to such repayment. For this reason I am of the opinion, in answer to your second inquiry, that it would not be proper to report this money under the provisions of section 2642, G. C., nor should it be credited in any event to the undivided general tax fund. As before observed, there are no statutory provisions applicable to this situation, and I, therefore, advise that this money be held by the county treasurer until his semi-annual settlement with the county auditor. In the meantime each treasurer should make every possible effort to return all duplicate payments to those who are entitled to the same. At the time of making the semi-annual settlement whatever amount of such payments remains in the hands of the treasurer should be reported by him to the auditor and turned into the county treasury to be credited to a special trust fund and thereafter all claims against such fund should be paid upon the allowance of the county commissioners; said allowance to be made upon the written request of the treasurer and upon proof that the party making the claim is rightfully entitled thereto.

I further advise that your examiners be instructed at each examination of the treasurer's office to make a detailed report of this fund showing who has made the payments which created it and the amount each has paid. In this manner a publicity will be given which will doubtless result in advising many persons of their mistake and result in their recovery of what rightfully belongs to them.

It must be understood, however, that the foregoing plan is offered merely as a suggestion. Other plans may be adopted if so desired. Under the provisions of section 277, G. C., the auditor of state is fully authorized to prescribe and require a system of accounting and reporting for all county offices and other offices named in section 274, G. C. This section, therefore, gives your department ample power to provide any plan it may choose to adopt for the reporting and accounting of the moneys under consideration here. I must advise, however, that no system should be adopted for such accounting that does not recognize the trust character of this fund and which does not require the treasurer to turn the same into the county treasury at stated intervals and which does not also provide for a complete detailed report of said fund at the time of the annual examination of the office of each county treasurer.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TEACHER IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS MAY NOT MAKE UP FOR A DAY LOST DURING TERM OF TEACHING ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY—SECTION 7687, G. C., CONSTRUED.

A teacher in the public schools may not, under authority of section 7687, G. C., make up for a day lost during the term by teaching on the 22nd day of February (Washington's birthday).

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 20, 1916.

HON. ARCHER L. PHELPS, Prosecuting Attorney, Warren, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of March 7th, which is as follows:

> "In Bristol township rural school district, this county, the schools were not opened on Friday after the Thanksgiving holiday, 1915, it being understood between the teachers and the board of education that this day should be made up later; on Washington's birthday, February 22nd, by permission of the board of education, the teachers in this school district, attempted to make up the day lost after the Thanksgiving holiday by teaching on Washington's birthday. The question is now raised as to whether or not the teachers are entitled to two days' pay for teaching on Washington's birthday, thereby making up the day lost after the Thanksgiving holiday.
> "Section 7687, G. C., provides in part as follows:
> "'Teachers in the public schools may dismiss their schools without forfeiture of pay on the * * * twenty-second day of February * * *'
>
> "The evident purpose of this statute is to secure the observance of the respective holidays therein mentioned. The legislature did not give the board of education the power to say whether or not schools should be kept open on the days mentioned, but left the decision of this question to the teachers themselves, with the express provision that if the teacher did dismiss the school, they should be paid for that day's time. If, on the other hand, the teacher elected to teach on that day, he would of course be entitled to the day's pay.
> "In my opinion, however, under the language of this statute, the teacher has no right to two days' wages for teaching on a holiday, and that is precisely what it amounts to if a teacher may be permitted to make up lost time on one of the holidays mentioned in section 7687.

"The manifest intent of the statute is to secure a dismissal of the schools on the holidays mentioned, to the end that these important days in our yearly calendar may be properly observed, and a reverence for the same established in the mind of the youth. To secure this end, the teacher is given authority to dismiss the school without forfeiture of pay. This is clear; it is equally clear that if the teacher elects to keep the schools in operation on that day, he is then entitled to one day's pay. I can find no authority under the language of this section or elsewhere supporting the proposition, that if a teacher elects to teach on a holiday, that he is thereby entitled to two days' pay.

"I will appreciate your opinion in this matter."

I concur in the reasoning advanced and in the conclusion reached by you in answer to the question submitted.

It seems clear to my mind that to hold that a teacher has authority under the above provision of section 7687, G. C., to make up for a day lost during the term by teaching on the twenty-second day of February would be to sanction as legal a practice which would defeat the manifest purpose of said statute.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that your question must be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES LAWS—NO PROVISION OF LAW FOR MANUFACTURER OF PAPER MILK BOTTLES TO FILE BOND GUARANTEEING STANDARD MEASUREMENTS.

There is no provision of law which enables a manufacturer of paper milk bottles to file a bond with an official as a guarantee that its bottles are up to the standard required and thereby obviate the necessity for inspection and sealing.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 20, 1916.

The Board of Agriculture, Dairy and Food Division, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your request for an opinion, which is as follows:

"The Ohio weights and measures specifications provide that all bottles or containers used within the state shall be inspected and sealed, and any bottles or containers which fail to hold the standard measurements should be confiscated or destroyed.

"This department has before it a request from the J. R. Van Wormer Co., Toledo, Ohio, asking that they be permitted to file a bond with the state as an assurance that all paper milk bottles made by them will be of the required standard and the usual routine of sealing abolished. We are informed by this company that the measurements must be exact to the 100th of an inch and if by chance there should be an error of this amount the folding machine would not fold the bottle. In all our inspection of these bottles we have never found one to be in excess or deficiency

"This department approved the issue of a bond and the authority of sealing same to be granted the manufacturer.

"Will you kindly submit your opinion as to whether this would be a lawful act under the present weights and measures laws?"

I have carefully examined the laws of the state relative to weights and measures, as well as the specifications which are issued by your board to the various inspectors and serve as their guide in the conduct of their office. Nowhere in the law do I find any provision for the giving of a bond such as is contemplated by the Van Wormer Company, of Toledo, Ohio, and I am at a loss to see wherein anything would be accomplished by such an action on the part of that company. If one of the bottles of the Van Wormer Company was found to be in violation of the law, the same procedure would necessarily have to follow as in the case of any other individuals, partnership or corporation violating the weights and measures law.

It is, therefore, my opinion that your board is without authority to accept the bond of the Van Wormer Company, referred to, and the action of that company in giving it would be without any force or effect in so far as it applied to the enforcement of the weights and measures law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BLIND RELIEF—ONE NEED NOT BE TOTALLY BLIND TO RENDER HIM ELIGIBLE—QUESTION AS TO WHETHER SUCH PERSON WOULD BECOME PUBLIC CHARGE—SECTION 2965, G. C.

One need not be totally blind to render him eligible to receive relief under the provisions of section 2965, G. C. A condition of blindness which makes one unable to maintain himself from becoming a public charge is required.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1916.

HON. LINDSEY K. COOPER, Prosecuting Attorney, Ironton, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 7th, in which you ask for an opinion as to the operation of section 2965 of the General Code, has been received. With it you enclose copy of an opinion which you have just rendered to the county commissioners on this question. Your letter and the copy of opinion are as follows:

"I have rendered the enclosed opinion to the county commissioners of this county, and they are anxious for me to submit to you section 2965, General Code, for an opinion, especially on the following proposition: Does a person have to be absolutely blind and unable to see at all, before he is entitled to any relief, or, if the person has so lost his eyesight as to be unable to provide himself with the necessities of life, for that reason, and has the other necessary qualifications entitling him to relief, can relief be legally afforded him? * * *

"Thanking you in advance for the favor of your opinion on this question, I am, * * *

"OPINION

"To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of Lawrence County.

"GENTLEMEN:—Replying to your verbal enquiries relative to blind relief, will say:

"Section 2967, General Code (as amended 103 Ohio Laws, 60), provides in part:

" 'No certificate of qualification of drawing money hereunder shall be granted until the board of county commissioners shall be satisfied from the evidence of at least two reputable residents of the county, one of whom shall be a registered physician, that they know applicant to be blind and that he has the residential qualifications to entitle him to the relief asked.'

"Section 2965 of the General Code, provides:

" 'Any person of either sex who, by reason of loss of eyesight, is unable to provide himself with the necessities of life, who has not sufficient means of his own to maintain himself, and who, unless relieved as authorized by these provisions would become a charge upon the public, or upon those not required by law to support him, shall be deemed a needy blind person.'

"Section 2966 of the General Code, provides:

" 'In order to receive relief under these provisions a needy blind person must become blind while a resident of this state, and shall be a resident of the county for one year.'

"It is, therefore, my opinion that a person does not have to be totally blind in order to be entitled to relief, but if he has lost his eyesight to the extent of being unable by reason of that fact to provide himself with the necessities of life, and has the other necessary qualifications to entitle him to relief, he may lawfully be granted relief.

"Section 2966 above quoted is as plain as language could make it, that is, that no person is entitled to relief who became blind at any time before he came into this state, and that he must be a resident of the county for one full year immediately preceding any relief granted."

A reading of section 2965 of the General Code, supra, will at once show conclusively that the blindness comprehended by that section is of a comparative nature, and what might be blindness in one to bring that person under the statute would not necessarily be blindness in another.

It is, therefore, my opinion that it is not necessary that one be totally blind in order to entitle him to receive relief as a needy blind person. If he is so blind as to make it impossible for him to maintain himself from becoming a public charge he would be entitled to relief under the statute, all the other conditions being present. I concur in the conclusion expressed in your opinion.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—NO STATUTORY PROVISION IN PURCHASING CULVERT PIPE AND ROAD MACHINERY TO LET CONTRACTS FOR SAME BY COMPETITIVE BIDDING.

There is no statutory provision which requires county commissioners or township trustees, in purchasing culvert pipe and road machinery, to let the contracts for the same by competitive bidding.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your communication of February 15, 1916, in which you submit the following inquiries:

"(1) Can county commissioners make legal purchases of culvert pipe and road machinery without advertising for bids? If not, please give conditions as to advertising, etc. Also please advise as to the amount, if any, that they may purchase at any one time without advertising for bids.

"(2) Can township trustees make legal purchase of culvert pipe and road machinery without advertising for bids? If not, please give conditions as to advertising, etc. Also please advise as to the amount, if any, that they may purchase at any one time without advertising for bids."

Section 157 of the Cass highway law, section 7200, G. C., contains the following provision:

"The county commissioners may purchase such machinery or other equipment for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of the highways, bridges and culverts under their jurisdiction, as they may deem necessary, which shall be paid for out of any taxes levied and collected for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of roads, as provided in this chapter."

The same section also contains the following provision:

"Nothing herein shall prevent any township or two or more townships from purchasing for the exclusive use of the township or townships such machinery, tools and equipment as may be deemed necessary by the trustees thereof, but before such purchase the suggestions of the county highway superintendent shall be considered. Such machinery, tools and equipment shall be paid for by the trustees of the township or by the trustees of two or more townships, if for the joint use of two or more townships, out of any funds available for road maintenance and repair. Such township or townships may join with an incorporated village for the purchase of machinery, tools and equipment for their joint use."

Section 230 of the Cass highway law, section 7214, G. C., contains the following provision:

"The county commissioners or township trustees may contract for and purchase such material as is necessary for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining or repairing any highways, bridges or culverts within the county. * * *"

The Cass highway law contains a number of provisions requiring the letting of contracts at competitive bidding. Section 63 of the act, section 3298-4, G. C., requires the township trustees to let contracts for road improvements to the lowest and best bidder after advertisement in the manner provided in said section. Section 124 of the act, section 6945, G. C., requires county commissioners to award contracts for road improvements to the lowest and best bidder after advertisement for bids in compliance with the terms of the section. Section 156 of the act, section 7199, G. C., provides that if in the opinion of the county commissioners it is advisable to provide for the improvement, maintenance and repair of any portion of the highways of the county by contract, such contract, if the cost and expense exceeds two hundred dollars, shall be let by competitive bidding. There are other sections of the act which require competitive bidding, but all of the sections which require the letting of contracts by competitive bidding relate to construction, improvement, maintenance or repair by contract.

Where commissioners or trustees proceed to construct, improve, maintain or repair a highway by contract, they have no occasion to purchase material or machinery, the necessity for such purchase arising only where the commissioners proceed by force account. I am unable to find in the Cass highway law any provision which requires the commissioners, where they determine to proceed by force account and must, therefore, purchase material and machinery, to let the contracts for such material and machinery by competitive bidding, and I know of no general provision of law requiring them to so proceed.

I, therefore, advise you that there is no statutory provision which requires county commissioners or township trustees, in purchasing culvert pipe and road machinery, to let the contracts for the same by competitive bidding. While there is no legal requirement as to letting contracts for material and machinery by competitive bidding, it is my view that under ordinary circumstances the interests of the public will be best served by inviting bids and awarding the contracts to the lowest responsible bidder, in making the purchases referred to by you in your communication.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

TREASURER OF STATE—WHEN SUCH OFFICER MAY CREATE COLLECTION ACCOUNT IN SOME BANK—LIMITATIONS OF STATUTES APPLICABLE TO DEPOSITORIES OF ACTIVE AND INACTIVE FUNDS.

1. The limitations of section 330-1, G. C., apply only to the depositories of inactive funds.

2. The General Code fixes no limitation as to the amount which a depository of active funds may receive, except such limitations provided in section 330-3, G. C.

3. Section 744-12, G. C., 106 O. L., 505, does not limit the amount of state funds which may be deposited with any depository.

4. The treasurer of state, as incidental to the proper discharge of his duties, is authorized, during the heavy collection periods of each year when active depositories are filled to capacity, and until he is able to place the state funds in inactive depositories, to create a collection account in some local bank, which properly secures him and the state funds, for the purpose of depositing therein and securing the collection of checks and drafts received by him.

Funds of the state should, however, be kept in such collection account only until the treasurer is able to transfer the same to properly qualified depositories.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 21, 1916.

HON. A. V. DONAHEY, Auditor of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of February 21st, in which you request my opinion as follows:

> "Reference is hereby made to sections 321 to 330-11, inclusive, of the General Code, and, specifically, to 330-1 thereof, which reads as follows:
> "'Section 330-1. No bank or trust company shall have on deposit at any one time more than its paid in capital stock, and in no event more than three hundred thousand dollars ($300,000.00) as an inactive deposit. (102 v. 33, Sec. 12.)'
> "QUESTION:
> "1. Does this section above quoted apply to inactive deposits or depositories only, and,
> "2. If so, what limitations as to amounts that may be deposited are placed on active depositories?
> "3. Is section 744-12 (O. L. 106, page 505) applicable to deposits of the state treasury?"

Section 330-1, of the General Code, quoted in your letter, by its specific terms, applies only to "inactive deposits" and fixes a definite limit upon the amount of inactive deposits which may be made in any bank or trust company.

There is no limit as to the amount which may be deposited as an active deposit, except such as created by the provisions of section 330-3 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "The treasurer of state before making such deposits shall require that each and every approved bank or trust company deposit with him United States government bonds, bonds of this state, county, township, school district, road district, or municipal bonds of this state at not less than their par value, in an amount equal to the amount of money to be deposited with such banks or trust companies, or surety company bonds, which when executed shall be for an amount equal to the amount deposited plus 5%, conditional for the receipt and safe-keeping and payment over to the treasurer of state or his written order of all moneys which may come into the custody of such bank, or trust company under and by virtue of this act, and the interest thereon when paid shall be turned over to the bank or trust company so long as it is not in default. And further, said bonds so given shall include a special obligation to settle with and pay to the treasurer of state for the use of the state interest upon daily balances on said deposit or deposits, at the rate bid for, but not less than 3% per annum for inactive deposits and 2% per annum for active deposits (on a 365 day basis) payable quarterly on the first Monday of February, May, August and November of each year, or any time when withdrawals are made or the account is closed."

Under the above section the security furnished by the bank or trust company must at all times be equivalent to the amount deposited, plus five per cent. This section is applicable to active as well as inactive deposits.

Section 744-12 (106 O. L., page 505) referred to in your letter, is as follows:

"That whenever any of the funds of the state, or any of the political subdivisions of the state, shall be deposited under any of the depository laws of the state, every corporation, person, partnership and association coming within the purview of this act shall be permitted to bid upon and be designated as depositories of such funds, upon furnishing such surety or securities therefore as is prescribed by the laws of the state of Ohio; provided, however, that there shall not be deposited with any such corporation, person, partnership, or association by any such political subdivision an amount in excess of five hundred thousand dollars."

The above section, excepting the proviso following the semicolon, which limits the amount that may be deposited with any such "corporation, person, partnership or association," is applicable to state funds. The limitation in the proviso refers solely to the funds deposited by a political subdivision of the state and does not apply to or affect the deposits of state funds.

Although I have specifically answered your questions as asked, yet from the information secured since receiving your request at a conference in your office at which, together with yourself and the members of your inspection and accounting force, the treasurer of state and two special counsel from my office were present, I do not believe that the situation which prompts your questions is cleared up or made easier of solution by the answers just given.

It seems that there are three qualified depositories of active state funds in Columbus, the principal one having a capital stock of $500,000.00, another having a capital stock of $400,000.00, and the third having a capital stock of $25,000.00. The amount of active deposits which each of these banks can have at any time is therefore limited by the amount of securities of the character prescribed in said section 330-3 of the General Code, which such bank is able to and did put up with the treasurer of state.

It is represented that none of said active depositories have been able to put up with the treasurer of state securities in excess of the amount of their respective capital stocks, and therefore that there has been no time when the treasurer of state was authorized to deposit with any of said banks an amount in excess of its capital stock.

The period commencing about November 15th and ending about January 1st, is the heaviest collection period of each year in the office of the treasurer of state. The collections during this period, amounting at times to more than $1,000,000.00 per day, are far in excess both of the amount which the treasurer is obliged to pay out upon warrants of the auditor of state and of the amount which he can lawfully place with the depositories of active funds. It therefore follows that until the excess over expenditures can be placed with depositories of inactive funds he must keep such collections, which are made largely in the shape of checks and drafts, in his safe, or he must convert such checks and drafts into cash and keep this cash in his safe, or he must create a temporary collection account with some bank until he is able to place the money so collected with depositories of inactive funds, or until the daily expenses have so reduced the active deposits that a transfer can be made to the depositories of such funds.

The first of these plans results in keeping checks and drafts in the safe of the treasurer of state for days, and sometimes weeks, before the same are presented for payment. This plan is contrary to every accepted principle of good business, and subjects the treasurer to liability for loss by reason of the possible failure, during the time such checks and drafts are so held, of the drawer of a check or draft or the bank upon which it is drawn, or both,, for which the treasurer has no security of any kind. I therefore cannot approve its adoption.

The second plan, i. e., to convert the checks, drafts, etc., into cash and keep such cash in the safe until it can be placed in qualified depositories, is subject to the objection that the collection of a large number of such checks and drafts if done directly by the treasurer would entail an enormous amount of extra work, and occasion additional administration expense, while if done through the agency of a bank employed simply to collect, and not in the ordinary course of business as a depository, would naturally result in the necessity of paying the bank a commission to take care of its collection expenses. Since the treasurer receives several thousand checks and drafts per day during this period, and the average amount of each check is small, (more than three thousand checks each of $5.00 or less having been received in a single day), it follows that this collection expense would be unusually high and exceed by many times the interest which the amount so collected would earn, even if the treasurer were able to immediately find place for it in a properly qaulified depository. This plan would also take out of circulation and place in the vaults of the state treasurer at certain periods several million dollars of currency. The state would reap no benefit from this course, because no interest would be received on such sums, and it would in addition be contrary to the plain provisions of section 326 of the General Code, which section is as follows:

> "The treasurer of state shall not keep at any one time more than fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) as a reserve in the treasury vault, and all other moneys of the state shall be deposited as hereinafter provided."

By the last of these three plans, which is the one adopted by the present treasurer, all checks and drafts are immediately deposited and collected in the usual course of business, and the account is withdrawn as rapidly as the funds can be placed in any qualified depository, the bank carrying the collection account secures the treasurer of state from loss by depositing with him securities other than those required by section 330-3 of the General Code, but which are of ample value.

It is true that the state receives no interest from this collection account until the funds therein can be placed in a qualified depository, but the same is true of either of the other plans. If the checks and drafts are carried and not cashed, the state loses the interest, and the banks upon which the same are drawn profit by the use of the money, and without giving any security; if the cash is kept in the safe no interest is received. The state is, therefore, in the same position so far as interest receipts are concerned under all of the three plans. The treasurer's books show that during the entire time this collection account was maintained, the depositories of active funds were filled to the amount permitted by the securities deposited by them. His correspondence shows that honest effort was persistently made to place this money with depositories of inactive funds, but with little success, because money during that period was plentiful and not worth to the banks qualified as inactive depositories the amount of interest bid by them; they, therefore, upon various pretexts refused to receive funds offered them.

Although there is no provision of the General Code directly authorizing the creation and use of such collection account deposit, yet by reason of the exigency resulting from the unusual situation existing during the period of time referred to, I believe that the treasurer of state was justified in following the plan adopted by him. It was in accordance with accepted business methods, and was apparently an honest endeavor to solve the situation which was not anticipated and not provided for in the depository law. It is true that any of the several possible methods of solving the difficulty is liable to abuse in the hands of a dishonest treasurer, but so long as an honest effort is made to place such funds as rapidly as possible with qualified depositories of inactive funds, and so long as the active depositories are filled to capacity the state does not suffer and the treasurer is able to secure himself and the funds of the state.

I am therefore of the opinion that the treasurer of state was authorized, in view of the situation confronting him during the temporary period of heavy collections in his office, to establish and maintain a collection account as hereinbefore described. Funds of the state, however, should be kept in such account only until the treasurer is able to transfer the same to properly qualified depositories.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION—HAS AUTHORITY TO ACT AS COMMISSION IN LUNACY—MAY TRANSFER PATIENTS FROM A PENAL INSTITUTION TO LIMA STATE HOSPITAL WITHOUT INTERVENTION OF PROBATE COURT—VICE VERSA.

Under the provisions of senate bill No. 106, 103 O. L., 681, being sections 1841-1 to 1841-5, G. C., inclusive, the Ohio Board of Administration is vested with authority to sit as a commission in lunacy and to transfer insane patients from the Ohio state reformatory or the Ohio penitentiary to the Lima state hospital, without the intervention of the probate court. No question can be raised as to the depriving of the persons transferred of their liberty without due process of law, as the limit of time for which they may be held in the Lima state hospital, under the transfer made by the Ohio Board of Administration, is fixed by the term of sentence of the court committing them to the institution from which they were transferred.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 22, 1916.

The Ohio Board of Administration, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I have your request for an opinion, concerning the transfer of insane convicts from the penitentiary and reformatory to the Lima state hospital, which request is as follows:

> "We have been transferring patients from the penitentiary and the reformatory to Lima under sections 2216 to 2222 inclusive, of the General Code of Ohio Laws. However, I am of the opinion that the board can, and I believe should, act under senate bill 106, page 681 of 103 Ohio Laws, which was passed April 9, 1913, and approved May 5th of the same year. It seems to me that our authority is fixed under this act for the transfer of all patients, whether from a penal institution to the Lima state hospital or from a benevolent institution to that hospital, or for their return, and if this is true it seems to me that a saving is thereby effected to the state."

Sections 2216, 2217, 2220 and 2221 read as follows:

> "Section 2216. When the physician of the penitentiary or reformatory reports in writing to the warden or officer in charge thereof, that in his opinion a convict confined therein is insane, such warden or officer shall apply to the probate court of the county in which the institution is located, for an examination to be made of such convict by two physicians of at least three years' practice in the state, not connected with the penitentiary or reformatory, and to be designated by the court. If satisfied after a personal examination, that the convict is insane, they shall so certify in the form and manner prescribed for the commitment of insane persons to state hospitals."
> "Section 2217. Such warden or officer shall apply to the court for an order transferring the convict to the Lima state hospital, accompanying his application with the medical certificate of lunacy. If satisfied that the convict is insane, the court shall issue an order of transfer, and the warden or officer shall thereupon cause the convict to be transferred to the Lima state hospital and delivered to the superintendent thereof with the certificate of lunacy and order of transfer.
> "Section 2220. An insane convict under indeterminate sentence, transferred from the penitentiary or the reformatory to the Lima state hospital, shall be detained at such hospital for the maximum term of sentence provided by law for the offiense of which the convict was convicted, unless sooner restored to reason.
> "Section 2221. When an insane convict confined in the Lima state hospital, whose term of sentence has not expired, has been restored to reason, and the superintendent of the hospital so certifies in writing, he shall be transferred forthwith to the penitentiary or reformatory from which he came. The officer in charge shall receive such convict into the penitentiary or reformatory."

It will be noted from a reading of the sections quoted above that full machinery is provided for the transfer of inmates of the penitentiary or reformatory to the Lima state hospital upon their becoming insane while under sentence. At the time these laws, as quoted above, were passed, the Lima state hospital was not under the jurisdiction and control of the Ohio Board of Administration, nor was your board vested with any authority to transfer inmates from either of the two penal institutions to the Lima state hospital, other than that given you by these sections. Since the completion of the Lima state hospital and its having been turned over to your board, under whose charge it is managed, a different situation exists, in that inmates of the Lima state hospital bear the same relation to the board of administration as inmates of the penitentiary, reformatory, or other state institutions, in so far as custody, control, etc., are concerned.

In your letter you refer to senate bill No. 106, page 681, 103 O. L., which is sections 1841-1, 1841-2, 1841-3, 1841-4 and 1841-5, of the General Code, and inquire whether or not under its provisions you are authorized to transfer patients from the penitentiary or reformatory to the several state hospitals without the intervention of the probate court. The contention of your board is doubtless based primarily on the provisions of section 1841-2, of the General Code, 103 O. L., 681, which is section 2 of senate bill No. 106, referred to above, and is as follows:

> "All persons committed to any institution under the control and management of the Ohio Board of Administration shall be considered as committed to the control, care and custody of such board. Upon resolution, duly entered upon the minutes of the board, any person committed to one of such institutions may, for reasons set forth in such resolution, be transferred to any other institution; provided that, except as otherwise provided by law, no person shall be transferred from a benevolent to a penal institution."

The authority of the board of administration to act in connection with the transfer of insane prisoners from the penitentiary or reformatory to the Lima state hospital would, under section 1841-2, quoted above, be clear and indisputable and no question could be raised concerning such authority save and except for one thing, and that is the continuance of sections 2216, et seq., of the General Code, which have not been repealed and which are apparently in conflict with the provisions of senate bill No. 106, referred to above. However, in view of the circumstances and conditions surrounding the erection and operation of the Lima state hospital, attention should be directed to the purpose to be accomplished through that institution.

The main purpose of the Lima state hospital is to secure to the unfortunate criminal insane medical attention and environment to the end that their condition may be improved to the best possible extent and, in addition thereto, another purpose of the Lima state hospital is to make possible the removal from the other state hospitals for insane such inmates thereof who may exhibit dangerous or homicidal tendencies, as referred to in section 1993 of the General Code, as amended at page 448 of 103 O. L., which section is as follows:

> "The superintendent of a state hospital for insane may make application to the Ohio Board of Administration for an order of transfer to the Lima state hospital of any or all inmates thereof that exhibit dangerous or homicidal tendencies, rendering their presence a source of danger to others. The board, upon satisfaction that such order is advisable, may order the transfer of such persons to the Lima state hospital."

It will be noted, therefore, that the Lima state hospital has two principal functions to perform in the care of unfortunates, who, either through their own act or through natural causes, become wards of the Ohio Board of Administration: (1) The providing for medical care and attention, and (2) the segregation of such of the dangerous wards of the board who, for reasons of safety to themselves and other inmates, are sent to the Lima state hospital. In the case of the transfer from the state hospital for the insane of patients exhibiting dangerous or homicidal tendencies, there has already been an inquest by a probate court, hence no question would be raised concerning the detention of such persons or the depriving them of their liberty without due process of law.

In the case of the transfer of inmates from the penitentiary or reformatory, it will be noted that such inmates, if transferred to the Lima state hospital, could not be deprived of their liberty in the Lima state hospital for any longer time than it would be taken from them if kept in the penitentiary or reformatory under the sentence of the court which committed them, it being expressly provided in section 1995 of the General Code, that if an inmate of the Lima state hospital is insane upon the expiration of the sentence under which he was committed, an inquest shall then be held to determine as to what disposition shall be made of him.

Section 1995 of the General Code is as follows:

> "If the insanity of an inmate, serving sentence, in the hospital, continues upon the expiration of his sentence, within five days after the expiration of such sentence, the superintendent shall make application to the probate judge of the county in which the institution is situated for an order to retain such person in the hospital until he is restored to reason and mail a written notice that he has made such application to one or more friends or relatives of the inmate, if their address is known."

I have been informed that senate bill No. 106, referred to above, originated through the efforts of your board to provide economical means of transferring patients from one of the institutions in your charge to another, and that the only possible reason that could be assigned for the failure of the general assembly to repeal the sections of the law specifically providing for the transfer of insane persons from the penitentiary or reformatory to the Lima state hospital, was the fact that at the time senate bill No. 106 was enacted, and for some time thereafter, the Lima state hospital continued to be under the management and control of the board of commissioners for the erection of the Lima state hospital, and there was no absolute certainty as to when it would come under the management and control of your board. However, it was provided by section 8 of the act, for the erection of the Lima state hospital, to be found at page 237, 98 O. L., as follows:

> "Admission of inmates during the period of construction. Inmates may be admitted to the Lima state hospital after the work of construction has progressed to such an extent that they may be safely and properly kept. Said inmates are to be admitted as hereinafter provided, but preference shall first be given to insane criminals."

Therefore, pending the transfer to your board of the management and control of the Lima state hospital, when the inmates of the various institutions under your care, custody and control might be transferred to the Lima state hospital, under the provisions of senate bill No. 106, referred to above, the machinery which had been previously provided for the transfer was allowed to stand, it being assumed that upon your board taking control of the Lima state hospital it would then proceed under the provisions of senate bill No. 106, which authorizes the board to sit as a lunacy commission and conduct the arrangements for the transfer of inmates from one of its institutions to another, without resort to the probate court.

Opinion No. 685, rendered by this department under date of August 5, 1915, to Dr. C. F. Gilliam, superintendent of the Columbus state hospital, Columbus, Ohio, dealt with the question of the transfer of inmates of the reformatory and penitentiary to the Lima state hospital, and it was held in that opinion that the transfer would have to be made under the provision of section 2216, et seq., of the General Code, supra. However, at that time the Lima state hospital had not been placed under the control and management of your board, hence the authority given by senate bill No. 106 was not operative.

The plan and procedure which has been provided by senate bill No. 106 is a sensible one, economical in its administration, and from the fact that the power to pass upon the condition of the inmates of the various institutions is lodged with the physicians and others in charge of the inmates daily, it is fair to assume that the very best judgment will be used at all times, owing to the superior advantages which those in daily contact with the inmates have over the physicians who might be selected casually for the inquest.

Under the existing state of the law, two means are provided for the transfer of patients from the penitentiary and reformatory to the Lima state hospital, viz.: The plan prescribed in sections 2216, et seq., of the General Code, and the plan proposed by senate bill No. 106, referred to. Every right of the inmate is preserved by senate bill No. 106, and, in addition thereto it has many advantages over the more cumbersome method which was made necessary before the board of administration had control of the Lima state hospital. So that while senate bill No. 106 does not, in words, repeal the other laws relating to the transfer of inmates from the penitentiary and reformatory to the Lima state hospital, it is my opinion that at the present time, and ever since October 1, 1915, when the board of administration assumed control of the Lima state hospital, it has had power to make the transfers without the intervention of the probate court. It also follows that there is abundant authority in the statutes for the return to the penitentiary or reformatory of such inmates in the Lima state hospital, who may recover their reason while there, that authority being contained in the provision of section 2221 of the General Code, which is as follows:

> "When an insane convict confined in the Lima state hospital, whose term of sentence has not expired, has been restored to reason, and the superintendent of the hospital so certifies in writing, he shall be transferred forthwith to the penitentiary or reformatory from which he came. The officer in charge shall receive such convict into the penitentiary or reformatory."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—JOINT COUNTY DITCHES—CIVIL ENGINEER APPOINTED BY GOVERNOR—DUTIES—COMPENSATION, HOW PAID—NO AUTHORITY FOR ENGINEER TO EMPLOY ASSISTANTS—SECTION 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, CONSTRUED.

No survey of a joint county ditch petitioned for pursuant to the provisions of sections 6536 and 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, et seq., is authorized to be made prior to the location and establishment thereof.

The duties and authority of a civil engineer appointed by the governor pursuant to the provisions of section 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, are limited to sitting with the commissioners in joint session and voting on all questions relating to the proceedings of such joint board of commissioners in the location of the proposed joint county improvement, and the determination of the necessity thereof pursuant to the provisions of section 6451, G. C., et seq.

There is no authority in law for the employment of assistants to aid in the performance of his duties by a civil engineer appointed by the governor pursuant to said section 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836.

Persons employed by a civil engineer appointed under authority of said section 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, may not be paid from the county treasury of either county in which the proposed improvement is located, nor may the compensation of persons so employed be charged against the petitioners if the improvement is rejected.

In case of the rejection of the improvement by the joint board of county commissioners the per diem compensation of the civil engineer appointed by the governor together with his necessary expenses is required to be charged against the petitioners for the joint improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 22, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours under date of March 20, 1916, is as follows:

"We would respectfully request your written opinion upon the following questions:

"In the construction of a joint county ditch between two counties, the boards of commissioners failed to agree, whereupon application was made to the governor for the appointment of a civil engineer as provided in section 6537, General Code, as amended 103, O. L., 836. The civil engineer was appointed, and spent two weeks in going over the line of the proposed improvement, using as assistants a deputy surveyor of one county and three deputy surveyors of the other county.

"Question 1. Does the law contemplate that a civil engineer so appointed, should make a survey of the improvement, or does he act as a member of the joint board in rendering a decision?

"Question 2. In this case, how are the assistants employed by him in this work to be paid? In other words, should the one county pay for the one assistant used, and the other county pay for the three assistants used, or is all this cost to be considered as part of the cost of location and construction and assessed against the property owners in case the ditch be granted and constructed?

"Question 3. In case the joint board concludes to dismiss the petition, who pays the cost thus incurred by the civil engineer, including his own compensation?"

Section 6536, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, provides in part as follows:

"Ditches, drains or watercourses which provide drainage, or, when constructed, will provide drainage, for lands in more than one county, may be located and constructed, enlarged, cleaned, or repaired or boxed or tiled as provided in this chapter and the laws prescribed for constructing, enlarging, cleaning or repairing single county ditches, drains or watercourses, * * *."

Section 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, to which reference is made, provides:

"When a ditch or improvement is proposed, which will require a location in more than one county, or it is sought to improve the channel of a river, creek or run, or part thereof, by straightening, widening, deepening, or changing it, or by removing from adjacent lands, timber, brush, trees, or other substance liable to obstruct it, which improvement as proposed is in more than one county, application shall be made to the board of county commissioners of each of such counties, and the surveyor or engineer shall make a report for each county. * * * A majority of the joint board of commissioners, when in joint session, shall be competent to locate and establish such ditch or improvement, or to grant the order improving the channel of a river, creek, or run, or part thereof. Or in case the members of the said joint board of commissioners when in joint session shall be equally divided on the locating or establishing of such ditch improvement, or the granting the order for improving the channel of a river, creek or run or part thereof, by straightening, widening, deepening or changing it, or by removing from adjacent lands timber, brush, trees or other substance liable to obstruct it; said joint board shall certify that fact to the governor of the state of Ohio, who shall within twenty days appoint an experienced civil engineer who is not a resident of either county or interested in the proceedings had under this act, nor employed at any time upon any public work done under the direction of the commissioners of any such county. Said civil engineer shall thereupon be competent to sit with said commissioners in joint session and vote on all questions relating to such proceedings as fully and completely as any commissioner of said joint board. The compensation for said civil engineer shall be ten dollars per day and his necessary expenses, provided, he shall not be paid for more than twenty days in any one proceeding. The said compensation and expenses shall be paid as part of the expenses of the proceedings if the improvement is ordered, and against the petitioners if rejected by said joint board. * * *"

The foregoing sections are a part of chapter 2, title III of part second of the General Code. An examination of this chapter fails to disclose specific provision under which a joint county ditch, authorized by the provisions of said section 6536, G. C., supra, to be constructed, may be established. For such provision for the proceedings in the establishment and location of such joint county ditch we are then, by the terms of said section, referred to "the laws prescribed for constructing, enlarging, cleaning or repairing single county ditches, drains or watercourses."

Section 6451, G. C., relative to the establishment and location of single county ditches provides in part as follows:

> "The county commissioners shall meet at the place of beginning of the ditch, as described in the petition, on the day fixed, as provided in this chapter, and hear the proof offered by any of the parties affected by said improvement, and other persons competent to testify. They shall go over and along the line of the improvement, and by actual view of the ditch and the premises along and adjacent thereto which are to be drained or benefited thereby, determine the necessity thereof, and may adjourn from time to time, and to such place as the necessity of the work may require. * * *"

The provisions of this section define the powers, duties and authority of the joint board of county commissioners and the civil engineer, appointed and authorized to sit with them under the provisions of said section 6537, G. C., supra, in the location and establishment of joint county ditches under proceedings authorized by sections 6536 and 6537, supra, et seq. That is to say, if all the proceedings necessary to confer upon the joint board of county commissioners jurisdiction to determine the necessity of the joint improvement have been regularly had, it then devolves upon such joint board to determine that question pursuant to the provisions of said section 6451, G. C., supra, and in the event the members of such joint board are equally divided upon the question of the location or establishment of such improvement and that fact is certified to the governor, he is required to appoint a civil engineer whose powers and duty it is to sit with such joint board and to vote upon all questions relating to the proceedings authorized by said section 6451, G. C., for the determination of the location and establishment of such proposed improvement. They shall meet at the place of beginning of the proposed ditch, hear proof offered by any parties affected by said improvement, or other competent persons, go over and along the line thereof and by actual view of the ditch and the adjacent premises drained thereby determine the necessity of such proposed improvement.

No authority is found for the employment of assistants by the joint board, and the engineer appointed to sit with the members would certainly have no more authority than the board itself in the absence of express provision therefor. No such express provision is found and the nature of the duties imposed upon the joint board and engineer in this regard is not such as to suggest either the necessity or the occasion for the employment of assistants. Neither previous to nor in the determination of the necessity of the proposed improvement or its general location is there requirement of or authority for making any survey thereof. It is only after a finding by the commissioners in favor of the establishment of the ditch or drain and an entry of such finding upon their journal that there is provision or authority for directing a survey of the proposed improvement according to the provisions of section 6454, G. C., as follows:

> "If the county commissioners find for the improvement, they shall cause to be entered on their journal an order directing the county surveyor to go upon the line described in the petition, or as changed by them as provided in this chapter, and survey and level it, and set a stake at every hundred feet, numbering down stream, note the intersections of lines and boundaries of lands, townships and county lines, landmarks, bench-marks and road crossings, and make a report, profile and plat thereof, and estimate the number of cubic yards of earth or other substance to be removed, and the cost per cubic yard for each working section as hereinafter provided, and of each section of one hundred feet."

I am therefore of opinion, in answer to your first question, that the sole authority of a civil engineer, appointed pursuant to the provisions of section 6537, G. C., 103 O. L., 836, is to sit with the joint board of county commissioners and to vote with them on all matters relative to the necessity, establishment and location of the proposed improvement, and that no survey of the proposed improvement by the civil engineer so appointed is contemplated or authorized by law.

This conclusion is a substantial answer to your second inquiry. Since there is no authority for making a survey of a proposed ditch improvement prior to its location and establishment, it follows of necessity that there is no authority in the civil engineer appointed by the governor to employ assistants in the making of such survey. There being no authority in law for the employment of assistants by the civil engineer so appointed, it also follows that assistants employed by him may not be lawfully paid by either county.

The civil engineer appointed by the governor is entitled under the provisions of section 6537, G. C., supra, to compensation for his services in the sum of ten dollars per day for the time actually employed for a period not in excess of twenty days together with his necessary expenses. It will be noted that it is also provided by said section that such "compensation and expenses shall be paid as a part of the expenses of the proceedings if the improvement is ordered, and against the petitioners if rejected by said joint board."

In answer, then, to your third inquiry I am of opinion that if the application or petition for the establishment of a joint county ditch, under section 6536, G. C., et seq., is rejected by the joint board of county commissioners the per diem compensation and necessary expenses of the civil engineer appointed by the governor are required to be charged against the petitioners for the proposed improvement, but that no part of the compensation or expenses of employment of assistants to said civil engineer may be paid by either county or charged against the petitioners for such proposed improvement.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 6928, G. C.—TAX LEVYING SECTIONS 6956-1, 3298-1, AND 3298-18, G. C., ARE SUBJECT TO FIFTEEN MILL LIMITATION—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MAY MAKE LEVIES UNDER BOTH SECTIONS 3298-1 AND 3298-18, G. C.—DIFFERENT LEVIES—WHEN TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES MAY SUBMIT QUESTION OF BOND ISSUE FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT—PARTICULAR ROADS NEED NOT BE DESIGNATED IN MAKING ROAD LEVIES UNDER SECTIONS 3298-1 AND 3298-18, G. C.—PROPERTY ASSESSED WHEN ROAD WAS BUILT MAY BE REASSESSED FOR IMPROVEMENT, REPAIR OR RECONSTRUCTION OF ROAD UNDER SECTION 6906, G. C.

Section 6928, G. C., does not limit improvements under the preceding sections to improvements made by joint boards of county commissioners or by agreement entered into between such joint boards and the trustees of one or more townships.

The levies provided by sections 6956-1, 3298-1 and 3298-18, G. C., are not subject to the ten mill limitation but are subject to the fifteen mill limitation.

Township trustees may make levies under both sections 3298-1 and 3298-18, G. C.

Township trustees may not submit the question of a bond issue for road purposes until budget commission finishes its work.

Township trustees at the time they make levies under sections 3298-1 and 3298-18, G. C., are not required to designate the particular roads upon which the proceeds of the levies are to be expended.

The fact that property was assessed at the time a road was built will not prevent it being again assessed for the improvement, repair or reconstruction of such road under the provisions of section 6906, et seq., G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 22, 1916.

HON. DEAN E. STANLEY, Prosecuting Attorney, Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 24, 1916, in which you submit a number of inquiries relative to the Cass highway law. You first inquire whether the county commissioners of a single county, under the provisions of section 6906, G. C., et seq., may improve county or township roads, paying the county's proportion of the cost of such improvement out of the road fund of the county, or whether section 6928, G. C., limits improvements under the preceding sections to improvements made by joint boards of county commissioners or by agreement entered into between such joint boards and the trustees of one or more townships.

Section 6906, G. C., being section 85 of the Cass highway law, reads as follows:

> "The board of commissioners of any county shall have power, as hereinafter provided, to construct a public road by laying out and building a new public road, or by improving, reconstructing, or repairing, any existing public road or part thereof by grading, paving, draining, dragging, graveling, macadamizing, resurfacing or applying dust preventives, or by otherwise improving the same. The county commissioners shall have power to alter, vacate or widen any part of such road in connection with the proceedings for such improvement."

Sections 6907 to 6927, G. C., inclusive, being sections 86 to 106, inclusive, of the Cass highway law, relate to the filing of petitions for road improvements with county commissioners, the duties of county commissioners when petitions for road improvements are filed with them, the power of the county commissioners to act without a petition, the making of surveys, plats, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications, the matters of compensation and damages, various methods of dividing the costs and expenses of improvements, the method of making and collecting assessments, the levying of taxes for the county's and township's proportions of the cost and expenses and other similar matters.

Section 6928, G. C., being section 107 of the Cass highway law, reads as follows:

> "The provisions of the preceding sections shall apply to the proportion of the costs and expenses of any improvement to be paid by any county or township in case the road improvement is authorized and constructed by any joint board of commissioners, or by the agreement entered into between such joint boards, and the trustees of any one or more townships."

It is clear that the legislature, by the enactment of section 6928, G. C., did not intend to limit the effect of the preceding sections of the Cass highway law, found in chapter VI thereof. Indeed, the intention of the legislature was quite the contrary. The purpose of section 6928, G. C., was to make applicable to improvements authorized and constructed by joint boards of commissioners, or under agreements between such joint boards and the trustees of one or more townships, certain provisions of the preceding sections of the law, which provisions are primarily applicable to improvements constructed by a single board of county commissioners.

I therefore advise you, in answer to your first question, that section 6928, G. C., does not limit improvements under the preceding sections of the Cass highway law to improvements made by joint boards of commissioners or by agreement entered into between such joint boards, and the trustees of one or more townships. The only effect of the section in question is to make applicable to improvements made by joint boards of commissioners, or made under agreement between such joint boards and the trustees of one or more townships, certain provisions of the preceding sections, which provisions are primarily applicable to improvements carried forward by a single board of county commissioners..

Your second and third questions relate to the question of tax levies, and are answered fully in an opinion today rendered to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, a copy of which opinion is enclosed for your information. The questions will, however, be answered briefly herein.

Your second question relates to the tax limits applicable to the levy provided for by section 6956-1, G. C., and I advise you that this levy is not subject to the ten mill limitation, but is subject to the fifteen mill limitation.

Your third question is as to whether township trustees may make levies under both sections 3298-1 and 3298-18, G. C., and as to the limitations upon these levies. The levies provided for by the two sections in question are not the same levies. This is apparent by reason of the fact that section 3298-1, G. C., authorizes a three mill levy, while section 3298-18, G. C., authorizes only a two mill levy. The levy authorized by section 3298-1, G. C., is to be made upon all the taxable property within a township, including that of any municipality therein situated, while the levy authorized by section 3298-18, G. C., is to be made only upon the taxable property of a township outside of any incorporated village or city therein situated. Since the levies are not identical and since the Cass highway law contains no provisions restricting township trustees to one of the two levies, I advise you that township trustees may make levies under both sections. The levies provided for by both sections are outside the ten mill limitation, but within the fifteen mill limitation.

Your fourth question is as follows:

> "When the levy provided for in section 3298-1 has been made, may the township trustees, if they are then of the opinion that it will be insufficient to care for the roads at that time, issue bonds as provided in section 3298-8?"

This question was fully answered in opinion No. 849 of this department, rendered to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, on September 21, 1915, in which it was held that as the Cass highway law did not go into effect until September 6, 1915, and therefore no levy might be made in 1915, under section 60 of that act, section 3298-1, G. C., no election to determine the question of issuing bonds may be held under section 3298-9, G. C., until after the time in the year 1916, when the township makes its levy under section 3298-1, G. C., and it is determined that said levy does not furnish sufficient funds for the construction and repair of the designated roads. The amount produced by a levy under section 3298-1, G. C., cannot be known until the budget commission has completed its work which must be not later than the third Monday in August, unless the time be extended by the state tax commission. The question of a bond issue may not, therefore, be submitted until the budget commission has made its report, and it is known how much will be realized from the levy and how much of the cost of the projected work will have to be met by a bond issue.

Your fourth question is, therefore, to be answered in the negative. A copy of opinion No. 849 will be found at page 32 of a pamphlet which I am mailing you under separate cover.

Your fifth question reads as follows:

> "Are the levies provided for in section 3298-1 and section 3298-18 confined to roads which must be designated by the trustees at the time the levies are made, or may they be used generally upon the county and township roads located within the township?

Section 3298-1, G. C., has been already quoted herein. Section 3298-2, G. C., relates to the placing on the duplicate and collection of taxes authorized by section 3298-1, G. C., and further provides that when collected such taxes shall be paid to the treasurer of the township from which they are collected, and the money so raised shall be under the control of the township trustees of such township "for the purpose of improving the roads of said township, as provided herein."

Section 3298-3, G. C., contains the following provision:

> "The trustees shall designate the road or roads or part thereof within said township to be improved."

I find nothing in the chapter in question which warrants the inference that as to levies made under section 3298-1, G. C., the township trustees are required at the time of the making of the levy to designate the road or roads on which the proceeds of the levy so made are to be expended. The natural inference is that under ordinary circumstances the several steps provided by the statute are to be taken in the order in which they are set forth in the absence of any reason for a different order, and I therefore advise you that as to levies made under section 3298-1, G. C., it is not necessary for the township trustees, at the time of making such levies, to designate the road or roads upon which the proceeds of such levies are to be expended, and that the proceeds may be used upon any road or roads designated by the trustees at any time subsequent to the making of the levies.

Section 3298-18, G. C., provides that after the annual estimate for each township has been filed with the trustees of the township by the county highway superintendent, they may increase or reduce the amount of any of the items contained in said estimate; and that at their first meeting after said estimate is filed, they shall make their levies for the purposes set forth in the estimate.

The provision relating to the annual estimate of the county highway superintendent for the township trustees is found in section 144 of the act, section 7187, G. C., and reads as follows:

> "The county highway superintendent shall, on or before April 1st of each year, make an annual estimate for the township trustees of each township, for the improvement, maintenance and repair of roads, bridges and culverts, or for the construction of new roads required in said township, and shall submit the same to the township trustees for their action."

There is nothing in the above quoted provision which requires the county highway superintendent in his estimate to set forth the particular roads, bridges and culverts to be repaired or the particular new roads to be constructed, and I therefore reach the same conclusion as to section 3298-18, G. C., as has already been expressed with reference to section 3298-1, G. C., and advise you that the township trustees, at the time they make the levy under section 3298-18, G. C., are not required to designate the particular road or roads to be repaired or improved out of the proceeds of such levy.

Your sixth question reads as follows:

> "Would the fact that property had been assessed at the time a road was built prevent it being assessed for the improvement, repair, or reconstruction of such road under the provisions of Sec. 6906, et seq.?"

I find no provision in the scheme of road improvement provided by section 6906, G. C., et seq., to the effect that the fact that property has been once assessed for a road improvement precludes a second assessment for the improvement, repair or reconstruction of such road, and know of no principle of law which would operate to prevent an assessment for the second improvement. The only provision in the sections in question which has any bearing on the question is found in section 6922, G. C., and is to the effect that in making an apportionment or estimated assessment upon the real estate to be charged therewith of such part of the cost of the improvement as is to be specially assessed, the surveyor (county highway superintendent) may take into consideration any previous assessments made upon such real estate for road improvements. This provision only goes so far as to authorize the surveyor to take into consideration previous special assessment, either for the road now being improved or for any other road, and does not prevent assessing a portion of the cost and expense of improving a road against real estate previously assessed for a former improvement of the same or a different road. Your sixth question is, therefore, to be answered in the negative.

In reply to your seventh question as to whether there is any provision for the issuance of bonds by county commissioners for the improvement of county and township roads, I advise you that bond issues of the character referred to by you are provided for by section 108 of the Cass highway law, section 6929, G. C.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

CASS HIGHWAY LAW—DISCUSSION OF TAX LEVYING SECTIONS—WHETHER OR NOT INTERIOR LIMITATIONS AND TEN AND FIFTEEN MILL LIMITATIONS APPLY TO TAX LEVIES AUTHORIZED TO BE MADE BY TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—TAXABLE PROPERTY THAT IS AND IS NOT SUBJECT TO LEVIES AUTHORIZED FOR TOWNSHIP AND COUNTY ROAD PURPOSES—GENERAL DISCUSSION OF TAX LEVYING POWERS AND LIMITATIONS UNDER PROVISIONS OF CASS HIGHWAY LAW.

The tax levy provided by section 3298-1, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy in question cannot exceed three mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property of a township, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy referred to in section 3298-13, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The only limitation on this levy is the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property of a township, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy provided by section 6926, G. C., is not subject to the three mill limitation for county purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property of a county, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy provided by section 6927, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed three mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made by the county commissioners upon all the taxable property of the township or townships interested, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy provided by the first paragraph of section 1222, G. C., is not subject to the three mill limitation for county purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed one mill and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property of a county, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy provided by the second paragraph of section 1222, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made by the township trustees on all the taxable property of the township interested, including the taxable property within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy provided by sections 1230 and 1231-2, G. C., is not subject to the fifteen mill limitation or any other limitation provided by law. The sections in question authorize and require a levy of three-tenths of one mill on all the property within the state, which levy is in addition to all other levies made for any purpose or purposes and is outside all the tax limitations provided by law.

The levy provided by section 6956-1, G. C., is not subject to the three mill limitation for county purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property of the county, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The levy provided by section 3298-18, G. C., is not subject to the two mill lim- itation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. The levy is to be made by the township trustees on the taxable property of a township outside of any incorporated village or city therein situated.

The levy provided by section 3298-20, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The only limitation upon this levy is the fifteen mill limitation and the levy is to be made on all the taxable property of a township, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations therein situated.

The provision for the repair and maintenance fund, under section 6956-1, G. C., of not less than twenty dollars per mile of county road is mandatory, and has the effect of preferring the repair and maintenance fund over the other fund provided by the section. As between the two funds provided by the section the repair and maintenance fund is to be given preference and if any cut is necessary it must be made in the other fund. The provision that the levy under section 3298-18, G. C., must amount to at least twenty dollars per mile of township road is also mandatory.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March, 22, 1916.

The Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—On September 21, 1915, this department rendered to you opinion No. 847, relating to the construction of a number of the provisions of the Cass highway law. The twelfth question submitted by you and answered in the opinion in question read as follows:

> "Is the tax limitation prescribed in sections 105, 238 and 239 ten mills or fifteen mills?"

I advised you, in answer to the above question, that as between the ten mill and fifteen mill limitation the levies in the sections of the Cass highway law, referred to by you, are above the ten mills but within the fifteen mills. It was observed in the opinion in question, however, that the answer therein given was not sufficient without some further explanation of the provisions of the sections in question and that as the Cass highway law did not become effective until after the levies were made in 1915, no levies might be made under the Cass Highway law until 1916, and there was, therefore, no immediate necessity for the interpretation of the tax levying sections of the act, of which there are others in addition to those referred to by you in your question.

I indicated that at a later date I would prepare an opinion for your information, covering the several tax levying sections of the Cass highway law, and I am, therefore, addressing to you a further opinion on the subject in question.

I will refer first to section 60 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-1, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "The board of trustees of any township may levy and assess upon the taxable property of such township a tax not exceeding three mills in any one year upon each dollar of taxable property therein for the purpose of improving, dragging, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads or part thereof. Such levy shall be in addition to the levy of two mills authorized by law for general township purposes, but subject to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

This levy is, by the terms of the section authorizing the same, expressly excepted from the two mill limitation on the aggregate of all taxes that may be levied by a township for township purposes. The use of the expression "the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force," in connection with the other language of the section, establishes a legislative intent to make this levy subject to only two limitations. The levy itself cannot exceed three mills and the levy under this section and under sections 5649-1, 5649-2, 5649-3, 5649-5, 5649-5a and 5649-5b, G. C., cannot exceed fifteen mills. In other words, the levy provided by section 60 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-1, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes, provided by section 5649-3a, G. C., and is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C., but the levy itself cannot exceed three mills and the levy, together with the other levies referred to in section 5649-5b, G. C., cannot exceed the fifteen mill limitation provided by that section. This levy is to be made by the township trustees on all the taxable property of a township, including the property within any municipal corporation situated within the township.

Section 72 of the Cass highway law, section 3298-13, G. C., relates to sinking fund levies for the redemption of the bonds issued by townships under the provisions of chapter 3 of the Cass highway law, and reads as follows:

> "Levies for the payment of principal and interest on bonds issued under the provisions of this act, shall be in addition to the two mills authorized to be levied for general township purposes, but subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

It will be noted that the levies referred to in the above quoted section are expressly excepted from the two mill limitation for township purposes and the only limitation expressed in the section is that the levies therein referred to are subject to the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C. The levies are to be made to provide an interest and redemption fund for bonds authorized by a vote of the electors had under authority of sections 3298-9 to 3298-11, G. C., inclusive, the issue of the bonds being authorized by section 3298-8, G. C., In view of the language of the section and the fact that the bonds must be authorized by a vote of the electors, I am of the opinion that the only limitation on the interest and sinking fund levies referred to in section 3298-13, G. C., is the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C. These levies are also to be made by the township trustees on all the taxable property of the township, including the taxable property within any municipal corporation situated in the township.

Section 105 of the act, section 6926, G. C., provides in part as follows:

> "* * * For the purpose of providing by taxation a fund for the payment of the county's proportion of the cost and expenses of constructing, improving, maintaining, dragging and repairing roads under the provisions of this chapter, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy annually a tax not exceeding two mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of said county. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for road purposes, but subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

It will be noted that while the section in question provides that the levy therein authorized shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for road purposes, yet the levy is not expressly excepted from the three mill limitation for county purposes, provided by section 5649-3a, G. C. An examination of other sections of the act discloses the fact, however, that it must have been the intention of the legislature to exempt this levy from the three mill limitation for county purposes. Section 1222, G. C., authorizes a one mill levy by counties for road purposes and section 6956-1, G. C., authorizes a two mill levy by counties for road purposes.

It will thus be seen that sections of the act other than the one now under consideration provide for maximum levies by counties for road purposes amounting to three mills. It must, therefore, be concluded that it was the intention of the legislature to exempt the levy now under consideration from the three mill limitation for county purposes.

I, therefore, advise you that the levy in question is not subject to the three mill limitation provided by section 5649-3a, G. C., and for reasons already stated it is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C. The levy itself cannot exceed two mills, and the levy, together with all other levies referred to in section 5649-5b, G. C., cannot exceed the fifteen mill limitation provided by that section. The levy is, of course, to be made on all the taxable property of the county, including that within any municipalities situated within the county.

Section 106 of the act, section 6927, G. C., provides as follows:

> "For the purpose of providing by taxation a fund for the payment of the proportion of the costs and expenses of such improvement to be paid by the township or townships interested, in which such road may be in whole or in part situated, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy a tax, not exceeding three mills in any one year upon all the taxable property of such township or townships. Such levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for road purposes, but subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

It will be noted that while the section provides that the levy therein authorized shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for road purposes, yet it is not expressly provided in the section that such levy shall be in addition to the two mill levy authorized by law for general township purposes. Such must have been the intention of the legislature, however, for reasons already given and for the further reason that the section itself authorizes a levy of three mills, while the limitation on levies for township purposes provided for by section 5649-3a, G. C., is only two mills. It is also provided in this section that the levy therein authorized shall be subject to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force, thus evidencing a legislative intent to except the levy in question from the ten mill limitation and to make it subject to the fifteen mill limitation.

In view of the foregoing, I advise you that the levy authorized by the section in question is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes, provided by section 5649-3a, G. C., and is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C. The levy itself cannot by the terms of the section exceed three mills and the levy, together with all other levies referred to in section 5649-5b, G. C., cannot exceed the fifteen mill limitation provided by that section. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property within the township or townships interested and in which the road to be improved is in whole or part situated, including the taxable property within any municipal corporation or corporations situated in said township or townships. The levy is to be made by the county commissioners and not by trustees of the interested townships.

The first paragraph of section 215 of the act, section 1222, G. C., reads as follows:

> "For the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the county's proportion of the cost and expense of the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of highways under the provisions of this chapter, the county commissioners are hereby authorized to levy a tax, not exceeding one mill, upon all taxable property of the county. Said levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for county purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

The levy authorized by the above quoted provision cannot, under the terms thereof, exceed one mill. It is expressly provided, however, that the levy in question shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for county purposes and subject to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force.

In view of what has already been said in the discussion of other sections, it will be sufficient to observe that the levy now under discussion is not subject to the three mill limitation on levies for county purposes, provided by section 5649-3a, G. C., and is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C. Said levy cannot exceed one mill and, together with the other levies referred to in section 5649-5b, G. C., cannot exceed the fifteen mill limitation provided by that section. This levy is to be made on all the taxable property of the county, including that within any municipal corporation or corporations situated therein.

The second paragraph of section 215 of the act, section 1222, G. C., reads as follows:

"For the purpose of providing a fund for the payment of the proportion of the cost and expense to be paid by the township or townships for the construction, improvement, maintenance or repair of highways under the provisions of this chapter, the township trustees are authorized to levy a tax, not exceeding two mills, upon all taxable property of the township in which such road improvement or some part thereof is situated; such levy shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes and shall be outside of the limitation of two mills for general township purposes, but subject, however, to limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

In view of what has already been said, it is sufficient to observe that the levy authorized by the above quoted provisions is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes, provided by section 5649-3a, G. C., and is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C. The levy in question cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C. The levy is to be made by the township trustees of the interested township or townships upon all the taxable property of such township or townships, including the taxable property within any municipal corporation or corporations, situated within such township or townships.

Section 223 of the act, section 1230, G. C., reads as follows:

"There shall be levied annually a tax of three-tenths of one mill on all the taxable property within the state to be collected as are other taxes due the state, and the proceeds of which shall constitute the state highway improvement fund."

Section 228 of the act, section 1231-2, G. C., reads as follows:

"The annual levy of three-tenths of one mill provided for by this act shall be in addition to all other levies made for any purpose or purposes, and the same shall not be construed as limited, restricted or decreased in amount or otherwise by any existing law or laws."

The above quoted sections authorize and require an annual levy of three-tenths of one mill on all the taxable property within the state, which levy is in addition to all other levies made for any other purpose or purposes and is not subject to the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C., or any other limitation found in the statutes of the state.

The sections next to be considered are sections 238 and 239 of the act, being sections 6956-1 and 3298-18 of the General Code. Section 6956-1, G. C., being section 238 of the act, reads as follows:

> "After the annual estimate for the county has been filed with the county commissioners by the county highway superintendent, and the county commissioners have made such changes and modifications in said estimate, as they deem proper, they shall then make their levy, for the purposes set forth in said estimate upon all the taxable property of the county not exceeding in the aggregate two mills upon each dollar of the taxable property of said county. The board of county commissioners shall provide annually a fund for the repair and maintenance of bridges and county highways. The repair and maintenance fund so provided shall not be less than twenty dollars for each mile of county highways in said county. Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for said purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The provisions of this section shall not, however, prevent the commissioners from using any surplus in the general funds of the county for the purposes set forth in said estimate, or in the repair or maintenance of roads."

The levy provided for by the above quoted section is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C., and for reasons already stated is not subject to the three mill limitation for county purposes provided by section 5649-3a, G. C. Said levy cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C. The levy is to be made on all the taxable property of the county, including any municipal corporations located therein.

The section in question provides for two separate and distinct funds: (a) for the purposes set forth in the annual estimate of the county highway superintendent; (b) not less than twenty dollars per mile for each mile of county highway in the county for the purpose of a repair and maintenance fund. Estimates of the county highway superintendent are subject to change or modification by the county commissioners, but the commissioners must provide at least twenty dollars per mile for the repair and maintenance fund. The commissioners may, however, provide a part or all of the money for the funds referred to in the section in question from any surplus in the general funds of the county. In my opinion the provision for the repair and maintenance fund, under section 6956-1, G. C., of not less than twenty dollars per mile is mandatory and has the effect of preferring the repair and maintenance fund over the other fund. That is to say, as between the two funds to be raised under the section in question, the twenty dollars per mile for the repair and maintenance fund is to be given preference, and if any cut is necessary, it must be made in the first of the two funds above mentioned.

Section 3298-18, G. C., being section 239 of the act, reads as follows:

> "After the annual estimate for each township has been filed with the trustees of the township by the county highway superintendent, they may increase or reduce the amount of any of the items contained in said estimate, and at their first meeting after said estimate is filed, they shall make their levies for the purposes set forth in the estimate upon all of the taxable property of the townships, not exceeding in the aggregate two mills in any one year upon each dollar of the valuation of such taxable property in said township outside of any incorporated village or city. Such levies shall be in addition to all other levies authorized by law for township purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation upon the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force. The amount levied to cover the estimate made for the construction, improvement, maintenance and repair of highways, shall be known as the township highway fund. The provisions of this section shall not prevent the expenditure of any portion of the regular levy of two mills for township purposes, but the levies herein provided for are in addition thereto. Such levy shall amount to at least twenty dollars for each mile of township road within such township."

The levy provided for by the above quoted section is expressly exempted from the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided for by section 5649-2, G. C. The levy cannot exceed two mills and is subject to the fifteen mill limitation. This levy is to be made only on the taxable property of a township outside of any incorporated village or city therein situated. In my opinion the provision that the levy under this section must amount to at least twenty dollars for each mile of township road is mandatory.

"The trustees of a township may levy a tax in such amount, as they determine, to purchase real property, containing suitable stone or gravel, and the necessary machinery for operating the same, when deemed necessary for the construction, improvement, or repair of the public roads within the township to be under the control of the trustees or a person appointed by them. The question of levying such tax, for such purpose, and the amount asked therefor shall be submitted to the qualified electors of the township at a general election. Twenty days' notice thereof shall be previously given by posting in at least ten public places in the township. Such notice shall state specifically the amount to be raised. If a majority of all votes cast at such election are in favor of the proposition, the tax therein provided for shall be considered authorized. Such tax may be levied in addition to all other taxes for township purposes, but subject, however, to the limitation on the combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force."

The section in question does not fix the maximum rate of the taxes therein provided for, it being provided merely that the trustees may levy a tax in such amount as they determine, provided the same be authorized by a vote of the electors. The section expressly provides that the tax shall be in addition to all other taxes for township purposes and the use of the expression "combined maximum rate for all taxes now in force" indicates that the legislature intended to except this tax from the ten mill limitation, but make it subject to the fifteen mill limitation.

I, therefore, advise you that the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C., is the only limitation upon the tax provided for by the section in question.

The further observation should be made that with the exception of the state levy of three-tenths of one mill provided for by sections 1230, G. C., and 1231-2, G. C., all of the tax levies herein discussed must be regarded as levies made under the several sections referred to in section 5649-5b, G. C., and, together with all other levies, made under the several sections referred to in said section 5649-5b, must not exceed fifteen mills.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

DISAPPROVAL, RESOLUTIONS FOR CERTAIN ROAD IMPROVEMENTS IN LAWRENCE AND SANDUSKY COUNTIES.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 17, 1916, transmitting to me for examination final resolutions relating to the following roads:

"Lawrence County—Ohio river road, Sec. 'D,' Pet. No. ——, I. C. H. No. 7.

"Sandusky County—Sandusky-Clyde road, Sec. 'P,' Pet. No. 2891, I. C. H. No. 276."

The resolution relating to the Lawrence county improvement recites that the same was adopted on the 7th day of March, 1916, whereas the certificate of the clerk recites that the same was adopted on the 23rd day of July, 1914. The resolution should be returned to the clerk of the board of commissioners of Lawrence county in order that this discrepancy may be corrected.

The resolution relating to the Sandusky county improvement shows that $17,800.00 is to be paid by the county and $7,700.00 by the state, making a total of $25,500.00. It is recited, however, that the total estimated cost and expense of the improvement amounts to $26,500.00. It will thus be seen that the entire amount to be paid by the state and county is $1,000 less than the total estimated cost and expense. This is probably due to an error in transcribing the resolution and if that be the fact the proper correction should be made.

For the reasons above stated, I am returning the resolutions in question without my approval.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—WHEN IT IS DUTY OF CITY AUDITOR TO ACT AS SECRETARY OF SINKING FUND TRUSTEES.

Under the provisions of section 4509, G. C., it is the duty of the city auditor to act, without additional compensation, as secretary of the trustees of the sinking fund of a city, unless council by ordinance provides for the appointment of a secretary by such trustees, and fixes the compensation, etc., as provided in said section, and in such event the city auditor cannot be appointed as such secretary.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter of March 18, 1916, asking my opinion, received, and is as follows:

> "If the council of a city, under authority of section 4509, G. C., has empowered the trustees of the sinking fund with the authority to elect a secretary, (said ordinance fixing the duties, bonds and compensation of the incumbent of said position) may said trustees select the city auditor, and if so, may he receive the compensation attached to the position?"

The provisions of law relative to the trustees of the sinking fund in municipalities are found in sections 4506, et seq., of the General Code. Section 4509, G. C., provides as follows:

> "The trustees of the sinking fund, immediately after their appointment and qualification, shall elect one of their number as president and another as vice-president, who, in the absence or disability of the president, shall perform his duties and exercise his powers, and such secretary, clerks or employes as council may provide by an ordinance which shall fix their duties, bonds and compensation. Where no clerks or secretary is authorized the auditor of the city or clerk of the village shall act as secretary of the board."

This section specifically provides the circumstances under which the city auditor may act as secretary of the trustees of the sinking fund, to wit: When council has failed to provide for a secretary. It is a well settled maxim of statutory construction that if an affirmative statute directs how a thing may be done, that thing shall not, even though there are no negative words, be done in any other manner. Harlan v. Roberts et al., 2 Dec. Rep., 473. Applying this rule it follows that it is only when council has failed to provide a secretary for the trustees of the sinking fund that there is any authority for the auditor to act as such secretary, and it would not be competent for the trustees to appoint the auditor.

There is no provision for compensation to be paid to the secretary of the trustees of the sinking fund, except that provided by section 4509, G. C., supra, and the compensation there provided is limited to instances in which council provides for the appointment of a secretary and fixes the compensation. It seems clear that the legislature, in enacting section 4509, G. C., proceeded upon the theory that if it were practicable for the auditor to perform the services mentioned it would not be necessary for the council to provide a secretary and fix compensation therefor.

The result of the foregoing is that when the auditor acts as secretary of the trustees of the sinking fund, he does so merely in the performance of a duty conferred upon him by statute, for which no additional compensation is fixed, and it is well settled that in such cases he is not entitled to such compensation. Jones v. Commissioners, 57 O. S., 189, and cases there cited.

I am therefore of the opinion that if the council of a city, under authority of section 4509, G. C., has empowered the trustees of the sinking fund with the authority to elect a secretary and has fixed the compensation of said position, the trustees may not select the city auditor as such secretary, and in the event that the auditor, under section 4509, G. C., acts as such secretary, he is not entitled to receive compensation therefor.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, SYNOPSIS FOR INITIATIVE LAW TO PROVIDE FREE TEXT BOOKS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1916.

MR. C. B. GRONIGER, Gallia Street, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for my certificate a synopsis to be embodied in an initiative petition proposing "An act to provide free text-books and supplies for all pupils in the public schools of Ohio, and creating a state text-book board, and to repeal certain sections of the General Code," said synopsis being in the following words:

> "The law proposed by initiative petition to be submitted to the general assembly of the state of Ohio: 'An act to provide for free text-books and supplies for all pupils in the public schools of Ohio, and to create a state school text-book board, and to repeal sections 7709, 7710, 7711, 7712, 7713, 7714, 7715, 7716, 7717, of the General Code,' is intended to furnish free text-books and supplies for all pupils in the public schools of the state. It is intended thereby to create a state school text board, whose duty it shall be to secure from every publisher, one or more of whose books is used in any of the public schools of the state, and from other publishers, the prices at which they will agree to furnish the books and supplies, beginning August 1, 1917. It shall be left to the board to devise a system of ordering and delivering the books and supplies to the various boards in the state, and of paying the publishers therefor.
> "It further provides that all the expense of the board and the cost of the text-books and supplies shall be paid out of the general revenue fund of the state."

I hereby certify that the foregoing synopsis is a truthful statement of the contents and purpose of the above entitled proposed law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHEN MEMBER OF RURAL BOARD BRINGS ACTION TO ENJOIN ANOTHER MEMBER FROM SERVING ON SUCH BOARD—ATTORNEY'S FEES—NOT PAYABLE FROM SCHOOL FUNDS.

Where a member of the board of education of a rural school district, as a tax payer, brings an action to enjoin another member of said board of education from continuing to serve as such member after his removal from the district, and a permanent injunction is granted, the claim of the attorney representing the plaintiff in said action, for services rendered in connection therewith, may not be allowed by said board of education and paid out of the school funds of said district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 23, 1916.

HON. E. A. SCOTT, Prosecuting Attorney, West Union, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 4th you request my opinion as follows:

"The following are the facts on which I desire your opinion. A member of rural board of education moved into another rural school district and wants to continue as director of the district from which he moved. B member of same board filed a petition in common pleas court asking for injunction and suit is brought by B a tax payer. The injunction is made perpetual and A no longer gets to act as member of board. The attorney for B presented bill to board of education to pay for services. Should board of education pay such a bill?"

Your statement of facts shows that the claim presented to the board of education of the rural school district referred to in your inquiry, by the attorney who represented the plaintiff in the action to enjoin the member of said board of education who removed from said district from continuing to act as such member after said removal, was for services rendered by said attorney to said plaintiff as an individual and as a tax payer, and that said services were not rendered to said board of education.

While it appears that said plaintiff was a member of said board of education, this fact is not material in view of the fact that said board of education made no contract of employment with said attorney and was in no way responsible for the contract between said plaintiff and said attorney.

I find no provision of the statutes authorizing the plaintiff as a tax payer to request the prosecuting attorney of the county to bring the action above referred to and, upon the failure of said official to comply with said request, authorizing said plaintiff to bring said action and, upon the determination of the same in his favor, allowing his costs including reasonable compensation to his attorney. It follows that even if said plaintiff had made such request upon the prosecuting attorney, upon the refusal of said official to bring said action said plaintiff could not be allowed his costs including reasonable compensation to his attorney out of the funds of the school district mentioned in your inquiry.

If said board of education had determined by resolution to bring said action the prosecuting attorney of the county is its proper legal adviser under section 4761, G. C., and would have been required by provision of said section to represent it in said action.

It is unnecessary, however, to pass on the question of the right of said board of education to call on the prosecuting attorney of the county to represent it in civil actions brought by or against it, or in case of his neglect or refusal so to do, to contract with an attorney to represent it under provision of section 2918, G. C., for the reason already stated that said board of education is in no way responsible for the employment of the attorney mentioned in your inquiry, and is under no legal or moral obligation to pay the claim therein referred to.

Your question is therefore answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

OFFICES INCOMPATIBLE—MEMBER OF COUNTY BOARD OF REVISION—TRUSTEE OF OHIO SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' ORPHANS' HOME, XENIA, OHIO.

A member of a county board of revision cannot hold the office of trustee of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, Ohio, the same being prohibited under the provisions of section 5590, G. C., 106 O. L., 270.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS, Governor of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR:—Your favor of March 21st, relative to holding the position of trustee of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, Ohio, and at the same time being a member of the Lucas county board of revision, to which latter position General W. V. McMaken has just been appointed, has been received, and is as follows:

> "Something like one year ago I appointed to membership on the board of trustees of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, Ohio, General W. V. McMaken, of Toledo, Ohio. Some weeks ago General McMaken was appointed a member of the Lucas county board of revision by the state tax commission of Ohio. Some question has arisen as to whether under the law he can serve in these two capacities. I therefore very respectfully request your opinion on the following matter: 'Can a person lawfully serve as a member of the board of tax revision for a county of this state and also at the same time as a member of the board of trustees of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia, Ohio?

While it of course has nothing whatever to do with your opinion in the matter I venture to say that I should be sorry indeed to have General McMaken leave either one of these positions. However, whether he is to retain both places is a matter to be determined not by my wishes, but by the law.'"

I note from the statement contained in your letter that General McMaken was appointed about a year ago trustee of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia under the provisions of section 1931-1 of the General Code (103 O. L., 159), and that he has recently been appointed as member of the county board of revision for Lucas county.

Your attention is invited to the provisions of section 95 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, so-called, which is section 5590 of the General Code, to be found on page 270 of 106 Ohio Laws, and which is as follows:

"An assessor, member of a county board of revision or an assistant, expert, clerk or other employe of a county board of revision shall not, during his term of office, or period of service or employment, as fixed by law, or prescribed by the tax commission of Ohio, hold any other public office of trust or profit, except offices in the state militia or the office of notary public."

In view of the express provisions of the section quoted above it is my opinion that a person cannot lawfully serve as a member of the board of revision for a county of this state, and at the same time hold the position of member of the board of trustees of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home at Xenia.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—TWO ADJOINING VILLAGE SCHOOL DISTRICTS ARE WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO UNITE FOR HIGH SCHOOL PURPOSES, ONLY.

The boards of education of two adjoining village school districts have no authority in law to unite said village school districts for high school purposes, only.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1916.

HON. GEORGE W. PORTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Greenville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 18th, which is as follows:

"Section 7669 of the General Code provides for the uniting of districts for high school purposes.

"I want to know if two adjoining village school districts, one of which is located in Darke county and one in Preble county, can unite for high school purposes.

"The question that puzzles me is that the statute provides that a rural and village school district can unite, but is silent as to whether or not two village school districts can unite for such purposes.

"The other question is, can two village school districts unite for high school purposes, said districts being located in different counties, although these districts join each other?"

Section 7669, G. C., (104 O. L., 229) provides in part:

"The boards of education of two or more adjoining rural school districts, or of a rural and village school district by a majority vote of the full membership of each board, may unite such districts for high school purposes. * * *"

Under the above provision of said section 7669, G. C., the right to unite for high school purposes is limited to the boards of education of two or more adjoining rural school districts, or of a rural and village school district.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your first question, that the boards of education of two adjoining village school districts may not, under said provision of said statute, unite said districts for high school purposes.

I understand from your second question that the two adjoining village school districts therein referred to are located in different county school districts. This fact, however, would not be material as affecting the answer to your first question.

While the union of said village school districts for all school purposes could be affected under provision of section 4696, G. C., (106 O. L., 397) provided either one or both of said districts are subject to county supervision, I find no provision of the statutes under authority of which the boards of education of said village school districts may unite said districts for high school purposes only. Your second question must therefore be answered in the negative.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF LIBRARY TRUSTEES—LIBRARY FUND—CUSTODIAN OF FUND—SEE OPINION NO. 1059, NOVEMBER 30, 1915.

The fund designated as the library fund in section 7640, G. C., remains in the custody of the treasurer or depositary of the board of education making the levy which creates said fund until it is expended by the board of library trustees.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1916.

HON. C. B. GALBREATH, State Librarian, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 22, 1916, as follows:

"I have a request for an opinion on sections 7636 and 7637 of the General Code, relative to the organization, powers and duties of a board of library trustees authorized by these sections.

"Should the fund set aside for library purposes under section 7640 be held by the board of library trustees or by the treasurer of the board of education of the school district? I understand that practices of library boards operating under these sections are not uniform in the state, and I am asking you in the interest of uniformity and an official interpretation of the law to state whether or not the board of library trustees, or a treasurer appointed by said board, may hold the funds to be distributed on warrant of said board 'signed by the president and secretary thereof.'"

Replying to your foregoing inquiries I must advise that the fund designated in section 7640, G. C., is held by and remains in the custody of the treasurer or depository of the board of education making the levy which creates such fund until it is paid out upon warrants issued by the library trustees and signed by the president and secretary thereof as provided in said section..

There is no statutory authority for the election of a treasurer of said board of library trustees, nor is said board by any statutory provision whatever given the custody of said fund.

I am enclosing herewith a copy of opinion No. 1059 rendered to the Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, under date of November 30, 1915, in which the matters covered by your inquiries, as well as the various sections pertaining to the organization of a board of library trustees, are fully treated, which renders unnecessary further discussion here.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC PRINTING—FRANKLIN COUNTY CONSERVANCY DISTRICT REPORT NOT AUTHORIZED TO BE PRINTED UNDER SECTION 173-2, G. C., 106 O. L., 514.

Only such reports as are to be paid for by funds out of the state treasury are required to be submitted to the commissioners of public printing for approval before publication under section 173-2, G. C., 106 O. L., 514.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1916.

Commissioners of Public Printing, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a communication from the secretary of the Franklin county conservancy district, in which inquiry is made whether publication of the report and recommendations of the engineers of said district must be submitted to the commissioners of public printing for approval before publication of such report can be had, as provided in section 173-2 of the General Code (106 O. L., 514).

Inasmuch as the inquiry refers to a section of the General Code relative to the duties of the printing commission, I am addressing an opinion to you.

Section 173-2, G. C., above referred to, provides as follows:

"No officer, board or commission, shall print or cause to be printed at the public expense, any report, bulletin or pamphlet, unless such report, bulletin or pamphlet be first submitted to and the publication thereof approved by the commissioners of public printing. If such commission shall approve the publication thereof, it shall determine the form of such publication and the number of copies thereof, provided that in all cases the commissioners of public printing shall cause their action thereon to be entered upon the minutes of their proceedings.

"If such approval is given, the commissioners shall cause the same to be printed, and may authorize such printing to be done at any penal, correctional or benevolent institution of the state having a printing department of sufficient equipment therefor; and when printed, such publications, other than the Ohio General Statistics, shall be delivered to such officer, board or commission for distribution by him or it."

This section is supplementary to section 173 of the General Code, as amended in 106 O. L., 513, and relates only to reports which are to be paid for out of the state treasury and has no reference whatever to such reports as referred to in the letter of the secretary of the Franklin county conservancy district. It is my opinion, therefore, that such report does not have to be submitted to the commissioners of public printing and their approval secured before the same may be published.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—TERRITORY MAY NOT BE TRANSFERRED TO AN ADJOINING COUNTY DISTRICT AFTER PROCEEDINGS TO CENTRALIZE SCHOOLS OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICTS HAVE BEEN COMMENCED.

The board of education of a county school district may not, under provision of section 4692, G. C., 106 O. L., 397, transfer territory from a rural school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of said county school district after proceedings have been commenced to centralize the schools of said rural school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 24, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter under date of March 11th, which is as follows:

"I will ask you to give me your opinion on the question stated below:

"In an attempt to rearrange the territory under the several boards of education in the northwestern section of Madison county a joint committee was apponited by the president of the county board of education to make recommendations in regard to the transfer of territory. This committee, composed of the presidents of the Monroe and Somerford rural boards of education, two members of the county board of education, and the county superintendent, recommended a transfer of certain territory from Somerford and Deercreek rural districts to Monroe rural district, and of certain territory generally known as the Williams district from Monroe rural to Pike rural. The transfer from Somerford and Deercreek rurals to Monroe rural was made on motion of the county board of education. The bounds of the district to be transferred to Pike rural were agreed upon and a map made and the motion was put in the county board of education meeting, but while all members were willing for the transfer to be made, at the request of the Monroe rural board of education the motion was tabled until thirty days might elapse for the remonstrance to be filed against the transfer from Somerford and Deercreek rurals to Monroe rural, the understanding of all concerned, relying upon the opinion of the attorney-general given to the Pike township board of education through Edmund A. Jones, March 6, 1905, being that the transfer should be made at the end of that period.

"When that period of time had elapsed the call for the centralization election by Monroe rural district had already been made and at the request of the Monroe rural board and with the understanding that the transfer could be made after centralization was voted, action was postponed until the election might have taken place. Pike rural district is already centralized. Under the above conditions can the county board of education now carry out the original understanding and transfer the so-called Williams district from Monroe rural district to Pike rural district?"

I am informed that the transfers of territory from Somerford and Deercreek township rural school districts to Monroe township rural school district were made subsequent to the date when the act of the general assembly (106 O. L., 396) became effective. It follows that in making said transfers the board of education of Madison county school district acted under authority of section 4692, G. C. (106 O. L., 497), which provides in part as follows:

"The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer."

While you state that the bounds of the territory comprising that part of Monroe township rural school district which it was proposed should be transferred to Pike township rural school district, were agreed upon and that a map of said territory was made, it appears that no official action of the county board of education was taken to make said transfer prior to the time when proceedings to centralize Monroe township rural school district were commenced. On the contrary it appears that at a meeting of the county board of education the first action to be taken by said county board under the above provision of section 4692, G. C., for the purpose of making said transfer, i. e., the passing of a resolution by said county board to make said transfer and describing the territory to be transferred, was postponed for thirty days and that during that interim the question of centralizing the schools of Monroe township rural school district was submitted to the qualified electors of said district under provision of section 4726, G. C. (104 O. L., 139).

From the statement of facts in connection with the question submitted to me by your predecessor, Hon. Frank W. Miller, as to the right of the boards of education of Madison and Champaign county school districts to act jointly under provision of section 4696, G. C. (106 O. L., 397), on a petition to transfer a part of said Monroe township rural school district in said Madison county school district to said Champaign county school district, after the centralization proceedings, above referred to, were commenced, it appeared that the vote of the electors of said Monroe township rural school district on the propositions to centralize the schools of said district and to issue bonds for one or more of the purposes authorized by provision of section 7625, G. C., was in favor of said propositions.

In opinion No. 1299 of this department rendered to you in answer to Mr. Miller's question 1 held that said county boards of education were without authority to act under provision of said section 4696, G. C., on said petition filed with said board of education of said Madison county school district after the commencement of the aforesaid centralization proceedings. Careful consideration was given to the holding of the court in the case of Fulks et al., v. Wright, 72 O. S., 547, which fully supported the conclusion reached in said opinion as above expressed.

While it was held in an opinion rendered by this department to Hon. Edmund A. Jones, state commissioner of common schools, under date of March 6, 1905, that "after a vote upon the question of centralization has been taken as provided by law and results in favor of centralization, the school district is still a township school district and the limitation of three years affects only the question as to the resubmission of the question of centralization and does not in any wise affect the authority of the boards of education to act under sections 3894 and 3895 (of the Revised Statutes) in transferring territory," said opinion was rendered prior to the commencement of the action in the common pleas court in the case of Fulks et al. v. Wright, supra, in which case the holding of the supreme court is contrary to the conclusion in said opinion expressed as above set forth.

In keeping with my former holding and in view of the holding of the court in the case of Fulks et al. v. Wright, supra, I am of the opinion, in answer to your inquiry, that inasmuch as no official action was taken by the board of education of Madison county school district to transfer a part of said Monroe township rural school district to said Pike township rural school district prior to the commencement of the aforesaid centralization proceedings, said county board of education may not now proceed under section 4692, G. C., to make said transfer of territory.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of the following letter from the prosecuting attorney of the municipal court of Cincinnati:

> "The solicitor of Cincinnati, by ordinance, delegates one of his assistants as the prosecuting attorney of the municipal court, and I, having been so appointed, prosecute all cases in that court, both for violation of municipal ordinances and for violations of state laws; in other words, all prosecutions in which the state of Ohio is plaintiff are handled by me for the state of Ohio in that court and I receive compensation for my services partly from the city and partly from the county for handling state and city cases.

"Recently I tried the case of state of Ohio v. Ned Rumpf, manager of the Wardmen's Social Club. The testimony presented involved the club question, and I have received a communication from the Hamilton county liquor licensing board enclosing a communication from the state liquor licensing board to the Hamilton county liquor licensing board, dated March 18, 1916, a copy of which is attached hereto. In that letter the subject is considered as to taking said case to the upper courts.

"Under section 13682, G. C., error could not be prosecuted because the case was dismissed in the trial court, but I would like to have your opinion and advice, in the event that the Hamilton county liquor licensing board should want me to present exceptions to the court for filing in the supreme court, whether or not under sections 13681 and 13682, G. C., I, as prosecuting attorney under the solicitor of the city of Cincinnati, could present exceptions to a judge of the municipal court of Cincinnati and present the said exceptions again to the supreme court, as provided in section 13683, G. C. It has never been done within my knowledge, or within the knowledge of any one I know, and I would like to have your opinion as to my right to take exceptions and have the supreme court pass on same."

Enclosed with said request for opinion is a copy of a letter from your board to the Hamilton county liquor licensing board asking that board to take up with the prosecuting attorney the matter of error proceedings in the case referred to.

As this is a matter that relates to the duties of your board I am addressing the opinion to you and sending a copy of same to Mr. Morrisey.

The prosecution referred to by Mr. Morrisey was for a misdemeanor and Mr. Morrisey's question is answered by the case of the State of Ohio v. Mansfield, 89 O. S., page 20, the third branch of the syllabus of which reads as follows:

"Sections 13682, 13683 and 13684, General Code, in so far as they purport to confer upon the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in misdemeanors, are inconsistent with the constitution as amended and, therefore, have no further force or effect. The question of the jurisdiction of this court under the provisions of these sections in felony cases is not involved in this case and is not here decided."

Answering Mr. Morrisey's question specifically, there is no authority under sections 13681 and 13682 of the General Code of Ohio for a prosecuting attorney to present exceptions in a misdemeanor case to the supreme court of the state.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF SCHOOL EXAMINERS—WHEN BOARD IS REQUIRED TO GRANT AN APPLICANT A ONE-YEAR CERTIFICATE WHO HAS NOT HAD PREVIOUS TEACHING EXPERIENCE.

The effect of the provision of the first part of section 7822, G. C., 106 O. L., 340, is to extend the authority of and impose the duty on a county board of school examiners to examine an applicant without previous professional training and without any teaching experience, and if said applicant complies with all the rules and regulations of said board applicable to applicants for a one-year certificate, and if upon investigation said board finds that said applicant is not less than eighteen years of age and is of good moral character and upon such examination in the subjects prescribed by section 7830, G. C., to be taught in any elementary school supported wholly or in part by the state in any village or rural school district, said applicant makes the necessary grades required by said examining board for the issuance of a one-year certificate, it becomes the duty of said board of school examiners to issue a one-year certificate to such applicant in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing the issuance of such certificate.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 25, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter under date of March 18, 1916, you request my opinion as follows:

> "Section 7822, General Code, provides with the exceptions stated farther on in the section than the quotation that 'Applicants for a one-year elementary certificate shall be admitted to examination, and if found proficient may be granted a certificate to teach in the public schools * * * without previous professional training. * * *' May a county board of examiners construe this to mean that if such an examinee without professional training secures in the examination the grades regularly required by their rules they may or may not at their discretion issue a teacher's certificate to such person? In other words, they hold that the word 'may' means that the certificate to such person may be denied regardless of the grades obtained on the examination, if they see fit to deny it. Is this construction tenable or is the county board obliged to issue a certificate to such an applicant in case the applicant makes the grades required by their rules and is of good moral character?"

You have quoted that part of section 7822, G. C. (106 O. L., 340) material to your inquiry. The above provision of said statute requires county boards of school examiners to admit to examination applicants without previous professional training. Taken in connection with the further provision of said section that:

> "Applicants for a one-year or a three-year elementary certificate who have taught in the public schools for one school year previous to the time of such application, unless said applicant is a graduate of a college or university of approved educational standing, shall possess an amount of professional training consisting of class room instruction in a recognized institution for the training of teachers, not less than the following: * * *"

it is evident that the provision of the first part of section 7822, G. C., as quoted by you gives to those applicants without previous professional training and without teaching experience the same right to take an examination to qualify for a one-year certificate as is afforded to an applicant for a one-year certificate who has taught in the public schools for one year, previous to his application and who is required by the further provision of the statute to be a graduate of a college or university of approved educational standing or in lieu of this qualification to have the professional training prescribed by the latter part of said section.

Under provision of section 7822, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 104, and as in force prior to the date when said section as amended in 106 O. L., became effective, all applicants for a one-year or three-year certificate had to possess the amount of professional training prescribed by provision of the latter part of said section as then in force.

I am of the opinion that it was the intention of the legislature in amending said section 7822, G. C., so as to give to those applicants without previous professional training and without any teaching experience the same right to take an examination to qualify for a one-year certificate as is afforded by the further provision of said section as last amended to applicants having one year's experience as teachers and having the additional qualifications prescribed by said further provisions of said statute, and to place the former class of applicants on an equal footing with the latter class of applicants above referred to. It necessarily follows that the county board of school examiners may not discriminate between the two classes of applicants solely on the ground that applicants of the former class are without previous professional training.

The effect of the first part of said section 7822, G. C., as last amended is to extend the authority of county boards of school examiners and to make it their duty to admit to examination the former class of applicants above referred to. While it may be argued that the use of the word "may" in the provision of the first part of said section 7822, G. C., as quoted by you makes said provision of said statute merely directory and permits the county board of school examiners in the exercise of its discretion to refuse to issue a one-year certificate to an applicant of said former class on the sole ground that such applicant is without previous professional training, I think in view of what has already been said that such an interpretation would defeat the plain legislative intent as above expressed.

As has already been stated the effect of the provision of the statute in question is to extend the authority of and impose the duty on county boards of school examiners to examine an applicant of the former class above referred to, and if said applicant complies with all the rules and regulations of said board applicable to said class, and if upon investigation said board finds that said applicant is not less than eighteen years of age and is of good moral character and upon such examination in the subjects prescribed by section 7830, G. C., to be taught in any elementary school supported wholly or in part by the state in any village or rural school district, said applicant makes the necessary grades required by said examining board for the issuance of a one-year certificate, I am of the opinion that it becomes the duty of said board of school examiners to issue a one-year certificate to such applicant in compliance with the requirements of the statutes governing the issuance of such certificate.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION—THE PRINCIPLE THAT A CORPORATION MAY NOT BE ORGANIZED TO DO MANUFACTURING AND MERCANTILE BUSINESS DOES NOT APPLY TO PUBLIC UTILITY COMPANIES—CERTIFICATE OF AMENDMENT OF THE CANTON ELECTRIC COMPANY, APPROVED.

A public utility company incorporated for the main or principal purpose of supplying light, heat and power by means of certain agencies may be authorized, by amendment of its articles of incorporation, to buy or otherwise acquire, as well as produce or manufacture, the service supplied by it.

The secretary of state advised to receive and record the certificate of amendment of The Canton Electric Company.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 25, 1916.

HON. CHAS. Q. HILDEBRANT, Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 22, 1916, requesting my opinion as follows:

> "We are herewith enclosing draft of a proposed amendment to the articles of incorporation of THE CANTON ELECTRIC COMPANY, seeking to amend its purpose clause, to wit:
> "'Sixth. The purpose for which the corporation is formed is to produce, buy, acquire, lease, use, furnish, supply, sell, transmit and distribute light, heat and power generated by means of gas, electricity, steam or hot water, or any or all of them, and in connection therewith to construct, acquire, purchase, use, sell, lease, operate or manage any works, plants, constructions or parts thereof for the production, use, transmission, distribution, regulation, control or application of gas, electricity, steam or hot water. The company may conduct its business in the state of Ohio, and, if permitted by law, in other states of the United States. The provisions of this article sixth shall supersede and be substituted for paragraph third of the articles of incorporation of The Canton Light, Heat and Power Company and paragraph third of the articles of incorporation of The Central Heating and Lighting Company.'
> "We have refused to accept for filing amendment in such form for the reason that a former attorney-general of Ohio has given an opinion that a manufacturing incorporation is not permitted to engage in the business of buying and selling of the same class of production manufactured by others.
> "We are submitting the aforesaid question to you for an opinion.
> "P. S. We are also enclosing brief of Lynch, Day, Fimple and Lynch, attorneys for The Canton Electric Company."

Former attorneys-general of Ohio have uniformly held that an Ohio corporation, by reason of the limitations in section 8623 of the General Code, can be organized for only one principal or main purpose with such incidental powers, which may be expressed in its purpose clause, as are necessary to enable it to properly carry out such principal or main purpose.

In the opinion referred to in your letter given by former Attorney-General Ellis on February 5, 1907, to the then secretary of state, Mr. Ellis had under consideration the purpose clause of a corporation which sought to organize to carry on a manufacturing and mercantile business. The conclusion expressed was that the two purposes were separate and unrelated, and that the corporation could not under the statute acquire both powers.

Under date of December 5, 1910, former Attorney-General Denman rendered an opinion to the then secretary of state, in which he held that,

> "A manufacturing company has undoubted power to supply its customers with articles it manufactures in order to carry out contracts made by it as a manufacturer, but the power to deal generally in certain articles in a mercantile way is quite separate and distinct from that of manufacturing the same article, and the two purposes cannot be joined in one clause."

The Canton Electric Company, in the certificate of amendment presented, seeks, among other things, to secure broader powers in its purpose clause. The principal or main purpose set forth in the proposed amendment is neither manufacturing nor mercantile. The Canton Electric Company is a public utility company, and its main purpose is to "supply light, heat and power" by means of certain agencies. They are related powers which may be exercised by an Ohio corporation. The other language of its purpose clause giving it authority to "produce, buy, acquire, lease, use, furnish, sell, transmit, and distribute" such light, heat and power "generated by means of gas, electricity, steam or hot water, or any or all of them, etc.," are simply incidental to the main purpose of supplying the service referred to, and I have little doubt that the corporation could exercise any of these incidental powers even though not specifically recited in its articles of incorporation.

A corporation such as The Canton Electric Company is subject to control by the Public Utilities Commission, and must of necessity be also subject to the terms and conditions of its local franchise. It is not in any sense a manufacturing corporation nor a mercantile corporation, but, as stated above, is a public service corporation having authority to supply certain kinds of service to a limited body of consumers. Neither the state nor the consumers of the service furnished are concerned in the source from which the service is derived.

I do not believe that the principle laid down in the opinion referred to in your letter, is applicable to the purpose clause contained in the certificate of amendment presented by The Canton Electric Company, and I am of the opinion that said certificate should be accepted and recorded by you.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

FARMERS' INSTITUTES—MONEYS RECEIVED BY DEAN OF COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE OF OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY ARE NOT TO BE PAID INTO STATE TREASURY—IT IS A TRUST FUND.

Moneys received by the dean of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University under section 9918, G. C., are to be retained by him as a trust fund for the purposes specified in section 9920, G. C., and not paid into the state treasury.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 25, 1916.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary Board of Trustees, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 30, 1915, you wrote me as follows:

> "By act of the legislature (O. L. 106, pp. 356-359) the farmers' institutes were placed under the direction and control of the Ohio State University.
> "Appropriations for conducting these institutes were made to the agricultural commission, and at a recent meeting a part of these appropriations was transferred from the state board of agriculture to the Ohio State University.
> "The opinion of the attorney-general is hereby respectfully requested on the following points:
> "1. In Sec. 9918—When certain conditions have been complied with, the county auditor is required to draw an order on the county treasurer in favor of the dean of the college of agriculture.
> "A. Has the board of trustees of the Ohio State University authority to receive this money from the dean of the college of agriculture?
> "B. If so, does such money come under the so-called Mooney law, and to what fund shall it be credited?
> "C. If not, what disposition shall the dean of the college of agriculture make with these orders?"

Section 9918 of the General Code, as found in 106 O. L., 356, provides that when annual farmers' institute meetings have been held in accordance with the rules of the trustees of the Ohio State University, "the dean of the college of agriculture shall issue certificates, one to the president of the farmers' institute society and one to the county auditor, setting forth such facts. On the presentation of such certificates to the county auditor, he, each year, shall draw orders on the treasurer of the county as follows: One in favor of the dean of the college of agriculture of Ohio State University for one hundred and seventy-five dollars * * *."

Section 9920, G. C., (106 O. L., 357) provides as follows:

> "At the annual farmers' institute meetings held as herein provided, and under the auspices of the trustees of the Ohio State University, the department shall furnish lecturers or speakers whose compensation and expenses it shall pay. A majority of these lecturers and speakers shall be practical farmers."

Both of these sections are but amendments of former laws relative to farmers' institutes.

There is no provision in the law as to the disposition to be made of the orders drawn on the treasurers of the counties in favor of the dean of the college of agriculture, and section 24, G. C., which provides for the payment into the state treasury of moneys, does not cover this matter, as it only seeks to cover state officers, state institutions, departments, boards, commissions, colleges, normal schools and universities. The dean of the college of agriculture is simply an employe of the trustees of the Ohio State University, although he is recognized in various statutes as an independent officer, in that he was made, under the old law, a member of the agricultural commission of Ohio, and thereby the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University was recognized as a distinct department.

There being no specific provision of law as to the disposition of this money after the same reaches the hands of the dean of the college of agriculture, and the amount not being required to be paid into the state treasury under section 24, G. C., an examination of sections 9918 and 9920, G. C., prior to enactment in their present form will disclose the legislative intent.

Section 9918, G. C., as enacted at the time of the codification of 1910, provided that the order for the one hundred and seventy-five dollars should be drawn in favor of the president of the state board of agriculture, and section 9920, G. C., provided that at the annual farmers' institute meetings held as provided therein and under the auspices of the state board of agriculture, such board shall furnish lecturers or speakers whose compensation and expenses it shall pay.

These two sections were amended in 1913, at the time of the creation of the agricultural commission of Ohio. It was provided in section 9918, G. C., (103 O. L., 339) that the order on the county treasurer should be in favor of the president of the agricultural commission, and section 9920, G. C., (103 O. L., 339) provided that at the annual farmers' institute meetings held as provided therein and under the auspices of the agricultural commission, the commission shall furnish lecturers or speakers whose compensation and expenses it shall pay.

The sections as amended in 1915 (106 O. L., 357) have been hereinbefore set out. It is to be noted that under section 9918, G. C., the order is to be drawn in favor of the dean of the college of agriculture, and section 9920, G. C., provides that at the annual farmers' institute meetings held as therein provided and under the auspices of the trustees of the Ohio State University, the department shall furnish lecturers or speakers whose compensation and expenses it shall pay.

The legislature having provided that the order shall be drawn in favor of the dean of the college of agriculture under section 9918, G. C., and under section 9920, G. C., having provided that the department shall furnish the lecturers or speakers, I am of the opinion that the "department" referred to in section 9920, means the college of agriculture, especially so since the statute states that the meetings are to be held under the auspices of the trustees of the Ohio State University, and that the department shall furnish the speakers. Had the legislature intended that the trustees of the Ohio State University should pay the speakers, it would not, as I see it, have used the word "department," but would have repeated the words "trustees of the Ohio State University." Therefore, I am of the opinion that the orders drawn in favor of the dean of the college of agriculture are not to be turned into the state treasury, but are to be retained by him, and out of the amount so received by him he is to furnish the speakers and lecturers for the annual farmers' institute meetings.

In so answering the above I do not wish it to be understood that the legislature cannot contribute to the fund in the hands of the dean of the college of agriculture by appropriation. If the legislature appropriates to the Ohio State University moneys to be used for the purposes of section 9920, G. C., that money is to be added to the money which is retained by the dean of the college of agriculture as a trust fund, and the two sums may be used in the payment of speakers and lecturers.

Specifically answering your question, therefore, I am of the opinion that the board of trustees of the Ohio State University is not authorized to receive the money in question from the dean of the college of agriculture, but that the dean should hold the same in trust for the uses and purposes for which the same is received.

Your question B, therefore, does not require an answer.

In answer to question C, the dean of the college of agriculture should retain the money so received by him, to be paid out for the furnishing of lecturers or speakers at the annual farmers' institute meetings held under the auspices of the trustees of the Ohio State University.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION FUND—MONEYS RECEIVED BY STATE TREASURER FROM COUNTIES AND FEDERAL GOVERNMENT FOR ABOVE PURPOSE NOT PAYABLE INTO STATE TREASURY—IT IS A TRUST FUND.

Moneys received by the state treasurer from counties and the federal government under the provisions of section 9921-1, G. C., 106 O. L., 356, are not payable into the state treasury, but are to be held by such treasurer as a trust fund for the purposes mentioned in the act.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 25, 1916.

HON. CARL E. STEEB, Secretary Board of Trustees Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Under date of December 30, 1915, you wrote me as follows:

"Section 2 of an act passed by the 81st general assembly, May 19, 1915, (O. L. 106, pp. 357-359) establishes an agricultural extension fund and provides for county agent work.

"Sandusky county has just sent to the state treasurer an order for $200.00 under section 9921-4.

"The opinion of the attorney-general is respectfully requested on the following points:

"1. Section 9921-1 states that all monies from counties, etc., shall be set aside and designated as 'the agricultural extension fund,' it also provides that the trustees of the Ohio State University shall expend, in accordance with law, all moneys in the state treasury to the credit of the agricultural extension fund.

"A. Is the money so received from the counties to be added to the amount already provided for in the general appropriation bill for agricultural extension work?" If so, is it appropriated in this act and now available for use?

"B. Section 9921-4 provides that the auditor of state shall issue a warrant in favor of the Ohio State University. When this is done, what becomes of the money? Is it to be paid back into the state treasury by the university?

"The last sentence of this section provides that if the money is not used before the expiration of two years, it shall revert to the county from which it came.

"How and by whom is the money to be returned?"

Section 9921-1 of the General Code, (106 O. L., 356) to which you refer in your inquiry, provides as follows:

"The state treasurer shall receive and place to the credit of the Ohio State University all moneys appropriated and apportioned to Ohio by the United States * * *. The money so appropriated and apportioned by the United States, together with any money appropriated by the state and any county or counties, to make available the aid extended by the United States in the aforesaid act, shall be set aside and designated as 'the agricultural extension fund,' and used in accordance with the provisions of this act for the extension service of the college of agriculture of the Ohio State University. The trustees of the Ohio State University shall expend, in accordance with law, all moneys in the state treasury to the credit of the agricultural extension fund."

Section 9921-2, G. C. (106 O. L., 357) provides that:

"From moneys appropriated by the state for the employment of agricultural agents, not to exceed three thousand dollars in any one year shall be expended for any county that shall raise at least one thousand dollars for the support of an agricultural agent for one year, and shall give satisfactory assurance to the trustees of the Ohio State University that a like sum shall be raised for a second year, or shall establish and maintain a county experiment farm as provided in the statutes."

Section 9921-4, G. C., (106 O. L., 358) provides that each county of the state is authorized to appropriate annually not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars, for the maintenance, etc., of a county agricultural agent, and the county commissioners are authorized to appropriate said sum of money and transmit the same to the state treasurer, who shall place it to the credit of the agricultural extension fund to be paid for the purposes aforesaid, on warrant issued by the auditor of state in favor of the Ohio State University.

It further provides that:

"If for any reason it shall not be used as contemplated in this act before the expiration of two years, it shall revert to the county from which it came."

A careful examination of section 9921-1, G. C., will disclose that the statute contemplates that the state treasurer is to receive the money appropriated by the United States government and the money appropriated by the counties, and place it to the credit of the Ohio State University.

Ordinarily, a provision in a statute that the state treasurer is to receive money and place it to the credit of a particular department or institution of the state is construed to mean that the same shall be placed in the state treasury to the credit of a particular department or institution; yet in this instance we must look to the entire act for the intention of the legislature.

In the first place, it must be borne in mind that the moneys paid by the counties and the federal government to the state are not paid to the state by way of revenue to the state, but are paid solely to the state in trust for the specific purposes mentioned; and furthermore, that in so far as the money appropriated by the counties is concerned, it is specifically provided that if the same be not used within two years, it is to be returned to the counties from which it came.

The provision that the money shall be returned within two years, unless the same is used for the purposes specified, is entirely inconsistent with the idea that the money is to be paid into the state treasury. It is only consistent with the idea that the money is not to be so paid, but is to be retained separate and apart from the moneys in the state treasury, in order that, if the same be not used for the purpose for which it was received, it might be returned.

The only right to pay moneys out of the state treasury is by appropriation, and it could well be argued that unless there was a provision that this money was to be returned to the counties from which it came, if not used, it would render the act unconstitutional. It is a familiar rule of law that courts will give to an act a construction which sustains its constitutionality rather than to declare the same unconstitutional, if the act is susceptible of such construction.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that the moneys so received are to be received by the state treasurer as custodian, and are not to be paid into the state treasury, and that the state treasurer shall hold such money in what the legislature has designated as "the agricultural extension fund."

The last sentence of section 9921-1 provides that the trustees of the Ohio State University shall expend, in accordance with law, all moneys in the state treasury to the credit of the agricultural extension fund. This refers solely to the appropriations made by the legislature out of state revenues in aid of the specific purposes for which the statutes were passed, and does not refer to the moneys that are received from either the federal government or the various counties.

This is clearly the intention of the statute for the reason that section 9921-4 provides that the moneys received from the counties shall be paid out on warrant issued by the auditor of state in favor of the Ohio State University.

It would not have been necessary to make the provision just foregoing mentioned if the moneys were to be paid into the state treasury, for the reason that the last sentence of section 9921-1 would have covered the entire matter.

For the foregoing reasons, I am of the opinion that the moneys paid by the counties and the federal government to the state treasurer are to be held by him solely as custodian, and should not be paid by him into the state treasury; and that said moneys should be paid out of such trust fund so held by the state treasurer as custodian on warrant issued by the auditor of state in favor of the Ohio State University, when called upon by the trustees of said university for the same; and that the moneys appropriated by the legislature out of the general revenues of the state for the purposes mentioned are to be paid out as provided in section 9921-1, G. C., "in accordance with law."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY CHILDREN'S HOME—REFUSAL OF BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES TO RENEW CERTIFICATE—COUNTY AUDITOR NOT PROHIBITED FROM ISSUING WARRANTS FOR SUPPORT OF HOME FOR BILLS CONTRACTED SUBSEQUENT TO REVOKING CERTIFICATE.

Refusal of the board of state charities to renew its certificate to a county children's home, as provided in section 1352-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 865, does not operate to prohibit the county auditor issuing his warrants on vouchers drawn against funds appropriated for the support of such home, to pay bills incurred after the expiration of the former certificate of the state board of charities.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 27, 1916.

HON. A. C. MCDOUGAL, Prosecuting Attorney, Woodsfield, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of March 17, 1916, asking my opinion, received, and is as follows:

> "The board of state charities, at their session February 3, 1916, refused to renew their certificate of indorsement of the Monroe county children's home, pursuant to sections 1352 and 1352-1 of the General Code, the last certificate having expired February 1, 1916.
> "The Monroe county children's home not having been reinstated as an accredited institution, has the county auditor legal authority to draw his warrant on the county treasurer for bills allowed by the trustees of the children's home contracted since the expiration of the last certificate?"

Section 3077, G. C., 103 O. L., 899, provides for the establishment of children's homes by counties, and provides that the question of establishing such home and issuing bonds therefor shall be submitted to a vote of the electors of the county.

Following sections provide the further procedure, the appointment of trustees and superintendents, and fix their duties, compensation, etc.

Section 3104, G. C., 103 O. L., 893, provides as follows:

> "The board of trustees shall report annually to the commissioners of the county the condition of the home, and make out and deliver to the commissioners a carefully prepared estimate, in writing, of the wants of the home for the succeeding year. Such estimate shall specify separately the amounts required for each of the following purposes, to wit: First, maintenance. Second, repairs. Third, special improvements."

Section 3105, G. C., provides as follows:

> "At their regular quarterly meeting at which such estimate is presented to them, the commissioners shall carefully examine the estimate, and if, in their judgment, it is reasonable and ratably within the assessment for the support of the home for the current year, or so much thereof as they deem reasonable and within such assessment, the board of commissioners shall allow and approve, and shall appropriate and set apart such amount for the use of the home. Upon the order of the trustees of the home, the county auditor shall draw his warrant upon the county treasurer, who shall pay such warrant from the fund so appropriated and set apart."

Sections 3090 and 3091, G. C., 103 O. L., 890, provide how children may be admitted to the children's home, to wit, on the order of the juvenile court or of a majority of the trustees, or by transfer from the county infirmary.

Sections 1352 and 1352-1, G. C., 103 O. L., 865, provide in part as follows:

> "Sec. 1352. The board of state charities shall investigate by correspondence and inspection the system, condition and management of the public and private benevolent and correctional institutions of the state and county, and municipal jails, workhouses, infirmaries and children's homes, and all maternity hospitals or homes, lying-in hospitals, or places where women are received and cared for during parturition, as well as all institutions, whether incorporated, private, or otherwise, which receive and care for children. * * *"
> "Sec. 1352-1. Such board shall annually pass upon the fitness of every benevolent or correctional institution, corporation and association, public, semi-public or private, as receives, or desires to receive and care for children, or places children in private homes. * * * When the board is satisfied as to the care given such children, and that the requirements of the statutes covering the management of such institutions are being complied with, it shall issue to the association a certificate to that effect, which shall continue in force for one year, unless sooner revoked by the board. No child shall be committed by the juvenile court to an association or institution which has not such certificate unrevoked and received within fifteen months next preceding the commitment. A list of such certified institutions shall be sent by the board of state charities, at least annually, to all courts acting as juvenile courts, and to all associations and institutions so approved. Any person who receives children or receives or solicits money on behalf of such an institution, corporation or association, not so certified, or whose certificate has been revoked, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not less than $5.00 nor more than $500.00."

These sections impose a limitation upon the power of the juvenile court to commit children to a children's home which does not have such certificate unrevoked and received within fifteen months next preceding the commitment, and upon the power of the trustees or superintendent of the home to receive children either by way of commitment by a court or otherwise, but do not in terms impose any limitation upon the duty of the commissioners to appropriate funds for the support of the institution, and of the auditor to issue warrants upon vouchers issued against such appropriation by the trustees as provided in section 3105, G. C., supra. Not only is there no specific inhibition against the same, but there is no provision for the disposition of children already in the home, and this strengthens the view that it was not the intention of the legislature that the refusal of the board of state charities to certify, should require that a county children's home should not be further supported by the county for the benefit of children already there.

I am therefore of the opinion that the refusal of the board of state charities to issue its certificate to the Monroe county children's home, as provided in section 1352-1, G. C., supra, does not operate to prohibit the auditor from issuing his warrants on vouchers issued by the trustees of the children's home against the appropriation made by the commissioners for the use of such home, to pay bills contracted since the expiration of the last certificate issued to such home by the board of state charities.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COMMON PLEAS JUDGE—REIMBURSEMENT FOR EXPENSES WHEN JUDGE HOLDS COURT IN COUNTY OTHER THAN THAT IN WHICH HE RESIDES—CHIEF JUSTICE OF SUPREME COURT DOES NOT ASSIGN JUDGE—EXPENSES PAYABLE FROM STATE TREASURY.

Reimbursement for expenses incurred by a common pleas judge when holding court in a county other than that in which he resides, without the assignment of the chief justice of the supreme court, is payable from the state treasury and not from the treasury of the county in which the services are rendered.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1916.

HON. ROSCOE J. MAUCK, Judge Common Pleas Court, Gallipolis, Ohio.

MY DEAR JUDGE:—With due apologies for the mislaying of your letter of February 14th and its enclosures, and with acknowledgment of your letter of the 29th enclosing copies of the former correspondence, I hasten to answer the question which you submit therein.

You call attention to the informal ruling of the chief justice of the supreme court, to the effect that common pleas judges, under the amendment to article IV, section 3 of the constitution and the legislation enacted in pursuance thereof, are entitled to exchange work and to hold court in counties other than those in which they severally reside without a direct assignment by the chief justice, and that while so holding court they are entitled to reimbursement for "expenses incurred by them as otherwise provided by law." You inquire whether the expenses to which such judges are so entitled are payable from the state treasury or from the county treasury.

Manifestly, section 2253, G. C., as amended 104 O. L., 251, is the sole source of authority to receive reimbursement for expenses of this character. That section provides:

> "In addition to the annual salary and expenses provided for in sections 1529, 2251, 2252, 2252-1, each judge of the court of common pleas and of the court of appeals, shall receive his actual and necessary expenses, not exceeding three hundred dollars in any one year, incurred, while holding court in a county in which he does not reside, to be paid from the state treasury upon the warrant of the auditor of state, issued to such judge; each judge of the court of common pleas who is assigned by the chief justice by virtue of section 1469, to aid in disposing of business of some county other than that in which he resides, shall receive ten dollars per day for each day of such assignment, and his actual and necessary expenses incurred in holding court under such assignment, to be paid from the treasury of the county to which he is so assigned upon the warrant of the auditor of such county, and the amount allowed herein for actual and necessary expenses shall not exceed three hundred dollars in any one year."

To me it is obvious that the second part of the section following the semicolon therein is limited in its application to cases in which judges of the court of common pleas are "assigned by the chief justice by virtue of section 1469, to aid in disposing of business of some county other than" those in which they respectively reside. On the other hand, the first part of the section preceding the natural division point is not qualified, but applies to the expenses incurred by a judge "while holding court in a county in which he does not reside."

It follows, therefore, that the authority of the common pleas judge who goes into another county to hold court by agreement with the common pleas judge of such county, or otherwise than by assignment of the chief justice under section 1469, G. C., to receive reimbursement for his expenses is referable to the first part of the section, and that accordingly such expenses so incurred are to be paid from the state treasury upon the warrant of the auditor of state, and are limited in amount, with other expenses so incurred, to three hundred dollars in any one year, provided the judge was elected subsequently to the date on which house bill No. 52 (104 O. L., 250) took effect; and if any such judge was elected prior to that date the limitation upon the amount of such expenses for which he may be so reimbursed is, as pointed out in opinions of this department, copies of which I believe you have received, one hundred and fifty dollars.

Of course, it follows from the premises that the per diem of ten dollars is not payable under the circumstances considered.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

BOARD OF EDUCATION—WHERE PUPIL PLACED IN CUSTODY OF RESIDENT OF DISTRICT BY JUVENILE COURT, ATTENDS CITY SCHOOL—PARENTS WHO RESIDE OUTSIDE OF DISTRICT NOT TO BE CHARGED FOR TUITION—WHAT COURT HAS JURISDICTION IN JUVENILE CASES IN HAMILTON COUNTY.

Where a minor child of the age of thirteen years is taken from the care and custody of its parents, who are nonresidents of a school district within the county, by order of the judge of the juvenile court of such county, and by the further order of said court is placed under the care and control of a person who is an actual resident of such school district, unless otherwise ordered by the court said child becomes the ward of said person, resident of such school district, under provision of section 1672, G. C., 103 O. L., 876, and as such is entitled to attend the public schools of said district without charge for tuition under provision of section 7681, G. C., 106 O. L., 489.

Under the provisions of section 1639, G. C., 104 O. L., 176, in Hamilton county the power and jurisdiction conferred by the statutes as found in the chapter of the General Code relating to juvenile courts is exercised by one of the judges of the court of common pleas of said county in the division of domestic relations.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1916.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 17th, which is as follows:

> "At the suggestion of Mr. Chas. A. Groom, solicitor of the city of Cincinnati, I write to ask your opinion upon the following question: 'Is tuition payable for a pupil attending one of the elementary schools of a city school district where the parents of such pupil reside outside of the school district, but the child has been placed under the care and control of a resident of the district by action of the court of domestic relations of the county?'
> "This involves a consideration of section 7681 of the General Code and a determination of whether such child can be considered a 'ward' within the meaning of that section while the parents are still living and non-residents. We enclose a copy of the solicitor's letter upon this subject."

Mr. Groom's letter above referred to, addressed to you under date of March 16, 1916, reads as follows:

"Mary Ellen Burton, a minor thirteen years of age, has been placed under the care and control of George A. Roundtree, of Sayler Park, by an order of the court of domestic relations in cause No. 12963. In re Mary Ellen Burton, dependant.

"The parents of this dependant reside outside of the school district of this city, and the question has been raised in regard to the payment of tuition. In order that there may be a uniformity of ruling on this subject, which is one that affects every school district in this state, I respectfully request that you, as counsel for the court of domestic relations, request an opinion upon this subject from the attorney-general of Ohio."

Section 7681, G. C. (106 O. L., 489), provides in part:

"The schools of each district shall be free to all youth between six and twenty-one years of age, who are children, wards or apprentices of actual residents of the district, * * *."

The latter part of section 1639, G. C. (104 O. L., 176), provides that in Hamilton county the power and jurisdiction conferred by the statutes as found in the chapter of the General Code relating to juvenile courts shall be exercised by the court of common pleas of said county. Said section as amended further provides that:

"In 1914, and every sixth year thereafter, one of the common pleas judges to be elected at said times shall be elected as a judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations," and requires that to this judge shall be assigned all juvenile court work arising under said chapter.

From the statement of facts submitted by you it appears that the parents of the child referred to in your inquiry reside outside of the city school district of Cincinnati, and that said child has been placed under the care and control of a resident of said school district by action of the judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, in the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon him by the above provision of section 1639, G. C., as amended, taken in connection with the provisions of section 1642 et seq. of the General Code (103 O. L., 868-879), as found in said chapter of the General Code relating to the power and jurisdiction of the juvenile court.

Section 1643, G. C. (103 O. L., 869), provides that:

"When a child under the age of eighteen years comes into the custody of the court under the provisions of this chapter, such child shall continue for all necessary purposes of discipline and protection, a ward of the court, until he or she attain the age of twenty-one years. The power of the court over such child shall continue until the child attains such age."

Section 1653, G. C. (103 O. L., 872), provides that:

"When a minor under the age of eighteen years, or any ward of the court under this chapter, is found to be dependent or neglected, the judge may make an order commiting such child * * * to the care of some reputable citizen of good moral character, * * *."

Acting under the above provision of section 1653, G. C., your court of common pleas, in the division of domestic relations, placed the child in question under the care and control of the person referred to in your inquiry. Section 1672, G. C. (103 O. L., 876), provides that:

"If the court awards a child to the care of an association, corporation or individual, in accordance with these provisions, unless otherwise ordered, the child shall become a ward, and be subject to the guardianship of such association, corporation or individual. * * *"

The child in question having been placed under the care and control of the person above referred to, and it not appearing that a further order of the court was made disposing of said child, I am of the opinion that under the provision of this latter statute said child became the ward of said person.

Inasmuch as the said Mary Ellen Burton, a minor of the age of thirteen years, was taken from the care and custody of her parents, who are non-residents of the Cincinnati city school district, by order of your court of common pleas in the division of domestic relations, and by further order of said court was placed under the care and control of the person referred to in your inquiry, who is an actual resident of said city school district, I am of the opinion that under the above provision of section 7681, G. C., the said Mary Ellen Burton as the ward of said resident of said city school district is entitled to attend the public schools of said district without charge for tuition.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—NO PROVISION FOR TWO OR MORE TOWNSHIPS TO CO-OPERATE FOR A ROAD IMPROVEMENT UNLESS COUNTY COMMISSIONERS TAKE JURISDICTION AND PAY PART OF COST.

Co-operation by two or more townships may be had only under section 6921, G. C. provided the county commissioners are willing to take jurisdiction and pay some part, of the cost of the improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1916.

HON. CHARLES F. ADAMS, Prosecuting Attorney, Elyria, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 9, 1916, which is as follows:

"In Lorain county are several roads on the boundary line of townships, the one in question is a road separating Carlisle and LaGrange townships, and about four miles in length. This road connects two improved roads which were improved under the former road district law 7033-52.

"The width of the road makes it impracticable to build solely in either township, and I have been unable to find authority for agreement between the trustees of Carlisle and LaGrange townships to jointly build this road.

"If any such authority exists will you please indicate where it may be found, and in event that the maximum levy for road purposes produces insufficient funds for this improvement, how can the needed money be raised?"

I beg to advise that the chapter relating to road construction and improvement by township trustees, being chapter III of the Cass highway law, contains no provision for the co-operative improvement by two or more townships of a township line road. The matter may be worked out, however, under chapter VI of the Cass highway law, if the county commissioners of Lorain county are willing to take jurisdiction and pay some part of the cost and expense of the improvement. Under section 6921, G. C., a board of county commissioners may enter into an agreement with the trustees of a township or townships in which a proposed road improvement is in whole or part situated, providing for a division of the cost and expense between the county and the interested township or townships.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—NOTICES REQUIRED BY SECTIONS 6912 AND 6922, G. C.—WHAT SUCH NOTICES SHOULD CONTAIN.

The notices required by sections 6912 and 6922, G. C., need not contain the names of the persons whose property is to be specially assessed or a description of the lands to be assessed.

In view of the variations in assessment districts possible under section 6919, G. C., the notice required by section 6922, G. C., should contain a statement of the particular method of assessment followed in the making of any given improvement.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 28, 1916.

HON. JOHN H. SCHRIDER, Prosecuting Attorney, Bryan, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 24, 1916, in which you submit the following inquiry:

"Must the notices required by sections 91 and 101 of the Cass highway law, being sections 6912 and 6922, G. C., set forth the names of the persons to be specially assessed and describe the lands to be benefited or assessed."

Section 6912, G. C., reads as follows:

"Upon the completion of the survey for such improvement by the county surveyor, he shall transmit to the commissioners his estimate of the cost and expense of such improvement, together with a copy of his survey, plats, profiles, cross sections, estimates and specifications therefor. As soon as the county commissioners have determined by resolution to construct said improvement, they shall cause to be published in a newspaper published and of general circulation within the county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no such paper published in said county, then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county, once a week, for two consecutive weeks, a notice that such improvement is to be made and that the surveys, plats, profiles, cross-sections, specifications and estimates for said improvement are on file in the office of the county commissioners for the inspection and examination of all persons interested therein. Such notice shall state the time and place for hearing objections to said improvement, and for hearing claims for compensation for lands and property to be taken for said improvement, or damages sustained on account thereof, and that unless such claims are filed in writing, with the county commissioners on or before the time fixed for hearing said claims, the same shall be waived, except as to minors and other persons under disability."

The section in question contains no specific requirement that the notice therein required to be published must contain the names of the persons to be specially assessed or a description of their lands. The hearing, notice of which is required by the section in question, is not upon the subject of assessments, but relates to objections to the improvement and to claims for compensation and damages. In fact, at the time the notice required by section 6912, G. C., must be published, no estimated assessment will have yet been made, as the notice required by section 6912, G. C., must be given as soon as the county commissioners have determined by resolution, to construct the improvement, and under the provisions of section 6922, G. C., the surveyor does not make his estimated assessment until the improvement is granted.

I think that, in so far as your inquiry relates to this section, it is determined by the above facts, and by the provision of the following section, section 6913, G. C., to the effect that in the event that land or property is to be taken for the improvement, the notice provided by the preceding section shall state briefly whose lands or property are to be appropriated.

I therefore advise you that in so far as the notice required by section 6912, G. C., is concerned, such notice need not contain the names of the persons whose property is to be specially assessed and need not contain a description of the lands to be so assessed. It is sufficient if the notice be drawn to contain the matter required by section 6912, G. C., and to comply with the provision of section 6913, G. C., to the effect that the notice shall state briefly whose lands or property are to be appropriated.

Section 6922, G. C., reads as follows:

"As soon as the improvement is granted, the surveyor shall make, upon actual view, an estimated assessment upon the real estate to be charged therewith of such part of the cost and expense of said improvement as the county commissioners may have determined at the time of granting such improvement. Such apportionment shall be according to the benefits which will result to such real estate. In making such apportionment, the surveyor may take into consideration any previous special assessments made upon such real estate for road improvements. The schedule of such apportionment shall be filed in the office of the county commissioners for the inspection of the persons interested. Before adopting the estimated assessment so made and reported, the commissioners shall publish once each week for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper published and of general circulation in the county, if there be any such paper published in the county, but if there be no such paper published in said county, then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county, notice that such estimated assessment has been made, and that the same is on file in the office of the county commissioners, and the date when objections, if any, will be heard to such assessment. If any owner of property affected thereby, desires to make objections, he may file his objections to said assessment in writing, with the county commissioners before the time for said hearing. If any objections are filed the county commissioners shall hear the same and act as an equalizing board, and they may change said assessments, if in their opinion, any change is necessary to make the same just and equitable, or they may make such changes as are just and equitable even if no objections are filed thereto, after giving notice to the parties whose assessments they propose to change, and such commissioners shall approve and confirm said assessment as reported by the surveyor or modified by them. Such assessments, when so approved and confirmed, shall be a lien on the land chargeable therewith."

The notice required by the above quoted section is very similar in character to the one required by old section 6956-12, G. C., now repealed, and it was never understood that the notice required by that section should include the names of the owners whose property was assessed or a description of their property. The section in question only goes so far as to provide that the notice shall set forth that the estimated assessment has been made, and that the same is on file in the office of the county commissioners, and the date when objections, if any, will be heard to such assessment. This language does not warrant the inference that the legislature intended that the notice should contain the names of the persons to be specially assessed, or a description of their property, especially as former road laws contemplated the publication of notices containing neither the names of owners nor the descriptions of their property.

In view of the foregoing, I advise you that the same rule as to the inclusion of names of owners and descriptions of real estate prevails as to notices under section 6922, G. C., as has already been stated, with reference to notices under section 6912, G. C., and that such notices need not contain the names of the persons whose property is to be specially assessed, and need not contain a description of the lands to be so assessed.

It should be noted, however, that under section 6919, G. C., the portion of the cost of a county road improvement to be assessed, may be assessed against the real estate abutting upon the improvement, or within one-half mile, or one mile, or two miles of either side thereof, or within one-half mile, or one mile, or two miles of either side or terminus thereof. In view of the variations in assessment districts possible under section 6919, G. C., it is my opinion that the notice required to be published by section 6922, G. C., should contain a statement of the particular method of assessment followed in the making of any given improvement. If this is done, notice will be brought to each owner of benefited real estate, of the fact that it is proposed to levy an assessment against his real estate, and that on a certain day he will be heard by the commissioners in case he desires to file objections.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, VILLAGE OF GRAND VIEW HEIGHTS, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 29, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of the village of Grand View Heights, Franklin county, Ohio, in the sum of $1,600.00, being two bonds—one for $950.00, to be paid by general taxation, and one for $650.00, issued in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of Fifth Avenue."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of Grand View Heights, relative to the issuance of the above bonds, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the General Code of Ohio.

I am of the opinion that said bonds drawn and executed in accordance with the ordinance authorizing the issuance, will, upon delivery, constitute valid and binding obligations of the village of Grand View Heights.

The bond and coupon form submitted for my approval incorrectly quote the title to the ordinance authorizing the issuance of said bonds, and I am returning the same to Hon. Smith W. Bennett, attorney for the village of Grand View Heights, calling his attention to the mistake, and requesting that correction be made.

When the bonds are presented to the treasurer of state for delivery I suggest that I have further opportunity to examine them.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION—FILING OF REMONSTRANCE AGAINST TRANSFER OF TERRITORY UNDER SECTION 4692, G. C., 106 O. L., 397—WHEN NAMES MAY BE WITHDRAWN FROM REMONSTRANCE —WHEN TRANSFER LEGALLY EFFECTED.

The filing with the board of education of a county school district of the remonstrance provided for in section 4692, G. C., 106 O. L., 397, three days before the filing of the map with the county auditor, as therein provided, showing the boundaries of the territory proposed to be transferred by said county board of education, acting under authority and in compliance with the requirements of said section 4692, G. C., is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of said statute and is legal.

Any one of the electors who resides in the territory proposed to be transferred, and who signed said remonstrance, has the right, at any time before the expiration of the thirty day period, provided for in said section 4692, G. C., to withdraw his name from said remonstrance.

If, upon investigation at the expiration of said thirty day period the board of education of said county school district finds that the number of qualified electors residing in the territory proposed to be transferred and remonstrating against such proposed transfer is less than a majority of the qualified electors residing in such territory, and if said county board of education has complied with all the requirements of said section 4692, G. C., the transfer of said territory is legally effected, and becomes a part of the school district to which the same is transferred for all school purposes.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1916.

HON. FRANK B. PEARSON, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 20, 1916, you request my opinion as follows:

> "The county board of education of Madison county annexed certain territory to the Jefferson village school district. A petition sanctioning the action of the county board was signed by 106 voters out of a possible 162. A remonstrance against the annexation of certain territory, signed by 116 voters (62 of whom had signed the first petition), was filed February 15, 1916. The map of said contemplated annexed territory was filed February 18, 1916, three days after the filing of the remonstrance. On March 18, the following was filed containing 53 names of those who had signed the remonstrance:
> " 'To the county board of education, Madison county, Ohio.
> " 'We, the undersigned having signed a remonstrance against the transfer of territory to Jefferson village school district, having since investigated the matter, hereby withdraw our names from said remonstrance.'
> "Query 1. Under section 4692, Ohio Laws, was the filing of the remonstrance three days before the filing of the map legal?
> "Query 2. May those who signed the petition against the remonstrance legally have their names removed from said remonstrance by said act?
> "Query 3. Thirty days having expired since the filing of the map, is the territory annexed to Jefferson village district by the county board of education now legally part of said village district?"

I am further informed by you that the Jefferson village school district is not exempt from county supervision, and is, therefore, a part of the Madison county school district. The authority of the board of education of said county school district to transfer territory from an adjoining rural school district to said village school district is found in section 4692, G. C. (106 O. L., 397), which provides in part:

> "The county board of education may transfer a part or all of a school district of the county school district to an adjoining district or districts of the county school district. Such transfer shall not take effect until a map is filed with the auditor of the county in which the transferred territory is situated, showing the boundaries of the territory transferred, and a notice of such proposed transfer has been posted in three conspicuous places in the district or districts proposed to be transferred, or printed in a paper of general circulation in said county, for ten days; nor shall such transfer take effect if a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory to be transferred, shall, within thirty days after the filing of such map, file with the county board of education a written remonstrance against such proposed transfer."

From your statement of facts it appears that after the board of education of said Madison county school district passed its resolution to transfer certain territory to said Jefferson village school district, but before a map, showing the boundaries of the territory proposed by said resolution to be transferred to said village school district, was filed with the auditor of said county, a written remonstrance against said proposed transfer, signed by 116 of the 162 qualified electors residing in said territory, was filed with said county board of education.

While the above provision of section 4692, G. C., by its terms limits the filing of the remonstrance therein provided for to the thirty day period therein mentioned, and I am of the opinion that a remonstrance filed after the expiration of said thirty day period would be without legal effect in so far as the action of the county board of education under said provision of said statute is concerned, I am, nevertheless, of the opinion that the filing of the remonstrance in question by a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory referred to in your inquiry, on February 18, 1916, three days before the filing of the map, above referred to, with the county auditor, was a sufficient compliance with the above provision of section 4692, G. C., and that the same was legal.

Your first question is therefore answered in the affirmative.

It further appears, however, that on March 18, 1916, before the expiration of said thirty day period, 53 of the 116 qualified electors who had signed said remonstrance, filed with said county board of education, a written notice to withdraw their names from said remonstrance.

It is clear, that if the 53 electors above referred to, had no legal right to withdraw their names from said remonstrance, the proposed transfer of territory has not been effected under the above provision of section 4692, G. C. On the other hand, it is equally clear, that if said 53 electors had the legal right to withdraw their names from said remonstrance, leaving only 62 of the 162 qualified electors residing in said territory as remonstrating against said transfer at the end of said thirty day period, if said county board of education has complied with all the requirements of said section 4692, G. C., said transfer of territory has been effected. It remains to be determined, therefore, whether the withdrawal of said names was lawfully made.

The evident purpose of the legislature in requiring the filing of the map with the county auditor, showing the boundaries of the territory proposed to be transferred, and the giving of the notice provided for in said section 4692, G. C., is to afford an opportunity to the qualified electors residing in said territory to remonstrate against said transfer if they so desire.

It will be observed that no affirmative action on the part of said electors is required to give the county board of education jurisdiction to act under the above provisions of the statute. After the county board of education has taken all of the steps required on its part to be taken by the provisions of said statute, to effect a transfer of territory, said transfer may still be defeated by a majority of the qualified electors residing in said territory filing the remonstrance provided for in said statute, at any time before the expiration of the thirty day period therein mentioned.

As I view it, it is the duty of the county board of education, at the expiration of said thirty day period, to ascertain whether there is on file the written remonstrance of a majority of the qualified electors residing in the territory proposed to be transferred. If, upon such investigation, said county board of education finds that such a remonstrance, signed by a majority of said electors, is on file, and that none of the persons who signed said remonstrance have withdrawn their names therefrom during said thirty day period, or that the number who have withdrawn their names from said remonstrance taken from the number of those who signed the same, still leaves a majority of the names of said qualified electors remaining on said remonstrance, the transfer of territory, in so far as said proceedings of said county board of education are concerned, is defeated, and no one has a right to complain. If, on the other hand, however, said county board, upon such investigation, finds that less than a majority of said electors have filed a written remonstrance prior to the expiration of said thirty day period, or that a majority of said electors having filed such remonstrance, a sufficient number of those having signed the same have withdrawn their names from said remonstrance so that the number remaining is less than a majority of the qualified electors residing in such territory, then I think that said transfer has been effected, provided said county board of education has complied with all the requirements of the above provision of the statute.

It seems clear to my mind that in view of what has already been said, anyone of said electors who signed the aforesaid remonstrance had the right, at any time before the expiration of said thirty day period, to withdraw his name from said remonstrance for the reason that no rights resulting from the filing of said remonstrance could intervene between the time said remonstrance was filed and the expiration of said thirty day period which would be defeated by the withdrawal referred to in your inquiry.

I think it may be said that the principle underlying the rule governing the right of a person to withdraw his name from a remonstrance filed under the above provision of said section 4692, G. C., is the same as that underlying the rule governing the right of a person to withdraw his name from a petition when the filing of the same is jurisdictional to the right of a board or officer to act upon the proposition therein presented.

As stated by my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, in an opinion as found at page 1632 of the Report of the Attorney-General for the year 1913;

> "It is well settled that names may be withdrawn from a petition at any time before jurisdiction is acquired thereover by the board or officer entitled to exercise the same."

It was held in said opinion that:

> "When a petition for the referendum on a municipal ordinance, therefore, has been filed with the clerk of the village, the names may be withdrawn therefrom at any time prior to the certification of such petition to the board of elections by said clerk."

In support of this conclusion the following cases are cited:

> Hayes v. Jones, 27 O. S., 218.
> Dutten v. Village of Hanover, 42 O. S., 215.
> Cole v. City of Columbus, 2 N. P., n. s., 563.
> Haynes v. Hillsboro, 3 N. P., n. s., 17.
> Norwood v. Board of Elections, 13 C. C., n. s., 465.

As was stated in my former opinion rendered to Honorable C. Q. Hildebrant, secretary of state, under date of May 22, 1915, it is equally well settled by the above cases that after an authority conferred by such petition is once exercised or such petition operates to effect a public right or interest, names may not be withdrawn therefrom.

In view of the foregoing authorities, and in keeping with my former holding, I am of the opinion, in auswer to your second question, that the qualified electors residing in the territory referred to in your inquiry, who signed the aforesaid remonstrance, and who, subsequent to the time said remonstrance was filed, and within the thirty day period provided for in said section 4692, G. C., withdrew their names from said remonstrance, had the right to make such withdrawal.

I am of the opinion, in answer to your third question, that inasmuch as the county board of education of said Madison county school district found, upon investigation, at the expiration of said thirty day period, that the number of qualified electors residing in the territory proposed to be transferred and remonstrating against such proposed transfer, was less than a majority of the qualified electors residing in such territory, if said county board of education has complied with all the requirements of said section 4692, G. C., the transfer of said territory has been legally effected and the same is now a part of said Jefferson village school district for all school purposes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—ROAD COMMISSIONERS WITHOUT AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO CONTRACTS AFTER CASS HIGHWAY LAW BECAME EFFECTIVE—FUNDS REMAINING SHOULD BE APPLIED TO INDEBTEDNESS OF ROAD DISTRICT.

Road commissioners appointed under section 7095, G. C., et seq., now repealed, had no authority after the going into effect of the Cass highway law on September 6, 1915, to enter into new contracts for the construction or repair of roads. Where the indebtedness of a road district created under said sections exceeds the funds on hand, such funds should be left in the custody of the county treasurer and applied toward the payment of the indebtedness.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1916.

HON. ALDRICH B. UNDERWOOD, Prosecuting Attorney, Medina, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 17, 1916, which is as follows:

"The four townships of Medina, Montville, Lafayette and York in this county, are organized into a road district, under section 7095, et seq., of the General Code of Ohio. At various times, bonds have been issued for the building and repair of roads in said district, and at the present time the road commissioners have several thousand dollars on hand for these purposes.

"It is the intention of said road commissioners to continue to do business, and to enter into new contracts, until all moneys are used. They refuse to let their accumulated funds to be diverted to the county road fund, on the asserted argument that they could then be expended in parts of the county other than where raised. The minute book or journal of the road commissioners shows the following proceedings:

" 'September 11, 1915.

" 'Moved by Wolfe and seconded by Blakeslee that the work of improving road No. 17, section 2, be let to Grover C. Woods, and a contract entered into.'

" 'September 18, 1915.

" 'Moved and seconded that all bids on road 17 be rejected and a contract entered into with George Koppes and William Emmons for the improvement of said road.' Note: This contract was made and entered into on September 18, 1915, and a copy thereof appears on the records.

" 'Moved by Wolfe and seconded by Blakeslee that the bid of Crocker & Crocker for hauling gravel on road No. 9, being the lowest and best bid, be accepted and a contract entered into. Note. This contract is dated October 2, 1915.

" 'Moved by Woods and seconded by Rohrer to improve road No. 14, from the street car line east to what is known as Spitzer's Corners, a distance of about 800 feet.'

"In view of the Cass highway act, particularly section 303, of the saving clause, I write to ask these questions:

"1. What authority, if any, have these road commissioners to enter into new contracts after September 5, 1915, for the construction, or for the repair of roads in said district?

"2. What is to be done with funds on hand belonging to this road district?

"3. If put in the county road fund, could they be expended in townships, other than where raised? In this connection notice section 5654, G. C.

"These matters are causing considerable trouble between the county commissioners and the road district commissioners, and for that reason an early opinion will be greatly appreciated."

Under date of March 27, 1916, in response to my request for additional information, you wrote me as follows:

"Your letter of the 25th inst. at hand, requesting additional information preliminary to the rendering of an opinion relating to the making of contracts by road commissioners under old section 7095, G. C., and to the proper disposition of the funds of such a road district.

"I find that at the time I first asked for your opinion, to wit, about February 17, 1916, that there were $135,000.00 of bonds outstanding and about $10,000.00 of cash on hand in this road district. The February distribution increased the amount of cash on hand to about $18,000.00. The total amount of bonds outstanding at the present time, therefore, ($135,000.00) is considerable in excess of the amount on hand ($18,000.00)."

Section 7095, G. C., referred to by you, which section, together with the succeeding sections, was repealed by the Cass highway law, 106 O. L., 574, provided for the organization of not less than two nor more than four adjacent townships in any county occupying contiguous and compact territory into a road district. A road district so organized was governed and controlled as to pike and road improvement matters by a road commission composed of one member for each township, the members being appointed by the county commissioners on the nomination of the respective trustees.

Proceedings for the establishment of road districts of this character were initiated by petition, and following the organization of such a district the question of the improvement of the public roads of the district by general taxation was to be submitted to a vote. In the event of a favorable vote, the road commissioners were authorized to designate what roads in their opinion should be improved and to determine other similar matters, and to employ an engineer and other assistants and purchase machinery. The compensation of the road commissioners and of their engineer and assistants were payable out of the funds of the road district on the allowance of the county commissioners. Contracts for work and materials were to be made by the road commissioners and payment was to be made therefor on the order of the road commissioners. The road commissioners were authorized to issue bonds of the road district for the purpose of providing money necessary to meet the expense of improving the designated roads. It was provided that when the road commissioners of a road district had determined to improve a road or roads, then in order to provide for the payment of such improvement and to provide for the fund for the redemption of bonds issued by them, the road commissioners should report the facts to the county commissioners, who were required to make a levy on the taxable property of the road district for the cost of the work of improvement and the creation of an interest and redemption fund. The county commissioners were also required to levy a tax on the property of the road district for repairing the roads of the district, the amount thereof, within certain limitations, to be determined by the road commissioners. All funds of the road district were to be received and disbursed by the county treasurer.

From the above it will be seen that where the sections in question were invoked, a separate organization was effected, which organization was distinct from the township and county organizations. It therefore follows that the saving provision of the Cass highway law applicable to such organizations is found in the latter part of section 303 of that act, which saving provision reads as follows:

> "Wherever under any law repealed by this act any organization now exists for the purpose of improving, repairing or maintaining any public road or roads, such organization shall be not affected by this act and all officers of such organization or organizations shall continue to hold office and exercise the powers heretofore exercised by them. Their successors in office with like powers shall be elected or appointed as heretofore till all contracts and obligations of such organization shall be fully met and complied with and all rights fully conserved. For such purposes such organization or organizations shall have all the rights heretofore exercised by them to hire necessary assistance, clerical or otherwise; to fund or refund any indebtedness and to levy and collect taxes or certify the same for levy and collection; to pay such debts and expenses together with salaries and other expenses of such organization or organizations but no such organization or organizations shall contract any new obligation or obligations after the taking effect of this act, for the construction or repair of additional road or roads or the maintenance or repair of roads already improved. When all obligations existing at the time of the taking effect of this act have been fully met and complied with, such organization or organizations shall cease to exist and all property or funds of such organization or organizations shall be and become a part of the road fund of the county in which such organization or organizations exist. All roads macadamized or paved by any such organization shall be kept improved and in repair by the county highway superintendent at the cost of the county in which the same are located."

In view of the above quoted provision, it is apparent that road commissioners appointed under section 7095, G. C., et seq., now repealed, had no authority after the going into effect of the Cass highway law on September 6, 1915, to enter into new contracts for the construction or repair of roads in their district, it being expressly provided that such organizations should not contract any new obligation or obligations after the taking effect of the Cass highway law, for the construction or repair of additional roads or the maintenance or repair of roads already improved. The above answers fully your first question.

In answering your second question, it should first be observed that the provision to the effect that the funds of an organization of this character shall be and become a part of the road fund of the county in which the organization existed is not by its terms effective until all obligations existing at the time of the taking effect of the Cass highway law have been fully met and complied with.

In view of the facts submitted by you, it becomes unnecessary to answer your third question or to discuss the force and effect of the provision referred to above. It appears that there are outstanding bonds of the road district in question and that the amount of these bonds far exceeds the funds on hand plus the funds which will be received at the August, 1916, settlement. As long as any of the bonds in question are outstanding, it could not be said that all the obligations of the district have been fully met and complied with. The funds on hand belonging to the road district should, therefore, be left in the custody of the county treasurer and applied toward the payment of the interest on the outstanding bonds of the district and toward the redemption of such bonds at maturity. As previously suggested, the facts submitted in your second communication and the conclusion reached as to your second question render it unnecessary to consider the third question submitted by you.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

JURISDICTION OF CRIMINAL COURT, LIMA, OHIO—JURISDICTION OF MAYOR, CITY OF LIMA AND JUSTICE OF PEACE OF TOWNSHIP IN WHICH CITY IS LOCATED—SELLING INTOXICATING LIQUORS TO A MINOR.

The criminal court of the city of Lima, Ohio, has no jurisdiction of offenses committed in violation of state law, except to discharge, recognize or commit upon hearing when the accused is charged with a felony.

The mayor of the city of Lima, has final jurisdiction of the offense of the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor by a saloon licensee when committed within the confines of said city.

A justice of the peace of the township in which the city of Lima, Ohio, is located has only such jurisdiction of such offense as is conferred by sections 13422, 13510 and 13511, G. C., where said offense is committed within such township and no jurisdiction of such offense when not committed within his township.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1916.

The State Liquor Licensing Board, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Yours under date of March 22, 1916, is as follows:

> "What are the powers of the criminal court of the city of Lima, Ohio, the mayor of the city of Lima, and a justice of the peace of the township, in which the city of Lima is located, with reference to an affidavit charging a person holding a liquor license in Allen county, Ohio, with the offense of selling intoxicating liquors to a minor?"

The alleged offenses about which inquiry is made, I am further informed by you, were confined to the corporate limits of the city of Lima and to such this opinion will be limited.

The offense of the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor by a licensee, as referred to in your communication, is defined by section 1261-67, G. C., 103 O. L., 238, as follows:

> "* * * Whoever, being a licensee, sells intoxicating liquors to a minor or allows a minor to play cards or any game of amusement, or to loaf in such saloon, or whoever, knowing that a person is a minor, induces any person, firm or corporation to sell or furnish intoxicating liquors to such minor contrary to law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for the first offense shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and for the second or subsequent offenses shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars or more than five hundred dollars, or shall be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than six months, or both."

Under the provisions of section 1261-69, G. C., 103 O. L., 239, it is required that at all trials for offenses under laws or ordinances regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, the court shall, before the trial, take testimony to determine whether or not the defendant is a licensee or the agent or employe of a licensee, and if it appears that such defendant is a licensee or the agent or employe of a licensee, whether the defendant has in fact been convicted of a previous offense and if the defendant be a licensee or the agent or employe of a licensee and has suffered a previous conviction under any of said laws or ordinances, or it appears that a conviction in the case pending will work a revocation of a liquor license granted in this state, the said defendant shall be entitled to a trial by jury. The offense under consideration is, then, a misdemeanor, upon the trial for the commission of which the defendant may or may not be entitled to a trial by jury.

Consideration may be first given to the jurisdiction of the criminal court of the city of Lima, over the offense in question. This court is established under authority of, and its jurisdiction is defined by, sections 1 and 2 of house bill No. 118, 106 O. L., 112, which provide as follows:

> Sec. 1. That there shall be, and is hereby established in the city of Lima, Allen county, Ohio, a criminal court held by a judge, which court shall be styled the criminal court and be a court of record, and shall have jurisdiction of any offense under any ordinance of said city to hear and finally determine the same and impose the prescribed penalty; but cases in which the accused is entitled to a trial by a jury, shall be so tried unless a jury be waived in writing by the accused.
> "Sec. 2. In felonies committed within the county the court shall have the power to hear the case and discharge, recognize or commit, and, if upon such hearing the court is of the opinion that the offense is only a misdemeanor, and that the court may assume jurisdiction of it under the last section, a plea of guilty of such misdemeanor may be received and sentence and judgment pronounced."

An examination of the foregoing provisions will readily disclose that the jurisdiction of the criminal court of the city of Lima, therein conferred, is limited to offenses committed in violation of the ordinances of said city, and to recognizing, committing or discharging the defendant in cases of felonies committed within the county.

The offense which is the subject of your inquiry, being neither a felony nor a violation of an ordinance of the city of Lima, is, therefore, not subject to the jurisdiction of the criminal court of that city, as conferred by the statutes above quoted. There is no provision in said house bill No. 118, 103 O. L., 112, making applicable to the criminal court of Lima the general statutory provisions conferring jurisdiction upon police courts and governing the procedure therein. In view of the absence of such provision, and the distinguishing title given to this court in the authoriration of its establishment, and the general policy of the law toward a strict construction of the criminal jurisdiction of courts, I am led to conclude that the Lima criminal court is not, for the purpose of determining its jurisdiction, a police court.

This limitation of the jurisdiction of the criminal court of Lima was called to the attention of the legislature by this department prior to the passage of house bill No. 118, which, to say the least, clearly evidences the purpose on the part of the legislature to so limit the jurisdiction of this court to offenses in violation of city ordinances and to discharging, recognizing or committing the accused in felony cases.

There is a striking similarity between sections 1 and 2 of house bill No. 118, supra, and sections 14696 and 14697 of the Appendix to the General Code, establishing and defining the jurisdiction of the criminal court of the city of Canton, Ohio. The only difference to be noted lies in the omission from section 1 of house bill No. 118, of the phrase "and of any misdemeanor committed within the limits of said city," found in said section 14696, G. C., App. From this it follows that the sole difference between the jurisdiction of the criminal court of the city of Canton, as conferred by said section 14696, supra, and that of the city of Lima, as conferred by section 1 of house bill No. 118, is that the former has jurisdiction of misdemeanors committed in violation of state law within the limits of said city, while there is no such jurisdiction conferred upon the criminal court of the city of Lima.

In the case of State ex rel. v. Oberlin, auditor, the court of appeals of Stark county, at the September term, 1914, held that the criminal court of Canton was essentially a police court within the meaning of section 3056, G. C., which provides for the payment of a certain portion of fines and penalties assessed and collected by the police court for offenses and misdemeanors, prosecuted in the name of the state, to the Law Library Association.

Following this decision, opinion No. 137 of this department, rendered under date of March 11, 1915, held that fines collected in prosecutions in the name of the state in the criminal court of the city of Lorain, should be disposed of in the same manner as if assessed by a police court. The issue before the court of appeals, and the question under consideration in rendering the opinion, involved only a construction of a civil statute (3056 G. C.), which does not directly affect personal rights, and, under the familiar rule of construction, is subject to a somewhat liberal interpretation to the end that its manifest purpose may be fully attained.

It is a well established principle of construction, that words and phrases must oftimes be given a very different interpretation when used in relation to a different subject matter, and it is not, therefore, in conflict or inconsistent with the decision of the court of appeals and the former opinion of this department with reference to the disposition of fines collected in the criminal courts of Canton and Lorain, to say, for the purpose of determining the criminal jurisdiction and power of the criminal court of Lima to punish individuals for criminal offenses that such court is not a police court within the meaning of section 4577, G. C., which defines the jurisdiction of police courts generally, or of the provisions of section 4527, G. C. Since, then, the criminal court of Lima is not a police court within the meaning of the terms of section 4577, G. C., and has no jurisdiction of misdemeanors committed in violation of state law, by virtue of said sections 1 and 2 of house bill No. 118, I am of the opinion that such court has no jurisdiction of the offense mentioned in your inquiry.

In reference to the jurisdiction of the mayor of the city of Lima of the offense under consideration, it will be observed that section 4527, G. C., confers upon mayors of cities not having a police court certain jurisdiction over violations of city ordinances.

Sections 4528 and 4532, G. C., provide as follows:

> "Section 4528. He shall have final jurisdiction to hear and determine any prosecution for a misdemeanor, unless the accused is, by the constitution, entitled to a trial by jury, and his jurisdiction in such cases shall be coextensive with the county.
> "Section 4532. If the charge is the commission of a misdemeanor, prosecuted in the name of the state, and the accused, being entitled to a jury, does not waive the right, the mayor may, nevertheless, impanel a jury, and try the case of the affidavit, in the same manner, and with like effect, as such cases are tried in the court of common pleas on the indictment."

By force of the provisions of section 4528, G. C., supra, the mayor of the city, not having a police court, has final jurisdiction of all misdemeanors committed within the county, when the accused is not under the constitution entitled to a trial by jury. From this, it conclusively follows that, if the affidavit does not charge a second offense, so that the punishment may be only a fine, the defendant has no constitutional right to a trial by a jury, and the mayor has final jurisdiction of the offense. If a second offense is charged, thus rendering the accused liable to punishment by imprisonment, and therefore entitled to a jury trial, then under the provisions of section 4532, G. C., the mayor has jurisdiction, if the accused does not waive the same, to impanel a jury and try the case on affidavit, as such cases are tried in the common pleas court on indictment. That is to say, the mayor has jurisdiction to impanel a jury and try the case, whether the accused has a constitutional right to a trial by jury by reason of a part of the punishment authorized being imprisonment or the accused has only a statutory right to a trial by jury, under the provisions of section 1261-69, G. C., 103 O. L., 239, hereinbefore referred to. This he may decline to do, however, if, in his opinion, the public interest will be thereby promoted, and having entered that fact on his minutes, upon inquiry, he may discharge, recognize to the common pleas court, or commit in default of bail. (Sec. 4533, G. C.)

As to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, attention is called to sub-division 8 of section 13423, G. C., 103 O. L., 539, which provides among other things that justices of the peace shall have jurisdiction within their respective counties, in all cases of violation of any law relating to:

> "The selling, giving away or furnishing of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, or keeping a place where such liquor is sold, given away or furnished in violation of any law prohibiting such acts within the limits of a township and without the limits of a municipal corporation."

It will be observed that the jurisdiction here conferred is limited to offenses committed in a township outside the limits of a municipal corporation, which township is dry under the township local option law. The jurisdiction here conferred can not, therefore, attach to offenses committed within the limits of the city of Lima.

There is no special statutory provision conferring jurisdiction of the offense of the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor within a municipal corporation by a licensee upon justices of the peace, and it therefore follows that the jurisdiction of justices, in such cases, is limited to the general jurisdiction of justices' courts over misdemeanors in violation of state law.

The general jurisdiction and authority of justices of the peace in matters of this character is defined as follows:

> "Section 13422: A justice of the peace shall be a conservator of the peace and have jurisdiction in criminal cases throughout the county in which he is elected and where he resides, on view or on sworn complaint, to cause a person, charged with the commission of a felony or misdemeanor, to be arrested and brought before himself or another justice of the peace, and, if such person is brought before him, to inquire into the complaint and either discharge or recognize him to be and appear before the proper court at the time named in such recognizance, or otherwise dispose of the complaint as provided by law. He also may hear complaints of the peace and issue search warrants.
> "Section 13510: When a person charged with a misdemeanor is brought before a magistrate on complaint of the party injured and pleads guilty thereto, such magistrate shall sentence him to such punishment as he may deem proper according to law, and order the payment of costs. If the complaint is not made by the party injured, and the accused pleads guilty, the magistrate shall require the accused to enter into a recognizance to appear at the proper court as is provided when there is no plea of guilty."
> "Section 13511: When the accused is brought before the magistrate and there is no plea of guilty, he shall inquire into the complaint in the presence of such accused. If it appear that an offense has been committed and that there is probable cause to believe the accused guilty, he shall order him to enter into a recognizance, with good and sufficient surety, in such amount as he deems reasonable, for his appearance at the proper time and before the proper court; otherwise he shall discharge him from custody. If the offense charged is a misdemeanor and the accused, in a writing subscribed by him and filed before or during the examination, waive a jury and submit to be tried by the magistrate, he may render final judgment."

It is hardly to be anticipated that the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor or licensee would be attended by such special or peculiar injury to any particular individual as to admit of the complaint being made by the injured party within the provisions of section 13510, G. C., supra. If the complaint is not made by the injured party and the accused enters a plea of guilty, the authority of the justice of the peace is limited to requiring the accused to enter into a recognizance to appear before the proper court at the proper time, or in default thereof to commit him to the county jail (Sec. 13528, G. C.), unless the accused in writing, subscribed by him and filed before or during the examination, waive a jury and submit to be tried by the magistrate, in which case the magistrate may render final judgment (Sec. 13511, G. C.). If there is no plea of guilty, the justice is required to inquire into the offense in the presence of the accused and if it appear that there is probable cause to believe that the accused is guilty, he shall order him to enter into a recognizance for his appearance at the proper time before the proper court, unless the accused shall, in writing, subscribed by him, waive a jury and submit to be tried by the justice, in which event the justice may then render final judgment.

Attention is called to the provisions of section 1261-71, G. C., 103 O. L., 240, as follows:

"No licensee, agent or employe of a licensee shall be held to answer for an offense under any laws or ordinances regulating the sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors before any probate court; or before any judicial officers whose court is held without the confines of the municipal corporation or township within which the offense is alleged to have been committed, except a judge of the common pleas court."

From this it follows that only justices of the peace, whose court is held within the confines of the city of Lima, would have any jurisdiction of the offense referred to in your inquiry.

Answering your inquiry more specifically, I am therefore of opinion that the criminal court of the city of Lima has no jurisdiction of the offense of the sale of intoxicating liquors to a minor by a licensee. The mayor of the city of Lima has jurisdiction of such offense when committed within the city of Lima. The jurisdiction of a justice of the peace of the township in which the city of Lima is located, is limited as to such offenses committed within the city of Lima and such township to that conferred by sections 13422, 13510, 13511 and 13528, G. C.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

JOINT COUNTY ROAD IMPROVEMENT—PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED UNDER SECTION 6930, G. C.—HOW COST AND EXPENSE TO BE PAID.

A petition for a joint county road improvement, filed under section 6930, G. C., must indicate the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses desired by the petitioners. If such a petition does not specify the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses desired by the petitioners, the joint board of county commissioners is without jurisdiction to act on the petition.

The respective proportions of the costs and expenses of a joint county road improvement payable by each county must be raised by the same method in each county, which method is to be set forth in the petition when the joint board is acting upon a petition and is to be determined by the joint board when acting without a petition.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1916.

HON. FRANKLIN J. STALTER, Prosecuting Attorney, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, and HON. DONALD F. MELHORN, Prosecuting Attorney, Kenton, Ohio.

DEAR SIRS:—Your joint letter addressed to me under date of January 28, 1916, was received on March 3d, and reads as follows:

"Proceedings for a joint county road improvement are being contemplated by the Wyandot and Hardin county boards of county commissioners, the proposed road improvement being on the county line between Hardin and Wyandot counties. Several legal questions have presented themselves in connection with this improvement that are, we think, of interest over the state generally, and we therefore respectfully solicit your opinion thereon.

"The first question is this: Must a petition for a joint county road improvement, filed under section 109 (G. C. 6930), indicate the method of paying costs and expenses that the petitioners prefer?

"We find nowhere in the statutes anything that expressly requires the method of paying costs and expenses to be stated in a joint county road petition, although such a statement seems to be required in the case of single county road petitions. (Sec. 98, G. C., 6916.)

"The second question really grows out of the first question and is this: The joint board, it seems, has no jurisdiction to grant the improvement prayed for in the road petition, unless 51 per cent. of the persons to be especially assessed have signed that petition (section 109, G. C., 6930). It cannot be determined, however, how many persons constitute the required 51 per cent. until the assessment area (which differs in extent, according to method of paying costs and expenses) is defined. If the petition itself does not specify which method of paying costs and expenses is preferred, and hence does not describe the assessment area, shall the joint board first determine that method, then ascertain whether the 51 per cent. have signed the petition, and then if these two things have been done take up the question whether the proposed improvement shall be granted?

"The third question is this: Whether after the joint board has granted the improvement, each county is at liberty to choose its own method of assessment, or whether the respective proportions of the costs and expenses, payable by each county, must be raised by the same method of assessment in each county?

"The first sentence of section 113 (G. C., 6934), apparently shows that the legislature contemplated the same method of paying the costs and expenses in each county:

" 'The joint board of county commissioners shall, at the time they grant such improvement, determine the method of payment therefor, which may be either of the methods authorized in the case of any improvement under the authority of a single board. * * *'

"That is, the joint board shall determine the method of payment, 'which may be either of the methods,' etc. It would seem that the joint board could avail itself of any of the eight methods provided for by section 98 (G. C., 6919), but could not adopt more than one method for the joint improvement. On the other hand, this same section, section 113 (G. C., 6934), also provides for a division between the counties of the costs and expenses of the improvement, and further requires each separate board of commissioners 'in the manner hereinafter specified' (evidently referring to section 119 G. C., 6940), to make its own special assessment necessary to defray its proportion of its said cost and expense. Furthermore, in case a bond issue is necessary to raise the funds to be contributed by each county, section 123, G. C., 6944, requires a separate issue in each county. In other words, the bonds are single county and not joint county obligations. From the sections just quoted in this paragraph, the common sense of the situation would seem to be this: That each county should be allowed to adopt whatever method of paying the costs and expense of the improvement they deem proper, regardless of the method chosen by the other county. But whether this is the law or not we are uncertain.

"We are advising our respective boards of commissioners not to take any action on the petition for this joint county road improvement until we can secure your opinion."

Your first question must, I think, be answered in the affirmative. Section 6919, G. C., which relates to improvements by single boards of county commissioners, provides that at the time an improvement is granted the commissioners shall determine the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses thereof, but such compensation, damages, costs and expenses are to be paid in the manner specified in the petition when the board is acting upon a petition.

Section 6942, G. C., provides that all the provisions of the statute relating to improvements wholly within one county shall, when applicable, unless otherwise specially provided, apply to improvements authorized by a joint board of commissioners. It is further true, as suggested by you in your discussion of the second question submitted, that a joint board of county commissioners, equally with a single board, would be unable to determine whether fifty-one per cent. of the persons to be specially assessed for an improvement had signed a petition unless the petition specified the method of paying compensation, damages, costs and expenses, inasmuch as the different methods provided by law contemplate radically different assessment districts or areas. I, therefore, advise you that a petition for a joint county road improvement, filed under section 6930, G. C., must indicate the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses desired by the petitioners.

The answer to your first question constitutes a substantial answer to your second. Your second question may be fully answered by the further observation that if the petition itself does not specify the method of paying the compensation, damages, costs and expenses desired by the petitioners, then the joint board of county commissioners is without jurisdiction to act on the petition.

Coming now to consider your third question, section 6934, G. C., contains the following provision:

"The joint board of county commissioners shall, at the time they grant such improvement, determine the method of payment therefor, which may be either of the methods authorized in the case of an improvement under the authority of a single board."

This provision would seem to vest in the joint board of county commissioners the discretion of determining the method of payment, but the provision must be read in connection with section 6932, G. C., which authorizes joint boards of county commissioners to proceed without petitions, and to initiate road improvements by the adoption of a resolution passed by a unanimous vote of the members. The provision must also be read in connection with the provisions relating to improvements by single boards of county commissioners, and I am of the opinion that the force and effect of this provision is only to vest discretion in the joint board in those cases where it is acting without a petition, and that when a joint board acts upon a petition it must order the compensation, damages, costs and expenses apportioned and paid in the manner specified in the petition.

The language of the provision above quoted is not such as to warrant the inference that the joint board might adopt one method of payment as to one county and another and different method as to a different county. Indeed, the provision is that the joint board shall determine the method of payment.

The provision of section 6934, G. C., to the effect that the joint board shall determine the proportion of the cost and expense of the improvement to be paid by the several counties interested therein must be read in the light of the provision of section 6930, G. C., giving joint boards jurisdiction when the proposed improvement is in two or more counties, or along the county line between two or more counties. In other words, a joint board not only has authority to construct a county line road, but also has authority to improve a road partly in one county and partly in another, and in the latter event it is important that the law clothe the joint board with authority to divide the cost in a manner other than upon the basis of an equal contribution by each county. The facts that each board of county commissioners makes the assesments against real estate located within its county, and issues the bonds for the proportion of the cost and expense to be borne by its county, are not sufficient to outweigh the plain inference arising from the language used in the first sentence of section 6934, G. C., to the effect that the joint board of county commissioners is to determine upon and adopt a method of payment, which method is to prevail in all the interested counties.

I, therefore, advise you, in answer to your third question, that the respective proportions of the cost and expenses payable by each county must be raised by the same method in each county, which method is to be set forth in the petition when the board is acting upon a petition, and is to be determined by the board when acting without a petition.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, VILLAGE OF NEW ALBANY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 30, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of the village of New Albany, Ohio, as follows: One issue of $3,600.00 in anticipation of special assessments to pay the property owners' share of the cost of constructing certain sidewalks, being six bonds of $600.00 each.

"One issue of $500.00 to pay the village's portion of constructing certain sidewalks, being five bonds of $100.00 each."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of the council and other officers of the village of New Albany, relative to the issuance of the above described bonds, also the bond and coupon form to be used in the preparation of said bonds, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code.

I am of the opinion that said bonds, drawn in accordance with the form submitted, and executed by the proper officials, will, upon delivery, constitute valid and binding obligations of said village of New Albany, Ohio.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION—COUNCIL MERGES DUTIES OF CLERK OF COUNCIL WITH DUTIES OF CITY AUDITOR—NO INCREASE OF SALARY FOR ADDITIONAL DUTIES DURING TERM OF OFFICE.

When a city council, under the provisions of section 4276, G. C., as amended, 106 O. L., 483, merges the duties of clerk of council with the duties of city auditor, the duties of said clerk thereby become and are the duties of said city auditor, and the latter, as such auditor, authenticates and verifies all matters and things required by law to be authenticated by the former.

During the term of office within which said merger is made no increase of salary or compensation may be allowed said auditor for the performance of said additional duties, section 4213, G. C. Council, however, may provide additional assistants for said auditor and fix and pay their compensation.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a letter from a city solicitor of a certain city in this state in which he states that on November 2, 1915, Mr. A. was elected auditor of said city; that on January 11, 1916, Mr. A. was by the council of said city elected clerk of council; that as auditor he receives a salary of $800.00 per year and as clerk of council he receives $250.00 per year. The letter then states:

"If the council now passes an ordinance which merely provides that the duties of the offices of auditor and clerk of the council shall be merged, that the auditor, by virtue of his office as such, shall be clerk of the council, saying nothing about salary, what would be your opinion on the following points:

"First. In authenticating legislation and performing similar duties heretofore performed by the clerk of council, should he sign his name as clerk of council, or merely as city auditor?

"Second. Would he be entitled to receive his salary as auditor, and also the salary now paid him as clerk of council? This question is of some practical importance for the reason that it will not be necessary to give him additional assistance, and that if there are no objections we would prefer to allow the salaries to stand as they are at this time, so that if council at some time in the future decides to repeal the ordinance merging the duties of the two offices it will not be necessary to rearrange the salaries again."

Deeming the matters presented in this letter of some importance, I am, in accordance with the established rules of this department, addressing my answer thereto to you.

It is provided in section 4276, G. C., as amended 106 O. L., 483, that:

"In cities having a population of less than twenty thousand the city council may, by a majority vote, merge the duties of the clerk of the waterworks, if any, clerk of the board of control and clerk of the city council with the duties of the city auditor, allowing him such additional assistants in performing such additional duties as council may determine."

When by virtue of these provisions a city council of the class named in said statute, by a majority vote, merges the duties of clerk of council with the duties of auditor, the duties of the former then and thereby become and are the duties of the latter. In other words, after such merger is completed as provided by law all the duties heretofore devolving upon both positions become and are the duties of the city auditor alone. It necessarily follows from this that the city auditor performs and discharges all of such duties when so merged, not as clerk, but as city auditor, and in the latter capacity must certify and authenticate all matters and things which by law are required to be authenticated by the clerk of council as well as the city auditor.

Answering the first question submitted above specifically, I am of the opinion that when a city council, under the provisions of section 4276, supra, by a majority vote, merges the duties of clerk of council with the duties of city auditor, the duties of said clerk thereby become and are the duties of said city auditor and that the latter as such auditor authenticates and verifies all matters and things required by law to be authenticated by the city clerk.

Referring now to the second inquiry as above submitted: it appears from the statement which accompanies said inquiry that the auditor in question was elected on November 2, 1915, and is therefore now serving as auditor of said city by virtue of said election. If the duties of said clerk are now merged by council with the duties of his office, said merger must necessarily be made during the instant term of office. This being so, he may not, therefore, receive additional salary or compensation during said instant term because such additional salary or compensation is prohibited by the terms of section 4213, G. C., which provides as follows:

"The salary of any officer, clerk or employe shall not be increased or diminished during the term for which he was elected or appointed. * * *"

By reason, therefore, of the foregoing provisions of said section 4213, supra, the auditor in question would be precluded from receiving any additional compensation during his present term of office. Council, however, may furnish him assistants to perform said additional duties imposed upon him and may provide and prescribe the compensation to be paid such assistants, but should said auditor elect to perform all such additional duties himself he may not receive any additional compensation therefor during his present term of office.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

REISSUE OF LOST OR DESTROYED BONDS AND CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS—INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 2295-5, G. C., 106 O. L., 303—PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED FOR MAKING DUPLICATE COPIES OF SUCH LOST INSTRUMENTS.

Duplicate copies of lost or destroyed securities provided for in section 2295-5, G. C., 106 O. L., 303, may be either written or printed.

Fac-simile copies are not required. An exact copy of the original security shall be made and marked "duplicate," and it would be good practice on the part of the issuing officer of the taxing subdivision issuing the original to attach a certificate as to the duplicate's being a true copy.

Issuing officer should exact satisfactory proof as to loss or destruction of original and is also empowered to exact proper indemnity.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1916.

HON. JOHN V. CAMPBELL, Prosecuting Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Your favor of March 25, 1916, asking for an opinion relative to the operation of section 2295-5 of the General Code (106 O. L., 303), is as follows:

> "We respectively request an opinion from your office as to the proper mode of procedure under house bill 219, passed by the general assembly May 14 1915, and appearing in 106 Ohio Laws, page 303.
> "In one of the taxing districts of this county a bond has been lost and the person alleging the loss desires a duplicate. The said act of the general assembly simply provides that whenever bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness issued by such taxing district are lost or destroyed, the district may reissue to the holder or holders, duplicates thereof in the same form and signed as the original obligations were signed. As a usual thing the plates from which such bonds are printed are destroyed at the time of issue, and in the specific instance in question the officers of the subdivision who signed the bond have all left office and some are dead.
> "The following questions, therefore, arise and are submitted to you by us for an opinion:
> "1. If a taxing district has issued bonds, either engraved or lithographed, and the plate has been destroyed, which is the usual custom, and the officers of the subdivision who signed the bond have long since left office, and some are dead, how shall the duplicate bond be drawn and signed?

"In the event that the prior officers are living, but not holding office, may they sign the bond; and if they refuse, is there any method of compelling them to do so?

"3. In the event a duplicate of the original lithographed bond is available, does the statute permit the present officers of the subdivision to sign their names thereto as such officers, or may they sign the names of the former officers in the event that they are dead, not available, or refuse to sign?

"4. In the event that the original lithographed form cannot be procured, may manuscript bonds be given instead of lithographed bonds,as the cost of making the new plate would be more than the face value of the bond in most instances?

"5. Who is authorized to pass upon the proof of loss or destruction, and who is to approve the sufficiency of sureties on the bond given as indemnity against loss or liability on account of the obligations lost or destroyed?

"It will be noted that the section requires the reissue to holders of duplicates in the same form and signed as the original obligations were signed. It appears on the face of the act therefore, that if a bond was issued fifteen or twenty years ago, it must still be signed as the original was signed, in order that the statute may be complied with, which, of course, in a large number of cases will be an impossibility on account of deaths and removals.

"I regret to trouble you in this matter but feel that uniformity of procedure throughout the state is desirable and necessary in a matter of this kind, and, feeling grave doubts as to the manner and possibility of carrying this act out in practice, I feel required to submit the matter for your opinion."

Section 2295-5 of the General Code (106 O. L., 303), is as follows:

"Whenever bonds, notes or certificates of indebtedness, issued by a municipal corporation, school district, county, township, or other political subdivision or taxing district of this state, are lost or destroyed, said corporation, school district, county, township, subdivision or district may reissue to the holder or holders duplicates thereof in the same form and signed as the original obligations were signed, which obligation so issued shall plainly show upon its face as being a duplicate of such lost bond, note or certificate, upon proof of such loss or destruction and upon being furnished with a bond of indemnity against all loss or liability for or on account of the obligations so lost or destroyed.

The purpose of the section above quoted is to place in the hands of the owner of a security which has been lost or destroyed as nearly as possible a duplicate of such lost or destroyed security. This purpose is fully accomplished by the furnishing of an exact copy of the original security including the signatures, which copy may be either written or printed. However, the section does not require that the duplicate shall be a fac-simile reproduction of the original security. In other words, the duplicate which is contemplated is the same as a certified copy of any record, and the issuing officer in the preparation of the duplicate should, of course, use the names of the original signers of the security, that is, reproduce the security in the exact form of the original insofar as the contents of the same are concerned.

Therefore, in answer to your first four questions, it is my opinion that by duplicates of lost or destroyed securities referred to in section 2295-5 of the General Code supra, are meant copies of the original record reproduced as nearly as possible in the form of the original. The entire contents of the original security must be recited as originally, but a fac-simile copy is not required. As a suggestion I would say that to make a copy of the original security and to follow the same by a certificate of the issuing officer to the effect that it was a true copy of the lost or destroyed security would be sufficient.

Coming to your fifth question as to

> "Who is authorized to pass upon the proof of loss or destruction, and who is to approve the sufficiency of sureties on the bond given as indemnity against loss or liability on account of the obligations lost or destroyed?"

it is my opinion that the issuing officer or officers of the taxing subdivision originally issuing the bond should exact such proof as would be satisfactory and conclusive and which would justify the issuance of a duplicate security and that the same officer or officers would be clothed with the power of exacting indemnity against all loss or liability to carry out the purpose of the statutes.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, VILLAGE OF EAST VIEW, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 1, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

> "RE:—Village of East View, bonds in anticipation of the collection of special assessments for the improvement of Kinsman road from the easterly limits of East View village to the center line of East View avenue, by constructing storm and sanitary sewers therein, amounting to $84,392.00, being one bond of $392.00, and eighty-four bonds of $1,000.00 each."

I have examined the transcript of the proceedings of council and other officers of the village of East View relative to the issuance of the above bonds, also the bond and coupon form attached thereto, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code of Ohio.

I am of the opinion that said bonds drawn in accordance with the form submitted, when executed by the proper officers, will, upon delivery, constitute valid and binding obligations of said village of East View, Ohio.

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER—CONTRACT BETWEEN STATE AND THE YOUNT & JACKSON COMPANY—WITHOUT AUTHORITY IN LAW UNDER FACTS SUBMITTED.

Under the facts submitted, there is not now in existence any contract between the state of Ohio and the Yount & Jackson Company for the construction of a certain section of inter-county highway in Geauga county, and the state highway commissioner is at present without authority to enter into such contract. When a proper certificate has been executed by the auditor of Geauga county, and a written agreement on the part of the commissioners of that county to assume in the first instance that part of the cost and expense of the improvement over and above the amount to be paid by the state, has been made and filed in the office of the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the attorney-general endorsed thereon as to form and legality, the state highway commissioner may award the contract to the Yount & Jackson Company, and enter into a contract with that company, provided the company is willing to enter into such contract. If the Yount & Jackson Company is unwilling to enter into such contract, it will be the duty of the state highway commissioner, when the conditions precedent have been fully complied with, to again advertise for bids.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWEN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 28, 1916, which communication reads as follows:

"Permit me to direct your attention to a copy of a letter under date of March 20, 1916, from the Yount & Jackson Company, requesting a release from the bond submitted with their proposal for the improvement of section 'H' of the Burton-Bloomfield road, I. C. H. No. 447, in Geauga county.

"The facts as I understand them from actual knowledge, correspondence and hearsay, are as follows:

"Under date of September 10, 1915, this department received bids for the improvement of the above mentioned section of I. C. H. No. 447, the estimated cost of the work being $36,008.20, the Yount & Jackson Company proposing to complete the work for the sum of $29,000.00, which was the lowest bid received. These bids were received after due notice by publication without this department having received from the county commissioners a so-called final resolution with the certification of the auditor that the county's share of the cost of the improvement was in the treasury properly accredited. It was our understanding that the industrial commission agreed to purchase bonds issued by the county, and that the money would be in the county treasury and available very shortly after the bids were received. It seems that the prosesuting attorney of Geauga county has had some difficulty with the legislation in connection with the issuance of these bonds, and that the industrial commission has just accepted the bonds, but we are still without proper certification on the final resolution by the auditor of Geauga county.

"The form of agreement between the state and the contractor bears the signature of the Yount & Jackson Company and has the written approval of the board of county commissioners of Geauga county, but has never been signed by the state highway commissioner.

"Viewing the request of the Yount & Jackson Company in the light of the above statement of facts, I respectfully request an opinion from your office as to the duties of this department in the matter."

The attached copy of the letter from the Yount & Jackson Company reads as follows:

> "On September 10, 1915, we were the successful bidder on section 'H' of the Burton-Bloomfield road in Geauga county, and since that time have no end of correspondence with the officials of that county regarding the sale of bonds to cover the county's portion of that improvement, and as six months have now elapsed, and we have not been able to touch the work, which has a completion date of September 1st, this year, and considering the fact that we already have three and one-half miles of other state highway which must be completed by June 1st and August 1st, we feel that we should not be asked to drag this contract out indefinitely, and ask therefore to be released from the bond submitted with our proposal for the work."

An answer to your question involves a consideration of the order in which the several steps looking toward the co-operative improvement of a highway by the state and a county should be taken. Such an improvement is, under the provisions of section 1191, G. C., to be initiated by an application made by the county commissioners to the state highway commissioner. The next step is the approval of the application by the state highway commissioner, in accordance with the provisions of section 1195, G. C., which further provides that he shall certify his approval to the county commissioners. Under section 1196, G. C., it becomes the duty of the state highway commissioner, when he approves an application, to cause a map of the road to be made and also plans, specifications, profiles and estimates for the improvement. Under section 1199, G. C., the state highway commissioner is required, upon the completion of the maps, surveys, profiles, plans, specifications and estimates, to cause the same to be transmitted to the commissioners, with his certificate of approval endorsed thereon. Under section 1200, G. C., the county commissioners, upon the receipt of the surveys, maps, plans, profiles, specifications and estimates, may by resolution adopt the same and provide that the improvement be made, and if they take this action they must transmit a certified copy of their resolution to the state highway commissioner. Under section 1206, G. C., the state highway commissioner, upon the receipt of such certified copy of the resolution of the county commissioners, is required to advertise for bids. It is provided, however, by section 1218, G. C., that no contract shall be let by the state highway commissioner in a case where the county commissioners are to contribute a part of the cost of said improvement unless the county commissioners of the county in which the improvement is located shall have made a written agreement to assume in the first instance that part of the cost and expense of the improvement over and above the amount to be paid by the state, which agreement must be filed in the office of the state highway commissioner, with the approval of the attorney-general endorsed thereon as to form and legality. Since the agreement which the county commissioners are required to made is one involving the expenditure of money, the provisions of section 5660, G. C. are applicable, the section in question reading as follows:

> "The commissioners of a county, the trustees of a township and the board of education of a school district, shall not enter into any contract, agreement or obligation involving the expenditure of money, or pass any resolution or order for the appropriation or expenditure of money, unless the auditor or clerk thereof, respectively, first certifies that the money required for the payment of such obligation or appropriation is in the treasury to the credit of the fund from which it is to be drawn, or has been levied and placed on the duplicate, and in process of collection and not appropriated for any other purpose; money to be derived from lawfully authorized bonds sold and in process of delivery shall, for the purpose of this section, be deemed in the > treasury and in the appropriate fund. Such certificate shall be filed and forthwith recorded, and the sums so certified shall not thereafter be considered unappropriated until the county, township or board of education is fully discharged from the contract, agreement or obligation, or as long as the order or resolution is in force."

It appears from your statement of facts that on September 10, 1915, when bids for the proposed Geauga county inter-county highway improvement were received, there was not on file in your office, and had not at that time been made any agreement, as required by section 1218, G. C., or, if such an agreement had then been made by the commissioners, a proper certificate had not been made by the county auditor of Geauga county in compliance with the provisions of section 5660, G. C. Although bids were received and opened on September 10, 1915, and a contract was thereafter drawn and was executed by the Yount & Jackson Company, the low bidder, yet the state highway commissioner was without authority at that time to let any contract and is still without such authority, in view of the fact that no proper certificate has yet been made by the county auditor of Geauga county in compliance with the provisions of section 5660, G. C. It may, therefore, be safely asserted that there is not now in existence any contract between the state of Ohio and the Yount & Jackson Company for the construction of the road in question and that your department is still without authority to enter into such a contract. The same conclusion would necessarily be reached if the proceedings were to be regarded as governed by the former law, inasmuch as the pertinent statutory provisions were not substantially changed by the Cass highway law.

Coming now to consider the proper action to be taken by your department, it is apparent that you are without authority to take any action whatever until a proper certificate has been executed by the county auditor of Geauga county, in compliance with the provisions of section 5660, G. C., and until the written agreement on the part of the county commissioners of Geauga county to assume, in the first instance, that part of the cost and expense of the improvement over and above the amount to be paid by the state has been made and filed in your office, with the approval of the attorney-general endorsed thereon as to form and legality. If such certificate and agreement are made, and if the agreement is filed in your office with the proper approval endorsed thereon, it is my opinion that you may then award the contract to the Yount & Jackson Company and enter into a contract with that company, provided the company is still willing to enter into such contract. It appears, however, from the letter of the company that it is very unlikely that the company will now be willing to enter into a contract for the construction of this road, and, in view of the facts above set forth and of the further fact that, as I am informed, this company was, during the fall of 1915, ready and willing at all times to enter into a contract and insistent that it be allowed to begin work on the improvement, I am of the opinion that the company can not at this late date be considered as bound by its proposal made on the 10th day of September, 1915, and that the company and its surety could not at this late date be considered as bound by the terms of its proposal bond to enter into a contract with the state of Ohio for the construction and completion of the improvement in question. The statutes above referred to contemplate that at the time bids are opened for the construction of an improvement under the supervision of your department all preliminary matters will have been disposed of and that the agreement required by section 1218, G. C., and the certificate required by section 5660, G. C., will have been made and filed in your office, with the proper approval endorsed thereon. Section 1206, G. C., provides that contracts shall be awarded by the state highway commissioner to the lowest and best bidder. The state highway commissioner would not, of course, be required to determine on the very day that bids were opened the question of which bidder is the lowest and best bidder.

The law vests in the state highway commissioner a measure of discretion in determining which of several bidders is the lowest and best and contemplates that the commissioner may, after the opening of bids and the determination of the amounts thereof, employ a reasonable time in investigating the financial responsibility of bidders and their skill, experience and business reputation, in order that he may properly exercise the discretion vested in him. It is not contemplated, however, that the state highway commissioner shall receive and open bids in advance of the time when he is authorized to award a contract and hold in abeyance for a long period of time the awarding of the contract, pending such time as the proper agreement and certificate may be filed in his office, with the possible contingency that such agreement and certificate will never be made.

The Yount & Jackson Company had a right to assume, when it filed its bid for the construction of the improvement in question, that all preliminary requirements had been complied with and that the state highway commissioner was authorized to accept the lowest and best bid and enter into a contract. As previously observed, the state highway commissioner would be allowed a reasonable time to make proper investigation and exercise the discretion vested in him to select the lowest and best bidder. It is unnecessary to discuss, in this connection, what might be regarded as a reasonable time for the exercise of this discretion, as the facts in this case are that the contract has not been awarded because the state highway commissioner has been without authority to award the same and the delay has not been due to an investigation on his part of the responsibility of the bidders. Over six months have elapsed since the bids for this improvement were opened and it appears that the state highway commissioner long since determined that the Yount & Jackson Company was the lowest and best bidder. The failure to enter into a contract has been due to the fact that conditions precedent to the taking and opening of bids were not and have not been complied with and I advise you that if the Yount & Jackson Company is now unwilling to enter into a contract and refuse so to do, said company will be within its rights in so refusing and would not be liable on its proposal bond. In such an event it will become your duty, when the conditions precedent have been fully complied with, as set forth above, to again advertise for bids and upon the opening of the same to award the contract to the lowest and best bidder.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, SYNOPSIS FOR INITIATIVE LAW TO PROVIDE FREE TEXT BOOKS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS—RESUBMITTED.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 3, 1916.

MR. C. B. GRONIGER, Gallia Street, Portsmouth, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have resubmitted to me for my certificate a synopsis to be embodied in an initiative petition proposing "An act to provide free text books and supplies for all pupils in the public schools of Ohio, and creating a state text book board, and to repeal certain sections of the General Code," being the same synopsis submitted to me on March 23, 1916, and approved by me in opinion No. 1412 addressed to you on that date, the necessity for such resubmission and approval being that a change has been made in the repealing clause of the proposed bill and the consequent change in the synopsis, said synopsis now being in the following words:

"The law proposed by initiative petition to be submitted to the general assembly of the state of Ohio: 'An act to provide for free text books and supplies for all pupils in the public schools of Ohio, and to create a state school text book board, and to repeal section 7709, 7710, 7711, 7712, 7713, 7714, 7715, 7716, of the general code,' is intended to furnish free text books and supplies for all pupils in the public schools of the state. It is intended thereby to create a state school text book board, whose duty it shall be to secure from every publisher, one or more of whose books is used in any of the public schools of the state, and from other publishers, the prices at which they will agree to furnish the books and supplies, beginning August 1, 1917. It shall be left to the board to devise a system of ordering and delivering the books and supplies to the various boards in the state, and of paying the publishers therefor.

"It further provides that all the expense of the board and the cost of the text books and supplies shall be paid out of the general revenue fund of the state."

I hereby certify that the foregoing synopsis is a truthful statement of the contents and purpose of the above entitled proposed law.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES—APPOINTMENT OF TOWNSHIP HIGHWAY SUPERINTENDENT—HOW REMOVAL OF SUCH APPOINTEE MAY BE ACCOMPLISHED.

A board of township trustees, while in terms authorized by the statute to remove a township highway superintendent only for certain specified causes set forth in the statute, may at any time accomplish the same result and terminate the tenure in office of such township highway superintendent by appointing a successor and such action will be effective and will terminate the authority of the former appointee as soon as his successor so appointed has qualified.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1916.

HON. HUGH F. NEUHART, Prosecuting Attorney, Caldwell, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of February 16, 1916, in which you state that the township trustees of the several townships in Noble county, shortly after September 6, 1915, the date of the going into effect of the Cass highway law, acting under section 75 of that act, section 3370, G. C., divided the townships into road districts and appointed township highway superintendents, who gave bond and qualified as required by law.

You observe that you are unable to find where the law fixes any definite period for which township highway superintendents are appointed and inquire whether a board of township trustees, elected in November, 1915, and who took office in January, 1916, may remove a township highway superintendent or superintendents without cause, on the ground that the old board of trustees had no appointive power that would extend beyond their term of office.

So much of section 3370, G. C., as is pertinent to your inquiry, reads as follows:

"* * * The trustees of the township shall appoint for each road district a superintendent, who shall be known as township highway superintendent and who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. * * * He may be removed by the township trustees or the county highway superintendent for incompetence or gross neglect of duty."

You are correct in observing that a township highway superintendent is not appointed for any definite term. The appointing power is lodged in the township trustees and the power of removal for cause may be exercised either by the appointing power or by the county highway superintendent. The causes for which a township highway superintendent may be removed are enumerated in the statute and it is well settled that where the cause is thus specified, it amounts to a prohibition of a removal for a different cause.

Mechem on Public Offices and Officers, Section 450.

If it were not for another provision found in the language now under consideration, the conclusion would be inevitable that a township highway superintendent, once appointed, holds his office until removed either by the township trustees or the county highway superintendent for one of the causes set forth in the statute. In the view that I take of the law, it is very important, however, to consider the force and effect of the provision that the township highway superintendent shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified.

Provisions of this character are more generally found in statutes relating to officers elected or appointed for a fixed term, and the object of the legislature in enacting such provisions, and making them applicable to officers elected or appointed for a fixed term, is to prevent vacancies, which vacancies might interfere with the administration of the public business. The language in question could not have been used for that purpose in the statute now under consideration, for the reason that the township highway superintendent does not have a fixed term. If the language "who shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified" had been omitted from the statute, it would, as before suggested, be clear not only that the term of the township highway superintendent is indefinite, but also that he can be removed only for the causes set forth in the statute. To reach the same conclusion upon the statute as framed would read out of the section the language above quoted, and deny to it any force and effect whatever. It is my view that the language in question was used by the legislature for the purpose of indicating that the incumbency in office of a township highway superintendent might be terminated at any time by the appointment of a successor, and the qualification of such successor. In other words, the provision that the township highway superintendent shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified, and the provision that he may be removed for certain causes, are entirely independent.

It will be noted that the township highway superintendent may be removed for the causes specified in the statute, not only by the appointing authority, the township trustees, but also by the county highway superintendent. It would not be contended that if the county highway superintendent removed a township highway superintendent for incompetence or gross neglect of duty, such superintendent so removed would continue to hold his office until such time as the township trustees of his township might choose to appoint a successor. Such a construction would, in effect, made the action of the county highway superintendent, in removing a township highway superintendent for cause, subject to the approval of the township trustees, and it is manifest that this was not intended by the legislature.

In view of the foregoing I think it may fairly be concluded that it was the intention of the legislature to authorize the removal of a township highway superintendent for incompetence or gross neglect of duty at any time, the removal to be made by the township trustees or the county highway superintendent. In case the removal is made by the county highway superintendent for one of the specified causes, there will necessarily be a vacancy in the office until such time as the township trustees may hold a meeting and fill the same. It is even conceivable that in a case where the removal is made by the township trustees, there might be a vacancy in the office for a time, for the reason that the township trustees, after exercising their power of removal for cause, might be unable to agree as to the appointment of a successor. If the township highway superintendent is not removed for cause he holds his office until his successor is appointed and qualified, but it is within the power of the township trustees to at any time appoint a successor to a township highway superintendent in office, and as soon as such successor has qualified the tenure in office of the old township highway superintendent will cease, and the new appointee will become the township highway superintendent for the district in question. In other words, the township highway superintendent may be removed either by the township trustees or by the county highway superintendent at any time for the causes set forth in the statute, or his tenure in office may be terminated by the township trustees at any time by the appointment and qualification of a successor. Any other conclusion would destroy the force and effect of the provision to the effect that the township highway superintendent shall serve until his successor is appointed and qualified. This provision could not have been intended by the legislature to prevent a vacancy occurring by the expiration of a term and the failure of the appointing authority to act, for the reason that the township highway superintendent has no definite term. The only other purpose that can be suggested for the use of the language in question, in view of the fact that the township highway superintendent has no fixed term, and that his term therefore cannot expire, is that the legislature intended to vest in the township trustees the power to at any time terminate the incumbency in office of a township highway superintendent by appointing a successor, and that the tenure of the township highway superintendent in office at the time the new appointment was made should cease as soon as the new appointee had qualified.

I therefore advise you that a board of township trustees, elected in November, 1915, and now in office, while in terms authorized to remove a township highway superintendent only for causes set forth in the statute, may at any time accomplish the same result, and terminate the tenure in office of such township highway superintendent by appointing a successor, and that such action will be effective and will terminate the authority of the former appointee as soon as his successor so appointed has qualified.

This conclusion is based on the language of section 3370, G. C., rather than on any lack of power on the part of the trustees to make an appointment extending beyond the term of office for which they were elected.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

NATURALIZATION FEES—CLERK OF COURTS NOT AUTHORIZED TO RETAIN SUCH FEES—SHOULD BE PAID INTO COUNTY TREASURY.

Since the adoption of the General Code on February 15, 1910, the clerk of courts is not authorized to retain that part of the naturalization fees received by him which is not paid by him to the United States Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, but the same should be turned into the county treasury.

As to whether or not findings should be made for such amounts heretofore received and not turned into the county treasury, since February 15, 1910, is left to the determination of the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1916.

Bureau of Inspection and Supervision of Public Offices, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Under date of March 16th you wrote me as follows:

> "We are enclosing herewith copy of opinion of Judge Collister in the Cuyahoga court of common pleas in the case of The State of Ohio, ex rel., Cyrus Locher, as prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, plaintiff, v. Charles S. Horner and the Bankers Surety Company, Defendants, in which the court held that the clerk of courts is required to account to his fee fund for the portion of naturalization fees received by him. This decision of the court reverses an opinion upon this subject rendered by Hon. Wade H. Ellis, attorney-general; see attorney-general's report 1907-1908, page 224; also the opinion of the court of appeals of the second district in the case of M. R. Talbot, v. State, ex rel., Houston.
> "What will be the attitude of this bureau on this question should you hold that the examiners of this department shall make findings against clerks of courts for the return of such fees retained by them, and how far back shall they go in making these findings?"

We have carefully considered the opinion rendered by Judge Collister in the case of State ex rel. Locher, Prosecuting Attorney v. Horner, et al., in the common pleas court of Cuyahoga county. This was an action brought by the prosecuting attorney against Horner for the amount of $6,000.00 retained by him out of the naturalization fees received by him from the United States government during the period the said Horner was clerk of courts, to wit, for the period commencing on the first Monday of August, 1911, and continuing for two years thereafter. The common pleas court held that under the provisions of section 2977, as the same was carried into the General Code (which General Code became operative on February 15, 1910), the said Horner should not have retained the same for his own use but should have turned the same over to the county treasurer.

In the case of M. R. Talbot v. State ex rel. Houston, prosecuting attorney, decided in the court of appeals of Champaign county, the said court had for consideration whether or not M. R. Talbot, who was a former clerk of courts of Champaign county, was required to turn in the sum of $9.50, being one-half of the fees for the naturalization of aliens received by him as clerk during the period of his incumbency of such office, to wit, for a period of three years commencing on the first Monday of August, 1906. The court in this later case considered sections 1 and 18 of the original county salary act, as the same was passed on March 22, 1906, and did not consider the provisions of the General Code as adopted in 1910.

Section 1 of the act of March 22, 1906, provided that all fees, etc., "which by law may now be collected by the clerk of courts should be received and collected by him for the sole use of the treasury of the county; and section 18 of the act provided that the salaries fixed should be in lieu of all fees, etc., which any of the officials named in the statute "may now collect and receive."

In the act of March 22, 1906, it was provided that said act was not to go into effect until January 1, 1907. However, it is apparent from an examination of the decision in the case of Talbot v. State ex rel Houston that the court of Appeals has determined that the word "now," as used in sections 1 and 18 of the act, referred to the time of the passage of the act and not to the time of the going into effect of the same, for the reason that the act of the United States granting naturalization fees was not passed until June 29, 1906. In said case the court held that Talbot was entitled to retain the fees received by him and was not required to turn the same over to the county.

In the case decided by the court of appeals that court referred to the case decided by Judge Collister, hereinbefore referred to, and stated in reference thereto as follows:

> "It appears from the statement of the case, however, that Horner's term of office did not commence until the first Monday in August, 1911, more than a year after the present provisions of the General Code took effect."

Consequently, the Talbot case cannot be considered in any way as reflecting upon the decision in the Horner case.

Under date of March 13, 1916, Hon. Cyrus Locher, prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county, wrote me as follows:

> "Answering your letter of sometime ago enclosing newspaper clipping from the court of appeals of Urbana, regarding the naturalization fees of county clerks, will say that in our suit of myself v. Horner, former county clerk, we secured a judgment of approximately $1,100.00, and the same has been paid into the county treasury."

It therefore appears that so far as the Horner case is concerned no further action will be taken.

In regard to the Talbot case, I am in receipt of a letter from Hon. Harold W. Houston, prosecuting attorney of Champaign county, under date of March 28, 1916, in which he states that it is not his present intention to take the case of M. R. Talbot, plaintiff in error, v. State ex rel Houston, prosecuting attorney, defendant in error, involving naturalization fees received by clerk of courts, to the supreme court.

It appears therefore that neither of the cases is to proceed higher.

In view of the two decisions referred to I would advise you that your examiners should not make any findings against clerks of courts for naturalization fees which they received and retained prior to the adoption of the General Code on February 15, 1910, and did not turn into the county treasury, but that findings may be made for the recovery of that part of the naturalization fees which were received and retained by clerks of courts subsequent to that date and not accounted for to the county treasury.

It is to be noted that the case of State ex rel Locher, prosecuting attorney, v. Horner was an action, as before stated, for the amount of $6,000.00 retained by Horner out of naturalization fees received by him as clerk from the United States Government, and that in the letter of Mr. Locher, under date of March 13, 1916, he advises that a judgment for approximately $1,100.00 was recovered. Mr. Locher advises us that the reason the judgment in the case was for approximately $1,100.00 rather than $6,000.00 was that the defendant proved on the trial of the case that he had expended the larger part of the $6,000.00 sued for in the way of clerk hire and postage in connection with the naturalization department, and that such expenditures were made on the advice of the attorney general pursuant to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Wade H. Ellis, addressed to the prosecuting attorney of Lorain county, and that the prosecuting attorney of Cuyahoga county at that time confirmed said opinion and requested defendant to act on same; that the trial court charged the jury as follows:

> "I charge you that if, acting on the advice of the attorney general, the county prosecutor and the instructions of the state accounting bureau, you find such officers so advised and instructed that the part of the fees authorized by the naturalization act to be retained by the clerk performing naturalization services were to be retained by him and not accounted for as public moneys, and the defendant Horner retained such fees and expended the whole or any part thereof in payment of salaries to clerks for services performed and for expenses in doing said work, the plaintiff cannot recover more than the difference between the amount so expended by defendant Horner and $6,000.00 with interest on such difference from August 4, 1913."

Mr. Locher further advises us, however, that the present clerk of court of Cuyahoga county, ever since he has taken office, has regularly paid all naturalization fees into the county treasury, as the law provides.

It seems, therefore, that in the case against Horner the court was of the opinion that if the clerk acted on the advice of the attorney-general and his prosecuting attorney in regard to the naturalization fees, that although he was not entitled to be personally enriched by the receipt of naturalization fees, nevertheless, he was not liable for such amount of the naturalization fees received by him for which he was not required to account to the United States bureau of immigration and naturalization, and which he actually paid out by way of clerk hire in the matter.

It would be well for your department to consider not only the law as established by Judge Collister in the above case, but also the result of the case and the charge to the jury given by Judge Leighley, the trial judge.

In your letter of inquiry you further ask:

> "How far back shall they (the examiners) go in making these findings?"

That is a matter which I desire to leave to the administrative policy of your office, except to say that no findings shall be made for naturalization fees received and retained prior to the adoption of the General Code on February 15, 1910.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

INTERPRETATION OF SECTION 1529, G. C., 103 O. L., 414—WHEN JUDGE SHOULD BE PAID HIS EXPENSES IN EXAMINATION AND DECISION OF CASES HEARD OUTSIDE OF HIS DISTRICT.

Under the provisions of section 1529, G. C., as amended 103 O. L., 414, the time for which a judge may be paid as and for expenses in the examination and decision of cases heard by him must be devoted to such examination and decision outside of the district for which he was elected.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1916.

HON. REYNOLDS R. KINKADE, Judge Court of Appeals, Toledo, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your letter of March 11, 1916, requesting my opnion as to the interpretation of section 1529 of the General Code, as amended 103 O. L., 414. The facts under which your inquiry arises are stated by you as follows:

> "Where a court of appeals or a judge thereof goes to another district, under assignment provided for in section 1528, and, without remaining in that district to finish and decide all of the cases submitted, brings back to the home district certain of the cases heard, and there considers and decides them, is the time so spent in the home district considering and deciding cases, covered by section 1529 mentioned, so that an allowance of the per diem therein provided for should be made for each day so spent in the home district?"

Section 1529, G. C., as amended aforesaid, provides as follows:

> "A judge so assigned, shall be paid five dollars a day for expenses for each day he shall perform such judicial duties, including the time necessarily devoted to going to and returning from such assignment and to the examination and decision of cases heard by him while he is so engaged outside of the district for which he was elected. * * *"

The first and general clause of the foregoing law expresses its purpose which is to pay the expenses of a judge while performing duties outside of his home district. If this general clause stood alone, no difficulty would be had in giving it a proper interpretation. By two succeeding provisions, however, the legislature has included in the time for which a judge may be paid: (1) the time necessarily devoted to going to and returning from such assignment; (2) and (the time necessarily devoted) to the examination and decision of cases heard by him while he is so engaged outside of the district for which he was elected.

I am of the opinion that the concluding clause of this section "while he is so engaged outside of the district for which he was elected" imposes a condition upon all payments to be made under said section. That is to say, this clause is to be applied, in order to get the intention of the legislature, to each separate provision of the law and not alone to the provision in respect to the examination and decision of cases. So interpreted the statute would read:

> "A judge so assigned, shall be paid five dollars a day, while he is so engaged outside of the district for which he was elected, for expenses for each day he shall perform such judicial duties including the time while he is so engaged outside of the district for which he was elected necessarily devoted to going to and returning from such assignment and the time while he is so engaged outside of the district for which he was elected necessarily devoted to the examination and decision of cases heard by him."

In this view of the purpose of this law, it is manifest that only time spent outside of his home district may be included in his per diem allowance. I think the purpose of the last two additional provisions of this section was not only to provide full compensation for all expenses but in a measure to protect a judge from any embarrassment which might arise by reason of a comparison of his expense account with the time shown by the court records which he had devoted to the hearing and trial of cases. It certainly is apparent that the primary purpose of the statute is to compensate a judge for expenses and a construction of such statute which allows him expenses while at home is certainly not in harmony with its manifest purpose.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

FORM OF AGREEMENT FOR RESCISSION OF CONTRACT BETWEEN STATE AND THE ENGINEERING SERVICE COMPANY.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1916.

HON. CLINTON COWAN, State Highway Commissioner, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 10, 1916, which reads as follows:

"Under date of October 8th, this department entered into an agreement with The Engineering Service Company of Columbus, Ohio, for the construction of a section of road in Monroe township, Perry county. I am attaching hereto a copy of this agreement.

"Just after the date of the above agreement and before the Engineering Service Company had performed any actual work on the road, but after certain materials were placed by that company on the site of the proposed improvement to be used in its construction, it was ascertained that the proposed improvement had been let upon a line which seems to have been contemplated as a change from the original inter-county highway, but which change had never been actually and legally consummated.

"It now becomes necessary to nullify this agreement and I, therefore, respectfully request an opinion from your office as to the procedure to be followed by me in so doing and if it is necessary that any written agreement or other formality be executed, I respectfully request that you prepare same.

"The Engineering Service Company has advised me informally of its willingness to waive any and all rights under the above mentioned agreement."

The result desired by the parties to the contract referred to by you may be accomplished by the execution of an agreement substantially in the following form:

"AGREEMENT.

"Whereas, On the 8th day of October, A. D., 1915, the State of Ohio and The Engineering Service Company entered into an agreement by the terms of which agreement said The Engineering Service Company agreed to furnish all materials, appliances, tools and labor and perform all the work required for the construction of section "P" of the New Lexington-Athens road, I. C. H. No. 158, in Monroe township, Perry county, Ohio, petition No. 889, according to the plans and specifications and to the satisfaction and acceptance of the State of Ohio, for an agreed compensation of $41,453.00 to be paid by the State of Ohio to said The Engineering Service Company, and,

"Whereas, It now appears that by reason of mistake the plans and specifications call for this construction of said improvement upon a line which had never been legally designated as an inter-county highway,

"Now, Therefore,

"It is agreed between the State of Ohio and said The Engineering Service Company that said agreement above referred to be and the same is hereby rescinded and in consideration of this agreement each of said parties to said original agreement entered into on the 8th day of October, 1915, does hereby release and discharge the other, its successors and assigns, from all obligations under said original agreement, and from all debts, claims, demands, damages, actions and causes of action whatsoever growing out of said original agreement or out of the rescission thereof.

"In Witness Whereof, the parties have hereunto set their hands this ----------day of----------, 1916.

"THE STATE OF OHIO,

"By---- ----------

"State Highway Commissioner."

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, SYNOPSIS FOR INITIATIVE PETITION TO AMEND CONSTITUTION OF OHIO BY REPEALING ARTICLE XV, SECTION 10 CIVIL SERVICE.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1916.

HON. TIMOTHY S. HOGAN, Attorney-at-Law, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—You have submitted to me for my certificate a petition to initiate an amendment to the constitution of the state of Ohio, the synopsis of which reads as follows:

"That the constitution of the state of Ohio be amended by the repeal of section 10 of article XV thereof, relating to appointments and promotions in the civil service."

I hereby certify that the foregoing synopsis is a true statement regarding the above entitled proposed amendment.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

COUNTY ORPHANS' HOME LOCATED WITHIN MUNICIPAL CORPORATION ENTITLED TO RECEIVE WATER FROM MUNICIPAL PLANT FREE OF CHARGE—SEE SECTION 3963, G. C.

An orphans' home belonging to a county, but located within the corporate limits of a municipality owning its waterworks, is entitled to receive water from the corporation without charge under section 3963, G. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 5, 1916.

HON. THOMAS H. MOORE, Prosecuting Attorney, Ashland, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter of April 1st, asking for an opinion which is as follows:

"Will you please give me your opinion upon the following:

"Ashland county has an orphans' home, which is located inside the corporate limits of the city of Ashland.

"The city owns and operates its own municipal water works system.

"Under section 3963 of the Code, can the city charge the county for water used by said orphans' home, said home being a county institution?

"I contend that under the above section, 3963, no charge can be made by the city."

Section 3963 of the General Code is as follows:

"No charge shall be made by the director of public service in cities, or by the board of trustees of public affairs in villages, for supplying water for extinguishing fires, cleaning fire apparatus, or for furnishing or supplying connections with fire hydrants, and keeping them in repair for fire department purposes, the cleaning of market houses, the use of any public building belonging to the corporation, or any hospital, asylum, or other charitable institutions, devoted to the relief of the poor, aged, infirm, or destitute persons, or orphan or delinquent children, or for the use of public school buildings; but, in any case where the said school building or buildings are situated within a village or cities, and the boundaries of the school district include territory not within the boundaries of the village or cities in which said building or buildings are located, then the directors of such school district shall pay the village or cities for the water furnished for said building or buildings."

The question of furnishing water to the Ohio hospital for epileptics at Gallipolis was involved in the case of the City of Gallipolis v. Trustees of Water Works, Ohio Nisi Prius reports, Vol. II, page 161, and it was determined in that case that the statute was constitutional, and that under its provisions the corporation owning the water-works was obliged to furnish water to a state institution coming within the class enumerated without charge.

The provisions of the statute are clear, it being expressly provided that no charge shall be made for water furnished to any hospital or asylum devoted to the care of orphan children, and I am, therefore, of the opinion, that the fact that the orphan asylum referred to is a county rather than a municipal institution does not relieve the city of Ashland from supplying it with water, and concur with the opinion expressed by you in reference to the matter.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

FINES COLLECTED FOR VIOLATIONS OF SECTION 1261-63, G. C., ARE REQUIRED TO BE PAID INTO COUNTY TREASURY—WHEN COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MAY ALLOW FEES TO OFFICERS NAMED IN SECTION 3017, G. C., ALTHOUGH FINES ARE PAYABLE INTO MUNICIPAL TREASURY—BALANCE OF FINE AND COSTS PAYABLE TO MAGISTRATE WHEN ACCUSED DESIRES TO BE DISCHARGED FROM JAIL AFTER COMMITMENT FOR NONPAYMENT OF SAME.

All fines collected for violations of section 1261-63, G. C., 103 O. L., 237, are required to be paid into the county treasury under the provisions of sections 12378 and 4270, G. C., without regard to whether the court in which the same is enforced is a municipal court or a county court.

The county commissioners in their discretion may make an allowance to such officers as are named in section 3017, G. C., in the place of fees legally taxed to them in prosecutions for misdemeanors in which the defendant upon conviction proves insolvent not in excess of one hundred dollars in any one year, although the court in which such cause is tried is required to pay the fine in said cause, if collected, into the municipal treasury.

Where the accused is committed to the county jail for the nonpayment of fine and costs adjudged against him after a part of the same has been discharged by reason of such commitment, and the accused desires to pay the balance thereof, such balance should be paid to the court by whom the accused was committed.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 6, 1916.

HON. E. E. LINDSAY, Prosecuting Attorney, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—Yours under date of March 27, 1916, in which you request my opinion, is as follows:

> "When convenient, I would like to have your opinion upon the following questions:
> "(1.) In the 75th O. S., page 529, the supreme court holds that where a fine is imposed by the court of common pleas in a prosecution instituted in that court for a violation of either the municipal local option law, the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, or the law requiring the closing of saloons on Sunday, such fine must, when collected, be paid into the county treasury. But where a fine is imposed and collected by a municipal court for a violation of either of said laws, the same must be paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation wherein such fine was imposed.

"Will the same rule apply in prosecutions under section 1261-63 of the General Code as found in Vol. 103 of the Ohio Laws, at page 237?

"(2.) If a person is prosecuted for a violation of either a municipal local option law, the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, or the law requiring the closing of saloons on Sunday, before a mayor of a municipal corporation, and such person is convicted and proves insolvent, may the commissioners of the county in which the municipality is located pay the costs of such prosecution, or must the municipality in which such conviction is had pay such costs?

"(3) On October 14, 1915, in opinion number 924, you hold in substance that the authority of a justice of the peace, after the execution of a sentence has been begun, terminates, and his jurisdiction ceases.

"If a justice of the peace or mayor in a misdemeanor case wherein he has final jurisdiction, imposes a fine and costs and orders the accused committed to the county jail or workhouse, until such fine and costs are paid, and after being committed to such jail or workhouse the accused decides to pay his fine and costs, to whom should it be paid? Should it be paid to the magistrate imposing the sentence or should it be paid direct to the county treasury?

"I have matters involving all of the above questions under consideration now, and of course I have my opinion in regard to them, but I would like yours also, before my final decision.

"Under the second question propounded, I find that it has been the practice in some places for the commissioners to allow the costs where the accused is convicted before a mayor and proves insolvent, but it does not seem fair to me that the municipality should have the benefit of the fines in such cases where they can be collected from the accused, and if such fine and costs can not be collected from the accused, then for the county or state to have to pay such costs. It seems to me, as a matter of right, that if the municipality is entitled to such fines, when they can be collected from the accused, then the municipality should pay the costs made in the case if they can not be collected from the accused."

Section 1261-63, G. C., 103 O. L., 237, to which you refer, provides as follows:

"Whoever sells intoxicating liquors without having been duly licensed as provided herein shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for the first offense and for a second or subsequent offense, not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than one month nor more than three months, or both.

"Sales of intoxicating liquor by other than dealers therein, in quantities of forty gallons or more, where said liquors are taken by way of payment of a debt or by way of collateral security on a loan, or are acquired for investment solely and sold en bloc, and sales under provisions of law requiring an executor, administrator, guardian, receiver or other officer of the court to sell, where such sales are made of a stock of liquors en bloc, or a sale by a person, firm or corporation previously licensed but whose license is not renewed, or is revoked, forfeited, surrendered or otherwise lost, where such sales are made of a stock of liquors en bloc, are not included within the meaning of this section. Nor shall this section include the manufacturer of native wine, cider or other intoxicating liquors from the raw material and the sale thereof by the manufacturer in quantities of one gallon or more at one time at the factory or the sale thereof in said quantities by the manufacturer from the wagon or other vehicle of said manufacturer to the holder of a liquor license, or in said quantities to individual consumers where said liquors are delivered to the homes of said individual consumers in territory wherein the sale of intoxicating liquors is not prohibited by law. Nor shall this section include the sales made by a registered pharmacist upon a prescription issued in good faith by a reputable physician in active practice, or for exclusively known mechanical, pharmaceutical or sacramental purposes."

Your first question has reference to the disposition of fines collected, as required by law to be made by officers authorized to assess and collect the same. General provision for the disposition of fines collected is found in section 12378 of the General Code as follows:

"Unless otherwise required by law, an officer who collects a fine, shall pay it into the treasury of the county in which such fine was assessed, to the credit of the county general fund within twenty days after the receipt thereof, take the treasurer's duplicate receipts therefor and forthwith deposit one of them with the county auditor."

Except, then, in so far as it will be found to be otherwise specifically provided, all fines are required to be paid into the treasury of the county to the credit of the general county fund.

Specific exception to the foregoing general provision is found in section 13247, G. C., which provides as follows:

"Fines and forfeited bonds collected under this subdivision of this chapter, except as provided in section thirteen thousand two hundred and thirty-one, if enforced in the county court, shall be paid into the county treasury, and, if enforced in municipal courts, shall be paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation in which the cause was tried. Such funds paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation shall be applied as the council thereof may direct."

An examination of the subdivision of Chapter XVII of Title I of part 4, referred to in this section, will disclose that the provisions thereof have application, under the present state of the law, to:

"(1) Offenses in violation of municipal and residence district local option laws as defined in section 13234, G. C.

"(2) Failure to remove intoxicating liquors from a municipal, township or residence district local option territory, within thirty days from the date of the election at which such municipality, residence district or township shall have been "voted dry" as defined in section 13237, G. C.

"(3) Druggists who sell intoxicating liquor for any purpose within a period of two years after a conviction for selling intoxicating liquors as a beverage, contrary to a local option law, under the provision of section 13239 G. C.

"(4) Druggists or pharmacists in a local option township, municipality or residence district who fail to keep the book or register and conform to the provisions of section 13242, G. C."

So that by reason of the special provision of said section 13247, G. C., supra, all fines collected for violations of the provisions of sections 13225 to 13249, G. C., inclusive, except violations of section 13229, G. C., in the county court, are required to be paid into the county treasury and all such fines enforced and collected in municipal courts are required to be paid into the treasury of a municipality in which the cause is tried.

By force of the exception found in section 13247, G. C., and the provisions of section 13231, G. C., therein referred to, all fines collected for violations of section 13229, G. C., in reference to the sale, furnishing or giving away of intoxicating liquors, to be used as a beverage, and keeping a place where such liquors are sold, furnished or given away in a township outside of a municipality, when the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is prohibited in such township, are required to be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the poor fund by whatever court enforced.

As before stated, the foregoing being a special provision, that will control to the exclusion of any general provision otherwise applicable.

It may be here observed that the provisions of sections 13225 to 13249, G. C., in so far as they relate to violations of county local option laws, have been abrogated by the adoption of section 9a of article XV of the constitution, known as the home rule amendment. A further exception to said section 12378, supra, is found in section 4270, G. C., which provides as follows:

> "All fines and forfeitures collected by the mayor, or which in any manner comes into his hands, and all moneys received by him in his official capacity, other than his fees of office, shall be by him paid into the treasury of the corporation weekly. At the first regular meeting of the council in each and every month, he shall submit a full statement of all such money received, from whom and for what purpose received and when paid over. All fines, penalties and forfeitures collected by him in state cases shall be by him paid over to the county treasurer monthly."

The operation of this section, as an exception to the provisions of section 12378, G. C., is limited by force of the last sentence thereof to offenses committed in violation of municipal ordinances and all fines, penalties and forfeitures collected in state cases, are specifically required to be paid into the county treasury monthly, subject, however, to the special provisions of section 13247, G. C., above referred to.

Section 13050, G. C., as it stood prior to the codification of 1910, was enacted as a part of house bill No. 183, 95 O. L., 87, as section 4364-20 R. S. This section makes it a criminal offense for any person to sell intoxicating liquors on Sunday or permit a place other than a regular drug store, where such liquors are sold, to remain open on Sunday. In the same act (95 O. L., 90) there was enacted section 4364-20g, R. S., as follows:

> "Money received from fines and forfeited bonds collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid into the treasury of the municipal corporation wherein said fine was imposed or bond forfeited, and shall be applied to such fund or funds as the council of the said corporation may direct."

Under the provisions of this latter section, the supreme court held, as stated by you, in the case of City v. Mochwart, 75 O. S., 529, that fines collected for violation of section 4364-20, G. C., by a municipal court, must be paid into the municipal treasury, and if enforced by the court of common pleas, such fines must be paid into the county treasury under section 6802, R. S., now section 12378, G. C.

Section 4364-20g, R. S., as construed by the supreme court, was substantially incorporated in section 13247, G. C., supra, in the codification of 1910, but was limited in its application, as above pointed out, to certain offenses defined in section 13225 to 13249, G. C., which, as will be observed, do not include offenses in violation of the provisions of section 13050, G. C., as above referred to. So that offenses committed in violation of said section 13050, G. C., are now, it would seem, clearly not within the rule laid down in the case of City v. Mochwart, supra.

The offense defined in section 1261-63, G. C., 103 O. L., 237, about which you make inquiry, does not come within any of the foregoing exceptions to the general provisions of section 12378, G. C., as will be readily observed, nor within the rule stated in the case of City v. Mochwart, supra. The offense to which you refer, as defined in section 1261-63, G. C., is not a violation of the provisions of either section 13234, 13237, 13239 or 13242, G. C., or any other provision of that subdivision of chapter XVII of title I, part 4, of the General Code, referred to in section 13247, G. C.

I am therefore of opinion that fines collected for violation of said section 1261-63, G. C., are required to be paid into the county treasury under the provisions of sections 12378 and 4270, G. C., without regard to whether the court in which the same is enforced is a municipal court or a county court.

Your second question relates to violations of municipal local option laws, the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday and the law requiring the closing of saloons on Sunday, and you inquire whether or not county commissioners may pay the cost in prosecutions for offenses committed under said laws had before a mayor of a municipal corporation.

I shall assume that your inquiry has reference to offenses committed in violation of state law prosecuted in the name of the state and does not involve violations of city ordinances passed pursuant to section 6137, G. C., which confers upon municipal corporations full power to regulate the sale, furnishing or giving away of intoxicating liquors and the places where the same are sold, furnished or given away.

The offenses in reference to which you make inquiry are all misdemeanors.

Section 3016, G. C., provides for the payment of the costs of justices of the peace, police judges or justices, mayors, marshals, chief of police, constables and witnesses in felonies upon conviction.

Section 3017, G. C., provides:

> "In no other case whatever shall any cost be paid from the state or county treasury to a justice of the peace, police judge or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police or constable."

From the above it is conclusive that only in felony cases, upon conviction, may "costs," as such, be paid out of the state or county treasury to a justice of the peace, police judge or justice, mayor, marshal, chief of police or constable. Authority is found, however, for the county commissioners to make an allowance to such officers "in place of fees," in felonies wherein the state fails, or misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, as follows:

> "In felonies wherein the state fails and in misdemeanors wherein the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners, at any regular session, may make an allowance to any such officers in place of fees, but in any year the aggregate allowance to such officer shall not exceed the fees legally taxed to him in such causes, nor in any year shall the aggregate amount allowed an officer exceed one hundred dollars."

This allowance is left to the discretion of the county commissioners and limited to the fees legally taxed in an amount not in excess of one hundred dollars in state cases to an officer in any year.

The offenses to which you refer, being misdemeanors, it follows that under the provisions of section 3019, G. C., supra, the county commissioners may, in their discretion, make an allowance to a mayor, justice of the peace, police judge or justice, marshal, chief of police or constable in place of fees legally taxed in misdemeanor cases, and in which the defendant proves insolvent, only in an amount not in excess of one hundred dollars in any one year. The commissioners may make such allowance, where the defendant proves insolvent, whether the offenses come within the class of offenses defined in section 13247, G. C., as to which it is provided that if the fines be enforced in a municipal court, the same shall be paid into the treasury of the municipality, or otherwise.

I am, therefore, of opinion, in answer to your second question, that in prosecutions for violations of municipal local option law, the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, or the statute requiring the closing of saloons on Sunday, before the mayor, police judge or justice, or justice of the peace of a municipality, where the defendant proves insolvent, the county commissioners may, in their discretion, make an allowance to such officers as are named in section 3017, G. C., in place of fees legally taxed in such cases, a sum not in excess of one hundred dollars in any year.

As to your third inquiry it may be first observed that opinion No. 924, under date of October 14, 1915, to which you refer, and in which it is held that after the execution of a sentence of a justice of the peace has began, a justice loses all jurisdiction to suspend execution of such sentence, has no application, nor is there occasion for the further exercise of jurisdiction as to such sentence by a justice under the facts stated by you, further than to accept and receipt for payment on such fines and costs. It devolves upon the defendant to discharge and satisfy the judgment and sentence pronounced against him. This he may do by payment of the fine and cost so assessed against him to the court in which the cause was tried, or if committed for nonpayment of the same the defendant is discharged by operation of law when the statutory credit allowed under the provisions of section 13717, G. C., for each day's confinement, aggregates a sum equal to the fine and cost assessed and adjudged against him. If after a portion of the fine and costs so assessed have been satisfied and discharged by reason of confinement of the defendant in default of the payment thereof, he may discharge the balance due thereon by the payment thereof to the court in which the cause was tried and sentence pronounced against him. Whereupon the defendant is entitled to his release. That is to say, after a portion of the fine and cost has been satisfied by reason of the confinement of the defendant, he may secure his release from such confinement by the payment of the balance due on said fine and costs to the court by which the cause was tried and sentence pronounced, and taking from such court a proper receipt therefor showing full payment of such fine and cost. Such receipt from the justice of the peace, mayor, police judge or justice or the duly authorized clerk of either of such courts is sufficient warrant to entitle the defendant to his release from further confinement.

There is no authority for the payment of a fine and costs or any part thereof into the county treasury by the defendant.

I am, therefore, of opinion, in answer to your third inquiry, that the fine and costs therein referred to, or the remainder thereof unpaid, should be paid only to the court in which the cause was tried, that is to say, the justice or mayor's court.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS—MAY ALLOW CONTINGENT EXPENSES OF EMPLOYES OF TAXING DEPARTMENT OF COUNTY AUDITOR'S OFFICE AND COUNTY BOARD OF REVISION—WHAT IS MEANT BY CONTINGENT EXPENSES UNDER PROVISIONS OF SECTION 5585, G. C., 106 O. L., 256—CAR FARE, AUTOMOBILE HIRE, ETC.

Expenses for street car fare of the employes of the taxing department of the county auditor's office in trips made in furtherance of the duties of said office, and for automobile hire, livery or car tickets in necessary trips made by the members of the board of revision in the performance of their official duty are contingent expenses within the meaning of that term as used in section 5585, G. C., 106 O. L., 256, and bills for such expenses may be allowed by the county commissioners and paid as other claims against the county.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 6, 1916.

HON. ROBERT P. DUNCAN, Prosecuting Attorney, Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of February 17th you request my opinion on the following question:

> "Have the county commissioners the authority to allow the payment of bills for street car fare of the employes of the taxing department of the county auditor's office in trips made in furtherance of the duties of that office, and of bills for automobile hire, livery or car tickets in necessary trips made by the members of the board of revision?"

Your question requires a consideration of that part of section 36 of the Parrett-Whittemore law, so-called (section 5585, G. C.), as found in 106 O. L., 256, which provides that:

> "The contingent expenses of the county auditor and county board of revision, including postage, and express charges, their actual and necessary traveling expenses and those of their deputies, experts, clerks or employes on official business outside of the county, when required by orders issued by the tax commission of Ohio, shall be allowed and paid as other claims against the county."

No other provisions of the statutes now in force authorize the payment of the expenses referred to in your inquiry out of the county treasury and it remains to be determined, therefore, whether the term "contingent expenses," as the same appears in the above provision of section 5585, G. C., includes such expenses as those mentioned in said inquiry. In other words, may bills for such expenses be allowed by the county commissioners and paid as other claims against the county?

I call your attention to an opinion of my predecessor, Hon. Timothy S. Hogan, rendered to the tax commission of Ohio, under date of April 24, 1914, as found in the Report of the Attorney-General for said year at page 514 of said report.

The first and second questions asked by the tax commission were as follows:

> "1. What expenses of district assessors and deputy assessors, members of district boards of complaints, deputies, assistants, experts, clerks and employes are a proper charge against the taxing district?
> "2. Does 'contingent expenses' include such expenses as automobile hire, car fare and the like for these various officers while in the exercise of their duties within their respective jurisdictions?"

Consideration was given to that part of section 35 of the Warnes law, so-called (section 5614, G. C.), 103 O. L., 795, which provided as follows:

> "* * * The contingent expenses of the district assessor and district board of complaints, including postage and express charges, their actual and necessary traveling expenses and those of their deputies, assistants, experts, clerks or employes on official business outside of the district when required by orders issued by the tax commission of Ohio shall be allowed and paid as claims against the county; * * *"

It will be observed that the above provision of section 5614, G. C., as in force prior to January 1, 1916, was carried into the provision of section 5585, G. C., as above quoted, and the only material change made was to substitute the county auditor and county board of revision respectively in place of the district assessor and district board of complaints.

As stated in said opinion, the term "contingent expenses" has a well understood technical meaning, viz., those expenses, miscellaneous in character, which the legislative body presumes will be incurred in the natural course of official business, but the exact character of which cannot be so definitely ascertained in advance as to permit specific enumeration of them.

> People v. Yonkers, 35 Barb., 236.
> Dunwoody v. U. S., 22 Ct. Cl., 269.

It was observed that the general assembly supposed that the phrase "contingent expenses" would not necessarily include all expenditures and that this is reasonably apparent from consideration of that part of the statute above quoted which begins with the word "including;" that by specifically enacting that postage, express charges and certain traveling expenses shall be included within the purview of the term "contingent expenses," the general assembly made it plain that such charges and expenses would not, without the provision, have been contemplated within the meaning of the phrase, being expenses, the incurring of which, is a certainty, and which are, therefore, not of the miscellaneous and unascertainable character ordinarily contemplated by the term "contingent expenses."

It was held in answer to the first question that, generally speaking, contingent expenses are such casual and miscellaneous expenditures which may naturally be incurred in the discharge of the duties of the office for which no special provision is made; save that in the case of the contingent expenses mentioned in section 5614, G. C., the term was to include postage and express charges and the traveling expenses mentioned in said section.

In so far as the second question of the tax commission relating to traveling expenses, it was held that, while in the exercise of their duties within their respective jurisdictions none of the officers referred to in said question might be reimbursed for such expenses incurred by them, and that the only traveling expenses, reimbursement on account of which out of the public treasury shall be afforded any of said officers, were those specifically mentioned in the above provision of the statutes, i. e., the actual and necessary traveling expenses of the district assessor and district board of complaints, their deputies, assistants, experts, clerks or employes, when incurred on official business outside of the district when required by orders issued by the tax commission of Ohio.

I concur in the conclusion reached by my predecessor, that none of the officers mentioned in the above provision of section 5614, G. C. (103 O. L., 795), might be reimbursed for expenses incurred while in the exercise of their duties within their respective jurisdictions. In other words, expenses incurred by the district assessors, or by their deputies acting for them, in going about their respective districts and in appraising property for taxation in the manner provided by law could not be considered "contingent expenses" within the meaning of the term as used in said statute.

The fact must not be overlooked, however, that under the Parrett-Whittemore law, the duty of appraising property in the first instance is placed upon the local assessors selected in the manner provided by section 17 of said law (section 3349, G. C.), and by the assistant assessors selected under the conditions and in the manner provided by section 18 of said act (section 3350, G. C.). Inasmuch as the county auditor, himself, or acting through his deputies or assistants, is not charged by any provision of the act with the duty of appraising real property in the first instance as was required of the district assessor and his deputies under provision of the Warnes law, and inasmuch as the members of the county board of revision in the performance of their ordinary duties as a board of equalization under section 51 of the act (section 5605, G. C.), and as a board of complaints under sections 44, 45 and 52 of the said act (sections 5597, 5598 and 5609 of the General Code), are not required to incur traveling expenses in the sense the term is above used, I think it necessarily follows that if circumstances arise which occasion the expenses referred to in your inquiry such expenses so incurred by the officers and employes named in the above provision of section 5585, G. C., could not in the very nature of things be determined in advance and are therefore "contingent expenses" within the meaning of the term as used in said statute.

I am of the opinion, therefore, in answer to your question that bills for such expenses may be allowed by the county commissioners and paid as other claims against the county under the above provision of said section 5585, G. C.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

APPROVAL, TRANSCRIPT OF BOND ISSUE, BRACEVILLE TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, TRUMBULL COUNTY, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 6, 1916.

Industrial Commission of Ohio, Columbus, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—

"RE:—Bonds of Braceville township rural school district, Trumbull county, Ohio, in the amount of $25,000.00 for the purchase of a site for the erection and equipment of a school building for the proper accomodation of the schools of said district, being fifty bonds of $500.00 each."

I have examined the amended and supplemented transcripts of the proceedings of the board of education and other officers of Braceville township rural school district relative to the issuance of the above bonds, also the bond and coupon form, submitted to me under date of April 3, 1916, and I find the same regular and in conformity with the provisions of the General Code of Ohio.

I am of the opinion that said bonds drawn in accordance with the form submitted, when executed by the proper officers, will, upon delivery,constitute valid and binding obligations of said rural school district.

Respectfully,
EDWARD C. TURNER,
Attorney-General.

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE BONDS FOR ROAD IMPROVEMENT PURPOSES—TEN YEAR LIMITATION—NO AUTHORITY FOR ELECTORS TO VOTE ON PROPOSITION—HOW TO DETERMINE MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF BONDS THAT MAY BE ISSUED FOR SUCH PURPOSES.

County commissioners are authorized to issue bonds for road improvement purposes, which bonds may not be issued for a longer period than ten years. There is no authority or necessity for submitting bond issues of this character to a vote of the electors. In determining the possible amount of bonds that may be issued for this purpose, it is necessary to consider the amount of taxes that may be levied under sections 6926 and 6927, G. C., and the amount of the special assessments proposed to be levied for the projected improvements and no greater amount of bonds may be issued than can be redeemed out of the proceeds of the levies made under the sections in question and the proceeds of the special assessments.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 6, 1916.

HON. ELI H. SPEIDEL, Prosecuting Attorney, Batavia, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—I have your communication of March 16, 1916, which reads as follows:

"There has been, of late, in this county considerable agitation and discussion about the deplorable condition of the Clermont county highways, and the board of county commissioners are considering the question of submitting to the electors of the county, at the general primary election in August of this year, the question of issuing bonds for the permanent improvement of these roads, and I am requested by the board of commissioners to ask your opinion as to the greatest amount of bonds that may be issued, provided such issue of bonds is approved by a majority of the qualified electors of the county voting on the question submitted.

"The grand duplicate of Clermont county amounts to the sum of $26,240,-610.00, that is for the year 1915. The total bonded indebtedness of the county or the bonded indebtedness that will exist when the resolution is passed by the board of commissioners, will be $191,957.00.

"To be more specific, we would like to have your opinion as to whether or not the bonds of Clermont county, in the sum of either $250,000.00 or $500,000.00, to be extended over a period of not exceeding twenty-five years, can be issued upon the above statement of the duplicate and total bonded indebtedness, providing the question is submitted to a vote of the electors of said county, at either a general or special election and a majority of the electors voting at said election, vote in favor of such bond issue."

The provision for the issuance of bonds by county commissioners for county road improvement purposes is found in section 6929, G. C., being section 108 of the Cass highway law, which section reads as follows:

"The county commissioners in anticipation of the collection of such taxes and assessments may, whenever in their judgment it is deemed necessary, sell the bonds of said county in the aggregate amount necessary to pay the estimated cost and expenses of such improvement. Such bonds shall state for what purpose they are issued and shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually and in such amounts and to mature at such times as the commissioners shall determine, subject to the provision however that said bonds shall mature in not more than ten years prior to the issuance of such bonds, the county commissioners shall provide for levying and collecting annually a tax upon all the taxable property of the county to provide a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds and to create a sinking fund for their retirement at maturity. The sale of such bonds shall be advertised once not later than two weeks prior to the date fixed for such sale in a newspaper published and of general circulation within such county, if there be any such paper published in said county, but if there be no such paper published in said county then in a newspaper having general circulation in said county. Such bonds shall be sold to the highest responsible bidder for not less than par and accrued interest. The county commissioners may reject any or all bids. The proceeds of such bonds shall be used exclusively for the payment of the cost and expenses of the improvement for which they are issued."

Under the provisions of the section above quoted, all bonds issued for county road improvement purposes must mature in not more than ten years. There is no authority for submitting to the electors of a county the proposition of issuing bonds for such purposes, and the county commissioners have the full power and authority to issue such bonds without a vote of the electors. Not only is a submission to a vote of the electors of the question of issuing bonds neither required nor authorized, but it is also true that no substantial advantage could be derived by submitting a proposition of this character, in view of the statutory provisions relating to the tax levies, in anticipation of which bonds of this character may be issued. Such bonds, in so far as they are to be issued in anticipation of the collection of taxes, are to be issued in anticipation of levies made under sections 6926 and 6927, G. C.

In opinion No. 1408 of this department, rendered to the bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices, on March 22, 1916, it was pointed out that the levy under section 6926, G. C., is not subject to the three mill limitation for county purposes provided by section 5649-3a, G. C., and is not subject to the ten mill limitation provided by section 5649-2, G. C. The levy itself cannot exceed two mills and the only other limitation to which it is subject is the fifteen mill limitation provided by section 5649-5b, G. C. It was also pointed out in the same opinion that the levy under section 6927, G. C., is not subject to the two mill limitation for township purposes and is not subject to the ten mill limitation. The levy itself cannot exceed three mills and the only other limitation to which it is subject is the fifteen mill limitation. In view of the fact that the levies under the sections above referred to are not subject to the limitations for county and township purposes, respectively, and are not subject to the ten mill limitation, it will be seen that in the making of such levies the county commissioners have practically all the freedom that exists as to sinking fund and interest levies, where a bond issue is authorized by a vote of the electors.

Answering your specific questions, I advise you that county commissioners are authorized to issue bonds for road improvement purposes, that there is no authority or necessity for submitting bond issues of this character to a vote of the electors and that such bonds may not be issued for a longer period than ten years. In determining the possible amount of bonds that may be issued for this purpose, it is necessary to consider the amount of taxes that may be levied under sections 6926 and 6927, G. C., and the amount of the special assessments proposed to be levied for the projected improvements, and no greater amount of bonds may be issued than can be redeemed out of the proceeds of the levies made under the sections in question and the proceeds of the special assessments. In determining the amount of taxes that may be levied under the sections in question, regard must be had not only to the limitations contained in such sections, but also to the requirements of other political subdivisions and to the requirements of the county for other purposes. Levies made under sections 6926 and 6927, G. C., must be regarded as levies made under the several sections referred to in section 5649-5b, G. C., and together with all other levies made under the several sections referred to in said section 5649-5b, G. C., must not exceed fifteen mills.

Respectfully,

EDWARD C. TURNER,

Attorney-General.

VILLAGE INCORPORATED FROM PART OF TOWNSHIP RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT—STATUS OF SCHOOL PROPERTY—TITLE TO PROPERTY IS HELD BY BOARD OF RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Upon the incorporation of a part of the territory of a township rural school district into a village the territory so incorporated automatically becomes a village school district, providing the valuation of the same for taxation is at least five hundred thousand dollars, under provision of section 4687, G. C., 104 O. L., 134, taken in connection with the provision of section 4682, G. C., 103 O. L., 545. In case of such incorporation the title to school property held by the board of education of said rural school district in trust for the use and accomodation of the pupils of said rural district, although located within the corporate limits of said village, will remain in said board of education of said rural school district.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 7, 1916.

HON. GEORGE C. VON BESELER, Prosecuting Attorney, Painesville, Ohio.

DEAR SIR:—In your letter of March 10th you request my opinion as follows:

"The electors of the township of Willoughby are about to vote upon the question of the creation of a village to be known as the village of Wickliffe, lying within and at the westerly side of said township.

"Just last year the township issued bonds in a considerable amount for the purpose of securing a site and erecting thereon a new and modern community school house. There is now a vast deal of strife and contention among the electors by reason of there being various opinions as to the resulting conditions in reference to the school building.

"Section 4687 is as follows:

" 'Upon the creation of a village, it shall thereby become a village school district, as herein provided, and, if the territory of such village previous to its creation was included within the boundaries of a rural school district and such rural school district included more territory than is included within the village, such territory shall thereby be attached to such village school district for school purposes, provided such territory has an area of less than sixteen square miles."

"The area remaining without the village will have an area of more than sixteen miles. Consequently thereafter there will be the two districts, namely the Wickliffe village school district and the Willoughby rural school district.

"Section 4682-1 of the General Code of Ohio is as follows:

" 'A village school district containing a population of less than fifteen hundred may vote at any general or special election to dissolve and join any contiguous rural district. After approval by the county board such proposition shall be submitted to the electors by the village board of education on the petition of one-fourth of the electors of such village school district or the village board may submit the proposition on its own motion and the result shall be determined by a majority vote of such electors.'

"The village of Wickliffe will have a population of approximately nine hundred.

"Section 4683 is as follows:

" 'When a village school district is dissolved, the territory formerly constituting such village district shall become a part of the contiguous rural district which it votes to join in accordance with section 4682-1, and all school property shall pass to and become vested in the board of education of such rural school district.'

"Starting with the assumptions that the village will be created, that the vote for a dissolution of the district will be favorable, it then follows that this new school building will certainly revert to and become the property of the rural school district.

"QUERY: What is the status of the ownership and control of this new school property upon the creation of the village? In so far as I have been able to ascertain, there is no provision of the statute disposing of school property under such circumstances. Some are contending that it will remain the property of the rural school district. Others contend that it will become the property of the village, but that the tax duplicate of the village will thereafter be exempt from any tax levy for the purpose of paying the interest and providing a sinking fund to pay the bonds at maturity, heretofore issued for the express purpose of the purchase of a site and the erection of this building.

"My view of it is that as a matter of necessity the building would pass to and become the property of the village with the liability for the payment of the bonds resting as it is at present, namely covering all the property listed for the purpose of taxation in both the township and the village.

"I wish you would give me your opinion in reference to the matter. It may be that section 4696 would be applicable, but it does not impress me as being so, the reference there being only to transferred territory by the county board of education."

In response to my request for additional information I have your letter of March 21st in which you state that the school property in question lies approximately at the center of the proposed incorporated district; that the school was established as an ordinary public school and that the building is used only for grades below the high school. You further state that the tax valuation of the district to be created will be something like two and one-half million dollars, and in your letter of March 24th you state that the school building in question is not confined precisely to the use and accomodation of those pupils residing within the territory which it is proposed to incorporate into a village and that you are informed that some children within the corporation go to schools lying without the corporation, but that no children living without the proposed incorporation come to this new school district lying within the territory proposed to be incorporated into a village.

You have quoted the provisions of section 4687, G. C. (104 O. L., 134). While the first part of said statute by its terms provides that > "Upon the creation of a village, it shall thereby become a village school district," said provision must be read in connection with the provision of section 4682, G. C. (103 O. L., 545), that

> "A village, together with the territory attached to it for school purposes, and excluding the territory within its corporate limits detached for school purposes, with a tax valuation of less than five hundred thousand dollars, shall not constitute a village school district. * * *"

The first part of said section 4687, G. C., was not changed by the act of the general assembly amending said section as found in 104 O. L., and in view of the above provision of section 4682, G. C., I am of the opinion that upon the creation of a village, the territory within its corporate limits will not automatically become a village school district if the tax valuation of such territory at the time of such incorporation is less than five hundred thousand dollars. It appears, however, that that part of Willoughby township, Lake county, which it is proposed to incorporate into the village of Wickliffe, has a valuation of about two and one-half million dollars. It follows, therefore, that upon the incorporation of said village the same will automatically become the Wickliffe village school district under provision of section 4687, G. C.

From your statement of facts it appears that the territory remaining in said Willoughby township rural school district, after the incorporation of the village, will have an area of more than sixteen square miles. Said territory will not, therefore, be attached to said village school district for school purposes under the above provision of section 4687, G. C., but will remain separate and apart from said village school district, and will continue as the territory comprising the Willoughby township rural school district until further change is made in accordance with law.

It further appears, for the purpose of erecting a school building in that part of said Willoughby township rural school district, which it is now proposed to incorporate into a village, the board of education of said rural school district issued the bonds of said district. The school building erected out of the proceeds of said bond issue is owned and controlled by said board of education of said rural school district, and the title to said property is held by said board of education in trust for said rural school district for school purposes.

While you state that no children without the territory proposed to be incorporated into a village attend school in the new school building in question, it must be remembered that the qualified electors residing in the territory within said rural school district that will remain after the incorporation of said village will have no voice in said incorporation proceedings, while in all probability it required a vote of a majority of the electors residing in said rural school district to authorize the board of education of said district to issue the bonds above referred to.

In view of the present tendency to centralize the schools of rural school districts, either by a vote of the electors under section 4726, G. C. (104 O. L., 139), or by the board of education of the rural school district in the exercise of the authority conferred by section 7730, G. C. (106 O. L., 398), it cannot be said that the use of a school building located within a rural school district is necessarily confined to the accommodation of those pupils residing within the immediate vicinity of said building, unless the board of education of said district so determines. On the contrary, I am of the opinion that the school building in question must be considered as available for any and all of the purposes which may be affected under provision of said sections 4726 and 7730, G. C.

I find no provision of the statute to the effect that upon the creation of the village referred to in your inquiry out of a part of the township in question, the title to the school property located within the corporate limits of said village, which upon the facts submitted by you automatically becomes a village school district, passes from the board of education of the township rural school district to the board of education of said village school district, and becomes vested in said latter board. While the above provision of section 4683, G. C., as quoted by you, provides that when a village school district is dissolved the territory formerly constituting said village district shall become a part of the contiguous rural district which it votes to join in accordance with section 4682-1, G. C., and that all school property shall pass to and become vested in the board of education of such rural school district, it will be observed that such transfer of territory and the passing of the title to the school property therein located is effected with the consent and approval of the qualified electors of such territory.

When territory is annexed to a city or village, section 4690, G. C. (104 O. L., 133), provides that such territory thereby becomes a part of the city or village school district, but said section further provides that the legal title to school property in such territory for school purposes shall remain vested in the board of education of the school district from which such territory was detached, until such time as may be agreed upon by the general boards of education when such property may be transferred by warranty deed.

In the case of Board of Education v. Board of Education, 46 O. S., 595, the court held:

> "Public school property, real or personal, that has been appropriated and set apart by a township board of education for the purpose of a public school of a higher grade than primary, for the benefit of the youth of the whole township, does not pass to or vest in the board of education of a separate school district that may be afterwards organized out of the territory within which the property happens to be situated."

The court in its opinion on page 597 of said report said:

> "The school house in dispute was built by the township board to be used for teaching a school of higher grade than primary, for the benefit of the youth of the whole township. It was, presumably, located at a point most convenient for that purpose, and which happened to fall within the territory afterwards organized into a separate village district, but was not designed for the benefit of that territory alone; nor was it ever afterwards set apart by any action of the township board for the use of that territory. * * *
> "To hold that grounds, buildings and appliances, designed and intended to secure to the youth of the whole township an opportunity for education in the higher branches of learning could be thus transferred, would defeat a legislative purpose clearly discernible upon the face of the law, for township boards could hardly be expected to provide the necessary means to accomplish it, where the requisite property should be held by so uncertain a tenure."

While it is true that the school referred to in the above case was for high school purposes, nevertheless, I think in view of what has already been said as to the possible use that could be made of the school building referred to in your inquiry, the case of Board of Education v. Board of Education, supra, has some bearing on the question submitted by you.
